Big Waves Of Bombers Will Open Assault

Decisive Turn In European War Is Believed Near

(By The Associated Press)

Nazi quarters in Berlin asserted today that 10,000 plane-loads of bombs daily will be unleashed on the London area in the next few days, striking from French coastal bases in a titanic "all out" assault.

A host of 2,500 German warplanes making four trips daily will carry out the threatened full-scale blitzkrieg, they declared, apparently aimed at wiping out the 2,000-year-old British capital with its 8,000,000 inhabitants.

"I wouldn't give a farthing for the houses of parliament," said a German closely connected with Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering.

May Try Invasion

The informant said Goering had "left open" the question of whether troop landings would be attempted to conquer the island kingdom, declaring:

"It all depends on how well the British fight back.

"It is conceivable that England will collapse under the weight of our air attacks. Then invasion will be unnecessary. But we are prepared either way."

This unofficial report, if true, would indicate that the next two or three days may see a decisive turn in the year-old European conflict.

The informant asserted that the great waves of Nazi bombers were scheduled to start the assault either late today or tomorrow.

Smashing Berlin Raid

Earlier, Britons excitedly cheered a smashing RAF raid on Berlin today as a belated announcement disclosed that Buckingham palace — the century-old royal residence of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth — was partly wrecked by a German bomb.

The king and queen were not in the great white-stone palace when the bomb, a delayed-action missile, crashed from the skies Sunday night.

It exploded Tuesday, demolishnig one corner of the north facade and showering splinters of glass over

The dispatcher said the fugitives were reported heading north toward McAlester.

OUR COUNTRY

John Steinbeck Believes That Internal Quarrels Prove The Vitality Of A Democracy

Third of 24 articles on "Our Country," written exclusively for NEA Service and Lubbock Evening Journal by the nation's most famous authors.

BY JOHN STEINBECK
Author of "The Grapes of Wrath," "Of Mice and Men," "Tortilla Flat," etc.

THE time has come when some realistic thinking must be done about the American democracy in its relation to the mushrooming totalitarian states.

The dictators say that democracy is a degenerate form of government. This is a ridiculous generality. Democracy is only degenerate when its leaders and its people are degenerate.

Actually, totalitarianism is a degenerate form, for in it a hopeless, confused and embittered people have tossed all thought and responsibility to one man, thus proving their lack of morality, versatility and ingenuity.

John Steinbeck

Democracy on the other hand, by dividing responsibility, keeps the political function and ability alive among the people, and this makes for a difference in endurance. That endurance lies here—America could lose many hundred thousand men and remain a functioning nation while the loss of ten key men would cripple the Third Reich.

WHETHER we like it or not, we are faced with a war. The Totalitarian discipline, designed for war, must continue to expand or it will begin to die.

Germany cannot permit the example of a free America in the same world with her slave conquests and the slavish citizens.

It will then be with us to prove whether or not we are degenerate.

We are not a contented people. We never have been. Part of the nature of America has been its restlessness. Only the most fatuous have ever considered that we have a perfect government.

But we have maintained the right and the ability of the people to change that government slowly and lawfully. And our government has been in a constant state of change since it was established. We like this method. There are very few Americans who do not infinitely prefer the worst of our democracy to the best of Totalitarianism.

THE history of Germany has been a history of magnificent errors. Now, because we fight each other—party against party, group against group, industry against labor—Hitler suspects that we are degenerate. He has completely overlooked the vitality of this fighting.

It is through such fighting that we have kept alive and that we have progressed socially and economically. This fighting is the proof that we are not degenerate.

The war will come and then it will be seen whether or not a free and alert people can coagulate into a force to withstand and defeat the power of the hypnotized automatons of the dictators.

Nearly all Americans believe in the same things. They differ on the details. I think they are quite capable of leaving those details for the moment for the preservation of the whole. I am convinced that this will be done, but I believe that in his judgment of America, Hitler has made one of the great historical Germanic mistakes.

We must do our utmost to keep the American idea alive, says Louis Adamic in the next article of this series on "Our Country."

14,394 New Army Planes On Order

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—A basic for type-standardization and mass production of American military aircraft was laid today with the placing of tentative orders for 14,394 army planes in one huge lot.

All the planes were expected to be virtual duplicates of models already being manufactured for the army. One official said a majority of them would be procured simply by exercising the options in some existing contracts. Other contracts will provide for the rest.

All Planes Covered

Representing an eventual expenditure of approximately $1,251,000,000, the tentative orders placed late yesterday cover all of the army planes contemplated in the $5,251,000,000 defense act, which was signed Monday.

The war department did not disclose delivery dates for the planes, contract amounts for individual manufacturers or how many of the ships were combat types.

Besides planes, which will cost an estimated $817,000,000, the orders included 28,282 engines at $377,000,000 and an unspecified number of propellers at $57,000,000.

Navy Making Contracts

The navy is engaged in making contracts for 2,400 more planes provided for in the defense appropriation.

Attempting to standardize production, the army does not now intend to call for any new types of planes under the expansion program. All models which are needed are now under contract, an official said, and the procedure is merely to increase the orders for those types.

Included in the list of 21 companies to whom tentative orders were sent were the manufacturers of the most celebrated American fighters and bombers—ranging from the new, 500-mile-an-hour interceptor to the forthcoming super-bomber with a 7,000-mile range.

Draft-Dodging Romeos Facing Worse Fate

BY PAUL H. KING
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 — Lukewarm Romeos, seeking to escape conscription through marriage, take warning!

A "fate" worse than the army awaits some of you.

At least, that's the opinion of married congressmen who are disturbed by the increase in what they describe as "slacker marriages."

Just Retribution

But they concede there is nothing to do about it except to let "a just retribution overtake these young men in the end."

Legislate against marriage?

You might as well legislate against the rain and sun, they say. Then, too, that would be unfair to hundreds who are marrying for love. (Yes, even the lawmakers admit that love has something to do with most marriages.)

Left To Own Fate

A survey of congressmen disclosed that they have decided to leave suddenly altar-bound Romeos to their own fate. They predict rough going for most of them in matrimony since "many

Sen. Ashurst Losing Out In Arizona Race

Three Colleagues Faring Better As Returns Pile Up

(By The Associated Press)

Mounting returns from Tuesday's primary elections found Senator Ashurst (D-Ariz), long a colorful capital figure, in an apparently losing fight today in his sixth bid for renomination, but the prospects were happier for three of his colleagues.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) was assured of renomination by an overwhelming lead. Senator Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite who joined Republican ranks this summer, enjoyed a wide lead in Minnesota over a field of 8 as the choice of his adopted party. And in Vermont Senator Austin received renomination unopposed.

Trails By Two-To-One

Ashurst, whose opposition to the conscription bill was used against him in the Arizona campaign, trailed his opponent Ernest W. McFarland by a vote of almost two-to-one. Ashurst has been senator from Arizona since the state's admission to the union in 1912.

Louisiana returns meanwhile indicated that four members of the House of Representatives had gone down to defeat, with three others facing the uncertainty of run-off primaries. Gov. Sam Jones, elected last winter by the anti-Long forces, had urged the defeat of all 8 incumbents as supporters of the Long organization. One did not seek renomination.

Aiken Is Chosen

Besides renominating Senator Austin, Vermont Republicans picked Gov. George D. Aiken, frequent New Deal critic, for the Senate vacancy resulting from the death of Senator Gibson (R). Aiken won the short term nomination decisively over Ralph E. Flanders.

In gubernatorial contests, two well known figures were riding high.

Gov. Harold Stassen, keynoter of the Republican national convention, had a huge lead in Minnesota for renomination over two critics of his administration. Stassen's activity in behalf of the Republican presidential nominee, Wendell L. Willkie, was stressed in his campaign.

Norther Routs Summer Heat

(By The Associated Press)

A mass of cool air rolled deep into Texas today, routing summer's heat temporarily from the coast to the Panhandle.

It won't last long, the weather bureau suggested in a forecast of warmer West Texas temperatures tomorrow. The fallish weather was supposed to get cooler along the coast tonight, however.

Sample Readings

Sample temperatures reported today: Corpus Christi 71, with 69-65 tonight; Houston 72, after the summer's highest mark, 98, yesterday; Beaumont 67 after yesterday's 96, highest this summer; Port Arthur 68; Sherman 59, lowest for this period in years; Pampa 55 and a touch of rain after a minimum last night of 52 degrees; Corsicana 62, not quite as low as temperatures June 10 and 11; Wichita Falls 57, tying season's low recorded last month; Fort Worth 60; Dallas 61; Tyler 60; Lubbock 53.

In Oklahoma the mercury took a dive in many places, touching 39 degrees at Vinita, Bartlesville and Woodward. Elsewhere the range was from 40 to 50 degrees.

Coolest temperatures reported for Texas were 45 degrees at Miami in Roberts county, northeast of Amarillo, 49 at Dalhart and 50 at Amarillo.

Two Killed In Menard Affray

(By The Associated Press)

SAN ANGELO, Sept. 11—L. D. Railsback, 24, cafe cook, died in a hospital here this morning, the second death in a main street shooting at Menard, 65 miles southeast of here, late Tuesday night. Ike Willingham, 52, cafe owner, died instantly with nine bullet wounds in his body.

Mrs. L. D. Railsback, 35, ex-wife of Willingham, also was shot and remains in a critical condition in the hospital here. She and Railsback were brought here early this morning and Railsback underwent surgery. He had been shot one time with a .45 calibre pistol, the bullet entering his left chest, just below the heart, and passed through his body. He made a statement to authorities here before he went to the operating room.

Sheriff Cecil Walston, Menard, said the shooting took place when Willingham and the Railsbacks met on the street. Two bullets were fired from the large calibre pistol and nine from a .22 calibre pistol. All shots took effect.

Willingham and Mrs. Railsback were divorced in April, 1939, and in May, 1939, Willingham's ex-wife married Railsback, Mrs. Fred Davis, Menard, mother of the wounded woman, said. The Willinghams were married in 1921. Mrs. Railsback was the mother of six children.

Sheriff Walston and District Attorney Carlos Ashley, Llano, were conducting an investigation in Menard this morning.

Railsback's death was the seventh resulting from shootings in this section during the last five days.

In his statement to officers here Railsback said he and Willingham engaged in a fist fight a few weeks ago. Since then, he stated, he tried to avoid Willingham.

He said he shot Willingham nine times after he had been fired upon

National Session Of GAR Is Being Held

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 11 (AP)—The Grand Army of the Republic was on the march again today, but only a handful of the graying veterans turned out to walk behind the colors they defended almost 80 years ago.

Opening their 74th national encampment in the home town of their war-time commander-in-chief, Abraham Lincoln, most of the old soldiers were resigned to riding in automobiles for the six block parade.

King And Queen Take Shelter Under Police Station In Raid

(By The Associated Press)

LONDON, Sept. 11 — King George and Queen Elizabeth took cover under a police station today when an air-raid alarm sounded as they were touring bombed areas of southeast London.

As the sirens shrieked, the king and queen left their car, in which they had been riding with Home Secretary Sir John Anderson, and walked downstairs into the shelter.

They resumed their tour when the "all clear" signal sounded 10 minutes later.

In the bleak, dim-lit shelter, the king saw one of the strangest assortments of humanity these class-levelling air attacks have brought together.

Their majesties sat on bare wooden chairs in the center of the room. On benches around the walls were policemen, court officials, overalled ARP (air raid precautions) workers fresh from the ruins of a courthouse next door, white-smocked women from the police canteen,

British Chief Says Attempt Is Very Near

Churchill Claims That England Is Ready For Fight

(By The Associated Press)

LONDON, Sept. 11. (Via Radio)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill said today Germany is preparing for the invasion of England by moving hundreds of self-propelled barges down from northern ports to the French coast opposite Britain's shores.

These craft and troop convoys, the prime minister said, are moving into position under the protection of the big German guns set up on the French coast.

FAILURE IS REPORTED

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP) — The New York Sun said today letters received by French residents here from independent sources in Paris and occupied France revealed that a Nazi attempt to land troops in England had failed disastrously.

According to the letters, the Sun said, the German invading fleet sailed from St. Malo on the 4th and in the expectation of landing on the west coast of England but the attempt proved to be "nothing short of suicide."

A letter from Paris, written by a French official acting in liaison with the German army of occupation, said, according to the Sun:

"Paris is full of German officers who are having a wonderful time. They are only hoping they will not be chosen to participate in another disastrous attempt to debark troops in England."

The next week, he said, "must be regarded as a very important one for us in our history."

He compared it with the attempt of the Spanish armada to invade the British Isles and the later attempt of Napoleon.

"Every man and woman must prepare to do his duty, whatever it may be, with special pride and care," he said.

Adjournment Plans Are Being Pushed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP) — Administration leaders, acting on President Roosevelt's assurance that he had no further major proposals at this time, laid plans today to adjourn Congress until January some time between Sept. 21 and 28.

Only one important piece of legislation has yet to be started through Congress — a billion dollar deficiency bill to pay the first year's cost of conscription — and leaders felt that action on this, on the pending tax and conscription bills, and on remaining minor measures, could be completed in about two weeks.

KEEPING HAM FLAT

If bacon or thin slices of ham curl up at the edges during cooking, make tiny cuts in the edges of the meat about 2 inches apart. This helps keep the meat flat.

STUDIO WINDOWS

An opulent effect can be given the simplest studio by a unique window treatment. Extend the cornice beyond the outer corners of the wide window across the entire width of the room. Then hang in full folds from the cornice to the floor yards of sheer lace net. This will prove to be a lot less expensive than it looks and will give your studio a fresh, airy atmosphere during hot weather.

BREAKFAST SURPRISE

Apple butter, spread on buttered toast and then reheated, is a grand treat to surprise the youngsters with at breakfast.

Curtains should be long enough to touch the sill, to come to the bottom of the apron or to reach the floor. When measuring be sure to allow amply for a generous bottom hem, top hem for the curtain rod and heading, if you wish one.

Prelude To Invasion Attempt Seen In Violent Nazi Bombing Raids

London Given Blood Baths

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press Staff Writer

There is an ominous look in the Nazi resumption of nation-wide bombing of Britain after four nights of blood-bath for London.

This may be the prelude to an attempt at invasion with soldiery. Any such adventure must be preceded by a general and violent aerial assault, to reduce the country to as near a state of insensibility as possible.

At the peak of this the invasion will be tried, if at all.

Whether Hitler will essay this hazardous operation, which stymied even Napoleon, must depend on circumstances. We do know that the Germans have made all preparations for the eventuality—even have a motley armada of small boats ready to dare the choppy waters of the English channel.

Must Have Victory

To my mind the Nazi chieftain will undertake it if there seems any chance of success, for he must achieve victory now at all legitimate hazards. Even a draw in the conflict at this time would do irreparable damage to his hypnotic prestige over the small countries of Europe—to say nothing of giving England a chance to build a powerful war machine against him, and tighten the blockade garrote about his neck.

Only yesterday Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, said it was a mistake to call the present drive on England "the battle of Great Britain" and that "Germans modestly regard this merely as the battle of London from which will develop the battle of Great Britain."

Mean General Onslaught

There would seem no reason to doubt that the conflict may take on far greater proportions in the immediate future. Irrespective of invasion, this will mean a general onslaught from the air in an effort to destroy industries and other military objectives (not overlooking civilian morale) and thus prevent England from acquiring a strength which might permit her to carry the war to the continent by invasion.

There is no doubt that England can stand a lot of battering and still be able to overcome the cessation of her own manufacture by imports, chiefly from the United States. That's where the rule of the ocean comes in—protection for sea-borne traffic.

An English expert tells me he believes that even if much of British industry were destroyed virtually everything could be replaced by imports in a few months.

So Britain's outlook won't be so dark, if she can survive the present crisis.

Chances Of Becoming A War Millionaire Are Very Slim

By FREDERICK GARDNER
Associated Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 — What's your chance of becoming a war millionaire?

Wall street seems to think it is about as slim as a newt's eyelash—maybe 1 in 5,000,000 under present tax laws.

Individual income taxes, Wall streeters figure, will plow under much or the major part of what remains of the war millionaire crop after the treasury has taken its cut of corporate profits from levies enacted or proposed.

Heavy Tax Seen

A lucky market plunger with a million-dollar profit gained in a sudden rise in speculative values would have to hand over about $800,000 of his winnings to federal and state collectors, tax experts calculated.

The federal surtax on a million dollar income, it was figured, amounts to about $648,000. Ordinary and state taxes add about $150,000 more.

Business profits have increased since the European war began. A compilation by the National City bank of New York shows profits of 334 manufacturing concerns in the first half of 1940 were up 60 per cent over earnings for the comparable period.

Multi-billion dollar defense expenditures, plus British war purchases, may bring further expansion in earnings.

At Lower Levels

Yet stock prices on the average ended the first year of the war at lower levels than when the conflict started. Brokers give various explanations for the lag in stocks, including suspense over the Anglo-Nazi battle, but taxes are stressed.

While steel mills hum at capacity or near capacity output and arms makers get ready for mush room expansion some traders who used to play for the millions prefer to clip coupons as "investors" rather than risk their capital at going tax rates.

Not even Wall street traditions of millions to be made from "war inflations" of stocks and commodities have tempted certain of these erstwhile big operators to quit their retreats for another bout with the ticker.

Rose And Fell

In 1914, before the World war speculative boom, there were 60 individuals with net incomes of more than $1,000,000 in the United States, treasury data shows. Million-dollar incomes jumped to 120 in 1915 and 206 in 1916, then dropped to 141 in the first year the United States was in the fray. With the collapse of the inflation cycle in 1920, the million-dollar income class shrank to a mere 33.

In 1929, at the peak of the post-war Wall street bull market, million-dollar income returns increased to more than 500. Tax changes and business conditions held down million-dollar incomes in the last decade.

Said a tax authority: "It's still legal to be a millionaire in this country but not practical to expect to be one in face of tax obstacles. When we get through paying for the defense billions, millionaires may be even scarcer than they are now."

Committees Chosen For Scout Activity

Committeemen to direct Boy Scout activities in the approaching Panhandle-South Plains fair were named Tuesday by Jimmie Wilson, department superintendent.

Committee members are Robert Maxey, building; K. N. Clapp, judges; DeWitt Landis, publicity; Grady Knight, troop service; and Cecil Schwalbe, model camp.

The model camp is to be set up at the entrance to the scout building. Homer Pierce will be in charge of that work as well as the setting up of exhibits.

Wilson also announced that reservations for four more booths have been received, leaving only three available. They have been made for troop 29, sponsored by Slaton Methodist church; troop 2, Lubbock First Methodist church; and troops 18 and 19, both sponsored by Dunbar negro schools.

Sites For Training Schools Are Offered

SEAGRAVES, Sept. 11 (Special) —Seagraves Chamber of Commerce has offered sites to the Canadian government for air training schools it is reported to be considering in Texas.

"Any amount of land up to five sections" adjacent to Seagraves was offered for use of the Canadian government for flying fields in telegrams sent to Canada's seat of government. Choice of any number of sites will be available, it was said.

Advantages of Seagraves and surrounding area for aviation training were cited in the telegrams, copies of which were sent to Texas senators and congressmen in Washington.

Man's Condition Is Said Satisfactory

Condition of T. H. Deatheridge, 74, who escaped with minor injures when struck by a car in 700-block Broadway about 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night, was considered satisfactory this morning at Lubbock sanitarium.

He suffered body bruises and lacerations. He was taken to the sanitarium in a Rix ambulance.

Police said Don Whipple, 19, a Texas Technological college student of 2002 Broadway, was driver of the car that struck Deatheridge. His parents live in Waxahachie. Whipple was accompanied by Walter Bullah, 19, of 2401 Fourteenth street, also a student.

Whipple was driving slowly east on Broadway, officers said, and the aged man apparently did not see the approaching car as he crossed the street from the north. He was knocked to the pavement.

Raymond Land and Homer Harrison, patrolmen, investigated. Deatheridge is nightwatchman of a fruit stand near the scene of the mishap.

Cockroaches Do Not Need Any Vitamin A

DETROIT, Sept. 11. (AP) — The cockroach is the only known animal that does not need vitamin A. This was reported to the American Chemical society today in a study of some oddities of animal diet by Dr. C. M. Cay of the animal husbandry department of Cornell university.

Another odd fact is that trout in some parts of their bodies have more vitamin A than there is in cod liver oil. But fishermen and epicures alike throw away all the trout's vitamin A.

Heavy Damage Is Caused In Berlin As British Strike Furiously

German Anger Said Aroused

(By The Associated Press)

BERLIN, Sept. 11—British demolition and incendiary bombs struck the heart of the German reich today in the RAF's most spectacular Berlin attack and forced evacuation of several streets lest bomb-weakened buildings collapse.

Bombs hit the reichstag (parliament) building, the Academy of Arts and also damaged famous Brandenburg gate in Unter Den Linden. The high command also said that two hospitals were hit in the center of the city.

Rage Is Aroused

Official and editorial rage over the assault at once gave rise to speculation whether Nazi airmen would strike back at London's parliament buildings, Downing street and government houses in Whitehall.

Adolf Hitler himself has threatened manifold retaliation for every attack by his British foemen.

Officially the civilian toll of the attack was five killed and several injured.

"In the diplomatic section a number of streets had to be evacuated temporarily because of the danger of houses collapsing," the daily communique reported.

Only quick action by air raid precautions workers prevented "numerous incendiary bombs from causing bigger damage," the communique went on.

Cause Little Damage

The high command acknowledged bombs were dropped in northern France, Belgium and elsewhere in northern Germany, but insisted they "caused but little damage."

"Some enemy planes succeeded in penetrating Berlin, unloading bombs," said the communique. "At numerous places in residential and business sections fires started."

One British plane was reported brought down by anti-aircraft guns, with pursuit planes getting another. German naval artillery on the channel coast was said to have shot down four British planes.

The Germans acknowledged loss of but three of their own planes in the preceding 24 hours of action against England and chalked up these successes:

Starting of "numerous" fires amid industries on the city and part of London where earlier bomb-set blazes were still to be seen.

Bombardment of "other war essential targets, especially port facilities, airports and industrial plants in the southeastern part of the British Isle."

Merchantman Sunk

Bombing and sinking of an 8,000-ton merchantman in a British convoy south of the Hebrides.

In the British raid, which began shortly after midnight, and lasted nearly two hours, incendiary bombs pierced the roof of the reichstag, presently unused but still regarded by Germans as a symbol of the reich. Workmen were said to have extinguished the flames immediately.

German authorities declared the British fliers apparently tried to hit government buildings on the Wilhelmstrasse.

Both incendiary and high explosive bombs hurtled down in the district of government offices.

Informed sources said the British also concentrated severe attacks on German-occupied Belgium, striking at Ostend, Ghent, Brussels and various points along the Belgian coast. Details were lacking.

The worst damage here was done to an apartment house, where three persons were reported injured. Bombs also struck the Academy of Arts, next door to the United States embassy, as well as a small hotel and two hospitals, and churned craters in Unter Den Linden and other thoroughfares.

Authorities said no military objective was damaged.

Attack In Waves

An air defense officer estimated that 10 to 20 British planes took part in the raid, attacking in four waves.

Terrific artillery fire was declared to have forced many of the planes to turn away.

The reichstag building, being reconstructed slowly since the 1933 fire which Communists were accused of starting and which marked a sensational incident in the rise of Nazis to power, is only a few streets from the Wilhelmstrasse.

Incendiary missiles struck the Brandenburg gate, familiar sight to Berlin visitors between the American and French embassies. They hit the handsome six-arched monument to the left of the figure of the goddess of victory driving a four-horse chariot.

An explosive bomb near the ministry of the interior blew out the ground floor windows of a building occupied by the Berlin bureau of International News Service, American news agency.

Heavy caliber bombs exploded in the center of the Avenue of Splendor—handsome street through the Tiergarten park known as Adolf Hitler's pride.

In Grosse Hamburger street incendiary bombs fell on Berlin's second largest hospital, St. Hedwing's, which houses 700 to 800 patients. Flames were extinguished quickly.

Incendiary bombs also fell on the roof of the Jewish hospital in August street. None of the patients were hurt.

In Invaliden street, explosives tore up a sidewalk and ripped out store fronts. Across the street, an apartment house and gymnasium were wrecked. Three persons standing in a doorway were injured.

PINAFORE FROCK — Dorothy Cox, a designer who was first an artist, suggests a bright red pinafore over a navy blue frock as a back-to-school costume. The dress is worn by Judith Tuvim, of the radio.

Montgomery Ward Stores Observing 68th Anniversary

The 68th anniversary of Montgomery Ward & Co. is being observed this week in the Lubbock and 625 other stores in the nation.

The Lubbock store was established thirteen years ago in May. A. H. Maas is manager, having been here since July, 1935. The store had 45 employes then; now it has a staff of 95 with a peak of 140 employes during the Christmas season.

A. Montgomery Ward and George R. Thorne founded their little mail order business in Chicago in 1872 and the idea took hold with the public so quickly that it proved the mail order business the start of a great revolution in the merchandising practices of the time. The company built large branch mail order houses at strategic shipping centers and today there are nine such branch houses covering the country from coast to coast.

In 1926 Wards entered a new field of merchandising—the retail store. The Lubbock store was established a year later.

C. E. Miller is assistant manager here. J. C. Monroe is display and advertising manager. Other department heads in the Lubbock store are: tires, J. L. Hooper; tire service, Vernon Gilmore; plumbing, T. W. Waddill; auto accessories, Paul Willis; women's fashions, Miss Thelma Barr; men's furnishings, H. T. Johnson; work clothes, E. Kemp, jr.; shoes, Ed Milburn; sporting goods, J. W. McGeorge; piece goods, Miss Marie Hale; ladies sports wear and accessories, Miss Elvis Rogers; hosiery, Mrs. Nell Green; draperies, Mrs. I. Cranford; infants clothes, Mrs. Joe Blair; lingerie, Miss Vera McBride; foundation garments, Mrs. Florence Hornsby; furniture and floor coverings, L. T. Sweet; stoves, R. T. Womack; household appliances, refrigerators and radios, E. W. Baity; hardware, L. Hughes; paints and wallpaper, L. T. Porter; household furnishing, Miss Nell Wilbanks; catalogue orders, Miss Alice Bynum; credit manager, Miss Helen Peters; service manager, E. E. Wheeler; cashier, Mrs. Inez Watts; payroll and record clerk, Miss Ruth Awbrey.

Maas is married and resides at 2001 Twenty-first street. He has one daughter, Carolyn, four years old.

One of the features of the 68th anniversary celebration the company is staging is the reproduction of many of the items shown in the firm's early catalogues which bring smiles to faces of many of the oldsters.

Italy's Passive Role In Battle Of Britain Somewhat Puzzling

But Action Is By Agreement

BY EDWARD E. BOMAR
Associated Press Staff Writer

Italy's almost passive role in the battle of Britain presumably is by agreement between the Axis partners but at the same time it is somewhat puzzling.

The widespread advance expectation that the onslaught would be double-barrelled, accompanied by an attempt to sever the empire lifeline in the Mediterranean, has failed thus far of realization.

Bombing Suspended

Instead, three months after Italy abandoned non-belligerency, the bombing of Gibraltar and Aden has been suspended, other aerial forays are mostly harassing in nature, and the Italian fleet sticks idly to its bases.

The British have just landed more troops in Egypt and say they have sent heavy naval reinforcements the length of the Mediterranean without molestation.

Meanwhile, the most favorable season for military operations is slipping away, Prime Minister Churchill proclaims the intentions to tighten Britain's grip on both ends of the Middle sea, and London dispatches speak of plans for a future offensive against the weaker of the Axis foes.

May Be Stymied

Unless England is beaten at home, Il Duce appears in danger of being fully stymied.

Italy's relative inaction might be another calm before a storm such as preceded the Nazi smash of last May. It could also be evidence that Italy is in no position to undertake more until the battle of Britain is decided or reaches a stage where Adolf Hitler can help his ally.

In three months of war, Mussolini's forces have seized a corner of France and have won a victory of doubtful importance by occupying British Somaliland.

Now, however, Italy is engaged up to the hilt in a war for which neither the nation nor army were prepared should it become drawn out instead of the short conflict Il Duce obviously anticipated.

Fascist forces in Africa outnumber their foes on land and in the air but how vulnerable they may be is indicated by British attacks on their supply lines. The latest of these attacks, London claims, resulted in the sinking of three ships.

The repeated bombing of Alexandria and points on the invasion route from Libya suggest that the long-threatened drive on the Suez canal may be undertaken soon. For it the veteran Marshal Graziani is credited with having 250,000 or more troops in Libya and East Africa, opposed by possibly half as many British around the Nile delta.

Defeatism Seen

In view of Italy's limited resources in oil and other munitions, an early attempt at something more decisive than continued air raids on Red sea convoys would appear logical. Instead of a frontal attack on Egypt, the capture of Khartoum on the upper Nile would weaken the defense of Suez and bolster morale at home.

The maintenance of morale is probably a matter of some concern to the Fascist high command. The Italian public has been warned repeatedly of late that the war may be long and difficult. And the day's news includes a Rome item that scores of persons suspected of anti-Fascist or defeatist tendencies have just been rounded up.

The sun was swallowed up by a dragon each evening and disgorged each morning, according to the belief of the ancients.

DEATH RAYS OVER BERLIN—Tracer bullets fan out amid exploding anti-aircraft shells to make a pattern of death across Berlin's skies as defenders of Germany's capital try to repulse night-raiding British planes. According to reported German statement that secret varnish on British bombers made them invisible in searchlights' glare, anti-aircraft gunners were firing blindly. Photo passed by German censor and radioed to New York.

Tip Of $46 Left To Waitress On Purpose

DETROIT, Sept. 11 (AP) — Ethel Gaff, 19-year-old Ft. Wayne, Ind., hotel waitress, needn't worry about the $46 left on the table from which Henry Ford and his party ate a four-dollar luncheon. It was the change from a $50 bill which paid for the luncheon, and it's all hers.

Miss Gaff was reported in doubt as to whether the money was a tip or whether the automobile manufacturer had just forgotten it in his hurry to resume his motor trip after lunching in Ft. Wayne.

"I paid the check, and I left the money purposely as a tip for the young lady," Harry Bennett, personnel director of the Ford Motor Co., said today. "She did a very good job in taking care of us, and particularly in keeping curiosity seekers away from Mr. Ford."

The fatal accident rate for trucks per 10,000 vehicles registered, has dropped 29 per cent during the last 12 years, while the passenger car rate has increased 18 per cent.

SALESMAN TOO REALISTIC

HUNTINGTON, Ind. (U.P.) — A meeting of the Huntington county commissioners here ended in grief when a salesman for tear gas bombs let loose a sample shot of the vapor as a climax to his sales talk to the board.

Early Christians sang at the dinner table, substituting hymns of praise and thanksgiving in place of "disgraceful laughter and unnecessary conversation."

Private flying in the United States last year covered about 183,000,000 miles, more than twice as much as the 82,594,234 miles flown by the scheduled airlines.

"I got the best mama in all the world. She knows just what to do for me when I suffer some of those little ills which come along when babies like me start teething. Mama gives me Teethina when I'm temporarily constipated and when gas or a sour stomach give me colic pains, or when I eat the wrong kind of food and run off my bowels. Teethina makes a big hit with me because it tastes good, and mama likes it 'cause twelve powders cost but 40c. The drug store man keeps plenty of Teethina for us babies." Give Teethina according to the directions in each package. TEETHINA.

"Build-Up" Relief Explained To Women

A simple method has saved many women a lot of suffering!

It is based on the fact that headaches, nervousness, cramp-like pain are often symptoms of functional dysmenorrhea due to malnutrition.

Help for this condition so often follows the use of CARDUI, because it usually increases the appetite and the flow of gastric juice; thus aids digestion and helps build physical resistance. Usual result is less periodic distress.

Many who take CARDUI a few days before and during "the time" have found this also helps ease periodic discomfort. Women have used CARDUI for more than 50 years! Adv.

Silhouette for 1941

Buick SPECIAL 6 passenger 4 door Sedan, $1052 delivered at Flint, Mich. Wheel shields and white sidewall tires extra.*

As surely as the new Buick FIREBALL* straight-eight engine sets the performance pace for the coming season, the graceful silhouette of the new Buick SPECIAL and CENTURY cuts the automotive style pattern for another half decade.

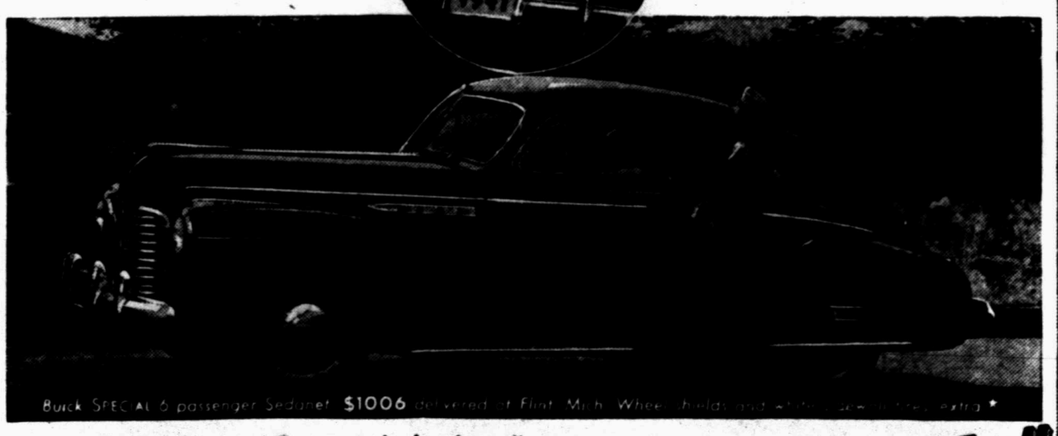

The reason is not alone the grace of its Buick-created lines, nor the appearance of solid substance in action that gives this honey the look of a speedster straining at its leash.

It is the practical quality of great room enclosed in sleek and flowing lines—more room for legs, for elbows, for heads, more room for entrance and more room for carrying luggage—that makes this the silhouette the cars of the future will seek to achieve.

Why wait for that—when in this Buick you travel in a car that, like time and tide, obviously isn't waiting for any man?

*According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, a super meteor which travels with a series of explosions like the shock waves of a great projectile is called a "FIREBALL."

Buick SPECIAL 6 passenger Sedanet $1006 delivered at Flint, Mich. Wheel shields and white sidewall tires extra.*

Buick prices begin at $935 for the Business Coupe delivered at Flint, Mich.

Texas Democrats Heading For Home In Search Of Million Votes

State Session Ends Tuesday

(By The Associated Press)

MINERAL WELLS, Sept. 11—Riveted to President Roosevelt's third-term candidacy, after a weird flare-up precipitated by its convention keynoter, Texas Democrats headed for the corners of the nation's largest state today in quest of a million votes they pledged with rebel yells.

The strange scenes of Democrats booing their own keynoter, of President Roosevelt's son angrily arising to defend his father's administration before Democrats, of the pall of British tragedy settling over a West Texas convention hall to bring its quietest moments, dotted a riotous day.

All Is Harmony

Finally, after delegates had tramped the hall floors in a wild demonstration for President Roosevelt, the air settled and all was harmony.

One issue went unanswered — the final decision of Commissioner of Agriculture J. E. McDonald as to which presidential candidate would get his vote.

The veteran office holder left the convention only a few minutes before it unanimously endorsed a resolution calling for his stand on the matter, brought to public attention several weeks ago when he said he would vote for the man with the best agricultural program. He had visited Wendell Willkie at Colorado Springs.

Obligation To Agriculture

Contacted at Waxahachie last night, McDonald said the convention's action was "their business" and that "his obligation was to agriculture, not politics." He recently was given his sixth nomination to his post. Delegates roundly booed the routine reading of certification of his election at the convention.

Elliott Roosevelt, the president's son, rocked the house when he arose to answer Keynoter Hal H. Collins' criticism of some of the New Deal's major policies.

"There are no Willkie Democrats," young Roosevelt, gesturing in shirt sleeves, roared. "But there is a renegade Democrat heading the Republican ticket."

He defended the administration's spending as the "thing that has kept the spark of life and hope alive in all Americans, regardless of circumstances."

Permanent Chairman John Lee Smith of Throckmorton, recently elected state senator, arose to say:

"America still believes in the heart beats of a great humanitarian, rather than in the kilowatts of a utilities man."

Flayed Excessive Spending

Keynoter Collins, who had flayed excessive governmental spending and described the Wagner act as taking away powers from courts withstood a great round of boos during his radio address, but smiled and said:

"I like all of you folks — and I want you to know I'm not speaking against that great man, President Roosevelt."

After young Roosevelt had finished his speech with a plea to "give without stint to those who seek our aid" and to "make it very clear to those who seek to interfere with us will be inviting destruction," Collins grinned and shook hands with an also smiling Roosevelt with the United States flag flapping between them.

Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel spoke briefly to pleas for renewed Americanism, "with the fate of the next to last great Democracy hanging in the balance." He was wildly applauded.

Resolutions adopted included favoring adequate provisions to discharge obligations of the state, payment of pensions to the aged, dependent children, needy blind and retired school teachers; streamlining the government to eliminate various agencies; quickening of the state's industrialization program; endorsement of the national administration's defense program.

Nazi Invasion

ever had before."

Adolf Hitler, Churchill said, "has ignited a fire which will burn with a steady flame until the last vestiges of Nazi tyranny and brutality have been wiped out . . . and the old and new worlds join their great forces to build that which has been destroyed."

Turning to the effects of the air raids on London, the prime minister said, "all the world" marvels at the courage, the fortitude of the people who are withstanding these attacks.

"Our forces at sea know they have a people behind them who will never flinch, will never fail them, . . . but will draw from the sufferings a victory won not only for our side, but for the better days that are to come."

Churchill, in opening his speech, said the air attacks so far had "failed conspicuously."

The Royal Air Force, he said, was stronger than at the start while the Nazi force was being worn down.

To attempt to invade this country without gaining mastery of the air, he said, would be "a very hazardous undertaking."

May Come At Any Time

He added, however, that Germany was preparing for such an invasion.

"It may be launched at any time now on England, Scotland, Ireland or on all three."

If it is to be tried at all, he continued, the invasion must, it seems, come soon because of the weather. And because, too, of the constant bombardment of the German vessels.

The next week, he said, may tell the story.

The "indiscriminate" bombings of the Nazi air force were part of a plan, he said, to cow the British people.

"Little does he (Hitler) know the spirit of the English people," he declared.

400 Believed Lost In School Bombing

By EDWARD W. BEATTIE, Jr.
United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Sept. 11—Hundreds of rescuers today dug into the wreckage of an east end London school in which officials feared that 400 destitute men, women and children were dead.

More than 500 persons had taken refuge in the school before it was destroyed by a German bomb of terrific force, probably an aerial torpedo. About 150 bodies and a few living persons have been taken from the wreckage, but officials said there was little or no chance that others would be found alive.

Not Sure Of Identity

One of the most horrible things about the picture of devastation was that none of the hundreds of friends and relatives aiding in the digging could be sure of the identity of those buried underneath the debris.

Since Tuesday morning, rescue workers have been at work on the wreckage of the school building, which was a modern two-story structure built in the shape of an "L." It was made of steel, brick and tile.

Except for a church, which was shattered, the school was the most imposing building in the neighborhood and must have appeared to destitute and homeless persons as a safe place to seek refuge after their own homes had been destroyed by enemy bombs.

The torpedo hit at the joint of the "L" and telescoped two floors into the ground floor with terrific force.

Mass Of Debris

It made a mass of twisted girders. Bricks and other debris covered shattered school desks. Some water had seeped into low spots.

A hole about 40 feet wide and 20 feet deep had been blasted.

The crater was so deep that ropes were used to lower rescue workers and medical aides into it to dig out bodies or to administer morphine to the living who could be reached. Ambulances stood by. A big crane lifted out wreckage.

Occasionally as the work proceeded there would come a cry of "silence!" The crane would stop and all around would stand motionless while some rescue worker crouched in the ruins, listening for what he had believed as a faint tapping from the debris. If the tapping was still heard, a rescue gang would start digging frantically at that spot.

Votes Tabulated

ren D. Dickinson, who got national attention some months back when he condemned big city vice and the evils of liquor, was far out in front of six younger rivals.

In Washington the initial returns went against Gov. Clarence D. Martin, who seeks to be the first chief executive of the state to win a third term. He trailed former U. S. Senator Clarence C. Dill for the Democratic nomination.

The state's contest for the nomination of U. S. Senator found Rep. Wallgren ahead on the Democratic ticket of five, and Stephen S. Chadwick, past national commander of the American Legion, leading a Republican field of four. Senator Schwellenbach (D) now holds the seat but he will vacate it because of his appointment to a federal judgeship.

In Colorado, George E. Sanders led John A. Carroll for the Democratic nomination for governor. The winner will run against Gov. Ralph L. Carr, unopposed Republican nominee.

BALLY IS HALTED

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill's prediction that Hitler is about to attempt the invasion of England brought a stock market rally to a jarring halt today.

The British leader's speech came late in the session while leading shares, particularly aircrafts, steels and other war babies, were engaged in a slow but fairly steady rise which had carried some issues more than a point ahead.

Traders were reported getting out of the market to await the final trial by arms for control of Europe.

At the last only a few issues held above water level, lending a mixed aspect to the closing. Transactions totaled about 380,000 shares.

Resisting the down turn were Sperry, Douglas, Boeing, United Aircraft, Eastman, Johns-Manville, Westinghouse and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Falling behind were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown, Chrysler, Union Carbide, Kennecott, American Smelting, American Telephone, Western Union, North American and Standard Oil of N. J.

Bonds, which had tended higher through most of the day, also exhibited mixed trends, but the last, Commodities generally worked higher.

NEW YORK REPORT

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP) — Cotton futures fluctuated erratically today and were easily influenced by small transactions either way. Routine trade demand absorbed light hedging, and some professional selling was prompted by a favorable weekly weather report. Steadiness in grains and securities, however, helped sentiment somewhat.

Futures closed unchanged to 2 higher.

and others.

As the royal couple continued the tour, the queen appeared distraught at each new scene of devastation.

Once, when the king and queen emerged from a bomb crater in the middle of a block of workers' flats, men and women pressed around them cheering and sang, "there'll always be an England!"

Dust gathered on the queen's shoes and stockings as they climbed over heaps of rubbish which a few days ago were a dozen small houses. Here, one old woman told the queen that her daughter and grandson had been killed, while another woman declared emphatically:

"Hitler can knock our houses down, but he can't get us down."

Juan Almazan Called Rebel

(By The United Press)

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 11—An interior department spokesman said today that Juan Andreu Almazan, candidate for president in the July 6 election, now was technically a rebel.

He said that if reports attributed to a San Antonio, Tex., radio station, that Almazan followers had "impeached" President Lazaro Cardenas, were true, Almazan might have trouble re-entering Mexico from the United States, where he has been the last two weeks.

Impeachment Reported

The report, attributed to radio station WOAI at San Antonio, was that a rump congress, formed by Almazan followers, had "impeached" Cardenas and named Hector Lopez provisional president until Dec. 1, when Almazan would "take office."

Emilio Madero, president of the revolutionary party of national unification, which nominated Almazan for president, said he knew nothing of the reported "impeachment," and that he was "very much surprised" by the report.

Phantom Involved

The interior department spokesman said he believed a "phantom congress and a phantom president" were involved.

Congress has delayed announcing the winner of the presidential election but it has been assumed that Manuel Avila Camacho, candidate of the revolutionary party to which President Cardenas and most other officials belong, would be declared the winner. Almazan followers, presupposing defeat, have announced that they have formed "the only legal" congress from their candidates for congress in the July 7 election, and that this rump congress had declared Almazan the winner.

House Action Being Asked

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11— House action was sought today on a new nationality code which sponsors claimed would so "drastically tighten" existing naturalization regulations that Communists, Nazis and Fascists could not acquire United States citizenship.

Before the start of debate, Rep. Rees (R-Kas.) told reporters the main purposes of the legislation were "to implement the fight against 'fifth columnists' and to clear up thousands of cases of doubtful American citizenship."

Although no groups are mentioned by name, Rees asserted belief that Communists, Nazis and Fascists would be barred from naturalization by new eligibility provisions.

Present law bars anarchists, polygamists, persons unable to speak English, army and navy deserters and draft dodgers.

The new legislation also would deny citizenship to those who advocate the overthrow by force or violence of the United States government or who distribute literature or contribute money "or promise anything of value" to that end.

Aliens who engage in or advocate sabotage also would be barred.

City Swimming Pool Has Banner Season

A banner season for city swimming pool in Mackenzie state park was indicated this morning by preliminary reports on financial operations during the past season. The pool closed Sunday.

Clarence Mast, manager, said that a profit for the season between $2,100 and $2,200 is indicated, which would be an all-time record for the pool. The net last year was approximately $1,900 and in 1938, about $1,500.

Increase in patronage was even larger than the gain in net receipts, city officials were informed. Many hundreds made use of the pool in learn-to-swim and instructional classes without adding greatly to total revenue.

The pool is operated by the city under a lease from the state parks board for which $1 per year is paid. Net revenues go into the city general fund.

would make bad choices of mates, anyway."

General congressional reaction was similar to that of Rep. Charles I. Faddis, D. Pa., married, a father of four children, a colonel in the army reserves and a member of the House committee that acted on the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill.

Will End Up Bad

"These kinds of marriages—and they really are draft-dodge marriages—are bound to end up bad," Faddis said. "The cards are against their success."

Faddis and Rep. James W. Wadsworth, R., N. Y., co-author of the conscription bill, thought it was "up to the ladies" to prevent "slacker-marriages." Faddis believed that both the bride and groom who marry to escape the draft will "pay and pay in the final analysis."

"Any woman who would marry a man knowing that he was doing so to dodge the draft probably would not make the best wife in the world," Faddis said. "It seems to me that only our ladies can prevent these gentlemen from walking to the altar and escaping the draft."

Three lines of stunning new Torpedoes in ten beautiful body types are offered in the 1941 Pontiacs and they bring unprecedented beauty, luxury and value to buyers of low priced cars, Bestwick said. The lines are the De Luxe Torpedo, the Streamliner Torpedo and the Custom Torpedo. In addition there are two Super-Streamliner Torpedo models available.

Re-Styled And Refined

The 1941 models have been restyled and refined to new heights of sparkling beauty and lavish luxury. They offer a combination of performance, dependability and economy even greater than previous Pontiacs, Bestwick pointed out.

All bodies are longer, wider and roomier than last year. Fittings that would capture a connoisseur's prize for sheer beauty and grace are featured. A wide windshield and extra-size windows actually provide a sun-porch view for the driver.

Acclaimed by owners everywhere as the finest power plants ever built, the 1941 Pontiac six-cylinder L-head engine has been stepped up to 90 horsepower. The 1941 horsepower eight L-head engine, with dual carburetion, now provides even finer performance than before.

the first floor. Pillars fell in fragments around a crater 15 feet deep and 35 feet wide. The blasted section was the glass-walled swimming pool, directly under the queen's sitting room. At least 100 palace windows were smashed.

Only household staff members were in the palace at the time safely huddled in underground air-raid shelters.

Coincident with this curiously delayed disclosure, which was not explained, First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander commented on reports of "mass concentrations by the enemy making his dispositions for entrance into this country," and declared:

"I can promise that if the enemy comes across in surface craft, they are going to get something to go on with."

Waves of British RAF dive-bombers gave Berlin's 4,000,000 an acrid taste of terror from the skies, knifing through a fierce anti-aircraft barrage to rain explosives on Hitler's reichstag, the Potsdam railway station, the Brandenburg gate and the famous Unter Den Linden — Berlin's Fifth avenue.

One unexploded bomb was believed to have dropped barely a yard from the home of Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels.

Hitler's high command admitted that a number of streets in the capital "had to be evacuated temporarily" this morning "because of the danger of houses collapsing."

Embassy Damaged

Bomb splinters slightly damaged the United States embassy, adjoining Goebbels' residence, shattering a window and denting the opposite wall in the office of First Secretary Donald R. Heath.

Huge craters pocked Unter Den Linden. Incendiary bombs crashed to the roof of the reichstag, setting fires which workmen quickly extinguished. Other explosives hit the 150-year-old Brandenburg gate, 85 feet high and 205 feet wide, and fell on Berlin's second largest hospital, St. Hedwig's, which houses 700 to 800 patients.

The RAF raiders, striking before dawn in the most spectacular assault yet on the German capital, took a reported toll of five killed, many wounded and apparently heavy damage. The raid lasted two hours.

Other squadrons of the Royal Air Force bombed German-occupied Belgium attacking objectives at Ostend, Ghent, Brussels and points along the coast.

Warning Of Invasion

German night raiders again subjected London's millions to an all-night attack — the fourth in a row — and Britons read in their morning newspapers a warning to expect a Nazi invasion soon.

Fires raged in warehouses and factories along the Thames river and in "The City," London's Wall street section. At the height of the assault it was light enough to read a newspaper on the roof of the Associated Press building just off Fleet street's "newspaper row" between St. Paul's cathedral and Charing Cross.

A Roman Catholic church in central London was demolished by a giant bomb-hit. A big apartment house on a London square was shattered and other havoc-dealing missiles hit a large maternity hospital, smashed into the streets and shook buildings in the main business section.

Some Londoners began to flee the city of nightly horror, but most stuck it out, grimly determined not to budge.

Search For Bodies

Rescue crews still searched for bodies in the debris-choked ruin of a two-story concrete school in east London, where nearly 500 persons — homeless after earlier raids — had taken shelter. Two babies, still alive, were found beneath the rubble.

After the long night alarm, Nazi daylight raiders set London's sirens shrieking again for a 10-minute warning starting at 11:53 a. m. (4:53 a. m. C.S.T.).

"Damage and casualties appeared less severe than on preceding nights," proclaimed a British communique.

At the same time Nazi bombers flew on their endless forays throughout the length and breadth of the country, to Wales and the midlands, to the southeast and the southwest. Some of these attacks were two hours long.

Carol In Italy

Early today Carol of Rumania, now an exiled former king, with his red-haired companion, Magda Lupescu, slipped furtively out of the servants' entrance of a hotel at Lugano, Switzerland and took a train into Italy. They were heading, reportedly, for Portugal.

Aerial attrition took the spotlight in the Mediterranean theater of war.

Latest reports said 112 persons were killed in yesterday's Italian bombing of Tel Aviv, gleaming white modern Jewish city in the holy land.

Rescue workers searched ruins of numerous homes today for additional bodies. The first official check showed there were 55 children among the dead.

British officials reiterated a charge that the Italian bombing was "indiscriminate," declaring there are no military objectives within 30 miles of Tel Aviv.

Among those killed was Theodore Peiss, 41, listed as a naturalized United States citizen.

Italian warplanes bombed British troops along the Egyptian coast, the Italian high command announced today. The British were reported at the same time to have sent airfighters from Egypt across the frontier into Libya.

The high command reported 13 persons killed and 21 injured in the British raids.

Uncle Sam To Register Young Men First For Conscription

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—Although congressional agreement was still in abeyance on conscription age limits, the war department has made plans, it was disclosed today, to register men from 21 through 30 years old as a separate group on event the broader 21-through-44 age bracket eventually receives approval.

The war department's decision was said to be in the interest of minimizing delay on the actual start of the compulsory military service program, once the Burke-Wadsworth legislation becomes law.

The age question continued the major problem today, as the joint Senate-House conference committee sought to compose differences in the varying drafts of the bill voted by the two chambers.

House conferees were to give their answers to a compromise proposal by Senate members for fixing the upper age limit at 30 instead of the 45-year maximum previously approved by House vote.

The Senate version of the measure called for registration of all men from 21 through 30.

Five Days Of Blitz Crushed France; Great Defeat Is Explained

Story Of Flight And Collapse Of The French War Cabinet Told As Censorship Is Lifted

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent

VICHY, Sept. 11 — Now that the political censorship has been lifted on events which preceded the armistice, the story of the flight and collapse of the French war cabinet and of the parliament regime can be told.

In its simplest terms, it is the story of a disorderly political retreat in strong contrast with the methodical orderly retreat on parallel roads of the French armies. It is a story of the hesitations, orders and counter orders, errors and general hysteria which surrounded the flight of the government from Paris to Montrichard, to Tours, on to Bordeaux where, finally, the whole structure collapsed as the German armies reached the stone bridge spanning the Gironde.

It is apparent now that the blitzkreig was lost in the 10 days of battle—May 10 through May 19—during which time the French government first considered the possibility of flight from Paris.

On May 10, at about 1 A.M., the German armies simultaneously penetrated Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg. Parachutists swarmed in the Dutch lowlands. The Belgian army drew up along the Albert Canal and the Meuse, imbued with the same spirit of sacrifice as Albert's heroic 1914 army. Dawn found the Germans all the way through Luxembourg and face to face with the Maginot Line at Wasserbillig and Esch sur Ailette. The French and British armies rolled into Belgium and Holland by the roads to Brussels, Antwerp, Namur and Liege.

Corap's Army Collapsed

Five days later, a beautiful spring day, the war was lost, but there was little reason to believe that fact at the time. The culminating point of the swift drama was reached before noon on the morning of Wednesday, May 15, when Gen. Andre Corap's 9th army broke and left its position in the vital loop of the Meuse, south of Givet, between Namur and Sedan.

On the Meuse, Corap's 9th army had been stripped to the bone to strengthen Gen. Henri Giraud's 1st army which was still rolling into Belgium and Holland, by day and night. All that Corap had left was two divisions. One was a Parisian division which apparently had been weakened by Communist agitators. The other was a division composed of men who had been working in Paris munitions factories and others who during eight months had been lent to farmers and to sugar makers to plant the new beet sugar crop and to convert the old into much needed sugar.

Bridges Not Blown Up

The apperance of a few German tanks across the Meuse seemingly was enough to break the morale of men who had listened to Communist agitators and for others who were too fresh from the green fields and the quiet factories of the rear. They broke and fled, not even stopping to blow up bridges by using the mines that had been planted eight months previously. Some of them never stopped until they reached the suburbs of Paris. Many were rounded up and taken back, some were shot, but the Germans, surprised by the turn of events, were prompt to see its possibilities and Gen Walther Von Reichenau drove forward with four Panzer-divisions and headed for Laon, Soissons, Amiens, Arras, Cambrai and the coast.

That same night exaggerated reports reached Paris. I had been in Belgium with Giraud's Army of the North, and had seen the most magnificent military advance in history—an army which rolled into action at 40 miles an hour, day and night. On the morning of May 15, I had visited General Corap's Army headquarters in a former convent school at Vervins, in the French Ardennes. We had lunched comparatively quietly, despite the passage of several large groups of bombers. No one at Verkins knew that the Meuse defense line had cracked and that the 9th Army was in flight, and was an army in name only.

The rumors that reached Paris overnight—chiefly to the effect that the whole front had broken and that the Germans were at Laon, Soissons, Amiens and marching on the capital—created dismay and hysteria rose. It was visible when, on the morning of May 16, the government gave its first indication of flight. Employes at the Quai d'Orsay, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, took off their uniform coats and began throwing huge bundles of secret documents, correspondence, treaties, and archives of all sorts out of the windows.

A huge bonfire was lighted in the courtyard along the Seine and another in the inner-court of the ministry.

Churchill Visit Recalled

Winston Churchill, who came to Paris that day to consult Edouard Daladier, Paul Reynaud and Gen. Maurice Gamelin, to ascertain what, if anything, could be done to plug the holes, saw the scene as he walked past a window at the Foreign Office. He halted, looked with interest at the destruction, broke into a quick smile, but said not a word as he pushed on.

Hundreds of curious stood along the street, pressing their faces to the iron fence, and watched. So industrious were the employes, so big were the bonfires and so great was the quantity of the material, that the fire got beyond control and the fire department had to be called—bringing thousands more curious watchers. All day, all night, these employes worked and the bonfires burned.

On May 16, it seemed no one in Paris knew exactly where the German armies were or how near were the spearheads of the Panzerdivisions. The War Office did not know. The premier's office did not know. The government packed its baggage feverishly. Late that afternoon Ludovic Frossard, Socialist minister of propaganda, had an idea: If the army could not tell him, he would send a plane and find out. His pilot returned after having flown over Soissons and told him he could see no Germans anywhere. In fact they were still east of Laon on the crowning heights. The hysteria slowly abated. Bags were unpacked.

Gamelin Broken By Failure

Meanwhile, days passed without an item of cheering news. On May 25, Gen. Maxime Weygand reported in Paris: "I will need another month." He had succeeded Gen. Maurice Gamelin, silent and broken from the failure of his great plan based on racing into Holland and Belgium ahead of the Germans. Weygand inherited a lost cause and was never able to gather enough reserves to hold the enemy at any point.

The Somme was crossed, the Bresle, the Aisne, the Marne and finally the Seine was reached. The armies of Gen. Fedor von Bock were trapping Gen. Henri Giraud prisoner in the North and cutting to pieces his mixed Franco-British-army of the north; the group of armies of Gen. Gerd von Rundstadt—which had broken the Corap army on the Meuse—was spread over the Aisne-Somme plains. In front of the Maginot Line, Franz von Epp's armies menaced. It was their mission to assume an offensive position from Sedan to Switzerland to force Weygand to keep his reserves and artillery in line with the forts.

On Sunday, June 9, the Germans reached the Marne and the Seine. Paris was doomed. The government sat twice, during the day, and twice decided to flee and twice decided to stay. At 6 P. M. the American correspondents who were left in Paris—most had fled during the heavy air raids a few days earlier—were summoned to the Hotel Continental to be told by the then minister of propaganda who succeeded Frossard when the cabinet of Daladier fell and that of Reynaud arose, that the situation was not nearly as bad as rumored.

Americans Received Assurances

"Let's be frank," the Americans told the minister. "Is the government leaving and if it is going, is it going to Tours or to Bordeaux? We want to know so we can send men ahead to organize our transmissions."

"I can assure you that the government is not going to run away. We will defend every town and village of France, house by house, street by street and that includes Paris. To prove to you that we are not leaving, I'll arrange right now for you a rendezvous for tomorrow night and for the night after, at the same hour, at this same place," the minister replied. The clock on the wall marked 6:15 p. m.

The Americans went to dinner; the minister hurried away to a meeting of the cabinet which sat at the Elysee from 9 to 11 p. m. At 11:30 p. m. that same night, half of the members of the government quit Paris by motor car over the already jammed road toward Tours.

The morning newspapers did not mention the flight, and it was noon of Monday, June 10, before the American correspondents were able to confirm that the majority of the cabinet—the minister of propaganda with them—had arrived at Tours at dawn. Only two ministers were left in Paris, Premier Paul Reynaud and Minister of Armaments Raoul Dautry. They remained all day and left, at 11 p. m. Monday.

Week Of Hysteria

From that time on, there was constant hysteria during the week spent at Montrichard—a village east of Tours.

The dramatic council of ministers which decided the political fate of France was held on Wednesday, June 12, at the Chateau de Cange, presided over by President Albert Lebrun.

Reynaud introduced Weygand to the cabinet. In a few words without oratorical effect but with a soldier's bluntness, Weygand told them the real story: France was whipped, the army was even now in full flight, chopped to pieces in some points, hopelessly split in others, and without munitions, food or other supplies. Several members of the cabinet wept. In his confusion, Weygand warned that it was necessary to ask an armistice because the army could not be stopped and he could do nothing to prevent a total occupation of the country.

Hearing that statement, the French government decided unanimously to call Winston Churchill to France to hear the same report. That meeting was scheduled for 3 p. m., Thursday, June 13, at the same castle. The French cabinet gathered on time but sat idle for hours. Reynaud and Georges Mandel were missing for hours, but finally arrived at 5 p. m. to announce that Churchill would not attend the meeting and had, in fact, flown back to London but had left a message for them to relay. He had been accompanied to France by Lord Halifax and Lord Beaverbrook.

British Views Quoted

"The British premier told me that the British government would continue, as in the past, to give the greatest possibility military, naval and air aid to France but that if developments oblige France to ask an armistice of Germany, it was his opinion and that of Lord Beaverbrook that England would, in no case, blame an ally in difficulties and would understand the situation in which France would find itself contrary to its desires," Reynaud reported to the council of ministers.

The French government put off for another 24 hours, despite the pressure of Weygand, the decision to ask for an armistice. The reason given was to await President Roosevelt's reply to a supreme French bid for aid and to give the London cabinet more precise information regarding the situation of the French armies and its consequences.

Meanwhile, several French ministers, including Mandel, who had not been delegated for that task, approached the British government directly and urged Churchill to adopt a more imperative attitude and demand that France respect her engagement not to make a separate peace. But the French government went on to Bordeaux, Saturday, June 15, without any further decisions.

The fatal week for French parliamentarism began Sunday morning, June 16, in Bordeaux when the cabinet met again. It was evident there was a serious split. Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, reading the latest war office dispatches, was grim. Weygand's reports left no doubts in the mind of the old soldier who judged these meager military dispatches reporting the complete debacle on their merits and each fresh dispatch confirmed his belief that surrender was inevitable, hence an armistice should be negotiated as soon as possible to preserve France from being wholly overrun.

Leaders In Disagreement

But the cabinet was not of the same idea. Nor was President Lebrun, nor the presidents of the senate and chamber, Jules Jeanenney and Edouard Herriot. They, like Reynaud, like Mandel, Daladier, Cesar Campinchi and Yvon Delbos, were for fighting on even if the government had to move to Africa—or even, as Reynaud said in his radio speech, to the French Antilles—to organize resistance.

Through Guy La Chambre and Pomaret, two of the youngest ministers, Lebrun, Jeanneney and Herriot tried to get the cabinet to agree to move to North Africa, arguing that even if it did not go there to organize further resistance it should go to have a freehand to negotiate an armistice.

During that Sunday, while the cabinet sat almost continuously, Lebrun, Jeanneney and Herriot ordered their cars packed and ready to start for Port Vendres to embark for Oran; three times they cancelled the orders. Finally, a majority of the cabinet voted to stay in Bordeaux, after Marshal Petain said calmly, coolly: "Regardless of what you do, I am not running away, I stay in Bordeaux," and he proceeded to make a general report of the day's dispatches which painted such a black picture that the next day, Monday, June 17, the Reynaud cabinet tottered.

On Tuesday, June 18, the partisans of flight launched a new offensive. They knew they could not shake Petain's refusal so they proposed and obtained the cabinet's approval that the whole government except Petain should leave for North Africa and that the old marshal would remain alone in Bordeaux.

Rump Congress Assembled

When Pierre Laval and Adrieu Marquet, mayor of Bordeaux, learned of that decision they organized immediately a stiff parliamentary resistance. They assembled a rump congress of 120 senators and deputies who delegated Laval and Marquet to call on Lebrun, Herriot and Jeanneney to reproach them for the decision to flee, and to urge Marshal Petain to stay. When Petain saw that most of the parliamentarians then in Bordeaux were with him and intended to remain in France, he obtained from the cabinet a revocation of the order of departure and a decision to stay in France. Twice in two days the decision for flight had been taken and cancelled.

Undiscouraged, the partisans of flight came back with a new suggestion that Petain remain in France if he wants to but that he delegate full authority to govern outside of France to the other Vice-Premier Camille Chautemps. Petain learned, however, that it was the intention of that group to refuse to accept the armistice once they reached safety in Africa.

The German army moved slowly nearer to Bordeaux through Wednesday and Thursday, June 19 and 20, and the cabinet sat continuously, still debating whether to go or to stay. The assault on Petain's stand was particularly bitter on Thursday and that night Herriot and Jeanneney were so certain that they had won their cause that Jeanneney started in his car from Bordeaux for Port Vendres, accompanied by his wife, while Herriot chartered the Massilia, on behalf of Parliament, to carry senators and deputies to Casablanca. Herriot had his baggage put aboard at 4 p. m., June 20.

Jeanneney Turned Back

When Petain learned of Jeanneney's premature departure, he gave orders that gendarmes or troops were to halt the car wherever it was found and to send the president of the senate back to Bordeaux. Late the next morning, the car was halted at Toulouse and Jeanneney was obliged to take the road back. At the same hour, Gen. Charles Huntziger was crossing the lines south of Tours on his way to Rethmondes to hear the armistice terms.

That same night, at about 1 a. m. Friday, June 21, Bordeaux was subjected to one of the most severe air raids of the war. The German authorities explained afterwards communications were so bad that when orders for the raid were given—for the purpose of helping the French government to make up its mind whether it wanted an armistice—the German authorities did not yet know that Huntziger had crossed the lines. In that raid, 225 civilians were killed.

That raid provoked a new offensive among the partisans of flight. Three ships embarked nearly 1,000 at Verdon for England, including most of the remaining American news correspondents and all but one of the British reporters, movie men, photographers and such personalities of the French press as Madame Genevieve Tabois, Andrew Geraud (Pertinax), Henri de Berillis and Elie Bois.

Herriot Canceled Sailing

About 30 senators and deputies embarked with their families on the Massilia, but before the ship sailed on the evening of Friday, June 21, at 8 p. m., three had a change of heart and returned to land. Of the 27 who remained on board and sailed for Casablanca, four were members of the cabinet which had declared war and lost: Daladier, Mandel, Campinchi and Delbos. Herriot was among those who cancelled his sailing and had his baggage removed two hours before the ship's departure.

After dinner that same night, President Lebrun decided to leave by car for a Mediterranean port. In fact, so thorough were his preparations that the prefecture at Perpignan prepared a menu for lunch the following day and submitted it by telephone to Lebrun at Bordeaux. The "plat de resistance," by a historical culinary satire was wild hare, which in France is the symbol of swift flight.

All through that night, Lebrun hesitated. From hour to hour, he changed his mind. Marshal Petain called on him and told him that Gen. Huntziger had established contact with the German armistice plenipotentiaries and urged him to await the result of the negotiations. Lebrun replied that he would delay his final decision until midnight. At midnight, the old soldier returned to the presidential palace and relayed Huntziger's report that the negotiations were proceeding favorably.

Firing Ceased at 1:30 a. m.

Saturday morning, June 22, brought a report from Huntziger that he had reached a complete agreement with the German negotiators, but had to fly to Italy to reach an accord with Benito Mussolini's plenipotentiaries because the Franco-German convention could not be made effective and the armistice could not be enforced until France and Italy were in agreement. That continued over Sunday, but on Monday, June 24, the armistice was signed. Hostilities ended at 1:30 a. m., Tuesday, June 25.

All day Monday, the French government—or what was left after the departure of the Massilia—sat in permanence from 8 a. m., and finally, at 6:30 p. m. a communique was published announcing that the counell of ministers presided by President Lebrun had given the order to Huntziger, at Rome, to sign the Franco-Italian armistice convention. The war was over.

The events of that week, however, firmly imprinted themselves on the mind of the 84-year-old Marshal Petain who was seeing for the first time in his long career the real workings of French parliamentary politics. He had already called into his cabinet Laval and Marquet, the two men who had persuaded President Lebrun to remain at his post. Checking his ideas with Laval, Marshal Petain found they agreed on the necessity of a fundamental reform which would involve the elimination of party politics, parliament, all extra-parliamentary influences including French Freemasonry, the Second and Third Internationals.

Petain Decided To Act

The inability of the chief of state, the heads of the chamber and the senate, the cabinet and the premier to get together on a question of whether or not the government should stay in France, convinced Marshal Petain of the necessity of establishing an authoritarian government, such as France's neighbors had.

It was Petain who insisted upon the elimination from the government of every functionary or minister who had any role to play in the Popular Front which he blamed for all of France's ills. It was also the old marshal who demanded the suppression of Parliament, the elimination of political parties, the dissolution of all secret societies which belied their purpose and were influencing national affairs, the reform of the constitution and the elimination of the triumverate of three presidents—state, chamber and senate.

Federal Government Ready To Build Defense Highways

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11. (AP)—The federal government prepared today to spend $200,000,000 for construction of 3,000 miles of roads and highways in and leading to the 120 army posts and cantonments where the expanded army will be trained.

Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody told a press conference yesterday that the government probably would bear the major portion of the cost, although states will put up 50 per cent in some instances. About 1,341 miles will be within reservations; 1,971 will be outside.

Roads Administrator Thomas MacDonald announced the approximate apportionment of funds authorized by Congress in the federal aid highway program, for 1942 and 1943. States will be required to match federal funds for regular federal aid and for secondary or feeder roads but the federal government will pay the cost of grade crossings. Actual allocations will be made in December. The approximate apportionment follows:

State	Regular Federal Aid	Secondary Or Feeder Roads	Grade Crossings	Total
New Mexico	1,693,000	281,000	166,000	2,050,000
Texas	6,229,000	1,090,000	1,087,000	8,406,000

Devil's Island Fugitive Has Found Peace In The Bahamas

(By The Associated Press)

NASSAU, Bahamas, Sept. 11 — Henri DeBoyn, a man without a country who says he spent 34 years in the Devil's Island penal colony, has found peace at last in these semi-tropical islands.

Born in French Algeria of Irish political exiles, DeBoyn joined the Foreign Legion at 18 but was sentenced to the penal colony for striking an officer. The sentence was prolonged as he tried again and again to escape.

Finally, on his 21st attempt, DeBoyn and several companions escaped in a boat and came here. He had never renounced his nationality, and British sympathy helped him combat efforts to repatriate him to French soil. The collapse of France apparently decided that question.

DeBoyn says he had hoped, before France was conquered by Germany, to recover and sell family property in Algeria. During his imprisonment he became skillful at carving. He has made a living here by selling carved coconut shell curios.

The refugee, now 53, hopes to marry a planter's daughter.

"I want children of my own," he says.

Gladstone's Belief Quoted By Official

FORT WORTH, Sept. 11. (AP) — The statement of England's great prime minister, William E. Gladstone, that "trades unions are the greatest bulwark of democracy," was brought up to date today by Joseph S. Myers of Houston, commissioner for the United States Conciliation service, in a talk before the Oil Workers' International union convention here.

"You will notice," he told the convention delegates, "that one of the first acts of Hitler and the other dictators was to abolish labor unions.

"And democracy has disappeared from every country except ours and Great Britain."

Hubbers' Bats Are Silenced As Borger Gassers Take Third Game Of Series

Gorski Takes Hill Tonight Seeking Win

Only two games away from their second straight West Texas-New Mexico league pennant, Lubbock's hopeful Hubbers mass their might behind big Walter Gorski for an "all out" batskrieg against Borger's battling Gassers tonight in the fourth game of the final Shaughnessy playoff series.

The White Sox farm hands' big berthas were silenced Tuesday night in the carbon city, young Bob Crues, who was sold to the Boston Red Sox Monday, celebrating by handcuffing the Hubbers with a three-hit masterpiece that gained a 2 to 1 triumph for him and his mates.

Series Is Extended

The setback was Lubbock's first in the Shaughnessy playoff, snapping a five-game winning streak. As a result, the two teams must play out their series at Borger, necessitating games there tonight and Thursday night. Needing two triumphs out of four chances while the Gassers must win three of four engagements, the Hubbers are more or less decided favorites to repeat for the third consecutive time.

Warmer weather was in prospect for tonight's tussle in contrast to the football like atmosphere which characterized last night's game, witnessed by 1,500 persons.

Local Fans Follow Team

Two special bus loads of Lubbock fans planned to follow the team to Borger, leaving here at 4 o'clock, returning after the game.

For the Hubbers last night, big Gib Williams traveled the route, hurling seven-hit ball, all singles and some of theh scratchy. And just as the pitching performances and score indicate, the game was one of the best of the Shaughnessy series.

Score In Sixth

Borger scored its two runs in the sixth stanza when Gilchrist led with a single to left. Bobby Decker moved him up with a fine bunt, Mack Short skying to Schweda, only to have Manager Gordon Nell single to right, scoring Gilchrist. Nell went to second on the throw. "Soapy" Scopetone then shoved Nell in with a single to right, advancing to second on the throw. Williams then bore down and whiffed Keaton to retire the side.

Lubbock, retired by Mr. Crues for seven straight innings, counted in the eighth when Elvin Mahan waited out a walk off the apparently tiring Borger ace, but the husky chunker recovered to fan Williams. Steve Niedziela then banged a double down the third base line, scoring Mahan from first. But the rally ended there as Ben Drake flied to center and Schweda whiffed for the third time during the game.

Collect Two Doubles

Of the three safe blows Lubbock collected, two were doubles by Niedziela and Schweda, the other a single by Williams in the third. Strikeouts, many of them called as Crues puzzled the Hubbers with a peculiar side-arm delivery, cut short any and all Lubbock attempts at a rally, however.

Errorless play afield was turned in by the Hubbers, Mahan, Niedziela and Schlereth handling some hot ones, following through with snap throws to cut off runners at first and second.

Moore Or Hausman

Manager Nell had not indicated definitely this morning who would oppose Gorski, but said it would be either the veteran Wilcy Moore or Clem Hausman, the latter if he has recovered sufficiently from a brief illness.

Tonight's contest is all-important to the Gassers, a victory putting them back on a two-all basis and even terms with the Hubbers, a Lubbock triumph placing the Hub City machine within one game of the championship.

"Six-Star Special" Is Being Offered At Sportarena Here

With a card that runs the gamut for wrestling entertainment, Promoter Sled Allen is advertising a "six-star special" at the Sportarena tonight.

First bout on the promising program will get under way at 8:30 o'clock. Tickets purchased at last week's postponed proceedings will be good tonight.

Raising the curtain will be a "special" 20-minute event featuring Abilene's clean cut Ace Abbott, who can box about as well as he can wrestle, and Glasgow's "Flying Scot," one Edgar Gideon, whose "flying" consists of tossing his opponent's torso through the ozone. They go for one fall.

And then comes the highlight of the night's menu. Farmer Jones, he of the long, somewhat wavy locks and facial alfalfa, sawed off blue jeans and bare feet, will carry his behemoth frame into the hempen strands against another "strong man," Denton's Dick Sampson. Farmer made a big hit with the fans last week before a downpour halted the show. Sampson has performed here upon numerous occasions and is well liked.

They tangle in the semi-final, a one hour, two out of three falls affair that should keep the house in an uproar.

Finale on the evening's card finds the two "villains" of the circuit—Lubbock's "Big Train" Clements and Chuck Powell mixing it up in a two hour, two out of three falls main event "grudge" bout.

Neither stops to observe ring "ethics," and the only reason they don't use the ring posts is because they, the ring posts, are tied down.

No advance in price has been made.

Grid Jamboree Will Be Held

For the first time in Lubbock's football history, pigskin fans of the section will have the opportunity of watching this city's seven gridiron aggregations parade their wares on the same turf within the brief space of two hours next Monday night.

Tech Stadium will be the scene. Time is 8 o'clock. And the fans are the special guests.

In a setting surpassing anything of its kind seen here, the football teams will stage a dress rehearsal as a premiere to their local 1940 campaigns. The Matador Club is sponsoring the event.

Dowell To Announce

Announcer for the proceedings will be "Mule" Dowell, Tech graduate manager. He will have charge of introductions and E. J. "Pinkey" Lowrey will handle the players in the dressing rooms.

The program first will introduce the Lubbock Junior High Calf Ropers along with Coach Gordon Thompson. The second act will show the Lubbock Junior High Cowboys along with Coaches Mule Davis and Lovie Liston. The third spotlight event will be the Lubbock Senior High Cowhands with Coach Cy LaMaster.

Westerners To Parade

Then will go one of the real smash hits of the 1939 campaign. The Lubbock High Westerners with Coaches "Goober" Keyes and Walker Nichols. Then just to add color the next feature will present the Dunbar Panthers, a crew of colored fellows who can really play football. After Dunbar and Coach Hill w'' come Coach Berl Huffman and his million dollar collection of Texas Tech freshmen along with Assistant Coach Dixie White.

The grand finale will be the presentation of the Texas Tech Red Raiders under command of Coaches Pete Cawthon and "Dutchy" Smith.

Following the introduction of seven teams, C. L. Storrs, Red Raider halfback, will be awarded the Standefer-Canon award for the highest scholastic standing of any Tech varsity athlete in 1939. After this the Westerners will workout for 25 minutes and will be followed by the Red Raiders in another 25 minute workout in which there will be a scrimmage.

Jack Parsons and Judge Raley, Matador club officials, have extended a cordial invitation for every West Texas football fan to attend the big free jamboree.

TEAMS ALL SQUARE

TYLER, Sept. 11 (AP)—The Tyler Trojans and Marshall Tigers were all square today as the teams returned here for the third game of the East Texas league play-off.

Marshall evened the series last night with a 10-3 decision.

Winn Jackson gave up nine hits but scattered them well while the Tigers pounded two Tyler hurlers for fourteen blows.

Tech Raiders Take It Easy

Twice daily workouts continue at Tech Stadium for Coaches Pete Cawthon's and "Dutchy" Smith's Red Raider gridiron recruits this week and the only reason a few ribrocking scrimmages aren't included is because the mentors say "no."

Straining at the leash to tear into each other and the "Fish" charges of Coaches Berl Huffman and Dixie White in particular, the varsity prospects gradually are rounding into shape for the tougher assignments and the mentors indicated they "may turn 'em loose" anytime.

No Injuries Reported

The Scarlet and Black recruits and the first year huskies have been tossing challenges and counter challenges for two days now and only the "go" signal is needed to start a second Civil war.

But the coaches, not taking any chances on inviting Old Man Injury into camp, keep warning the boys to take it easy, meanwhile gradually stepping up the pace. At present there are no injuries on the squad, unless Thayne "Red" Amonett's neck boil could be considered, and Messrs. Cawthon and Smith aren't taking any chances. Amonett was back in the lineup Tuesday, looking good at his right halfback position.

Meanwhile, the boys are bearing down as much as allowed, several positions receiving particular attention because of the battles for regular berths.

Perhaps the most highly interesting fight in the Tech camp is that for center with Edwin Irons, Wayne Pipes and Stanley Sigman scrambling for the regular starting job. All three are capable men and it is going to be tough to make a final decision.

Double Sessions Continue

Coach Cawthon said Tuesday night it was doubtful that the Raiders would scrimmage the West Texas Teachers of Canyon.

"We were to scrimmage the Buffs Saturday night but Coach Jack Curtice requested that we cancel the affair because he had so many injuries on his squad. I suggested another later date but so far Curtice hasn't agreed. I hope we can scrimmage the Buffs at some other date because it would help both teams," Cawthon said.

In the meantime, practice continues daily at Tech at 9 o'clock and at 4 o'clock each afternoon, and just any day now, any hour, the varsity and the "Fish" are going to get together and what happens then will be juicy conversation for "downtown quarterbacks."

Pennant Race Now Virtually In Deadlock

BY JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Life does begin at forty and Lefty Grove, the gaunt ghost with a magnificent past and doubtful future, has returned to haunt the trembling American league as proof.

Old Mose maneuvered through 13 innings yesterday to conquer the Detroit Tigers 6-5 and cast the chaotic pennant race into greater confusion with Cleveland again in front.

Seldom Managed To Last

Earlier this season Old Mose, 40 last March, seldom managed to last nine innings. When he broke a bone in his foot in August and was reported lost to the Boston Red Sox for the year, nobody figured it made much difference to Boston one way or the other—except sentimentally.

Then a week ago Sunday he came out of the limbo of the lost and battled for 13 innings against a strong kid half his age, Sid Hudson of Washington, and finally was beaten 1-0.

Yesterday Grove was up against the leading pitcher of the league, Buck Newsom, winner of 18 games against three losses, and a gallant team that was on the hot end of a five-game winning streak and in first place in the league.

Grove gave up three hits, one of them Hank Greenberg's 30th home run, for three tallies in the first inning. But after that he allowed only one run in the next ten innings and was never behind after his teammates tied up the score at 3-all in the sixth.

His victory lifted the Red Sox within four games of the lead.

The Cleveland Indians and the New York Yanks were kept idle by rain yesterday and both gained through Detroit's downfall, leaving this situation:

	Won	Lost	Pct.	Behind	Games To Play
Cleveland	76	57	.571	--	21
Detroit	77	58	.570	--	19
New York	75	57	.568	½	22
Boston	73	62	.541	4	19

The Indians and Yankees were scheduled for a doubleheader today with Detroit tackling the Red Sox in a single game.

The Washington Senators subdued the Chicago White Sox 5-2, and the Philadelphia Athletics whipped the St. Louis Browns 6-4.

The only National league games that escaped the rain were in a doubleheader that Pittsburgh captured from the Phillies 11-3 and 11-1.

Houston, Beaumont Take First Games

(By The Associated Press)

Houston's Buffs, one-up on Oklahoma City and also on a Texas league "jinx", will push young Howard Krist, a 23-game winner, to the firing line tonight in the second game of the Shaughnessy play-off.

Houston, failure in three previous years in the first round of the play-off, beat Rogers Hornsby's Indians 3-0 behind the four-hit hurling of Sam Nahem last night.

Young, hustling Beaumont will use Les Mueller, of no-hit, no-run fame, in an effort to make it two straight over San Antonio.

Last night Beaumont nosed out the Missions 4-3, coming from behind with a four-run splurge in the fifth. Virgil (Fire) Trucks started for Beaumont but didn't last, Charley Fuchs finishing and receiving credit for the victory.

Oklahoma City will rely on the slants of veteran Otho Nitcholas in the second game tonight. San Antonio will use Bob Munchief, 22-game winner.

Ty Cobb Refuses To Buy Club In Minor League Because It Would Interfere With Golf

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—Ty Cobb's reason for not buying a minor league club (in which he was very much interested) was because it would interfere with his golf. How! ... Don Budge is advising Don McNeill, the new singles champ, not to turn pro for at least a year ... Sonja Honey is going to open her winter ice tour in Fort Worth ... Jack Dempsey is having tough luck with his little girls. No sooner had he rushed Barbara home by plane from Salt Lake City with an infected throat than Joan fell in Central park and broke a leg ... Mike Jacobs is spiking reports he will retire from boxing the day Joe Louis hangs up his gloves.

O. K. MISTER

When Armstrong and Phil Furr collide
And start to pound each other's hide,
Please don't forget that it was I
Who first cracked that the Furr will fly.
... T. H. Miles.

Question of who is the power hitter in golf has been settled for the time being, anyway. Down at Scranton the other day, Jimmy Thomson, generally recognized as No. 1, and pretenders Sam Snead and Ed Oliver held a contest. Each whanged three blistering drives down the fairway ... Thomson averaged 288 yards, Snead, 266 and Oliver, 265.

LIFE BEGINS IN 1940

Until he went to the Pirates this year, Debs Garms' status as a major leaguer was only that of a lowly utility infielder and pinch runner ... But under the magic touch of Frankie Frisch, the speedy Texas collegian has developed into one of baseball's prize package surprises ... His average prior to yesterday was a neat .338 ... And the fact that he won't reach the 400 times at bat (necessary to qualify) may be all that would keep him from winning the N. L. batting crown.

Today's Guest Star

Frank B. Ward, Youngstown Vindicator: "If Rogers Hornsby gets the job managing the Cleveland Indians, there will be no race up the steps of Owner Bradley's office." ... Check and double check.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Out in the Western league, England pitches for Sioux Falls, Holland catches for Mitchell, S. D. and a Mr. Nation is a regular on the Norfolk, Nebr., team.

CANADIAN GOLD

During December of 1938, the province of Ontario, Canada, produced a new high of 260,878 fine ounces of gold, the bulk of which came from the Porcupine camp.

No Letup For Lubbock High

Lubbock High's Westerners, concentrating on "staying in shape" as well as planning payoff touchdown tactics, continue studying ways and means of riding a Bronc—an Odessa Bronc—this afternoon.

With a few flaws to smooth out as well as to further polish offensive and defensive maneuvers already assimilated, the charges of Coaches "Goober" Keyes and Walker Nichols are going about their business of preparing to defend their Texas Interscholastic league championship without letup.

Leave Saturday Morning

Following up Monday's lusty workout, the Westerners cavorted over Chapman Field Tuesday in a lengthy scrimmage session, looking like a million dollars at times and just looking at other times.

Early Saturday morning, the team will board a special bus and journey to Odessa to open the 1940 campaign against Coach Joe Coleman's Odessa High Bronchos. Fly Field is the scene of the contest. Time is 8:15 o'clock. It will be the lid blaster of the new season for both elevens.

Tickets On Sale

Another rough session is scheduled for Thursday, the boys taking things more or less easy Friday afternoon.

E. J. "Pinkey" Lowrey, business manager of Lubbock High athletics, announced that the Lubbock block of tickets for game were on sale at Hub Clothiers, admittance being 75 cents. He warned that local fans planning to see the contest buy their ducats here as Odessa officials are expecting an unusually large turnout and choice seats will be at a premium.

Punting Heartening

The tickets will be on sale until late Friday afternoon, Lowrey said.

Although several standout performers were noted in yesterday afternoon's scrimmage, as might be expected, there was not a great deal of distinction, considering everything.

The "coffin corner" punting of Leete Jackson, sensation of last year's heralded championship drive, and Co-Captain Max Walthall was satisfactory, although a high wind played havoc with punting in general. On placements, it was Fullback Robert McKinnon and Dale Odom who were tops.

Start With Rush

In the passing department, it would be hard to pick a leader if one wished to. James Reese handled an opportunity or two on aerial defense satisfactorily in the scrimmage.

The "A" team started off with a rush, Billy Wright, 156-pound right halfback, Jackson, now tipping the scales at 175-pounds, and McKinnon, 176-pounds, reeled off sizeable gains.

Lines Look Good

The lines were switched then and for awhile there was little difference in the gains, that is until 176-pound Carl Smith and 200-pound Carl Smith, playing at left guard and left tackle, respectively, started messing up a few plays, along with a few more the offense messed up themselves.

But all in all, it was a quite revealing session and didn't alter previous statements that the Westerners have a lot but are facing 10 foes who may have as much or more.

Pinchhitting For Parris

WRESTLING AT THE SPORT-ARENA TONIGHT — and for those who have been waiting for "that breath of fresh air" in the local tug and slug atmosphere they might be advised that it breezes in tonight in the colorful personage of one Farmer Jones.

Arkansas' gift to the human pretzel profession, the Farmer and his humorous antics will do until something better comes along.

Making his bow here last week on the rained out Wednesday night show, the Farmer, who fights sans shoes, sports flowing locks, wears blue jeans for trunks and a beard that would stuff a lounge chair, kept the house in an uproar through a light drizzle.

Characteristic of his actions and speech was a little episode with Referee Dutch Mantell. Pursuing the "Flying Scot" with clenched fists, he was warned to "open that hand!"

"Ah haven't hit him with it," he retorted, "but ah'm going to!"

It's the Farmer and Denton's Dick Sampson in a one-hour semi-final go as the spotlight then. Curtain raiser will pit Ace Abbott of Abilene against Edgar Gideon, the "Scot" from Glasgow. Main attraction finds two "villains," "Big Train" Clements and Chuck Powell, attempting to settle an old "grudge," two hour time limit or two out of three falls.

The program has been postponed twice now. If there's anything in opponents building up their rivalrys, then tonight's mat entertainment gets four bells ... and not a gong in the bunch! ... We don't think.

SOMETHING THE LITTLE BIRD DIDN'T TELL US—That all those rabid football faithful who are expecting to see Lubbock High's Westerners run roughshod over everything in sight with Odessa's Bronchos as the first victims Saturday night are in for a terrible jolt!

Not that the Westerners don't have it in huge quantities. But even the most valuable diamond in the world has to be polished before it pays off ... and that is a gradual and tedious process.

Which, in brief, is a prediction that the Gold and Black standard bearers will go to town at Fly Field Saturday, but a warning that it won't be easy by any means.

Every team on the Lubbock's 10-game schedule is "laying for the state champs." And Coaches "Goober" Keyes and Walker Nichols, who play squarer with fans, the newspapers and radio sportscasters than any other mentors we know, aren't dampening any crying towels when they tell you "we're on the spot," which they won't though they could very easily.

Tales of Lubbock's prowess will bob up in every city which the likeable gridders visit this fall.

But last fall is history and the challenge facing the present crop of Westerner gridders is just twice as tough as that which the nearly perfectly balanced aggregation of '39 waded through.

None of which is an alibi ahead of the season because we don't think any will be needed, certainly wouldn't be offered by mentors or players, regardless the results.

It's just a plea to give the 1940 machine and Coaches Keyes and Nichols credit for its and their accomplishments, remembering that the famed Texas Interscholastic league "starts from scratch" every September, and District One takes that literally!

Watch this space the next few days for articles by Editor Parris concerning prospects of other District One teams, Borger's Bulldogs being the first

Most Texas Crops Giving Prospect Of Greater Yields This Year

Timely Rains Proving Help

AUSTIN, Sept. 11 (U.P.) — Most Texas crops give prospects of yields exceeding those for last year and in excess of the average production for 10 years, the federal agricultural marketing service reported here today. Estimates are based on reports of crop observers made on Sept. 1.

Timely rains were expected to carry late crops through in good shape.

A summary of crop conditions issued by the service said:

Conditions Improved

Production of cotton was estimated on Sept. 1 at 3,479,000 bales an increase of 586,000 bales over the August forecast. Most of this increase is due to improved conditions in the northwest sections of the state. Production of cotton in 1939 was 2,846,000 bales and the 1929-38 annual average was 3,876,000 bales.

As gathering of corn got under way better yields than previously anticipated were reported, resulting in an estimated production of 94,977,000 bushels, at 19 bushels per acre. This may be compared with 73,376,000 bushels at 16 bushels per acre in 1939 and the 1929-38 average of 75,556,000 bushels at 15.4 bushels per acre.

Grain sorghum prospects improved during August, particularly in northwestern districts, to bring the estimated production up to 53,844,000 bushels, or an average of 14 bushels per acre. In 1939 production was 38,115,000 bushels and the 10-year average was 45,412,000 bushels.

Rice Crop Recovers

Recovery of the rice crop from the damage in early August has been such that production estimated on September 1 at 15,132,000 bushels, or 52 bushels per acre, is only 4 per cent below the August 1 estimate, but well above the 13,988,000 bushels produced in 1939 and the 1929-38 average of 9,770,000 bushels.

Peanuts to be picked and threshed will amount to 166,950,000 pounds, averaging 525 pounds per acre. This is about 29 per cent greater than the 1939 crop of 129,480,000 pounds and more than double the 10-year average of 77,449,000 pounds.

Improved conditions in the northwest raised the forecast of broomcorn production to 3,800 tons on September 1, at an average of 290 pounds per acre. In 1939 2,200 tons were produced and the 1929-38 average was 3,600 tons.

Pecan production was estimated at 34,840,000 pounds, a crop about 10 per cent greater than the August 1 forecast. The 1939 production was 19,000,000 pounds, while the 1929-38 average was 24,470,000 pounds.

To Exceed Forecasts

Production of peaches, pears and grapes all exceed August 1 forecasts, as well as production in 1939 and the 10-year (1929-38) average.

Ample feed for Texas livestock is indicated by production of all tame hay in the amount of 1,224,000 tons, compared with 1,022,000 tons in 1939 and the 10-year average of 745,000 tons. This will be supplemented with 299,000 tons of wild hay compared with 257,000 tons in 1939 and the 10-year average of 220,000 tons. Pastures were reported at a condition of 71 per cent of normal on September 1, showing a seasonal decline from the 74 per cent on August 1; however, they were much better than the 60 per cent on September 1, 1939 and the 10-year average for the date of 57 per cent.

Citrus fruit prospects were little changed from those of August 1, but the condition of grapefruit at 54 per cent and of oranges at 62 per cent of normal are well below the respective conditions of 62 and 69 per cent a year ago and 61 and 68 per cent for the 1929-38 average. Fruit made very little growth in August, due to general lack of rainfall in the citrus area, but average sizes are still advanced over the same date last year.

Substances which promote growth and aid the replacement of tissue are contained in the human liver.

Southern Methodist Is Favorite To Beat Texas Aggies For Southwest Grid Title

FORT WORTH, Sept. 11 (U.P.)—Southern Methodist university is the favorite to beat Texas A. & M. for the 1940 Southwest conference football championship, a poll of more than 200 sports writers and radio commentators showed today.

J. Willard Ridings, director of journalism at Texas Christian university, announced that 108 first-place votes were cast for the mighty Methodists and only 69 "experts" predicted that the Aggies can break precedent and repeat.

The Aggies were second choice for 90 voters, compared to 48 for S. M. U.

Baylor Is Third

Baylor was third in the balloting, followed closely by Texas. Texas Christian, Arkansas and Rice trailed in that order.

Several writers forecast that there will be no undefeated teams in the Southwest conference this fall, as were the Aggies a year ago.

Representative comment was:

"S.M.U. and the Aggies have a decided edge on the field. Baylor, Texas and T.C.U. all are high-ranking dark horses. Arkansas and Rice don't figure to finish in the money."

Promoter "Pup" Thomas, whose "Babe Hunting" efforts more or less brought professional boxing back out of the gutter here this summer, is enthused over an approaching "benefit" ring show he is planning for Seagraves September 19 under sponsorship of the Lions club of that city.

Hunt will meet Fort Worth's Woody Lynn in what likely will be billed as a title fight, which is equivalent to saying Joe Louis will defend his crown these days.

Proceeds of the show will be used for charity in and around Seagraves. The ducats are going like the proverbial hot cakes. "Pup" reports.

Don't bet any folding money you might save for the football season on it, but the Babe may be making his last Texas appearance for some little time when he meets Lynn.

According to Thomas, Promoter Jack Kearns has offered the Texas heavy champ $1,000 to appear on the semi-final of the Max Baer-Pat Comiskey card in New Jersey September 26.

It's time Hunt "stepped out" in the semi-big show again. And Izzy Kline's Bob Sikes would make a suitable opponent there—now that negotiations to bring the Southern titlist here for a match are fading fast.

HERE 'N THERE — It's a right huge pigskin party they've lined up at Tech stadium next Monday night . . . what with the city's seven gridiron machines rolling across Tech's turf in a premiere parade that tops anything previously planned along that line . . . Matador Club is sponsor . . . Anyone planning to see the Lubbock-Odessa game better buy ducats here . . . Broncho officials expect near sell-out . . . Both Odessa dailies have been tossing fuel on the football fires for about three weeks now, apparently trying to outdo each other in the matter of building up the Westerners . . . Pure propaganda! . . . A scrimmage that should be worth watching will be the "opener" featuring the Tech "Frosh" and Varsity. . . .

Mustangs Of Olton Will Prove Tough

OLTON, Sept. 11 (Special)—For the information of Olton's gridiron opponents this season—the Mustangs will be dishing it out in double doses again.

Willard and Willis, the touchdown Hedges twins are back.

Two of the biggest factors in the Mustangs' bi-district championship drive last fall, the duo forms the nucleus for Coaches Ernest Jones' and Lloyd Hunt's 1940 title defending aggregation, now working out daily.

Expect Good Season

Although looking forward to an average season, the Mustangs were in many ways rebuilt this fall, graduation riddling their ranks last spring.

The Mustangs compete in the northern division of Conference 5-A, with Littlefield, Sudan, Morton and Muleshoe. Last season they won the northern division crown, defeated Brownfield for the district title, won the bi-district from Roscoe and lost the regional crown to Pecos.

The Mustangs open the season at Spur September 13.

The schedule:

Sept. 13. Spur at Spur.
Sept. 20. Matador at Matador.
Sept. 27. x Morton at Olton.
Oct. 4. Chillicothe at Chillicothe.
Oct. 11. x Muleshoe at Olton.

No thanks. We'd rather not know what we're thinking these days. It might worry us!

ACCORDING to George Dennis, of the El Paso Herald-Post, Otis Grubb, jr., foreman of the upper U-Up-And-Down ranch near Fort Davis, is telling a story to show that lots of cows are just about as educated as lots of motorists.

He's telling the yarn as "reverse English" on the recent story of the Eastern motorist who rode into a West Texas filling station with a flat tire, the rubber cut to ribbons, and said: "I was scared to stop and change it. I saw those signs, 'Look Out For Cattle.'"

* * *

On one recent Sunday afternoon, Foreman Grubb heard a horn honking loudly on a road near his ranch headquarters in the Davis Mountains. He rode hurriedly to the scene and found an automobile surrounded by milling cattle.

"What's the matter, pardner," he asked the man behind the wheel of the stranded car.

"Listen," implored the distressed man over the bawling. "What have I done to inspire this attack? All I did was honk my horn at two cows in the road.

"They wouldn't get out of the way. I stopped and honked some more. Then all these animals crowded around; licking their faces and cracking their horns against the fenders of my car. What's wrong?"

Grubb dismounted and laughed.

"Nothing," he said, "except that you honked your horn and that's the way modern ranchers call their cattle to feed them. These cows just thought I was out to scatter cotton-seed cake on the ground for them."

* * *

MR. GRUBB'S story is reminiscent of the yarn told by Rancher man W. H. Whitehead, of the Sonora country, concerning how he hunts deer.

He says he gets into his station wagon, drives to an isolated spot and turns on his radio. Then he drives slowly around the range.

The music, he says, attracts the deer, which are very curious. They approach the source of the sound and he doesn't have to get a boot out of the car to kill him a nice, big buck!

It's probably a good thing for the ego of us all that there is no permanent record kept of our thoughts and observations regarding public affairs.

A small Dallas dinner group, after settling the affairs of city, county, state and nation, decided that a set of minutes would be kept of each of its gatherings and that each person's views on the problems discussed be set down for future reference. The minutes would serve, they all agreed, as a record to prove who had been right and who had been wrong.

Within one month the practice was discontinued by unanimous consent.

All the wise guys, it seemed, were wrong more times than they were right!

EVERY once-in-awhile a fellow demands extra service — and gets it, much to his dismay.

A friend of ours recently was taking a train-load of steers to market. At a little station up the line from El Paso, the cattle train was pushed over on a siding to let a fast passenger go by.

While waiting for the passenger train, the cowman dropped into the little restaurant near the station and ordered a cup of coffee.

The waitress brought it and it was hardly half warm. The cowman protested. "Take this back to the kitchen," he directed, "and bring me a cup of hot coffee."

The waitress was miffed, but did as she was introduced. When she brought it back not only the coffee but the cup and saucer, as well, were too hot to handle. She had set them all on the stove.

The cowman scalded his tongue and his fingers simultaneously then he drew back.

"Please, ma'am," he said, "put this coffee on the shelf for me. I'll be back from Kansas City in about three days and by then it ought still be hot enough to drink!"

* * *

"Our grandfathers got along without paying any attention to vitamins," declares a contemporary editor.

They got along, yes, in a manner of speaking. But did you ever dig up an old album and take a gander at how they looked?

* * *

That Man on Avenue Q says it is true that the Indians didn't develop this country when they were running it, but still, on the other hand, they didn't mortgage it, either.

* * *

Baltimore doctors were astounded when a truck ran over the head of a Maryland man and still left him uninjured.

We'll bet his wife wasn't a bit surprised!

SOMETIMES The Plainsman wonders if it is not possible to have too much ambition and—what is worse—to inculcate into our youngsters too much of the desire to do unusually big things.

Most of us exhort our young folks to be go-getters to the nth degree.

The kids are told that push and determination will elevate them to great heigths.

They are nurtured on "success stories" of the ultra-ultra type and before long they are seeing themselves in the future's mirror as nothing short of captains of industry and heads of giant corporations.

But after they get out into the world, and are buffeted from one mis-chance to another, what happens to their dreams?

They discover obstacles that the "success stories" forgot to mention. The ups-and-downs of trade, the competition of smart rivals, the dishoneaty of some these and other fates beat them about.

And soon many of them discover that, after all, only the very few climb to great heights; that the world needs only a few captains but many privates.

And everything looks hopeless and black.

Some are wise enough to accept the situation and make the best of things. But a great many others, sadly disappointed, become sour and adopt a life-long attitude of frustration.

In their let-down, they overlook the fact that happiness, comfort and satisfaction are available to the many, rather than to the few. They fail to realize that many of the great successes in business, the professions and politics are not as happy as men in lesser stations. They never learn that simply because an individual is what men call "successful," is no reason for assuming that happiness has gone hand-in-hand with his success.

And that's an unfortunate state of affairs.

THE individual who thinks clearly would much rather live a happy, satisfied life without any marked success — financial or otherwise — than to be acclaimed on every hand, be extremely rich, but not be happy and satisfied.

Therefore, it occurs to The Plainsman that we should urge our young people to be ambitious for happiness, rather than for great riches or high stations.

Whenever we do that, and the young people respond, this world will have more happy people in it.

YESTERDAY: The Cabrillos are furious at Constance's plan to keep the ranch. Pedro writes, asking for her decision.

Chapter 18
All's Fair

Constance had carried the letter to her window to read. Now she looked out. Rain had followed the snow and now, with lowering clouds dripping half rain, half snow, it was as miserable underfoot as it was overhead. Constance thought she had never seen a more beautiful day.

She returned to her desk, pulled it before the hearth, snapped on a low light and started composing the reply, her cheeks as scarlet as the velvet robe she wore.

And then she wrote, swiftly.

Dear Pedro:—

Mr Raskthorne will write the formal decision to Judge Franck, but I would like you to know why I reached my decision.

Really, I have never had to reach one. At no time have I, personally, wanted to sell the ranch.

Despite your belief that the Cabrillos have thought of it only as a means of income, this has not been true of me, or perhaps, as Meg says, I am not a Cabrillo.

To me, the ranch has always been a symbol of home. I have worked for the day when I could return there to live.

Your offer forced me to return for a visit, and that visit made me know I could not part with it without first trying to save it for myself.

Perhaps it is wrong for me to follow your plan to convert the place into a dairy farm, however the plan is not original, and when you are fighting for something you love . . . all's fair.

I know your father's contract allows him to remain as manager, as long as the property remains in the hands of the Cabrillos.

I am bringing in a dairy expert. If he . . . and you, care to remain under these circumstances, and—

Constance stopped to nibble the end of her pen.

Why couldn't she think of El Cabrillo without the Taylors there? Why couldn't she divorce them from the ranch; it was the ranch she loved. Were they as much a part of the ranch as the house and the willow trees, and the hills and the ocean?

They loved it. That justified her next words. She was confident it was the only reason she wrote them.

"—and I hope you will find it convenient to stay, at least during the three years I am taking for my experiment.

"I will arrive, on New Year's day.

May I now hear whether or not you will remain . . . at your earliest convenience?

Michael.

P.S. Pedro . . . A Cabrillo raised the money. Or was it a Mahoney?

She waited anxiously for the reply. She watched the city burrow into the snow for the winter. She made trips with John, and then one evening she returned to find a letter awaiting her.

Peter, Senior, had written it. She opened it before John.

'Ringside Seats'

Constance laughed as she read Peter Taylor's letter. She could imagine Meg standing around, wondering if Peter's pen would gouge through the paper and scratch the desk, could imagine Pedro, standing by chuckling, dark eyes sardonic.

"—of all the fool young women you are the prize," he wrote. "A snowball in hades has a better chance of enduring than you have on a dairy farm."

And the concluding paragraph. John Raskthorne saw nothing humorous about it, but Constance laughed, hysterically.

"—you bet we're staying. We have ringside seats at the biggest stock show the west has ever put on—"

John paced up and down, then stopped before Constance. "Chita, there's something queer about their staying on. I don't like it. No business men, and I have great respect for the business ability of cattlemen, with the capital these fellows have, would take three years out of their lives for the pleasure of watching a girl make a failure of the place they wanted. Connie, what is this son of Taylor's like?"

"Oh, my goodness," gasped Constance. "Why, he's . . . a . . . well, he's . . . I don't know how to describe him, John, he's sort of insolent and . . . well, well we fought everytime we met," she hastened to say. "He doesn't like Cabrillos," she explained. "He thinks them completely worthless."

John resumed his pacing and again stopped before Constance. "The Taylors are remaining for one of two reasons," he stated. "Either this young Taylor hopes to marry El Cabrillo . . . or else they will work against you . . . undercover."

Constance reached for a cigaret and for once John did not spring to light it for her. She was glad. The silly little white cylinder was trembling. Either reason was disconcerting. One more than another. "Idiot," she charged herself.

"As the young Taylor can't marry EEl Cabrillo, unless Donna should succumb, and I can't imagine Donna failing for a vaquero," Constance began, "he must mean to work . . . undercover. However, as I am hiring the dairyman and the employees have been with the Cabrillos since time began, I don't intend worrying about their making any headway."

John drew an ottoman close. "I'm jealous of that Taylor," he confided half ruefully. "He'll be there seeing you every day. Constance, how about taking me on as your business manager?"

"Dollar-a-year man?" inquired Constance. "But don't be foolish, John, there's no reason for my seeing Taylor every day, or even every week . . . and what if I should?" she added. "Look, here's a letter from the State Agricultural college, must be Pederson's credentials; Pederson is the Dane Mrs. MacKelvey believes in so firmly."

Constance tried several times to interest the family in the ranch.

"Imagine a man graduating from a cow-college," disparaged Donna. "What good are those references? Who cares if he's had ten years of practical husbandry since then? Anyone who could stand to be around a cow could run a dairy."

Bound By Kindness

Constance gave up. She was leaving for the west, two days before Christmas. There would be nothing merry or peaceful among the Cabrillos if she remained.

She had one last chore. She must tell her story. Fortunately the reporter had imagination. Into his account he wove the history of Michael Mahoney, as well as the Cabrillos, and, he gave full credit for the present condition of the ranch to the Taylors, who had carried on despite changing conditions.

"That," stated John, striking the paper as he drove with Constance to her west-bound train, will put a final check on Cabrillo credit. No man, aside from the one who loves you, will believe you can make good against such odds."

Constance settled into her compartment; Lamson bringing evidences of John Raskthorne's affection with him. Candy, flowers, magazines and a number of books on dairy farming.

She had received her Christmas gift from him, a fleece-lined coat of softest leather; a leather bound wristwatch; laced boots of softest doeskin, and, riding in the baggage car, a handsome stock saddle.

Lamson, the only family representative, gave her an agitated farewell. "Be careful of the 'orses, Miss Conchita. I wish you would wait until I could join you."

"You can join me anytime you're ready." Constance assured him. "Someone has to drive my car out in the spring."

Lamson left and she turned to John. How could she think of him as a sweetheart, when he was father, mother and brother to her? He'd thought of the things Nadine should have remembered. He'd stood by her through her troubles as Don should have stood. Now he was letting her go on, into a new world.

"COMRADE BROWDER" WRONG AGAIN

Earl Browder, Communist candidate for president, was wrong again, as usual, the other day. Barred by federal court decree from making a campaign tour on the Pacific coast, he inferred that our government has begun to "out-Hitler that of Hitler, himself."

Browder knows that isn't so. Probably he is happy in his knowledge. If this government was one-tenth as "Hitlerish" as that of any dictatorship, Browder and his stinking kind would have ceased to be irritants long ago. They would be occupants of some six feet of real estate.

Meantime it behooves the patriotic citizens of Texas and other states to discover just how the Pacific coast states went about slamming their doors on Browder, the would-be Stalin of the United States. With that knowledge, we will be prepared to do a little door slamming ourselves should Browder head in this direction before beginning his prison term for passport fraud.

In Fewer Words: Some of us were gabbing about the magic of New York. Damon Runyon, one thought, described it best this way: "Where everybody will stop watching a championship fight to look at an usher giving a drunk the bums rush!" . . . Street Scenery: Maynard Smith reports that America is safe in Bryan, Ohio, at any rate, where a wayside ice cream parlor displays this sign in its window: "Hitler Sundae—Half Nuts."

THE Morning Mail: "Dear Walter Winchell: I guess you'll be pleased to know that the Royal Air Force think that you are tops in your broadcasts which we get by short-wave. Keep up the good work. Maybe you'll remember me—in collaboration with the late Nan O'Reilly of the Journal-American, I wrote and produced 'Four o'Clock' at the Biltmore Theater in 1934. I also had many a drink with you at the old N. V. A. club and I worked on the Daily Mirror in New York when it was down on the Row. Hullo to Bill Farnsworth and all the others who might recall my name. Hullo, too, to Mr. and Mrs. America. All the best from the RAF boys and yours sincerely, Rupert Darrell, Royal Air Force, Somewhere in England."

Sounds Like Him: Fred Allen has several pensioners to whom he makes regular weekly payments. They are supposed to be on his "staff," but really do no work. One, an old-timer, comes every Sabbath for his $25. Allen often wished he could get rid of the guy. A few Sundays ago the fellow didn't show up at the usual 4 peeyem and Fred got nervous and almost hysterical. He phoned the police to help trace him and sent friends searching all over town. When they found the truant, Allen yelled at him: "Don't ever worry me that way again!"

OW-WOWCH! It happened at a famed gay spot the other night. A yokel asked one of the headliners working there to help him get the autograph of a comedian on the program. Trying to be obliging the headliner went looking for the comic and finally found him outside in the alley in a dice game for huge stakes. The headliner had avoided the nightly alley dice games because he didn't want to gamble away his hard-earned salary. But while waiting to get the comic's signature for a stranger, he lost $1,200.

Last Laugh Dept: Before the last war Lord Beaverbrook, the London publisher and statesman, was in the real estate business in Montreal. He had been proposed for membership in the Mt. Royal Club (Canada's most exclusive kleb, sir) and had been black-balled. Beaverbrook never forgot the rebuff. The following year he went to England and began his brilliant career. A few years later a Canadian friend got this cable: "Would you inform the gentlemen of the Mount Royal Club that the fellow they black-balled has just dined with the King?—Beaverbrook."

LITERARY LACE: Dorothy Parker, writing about a baby: "And sometimes she would give him her little starfish of a hand" . . . Bugs Baer's: "If it doesn't make sense it's either another constitutional amendment or a love letter" . . . The Cincy Enquirer's: "There's nothing wrong with the world that a few well-placed funerals mightn't solve" . . . Christopher Morley's: "The sharp numbing surgery of goodbye."

Gag Of The Month: The quip most quoted during our holiday in August, in case you missed it, was the observation of an actor appearing in "The Man Who Came to Dinner." He was looking at George S. Kaufman, the co-author, for the first time . . . "Gosh," he goshed, "how can a guy who looks like Lincoln and thinks like Lincoln pay slave wages?"

Private Citizens Played Key Roles In Swapping Of Destroyers

White Committee Backed Deal With Publicity

BY BRUCE CATTON
Journal Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 — Behind the swap of those 50 destroyers for naval and air base leases on British islands there is a story of long, patient work by various private American citizens who have felt all along that England is to a great extent fighting America's fight.

Catton

First impetus came a couple of months ago, when some of these individuals who had access to official circles in England asked the British government point-blank what sort of help from America was most vitally needed. Back came the answer: "Destroyers—as many of them as possible."

This attitude was made known to the U. S. administration, and the campaign was on.

Letter Campaign

Most of the publicizing of the affair was carried on by the William Allen White committee. After the project had been before the public a while, the committee brought forth a high-powered legal brief asserting that under existing law the president had the power to trade the destroyers without prior consent of Congress. This brief, signed by four prominent lawyers—Charles C. Burlingham, Thomas D. Thacher, George Rublee and Dean Acheson—was published on the editorial page of the New York Times.

A little later, the White House suggested the cause might be helped if senators and congressmen began to get letters urging the transfer. The committee saw to it that some thousands of these were sent.

After that, it engaged a survey organization to study the protests against the projected sale. This group analyzed the mail of various congressmen and reported that the bulk of the no-sale letters were more or less directly Communist-inspired.

Meanwhile, the White House carefully sounded out sentiment on Capitol Hill. Oddly enough, it learned that quite a number of Republicans would be just as well pleased to have the president go ahead and make the deal without asking Congress about it—the theory being that Congress probably would approve anyhow and that if there was any way of sparing members the necessity of voting on it, in an election year, so much the better.

Destroyers, Not Planes

Unofficial word here from Britain is that transfer of the destroyers will greatly diminish the threat of a German invasion of the British Isles. Fifty destroyers, as naval experts here see it, added to British light craft already available, should make any effort to land troops extremely hazardous; it is pointed out, too, that for shore-defense use in the narrow channel waters these boats will actually be as effective as so many battleships.

Britain's destroyer-building program got under way late, and only a few are being launched this year. Forty-one are due to be finished in 1941. Understanding here is that the British have plenty of anti-aircraft guns for the American vessels; as presently equipped, each of these destroyers carries only one, a three-inch affair.

Most interesting thing about the whole deal, in many ways, is the fact that it was destroyers, and not airplanes, which the British asked for. Obvious deduction is that they feel the air threat, onerous though it is, no longer represents an immediate danger to the life of the empire.

Memory Of The Moon

without trying to hold her; letting her try out her wings, as a father would. And he'd be there, in the background, waiting, if the wings weren't strong enough.

"John, you're binding me to you with your kindness," she whispered into his shoulder, and leaned there a moment.

And then the train was moving out and she was alone. Lights slid past her window, colored lights, tiny trees glittering in shack windows the railroad, snow hiding the ugliness of the mean places which held them.

Once, after she had turned out her light and lay watching the landscape, a sleigh waited at a crossing, a sleigh filled with people old and young . . . a family, all together, going somewhere to celebrate the holiday.

Constance thought of her mother's farewell, a quick, light, perfumed kiss. "I hope you're not making a mistake, dear."

Don and Donna had left for a cocktail party without offering farewell.

Constance had watched the glittering parade, seeing herself in severe black tailored clothes. Now she thought, bitterly, "The runt of the litter; the queer crossbreed; the throwback."

Morning came with the snow falling thick, blurring the landscape and casting an unearthly glow in filled with families going home the compartment. The diner was for Christmas; with commercial men, hurrying home for one day with their families; even the waiters were filled with the joy of the holiday.

Constance retreated from the happy people. She rang for a table and buried her thoughts in the future.

Here were the letters pertaining to transactions. She'd read them through, every one of them . . . but later, now she would study dairying. She read. Holsteins, Jerseys, Guernseys, Shorthorns, Herefords, Galloways, Devons and Durhams marched across the pages of the books. Feed mash, tillage, housing, marketing, crammed into her mind.

What would Michael Mahoney have thought of his throwback, she wondered once. She closed the books and leaned back assured. She had done exactly what Michael would have done under these circumstances.

"I can't lose," she cried aloud. "I can't, it isn't in the cards; it's just history repeating itself."

WANT-ADS ARE Cheap!

Rush On At Texas Tech

A Jump, A Smoke, A Drink— And That's The End Of The War For This Nazi Raider

Beaten in air battle, a German aviator parachutes to safety. He's seen over the roofs of a southeast England town. . . .

The fallen airman lands in a field near the town, lights up a cigaret while answering questions of an English policeman. . . .

The captive's guards produce a bottle and he fortifies himself for the long days ahead in an English prison camp. . . .

Off he goes to internment, flanked by British soldiers. He'll fly no more against England. Note Iron Cross.

Preliminaries Are Started

Students again thronged college halls as they took advantage of opportunity to dispense with preliminaries to registration at Texas Technological college this morning.

At noon 475 students had obtained permits to register, it was said in the office of Registrar W. P. Clement. The business office reported approximately 200 individuals had paid fees.

Photos Are Taken

Rollin T. Herald, student from Fort Worth who is making identification pictures of students, said he photographed an average of more than one student a minute. Approximately 900 students were photographed.

A total of 407 students had reported for physical examinations when the college physicians' offices in the library building closed Tuesday afternoon, and additional students were examined this morning.

The first general faculty meeting of the 1940-41 college year was held this morning and routine business occupied most of the time, said President Clifford B. Jones.

Dr. Jones said the state board of control had asked an inventory of all property, to be presented to the board by Oct. 1. G. W. McCleary, chief accountant of the college, explained the bases of preparation of the inventory.

W. L. Stangel, head of the animal husbandry department, discussed the athletic situation and support of athletics by faculty members and students.

New faculty members were introduced by deans.

Pre-registration activities will continue the remainder of this week. Classes will be scheduled Monday and Tuesday, official registration days.

Part of the pre-registration procedure is the approval of housing.

Herald said he expected to take a picture every 30 seconds during the registration rush.

Ticket Sales Get Publicity

Advertisements have been placed in 72 newspapers of Lubbock and area for first appearance this week announcing forth-coming advance sale of strips of general admission tickets to the Panhandle-South Plains fair Sept. 30-Oct. 5, according to announcement this morning by C. E. Maedgen, fair association president.

The number of newspapers is the largest in the area in which the same advertisement ever has been placed at one time by the fair association, the chamber of commerce or any affiliated organization, and probably is larger than by any business or commercial agency, officials said.

In most cases, the ad will appear three times in weekly newspapers.

To Be Sold By Mail

Those residing outside of Lubbock will be invited to secure their bargain-price tickets by mail, care the Panhandle-South Plains Fair association, P. O. Box 561. The tickets will be sold in strips of four at $1—exactly half the general admission price which will prevail during the fair. The advance sale will close Saturday, Sept. 28, and orders must bear a postmark no later than that date.

In Lubbock, the advance ticket sale will be conducted on behalf of Lubbock Boys club, inc., an organization for boys sponsored by service luncheon clubs.

Friday, Sept. 20 has been set as date for that campaign, with O. W. Ribble the general sales manager and S. E. Marbut the chairman of the campaign committee. Organization for the campaign, in which approximately 75 members of luncheon clubs will participate, is now in progress with the expectation that the drive will be virtually finished in one day. The boys' club will receive 10 per cent of the proceeds of its sales.

Project Near City To Receive Study

The Brazos River authority is just about ready to concentrate on a proposed dam project southeast of Lubbock, according to information received at the chamber of commerce this morning.

The information was contained in a letter from S. W. Freese, consulting engineer of the authority, which has agreed to make a survey of the watershed of the proposed lake. The project contemplates the erection of a dam in Yellowhouse canyon between Lubbock and Slaton.

Although some of the office work in connection with the survey already has been started, it was explained, no experts have been available for field work because they have been occupied elsewhere—particularly on dam projects at Throckmorton, Anson and Albany.

The Throckmorton work has been finished and contracts for the Anson and Albany dams are scheduled for letting this week, according to information here. That will mean engineers available for the necessary studies here which, according to Freese's letter, will now be "pushed on all fronts."

The letter added that the Brazos River authority is working or is prepared to work "hand in glove" with every agency which attempts to cooperate in the local project. He referred particularly to the federal reclamation service with which an application for the proposed dam here was filed several months ago. An engineer of that service made a preliminary inspection of the site about three weeks ago.

Rumors Of Attempt To Abolish FHA Office In City Are Heard

Rumors have reached Lubbock that attempt is being made to cause the abolishment of the district office here of the Federal Housing authority, officials of the chamber of commerce said this morning.

The report, although lacking in official corroboration, has caused the chamber to contact Senators Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally, Congressman George Mahon and high officials of the FHA in Washington to urge need for retention of the office, of which J. A. Raley, jr., is senior evaluator.

Consolidation Sought

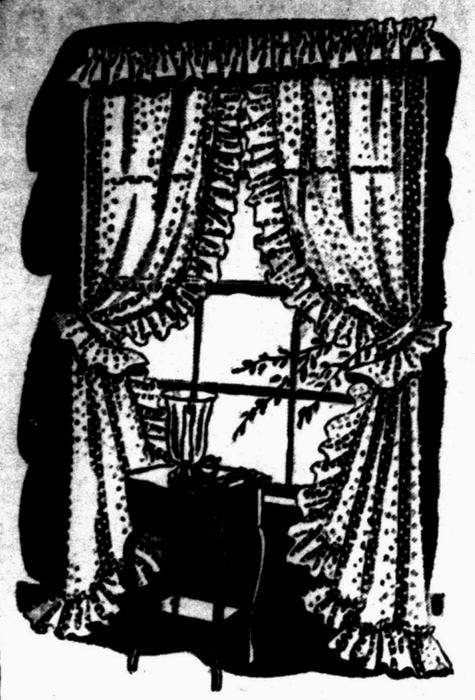

Information received here is that the movement seeking to abolish the local office has originated in Fort Worth. Consolidation with the office there is sought, according to the report.

Officials pointed out that building in Fort Worth this year has barely kept pace with that in Lubbock. New home construction in that city, which is many times the size of Lubbock, has been short of that here.

Letters to Washington point out that loans making possible the construction of approximately 2,200 homes in this area have been cleared through the Lubbock FHA office since its establishment in 1938. The letters recite further that there has been no material decrease in the business volume of the office here.

NEGROES HEALTHIER

MONTGOMERY, Ala., (U.P.)—Alabama's negro health program has received the praise of Dr. M. O. Bousfield, director of negro health for the Julius Rosenwald fund, who wrote Dr. J. N. Baker, state health officer, that "your leadership is now unequaled in this field."

Sears' 54th Anniversary In Business Is Being Observed

Sears, Roebuck and company is observing its 54th anniversary in the merchandising business this week and the Lubbock store joins the 558 other Sears stores throughout the nation in this great event which opens Thursday and runs for fifteen days.

The year 1939 was a great year in Texas for Sears, W. C. O'Mara, manager of the Lubbock store, pointed out today as he cited figures on purchases of merchandise and newspaper advertising in the state last year. A total of $2,557,464 was paid for Texas merchandise to 127 manufacturing concerns located in 24 Texas cities and towns. The company spent the huge total of $11,409,649 for advertising, all but 8.34 per cent going for newspaper advertising.

Lubbock Store Is Leader

The Lubbock store is one of the leading units of the Sears company in Texas despite the fact that it has only been here since March, 1936. When O'Mara came to Lubbock in 1938, the store had 35 regular employes; now it has 53 regular members of the staff.

Of the 53 regular employes now, a large number of them have been with the store since it opened and several more date their employment back to the first year of the store's business here.

Mrs. Una Elliott, cashier, heads the list of those who have been with Sears since it opened here 4 years and ten months ago. Mrs. Bonnie Bumpass, control records manager, is another with the same amount of service. Mrs. Kay Murray, hosiery manager, has four years of service.

Others Have Long Service

Ray Allen, manager of the second floor furniture and floor coverings department, dates his employment back to the first year of the store's opening here. He has been with the store three years and ten months. Others with slightly shorter periods of service include: M. H. Kinard, stoves, three years and eight months; Nat Mullions, sporting goods, three years and nine months; Robert Brinker, appliances, two years and six months; Mrs. Alva Richardson, credit manager, two years and ten months; and Mrs. Carolyn Watson, housewares, four years and two months.

W. C. O'MARA

Orville Laird is assistant manager of the store. He has been with the company six years.

Special preparations have been made for the anniversary event and O'Mara pointed out that it will be the tenth annual event of such a nature staged by the company and the Lubbock store has received huge shipments of anniversary merchandise and displays are now set up and in readiness for tomorrow's opening.

Financial Report Of Loan Group Given

MULESHOE, Sept. 11 (Special)—Annual financial report of Western National Farm Loan association has been placed in the hands of stockholders.

Seventy-four land bank and commissioner loans have been closed through the association since the last stockholders' meeting for a total of $161,450 with 33 loans now pending for $136,000.

Directors of the association, George W. Bolton, D. C. Stovall, J. T. Gilbreath, Fred E. Kepley and B. T. Hendrickson, were re-elected as was L. W. Jordan secretary-treasurer for the past three years.

Talks were made at the meeting by Bailey Agent Sam Logan, J. W. McDermott, county RR supervisor; J. C. Smith, jr., assistant farm administrator; and M. R. Snyder, secretary-treasurer of the Plainview Production Credit association.

Cecil Hunter and his radio entertainers from Amarillo furnished the major entertainment at the meeting.

Approximately 1,200 persons were in attendance at the meeting held on the Bailey county courthouse lawn.

Mighty Fossil Called Unique

DENVER, Sept. 11 (AP)—Colorado residents who constantly hear talk of drouth and its resultant crop failures are looking these days at proof that this area was once excessively damp.

Of course, nobody remembers back that far, but there is a rather grisly testimonial at the Colorado Museum of Natural History that proves what science says.

For the last 10 months Philip Reinheimer, chief preparateur of the museum, has been putting together the bones of the extinct Plesiosaur, a monster that inhabited Colorado in the neighborhood of 100 million years ago.

The Plesiosaur's respiratory apparatus indicates that it travelled exclusively under water, thereby furnishing proof that the state probably was "briny" then.

Approximately 5,000 persons went to the museum to attend the unveiling of the pre-historic fossil. The skeleton is 40 feet long and resembles very much a hogback mountain range which has had the bottom cut out from under it. The bones weigh 1,400 pounds, Reinheimer said, and when adorned with muscles, fat and epidermis it probably tipped the beam at about three tons. Sixty-two of the 114 vertebrae are in the neck, indicating that the Plesiosaurian frightener had a good view of its surroundings at all times.

Reinheimer, very proud of his newest construction, said the specimen was found in the flatlands of Southeastern Colorado, now one of the driest areas in the nation. The entire skeleton was in place and complete.

There has been nothing, Reinheimer said, to alter his belief that Colorado's Plesiosaurian specimen is the only one of its kind.

It is estimated that during 1940, total premiums paid for pilot, passenger and plane insurance in the air-conscious United States will amount to $3,750,000.

DRIVERLESS, this car ran across a railroad track before crashing into a police booth at Glen Head, N. Y.

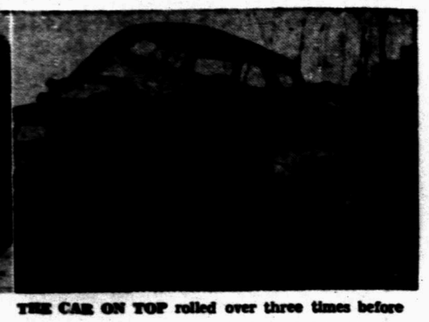

DON'T BANK ON SUCH LUCK—The drivers could laugh. Every one escaped injury. It all goes to show that you never can guess what an automobile will do. For every instance where an automobile runs wild or turns turtle without injuring anyone, there is an accident wherein the driver or someone else is injured or killed. Look at these pictures and smile, but don't count on this kind of luck the next time you drive to work or go out on the highway for a pleasure spin.

AFTER a collision with a sedan, this truck was left with cab pointing upward. Near Chicago.

LIFE REALLY DID HANG by a thread when this car plunged into a 20-foot washout at Brown's Mill, N. J., and was kept from turning over when it caught on a steel cable.

THE CAR ON TOP rolled over three times before assuming its final position. Driver of the other car had time to jump to safety. In Minneapolis.

Now YOU Decide

By ROBERT GEIGER, AP Feature Service Writer

DENVER—Scene: A Denver backyard. Cast: Two University of Denver co-eds. Time: Three weeks ago.

Betty Schroeder, brunette sophomore: "You know, Jean, I'll bet I get a swell sun tan when I go to California on vacation. Boy, am I going to get tan!"

Jean Searborough, blonde junior: "I don't know. You can do pretty well right here in Denver. The Colorado sun is good.

Betty: "Oh, yeah? Not so good as in California. The sun shines there all the time except when the weather is unusual."

Jean: "As for tan, I can do as well here in Denver. I'll bet I can."

Betty: "You've made yourself a bet, girl. I bet a drink—a soft one."

Jean: "It's a bet."

The neighbors are called in.

They compare the tans of Betty and Jean and decide the human eye can detect no difference.

The day Betty leaves for California, Jean begins taking sun baths.

When Betty returns the neighbors are again summoned.

Betty and Jean jump into bathing suits. The judges inspect them carefully. This is their official verdict:

Jean's face and arms are much more tan than Betty's face and arms. Betty's back appears a shade darker than Jean's. Scientific equipment might confirm the human eye's impression that there is a wee bit more tan on Jean's legs than on Betty's.

Jean, all points taken into consideration, is more tan than Betty.

Roosevelt To Give Address To Labor

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP)—Keen political interest centered today on President Roosevelt's address to the international teamsters convention — an address announced by his press secretary as "in all probability . . . the labor speech of the campaign."

Mr. Roosevelt will make the address in Constitution hall tonight (from 8:30 to 9 p. m., C.S.T.), but he said to reporters yesterday that no one would be able to tell whether it was political even after it had been delivered.

The Democratic national committee arranged to pay for the radio time on two national networks (NBC-CBS) — a possible sign, inasmuch as broadcasting companies charge to carry political speeches.

Democrats said the occasion offered Mr. Roosevelt an opportunity to aim a few shafts, if he chose, at Wendell L. Willkie, his Republican opponent for president. Willkie has spoken several times on labor and related subjects since his nomination.

Abolition Of Naval Academy Proposed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP)—Rep. Melvin J. Maas, R., Minn., ranking Republican member of the House naval affairs committee, today proposed abolition of the naval academy "as now constituted and administered."

Writing in the current issue of Look magazine, Maas said that the academy, located at Annapolis, represents an "archaic method of supplying officers for our national defense."

"As a service school," he said, "it is inefficient, undemocratic and wasteful. It is unfair to young men who win appointments, as well as to those who fail through lack of political influence. . . .

"It should be a postgraduate school for young men who have already finished academic training and have some idea where they are going. It should be an academy for the professional training of men, not for the schooling of boys."

Embassy Is Damaged In British Assault

BERLIN, Sept. 11 (AP)—The United States embassy was damaged slightly by one of the bombs dropped into central Berlin today by British night raiders.

Half of the embassy garden, including the tennis court, was closed because of fresh holes suspected as containing unexploded bombs.

One such hole at the edge of the garden is barely a yard from the home of Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, which adjoins the embassy property.

The holes are being left unexplored until the danger of handling incendiaries — if that is what they contain—is reduced.

The damage to the embassy was evident in the wall of the office of First Secretary Donald R. Heath made by a half-pound fragment of a bomb which exploded 150 yards away.

Otherwise the embassy property, in the center of the bombed area which includes the reichstag, French embassy and Kroll opera house, was undamaged.

PROMOTION FOR MAJOR

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Five years ago Charles J. Ostertag tried unsuccessfully to give away Major, his German shepherd dog. Now, Major has the place of honor in the Ostertag household. The dog's barking aroused the sleeping family while fire was eating into two rear bedrooms. Major, burned on the side, was sent to a dog hospital for treatment by the grateful family.
