Yeltsin loses support

Lawmakers reject proposal

■ Yeltsin's failure to subdue the breakaway region launches celebration

Associated Press

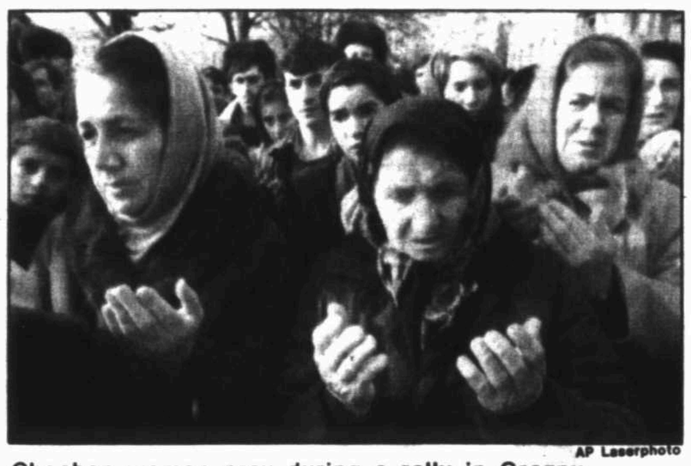

GROZNY, U.S.S.R. — Separatists in the southern Chechen-Ingush region fired automatic weapons to celebrate the Russian legislature's refusal Monday to approve Boris Yeltsin's state of emergency in their Muslim enclave.

Gen. Dzhokar Dudayev, formerly a bomber pilot in the Soviet air force and now president of the Chechen-Ingush region, had threatened terrorist attacks on Moscow's nuclear power stations and subways if the decree was not repealed.

The 177-4 vote Monday against Yeltsin by the usually pliant Russian lawmakers was the first major show of no confidence in Yeltsin since his election in June as president of the Russian Federation — a mosaic of scores of restless ethnic groups scattered among the Russian majority.

The legislature's rebuff was likely to damage Yeltsin's authority, which was greatly enhanced by his successful opposition to hard-liners who tried to oust Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev

Kirkland miffed

DETROIT — American workers are being "royally stiffed" by President Bush, who campaigned on a promise to create 30 million new jobs during his time in office, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said Monday. "Giving him full credit for a small growth in jobs before his recession began to destroy them, he now owes us about 29,750,000," Kirkland told the opening session of the trade union's convention in Detroit./5A

Fusion price

LONDON — European scientists in pursuit of nuclear fusion's clean and unlimited energy said Monday they will appeal for $5 billion to build a reactor for experiments by a consortium of nations, including the United States. The scientists were thrilled by an experiment on Saturday in which they said they achieved fusion for two seconds and produced about 1.7 megawatts of power for nearly a second. The commercial production of fusion power is decades away, but it promises to be a boundless source of energy./8A

Texan prepared

KINSHASA, Zaire — As foreigners gathered to discuss what to do if the unrest in Zaire intensified after Belgian troops withdrew last week, Texas conservationist Delfi Messinger already had set up her hiding place. Deep inside a multimillion-dollar French lab set up to study deadly viruses, past a row of lights that could sterilize anyone passing by, the Austin woman was stacking up food in case Zairean troops riot again./3B

Versatile pitcher

Mattlingly

Mattingly was a guest star for Sunday's opener of the Evansville Philharmonic's 1991-92 Family Series.

He admitted to being nervous, but it didn't show. His reading was poised, powerful and even a bit provocative — especially a section he delivered in a cool, rhythmic, style.

"I've got to be a little bit of a hot dog," he said.

Baptists free Baylor

WACO (AP) — Baptist moderates sent a strong signal Monday to fundamentalists by approving Baylor University's attempt to insulate itself from a takeover by the conservative wing of the church.

The moderates' decisive victory came at the 106th annual Baptist General Convention of Texas (BGCT), and effectively blocked fundamentalists attempts to retain control of the 146-year-old institution.

Delegates at the convention voted 5,745 to 3,992 to approve a plan that reduces its own control of Baylor's governing board.

The plan allows the convention to elect only 25 percent of Baylor's governing board. The university's regents would elect the remaining 75 percent.

"I'm very pleased, I'm very happy about it," said Baylor President Herbert Reynolds.

Reynolds, who last year startled the 15 million Southern Baptist membership with the news the school was pulling away from denomination control, said the vote was a mandate of support for current BGCT leadership, considered mostly moderate.

Maples

"It was not an easy thing for a lot of these folks," Reynolds said.

Baylor trustees voted Sept. 21, 1990, to create the Board of Regents to insulate the Central Texas school from fundamentalist control. Baptist leaders first considered suing the university for the change in the school charter.

But after a year of meetings, Baptist leaders backed off earlier threats and released more than $6 million in annual funds designated for the university that were frozen after the charter change.

More than 10,000 Baptists from the state's 5,400 Southern Baptist churches and missions attended the opening session of the meeting, highlighted by the agreement that distances the 12,000-student school from the convention.

Monday's landmark vote followed a last-minute effort to restore total power of the newly created board of regents to the convention.

Delegates earlier defeated by a vote of 5,976 to 4,714 a proposal that would have returned the university to total control by the convention.

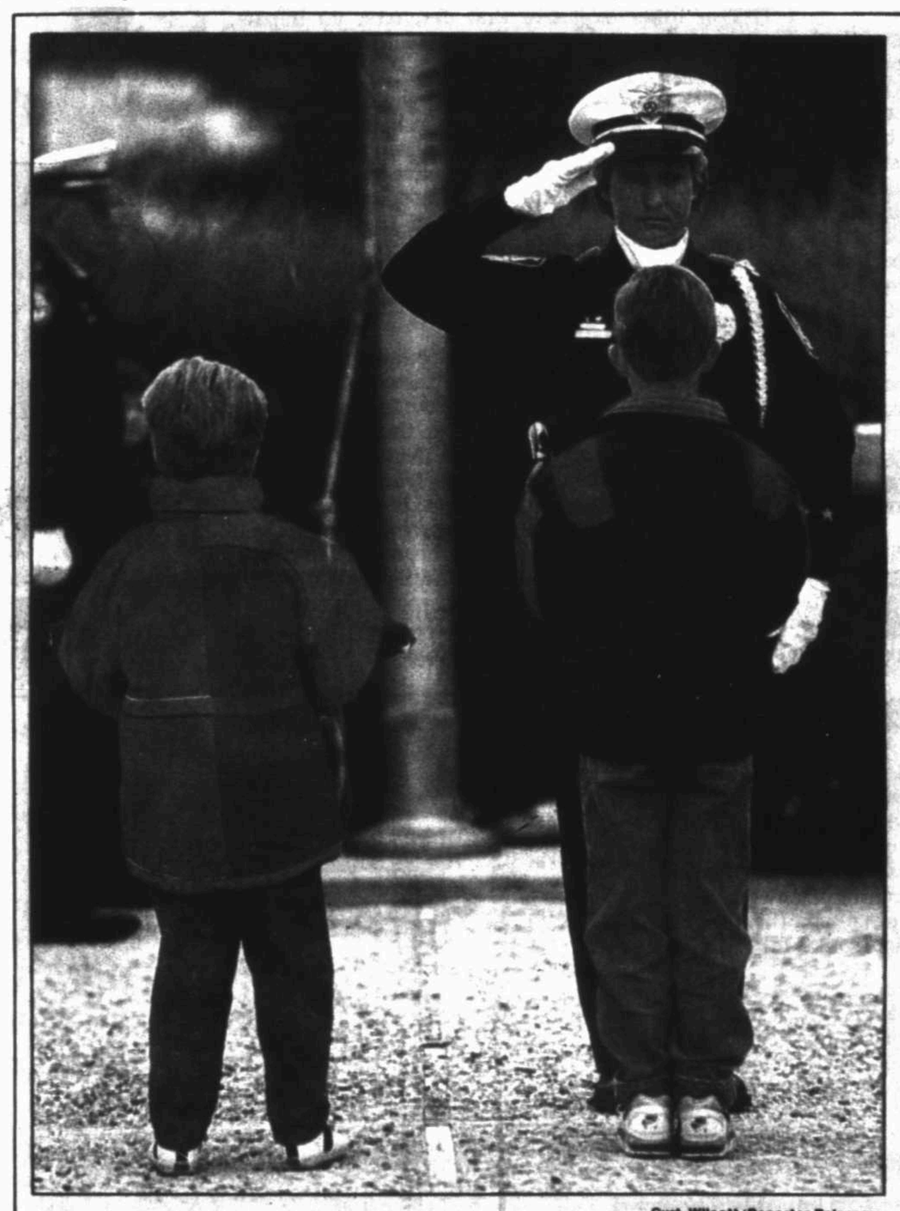

The substitute measure was offered by a Houston minister who called the agreement to reduce Texas Baptists role in Baylor's affairs a "dangerous precedent."

The move from the Rev. Ed Young called for evangelist Billy Graham to oversee an arbitration team to restore Baylor's ties to the BGCT.

"I am in a difficult place," Young said. "We need all of Baylor University in the Baptist camp."

Midland Police Officer Paula Bynum salutes Chase Woerndle, 7, Trinity School first grader. Chase is holding the flag retired from the school's flagpole. Marcie Deffenbaugh, 6, left, holds the flag which flew over the capitol building in Washington, D.C.

School marks Veterans Day

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Despite drizzly weather Monday morning, Trinity School pupils trooped out to the flagpole to observe Veterans Day.

Dreary overcast skies didn't dampen the spirits of the youngsters, who waved jubilantly when Confederate Air Force member George Coombes flew overhead in a North American SMJ Navy Trainer.

First graders Marcie Deffenbaugh and Chase Woerndle served as flag bearers during the ceremony which retired the school's American flag.

Hoisted up in its place was another American flag, one which had the honor of flying over the capitol building in Washington D.C. on Citizenship Day, Sept. 17.

The new flag was a gift from U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, a Republican from San Antonio who represents Midland in Congress.

"This was all initiated when my first grade class made a flag in class last year," said Trinity teacher Patti MacDonald.

The Trinity pupils sewed together a replica of the flag created by Betsy Ross.

Thirteen students in Ms. McDonald's 1990-91 first grade class each sewed on one star and one stripe on the Old Glory replica.

Police officers Paula Bynum and John "Jack" Driggs served as the honor guard in Monday's ceremony.

Driggs said the Midland Police Honor Guard, which consists of 17 officers, "run the gamut" on the types of ceremonies they perform.

Cowboy cartoonist Reid dies

Reid

KERRVILLE (AP) — When he wasn't raising cattle, drilling for oil or campaigning to save the horned toads, cowboy cartoonist Ace Reid was drawing "Cowpokes."

Reid's self-syndicated cartoons once appeared in more than 400 newspapers across Texas, including the Houston Chronicle, Fort Worth Star-Telegram and San Antonio Express-News.

But the humorist and founder of a presweated hat business — "the man who invented sweat," Playboy magazine said — died Sunday at Methodist Hospital in San Antonio.

Reid suffered a long battle with leukemia and diabetes. He was 65.

"His genius was to be able to see the world in its humor and put it down on paper," said his son, Stan Reid of Kerrville. "In his cartoons, he would go straight to the point of the problems of everyday people. He made them feel comfortable."

Don't ask Cuomo which way is up

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Comics and cartoonists are having a field day — field weeks? field months? — with the public ruminations of Mario Cuomo over whether to run for the presidency.

The New York governor is the kind of guy who drives a car "down the center of the road with both turn signals on at the same time," said Johnny Carson of "The Tonight Show."

Since Cuomo announced a few weeks ago that he's thinking of bidding for the Democratic nomination, he's offered a variety of comments on the subject. But nowhere among them is a "yes" or "no."

"The man hears more voices than the Mormon Tabernacle Choir," said political satirist Mark Russell.

"There's the governor," he said, "just where we left him two months ago, meeting with his campaign advisers —

Czech outlines plans for improving police response

By Darren J. Waggoner

City councilmen and residents of Midland's southeast side discussed the Police Department's plans for a community policing program Monday night at a meeting at the Southeast Community Center.

Midland Police Chief Richard Czech explained the program's aim is to change the traditional methods of police work that often result in wasted time.

Under the program, which is scheduled to begin in January, Midland would be divided into three separate areas: the first area encompasses locations west of Midkiff Road, the second encompasses locations between Midkiff Road and Big Spring Street and the third area encompasses locations east of Big Spring Street.

These divisions would help residents become more familiar with the officers

Soviet official backs rebels, Afgan official claims

MOSCOW (AP) — An Afghan rebel official said Monday that Russian Vice President Alexander Rutskoi told him he supported the rebels' armed struggle against the Kremlin-backed government in Kabul.

"Mr. Rutskoi said the establishment of an Islamic government in Afghanistan is guaranteed," Masood Khalini said after he and 10 other visiting Afghan rebel leaders met with Rutskoi.

A spokesman for Rutskoi's office said Monday that the vice president would not comment on his meetings with the Afghan representatives until Tuesday.

If Khalini's statement were true, it would reflect a dramatic shift in the position of the Russians toward Afghanistan. Over a decade, Moscow committed more than a 100,000 troops to Afghanistan to help the Kabul government fight the rebels.

The last Soviet troops withdrew in 1989, but Soviet leaders have continued to back President Najibullah's government, although they have encouraged a negotiated settlement of the war.

Rutskoi is a veteran of the Afghan war. As a pilot, he was shot down in Afghanistan, captured by rebels and later released as part of a prisoner exchange.

Spurred by a new U.S.-Soviet peace plan, the rebels arrived Sunday for talks aimed at ending the rebels' 12-year-old civil war with Kremlin-backed forces.

They are the first direct talks in Moscow between Soviet officials and the rebel "transitional government" fighting Najibullah.

Havel fights for national unity

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia (NYT) — Underscoring that he is president of the Slovaks as much as of the Czechs, his own national group, Vaclav Havel arrived here on Monday to spend an entire working week in Slovakia.

Helping him drive home the point is Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, of Spain, who in an unusual move is calling on the president here on Tuesday on an official visit rather than in Prague, the federal and Czech capital.

Havel's weeklong stay is his first of such duration. Sending another political signal to Slovaks, Havel opened a new presidential office, which he had installed in Bratislava Castle overlooking the Danube River. His arrival followed a debacle on his last visit here, on Oct. 28.

On that day, Havel came straight from the United States to celebrate National Day, commemorating the founding of Czechoslovakia in 1918. He was jeered by egg-throwing Slovak separatists, who ignored his request for two minutes of silence in memory of those who died for this country. The president departed hurriedly for Prague without delivering his prepared speech.

Havel's first appearance on Monday was devoted to a renewed attempt to resolve what has become the most urgent national issue, the framing of an agreement between the Czech and Slovak national Parliaments to create a new structure for a common, binational state. Such a structure would then have to be ratified in new federal, Czech, and Slovak constitutions.

At the nearby mountain guesthouse of the Slovak Parliament in Papiernicka, the president opened a joint two-day meeting between the governing presidiums of both national Parliaments. They were convened after weeks of hard bargaining sessions at all levels between the federal, Czech, and Slovak governments, including a weekend retreat by all national leaders in Havel's country cottage, which failed to produce a compromise text.

"It becomes a more serious problem day by day," Jiri Krizan, Havel's chief political counselor, said in an interview in Prague. "It is a crisis now."

The drawn-out negotiations reflect deep divisions mainly among Slovak political leaders. Their positions, which some Slovak political figures say do not always coincide with their private views, are strongly influenced by the intense activity in this city by the well-organized Slovak National Party, which favors total separation from Czechoslovakia.

Some National Party members, like those who prevented Havel from speaking last month, take regularly to the streets in noisy demonstrations.

Teams find Iraqi chemical weapons

VIENNA (NYT) — Austrian experts who recently returned from Iraq have said they found large numbers of Iraqi weapons outfitted with chemical warheads that could have been used in the Persian Gulf war.

They also said some of the weapons included Soviet-built Scud missiles. But they said that primitive ballistic technology and warheads that were unevenly filled with deadly liquid chemicals made it unlikely they could have been fired accurately, if at all.

The officials said they found large depots of rifle grenades, artillery shells, and bombs with chemical warheads containing sarin, a deadly liquid substance that when distributed as an aerosol spray destroys the nervous system by stopping lung and heart muscles, and mustard gas, another poison gas more likely to incapacitate than to kill, which works similarly on contact with the skin.

The three officials, experts on chemical warfare protection from Austria's federal defense force who were part of a United Nations inspection team, said their last three-week tour, which ended on Nov. 5, took them to storage sites reported by Iraq to the United Nations, one at Mosul north of Baghdad, a second west of the Iraqi capital, and a third in the south of Iraq near Basra.

Iraq has reported a store of 40,000 chemical bombs and shells, but inspection has raised the figure to about 100,000, United Nations officials say. Roughly half have already been destroyed.

In an interview, the Austrians said that most of the rifle grenades and 122mm artillery shells they examined were outfitted with chemical warheads, often plastic containers with the deadly liquid chemical surrounding a so-called burster tube, a cylinder of TNT or other explosive that detonates on impact, sending the chemical content into the air.

The experts could not say how many Scuds were found in all. But they described the Soviet technicians who examined the missiles as being startled by the primitive workmanship. They said some experts believed that the missiles would have been destroyed by heat on re-entry into the atmosphere, had they been fired, while others believed that the partly-filled chemical warheads would probably have caused the kind of destabilization that occurs in half-filled oil tankers at sea, rendering the missiles useless.

There appeared to be no indication that the long-range missiles had ever been tested, the officials said. They said other weapons provided no clues as to why they were not deployed in the war.

The function of the United Nations inspection teams, usually about 25 experts from several countries, including the United States, is to take samples for testing and report the numbers, content, and condition of the weapons and the plausibility of removing or destroying them. The Soviet Union and Canada have offered the use of mobile incinerators to destroy the weapons, United Nations officials said, but the technology is slow and costly.

Brazilian plane crash kills 17

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A Brazilian domestic airliner plunged in flames into a public square Monday night in the city of Recife, killing 17 people, including two on the ground, a Brazilian news agency reported.

The Nordeste airline twin-engine, turbo-prop plane tore through power lines before crashing, blacking out a lower middle-class section in the southern part of the city, Jornal do Brasil agency said.

The airliner crashed minutes after takeoff from Recife's Guararapes airport and all 15 people aboard were killed, including three crew, the agency said.

It said the two people killed on the ground included a young boy who was playing in the square. The plane also plowed through a home, destroying the kitchen, terrace and front wall.

A couple living in the house were badly burned and hospitalized, Jornal do Brasil reported.

"The plane splattered on the ground and I heard a blast that sounded like the end of the world," witness Ana Brito was quoted as saying.

Serbian-led army launches two-pronged attack

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav federal forces attacked Dubrovnik by land and sea Monday, setting fire to tourist hotels and yachts in the harbor, and casting huge clouds of black smoke over the Adriatic port.

European Community officials reported the army was targeting the medieval heart of the Croatian city and said they would pull EC monitors out for safety reasons.

In eastern Croatia, Serbian-led federal soldiers appeared close to capturing the Danube River city of Vukovar, where an estimated 12,000 people have been living underground for three months to shelter from bombardments.

The advances were bringing the army close to capturing two cities with great symbolic and strategic importance to both sides in the 4½-month old civil war, in which more than 1,700 people have died.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman said Dubrovnik and Vukovar had been "plunged into total war" and called for U.N. peacekeeping troops.

Earlier, Croatian officials said peacekeepers should be used only on the republic's borders, not to separate fighters within the republic.

Former U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, the U.N. special emissary to Yugoslavia, told reporters in New York that he had observed "very bad" fighting in Yugoslavia during a visit last week.

He said there were now 420,000 displaced people within Yugoslavia, in addition to hundreds of thousands in exile.

"This kind of human suffering is something that is really agonizing," Vance said.

The 14 EC monitors are to quit Dubrovnik Tuesday as soon as safe passage is guaranteed, after enduring four days of relentless bombing and shelling.

"The whole of Dubrovnik is ablaze and surrounded by smoke," Croatian radio reported.

Shells hit two hotels in the Babin Kuk complex Monday, within 100 feet of the Hotel Argentina, which houses the monitors. Croatian TV said nine people died. Sunday, sniper fire wounded several people at the Argentina.

Army gunboats targeted Dubrovnik's old harbor Monday and mortar shells landed within 65 feet of the EC monitors' boat.

The suburb of Lapad blazed all Monday afternoon and the top three floors of the Imperial Hotel, 150 feet from the walls of the old city, were destroyed.

Serbian leaders in Belgrade called for U.N. peacekeepers on Saturday after the European Community imposed sanctions, but U.N. officials say it will wait until the EC requests such a move. The EC sanctions were aimed mainly at Serbia, which has rejected an EC peace plan.

Croatia, which declared independence June 25, has lost about one-third of its territory in fighting since then.

Japan needs to lead, Baker says

TOKYO (NYT) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III called on Japan on Monday to assume a more active role in protecting democracy and advocating free trade, instead of relying on "checkbook diplomacy" to protect its narrow interests or waiting for foreign pressure to force it into action.

"We recognize that Japan's leaders, and its people, are now grappling with a difficult adjustment in Japan's world role," Baker said in an address to the Japan Institute for International Affairs.

"You are beginning to fully appreciate your national capabilities — and your responsibilities — around the globe. Your 'checkbook diplomacy,' like our 'dollar diplomacy' of an earlier era, is clearly too narrow."

The remarks by Baker, who met on Monday with Japan's new prime minister, Kiichi Miyazawa, and its foreign minister, Michio Watanabe, did not mark any sharp departure from United States policy. But they pointed the way to future Japanese-American relations as envisioned by Washington in the post-cold war era.

Specifically, Baker is seeking a greater Japanese role in promoting a compromise in global free trade talks; in United Nations peacekeeping efforts; and in a campaign to dissuade North Korea from developing nuclear weapons.

More world news/8A

An example of the stance urged by Washington is Tokyo's participation in an international conference on Middle East issues that is expected to convene in the next three weeks as part of the peace process begun in Madrid last month.

Baker's comments here were seen in particular as public support of pending Japanese legislation that would permit the government to send troops on limited United Nations peacekeeping missions, their first duty abroad since World War II.

The bill moved toward approval on Monday when the leaders of the small Komeito party said they would back the measure, thereby assuring that it would receive enough votes to pass.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Drizzle, fog in forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for considerable early morning drizzle and fog and a 30 percent chance of showers with a high in the low 50s and east winds at 5 to 15 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers and a low near 40, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tomorrow should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 40, Monday's high was 44 compared with the record high for that date of 83 set in 1964. The record low for that date is 19 set in 1932.

STATE

Clouds hung over most of the state Monday, bringing patches of light rain to the Panhandle and southern plains of West Texas.

A weak cold front stretched across South Texas and into Mexico bringing clouds to the region. An upper level system of low pressure kept a constant blanket of clouds over much of North Texas.

Variable winds blew across West Texas at speeds of less than 10 mph. Temperatures remained in the 40s and 50s.

An east to southeast wind swept South Texas at 10 mph with gusts along the lower coast reaching 25 mph. Temperatures reached the 70s in the south.

North Texas lows dipped to the 30s Monday, as highs reached the 60s. Winds were mostly from the north, with speeds at 5 to 10 mph.

The South Texas forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a chance for light rain. Highs are expected to be in the 60s and 70s.

Cloudy skies and a few sprinkles are expected for North Texas, with highs in the upper 60s.

Scattered showers are expected for West Texas. Lows are predicted in the 30s and 40s, highs reaching 70s in the Big Bend.

NATION

Rain and snow fell from the northern Plains to New York Monday, and the lingering cold wave dropped temperatures to record lows across the Deep South.

At midday, snow fell over southeastern North Dakota, eastern South Dakota, central Minnesota, northwestern Wisconsin, northwestern Michigan, western New York, western Pennsylvania, and eastern West Virginia.

Buffalo, N.Y., got 6 inches of snow Monday. "This is extremely early — the earliest we've had in years," said Dick Smith, highway superintendent in suburban Hamburg.

Snow that fell beginning Sunday knocked out electricity to more than 32,500 customers in parts of West Virginia. But the storm that dumped up to 4 inches of snow, plus icy rain and slush, dampened forest fires that have burned since last month.

Midland statistics

Today: Considerable early morning drizzle and fog with a 30 percent chance of showers. Highs will be in the low 50s with east winds at 5-15 mph.

Tonight: Mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers and a low near 40.

Wednesday: Partly cloudy with a high in the mid-60s.

who typically work their respective neighborhoods.

The first step of the program involves solving the problem of continuous calls from the same location, Czech said.

"We need to spend more time on the more important problems and we want to remove the responsibility from the officer on the street. Of every 100 calls we receive, only two are emergencies," Czech said.

"We're constantly out there just spinning our wheels, running from minor call to minor call to minor call."

Czech admits that the process could be slow-going in the beginning.

"Educating the public is crucial. They have to understand that we might not be able to immediately respond to a loud music call," Czech said. "And when they find their homes robbed after returning home from a two-week vacation, they shouldn't expect immediate response. After that period, it is no longer an emergency."

Lieutenant John Urby explained that emergency calls will continue to receive top priority.

"We're certainly not going to start not responding to emergencies. This program only relates to calls that could take 10 or 15 minutes or longer (in response time)," Urby said.

Czech also said that MPD dispatchers will be trained to tell callers how long it will be before they can expect an officer to arrive.

"Ultimately our goal is to encourage callers to ask for their officer — an officer they know works in their territory," Czech said.

Czech hopes the program is fully implemented by March or April of 1992.

Also discussed at Monday's meeting were proposed zoning plans for the southeast section of the city.

Richard Hennessy, director of the city's Planning and Development Commission, suggested retail development along both sides of Highway 80 would help lessen the decline of the area. But one councilman suggested commercial development would be a more logical opportunity because it would create more jobs.

Sylvester Cantu, administer of the Commercial Development Block Grant committee, believes commercial development would eliminate the neighborhood atmosphere.

"There is a significant dilemma of balancing the neighborhood with the opportunity for economic development," Cantu said. "I really don't know where we go from here."

The establishment of a district health clinic was also discussed at the meeting.

Free blood pressure checks will be held every Tuesday between 1 and 5 p.m. at the Southeast Community Center.

The primary focus of the clinic will be toward senior citizens. Organizers are conducting surveys to help determine the major health care needs of the community.

Organizers also hope to teach young residents how to take better care of themselves.

BAYLOR: Baptist moderates approve plan erning board.

Young's motion called for an effort to force Baylor to return to it's original charter by rejecting the proposed agreement.

It also called for an arbitration team to look into ways to restore the school's board of trustees and dismiss the newly-created board of rejects. Young proposes that the arbitrators be handpicked by Graham.

Young said Graham had agreed to oversee a team of arbitrators.

Fundamentalists have complained for years that the university is too liberal and have been at odds with Baylor President Herbert Reynolds because he does not support biblical inerrancy, the belief the Bible is without error.

Many Baptists have criticized the convention for hurting the faith's image. With at 15 million members nationwide, the Southern Baptist Convention is the largest Protestant group in the United States.

Although Baylor officials said they would have adopted the proposal with the convention's support, the vote indicates that mainstream Baptists are still in control of the 2.5 million-member Texas Baptist convention — the nation's largest state convention.

MEMORIAL: SWB group donates to monument released.

"It has been a long process," said John Philbeck, president of the local committee. "After two years we finally got a site and we are just now looking forward to strong fund-raising efforts. We are at the final stages of the preparation of grants and we're now looking forward to active fund-raising. It (fund-raising) will start around Jan. 1 and culminate at the end of '92."

According to Philbeck, the memorial will honor veterans from 25 West Texas counties who were killed in action or have been listed as missing in action.

"It should really add even more to the area around there. It will be a regional facility with picnic areas and such. I expect it to add to the whole area out there . . ." said Philbeck.

The memorial will be an 8-by-9-foot replica of the state of Texas. Bronze plates will outline the represented counties and names will be cast in half-inch bronze plates.

"This will make any necessary corrections or additions much easier," said Philbeck. "We don't want to exclude anyone and we certainly don't want to spell anyone's name wrong. They didn't go over there and do what they did to have their names mispelled on a remembrance."

Philbeck encourages anyone who knows of someone killed or listed as missing in action in Vietnam to contact the committee at P.O. Box 2178, Midland, 79702. Additional information can be obtained by calling (915) 682-0461.

Total cost for the project is estimated at $500,000, Philbeck said. The committee has raised $30,000 through previous fund-raising projects.

CUOMO: Governor can't make up his mind

(From 1A)

Plato, Socrates, St. Thomas Aquinas."

A New York Post political cartoon was captioned "The world awaits Cuomo's decision," but the man sprawled in front of Cuomo's televised image was sound asleep. So were his dog, cat and goldfish.

One Cuomo comment — that his heart is telling him to run but he's still working on his head — was an inevitable hit with those who poke fun for a living.

"I gather his spleen has the deciding vote," Russell said.

"If he's got a heart and a mind, he's already overqualified," said Jay Leno.

"Making up my mind was gut-wrenching," a cartoon Cuomo said in the Atlanta Constitution. "My heart told me one thing, my head told me another. But I've reached a decision. I'll have the lasagna."

Tom Toles, the Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist for the Buffalo News, recently described Cuomo as an 800-pound jellyfish, not the 800-pound gorilla some see in the governor.

"Either he's going to run or he enjoys making a fool of himself," Toles said.

Toles has visited Cuomo's reluctance before. In 1988, he depicted the governor as Moses heading up the mountain to make his decision. Cuomo keeps hesitating, engaging in more self-debate. Finally, the crowd at the foot of the mountain screams: "Just Go!"

Cuomo and his friends joke about it, too.

During a visit last week to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City, the organist played "Hail to the Chief" and the cathedral's dean handed Cuomo a foot-high stone etched with the letters R-U-N.

"It's ancient. It's a hieroglyphic, as you can see," said Cuomo. "If my Egyptian does not fail me, it says, 'Think' in hieroglyphics."

YELTSIN: Emergency decree rejected in vote

in August. The vote was not binding, but may force Yeltsin to withdraw his decree.

Yeltsin did not attend the debate and had no immediate comment on the resolution, which also called for negotiations toward a political solution. Dudayev said he was asked to take part in talks and was prepared to do so.

Two Yeltsin allies, Russian parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov and Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, the author of the decree, reversed their earlier defense of the crackdown. They backed the lawmakers' move for negotations, signaling that Yeltsin had decided against confrontation.

Yeltsin's apparent indecision in using force, the limited number of troops he was able to send to the region to enforce his decree, and the failure of his representatives to carry out an order to arrest Dudayev showed his government to be weak in areas not dominated by ethnic Russians.

In the Chechen-Ingush capital of Grozny, cheering militants fired their automatic weapons in the air and honked car horns to celebrate the Russian retreat.

Dudayev said the Russian vote represented a "victory for democracy and truth." There was no sign of compromise from the Chechen-Ingush leaders on their Nov. 2 independence declaration from the Russian Federation.

Immediately before the Russian legislature voted, Dudayev said he would order terrorist strikes against atomic power stations around Moscow if Yeltsin did not back down.

"Why should our mothers cry, our old people cry, why should our children cry and live so much in fear?" he said. " Why shouldn't Russia, which is where this evil is coming from, feel fear?"

After the vote in Moscow, Dudayev suspended the threat.

Dudayev is a national hero in the mainly Muslim autonomous region of 1.3 million people, 930 miles southeast of Moscow, for trying to break free of Russian control, which began under the czars.

If Yeltsin had ordered troops to open fire, violence could have spread to other parts of the Russian Federation with substantial non-Russian populations. The backlash could also have worsened Russia's relations with Muslim republics to the south.

But if Yeltsin backs down entirely, it could encourage secessionist movements in other parts of the vast Russian republic, including largely Muslim Tatarstan.

After Yeltsin declared a state of emergency on Friday, armed Chechen-Ingush separatists took to the streets, forcing the badly outnumbered troops to withdraw to the Russian city of Mineralnye Vodi. The Chechen defense minister said 300,000 men had volunteered for the National Guard.

Egyptian leads in United Nations race

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — Egyptian Deputy Prime Minister Butros Ghali moved into the lead Monday in the race to become the next U.N. secretary general, winning the support of 11 of the 15 Security Council members.

But with three members abstaining, it was not clear whether the single vote cast against Ghali in this informal secret ballot came from one of the five permanent members with a veto over decisions or from Zimbabwe, the only council member running a candidate for the $185,000-a-year post.

Zimbabwe's candidate, Finance Minister Bernard Chidzero, took second place with 10 positive votes, two negative ones and three abstentions. He was followed by the former Nigerian head of state, Olusegun Obasanjo, who was supported by nine council members and opposed by four. Two abstained.

All three Africans strengthened their positions slightly from the council's last informal ballot, held Oct. 25, when Ghali and Chidzero tied for first place with nine votes each, while Obasanjo came in third with seven.

The Security Council has been holding the informal ballots in an effort to produce a consensus recommendation to the General Assembly on who should succeed Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar when he leaves his post at the end of the year.

It is not clear when the council will abandon these "straw polls."

FLAG: Pupils ignore rain

(From 1A)

"This was one of the least complex ceremonies that we do," he said Monday.

Although the ceremony was short and simple, it was no less important for the children.

Marcie and Chase stood straight throughout the ceremony and gazed at Officer Bynum solemnly when she saluted each of them in turn.

Then, just as the honor guard finished hoisting the new flag up the pole, Coombes' circled his airplane overhead.

"The timing was just perfect. It's amazing," said Margaret Simmons, head of the private school.

Coombes said his accurate timing was "just old Navy navigation. You are supposed to get there on time and you do — and I had a little luck."

The pilot said he could see the Trinity students waving at him.

"It was fortunate that it happened at that time because an hour later the flying conditions wouldn't have been good," he said.

"The plane was neat," said one youngster as he marched back to class, "but my nose got cold."

REID: Cowboy cartoonist dies

made him a popular speaker across the country.

He once told a Star-Telegram reporter that his favorite depiction of himself came from the late movie actor Slim Pickens.

"The only creatures in the world that are more unpredictable, less reliable and sorrier-looking than Ace Reid are cowboys, horses and cows that he draw," Pickens wrote.

Among Reid's ventures were setting up trail drives along the Old Chisolm Trail and organizing the Old Crippled Cowboys of America.

He claimed to be on "howdy" terms with Lyndon B. Johnson, who as vice president endured Reid's frequent ribbing.

Reid's body will be cremated.

"No tombstone," he once said, "because I don't believe in being buried 'cause you take up some good ranch country an old cow or sheep could be grazing on. And when you're dead, you're dead."

Reid was born at Lelia Lake in the Panhandle and grew up near Electra, west of Wichita Falls. He married Madge Parmley in 1950 and moved to Kerrville.

Other survivors include his wife; a sister, Doris Ernst of Fredericksburg; and two grandchildren.

Memorial services were pending with Grimes Funeral Home of Kerrville.

Bush: Respect for Vietnam vets long overdue

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Leading the nation's Veterans Day observances, President Bush placed a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns on Monday and said victory in the Gulf War had kindled overdue respect for Vietnam vets that was "good for the nation's soul."

Bush pledged the United States would "always be a force for peace in the world" as he paid special tribute to veterans of the nation's two most recent wars,

His topcoat drawn tight against a chilling wind, Bush said at the annual ceremony in Arlington National Cemetery that Desert Storm veterans "freed a captive nation and set America free by renewing our faith in ourselves."

The president also promised that the nation would "never forget the POWs and the MIAs yet to be accounted for" from the Vietnam War.

Across the Potomac River in Washington, several thousand people came to the Vietnam Memorial for brief ceremonies in which eight names were added to the wall of Americans whose deaths were attributed to the war — making 58,183 in all.

In a sampling of other Veterans Day observances:

■ ROTC students based at Wright State University kept a vigil at the Dayton National Cemetery in Ohio to remember any American prisoners of war who didn't return from Vietnam.

■ The national commander of the Disabled Veterans of America said in Indianapolis that the government should do more than just praise war veterans. At a ceremony at the Indiana War Memorial, Cleveland Jordan said a variety of medical and educational services to veterans are being cut back or threatened even as the nation celebrates its success in the Persian Gulf.

■ In New York, 97 survivors of the Pearl Harbor attack a half-century ago were honored with medals in a ceremony that included airplanes, model warships and other memorabilia from America's wars. There also was a 15-block parade down Fifth Avenue to a wreath-laying ceremony honoring the service of Americans in all wars.

■ In another traditional parade, World War I vets including 101-year-old John Maxie led marching bands, drill teams and flag-draped floats of military ships down Broadway in Oakland, Calif.

At Arlington, Bush said ideals of democracy and freedom that Americans have fought to defend are taking root around the world.

"In the Western Hemisphere, 98 percent of the people now live in democracies. In Africa, people line up to vote as one-man states collapse. Europeans, East and West, unite in ways never thought possible," Bush said.

"Age-old enemies of the Middle East finally sit face-to-face to seek an end to their bitter strife. The Soviet Union strives to throw off the dead-hand of communism, and the time is coming when those last few totalitarian states will fade into historical oblivion."

"The United States will always be a force for peace in the world," he declared.

Bush laid a large flower wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns, a monument to the war dead whose names were lost in the chaos of battle. An Army bugler played "Taps" as Bush and top military and civilian officials stood at attention.

Later, at a memorial service at an adjacent amphitheater, Bush said: "On this cold autumn day in this hallowed place of honor, we gather to convey our nation's gratitude for those who risked their lives for the land, the people and the ideals they loved."

He said the nation owes "a special debt to the men and women of Desert Storm. They went proudly, willingly, on a mission of high principle and noble purpose: to defeat aggression and defend freedom."

"And in this victory America rallied behind those who served in Desert Storm and in a wonderful way, they rallied behind those who so proudly served in Vietnam," Bush said.

He said recognition for Vietnam veterans "was long overdue and it was good for the nation's soul."

Bush 'royally stiffs' U.S. workers, says AFL-CIO president

DETROIT (AP) — American workers are being "royally stiffed" by President Bush, who campaigned on a promise to create 30 million new jobs during his time in office, AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said Monday.

Kirkland

"Giving him full credit for a small growth in jobs before his recession began to destroy them, he now owes us about 29,750,000," Kirkland told the opening session of the trade union's convention in Detroit.

'He might even discover the fact that America's most successful competitors are far more generous with family leave and unemployment compensation.

— AFL-CIO's Lane Kirkland

The meeting's host city has a 24.9-percent unemployment rate.

"He has only a year left to come across, and the jobs he proposes to create in Mexico with his Free Trade Agreement, and in the prisons of his most-favored nation, Red China, do not count," Kirkland said.

"I have been keeping track and we are being royally stiffed."

Striker replacement legislation, as well as national health care and trade policy, were key items on the agenda.

Delegates overwhelmingly approved by voice vote a resolution to support Senate passage of the Workplace Fairness Act sponsored by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. The bill has 33 co-signers so far, but Metzenbaum said without 60 votes, it could die in a Senate filabuster.

"This president will threaten a veto. He's the most veto-prone president we've had," Metzenbaum told delegates in a rousing speech, interrupted several times by cheers and hoots from the convention floor.

Similar legislation sponsored by U.S. Rep. Bill Ford, D-Mich., passed the House 247-142 in June. Both bills re-establish the priority of workers' right to strike over an employer's right to permanently replace workers, made possible by a U.S. Supreme Court decision.

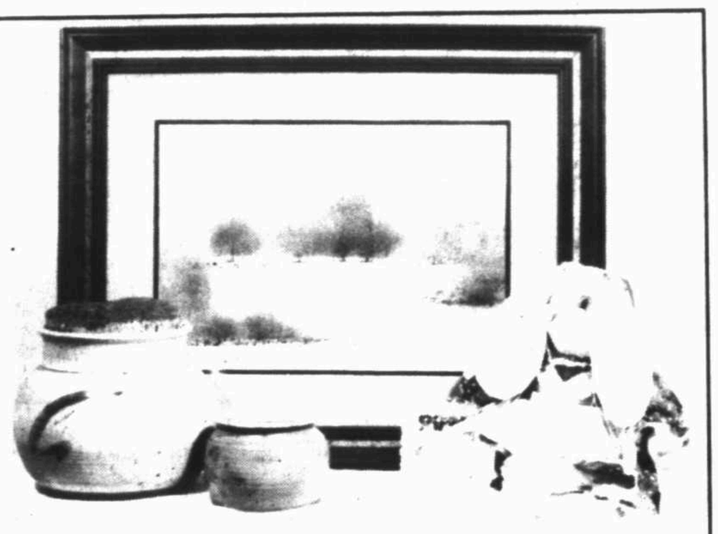

The more than 700 delegates cheered when Kirkland said Bush's whereabouts are not the issue. Bush has been criticized for focusing on foreign affairs and ignoring domestic issues.

"The real issue is not where he goes, but where he stands," Kirkland said.

Bush should pay closer attention to the way many foreign governments treat their working class, said Kirkland, president of the 14-million member labor organization for 12 years. Kirkland is unopposed in his bid for re-election Wednesday.

"He might observe that every other industrial nation guarantees its citizens access to health care," Kirkland said of Bush. "He might even discover the fact that America's most successful competitors are far more generous with family leave and unemployment compensation, and that the permanent replacement of strikers is virtually unheard of outside the United States."

Fusion test gives promising outlook

No doubt the American researchers who have been attempting for years to develop a reliable source of power from controlled nuclear fusion are disappointed that it was the European team that achieved the first real success Saturday. But the fact that success has been achieved by someone should generate excitement for all who understand that the world needs more forms of better and less exhaustible energy.

The weekend achievement by researchers at the Joint European Torus experimental fusion reactor in Oxfordshire, England, has suddenly shown that the goal of harnessing a significant amount of power in the same method that lights the sun really is feasible. What that could mean for mankind is that complex machines can be built that will produce a new kind of nuclear energy that is cheap, clean and virtually inexhaustible.

The fusion process produces energy by fusing the atoms of light elements in sharp contrast to nuclear fission, now in use in nuclear reactors. Nuclear fission generates energy by breaking apart the atoms of heavy elements like uranium. Scientists say that if fusion can be developed it would be far better than fission because the fuel needed in fusion — deuterium — can be easily extracted from plain water and there is far less radioactive waste.

We have already witnessed the difficulty in determining how to dispose of waste from nuclear reactors. It isn't likely to become less difficult as more nuclear plants come on line. So this achievement does offer hope for the future.

Dr. Paul-Henri Rebut, director of the JET program, said in a statement following the achievement in Oxfordshire, "It is clearly a major step forward in the development of fusion as a new source of energy."

There is, of course, a catch. The goal of producing nuclear energy that is cheap, clean and virtually inexhaustible could take another half century of difficult work. That's the assessment of the outlook from those closest to the JET project.

This weekend's achievement was significant, but there is still a long way to go. At least now the scientists pursuing this form of energy know that it is possible and that eventually energy from the nuclear fusion process may fill the needs of mankind.

Citizens deserve apology from MISD

Your newspaper published a letter recently from Wilson Heidelberg about the bid received on three school additions proposed for the Midland Independant School District (MISD). These comments were by any interpretation hostile to the local construction industry.

R.S. Means Co., Inc., a reputable cost reporting and estimating organization of national scope, gives a range of prices for elementary school construction of the nature involved from $37.10 to $89.90 per square foot. The reported $61 per square foot cost would fall in the 45th percentile, certainly a reasonable position given that the construction was not an inexpensive or cheap approach to the question.

The greatest factors affecting the cost of a proposed structure are those controlled and dictated by specification of the design team. The contractors bidding the work have no choice as to extent of work, quality of material or method of construction, which are rightly set forth by the architect and engineers involved in the design procedure. It is therefore fair to state that the cost of project is the consequence of the judgement and decision of the designer, perhaps modified by requirements and mandates of the owner.

The design team in this circumstance was the choice of the school administration, agreed to and accepted by the school board. That design team is a Fort Worth firm, which does not pay Midland Independent School District taxes. A number of the bidders on the subject project do pay taxes to the district, not only as individuals on their residences but also as business owners on their business properties.

That school officials denigrate with thinly-veiled innuendo the local taxpaying workers responding to the requirements of an outside agency without once even suggesting that that agency itself may have some explaining to do is unconscionable, vicious, and uncalled for. That they go further by suggesting the appropriate response would be to make the project so large as to bar local participation in the bidding is overtly hostile and insulting.

Local citizens are entitled to an apology from those officials along with a promise that they will in the future respect local needs and local wishes, rather that cavalierly exercising their own agenda at the literal expense of local citizens and taxpayers.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 12, the 316th day of 1991. There are 49 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 12, 1920, baseball got its first "czar" as Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis was elected commissioner of the American and National Leagues.

On this date:

In 1927, Josef Stalin became the undisputed ruler of the Soviet Union as Leon Trotsky was expelled from the Communist Party.

In 1948, former Japanese premier Hideki Tojo and several other World War II Japanese leaders were sentenced to death by a war crimes tribunal.

Quayle becoming valuable to Bush

WASHINGTON — Most political pundits have dismissed Dan Quayle as a lightweight. If the truth be told, there have been times when he could have used a bigger mouth or a smaller foot. But not lately.

Anderson

The handling of Quayle has been so masterful that he has been guilty of nary a slip in recent months. The pundits have greatly underestimated what a vice president can do when he has time on his hands, instructions to keep a low profile and plenty of political savvy.

Quayle has quietly established himself as George Bush's MVP, Most Valuable Politician. He came into office carrying the credentials to become Bush's intermediary with the Republican right wing. He has stroked ruffled feathers and explained the president's policies to hard-line conservatives. On one conservative issue, Israel, Quayle has done such a good job mending fences with the right that, as we reported recently, the Israelis consider him to be their best friend in Washington. They hate Bush and love Quayle.

But Quayle has not simply carried water one way. He has reversed his role and become the conservatives' advocate inside the White House. At his Thursday luncheons with the president, Quayle pleads the conservative cause.

That has put him in a position to tap into conservative money and has made him the leading fund-raiser for the Republican Party. That is why it would take a major nose dive in Bush's popularity for him to drop Quayle as a running mate before the 1992 election.

The money flows into Quayle with strings attached. Few big contributors donate to their favorite politicians out of a sense of public duty and patriotism. They want a return on their investment. And it has become common in both parties to grant federal blessings for campaign contributions, or more bluntly — to trade favors for cash.

Bush has established a special vehicle for Quayle to use to help big corporate contributors. It is the Council on Competitiveness, and not much happens in federal regulatory agencies without the rules being routed past Quayle and his council to make sure American business isn't hamstrung.

The council was a natural for Quayle. He kept pestering Bush with complaints from industry that government bureaucrats were reregulating the industries that Ronald Reagan had deregulated. So Bush authorized Quayle as the head of the council to ride herd on the regulators.

Quayle has used his new powers to obtain regulatory relief for various industries and industrial tycoons, and to make sure regulators remember that someone is breathing down their necks.

Big business loves the council almost as much as they love Quayle, and they will respond with even more campaign contributions to give the Republicans an edge next year. Bush needs all the help he can get. He is trying desperately to stimulate the economy and eliminate the primary complaint against his administration, that he let the country fall into a prolonged recession.

But even if the economy should still be stumbling in 1992, Bush will have one advantage over the Democrats. The recession will dry up Democratic coffers before it puts a dent in Republican wallets. Rank-and-file Democrats won't have the money to contribute to their party. Thanks in large part to Quayle, the Republicans should be able to outspend the Democrats.

Quayle hasn't done all of this out of the goodness of his heart and loyalty to the party and the president. He expects his party's nomination to the presidency in 1996. He has used his key to the corporate campaign chests to help powerful Republicans who are running for office. He has also flown around the country to stump for them.

This has given Quayle a pocket full of IOUs that he expects to cash in 1996.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The new Reagan Library in Simi Valley, Calif., includes a small Iran-Contra display with a footnote that the president took "full responsibility" for the affair. We must have missed that press conference. We recall Reagan saying he didn't know, didn't remember, wasn't told or didn't understand. History may show that that's what "full responsibility" amounted to in the Reagan administration.

Government should stay out of health care

Insofar as the voters said anything coherent last Election Day, they told government to go directly to the hot place, do not pass "Go," do not collect $200.

What lesson, accordingly, do unregenerate fans of government see gleaming amid the post-election ashes? The lesson supposedly is that we voters are clamoring for the U.S. government to institute national health care. Yes — about the same way the Titanic's passengers clamored for more ice.

Murchison

The proximate cause of the attention paid to the health care issue is Democratic Sen. Harris Wofford's victory in Pennsylvania over former U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh — a victory that shook up Thornburgh's patron, George Bush, and caused him to promise more attention to domestic issues. Wofford, an old-school Kennedy liberal, talked frequently about national health care, an issue kept simmering over the years by none other than Sen. Ted Kennedy, who is among the authors of a Democratic health care bill.

Before the politicians trip over each other, rushing to board the bandwagon, certain realities need pointing out:

- Pennsylvania is one state.
- National health care was one issue in one election in this one state.
- Wofford never got deeply into how national health care would work and how we could possibly afford it.

If we admire the present federal establishment's efficiency and cost-consciousness, why, yes, let us have federally mandated health care. Otherwise, let us be wary. Politicians are in danger of taking a simple truth — that health care costs too much — and twisting it into a mandate for handing the political establishment more power than it presently enjoys.

Yes, the medical care system is a mess. No, the federal government doesn't need to get more involved. Where would the money come from? The federal deficit is approaching $300 billion. Nor can business pay the tab without cutting purchases, laying off workers, and intensifying those economic woes with which the Democrats are beating Bush over the head.

We're in our present medical pickle — costs rising faster than inflation, up to 37 million Americans medically uninsured — for various reasons. Not the least of which is federal tax policy, which has made employee health benefits a popular tax-free benefit. Americans no longer ask the cost of medical care. They expect insurance to pay the tab. There is no way to know the true marketplace cost of medical care, because only the most limited kind of marketplace exists.

Bush needs a health care program? Here's one: Create a marketplace. "Every year," writes Regina E. Herzlinger, in the September Atlantic, "employers would transfer the money they now spend on health insurance to their employees, who would use it to buy their own policies." Let them shop around, buy what they like, shun what they don't.

Free-market economists are pretty well agreed that workers should be allowed to set up tax-free savings accounts for small medical expenses and should be encouraged to talk prices in advance with hospitals.

None of which precludes a role for government in health care. We'd still have Medicare for the elderly and Medicaid for the poor. Both programs have their defects, including bureaucracy and inflated cost, but one can't see the voters authorizing their extinction.

What needs extinguishing quickly is the idea that government should, or even is abstractly capable of, prescribing for the whole country's health care needs. This is an idea at odds with our national experience and with the nearly worldwide trend to lean less on government and more on private initiative.

17th century samurai's wisdom not outdated

Good advice for just living seems to be singularly lacking these days as people concentrate grabbing money, networking, dressing for success, and all the other shallow cliches that flit about modern society like bats at twilight.

Reese

Therefore, I thought you might be interested in a few tips from Jocho Yamamoto, a Japanese samurai, who lived in the 17th century. As you will see, wisdom is never dated.

The samurai were the warrior ruling class of feudal Japan, roughly comparable to the knights of Christian Europe. These tips from Yamamoto are drawn from his diaries, an English translation of which is now available.

"Fish do not live in clear water. It is because one sometimes overlooks details and does not lend an ear to minor complaints that those in one's services are able to live in peace."

That's a very good tip for anyone in management.

"One learns by listening to what others have to say and by reading books, one transcends the limitations of one's own powers of discernment and follows the teachings of the ancients."

This is especially good advice in this modern age of belligerent and militant ignorance.

"A samurai must know his shortcomings well and spend his life in training without ever feeling he has done enough. Of course he must never be overconfident, but neither should he feel inferior to others. A true samurai lives out his days in constant effort to improve. That is what training is — a process without end."

Good advice for many young folks who are convinced that they have reached a stage of perfection and already know everything.

"A person who is friendly to you in good times and turns his back on you like a stranger in times of illness and misfortune is a coward. It is most important when someone has met with ill-fortune, to stand by him, to visit him, and to take him what he needs. A samurai must never as long as he lives permit himself to be cut off from those to whom he is spiritually indebted."

Perhaps both Ronald Reagan and Ollie North should have pondered that piece of advice.

"One resolution after another add up to a lifetime. In the last analysis, the only thing that matters is the resolution of the moment. A samurai makes one resolution after another, until they add up to his whole life."

This is not, as it might appear, an advertisement for hedonism. On the contrary, Yamamoto is stating one of the obvious, but most overlooked, truths of human existence.

Neither the past nor the present exists except as memory or imagination. Consequently, no individual can act in the past or in the future. We can only act in the present and our actions in a succession of present moments create both our past and our future.

Whatever we wish to be, we must be now; whatever work we wish to accomplish, we must start now, for these succession of present moments flow like water from a vessel that will soon be emptied.

"It is advisable always to make plans the evening before and make a note of the schedule."

And you thought time management was invented by an American businessman. Save for a few gadgets, nothing in the realm of ideas and wisdom has been invented for a very long time.

Black, Jewish groups campaign against Duke

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With former Klan leader David Duke making a strong run for governor, get-out-the-vote efforts in Louisiana's black communities are the strongest since the early days of the civil rights movement.

Duke

"History is going to be made," said the Rev. Zebadee Bridges, president of the political arm of the Interdenominational Association of Black Ministers of New Orleans.

"We are going to get the vote out as never before."

The get-out-the-vote strategy for Saturday's gubernatorial runoff against former Gov. Edwin Edwards also is intense, but more subtle, in Jewish communities since Duke's strong showing in the Oct. 19 primary.

"We are being extraordinarily careful not to violate the tax exempt status that prevents us from campaigning for a candidate through our synagogues," said Rabbi Edward P. Cohn of Temple Sinai, Louisiana's largest Jewish congregation.

"As individuals, however, there is tremendous work going on in everything from voter registration to getting people to vote absentee ballots to raising money."

A joint statement by Louisiana's highest ranking black religious leaders — from the National Baptist Convention U.S.A. in Baton Rouge, the African Methodist Episcopal Church in New Orleans, the Church of God in Christ in Lafayette and the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church in Shreveport — endorsed Edwards for governor and launched a statewide effort to defeat Duke.

"Duke's overt race baiting brings out the worst instincts in people and plays on fear and ignorance," said a joint statement from the leaders. "We will unite with responsible citizens on Nov. 16 to put him back under the sheet and swastika where he belongs."

Duke, a maverick Republican who describes himself now as a born-again Christian, is a former Ku Klux Klan grand wizard. He once openly expressed Nazi views but says those days are behind him.

With Duke expected to get the majority of the white vote, political consultant Renard Rochon said Edwards will need to double his white vote in the primary to 33 percent and get every black vote available.

Strong black support for Edwards is a given in the election, said Democratic state Rep. Sherman Copelin. A 35 percent white vote for Edwards is well within reason, he said.

"It's amazing. Go in the barrooms, the beauty shops, the clubs, anywhere you have people getting together and you will find people working for votes," Copelin said.

Black voters didn't believe white voters would back Duke to the extent they did in the primary, said Rep. Bill Jefferson, D-La.

"Edwards didn't get as big a black vote as he could have in the primary because black voters just didn't take Duke that seriously," he said.

Black voters also didn't believe white voters would back Duke to the extent they did, Bridges said.

"We just didn't know there were that many white people who still were that prejudiced against us," Bridges said. "Evidently we were wrong, but we won't make that mistake again. In the churches, the social halls, the streets, you're going to really see people working this time."

Louisiana has 2.2 million registered voters, of which a little more than 625,000 are black and 1.6 million are white, said the state Department of Elections and Registration. Of the 625,000 black voters, about 32,000 registered after the October primary.

The state has at least 17,000 but under 20,000 Jews, Cohn said.

Black votes alone wouldn't defeat Duke, analysts said. Some state officials expressed concern over the affects of a strong racial split in the election.

The turnout of black voters for Edwards must be matched by the turnout of white voters who support him, said Democratic state Sen. Cleo Fields.

Black leaders from across the state met in New Orleans last week to map out strategy for reaching out to white voters and defeating Duke.

"We have to reach the segment of the white community that is concerned with bringing the state together," said Mel Jones, a black businessman and civic leader. "What we are doing is extending a hand to the white community to try to work together to move the state ahead. None of us can afford the politics of the past."

Congressman to seek seat Garn's vacating

Associated Press

Democratic Congressman Wayne Owens of Utah said Monday he will forego a bid for a fourth consecutive term and run in 1992 for the Senate seat being vacated by Republican Jake Garn.

In Washington state, a Republican state senator and Medal of Honor winner announced he will seek the U.S. Senate seat held by Democrat Brock Adams.

Utah Republicans quickly denounced Owens' decision, accusing him of reneging on a promise to his constituents and to Garn not to seek the post.

"I feel I have been betrayed by a very close personal friend," Garn said, saying Owens had promised him he would not run for the Senate.

Owens, 53, of Panquitch said he had encouraged Garn to seek reelection and tried to persuade law professor Scott Matheson Jr. to run in 1992. Owens said he decided to run only after Garn and Matheson chose not to.

Owens also blamed the GOP-dominated Legislature for his decision, saying its recent reapportionment had robbed him of Democratic support in his urban, politically diverse district.

In Washington, state Sen. Leo Thorsness attacked congressional insiders Monday as he announced he will seek Adams' seat.

Thorsness, 59, a first-term Renton Republican, said his candidacy would stress increasing America's competitiveness through economic growth and reforms of education, welfare and trade.

Calling for reforms of both Congress and campaign financing, Thorsness said his campaign for the Republican nomination would accept no money from political action committees.

"You can't be an outsider if you take the insiders' money," he said.

Thorsness is a retired Air Force colonel who spent six years as a prisoner of war in Vietnam. He previously lived in South Dakota, where in 1974 he came within a few votes of defeating incumbent Sen. George McGovern just two years after McGovern's unsuccessful presidential bid.

European scientists want $5 billion for fusion reactor

LONDON (AP) — European scientists in pursuit of nuclear fusion's clean and unlimited energy said Monday they will appeal for $5 billion to build a reactor for experiments by a consortium of nations, including the United States.

The scientists were thrilled by an experiment on Saturday in which they said they achieved fusion for two seconds and produced about 1.7 megawatts of power for nearly a second.

The commercial production of fusion power in decades away, but it promises an boundless source energy. The main fuel used in fusion can easily be extracted from water, and scientists also say that the process is much safer than the nuclear fission that powers today's nuclear plants.

Scientists from 14 European countries took part in Saturday's experiment at the Joint European Torus, or JET, nuclear research center, 50 miles north of London.

The United States, the Soviet Union and Japan had long been working on their own to achieve the same results.

An American scientist said Monday that U.S. research has been hampered by tight budgets.

Dr. Ronald C. Davidson, head of the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory at Princeton University in New Jersey, said the European breakthrough would not change the American timetable for similar experiments. He also said he hoped the success would stimulate worldwide interest in fusion as a possible alternative fuel.

The proposed International Thermonuclear Experimental Reactor is supported by the Soviets, Americans, Japanesse and the European Community. The experimental nuclear fusion reactor would cost $5 billion, but the scientists say it would be worth it.

At the news conference Monday, Alan Gibson, associate director of JET, said: "We are in the business here of establishing energy options for the next century.

"Fusion has in its favor ... the largest fuel reserves on the planet."

The scientists want their countries to put up the $5 billion. But they said many politicians are reluctant to become committed to the research because it will not bear fruit for years.

"Too many people will be dead when we will see fusion so they are not really interested," said Paul-Henri Rebut, director of JET.

Nuclear fusion is a process that gives the sun and stars their energy. Instead of splitting heavy atoms of uranium as in the fission process, fusion unites light atoms of hydrogen to release energy.

In Saturday's experiment, two forms of hydrogen — tritium and deuterium — were fed into the Torus apparatus. They were heated to 360 million degrees, 20 times hotter than the sun, by electric currents that transform the hydrogen into a plasma and create a powerful magnetic field.

Scientists had been using deuterium to produce fusion, but on Saturday they added tritium for the first time and produced a surge of energy.

Thousands get AIDS each day, WHO says

GENEVA (AP) — Heterosexual sex is the method of infection for 75 percent of the people with the AIDS virus worldwide, and is increasingly the pathway for the virus in Western countries, the World Health Organization said Monday.

The majority of the heterosexually infected people are in the developing world, particularly in Africa, and this group is still only a small percentage of the total AIDS cases in North America and Europe, the Geneva-based agency said in an extensive report.

The U.N. group says up to 5,000 people are infected with AIDS each day around the world, and officials fear an increase in pregnant women infecting their babies.

Awareness about heterosexual transmission of the AIDS virus was heightened after basketball star Magic Johnson announced Thursday he had the HIV virus and said he had no homosexual affairs.

In the United States, 3 percent of men and 34 percent of woman contracted the virus from a person of the opposite sex, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"It is not easy to change sexual behavior, but hopefully with more people like Magic Johnson coming out and talking about their illness everyone will realize they are at risk and take more care," said Dr. Michael Merson, head of the U.N. health agency's AIDS program.

Merson said large-scale effectiveness tests of possible AIDS vaccines are planned for Thailand, Uganda, Rwanda and Brazil — nations with some of the highest AIDS rates. The tests — which will involve several thousand volunteers — mark a departure from previous approaches favoring early testing on animals.

About a dozen potential vaccines to slow or halt the onset on AIDS are being tested on smaller groups in the United States and Europe, and several more may be available. The larger trials are likely to be ready "within a couple of years," Merson said.

But he advised against having too much hope for the vaccines.

"The major point is that we're not going to have a vaccine today and we're not going to have a vaccine tomorrow," Merson said. "We have to do everything we can to inform the public now of the risks and the need for safer sex."

It usually takes about 10 years before a person with HIV to show the full signs of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which attacks the immune system and leads to death.

Council to debate animal control charges

■ City facility seeks rate increase for impoundment fee, boarding fee and flea and tick dips.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

The cost of a runaway pet may be getting more expensive, with an animal control rate increase proposal to be considered by the Midland City Council today.

Councilmen, meeting at 10 a.m. in the chambers at City Hall, will consider increased charges for several of the department's services.

"We try to review these every one or two years," said Susan Thorpe, assistant city manager. "We have to maintain our charges in line with the market."

Ms. Thorpe said the slight increases, most a matter of a few dollars, are expected to bring in $3,500 per year.

If the proposal is approved, the impoundment fee, charged per confined pet, will be set on a tiered scale based on the number of offenses. Pets without a previous record will be charged $40. Proof the animal has been spayed or neutered will save the owner $15 on that cost.

"That's a kind of incentive to encourage people to spay or neuter their pets, something we think is very important," Ms. Thorpe said.

Under the new proposal, the second impoundment for the pet would increase to $50, and the third $60. Pet pick-up, now $10, would increase to $15 under the plan.

Other delinquent pet charges include a boarding fee, which may increase from $3 per day to $5. It is for funding feeding and watering of sheltered pets. Sick pets who must be quarantined in a special area of the shelter would be boarded at a rate of $6 per day.

Flea and tick dips, now $10, would increase to $12 per animal.

An advisory committee has approved the proposed fee increases, part of a series of possibilities designed by animal control staffers.

Also at today's meeting, councilmen will consider an agreement for funding a group known as Citizens Coalition for Economic Development. Operating under the direction of the Northeast YMCA, the group is seeking surplus hotel-motel tax money to promote job creation in the city's southeast side. About $28,000 remains in the tax fund, city officials said.

Purchase of a new ambulance is to be considered as well, to replace the vehicle destroyed in a recent accident.

Adoptive mom involved with Gladney group

■ Local auxiliary working toward opening a Gladney Center field office in Midland.

By Allen E. Howland
Assistant City Editor

Adoption can expand your family in more ways than one.

When Craig and Susan Atchison brought their daughter Caroline home from the Gladney Center in Fort Worth just more than two years ago, they not only gained a bouncy, blue-eyed bundle of blonde energy, but they got a built-in local support group of fellow adoptive parents.

Those parents make up the Midland Gladney Auxiliary, which provides family support for new and prospective adoptive parents as well as outreach and education on the issue of adoption.

The bond among them is their children — all of whom were placed by the 104-year-old agency.

Mrs. Atchison currently is president of the local Gladney Auxiliary, which is in the midst of a major fund-raising campaign aimed at opening a field office here by next spring.

The major event in the drive will be a Nov. 21 benefit featuring Margaret Bush, who will relate stories of her two Gladney children, especially their experiences at their grandparents' house at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D.C.

Gladney Center president Michael McMahon, recently in town for fund-raising activities, called Mrs. Bush's slide presentation "very personal" and an interesting glimpse behind the scenes at the White House.

Mrs. Bush and her husband, Marvin, have adopted two children with the assistance of the center, which was founded in 1887 by the Rev. I.Z.T. Morris as the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society. Its work focused on finding appropriate adoptive parents for orphaned or abandoned children, reversing the then-accepted social practice of parents merely "selecting" a child.

That thorough screening and matching process is still a major concern at the center. After a brief initial application, prospective parents must complete a 25-30 page form detailing personal data and family history and write a narrative autobiography.

After a half-day personal interview, a case worker from Gladney makes an in-home visit to lay the groundwork for matching adoptive parents with a birth mother. The entire approval process typically takes up to a year to complete.

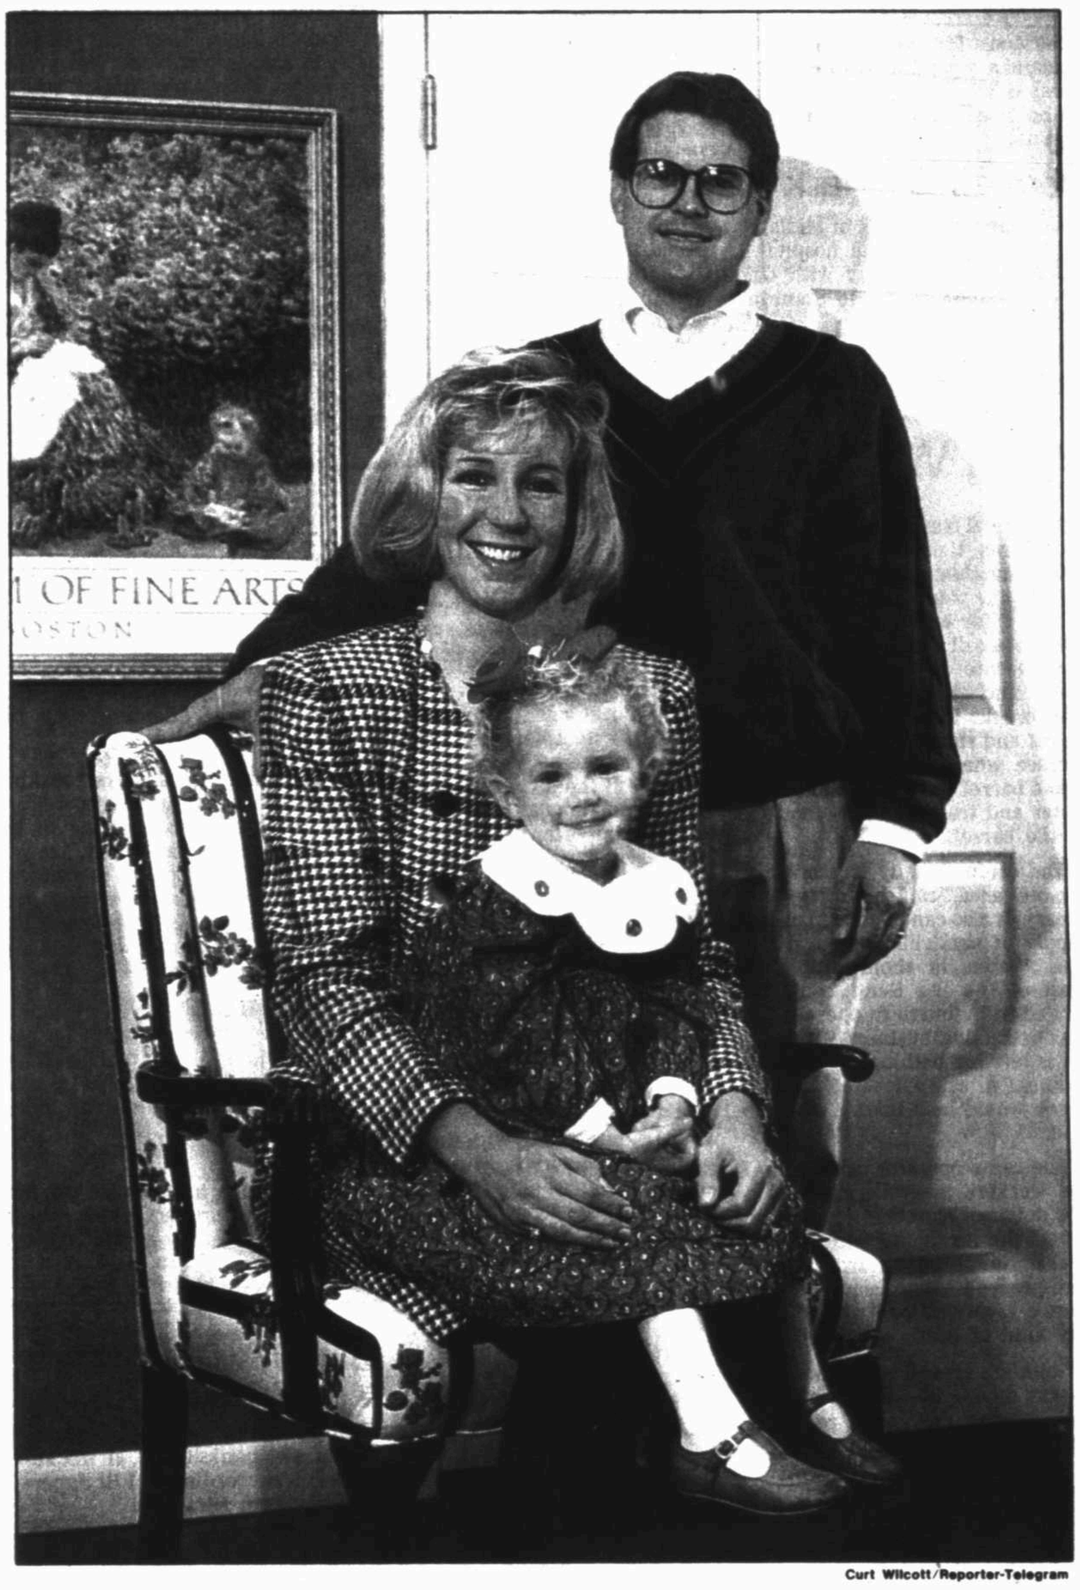

Under a newly instituted policy at the center, birth mothers are allowed to review the background of three finalists and select a home for their child.

After they are approved for adoption, parents may wait anywhere from several weeks to more than a year for a child.

The center has a residential campus with an accredited high school for birth mothers in Fort Worth, but McMahon noted that there is a trend toward young women remaining at home during their pregnancy.

Officers training for DARE program

■ Midland is one of five sites across the state at which police officers are learning how to teach students to stay away from drugs.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Three dozen police officers from throughout the state are in the midst of a two-week training program at the Ramada Inn in Midland that will provide them with skills to move to an educational phase of law enforcement work.

The officers want to become Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) officers. DARE officers work full-time teaching fifth and sixth graders how to avoid drugs and the inevitable peer pressure to use them.

Conceived in Los Angeles in 1983, the DARE program has grown from 10 officers to 10,000.

"The program has just drawn an interest beyond belief," said Sgt. Craig Fletcher of the Houston Police Department. Fletcher is leading DARE training throughout the state. The Houston Police Department implemented the program in 1987 and its success spawned statewide interest among police departments and school districts alike.

"Everyone is becoming increasingly concerned about educating the kids. As the enthusiasm has grown, a definite need for established training centers rose," said Fletcher.

This year, Midland serves as one of five required training centers in Texas. According to Fletcher, the two-week training course is designed to help the officers learn educational methods and sharpen public-speaking skills.

"We do a lot of unusual things in the seminars. We have a bear that serves as our mascot and the officers compete for possession of the bear through various competi-

Many ranchers set up candellila wax camps

By Ross McSwain
Associated Press

MARATHON — Candelilla wax-making used to be big business in the Big Bend, but the hard work and remote lifestyle required to extract the material from its native plant source has ended.

Today, drug smuggling provides more profit for those living along the Rio Grande.

But wax-making boomed at one time in this region of Texas where the candelilla plant grows in abundance. During the long drought of the 1950s, many ranchers along the border looking for extra income started work camps where the waxy substance was extracted from the plant.

Those living along the Mexican side of the river also smuggled lots of candelilla wax into the United States, where they sold it to traders rather than selling it to the Banco de Mexico, as required by the Mexican government.

Candelilla wax is one of the best vegetable waxes, second only to the South American "carnauba" wax in quality. In fact, candelilla wax is mixed with carnauba wax after refining.

The result is a high-quality product, used in floor and furniture waxes, cosmetics, lipstick, breath fresheners, in lubricants for missiles and other products. In the 1950s, the wax was used extensively in the production of phonograph records.

When the Hallie Stillwell Hall of Fame Museum was opened at the end of October at the Stillwell Ranch and RV Camp south of Marathon, a special attraction for the nearly 1,000 people who attended the celebration was a working candelilla wax camp.

"I've waited 79 years to see this," said one man who had come to the Stillwell museum opening. "I've heard about candelilla wax making all my life. This is the first time I have ever seen it done."

Hallie Stillwell, who celebrated her 94th birthday that same day, opened five candelilla wax camps on her 50-section ranch during a drought and worked 40 men. The wax that Mrs. Stillwell was able to sell to dealers helped feed her family and her cattle, she said.

"Momma saved the ranch in the 1950s selling the wax," said Dadie Potter, recalling how the camps were put up in remote areas of the ranch close to where candelilla plants grew in profusion.

Sam Houston school has new look

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

People who haven't been to Sam Houston Elementary School since it was renovated think they have walked into the wrong building, according to Principal Stanton Burrill.

"We are extremely excited about the new look," Burrill said. "It's functional and so much more conducive for children to learn. It's also pleasant."

Burrill said the school is decorated in subdued shades of mauve and tan.

The $1.4 million renovation was "very similar" to the construction done at Washington Elementary school, according to James Riggen, architect for Midland Independent School District.

Houston was completely gutted during the summer months.

Construction included enclosing walkways and expanding office space into the library.

"The library became additional office space, so we are without a library until the second phase of construction," Burrill said.

The second phase of construction will include adding a multipurpose room and renovating the adjacent former MISD administration building into a library and additional classrooms.

The next phase of construction was included in the district's $24 million bond package passed in the May 4 election.

MISD administrative personnel have moved into the former Exxon building, at 615 W. Missouri. School board trustees also meet in the downtown building, leaving the former administration building free for classroom space.

Houston had its rededication ceremony Monday night. Past principals of the school were featured along with entertainment from the Houston choir.

The school was renovated and rebuilt by Campbell Construction.

GLADNEY: Center matches adoptive parents, children

about 100 young women at the center at a time and last year, the home placed about 250 children in adoptive homes.

Nearly 10 times that many parents began the application process with Gladney.

There are 21 auxiliaries, primarily in the Southwest, but also in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C., which work to contact physicians, counselors, pastors and other individuals who may be the first contact for a girl facing a crisis pregnancy.

More than 13 percent of American teen-age girls will face an unplanned pregnancy by the time they reach high school graduation age, McMahon said.

Calling that prevalence an "epidemic," Gladney officials and volunteers work with schools and youth groups to make more young women aware of "the loving option of adoption," Mrs. Atchison said.

One of the tools that Gladney educators use is a videotape entitled "Sex and Sacrifice," which began as a class project for a career development program.

In the 20-minute documentary, several of the Gladney girls — what they call themselves — discuss the consequences of being sexually active.

For young women who choose to give up their baby for adoption through Gladney, the consequences can include staying apprised of their child's development. The center forwards non-identifying mail between biological and adoptive families with the consent of both parties.

Each year on Caroline's birthday, the Atchisons write a letter to her birth mother, detailing their daughter's growing up.

Although she doesn't yet understand all it encompasses, Caroline prays for her birth mother each night at bedtime and has a stuffed bear from her on her bed.

The Atchisons are typical of adoptive parents in the '90s by being open about the circumstances surrounding Caroline's birth.

Thinking has evolved and experts believe that it is very healthy for a child to know they are adopted, Atchison said. "It should never be a surprise or some sort of dramatic secret." At age 21, adopted children can sign up with the Texas Voluntary Registry, which allows them to contact their birth mother, if she is registered.

The local auxiliary, which comprises more than 40 families, has regular family meetings that give youngsters a chance to grow up knowing other adoptive children.

"It's important for them to understand that their birth mothers loved them and wanted them to grow up with married parents in a family that was ready for a child," Mrs. Atchison said.

The couple celebrated Caroline's second birthday in another way, applying with Gladney to adopt a son. Gladney rules do not allow parents to specify the sex of a first child and require couples to wait at least two years before applying for a second child.

The Atchisons, who met as undergraduate students at Texas A&M in 1978, consider themselves lucky, having waited less than 8 months after they were approved until Caroline came into their lives. The couple had tried to start a family for more than three years before pursuing adoption.

The Gladney Auxiliary also provides support for families coping with the issues of infertility and conception, Mrs. Atchison explained.

If fund-raising efforts are successful in opening a Midland field office for the agency, it would mark the first office west of the Metroplex. In the last year, offices have opened in Houston, Oklahoma City and Dallas.

Gladney Auxiliary sets benefit

Staff Report

The Gladney Auxiliary's style show, dinner and program begins at 6:30 p.m. Nov. 21 at the Midland Petroleum Club.

Adoptive parents and their children will participate in a fashion show before the 7 p.m. dinner, which is being held to raise funds for a prospective local field office.

Margaret (Mrs. Marvin) Bush is to be the guest speaker.

Local counselors have been invited as guests to learn about Gladney's program.

Student essays displayed at book store

Staff Report

The five winning essays from the local National Children's Book Week contest will be on display at Pages and Prints bookstore through Friday.

All the essay entries — from five classes of Midland public schools — will also be available for perusal at the bookstore.

Contest winners are Courtney Ratliff and Tom Kaul, eighth graders from Goddard Junior High School; second graders Megan Tipton from Quanah Parker Elementary School and Tanya Chavez from Ben Milam Elementary School; and Jeremy Pierce from Anson Jones Elementary School.

A quote from Tom's essay "The World is an Open Book," was incorrectly attributed in a story in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

His essay began, "We the people, are many times what we are because of books. Books tell us about different parts of the world and the people that live there. From reading books we learn that we all come in many colors, shapes, sizes and nationalities . . ."

Tom's complete essay, and the complete essays of all the winners will be published each day this week in the Reporter-Telegram in honor of National Children's Book Week.

The contest was sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram, Midland Independent School District and Pages and Prints bookstore.

Patteann Daniel-Beverley, contest sponsor and bookstore owner, judged the contest along with Lucinda Windsor, MISD coordinator of language arts.

Book week activities will continue with a Book Fair 6-8 p.m. tonight at Carver Cultural Center, 1300 E. Wall. Persons wearing the costumes of book characters "Spot" and "Clifford" will attend the book fair.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce will salute the Pages and Prints teen board, the Paracletes, with a ribbon cutting on Thursday for the new young adult section of the bookstore.

The bookstore participated in the recent Multicultural Book Exhibit for the West Texas Regional Council for Social Studies Teachers at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. The bookstore also provided an exhibit of preschool books and teacher-oriented materials for the Child Care Conference at Midland College.

CAMPS: Wax-making hard and dirty work

(From 1B)

"I got 35 to 65 cents a pound for the wax," Mrs. Stillwell said. "It was good business until the record companies started buying wax from South America and the price went down 15 cents a pound in one day. That put me out of the wax business, but I was out of water anyway."

Manuel Galindo of Fort Stockton used to work in a wax camp near San Carlos, Mexico, before coming to the United States. He also is an experienced adobe maker and made the adobe used to build the Stillwell museum.

Galindo said candelilla wax brings up to $1 a pound today in Mexico, but few people work in the camps any longer.

"The work is too hard, and people have to live in such primitive conditions where the camps are located," he said.

The process takes lots of water for boiling the plants. A cup of sulfuric acid is poured into the boiling water to loosen the wax from the plant stems. However, the candelilla plant is a recyclable resource. The boiled and dried plants can be used to fuel the fires needed for boiling the next batch.

Two men can keep the fires going and keep the iron vat filled with plants, but it takes a big crew of men to pull the plants and bring them to camp in bundles carried by burros.

When the candelilla plants are dumped into the boiling water, a heavy metal frame is used to press the plants tightly into the vat, squeezing them to the bottom.

After the plant has boiled under pressure for about 15 to 20 minutes, a small amount of acid is poured into the water, spewing water and clouds of steam. The wax breaks loose from the plant leaves and stems and floats to the surface where it is skimmed off into a barrel. As the wax hardens, water and trash go to the bottom of the barrel.

The camp, usually located in a remote area, can be dirty and dreary. It also can be moved as the supply of candelilla plants dwindles. Water, in short supply in most of the Big Bend, must be hauled in by burro to operate the wax-extracting business. Thus, little is left for bathing or washing clothes. A camp located near a creek would be a luxury, Galindo said.

The camp operator usually paid the workers in groceries, plus a few dollars. Cigarettes were at the top of the list, along with coffee, beans, flour and sugar. Cans of sardines and Vienna sausage also were a favorite along with almost any kind of candy or sweets.

Galindo's crew made a nice pile of wax during that museum-opening day, but they were ready to quit and go home by evening.

"I remember how hard we worked," he said. "I like my life now better."

VOLUNTEERING

Fall for the great feeling you will receive by helping others. The needs are many and diverse. A few of the opportunities available through the Volunteer Center of Midland include:

■ A local agency needs your help with its Telephone Reassurance Program. Your friendly voice will help reassure homebound individuals that their well-being is important. The few minutes each day you share on the phone with them will be a highlight in their day, as well as yours.

■ A local senior citizen's agency needs your help to call and visit homebound individuals. This is a very flexible volunteer opportunity and the need is great. Call a friend and team up for this enjoyable volunteer program.

■ A local agency invites you and your friends to help with their second annual hayride. You will assist with chaparoning for this special event. Get in on a good time and make new friends in the process. Call the Volunteer Center today for more information.

■ Experience the reward of helping an adult learn to read. A local agency is recruiting tutors for its adult literacy program. Excellent training is provided. Call the Volunteer Center today for more details.

■ Mentors can and are a making a difference in the lives of welfare mothers who are striving to become more self-sufficient. Are you interested in helping a person who is motivated to improve their quality of life and independence? For more information, call the Volunteer Center today.

■ 697-HELP. The only number you need to remember when you have a question or problem and do not know where to find the answer. Call Information and Referral Midland. 697-HELP.

Man accused of killing lawman to go on trial

HOUSTON (AP) — A man accused of fatally shooting a Houston police officer who had stopped to question him in a dark alley is scheduled to go on trial today.

Shelton Denora Jones is charged with capital murder in the April 7 slaying of police Sgt. Bruno Soboleski, 33. If convicted, Jones would either be sentenced to death or life in prison.

Soboleski and Linda Ligon, a grand jury foreman riding with the officer, were on their way back to the police station about 1 a.m. when the officer saw two men in an alley.

Suspecting they might be involved in drug activity, Soboleski stopped to question them. As the officer began to search Gregory Pickrom, prosecutors claim Jones pulled a 9mm pistol and fired a series of shots at Soboleski. A third man nearby also opened fire on the officer from behind some parked cars.

Soboleski was wounded in the chest, abdomen and groin. Ms. Ligon, who is scheduled to testify during the trial, called for help on the police car radio. Soboleski died a few days later.

Christopher Dwight Coleman, 19, faces charges of attempted capital murder in Soboleski's slaying. Pickrom was not charged in the case.

A 13-member jury was selected during an 18-day period last month. Another juror was picked earlier this month when one of the original panel members became ill and was dismissed.

Man charged in other robberies

Staff Report

One of three men arrested in connection with the Nov. 5 robbery of Team Bank was charged with robbing four other banks in California.

Alvin Shinette Jr., 22, of Galveston, was charged with robbing banks, Aug. 30, Sept. 28 and two banks Oct. 3, all in California, according to FBI Supervisor Tom Kirspel.

Kirspel said more information is still being gathered concerning the other suspects.

Guard shoots man in struggle

DALLAS (AP) — Police said Monday they plan to file shoplifting and assault charges against a man whose friend was killed as the two fought with a security guard over a gun.

Off-duty police officer Gary Colecchi shot a man who attacked him and attempted to take away his gun as Colecchi arrested the shoplifting suspect. Colecci was working as a security guard at a Sound Warehouse Store.

Deputy Police Chief Granver Tolliver said Joe Robert Tovar, 31, was shot twice in the chest and was pronounced dead upon arrival at Parkland Memorial Hospital Sunday night.

Tovar's friend had stolen a blank cassette tape and had been taken to the store manager's office by Colecchi, Tolliver said.

The arrested man and Tovar both attacked Colecchi and tried to take the officer's weapon during a struggle, Tolliver said.

"He (Colecchi) had his hand up, trying to get them back," Tolliver said. "But they came back at him, and that's when he fired."

The man arrested in the incident likely will be charged with misdemeanor theft and aggravated assault on a peace officer, a third degree felony, Deputy Chief Pam Walt said.

DRUGS: Officers DARE to train

tions," said Fletcher. "If a group loses the bear we make them do something embarrassing. It usually becomes pretty competitive."

Testing can be a rigorous process, as well.

"We make them write poems about DARE, give a two-minute impromptu speech and a 45 minute prepared lesson at the end," said Fletcher.

Locally, the DARE program operates through funds generated from the third year of a continuing five-year grant. The grant must be applied for annually with the amount of money decreasing each year.

The city has donated $73,838 to the program this year and the Midland Independent School District has added $30,000. This grant, paired with the state's allocation of $39,651, raised the total given to the program to $143,489.

According to Rick Menchaca, assistant to the city manager, this money provides for the salaries of three full-time officers who visit local schools to teach sixth-graders the merits of staying away from drugs. The funds also pay for all the educational supplies used in the classes.

Former construction worker executed in slaying

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A former construction worker who was among the longest serving of inmates on Texas death row was executed early Tuesday for the 1976 slaying of a Montgomery County probation officer.

G.W. Green, 54, sentenced to die for the shooting death of John Denson during a robbery at Denson's home, received a lethal injection at 12:10 a.m. CST and was pronounced dead at 12:17 a.m.

Green

Green, whose full beard, dark glasses and raspy voice made him appear like a hippie from the 1960s, was among the longest-serving of the 349 inmates on the Texas death row, the nation's largest.

After federal appeals courts and state courts rejected Green's requests for a stay, he appealed to the Supreme Court on Monday. But the Supreme Court refused to block his execution.

The Monday afternoon vote was 7-2, with Justices Harry Blackmon and John Paul Stevens dissenting.

"We all are born, we all live a while, and we all die," Green, who has refused to speak with reporters in recent weeks, said in an earlier interview. "I never thought I was going to live forever. I have no apologies, no mercy to ask.

"When it comes time to go to the table, I'm going to roll up my sleeve and say: 'Get it right.' If they keep me here till I'm 70 and then snuff me, I'm going to be the oldest hippie. I don't think I'll blast off for Jesus. I'll never tell someone I'm sorry for something I didn't commit."

Attorneys for Green contended his trial jury wasn't able to consider all the evidence in the case and was not allowed to consider the fact he was not the triggerman in the Denson killing. They also argued his legal help at trial was ineffective.

The triggerman in the slaying, Joseph Starvaggi, was executed Sept. 10, 1987. A third man involved in the case, Glen Earl Martin, received a life prison term and remains jailed.

Testimony showed the three broke into the Denson home near Magnolia, about 50 miles northwest of Houston, to steal a $6,000 gun collection. Denson, a parttime probation officer and sheriff's reserve deputy, had answered a knock on the door and was confronted by a gunman and the others.

He was shot while his wife and then 12-year-old daughter listened horrified, hiding under a blanket.

"I was robbed of something that was very precious and nobody can ever replace that," Susan Denson, now 27, said Monday. "For things in my life, I wanted my father there and he wasn't there. It has not been easy by any means. Unless you're a victim or lost someone close, you can never know the feeling."

She also said she would like to be in the death chamber when Green is executed, although her presence is not allowed by prison officials.

"It would give me the satisfaction knowing that he's finally gone," she said of Green. "I want my face to be the last one he sees before he goes to hell."

Denson's wife, Grace, identified Green in a lineup by the sound of his voice. She said Green had screamed at Starvaggi to kill them as well but Starvaggi refused.

"I want him to suffer, although maybe he's not suffering as much as my husband did," Mrs. Denson said. "I would like for him to suffer."

Green was the fifth Texas inmate put to death this year.

Texan ready in case Zairean troops attack

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — As foreigners gathered to discuss what to do if the unrest in Zaire intensified after Belgian troops withdrew last week, Texas conservationist Delfi Messinger already had set up her hiding place.

Deep inside a multimillion-dollar French lab set up to study deadly viruses, past a row of lights that could sterilize anyone passing by, the Austin woman was stacking up food in case Zairean troops riot again.

When Belgian troops left they donated military rations and dozens of boxes of cereal. "I sure wish I had some milk. I guess the chimps will eat them," she said.

A mutiny by Zairean troops in September triggered the intervention of French and Belgian troops and the evacuation of more than 15,000 Westerners in the former Belgian Congo. When the Belgians left this week Zaire's political problems remained unsolved and new violence was feared.

Ms. Messinger, 37, is allowed to run several conservation programs at the National Institute of Bio-Medical Research in return for taking care of its chickens, lab mice and sheep. The institute is across the street from a military camp.

"In September, they looked at me and fired their guns in the air," Ms. Messinger recalled.

She said soldiers were leery of the vipers and pythons she keeps. French Foreign Legion troops who came to check her security were impressed and left.

Her favorite reptile is an import from North America, a king snake that "isn't poisonous but it bites ..."

Ms. Messinger, a former Peace Corps volunteer, has been caring for chimpanzees and other animals since 1987. She made a deal with the French-built and operated institute, which was involved in AIDS and other research, that allowed her to keep her animals on its grounds.

Her menagerie includes eight Bonabo chimps, previously mistakenly classified as pgymy chimpanzees.

"It's an important group because there are few in captivity and the people who are investigating the endangered nature of the species feel that every single captive individual is important," said Jane Goodall, a Briton who is a leading authority on chimpanzee behavior.

Goodall, who was visiting Zaire when the riots erupted in September, said in a telephone interview from Britain, "Delfi is certainly brave and tenacious. She saved the lives of all the animals. I just hope it doesn't get worse."

French Ambassador Henri Rethore wrote Ms. Messinger that the measures she took saved the institute from pillaging troops.

"To protect my animals I had to protect the lab," said Messinger.

Americans who fled also entrusted her with sophisticated equipment from the U.S. research project on AIDS in Kinshasa, the most important in Africa.

Goodall has offered to help Ms. Messinger transfer her Bonabos to Brazzaville, across the river in the Congo, if it becomes necessary.

Ms. Messinger, who graduated from Southwest Texas State University at San Marcos with a degree in animal sciences, arrived in Zaire in 1984 to teach agriculture in a Peace Corps project in the Kasai, the geographical center of the former Belgian Congo.

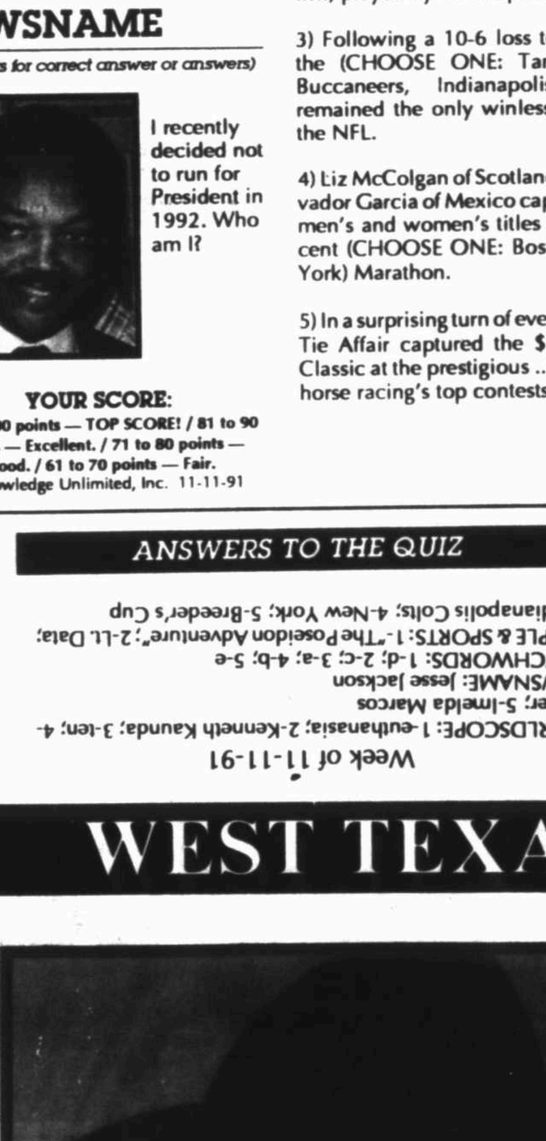

Later she worked in a study of monkey pox, a serious health problem in some areas.

GLADNEY: Center matches adoptive parents, children

about 100 young women at the center at a time and last year, the home placed about 250 children in adoptive homes.

Nearly 10 times that many parents began the application process with Gladney.

There are 21 auxiliaries, primarily in the Southwest, but also in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C., which work to contact physicians, counselors, pastors and other individuals who may be the first contact for a girl facing a crisis pregnancy.

More than 13 percent of American teen-age girls will face an unplanned pregnancy by the time they reach high school graduation age, McMahon said.

Calling that prevalence an "epidemic," Gladney officials and volunteers work with schools and youth groups to make more young women aware of "the loving option of adoption," Mrs. Atchison said.

One of the tools that Gladney educators use is a videotape entitled "Sex and Sacrifice," which began as a class project for a career development program.

In the 20-minute documentary, several of the Gladney girls — what they call themselves — discuss the consequences of being sexually active.

For young women who choose to give up their baby for adoption through Gladney, the consequences can include staying apprised of their child's development. The center forwards non-identifying mail between biological and adoptive families with the consent of both parties.

Each year on Caroline's birthday, the Atchisons write a letter to her birth mother, detailing their daughter's growing up.

Although she doesn't yet understand all it encompasses, Caroline prays for her birth mother each night at bedtime and has a stuffed bear from her on her bed.

The Atchisons are typical of adoptive parents in the '90s by being open about the circumstances surrounding Caroline's birth.

Thinking has evolved and experts believe that it is very healthy for a child to know they are adopted, Atchison said. "It should never be a surprise or some sort of dramatic secret." At age 21, adopted children can sign up with the Texas Voluntary Registry, which allows them to contact their birth mother, if she is registered.

The local auxiliary, which comprises more than 40 families, has regular family meetings that give youngsters a chance to grow up knowing other adoptive children.

"It's important for them to understand that their birth mothers loved them and wanted them to grow up with married parents in a family that was ready for a child," Mrs. Atchison said.

The couple celebrated Caroline's second birthday in another way, applying with Gladney to adopt a son. Gladney rules do not allow parents to specify the sex of a first child and require couples to wait at least two years before applying for a second child.

The Atchisons, who met as undergraduate students at Texas A&M in 1978, consider themselves lucky, having waited less than 8 months after they were approved until Caroline came into their lives. The couple had tried to start a family for more than three years before pursuing adoption.

The Gladney Auxiliary also provides support for families coping with the issues of infertility and conception, Mrs. Atchison explained.

If fund-raising efforts are successful in opening a Midland field office for the agency, it would mark the first office west of the Metroplex. In the last year, offices have opened in Houston, Oklahoma City and Dallas.

Student essays displayed at book store

Staff Report

The five winning essays from the local National Children's Book Week contest will be on display at Pages and Prints bookstore through Friday.

All the essay entries — from five classes of Midland public schools — will also be available for perusal at the bookstore.

Contest winners are Courtney Ratliff and Tom Kaul, eighth graders from Goddard Junior High School; second graders Megan Tipton from Quanah Parker Elementary School and Tanya Chavez from Ben Milam Elementary School; and Jeremy Pierce from Anson Jones Elementary School.

A quote from Tom's essay "The World is an Open Book," was incorrectly attributed in a story in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

His essay began, "We the people, are many times what we are because of books. Books tell us about different parts of the world and the people that live there. From reading books we learn that we all come in many colors, shapes, sizes and nationalities . . ."

Tom's complete essay, and the complete essays of all the winners will be published each day this week in the Reporter-Telegram in honor of National Children's Book Week.

The contest was sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram, Midland Independent School District and Pages and Prints bookstore.

Patteann Daniel-Beverley, contest sponsor and bookstore owner, judged the contest along with Lucinda Windsor, MISD coordinator of language arts.

Book week activities will continue with a Book Fair 6-8 p.m. tonight at Carver Cultural Center, 1300 E. Wall. Persons wearing the costumes of book characters "Spot" and "Clifford" will attend the book fair.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce will salute the Pages and Prints teen board, the Paracletes, with a ribbon cutting on Thursday for the new young adult section of the bookstore.

The bookstore participated in the recent Multicultural Book Exhibit for the West Texas Regional Council for Social Studies Teachers at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. The bookstore also provided an exhibit of preschool books and teacher-oriented materials for the Child Care Conference at Midland College.

(From 1B)

"I got 35 to 65 cents a pound for the wax," Mrs. Stillwell said. "It was good business until the record companies started buying wax from South America and the price went down 15 cents a pound in one day. That put me out of the wax business, but I was out of water anyway."

Manuel Galindo of Fort Stockton used to work in a wax camp near San Carlos, Mexico, before coming to the United States. He also is an experienced adobe maker and made the adobe used to build the Stillwell museum.

Galindo said candelilla wax brings up to $1 a pound today in Mexico, but few people work in the camps any longer.

"The work is too hard, and people have to live in such primitive conditions where the camps are located," he said.

The process takes lots of water for boiling the plants. A cup of sulfuric acid is poured into the boiling water to loosen the wax from the plant stems. However, the candelilla plant is a recyclable resource. The boiled and dried plants can be used to fuel the fires needed for boiling the next batch.

Two men can keep the fires going and keep the iron vat filled with plants, but it takes a big crew of men to pull the plants and bring them to camp in bundles carried by burros.

When the candelilla plants are dumped into the boiling water, a heavy metal frame is used to press the plants tightly into the vat, squeezing them to the bottom.

After the plant has boiled under pressure for about 15 to 20 minutes, a small amount of acid is poured into the water, spewing water and clouds of steam. The wax breaks loose from the plant leaves and stems and floats to the surface where it is skimmed off into a barrel. As the wax hardens, water and trash go to the bottom of the barrel.

The camp, usually located in a remote area, can be dirty and dreary. It also can be moved as the supply of candelilla plants dwindles. Water, in short supply in most of the Big Bend, must be hauled in by burro to operate the wax-extracting business. Thus, little is left for bathing or washing clothes. A camp located near a creek would be a luxury, Galindo said.

The camp operator usually paid the workers in groceries, plus a few dollars. Cigarettes were at the top of the list, along with coffee, beans, flour and sugar. Cans of sardines and Vienna sausage also were a favorite along with almost any kind of candy or sweets.

Galindo's crew made a nice pile of wax during that museum-opening day, but they were ready to quit and go home by evening.

"I remember how hard we worked," he said. "I like my life now better."

■ A local agency needs your help with its Telephone Reassurance Program. Your friendly voice will help reassure homebound individuals that their well-being is important. The few minutes each day you share on the phone with them will be a highlight in their day, as well as yours.

■ A local senior citizen's agency needs your help to call and visit homebound individuals. This is a very flexible volunteer opportunity and the need is great. Call a friend and team up for this enjoyable volunteer program.

■ A local agency invites you and your friends to help with their second annual hayride. You will assist with chaparoning for this special event. Get in on a good time and make new friends in the process. Call the Volunteer Center today for more information.

■ Experience the reward of helping an adult learn to read. A local agency is recruiting tutors for its adult literacy program. Excellent training is provided. Call the Volunteer Center today for more details.

■ Mentors can and are a making a difference in the lives of welfare mothers who are striving to become more self-sufficient. Are you interested in helping a person who is motivated to improve their quality of life and independence? For more information, call the Volunteer Center today.

■ 697-HELP. The only number you need to remember when you have a question or problem and do not know where to find the answer. Call Information and Referral Midland. 697-HELP.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center of Midland 697-8781.

Man accused of killing lawman to go on trial

HOUSTON (AP) — A man accused of fatally shooting a Houston police officer who had stopped to question him in a dark alley is scheduled to go on trial today.

Shelton Denora Jones is charged with capital murder in the April 7 slaying of police Sgt. Bruno Soboleski, 33. If convicted, Jones would either be sentenced to death or life in prison.

Soboleski and Linda Ligon, a grand jury foreman riding with the officer, were on their way back to the police station about 1 a.m. when the officer saw two men in an alley.

Suspecting they might be involved in drug activity, Soboleski stopped to question them. As the officer began to search Gregory Pickrom, prosecutors claim Jones pulled a 9mm pistol and fired a series of shots at Soboleski. A third man nearby also opened fire on the officer from behind some parked cars.

Soboleski was wounded in the chest, abdomen and groin. Ms. Ligon, who is scheduled to testify during the trial, called for help on the police car radio. Soboleski died a few days later.

Christopher Dwight Coleman, 19, faces charges of attempted capital murder in Soboleski's slaying. Pickrom was not charged in the case.

A 13-member jury was selected during an 18-day period last month. Another juror was picked earlier this month when one of the original panel members became ill and was dismissed.

Man charged in other robberies

Staff Report

One of three men arrested in connection with the Nov. 5 robbery of Team Bank was charged with robbing four other banks in California.

Alvin Shinette Jr., 22, of Galveston, was charged with robbing banks, Aug. 30, Sept. 28 and two banks Oct. 3, all in California, according to FBI Supervisor Tom Kirspel.

Kirspel said more information is still being gathered concerning the other suspects.

Guard shoots man in struggle

DALLAS (AP) — Police said Monday they plan to file shoplifting and assault charges against a man whose friend was killed as the two fought with a security guard over a gun.

Off-duty police officer Gary Colecchi shot a man who attacked him and attempted to take away his gun as Colecchi arrested the shoplifting suspect. Colecci was working as a security guard at a Sound Warehouse Store.

Deputy Police Chief Granver Tolliver said Joe Robert Tovar, 31, was shot twice in the chest and was pronounced dead upon arrival at Parkland Memorial Hospital Sunday night.

Tovar's friend had stolen a blank cassette tape and had been taken to the store manager's office by Colecchi, Tolliver said.

The arrested man and Tovar both attacked Colecchi and tried to take the officer's weapon during a struggle, Tolliver said.

"He (Colecchi) had his hand up, trying to get them back," Tolliver said. "But they came back at him, and that's when he fired."

The man arrested in the incident likely will be charged with misdemeanor theft and aggravated assault on a peace officer, a third degree felony, Deputy Chief Pam Walt said.

DRUGS: Officers DARE to train

(From 1B)

tions," said Fletcher. "If a group loses the bear we make them do something embarrassing. It usually becomes pretty competitive."

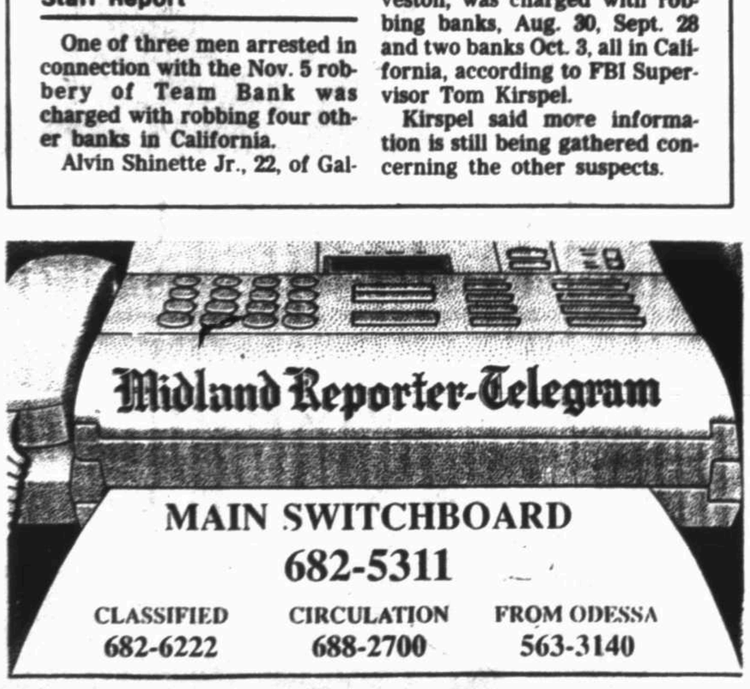

Testing can be a rigorous process, as well.

"We make them write poems about DARE, give a two-minute impromptu speech and a 45 minute prepared lesson at the end," said Fletcher.

Locally, the DARE program operates through funds generated from the third year of a continuing five-year grant. The grant must be applied for annually with the amount of money decreasing each year.

The city has donated $73,838 to the program this year and the Midland Independent School District has added $30,000. This grant, paired with the state's allocation of $39,651, raised the total given to the program to $143,489.

According to Rick Menchaca, assistant to the city manager, this money provides for the salaries of three full-time officers who visit local schools to teach sixth-graders the merits of staying away from drugs. The funds also pay for all the educational supplies used in the classes.

Former construction worker executed in slaying

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A former construction worker who was among the longest serving of inmates on Texas death row was executed early Tuesday for the 1976 slaying of a Montgomery County probation officer.

G.W. Green, 54, sentenced to die for the shooting death of John Denson during a robbery at Denson's home, received a lethal injection at 12:10 a.m. CST and was pronounced dead at 12:17 a.m.

Green

Green, whose full beard, dark glasses and raspy voice made him appear like a hippie from the 1960s, was among the longest-serving of the 349 inmates on the Texas death row, the nation's largest.

After federal appeals courts and state courts rejected Green's requests for a stay, he appealed to the Supreme Court on Monday. But the Supreme Court refused to block his execution.

The Monday afternoon vote was 7-2, with Justices Harry Blackmon and John Paul Stevens dissenting.

"We all are born, we all live a while, and we all die," Green, who has refused to speak with reporters in recent weeks, said in an earlier interview. "I never thought I was going to live forever. I have no apologies, no mercy to ask.

"When it comes time to go to the table, I'm going to roll up my sleeve and say: 'Get it right.' If they keep me here till I'm 70 and then snuff me, I'm going to be the oldest hippie. I don't think I'll blast off for Jesus. I'll never tell someone I'm sorry for something I didn't commit."

Attorneys for Green contended his trial jury wasn't able to consider all the evidence in the case and was not allowed to consider the fact he was not the triggerman in the Denson killing. They also argued his legal help at trial was ineffective.

The triggerman in the slaying, Joseph Starvaggi, was executed Sept. 10, 1987. A third man involved in the case, Glen Earl Martin, received a life prison term and remains jailed.

Testimony showed the three broke into the Denson home near Magnolia, about 50 miles northwest of Houston, to steal a $6,000 gun collection. Denson, a parttime probation officer and sheriff's reserve deputy, had answered a knock on the door and was confronted by a gunman and the others.

He was shot while his wife and then 12-year-old daughter listened horrified, hiding under a blanket.

"I was robbed of something that was very precious and nobody can ever replace that," Susan Denson, now 27, said Monday. "For things in my life, I wanted my father there and he wasn't there. It has not been easy by any means. Unless you're a victim or lost someone close, you can never know the feeling."

She also said she would like to be in the death chamber when Green is executed, although her presence is not allowed by prison officials.

"It would give me the satisfaction knowing that he's finally gone," she said of Green. "I want my face to be the last one he sees before he goes to hell."

Denson's wife, Grace, identified Green in a lineup by the sound of his voice. She said Green had screamed at Starvaggi to kill them as well but Starvaggi refused.

"I want him to suffer, although maybe he's not suffering as much as my husband did," Mrs. Denson said. "I would like for him to suffer."

Green was the fifth Texas inmate put to death this year.

Texan ready in case Zairean troops attack

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — As foreigners gathered to discuss what to do if the unrest in Zaire intensified after Belgian troops withdrew last week, Texas conservationist Delfi Messinger already had set up her hiding place.

Deep inside a multimillion-dollar French lab set up to study deadly viruses, past a row of lights that could sterilize anyone passing by, the Austin woman was stacking up food in case Zairean troops riot again.

When Belgian troops left they donated military rations and dozens of boxes of cereal. "I sure wish I had some milk. I guess the chimps will eat them," she said.

A mutiny by Zairean troops in September triggered the intervention of French and Belgian troops and the evacuation of more than 15,000 Westerners in the former Belgian Congo. When the Belgians left this week Zaire's political problems remained unsolved and new violence was feared.

Ms. Messinger, 37, is allowed to run several conservation programs at the National Institute of Bio-Medical Research in return for taking care of its chickens, lab mice and sheep. The institute is across the street from a military camp.

"In September, they looked at me and fired their guns in the air," Ms. Messinger recalled.

She said soldiers were leery of the vipers and pythons she keeps. French Foreign Legion troops who came to check her security were impressed and left.

Her favorite reptile is an import from North America, a king snake that "isn't poisonous but it bites ..."

Ms. Messinger, a former Peace Corps volunteer, has been caring for chimpanzees and other animals since 1987. She made a deal with the French-built and operated institute, which was involved in AIDS and other research, that allowed her to keep her animals on its grounds.

Her menagerie includes eight Bonabo chimps, previously mistakenly classified as pgymy chimpanzees.

"It's an important group because there are few in captivity and the people who are investigating the endangered nature of the species feel that every single captive individual is important," said Jane Goodall, a Briton who is a leading authority on chimpanzee behavior.

Goodall, who was visiting Zaire when the riots erupted in September, said in a telephone interview from Britain, "Delfi is certainly brave and tenacious. She saved the lives of all the animals. I just hope it doesn't get worse."

French Ambassador Henri Rethore wrote Ms. Messinger that the measures she took saved the institute from pillaging troops.

"To protect my animals I had to protect the lab," said Messinger.

Americans who fled also entrusted her with sophisticated equipment from the U.S. research project on AIDS in Kinshasa, the most important in Africa.

Goodall has offered to help Ms. Messinger transfer her Bonabos to Brazzaville, across the river in the Congo, if it becomes necessary.

Ms. Messinger, who graduated from Southwest Texas State University at San Marcos with a degree in animal sciences, arrived in Zaire in 1984 to teach agriculture in a Peace Corps project in the Kasai, the geographical center of the former Belgian Congo.

Later she worked in a study of monkey pox, a serious health problem in some areas.

Lifetime Siding pays $50 if they can't beat other estimates

Anyone who, in the last two years, has received a written estimate from a company that specializes in siding (whose primary business is installing siding) is invited to call Lifetime Siding & Window and also request an estimate from them. If Lifetime Siding & Window's estimate to install new siding on your home is not at least 5 percent lower — they'll pay you $50 for your time.

And, for those who schedule jobs for December or January will receive additional, significant savings. Call 689-0307 for more information. (All jobs scheduled for December will be completed by Dec. 21).

Eugene and Rose Hunter of 300 Willowood in Midland nearly made a costly $1000 mistake. That is until they contacted Neil Letkeman of Lifetime Siding & Window for a money-saving estimate.

"We had thought about adding siding to our home for years," Mr. Hunter said. "Two other contractors had given much higher estimates for siding on our home. Neil's bid was almost $1000 lower than the lowest estimate."

"We were amazed by Neil's bid and thought there must be something wrong with his work, so we really checked him out. His installation methods are excellent and we have not regretted our decision. I'd be pleased to have anyone come look at what Neil did for us," he said.

Neil Letkeman uses only top quality materials and workmanship on every Lifetime Siding & Window job. "Our superior installation methods contribute largely to the success of Lifetime Siding & Window Co.," he said. "Today's homeowners are looking for the highest quality products at the lowest price."

"We start by replacing any rotten or warped boards," Letkeman said. "And we refasten loose boards. We make sure that all the wood on the house is in good shape before we start installing our siding."

When installing siding, Lifetime specialists use screws and rivets in all critical areas of installation. It does not take an engineers to figure out that screws and rivets secure siding better than staples and nails.

These installation methods, together with the highest quality lifetime warrantied steel or vinyl siding will give a home a permanent solution to painting problems.

For energy efficiency, protection for home and family, noise and dust reduction as well as overall savings, Letkeman recommends storm and replacement windows for your home. Storm windows, which are great for insulation, can come with tinted glass. And replacement dual glass thermal break windows are solid investments in the long run.

Lifetime Siding & Window also sells and installs other home improvements such as storm and replacement windows, storm doors, rain gutters and metal carports.

For a free estimate, call Lifetime Siding & Window Co. at 689-0307.

Neil Letkeman, owner of Lifetime Siding & Window Co., invites homeowners to present him with a written estimate for siding installation received within the last two years. If he can't beat the estimate by at least 5 percent, he'll pay homeowners $50 for their time.

Vacuum Cleaner City keeps up with rapidly changing times

Times are changing. And, by the year 2000, there will be some revolutionary changes in home care products.

Some experts think the design changes in home care products and product improvement may be more dramatic in the next nine years than in all of the last 50.

No one cleaning system will be able to keep pace with the flooring industry's dramatic changes, said Jeanie Shafer, owner of Vacuum Cleaner City.

"But we plan to stay abreast of the changes by keeping up with the new products that all the companies will put out," she said.

Shafer also said that Vacuum Cleaner City's three locations will continue to feature sales, service and repairs on all Hoover, Eureka, Royal, Panasonic, Riccar, Filter Queen, Kirby, Rainbow, Regina, Oreck, Electrolux, Singer, Tri-Star and other lesser-known brands.

That diversity underlines Vacuum Cleaner City's commitment to serve their valued customers.

"We give more value for our customers' dollar by offering free extended warranties, service after the sale, providing top-quality models not found in discount or department stores," Shafer said. "And we have a good trade-in allowance for their old vacuum cleaners.

She and her trained service staff guarantee their service clinic work for a year. And the regular $34.95 service special — when they repair and completely service your vacuum — is on special for just $22.95, plus parts, if needed.

Genuine bags, belts, parts and accessories are critical to keep equipment working the way it did when it was new, Shafer said.

Vacuum Cleaner City is also Midland-Odessa's best source for information on the water vacuum, a vacuum that uses water as a filter.

"Before you decide to buy one call us at 699-6505," she said. "We'll give you all the facts to help you make the right choice."

Advice like that will be more important than ever if the expected dramatic improvement in cleaning industry products takes place during this decade.

The bright side is that improved cleaning supplies and machines all of which will be available at Vacuum Cleaner City — will make household cleaning more fun, more satisfying and make home environment healthier than ever.

Vacuum Cleaner City has three Permian Basin locations. 3304 W. Illinois in Midland and 3612 N. Dixie and 2602 N. Grandview in Odessa. Hours are 9 to 6 a.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Since no one cleaning system can keep pace with the rapid changes in the flooring industry, Vacuum Cleaner City rises to the challenge by stocking and servicing an extensive collection of cleaning systems.

J&S Commercial Electric makes all the right connections

Terry Shipman, the licensed electrician who manages J&S Commercial Electric, is earning a reputation as a top-quality residential and commercial electrician.

When daylight savings time came to an end and West Texans turned back their clocks, it marked more than a change of seasons.

It marked the beginning of long, dark winter evenings.

With nightfall coming on earlier each day, it's more important than ever for adequate security lighting around home or business, said Charles Cunningham, a senior official of J&S Commercial Electric — a division of J&S Oilfield Electric.

They are earning quite a reputation. When supermarket giant Jewel-Osco — formerly Skaggs — in Odessa and Sleep Rest in Midland needed safety lighting for their properties, they called on J&S Commercial Electric.

Homeowners who want safety or security lighting installed in back or front yards can call on the same skilled electricians that Jewel-Osco and Sleep Rest called on to do their jobs, Cunningham said.

He pointed out that, besides standard security lighting, J&S Commercial Electric technicians can install motion detectors around residential areas that trigger floodlights to discourage vandals or thieves.

Anyone who has a valuable bass boat parked along an alley fence or an expensive recreational vehicle parked outside a garage can find that a motion detector and additional lighting is well worth the investment.

J&S Commercial Electric beats its competition several ways:

■ Terry Shipman, who manages the commercial division, can call on the parent firm for equipment or crew — whether it's a bucket or boom truck, a hole digger or ditch digger — instead of having to rent a unit.

"Those resources mean a quicker job and savings to the customer," Cunningham said. He also said that the commercial division has access to a bigger buying base.

■ "Our prices are considerably cheaper than most others because we probably buy $40,000 worth of electrical materials every month," he said. "That gives us a volume discount and we pass the savings along to the customer."

■ All work is fully insured — again, an advantage of J&S Commercial's ties with its parent firm — J&S Oilfield Electric. The company has a $3 million liability coverage.

"Most small one-man outfits can't afford to carry the amount of liability insurance that we do," Cunningham said. He added that jobs requiring bonds are a specialty.

Shipman, a licensed electrician, also performs residential electrical troubleshooting work.

Many of the residential problems he's called in to remedy are the result of an overload of modern conveniences — microwave, blender, toaster and mixer — Plugged into an out-of-date electrical wiring system built for another era.

He can identify the problem and solve it quickly.

"No job is too big — or too small," he said. Shipman will fix a doorbell chime or install a ceiling fan, wire a control system for a sauna, rewire a house, install track lighting, or install security lighting around a yard.

"We've had several customers call us back and tell us what a good job Terry has done," Cunningham said.

It is apparent that J&S Electric is already taking on the reputation enjoyed by its firm — as the electrician for the homeowner and business owner out here in the oil patch.

They are located south of US 80 between Odessa and Midland.

General discusses veterans with Brownsville audience

Associated Press

Texans paused Monday to reflect on the contributions of past veterans and the brave tenacity of those serving now.

Not all American wars have proved popular, Major Gen. Marc Cisneros told a Brownsville audience gathered for a Veterans Day flag-raising ceremony at Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2035.

"But throughout it all, the veterans served with great confidence because the great country we live in is based on the principles of the Constitution," Cisneros said.

The Brownsville man was the negotiator and officer that took Panamanian strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega into U.S. custody after the United States invasion in December 1989. His 22-year-old son served in Saudi Arabia during Operation Desert Storm.

Worl War II veteran Roberto A. Garcia led the post's poppy sales this year. Each poppy represents a fallen soldier, he said.

"The red poppy is a symbol of the fallen veteran," Garcia said. "Only the soldier that is forgotten is dead."

Garcia was an aviation mechanic and worked on the bomber Enola Gay, which dropped an atomic bomb on Hiroshima.

In San Antonio, about 250 people gathered Monday at Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery for a ceremony honoring veterans from all branches of the armed services.

Wreathes were placed at soldiers' grave sites, and weapons salutes were fired.

At the Municipal Auditorium in San Antonio, dozens of school children gathered and sang special songs for veterans. A plaque honoring area residents who died at Pearl Harbor was rededicated.

On Sunday, Ret. U.S. Air Force Gen. John Chain told a Dallas crowd that he was proud of his service. About 1,000 veterans, parents and high school students gathered to honor U.S. men and women killed in past wars.

"I've lost friends fighting their nation's battles on land and sea, as well as in the air," the former commander of the Strategic Air Command said. "We gather today to honor, to pay tribute and to remember those who made the supreme sacrifice for their country in past wars."

Plano dedicated its new veterans memorial Monday. And Fort Worth sponsored its annual downtown Veterans Day parade Saturday.

Group honors Texas Revolution veteran

AUSTIN (AP) — At 17, John W. McHorse fought for Texas independence at the Battle of San Jacinto, helping defeat Santa Anna's Mexican troops in the decisive battle.

On Sunday, 155 years later, the Daughters of the Republican of Texas and McHorse's descendants gathered around his grave to honor him.

"It's good that we come back to remember our past," U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle told a crowd of about 60 people at the State Cemetery. "It's through these kind of events that we recognize what was sacrificed before us."

The ceremony was organized to commemorate Monday's Veterans Day holiday, the 100th anniversary of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas organization, and the addition of two bronze seals to McHorse's tombstone from the Daughters of the Republic of Texas and the San Jacinto Descendants groups.

"We would hope that every veteran of the war for independence would get one of these bronze seals," Pickle said. 'We are here today to recognize one of those who came before us and gave us our freedom."

McHorse moved to Texas in 1836 from Alabama, in time to fight Santa Anna. He returned to Alabama to join troops fighting the Seminole Indians in Florida and later fought for the Confederacy in the Civil War. He lived in Alabama and Arkansas until the 1870s, when he moved to Milam County and later Falls and Williamson counties. He died on Jan. 19, 1897, in Leander.

Couple learns 'friendly fire' killed their son

HOUSTON (AP) — The parents of a Conroe soldier killed in the Persian Gulf War said military officials hid the fact that their son died from "friendly fire," a Houston newspaper reported Monday.

James Murray Sr. said he and his wife were told their son, Spec. James "Jamie" Murray Jr., 20, was killed by Iraqi tank fire Feb. 27 in Operation Desert Storm.

But since then, authorities have confirmed the younger Murray was killed aboard a Bradley Fighting Vehicle when it came into the sights of an American M1A1 Abrams tank.

"There's not a day or night that goes by that I don't think about it," the elder Murray said.

The Bradley was hit by a sabot round, a two-foot steel dart tipped with dense depleted uranium, the Long Island, N.Y., newspaper Newsday reported Sunday. The sabot ripped through the Bradley that Murray was driving, pushing him into the engine and "literally tearing him apart," his father said.

Murray Jr.'s Bradley and a companion vehicle from the 41st Infantry Regiment wandered into a battlefield controlled by another unit, the First Mechanized Infantry Division.

The Army absolved commanders of negligence and blamed foul weather, long-range engagements and the "fog of war" for the deaths of Murray and five others, and the wounding of 30 soldiers.

But Murray Sr. says his son's comrades gave him a different story.

"They (the Abrams tank gunners) were more or less trigger-happy," said Murray, who served in the Marines in Vietnam. "They didn't care if it was Americans or not. They just wanted to shoot something. There was a lack of discipline and leadership all the way up the chain."

THE WORLD IS AN OPEN BOOK

Courtney Ratliff
Goddard Jr. High
Marilyn Powell - 8th Grade

My First Reading

Reading is very important in my life. It has given me a positive influence and has opened a door to a whole new world. There are many ways reading has effected my life.

I read my first word in a nursery where I was learning to read. That first word was the legendary "cat". My mom and dad were so proud of me that they bragged to other parents about how smart I was. They really went wild when I read my second word.

The reading of my first word brought up the subject of my first book. This book thing came up in kindergarten. I was ahead of the other kids because they were just learning to read cat and dog, so my mom told the teacher that I already knew how to read words and was ready my first book. The next day one of the teachers pulled me aside and showed me my first book. At the time it seemed to be over a thousand pages long. The teacher said we would take it one page at a time starting with the cover. Very slowly I read, "Yes I Can." From then on I took it one a page and one day at a time.

Those first words and that first book have brought me where I am today. Reading can make a difference in anyones life if they will let it. Try to remember what the first book you read was and how it opened up new worlds for you.

'On Silver Wings' tells WASP's story

HOUSTON (AP) — In November 1942, the U.S. Army Air Force ordered 28 women pilots to report to Houston to begin training for an operation veiled in secrecy.

Secrecy was required not because some World War II military operation might be compromised, but because using women as military pilots was then so controversial and politically sensitive.

These flyers were joining a unit that would get the name Women Airforce Service Pilots, and come to be known by its acronym — WASP.

Surviving WASPs were among those being honored on Veterans Day, but it took more than 40 years for them to get full recognition for their wartime service.

As author Marianne Verges tells in her new book, "On Silver Wings," the first WASP trainees came to Houston at their own expense and assembled at the Rice Hotel on the morning of Nov. 16, 1942.

"They were dressed in everything from tailored suits to cowboy boots," Ms. Verges writes. "Some of them were career girls, others were college students, several were heiresses — and one was a movie stuntwoman. Over half the group was married. The average age was 25, and they had all been flying for years."

None of the succeeding classes would be quite as colorful as this first one.

"No one asked for congressional approval or funding" for the women flyers, Ms. Verges explains, "and there was still no legislation to commission or pay women flying officers. The money came from here and there in the civil service and Army Air Force budgets."

The Air Force badly needed the women to help ferry military planes and fly other noncombat missions. This helped free male flyers for combat duty. All told, about 1,100 women served as WASPs.

The trainees at Houston received no uniforms except for Air Force coveralls and leather flying jackets. The women nicknamed the coveralls "zoot suits" because they "were so huge on most of the women that the crotch hung down between their knees," Ms. Verges writes.

Eventually the WASPs would be well publicized, but the first trainees helped maintain the secrecy.

When the women flyers went out in groups, people often asked what they were doing in Houston. Ms. Verges says that "a favorite answer was, 'We're a women's basketball team.' " That drew laughs because "about a third of the trainees were 5 feet 2 inches or less."

The first classes received their Army-style flight training at the now long-gone Howard Hughes Airport, adjacent to the Air Force's Ellington Field.

At first, trainees had to find their own living accommodations, but the most troubling problem at their new training base, Ms. Verges notes, was that "only one john was available for 28 women."

In May 1943, the training program was moved to the newly established Avenger Field, near Sweetwater in West Texas.

Continuing controversy seemed to daunt the WASP unit until it was disbanded in December 1944, about nine months before the war ended. By that time, Air Force training was winding down, and there was a surplus of pilots. Government officials worried that WASPs were taking jobs away from male flyers.

WASP made a significant contribution to winning the war, ferrying thousands of planes and carrying out a wide variety of missions, Ms. Verges writes. In some assignments, women pilots were credited with doing a better job than their male counterparts.

A total of 38 WASPs lost their lives in the service of their country.

An effort to secure congressional action granting WASP standing as actual military veterans and the same benefits as other veterans did not succeed until 1977.

WASP helped open the way for the numerous women now serving as U.S. military pilots. In the wake of the Persian Gulf War, Congress went a step further — repealing a ban on women flying combat missions.

During World War II, about 1,100 women pilots braved physical hardships and prejudice to serve their country. Many of the Women Airforce Service Pilots (WASPs) trained in Houston.

A&M has university relations head

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Rene A. Henry Jr., a longtime public relations executive, was named Monday as executive director of university relations at Texas A&M University.

President William H. Mobley said Henry will be responsible for leading the university's internal and external communications programs.

With 41,000 students, Texas A&M is the seventh-largest university in the nation.

Previously, Henry was president of the National Institute of Building Sciences. For the past three years he served in the Department of Labor, Agency for International Development and Department of Agriculture.

He was responsible in 1978 for the worldwide media campaign that led to the selection of Los Angeles as the site of the 1984 Olympic Games.

Morris files

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jack Morris, the MVP of the World Series, filed for free agency Monday along with Minnesota Twins teammates Al Newman and Junior Ortiz.

Morris had a 1992 option for $3.65 million but one day after pitching 10 shutout innings against Atlanta in Game 7 of the World Series, he decided not to exercise it. Twins general manager Andy MacPhail has said he hoped to re-sign Morris, who is looking to raise his salary to the $5 million-a-year range.

"I'm not optimistic at the moment," Morris' agent, Richard Moss, said Monday.

Have Dons improved?

■ Amarillo Palo Duro enters Saturday's playoff against 9-1 Midland Lee with a 4-6 record and an earlier 34-7 loss to the Rebels.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

At first glance, Midland Lee's noon Saturday bi-district playoff meeting with Amarillo Palo Duro in Amarillo's Dick Bivins Stadium should be a Rebel cake walk. That is if you don't glance too deep.

Lee crushed the Dons by a 34-7 margin during the third week of regular season play. That alone should say that Lee will be highly favored when they meet again Saturday with much more on the line.

Palo Duro has posted a 4-6 season record, winning only four conference games to get into the playoffs. The Dons lost all four non-conference outings, including one to Lee and another, 28-0, to District 4-5A's fourth place team, Odessa High. Lee, on the other hand, has posted an impressive 9-1 season mark, losing only to state-ranked Odessa Permian, 33-0.

However, if you look closely at Lee's outing with Palo Duro back in September, this rematch can be considered a little scary if you are for the Maroon and White.

The score is lop-sided to be sure, but the statistics are nearly dead even. Lee had only 239 yards of total offense. Palo Duro had 232 yards. Lee led in first downs by only a 16-13 margin. These are not numbers that would indicate a 34-7 victory dance for Lee.

The big margin of victory was mainly due to Palo Duro's woeful kicking game. The Dons' punter was hurt the week before playing Lee and had to use a backup. Palo Duro had two punts for an average of 17 yards and had another blocked in its own end zone for a touchdown.

But the story goes even deeper than that. The Dons elected twice not to punt on fourth down in its own end of the field due to the lack of punting skill, setting up one short Rebel drive of 45 yards for a score. That's at least two TDs set up by the awful Don kicking game.

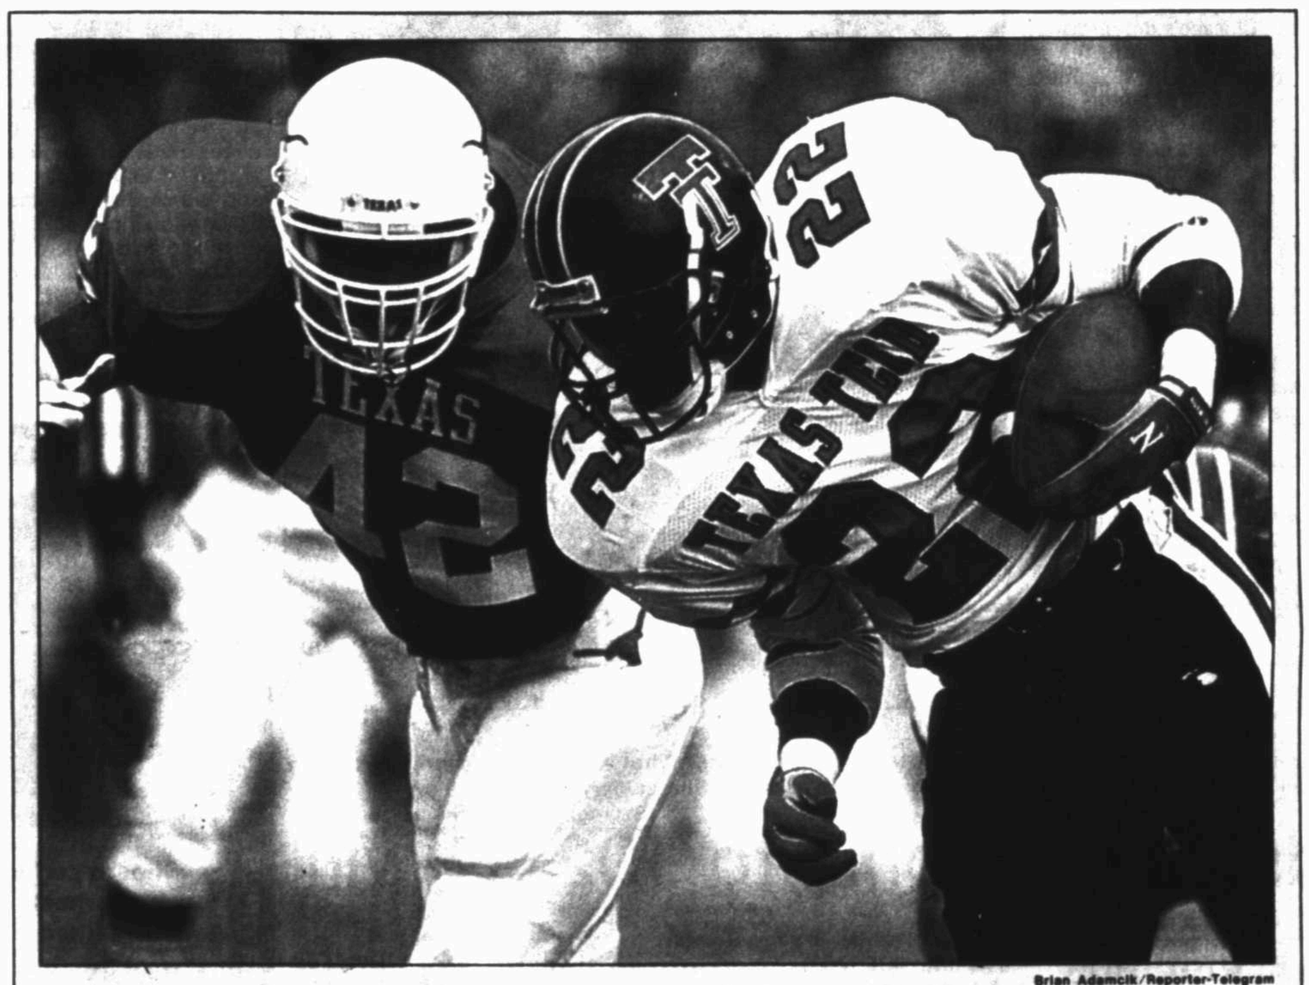

Lee did have a major star in that contest. Defensive back Jack Krautsch was the one who blocked the punt in the end zone where Mark Seidenberger recovered for a touchdown. Krautsch came back on the next series and returned a third quarter interception to the Don 16-yard line to set up another Lee score in boom-boom fashion.

Palo Duro has solved its punting woes and Krautsch may have a tougher time intercepting this week. Tremaine Brown, Palo Duro's all-purpose back and leading rusher for the season, has been handed the punting chores. He was also forced into playing quarterback against Lee when Jermaine Gilbreath was hurt. Gilbreath is back.

Brown led all rushers in the game with 88 yards, but he had to carry 32 times to accomplish that. That's only an average of 2.8 yards per carry. Lee's Jimmy Patton had one of his best running outings with 84 yards on 10 carries while fullback Roy Robinson had 49 yards on six carries.

Lately, however, Sherman Dedrick and Brett Sullivan have been carrying the rushing load and Robinson and Scott McLeod have been much more productive at fullback.

No matter how you look at the first game these two teams played, what you will see in Amarillo Saturday will have a much different look. It will still take a scoreboard to tell the final story.

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes watched his team's hopes for a Cotton Bowl berth crash in four early-season losses.

Now the Red Raiders are on a mission to ruin everyone else's chances.

Tech (4-5, 3-3 in the Southwest Conference) clobbered Southeastern Conference-bound Arkansas 38-21 Saturday in Lubbock amidst choruses of "SWC! We're pork free!"

The Red Raiders' victory likely knocked the Razorbacks (5-4, 4-2) out of the Cotton Bowl race on the eve of their flight from the SWC to the SEC.

Tech will attempt to knock 20th-ranked Baylor (7-2, 4-2) out of the race this week in Waco.

AUSTIN — Coach David McWilliams, who watched Texas' bowl hopes crumble in a 23-14 loss to Houston, said Monday he still expects an all-out effort from players and coaches in the Longhorns' final three games.

Texas faces Texas Christian and Baylor at home and Texas A&M on the road. All three opponents could win invitations to post-season bowls.

Texas, however, is expected to sit at home after falling to 4-4 in a year it had hoped to defend its Southwest Conference football championship.

Threatt on the move against Minnesota's Tyrone Corbin.

6-2 Threatt not threat Magic was

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Now playing point guard for the Los Angeles Lakers: Sedale Threatt.

A smaller version of Magic Johnson?

"No, no way," Threatt said.

"I'm just going to go out and try to distribute the ball, play the way Magic would on the fast break."

Little did Threatt know on Oct. 2 when he went from Seattle to L.A. for three future second-round draft choices that he'd be the team's starting point guard, what with Magic around.

But that's the case since Johnson announced last Thursday he was retiring after testing positive for the HIV virus that causes AIDS.

Like most of his teammates, Threatt didn't do very well Friday night at Phoenix in his first game since Johnson's retirement.

Besides being only 6-foot-2 to Magic's 6-9, Threatt had a very un-Magic like performance — 3 points, 2 assists and 2 rebounds in a 113-85 loss.

But Sunday night against Minnesota, Threatt was much better — 27 points, 14 assists and two rebounds in a 96-86 win.

"The game at Phoenix, we were all real down, so I came out tonight and really wanted to turn it up," Threatt said afterward. "They were setting some good picks on the side and I got my shot. I had four turnovers, though. I'm going to have to work on that."

At age 30, Threatt said he's not under pressure despite the circumstances.

"If I would have been a rookie in this situation, there would be a lot of pressure," he said. "I'm an old veteran in this league. I know what goes on around here. I'm just going out and trying to win."

Threatt was a sixth-round draft choice of the Philadelphia 76ers in 1983 after playing at West Virginia Tech. He played more than three seasons with the 76ers before being traded to Chicago, where he played briefly before moving to Seattle.

Before this season, he averaged 8.6 points and a little less than three assists in 544 regular-season games. In five games with the Lakers, he's averaging 17.6 points, 7.6 assists and 5.0 rebounds.

Threatt came to the Lakers tabbed as a backup to Johnson who would also play some at shooting guard.

He had no qualms about his role.

"That's the only reason I came here, playing with Magic, no question about it," Threatt said. "He said with me and another guy, we could win it all."

MC escapes Cisco

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Another 30 seconds on the clock, and Cisco Junior College may well have upset Midland College Monday night at Chaparral Center.

Despite squandering away a 25 point lead with five minutes remaining in the game, the Chaps instead held on to beat the Cisco Junior College Wranglers, 96-91, for the 400th win in MC's 16-year basketball history.

MC freshman post Ari Rodriques was near perfection with 35 points on 13-of-16 from the field and 9-of-10 from the line.

In addition, Chap guard Kelon Haynie missed a triple-double by one rebound. In by far the most impressive performance of his brief junior college playing history, the freshman from Dallas Kimball finished with 18 points, 10 assists and nine rebounds.

Even though the positives outweighed the negatives for the 3-0 Chaps, there was the letdown to contend with at game's end.

To wit, MC held a 91-66 lead with just under five minutes remaining, but a 25-5 run by Cisco down the stretch allowed the Wranglers to close within the final five point margin. The Wranglers also outscored the Chaps 51-36 in the second half.

"We missed a lot of shots, and we had some turnovers in the last five minutes," MC head coach Steve Green said. "Sometimes a game gets nasty at the end.

"This is a mark of an inexperienced team. They (the Chaps) knew the score the whole time. You've got to forget that. You can't relax and say to yourself 'We're up by 25 points, so this possession's not going to hurt us.'"

Green said he felt the Chaps should've won the game by 30, which, ironically was how many turnovers MC ended with, compared with 26 for the Wranglers.

What allowed the Chaps to cruise for much of the second half was nailing 57 percent of their first-half shots (26-of-45). It didn't hurt, either, that Cisco was busy shooting just 26 percent (11-of-41) during

Dallas Carter loss vaults Permian to No. 2 ranking

Associated Press

Dallas Kimball coach James Jones is the first to admit that it took more than talent and hard work to beat No. 2 Dallas Carter.

"It was just a little bit of that Louisiana luck," Jones said of his team's 12-6 victory Saturday, which earned Kimball (10-0) the District 10-5A championship and a perfect regular-season record.

The victory also vaulted Kimball to No. 9 in The Associated Press Schoolboy Poll. Carter dropped to seventh in the vote by sportswriters from across the state.

Kimball scored the winning points on a 16-yard pass from Henry Cofer to Wayland Crowder with nine seconds remaining. But the key play was Tomell Hurd's interception of a Carter pass at the Cowboys' 42 with less than a minute left.

While Kimball had fortune on its side, Carter also proved itself worthy of a state ranking, Jones said.

"I saw two champions play that game," Jones said. "If I had paid five dollars to see that game, I would have given the man another five dollars when I walked out the gate."

Arlington Lamar finished the regular season ranked No. 1 in the state after its 41-0 thrashing of Cleburne. The Vikings, who received

High School Poll

244 points and 21 of 25 first-place votes, were powered by Shawn Walters' 208 yards and three touchdowns.

Carter's defeat allowed Odessa Permian, which beat Abilene Cooper 35-18, to move into the No. 2 spot. Permian received three votes for first and 217 overall.

Waco was third, followed by Beaumont West Brook, Jersey Village, Alief Elsik, Carter, Mission, Kimball and Corpus Christi Carroll.

Sulphur Springs is the new No. 1 team in Class 4A after LaMarque's 23-13 victory over previously top-ranked Houston C.E. King.

"We're honored to be No. 1, but we're going to have to do a lot of work to earn that ranking," said Sulphur Springs coach James Cameron. "There are so many good teams in Texas. To put us No. 1, you're putting us above some great teams."

Although Sulphur Springs received the most points (223), the Wildcats received just nine votes for first, while the third-ranked Bastrop Bears received 10.

Bastrop was the No. 1 team through most of the season until a ruling that it used an ineligible player cost the school victories over Lockhart and Hays and, ultimately, a playoff berth despite its 10-0 record.

Waxahachie was No. 2 and LaMarque improved to fourth, followed by Austin Westlake, Alamo Heights, Houston C.E. King, Carthage, Corpus Christi Calallen and McKinney.

Sinton received 16 first-place votes and 228 points to retain its tenuous grip on the No. 1 spot in Class 3A. Southlake Carroll was a close second with eight votes for first and 226 points.

Class 2A's Schulenburg, the only preseason No. 1 team to hold the ranking throughout the season, received 21 votes for first and 244 points total.

Valley Mills, which completed a 10-0 campaign with a 45-12 whipping of Axtell, again was No. 1 in Class 1A.

There were five debut teams, including Kimball and Corpus Christi Carroll, in the poll. Atlanta was No. 10 in 3A after improving its record to 10-0 with a 9-8 victory over Linden-Kildare.

San Saba shot to No. 7 in 2A after its 43-7 thumping of previously third-ranked DeLeon, which fell to eighth. New Diana was 10th in 3A.

Wilmer-Hutchins eligible in 4A

CEDAR HILL (AP) — The District 13-4A executive committee on Monday voted unanimously that a Wilmer-Hutchins football player is eligible, allowing the 1990 state champion Eagles a chance to defend their title.

Lancaster school officials, who charged that Wilmer-Hutchins junior linebacker Glenn Rice was ineligible, said they don't plan to press their case in court.

"We don't have any plans along that line," said Lancaster Supt. Larry Groppel. "We'll just say that we respect the committee's decision."

Lancaster alleged that Rice's parents live in Lancaster while the boy resides with his grandmother in Wilmer. Rice played at Lancaster as a sophomore.

But the committee, by a 6-0 vote, ruled that the boy is eligible, said Cedar Hill superintendent Albert Thomas, the committee chairman.

"There was some evidence that his father, who is an over-the-road trucker, does have a place of residence in Wilmer," Thomas said.

Wilmer-Hutchins officials told the committee Rice's parents are separated and the father has established residency with the grandmother, Thomas said.

If Rice had been ruled ineligible, Wilmer-Hutchins (8-2) would have been forced to forfeit all its games and Lancaster would have assumed the second playoff berth in District 13.

Bears go to 8-2 with 34-17 win over Vikes

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The Chicago Bears overcame their offensive problems and, for the second successive week, overcame a challenge to their NFC Central supremacy.

Neal Anderson's 6-yard run and Jim Harbaugh's 7-yard pass to Anthony Morgan capped the Bears' opening two drives — the first time all season they've scored on two consecutive marches — and Chicago took control of the division Monday night with a 34-17 victory over the Minnesota Vikings.

Anderson, who rushed for 91 yards, added a 24-yard touchdown run and Lemuel Stinson returned an interception 34 yards for a TD as the Bears scored more than 21 points for the first time this season. Chicago had five drives of at least 10 plays and didn't have to punt until 10 minutes remained.

Chicago (8-2), which beat Detroit last week, has won four straight to take a two-game lead over the Lions. The Bears are seeking their seventh NFC Central title in the last eight seasons.

The Vikings (5-6), the only team besides the Bears to win the Central crown since 1984, fell 3½ games back. Minnesota is 18-21 since winning the '89 title. The Vikings had won 23 of their previous 29 games — including three straight against Chicago — at the Metrodome.

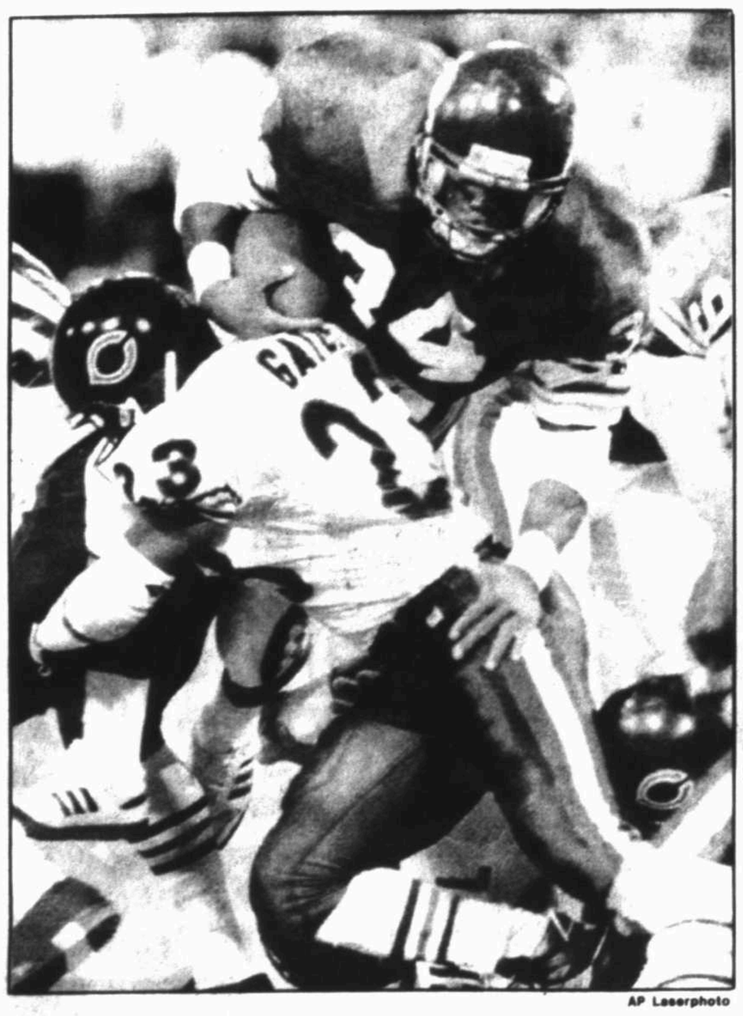

As usual, Chicago's defense was tough, allowing 20 points or fewer for the ninth time in 10 games. Turnovers set up 10 of Minnesota's points. Chicago has won 86 of its last 88 games when holding opponents under 18 points, including all seven this season.

Kevin Butler added field goals of 50 and 41 yards for the Bears, who won a Monday night road game for only the third time in 17 tries.

After Minnesota went 80 yards on the game's first series, with Darrin Nelson's 6-yard touchdown run giving the Vikings their only lead, the Bears used Anderson's running and Harbaugh's short passing to take control.

Anderson rushed nine times for 42 yards on a 13-play, 80-yard drive that ate up 9:03.

The Vikings were unable to advance on their next possession but appeared to have recovered a fumbled punt return by Mark Green, who was substituting for injured return man Johnny Bailey. However, John Magnum took the ball away from Minnesota's Audray McMillian.

MC women host Odessa

Staff Report

Fresh from a sweep of the women's division of a national tournament, the Midland College women's tennis team takes on Odessa College, an always-tough neighborhood rival.

The two teams are playing a dual match on the OC courts at 2 p.m. today.

Less than two weeks ago, the MC women took the singles and doubles titles at the Rolex National Junior College Championships and the concurrent Small College Championships, both played in Corpus Christi. The defending Small College singles champion, Myriam Berthe of MC, was beaten in a tight semifinals match by teammate Seiko Ichioka.

The three-set event went to 13-11 in the third-set tiebreaker before Ichioka won. Ichioka then edged another teammate, Lucie Ludvigova, for the Junior College Championship and marched through a Division II champion and one from Division III to take the Small College title.

In the women's doubles, MC's number two doubles duo of Adriana Isaza and Boba Tzvetkova upset Berthe and Lucie Ludvigova for the junior college title before going on to win the Small College crown with victories over NAIA and Division II champions.

Ichioka, Isaza and Tzvetkova earned trips to the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association's Rolex National Collegiate Indoor Championships in Minneapolis next February with their victories.

Hawkins leads Philadelphia to 102-99 win

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Long-range shooting was the key Monday night as the Philadelphia 76ers finished with seven 3-point goals, one more than Milwaukee, to edge the Bucks 102-99.

Hersey Hawkins led all scorers with 21 points, including 3-for-4 3-pointers, as the 76ers held off the Bucks, who rallied from 23 points down in the second quarter to make the game close at the end.

The 76ers won their fourth consecutive game and took the lead over New York and Orlando in the Atlantic Division, despite losing their first two games.

In all, Philadelphia connected on seven of 11 3-point shots. Milwaukee made six of 14.

"If the shots are there, nobody's going to have to tell us to shoot them," said Hawkins, who became the first Philadelphia player other than Charles Barkley to lead the 76ers in scoring this season.

The shooting impressed Philadelphia head coach Jim Lynam.

"Both teams were making their 3-pointers," Lynam said. "Hersey made some big ones, and Ron Anderson hit one when we really needed it."

The 76ers led 89-83 in the fourth period, but the Bucks closed to 94-93 on a 3-pointer by Jay Humphries with 1:18 left.

A jumper by Johnny Dawkins and a hook shot by Manute Bol gave Philadelphia a five-point lead with 17 seconds to play, but another 3-pointer by Humphries trimmed Philadelphia's lead to 98-96 with 11 seconds left.

Two free throws each by Armon Gilliam and Dawkins completed the scoring.

Milwaukee coach Del Harris said he will switch some starters to force more effective defense.

"I guess I'm going to have to change the lineup," Harris said. "I'm not satisfied with the way we're playing defense."

"We got off to a very slow start," said Harris.

NBA Roundup

Jazz 106, Kings 90

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Jazz handed Sacramento its 40th consecutive road loss behind 29 points from Karl Malone and 21 by Jeff Malone.

The Kings saw their NBA record for road losses, a streak that started last Nov. 21, extended to 40 in their third road game of the season. They were 1-40 away from home in the 1990-91 season, concluding with 37 consecutive road losses.

John Stockton had 15 points and 13 assists, and Mark Eaton blocked eight shots for the Jazz. Lionel Simmons scored 33 points and Mitch Richmond 17 for the Kings, who shot just 40.9 percent from the field for the game.

Two Hurricanes suspended after motorcycle incident

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Running back Martin Patton and receiver Jonathan Harris, both reserves, were suspended Monday from the Miami football team after a weekend motorcycle accident that led police to file charges.

Coach Dennis Erickson announced that the indefinite suspensions were effective immediately. The second-ranked Hurricanes play No. 1 Florida State on Saturday.

"Martin Patton and Jonathan Harris were involved in incidents over the weekend which violate our team policy," Erickson said. "This is not a decision that was made based on whether they are innocent or guilty by law. That issue is separate from the fact that they violated team policy."

Patton, a 6-1, 196-pound redshirt sophomore, was arrested early Sunday after a fight with Coral Gables police officers. He was jailed on charges that included battery to a police officer and resisting arrest with violence.

Patton was arrested while officers were investigating a motorcycle accident involving Harris, a backup wide receiver. He said the fight started when officers pushed him away from an ambulance that was transporting Harris to Doctors Hospital.

Harris was treated for scrapes and bruises. Patton injured his ribs in the fight.

"I did not initiate the conflict," Patton said. "It was unprovoked. I think the police officers were angry at Jonathan for riding the cycle and needed to deal with him and let out some frustration."

A South Miami police officer followed him but Harris sped up.

The Chaps went to work early, going on a 7½ minute spurt which saw them jump out to a 31-9 lead by the 12:14 mark. By half, the Chaps were in control of the game, and only a major slide in the second half would've cost them the game.

"It's hard to maintain intensity when you're up by 30," Cisco head coach Doug Galyean said of MC.

"I thought we would be better. I didn't know how good Midland would be; I knew they'd be better. I thought we would handle their pressure, but they just force you out of your game."

Green said Haynie's performance is something he "has the capability of doing every night.

"He's a big time basketball talent. He's such a good defender, he'll always be around the ball, and he'll get some easy shots."

After 19 and 17 point performances in his first two games, Rodriques fell one point shy of doubling his output for the season with his 35 Monday. Through three games, the Brazilian is averaging 23.6 points per game.

The game also marked the return to Chap Center of former Midland Lee player Darren Dortch. Dortch, a post for Cisco who ended with 11 points, including 6-of-6 from the line, said a win would've been a nicer way to cap the homecoming.

"We got behind early and started forcing some shots," Dortch said. "The size of the building, and the taller guys for Midland may have intimidated us. Coach told us at halftime not to let those things get to us."

MC forward Bruce Patterson, playing with a nagging ankle twist for most of the night, finally had to be carried from the court near the end of the game after a mid-court collision. Doctors said Patterson aggravated the already sore ankle as a result of the mishap.

MC takes its unbeaten record to Yavapai (Ariz.) for a three-day tournament beginning Thursday. The Chaps play Pima College Thursday, Good Shepherd on Friday, and Yavapai on Saturday.

MC returns to Chap Center for its final home game until January next Tuesday when Ranger Junior College visits. Cisco, 1-1, defeated Ranger, 86-85, for its lone win of the season last week.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A long-overdue decision you make now will result in great happiness. Look for fresh financial gains early in 1992. A parent-child relationship undergoes a major change next spring. The love bug will bite in midsummer! Count on career progress to accelerate next September. October is the ideal time to travel. Keep a journal of your experiences and expenses. Wise investments made in the fall will pay off next winter.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Justice Harry Blackmun, singer-songwriter Neil Young, gymnast Nadia Comaneci, sculptor Auguste Rodin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Too many comforts could sap your motivation. Rethink your priorities. Plunge into new creative ventures. Hard work and a realistic savings program are the only answers to recurring financial worries.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you want to shine, seek new outlets for your creative talents. Those in love give serious thought to marriage. Redouble your efforts to save money.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Children will be more cooperative if you are candid with them. Exercise self-restraint. A temporary sacrifice could bring new chances for success. Follow your heart in romance!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Try to visualize how a project will develop. Keep close tabs on costs if building a house. Real estate negotiations enjoy highly favorable influences. An old flame could re-enter your life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If your workload increases, pace yourself. Delegate more responsibility to reliable people at work and home. Trust only the tried-and-true today. Keep in touch with old friends. Romance has you guessing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Financial changes are favored today. Check your insurance coverage; it may be time to shop around. Rumors could be growing about your personal life. Nip them in the bud by being very discreet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Travel is best postponed. Transact as much business as possible by telephone. The direct approach works best if you need a favor. Small social gatherings are favored tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An upsurge in energy is indicated. Rev up your artistic motor! You may be able to obtain some assistance that will reduce your financial worries. Keep a close eye on spending.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You find it easier to communicate with your co-workers now. Good news could arrive by mail or phone. Express your feelings openly and romance will become more rewarding.

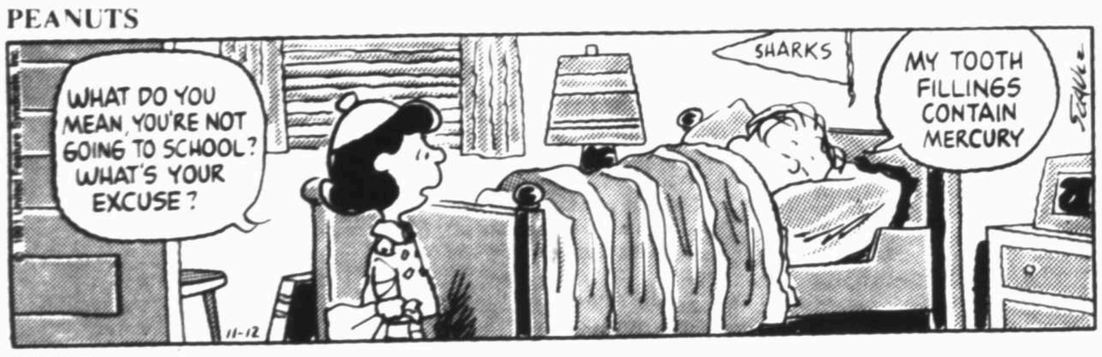

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you feel that the pace is getting to be too much for you, slow down. Do not be lured into making risky investments. You need a safe place for your savings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can make up the ground that you recently lost by getting an early start today. A promise of financial support comes from an unexpected source. Be careful not to take mate for granted.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Postpone reaching any conclusions until all the facts are known. Do not use your resources to back risky financial schemes. Sharing secrets with your mate brings you closer together.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are fiercely independent and very self-disciplined. They have so many interests and friends that they seem to be in constant motion. Encourage these lively Scorpios to set priorities. Secretive by nature, these children find it difficult to forgive anyone who pries into their affairs. They treasure their family and friends but need regular periods of solitude to recharge their batteries. They get their best ideas when alone with nature or an inspiring book.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	3 ◇	3 ♠
Dbl	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

One careless play by a defender made the world of difference on this hand. That many other defenders would have made the same error was little consolation.

South took a bold step when he entered into a forcing auction on only a fair hand in high-card points and good distribution. West's decision to double rather than bid three no trump was questionable, as was South's failure to try four clubs—a contract that would have proved simple as the cards lie.

East dropped the queen of diamonds under the king at trick one to show possession of the jack. West kept the defense on course by continuing with diamonds, forcing declarer to ruff. With nothing better to do, declarer led a low spade and West fell from grace by following low, enabling dummy's nine to win.

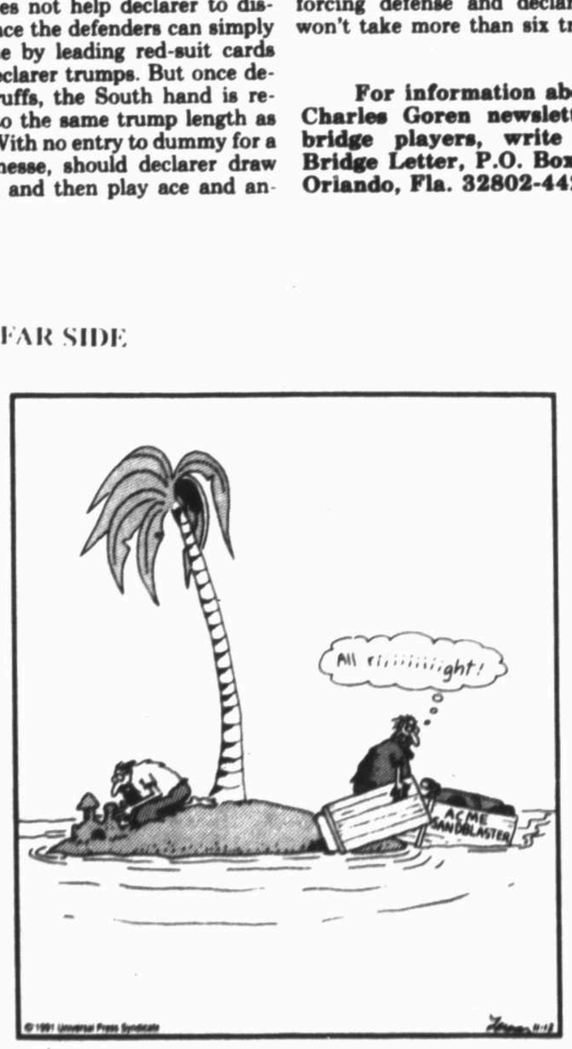

Declarer took advantage of being on the table to run the jack of clubs, then repeated the finesse. When the suit split evenly, declarer reverted to trumps. West took the ace and continued diamonds, but it was too late. Declarer ruffed, drew trumps and ran clubs to make the doubled contract with an overtrick.

More alert defense would have inflicted a severe loss on South. Observe the difference had West risen with the ace of trumps and continued with a diamond.

It does not help declarer to discard since the defenders can simply continue by leading red-suit cards until declarer trumps. But once declarer ruffs, the South hand is reduced to the same trump length as West. With no entry to dummy for a club finesse, should declarer draw trumps and then play ace and another club the defenders will take the rest for down three. If, instead, declarer doesn't draw trumps but goes after clubs immediately, the defenders simply continue with their forcing defense and declarer still won't take more than six tricks.

LITCHFIELD, Conn. — A tour by Tom Brokaw of the NBC news offices went for $500 and storytelling by Meryl Streep brought $850 during an auction for an environmental group.

Streep

The auction Sunday grossed $24,125 for the Housatonic Valley Association.

Brokaw, an NBC anchorman, and Miss Streep are among several celebrities who make their first, second or third homes in the area.

Arthur Miller gave a handwritten page from his new play, "The Ride Down Mount Morgan," and a page from notes for the screenplay of "The Crucible."

Brokaw

Fashion designer Diane Von Furstenberg, honorary chairman of the Cornwall-based association, offered bidders a chance to stay at her Paris apartment for six days. It was the top item, bringing in $3,600.

Violinist Isaac Stern donated dinner at a Manhattan restaurant and two tickets to a Feb. 24 Carnegie Hall concert.

EVANSVILLE, Ind.— A construction worker paid $2,100 for the unwashed baseball uniform Madonna wore during the recent filming of "A League of Their Own."

Doug Burton of Boonville said he would have paid as much as $5,000 for the 1940s-style uniform during an auction Sunday to raise money for low-income housing.

The movie is about an all-women's baseball league that flourished during World War II. The movie, filmed partly in Evansville, also stars Tom Hanks and Geena Davis and could be out as early as spring.

The auctioneer described Madonna's costume as "still having the scent of a megastar."

Burton said he isn't interested in Madonna or the movie but purchased the uniform as an investment. He said he plans to resell the one-piece, skirted cotton uniform for about $10,000 when the movie is released.

CARLISLE, N.Y. — Spelunker Emily Davis Mobley, whose days-long rescue from a New Mexico cave was chronicled on television, was on the helping end of a rescue.

Mobley and her husband, William, rescued 15-year-old Michael P. Funk from a cave Sunday in a preserve they manage.

Funk climbed about 65 feet into the cave, which drops straight down, and couldn't climb out. A companion who didn't enter the cave called Mobley for help.

Mobley said she crawled down to Funk and attached a rope to him. He was able to walk out of the cave. The rescue took about 30 minutes once Mobley entered the cave, state police said.

Funk, from the Carlisle area, was charged with criminal trespassing. The cave is part of a preserve owned by the National Speleological Society. Mobley and her husband manage the preserve.

In March, a rock crushed Mobley's left leg while she was mapping a cave in southeastern New Mexico. It took several days to remove her from the cave. She began spelunking again in October.

NEW YORK — Late-night talk show host Arsenio Hall said he will try to knock off NBC's top-rated "Tonight Show" when Johnny Carson retires May 22.

"Instead of striving to be No. 2, my new philosophy will be to strive to be No. 1," Hall said in an interview slated for Tuesday night's "First Person with Maria Shriver" on NBC.

"I have a certain kind of respect for Johnny Carson," Hall said. "But when he's gone the word 'respect' will only come out of Aretha Franklin's mouth. It's going to be hardball then."

VALENCIA, Calif. — Actor Bruce Willis rented Six Flags Magic Mountain for a star-studded 29th birthday bash for his wife, Demi Moore.

Park spokeswoman Courtney Simmons wouldn't reveal how much it cost to throw the party Saturday night.

Tom Cruise, Jack Nicholson, Sylvester Stallone, Ally Sheedy, Keifer Sutherland and Keenan Ivory Wayans were on the guest list.

For two hours, Willis reigned over rides aboard Magic Mountain's white-knuckle Psyclone, Revolution, Ninja, Colossus and Viper roller coasters.

Cruise and his wife, Nicole Kidman, rode each attraction twice.

After two hours of nonstop coaster riding, the 60 guests got a gourmet meal and birthday cake, Ms. Simmons said.

LOS ANGELES — Dean Torrence of the 1960s surf-rock duo Jan & Dean has moved out of his Hollywood Hills home of 22 years and set up permanent residence in Huntington Beach. The reason: fatherhood.

Torrence said his old home in the hills beneath the Hollywood sign isn't suitable for a couple with a young child.

Prices fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures prices fell Monday in trading largely dominated by technical factors.

The December contract for West Texas Intermediate fell 43 cents to $22.58 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Analysts said there were no news developments to affect trading, and prices fell on market influences. As December crude fell below $22.88 a barrel, considered a psychologically important level, it lost support among investors and continued to fall.

Natural gas futures fell on the Merc. The December contract lost 1.2 cents to $2.070 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Gas costlier

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices nationwide rose an average penny-a-gallon in the past two weeks, a hike due in part to the freeze in the Midwest and the demand for home heating oil, an industry survey reported.

The average price for all grades of gas at full- and self-service stations was $1.24 a gallon on Friday, according to the Lundberg Survey of 13,000 gasoline stations.

That's a 1.01-cent increase over the Oct. 25 price, analyst Trilby Lundberg said Sunday.

Demand for heating oil has surged because of cold weather in the Midwest and East, she said.

The Lundberg Survey showed the average price for a gallon of gasoline at self-service pumps, including taxes, was $1.10 for regular unleaded, $1.27 for premium unleaded and $1.05 for regular leaded.

At full service pumps, the average for regular unleaded was $1.39, premium unleaded was $1.54 and regular leaded was $1.38.

Dollar down

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against most major currencies in European trading Monday.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7695 from $1.7680 late Friday.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.18 yen to a closing 130.05 yen.

Market drifts

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices drifted without direction Monday in quiet Veterans Day activity.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen 10.73 points last week, dropped 3.36 points to 3,042.26.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 9 to 8 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Demand rises for U.S. exports

N.Y. Times News Service

Japanese newspaper readers want color photos. Venezuelan households want top-loading washers. The residents of Indonesia want cleaner air.

And reaping the benefits are American companies that are working hard to increase their exports. Weyerhaeuser Corp., for example, expects to ship a quarter of a million metric tons of high-grade newsprint, suitable for color printing, from Tacoma, Wash., to Tokyo this year.

Whirlpool Corp. says its appliance exports to Venezuela and elsewhere will jump 25 percent in 1991. And Fluor Corp., the construction giant, is installing antipollution devices in Indonesian oil refineries.

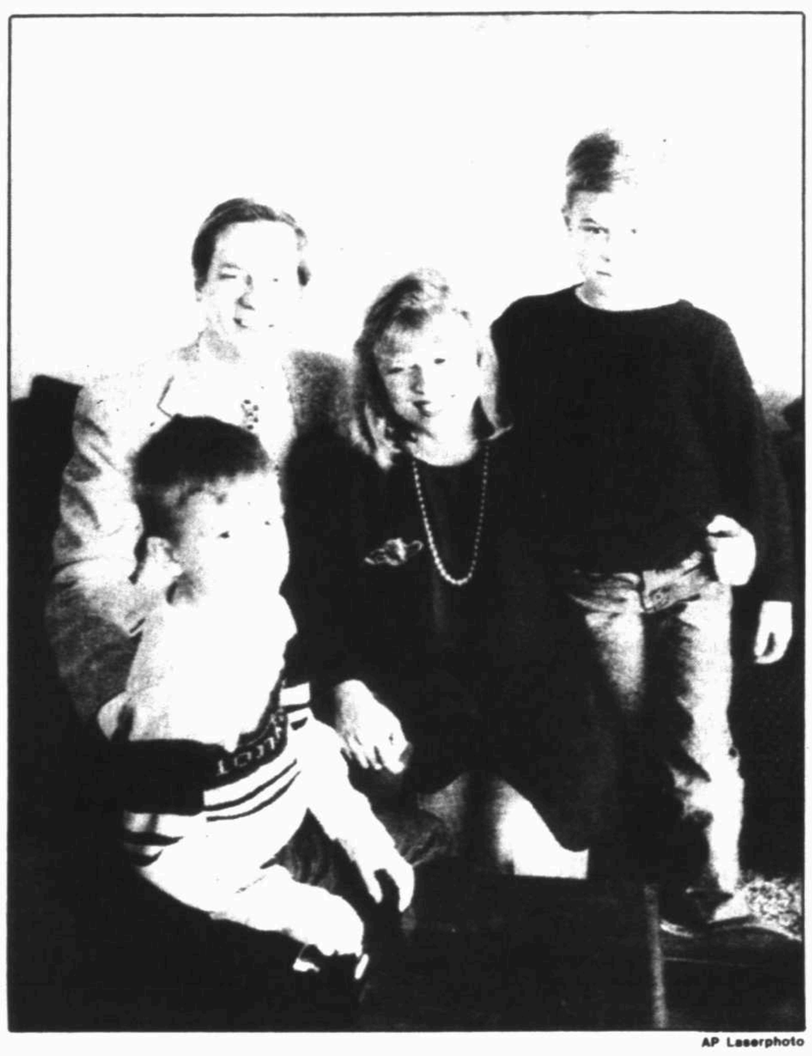

Around the globe, the appetite for American goods and services remains robust, a sign that exports are likely to remain a bright spot in the otherwise lackluster American economy.

"We're seeing strong export business that is keeping the wolf away from the door," said Milton Glass, chairman of the International Business Center of New England, an organization that represents 400-or-so area exporters.

Exports alone cannot turn a foot-dragging recovery into a fast-paced one, because they account for just one-tenth of the gross national product. But their strength can provide much-needed support.

American exports have a number of things going for them right now, executives and economists say. For one, even though demand is soft in some large markets, lots of smaller ones are thriving.

Business is surging in South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore and Hong Kong; Mexico is booming after nearly a decade of economic decline. And Canada, the biggest customer of the United States, is shaking off recession.

Chris and Pamela Russell and their sons, Alex, 5, left, and Nick, 7, are living in their first house in suburban Chicago.

First-time home buyers enter real estate market

CHICAGO (AP) — Pamela Russell sells newspapers in the pre-dawn hours, babysits some afternoons and checks coats some nights. The odd jobs are a sacrifice she's making in her new role: homeowner.

Mrs. Russell and her husband, Christopher, recently took the plunge and bought their first house, a tri-level in south suburban Park Forest. The thirtysomething couple has a new sense of security. But they're scared, too.

"I had a lot of fears thinking we're not going to be able to afford this, is this the right area, will he lose his job?" Mrs. Russell said. "We live paycheck to paycheck."

But Russell, a hotel banquet manager, said it was time to make the move.

"All of a sudden we got to the point the economy seemed right to us," he said. "If we kept putting it off, we might never get around to it. Interest rates were getting to be the best they've been since the '70s. We felt there were enough good signs."

The Russells were right, the National Association of Realtors says. Falling prices and mortgage rates make it the best time in 14 years to buy a house. The average 30-year fixed-rate mortgage is 8.83 percent, the lowest level since 1977.

"Right now, anybody's who got the urge, the notion and the capacity ought to be in the market," said John Tuccillo, the group's chief economist. "I definitely say, 'Buy now.' "

First-timers like the Russells helped boost the median price of a home by 5.5 percent in the third quarter compared with a year ago, the trade group said last week.

Southland has profit, but less than expected

DALLAS (AP) — Southland Corp. said Monday it earned $5.8 million in the third quarter, less than anticipated as recession and cool weather took a toll on its 7-Eleven convenience stores.

The performance weakened Southland's ability to meet some terms of its agreements with major bank lenders, which were made prior to the company's emergence from a Chapter 11 reorganization in March.

Southland chief executive Clark Matthews said the company was disappointed with the quarter and did not expect an improvement the rest of this year or in 1992 because of weakness in the U.S. economy and intensified competition.

"The recession has outlasted most people's expectations, including ours," Matthews said.

The company earned 1 cent a share on revenue during the three months that ended Sept. 30. During the same period last year, Southland lost $122.8 million, or $6.12 a share.

Revenue was $2.15 billion, down 4.9 percent from $2.26 billion a year ago when the company operated 180 more stores.

When Southland reported a second quarter profit of $19.6 million in August, the company said its earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization, or EBITDA, for the second half of the year would be lower than anticipated during its Chapter 11 reorganization.

For the first nine months of the year, Southland's EBITDA was $255 million, $20 million below the expectation of the company's bankruptcy plan.

That softness will cause the company to meet with its senior bank group during the fourth quarter to discuss changing terms of some lending agreements. The company believes bankers will agree to the changes, Matthews said.

Southland spokeswoman Cecilia Norwood said the company is not troubled by liquidity issues as it was prior to and during the Chapter 11 restructuring. Southland had cash and short term investments of $320.2 million at the end of the quarter compared to $108.3 million at the end of 1990.

Southland's 13,000 convenience stores increased average merchandise sales 1.5 percent during the third quarter compared to last year. But profits fell as demand for high-margin items such as fountain drinks slowed in areas that were unseasonably cool or wet during the summer.

The company anticipated capital spending of $120 million during the last six months of the year. But only $50 million will be spent because it took longer than expected to develop the capital program.

Next year, Southland officials said they expect sharp increases in capital spending, partly to implement ideas culled from marketing tests on new merchandising formats for 7-Eleven.

The company's bottom line for the year-to-date shows a profit of $116.7 million, 37 cents a share. During the same nine months last year, Southland lost $278.1 million, or $13.97 a share.

Revenue was $6.16 billion, down 3 percent from $6.35 billion.

After the bankruptcy restructuring, Southland became largely owned by Ito-Yokado Co. of Japan and Seven-Eleven Japan Co.

The company owns or franchises more than 6,000 7-Eleven stores in the United States and Canada. Seven-Eleven Japan operates about 4,300 7-Eleven stores in Japan under an agreement with Southland. Licensees operate 2,300 more 7-Eleven stores in 19 other countries.

Parker & Parsley to buy Mobil wells

Staff Report

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. of Midland announced Monday that it has agreed to buy 600 producing oil wells, including three waterflood projects, from Mobil Producing Texas and New Mexico Inc. for approximately $125 million dollars.

A spokesman for Parker & Parsley said most of the properties were in the Permian Basin and fit its present producing strategies. Mobil owns a majority interest in all of the wells and currently operates nearly all of the properties.

The sale which is pending approval by the Mobil Executive Committee and Parker & Parsley board of directors is expected to be concluded before the end of the year. The purchase will be funded by cash flow and additional borrowing, says P&P.

Parker & Parsley said it was unable to make further comments on the purchase until the details of the sale are finalized.

The company which finalized its purchase of Damson Oil Co. earlier this year owns interest in nine gas processing plants and 7,000 producing oil and gas properties with estimated reserves of 32.2 million barrels of oil and 190 billion cubic feet of natural gas, and 23.2 million barrels of natural gas liquids.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Conservative approach aids retirement

By Bill Doyle

Q. I will retire soon and receive approximately $225,000 from my company's 401(k) retirement plan. Can I put this into three rollover individual retirement accounts at different banks? I'd like to put $25,000 into two-year, three-year and five-year certificates of deposit at each bank, so that it all will be insured.

Doyle

I do not need the 401(k) money at this time, as I have other savings and investments. Does my plan make sense to you? Am I allowed to roll over my 401(k) money into three IRAs?

A. Your plan makes very good sense. You're taking a very conservative approach, which is wise at retirement time.

By spreading the money around as you plan, you will have less than the $100,000 Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. limit in each of the banks. Your total nest egg will be fully protected.

Also, by having IRA CDs with varying maturities, the money will be available to you at staggered future dates. Even though you don't need cash now, that could be a big help as time rolls on.

I suggest you make one small change. Start with one-, two- and three-year CDs and, as each matures, renew it for three years. That way, you will have a CD coming due every year at each bank.

Indeed, you are permitted to roll over 401(k) money or a lump sum from any other tax-qualified retirement plan into three IRAs. There is no rule saying you must put it all into the same IRA.

Q. At age 62 and approaching retirement, I have $82,000 in various stocks and mutual funds. This amounts to less than 25 percent of my capital and is the most I want to risk for growth purposes. The rest of my money is CDs and U.S. Treasury securities. I feel having 25 percent invested this way is conservative. What do you think?

A. You and I are in general agreement. Because three-quarters is absolutely free from risk, your overall investment portfolio has a conservative slant.

The one-quarter in individual stocks and fund shares carries some risk in hopes of higher financial rewards. Considering your total resources, you can afford to take on some risk. Good common stocks and shares of mutual funds holding such stocks have been successful investments and most likely will do well in the future.

Q. I have CDs at two banks, which have signed an agreement to merge next March. The sum of my CDs is more than the $100,000 FDIC coverage limit and the CDs don't mature until 1993.

I feel it is most unfair to customers of the two banks who will be trapped with part of our CDs and other deposits not covered by the FDIC as a result of the merger.

Is there anything I can do to reduce my deposits at the merged bank below $100,000, without swallowing the penalty for early withdrawal?

A. You don't have to do anything to retain full FDIC coverage. In a merger situation, the amount of CDs and other accounts in excess of $100,000 from each bank does not automatically lose insurance.

In such a case, the CDs stay covered until they mature. As each CD matures, you can move that money to a different bank or S&L so it will continue to be insured. Amounts over $100,000 in checking, savings and other "transaction" accounts from which withdrawals can be made without penalty remain insured for six months after a merger.

Q. My husband, 78, and I, 75, have $256,000 in CDs, distributed in two banks and two S&Ls, so there is less than $100,000 in each. If only $100,000 per family is to be insured, as I have read, how would you suggest we invest the amount over $100,000?

A. First off, there is no great rush. Congress has been kicking around plans to limit FDIC coverage for several years. Even after our lawgivers get off their overpaid duffs and finally pass such legislation, your CDs will remain insured until they mature.

Past that, for absolute safety, you can invest what ever you have beyond the FDIC limit in U.S. Treasury notes by using the "Treasury Direct" system through your district Federal Reserve Bank or branch.

Firm experiments with wind power

MANCHESTER, Vt. (AP) — Two giant pinwheels sit 3,300 feet above sea level in search of a good breeze.

When a gust kicks up, they whir at speeds of up to 150 mph and send electricity surging through a cable down Mount Equinox. A flick of a household switch and that electricity lights a bulb, turns on a television or bakes a cake.

The journey from breeze to bulb takes seconds.

Mount Equinox is home to Vermont's first commercial wind power project. Green Mountain Power Corp. installed the towers of power in 1989 after more than a decade of research. In total, GMP has invested about $300,000 on its Mount Equinox Wind Station.

Only three other states have tried wind power: California, Massachusetts and Minnesota.

"We think it's going to be a viable technology," said John Zimmerman, GMP's wind consultant. "It is a renewable resource. It is a clean resource."

GMP believes as the technology advances and costs decrease, there will be enough demand to make the project economically viable. In fact, GMP is exploring putting wind turbines in Glastenbury.

But the state's Public Service Department is giving a higher priority to other renewable energy sources like wood, the sun, small hydroelectric projects and landfill gases.

"We think wind is still in the research and development mode," said Richard Sedano, the department's chief engineer. "It's really not something we feel confident about to put the time in that is necessary to promote it."

Andrea Colnes, policy director for the Vermont Natural Resources Council, said the state should study all forms of renewable energy.

"The potential for using wind power in Vermont is very clear," she said. "It's something that's worth looking into."

However, VNRC believes wood is currently the most efficient renewable energy source.

The American Wind Energy Association says wind power now provides one-tenth of 1 percent of the nation's electricity, mainly from California's 15,000 wind turbines. The association released a study last year claiming wind has the potential to meet the nation's entire energy needs.

Each of GMP's two 80-foot turbines generates 200,000 kilowatt hours of electricity a year — enough to meet the average annual residential requirement for 60 homes, Zimmerman said.

But GMP has identified enough sites to generate electricity for nearly 18,000 homes a year, according to Zimmerman and state officials. In addition, Vermont's winds are strongest in the winter, when energy demand is also at its peak.

GMP began researching wind power in 1976 after an oil embargo. In the late 1970s, the utility installed wind gauges at 15 sites, Zimmerman said.

While GMP was measuring wind around Vermont, a Buffalo, N.Y., developer installed four wind turbines atop Mount Equinox from 1981 to 1984, with a plan to sell power to the Central Vermont Public Service Corp., Zimmerman said.

But those turbines rarely worked and the developer eventually abandoned the project. GMP took over the site and installed its turbines, which resemble three-bladed propellers sitting on a tripod.

The propellers need a breeze of 13 mph to generate power, Zimmerman said. A steady wind of 29 mph will achieve full power.

While wind power may have environmental benefits — no pollution and no depletion of natural resources — it still faces several problems that could stunt its growth:

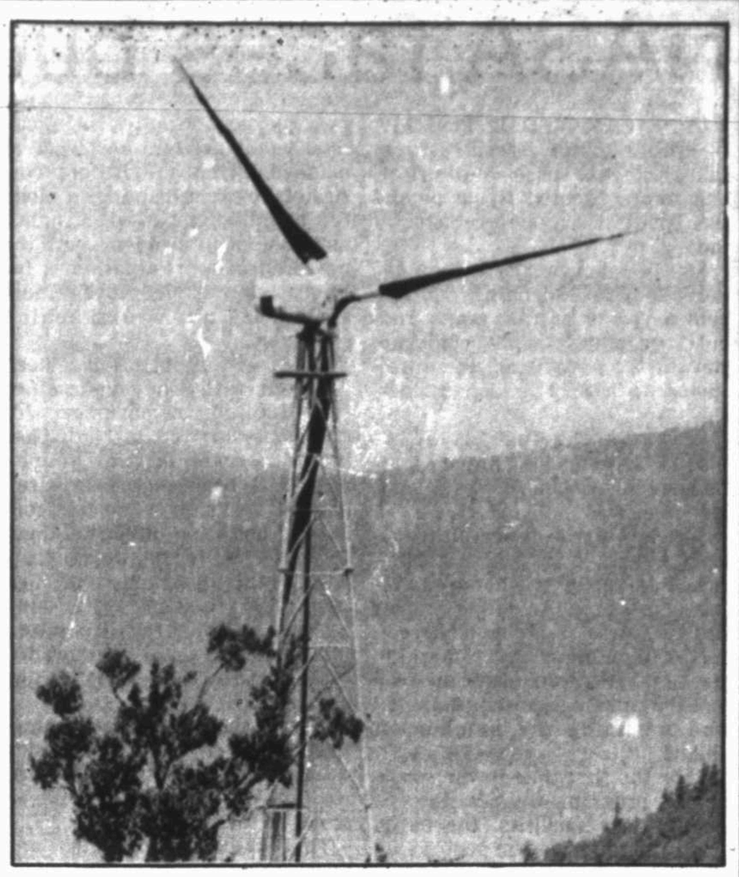

■ GMP's turbines were manufactured in California and not tested during harsh winters. Zimmerman said ice forms on the machines and prevents the blades from spinning. A solution has yet to be found.

■ The machines are vulnerable to lightning. Last winter, a lightning bolt blew apart one propeller blade.

■ The machines are unattractive, yet must be placed on the highest peaks, where they are most visible, in order to work.

■ The machines, by necessity, are placed in remote, undeveloped areas where they can affect wildlife and kill birds flying by.

"I think the economic issues will take care of themselves," Zimmerman said. "The aesthetic and environmental issues are going to be decided by the people. If they don't want it, we're not going to force it on them."

Professor believes chimpanzees are like people

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — The newest member of the psychology faculty at Emory University is an author praised for writing a compelling saga of power and sex. He's been lauded for his writing on issues of peace and war.

But this is no Sidney Sheldon. Frans de Waal, associate professor of psychology, chronicles love and loathing among primates.

De Waal will split his time between his Emory students and his role as research professor at the university's Yerkes Regional Primate Research Center.

His earlier work documented a surprising proclivity toward peacemaking among primates. Now he's planning experiments with capuchin monkeys to observe how willingly they share food with one another.

"I want to set up a situation ... to see if they do that on a reciprocal basis," de Waal said at Yerkes' field station in suburban Atlanta.

"We call these tests of social cognition," he said. "What do monkeys understand of their own relationships? To what extent do they have certain rules of conduct?"

Capuchins — "the organ grinder monkeys," as de Waal put it — and chimpanzees are two primates that will share, unlike others.

In similar studies with chimps, de Waal found that "aggression is normally directed against those individuals who do not share very well. There seems to be a rule that if you're stingy, you cannot expect too much from others."

If it sounds like this has parallels to the human condition, it does, de Waal said.

"Reciprocity is a very interesting phenomenon," he said. "Our societies are built on reciprocity; our whole economy is really built on reciprocity.

"The two things we need to know about reciprocity are, one, its development in (human) children ... and, second, its development in our animal relatives so we can see how it evolved."

There are, to de Waal's way of thinking, two ways to look at the obvious parallels between apes and humans.

"You can guard against it," he said, "and try to put a sort of mental barrier between yourself and the chimpanzee, saying, 'They are animals and we are people.'

"The other way is that you, so to speak, give in to it, and say 'OK, these chimpanzees are just like people.' ... The parallels are not only obvious, they are valid.

"Well, I belong to the last group."

A zoologist, de Waal came to Emory from the University of Wisconsin's primate center, where he was an associate scientist for 10 years. In that time, he published two books: "Chimpanzee Politics," a 1982 detailing of his observations at the Arnhem Zoo in his native Netherlands; and "Peacemaking Among Primates," a study of four primate species which won a Los Angeles Times book award in 1989.

De Waal wrote "Peacemaking" to combat "biology's bleak orientation on the human condition. People tend to believe that violence is more integral to human nature than peace."

But, he said, peacemaking — kissing, embracing, social interaction after a fight — really comes naturally to primates.

By contrast, de Waal said, there is "almost nothing" in the way of psychological research on peacemaking in humans. That's one reason he is intrigued by the possibility of working with the scholars at another arm of Emory University, the Carter Center, which specializes in conflict resolution.

It's de Waal's hope that primate psychology is applicable in other fields. He speaks often to family therapists, political scientists and others interested in the parallels between humans and their fellow primates.

"There is quite a bit of interest outside my direct field," he said. "To what extent that's going to be translated into research — that's not up to me."

Equipment remains in war zone

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Some 250,000 tons of ammunition will remain behind, but by mid-December all other U.S. Army tanks and other equipment will be shipped home from Saudi Arabia, the U.S. military said Sunday.

A British newspaper, meanwhile, accused allied armies of leaving 40 tons of depleted uranium on Persian Gulf War battlefields in the form of spent armor-piercing shells.

Maj. Charles Hayes, a spokesman for the U.S. military's Joint Information Bureau in Dhahran, said the ammunition would be shipped back by April.

In all, 350,000 tons of ammunition was sent to the kingdom, the main deployment point for U.S. forces fighting to oust Iraq from Kuwait.

Hayes said that army logistics teams were busy cleaning, packing and shipping back the remaining 10,000 of an original 129,800 tanks, tracked vehicles and wheeled vehicles deployed in the kingdom.

The United States has signed agreements with Kuwait and Bahrain to leave weapons behind as part of a security pact. But Saudi Arabia is unwilling to allow such equipment on its soil.

About 10,000 army personnel were in Saudi Arabia, he said.

Hayes said most would be home by Christmas. Such troops haven't been stationed there since the war ended in February, however. They were rotated into the region since then.

He said he could not speak for the U.S. Navy, which still deploys 25 ships and 18,500 sailors and Marines, or for the Air Force, which has 5,000 personnel and about 70 warplanes in Saudi Arabia.

The Independent On Sunday quoted a secret British Atomic Energy Authority report as saying the uranium left from the war could pose health hazards to local populations and to clean-up teams.

Spokesman from Britain's Atomic Energy Authority and Ministry of Defense, speaking on condition of anonymity, could not confirm the existence of the report.

Not all fires harmful, Forest Service says

LA GRANDE, Ore. (AP) — For generations, Smokey Bear has admonished Americans not to start forest fires. Now, the U.S. Forest Service is planning to bring fire back to some forests where it has been kept out too long.

In the Blue Mountains of northeastern Oregon, for example, a tradition of fighting forest fires has backfired, leaving a sick ecosystem where hordes of insects feast on weakened trees. Half the woods have turned to brown, and fires are a greater danger than ever.

"We have a public, a national public, that has been given the message that Smokey and all his friends get their homes burned up and get killed from fires," said Charles G. Johnson Jr., a Forest Service ecologist who helped write the prescription for nursing the Blue Mountains back to health.

"If we don't create them in our time frame on our scale, Mother Nature will provide them for us, and it may be on a scale and time frame we don't like."

That's what happened at Yellowstone National Park. Years of fighting fire allowed deadwood to build up like logs in a fireplace. To return balance to the forest, the National Park Service decided in 1972 to let lightning fires burn, as long as they didn't threaten people or buildings.

But the stage was already set. When the summer of 1988 came in hot, dry and windy, there was little anyone could do but get out of the way as flames roared through nearly 800,000 acres of the 2.2 million-acre park.

The biggest of the fires was sparked at a logging site outside the park and was fought from the beginning, said park spokeswoman Joan Anzelmo.

But public outrage forced the Park Service to reconsider its fire policy. Now the agency proposes to still allow natural fires, provided they are in the right place at the right time.

Around the country, people are realizing that fire is good, said Jack Walstad, chairman of Oregon State University's Department of Forest Resources. He's organizing a January symposium on fire.

"As we learned at Yellowstone, it is impossible to exclude fire for indefinite periods of time," said Walstad. "If we are going to maintain and restore health and vigor to ecosystems, we are going to have to learn how to use fire intelligently."

To that end, the Forest Service is looking at carefully restoring fire to places such as the Blue Mountains.

"Whether Smokey begins to carry a drip torch, I don't think that's the Forest Service's intention," said Thomas Quigley, a Forest Service range scientist who heads the Blue Mountains Institute. "But the Forest Service does have a fair amount of support internally now to see fire management take a more dominant role in the sorts of ecosystems we have in the Blue Mountains."

When covered wagons rolled through the Blue Mountains on the Oregon Trail, pioneers saw open stands of big ponderosa pine, with a blue pall of smoke that gave the region its name. The smoke came from slow-burning fires that hop-scotched around the mountains every 10 to 20 years, clearing out fir seedlings that sprouted in the shade of the pines, which were protected by thick bark.

As settlement grew, people put out the fires, allowing Douglas fir, white fir and grand fir to crowd in.

The Forest Service still fights all wildfires, because they are destructive and dangerous, said Nick Greear, fire staff officer on the Wallowa-Whitman National Forest.

But foresters plan more prescribed fires in spring and fall, when they burn slowly, rejuvenate the forest, and consume deadwood, he said.

Physicist's painting is 'just ducky'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joseph Hautman, a physicist from New Jersey, won the richest prize in duckdom last week when his acrylic painting of a spectacled eider was chosen to grace next year's federal duck hunting stamp.

He follows in the footsteps of his brother Jim, who submitted the winning painting two years ago. Another brother, Robert, from Plymouth, Minn., placed fourth this year.

The three brothers grew up in St. Louis Park, Minn., next to a wetlands. Their father was an avid duck hunter, their mother an artist.

Officially, first prize is a sheet of the stamps signed by Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan, but the real payoff is substantial. The winner can rake in as much as $1 million in royalties when limited-edition prints go on sale.

Every hunter is required to buy one of the $15 federal stamps in addition to his state's licenses. The government uses the earnings to buy wetlands: the $400 million raised since the first stamps were sold in 1934 has bought more than four million acres, said Craig Rieben of the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Joseph Hautman lives in Jackson, N.J., while working at the University of Pennsylvania on a grant from the National Institutes of Health. He is researching computer modeling of molecular structures.

He had entered the contest four times before but never got past the first of three eliminations. He is a duck hunter and has bought stamps for 10 years.

NASA faces budget constraints

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA is on the verge of setting sail with a full space shuttle fleet and unprecedented flying potential. There's just one problem — money.

Shuttle managers have been ordered to reduce spending by 3 percent a year over five years. The cuts began last month with the start of the new fiscal year in response to a $330 million budget shortfall.

"A lot of the fun has disappeared from this job," space flight budget chief Michael Mann said last week.

Welcome to the new shuttle era, an age marked by job streamlining, management changes and penny-pinching. Among the more drastic plans being considered: mothballing one of the four shuttles, shutting down one of the two shuttle launch pads or a hangar, and trimming the number of flights.

"For the first time in the space shuttle program, we have the capability, the facilities, the hardware, the software, the people and the know-how to fly more shuttle flights than we can afford to fly," said William Lenoir, head of NASA's space flight program.

The outgoing director of Kennedy Space Center, Forrest McCartney, questions whether NASA can fly all four orbiters next year as planned, given the budget constraints, work remaining to modify Columbia for two-week flights, and equipment problems with the new Endeavour. Preparations for Endeavour's maiden voyage next spring are six weeks behind schedule.

About 1,600 problems have been reported with Endeavour since the $2 billion replacement for Challenger arrived in May. They include scratched and gouged structural beams, crossed wires, exposed electrical connectors, misaligned bolts and dirty fuel lines.

Engineers expect more problems by the time Endeavour flies. About 3,000 problems were found on the other orbiters when manned space flight resumed following the 1986 Challenger accident.

"I have seen no indication at all that anyone is going to degrade safety," said McCartney. "But can we fly the four orbiters with all that's on the plate?"

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans eight shuttle flights in 1992 at a cost of about $330 million each. That's two more flights than in 1991; Atlantis is scheduled to leave on the year's final mission Nov. 19.

Officials anticipate eight to 10 shuttle launches a year as the agency moves toward building a space station later this decade.

"I'll tell you one thing now, it's going to be a full-court press," McCartney said. "Whether they can do it and keep the overtime down — it's down to 6 percent now — I really don't know."

One of the recommendations following the Challenger accident, which killed seven astronauts and grounded the fleet for 2½ years, was that overtime at the launch site be reduced.

Already this fall, 400 shuttle workers at Kennedy have been laid off. More layoffs are feared under Robert Crippen, an ex-astronaut who will replace McCartney as Kennedy director Jan 1.

The abrupt change in command is part of internal restructuring to sharpen the agency's focus on the shuttle and space station programs, Lenoir said.

Officials are considering a presidential panel's recommendation to move key shuttle posts to Kennedy from Johnson Space Center in Houston, Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., and Washington headquarters.

"If we want to pursue the shuttle and space station, and moon and Mars exploration, we're going to have to be really efficient," said chief astronaut Dan Brandenstein.

But Aviation Week magazine reported Sunday on signs of inefficiency in another NASA program. A $70 million cost overrun has doubled the price of two NASA spacecraft being developed to study the interactions between the Earth and the sun, the magazine said.

Costs now are projected to reach $140 million for the spacecraft, named Wind and Polar. They are being built for use by the 17-nation International Solar Terrestrial Physics Program. NASA officials confirmed the cost increases and said some cost growth had been anticipated.

NASA must present its revised spending plan to Congress by Nov. 27. The 3 percent reduction against the $3 billion requested for shuttle operations in fiscal 1992 represents some $90 million. Another $230 million must be cut to reach the $2.7 billion appropriated by Congress.

Nearly $2.8 billion was spent on shuttle operations in fiscal 1991.

"Our primary objective is to fly the shuttle safely," Mann said. "If we can't do that then we won't fly it. That remains kind of paramount in this whole environment."

Little hero

Randi Kistler, 3, of Mansfield, Ohio, recently recalled how she used a programmed button on the telephone to dial 911 to summon rescue workers after her mother passed out. Ohio firefighters are considering honoring Randi for her actions. Behind Randi are her brother, Cody, and father, Ray.

DEAR ABBY

Soon-to-be-married couple met through mail

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations, you've done it again! You can now put another notch in your "success column" for Operation Dear Abby.

Van Buren

Last Thanksgiving, I wrote a letter to "Any Serviceperson" and sent it to the Persian Gulf as a part of your letter-writing campaign. I never really expected a reply, but I received one from a Lt. Patrick E. Fortune, which I answered promptly. We soon learned that we had a lot in common: His name is Patrick, my name is Patty; he's Irish-Catholic, I'm Irish-Catholic; he's one of seven kids, I'm one of seven kids; he went to an all-boys Catholic school, I went to an all-girls Catholic school; we both have dreamed of biking through Ireland. We also share many of the same beliefs about God, family and values.

When Pat returned to the states, we started talking on the telephone. We have had three- and four-hour long conversations. (Don't ask about our telephone bills!) I finally broke down and told him that I was absolutely nuts about him! He then confessed that he felt the same way about me.

We finally met in Cincinnati over the Labor Day weekend and had a sensational time. We knew there was no doubt about it — we were right for each other.

Pat sent me a plane ticket so I could visit him at Fort Bragg, and our romance flourished. He will get out of the service in about six months, after which he plans to move to Milwaukee and make spoiling me a full-time job. That's wonderful because he's the most important person in my life.

So, Dear Abby, that's the saga of Pat and Patty. How can I ever thank you? — PATTY TREACY, GREENFIELD, WIS.

DEAR PATTY: You just did.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend and I have been friends for 6½ years. I am a single man who has never been married, and my best friend is a married woman with two children. Her husband's job allows him to be home only three nights a week. I even stay at her home about 50 percent of the time. Her husband has no objections to my staying in their home. In fact, we get along very well.

The problem is that everyone thinks it is abnormal for us to "hang out" as much as we do. We do not have sex, and never will; we are not attracted to each other sexually at all. We are just good friends and that's all.

So, what do you think, Abby? Is our relationship normal or not? I hope you will print this so our friends will know that two people of the opposite sex can be good friends — and that's all. — BUGGED IN BARSTOW

DEAR BUGGED: It is indeed unusual for a single man and a married woman who are not romantically involved to spend so much time together. It is also out of the ordinary for the woman's husband to be as secure and generous about his wife's close friendship with another man.

And yes, people of the opposite sex can be friends — and that's all. It is not necessarily "abnormal," but it is unusual.

DEAR ABBY: I recently remarried. My new husband was also previously married. How should I introduce my first husband's relatives who are my former in-laws? I am very friendly with my ex-husband's nieces and nephews, too. — SECOND TIME AROUND

DEAR SECOND: There is no reason to call attention to the fact that you were formerly related by marriage. Just introduce your ex-in-laws — nieces and nephews — as "dear" or "old" friends, and save the explanatory details for subsequent meetings.

AT WIT'S END

Computers can't predict genetics

Whenever I feel a need to be severely depressed, I leaf through the family photo album.

Bombeck

On my honeymoon, I am wearing a black bathing suit with small rosebuds on it. With each following year, I am pictured wearing the same bathing suit — only the buds have burst into full bloom. A few of them have died.

There are other less subtle changes in my appearance. My laugh lines have turned into plowed furrows, my chin dangles like an unopened parachute, and my upper arms could fan Brazil.

Occasionally, the question crosses my mind that if my husband knew then what he knows now, would he have made all those promises in front of witnesses?

Brace yourself. An electronics company, Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., has developed a computer program that can use photographs of faces to predict the aging process or turn back the clock to your youth.

The possibilities are endless. By combining facial characteristics of the prospective parents, it can produce a portrait of an unborn child. Plastic surgeons can show patients the effects of proposed surgery. Police artists can put together a composite of a suspect.

For a fun evening, you can even sit around and produce an image of what would happen if your husband and Michelle Pfeiffer produced a child or if you bore a child fathered by Mark Harmon.

All of this sounds great, but there's a lot of margin for error. How does a computer know what part you're going to get from each parent? How could it have predicted, for example, that I would have my mother's math abilities and my father's legs? Of if sons will get their mother's height and daughters their father's feet?

Besides, if someone had predicted that I would one day lose my seat belt in my stretch marks, I wouldn't have believed him. The problem is that computer science is not an exact one. This whole concept is based on genetic odds. But nothing could have prepared me for the moment when a nurse placed a newborn son with flaming red hair in my arms.

"Any redheads in the family?" she asked.

I shook my head.

"Then how did this happen?" she pressed.

"Rust," I answered.

I played it cool. A computer would have shorted out.

Bid/Contract Documents, including Drawings and Technical Specifications are on file at the office of the Engineer, Garcia & Wright Consult. Engrs., Inc., 407 W. Rhapsody, SA, TX 78216 and at the office of Frank X. Spencer & Associates, 505 South Oak, Pecos, TX 79772.

Copies of the Bid/Contract Documents may be obtained at the office of Frank X. Spencer & Associates/Garcia & Wright Consulting Engineers, Inc., A Joint Venture located at 407 Rhapsody, San Antonio, Texas 78216 upon payment of $40.00 for each set. There is an additional $10.00 non-refundable mailing fee for each set.

Any bidder who submits a bid to the Owner, upon returning the Contract Documents within 10 days of bid opening and in good condition, will be refunded his payment, and any non-bidder (supplier, subcontractor, etc) upon so returning the Contract Documents will be refunded $20.00.

A bid bond in the amount of 5% of the bid issued by an acceptable surety shall be submitted with each bid. A certified check or bank draft payable to the County of Presidio on negotiable U.S. Government Bounds (as par value) may be submitted in lieu of the Bid Bond.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the federally determined prevailing (Davis-Bacon) wage rate, as issued by the Texas Department of Commerce and contained in the contract documents, must be paid on this project. In addition, the successful bidder must ensure that employees and applicants for employment are not discriminated against because of their race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

The County of Presidio reserves the right to reject any or all bids or to waive any informalities in the bidding.

Bids may be held by the County of Presidio for a permit not to exceed 60 days from the date of the bid opening for the purpose of reviewing the bids and investigating the bidders qualifications prior to the contract award.

310 General Help Wanted

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also? Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
