EIGHT HURT IN CRASHES

RED ARMY ORDERED TO ANNIHILATE FINNS WHO FIRE ACROSS FRONTIER

By JOE ALEX MORRIS
United Press Foreign Editor

Soviet Russia ordered red army forces today to "annihilate" any Finns firing across the forntier into the war-threatened Karelian sector.

The order was the first soviet reaction to a Finnish note which denied that Finnish artillery had fired across the border, refused to accept the Russian demand for withdrawal of frontier troops, and proposed instead that both sides withdraw their armed forces.

The Finnish government and its people remained calm but at Moscow it was said that the little nation's reply to the soviet demands was both bold and impertinent. More and more red pressure appeared certain with the increasing danger that the soviets would become so definitely committed to forcing a solution of their demands that military action could no longer be avoided.

One obvious soviet hope was that Finland could be persuaded to overthrow its cabinet and come to terms.

No Reason for Speed

There was no special reason for speed on the part of Russia's 170,000,000 population to complete an indirect conquest of 3,800,000 Finns except insofar as the soviets would like to clear up their Baltic expansion and turn attention to the Balkans.

Great Britain and France continued to be occupied with the sea war against Germany and there appeared to be little chance of serious interference with the soviets' activities in the Baltic area.

The French issued a claim that six nazi U-boats had been destroyed in the last ten days but offered no details substantiating that claim. In London it was reported that the British navy had captured or sunk at least a dozen disguised German merchant ships attempting to sneak through the British blockade from the Americas.

Search by the British and French naval forces also continued for the nazi pocket battleship Deutschland, which sent the British armed merchant cruiser Rawalpindi to the

R. H. Templeton, Prominent Attorney And Former Childress School Head, Dies Today at Home in Wellington

WELLINGTON. — Judge R. H. Templeton, prominent attorney at Wellington for many years and once superintendent of Childress schools, died at his home here this morning at 2 o'clock, after an illness of several months.

The funeral will be conducted at the Methodist church here Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. J. E. Kirby, pastor. Burial will be in the Wellington cemetery.

Judge Templeton was superintendent of Childress schools for two terms at about the turn of the century. He came to Wellington in 1904 and was elected county attorney of Collingsworth county soon afterward, serving two terms. His next official position was as mayor of Wellington in 1921. He resigned that office to become county judge.

He was owner of one of the city's first newspapers, The Times, and helped organize the first two banks established here. He was always active in civic affairs, and was a member of the Methodist church.

FARMERS' MEETINGS START

Farmers of the Loco and Arlie communities today heard a discussion of the 1940 AAA farm program, the cotton marketing quota and other details of the farm program. The two meetings today were the first of a series which will extend to all county communities.

They are conducted by J. F. House, secretary of the county ACA, and H. B. Hill, chairman of the county committee.

The meetings will be resumed next week and will be held at Olympus Monday morning, Harrell Chapel Monday afternoon, Garden Valley Tuesday morning and Community Center Tuesday afternoon, Rivercamp Wednesday morning Dec. 6 and Kirkland that afternoon, Carey Thursday morning Dec. 7 and at Tell in the afternoon, and at Highpoint Friday morning Dec. 8 and at Childress at 7 o'clock that evening.

Childress to Close Thursday

Practically all Childress stores and offices will close Thursday in observance of Thanksgiving.

The postoffice will close again, city and county offices will close and most business houses will be closed for the entire day.

School students of Childress will be dismissed tomorrow afternoon for the Thanksgiving holidays and will return to classes next Monday.

Mayor C. V. Jones has proclaimed Thursday as the Thanksgiving holiday in Childress.

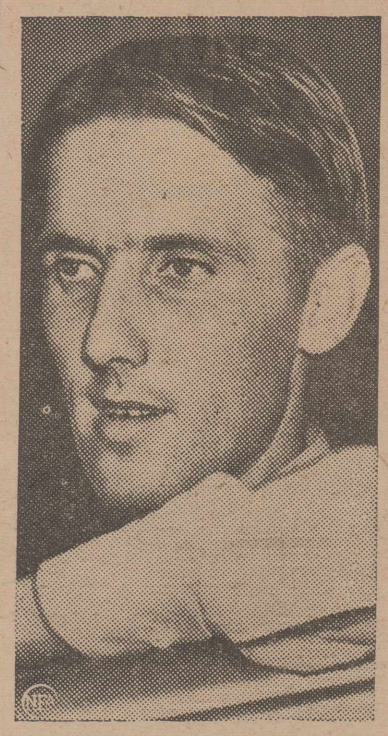

Aged Politician Gets Parole

OKLAHOMA CITY (UP)—Theodore Roosevelt Wilcox, democratic candidate for congress in 1934, 1936, and 1938 was paroled from serving a prison term at McAlister today.

The 70-year-old former school techer, who once taught at Hobert, was released from the county jail with three paroles over his head.

Sentenced to serve two years at McAlister Dec. 9, 1915 Wilcox was paroled originally by Gov. Robertson. He was convicted three weeks ago in federal court on a charge of conspiring to defraud the government and placed on probation. Gov. Leon Phillips revoked the parole and ordered Wilcox held in jail. The governor relented today and renewed the parole after friends of Wilcox interceded in his behalf.

Wilcox said he had been a resident of southwestern Oklahoma for 15 years.

YOUNGEST MAYOR in the country is the claim of Bill Collins, 23, who was elected to the office in Whitesburg, Ky., when he was 21. Now he's opening a filling station to get money to go to college.

WOODS TO BE HERE

L. A. Woods, state superintendent of schools, will be in Childress Dec. 11 for a meeting of the Childress county unit of the state teachers' association.

All city and county teachers will attend the meeting.

The program will be announced later.

Teachers, at the meeting, will also select officers and directors of the county interscholastic league organization for the coming year.

Amarillo Man Dies in Crash

RATON, New Mexico (UP)—K. D. Hirst, Amarillo chain store executive, was killed and Beulah Heilman, his secretary, was injured critically when their car left an ice covered highway near here.

The wreck occurred southeast of Raton.

Passersby failed to discover the wreckage for several hours and Hirst died from a fractured skull and internal injuries after being brought to a Raton hospital.

Miss Heilman was near death, physicians reported, suffering from skull fractures and possible internal injuries.

NO PEACE; NO PRIZE

OSLO, Norway (UP)—The Nobel Peace Prize will not be awarded this year because there are no outstanding candidates for the international award and the honor will be held over to 1940, it was announced.

ONE MAN TO FACE CHARGE

Eight persons were injured, three of them seriously, and one man was charged with drunk driving as the result of two automobile accidents on highway 83 near Childress during the past 24 hours.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Glover of the Rivercamp community suffered severe cuts and bruises when their car ran into the rear of a truck on the highway north of the Golden Court station about 10 o'clock last night. Mrs. Glover possibly has two fractured ribs.

R. B. Eads of Wellington, one of the two men in the truck, was charged with drunk driving and was bound over to action of the grand jury under bond of $500. The complaint was filed by Sheriff Dick Moore.

Glover said the truck had no tail light and he failed to see it in time to avoid the crash.

Car Hits Post

John Henry Anderton and Mrs. Ela Ingram of Paducah and four negro cotton pickers whose home is in Waco were hurt early this morning when their pickup left the highway and crashed into a highline post at the intersection of highway 83 and the loop southwest of Childress.

Mrs. Ingram suffered serious cuts and bruises and remained in a hospital here today. Anderton also was cut and bruised, but returned to his home in Paducah.

The negro man received a deep gash on his head and other serious injuries, but his wife and two children were not believed seriously hurt.

Anderton was driving the truck, which was owned by Mrs. Ingram. They were enroute to Wichita Falls, and the four negroes were riding with them, enroute to their home.

The truck was loaded with turkeys, chickens, empty beer bottles, canned goods, maize and other articles, which were scattered over the side of the highway.

1940 FARM PROGRAM IS ANNOUNCED

WASHINGTON (UP)—Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace announced a 1940 farm program today calling for more than $750,000,000 in government subsidy payments.

The program provides for increased payments for soil conservation in line with Wallace's plan to shift emphasis from acreage control.

Wallace said that the 1940 program was contingent upon an appropriation of $500,000,000 to the AAA by congress.

The program calls for changes in the rates of payments on several crops but total benefit payments would be about the same as this year. The national soil depleting crop goal was unchanged at 270,000,000 to 285,000,000 acres.

The 1940 program does not change the cotton acreage goal of 27,000,000 to 29,000,000 acres. Cotton planting has been reduced by nearly 11,000,000 acres since the start of the farm program in 1933. Last spring 26,000,000 acres were planted.

Mind Your Manners

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. Should the parents of both the bride and groom be permitted to kiss the bride before other guests rush in?
2. Who sees to it that the mothers of both the bride and groom receive corsages?
3. Who pays for the bouquet of the maid of honor?
4. When a girl is walking down the street with two men, where is her place?
5. If you are a man and you bump into a woman in a crowd, should you lift your hat as you say "I beg your pardon"?

What would you do if—

The woman in front of you in a theater has on a hat that obstructs your view. Would you—

(a) Lean forward and ask her if she would mind taking it off?

(b) Say in a voice loud enough for her to hear: "Why in the world don't women take off their hats in theaters"?

Answers

1. Yes.
2. The groom.
3. The bride's family.
4. Between them.
5. Yes.

Steele Heard by Large Crowd in Sermon-Drama

Practically all religious denominations in Childress were represented in the crowd that almost filled First Methodist church auditorium last evening to hear a Presbyterian minister, Rev. J. A. Steele of Vernon, give an impressive sermon-monologue, "Judas Iscariot."

He presented the characterization of which he is the author, portraying Judas as a man impelled by desire for power and money.

Music before the monologue included a solo by S. O. Murdock and songs by the choir with Miss Cornelia Maness at the organ. Rev. Orion W. Carter, pastor, introduced the guest speaker and Rev. T. M. McBrayer of King Memorial church gave the invocation.

The Hughes Bible class and choir sponsored the program, and took an offering for the church organ fund.

The season for Santa Claus' letters has opened. Two have already been received at The Index office, and after Thanskgiving we expect many, many more to be published before they are forwarded to Santa.

Wayne Webb, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Truman Webb, made a very practical move and drew pictures of what he wanted, rather than writing. He only added a postscript, "I want a bicycle, too". The pictures are of a steam shovel, horse, doctor's set and several smaller articles. Of course Santa can read picture writing as well as English.

The other letter is from Clint Crawford, who prints: "Dear Santa, I am a little early but it looks like snow. I am 6 years old. I go to school. Miss Wilson is my teacher. Bring her something nice. Bring me an electric train and an airplane".

Miss Sides of Kirkland Weds At Clarendon

KIRKLAND.—Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Sides have announced the marriage of their daughter, Fay Marie, to Jimmy N. Waters of Clarendon. The ceremony was read by Rev. A. B. Smith in the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Waters, in Clarendon Friday.

The only witnesses were Mr. and Mrs. Waters and Maurice Lane.

The bride grew up in Kirkland and is a graduate of Kirkland high school. She was attending Clarendon Junior college at the time of her marriage.

Mr. Waters is employed in Clarendon and the couple will make their home there. They were weekend guests of her parents here.

Taft Urges GOP Victory Next Year

OKLAHOMA CITY (UP)—U. S. Senator Robert Taft today resumed his presidential tour of the middlewest after urging Oklahoma republicans to pitch the 1940 republican campaign on an anti-new deal basis.

Taft left here for Tulsa and was then prepared to visit Dallas and Houston in his swing through the southwest.

The son of the former republican president emphasized the need for balancing the budget and letting business run itself in an address last night.

He said he believed that the current political swing was against "irresponsible" spending and toward "sane" governmental policies.

"We have the same irresponsible spending," he declared; "we have the same attempt to regulate everybody's business and everybody's farm.

"We have almost the same unemployment. The national income is still far below what it was ten years ago and there are 10,000,000 more people."

● PERSONALITIES

TODAY'S PROFILE

By The United Press

Wayne Lyman Morse used to like nothing better than a good fight, with his own role that of an enthusiastic—but judicious—partisan. Lately he's become the Pacific Coast's No. 1 peacemaker in an industry often torn by labor warfare.

That is only one of many contradictions in the career of the 39-year-old dean of the University of Oregon law school who is completing his first year as coast waterfront arbitrator. Morse was reared in the argumentative school of Wisconsin politics, and the late Robert M. LaFollette was and remains his model of a man.

While attending the University of Wisconsin, Morse campaigned for LaFollette, argued for him on the college debate team, and represented Wisconsin in the Big Ten Oratorical contests—usually urging LaFollette's plan for over-ruling supreme court decisions by a two-thirds vote of Congress.

His rise has been rapid. After obtaining his degree in labor economics at Wisconsin, he went to the University of Minnesota as an instructor and, incidentally, obtained a Master's Degree in psychology and won his L.L.B.

Columbia called him and he was chosen to survey the grand jury system. He won a Doctor of Jurisprudence degree on the strength of his survey. In 1929 he accepted an assistant professorship at the University of Oregon, and was advanced over three full professors to the deanship in 1931.

A lifelong Republican, he was called to Washington to direct an administration survey of release procedures, and personally wrote more than 1,500 pages of the 4,000 page, five valume report—one of the most comprehensive ever attempted on any legal question.

In 1935 he accepted an invitation to act as arbitrator of a Northwest wages and hours dispute. His award settled the dispute. In Washington he appeared as a government attorney in a similar case, and won it. The labor department's attention was attracted.

Last year Secretary Frances E. Perkins named him Pacific Coast waterfront arbitrator, to settle the many disputes of the International Longshoremen and Waterfront Employers. Five previous arbitrators had tried and failed.

Since his appointment, Morse has arbitrated 41 cases, and in 40 of them got immediate compliance. The longshoremen refused to observe his 41st award, and Morse resigned.

A week later he accepted reappointment at the joint request of longshoremen (who had hastened to obey the edict), employers and the labor department. And the parties to the disputes agreed to his condition that renewal of their contract would not be decided by strike or lockout—a victory for peace almost despaired of on the coast.

Of medium height, sharp-featured, Morse looks and lives like a country gentleman, the antithesis of everything a longshoreman is or does. His hobby is the breeding and showing of fine horses.

He is married, the father of three children. His wife was his college sweetheart.

Burial Flags Are Available

Burial flags to drape caskets of ex-soldiers are now available for caskets of all who have served at least one enlistment in peacetime service and have been honorably discharged, according to information received by Postmaster J. A. Hilburn from Frank S. Cleckler of the veterans administration.

Formerly, the burial flags were available only for former soldiers who had served in a war of the United States.

Service in the army, navy, marine corps or coast guard makes the veteran eligible for the flags.

Preventing War In 1964

Something that never happened during those long years between 1914 and 1918 is happening in Europe today. People are asking their statesmen what they intend to do to the continent AFTER the conflict is over. The man on the streets of London and Paris is interested not only in having his country win the war, but in punctuating the fight with something better than a Versailles Treaty.

During the last war, virtually the only objective of any allied nation was to hang the kaiser. That accomplished, everyone believed everything else would take care of itself. Democracy would be rescued, workers could go back to their factories, farmers to their fields; joy and peace would reign. It was as simple as that.

Today, one of the prinripal war aims advocated is the federalization of western Europe. The chief champion of this idea is Julian Huxley, British novelist, who feels that instead of trying to balance power, the European nations should consolidate it. Huxley would set up a United States of Europe, based upon the successful American system.

Clarence Streit, American author, carries this idea a step further in the book he wrote some time before war was imminent. Streit, in "Union Now", proposes a federation of world democracies. Under the American's plan, Germany, Italy, and Russia would be ineligible until they adopted democratic forms of government.

Loudest demand for a concrete declaration of allied war aims comes from H. G. Wells, British writer, who doesn't care particularly what the British and French have in mind—as long as it's something a little more solid than merely clipping Herr Hitler's ears.

There is some hope, if the people are sufficiently aroused by the spread of these ideas, that Europe's troubles can be disposed of for periods longer than 25 years at a time. Whether the next peace conference will meet after a long, harrowing war or before too much blood has been spilt, the results should be much better than they were after the Wilson-Lloyd George-Clemenceau huddle in 1919.

No matter who wins the war—if anyone wins it—the loser can't be expected to remain permanently on his knees. Economic expansion is important, and international trade is doubly essential to nations that have just gone through long years of military profligacy.

THE POET'S CORNER

THANKSGIVING
By Mable C. Bogan

Yes, the heart is thankful
For clothing and for food,
For friends and life's comforts,
And everything that's good.

Give thanks to Him always,
For the blessings of each day;
Show it first by obedience,
Evidence of the real way.

Being thankful for your comforts
That made life an easier way,
And for loving ones around you
Shows that you know
Thanksgiving day.

Keeping too, the day in reverence,
Assigned by one long ago,
To show our heavenly father
That we love Him here below.

Love Him for His gentle mercy,
His gift of harvests great,
Food prepared for the winter
As the spring again we wait.

From Now on Nothing Will Be Overlooked

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

By BRUCE CATTON

WASHINGTON.—For the second time in history, one of the major political conventions may be held as late as August.

Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the Republican National Committee has pretty well sold the party high command on the idea that the Republican convention in 1940 ought to be held after the Democratic convention. Now the idea is being carried farther, in high Republican circles, and there is talk of holding the convention late in July or August.

This will be one of the subjects discussed when the party's executive committee meets here Dec. 7.

FAVOR LATE DATE TO AVOID LETDOWN

Those favoring a late date argue that there is always a letdown after a presidential convention. The delegates go back home full of enthusiasm and energy, then have to wait a couple of months before they can really get to work.

One suggestion being advanced is that it might be smart to make the presidential campaign swing into high immediately after the convention, have the formal notification of the nominee as soon as possible, and start the candidate out on his speech-making tour right after that. This would keep tempo high all through the campaign.

In line with this idea, plans are being made to get as much as possible of the routine spade-work of the campaign out of the way before the convention.

In 1936, it is recalled, Mr. Hamilton took office as chairman and found—as new national chairmen usually find—that he had to start from scratch. Nobody knew how much money was going to be available, where it was going to come from or who was going to get it.

HOPE TO ELIMINATE ROUTINE WORK

If enough of this routine work can be eliminated ahead of time, it is figured, the campaign can swing into high right after the convention without any waste motion.

Naturally, it won't be possible to do all of it. For one thing, a new nominee is always entitled to name a new national chairman, who in turn may name a new committee staff. But it is felt that enough can be done to make the job of the new chairman (if there is a new one) a good deal easier.

One reason for wanting a late Republican convention is the prevailing uncertainty about what line the Democrats are going to take. In 1936 everybody knew the Democrats would nominate Rosevelt on a straight New Deal platform.

This year no one knows whether the Democratic nominee will be an ardent New Dealer, a middle-of-the-roader or an anti. The Republicans can shape their platform and perhaps pick their candidate more intelligently if they know just who and what they're going to be up against.

CIVIL WAR DEMOCRATS CONVENED IN AUGUST

Since the Republican party was organized—in 1856—there have been 21 presidential elections—and, of course, 42 national nominating conventions. Thirty-three of these conventions have been held in June, six in July and two in May.

The only one ever held in August was the Democratic convention of 1864. This was when the Civil war was on and the line the party took was going to be determined pretty largely by what happened in the field.

One of Jupiter's nine moons is about 20,000,000 miles from the planet and requires about two years for one complete revolution.

T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF

(This is the fourth in a series of 14 articles by Dr. Fishbein on the nine principal causes of death in the United States.)

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

We can do much to prolong our lives and to prevent heart disease by maintaining suitable hygiene, including control of diet, exercise, work, sleep, relaxation, and rest. For the person who already has a heart disease or weakness, there is also some important advice.

Sir Clifford Allbutt, one of the greatest British authorities on heart disease, used to say to the young physicians who studied with him, "Tell a patient with heart disease to find out what he can do and do it; tell him to find out what he cannot do and never do it."

The one most important rule for prolonging life in the case of people with heart disturbances is to keep all their activities within the capacity of the weak organ. This means that people with heart disease should avoid any kind of work that involves sudden effort, such as lifting heavy weights, the constant use of the arms in swimming—even sweeping and hammering.

Any exercise that the patient can take without becoming short of breath or feeling a pain may be helpful. The first prescription, however, is rest. To provide rest for a weakened heart, we must consider what causes strain.

An excess of fluids in the body, an excess of food that must be digested, an excess of muscular endeavor of any kind, and excess of emotional tension will make work for the heart, speed up its rate, and endanger the life of any one whose heart is not up to normal capacity.

A doctor can prescribe drugs which induce sleep and lower the tension of the nervous system. He can also prescribe drugs which slow the rate of the heart and strengthen its beat. Every drug, however, is capable of harm as well as good; no drug should ever be taken in case of disturbed action of the heart unless prescribed specifically by the doctor after the patient has undergone a careful examination.

Few people realize that worry is bad for the heart. In fact, worry over the condition of the heart may actually lead people to feel symptoms that do not exist. Women frequently complain of palpitation of the heart, which turns out usually to be something wrong with the mental and nervous system.

We now have tests for measuring not only the size of the heart and detecting the character of the heart beat but also for measuring the capacity of the heart to do its work. Such tests made by competent doctors are of the utmost importance in determining how much work a heart can do, and in regulating the routine of the patient to ensure him the longest possible life expectancy.

WISE and OTHERWISE

By Fred L. Haskett

This afternoon I was in Ennis, Ellis county, to speak to the ladies of the First Christian church upon "Affairs in Europe." Ellis county is the home of several prominent Childress county citizens, two of my friends being Claude and Herman Alexander, hailing from Ellis county. The county has had tough going the past few years, or since the government told them how much cotton to plant and how to kill the pigs, and feeding a lot of worthless negro, white and tenant farmers, who never work so long as Uncle Sam and the state of Texas will help them with cash and groceries.

Ellis county is a rich county. Fine soil, and as black as one will find in the world, and with whitest and blackest people. When speaking of blackest people I refer to the old-fashioned Texas negroes who are honest, toil hard and get little for their labor.

In my talk to the ladies at the church I said there is news and propaganda, but it is difficult to separate the news from propaganda, therefore we must not believe all we read in the newspapers or hear over the radio. I explained to them a story that I recently read in the Amarillo News-Globe, which I believe was written by Gene Howe and uoted Cal Farley.

This story was to the effect that graves of American soldiers of the World war had been opened and the bones scattered because rents were not paid on the graves. There is not a word of truth in that story and why any person should quote it or publish it is beyond my understanding. The cemeteries occupied by the American dead is land purchased by France from farmers and donated to the American government forever. There is no tax on the land, or rents. Every American cemetery is as pure American soil as we have right here in the United States. Old Glory floats over these cemeteries.

That story appeared in the Amarillo News-Globe and a Childress paper. I don't think Cal Farley purposely misrepresented the facts or did it for propaganda in the interest of Germany. I just cannot make myself believe that.

There are private burial places in most every nation in the world, and perhaps some in the United States, but especially true of countries which speak the language kindred to Latin. It is possible that some American soldiers were buried in these private cemeteries by friends, relatives or French wives, who failed to maintain the rents and the bones were removed. But in the national cemeteries not the remains of one soldier has been unearthed, except for shipment to the United States for burial in Arlington or some family burial plot.

Germany claims England violated international law. Germany in the World war violated all international laws as regards the sea. She started off this war violating international laws and the common law of humanity. America desires to be neutral but we are neutral to England and France, and Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Sweden, Poland, Switzerland, Czecheslovakia, Jugoslavio, Italy, Hungary and the other nations who do not wish war. None of us are neutral if Japan, Germany or Russia are considered. One cannot be a good American and be neutral. It is not in our make-up. Americans may not worship God as they should but 99 out of every 100 Americans fear God. And Germany and Russia, as far as the official governments in power are concerned, do not know God. That is why Germany cannot win this war, and the reason why Japan will lose in China, and why Russia is a cock-eyed coward.

We hope Gene Howe will correct the statement about the American soldier boys who are buried in France. Those boys, if alive today, would tell you the World war ended too scon, and had the opinion of the American officers been followed Old Glory would have been planted over the imperial palace in Berlin, and the Germans told the story that General Sherman once related: "War is hell!"

Sport Parade

By Henry McLemore.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UP)—May I take it all back?

I mean the things I have said about Tennessee's football team being so good no other club had a right to be on the same field with it.

I was wrong, awfully wrong. The Southern California team that licked Notre Dame here Saturday can walk on any field, any time, with anybody.

The Trojans are big, mighty big. They're fast, mighty fast. They're sure, mighty sure. And there is one h—l of a lot of 'em. When one goes off, his replacement is just as good, maybe better.

The Trojans beat a good Notre Dame team here Saturday. Perhaps the best Notre Dame team since Rockne's last one in 1930. The score was 20 to 12, and I don't believe that even the most rabid Irishman this side of Dublin could find fault with the score. As a matter of fact a score so close was a tribute to a game Notre Dame eleven. Outweighed, outmanned, outclassed, the Irish fought hard, tried desperately, and made a thrilling game of it.

Had the boys from Notre Dame been a little less keen, a little less determined, the men from Southern California would have beaten them by four or five touchdowns. The Trojans are that much better. They have everything. And in abundance. When Grenny Lansdell comes out, in goes Doyle Nave.

When Nave comes out, in goes Ambrose Schindler. In short, there are backs in abundance, and linemen are a dime a dozen.

Against Notre Dame the Southern Californias scored whenever it was necessary. They started off with a smashing dive down the field that brought them a touchdown in 12 plays. When the Irish tied the score, the Trojans cut loose and again went ahead. When Benny Sheridan got Notre Dame's second touchdown on a brilliant run—a perfect Notre Dame scoring play with every man doing his job—Southern California put the game on ice with a third touchdown.

One got the impression that the men from the West could score whenever they wanted to. They had perfect poise, and were never upset by the score, even when it was closer than next month's rent.

What would be the outcome if USC and Tennessee met in the Rose Bowl?

Heaven only knows. Southern California has power, speed, and endless reserve power. Tennessee has power, speed, and reserves to burn.

If I had to bet—and I probably will—I'd lean toward Tennessee. And for only one reason. The Vols are a little meaner, but a little harder, and are a little hungrier for fame. Of course, these two teams aren't in the Rose Bowl. USC has to take care of UCLA and Tennessee has to be invited.

But they'll be there. And what a game! The vicious Vols against the terrific Trojans.

It might even pay to see it.

Allred, Powers Assessed Fines

HOUSTON (UP)—Federal Judge James Wilson of Fort Worth fined Renne Allred Jr., and Neal Powers, both attorneys, $1,000 each Monday when they entered surprise pleas of nolo contendere to charges of violation of the Connally hot oil act.

Judge Wilson dismissed a charge of conspiracy against the two, ending the federal court case that has been pending against Allred and Powers for several months.

Allred and Powers entered the pleas as their trial began its second week and while 96 witnesses waited to testify.

BOBCATS OUT TO AVENGE 1938 LOSS TO TIGERS

Lopsided Score Favored Electra Team Last Year

It was on Armistice Day, 1938, that the Childress Bobcats pushed the Electra Tigers all over Fair Park field, but still lost a 33-13 decision.

The Bobcats made 21 first downs to 10 for Electra and gained 311 yards on running and passing plays to 192 for the Tigers, but still they lost the game by a lopsided score. Electra got every break imaginable and converted a blocked punt and three pass interceptions into touchdowns.

Nine members of the 1938 Bobcat squad and nine men who were on that Electra team will be on the field Thursday afternoon at Electra when the Bobcats tangle with the Tigers for the district 2AA championship.

The Bobcats will be out to avenge that hard-to-take setback of 1938.

Bobcats who played in 1938 and who are still on the squad are Max Jones, Sammy Privitt, Junior Brown, Bill Lamb, Brack Taylor, Albert Williams, Vic Bates, James Willeford and Morgan Goodson.

Electra men who are back this season are Joe Ed Elliott, Jack Sachse, Joe Scholdberg, Joe Smith, Morris, Ben Ely, Ledford Smith, Gayle McLaughlin and Ledbetter.

It will be two veteran teams which clash in the Thanksgiving game at Electra. The Tigers have an experienced backfield and a sprinkling of veterans in the line, while the Bobcats have veteran forwards and considerable experience in the backfield.

The Smith brothers, Sachse, McLaughlin and Ely all have three or four years of experience, while Taylor, Williams, Privitt, Goodson and Bates are three-year men on the Bobcat squad.

Both clubs are made up largely of seniors.

CAGE FATHER

Inventor of Basketball Is Dead

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UP)—Dr. James A. Naismith, 78, the inventor of basketball, died early today.

He had been critically ill since last Thursday when he suffered a heart attack. This followed an amazing recovery 10 days ago from a cerebral hemorrhage. He died at 1:50 a. m. Present in his home, just off the University of Kansas campus, the school he served for years as physical education director, was his second wife, whom he married last summer, three daughters, and two sons.

Naismith invented basketball in 1891. At the time he was an assistant head of the physical education department of the YMCA college at Springfield, Mass. He was asked to devise an indoor game, one that could be played between football and baseball seasons.

Naismith combined the fundamentals of duck on the rock, lacrosse, and soccer.

Tennessee Must Hurdle Kentucky Before Making Plans for Bowl Game

By Harry Grayson
NEA Service Sports Editor.

While unbeaten and unscored on Tennessee makes Rose Bowl plans it might be well to remember that the Vicious Volunteers still have two hurdles to negotiate.

Major Robert Reese Neyland's men tackle Kentucky in Lexington, Nov. 30, and Auburn in Knoxville, Dec. 9.

While the odds are against the Wildcats and Plainsmen, each outfit is capable of spilling the applecart.

Has Kentucky any chance against Tennessee?

"Well," replies Hank Hardboot, from down in them thar' hills, "has Bimelich any chance to win Kunnell Bradley's fifth Derby?"

Although Tennessee won, 46-0, a year ago, Kentucky players and followers see no reason why the Wildcats should fall this trip.

The Kentuckians haven't done so badly themselves this season in winning six, tying one and losing one.

They have high hopes of once more blasting Major Bob Neyland and his orange clad gridders out of a Pasadena bid.

If they do, it won't be the first time.

Cats Good Enough

Just 10 years ago, the good major brought another "dream" team to Lexington en route to Southern California and was fortunate to get off undefeated.

The score that afternoon was 6-6, but the Wildcats gained the glory, piling up 14 first downs to two for the Vols.

Again in 1931 Tennessee had high hopes of a trip to the gold coast, but with the fragrance of roses in the Vols' noses the pesky Kentuckians sprang up with another 6-6 deadlock. Thus twice was Tennessee thwarted.

Most experts pick Tennessee as the nation's No. 1 varsity, but to the hard-bitten Wildcats, the Vols are just another football team.

Kentucky and Tennessee have met two common foes. Tennessee beat Alabama, 20-0, while Kentucky and Alabama tied, 7-7. Tennessee trimmed Vanderbilt, 13-0, whereas Kentucky defeated Vandy, 21-13.

Much has been written about George Cafego, Tennessee's senior triple threat tailback, but Kentucky believes it can match him with a sophomore fullback, Noah Mullins, a lad who hasn't been stopped this fall.

Mullins almost ran Alabama out of the Birmingham Stadium single-handed. His alternate, 195-pound Charley Ishmael, is another on whom Wildcat followers pin faith. The Cats have a whale of a tackle in 240-pound John Eibner.

Kentucky's coach, Ab Kirwan, struck back in his second year on the job. He is a former Wildcat end who captained the Kentucky team of 1925 which repelled Tennessee, 23-20.

With or without George Cafego, who has been out with a bad knee, Tennessee will have no picnic in Lexington on our second Thanksgiving Day.

Tigers Await Chance to Win District Title

ELECTRA.—The Electra Tigers are in fine fettle as they await their chance to win the district 2AA championship here Thursday afternoon over Childress.

The Tigers have rung up 215 points as compared to 47 for their eight opponents. Five of the opparents have been kept scoreless, including Mineral Wells, Wichita Falls, Vernon, Plainview and Graham.

Fans are elated over the power shown by the Tigers Friday night in beating the Graham Steers, 46-0. Childress defeated the Steers by the lesser margin of 25-7, and that is a little consolation to fans who expect the Tigers to win the championship.

A balanced line and a speedy backfield comprise the Electra eleven. The one weak spot is pass defense, but the Tigers have improved that. The Tiger pass offensive does not click very well, and most gains are on running plays. Gayle McLaughlin, fullback, proved Friday night that he is equally as good on sprint jaunts as on powerhouse drives. Bud Ely and Ledford Smith, halfbacks, are consistent ground gainers with Kenneth Morris, quarterback, adept at returning kickoffs and punts.

In the line, Jack Sachse, center, and Joe Edd Elliott, tackle, are outstanding on defense, along with Joe Smith, end.

TEXAS OUT-O'-DOORS

AUSTIN.—With the hunting season in full sway in Texas, the executive secretary of the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster Commission has issued an appeal to every sportsman to treat every gun as if it were loaded, and has set out a series of rules, which if observed, would do much to lessen the tragedies of accidents in fields and woods.

"It is the 'unloaded' gun which does the most damage," the game chief pointed out, "and if the following rules are observed there will be more sportsmen to take the fields another day:"

Carry only empty guns, taken down or with the actions open, into your automobile, camp or home.

Always be sure the barrel and action are clear of obstructions.

Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle, even if you stumble.

Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.

Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger.

Never leave a loaded gun unattended.

Never climb a tree or fence with a loaded gun.

Never shoot at a flat, hard surface, or at the surface of water.

Always remember alcohol and gunpowder should not be mixed.

No wonder J. G. Kane of Port Arthur was able to catch a certain sand trout recently—it had two mouths. Mr. Kane caught the fish in the lower jaw and brought the ten-inch finny tribe member to the office of the Port Arthur News, just in case there was any doubt about his story.

Texas sportsmen are becoming more sportsmanlike, in the opinion of the executive secretary of the Game Department, who has received numerous reports from many of his game wardens since the dove season opened detailing fewer violations this year than at any time in the history of the department.

There was a time when the dove hunter, if a covey of quail got up in front of him, wasn't the slightest bit reluctant about firing into the birds. However, law enforcement and the educating of sportsmen to the needs of proper observance of game laws has brought about the change, the game department head believes.

Few wardens have found it necessary this fall to file cases against sportsmen for hunting quail out of season, the executive secretary said. The quail season does not open until Dec. 1.

A 3½-year-old boy in San Francisco turned in a false fire alarm and waited for the engines to arrive. It appears offenders will shortly have to be wheeled into court in perambulators.

Playboy Is Entertainer As Met Opens

NEW YORK (UP)—The Metropolitan opera opened another season last night.

In the audience were 11 chinchilla coats, a peck or so of emeralds and diamonds, and members of the 400, but the star of the evening was Richard Knight, wealthy socialite lawyer.

Knight, apparently not wishing to compete with Lawrence Tibbett and other stars of Verdi's opera "Simon Boccanegra," performed in the bar, in the lobby and on the sidewalk outside the holy of holies of New York society.

After a few plunges and acrobatics on the brass rail of the bar, two guards suggested to Knight that he take a walk with them. He consented and on the way downstairs he saw Mary Steele, a beautiful debutante, at the water fountain, a paper cup in hand.

"Hi, Mary," he called. "Bet you can't do this."

Whereupon he did a standing somersault, landing square on his feet, his opera hat still firmly on his head, his tails undisturbed.

Miss Steele spilled water on her gown and on her long white gloves. Guards persuaded Knight that he would have a better time at George White's "Scandals."

Ireland Now Has Navy In Action

DUBLIN (UP)—The government of Eire, the former Irish free state, last night announced the creation of a small Irish navy because of the intensified naval warfare and ship sinkings along the Irish coasts.

The naval units will include motor torpedo boats and armed trawlers, augmenting the present coastal observation fleet.

Until now Eire's only armed ships have been two fishery patrol vessels.

Production Up

TULSA, Okla. (UP)—Domestic production of crude oil averaged 3,815,745 barrels daily last week, an increase of 219,170 barrels, the Oil & Gas Journal reported today.

Texas production of 1,552,629 barrels a day accounted for the major part of the increase. Other areas increasing output were Louisiana, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Rocky mountain states.

The daily average was 195,000 greater than the figure recommended by the federal bureau of mines.

NEW FFA GROUP HAS 79 MEMBERS

WELLINGTON.—The new first-year Wellington FFA chapter is making rapid progress, and with its paid membership of 79 is one of the largest "new" chapters in the United States. The vocational agriculture teacher and chapter sponsor is Ronald Davis.

A string band and FFA chorus have been organized, and were recently presented in a program at the Wellington high school. Members of the band are Calvin Adcock, Sam Lindley, and Thad Trew. Chorus members are C. A. Crawford, R. W. Duke, Tommy Austin, Alvin Roy, Royce Walters and Cecil Shanks.

The chapter has also elected two sweethearts, one of whom will represent them in the race for district FFA sweetheart. The girls chosen were Clarice Harper and Mildred Stafford, both popular students in Wellington high, and both with brothers in the FFA who are prominent in its work.

The chapter has bought stickers, jackets and coveralls with the FFA emblem.

Even larger activities are planned by the boys for the remainder of the year, with indications that they will be carried out.

Large Crowd Is Present at Play By Carey Seniors

CAREY.—People from Tell, Estelline, Kirkland, Childress, and Community Center turned to Carey Thursday night in numbers that exceeded all expectations to see "Good Gracious, Grandma!" Gate receipts totaled $52.76, and the net profit amounted to about $41. It is estimated that at least 300 persons saw the play.

Promptly at 8 p. m., Miss Hardin introduced the members of the cast and the play started. Roars of laughter sometimes forced the action to almost halt.

Immediately after the play, a turkey was given away. Lois Storey was the lucky person.

"Good Gracious, Grandma!" was probably the most successful play ever produced at Carey.

If no difficulties are encountered, the play will be presented at Cee Vee sometime before Christmas. Last year the senior play was produced at that place with admirable success.

Proceeds of Comedy Tonight Will Improve Kirkland School's Gym

KIRKLAND.—The PTA play, "Aunt Minnie" will be presented tonight at the school auditorium as the organization attempts to raise finances to improve their school gymnasium.

Featured in the title role is Mrs. Tommy Williamson who returns to her home town an old maid with new ideas on romancing that should win what she has been searching for—a man.

Others cast in the play are: Miss Gracia Ross as Mrs. Emily Evans; Bobbie Harwell as Elvira Evans; Madeline Williamson as Elvira's attractive sister, Eva; Louis White as Emery Eaton, Eva's fiance; Luie Cross as Guy Graham, a mechanic; Harvye Huggins as Silas Spencer, the mayor; Mrs. W. C. Harp as Patience Perkins, gossiping old maid; Glyndon Riley as Andy Andrews, a former suitor of Minnie's; Dorothy Cross as Cornelia Curtis, a city girl; Opal Collins as Nella Nelson, a milliner and modiste; and Matt Clements as Worthington Winter, a promoter and one of Aunt Minnie's suitors.

The play is directed by Miss Hannah Pfenninger.

Honor Roll for Junior High at Cee Vee Listed

CEE VEE.—Honor students in the Cee Vee Junior High school for the past six-week period were Johnnie Ray Boykin and Cora Bell Newman in the ninth grade, Tate Timmons in the eighth grade, and Daber Chewning in the seventh grade.

Officers in the Cee Vee Parent-Teacher association were elected recently. Elmer Monson is president, L. W. Sams vice-president and Mrs. Clifton Hill secretary-treasurer. The program committee includes Mrs. G. W. Lane, Mrs. Wilma Jones and Mrs. Bess Ward.

Public Property

An Editorial.

At Kirkland recently, it was noted that the names of some Carey boys had been freshly carved in the railing around the seats above the basketball court. This was taken to be nothing more nor less than a willful disfiguration of public furniture. Whether or not it was done willfully, this practice should be stopped immediately.

Boys often find themselves with nothing to do and absently begin to whittle. Perhaps they are thinking about something far away, but at any rate they pay little attention to what they are whittling at. Articles of furniture are often disfigured in this way.

Those boys may have done that carving at Kirkland without thinking about what they were doing, but that does not justify the act. Had it been something they owned and valued highly, they probably would not have done it. Then it should be remembered that others also don't wish to have their property hurt in any way.

Since the deed is already done, there is nothing we can do to help it. We can, however, try to prevent such from happening again by requesting that you take care of public property as if it were your own. It shouldn't trouble you much to see that it is properly cared for and it is assured that you will be doubly proud of it if it is well kept.

W. C. WHITESIDES,
In "The Cardinal Crest."

Terrapin Race Benefits Seniors

KIRKLAND.—The firm of Isaacks and Austin grocery company of Childress held the number of the winning entry at the annual terrapin race held at the city square Nov. 18. Proceeds from the contest will be used by the seniors next spring in sponsoring a trip of some nature.

There were 41 contestants in the tortoise tournament. The hard-shelled reptiles were placed in the center of the 60-foot circle and all made a slow dash for the edge. The Childress tortoise nosed out Earl Scarborough's representative by a few inches. W. H. Wilson, superintendent of schools, was in charge.

Cleveland Relief Funds Are Exhausted

CLEVELAND (UP) — Mayor Harold Burton today stopped food orders for 8,000 single persons and 4,000 couples without children, and social workers closed doors against lines of relief clients in the streets of this city of a million.

The mayor said that without enough money for all, women and children should come first. He conferred with his cabinet members to seek additional funds to continue direct relief and met with congress of industrial officials on possible measures to keep the unemployed fed. Then he asked the chamber of commerce to send letters to its manufacturing members, asking them to employ as many relief clients as possible.

NAZI-SOVIET FORCES STRIKE NEW BLOWS

By The United Press.

The soviet-nazi combination struck two new blows today in Europe's military and diplomatic war.

Germany announced that a tenth British warship, a 10,000 ton cruiser, had been sunk off the Shetland Islands by a U-boat under the command of Lt. Commander Guenther Prien, whose sub sank the battleship, Royal Oak.

Soviet Russia announced denounciation of its non-aggression treaty with Finland, charged the Finns with "deep hostilities" and again demanded without making it an ultimatum that Finnish troops retire from the frontier area.

Both developments were of vast importance, but Russia's pressure on the Finns carried the gravest danger.

In the sea warfare nazis claimed that destruction of the British cruiser emphasized that Britain's sea power was broken. From the British, claims of nazi power were considered boasts.

LONDON (UP)—The allied powers will avoid any effort to "impose vindicative peace" on Europe, Prime Minister Chamberlain said today in the house of commons.

"We have not entered this war with any vindicative purpose," Chamberlain said.

"We do not therefore intend to impose any vindicative peace. None of us knows how long this war will last, in what direction it will develop, or when it is ended who will be standing at our side and who against us.

"In those circumstances it would be mischievous if we attempted to lay down today the conditions in which a new world is to be created," Chamberlain said.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Price are the parents of an 8-pound boy born Friday in a local hospital. The child has not been named yet.

SERIAL STORY

5 WOULD KILL

BY TOM HORNER

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Dawson searches the house for the gun that killed Benthorne, but fails to find it. When he goes to awaken Alston, who had been sleeping soundly, the old man is gone. Later Alston comes out of the passageway to the street, hands Dawson a smudged, half-smoked cigaret.

CHAPTER XII

DAWSON glanced for an instant at the paper in his hand, then closed his fingers over it. He studied the faces around him. John Douglas and Ara, hurrying from the dining room, wondering what this impetuous outburst might mean; Helen Benthorne, beside her father, her eyes clouded with anxiety; Krone, in blank amazement, and beside him, Joey di Torio, his face a mask, but his eyes darting from one to another.

"Give me your cigarets," Dawson commanded. Douglas fished in his pockets, produced a pack. Ara's purse, on her arm, yielded hers.

"You'll find mine all over the house," Mrs. Benthorne volunteered.

"I've only a few left, but you're welcome to them," di Torio said, extending his silver case.

"Thanks," Dawson growled. "Now all of you get into the living room, I'll call you—"

Alston took a step toward the door, then crumpled to the floor.

"Daddy! Daddy!" Helen Benthorne moaned, as she dropped to her knees beside him.

Alston's eyes flickered open. "I'll be all right—my heart—excitement—"

"Carry Mr. Alston upstairs—you Krone—and you, Douglas. You too, Joey. Keep 'em all up there, Krone."

* * *

DAWSON studied the four cigarets on the desk before him, compared each one carefully with the bit of paper in his hand. So he had been right, after all. This would cinch the case, alibi or no alibi. So intent was he that he did not notice Ara standing in the doorway.

"Captain—" she began hesitatingly. He looked up.

"What do you want? I'll see you later, I'm busy now—"

"It's about last night—John and I talked it over—we think you should know—"

"Think I should know what?" Dawson answered shortly.

"That I was here, early last night—before 9 o'clock. I came to see Mr. Benthorne—"

"So you've decided to let me in on your secrets now—" Sarcasm tinged the detective's question, but the girl let it pass, apparently unnoticed.

"Lots of people were here to see Benthorne last night. . . . I'm busy. . . . Your new fairytale will keep, won't it? He turned back to the cigarets.

* * *

THE clock above the fireplace ticked off the minutes. When Dawson paused, after a time, to fill and light his pipe, the girl was still standing there. John Douglas was beside her, his arm protectively around her shoulders.

"I thought I told Krone—"

"You did," Douglas said. "He's right here on the stairs. He can see Mr. Alston's door; Mrs. Benthorne is with her father, and di Torio is on the steps with Mr. Krone. He can see us here in the doorway, too."

"Where's Nick Smith?" Dawson suddenly remembered the taxi driver had been missing during the excitement.

"He's out in front, talking to the officer on duty there," Krone called down from the stairs. "He won't get away."

"So you two have cooked up a real story," Dawson returned to the couple before him. "All right, come in and let's have it." He pulled open the drawer, pushed the cigarets, the packs and Tony's case into it. "Close the door and sit down." The girl made no move to obey, but walked slowly across the room, until she stood at the edge of the desk. Douglas pushed the door closed, stood behind her.

"You came to see Benthorne," Dawson went on. "Why?"

"I came to kill him!" The girl's expression did not change, her voice was almost a monotone. "If ever a man deserved to die, it was Arnold Benthorne.

"He knew I was coming; he told me to come in the side entrance, the passageway from the street. At first he had refused to see me, but when I gave him my name he wanted to see me.

"I came fully prepared to kill him. I had an automatic revolver in my purse. I know how to use one—"

"You realize, of course," Dawson interrupted, "that anything you tell me may be used against you."

"I know that, Captain Dawson," the girl replied, "but I did not kill Benthorne. You'll understand after you hear all of my story.

"Mr. Benthorne met me at the outer doorway about 8:45, brought me directly to his study. We talked for some time. At first he was obstinate, mean, nasty. He refused to believe anything I said. Then, when I showed him proof, he begged for mercy, offered me money, offered me almost anything. The more he begged, the more he pleaded, the more I hated him. Oh, I'm glad—glad that he's dead." Momentarily she lost her calm, and her dark eyes flashed. For an instant Dawson thought he had seen that same expression before, on another, different face, but he dismissed the idea as Ara continued.

"It was then that Mrs. Benthorne came in, found her husband and me. She demanded to know what it was about, why we must meet secretly without her knowledge, and I told her.

"She turned on her husband like a fury. I detested Arnold Benthorne for what he was and what he had been, but she hated him with a madness that was almost insanity. I do not blame her. He never knew the meaning of honor. What he had done to one woman, he would do to another.

"At last I left them. If I killed him then, before his wife, I could never escape punishment for doing what I believed was only justice. I hurried out the same way I had come, intending to return today. But I did not get back in time. Someone else wished Arnold Benthorne dead, too. I was too late."

"You're talking in circles," Dawson broke in angrily. "Of all the d i s c o n n e c t e d, unintelligible—What are you talking about? Why did you come here to kill Benthorne? Answer me, why did you?"

The girl shook her head, sobbed into Douglas' shoulder. Dawson strode around the desk, grabbed Ara's shoulders and turned her around to face him. "You started this. Now tell me the truth. Why did you want to kill him?"

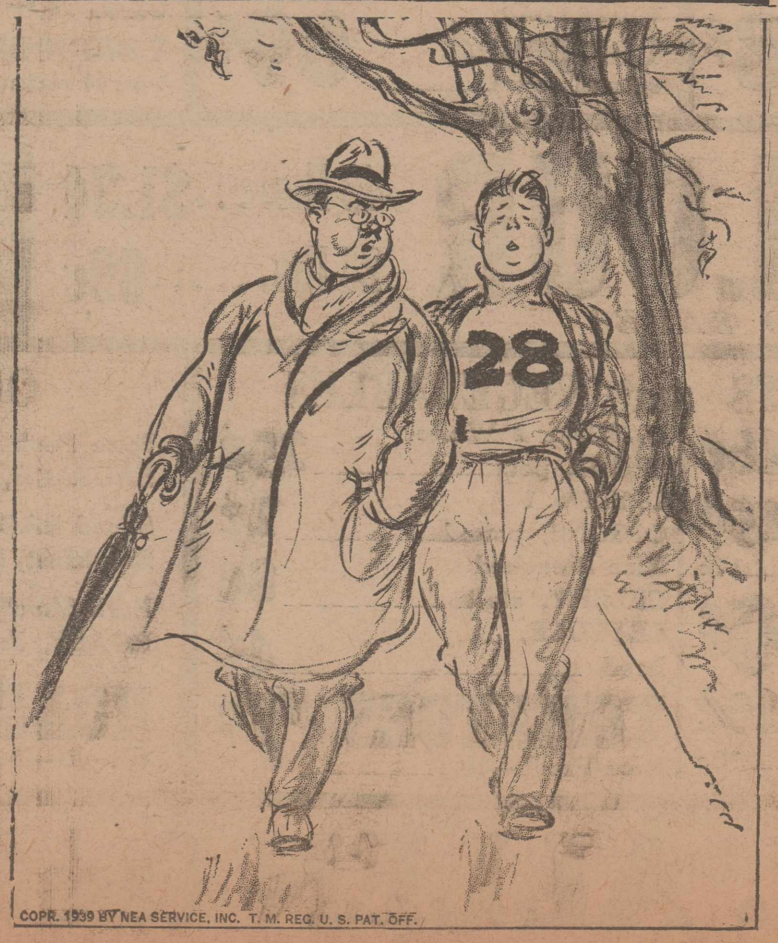

The answer came in a whisper.

"Arnold Benthorne was my father!"

COMMITTEE NAMED FOR COURTHOUSE OPENING

Arrangements for a formal public opening of Childress county's new $225,000 courthouse have been placed in the hands of a committee of citizens, county officials have announced.

C. A. Williams is chairman of the group and other members are Kenneth Fink, Clyde L. Jones and Ben Hardison.

The building will be accepted by the county and the PWA next week, but the formal opening will be held later, possibly after new furniture is installed. The committee will meet soon to discuss the plans.

The new building has been completed, but county offices will not be moved until the furniture quesiton is settled. The county now has an application with the PWA for an additional grant to match county funds for the purchase of new equipment.

Young Roosevelt In Labor Speech

DETROIT (UP)—Elliott Roosevelt, son of the president, will address a mass meeting tonight in connection with the labor dispute at the Chrysler corporation. He accepted an invitation of a committee said to represent Chrysler workers to speak on the subject, "Shall radical labor leaders control industrial America?"

Two of the highest officials of Chrysler corporation and the congress of industrial organizations, meanwhile, sought to bring peace in the dispute which has made 60,000 workers idle.

LAND TO BE SOLD

Four tracts of Childress county land are listed among the 200,000 acres of state school lands which will be placed on the market Jan. 2, according to an announcement of Bascom Giles, state land commissioner.

Bids on the land will be accepted by Jan. 2 on the land. Tracts of less than 80 acres must sell for cash, and larger tracts may be purchased for one-fortieth down and the remainder in 39 equal annual installments.

The Childress county land listed is:

The NE¼ of the N½ of the NW¼ of section 790, block H, W &NW survey, which includes 240 acres.

The SW point of section 25 block T, which includes 61.1 acres.

The east 50 acres of section 36, block S.

Section 100 of block K which includes 406.5 acres.

The minimum prices on all of the land will be $2 per acre.

Additional information, application blanks and envelopes may be secured from Giles, commissioner of the general land office, at Austin.

Story Speaks At Lions Club

"The Spirit of Thanksgiving" was the subject of a talk by Fred Story at today's luncheon of the Childress Lions club.

President Charles Damron reminded club members that the regular meeting next Tuesday has been cancelled and the group will attend the highway banquet in a body Tuesday night.

47.4 Percent Want Third Term Poll Reveals

NEW YORK (UP)—Fortune magazine announced today that 47.4 per cent of the persons who answered questions in its latest poll of public opinion had favored a third term for President Roosevelt.

The magazine said that this represented an increase of 12.5 per cent since it last took a poll on Mr. Roosevelt's popularity. The last poll was taken just before the European war began, and the magazine ascribed the change to the war.

"Not only has Roosevelt gained quantitatively but also qualitatively," Fortune said.

Drizzle, Mist Blankets Area

Light drizzle and mist hung over Northwest Texas this afternoon, but the weather man refused to commit himself in favor of any substantial amount of moisture. Warmer weather is predicted.

The light rain which started falling in Childress during the noon hour and a similar rain around Lubbock were the most encouraging moisture reports, according to the FW&D dispatcher. However, mist was falling this afternoon over a wide area and skies were cloudy.

Frank Phillips Is Celebrating 66th Birthday

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (UP)—Frank Phillips announced today at his 66th birthday celebration that he had set aside $66,000 for advancing education among children of Phillips Petroleum company employes.

Phillips, chairman of the board of the company he founded, announced the establishment of the fund at his 66th birthday celebration.

"It isn't much for a start," he said of the $66,000 fund. "But anyway it is a starter."

From throughout the oil world came visitors, gifts, and congratulatory letters and telegrams on the oil man's birthday observance.

Birthday cake, 10 tons of it, was brought in. Phillips confessed worriedly that he doesn't like cake.

At 12:49 p. m. 66 aerial bombs signaled the beginning of an air show that included fancy skyriding by Col. Art Goebel, Phillips' protege who won the dole competition flight to Hawaii in 1927.

Phillips and his wife, accompanied by Gov. Leon Phillips and wife, were to drive the length of the parade route at 1:30 p. m. in a car specially built for the king and queen of England for their tour of Canada last spring.

A birthday cake presentation was scheduled for 3:30 p. m. at municipal stadium.
