Tax overhaul gains informal nod

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON — Congressional negotiators Saturday night informally approved the most radical income-tax overhaul in a half-century, a politically popular bill shaped around lower rates, fewer deductions and higher burden on corporations.

Senate members of the negotiating team approved the measure by an 8-2 vote with Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., and John Danforth, R-Mo., voting no. The House delegation, meeting in private, endorsed the plan with some dissenters, aides said, although the vote was not announced.

A final vote by negotiators from both houses, meeting in open session, was required to seal the deal; that was expected later Saturday. The agreement then would be subject to votes by the House and Senate after they return Sept. 8 from a three-week recess. It would become law when signed by President Reagan.

The conference agreement came only a few hours after the bill — the top legislative initiative of Reagan's second term — appeared to have hit another in a long series of snags.

Several senators had shown a reluctance to sign their names to the voluminous package until they had a chance to analyze it. At one point, Packwood had the support of only two other senators in his bid to have the plan approved before September.

After that vote, Packwood was closeted once again with Rostenkowski and the two produced the final compromise. But some bitterness remained because of the rush to approve the plan.

Danforth, who had fought beside Packwood throughout the year, regretted his vote against the compromise but said the conference seemed to be moving to pass the bill quickly "or people are going to find out what's in it."

The bill would reduce the number of individual tax brackets from 14 or 15, depending on filing status, to two basic rates of 15 percent and 28 percent (although upper-income people would pay more) and a maximum corporate rate of 34 percent. Both the maximum rates are one percentage point above the Senate-passed rates that Packwood had insisted could not be exceeded.

One last-minute change would delay until 1989 raising the personal exemption to a full $2,000; now $1,080, it would rise to $1,900 next year and $1,950 in 1988. As earnings of upper-income people increase, their exemptions would drop gradually to zero.

Standard deductions would increase significantly in 1988, to $3,000 for single people and $5,000 for couples. The special "marriage penalty" writeoff for two-earner couples would end. Deductions for consumer interest and state and local sales taxes would vanish.

The bill would scale back deductions for medical expenses and such miscellaneous expenses as union dues. It would significantly reduce the number of workers who could get fully deductible Individual Retirement Accounts.

Over-all, the package would cut taxes for about three-quarters of Americans; take 6 million of the poor off the tax rolls; shut down abusive shelters and boost taxes on corporations by about $120 billion over five years. More than 20 million couples and individuals would pay higher taxes.

The package would meet the requirement that it produce the same revenue as present law.

Congressmen put off spending decisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a rush of legislation before taking off for the campaign trail, the House and Senate last week passed major foreign policy and defense bills but put off the tough spending decisions until September.

The Senate ended weeks of haggling and approved both aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua and sanctions against the white-minority government of South Africa.

The House passed a major defense bill after adding provisions to ban testing of anti-satellite weapons, block production of chemical weapons, require continued compliance with the SALT II nuclear treaty, halt U.S. nuclear tests for a year and freeze "Star Wars" spending.

President Reagan on Saturday vowed to veto the measure unless an upcoming House-Senate conference committee removes those restrictions. It "would pull the rug out from under our arms negotiators in Geneva and eventually imperil the national security of the United States," the president said in his weekly radio address.

Meanwhile, House and Senate negotiators neared agreement on a sweeping overhaul of the federal income tax system.

It had been "in many ways a historic week around here," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., Friday evening after the Senate's final South Africa vote.

There was just "one little final step here" that needed to be done before Congress could begin its three-week recess, he said, a $32 billion credit increase to carry the Treasury until Congress returns in September.

The ensuing battle lasted nearly until dawn Saturday. It was a snapshot of Congress' inability this year to belly up to the spending cuts required to keep its promises of deficit reduction.

So far, Congress has failed to pass any of the legislation needed to implement the fiscal 1987 budget. No spending bills, tax bills, cost-containment legislation, nothing.

"I submit that we are treading on very dangerous ground," warned Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M. "I am not so sure that wishes and hopes and great aspirations are enough," he said.

Domenici joined with Sens. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, Warren Rudman, R-N.H., and Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., and convinced the Senate to amend the short-term debt bill so it would restore automatic spending cuts to the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

That would force Congress in September, before adjourning for the year, to make the spending decisions needed to meet fiscal 1987's $144 billion deficit target, they said. Future year targets get smaller until a balanced budget is reached in fiscal 1991.

"I don't even know whether we've even got time," Rudman said. "This economy is fragile, the world economy is more fragile," he said, partly the result of the record U.S. deficits that have been exceeding $200 billion a year.

Legislative talks focus on plight of oil states

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The plight of oil-producing states was the talk of the recent National Conference of State Legislatures in New Orleans, state Sen. John Traeger said.

Not that there was a whole lot of sympathy among legislators from non-oil producing states, the Seguin Democrat said.

Those states went through their bust economy in the late 1970s and early 1980s, when the price of oil skyrocketed and left the oil-producing states awash in money.

In those years, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas were one, two and three, respectively, in per capita spending on government programs in the South.

But the oil glut, attributed to a lack of production controls by the Organization of Petroleum Producing Countries, has turned the tables. Now all three states are struggling to keep state spending in the style to which they have become accustomed.

"We were really in fat city as long as the oil revenues were coming in," said Traeger, chairman of the Southern Legislative Conference. Of the non-oil states, he said, "For the first time, they're on the fat side."

"Those states curtailed their budgets in the lean years," he said, and now their economies are recovering.

But as tempting as budget cuts might sound to Texas legislators, especially those facing election challenges in November, Traeger said Texas must continue spending on state services.

"You can't sit on a state budget with population growth," said the longtime conservative legislator, who is retiring in January after 24 years in the House and Senate.

As legislators in Austin wrangle over whether they can cut enough from the state's $18.5 billion annual budget to get by without a tax increase, Texas is in good company when it comes to oil woes.

Louisiana and Oklahoma both have wrestled with massive budget problems in the past few years as their oil revenues were cut in half.

Like Texas, which lost $211 million in annual petroleum revenue from 1982-85, those neighboring states' legislatures embarked on massive budget cuts to replace lost hundreds of millions of dollars.

Texas may be in better shape because it held spending down during the oil bonanza. In 1983-84, Texans had among the lowest tax bills in the South, spending an average of $1,861 in state and local taxes. Oklahomans paid $1,931 per capita and Louisiana paid $2,239, highest among the 13 Southern states.

A U.S. Census Bureau report showed Texas had the highest per capita spending on public education of any Southern state in 1984. Oklahoma and Louisiana ranked in the top five.

Louisiana headed the list in spending on welfare programs in the South, while Oklahoma was third and Texas was 12th.

But as oil prices declined in 1982 and 1983, the chill spread to the rest of the economy.

TDHS caseworker criticizes state's 'numbers' game

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Financial eligibility caseworker Betty Primeaux said the pangs of guilt keep her from sleeping at night.

Instead of viewing welfare applicants as human beings, she contends the state budget crisis has forced her office to look at such people as numbers on a piece of paper.

And though she just started in December, she said she'll quit her job at the Midland office of the Texas Department of Human Services in September because she can't stand the pressure any longer.

The sleepless nights began when the state — trying to struggle through a budget crisis — began taking shortcuts in funding Ms. Primeaux's office, she said.

Statistics show that in June 1985, when Midland unemployment was at 5.9 percent, 234 requests for food stamps were received, but in June 1986, unemployment had grown to 14.2 percent and requests for food stamps had nearly tripled to 630.

Instead of the 15 caseworkers 1986 TDHS statistics show the office needed to handle increased caseloads, the office — adhering to state-mandated personnel freezes — found itself with eight.

"We are doing a disservice to two parties," Ms. Primeaux, 39, said.

"For one thing, we are wasting taxpayers' money. Their taxes go to financing our office — paying our salaries.

"We are not doing our jobs effectively because the amount of work is far too large for the small staff allocated to do it.

"Those in need are not being treated the way they should be. Applicants are facing up to a 45-day wait for processing of their requests, when they should only wait a week for their aid to begin," Ms. Primeaux said.

Steve Witherspoon, a Midlander recently laid off, has been struggling to get emergency food stamps since mid-July — the date of his last paycheck.

"They (the financial eligibility office) told me that interviews for food stamps were booked until the middle of September and that I would have to come up here and sit every day in the hopes someone with an appointment wouldn't show up," Witherspoon said.

"They don't tell me anything — I just sit here and hope someone cancels. But I don't blame the case workers, I blame the state.

Marlin Johnston, TDHS commissioner, said there are no available funds to assist these offices.

"I don't have the resources and I really can't go out and print the money they need.

"The state appropriated the monies for this year back in May 1985 — in no way did we expect this high unemployment," State Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, said.

"There aren't two sides to this case. We all want to help the people who need help."

Eight case workers at the TDHS financial eligiblity office wrote a letter to Sims appealing for some sort of help.

"I'm really sorry all this is happening, but frankly, I just don't know what to say," Sims said.

"Personally, I feel the administrative cuts should come from the central office (in Austin) first, not from our field service offices (as in Midland) whose purpose is to serve the people," Sims said.

MISD trustees suggest long-range study

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The state's economic crisis has prompted local school board members to take a long, hard look at the efficiency of the Midland Independent School District.

During its annual goal-setting retreat Saturday, the board agreed that a study of programs, facilities, instructional productivity and extracurricular activities could aid in developing a more cost effective school district in the future.

"It would be a long-range type study of what we would need in facilities, staff and programs," said MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi.

Baressi said the suggested study was the result of the board's concern over the dwindling state economy.

The board also suggested implementing a stress management program to help the MISD staff, students and their families deal with the emotional ramifications that result from company lay-offs and closings.

An energy management program to help the district attain a more cost effective method of operating the MISD also was suggested.

In reviewing the board's 1985 retreat, trustees said they were generally pleased with the progress.

Last year, trustees identified seven problem areas within the MISD and developed a 25-page list of goals they said would address those concerns.

Among the goals were to initiate better communication between the community and the school district by conducting a public opinion survey every three years, schedule two bi-annual "town hall sessions" in a different section of the community and establish an MISD Community Advisory Committee to provide ongoing input from Midlanders as a whole.

The board also agreed to pursue a program that would attract and retain quality personnel to the MISD.

Such a program would include the development of a more competitive district-wide salary schedule that would eventually rank in the top 10 percent ofthe state, implement a more comprehensive program for recruiting new personnel and create an improved incentive program to retain quality experienced personnel.

In the area of alternative education, trustees agreed to conduct an annual survey of graduates; examine standardized testing programs and possibly include additional academic disciplines; analyze data and make recommendations to modify, discontinue or implement programs; redirect or expand the role of the guidance counselor; revise student schedules to provide each high school student with a preliminary class schedule for the next school year; increase opportunities for parents to be on the school campuses; evaluate and modify the Partners In Education program; and establish active alumnae associations at both high schools.

Pakistani riot police clash with demonstrators

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Riot police clashed on Saturday with anti-government protesters who attacked government offices and burned vehicles across Pakistan, and witnesses said police shot 12 people in Karachi.

Army units were deployed for the first time since nationwide protests began Thursday to demand the release of opposition leader Benazir Bhutto and to denounce the government of President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq.

However, the crowds of protesters were smaller Saturday, probably due to weekend preparations to observe the major Moslem holiday of Eid el Adha.

Miss Bhutto, leader of the Pakistan People's Party, was arrested Thursday after leading a protest march and rally in Karachi, and authorities have said she will be held for 30 days.

In Karachi, the nation's largest city with 5.1 million people, witnesses said police fired rifles and shotguns at a crowd that had set fire to a flour mill and prevented firefighters from extinguishing the blaze.

The witnesses said 12 people were wounded and some people in the crowd fired back, wounding two police officers. No serious injuries were reported.

Witnesses said opposition supporters also set fire to a bank and bus depot in Karachi. Small groups stoned buses and vehicles, fleeing before police could seize them.

Similiar clashes were reported throughout southern Pakistan.

Rattlesnake roundup ropes MTV crew into Sweetwater

SWEETWATER (AP) — The idea of being part of a rattlesnake roundup caught the fancy of the MTV music video network, which decided to include this West Texas city on its 41-day, coast-to-coast journey across the United States.

On Day 20 of MTV's celebration of five years in existence, an 11-member cast stopped here Friday afternoon as part of its "MTV's Amuck in America."

The "Amuckers" came to Sweetwater in response to Jerry Ransberger's postcard inviting them to see rattlers, up close and personal, in this West Texas city, which each year is host to a rattlesnake roundup.

"I told them we'd hold the First Annual MTV Roundup," said Ransberger, who has gone back to school at Texas State Technical Institute while waiting for the oil industry to steady itself.

In the party were one of the network's on-the-air hosts, Alan Hunter, a supporting cast of eight production people and two drivers.

Rain made even staged hunting of rattlesnakes muddy work, so the entourage settled for taping Ransberger's father — veteran snake handler Bill Ransberger — and one of its own gang milking a diamondback.

The segment is scheduled to be televised on MTV Tuesday afternoon.

The cast didn't get too close, however. The MTV crowd scattered when a snake, which had just been picked up, fell off a stick it had been wrapped around.

The Ransbergers discovered only three days ahead of time that they would have special guests. MTV advance people telephoned Ransberger last Tuesday.

MTV publicity spokesman David Newman said the last-minute aspect of the journey is what makes it fun.

"We have no specific game plan," he said.

The thousands of postcards sent in by viewers promoting their towns as tour stops are sifted through constantly on the trip, and usually the working vacationers don't know where they'll be until a card strikes their fancy, Hunter said.

"That's why we call it 'Amuck in America,'" Hunter said.

So far, the journey has encompassed 14 states and 4,400 miles and won't end until Sept. 5.

ECISD officials concluding workshop

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County school trustees and administrators this afternoon will wrap up a two-day workshop at the Holiday Inn Centre during which they have looked at budgets, district goals and needs for the present and future.

Dr. Bill Walker, deputy superintendent for instruction and services, as well as business manager, presented board members with what he described as the "final budget."

In the face of decreased tax revenues of 13.3 percent, ECISD's 1986-87 budget will be nearly $2.7 million less than last year.

Trustees plan to approve the proposed $83.4 million budget when they meet August 26. However, approval of the tax rate, which can't be changed once approved, will be delayed as long as possible to see what type of budget measures come out of the special session of the state legislature.

Walker noted the budget can be amended, but once the tax rate is fixed it can't be changed.

Despite the fact the tax rate will probably be set about 7/10ths of a cent higher (83.8 cents per $100 of valuation compared to 83.1 cents last year) most Ector County property owners will be paying lower taxes than in 1985. The slight increase, Walker said, is to cover debt service. This rate will increase from 4.9 cents to 5.6 cents to continue paying off about $16 million in bonded indebtedness.

Walker noted ECISD indebtedness "is way below" the average debt of other Texas school districts, primarily because the district has used reserve funds to pay for various capital improvement projects over the years.

Superintendent Hugh Hayes, going through his first budget session with the group, remarked that it was amazing to find a school district with so little debt.

According to recent information published by the Texas Research League, the Midland Independent School district debt service annually amounts to $231 per student, while the ECISD per student share is only $113.75, a difference of nearly 50.8 percent.

Dr. Wayne Milligan, director of planning and evaluation, presented a series of five goals and priorities that had been identified by administrators during the 1985-86 school year.

The goals include: improvement of student performance in essential learning areas; improvement of teaching skills; improvement of management and supervisory skills; improvement of service and classified personnel skills and improvement of school-community relations.

Concerning anticipated high school enrollment this year, Milligan estimates 4,531 students will start high school in the 1986-87 school year, about 3/10ths of one percent fewer than last year. He told board members the "projected peak figure reflects the best estimate based on the economy."

Deputy Superintendent Keith Dial, referring to ethnic imbalances between Odessa High and Permian High, suggested board members consider implementation of magnet-type programs, such as specially designed math and science courses, at Odessa High.

Dial also noted student achievement levels had improved to the point that board members might want to consider instituting an international baccalaureate program. He explained that an agreement would have to be worked out with Odessa College to have ECISD teachers certified for college-level teaching, or have OC professors or instructors certified for public school teaching before such a program could be implemented. But, he said, students earning an international baccalaureate diploma would also have earned transferable college credits for their studies while acquiring their high school diplomas.

COMPARE

In addition to the decline in oil and gas revenues, the states have seen a dropoff in sales tax collections as people bought fewer goods, and unemployment in the oil industry meant there was less income to tax in Louisiana and Oklahoma.

The Louisiana Legislature entered the year expecting revenues to run $800 million short.

Gov. Edwin Edwards, who got a $750 million tax increase in 1984, failed to gain enough support in January for his plan to raise money through casino gambling and a lottery.

The Legislature, in its regular session, combined $430 million in budget cuts with a 1-percent sales tax on food, drugs and business services. That tax and the cancellation of some exemptions to the personal income tax raised approximately $200 million.

Appropriations were cut 5.8 percent, to $3.38 billion.

The cuts hit especially hard on museums and parks and other state services and are expected to cause tuition increases at state universities.

Some departments, such as Natural Resources, Environmental Quality and Wildlife and Fisheries were able to recoup the lost appropriations through fee increases.

But the combination of cuts and new revenue is still approximately $200 million short of the anticipated shortfall, said Emogene Pliner, finance specialist for the Public Affairs Research Council, a private group that studies state finances.

"Everybody is saying we're going to have another session, certainly by October," Ms. Pliner said.

Many Louisiana legislators are still in trouble with their constituents over 1984 tax increases, Ms. Pliner said, but she thinks the state will come out of the trauma in better shape.

One of Louisiana's problems was that it spent its money during the oil boom days and had little savings when the crash came, she said.

Louisiana never invested its excess revenue in trust funds, as Texas has with oil and gas royalties, she said.

In September, for the first time, voters will decide whether to create an education trust fund with $540 million from a settlement with the federal government on continental shelf royalties.

But that provision might fall victim to an unpopular proposal on the same ballot to raise the car license fee from $3 to $25. That issue is likely to attract voters who will vote against the entire package, she said.

The Oklahoma Legislature faced a $467 million shortfall when it met in January, 19 percent below the amount appropriated.

The legislature raised some fees but cut state spending 13 percent, to $2.2 billion, by eliminating capital appropriations, dipping into its cash reserves and making some deep cuts in programs.

The largest cut came in the highway department, which lost 40 percent, virtually stopping all but federally-matched highway projects.

Education lost 10 percent, as the Legislature tried to keep a teacher pay raise and smaller class sizes in elementary grades but lost some of the more innovative programs, said Ron Snell, assistant director of the Oklahoma House Fiscal Division.

The Department of Human Services was cut 8 percent, with special care not to save money needed to match federal grants. The cuts came despite a record increase in demand for food stamps, Snell said. "We think we should be all right, but if the economy worsens and demand grows we might be in trouble."

Some agencies have imposed furloughs — days off without pay — in addition to hiring freezes, he said.

"We think with our reduced appropriation level, the state's revenue will be sufficient in the coming fiscal year — if oil hangs around $15-16 a barrel we should be OK," Snell said.

Back in Texas, Traeger said he is confident that Texas will get by without cuts on the scales that Louisiana and Oklahoma took. But he said it will require a tax increase.

He supports Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's plan to cut the budget by about $650 million and make up the difference with a tax increase.

That runs counter to the House Speaker Gib Lewis' expressed determination to avoid a tax bill until the regular session that starts in January. Instead, he has proposed a combination of $1.2 billion in budget cuts and bookkeeping maneuvers to keep the state solvent until January.

"Frankly, I don't think we should panic and slash essential services," Traeger said.

Texas' conservative tax practices in the past has left it room to move with the oil crunch, Traeger said.

Dominican leader begins his fifth term

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Vowing a fight against poverty, conservative Joaquin Balaguer was sworn in as president of this Caribbean nation on Saturday for the fifth time in 26 years.

"Thousands of Dominicans find themselves each day without food," Balaguer told the National Assembly and foreign representatives in a 45-minute speech. "We have the obligation to declare war on misery."

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz was among the notables witnessing the inauguration.

Balaguer, who turns 79 on Sept. 1, is a noted historian and poet who gradually lost his eyesight to glaucoma during the 1970s and now cannot read.

Balaguer called on Saturday for conciliation among the main political parties in the Dominican Republic following the May 16 election, which was preceded by a volatile campaign that left 15 people dead.

He is the country's 64th president.

The nation's problems include a weak economy, unemployment of about 25 percent and a multibillion-dollar foreign debt. The country, with a population of 6.3 million, shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti.

The new president laid no specific blame on the outgoing president, Salvador Jorge Blanco of the Dominican Revolutionary Party, but Balaguer said his Reformist Party would not tolerate government waste or corruption.

"In the government that begins today, there will be no corruption without penalties," he said.

Among those viewing the ceremony were presidents Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua, Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador, and Eric del Valle of Panama.

In brief remarks after the inauguration, Shultz said, "The United States wants to see the Dominican Republic flourish as a free and democratic society. We know full well of the economic problems and to the absolute maximum extent that we can do so, we will be wanting to help this wonderful country to succeed."

He was appointed president in 1960 by the late dictator Rafael Trujillo, and elected in his own right in 1966, 1970 and 1974.

He campaigned but lost in 1978 and 1982.

"I'm not on the state finance committee, so I'm not sure just where all the cuts are coming from — I do know we are constitutionally bound to a balanced budget.

"I'd be glad to cut my salary to help, but I don't think it would," Sims said.

Pat Ayala, TDHS regional information director, said the El Paso regional office was sending seven workers to aid the Permian Basin offices deluged with applications, although she added her office could not necessarily spare the workers either.

"We're just trying to help however we can," Ms. Ayala said.

Ms. Primeaux, the only worker who would talk on the record, said that fraudulent welfare applicants may be receiving benefits as well.

"It is not our main priority at this time. There may be instances, for example, of falisification of citizenship, but we can't even handle the new applicants, much less monitor the older ones.

"There again, we're doing the taxpayers a huge disservice by letting funds into the hands of those possibly not eligible," Ms. Primeaux said.

Shortcuts in the agency's budget can be traced back to Feb. 18, 1986, when Gov. Mark White issued the order to agencies telling them to cut budgets in preparation for the projected $1.3 billion shortfall.

A special issue of the "Sabelotodo," the newsletter for the TDHS, said the mandate translated into a 13 percent or $245 million reduction in general revenue expenditures for the department.

On July 25 after State Comptroller Bob Bullock increased the projected state budget shortfall for the third time to $3.5 billion, White issued an order freezing all state agency positions unless a selection and job offer had been made prior to that day, the newsletter said.

On July 30, the newsletter said Johnston requested a waiver from White to allow the agency to fill clerical jobs in financial eligiblity offices, but with the House bill passed Friday, that light most likely went out.

"I guess it's just the old adage about the government keeping taxpayers in the dark that keeps officials from not bringing this problem into light. But it has become almost impossible to do a job one way when your heart tells you to do it the other," Ms. Primeaux said.

"It's one thing when the government doesn't care about its own employees — that's nothing new.

"But when government stops caring about the people it created the agencies to serve in the first place, well then...it's time for something to be done."

MISD

Regarding state-mandated changes, the board voted to work for changes in state legislation and establish a long-range time frame for facility renovation and construction which would be based on data of the district's needs and growth.

The board also established criteria by which it would determine the need for adjustments to maintain equal schools in the MISD.

Trustees voted to conduct an annual audit of "significant" factors for maintaining equal schools make decisions for adjustments in attendance boundaries, teacher assignments or facilities.

The board also voted to develop private outside funding sources for the MISD, to increase state funding and secure community support for special programs and construction.

Trustees acknowledged there is a drug problem in the MISD and voted to revise policies to support chemical abuse education, prevention and rehabilitation.

The board agreed to provide education on the dangers of chemical abuse to students, teachers and parents, prevent substance abuse by MISD students on school grounds and assist in the rehabilitation of student chemical abusers.

City upset by Donahue's portrayal

The program "Family and Survival" — the last segment of NBC's Phil Donahue Examines the Human Animal — featured interviews with J.J. Pearce High School students on drugs, suicide and divorce, and profiled a Richardson family.

The family said the program placed too much emphasis on the city's wealth.

The students said their interviews, which took place in March in the school's library, received heavy-handed treatment at the hands of program directors.

And other residents in the Dallas suburb said the documentary broadcast nationally Friday night was simply an inaccurate portrayal of their lives.

"We were very enthusiastic about Dallas and about Richardson in general — about how we thoroughly enjoyed living here and that we would raise our kids here," 16-year-old Jeff Mulkey, a Pearce junior, told The Dallas Morning News.

Jailed Lubbock doctor testifies at bond hearing

LUBBOCK (AP) — A Lubbock neurosurgeon who testified that he had performed several surgeries during a 10-month span while using cocaine and methamphetamines will have to wait until Monday to see if he will be released from jail.

Dr. William G. Evans was charged with making and selling methamphetamines last week, and testified Friday at a hearing on whether he will receive bond.

Evans said he had assisted in back surgery at a local hospital in July. During the same time period, he said, he had been using the drugs three to four times a week at a cost of approximately $3,000 a week.

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward held the detention hearing to determine whether the 62-year-old physician should be granted bond or be detained in the Lubbock County Jail until a trial scheduled Sept. 29.

He has been jailed since his arrest Aug. 8.

Woodward said he will wait until Monday to determine whether Evans should remain in jail or receive bond and be sent to the Chemical Dependency Unit at Lubbock's St. Mary of the Plains Hospital until the trial.

The prominent neurosurgeon was arrested in the Koko Inn parking lot while allegedly transacting a $30,000 deal for methamphetamine, commonly known as speed.

More than two pounds of the drug with an estimated street value of $450,000 were recovered from Evans' car and two mini-storage units, according to narcotics task force agents. Related chemicals and a large amount of laboratory equipment were also confiscated, agents said.

In testimony Friday, Evans admitted to performing several surgeries in local hospitals while actively using drugs.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Dick Baker asked Evans about performing his most recent surgery while he was using drugs.

Evans responded that three weeks ago he assisted a local surgeon with back surgery after using cocaine and methamphetamine the week before.

" ...I did the first part of the surgery," Evans said.

During his testimony, Evans said his cocaine usage had been "off and on" for the past 10 months. He later said he used between one-half ounce and one ounce of speed and one-half ounce of cocaine each week.

Baker further questioned Evans about whether his practice would be active if he were released.

"I would assume not," Evans responded.

Evans currently has active staff appointments at two Lubbock hospitals.

Evans testified that he had diabetes, a heart condition and lingering complications from Legionnaires' disease. He repeated several times that his memory frequently fails because of damage resulting from a lack of oxygen to his brain. The damage, he said, occurred during his bout with Legionnaires' disease, a type of pneumonia.

"I know my thinking is slow and sometimes my memory is poor," Evans said. "I have diabetes and have received treatment for that. I have an irregular heart beat which I receive medication for."

Defense witness Dr. Leslie Ansley, chairman of the impaired physicians committee for the Lubbock Crosby Garza County Medical Society, testified that major illnesses experienced by physicians were common reasons for substance abuse.

DALLAS (AP) — Charlayne Hunter-Gault, a correspondent for The MacNeil/Lehrer News Hour of the Public Broadcast System, was named Journalist of the Year Friday by the National Association of Black Journalists at its annual convention here.

Ms. Hunter-Gault, who was cited for her television documentary "Apartheid's People," spent a month in South Africa last year to film a report on that nation's white minority government.

First place awards were presented in the following categories:

City, county both seeking funds for detention center

MARFA (AP) — Officials from the city of Marfa and Presidio County who decided to build a detention center to help them out of tough financial times are now considering two separate jails for the area.

With the West Texas county's jobless rate at 22.8 percent, and several hundred of Marfa's 2,500 residents out of work, officials believed a detention center could be a means for raising revenue without raising taxes.

But the Presidio County Commissioners Court voted to endorse Detention Systems Inc. of Rockwall as builder and operator of a detention center that would house nonviolent inmates.

After unsuccessfully trying to stall the endorsement in district court Monday, Marfa city officials say they are going ahead with their own plans to build a city-owned facility.

Marfa Mayor Jane Shurley was in El Paso Friday seeking approval of the city's plan from the West Texas Council of Governments board of directors. A final state review is scheduled Aug. 25 in Austin.

Marfa is applying to the Texas Department of Community Affairs for $500,000, which would be matched by $500,000 in local funds from certificates of obligation.

The money would finance construction of a detention center that would hold up to 220 men, mostly illegal aliens, convicted of misdemeanors. Land for the center is being donated.

Dying woman still thinks of others

EL PASO (AP) — Belle Cotsonis has dealt with handicapped people most of her life, but the barriers they often face never really hit home until this summer.

Belle, who was growing weaker and weaker from a cancer in her brain, was encouraged to get out of the house. Her husband, Denus, helped her into a wheelchair one May afternoon for a stroll through their quiet Central El Paso neighborhood.

"It was bone-jarring," Belle, 61, recalled this week. "It was terribly, terribly rough."

The wheelchair couldn't help but hit bump after crack after hole as Denus rolled her down the sidewalk.

"It was very revealing, the problems these people who are confined to wheelchairs have," she said. "I just felt I couldn't leave things that way."

So Belle contacted the West Texas Association for the Handicapped. A fund in her name was established to help people repair their sidewalks.

HISD board asks teachers who failed test to resign

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston school board members asked 248 teachers who twice failed the state's basic competency test to resign as the board approved a $566 million budget designed at avoiding a tax increase.

The teachers had requested waivers and the opportunity to retain their jobs with the Houston Indedependent School District for one year.

Instead, the board voted late Friday to ask the instructors for their resignations but offer them a chance to be rehired in non-instructional jobs for less pay. They could become bus drivers, janitors or substitute teachers, trustee Cathy Mincberg said.

Trustee Bobby Peiffer said teachers who twice flunked the state-required tests had 15 chances to bone up through refresher courses.

"Nobody remembers that?" he asked. "I'm concerned that the public feels we're being cruel and inhumane."

Dallas to cut 1,047 jobs

DALLAS (AP) — As many as 1,047 full- and part-time city jobs will be cut at the beginning of the fiscal year on Oct. 1 if City Council adopts a $1 billion budget proposal, City Manager Charles Anderson said.

But 736 of the positions are vacant because of a hiring freeze imposed last May, and only 311 employees are actually subject to being laid off, Anderson said Friday.

Dallas has never had to lay off employees because of budget problems.

Of the 1,047 jobs that will be eliminated, 464 are seasonal jobs offered by the Parks and Recreation Department, 455 are full-time city jobs and 128 are administrative positions, Anderson said.

"We have notified the 311 employees...that their positions are at risk," he said. "But this does not mean they will be laid off because we will be making every effort to place these employees in positions that we expect to become vacant through attrition.

Donors' blood tracked

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Authorities are looking for 36 people who have obtained products made from the blood of 10 donors now found to be carrying the AIDS virus.

The 10 donors have given 17 pints of blood since 1980 and 36 products have been made from the blood, according to Dr. Norman Kalmin, medical director of the South Texas Regional Blood Bank.

The people may or may not have had the AIDS virus at the time the blood was donated, Kalmin said, but the blood bank is contacting hospitals to find the recipients in order to test their blood to find out if they are carrying the AIDS virus now.

Kalmin said it is conceivable that as many as 36 people have received contaminated blood products.

Six charged in smuggling

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Four men and two women were charged in connection with the smuggling of 18 illegal aliens found inside tractor-trailer truck, officials said.

Border Patrol agents followed the group from Laredo to New Braunfels, where the aliens were to be transferred to three vehicles that would take them farther into the United States, authorities added.

Reagan: House bill major victory for Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, accusing the House of giving Moscow a major victory on nuclear weapons, vowed Saturday to veto legislation that strikes a major blow against the administration's arms-control and defense policies.

He called the legislation — approved by the House on Friday — "a reckless assault upon the national defense of the United States" and warned he would make it the paramount political issue in the 1986 congressional elections.

"Soviet arms negotiators must be mystified today that U.S. legislators would give away in Washington what they have been unable to win at Geneva," the president said. "Soviet military planners must be astonished at the blows the House delivered this week to America's national defense."

NATION

The tough language was delivered in Reagan's weekly radio address, which was taped Friday and distributed for release Saturday as the president flew to California for a 23-day vacation.

Air Force One touched down shortly after noon, California time, at Point Mugu Naval Air Station, where the president was greeted by the Santa Barbara High School Band playing "Hail to the Chief."

The House bill, authorizing $286 billion in defense spending, would ban testing of anti-satellite weapons, outlaw production of chemical weapons, require continued compliance with the SALT II nuclear arms treaty, freeze "Star Wars" spending and halt all U.S. nuclear arms tests for a year.

None of those provisions, however, is included in the defense bill passed by the Republican-controlled Senate, and Reagan's allies can be expected to battle for the administration when the bill goes to a Senate-House conference.

Reagan said the objectionable provisions, if allowed to stand, "would pull the rug out from under our arms negotiators in Geneva and eventually imperil the national security of the United States."

Reagan had sought $320 billion for defense for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The Senate version would cut his request to $295 billion.

Attacking the House bill, Reagan said, "It threatens our hopes for arms control and moves us back toward an era in policies which the American people emphatically rejected in the last two national elections."

Technology makes biological warfare treaty obsolete

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, in an admittedly dismal report to Congress, says the Soviet Union is routinely violating an international ban against the development of biological poisons and that no arms control agreement can ever address the problem.

"The BW (biological and toxin) picture has been radically altered by recent scientific developments," Douglas J. Feith, the deputy assistant defense secretary for negotiations policy, wrote in a report to Congress.

"It is now possible to synthesize BW agents tailored to military specifications. The technology that makes possible so-called 'designer drugs' also makes possible designer BW."

Moreover, such agents can now be produced quickly — without maintaining any large stockpile — in self-cleaning equipment inside small laboratories, "making it impossible for anyone to prove that a given substance has been produced."

Feith's report was submitted to the House intelligence committee on Aug. 8. An unclassified version was released Saturday.

The 11-page report deals exclusively with the military use of poisons and toxins produced with live organisms and techniques such as genetic engineering. It does not address the issue of weapons made with chemicals, such as nerve agents, mustard gas and cyanide.

The United States has not produced any chemical weapons since 1969, although the Reagan administration is now in the midst of another fight with Congress seeking permission to destroy the current aging stockpile of such weapons and replace it with more modern, safer weaponry.

At the same time it stopped making chemical weapons, the United States unilaterally renounced all biological weapons. In 1972, it joined more than 100 other countries — including the Soviet Union — in signing the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention.

That agreement makes it illegal to "develop, produce, stockpile or otherwise acquire or retain" biological or toxin weapons.

According to Feith's report, the Defense Department has now concluded in essence that the ban is worthless because of the advance of technology.

"It is not a pleasant task to deliver so dismal a report to the Congress," Feith wrote.

While the Reagan administration has no intention of changing U.S. policy on biological weapons, Congress must understand how this field of weaponry has changed, he continued. The administration has also decided that when the signatories to the 1972 ban gather in Geneva next month to review the agreement, the United States "will make an effort to highlight the nature of the problem and the critical defects of the BW Convention."

"The danger of not publicizing these matters is that friends and allies will continue to neglect BW defense work aimed at developing detection and medical capabilities and protective gear."

Drug testing of workers likely to be challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's desire to test some federal workers for drug use, if put into practice, could quickly face a legal challenge. And many courts already have declared mandatory drug testing of public employees unconstitutional.

Although federal and state courts have not been unanimous, the overwhelming majority of their rulings said such testing violates constitutionally protected privacy rights.

"The consensus is very clear — urinalysis tests represent searches that violate the Fourth Amendment if not based on a reasonable suspicion," said Loren Siegel of the American Civil Liberties Union.

In a largely symbolic gesture, Reagan and members of his senior staff, including Vice President George Bush, last week took "voluntary" urinalysis tests for drug use.

The tests, dubbed "jar wars" by some, are to serve as examples in the president's push to discourage drug use. But they were lambasted by critics as intrusive, coercive and "crackbrained."

Reagan wants mandatory — not voluntary — drug testing for federal employees involved with public safety, such as air traffic controllers and those guarding nuclear weapons.

"Nobody's talking about testing the entire federal workforce," said Rae Nelson, a spokeswoman with the White House's drug abuse policy office. "Those dealing with public safety are the focus."

She noted, however, that drug testing for federal employees with "sensitive positions such as those with top-security clearance" might be recommended also.

Film studios bid for story of girl who turned in parents

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Hollywood movie companies have started a bidding war for the rights to the story of Deanna Young, the 13-year-old whose parents were arrested after she turned them in for alleged drug use.

"I have had telephone calls from nine major production companies wanting to acquire the rights to Deanna's story. My telephone hasn't stopped ringing since her story broke, and we're overwhelmed," said Bob Theemling, director of Orangewood Children's Home, where Deanna was sent after her parents' arrest.

"Deanna has become a national symbol of someone who battled the drug problem," Theemling said, adding that the calls have come from such companies as Lorimar, 20th Century-Fox, Columbia Pictures Television and Triad Artists.

Callers were being referred to an attorney representing Deanna.

Deanna remained at Orangewood on Saturday, even though she asked to be reunited with her parents. She was sent to the home Wednesday, the same day she went to Tustin police with a trash bag containing marijuana, pills and $2,800 worth of cocaine that she said belonged to her parents.

Noted priest resigns order

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An Emmy-winning Roman Catholic priest has resigned from the Jesuit order rather than obey commands to destroy his survey of 145 U.S. bishops on the issues of celibacy and women priests.

The Rev. Terrance A. Sweeney, 41, signed papers Friday at Loyola Marymount University resigning from the Society of Jesus.

Beforehand, Sweeney spoke briefly outside the campus post office, where he mailed a copy of his research to Pope John Paul II. He said he'd rather leave the order than submit to "authority destructive of the very foundations of the church, and religious and academic freedom."

The priest holds five Emmy awards for his work as a writer and producer on nearly 100 film and television projects, including "The Thorn Birds" and "Barnaby Jones."

The Rev. Robert Caro, rector of the Jesuit community at Loyola Marymount, praised Sweeney's abilities as a priest but declined to discuss his departure.

Although Sweeney remains ordained, he is no longer a Jesuit and cannot function as a priest unless he finds a bishop willing to receive him into his diocese. Sweeney already has been rejected by Los Angeles Archbishop Roger M. Mahony.

Detroit officers wounded

DETROIT (AP) — Six off-duty law enforcement officers and a lawyer were shot and wounded as they left a benefit, authorities said Saturday.

One of the officers, a female agent with the U.S. Treasury Department Bureau of Alcohol, Firearms and Tobacco, was in stable condition Saturday at Detroit Receiving Hospital with a wound to the right hand, said hospital spokesman Dennis Archambault.

The other six were treated at the hospital and released, said Officer John Leavens, a police spokesman. Names of all seven were being withheld, he said.

The group, all wearing civilian clothing, was fired on about 11:50 p.m. Friday as they left a benefit being held to raise funds for muscular dystrophy, said another spokesman, Officer Fred Zaharoff.

"They were outside at the time of the shooting. The shots came from across the street," Zaharoff said. "By the time it happened, it was over with. No one saw anything."

Soviet satellite crashes

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A large Soviet satellite blazed into the atmosphere over the south Indian Ocean late Saturday afternoon, a U.S. military spokesman said.

Lt. Col. Chuck Wood, a spokesman for the U.S. Space Command here, said the satellite did not come close to any land. It hit the ocean between 5:26 and 5:40 p.m. EDT, he said.

Authorities predicted the re-entry, but had not been able to pinpoint the exact location until shortly before it fell.

Del Kindschi, another Space Command spokesman, said it was impossible to determine the exact time the satellite re-entered the atmosphere.

He said military radar stations tracked the satellite as it went overhead and it was only when a tracking station didn't pick up the satellite that officials knew it had re-entered the atmosphere.

Charity's methods probed

CLEVELAND (AP) — Only about half the $41.6 million raised by Hands Across America will be given to the needy when the money is eventually distributed because administrative costs have been so high, according to a report published Saturday.

Officials of the charity say distribution of the money, originally scheduled for late September, will begin before Thanksgiving, the Cleveland Plain Dealer reported.

Organizers have spent about $17 million in administrative and other costs, the newspaper said.

George Delianedis, chief investigator of the Los Angeles Social Service Department, criticized the amount of money spent on administrative costs.

"Something is wrong," he said.

The social service department regulates fund-raising operations based in California. Hands Across America is headquartered in Los Angeles. Its guidelines say at least 70 percent of the proceeds from a fund-raising event staged by a not-for-profit foundation should go to the charitable cause for which it was designated.

Sandinistas make plans to counter increased Contra threat

By REID G. MILLER

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista army hopes to counter an increased threat from U.S.-backed rebels with more men, better weapons and new battlefield tactics, Nicaraguan and foreign diplomatic sources say.

With both sides predicting a rapid, heavy escalation of a war that already has gone on more than five years, the Sandinistas are counting on maintaining an edge over the Contra rebels through their superiority in numbers, firepower and mobility.

Those three factors, plus a sophisticated intelligence service, have given the Sandinistas such a distinct combat advantage that the rebels have not come remotely close to their goal of overthrowing the leftist Nicaraguan government.

But with a fresh infusion of $100 million in U.S. aid, the rebels pose a greater threat, a threat the Sandinistas moved to meet even before the Senate gave final congressional approval to the assistance package last week.

Shortly after the House of Representatives first approved the package in late June, Western military and diplomatic sources reported the Sandinistas had received an undetermined number of MI-17 Soviet troop transport helicopters.

Most Western analysts agreed that the new craft brought the Sandinista helicopter fleet to about 22, including at least six Soviet MI-24s.

The MI-24s were used first in Nicaragua in early 1985, and rebel commanders acknowledge they have dealt death and created severe morale problems among men unequipped to fight them.

The Sandinistas also are known to have MI-8s, a troop carrier similar to the MI-17. In addition to men and material, both helicopters can carry heavy machine guns and rockets.

"They (the Sandinistas) plan to expand their fleet to 30 or more, although they've had some trouble keeping the helicopters they've already got in the air," said one Western military analyst who claims to have access to intelligence reports.

The analyst and others said the Nicaraguans have been plagued by maintenance problems that keep a number of helicopters grounded at any given time, a not uncommon problem even among more sophisticated armies.

Nicaraguan authorities said mechanical problems caused the July 19 crash of an MI-17 near Puerto Cabezas in northeastern Nicaragua, killing 16 people and injuring one person.

Diplomatic sources say several other helicopters have crashed apparently without loss of life, although the Sandinistas have not reported the crashes.

Citing either security reasons or concern that their remarks would offend their host country, none of the foreign officials interviewed would speak for attribution.

So far the Sandinistas have used their helicopters sparingly, generally to ferry supplies, reinforce small units and evacuate wounded.

But with a growing fleet, most analysts expect the Sandinistas soon will begin full-scale air mobile operations, using their helicopters to carry full battalions of up to 500 men to remote battlefields.

The rebels have shot down only one helicopter, last December, using what the Sandinistas said was a SAM-7 missile. The insurgents bought about 30 of the missiles on the open market early last year, but reportedly found they didn't work well under Nicaraguan field conditions.

Jalisco governor: Agent's account 'absolutely false'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The governor of the western state of Jalisco denied as "absolutely false" allegations that state police tortured a U.S. drug agent, the government newspaper reported Saturday.

El Nacional said Gov. Enrique Alvarez del Castillo "denied categorically the version given by Victor Cortez," an agent of the Drug Enforcement Administration.

"It is absolutely false," the newspaper quoted Alvarez del Castillo as saying. "It involves only a small incident."

U.S. officials have said Cortez, 34, was held for six hours Wednesday by police in the Jalisco state capital of Guadalajara, and was released after Sergio Garcia Ramirez, the federal attorney general, intervened at the request of U.S. authorities.

John Lawn, chief of the Drug Enforcement Administration, said Cortez was "stripped, bound, beaten and prodded with a cattle prod." The U.S. has protested the incident.

Garcia Ramirez has ordered a thorough investigation and sent a team to check out the allegations, presidential spokesman Manuel Alonso has said.

There have been several versions of the events surrounding the detention of Cortez and a Mexican, identified by Jalisco state authorities as Antonio Garate Bustamente, who he said was also freed.

"The information they have here is that there were two men discovered with high-caliber weapons in a car who were suspicious," said Alonso.

"They were detained and were taken to the offices of the police, where they verbally identified themselves — one of them as an agent of the DEA — because this is customary with this type of agents. They don't carry any type of identification on them, so once they were identified really as what they said, they were liberated," Alonso said.

Alvarez del Castillo was quoted in El Nacional as saying that Cortez was held for three hours, "time that was used to ascertain his identity."

The Jalisco state attorney general, Jaime Alberto Ramirez Gil, said in an interview with the Mexico City newspaper Uno Mas Uno that, "In all detentions here and in any other country there is always body contact." Asked to define such contact, he said, "The normal contact to the body."

Chernobyl mishap due to operator error, paper says

TOKYO (AP) — The Chernobyl nuclear disaster was caused by plant operators who turned off several safety devices to conduct an experiment, a Japanese newspaper today quoted an official Soviet report as saying.

Asahi Shimbun, a nationally circulated newspaper, also quoted the report as saying plant operators were not informed of the dangers of the procedure and were not prepared to deal with the emergency.

The report said that during the accident about 50 million curies of radiation were emitted from Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor, or about 3.5 percent of all the radioactive material in its core, according to the newspaper.

That is dozens of times more than the amount of radiation released by the atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima at the end of World War II, the Asahi said.

The April 26 Chernobyl accident released a cloud of radiation that circled the globe. The disaster has claimed at least 28 lives, caused $2.8 billion in damage and forced the evacuation of more than 100,000 people from around the plant in the Ukraine.

The newspaper said it obtained the 382-page Russian-language report on the accident Friday, a day after the Soviet Union submitted it to the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna for an Aug. 25-29 meeting.

According to the Asahi, the accident occurred when workers were testing how much power could be generated by the turbine after shutting off the steam from the nuclear reactor that normally drives the generator.

The Soviet report said the emergency core cooling system, an automatic reactor shut-off device and other safety mechanisms were turned off so the experiment could be repeated immediately if it were not successful the first time, according to the Asahi.

During the 4-hour experiment, pressure in the core decreased and air bubbles formed that caused a sudden drop in the flow of cooling water, which in turn led to the sudden rise in the reactor's output, the newspaper quoted from the report.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — U.S. experts trying to account for Americans reported missing in the Vietnam War investigated sites in Hanoi last week containing wreckage of U.S. B-52 bombers, the leader of the U.S. team said on his return here Saturday.

Lt. Col. Joe Harvey, commander of the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center in Honolulu, said the Vietnamese provided new information on missing Americans and a report of their continuing investigations during three days of talks in Hanoi. He declined to elaborate.

Harvey refused to say whether Vietnam would soon repatriate remains of some of the nearly 1,800 U.S. troops and civilians listed as missing from the war.

Harvey said the U.S. team handed over new information on cases of missing Americans and on reports alleging that Americans have been seen in Vietnam since the war. Vietnam had agreed earlier to investigate any rumored sightings and provide written reports.

"They took (the information) and I expect to hear more from them about those live sighting reports in future meetings," Harvey said. The next session of the regularly scheduled talks is planned for October.

Sri Lankan groups meet

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — President Junius Jayewardene met with leaders of a moderate Tamil group Saturday in a new attempt to reach an agreement that would end a three-year-old insurgency that has claimed at least 4,500 lives.

In Trincomalee, 140 miles northeast of Colombo, authorities reported two soldiers were killed by Tamil guerrillas. They gave no details.

Appapillai Amirthlingam, secretary general of the Tamil United Liberation Front, told The Associated Press that Saturday's talks lasted about two hours. He declined to release details.

"It was decided by both sides that public statements at this stage would not be conducive to the negotiations," he said.

Refugees apologize

MONTREAL (AP) — Sri Lankan refugees rescued by Newfoundland fishermen told a false story about the orgin of their voyage because they feared they would be sent back to their island home, a member of the group said Saturday.

"We deeply regret not having been open and forthright at the outset," said Wijayanathan Nalliah, 46, who acted as spokesman for 30 of the refugees at a news conference held by the Eelam Tamil Association of Montreal.

"We were pressured and warned not to divulge our point of departure or to give away those who helped us and any other information related to our voyage," Nalliah said.

Those instructions were given by the captain of the ship that carried 155 Sri Lankans from West Germany to Newfoundland and then set them adrift in two lifeboats. They were rescued Monday.

Aquino warned of possible coup attempt

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A government committee has warned President Corazon Aquino that supporters of ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos may try to regain power during her coming visits to Southeast Asia and the United States, a newspaper said Saturday.

A presidential spokeswoman confirmed that the committee met with Mrs. Aquino on Thursday, but refused to comment further on the report in the Manila Chronicle. She said Mrs. Aquino had not changed her travel plans.

Mrs. Aquino said Wednesday it would be "extremely difficult" for anyone to grab power while she is in Indonesia and Singapore on Aug. 24-27 and the United States on Sept. 15-23.

About 1,000 pro-Marcos politicians meanwhile met at a suburban restaurant Saturday to discuss reviving Marcos' political party, the New Society Movement, and heard speeches asserting anew that Marcos still is the nation's legitimate leader.

The assemblage passed a resolution expressing confidence in the leadership of Arturo Tolentino, a former senator and former foreign minister, and describing him as the country's acting president.

Tolentino gave himself that title during an abortive 38-hour revolt against Mrs. Aquino's government on July 6. He was Marcos' vice presidential running mate in fraud-tainted Feb. 7 elections that gave Marcos a new six-year term weeks before he was overthrown by a military-civilian revolt.

Tolentino and his supporters holed up in the posh Manila Hotel during the revolt. They surrendered peacefully, but he has failed so far to take an oath of loyalty to the Aquino government or to recognize its existence.

On Saturday, Tolentino urged the Marcos followers to begin preparing for elections Mrs. Aquino has said she will call next year.

"It is our obligation to participate in these processes and we must, therefore, prepare ourselves to fully discharge this responsibility," Tolentino said.

But instead of serious discussions on revitalizing the party, speakers devoted five hours to speeches accusing Mrs. Aquino of usurping power and declaring Marcos the legitimate president.

The loyalists adopted resolutions criticizing Mrs. Aquino's promulgation of a temporary constitution, her abolition of the National Assembly dominated by the New Society Movement, and her efforts to make peace with communist rebels.

TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WARNING — (A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

In North Texas, partly cloudy, very warm and humid Sunday through Monday with widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms, mainly eastern portions. Highs Sunday and Monday 94 to 103. Lows Sunday night 71 to 77.

In West Texas, widely scattered mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms west of the Pecos through Monday. Isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms southeast through Monday. Sunny days and fair at night remainder of the area through Monday.

In South Texas, partly cloudy and continued quite warm through Monday with isolated thundershowers north and east. Highs Sunday and Monday near 90 coast, mid 90s to near 100 inland. Lows Sunday night 70s, low 80s immediate coast.

Rain chances diminishing

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders are in store for a sunny day with less than a 20 percent chance of rain tonight, says the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

Today's high will be in the upper 90s with winds at 5 to 10 mph. Tonight will be fair with a low in the lower 70s.

Monday's weather will be a repeat of Sunday's with a high in the upper 90s and a low in the lower 70s.

Saturday's high of 93 degrees was 11 degrees cooler than the record high of 104 set in 1946. The overnight low of 70 degrees was 10 degrees warmer than the record low of 60 degrees set in 1972.

STATE

A large area of scattered thunderstorms and showers developed over East and Southeast Texas Saturday as warm tropical Gulf air moved over sun-baked land.

Isolated thundershowers also popped up along the Davis Mountains in West Texas and near Wichita Falls in North Texas. Skies were partly cloudy over the rest of the state, the National Weather Service reported.

Afternoon temperatures were mainly in the 80s and 90s, with a few 100-degree readings to the south. The 3 p.m. extremes were 83 degrees at Guadalupe Pass and 101 at Brownsville.

NATION

Tropical storm Charley loitered off the South Carolina coast Saturday, while a line of showers and thunderstorms angled across the East and a chance of thunderstorms in the Northwest threatened more forest burning lightning.

The center of Charley moved slightly northward Saturday, but upper level steering currents were weak and the storm was expected to drift erratically into Sunday, while strengthening slowly through the night.

A few showers and thunderstorms from Charley were over the southern coast of North Carolina, but with the majority of the storms' precipitation falling offshore.

A weak weather disturbance caused clouds and a few showers and thunderstorms along a line from eastern New England and Pennsylvania across southern Ohio and sections of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi.

Most of the rainfall was light, but strong thunderstorms developed across parts of Mississippi, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Brown: City 'lucked into' pilot program

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

City Manager Jim Brown says he lit up like a light bulb when a blurb about improving worker productivity flashed across the TV screen.

The blurb — which would eventually lead to names such as the Dirty Ten, People Power and the Kick Butt 10 — was just what he was looking for.

"I just lucked out," admits Brown, the 64-year-old chief of Midland city government.

Brown's luck has turned into an off-the-wall pilot program, a move city officials hope will be a key part on improving their efficiency.

The program focuses on the use of quality circle groups and is planned to urge employees to get more involved with City Hall management.

"I am always looking for a better way to do things," says Brown, "and this may be an idea that works."

The plan has already led to the forming of three quality circle groups and has spurred what officials describe as an improvement in morale and comaradry among city employees.

And, although Brown and several of his key administrators agree it is too early to tell how the program will fare, they say they are optimistic.

"If we can save $400 the first year," says George Logan, director of community development, "and then maybe increase that to $4,000 the second year, it would be a good deal.

"And I personally can see this helping the city solve a problem which might save us $10,000, $50,000 or even $100,000. There's just a lot of potential."

The issue of getting more productivity from city employees surfaced in September during the city's annual retreat, a place where the City Council and city department heads hammer out priorities for the upcoming year.

Priorities for that retreat included improving employee productivity, Brown says.

"There was not a problem with productivity per se," says Brown, noting the city has been involved in similar efforts for years.

"We have a good program, but we did feel like we were not doing as well as we could do."

That thought sparked Brown a month later when he flew to Beaumont for an economic diversification seminar.

He says he was in a conference room at the John Gray Institute — a non-profit group — to listen about ideas for diversification.

The Institute played a videotape outlining all its services, and that's when Brown heard the blurb about employee productivity.

"Right after that meeting, I went around and asked who I would talk to about the idea," he says. That led him to Ron Asbury, the institute's vice-president.

The program was on.

Brown, institute officials and his department heads brainstormed over the next few months and hammered out a plan.

The institute also surveyed more than 700 city employees to find out their perceptions about City Hall brass.

Then, two months ago, the quality circle groups — the main thrust of the productivity plan — were started.

Quality circle groups, commonly used by the private sector, were began in the United States and then improved by companies in Japan.

The city selected three groups from Fleet Services, the Water and Sewer Department and Administrative Services.

Each group, which named itself, is made up of 10 employees. The groups began weekly meetings in June to brainstorm about solutions to city problems.

"There's just so much enthusiasm," says Hank Kirk, director of the Fleet Services. "I can almost feel the fire."

Kirk, whose quality group is called the Dirty Ten, says the method already has increased efficiency in his department.

"It's easy for me to go out in the garage and say we need three jack stands," he said. "But it is a lot more important if the employees have the opportunity to make that suggestion. It makes them more a part of the organization."

Kirk and two other department heads also gave thumbs-up testimonials earlier this week to City Council members.

Bob Campbell of the Water and Sewer Department said he could see a definite improvement in his employees.

"I can just see the perception and attitude change," Campbell told the council members. "It's an amazing revolution. I'm excited to see the growth of that circle.

"Hopefully that same type of attitude change will effect the entire city," he added.

Productivity groups draw on employee skills

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

Tami Brown, a 28-year-old city garage worker, says she likes the idea of belonging to the Dirty Ten.

"It really gives us a chance to help get things done. We get to try and solve issues which we think are wrong."

Ms. Brown, a secretary in the parts department, and nine other city garage employees make up the Dirty Ten, one of three quality circle groups initiated by the city in June.

The quality groups are one part of a plan by the city to improve employee productivity. So far, city officials said they are pleased with the groups.

The group's members were trained in May for the job.

George Logan, the city's director of community development, said officials from the John Gray Institute — a non-profit Beaumont group — showed group members how to effectively deal with problems.

Logan said the group was shown methods of problem-solving such as illustrating solutions with the use of graphs.

They also were told of cause-and-effect relationships.

"That way, when they have a solution, they can present it in a way that management is used to," Logan said.

Three departments are now in the quality circle program.

People Power was formed from the administrative services office and the Kick Butt 10 derived from Water and Sewer.

Four more such groups are on the drawing board for later in the year.

The Dirty Ten meets every Tuesday at 7:30 a.m. to discuss designated problems.

The group members have a round-table talk, trying to find clever ways to save the department money and time.

"We might come into a meeting with 90 ideas," says Ms. Brown, who has worked for the city the past 2½ years. "We then vote for the top 10 choices, and then try to list our No. 1 priority for that week."

Ms. Brown said the ideas are then given to management, who consider the idea.

Although several of the ideas may be rejected, many are adopted.

Ms. Brown said her group's first success story was developing a parts ordering/delivery tracking procedure.

"The mechanics kept coming back to the parts department complaining they would order parts and then would not receive them until six weeks later," Ms. Brown said.

"We started looking at it to find out the causes. Basically, the ways we were keeping records were just shabby.

By ANNTOINETTE MOORE
Staff Writer

Amarillo's nuclear weapons plant — Pantex — saw its first organized civil disobedience action and arrests this year, despite being the site of protests for the last three years.

"The action on Sunday (Aug. 11) was the first time that an open and above board civil defense action occurred at Pantex," said Les Breeding, a protest organizer, during a phone interview from Amarillo.

Although individuals have been arrested in the past for trespassing, this was the first time protesters purposely blocked workers from entering the plant.

"They just sat down and then we loaded them in the car," said Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed in a phone interview from Panhandle.

Seven people were charged with obstructing a public roadway, a class B misdemeanor (maximum penalty 6 months in jail and a $1,000 fine) and spent two nights in jail.

The arrests came at the end of the third annual "Peace Camp," sponsored by the Red River Peace Network, a coalition of peace groups from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico that converged on the Department of Energy's Pantex Nuclear Weapons Assembly Plant, 17 miles northeast of Amarillo.

The plant, which has been in operation since the early 1950s, is the final assembly point for all of America's nuclear weapons.

The Peace Camp marked the week of the 41st anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Three of the protesters — Jimi Clark, Bob Henschen and Charles Perez — had stopped in Midland just a few days before, on their bicycle pilgrimage to Pantex. Five Midland cyclists joined the Houston group for the rest of their journey.

Bicycling across Texas and setting up a camp outside the plant's gates are grassroots ways to communicate concerns about the arms race, protesters said.

"We're not rich and can't afford to go to Washington. It's important for people to have an experience to motivate them. People realize that they are in the presence of the plant where all the nuclear weapons are assembled," Breeding said.

"We can't just protest at Pantex, or protest in Washington or write our senators. All of these things together may make a difference."

However, Dwayne Hubbard, chief of the Pantex administrative branch, has a different view.

"The real decisions are made in Washington. Most people (at the plant) feel 'What are they (the protesters) doing here?' We can't change the thing even if we wanted to.

"They're going to be built somewhere. It might as well be built here — at Pantex," he continued.

"We just do what we're told. We meet schedules. We don't make policy.

"People who work at the plant feel they're just doing a job. They don't think much about what they're doing.

"People here at the plant don't speak out. They come to work, work eight hours and go home."

But Midlander Alan Harbert, who attended the peace camp, disagreed.

By ANNTOINETTE MOORE
Staff Writer

Closing down a military base or weapons plant may be the best thing that could happen to an area's economy, according to economist Lloyd Dumas.

Between 1961 and 1981, 94 military bases were closed in the United States, he said in a telephone interview from Dallas.

"By the Pentagon's own figures" after the bases were closed and put to civilian uses — as college campuses, industrial parks, hospitals, etc. — they generated "50 percent more jobs than before they had been converted."

"There is nothing economically to fear about closing plants or bases," he claimed.

Dumas, a professor of political economy and economics at the University of Texas at Dallas, presented workshops on his theory of "economic conversion" at the "Peace Camp" outside the Pantex nuclear weapons plant and at an Amarillo hotel last week.

Simply put, economic conversion is changing "people and facilities from military-oriented activities to civilian-oriented activities."

Such conversion is needed, he said, because massive military spending is taking needed resources from America's civilian industries.

"The long, 40-year period of heavy military spending (since World War II) is an unprecedented period in U.S. history."

This military buildup has "drained certain critical resources," he continued.

"It's the main reason that the United States can't compete" in domestic and world markets.

"Historically it's the improvements in commercial technology — improvements in the ways of making things — that come from engineers and scientists," Dumas said.

Divorce: While pain comes to end, bitterness lingers

I ran into a friend the other day and, to be brutally honest, he looked like warmed-over death.

"What's the problem?" I asked, quite innocently.

"I think I'm dying," he replied.

"That's not exactly a bulletin for the CBS Evening News," I said. "You look horrible. What happened?"

"I drank beer, wine and champange last night," he sighed.

I paused briefly to gag.

Regaining my composure, I then asked the All-American question:

"Why?"

He responded with a classic answer of his own:

"Because I was celebrating my divorce becoming official."

"That'll do it," I said, unable to fend off a grin.

Divorce is like that. It can be a terribly traumatic ordeal, but for some unknown reason, people usually end up laughing about it.

That's why divorce jokes are so popular.

Men will often say: "My third ex-wife was a real looker but, Lord, she had the personality of a rattlesnake."

Women counter by saying: "My ex-husband had a high-price body to go with his low-rent mind."

We all giggle and try to come up with a better one-liner about our exes.

We really shouldn't do that. Divorce is not a laughing matter. It can cause wounds that take years to heal — if they do at all.

Still, we laugh.

Some so-called experts have suggested the laughter is merely a cover for the hurt and bitterness that is really being felt.

And, when you stop and think about it, there is probably a lot of truth to that.

Best I can tell, the hurt goes away faster than the bitterness.

Hurt is really nothing more than a bruised ego. In effect, a person has said they don't want you around any longer. You simply have been rejected and, while that may hurt for awhile, time will eventually heal the pain.

Bitterness, on the other hand, is a different, a much stronger, form of emotion.

It involves anger.

It is also more direct. You hold a particular person responsible for your pain. The hurt goes away but the bitterness doesn't. It lingers.

I bring all of this up because I overheard a couple of men discussing their exes the other night at a local restaurant. They were ripping the poor women to shreads. The anger being expressed was truly shocking.

Hatred filled the air. It made me terribly uncomfortable.

The incident also got me thinking about the last time I saw my ex.

It was three or four years ago at the wedding of a mutual friend. I was alone and she was with her new husband. When they arrived, I saw her out of the corner of my eye. She noticed me at the same time. We acknowledged each other with a nod and a quick smile.

She looked good. I couldn't help noticing her husband had a receding hairline. I smiled.

Following the ceremony, I went over to say hello. We chatted for about five minutes. It was one of those awkward conversations where you ask a lot of pleasant questions and act overly interested in what the other person is saying but, in the end, nothing of significance is exchanged.

As we parted, we shook hands and wished each other the best.

There was no pain, no anger, no hatred.

There was, however, just a tinge of bitterness.

Maybe those so-called experts know what they are talking about, after all.

It also could have something to do with me getting stuck with the MasterCard bill.

Highway commission members present legislative proposal

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — State legislators have been offered a proposal by two members of the Texas Highway Commission that, according to the proponents, would partially ease the state's budget crunch while assuring funds for highway projects currently going on or are scheduled for the next 10 years.

Highway Commissioner Ray Stoker Jr. of Odessa said he and Commission Chairman Bob Lanier of Houston have both suggested the Legislature increase the state's motor fuel tax five cents a gallon and dedicate the funds raised to the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Should the Legislature decide to do this, Stoker said, the highway department would relinquish any claim to general revenue funds.

"That, coupled with the cent and a quarter (.0125) that will go into the available school fund," said Stoker, "Will amount to a $750 million increase in monies available for state budgeting purposes over the next biennium."

"In other words," Stoker said, "Roughly a fourth of the current (state budget) problem can be solved by doing it that way and it doesn't interfer with any highway department projects which are going on at the present time or which are scheduled for the next 10 years."

The Odessa attorney, named to the highway commission by Gov. Mark White about a year ago, said Lanier's comments were made when he testified the state senate sitting as a committee of the whole and that he, Stoker, made the same proposal during his confirmation hearing in Austin Tuesday.

The proposal, Stoker said, "would put us (THD) on a pay-as-you-go basis. It would afford immediate relief from a state budgeting standpoint too," he stated.

Stoker said highway commissioners have discussed the proposal with several members of the House of Representatives. "Needless to say," he said, "some are in favor of it and some are not."

In effect, if not in actuality, as Stoker sees it, the additional nickel motor fuel tax really would be a user fee. If roads are used, then funds would be generated to build and maintain them, he believes.

The highway department staff, at the direction of commissioners, did a state-by-state study of motor fuel taxes.

Byron C. Blaschke, highway department deputy director for design and construction, in a letter to commissioners dated July 25, said the study showed "Texas is currently ranked No. 41. If the motor fuel tax were raised to 15 cents a gallon," he said. "Texas would move to the No. 15 position."

Lanier, in a recent Houston Chronicle opinion page article said of the proposed nickel a gallon motor fuel tax increase, "One way of looking at it is this really isn't an increase but a replacement of declining 'wellhead' taxes by transferring an approximately equal amount to the pump."

Of a Legislative Budget Board proposal to cut $327 million from the highway department budget, Lanier said, this would result in a "direct loss of 7,750 jobs (spread among the highway department, engineering firms, highway contractors and suppliers). This excludes the multiplier effect," he said.

According to Lanier, loss of jobs in the Houston area alone "would be approximately 2,200, based on present distribution of work, a job loss greater than that threatened at NASA," he stated.

The building of new roads, maintenance of existing roads and rehabilitation of roads whose design lives end, as highway commission members see it, have a direct economic impact on the state.

Lanier cited the San Antonio Northwest Expressway, which made it possible for that city to take advantage of "the opportunity to locate a substantial new industry, Sea World."

Because the highway commission had funds available, he said, it acted quickly to approve the project. "Cars will be rolling on the freeway four years after their (San Antonio representatives) first appearance in front of the commission," he said. "Sea World as broken ground and is bringing 1,500 employees to San Antonio," stated Lanier.

Citing Sea World as "a major tourist attraction," Lanier said estimates indicate it will "bring in an estimated 3,000,000 tourists per year."

In light of the declining oil economy, Stoker said tourism has become an increasingly important source of income to the state and, he said, Texas must have a well-maintained and effective highway system to handle tourist traffic attracted to the state.

PANTEX

"We as individuals are all responsible for our actions, even though we're only carrying out orders. The workers who are building these weapons are just as responsible.

"We as members of the peace community are also guilty. Our tax dollars are funding these weapons," he continued.

"We are responsible for what we're doing even if we don't think about the fruits of our labors.

"As long as (the workers) have a commitment — bear some responsibility — for what they're doing, we're all better off for it.

"There are smart people and people of conscience on both sides of the issue. As long as people do have a strong feeling and do care about what they're doing, then we're all better off."

But it's hard to ignore the economics of a plant such as Pantex, which employees 2,800 people in an area dependent upon the depressed agricultural industry.

According to Jack Speer, Amarillo Chamber of Commerce senior vice president, Pantex makes up about 25 percent of the city's economic base.

"No one likes any kind of a weapon. People in our area of the world recognize that national defense is a high priority and that peace is built on strength, rather than weakness," Speer said.

Pantex workers are "not only a large part of our corporate community, but a very responsible part of our local community."

The employees are "people who think, who pray, who know what life is about. People who are not insensitive to what war is.

"They are filling a legitimate need of the United States of America and doing it in a legitimate way."

Hubbard said "I think they're (Amarillo residents) elated that Pantex is here.

"I think it will be years before that changes. So many individuals have their lives tied up here. Everyone knows someone who works here."

Amarillo Bishop Leroy T. Matthiesen would like to see those ties cut.

In 1981, the bishop issued a call to conscience after the United States decided to assemble the neutron bomb.

AP Laserphoto

Anti-nuclear protesters block the road into the Pantex nuclear weapons plant near Amarillo last Sunday. Jimi Clark, seated at far right, and Charles Perez, next to him, were part of a group of Houston cyclists who pedaled through Midland Aug. 4. They were arrested along with five other protesters and charged with blocking a public roadway.

"I condemned assembling of that bomb, because it is an anti-people bomb. They don't destroy buildings or property, but do destroy people."

"I asked people engaged in construction and assembly of nuclear weapons to consider the moral implications of what they were doing," he said.

Initially there was "a strong negative reaction" to Matthiesen's call, although he did receive letters of support.

He set up the Solidarity Peace Fund in 1983 to aid any Pantex workers who wanted to quit for reasons of conscience but were unable to do so for economic reasons.

So far, two workers have asked for assistance, Matthiesen said. There are perhaps "half a dozen" others who have resigned for moral reasons.

Pantex officials say only one employee has publicly acknowledged quitting for reasons of conscience.

Matthiesen said most employees don't leave because "it is their way of life. It does provide close to 3,000 jobs. Jobs are scarce. We're caught in this trap."

"There are those who do very positively believe in what they're doing. That the United States must be strong — the only way to defend ourselves against aggression."

But "nuclear weapons are a two-way sword," he continued.

"It's coming, inevitably, when we as a church will have to say 'no, morally you can't do this.'"

"I think the church — all the churches, not just Roman Catholics — must make very clear statements" against nuclear weapons.

"That won't make it stop, but it would be the beginning of stopping."

"The real issue is not the nuclear bomb, but the issue of taking innocent lives to defend ourselves."

While Matthiesen is not yet ready to participate in civil disobedience, he supports others who do.

"It is absolutely essential that the issue be kept before us. Perhaps there are better ways to do it. Somebody has to do that.

"Civil disobedience as a last resort is all right. One must be very sure that all channels have been exhausted. I don't advocate breaking the law...but there are higher laws that one must obey."

PLANT

"Those improvements are what have allowed American industry to pay good wages...and yet at the same time produce things so efficiently...that prices are low.

"You need a lot of scientists and engineers working on the problems — making steel, automobiles and television sets better and cheaper."

But "at least 30 percent of the engineers and scientists in the United States have been devoting their time and energy to improving weapons and other military technology."

So a "big piece of U.S. talent is not working on improving technology" in commercial industries.

Thus there aren't as many of these new improved products and American firms aren't able to pay good wages and still hold prices down, he said.

"We can't sell them (the products) overseas the way we used to; we can't sell them here the way we used to. We have to cut back production here and that causes unemployment," he continued.

In 1982, the Japanese, with one-half the population of the United States, graduated about 10 percent more engineers than the U.S. did, according to Dumas. All of these engineers worked in civilian and commercial research.

"We used at least 30 percent of ours for the military. So Japanese industry had at least 50 percent more engineers" than did American industry.

"Fifty percent in modern industrial society — that's too much. That's why American-made products don't sell.

"By becoming obsessed by the idea that piling up more and more weapons makes us safe...we have caused a great deal of trouble in our economy...that in fact is making us less secure, not more secure," he said.

"No nation has remained secure while its economy is deteriorating.

"I do believe we need a strong military, but I don't believe that means building every weapon anyone can dream up."

But what about the technological spinoffs from military research and development, such as the transistor?

"If military research was so crucial to commercial advances, it's hard to understand how a country such as Japan or West Germany is doing so well in civilian technology when they spend so little on the military," Dumas replied.

The American economy has been in a "downhill slide over the last 40 years, especially since the middle '60s. The real income — the purchasing power of Americans — has gone down over the last 11 years.

"This generation is looking at a lower standard of living than their parents," he continued, and their children will have an even lower standard of living.

While many businessmen and economists realize U.S. industries have become very inefficient, they haven't figured out why, he said.

"I'm going that extra step ... the reason that is happening is that we're taking our own scientists — there's an 'internal brain drain' — civilian industries are losing all these people to the military industry," Dumas said.

PILOT

Campbell, whose quality circle group is called the Kick Butt 10, said the results of the meetings have been cleaner trucks and a more positive feeling toward their work.

Brown said productivity can be measured by the number of days employees take for sick leave or do not show up for work.

"If you like your job, you usually want to come to work — you don't want to take the day off."

But he said the whole point of productivity is to get the employee involved. If that happens, the entire city will be better off.

"When employees hear about us trying to improve productivity, the first thing that will come to their mind is they want us to work faster.

"That's not it at all. It just means more efficiently."

The pilot program will be expanded next month when four more quality groups will be formed in the Aviation, Data Processing, Customer Service and Street departments, Logan said.

Next year, another survey will be taken to see if the perceptions of management have improved.

But whatever the outcome, Brown says it is worth the try.

"We are not sure it will work out in the long-run," says Brown, "or whether it will be a flash in the pan.

"We'll just have to wait and see."

GROUPS

"We developed a check-in board, and now the mechanics come to the window and their parts are usually there."

Other cases the Dirty Ten has solved include:

— Through the group, it was determined time was being wasted loading and unloading welding equipment when making service calls. The group suggested using an old Dodge flat wagon for faster service.

— The group determined a great deal of time was being wasted emptying drain pans at the far end of the compound. A mobile drum was suggested. Officials say this saves about eight hours a week.

"Things are just running a lot smoother," said Hank Kirk, Ms. Brown's boss and director of the city's fleet services.

"It's a good idea. If an employee can tell you a better way to put a windshield wiper blade on a vehicle or how to better take a tire off a truck, I am for it.

"After all, who knows the job better than the employees?"

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Jess Parrish represents MC on Legislative Committee

By H.A. TUCK

EDUCATION

Although the State Legislature still was battling over ways to reduce the budget deficit when this was written, Midland College's president Dr. Jess Parrish was in Austin as chairman of the public community college's Legislative Committee. He and other community college presidents were trying to convince lawmakers about the educational bargain which their institutions provide for the state's residents.

While the percentage varies from one community to another, at Midland College about 50 percent of the operating budget is derived from state funding. Local taxes pay about 30 percent of the cost and the remainder comes from tuition, fees, and other sources. When you consider that about half of all undergraduate students and almost 55 percent of all freshman and sophomores in the state are being educated at community colleges, it really is a bargain.

Regardless of the budget, the bargain of education at MC is currently being accepted by large numbers who are signing up for fall classes during the college's pre-registration and early counseling period.

This is the final week of pre-registration. Hours this week are 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The final pre-registration day is Thursday, Aug. 21. During this time, students can visit with counselors about their college plans, future transfers, and required courses. Upon completion of pre-registration, they received time permits that assign them a period to come for official registration.

Official registration is Aug. 26 and 27. Those with time permits will be processed Tuesday and Wednesday, while those who don't pre-register will not be registered until the final two hours on Wednesday evening. Classes will start Sept. 2.

The part about talking with counselors regarding future transfer is very important, not just for first-time freshmen, but for all students. Although state universities are supposed to have identical courses, they get quite picky about some transfer courses. Out-of-state and private universities can be even more peculiar. For instance, one state university in Texas may have a three-hour statistics course, while another may list a four-hour course. There's been some coordination in trying to get courses specified as identical and transferrable, but there still are occasional problems. That's where MC's counselors, who maintain contact with the universities, can be most helpful.

All students who will need financial aid to attend Midland College this fall must visit with financial aid officer Bill Burns and pre-register not later than Thursday, Aug. 21. Burns said this applies to students who will qualify for the Abell-Hanger Foundation Scholarships for 1986 graduates of Midland, Lee, and Greenwood high schools, Pell Grant, local organization scholarships, Veterans' assistance, etc.

Pre-registration also is needed for those who will receive music scholarships to participate in various ensembles this fall.

To avoid waiting, those who will receive financial aid should call 685-4501 to arrange an appointment.

Last week we talked about the college's Adult Basic Education, then noticed an interesting article about an 83-year-old woman in Pennsylvania who had just received her GED. Her inspiration for getting the high school equivalency diploma came from reading about a 90-year-old who had earned her GED! You're never too old to earn a GED or to take classes.

Orientation for those who would like to come to college but are a bit unsure about the procedures or being ready to take classes will be held in Room 134 of the Occupational-/Technical Building and it's free. If possible, you should call 685-4568 Monday or Tuesday morning to pre-register. But that's not absolutely necessary.

Dr. Elizabeth Robinett, a counselor, will explain pre-registration, costs, course offerings, registration, and study tips. A tour of the campus will end the one-hour session.

But credit courses aren't the only educational avenue open in Midland. The college also offers an extensive group of non-credit courses for adults each semester. Bulletins listing the fall courses are available at the college, the Midland County Library, Midland Chamber of Commerce, and all Midland banks.

Among the many courses are such subjects as flyfishing, oil painting, photography, interior decorating, graphology, making Christmas candy, concrete masonry, Spanish, introduction to the stock market, quilting, woodworking, and word processing.

These courses range in length from one evening to 13 weeks. Virtually all of them are offered in the evening at very nominal costs. And if the economic downturn is bothering you, there's even a course on "Preventing, Recognizing, and Coping with Depression" or one on "Exploring Your Career Potential" that includes personal interest testing.

There's been a prolific crop of rabbits on campus this summer, both cottontail and jackrabbit varieties. Totally unafraid of humans, they are guarding the parking lot early in the morning, patrolling the plaza, and nibbling grass on the lawn. Early bird joggers and walkers probably are having to kick them out of the path as they make their way around Chaparral Circle.

A delightful small exhibit of items from China currently fills one wing of the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building. It shows some of the souvenirs collected by the Midlanders who went to establish sister city relationships with Dongying earlier this summer. There are everyday articles, plus some beautiful art works.

Entitled "Marco Polos of Midland," the show closes August 24. Gallery hours this week are from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

UTPB has lower-level guides for transfer students

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The Office of Admissions of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin has available lower-level guide sheets for students who plan to transfer to UTPB after completing 54 hours of course-work.

Specific course requirements and corresponding course numbers are available for students currently attending Odessa and Midland Colleges, Howard College, Western Texas College, South Plains College and New Mexico Junior College.

"Students following the requirements established by the Coordinating Board for Texas Colleges and Universities can be certain that all course-work will transfer," said Vickie Gomez, associate director of admissions.

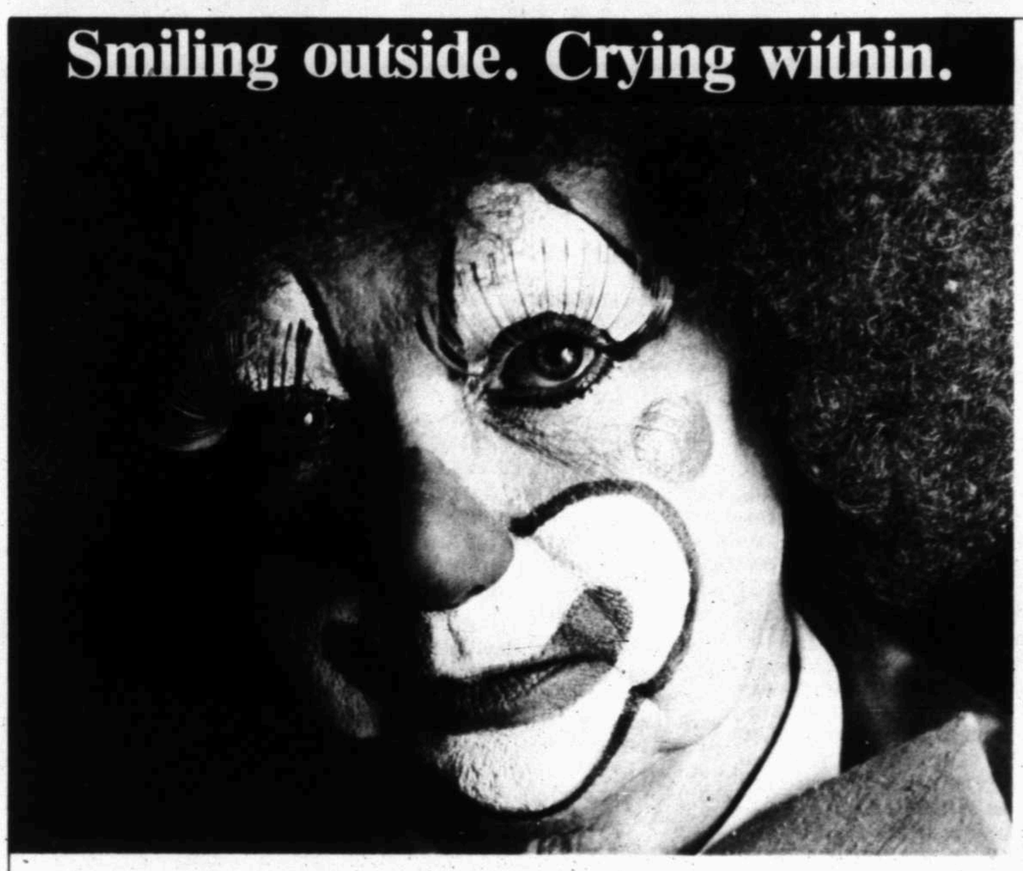

"However, it is often to the student's advantage to follow our list of course recommendations. As an example, the Coordinating Board recommend eight hours of a foreign language, but there is no foreign language requirement at UT Permian," she said.

Area community college counseling departments have been supplies with an advisor's guidebook, Ms. Gomez said.

For information, call 563-2400, extension 2210, or write the Office of Admissions, UTPB, Odessa, Texas, 79762.

Smiling outside. Crying within.

Often we live behind a mask. We hide our feelings, our problems, our emotions deep within ourselves, afraid to let them out. By not honestly dealing with our true emotions, we ultimately suffer. Depression sets in. Relationships flounder. We're robbed of the joys life should bring.

On August 15th, Permian General Hospital established a comprehensive mental health management unit within the hospital offering quality care for emotional disorders on an in and outpatient basis.

Because mental health care is sometimes misunderstood, all patient contacts and treatments are handled in the strictest of confidence. And because our mental health unit is found within the confines of a full-service hospital, the cost for treatment is covered by most hospitalization insurance plans.

Living behind a mask can rob you of the joy and happiness you deserve. Learn to feel the warmth life has to offer.

Good report card

How good a job are Midland schools doing?

That question and a lot more were asked of 530 residents recently and the results were surprisingly refreshing for teachers, administrators and other school officials. The results said, in effect, that the school district personnel are doing an above-average job of educating the young people of the city and that there is a strong base of support locally for schools and for higher education.

In part the July survey, conducted by the University of Texas at Austin Foundations in Educational Administration, indicated that:

★ Nearly half of those surveyed — 48 percent — gave Midland Independent School District a "grade" of A or B in the job it is doing. The same survey, conducted in a 1985 Gallup Poll nationwide, listed that high rating of schools on the national level by only 27 percent of respondents.

★ Principals and other administrators in MISD were rated above average by 59 percent of those surveyed locally.

★ Almost 70 percent of Midland teachers were given a grade of A or B by local residents, compared to the national survey rating of 45 percent.

★ Midlanders overwhelmingly rated a college education as "very important" — 80 percent of the local residents surveyed, compared with 64 percent at the national level.

★ 45 percent of the Midlanders surveyed said the school board represents their opinions "very well" or "satisfactory."

★ A large majority of Midlanders — 79 percent — said they would support a bond issue if additional classrooms were needed.

Of course, not everything gleaned from the survey was particularly positive. Seventy-eight percent of the local respondents listed discipline as a "problem" and the other 28 percent said it was a "serious problem." But over 50 percent of the respondents blamed the discipline problem in the schools on lack of parental guidance.

Another thirty-six percent also said they believe the schools are doing a "poor" job of dealing with the problem of student substance abuse while only 13 percent said they believed the schools were doing "very well" in that regard.

All in all, the survey should help to illuminate for school officials areas in which the district is doing an exceptional job and the ones where it needs to concentrate more effort on improvement.

Even more than that, though, the schools have every right to be pleased with the survey's results because of the outstanding support it underscored from local residents. With that type of widespread support, Midland's school personnel should proceed in the education of Midland youngsters confident in the knowledge that the job they are doing is respected and supported.

Mexico's babies may threaten U.S.

WASHINGTON — Here's an eye-opening proposition: By the turn of the century, the babies of Mexico could be a greater threat to the United States than the nuclear missiles of the Soviet Union.

Jack Anderson

Preposterous as this may seem, a growing number of officials in the Reagan administration are beginning to believe it. And trying to curb this threat might make the president's Star Wars anti-missile defense seem like a piece of cake by comparison.

Why are Mexico's babies so threatening? Because Mexico is groaning under a population explosion that has already stretched the country's resources to the limit. The baby boom threatens the basic stability of a neighbor that hasn't had a serious upheaval in more than half a century.

North America is the only place in the world where a developing nation is next door to a highly industrialized one. Already Mexico's incredible leap in population — and the stagnation of its economy that goes hand in hand with it — has sent hundreds of thousands of Mexicans streaming across our southern border.

It's hardly surprising that the United States is so attractive to Mexicans, nearly 80 percent of whom are under the age of 35. About a million Mexicans enter that country's diminishing labor market each year.

In a secret report on the serious problems facing Mexico, the CIA warned: "Even if Mexico manages to get through (its current austerity programs), it will face a series of persistent, long-run difficulties that will impose still greater strains on the system." Second only to economic stagnation, the report listed "the population, which has doubled in one generation, from 35 to 70 million, (and) will double again in the next generation."

Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid is well aware of the population problem. He recently told us illegal immigration is "a permanent issue. But I emphasize (Mexican) migration is a result of the structural circumstances in the United States and Mexico. The American market requires our manpower in many activities on the southern border, and in other parts of the country — Chicago, for instance."

He added: "Mexico has a very important population growth, although we are acting very firmly in population control, in family planning. But many Mexicans look for better opportunities for work in the American market. And the American market demands this 'Mexican power.'"

Notwithstanding the cheap labor that the "American market demands," the CIA expressed clear alarm over Mexico's population explosion and the illegal immigration. In another secret report, the agency's analysts predict that U.S.-Mexican relations could well be the most prickly of all by the year 2000, because of the migrant problems, pollution and water concerns.

It was in 1972 that President Luis Echeverria Alvarez recognized the population boom as the potential disaster it was and took steps to solve it with a family-planning campaign. At the time, Mexico's population was growing by greater absolute numbers than those of the United States and Canada combined — though at the time it had about one-quarter of their total population. Without a birth-control drive, Mexico's population would reach 132 million by the end of the century, officials estimate.

In a Mexico City interview, budget boss Carlos Salinas de Gortari told us: "In the 1960s, we had the highest birth rate in the world. Today, we have a reasonable rate, which this administration has lowered from 2.5 to 2 percent a year." A decade ago, the birth rate was 3.5 percent; the government's goal is 1 percent by the year 2000.

In the rural areas, the government trains at least one woman as a nurse in each of 13,700 selected communities to dispense family-planning advice and birth-control pills. (Abortions have been illegal since 1931.)

In the urban areas, where the need is greatest, the program has made even more progress, Salinas said. But the size of the problem is truly daunting.

Mexico City, for example, has a population today of more than 17 million, and officials fear it will be double that around the turn of the century if something isn't done. Already, more than 2 million of the city's residents are without running water, and more than 3 million don't have basic sewage facilities. The city produces about 30 million pounds of trash a day, almost half of which is dumped in landfills or left in the open to be picked over by the poorest of the poor.

Another View:

More hornswoggling

Strange amendments occasionally appear in appropriations bills, especially at times when the rush is on to pass the money measures before a deadline.

They are usually aimed at getting some special bonus for a committee member's district or preventing the expenditure of money for a project that has fallen into disfavor.

This week, though, the subcommittee on Commerce, Justice and State adopted a provision having nothing to do with appropriations. The far-afield amendment is legislation agreeing to an interstate compact — a measure that really belongs in the Judiciary Committee.

The reason for this end run is pretty clear. The compact is a controversial one with a major flaw that the Judiciary Committee had spotted and was about to fix.

The pact, between the states of California and Nevada, divides water rights in the Lake Tahoe and Truckee River basins and two adjacent watersheds. Unlike all similar Western water agreements, however, this compact does not expressly protect the rights of the federal government and the Indian tribes in the affected area.

It has therefore been consistently opposed by the departments of Justice and the Interior in the last five administrations, Democratic and Republican.

The rights at stake are substantial, since the compact would greatly reduce the flow of water into Pyramid Lake, which lies entirely within the reservation of the Paiute Indian tribe and is the mainstay of the tribe's economy.

Last month a bipartisan group of former Justice and Interior officials wrote to the Judiciary Committee urging rejection of the compact. "Ratification," they wrote, " ... would be a great disservice and manifest injustice to the Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe of Indians."

The Reagan administration agrees, and the current Interior Department has urged Congress to withhold consent unless language is adopted protecting federal and Indian rights. Before such a proviso could be considered by the full Judiciary Committee, the Appropriations subcommittee intervened.

Seventeen years ago, while the California-Nevada pact was being negotiated, this newspaper characterized the process as "hornswoggling the Indians." Nothing has changed.

Neither the federal government nor the Paiutes were party to the agreement, yet their rights will be severely diminished if it is approved by Congress.

When the full Appropriations Committee meets, members should strike the language approving the compact — which doesn't belong on a money bill in the first place — and let the Judiciary Committee handle the measure in a way that does simple justice to the Indians.

Put Tolstoy away; Labor Day's too close!

WASHINGTON — If you try, you still have time to ruin your summer, with the help of guilt and Tolstoy.

Your average walking-around American thinks he has pretty much atoned for slavery, the Battle of Wounded Knee and Vietnam. The final form of guilt to which Americans are prey flows from this fact: Years ago a professor assigned "War and Peace" and everyone cheated. They read an abridgement. So each summer they take the book to the beach, and then doze off, yet again, many chapters before the battle of Borodino.

George F. Will

That book is too long. Or, what is much the same, August is too short. So shove Tolstoy back on the guilt shelf, up there next to Proust, and pack instead two new novels, "The Great Pretender" by James Atlas and "The Conduct of the Game" by John Hough, Jr. Both are about young men coming of age through different thickets of difficulty.

Atlas' protagonist, Ben, is a Chicagoan, Jewish and of two minds. He wants to match his intellectual father, who knows by heart "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock" and reads "EitherOr" while waiting in supermarket check-out lines. The father is a doctor who resents patients because they distract him from making oboe reeds. "Our house," says Ben, "was like a Bennington dorm."

"These liberal households were tough on kids," Ben says. It is hard to rebel against an environment in which the chains of tyranny involve things like a ban on watching "Amos 'n Andy." When arrested for drunk driving, Ben is tossed in a cell with a black teen-ager who says "My papa's gonna whup my ass." Ben thinks: "Yeah? Mine's going to suggest that my arrest was Kafkaesque." "Kafkaesque" was his father's favorite adjective, until he saw it in Time magazine.

Ben is a pretender as a poet. He aspires to be among the fortunate few who live and feel on a more exalted plane than ordinary people. Alas, he also has an ordinary young man's interests, such as rock 'n' roll, sex, Henry Miller and stuff like that. In his room, listening to Neil Sedaka on WLS, Chicago's Top Forty station, "I was as furtive a citizen behind the Iron Curtain tuning in to the Voice of America. Only it wasn't barbed wire that cut me off from freedom; it was culture." Ben's antic passage through adolescent intellectuality to — you guessed it — a job with Time, Inc., provides ample laughter.

"The Conduct of the Game" is a bittersweet story of a different kind of passage by a different kind of young man. Lee Malcolm has grown to the verge of manhood on Cape Cod. He has no pretensions, has not shown much promise, and has not derived from his blue-collar background any idea that the world makes promises it intends to keep. But one day he has an epiphany, and acquires a vocation.

He is pressed into service as an umpire in a baseball game. In the first inning he quells a dispute. Suddenly he has not just power but authority. It is a game: "Mine to ruin or to make right — the difference between noise and music, between a free-for-all and the pretty game of baseball. I never understood, till that moment, what good umpiring means to the game. Baseball can be thrilling and it can be beautiful — but only if the umpiring is good."

For the words "baseball" and "umpiring," substitute "life" and "rules."

Fifty years ago, during the Depression, literary radicalism celebrated the "proletarian novel." Here we have one. Lee heads for umpiring school as his high-school girl friend — at first disbelieving, then disgusted with him — heads for Bryn Mawr. This is blue-collar fiction: Umpires toil so the stars can shine. Among this fine novel's layers is one celebrating such humble toil.

Author Hough is too gifted to preach, which is why his novel teaches. It teaches arcana of the umpire's craft. (Be stationary and 90 degrees from the throw. Signal an out with the motion of driving a dagger down through a door.) But it also teaches, in an agreeably offhanded way, a difference between games and life.

An athlete's career compresses many of life's phases — youth, apogee, decline — into a short trajectory. Lee quickly passes through aspiration, striving, fulfillment, crisis and disappointment. His crisis concerns an honorable but wrenchingly ironic choice. Lee the umpire — custodian of rules, embodiment of authority — sacrifices his career rather than truckle to baseball authorities.

RUSSELL BAKER

In news game, a Rudman isn't usual enough!

A lot of the news business amounts to rounding up the usual suspects. Suppose, for instance, somebody sort of official issues a paper saying the government should outlaw pornography.

Tame stuff, right? You can always get somebody official to denounce pornography, same as you can always get somebody official to endorse motherhood. As news, it is thin gruel. So the editor shouts, "Round up the usual suspects!"

Russell Baker

You don't have to be Hildy Johnson to know who to nab. Think a moment. To pep up this dim story, you need to get hold of somebody who can be relied on to say that pornography is ruining the country and that drawing and quartering is too good for people who traffic in it.

Then you need somebody who will say that the report's authors are out to stifle freedom of expression and destroy the First Amendment, if not the entire Constitution.

The problem, you see, is to generate some heat in a very cool story.

When the attorney general's Pornography Commission issued its report last month and editors shouted "Round up the usual suspects," who do you think the reporters rounded up?

Right you are: the Rev. Jerry Falwell and Christie Hefner, daughter of Hugh the Founder. (Of the Playboy empire, that is.) A TV station also rounded up Linda Marciano, aka Linda Lovelace, who starred in the highly successful pornographic film "Deep Throat."

She has since converted to feminism, proclaimed herself a victim of pornographers and is occasionally rounded up among the usual suspects needed to improve stories with a sex angle. Putting her in the same camp with Falwell on the pornography issue improved that day's news considerably.

The chief usual suspect rounded up for economics stories these days is Alan Greenspan. Another biggie is Henry Kaufman. Both are economists. Greenspan once served at the White House; Kaufman works in Wall Street.

Reporters have ways of making the usual suspects talk, of course, but Kaufman is harder to break than Greenspan.

Rounded up at the drop of a Treasury statistic, Greenspan cheerfully spills the interpretive and forecasting beans all over the TV networks. Kaufman will sing now and then for the boys in the print squad, but clams up when the television division tries to grill him on camera.

Usual suspects rounded up for economics stories are not as predictable as those rounded up for sex stories. They are needed to say that the latest important economic statistic is either good news or bad news. It doesn't matter which.

If, however, they start saying the latest important economic statistic isn't important at all, they are quickly dropped from the usual-suspects list and can no longer get rounded up. A statistic is dull enough without having usual suspects saying, "What's more, it's not very important either."

So far we have discussed only specialized usual suspects, and for good reason. It is a field that lends itself to specialists.

Carl Hubbell, for example. He pitched for the New York Giants in the 1930s and in that era established a famous strikeout record in an All-Star Game. Today, more than 50 years later, he is the only usual suspect rounded up after every baseball All-Star Game in which there were a lot of strikeouts. He is perhaps the most specialized usual suspect in the news industry.

By contrast, consider Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, who is fast becoming the all-purpose Washington usual suspect. It often seems nothing can happen in Washington without having the reporters round up poor Gramm.

His is the name that graces the front end of the famous Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act, and what with being rounded up first to declare this the greatest governmental idea since Social Security, then to expound on various aspects of constitutional law, political science and human nature, Gramm seems to be in constant news custody.

Why, you wonder, doesn't he get a writ of habeas corpus to free himself from this incessant interrogation under the TV lights' merciless glare? People ask, "Can't the press content itself with rounding up Rudman or Hollings now and then so poor Gramm can have a few days off?"

It doesn't work that way, kiddies. There's no explaining why. It just doesn't. When the editor says, "Round up the usual suspects," skilled reporters bring in Gramm. Anybody who rounded up Rudman would probably be fired.

Nobody can explain it, but Rudman is simply not usual-suspect material. Some people have "usual suspect" written all over them, some don't. You wouldn't catch me rounding up Rudman, not even if Gramm weren't always standing right there with hands up, demanding to be taken down to headquarters.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 17, 1807, Robert Fulton's North River Steam Boat (later known as the Clermont) began chugging its way up New York's Hudson River toward Albany. The 150-mile trip to Albany took 32 hours, the return trip 30. "Fulton's Folly," as it had been called, was proven a success.

On this date:

In 1590, John White, who had led the second expedition of English settlers to Roanoke Island, returned from a trip to England to discover that everyone had vanished.

In 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Canadian Prime Minister William Mackenzie King met in Ogdensburg, N.Y., and agreed to set up a joint defense commission.

In 1943, Allied forces gained complete control of Sicily.

In 1948, Alger Hiss denied ever being a Communist agent in testimony to the House Un-American Activities Committee.

In 1978, the first successful trans-Atlantic balloon flight was completed when Maxie Anderson, Ben Abruzzo and Larry Newman landed their Double Eagle II in a wheat field outside Paris.

Ten years ago: A devastating earthquake and tidal wave struck the southern Philippine island of Mindanao, claiming more than 8,000 lives.

'Make My Day' laws not best answer to problem

Clint Eastwood obviously captured the frustration of the American people in regard to violent crime with his "Dirty Harry" performances.

Harry (pardon my informality, but I saw the movies and don't think he would mind) got the job done even when the system failed by doing an end-run around law-and-order and kicking civil rights in the posterior. He delivered what many Americans perceived as the justice the country's courts were failing to provide because of flip-flopping Supreme Court decisions, the seemingly endless appeals process and so forth.

But good entertainment, which is what Clint was providing, doesn't necessarily translate into real-life justice off the silver screen.

Some states wanted to be able to fashion an all-inclusive law that would balance defendants' rights with those of the accused. It's unfortunate that a number of states — including California and Colorado — misinterpeted the wave of enthusiasm for Harry Callahan's heavy-handed, vigilante-style justice. I have to admit, it's fun to watch the "good guys" win once in awhile after watching them lose so frequently in the form of quirks in the law that free hardened criminals from prison or legal manuevering that keeps death sentences from being carried out for years.

So, it's easy to understand why states would attempt to fashion laws that would let law-abiding citizens have a chance against criminals. Thus came the infamous "Your Home is Your Castle" laws, better known in some states as "Make My Day" laws. That last title is taken from Eastwood's memorable "Go ahead, punk. Make my day" line from the Dirty Harry series.

But the laws, which seek to relieve people of criminal or civil liability for protecting themselves in confrontational situations with others suspected of criminal activity aren't the best response to a very dangerous dilemma and can actually create more problems than they solve.

In Colorado, for example, a man recently shot three individuals, killing one of them, because of a disturbance outside his home. He was freed from criminal and civil liability because that state has enacted a "Make My Day" law giving homeowners the right to protect themselves from assaults if they fear a crime has or will be committed and believe even the slightest degree of harm may come to them.

That's the wrong way to address the problem. Don't give innocent people guns and tell them to shoot to kill at the first provocation. All that means is a number of innocent people will be hurt or killed because of a hip-shot approach to a matter that reasonably should be addressed only within the confines of the justice system.

What are grand juries and prosecutors supposed to do if not determine whether there is enough evidence that a crime has been committed to take a case to court? If not, don't let it proceed any further than the grand jury stage. If the case obviously involves an innocent individual defending himself against an aggressive attacker, why not let the grand jury decide whether to forward the case to a pettit jury for a decision?

I agree that there's always a possibility, however remote, that an innocent person will be convicted of a crime when he was actually only protecting himself, but that's still safer than having a bunch of gun-toting people shooting at the first thing that moves in their neighborhoods.

Society has to have faith in prosecutors, judges and the judicial system in general. The problem is getting the judicial system to be effective in dealing with crime. If that can be accomplished, the problem will be resolved, innocent people attempting to protect themselves from criminals will find true justice in the system and "Make My Day" laws with all their inherent dangers no longer will be necessary.

SPEAKING OUT

Better yourself by serving others

By ALICE BROWN

Alice Brown, a resident of Midland for four years, is volunteer coordinator of Casa de Amigos.

Altruism has always been a major motivating force for voluntarism. But there are many other valid and practical reasons that people volunteer. In fact, surveys show that the main reason individuals in the '80s volunteer is to enhance their own value in the marketplace. Today's volunteers want to improve on or learn new job skills, explore potential career changes, enhance the appearance of their resumes, keep their morales high during periods of unemployment, and exemplify a productive life in the community. To desire to better oneself while serving others is wisdom, not selfishness.

Midland is now beset with a high unemployment rate due to the economic slump. Individuals and families are making choices about their futures. Many are seeking new employment but are faced with the reality of time on their hands due to unemployment.

However, a period of unemployment can be a very productive time if individuals choose to volunteer while they are without work. When asked the often dreaded question, "And what do you do?" the volunteer can answer, "I'm tutoring a public school child. I'm doing something positive to see that this child isn't going to be a school dropout six or seven years from now." Or perhaps the person can answer, "I don't have a job right now, but I'm grateful that I have my health and my family. I'm sharing my life and my time with a critically ill person." The variations on the answers a volunteer can give to that often asked question are infinite.

The paralyzing part of unemployment is the creeping deterioration of a sense of self worth. Depression follows, making it harder and harder to go on job interviews. One's chosen work is a mirror of what one thinks of himself and the person he wants to be. Volunteer work gives each the opportunity to choose exactly the job desired and offers a different citeria for establishing self worth.

Midland agencies have changed to accomodate the new trends in voluntarism. First, the prospective volunteer can look through a manual of volunteer job descriptions that tell exactly what job skills and other benefits can be derived from each volunteer position. The volunteer can pick the position that best benefits him. Public exposure and the possibility of making contacts that might lead to a job are benefits that can be openly acknowledged by the volunteer and the agency. The volunteer can specify the training he desires to receive and find a corresponding volunteer position that offers such training as a benefit.

The potential volunteer can specify the particular time span in which he wishes to volunteer. Volunteer jobs have a definite beginning and end. The volunteer doesn't have to feel guilty for not continuing in a particular position forever. If one expects to be available for only a short time, volunteer positions of short duration abound. Also, the volunteer can state that he needs to be free to go on job interviews if they are scheduled at the same time for which he has volunteered. Agencies can recommend flexible positions in such instances.

When a volunteer job is completed, the volunteer can receive a letter of exit to place in a portfolio or use the place as a reference. Increasingly, employers are finding that faithful volunteers make faithful employees. People willing to give themselves to help others in their community are often those who make well-balanced employees.

"That approach seems so self-serving," a volunteer asked recently. Is it self-serving when the quality of services offered to Midland is improved by taking into consideration that volunteers are human beings with needs, goals, and dreams to be fulfilled also? If so, then the answer is yes, it is self-serving. But, as the quality of voluntarism is improved through recognizing that the volunteer has needs to be fulfilled as well as fulfilling the needs of those being served, everyone benefits.

"How can I find out about the positions available for volunteers in Midland?" I am asked by newcomers. Local agencies cooperate. If one agency cannot provide the type of job experience desired, another can. In the future Midland will have a volunteer center, a clearinghouse for all the agencies where anyone can look through books of job descriptions from all types of non-profit organizations in Midland and watch videos of the agencies before deciding which ones to visit about volunteering. Until that time, Midland agencies are referring volunteers to one another.

Whether employed or unemployed, the individual can grow personally while helping others as a volunteer. The demands upon social service agencies in Midland has never been greater. You can help Midland's economy and morale by volunteering.

Texas needs big dose of 'high tech' ideas

California gave free university educations to their people for many years so that they now have a workforce able to get $1 out of every $8 of all the federal taxes paid by all the 50 states. Even in the Great Depression, they began investing in "high tech" research. Texas talks high tech and space industry, but we remain far behind in comparison with California.

Voices in the Texas Legislature threaten to condemn Texas to drop out of the race totally by shutting down the research institutes of our state universities, including the world-renowned McDonald Observatory. Astronomy is the window to the space around us. Our observatory has brought millions of federal dollars to Texas, not to mention its major achievements in space sciences.

Texas research programs, in competition to draw scientists and investments into our state, have not yet recovered from the truly shocking recommendation of the Legislative Budget Board two years ago that higher education be cut back 25 percent! Some of our leading scientists offered to leave Texas at the time, and new people have been measurably harder to attract to Texas.

We might joke that the Texas Legislature was infiltrated with agents from California who were deliberately sabotaging our efforts to catch up. The truth is, if Texas had enemies, they could not have found a more devastating way to embarrass us worldwide in scientific circles or to block our future progress than the proposal to shut down the research institutes!

Why bother with the increased taxes we agreed to pay for better public school education if we are not going to follow up with investment at the university level? The factory jobs that high school graduates can do are already going to places like Mexico where the skilled workers are glad to get something better than the basic $3.44 per day wages.

The proposals to shut down research are not frivolous. They are not mere politics. At a time when we are trying to prepare our youth and our economy for the 21st century, these proposals are a deadly, long-lasting poison in the environment of Texas higher education.

Pantex protesters carry peace message

On August 10, seven protesters were arrested while blocking the road leading to the main gate of the Pantex plant near Amarillo. The event was noted briefly in this paper on the following day. The purpose of my letter is to clarify the motives of those who were arrested and the circumstances surrounding their arrest.

The Pantex plant is the final assembly point for all nuclear weapons produced in the United States. Protesters of the Pantex plant believe that the production and deployment of nuclear weapons constitute a threat to the continued existence of humanity and all other forms of life on this earth. It is our responsibility as citizens of the United States and members of the larger world community to stop this escalating spiral toward global destruction.

The demonstration leading to the arrests was peaceful and nonviolent. Organizers of the protest met with law enforcement officials, including Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed, well in advance of the action. Discussions between both parties were friendly and open, with little room for misunderstanding. Just prior to making the actual arrests, Sheriff Reed told the demonstrators he recognized them as being peace-loving individuals following their consciences, and he respected their convictions. The demonstrators cooperated fully with Sheriff Reed and his deputies, and there was a general feeling of harmony and trust among all who were present.

The seven protesters allowed themselves to be arrested in order to bring their message before the court and public. If found guilty, they each face a fine of $1,000 and up to six months in prison. We must remember that these people are not common criminals out for personal gain. Instead, they are relatively anonymous individuals willing to make long-term sacrifices so that we may all live in a world free of nuclear nightmares. I pray that more of us will listen to their message and do what we can to bring peace to our world.

Dettman's remarks distasteful, appalling

This is in response to Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman's comments in August 6 edition of The Reporter-Telegram. I found his remarks regarding illegal aliens distasteful, appalling and unbecoming our county's leading law enforcement officer. He is supposed to deal with facts and not inaccuracies, supposition and innuendo.

According to Dettman, one out of every three illegal aliens is guilty of 10 percent of our county's misdemeanor crimes. It is amazing how Dettman arrives at such a statistic when even the INS is uncertain as to the number of illegal aliens residing in our country. Words such as "I think," "I assume," and "in most cases" increase my suspicion that Dettman has little hard evidence to back up his remarks. By stereotyping the majority of illegal suspects as drunks, dope addicts, thieves, and weapon-carrying criminals, he disparages the character of all Hispanics. Exactly what percentage of these incidents are composed of the above mentioned crimes? Illegal aliens have already been blamed for unemployment. Is this another effort to use illegal aliens as scapegoats for the increased criminal activity in Midland? What's next? Are the illegal aliens going to be responsible for our drought problems?

Dettman's comments convey negative racial overtones. He agrees with tactics which seem somewhat similar to those used by the Germans against the Jewish people. He supports the sting tactics with his assumption that since these individuals cross the border illegally, they have no respect for our laws. I suggest that for the most part these are hard working honest people seeing an opportunity for a better life. To some, a somewhat similar situation to that of the pilgrims leaving England and settling in American Indian territory.

The publicity seeking sting operation is not the solution to the problem. Building a stronger Mexican economy and securing our borders with an ally guarantees not only our society but a better life for our very close neighbor.

I commend Assistant D.A. David Rosado and Sheriff Gary Painter for having sense enough to be truthful and admit that they didn't know enough about the issue to discuss it logically.

Look at Midlanders before choosing chief

As well known throughout the area, the city council will be appointing a new police chief for the city of Midland. This appointment will be made from recommendations given to them from Jensen & Oldani Associates, a survey company out of Belleview, Wash.

Although I'm sure this survey will produce well qualified applicants, I feel the survey is not needed. There are many qualified applicants right here in Midland to fill the vacancy. For example, Robert W. Peetz is one of these persons. Peetz is currently the Coordinator of the Criminal Justice Program at Midland College. He is also employed on a part-time basis with the Midland County Attorney's Office. He holds bachelor and master degrees in Criminal Justice, is a graduate of the National FBI Academy, and has attended many post graduate studies and seminars. Peetz has spent over 14 years in law enforcement, has earned his advanced and instructors certification from Texas, and has earned hundreds of law enforcement training hours.

He has served as a captain in the United States Army and is currently a member of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the FBI National Academy Association, and the Community College Criminal Educators of Texas. Peetz has also been involved with many local community activites such as Septemberfest, Christmas in April, and the Midland Rape Crisis Center.

As anyone can see, Robert Peetz is well qualified for the chief's position. Come on Midland, let's utilize what Midland has to offer before we start looking elsewhere.

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

SAN SIMEON — President Reagan disclosed that nearly all black leaders in South Africa oppose economic sanctions, a view he strongly shares, and said he embraced a suggestion by the South African government that the Western powers, including the U.S., review the problems of apartheid in the hope that many could be dismantled.

The president declared that Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, head of the Zulus, the largest tribe in South Africa, and Bishop Issac Mokoena, spiritual leader of 4.5 million South Africans, vigorously oppose sanctions as a method of compelling the goverment to terminate apartheid.

But despite the president's views, and those of the majority of black leaders within South Africa, the Senate voted in favor of sanctions, a move President Reagan has already said he would veto. The vote came on Friday, just at my deadline.

The African National Congress, most militant in favor of sanctions against South Africa, has a bigger mouth than clout. President Reagan said at his news conference last Tuesday that communist infiltrators had managed to move into the African National Congress (ANC) and were having signals called for them from Moscow.

The president's views about sanctions dominated his wide-ranging press conference after a hectic day during which he campaigned for Republican candidates and promised support for the nation's hard pressed farmers.

The president explained tactfully to a badgering questioner why grain was sold cheaply to the U.S.S.R. and Secretary of State George Shultz had originally opposed the transaction.

Reagan said that when Secretary Shultz learned about the details —about which he had no opportunity to do before the deal — he approved.

President Reagan pointed out that this sale was intended to help American farmers and the price the Russians were paying was agreed upon as a one-shot sale for four million metric tons of wheat. If the Soviets want to purchase additional wheat, they will have to pay a higher price. There was no subsidy involved for the U.S.S.R.

On a promising note, he said he was "optimistic" for a summit meeting later this year with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. Coincidentially, it was announced in Moscow that the U.S.-Soviet arms talks that ended there would be resumed in Washington within a month, as part of further preparations for the mid-September meeting between Secretary of State Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Undoubtedly, the question of South African sanctions will arise at the meeting between Secretary Shultz and Foreign Minister Shevardnadze, since the Soviets and their puppets in South Africa have endorsed that acion.

But President Reagan has endorsed a call from South Africa President P.W. Botha for a parley with his government and Western leaders from Great Brtain, France, West Germany and America. He expressed hope that the heads of those governments would participate.

British Prime Minister Mrs. Margaret Thatcher has been a staunch supporter of President Reagan in opposing sanctions for which she has drawn critical fire at home and from many British Commonwealth members.

A leading Commonwealth critic of Mrs. Thatcher on sanctions has been India's Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. The Indian leader, however, consistently ignores the fact that India itself is the largest practioner of apartheid in the world — with millions of untouchables doomed to the lowest rung in society and only a tiny handful able to surface to a better life from time to time.

In South Africa, President P.W. Botha is currently pushing for a form of power-sharing with protection for minority groups. President Botha, who has been gradually making concessions which also produce strong opposition from many white South Africans, wants to shrug off pressures at home and abroad to free jailed black nationalist Nelson Mandela and also legalize the African National Congress.

"Granting concessions under conditions bordering on blackmail merely encourages a stronger party to raise its demands," President Botha told a rare national convention of his political party.

His statement is historically accurate, based on the consideration of what happened only a short time ago to the nation of Czechoslovakia when Adolf Hitler made a demand and said he would not make any others. But Hitler followed that up fast by seizing all Czechoslovakia.

At just about the same time, the Soviet Union made demands on the little Baltic Republics which conceeded and today have been totally absorbed by the U.S.S.R.

Both Chief Buthelezi and his vast Zulu tribe of traditional warriors and Bishop Mokoena, seeking to guide millions of their followers, repeatedly warn that sanctions inflict punishing hunger and degredation on blacks. These leaders have many more followers than Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu, who may be altruistic but spends a good deal of his time out of South Africa traveling throughout the world.

Understandably American blacks are upset by the injustice of apartheid and would like to see strong action taken against it.

An anti-famine group funded by British and American organizations warns also that sanctions may well cause an enormous increase in infant mortality because supplies and necessary medical equipment will be sparse and frequently impossible to obtain.

President Botha has asserted that sanctions would compel South Africa to take counter-measures and in his words "we will survive them and emerge stronger."

But it would be far better if some sound beginning toward power sharing could start with the abolition of apartheid as the goal.

HOW THEY VOTED

House narrowly challenges U.S. chemical weapons policy

Hearst Washington Bureau

KEY HOUSE VOTES

House challenges administration policy on chemical weapons. The House, by a one-vote margin, voted to delay production of new chemical weapons until Oct. 1, 1987, and to prohibit the withdrawal of existing chemical weapons from Europe unless they will be replaced with the new ones. The amendment, adopted 210-209 Aug. 13, was attached to the fiscal 1987 Defense Department authorization bill.

The vote was the second recent indication fo Congress' ambivalence over chemical weapons. Last week, the Senate, by one vote — that of Vice President George Bush — approved production of new chemcial weaponsm nichnamed the "Bigeye" bomb. A House-Senate conference will have to choose one position or find a compromise.

The United States has not produced chemical weapons since 1969, and the old stockpile, based in Europe, is dangerous, even in storage. President Reagan has agreed with West Germany to withdraw existing chemcial weapons from Europe by 1992, and to install the new chemical weapons in the United States.

Those urging the delay in producing new chemical weapons cited 26 years of development that had failed. Rep John Porter, R-Ill., argued "(T)he Bigeye bomb is a disaster. The General Accounting Office says so. (The Bigeye) ought to have more time to have developed and this amendment gives it that time." Proponents of the delay also contended that the chemical weapons would not be deployed in Europe.

Opponents of the amendment argued that, for President Reagan to continue to push for the long-term U.S. goal of banning chemical weapons, the United States needed a credible deterrent against Soviet chemical weapons. Minority Leader Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., stressed, "The harsh reality of our time is that the Soviet Union has a substantial chemcial warfare capability and has used it against defenseless people in Afghanistan." The amendment's opponents also stated that charges of Bigeye's failures were based on old data and that additional testing would show that the weapon works.

Voting to delay production of chemical weapons:

Rep Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio

Reps. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt; Larry Combest, R-Lubbock; Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford; Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo.

House slashes president's "Star Wars" program. With most Democrats and enough Republicans voting in favor, the House Aug. 12 took an even bigger swipe out of President Reagan's strategic defense initiative (SDI) or "star wars" program, than its Armed Services Committee recommended. By 239-176, the House cut SDI research and development to $3.1 billion from the $5.5 billion requested by the president and th $3.9 billion proposed by the committee.

The cut in he anti-missile defense system came as an amendment to the authorization bill containing spending recommendations fo the Defense Department for fiscal 1987. The Senate approved $3.9 billion for SDI research and development when it considered the Defense Department authorization bill last week, and the divergent amounts will need to be reconciled in a House-Senate conference.

Proponents of the SDI cut portrayed the additoinal $800 million reductoin as a necessary step for reaching a moderate level of spending in the House-Senate conference. "We are not trying to stop the program," said Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Mich. "We will be in a good position in conference; we are at ($3.1 billion); the Senate is at ($3.9 billion); we will end up probably at ($3.5 billion). That is a major increase in the SDI program."

Opponents of the amendment insisted that a vote to decrease SDI funds any further was a vote against the president as the architect of U.S. foreign policy. "The difference between what the committee has reported and what the...amendment would allow is something more than dollars," argued Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill. "It is the difference between continuing to move forward and starting to go backward."

Voting to cut SDI spending:

Reps. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt; Larry Combest, R-Lubbock; Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo.

House moves to derail Reagan's decision to abandon SALT II treaty. In response to a majority of its members' desire for continued U.S. adherence to the U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II), the House Aug. 12 voted 225-186 to prohibit the president from deploying weapons that would violate the treaty's limits. The vote came on an amendment to the fiscal 1987 Defense Department authorization bill.

Although the 1979 SALT II treaty was never ratified, both nations have for the most part abided by its guidelines. On May 27, 1986, President Reagan announced the administration's intent to exceed the SALT II limits later this year by equipping more B-52 bombers than asllowed under the treaty with long-range nuclear cruise missiles. The president said he was basing his decision on Soviet violations of the treaty and the Soviets' failure to make major concession in nuclear arms reduction talks.

VOTED

Supporters of the amendment pointed out the benefits that the United States had received by adhering to SALT II. They said that the Soviets had dismantled 500 launchers, or a total of 1,300 launcherss if those dismantled after the 1972 SALT I treaty were included.

Disgruntled by what they considered an infringement on the president's authority to conduct foreign policy, critics of the amendment accused its proponents of weakening the president's diplomacy. Hard-liners on Soviet policy contended that the time had come to show Soviet leaders that future arms agreement violations would be met with reciprocal U.S. actions.

Voting to force the president to continue complying with SALT II:

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio

Reps. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt; Larry Combest, R-Lubbock; Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford; Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo.

KEY SENATE VOTES

Senate moves to limit PAC influence in congressional campaigns. Taking care of some unifinished business from last year, the Senate Aug. 12 voted 69-30 to limit how much money congressional candidates can take from political action committees (PACs). The Senate, not wanting to decide on the touchy political issue of "special-ionteresdt" campaign contributions funneled though PACs, delayed the vote from December 1985.

The limit, attached as an amendment to an unrelated bill dealing with low-level radioactive waste, gave senators the opportunity to vote against special-interest contributions by business, labor, and ideological groups without fully committing themselves. The radioactive waste bill still must pass the Senate and might be voted down with the amendment in tow.

There are no restrictions now on how much money a congressional candidate can accept from PACs and proponents of the limit estimated that nearly a third of Congress received over 50 percent of its contributions from PACs in the 1984 election. The Senate voted to limit PAC receipts by House candidates to $100,000 and by Senate candidates to $175,000 to $750,000, depending on their state's population. The Senate also lowered the allowable size of a PAc contribution to $3,000 per election from $5,000.

Limiting PAC contributions now, supporters of the restrictions argued, is hte only way to stop the trend of skyrocketing campaign costs. They also charged that the rising influence of PAC funds in campaigns had increased voter discontent.

A PAC is merely a group of people who pool their money to support a candidate, opponents countered, and is no more a special interest than an individual who contributes to a campaign. Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa, said that, while the size of a contribution of a PAC or individial may make to a campaign has stayed the same since 1974, the costs of campaigning, such as postage, media advertising and consultants, have increased.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Senate approves Contra aid. After an intensely partisan and heated debate in the Senate, President Reagan scored a victory Aug. 13 when the Senate approved his request for $100 million in aid to the guerrillas — better known as Contras — who are battling to overthrow the government of Nicaragua. The contra aid, which was attached to the fiscal 1987 military construction appropriations bill, was approved by a vote of 53-47.

The contra money includes $70 million for military aid and $30 million for non-military supplies to the contras. The military aid would be the first that Congress has approved for the rebels since 1984. The aid package is identical to the one passed by the House in June.

Playing down any parallels between Vietnam and Nicaragua, supporters of contra aid stressed that the package was carefully crafted to impose limits on direct U.S. involvement in Nicaragua. Proponents argued that the first step toward a military escalation in Nicaragua is the abandonment of the contras.

Contra aid opponents argued that approving the $100 million would pave the way for future military aid, and that the eventual cost of ousting the Nicaraguan government could be billions of dollars and thousands of men. Critics pointed to the administration's use of military advisers and trainers for the contras as an indication of its intention to fight a full-scale war against Nicaragua.

Voting to approve contra aid:

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas; Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

PUC sees decline in power use

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texans will use less electricity during the next 10 years because of a slowdown in the state's economy from the boom days of the 1970s, says a report by the Texas Public Utility Commission.

The biennial report, requested by the Legislature to get a better picture of Texas' future power needs, estimates a 3.2 percent average annual increase in statewide demand for electricity from 1985 to 1995.

Two years ago, the PUC staff estimated a 4 percent annual increase in electricity demands for a 10-year period. From 1975 to 1985, when energy prices boomed, demand for electricity grew at 5 percent per year. From 1950 to 1970, electricity demands in Texas increased at an annual rate of 10 percent.

"The further reduction in electric peak demand growth rates expected for the next 10 years largely reflects an anticipated slowdown in the state's economy from the dramatic expansion demonstrated in the 1970s," the report says.

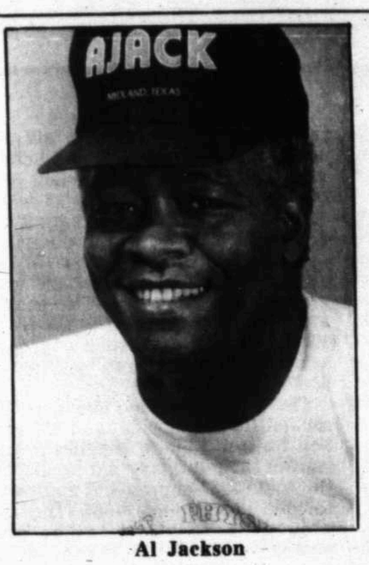

The PUC staff based its figures on a study of 11 of the state's largest utilities, including Texas Utilities Electric Company, the parent company of Texas Electric Service Co.

Customers of TESCO will increase their demand for electricity at an annual average rate of 3.33 percent during the next 10 years, the report says.

The report says electricity demand forecasts by the PUC staff and the major utilities are similar, but it said utilities need to place more emphasis on conservation and "load management strategies" to meet the anticipated demand for electricity. Load management is a technique used to level out demand for power so that peak demand does not climb so high.

On the supply side, the report says cogeneration and interregional purchased power are viable options for meeting future electricity demands. Interregional purchased power involves contracts between utility companies to buy electricity from one another.

The report also says the uncertain status of the South Texas and Comanche Peak nuclear power plants continues to be "one of the major uncertainties in capacity planning for the state."

Raiders drop Pokes to 0-3

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback Marc Wilson, burned on his first throw Saturday night, came back to fire a 60-yard touchdown pass to Rod Barksdale to help the Los Angeles Raiders defeat the Dallas Cowboys 24-19.

The Raiders, 1-1 this summer, trailed 10-7 when Wilson hit Barksdale, a second-year wide receiver who spent all of 1985 on the injured reserve list. The play came with 6:01 remaining in the third quarter and put Los Angeles ahead to stay.

Wilson, listed as the Raiders' starting quarterback, played most of the third quarter and completed three of his five passes for 101 yards.

Jim Plunkett called signals for Los Angeles in the first half and completed seven of 15 passes for 99 yards.

The Cowboys, 0-3 in the preseason, had taken their 10-7 lead early in the third period when an interception by linebacker Steve DeOssie set up their first touchdown in 17 quarters dating back to last season.

Oilers' little man wants his chance

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It's Allen Pinkett, Notre Dame's all-time leading rusher and now a Houston Oiler.

But with the recent success of such trial-sized athletes as Lionel James (5-6), Spud Webb (5-7) and Texas Tech's Tyrone Thurman (5-3), Pinkett can stand tall as he enters the National Football League.

The Oilers were searching through the forest in the NFL draft last April and found a shiny oak they liked in the third round. And now he's ready to challenge the trees for breathing room.

Pinkett, all 5-9, 180 pounds of him, expects to make a niche for himself in the Houston backfield, special team units, passing situations or wherever coach Jerry Glanville can find a spot for him.

"There's a lot of athletic ability in that little body," Glanville says.

PINKETT PROVED himself for four long seasons under Gerry Faust at Notre Dame, rushing for 4,131 yards and 53 touchdowns for the Green and Gold of the Fighting Irish. He is also the sixth leading receiver in Notre Dame history with 73 career receptions.

And despite his undersized physique, Pinkett never missed a game to injury.

"I just run scared, it helps my quickness because I don't want to get beat on," Pinkett says. "Really, I credit my conditioning. In 14 years of football the only injury I've ever had was a slight shoulder separation (in high school). I lift weights avidly and that conditioning helps me withstand the hits."

And the hits he felt week-in and week-out were from college football's elite, the Alabamas, Penn States, Michigans and

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The struggling Midland Angels needed something good to happen and Mike Liddle provided the good news Saturday night at Angel Stadium with a two-out, bottom of the ninth single to score Kevin King from first base as Midland opened its final five home games of the season with a 6-5 win over Beaumont's Golden Gators.

King singled with one out in the ninth off loser Rusty Ford (1-9) and Pat Keedy walked to put King in scoring position. Ford then got Dante Bichette on a fly to right and that put the ball in Liddle's corner.

Liddle responded with a sharp hit to left and the fleet-footed King raced the ball home and won.

"I knew we had speed on second base with Kevin, so all I was thinking was to just get a base hit and let him score," said Liddle. "We needed this one and extra innings and another loss was in the back of my mind. You can bet on that."

Liddle did his part, but if it had been another runner besides King trying to score, the game still might have gone into extra innings.

"I knew if the left fielder (Eric Hardgrave) made a good throw and if the catcher blocks the plate, I was going to have to nail the catcher (Sandy Alomar). He's a good friend of mine and I didn't want to have to come in hard against him, but I was prepared to," said King. "I'm glad I was able to come in standing up."

This contest had the makings of another Angel foldo. Leading 4-0 going into the sixth with Rafael Pimentel seeking to become the first Angel hurler to win 10 games, the Gators turned the tables with a five run inning to take the lead. The lead came on a ball that never left the infield when Tom Brassil chopped one in front of the plate and reliever Julian Gonzalez was late on the throw home to get the speeding Randy Byers.

But Bichette doubled King in the seventh to tie the game and that set the stage for Liddle's heroics in the ninth. Reliever Randy Harvey got the victory after throwing only two pitches in the ninth to Hardgrave to retire a Beaumont threat.

Jeff Schaefer's RBI single in the second gave the Angels a 1-0 lead and James Randall produced another scoring hit in the third. Midland then went up 4-0 in the fourth with Pete Coachman connected for his second homer of the year with Brian Brady on base.

Zendejas, defense key Oiler victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Tony Zendejas kicked three field goals and cornerback Steve Brown returned an interception 25 yards for a touchdown to fuel the Oilers to a 23-20 NFL exhibition victory over Buffalo Saturday night.

Houston improved its exhibition record to 2-0 and the Bills dropped to 0-2.

Trailing 23-3 at the half, Buffalo rallied in the fourth quarter behind rookie quarterback Brian McClure. Scott Norwood kicked a 36-yard field goal and McClure hit Walter Broughton with a 6-yard touchdown pass with 1:51 to go in the game.

Zendejas kicked field goals of 32, 24 and 23 yards for a 9-3 second-quarter lead before Larry

Moriarty ran 4 yards for a touchdown late in the second quarter for a 16-3 lead.

Brown picked off Art Schlichter's first pass on the next drive and ran untouched 25 yards into the end zone.

Norwood kicked a 37-yard field goal for Buffalo's only first-half scoring.

Buffalo's Anthony Hutchison scored on a 2-yard run late in the third quarter, capitalizing on a bobbled punt attempt by the Oilers.

McClure finished with 11 completions on 20 attempts for 107 yards. He hit six of 11 passes for all of Buffalo's 62 yards in its late scoring drive.

Norwood's fourth-quarter field goal was keyed by a 28-yard pass from McClure to tight end Butch Rolle.

'Dogs, Rebs ready for first workout

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

There are 5A coaches around who believe that championships are won in the next two weeks, but both Midland High coach Doug McCutchen and new Midland Lee coach Earl Miller are thinking of the work ethic.

Work starts Monday morning as both the Bulldogs and Rebels begin the quest for a state playoff berth in November. Both are rolling up sleeves, so to speak.

And work it will be. The two teams face the dreaded two-a-day grind and it is here decisions will be made that will carry into the season. It is a critical time, regardless of how you approach this point of the season when there are no games that count, only grueling practices that count heavily every day.

"We have our mile run at 8:30 Monday morning. That's the first step," says McCutchen, who annually puts his Bulldogs through this season starter. "Our backs must run the mile in six minutes or under while the linemen must run it in 6:30 or less.

"It's just a tool for us to use to see what kind of shape the kids are in. If they don't make the time, they face extra conditioning and the chance to do it 'til they get it right.

"However, we expect the vast majority to be in pretty good shape. They usually come in here ready to go. They have in the past."

Miller has no mile run to put his Rebels through, but Lee players won't skate through Monday's session.

"The first week is mostly a learning process," said Miller. "There is no contact because we have to work out in shorts until Friday. But we'll have a lot of running and learning going on.

"The varsity kids know what is going to take place and usually report in great shape. They know what we expect and what is going to happen Monday. That means most of them have been out running and working this summer before practice starts in order to escape the agony and pain that comes if you don't."

Lee will begin workouts at 8 a.m. Monday and will be back for a 4 p.m. workout. MHS will also have a 4 or 4:30 p.m. session to go with the mile run.

MILLER EXPECTS to lose five players going into the season. He lost linemen Chad Griffin, Kevin Beach and Mark Daniels last spring when they moved. Since then, Lee has learned that running back Eric Lacy is expected to move to Oklahoma and lineman Joel Dunn has decided not to play football. Dunn suffered a broken arm last year and it has not responded as he had hoped, according to Miller.

"I hope all the kids gained 20 pounds and are one second faster than they were last spring when they come in Monday," deadpanned Miller, who quickly added, "But realistically, I just hope they all show up. We've lost enough already."

McCutchen, on the other hand, says, "You never know who will be there when you open the doors, but I think our losses have been minimal up to this point. We had one in-coming sophomore kid move to Fort Stockton and that's all we know about. There may be some losses we don't expect, but things look pretty good now.

"We were pleased to see some of the kids up here over the summer and I think they've done a good job of working out. We'll see for sure Monday."

Things will be fast and furious the next three weeks before MHS hosts Lubbock Monterey at 8 p.m. at Memorial Stadium and Lee travels to Lubbock Coronado at 7:30 p.m. for the Sept. 5 season openers.

The annual Rebel Kickoff Rally will be held at the Lee Fieldhouse on Tuesday, Aug. 26, tentatively at 7 p.m. and will have two split squad

Bears roll another victim, 38-21

CHICAGO — Quarterback Mike Tomczak passed for three second-half touchdowns as the Chicago Bears rolled to another easy pre-season victory, this time over Indianapolis, 38-21.

Tomczak directed an 81-yard drive capped with a 12-yard touchdown to rookie David Williams to open the second half. He also hit Dennis Gentry with a 1-yard scoring pass and E.J. Jones with an 11-yard touchdown pass.

Tomczak, who also passed for three touchdowns last week against Pittsburgh, completed 9 of 11 for 115 yards.

The victory was the third straight for the Bears, while the Colts suffered their second defeat in as many starts.

Falcons 20, Buccaneers 17

TAMPA, Fla. — Veteran kicker Mick Luckhurst, entering the game for the first time with only three seconds left, booted a 29-yard field goal to give Atlanta a victory over Tampa Bay.

ANGEL NOTES: Today's 6 p.m. contest is Fan Appreciation Night with KPEJ TV and Safeway offering $5,000 in prizes...Sherman Corbett, who is 6-10 for the year and who gave up 10 earned runs in his last start, will pitch for Midland while Candy Sierra, 4-5, will go for Beaumont...Beaumont manager Steve Smith was tossed out of the game in the bottom of the ninth when he argued over a balk call on Ford...Pimentel pitched five shutout innings for the Angels in the best start for a starter in a long time. He gave up four hits in the first five frames and retired eight in a row at one point. Pimentel ran into trouble in the sixth when he developed a problem with his pitching hand, giving up a walk, a single and a two-run triple to Jerald Clark...Coachman kept Beaumont from scoring in the second with runners at first and third and only one out when he ranged into foul territory for a good catch and made a perfect throw home to hold the runner at third. Baylor's fans want Bears in Cotton Bowl

It took a half-century to merely get into the New Year's Day Classic, and the Bears were so overjoyed at just being there in 1974 that Penn State rolled to a 41-20 victory.

Six years later, the Bears were back in Dallas, but had the misfortune of facing one of the late Paul "Bear" Bryant's better Alabama teams. The Bears crumpled 30-5, even though All-American middle linebacker Mike Singletary had a great day.

Grant Teaff enters his 15th year as Baylor coach this year, and he's aware of the Baptists' dream scenario of an Southwest Conference championship season and a Cotton Bowl victory.

"We have the kind of team that could do it if we don't have injuries in two key areas — quarterback and linebacker," Teaff says. "We have a lot of momentum left from the Liberty Bowl."

In the Liberty Bowl last December, the Bears capped a 9-3 season with a devastating performance against a solid Louisiana State team, flogging the Tigers 21-7, with quarterback Cody Carlson winning the offensive MVP award.

Carlson, who had split the quarterback chores with Tom Muecke for three years, is a senior and his own man this year.

"Everything depends on Cody, because we don't have anyone else who has taken a snap in a game," Teaff says. "If he gets hurt, we could be in trouble."

Baylor also is thin at linebacker, although the Bears have one of the best ones in the country in Ray Berry, who can cover a lot of ground and deliver some big hits.

Baylor, the second-place finisher in the SWC in 1985 with a 6-2 ledger, boasts a big and burly offensive line led by center John Adickes, guard Mark Bates and tackle Joel Porter.

PINKETT

Making that jump to the pros is the biggest concern for anyone his Pinkett's size, but in his time at Notre Dame he developed work habits and a perseverance that have overcome his his size and made him an attractive package for the pros.

"The advantage of playing at Notre Dame is that I'm not overwhelmed by the size of the players. They are faster, but they aren't any bigger. It's not like I've been sheltered," Pinkett said.

AND NOW that he's in camp after an eight-day holdout ("as soon as they offered what we thought was a fair deal, I jumped on it."), Pinkett is bringing his work habits to the Oilers preseason camp, trying to impress Glanville and offensive coordinator Dick Jamieson.

Jamieson, in his first season with the Oilers after a five-year stint with St. Louis, is implementing a new run-oriented offense in Houston. Pinkett is hoping more work for the running backs means more work to spread around.

But you're not likely to hear griping out of this high-priced draft rookie if the playing time doesn't come right away. Not after the years of hard work and sweat he's dedicated.

"I'm willing to fill whatever role they want me to play. Maybe it will be to spell Mike (Rozier) or Butch Woolfolk, or to come in on passing situations or on special teams. Whatever it is, I'm ready to do it," said Pinkett, who grew up in Sterling, Va. "It's a dream just to be here. Ever since I was eight years old I wanted to play pro football."

DALLAS

returned it 24 yards to the Los Angeles 12-yard line. Running back Robert Lavette scored on a 1-yard run four plays later.

The Cowboys took a 3-0 lead on Rafael Septien's 42-yard field goal with 4:14 left before halftime. Dallas had moved from its own 36-yard line to the Los Angeles 24 thanks mainly to a 32-yard run by Lavette.

The Raiders then drove 75 yards on eight plays to take a 7-3 advantage, scoring on a 14-yard pass from Plunkett to running back Steve Strachan with 1:04 to play in the half.

After the Wilson-to-Barksdale bomb, the Cowboys drew to within 14-13 on a 30-yard field goal by Max Zendajas with 1:51 to go in the third period.

In the fourth quarter, the teams exchanged field goals — a 45-yarder by Chris Bahr of the Raiders and a 51-yarder by Septien — before Hilger connected with Pattison to give Los Angeles some breathing room.

A 28-yard field goal by Zendejas with three minutes remaining completed the scoring.

Clinkscale loses spot to Bates

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys safety Dextor Clinkscale, who has missed five weeks of training camp because of a contract dispute, has lost his starting job to Bill Bates, Coach Tom Landry says.

Only 28,797 watched the Falcons win their second straight exhibition contest, while the Bucs lost their second in as many games.

Jets 28, Bengals 17

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.Y. — Ken O'Brien threw for two touchdowns and Michael Harper had two long kickoff returns, one 97 yards for a score, as New York beat the Cincinnati.

O'Brien, playing only the first half, hit 11 of 17 passes for 137 yards. He found Al Toon and Billy Griggs for scores.

Giants 22, Packers 14

MILWAUKEE — Starter Phil Simms completed 11 of 15 passes for 127 yards and a touchdown while Eric Schubert added a pair of field goals Saturday night to lead the New York Giants to victory over Green Bay.

Tight end Zeke Mowatt, seeking to regain his starting job after missing the 1985 season with a knee injury, caught seven passes for 112 yards.

Chiefs 27, Cardinals 26

ST. LOUIS — Nick Lowery kicked a 32-yard field goal with 4:58 remaining, lifting Kansas City to a triumph over St. Louis.

Two missed extra-point tries by St. Louis provided Kansas City, 2-0, with its eventual winning margin. Cardinals holder Scott Brunner bobbled a center snap in the second quarter, and the Chiefs broke through to block rookie John Lee's conversion try with 9:58 left.

St. Louis, 1-2, rallied on rookie Vai Sikahema's punt returns and a pass interception by safety Lonnie Young to overcome Kansas City's 24-6 halftime lead.

New England 38, New Orleans 34

NEW ORLEANS — The New England Patriots squandered a 25-point halftime lead, then came back on a 21-yard scoring pass from fourth-string quarterback Steve Calabria to rookie tight end Greg Baty with 59 seconds left to beat New Orleans.

The Saints scored four touchdowns in the fourth quarter to lead 34-31 with 2:20 left in the game. But Calabria marched the Patriots 80 yards in seven plays to recapture the lead and the victory.

San Diego 45, Philadelphia 38

SAN DIEGO — Timmie Ware caught three fourth-quarter touchdown passes from Tom Flick, including a 52-yarder with 31 seconds remaining, to give San Diego a victory over Philadelphia.

The Eagles tied the score 38-38 with 1:10 remaining, but Flick threw his fourth touchdown pass, and third to Ware, to complete a 70-yard drive that took four plays and about 30 seconds.

Flick, who played the final two quarters, Dan Fouts and Mark Herrmann threw for 598 yards, which would have topped the NFL record of 554 yards set in 1951 in a game between the Los Angeles Rams and the New York Yanks. It was also the most passing yardage in Charger history but the mark isn't official because it came during a preseason game.

Vikings 29, Broncos 27

MINNEAPOLIS — Third-string quarterback Steve Bono fired a 12-yard touchdown pass to running back Allen Rice with 56 seconds to play, rallying Minnesota to a victory over Denver.

After Sammy Winder's 9-yard touchdown run gave Denver a 27-15 lead with 5:51 to play, Bono replaced Wade Wilson. He completed two passes before a 60-yard scoring run by Vince Evans on a fourth-and-1 play pulled the Vikings within 27-22 with 3:51 remaining.

Southern Mississippi football player dies

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — University of Southern Mississippi fullback Eric Sorey of Campbellton, Fla., collapsed with leg cramps in Saturday morning practices and died several hours later at Methodist Hospital here.

University clinic Director Boyd Kellett said that Sorey was treated at the practice field and taken to the university clinic, where he was evaluated and treatment began.

When his condition did not improve, he was taken to the hospital.

On the way, Sorey collapsed. Kellett said that he was found to be in cardiac arrest and treatment was started at the hospital's emergency room. A medical team spent more than two hours trying to revive him.

He was pronounced dead at the hospital shortly after 6 p.m. Officials say no cause of death has been determined.

Sorey, 21, a 5-foot-9, 200-pounder, was in his second year at the university. Sorey was listed as a redshirt freshman on the team because he did not play last year.

He had played linebacker and running back at Graceville High School, and was named all-State in 1984.

"We are in a state of shock and grief about today's unkindly occurance," said university president Aubrey K. Lucas. "Our sincerest sympathy is extended to Eric's family. They are very much in our thoughts and prayers during this time of great sadness."

Head coach Jim Carmody expressed similar sentiments. "We are stunned by what has happened to Eric Sorey today. He was an outstanding young man, a good student and a promising athlete."

Flutie having trouble finding home

BOSTON — Doug Flutie's life has changed drastically.

Once a middle-class college kid, he is now a wealthy young man. Once a highly-praised Heisman Trophy winner, he now is trying to find a football team — any football team — that wants him.

One thing hasn't changed. Doug Flutie is still short.

The computerized world of professional football is built on numbers. Talent scouts look at a quarterback with numbers like 6-feet-4 and 215 pounds to help decide if he has potential. Numbers describing actual performance sometimes are ignored.

Sure, Flutie finished his career with a Division 1-A record of 10,579 yards passing. Sure, he completed 60.4 percent of his passes as a senior. Sure, he threw for 27 touchdowns that year. But wasn't he also 5-feet-9¾ inches as a senior?

"He doesn't have the height and, you know, after four years of it here I really get tired of talking about it," Jack Bicknell, his coach at Boston College, said. "The people who say he's too small, you're not going to change their opinion."

Bob Woolf may try.

He's Flutie's attorney, an experienced, determined negotiator about to embark on a severe test of his skills.

On Tuesday, the New Jersey Generals of the USFL gave Woolf permission to talk with the NFL about Flutie, who is under a personal services contract to Generals' owner Donald Trump.

Woolf's first call will be to the Los Angeles Rams, who own Flutie's NFL rights. The Rams have quarterback problems but they have said they don't think Flutie will help. If they turn a deaf ear to Woolf, he will ask the Rams to allow him to talk to other clubs.

"Don't you think Washington would be perfect?" Woolf asked. "There's a lot of places like that."

There also are places where coaching staffs feel they would have to change their offense substantially to allow Flutie to see past tall defensive linemen and utilize his scrambling ability. They're reluctant to do that.

"They can say I'm prejudiced, but I know what a well-released ball does," Bicknell said. "I know what a winner does. I know how a winner acts and I laugh when these guys say you've got to change your whole attack to accommodate Doug Flutie. That's a bunch of baloney."

MHS-Lee

scrimmages against Del Rio and Kermit on back-to-back nights of Thursday, Aug. 28, and Friday, Aug. 29.

Lee's first teamers will travel to Ozona to meet Del Rio at 6 p.m. on Aug. 28, and the remainder of the team will host Kermit at the Lee Field at 6 p.m. on Aug. 29.

"This will give us an opportunity to see every kid play and look at what he can do with two scrimmages," said Miller. "It will also give every kid much more game-like experience than we could do with one scrimmage."

MHS WILL combine its annual Super Dog Night with its Memorial Stadium scrimmage with Pecos on Friday, Aug. 29.

"We'll introduce the players prior to the scrimmage and serve a supper so the fans can eat and watch the game," said McCutchen, who also said that the time was still being worked on. That scrimmage will be at either 7 or 7:30 p.m.

Teams must work out in shorts until Friday when full pads can be donned. The next week is highlighted by scrimmages and the next week comes the real thing.

All of this looking to the District 4-5A opener on Sept. 26 when — you guessed it — MHS hosts Lee in the lid lifter. There are just a few sore muscles to work through between now and then.

Did it really happen? Even history isn't sure

Those meddlesome tamperers of history are at it again. This time it's Davy Crockett, the inference being that the frontier indian fighter, pioneer outdoorsman and Alamo hero is as much a figment of Walt Disney's imagination as he is fact.

Davy isn't around to say it isn't so and Fess Parker isn't talking, but the busy-bodies are rewriting the facts, as we know them.

Now, it is claimed, Crockett didn't go down swinging his rifle in hand-to-hand combat at the Alamo, but was captured and executed forthwith. It doesn't alter Davy's contribution or diminish his valor, but it's not the way we heard it.

CROCKETT wasn't tall like Parker, either. And no one called him Davy. He was known as David.

He didn't wear a coonskin hat and he wasn't born on a mountain top. And while it is conceded he did hunt bears, one gets the feeling that someone in the background is muttering, "and so do the Dallas Cowboys."

Fight Indians? Maybe, but he also championed their rights.

It isn't so much that any one is belittling Crockett, it's just that the misconceptions, if they are indeed, are unsettling.

It's enough to make one worry about his own place in history. All of us should be taking precautions. After all, look what the skeptics have done to the veracity of Babe Ruth's called shot back in the '32 World Series.

For example, despite accusations, I never said about track, "If God had meant for man to run, he would have given him four legs." What I really said was, "If God had meant for man to fly, he would have given him a bamboo pole."

THERE IS no truth to those tales about Betty Grable and me during the war. Sure, I had her picture, but...

It's not true, either, that I sat through that entire 222 point game between Georgia Tech and Cumberland. I wasn't even there. I remember because that was the day the New York Giants and Boston Braves were going 26 innings, 0-0.

And for that oft repeated statement that "without that USC line to run behind, Marcus Allen will never make it in the pros."...simply, plucked out of context by some irresponsible headline seeker. My original statement was much more optimistic, "Marcus Allen has about as much chance of making it in the NFL as Spud Webb has of making it in the NBA."

AS FOR the tales that I taught American skier Billy Kidd everything he knows on the slopes, that, too, is twisted. I said we handled Mount Mansfield in Stowe, Vt., with equal facility. The difference was hardly apparent to a non-skier...he used the diamond trails and I used the chairlift.

However, Texas Tech Coach David McWilliams is spreading the malicious gossip that I taught every thing he knows about golf, "which is a handicap I haven't been able to overcome."

Stories that Bill Kleine, Bob Kurland and I were an integral part of the AAU champion Phillips 66ers basketball team back in the early 1950s were misunderstood. Kleine and Kurland were the centers on the team, a fact plainly evident to someone in the press box.

Of course, such disclaimers really don't alter the facts that much, but they help clear the air so one doesn't wind up like poor David Crockett.

Just one other record to be set straight. I was never the sports editor of the New York Herald-Tribune. However, my bylined story in the paper did herald the birth of the New York American Football League franchise. Just ask Midland's Don O'Shaunghnessy.

Blue Jays' Key locks out Rangers, 13-1

Associated Press

TORONTO — So what, says Jimmy Key, if he doesn't win the American League earned-run average championship. So what if he doesn't even come close.

"I said to heck with ERA a long time ago and concentrated on just getting as many wins as I could," Key said Saturday after tossing a five-hitter over seven innings in the Toronto Blue Jays' 13-1 rout over the Texas Rangers. "If I can come out of this season with 15, 16, 17 wins I'll be fairly satisfied."

Key knew his ERA was not going to be a thing of beauty after starting the season 0-3 with an ERA in the mid-teens. But, with a record of 11-8, he is on target for his goal in victories despite an ERA of 4.06.

"I feel I've had three good outings in a row now," Key said. "I'm getting all my pitches over for strikes, so the hitters can't sit on my fastball."

Key's batterymate, Ernie Whitt, went 3-for-5 with two doubles and four RBI in to lead Toronto's 12-hit attack against four Texas pitchers. Damaso Garcia and Tony Fernandez each homered for Toronto.

The Blue Jays scored four runs in the first inning against knuckleballer Charlie Hough, 9-8, and put the game away with a six-run fifth inning. Hough, who hasn't won since July 12, is 0-4 in his last seven starts.

Key allowed only two hits going into the sixth, but the Rangers ruined his shutout bid with a one-out single by Oddibe McDowell and a run-scoring double by Scott Fletcher. Steve Lamp and Bill Caudill each pitched an inning in relief.

American League

Royals 4, Yankees 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hal McRae's two-run double capped a three-run sixth inning and Danny Jackson pitched a five-hitter through seven innings to propel Kansas City to victory over New York.

The victory snapped a three-game losing skid for the Royals and halted the Yankees' winning streak at four.

The second-place Yankees lost a chance to move within three games of Boston in the American League East as the Red Sox lost earlier in the day to Detroit.

Indians 2, Orioles 1

CLEVELAND — Phil Niekro won the 309th game of his career, losing his shutout in the ninth inning on an Eddie Murray homer as Cleveland defeated Baltimore.

Niekro, 9-9, moved past Charles "Old Hoss" Radbourn and into 13th place on the all-time victory list. Tom Seaver of the Boston Red Sox is in 12th place with 310 career triumphs.

Niekro, 1-1, lifetime against Baltimore, has now defeated every team in the major leagues except the Atlanta Braves, with whom he spent his entire National League career.

Tigers 12, Red Sox 6

BOSTON — Lou Whitaker led a 21-hit attack with a double and two singles, and pinch-hitter Larry Herndon hit a grand slam in a five-run eighth inning to help Jack Morris and Detroit to a triumph over Boston.

Nursing a 7-5 lead, the Tigers loaded the bases with one out in the eighth inning against reliever Sammy Stewart, then scored five times on a bases-loaded walk by reliever Joe Sambito and Herndon's grand slam on the next pitch. The homer was Herndon's fifth and the first grand slam of his career.

Morris, 15-7, allowed nine hits in seven innings, including three by Tony Armas and homers to Dwight Evans and Don Baylor. Morris won for the eight time in nine decisions, striking out three and walking three before he left after Baylor's leadoff homer in the eighth.

Brewers 6, White Sox 5

CHICAGO — Pinch-hitter Ben Oglivie hit a two-run triple in the eighth inning to lift Milwaukee to victory over Chicago.

Trailing 4-3 with two outs in the eighth, Dale Sveum and Jim Gantner both singled off reliever Gene Nelson, 5-5. Oglivie, batting for Rick Cerone, tripled to center field to give the Brewers a 5-4 lead.

Oglivie's hit knocked out Nelson and brought in Bobby Thigpen. But Thigpen gave up a single to Paul Molitor, scoring Oglivie with the Brewers' eventual winning run. That gave Milwaukee a 6-4 lead and helped the Brewers withstand an RBI triple by George Foster in the bottom of the eighth.

John Henry Johnson, 1-1, was the winner with relief help from Mark Clear, who pitched the last 1⅓ innings for his 11th save.

Milwaukee's Juan Nieves was coasting with a four-hitter before the White Sox scored three runs in the sixth to take a 4-3 lead.

Julio Cruz opened the Chicago sixth with a walk, and advanced on Daryl Boston's double, before scoring on Reid Nichols' sacrifice fly. Baines blasted the next pitch into the right field stands for his 19th homer, giving Chicago a 4-3 lead and knocking Nieves out of the game.

Cosbie leaves, fined $2,000

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys veteran tight end Doug Cosbie has been fined $2,000 for leaving training camp without permission.

Cosbie said Friday that he wanted to see his wife, who is nearing the end of her pregnancy, and that he was disturbed about the progress of contract negotiations. He returned to camp after signing a new contract Thursday.

"The fine doesn't bother me," Cosbie said. "It just means I won't get paid for the rest of training camp. Coach Landry just wasn't too happy that I didn't talk to him."

But Cosbie said he is upset with the way the Cowboys negotiate contracts.

"They can do Herschel Walker's contract in two days," he said. "But with other guys, it can take six months. It kind of leaves a bad taste in your mouth. I think it will come back to haunt the Cowboys."

Team President Tex Schramm said finalizing the contract was delayed by Cosbie's agent.

"I'm surprised he (Cosbie) didn't know where the hang-up was," Schramm said.

Snyder's Spikes faces seven years in pen

DALLAS (AP) — Former All-American fullback Jack Erwin Spikes faces up to seven years in prison following his guilty pleas to charges of defrauding a Grapevine bank of $388,000.

Spikes, who is from Snyder and played for Texas Christian University during the late 1950s before playing professionally for seven years in the American Football League, entered the pleas Friday to two counts of a 14-count federal indictment.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer scheduled sentencing for Sept. 26. Spikes also faces a possible fine of up to $10,000. As terms of a plea bargain arrangement, prosecutors dismissed the other 12 counts.

According to the indictment, Spikes defrauded the American Commerce Bank of Grapevine in 1983 while serving as the bank's board chairman.

Spikes, 48, declined comment following Friday's hearing. "There's nothing to tell," he said.

His attorney, Kevin Clancy, said the guilty plea was "a tough decision for Jack to make. It weighed on him heavily. Jack decided, after thinking hard about it, that he may have been guilty of some of these offenses."

After playing high school football in Snyder, Spikes was an All-American fullback in 1959 at TCU and twice was named to the all-Southwest Conference team.

In 1960, Spikes signed with the AFL's Dallas Texans, which became the Kansas City Chiefs in 1963. He also played for the San Diego Chargers, Houston Oilers and Buffalo Bills before retiring in 1967.

Astros increase West lead with 7-4 win over Braves

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Kevin Bass drove in three runs and Matt Keough and Charlie Kerfeld combined on a five-hitter as the Houston Astros beat the Atlanta Braves 7-4 Saturday night.

Keough, 3-3, winning his first game as a starter in more then two years, allowed two runs on three hits in 5⅔ innings, striking out five and walking two. Kerfeld earned his sixth save by pitching the final 3⅓ innings.

Loser Rich Mahler, 11-12, gave up five runs on seven hits, walking one and striking out four in five innings.

The Astros broke a scoreless tie with two runs in the fifth. Jose Cruz led off by reaching first on second baseman Glenn Hubbard's error and took third on Alan Ashby's double. Both scored on Reynolds' single.

Houston added three runs in the sixth. Bass tripled home Denny Walling and Glenn Davis, knocking out Mahler, and scored himself when Cruz singled.

The Braves, who made the score 5-2 on Dale Murphy's 22nd home run with Ken Oberkfell on base in the sixth inning, came within 5-4 with two runs in the seventh. Rafael Ramirez scored on pinch hitter Chris Chambliss' sacrifice fly and Ozzie Virgil came home on Kerfeld's wild pitch.

Bass hit his 17th home run in the eighth to put Houston ahead 6-4, and the Astros added a run in the ninth on John Mizerock's homer, his first in exactly three years.

National League

Cubs 5, Expos 0

MONTREAL — Rookie Jamie Moyer pitched 6⅓ innings of perfect baseball before Jim Wohlford, who got both Montreal hits, blooped a single to right field in Chicago's victory over the Expos.

The first hit allowed by Moyer, 23, came when he tried to jam Wohlford with a pitch. But the veteran fought it off, sending the ball several feet from Ryne Sandberg, who was trying for an over-the-shoulder catch. Wohlford's second hit was a single in the ninth.

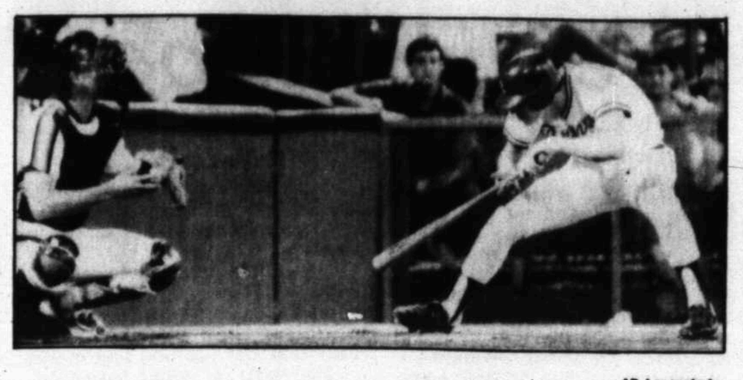

Cardinals 3, Mets 1

NEW YORK — John Morris tripled to score Terry Pendleton and break a 1-1 tie in the 11th inning after rookie left-hander Greg Mathews had held New York to five hits over the first 10 to give St. Louis a victory.

Mathews, 9-3, won his third straight game and fifth in his last six decisons as the Cardinals beat the Mets for the third time in a row. He struck out five and walked one.

Reds 4, Padres 1

CINCINNATI — Buddy Bell hit a three-run homer, his third in two days, and Bill Gullickson pitched into the ninth inning to lead Cincinnati to victory over San Diego.

Dodgers 6, Giants 5

SAN FRANCISCO — Steve Sax keyed a five-run fourth inning with a two-run single, and pitcher Bob Welch continued his mastery over San Francisco as Los Angeles beat the Giants.

Pirates 6, Phillies 1
Phillies 6, Pirates 0

PHILADELPHIA — Tom Hume and Kent Tekulve combined for a one-hitter, and Mike Schmidt and Juan Samuel homered as Philadelphia defeated Pittsburgh Pirates in the nightcap to gain a split.

Sid Bream drove in four runs with a homer and three singles, and Rick Rhoden, 13-7, pitched a five-hitter to lead the Pirates to victory in the opener.

Hume, 4-0, normally a reliever, was making his first start since July 28, 1984. He allowed one hit in six innings, struck out one, walked none and had a no-hitter until Rafael Belliard lined a single with one out in the sixth. Tekulve pitched three hitless innings to gain his third save.

Larry McWilliams, 2-9, allowed six runs and seven hits in seven innings.

In the first game, Rhoden struck out seven and walked two in pitching his seventh complete game. He lowered his earned-run average to 2.35, second-best in the major leagues to Houston's Mike Scott, who has a 2.32 ERA.

Budget cuts could hurt TPWD

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Everybody is having budget problems and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is no exception. A $29.4 million Fiscal Year cut would devastate the park system, closing 30 parks and terminating 157 full-time employees.

The impact on the public would result in the loss of recreational opportunities for 3.5 million visitors and $3.5 million in revenue. Three parks nearing completion could not be opened.

Also the state park repair program would be eliminated and the deterioration of state park system facilities would be inevitable. Further, no funds would be available for repairs resulting from natural disasters such as hurricanes, tornados and floods...

THE TPWD'S experimental deer registry program is supposed to help prospective hunters and landowners get together, enabling landowners with surplus deer the opportunity to list their properties and detailed information on lease opportunities. The information will be furnished to hunters on request.

"Texas has a limited amount of public lands for hunting," says Horace Gore, white tailed deer program leader for the TPWD, "and most deer hunting is conducted on a private lease basis. We hope this voluntary program will create more opportunities for hunters while offering landowners an opportunity to generate additional income."

PRONGHORN antelope populations have increased in parts of West Texas with 3,181 antelope sighted in portions of Glasscock, Howard, Irion, Mitchell, Reagan, Sterling and Tom Green counties. That's an increase of 37 percent over 1985, resulting from better-than-average weather and range conditions and good fawn survival during the past two years....

THE COLORADO City Bass Club will hold an Open Tournament Sept. 6 at Lake Champion and/or Lake Colorado City with headquarters at Lake Colorado City State park. It is a black bass tournament, three fish, with an optional calcutta. Based on a field of 150, the first prize will be $2,000 down to $40 for 16th-through-20th.

24K gold fixtures, a custom-made gold-trimmed shower and steeping tub are just a few of the amenities in the master bathroom.

Accent on detail

Entering through a recessed atrium, gracious living is announced at the door, which is inset with hand-made stained glass windows.

DETAIL

Not surprisingly, this home was featured in a 1983 issue of Architectural Digest and was on the 1982 Midland Parade of Homes.

Brilliantly contrasted with the redwood is a floor to ceiling stone fireplace which boasts solid copper screening. As with many of this accents in the house, this fireplace is not only the maximum in elegance, but in utility as well. Equipped with an individual thermostat, this fireplace is capable of heating the entire house through a specially designed vent system.

Copper trimmed skylights, a bay window overlooking the garden and ceiling fans complete the beauty of this area, decorated in earth tones and continuing with the oriental theme.

An adjoining dining room leads to the kitchen, which is a delight to look at as well as work in.

Solid oak cabinets set off imported silk-screen tile in a rich, deep blue. Stained glass windows intermingle with leaded glass in both the kitchen and breakfast nook.

All appliance fronts have been fitted with solid oak fronts. These include a nu-tone sound system and intercom, commercial ice machine and sub-zero refrigerator, to name just a few.

A conveniently located study, with a window looking out on the atrium, can also double as a television room. Dark paneling coupled with deeply colored leather furnishings lend a touch of elegance to this room.

Moving into the master bedroom the rich earth tone colors and designs return in triumph. A private courtyard, accessible only from the bedroom, is the perfect place for a private breakfast or lunch. Once again, the landscaping, done by Blue Heron Designs, is a perfect blend of nature and conscious human design.

Keeping in mind an enthusiasm for sports, the owners designed this bedroom with two closet areas and a sports storage closet.

In a home of beautiful rooms, perhaps the master bathroom could be said to shine brightest. All fixtures in this room are 24K gold.

A steeping tub, with hardware of german brass, is topped with a ventilating skylight. The custom-made gold-trimmed glass shower is equipped with a steam unit.

But the highlight of the room is the gold wallpaper, whose design was copied from an ancient pattern which is displayed in the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Continuing with the Oriental theme, the wallpaper is a tapestry featuring birds flying from branch to branch and nest to nest.

An exterior door leading to the outdoor jacuzzi is adorned with sandblasted and leaded glass window matching the wallpaper.

Upstairs, a sequestered guest room assures privacy for both you and your guest. A full bath will assure your guests comfort in this room, which also boasts a large walk-in closet for off-season storage.

Located in the Greentree Country Club area, this two bedroom, two and a half bath home backs onto the golf course and boasts an unobstructed view of the clubhouse.

With approximately 3,241 square feet of living space, this home is listed by Chapparal Realtors for $295,000.

Housing affordability index rises one point

WASHINGTON— The ability of the typical family to purchase an existing single-family home showed a healthy improvement in June as the National Association of Realtors' Housing Affordability Index increased a full percentage point to 101.4.

"With the index at this level, more than half of the families in this country could qualify for a mortgage to purchase the median-priced existing single-family home last month (June)," said Clark E. Wallace president of the association.

A $900 May-to-June drop in the median existing single-family home price to $82,300 more than offset a slight increase in interest rates in June. Association economists said the June price drop likely was a correction for the huge $3,000 increase to $83,200 in May. The economists do not expect further price declines in the months ahead.

In fact, the median existing-home price in June was 7.6 percent higher than a year ago, and they expect the median resale home price to show an eight percent increase for all of 1986 and a five percent increase for all of 1987.

'The Housing affordability Index has been above the 100 level every month since December last year, except for March when it slipped to 99.9," Wallace noted.

"This has been good news for families who waited years for interest rates to fall to a point where they could make their move into the housing market," Wallace said. "Prior to December last year, the index had been below 100 since December of 1978," he added. When the index is 100, a family earning the median income has exactly enough income to qualify for a mortgage on a median-priced resale home.

"The improved affordability index in recent months has translated into more existing-home sales. In fact, for the first six months has translated into more existing-home sales. In fact, for the first six months this year, home resale activity was up 12.5 percent from the same period last year," Wallace, a Realtor from Moraga, Calif., said.

Last December, the index broke above the 100 mark to 100.2. In January, this year it rose to 101, in February it went to 100.9, in March it was 99.9 and in April it was 101.9.

The direction of the index has closely followed the direction of interest rates, Wallace observed. The index peaked in February 1972 at 153.1, when mortgage interest rates were less than eight percent. conversely, the index hit its all-time low in September 1981 at 63.9, when mortgage interest rates were about 16 percent.

With the interest rate used to compute the index at 10.21 percent in June, up from 10.15 percent in May, the monthly principal and interest payment on a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage for $65,800 (80 percent of the median resale home price would be $588, down from $592 the previous month, association economists said.

The interest rate used to compute the index is the average effective rate (including points) on loans closed for previously occupied homes as reported by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Based on lending requirements set by the Federal National Mortgage Association, principal and interest payments by a borrower making a 20 percent down payment should represent no more than 25-28 percent of yearly gross family income. The National Association of Realtors calculates its index assuming that a borrower devotes 25 percent of family income to principal and interest payments.

NAR survey looks at home buying patterns

WASHINGTON— Even with home sales at a seven-year peak, most of the homebuyers (82 percent) surveyed by the National Association of Realtors actively searched for their home less than six months.

The association's new in-depth look at "The Homebuying and Selling Process" examines how long buyers searched for a home, how many homes they actually viewed, if they were satisfied and how they purchased their homes. The report, completed by NAR's Economics and Research Division, is based on a survey of 5,000 homebuyers across the country.

The amount of time buyers reported they spend actively searching for a home varied from less than one month to more than six months. On the average, first-time buyers took slightly more time to find a home (three months) than did repeat buyers (two months).

First-time buyers did, however, look at fewer homes than did the repeat buyers--eight compared to eleven. The researchers reason that this may be because either fewer homes were available in their price range, or they spent more time looking at the ones they did consider. The vast majority (80 percent) felt that they spent about the right amount of time on their home search. Very few felt that they spent too much (11 percent) or too little (10 percent) searching.

Real estate professionals continue to play a pivotal role in bringing homebuyers and sellers together. Some 64 percent of the homebuyers surveyed found out about the home they purchased from a real estate agent.

Buyer awareness also was enhanced through other forms of media. For example, 15 percent of the homebuyers discovered the home through "for sale" signs, eight percent from newspaper advertisements and one percent from magazines. In a few cases, the buyers knew the sellers personally.

Nearly all (99 percent) of the homebuyers surveyed were satisfied with their purchase and a majority (63 percent) were satisfied with the real estate agent they used.

In financing their home purchase, most buyers used savings (46 percent) for the down payment or equity from their previous home (30 percent). A few of those homebuyers surveyed relied on gifts (9 percent), loans (7 percent) or their life insurance policies (2 percent). Since first-time buyers don't have a previous home to tap for equity, they are more likely to rely on savings and gifts for a downpayment, while repeat buyers depended more heavily on equity.

Most homebuyers in the survey obtained mortgages from a mortgage banker (31 percent) or mutual savings bank (30 percent). Savings and loans (7 percent) or their life insurance policies (2 percent). Since first-time buyers don't have a previous home to tap for equity, they are more likely to rely on savings and gifts for a downpayment, while repeat buyers depended more heavily on equity.

Color evokes emotional response

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Give a child an assortment of red, yellow and blue colored squares, circles and triangles and ask him or her to sort them. The result will be an assortment of colors, not shapes.

Give an adult the same task and you're likely to get asked for additional information about how the task should be accomplished, says Faber Birren, a color authority who has 24 books on the subject to his credit.

Color, Birren says, is closer to the emotions than form and draws a more primitive and emotional response. Perhaps, he adds, that's why human beings find color preferences and choices so fascinating.

In general, warm colors such as red, yellow and orange seem to be most attractive in the beginning years of life. With maturity, a preference for a different ranking occurs, and blue, red, and green tend to be favored.

But, he adds, one of the difficulties involved with developing a science of color use is that reactions to colors vary over time. "Human beings respond to color physiologically whether they like it or not. Hot colors and bright lights increase the blood pressure and heart rate. But if you asked me if red influences behavior, I'd have to answer that it depends on how long a time you are in the room."

At first, bright colors and highly contrasting color schemes can be distracting. If an individual already is distressed, this type of environment may be relaxing. As a person gets accustomed to the place, the surroundings cease to have the power to distract, he says.

This ability of individuals to adapt to color is often overlooked, but it shouldn't be, because it shows that color effects are temporary. A space in one color alone will tend to fade out visually and lose its impact. That's why a variety of colors should be employed to maintain stimulation and interest.

Despite the high degree of differing and perhaps unmeasurable personal responses, color therapy today has won some recognition among the medical and scientific community, says Birren. Visible light and different light waves have been shown to influence biological responses of plants, insects and other forms of animal life in the laboratory.

When it comes to consumer preferences for home furnishings, Birren says that most people want a greater variety of color in their home and that this trend is likely to continue in the forseeable future. As a rule, consumers tend to select housewares such as containers and towels in bright accent colors, though they may be much more conservative when choosing a color scheme.

As a rule, popular colors in the home filter down from from high fashion textiles and other products. The colors selected by interior designers and magazine editors for costly and stylish rooms eventually turn up in less pricey surroundings.

INDEX

In June, the income needed to qualify for an 80 percent loan on a typical resale home was $28,226–$399 less than the median family income. The June index meant that a median-income family had 101.4 percent of the income needed to qualify for a $65,800 mortgage.

A family earning the median income in June could have qualified for a loan covering 80 percent of an $83,500 home, $1,200 above the median-priced resale home in June. This was about the same as May but was significantly improved from June 1985, when a typical family could have afforded a $70,100 home.

With the Housing Affordability Index at its June level of 101.4, a family earning $20,000 per year could have qualified for an 80 percent loan on a $58,300 home, while a family with a $30,000 income could have afforded an $87,400 home. A family with a $40,000 income could have qualified for a mortgage on a $116,500 home, and a family with a $50,000 income could have afforded a $145,600 home.

Fascinating Facts

by Bob & Bill Drummond, Licensed Master Plumbers

The practice of using antiseptics in the care and treatment of wounds was started by English surgeon Joseph Lister in 1868. Basing his works on the findings of German anatomist Theodore Schwann and French biochemist Louis Pasteur, Lister disinfected surgical and accidental wounds with a solution of carbolic acid. In five years, it reduced the death rate from major amputations from 45 percent to about 12 percent. Many other anticeptics have since come into use. Among the most important are bichloride of mercury, iodine, boric acid, soap, alchohol and chlorine which is widely used in the sterilization of water.

Grow your own privacy fence

By The Associated Press

Backyard privacy can be hard to come by.

A fence or screen is an obvious solution, but these structures can be costly. They also can make a small yard look more cramped and may cut air ciruclation.

Better Homes and Gardens magazine suggests a more gradual way to achieve a privacy screen is to grow one.

Flowering shrubs will make a satisfactory hedge, but many species have a tendency to spread out and gobble up a lot of valuable yard space, the editors say. Tall, narrow species are much more effective hedge plants.

The best choices include Tallhedge, Rhamnus frangula columnaris. This deciduous shrub is hardy, grows quickly, and thrives in full sun or partial shade. Trim the plants to any height or let them grow naturally. Untrimmed, Tallhedge will grow to 15 feet tall. Its narrow growth habit makes side pruning unnecessary.

For an evergreen hedge, try Skyrocket juniper. This shrub is tall and slender with bluish-green needles that look good all year. Skyrocket juniper can reach a height of 15 feet in 10 years. The plants grow best in a sunny spot with slightly dry soil.

Let's Talk Real Estate...

Joanne Langston

One encouraging factor in Midland's current economic picture is continuing strength in the local real estate market.

A flurry of July and early August transaction, at lease in our office, seem to be fueled by incoming transferees getting settled prior to the opening of school plus an encouraging number of move-ups and first time home buyers taking advantage of 9 1/2-10 1/2% interest rates, and moderating prices on a wide selection of homes.

In fact, as a personal observation, in my 20 years in the business, I have seldom seen so many fine properties for sale in all price ranges! I would certainly encourage would-be buyers to call any of our agents for a preview of today's exceptional market.

Rock Around The Watch

Text By DAVID LEE FORREST

Watches Courtesy of Dillards, Mervyn's and Service Merchandise

It's almost time for the Reporter-Telegram's look at this year's fall and winter fashions. 'Watch' for the Fall Fashion 1986 Special Section in Thursday's paper ...

An old proverb: "A man who owns one clock is always sure exactly what time it is; a man who owns two can never be sure exactly what the time is."

A modern proverb: "Nothing exceeds like excess."

When it comes to wristwatches, fashion-conscious young people are more likely now to have a "the-more-the-merrier" philosophy. Midland members of the MTV generation have been observed in their native habitat — the mall — wearing up to a half-dozen watches on one arm.

Even more conservative older individuals, especially women, are now building whole "watch wardrobes." They may wear only one watch at a time, but they want to have a range to choose from when trying to match a certain outfit, mood or occasion.

While the watch has always been almost as much of a fashion accessory as a utilitarian timepiece, this new watch wave was launched just a few years ago by the Swatch company.

The thin Swiss-made watches — "Swatch," of course, being an abbreviated form of "Swiss watch" — promoted a hip, youthful image to beat the inexpensive Japanese competition that was flooding the wristwatch market.

Swatches come in bold, bright colors with a wide variety of often offbeat face designs. In fact, the watch face graphics are often so boldly offbeat that it can be hard to tell what time it is by looking at them.

Many teen-age and college-age shoppers don't care about such mundane matters, however. Swatches became status symbols. While Swatch may have pioneered the territory, though, it wasn't long before other manufacturers got into the lucrative fashion/novelty watch market.

Compared to a Rolex, Seiko or other "serious" wristwatches, these trendy watches are inexpensive — Swatches are among the most costly at around $30 each — making it easy to buy more than one.

No doubt if one owns multiple watches, it seems silly to have several ticking away uselessly at home while only wearing one at a time. So, a logical progression — well, sort of logical — follows that if wearing one inexpensive but fashionable watch was good, then wearing several was several times better.

"That's really the 'in' thing to do — wear all the ones you have," said Diana Dominguez, Dillard's area sales manager for Juniors.

Some of these wristwatch fanatics set all their watches so that each gives the correct time for a different time zone. A person wearing four watches might, for example, be able to simultaneously know the time in New York, Midland, Denver and San Francisco. It's debatable how often this actually comes in handy; one suspects there may be many Midland teens who are just dying for someone to walk up and ask what time it is in Los Angeles.

Others might arrange the wristwatches at different angles around their arm so that no matter which side of the arm they look at, they can see a watch face. Rumor even has it that some teens have started wearing watches around their ankles.

Ms. Dominguez said she has customers who return frequently to add a new Swatch to their wardrobe. "I know a person who actually has 10."

Swatch obliges by constantly cranking out new designs. Their most popular current face design is a coat-of-arms graphic, according to Ms. Dominguez. "It's just the newest theme they've come out with."

Other companies take a different approach. Sandy Shelton, manager of Mervyn's jewelry department, pointed out that one wristwatch she sells — The Cassette — only has one style of face, but each watch comes with five easily interchangeable bands. The bands have different color schemes to be used to match different ensembles.

"They're for more than just to tell time," said Ms. Shelton. "They're a fashion accessory just like any other piece of jewelry."

Approximately 34 percent of all watches she sells are of the new wave variety.

"Five-year-olds love it and 55-year-olds love it," Ms. Shelton said of her female customers. Men tend to be a bit more conservative, with most of the male buyers of mod watches being "teen-agers and young men in their 20s."

"Mostly you're looking at the younger crowd," said Vito Masciale, jewelry manager of Service Merchandise.

Twenty years ago, the troop was led by Elaine (Mrs. J. Ray) Brack, now of Dallas. A highlight of the girls' Scouting experiences was a 1965 visit to Nuestra Cabana (an International Girl Scout House) in Cuenavaca, Mexico, with Jetta (Mrs. David) Breith and Frances Walker acting as sponsors.

Allergy awakened

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Ear piercing can awaken a dormant allergy to metal, rendering a person unable to wear many kinds of jewelry, dermatologists warned recently.

"The allergy often becomes active after a trauma to the skin," Dr. Alexander Fisher of New York University told the American Academy of Dermatology at its May conference.

In most cases, nickel is responsible. The metal is often present in gold, silver and platinum objects, and is usually also in costume jewelry.

If the piercing needle contains nickel, Fisher said, it can spark a reaction in the earlobe, which in turn sensitizes the entire body. After that, a rash develops any time metal jewelry is worn.

He said ears should be pierced only with a stainless steel needle. Although stainless steel contains nickel, it is bound so tightly that it does not react with the skin. While the ears heal, only earrings with stainless steel posts should be worn.

WATCHES

Masciale has also noticed a gender difference between sales of digital watches and analog ones, with men being much more apt to buy digitals.

Digital watches may have a slightly more macho image because they are "more oriented to athletics," he said, with of all their various stopwatch and calculator functions. Most of the trendier watch aficionadoes, however, seem to prefer analogs.

■ Mickey Mouse watches are still being made and while Mickey may be cute, he lacks the sex appeal of cartoon character Betty Boop.

■ Clear plastic faces showing the intricate inner workings of watches are common and should particularly appeal to gadget fans.

■ The Statue of Liberty and American flag motifs have been popular with patriots this summer.

■ Swatch constantly changes and updates their colorful watch faces, especially emphasizing bold, offbeat graphics.

■ This Lorus has one of the most startling — and difficult to read — watch faces with its offset hands that almost appear to float in space.

■ The crooked hands of this Awatch brand wristwatch seem to imply that time is not a linear concept.

■ Floral and paisley prints, often paired with pastel watch bands, are common.

■ Lorus — a brand that seems to specialize in unusual hands — also includes circular hands in their repertoire.

■ Rectangular faces can still be found, but are somewhat less common than circular ones in the current crop of watches.

■ This watch says "love" with heart-shaped hands.

■ Plastic "jelly" watches, looking a bit like timepieces made of Jell-O, match the popular plastic shoes known as "jellies."

■ This Swatch is unusual in its easy-to-read numbered face. "The numbers are coming back" on watch faces, though, according to Masciale.

Jewelry becomes 'racy'

NEW YORK (AP) — It's off to the races this fall for jewelry that follows the current European trend to an equestrian theme, reports Kae McCulloch, fashion consultant to the Jewelry Industry Council.

Foxheads, galloping horses, stirrups and sombreros adorn pins, bracelets, earrings and pendants, she says.

Tips offered for ring shopping

Copley News Service

A monumental task faced Prince Charles when he set out to buy an engagement ring for Diana. What does the future king of England give his bride as a symbol of his love?

The ring he chose would be seen by thousands, copied by jewelers across the world. It had to be breathtaking and elegant, yet tasteful.

Charles decided on a large blue sapphire. His choice is a testimonial to the current popularity of colored gemstones in engagement and wedding rings.

Gemstones have fascinated people from the earliest of times. We have searched for them, studied them, collected them, fought for them and even invented legends about them. Their popularity has endured through the ages.

A person's specific color preference can be satisfied through a wide-range of gemstones, according to Helen Fortunoff, merchandise manager of fine jewelry and secretary-/treasurer of Fortunoff Fine Jewelry and Silver of Westbury, N.Y.

Pick your favorite color and match it to a gemstone — amethyst, aquamarine, emerald, opal, ruby, sapphire and topaz to name a few. Choose a cut, and combine the stone with a 14 karat gold, white gold or platinum setting and even other stones for a unique combination.

Besides individuality, each gemstone has its own legacy. "In addition to beauty, there is history, mystery and legend behind every gemstone," Fortunoff said. "Be careful how you look at rubies. It was said you should never make faces at them or ignore them because they would grow dull."

LEGEND SAYS marriage partners believed if the luster of a sapphire dimmed, the spouse had been unfaithful. The amethyst, according to the ancient Greeks, would prevent intoxication and overeating, improve the complexion and prevent baldness.

Fine gemstones don't have to cost a fortune. Some are pricey. Others, like the rubellite and red garnet, are less expensive, but beautiful. Some brides opt for both an engagement ring and wedding ring ... others let one ring serve both purposes.

You're not alone — demand for diamonds, precious since 700 B.C. when only clerics and kings could wear them, is stronger than ever. Since 1477, when the engagement ring tradition began, diamonds have filled a need for men and women all over the world.

It's estimated that 43 million pieces of diamond jewelry worth more than $20 million were sold in 1984. About one-third of those diamond sales came from the United States, according to the American Diamond Industry Association.

Before choosing a diamond, or any other jewelry or gems, it's important to select a knowledgeable and trustworthy jeweler. The American Gem Society recommends consumers shop around and that they ask their jeweler about his credentials and look at their gem under a microscope.

SOME COUPLES prefer solid bands of gold with no stone ornamentation. Two popular styles in women's wedding bands include the pared-down, minimalist look featuring subtle, sculpted details, and the more ornate, feminine designs emulating lace, damask and tapestry fabric, according to The Gold Information Center.

Surprising the bride-to-be with an engagement ring she's never seen before isn't recommended since the ring and the woman will be together for years to come. Shopping together for an engagment ring and wedding ring assures that both bride and groom will be pleased with the choices, according to the "Bride's Book of Etiquette" (Perigee; $6.95).

The bride's ring doesn't have to match the groom's, but a ring should flatter the hand that wears it.

Couples might consider having the inside of both rings engraved with their initials and wedding date, or any sentimental phrase that fits in the space available.

When you're shopping for wedding rings, look around at some gift ideas for the maid of honor, your future spouse or others involved in the happy event.

For the bride, consider a strand of cultured pearls, an opal necklace, sapphire or ruby earrings or a thin gold watch.

Whether you follow the example of Prince Charles with a precious gemstone, or follow tradition with gold or diamonds, make sure your wedding jewelry has timeless beauty that lasts.

Companionship tops pet poll

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (UPI) — Companionship is the most common incentive for people to acquire a pet, according to a poll conducted at Walt Disney, World's Epcot Center.

More than 5,600 visitors to Walt Disney World were asked, "What's the most important reason why some people own a pet?"

The second most popular reason, "to give and get love," was the response of 28 percent of those polled.

Seventeen percent said they had pets "just for the fun of it," while 7 percent had pets "to care for a living thing."

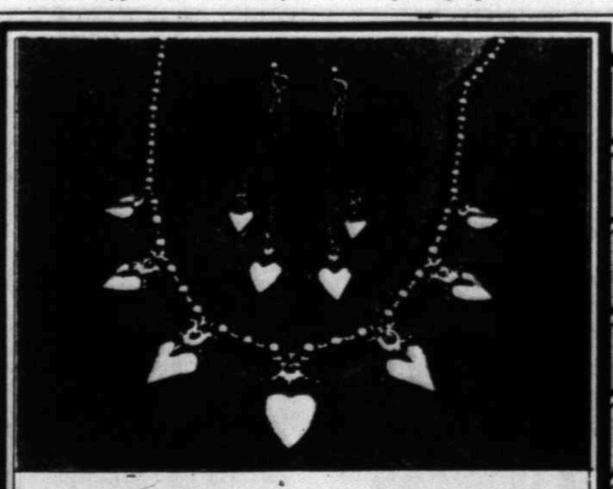

Ten percent were not sure why they owned pets, and 4 percent did not respond.

Dogs and cats were listed as the most popular pets, with a combined total of 76 percent.

Birds were the second favorite at 4 percent.

Fish and insects tied with 3 percent each.

Thirteen percent said they preferred none of these animals, and one percent did not respond to the survey.

Had A Wedding Lately?

Before the wedding:

"Boy, are we lucky! The groom's fraternity buddy is a GREAT PHOTOGRAPHER and he is giving us the pictures as a wedding present!!! Daddy took the engagement and bridal portraits for the paper with his Sukiyaki 35 and we're just saving all kinds of money!"

After the show:

"Ugh! That clown had no idea what he was doing. His flash wouldn't work most of the time. He stood up in the front pew and took pictures during the ceremony and then ran out of film during the recessional. What few pictures turned out are just awful and most of them are of people at the reception that we barely know. We're going to get dressed up and go to a studio so we will have some good photographs to keep, daddy's 35 shots are not all that great."

MISTER ROGERS

Children on beach resemble adults at work

By FRED ROGERS with BARRY HEAD

Rogers

Have you ever complained about your boss or about anyone who was in a position to give you orders? Where do "management styles" come from ... and our responses to different kinds of management?

It was a group of children at the beach that brought bosses to mind the other day. They were between 4 and 6 years old, and as they sorted out their play and their games, they seemed to be parodying the kind of office life so familiar to many of their parents.

Three of them were standing on a bench, bouncing up and down in rhythm as they chanted, "We're the captain of the ship! We're the captain of the ship!" Suddenly the oldest stopped and said disdainfully, "We can't all be captain of the ship. I'm the captain of the ship, and you're the sailors."

With that, their play fell apart. No one challenged this seizure of authority, but there was nothing to chant anymore, nothing to hold the group together. It seemed that the oldest had identified the commonplace management problem of "too many chiefs and not enough Indians" and determined that seniority was the answer. It was as though he had issued a memo outlining a new chain of command, and no one was clear about his or her new role in the organization.

In another group, the issue became the building of a sand castle. "That's gotta be a turret!" one boy said to a girl who was scooping out a corner of the pile of sand. "Why's it gotta be a turret?" the scooper asked. "'Cause I said so," the boy replied as if to say, "And that's an order!"

But it didn't work; the scooper went on sulkily scooping as though she hadn't heard a thing. So the self-appointed architect tried another approach: "Look," he said, "castles always got to have turrets."

Here, clearly, he was making an appeal to company policy. That didn't work either. "I don't want to make turrets," his playmate said.

The boy went on building for a while but quickly grew frustrated that one side of the castle wasn't taking shape at all. What's more, his opponent was joined by two of her friends and they'd decided that what they were making was a cake.

Now there was an undercurrent of male-female hostility in the group. The boy, outnumbered and on the defensive, tried once more. "Look," he said, brushing the sand off his hands, "are we gonna make a castle or not?" The answer was definitely "not." He didn't have any "team players" in his division.

So he issued Pink Slips. "Well, I'm not going to play with you anymore," he said disgustedly, getting up and giving the cake side of the castle an "accidental" kick.

"I'm gonna tell my mommy what you did!" one of the cake builders threatened. "Tattletale!" the boy sneered, but he looked uncertain about his threat to report him to a superior. Sensing this uncertainty, one of the girls launched a final barb: "Anyway," she taunted, "you're my sister's boyfriend!" and with that she stuck out her tongue. The boy glared and walked away.

She might just as well have been saying, "And don't forget I know about that little dinner item on your expense account!"

Children, of course, grow up with different models of authority in their families, and it's likely to be these (at least the ones that seem to work) that they first try out in their play. But other children have other models, and so the clashes and negotiations of "office politics" begin.

It seemed at first glance that those children at the beach were parodying our adult world, but a little thought made that notion unlikely. They couldn't, at that age, know our world well enough to parody it.

That left another possibility, one that was much likelier but hard for some of us to accept: Far from the children parodying our world, it is we who act out in our adult offices the management techniques and responses we've brought with us all the way from early childhood.

AT WIT'S END

Teens killed

Editors note: Erma Bombeck is on vacation. She left behind some of her favorite columns.

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

For the sake of this story, we will call the high school Central. We will place it somewhere in the Midwest, say Minneapolis. Central has a football team, a band, a Latin club, and until this moment, it had a senior class of about 200.

To make a point, we are going to let Central High School assume the burden of all the teen-agers who will die in one year in accidents involving drunken driving.

There will be no senior class at Central this year. There will be no senior class for the next 45 years! By that time, 9,000 young people won't live to see their diplomas.

Half of them may not have taken a drink or have driven the car. They will be the victims of drunken drivers.

Amanda will be one of them. She always believed you had to come home with the same boy who took you to a dance. She didn't stop to think that the young boy who showed up at her door sober was not the same boy five hours later who couldn't get the car key in the ignition by himself.

Had Andy been born, he would have been in the class of 2017, but his mother, who died, a member of the 1994 class, never had the chance to marry or give birth to him. She was riding a bicycle at dusk when a motorist who drank too much at his retirement party ran her down.

The people of this country champion the lives of helpless seals, unborn babies, abandoned dogs and cats, abused children, alcoholics, the elderly and the disease-ridden. When will we weep for the phantom classes at Central High?

To be factual, I would have to point out that in the 45 years that the senior classes of Central were wiped out, 405,000 young people aged 15 to 24 also would have died. When you add to that the number of parents, brothers, sisters, grandparents, friends and lovers who died with them, the toll of human misery is staggering.

That's not a pun. It's a reminder.

Groom must decide: How many brides?

In the primarily Moslem country of Senegal, ideas about marriage vary greatly from what is believed in the United States. In Senegal, polygamy is permitted by law.

The only catch is that before the wedding the groom must declare his intention to be either polygamous or monogamous — and his decision can never be changed!

GET the SCOOP

I scream and you scream and according to managers of some Midland specialty stores, the whole town is screaming for ice cream — regular and low-calorie ice cream, frozen yogurt, sherbet, ices and any other frozen treat they can find.

"Our clientele is pretty much across the board," said Linda Gay, owner of Yogie's frozen yogurt store in Midland. "We have customers who come in here every day, just like clockwork — you can count on them, even in the winter."

All types and ages of customers flock to Baskin-Robbins, too, said assistant manager Lynette White. "During the day, our customers are mainly women. Now that school's out, they bring in all their kids." Families with children go to the store in the evenings, as well as high school students, who often meet their friends there.

"Businessmen come in after lunch," Mrs. White said. "We've got quite a few regulars."

The majority of customers at Zody's Ice Cream Parlor come in family groups, said partner Zonell Eddy. "People in Midland are starving for a family-type something to do. In family-type entertainment in Midland, what is there besides ice cream parlors?"

ALTHOUGH MANY high school students are customers at Zody's, "75 percent of our business is adults with kids — and adults without kids," Ms. Eddy said.

At Skinny Dip in Midland, "we have teenagers come in, even during the school year; we are very family-oriented," said owner Mignon Armstrong. "We have a lot of people very into exercise and health care" including diabetics and heart patients. "We have even had people tell us the dieticians at the hospital sent them in."

The no-sugar frozen dessert offered in Ms. Armstrong's store is "served in diabetic wards in hospitals in Austin, so the health aspect of it is real important," she said.

All the stores carry their products in several flavors to please more customers. Of course, Baskin-Robbins' trademark is the famous "31 flavors," but in reality "they are making more flavors all the time," Mrs. White said. The 31 flavors in the store change frequently: "They feature one new flavor every month," she said.

"The No. 1 best seller" at Baskin-Robbins is pralines and cream, Mrs. White said. "After that, it's a variety. With kids, rainbow sherbet is popular. ... International creams are becoming fairly popular."

Zody's carries 32 flavors at a time, and also rotates the selection. While popular flavors there include peach, peppermint, chocolate chip and vanilla nut fudge, Ms. Eddy said vanilla is the biggest-seller, because "you mix all the milkshakes with vanilla."

Yogie's has access to 17 flavors of regular yogurt and four sugar-free flavors, but "those machines cost $10,000 each, so we can only carry six flavors at a time," Mrs. Gay said. "Vanilla, chocolate and strawberry we always have."

Skinny Dip comes in 48 flavors, Ms. Armstrong said, which are rotated. "We are constantly adding new flavors, coming up with new choices."

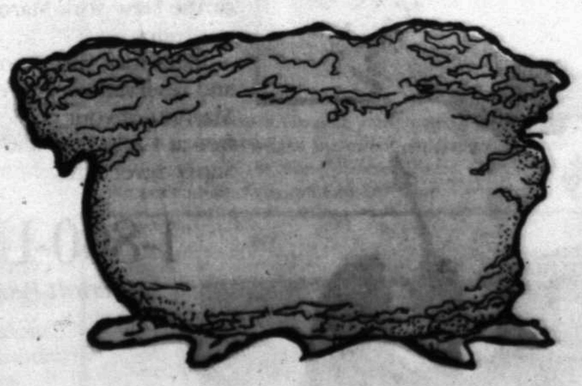

HER CUSTOMERS prefer frozen delights in exotic flavors, such as cheesecake, coconut, banana nut, apple pie, "some of our chocolates — turtle fudge, cherry chocolate — we run chocolate and vanilla every day, and cheesecake."

Perhaps the most unusually named Skinny Dip flavor is something called "George of the Jungle," — chocolate and banana.

Some of the frozen dessert stores have branched out into other food items, such as sandwiches, soups and stews, cookies, cakes and pies, but the biggest draw is still the frozen taste treats they do best.

Midland's depressed economy has been felt in these businesses, too, but, according to Zody's Ms. Eddy, she and her partner Clarence Marley — who are both retired from Gulf Oil — have lived in Midland long enough to know how busts turn back into booms.

As Mrs. White of Baskin-Robbins said, "It costs $5 a head to go to the show, but it seems like everybody has enough for an ice cream cone."

Ice cream freezers 'come a long way'

Hearst News Service

Ice cream has come a long way from the days when it took a whole family's-worth of muscle power to crank out a batch. While hand-powered models are still available and still inexpensive — as low as $20 — there are some equally affordable and effective modern options.

The basic parts remain the same: a tub for the ice-cream fixings and a stirring mechanism (paddles, dashers, scrapers) that fits inside the tub. The difference is in how the ice cream is churned and frozen.

Electrically powered bucket models are the good old days minus the work. Manufacturers have mounted a small motor on top of the bucket so that electricity, rather than elbow grease, powers the wooden or plastic paddles. The tubs come in 2-, 4- and 6-quart capacities. They range in price from $20 to $150.

To operate, fill the can with the ice-cream base and fit it into the bucket. Layer crushed ice and rock salt around the can and proceed according to the manufacturer's directions. Do keep an eye on the machine while it's running, however: Once the ice cream is fully frozen, the paddles can lock up and the motor burn out.

A plastic, motor-powered freezer by Richmond Freezer Works sells for about $20. In contrast, the highly regarded 6-quart White Mountain electric freezer, with its pine tub, beechwood scrapers and stainless-steel can, sells for about $154.

ICE CREAM IS a frequent dessert feature at Seattle's Rhododedron Cafe. Since the restaurant is small, owner/chef Don Shank is able to use an electrically powered home bucket model with a 1-gallon capacity.

He said it's important to crush the ice well and to have the right balance of ice to salt. Too much salt causes the ice to melt too rapidly; too little salt allows the ice cream to freeze too well.

Shank packs the side of the bucket one-third of the way up with well-crushed ice, then sprinkles it with ¼ cup rock salt. The rest of the way up the side, he alternates 1 inch of ice with ¼ cup rock salt.

Keep the ice/salt mixture at least up to the level of the ice cream during the churning process. It's also important to leave some room for expansion as the paddles beat air into the ice cream, he says. Never fill the tub more than three-quarters full.

Hand-cranked ice-less freezers are the rage this summer. The Donvier Ice Cream Maker from Japan is synonymous with this category. The Incredible Ice Cream Maker, a new minifreezer in the shape of an ice-cream cone, is also receiving a lot of attention. Their ingenious design eliminates both ice and electricity from the picture.

Don't let the phrase "hand-cranked" fool you; a 10-year-old can handle the work involved. In both cases, the secret is a refrigerant sealed inside the ice-cream tub.

The Donvier is composed of a plastic jacket, plastic crank and dashers and a double-walled aluminum container in which the refrigerant, trade-named Chillfast, is sealed. Just freeze the tub, assemble the machine, pour in the ice-cream fixings and crank it every few minutes for 20 minutes or so. The Donvier sells for about $40 for the quart version; $30 for the pint.

COLD IS THE key to the Donvier. The tub needs no less than 7 hours in the freezer between batches. The ice-cream fixings should be well-chilled. An apartment freezer or one that isn't frost-free cannot get the Donvier cold enough.

The Incredible Ice Cream Machine is a much smaller and more primitive version of the Donvier. It's made up of a double-walled plastic cone with refrigerant inside, and a cap with a dasher attached. To make ice cream, you freeze the cone, fill it with ingredients, cap it and turn it a few times. Its capacity, however, is only 8 ounces — a mere taste. It sells for about $10.

Plug-in ice-cream machines are the most convenient and the most costly of today's ice-cream machines. The immense price jump between these and the other models seems hardly justified unless you plan to make ice cream every day. And some may not be worth the price even then.

Italy is the manufacturing center for these machines: the Simac Il Gelataio, the Gagia Gelatieria and the Viva all cost about $300 each. The Ugolini Minigel costs about $600.

Though they differ somewhat in outward appearance, all are boxlike affairs. They consist of a refrigeration unit and a stainless-steel bowl with stirring arms inside. The removable bowl is sunk into the unit. Additional features on some units include two bowls and timers that automatically stop the paddles when the ice cream is set.

The operation is very simple: Just fill the bowl, flip a switch and come back in 20 minutes.

Tips improve homemade ice cream

Hearst News Service

Here are some tips on ice-cream making based on experiments with the Donvier and electric crank models.

- Generally, homemade ice cream makes up softer and freezes harder than commercially made ice cream. It's best within a few hours of preparation.
- To store ice cream, pack it into a freezer container, fit a layer of plastic wrap directly on top of the ice cream, then cover tightly with a container lid or aluminum foil. Store for seven to 12 days at most.
- Always chill ice-cream bases before use.
- The richer the base, the longer it will take to freeze — 20 minutes for sorbets, as long as 50 minutes for recipes rich in cream and egg yolks.
- Cooked bases are smoother and creamier than uncooked ones. Uncooked bases containing egg yolks have been blamed for salmonella poisoning.
- Alcohol inhibits freezing. Never exceed recommended amounts in recipes containing liquor.
- Always finely chop or puree fruits, nuts, candies or other solid ingredients. Large chunks freeze solid, giving an unpleasant, icy texture. Chunkier ingredients are added toward the end of the freezing process.
- Use high-quality ingredients and don't stint; the cold actually dulls flavors.
- Never store ice cream in the ice-cream maker. It can freeze too solid and pick up off-flavors.

Ice cream recipes differ

By WANDA A. ADAMS
Hearst News Service

Ice cream is among the least rigid of recipes. Just about any combination of milk products, sweetener, eggs (or gelatin) and flavoring will work if they're well-blended and properly cold.

The simplest ice-cream base is sweetened, flavored whipped cream. The proportions recommended in Hilary Walden's "Ice Cream" (Simon and Schuster) are: 1¼ cups cream whipped to the soft-peak stage, folded together with ½ cup sugar. Flavor with 1 cup of pureed or strained fruit, 1 cup of chopped nuts and/or a teaspoon or two of vanilla or other liquid flavoring. One or two whipped egg whites (stiff but not dry) may also be folded in. Chill before freezing.

2½ cups milk, evaporated milk, half-and-half or cream or any combination
½ cup sugar
3 to 7 egg yolks
1 to 2 teaspoons vanilla extract.

Scald the milk or cream. Beat the yolks together with the sugar. Pour ½ cup of the hot milk into the yolks in a thin stream, stirring to prevent curdling. Blend in the remainder of the milk. Heat the milk-egg mixture over medium-high heat until it can coat the back of a spoon; do not boil. Transfer to a cool bowl. Stir a few times. Chill before freezing.

2 (12-ounce) cans of evaporated skim milk
1 envelope of plain gelatin
½ to ¾ cup granulated sugar
1 to 2 tablespoons vanilla
1 cup plain, low-fat yogurt.

Heat the milk and gelatin until the gelatin dissolves. Add the sugar and stir until it dissolves. Whisk in the vanilla and yogurt. Blend well. Chill, then freeze.

Here's a recipe for a silky extremely rich chocolate ice cream from Seattle's Rhododendron Cafe.

ULTRA-RICH CHOCOLATE ICE CREAM

3 ounces strong coffee
½ cup sugar
16 ounces semisweet chocolate
3 ounces butter
3 cups half-and-half
1½ cups whipping cream
8 egg yolks
½ cup sugar

Break up the chocolate. Combine the coffee and ½ cup sugar in a heavy saucepan and heat to boiling, stirring while the sugar dissolves, forming a slightly thick simple syrup. Reduce the heat to medium. Add the butter; stir. Add the chocolate; stir. As soon as the chocolate is melted, remove from the heat.

Meanwhile, scald the half-and-half and cream over medium heat (tiny bubbles will form at the edges).

Whisk the egg yolks together with the ½ cup sugar. Blend a little of the warm chocolate into the egg yolks (so the yolks don't cook), then blend the two mixtures together. Whisk in the scalded cream.

Refrigerate the mixture, covered, overnight. Freeze according to manufacturers' directions. Makes 1½ quarts.

Ice cream made with chunks of chocolate

Associated Press

DOUBLE CHOCOLATE CHUNK ICE CREAM

2 cups sugar
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
4 cups light cream
4 squares (4 ounces) unsweetened chocolate, chopped
2 beaten eggs
4 cups whipping cream
1 cup finely chopped milk chocolate, (about 6 ounces)

In a saucepan combine sugar and gelatin. Stir in light cream and unsweetened chocolate. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture almost boils, sugar dissolves and chocolate melts.

Stir 1 cup of hot mixture into eggs; return all to saucepan. Cook and stir 2 minutes more. (If chocolate flecks appear, beat until smooth.) Cover; chill.

Stir in whipping cream and milk chocolate. Freeze in a 4- or 5-quart ice cream freezer according to manufacturer's directions. Makes about 2½ quarts (20 servings).

DEAR ABBY

Plans vetoed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My daughter just hung up on me, and I need to run this by you to find out if you think I did the right thing.

A little background: Our daughter eloped last week with the man she's been living with for 12 years. When they returned from their elopement, they called and asked her father and me to have dinner with them to celebrate. The other guests were the parents of the groom and another couple — their good friends who were their witnesses. We went to dinner with them and offered to pick up the tab, but they refused.

Just now this daughter called me to say that since we were spared the expense of a big wedding, she thinks it's our duty to give them a wedding reception! She said they would select the time, the place, plan the menu, invite all the guests and all we would have to do was pay for it.

I told her that if she wanted a reception she would have to pay for it — that I was not interested in inviting our family and friends to a wedding reception that was 12 years too late. That's when she hung up on me. Abby, this girl is 39 years old. How do you feel about this? — HAD ENOUGH IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR HAD ENOUGH: My feelings concur with yours. You are not obligated to give your daughter a wedding reception because she eloped, thus sparing you the expense of a wedding.

DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing a gentleman who is charming and well-educated. He has traveled extensively and is a fairly prominent lecturer. He is over 60.

This man has a habit that I find very annoying. He makes a slurping noise while drinking tea. At first I tried to ignore it, then I finally told him nicely that in case he wasn't aware of it, he was making a loud noise while drinking his tea. He did not accept this criticism very well. Instead he gave me an argument, saying, "Since no one else has ever mentioned it, I assume it is OK." He said he had attended tea-tasting ceremonies in London, and "they" all make noise when they sip tea.

I have tried to find some reading material on how to drink tea, but could not come up with anything. I would like something in writing to show this gentleman. Even a word from you might convince him. Please don't mention my name, his name or the city this is from. Thank you. — A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: If your charming, world-traveled, well-educated friend needs something in writing to convince him that making a slurping noise while drinking tea is not socially acceptable, I submit this: Slurping may be OK at a tea-tasting ceremony in London, but it's considered bad taste here.

DEAR ABBY: I am almost ashamed to tell you why I am writing, but here goes: I was married in May 1985. I had a beautiful church wedding and received over 300 wedding gifts, but I never got around to writing my thank-you notes.

I have put it off for so long I am embarrassed to write them now. I really want to get them written and get it over with, but I don't know what to say. I don't want to make up some story that isn't true, but on the other hand, I don't want to appear even more irresponsible than I have already been.

Will people think I'm crazy if they get a thank-you note at this ridiculously late date? I suppose by now they will have forgotten that they never received one. Please advise. — ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: Don't for one moment suppose that those who gave you gifts have forgotten that they were never acknowledged. Write those notes as quickly as you can, with sincere apologies for your tardiness. Better a ridiculously late thank-you than none at all.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

Children learn skills from music

CHICAGO (UPI) — Piano lessons and other exposure to music at an early age can help preschoolers develop social and intellectual skills, says a piano professor at Western Illinois University.

"Music and children are a natural combination," says Ann Collins. "Most children respond to pitches and rhythms of music practically from birth, and they're eager to express themselves through movement, singing and playing an instrument."

Collins has written "Piano and Your Preschooler," a free brochure for parents available from the National Piano Foundation. "By studying the piano," she says, "a young child can learn much about the process of learning, and develop an awareness of how self-discipline and daily practice can improve his or her skills."

While many piano teachers have been reluctant to accept very young students, Collins reports that "today, 4-, 5- and 6-year-olds are beginning traditional piano study and surprising their teachers and parents with the speed of their musical development.

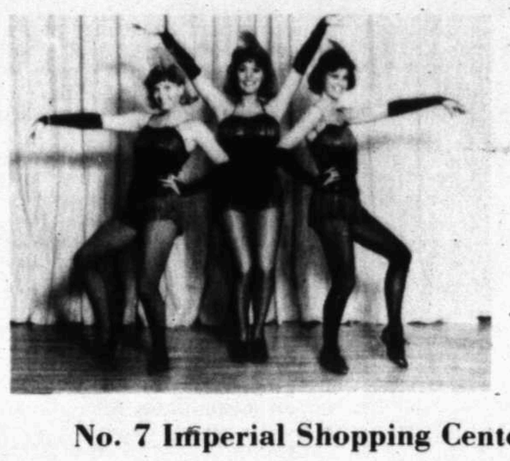

She also has found that students who begin music lessons as preschoolers have stronger rhythmic skills, listen with keener ears and are less inhibited about performing for others.

Copies of "Piano and Your Preschooler" can be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to the National Piano Foundation, 15080 Beltwood Parkway East, Suite 108, Dallas, TX 75244.

Bears popular toys

NEW YORK (AP) — Theodore Roosevelt may be remembered as a Rough Rider, but in reality he earned a soft spot in the hearts of millions of children as the inspiration for one of America's most enduring toys — the Teddy Bear.

Created in 1902, these soft toys remain as popular as ever — although they are more sophisticated than ever before. Today's teddies involve children in interactive conversations, according to Hasbro, which calls its talking bear Bingo.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Planning, perception important for retirement years

By STEVE A. EDWARDS

Edwards

"There's really only one thing wrong with the younger generation. We just don't belong to it anymore." These words were spoken in jest by a friend of mine at a recent gathering.

He had retired not long ago from a major corporation and was still trying to make the transition into this new life. It had been an extremely difficult adjustment for him.

His observation in looking back was that "the gift they gave me for the years of service was nice, but I sure wish they had done more to help me prepare for retirement. I didn't want to think about it or face the reality and they sure didn't encourage me either. One day I was working and now I'm retired. It's here and I'm not sure I know what's happening."

These words spoken by an age-denying society reflect again the importance of planning and perception as we look to the those years beyond our working ones. Regardless of our position of management or job during our employment years, we may be disenchanted or disappointed during our life in retirement if we do not define what retirement means to us prior to retirement.

Age, sex or occupation have little effect on the way people perceive themselves in retirement. Research has revealed that a person's enjoyment of retirement is greatly influenced by the way his or her family, friends and fellow workers perceive retirement in general.

These studies reiterate the point that our culture places strong emphasis on the "work ethic;" that is, if you are not working, you are unemployed — you're not a full, functioning, valued member of society.

Retirees who feel this attitude reflected by friends or business associates often feel guilty or devalued during retirement years. This not only makes the transition to retirement more difficult, but it also handicaps the retiree's enjoyment of what he has rightfully earned — the retirement years.

Researchers have found four distinctly different patterns in the way people handled and viewed retirement:

- Retirement was an indication of aging.
- Retirement represented a loss of a highly-valued activity, one that brought prestige and accomplishment.
- Retirement was viewed as of no major importance.
- Retirement was the beginning of life.

For those who saw retirement as an indication of aging, it was found that the reason for this viewpoint was because of the way their family, friends and fellow workers perceived a retired person. It's very hard not to accept the feelings and perceptions of those close to you. If they feel retirement is an indication of aging, sometimes we, in fact, age. We become a reflection of what people want us to be.

Those who believe that retirement means a loss of prestige and ego satisfaction must find other activities that can substitute for these types of acknowledgments so that their friends and family will realize they are still productive individuals.

Lack of experience in dealing with retirement is the major reason most people have difficulty in determining what retirement is all about. Retirement can also bring about highly-valued activities.

Very few people interviewed indicated that retirement was viewed as of no major importance in a person's life. What was found was that the way other people perceive is the way retirees seem to want to live.

The study also showed that individuals who saw retirement as a time to forget old work habits and plunge into new activities were most likely to find the new joys that this transition can bring. Enjoying retirement depended largely upon one's own perception as well as that of family and friends.

Retirement should be something beautiful. It is obviously something for which an individual has worked long and hard. Thus, to get the most out of it, positive planning and attitude must underline the preparation for it. It should be a reward for a "job well-done."

Women wed younger men

Associated Press

Older women are finding a simple solution to their manpower shortage — younger men.

Women over 30 outnumber men their own age, according to an article in the August issue of Harper's Bazaar. But some very famous older women have opted for men 5, 10 or even 20 years their junior.

A decade ago it was news when Dinah Shore had a four-year romance with Burt Reynolds, 18 years younger.

Now, the famous women who have pulled a role reversal on the old May-December combination include Mary Tyler Moore, Joan Collins, Audrey Hepburn, Grace Slick, Goldie Hawn, Raquel Welch, Ursula Andress, Miriam Makeba, Juliet Mills and Estelle Parsons.

The statistical reasons are there. For women over 30 there are not enough men of suitable age — two or three years older — to go around. In addition, most men over 30 are already married, gay or pursuing younger women. Add to that the fact that women who marry men their own age are likely to outlive their husbands and you have the case for younger men.

What was once taboo — when poet Elizabeth Barrett, at age 40, ran off to Italy with 30-year-old Robert Browning — is today's trend.

The stereotype of these couples is that of a calculating older woman who wants to control and dominate a younger man searching for Mommy, dragging his unresolved oedipal dilemma behind him like a tattered teddy bear.

Not true in most cases, said Joyce Sunila, author of "The New Lovers: Younger Men-Older Women. She said usually the man has real appreciation of a sophisticated, challenging woman. For the woman, it may be the first time she has been treated as an equal.

Women in these involvements may be escapees from traditional marriage to a domineering man of appropriate age whose ego needed coddling by the self-effacement of a doting wife.

As for younger men, some psychologists say they are rebelling against machismo and their parents' male-dominated marriage. Others say many of them are sons of "wimps."

Psychologist Thomas Greening, of Westwood, Calif., speculates they are looking for Dad, not Mommy, and turn to older women for the stability and guidance they failed to get from their fathers.

The number of December-May romances is likely to increase in the future. Thanks to the 1960s baby boom, the nation now has a "bachelor bulge." By 1990, according to Census Bureau figures, there will be more eligible men in their 20s than women in their 20s.

ASK DR. RUTH

Inexperienced couple planning to be married for first time

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Westheimer

Q. I'm 25 and about to be married the first time. My husband-to-be and I are both virgins. I have heard about oral sex, but don't know anything about it. Isn't it unhealthy?

A. In itself it is not unhealthy. You should consider that any sexual activity can be a way of transmitting infection from one person to another. That's one of the reasons why you select sexual partners with care — a big parallel reason being that sex is emotionally important and goes best with a serious relationship.

When both partners are healthy and clean, oral sex is as harmless as any other sexual activity, and pleasant and stimulating when both partners accept it. When one partner has a feeling against it, the practice absolutely should not be pressed. It is not a requirement for a good sex life.

Q. When is it safe to have sex without contraception?

A. Never. Unless, of course you and your loved one want to have a baby. Now, if you are asking when it is safe in the monthly cycle of the woman, there is no reliable way to tell. I recommend using barrier techniques — condoms or diaphragms — even at the so-called safe times, because the possibility of miscalculation is too great without them.

If you have religious reasons for using the natural method, you must receive thorough instruction from professionals. Otherwise it is an invitation to pregnancy.

Q. During sex my boyfriend is so undemonstrative that I am disappointed, even though I guess he is really enjoying it. Afterwards he says he is; during, he's silent as a tomb. I could use some vocal effects from him.

A. Not everybody is vocal at this time. It is a matter of personal behavior.

But you can talk to your lover and explain that if he could be a little operatic about this big event he likes so much, then your pleasure would be increased and your responses would be enhanced.

Cattus Corp. litters path to success

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

All that glitters is not litter, but one would have a hard time convincing Midland entrepreneur David Covey of that. In the span of only three years he has built a small kitty litter mail order firm with $50,000 in sales into a glittering success.

Cattus Corp., one of the few non-oil manufacturing concerns in Midland, has not neglected its mail order roots, which still account for 25 percent of the business, but a vigorous one-man expansion program has made it into an international concern with distribution throughout most of Europe and the U.S. with sales of $500,000. Next year Covey expects his litter business to glitter to the tune of one million dollars in sales as markets expand here and abroad.

Cattus Corp. now sells to England, Australia, West Germany, Israel, Japan and Puerto Rico, and is looking to add new foreign markets. In the U.S., Covey has succeeded in placing his mail order pet products in the K-mart and Woolworth chains, along with 1,150 pet stores and 150 animal hospitals. Ten distributors also help keep sales climbing.

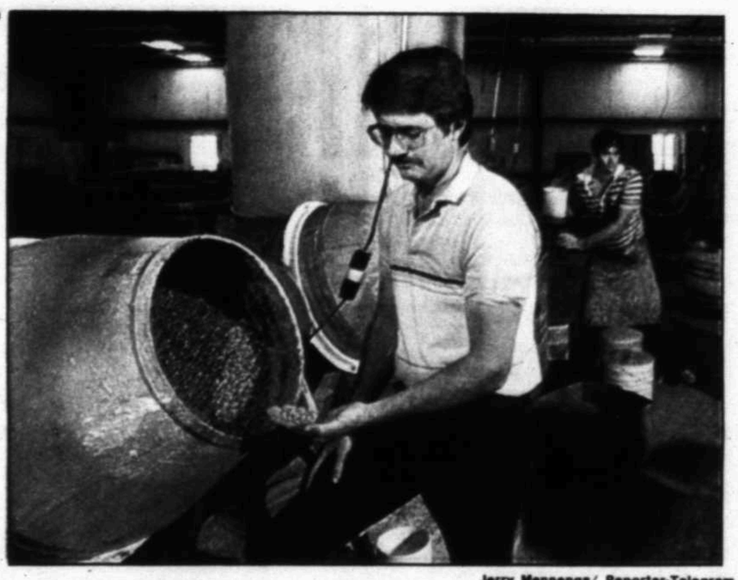

ENTREPRENEURS

Covey says an aggressive sales program that required many weeks on the road calling on stores and attending cat shows is responsible for the dramatic increase in sales and retail outlets. "We used to do $50,000 a year in sales, but I just received an order from K-mart for $140,000."

He also attributes much of his success to word-of-mouth advertising and magazine advertising in cat magazines and Reader's Digest.

"Reader's Digest gave us our biggest high since we have been in business," said Covey. "An ad in the magazine brought us over 5,000 responses, turned things around for us and kept us going. We are still getting calls from the ad." He said Reader's Digest was selected because surveys showed it had a very high percentage of readers who owned pets and had a long shelf life.

"We also used cat shows to help spread our reputation. Cat lovers form a clan and word of mouth advertising has brought us many opportunities," he said. Covey said a display at the National Supreme Cat Show in London had resulted in new European distribution and the establishment of a warehouse in London.

Jerry Mennenga/ Reporter-Telegram

The former president of Security National Bank in Midland, Covey says he became interested in Cattus Corp. after it was passed over as a potential investment by a group of Midland investors. "I saw a window

Can handwriting help find the right worker?

Can penmanship reveal character?

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Businesses use many tools including interviews, aptitude tests, lie detector tests, and background checks, but a Midland woman says handwriting analysis is one of the most reliable tools and more and more businesses are turning to it in an attempt to make the best hires.

According to local handwriting expert, Juanita M. Turner, employers in Europe have long depended on graphoanalysis, the study of a person's handwriting to to determine the character and personality of an applicant. U.S. courts have also long ago accepted the reliability of this study. And now, says Turner, U.S. businesses are beginning to follow suit.

"A bank in Colorado will not hire anyone without screening them through handwriting analysis," says Turner, who has studied graphoanalysis since 1955.

She says, however, that she's not aware of any local business which uses graphoanalysis. "But I hope employers will soon see the validity of it. It works, and it's been proven. It all starts in the brain. The arm holds the instrument and does what the brain tells it to."

Turner says she can tell a prospective employer such traits about an applicant as:

- how he'll react under stress
- how he gets along with others
- how he takes instructions
- what kind of decisions he's capable of making and,
- his organizational abilities.

"For example, an employer looking for an employee that will follow instructions explicitly, and not want to do it his way can be determined by handwriting analysis, as can the employee who will take charge."

But employers aren't the only ones who can put this skill to good use. For job-seekers, Turner also offers "Vocational Graphoanalysis" which helps determine an individual's aptitudes and vocational interests and can be a help to career selection.

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Juanita Turner has studied graphoanalysis since 1955.

It can also be used by credit services to determine an applicant's reliability, and, perhaps, a tendency to lie or steal.

She said it was difficult for individuals to disguise personality traits in their handwriting, that they could disguise by acting.

"Everyone has fears and defenses that can affect their personality. Everyone has to protect their ego," Turner notes, adding that's one reason she'd like to work with children — to help them before they can begin forming their fears and defenses. One thing a Graphoanalyst cannot do is determine the writer's gender or age.

Turner was introduced to graphoanalysis by a co-worker over 30 years ago. At the time she was working in data processing, "which is the boringest thing that ever was." She's been concentrating on the skill the last couple of years, recently receiving a certificate from the International Graphoanalysis Society, designating her a Certified Graphoanalyst. "It's hard work," she notes. "It takes at least 15 hours for a thorough analysis, and you have to have at least 100 downward strokes to do a good job."

And it's not cheap, either. A business graphoanalysis can cost $150, and a comprehensive compatability report, for an engaged couple, for example, can cost

Graphoanalysis: How accurate?

How accurate is graphoanalysis? Needless to say when it comes to accurately predicting human behavior and character using such criteria as the slant of letters, position of the dots over "i's" and the means in which "t's" are crossed there is bound to be some skepticism, especially among a pack of natural skeptics in a news room.

To answer the question, the business-oil department of the Reporter Telegram conducted its own unscientific test and determined — at least in this instance — that the analytical process is relatively accurate — about 67.5 percent accurate to be exact.

Here's how the test was conducted: Six individuals of the Reporter-Telegram editorial staff were asked to write the signature, John Paul Pitts. The signatures were given to Juanita Turner who took them home for the evening and wrote a brief paragraph below each signature about the person who wrote it.

The next day the character descriptions under the signatures were handed back to the person who signed it, and he or she was asked to read it carefully and rate it for percent of accuracy. If they felt only 50 percent of what was presented in the analysis was true about them, they would give it 50 percent and so on. Of the six grades, the highest (85 percent) and lowest (10 percent) were thrown out and the remaining four (80,70,70 and 50) were averaged to come out with 67.5 percent.

Obviously one, who was treated rather harshly in the analysis (Miss 10 percent), thought the whole process was "bull stuff" while another who was treated more favorably (Miss 85 percent) thought it was very accurate.

Perhaps it would have been more accurate to have someone other than the individual involved rate the accuracy of the character analysis. It would also have been more accurate to have provided Mrs. Turner with more handwriting than just a signature for analysis. Nevertheless, our test was not designed to hold up under scientific scrutiny but merely to provide a ball park guesstimate of accuracy.

New FERC order has gas industry puzzled

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

A new version of 'let's make a deal' on old gas is causing justified confusion among natural gas producers and pipelines.

Vintaged natural gas — unlike fine vintage wines — is much cheaper than its more contemporary counterparts. And, in an effort to bring prices of 'old' natural gas closer to today's market clearing prices, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) has opened a potential Pandora's Box of new complications in the gas industry under the guise of 'good faith renegotiation'.

Under Phase I of FERC Order 451, designed to de-vintage old gas reserves and supplies, effective July 30 gas producers and their purchasers can enter voluntary renegotiation to bring 'old' pre-1974 gas prices up to a ceiling price equal to Section 109 gas

Reporter-Telegram

(discovered between 1974 and 1978) of $2.58 per Mcf.

Starting Nov. 1, Phase II of the good faith process takes effect. Beginning on that date, producers will be able to nominate any of their purchase contracts which cover 'old' gas production, either exclusively or partially — such as under a multi-vintage contract.

Once a contract has been nominated, the gas purchaser must make a counter-offer at or below the $2.58 ceiling price. The producer can then either accept the purchaser's new price, or reject the offer and receive FERC abandonment authority on the contract and be free to market the gas elsewhere.

If the purchaser has the only pipeline in the field, and the producer decides to market his gas to other purchasers, the pipeline is obligated to provide non-discriminatory transportation for the producer's gas.

However, if a producer nominates one contract with a particular purchaser, then the purchaser can turn around and open up all other contracts covering old gas volumes between the two parties.

IPAA BRIEFINGS

The complicated nature and individualized impact of Order 451 will affect many independent gas producers. The Independent Petroleum Association of America has scheduled a series of half-day meetings to explain the possible ramifications of the rules to producers around the region:

9 — Houston (9 a.m.)
— New Orleans (3:30 p.m.)
10 — Shreveport (9 a.m.)
— Dallas (3:30 p.m.)

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Unity: a good idea for hard times

When Federal Energy Regulatory Commissioner Michael Naeve was in town recently, he recalled his days as an aide to Senator Lloyd Bentsen: "When the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 was being drafted, we received almost as much input from the Permian Basin Petroleum Association as from all the other oil and gas associations put together. We were in contact with PBPA and its president Al Dillard almost daily and found their input and insight to be most helpful."

While the NGPA was an atrocity committed against the oil industry by a hostile Congress and administration and even more hostile bureaucrats, Naeve hinted that it might have been much worse if not for the efforts of PBPA.

The kudos were nothing new for an organization that has been fighting for the Permian Basin in Washington and Austin for over 25 years.

More recently, efforts by PBPA, along with other oil and gas associations, were instrumental in getting a "less-punitive" treatment of tax reform for the oil industry out of the Senate. Midland oilmen, representing PBPA at their own expense, kept the Dallas-Washington routes profitable for airlines for months on end, flying back to Washington to answer IPAA call-ups and explain the oil industry's side of tax reform. Some, like former PBPA president Perry Bolger, came away with well-earned callouses on his knuckles from knocking on the doors of "unfriendly" congressmen.

"While it's hard to quantify effort, I feel our efforts had a positive effect on the outcome," said Bolger, who had to put his own business on the sideline while lobbying for the Permian Basin oil industry.

Others also feel the effort was worthwhile. One would be hard put to find a doubter anywhere in the industry who would say PBPA did not make a difference in informing the uninformed and abating animosity toward the oil industry in some quarters. While oil industry treatment was not as favorable as we in the Basin would have liked, it was about as good as one could have expected in the political process, where compromise is the name of the game.

One thing is certain: whatever comes out of the House/Senate Conference Committee on tax reform will be considerably better than what the industry would have gotten if members of PBPA and other oil associations had not gone to Washington armed with expert testimony to plead the case of the oil industry.

What will those efforts mean to the Permian Basin? Over the long haul, if the Senate version of tax reform holds, it could mean literally billions of salvaged dollars for drilling and development that would have been lost with cancellation of depletion allowances and intangible drilling costs.

Those are 'oil-finding' dollars that get passed around this community many times — from operators to banks to service companies to payrolls to local stores.

But the efforts of this association to keep oil dollars pumping into our economy and to safeguard the processes which pump them, doesn't end there.

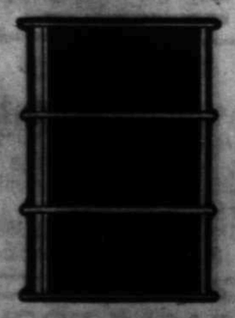

Many oil and gas operators in the Permian Basin will have their cash flow improved considerably this month as a result of new royalty policies announced by the General Lands Office and University Lands System. Operators on state and school lands were previously required to pay royalties on the highest posted price, without consideration for transportation charges or difference in pricing by lease.

The PBPA and Rep. Tom Craddick (R-Midland) worked hard to have these pricing inequities rewritten. The saved dollars will be pumped back into the local economy.

When the Texas Railroad Commission decided to extend the length of time in which an operator has to plug a marginal well from 60 days to

Posted prices climb

For the second consecutive week, the median posted price per barrel of West Texas Intermediate crude climbed a dollar — to $13.25 — for most area purchasers. Another jump could be on the horizon for next week because of increased stability on the spot market, says one crude buyer. For this week's key industry indicators, see PAGE 3G.

of opportunity and potential there and decided to take it," said the 38-year-old graduate of Southwest Texas State University at San Marcos and Southern Methodist University.

In 1983 Covey formed a limited partnership to purchase the patent and firm from inventor Harry Lander, who is also the inventor of the solid-core, long-play golf ball and materials used in drop ceilings. Once the purchase was complete, he moved the entire operation from Grand Rapids, Michigan to Midland.

Originally invented as a bacteria-free bedding for laboratory animals, Covey says Kitty Privy is unique in the cat world because it doesn't absorb urine, instead allowing it to pass directly through the litter into an air tight pan below where it is neutralized by a special chemical compound. "Litter which absorbs urine and causes it to evaporate produces odor," he informed.

Made from crushed corn cob granules cooked in pots of hot wax and coated with epoxy in cement mixers, much of the manufacturing process is done by Covey and his family with the help of occasional temporary workers.

Even though the firm is going for a million dollars in sales, it remains essentially a family business. While David is on the road lining up dealers, attending shows and establishing new accounts, his wife Diane, a former homemaking teacher, oversees much of the bagging, packaging and shipping as well as company books. His brother Russell is in charge of production, where David and Diane's 12-year-old son Stephen works part time shoveling corn cob granules into cement mixer blenders. Even his mom and dad, who are retired and spend much of their time traveling, are in the act, as was his uncle, who once ran the firm's San Francisco warehouse and called on 110 stores in the Bay area.

As for the future, Covey says that he has just "scratched the surface" in the cat business: "There are over 27 million households in the U.S. that use kitty litter. This is a $1.5 billion industry, with lots of room to grow." He says he had no intention of building a company to sell to a conglomerate, because he's having too much fun.

Covey says other manufacturing concerns could relocate to Midland and succeed with a good capital base and a willingness to work hard.

PITTS

one year, thus saving hundreds of stripper wells from extinction, PBPA had already been there, bending the ear of the commissioners.

A long-standing slogan of the association has been: "Oil is everyone's business in the Permian Basin." And few would dispute that statement. Everybody in the Permian Basin who rings a cash register or draws a paycheck is either directly or indirectly living on oil dollars.

And that's why almost every retail, wholesale, and service business in the Permian Basin is a member of PBPA and why every oil company faithfully supports the oil association that looks after our interests in Washington and Austin — isn't it?

Wrong! Not only is most of the business community of the Permian Basin not members of this organization which charges a mere $100 a year, but the association is having a difficult time holding on to the members it has.

According to Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of PBPA, membership is down 18 percent and dropping. Spannaus says it's a direct result of cost-cutting measures by oil companies: "When things get tough they cut out petroleum club memberships, country club memberships and association memberships."

The net result is that constriction of memberships is hurting the operations of the PBPA not only from a fiscal standpoint, but from a bargaining standpoint.

"When I walk into a congressman's office in Washington and tell him I represent 1,700 members of the oil industry in the Permian Basin it makes a bigger difference than if I tell him I represent only 1,000," said Charles Perry, current president of the PBPA.

I would not presume to tell anyone else how to run his business or spend his money, but to me it seems only logical that when things get tough in one's industry, one normally gets behind the association that fights his battles and looks after him in the political and regulatory arenas. That holds true if you're a teacher, doctor, car dealer, plumber or oil man. Or, all — if they make a living in the Permian Basin.

Producers bring legislative aides to Basin oil patch

This week, Midland will host administrative assistants to 15 U.S. senators and representatives on the second annual trip sponsored by the West Texas Producers Forum (WTPF).

Participants will include individuals from the staffs of: Sens. Paul Simon, D-Ill.; Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio; and Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas; and Reps. Phillip Crane, R-Ill., Lee Hamilton, D-Ill., and Virginia Smith, R-Nebr. The group will arrive Aug. 20, for a luncheon and introduction to the oil business at the Petroleum Museum. That evening the WTPF will host a dinner party at the Plaza Club, with Thomas Wageman, president of RepublicBank First National Midland speaking.

Also, the aides will visit Parallel Petroleum Co. to see an oil company at work. Thursday will be used for a field trip to a drilling rig and production and field installations.

WTPF spokesman Richard Dulaney said last year's trip was successful, and he hopes the trip will become a regular event. "This humanizes West Texas for the vistors," he said. "I've been on several IPAA call-ups, and come away with the impression that I didn't do any good. No one up there knew me, or had time to talk."

"They had no way to relate to what I was talking about. This trip gives them a picture of West Texas, and puts a new face on what I believe they think is a monolithic industry," he added.

He added that bringing the aides to West Texas is more efficient as well as more effective. "Recently 10 of us went to Washington at an average cost of $700 per person for two days. We're bringing them down here at an average cost of $500, and it's a better environment that helps them listen better."

U.S. rig count up fourth week in a row

The number of working oil and gas rigs in the country rose for the fourth week in a row to 734, Hughes Tool Co. officials reported.

The Permian Basin rig count held steady at 89 after advancing the previous three weeks. A year ago there were 281 rigs working in the Basin.

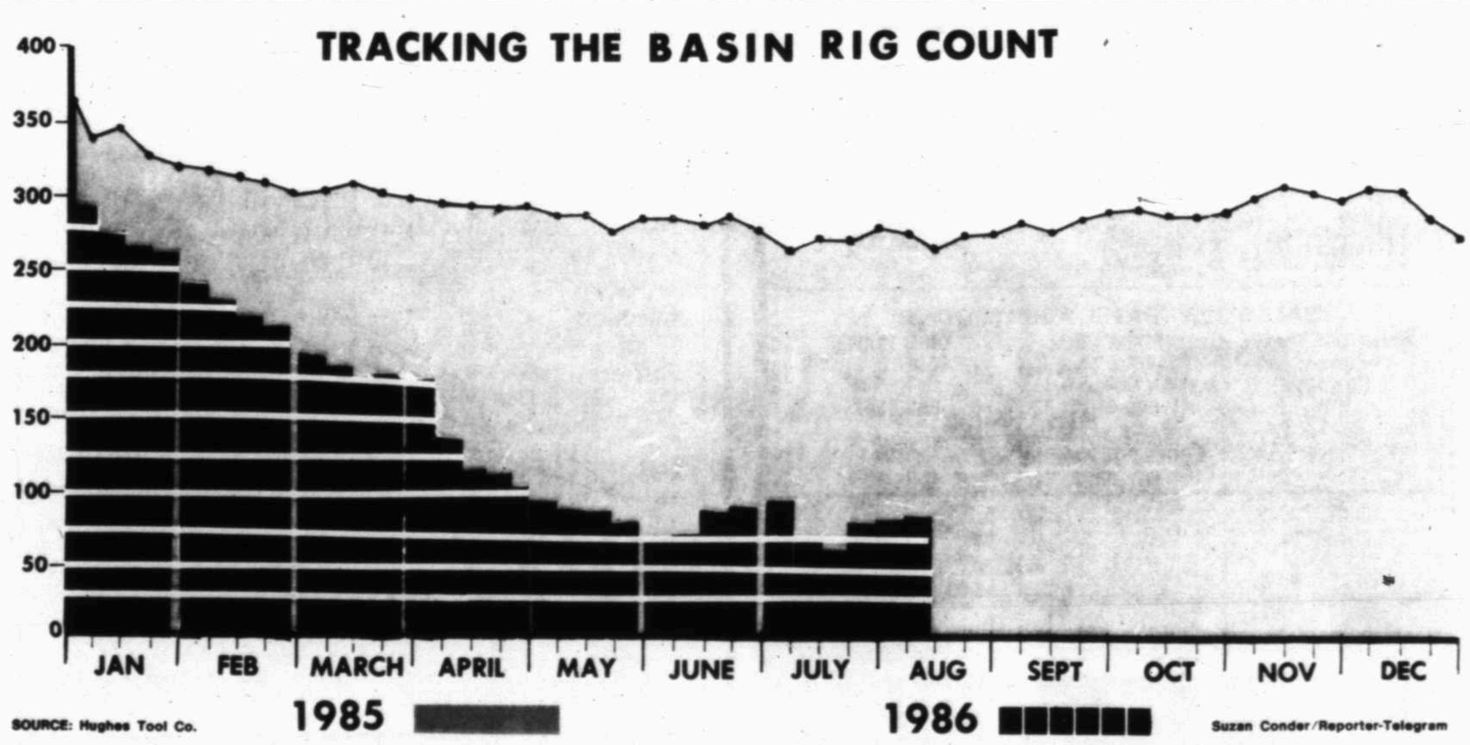

During July, the rig counts were at all-time lows of 663 and 672, company officials said.

Before 1971, the lowest number was 805 rigs working in April 1943, according to officials of the oil tool maker that has kept industry statistics since 1940.

More than 1,000 rigs have been idle since December when oil prices began their slump, falling as low as $9 a barrel. Since Dec. 23, the rig count has dropped steadily from 1,995, officials said.

FDIC rescues Oklahoma bank

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A $130 million federal package has been put together to prevent the closing of the financially troubled Bank of Oklahoma in Oklahoma City, the government said Friday.

The rescue effort is a joint operation of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the Federal Reserve Board and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

The plan was approved because the Oklahoma City branch of the bank is in danger of failing, and the FDIC determined the aid package is the least costly option, the agency said.

The bank, with assets of $500 million, is one of 11 banking subsidiaries of BancOklahoma Corp., a bank holding company with assets of more than $2.5 billion.

As part of the rescue plan, the bank will be merged into the $1.6 billion Tulsa branch of the Bank of Oklahoma.

The FDIC's assistance will consist of purchasing $90 million of nonvoting convertible preferred stock in the bank and the repayment of $40 million of the bank's existing debt to the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City.

As a condition of the program, the FDIC will receive warrants to buy 55 percent of the common stock of BancOklahoma at a nominal price. In addition, bank creditors of the holding company have agreed to substantial concessions in the terms of their loans, the FDIC said.

In Tulsa, Leonard J. Eaton Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of BancOklahoma Corp., said the merger and new capital will "create one of the strongest, best capitalized banks in the region."

Eaton said the plan is subject to approval by BancOklahoma Corp. shareholders.

"Following the merger, the bank will have total assets of $2 billion and a primary capital-to-assets ratio of 12.66 percent, more than twice the minimum regulatory guideline," Eaton said.

The nine other Bank of Oklahoma subsidiary banks located in and near Tulsa are not affected by the merger and will remain as individual banks under BancOklahoma Corp., he said.

The rescue plan was announced less than 24 hours after the failure of the Citizens National Bank in Oklahoma City.

Citizens National was the second Oklahoma bank to be declared insolvent this month, the ninth this year and the 30th since the Penn Square Bank collapse.

The two branches of Citizens National bank will reopen Monday morning as branch offices of Liberty National Bank, a subsidiary of Banks of MidAmerica, Inc.

General Motors may drop price on 1987 Chevettes

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. may lower the base price on its 1987 Chevrolet Chevette this fall to $4,995 to compete with foreign makes and Chrysler Corp.'s Omni-Horizon models, a trade newspaper reports.

Automotive News, quoting unidentified sources, also reported Monday that to cut costs of the Chevette, GM may limit color choices and options for the car, as Chrysler did with the 1987 Dodge Omni-Plymouth Horizon.

Chrysler cut base prices of those cars by more than $700, to $5,499, and touted them as the lowest-priced U.S.-made cars. It has since announced a $300 price increase.

GM spokesman Harold Jackson said the automaker wouldn't comment on the report.

China tries to deal with complaints

PEKING (UPI) — China, responding to mounting complaints by foreign businessmen over the difficulty and high cost of doing business in the country, sought last week to reassure them that things will get better.

Foreign firms in China complain of flagrant price gouging, exorbitant labor fees and other high costs. They also say they have been unable to get the necessary foreign exchange to finance their operations in China.

Premier Zhao Ziyang, in a meeting with a group of business leaders and diplomats from the United States, Japan, West Germany and Britain, said China is looking into their complaints and is seeking to remedy the foreign exchange crunch plaguing many of them.

"Some foreign firms are complaining that investors in China feel disappointed at the relatively high costs," Zhao was paraphrased by the news agency Xinhua as telling the Westerners.

"China is prepared to consider this problem seriously in order to keep China attractive to foreign investors," he said. "The cost of their products will have to be kept low enough to make them competitive on the international market."

One Western bank representative recently paid $230,000 in one year's advance rent for his small hotel room office in Peking, where there is a severe shortage of commercial space.

Other businessmen say they have been asked for cash kickbacks from Chinese officials, or for consumer items such as color televisions, refrigerators and washing machines.

All foreign ventures must hire employees through the state-run Foreign Enterprises Service Company (Fesco), a government monopoly. As a result, wages often are several times higher than the worker actually gets to keep.

A recent report by a Western commercial attache cited the example of one company that pays $286 a month for a driver, who receives only $36 from Fesco.

Inability to get foreign exchange for parts, let alone to repatriate profits, is another problem that central bank President Wang Deyan said the government is attempting to alleviate.

Even where export-oriented foreign firms have found domestic demand for their products, all domestic sales are paid for in nonconvertible Chinese renminbi, leaving them unable to repatriate profits.

The problem here is China's dwindling foreign exchange reserves, which dropped from $16.3 billion in September 1984 to $10.34 billion in March this year.

One sign of growing disillusionment among foreign investors was a government report last week that showed China is experiencing its first major slowdown in overseas investment in seven years.

The government said the value of foreign investment contracts in the first half of this year slumped 20 percent to $1.24 billion. A record $5.85 billion was recorded for all of 1985.

If the producer 'opts out' of the contract, he has an obligation to give the former pipeline/purchaser firm's customers — usually local distribution companies — a right of first refusal to match the price the producer has negotiated in the open market.

THE POSSIBLE STUMBLING blocks along the way to de-vintaging 'old' gas under this program are many and varied, explains Robert Pratt, staff counsel on natural gas matters for the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA). Pratt was recently appointed to the position which was first authorized by the IPAA at its national meeting this spring.

For instance, if producer and purchaser reach any sort of voluntary agreement during Phase I of the 451 plan, the producer forfeits the automatic abandonment authority provision of Phase II. If, during the good faith renegotiation after November 1, the producer seeks a higher price which the purchaser fails to meet, the producer is not allowed to walk away from the purchase contract and seek other markets without going through FERC abandonment hearing procedures, Pratt says.

Midland gas consultant John Smart of Smart & Kuss expects to see little negotiation activity before the November deadline, because Phase I holds little incentive for either party to upgrade contracts.

All of the interpretations of the existing FERC order are conditioned on the outcome of a rehearing on the rules anticipated in September. According to FERC spokesman Bobby Isaac, the FERC commissioners are expected to comment on the merits of the substantive issues raised by more than 60 petitioners seeking changes or delays in the rules.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals granted a temporary stay of the FERC order on July 17 to postpone the original effective date from July 18 to July 31, at which point both the appellate court and the commission refused to grant a further stay of the order.

PHASE II IS WHEN things could get tricky, gas industry observers agree.

Gas producers must thoroughly evaluate their gas sales portfolios on a purchaser-by-purchaser basis before triggering the good faith renegotiation provision. If not they could face re-bargaining on multi-vintage contracts which could ultimately lower prices for newer gas production covered by contracts nominated by the purchaser, Smart explains.

In addition, if a producer rejects the purchaser's counter-offered price and takes abandonment authority over the gas, he must then be ready, willing and able to market the gas on his own.

Operators must also evaluate the ramifications of renegotiation — or the decision not to renegotiate — on working interest and royalty owners. Some would benefit by higher prices for old gas and others' participation income could be cut by bargaining away higher new gas prices under multi-vintage contracts.

"Because of the far-reaching impact of these decisions, Order 451 is forcing all gas operators to thoroughly investigate their sales contracts, and take appropriate actions," Smart notes.

"Generally, most gas marketing rule changes give producers opportunities which they can take advantage of, if they so choose; but don't force the issue. Under 451, producers who don't consciously decide for or against renegotiation could face lawsuits from royalty and interest owners who feel their gas is being sold too cheaply."

The IPAA's Pratt cites another potential legal pitfall with the rules: determining how broad a spectrum of contracts can be triggered by the purchaser after the producer has opted for good faith negotiation. Some producers fear that contracts covering wells which produced 'old' gas prior to being abandoned could be interpreted as multi-vintage, although all current production is 'new' gas.

Limousine factory planned

HOUSTON (UPI) — A group of Houston and California investors is preparing to open a limousine and "specialty" car factory in a 112,000-square-foot facility that eventually will employ 300 workers.

The new firm, called Rolzcad Industries, is being transformed from a privately held firm to a publicly owned company incorporated in Utah.

Robert Psenka, pro tem chairman and general manager of Rolzcad, said Thursday the company will produce commercial limousines for the international market, plus specialty cars.

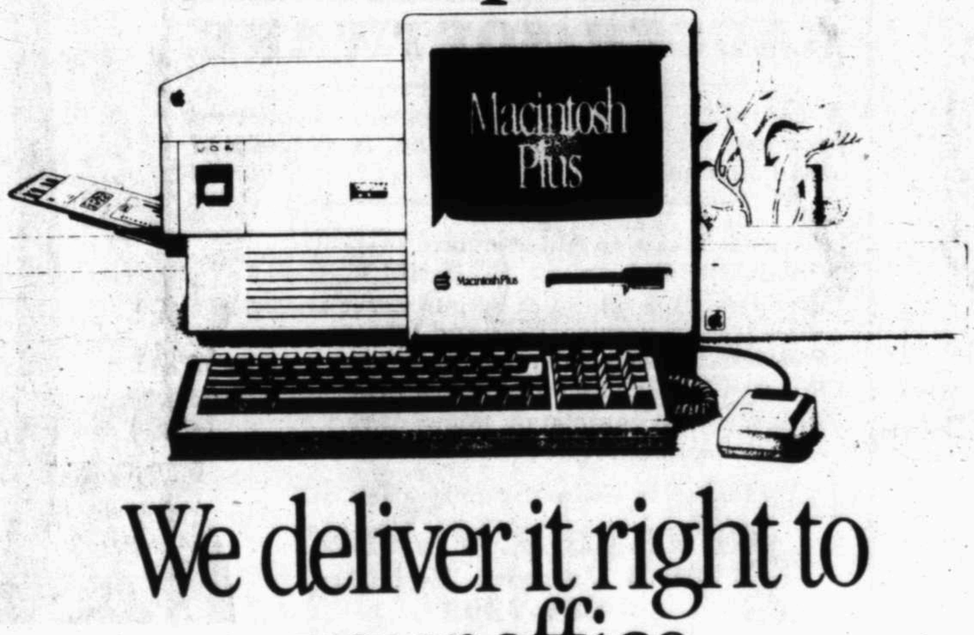

The company has acquired a $6.5 million plant and 15.8-acre site northwest of Houston.

Barry Beck, left, and Stan Jacobs talk about the "Marco Polos of Midland" exhibit, on display at Midland College's McCormick Gallery through Aug. 29. On the wall behind them, are samples of clothing sold to tourists who travel to China. The colors are much brighter than those actually worn by the Chinese.

MIDLAND'S MARCO POLOS

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

"The Marco Polos of Midland" exhibit, on display at Midland College's McCormick Gallery through Aug. 29, is the result of an idea born during June's cultural trip to China.

"Joan Baskin (president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the trip) and I talked on the trip home about the fact that we ought to have a showing of everything that's been purchased, and that it would be nice to have it at the college," says Barry Beck, vice president of the newly formed Midland-Dongying Sister City Association.

"The college was interested in the educational value of such a show," says Stan Jacobs, chairman of MC's Fine Arts Department. "There are several different types of art going on now which have historical value."

"The pottery is reminiscent of Ming Dynasty porcelains. There are Ching Dynasty reproductions of Ming Dynasty work. China will now allow nothing older than 1796 exported, and the Ming Dynasty was 1368-1644. Considered like the Golden Age in Greece, it was in many ways China's golden age and the height of its artistic development in the rhelm of pottery."

The exhibit also features scrolls with "ethereal misty landscapes," reminiscent of the Sung Dynasty, 906-960, Jacobs says. "What's surprising is when you go over there, you discover the landscapes really look that way."

A public reception for "The Marco Polos of Midland" exhibit will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday in the Allison Fine Arts Building's McCormick Gallery. Included in the items on display, which come from 15 individuals and have been acquired on several trips to China, are scrolls, pottery, clothing, cloisonne pieces, dolls and boudoir items.

"The reception is a good opportunity to visit with those involved in the sister city program," Beck says. The association is open to new members.

Unlike Marco Polo, who left Venice for China in 1271 with his father and uncle to return 24 years later in 1295, the Midland trip took a must shorter period of time — two weeks. However, the purposes were similiar — establishing an exchange of ideas and trade.

"The main purpose of the trip in June was the signing of accords between Midland and Dongying," Beck says. "Dongying, it just so happens, is in the center of one of China's largest oil producing regions. It produces the same percent of China's total as the Permian Basin does for the U.S. total. Both produce 22 percent."

The China field is less developed than the Permian Basin, having been in production since the late 1950s and early 1960s. The area is flat and geographically resembles Midland-Odessa except that the Yellow River runs nearby.

"We felt our two localities would have some things in common," Beck says. "The reason to work together is to find out more about the other's culture and maybe to help each other economically in trade."

The cultural exchange agreement signed June 22 states that the two cities will exchange art work which is representative of the people, occupations, landscapes and landmark items of each city. Thus, 54 pieces of art work executed by 30 Midland artists were sent to Dongying Aug. 15.

The works will hang in the Cultural Palace of Dongying, a five-story recreational facility for the 1,400,000 population. This fall when the Dongying delegation visits Midland, included in the luggage will be at least 30 pieces of visual art from the artists in the Dongying area to be displayed for two months in Midland.

The members of the Sister City Association hope this is just a beginning for cultural exchanges and that future such endeavors will encompass visual and performing arts as well.

The Tango dances back into popularity

Waves of its wicked, sensuous rhythm sweep the nation

By PHYLLIS ZAUNER
King Features Syndicate

They're doing the tango again. Seductive, lascivious, sleek and passionate, the tango has turned into the surprise dance hit of 1986. From New York to San Francisco, Minneapolis to Miami, at private parties, public dances and supper clubs, the insinuating rhythms of "Jalousie" and "La Cumparsita" are again working their magic, calling couples out on the floor to engage in a dance that is dazzlingly sexy.

As danced by professionals in Latin tango clubs, it is downright incendiary. The man, dressed to suggest power and domination, begins with back slightly arched and his face impassive and hard, much the way a matador faces a bull.

The woman, her skimpy dress slashed up to the waist, also wears a blank expression. They join in a tight embrace and begin the intricate steps and glides of the dance.

As the music drives relentlessly, the dancers move erotically to the beat, their hips touching, her leg curling around his hip as they turn. The dance often ends with the man leaning over the submissive form of his partner.

The tango is Argentina's national dance. But for Americans, it is not an easy dance, says Margie Tozer, a San Francisco tango instructor. "Americans have a fear of intimacy, are shy about being so openly sensual and showing sexuality in public."

So what's brought them out of their shells?

Although the origin of the wave is difficult to pinpoint with certainty, it seems likely that the Broadway show "Tango Argentino" was the major catalyst in bringing back a dance that has been virtually moribund in this country since Fred and Ginger gave it up.

This elite company of 15 dancers, four singers and a dozen musicians was formed in Argentina by Claudio Segovia and Hector Orezzoli, who combed dance halls and clubs all over their country to find the best tango teams. Having then produced a solid hit at home, they took the cabaret-style revue to Paris and New York.

"Tango Argentino" arrived on the Broadway scene in October 1985 for a five-week engagement and turned out to be the season's surprise smash hit — or as Variety put it, "a genuine sleeper doing prairie-fire business."

What these dancers do is certainly not the basic American tango once performed seriously by Rudolph Valentino and satirically by Groucho Marx, later polished by Fred Astaire, and popularized by Arthur Murray in his 1920s radio dance lessons.

This is the rough and tortuous tango that got its start in the bordellos of Buenos Aires a century ago, where flashing legs were sometimes joined by flashing knives. This was the lusty dance of the lower element.

But in 1907 the steamy dance rose from the underworld and was swept into the ballrooms of Parisian high society, where exponents of its sensuous movements displayed their expertise at "tango teas."

In this new sleek and sinuous form it took Paris and New York by storm. No dance ever — not the lindy, the twist nor the gyrations of disco — has had the impact that the tango did in those years. But by the 1930s the craze had died.

The New York run of "Tango Argentino," awash in rave reviews, was extended for an additional eight weeks. Since then, the company has been on North American tour, playing to standing ovations.

As George Theiss, director of Arthur Murray headquarters in Miami, is pleased to report, "These dancers have stimulated a tremendous interest in the tango wherever they've appeared — and even where they haven't appeared but their fame has reached."

At the Arthur Murray studios in Minneapolis (where the dancers haven't appeared) manager Gary Stephens says about one-fourth of the telephone inquiries he receives now ask if the tango is included in the dance lesson package.

Lately he's been touting the tango on TV talk shows. "I'm also putting together a show for cable TV, demonstrating the tango steps. We even brought in Vicki Regan from New York to choreograph the dances for a professional couple."

So far, no one is willing to hazard a guess as to how long this tango fad will last. Some indicators suggest we may be in for another craze like the one that began before World War I and lasted into the late 1930s.

New York, especially, has taken the tango to its heart. The venerable Tango Palace, just above Times Square, packs them in. And La Milonga, an Argentine restaurant on Ninth Avenue, gained a new popularity after the cast of "Tango Argentino" took to hanging out there.

In late May "Tango Argentino" started its run in Los Angeles, a city well-known for embracing the avant-garde. In a wild gesture of welcome, the Dance Gallery (a center for all kinds of dance) bought out the entire Pantages Theater seating for one performance, and staged a tango party in the lobby before curtain time.

In preparation for this grand event, there was a surge of visits to dance studios as invited guests swept into the spirit of learning the dance.

Terry Leone, owner of dance studios in Beverly Hills and Dallas, says the excitement over the tango is such that during the preceding week he had no less than six invitations to tango parties.

"Women are coming out in tight tango dresses slit to the knee. Men are dressing in gaucho clothes. The tango has put romance back in dancing; it's the injection the public has needed for a long time. People are bored with the bump-bump beat of disco. Tango music is beautiful, almost classical."

To keep up with the times, he says, the Los Angeles Roosevelt Hotel now features tango matinees every Sunday afternoon, including an hour of instruction. The same thing happens at a popular night spot called Helene's on Tuesday nights, when Robert Duvall and others of the movie clan can be seen practicing the intricate steps.

"But tango may not hold up in the long run," Leone fears, "because people don't hear enough of the music. When Leroy Anderson wrote "Blue Tango" in the 1950s, people loved it. But no new tango music has been written, and disc jockeys seldom play it. The dance will last only as long as people are compelled by the music."

Compelled by music, or whatever force, Americans are at least momentarily caught up in a new dance that is certainly nothing less than macho, according to Cesar Ascarrunz, owner of Cesar's Latin Palace in San Francisco.

"It is like a man riding a horse," he explains. "He is trying to do the best he can with a woman — they caress. He gets close to the woman, to feel her." Latins can learn the tango quite quickly, he says. The rest of the world? "Two left feet!"

That is not to say, however, that a passable variation of the Argentine tango can't be learned with a little practice.

At the Ruvano Dance Studio in San Francisco, Marge Tozer and her Latin-born husband, Rudy Valle, have found tango business brisk of late. Tozer says, though, that the classes often leave her with an aching back. "You just can't tango properly without body contact," Tozer tells her male students. But while she is trying to get closer, the student is pulling away. "I tell him, 'No, no, you're not holding me right.' Every time I have to say, 'Come on, it's OK to put your knee in here.' "

"Also, Americans have a tendency never to look at their dance partner," Valle complains. In one of the steps that Tozer and Valle demonstrate, they glide into an intricate pose in which, bodies tightly pressed, they stare deeply into each other's eyes while her right hand, beginning on his cheek, slides slowly down his chest.

That's why the best tango dancers are often married (as are some of the "Tango Argentino" couples), according to Ed Lahl, who teaches the tango for San Francisco's Parks and Recreation Department. "The dance comes from a man and woman expressing their feelings for each other. Done with just anybody, you lose the provocativeness."

In any case, Tozer has found it better to accept only couples into her tango class. Not just because of the necessary body contact, but also because of the kicking — what one dance has called "cuts and bruises and a certain amount of bleeding."

The right clothes are very important to the tango. You must be able to move. A dress should allow freedom of movement, so the legwork of the dance can be seen and appreciated. Slits offer one solution, full skirts another.

High heels are a must. "But don't wear dance shoes that have open toes, the real strappy ones," warns Tozer. "The men always step on your toes."

Another word of caution for novices: Don't wear long, loose necklaces; "you could inadvertently hit your partner with a rope of pearls as you demonstrate your prowess."

For the men, pin-striped suits give the desired look of callous machismo, though there are some who favor the ruffled shirt.

There are some who say that the tango's rise goes back to the Broadway musical "Evita" and its hit tune, "Don't Cry for Me, Argentina."

It is certain that the music is one of the tango's basic allures. In fact, in Buenos Aires, that is the main draw. Tango parlors might feature a dancing act or two, but true aficionados come only for the music, which is as haunting and tragic as anything you'll ever hear.

The bandoneon, an instrument similar to the accordion, whumps and sighs, while a man with tears in voice wails out his despair, his exquisite grief. Almost without exception the lyrics tell of a woman who has left her man for another. Those who listen grow wistful and melancholy, remembering their own lost loves. The tango is in their blood.

The impetus of the tango in America was accelerated in the early 1980s by three popular new record releases. One was a Placido Domingo album, with the Spanish-born tenor backed by a studio orchestra. There was also "The Tango Project," a collection of tango classics by pianist Michael Sahle.

But the best album to dance to is one called simply "Tango" on the Picante label, with arrangements of songs you love to hum — "La Cumparsita" and "Adios Muchachos," "Blue Tango," "Jalousie" and "Orchids in the Moonlight."

Buy it. Take it home and start practicing. Put on your slinkiest dress, rip it to the knee if you must. Invite a friend who owns a pin-striped suit. And slip into a passionate tango.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

'Cinderella' production to be sponsored by Lions

The Midland Westside Lions Club is bringing a professional touring production of "Cinderella" to town Saturday. The show will be presented live on stage at Midland High School Auditorium with a performance scheduled for 3 p.m.

The production is a musical version of the age-old fairy tale of Cinderella. This production "is enriched with a bright new musical score, sparkling costumes and elaborate special scenery," according to a spokesman for the World of Fantasy Players, by whom the play is being presented.

In addition to Cinderella, the Handsome Prince, the Wicked Stepmother, and the Ugly Stepsisters, the play will feature animal characters.

Phillip Morris, illusionist and costumer, is producing the play and employs the use of illusions and special effects such as a pumpkin in a box expanding to become Cinderella's coach and Cinderella's rags turning into a ball gown before the audience's eyes.

Tickets will be available through members of the Midland Westside Lions Club or may be purchased at door. Admission is $3 for children and $4 for adults.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—From time to time, you mention the Principle of Restricted Choice in your writings. I am not sure how this principle operates. Would you mind explaining it? — N.E., Tampa, Fla.

A.—To the best of my knowledge, this subject was first raised by New York Times bridge editor Alan Truscott in a magazine article in the mid-1950s. Later, Terence Reese delved into the principles involved in greater detail.

NORTH

SOUTH
♠ 4 3 2

South needs one trick from the suit, and entries to his hand are no problem. He leads low to the queen and East wins the king. When next South leads the suit and West produces a low card, should South play the jack or finesse the nine?

If South has no information from the bidding to suggest that East started with both high honors, it is correct to play the jack. The reason is that, if East had started with both the ace and king, he could have won the first trick with either card. The fact that, in the example cited, he won with the king suggests that he doesn't hold the ace.

Here's another common case.:

NORTH
♠ K 10 8 7 5 4

SOUTH
♠ A 9 3

South needs to bring in the suit without losing a trick. He leads the ace and East drops the jack. When he continues with the nine, West follows low. Is it correct to rise with the king or finesse the 10?

The Principle of Restricted Choice dictates that you take the finesse. Indeed, the odds are almost 2-to-1 in favor. Again, if East had both missing honors he would choose to drop the queen half the time.

Reese stated the principle as follows: Assume that a defender did not have a choice to exercise rather than that he exercised a choice in a particular way.

One last example:

NORTH

SOUTH
♠ A 2

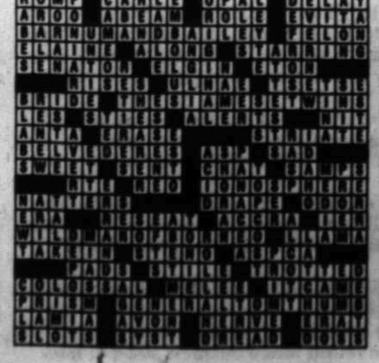

South leads the ace and East drops the 10. Should South finesse the nine next, or go up with the queen?

You understand the principle perfectly if you elected to finesse the nine. If East held both middle honors, he could have dropped either the jack or 10 under the ace. The fact that he chose the 10 makes it less likely that he holds the jack.

REVIEWS

Savage Steve has 'Crazy Summer'

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

Savage Steve Holland strikes again!

While a name like "Savage Steve" sounds like it ought to belong to some low-budget Rambo rip-off, it actually belongs to one of the weirdest directors of teen comedies.

Savage Steve directed one of last fall's more bizarre films, "Better Off Dead."

If Franz Kafka had written screenplays for teen comedies instead of short stories about guys waking up as roaches, he quite likely would have come up with something resembling "Better Off Dead."

The film was a Kafkaesque vision of teen life; everything was exaggerated and slightly surrealistic. When Mom baked a particularly unappetizing dish, for example, it didn't just look bad, it wiggled off the table and slithered away.

Savage Steve also punctuated the movie with slightly demented references to other movies. In one scene he borrowed heavily from 1935's "Bride of Frankenstein," but changed it considerably. His version was set in a fast food restaurant and involved bringing hamburgers to life. It was strange stuff, to say the least.

Most critics didn't like it at all, typically working into their reviews such cute lines as " 'Better Off Dead' would indeed have been left better off dead."

The criticism was not entirely fair since many of Holland's jokes were, on an individual basis, hilariously original and almost subversively clever. Unfortunately, they were worked into a sloppy, almost incomprehensible plot.

Now, Savage Steve rides again in "One Crazy Summer." This film stars John Cusack, the young actor who was so good in "The Sure Thing," as a teen who goes off to spend the summer on Nantucket Island.

Once again, there are some truly hysterical bits, such as a number of offbeat animated scenes featuring vicious fuzzy bunnies, an ersatz Godzilla stomping on model condominiums and a pair of paramedics arguing over a who had seniority in administering CPR.

Also once again, the plot is virtually nonexistent. For what it's worth, Cusack tries to help the pretty Demi Moore — who has appeared in "St. Elmo's Fire" and "About Last Night" — save her grandfather's home from a ruthless would real estate magnate, played by Mark Metcalf (who is probably best-know as the villain in a number of music videos made by the rock band Twisted Sister).

She's assisted — more or less — in her struggle by Cusack and his friends, who include Bobcat Goldthwait, the terminally stupid screamer from the 1985's "Police Academy 2."

Ms. Moore is supposed to be fighting so hard to save the house because a group of impoverished senior citizens live in it. Oddly, we never see any of these noble old folks, however.

What we do see are a bunch of gags, only about half of which work. The best ones are probably the parodies of other movies, including "Godzilla" and a take-off of "Jaws" called "Foam," which is about a rabid dolphin.

Sadly, Savage Steve doesn't seem to have improved any at all in his second feature. "One Crazy Summer" still has a few brilliantly funny gags, but the overall movie is still sloppier than even "Better Off Dead."

Still, if Savage Steve is as tough as his outrageous name, he should survive this flop to make yet another crazed comedy and perhaps even fulfill the comic promise he shows.

'Killer Party' proves more killer than party

Americans have been trying to "lighten up" a lot lately; we have "lite" beers, light lunch menus and, now, even light bloody massacre movies.

The basic theory behind the trend to lighten up the old geek-with-a-knife genre seems to be that audiences are getting to be bored with the old, routine bloodletting. After all, there are only so many ways to mutilate a human body using low-budget special effects.

Some filmmakers think that the best way to keep the slasher genre rolling — rolling bucks into the box office, that is — is to inject humor into the films.

This is almost identical to what happened to classic monster movies in the 1940s. Once vampires, werewolves and mummies lost some of their ability to turn audiences' fears into cash, Hollywood milked them for a few extra dollars by producing such forgettable comedies as 1948's "Abbot and Costello Meet Frankenstein."

This trend is being repeated in such modern movies as "Nightmare on Elm Street II," "Return of the Living Dead" and "April Fool's Day." Even "Friday the 13th, Part V" had some twisted attempts at humor.

Obviously, it's easy to have mixed feelings about these new slasher flicks. On the one hand, most slasher films have been almost laughably bad anyway and just about any change in the genre could be seen as an improvement. On the other hand, it seems vaguely sick and cruel to laugh at someone getting murdered.

The new film "Killer Party," for example, is a completely inept and somewhat sick attempt to combine a teen comedy and a Dead Teen Movie.

It opens with not one, but two bizarre false starts — one includes a funeral eulogy that quotes lines from "The Wizard of Oz" and the other is a stupid music video.

As it turns out neither of these has anything to do with the rest of the movie, which is a shame since the first opening looks like it probably could have been made into a more entertaining show than "Killer Party."

The film itself is about three college girls joining a sorority, Sigma Alpha Pi (which, appropriately enough, makes them real SAPs).

After some feeble gags and sexual innuendoes, a demonic possession subplot comes roaring out of nowhere and the sorority rush turns into a sorority slaughter.

Even a supporting performance by the Baron of B-movies, Paul Bartel — of "Eating Raoul" fame — can't do a thing to keep "Killer Party" from turning into a deadly bore.

There's nothing fine about this 'Mess'

The title of the new Blake Edwards' movie "A Fine Mess" is taken from the famous 1932 Laurel and Hardy short film "The Music Box," which was about the two classic comedians struggling mightily to move a heavy piano into a house.

In that movie Oliver Hardy used his well-known line, "Here's another fine mess you've gotten us into."

Actually, that line never pops up in Edwards' screenplay. Nor, for that matter, does he use much of anything else from his supposed source of inspiration.

This film's two costars, Ted Danson and Howie Mandel, do eventually move a piano, but there's really nothing funny about the few minutes it takes them to accomplish this.

The terrible thing about "A Fine Mess" is that the whole movie doesn't have much of anything amusing in it's entire plodding 100 minutes.

Danson plays a semi-employed actor who accidentally overhears two low-grade gangsters giving a super suppository to a racehorse to ensure that it will win a race. The gangsters, played by Richard Mulligan and Stuart Margolin, discover Danson's eavesdropping and pursue him for the rest of the motion picture.

This leads to a seemingly endless series of awkwardly-staged slapstick routines and some very broad comedy (any boarder and it could span the Grand Canyon).

This film's idea of subtle humor is Mandel trying to escape from a doberman guard dog on a pair of furry bunny roller skates. Mandel, who's actually a talented stand-up comic, is given very little chance to strut his stuff.

Danson, on the other hand, is a so-so TV actor who spends altogether too much time onscreen with very little genuinely funny to do.

Mulligan, who was outstanding in Edwards' 1981 dark comedy "S.O.B.," is stuck with his worst role — an incompetent gangster — since the excruciatingly bad "Meatballs 2."

It's surprising to get something this poor from Edwards who has made such fine films as "The Pink Panther," "10" and "Victor-Victoria" and "Micki and Maude." Of course, Edwards is also the man who made the mistake of trying to continue the Pink Panther movie series even after Peter Sellers died, so his record isn't exactly unblemished.

"A Fine Mess, rated PG primarily for sexual innuendo, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

Victor Borge finds secret of longevity

By ROBERT BARR

NEW YORK (AP) — Victor Borge can't help himself. Give him an audience of two or three people and he performs.

Ask him to lean forward a little bit for a photograph, and Borge keeps coming forward until he's draped over the arm of his chair like a big stuffed puppy.

He graciously signs an autograph, then demands: "Six dollars, please."

At 77, the great Dane has hardly slowed a step and has no yen to retire.

"Some people reach the point where they must try desperately to hold on to something that isn't there anymore, no matter how great they are," he said when he finally settled down. "This is where I am very, very lucky.

"We all do what we can, we all have limitations. Apparently, within my limitations, is enough to go on and on and on and on."

Borge performs 100 or more nights a year, sometimes as pianist and sometimes as conductor, usually as a clown but often in dead earnest.

He has prepared a concert version of "Carmen" which he is taking on the road this year, he's just finished a two-hour videotape of some of his funniest bits, and he'll be seen on public television Sunday convulsing the audience and the Boston Pops Orchestra on the "Evening at Pops" series.

A kind of insecurity, it seems, keeps him from a leisurely retirement at his homes in Connecticut, Portugal and St. Croix, or from indulging his passion for sailing full-time.

"When you are trying to defend a position, or create a position, in any field in your life, then every change, every move, has to be defended," he said. "Every move can be the end of it, or an advance. You have to be courageous."

In the Boston performance, he hears someone laughing in the audience and cracks, "Were you laughing at what happened, or what is going to happen?"

It doesn't deter him if someone has seen his act before. Half of his audience must be younger than such famous routines as "phonetic punctuation," in which he creates crazy sounds to indicate periods, commas and question marks. He was doing that in the 1940s, and is still milking gallons of laughter from it.

The trick is to amuse the musicians while still tickling the people who couldn't find middle C on a piano with a map and a musical bloodhound.

"That is why I like to be with musicians," he said. "To entertain I could do in my sleep.

'Classic' actor characterizes latest film role 'ducky'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jeffrey Jones, who has appeared in classic plays here and abroad, is currently co-starring with a cigar-puffing, beer-swigging, three-foot duck in a movie from the fantasy factory of George Lucas.

"Howard the Duck" is the movie, and Jones plays a scientist whose body is commandeered by the Dark Overlord from an evil planet. Is this the sort of thing you would expect from a graduate of the Guthrie Theater of Minneapolis, the London Academy of Dramatic Art and the Stratford Theater of Ontario?

"I thought it was a wonderful challenge to create a character of unrelentingly black, tongue-in-cheek evil," Jones said.

As to acting with an oversized duck, the hero of Marvel Comics and now the big-budget Universal Picture, Jones offered no apologies.

"I rather liked working with Howard," the actor said. "As a matter of fact, we got to be good friends. I visited him at his trailer park in Palm Springs. He rents recreational vehicles down there."

He wouldn't say anything further because the producers have imposed a blackout on how Howard is operated. Obviously, there is a little person inside the duck suit, but neither he nor the voice is identified in the film credits. Eight names are listed as playing Howard T. Duck, but what they contributed to the character has not been revealed.

After a decade of acclaimed performances in the theater, Jeffrey Jones has suddenly been discovered by films. It started with his wonderfully shaded role as Emperor Joseph II in "Amadeus." This summer he is appearing as the exasperated high-school officer who tries to expose Matthew Broderick's truancy in "Ferris Beuller's Day Off." Several critics cited Jones' performance as the highlight of the movie.

Jones explained that he lucked out in the editing of both films.

"I actually had a rather small part in 'Amadeus.' Then Milos Forman had to cut 53 minutes out of the film. Although my part didn't get any bigger, it grew in importance because of what was eliminated. The same thing happened when John Hughes edited 'Ferris Beuller,'" he said.

Many watching "Amadeus" wondered, "Who's that English actor playing the emperor?"

"That 'English actor' was really a guy from Buffalo, N.Y.," Jones said in an interview. He grew up there in an affluent family; his father had the foresight to move from the family lumber business into house-building after World War II. Jones dabbled in drama at prep school in Putney, Vt., and Laurence College in Appleton, Wis.

In 1967, Sir Tyrone Guthrie saw Jones in "Hobson's Choice" and enlisted the young man in the repertory theater he had formed in Minneapolis. Guthrie proved to be a profound influence.

"He was not just a director but a disseminator of the appreciation of theater throughout the world," said Jones. "He decided I was going to be a stage actor, and he arranged for me to enter drama school in England."

As an actor in New York, Jones tried to adhere to the principles Guthrie had taught him, not easy for a young man with a wife and son. Still, he managed to avoid the trap of taking television commercials, meanwhile gaining stature with plays such as "The Elephant Man," "Secret Service" (directed by John Lithgow) and "Cloud 9" (directed by Tommy Tune).

That heavenly hash has peasant roots

By SHIRLEY E. SUMP
King Features Syndicate

Hash, originally a peasant dish, has been around as long as there have been leftovers, and many countries have their own special ways and names for it. Pytt I Pana from Sweden, Mexico's Picadillos, Hoppel Poppel from Germany and Ireland's Bubble and Squeak are just a few of the many dishes.

The word "hash" comes from the French word hacher, meaning to chop. The thrifty French prepare hachis with anything from beef to fish.

Early settlers brought their ideas with them to America. "Waste not, want not" was the rule heeded in colonial homes where leftovers evolved into such dishes as Red Flannel Hash. It is a classic example of a dish made with leftovers that has held its own through the years.

In America, the word hash is commonly applied to a mixture of chopped meat and potatoes fried or sauteed in a skillet. The fact is, there are many savory hashes in which the main ingredient is enhanced by anything from rice to beets, and methods for preparing them can be as different as the array of foods that are used.

Just remember, like any dish, hash is no better than the freshness of the foods that go into it. Because nothing is quite so uninteresting as a hash made with old stale leftovers.

Cooked beets and leftovers from a New England boiled dinner were chopped and fried together in salt pork drippings. The resulting dish was this savory hash, named for the beet coloring similar to red flannel. This variation can be pan-fried or baked in the oven. With this old-fashioned dish, serve plenty of hot biscuits, pickles and your favorite cabbage slaw.

RED FLANNEL HASH

3/4 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
3 cups chopped cooked potatoes
2 cups finely chopped corned beef
1 (16-ounce) can chopped beets, drained
1/2 cup sour cream
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

Saute onion in melted butter in small skillet until soft. Combine with potatoes, corned beef, beets, sour cream, salt and pepper. Spoon into greased 2-quart casserole. Smooth out top. Bake in (350F) oven 35 minutes.

Or fry mixture slowly in 3 tablespoons butter or bacon drippings in 12" skillet until bottom is crusty. Invert platter over skillet and turn out, crusty side up.

Serves 6.

Note: You can use 1 (12-ounce) can of corned beef or 2 cups of beef pot roast.

This is typical of the way in which Norwegian cooks use up leftovers. The pork and potatoes are cooked with the onions, and beef broth is stirred in and cooked until all moisture is gone and only the flavor is left.

NORWEGIAN BROWN HASH

4 cups diced cooked pork
4 cups diced cooked potatoes
1/2 cup butter or margarine
11/2 cups chopped onion
1 cup beef broth or bouillon
salt and pepper to taste

Brown pork and potatoes in melted butter in large skillet, stirring occasionally. Add onion; mix lightly. Stir in beef broth. Salt and pepper to taste. Cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 45 minutes, stirring occasionally, until all the broth is absorbed.

Serves 6.

I tasted this hash when I was in Hanau, Germany. The colorful name means hodgepodge or mishmash. That's exactly what it is — pieces of meat and vegetable mixed together in the same pan. Hoppelpoppel can be eaten at any time of the day, but is generally regarded as a snack in Germany, with a glass of beer.

HOPPELPOPPEL

5 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 large onion, chopped
11/2 cups diced cooked potatoes
1 cup diced cooked pork or beef roast
4 eggs, beaten
1 tablespoon dry parsley flakes
salt and pepper to taste

Melt the butter in a large skillet over low heat. Add the onions and saute them for about 1 minute, stirring constantly. Add the potatoes and saute them for about 3 minutes. Add the pork and stir for 2 minutes. Add the eggs, parsley, salt and pepper, stirring all the time. Continue cooking until the eggs are set.

Serves 2 to 4.

This is a hash of leftovers with a rice base. It originated in New Orleans late in the 1700s. It is popular now in every state south of the Mason-Dixon line between the Mississippi River and the Atlantic Ocean.

Depending on the leftovers, it can be made with shrimp, oysters or other fish, scraps of cooked pork, ham or chicken — one at a time or all together. This version using the original ham is quite good when served with crisp green salad and lemon sherbet.

JAMBALAYA

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 large onion, chopped
2 medium green peppers, chopped
2 cups long-grain uncooked rice
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 (28-ounce) can tomatoes
2 cups water
2 cups diced cooked ham
1/2 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
2 tablespoons dried parsley leaves
1/2 teaspoon instant chicken bouillon
salt and pepper to taste

Melt the butter in a Dutch oven. Add onion and cook over low heat for 2 minutes. Add green pepper; continue cooking 2 minutes longer. Add rice, stirring frequently, until rice becomes somewhat golden.

Add garlic, tomatoes, water, ham, thyme, parsley, chicken bouillon, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil. Cover and simmer over low heat for 20 25 minutes or until rice is tender. Add a little more water if the rice starts to dry out before it is tender.

Serves 6.

Children and the young at heart enjoy this hash. Serve with buttered corn, carrot and celery sticks; for dessert, brownies with vanilla ice cream.

HOT DOG HASH

4 cups finely diced cold boiled potatoes
1 medium onion, chopped
3 tablespoons flour
salt and pepper to taste
1/4 cup milk
1/2 pound hot dogs, thinly sliced
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Combine potatoes and onion. Sprinkle with flour and season to taste. Add milk and hot dogs. Put in shallow baking dish. Dot with butter. Bake in (425F) oven for 30 minutes. Top with cheese. Bake for 5 minutes longer, or until cheese is melted.

Serves 4.

This hash dish using leftover cabbage, mashed potatoes and roast beef is a Monday favorite in Ireland. As the hash fries in the skillet, it bubbles and squeaks; hence its unique name. While not a dish for a fancy occasion, it makes a great family supper with rye bread and chocolate pudding.

BUBBLE AND SQUEAK

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 small onion, diced
2 cups shredded cooked cabbage
2 cups mashed potatoes
2 cups diced roast beef

Melt butter over low heat; add onion and saute until tender. Combine cabbage, mashed potatoes and beef. Add to skillet; press with fork to form large cake. Cook over moderate heat until well-browned. Loosen cake with spatula; slide onto plate. Flip back into skillet, uncooked-side-down. Cook until well-browned. Serve this cut into wedges.

Serves 4.

In our country, hash is usually made by combining potatoes, meat and onions and browning until crusty. In Sweden, they pour a cup of cream over the browned hash and reheat thoroughly. It then becomes a creamed has which is unusual and tasty.

PYTT I PANNA

3/4 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup butter or margarine
3 cups diced cooked potatoes
3 cups finely diced cooked beef
salt and pepper to taste
11/2 cups light cream or evaporated milk
2 tablespoons dried parsley flakes

Saute onion in melted butter in 10" skillet until tender (do not brown). Add potatoes and beef; saute until browned. Season with salt and pepper. Pour cream over all; sprinkle with parsley. Heat well over low heat.

Serves 6.

Crestview's choir to present 'Alleluia'

The Sanctuary Choir of Crestview Baptist Church will present the contemporary Christian musical "Alleluia" at 7 p.m. today.

Written in 1973 by Bill and Gloria Gaither, the work employs both formal choral settings and familiar praise songs such as "Let's Just Praise the Lord!," "Because He Lives" and "Alleluia." Arranged and orchestrated by Ronn Huff, the production is being directed by Ty Morris Jr., minister of music at Crestview Baptist Church.

The Crestview Sanctuary Choir first performed the musical in 1975. The choir will be joined on this occasion by former members of the choir who sang in the original production, including the Rev. Kenneth James, former pastor at Crestview who is now pastor of First Baptist Church, Hillsboro, and Kenneth Hunnicutt, now minister of education at First Baptist Church, Woodway.

Soloists include Johnnie Baxter, Hunnicutt, Linda Sellers, Thurman Pylant, Kenneth James, Linda Morgan, Ruth Shelburne and Kathy Alverson. Trio singers are James, P.J. Tyler and Morris.

The voice of the fisherman will be done by James Sellers, the tax collector's by Hunnicutt, the woman at the well by Anita Noles and the once blind man by James Dumas.

Larry and his hilarious brothers loose in New York City

By LAWRENCE EISENBERG
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — One Manhattan restaurant never returned the call. Another scoffed.

Larry, his brother Darryl and his other brother Darryl, the trio of riotously funny, stupendously scruffy Vermont bumpkins from "Newhart," were coming to New York as part of a publicity tour and were going to wear their costumes from the CBS hit series — items of apparel that bag ladies wouldn't even put on to polish their stolen grocery carts.

Therefore, the Manhattan watering holes of the rich and famous, the pretentious and insecure, the understated and overdressed, did not want them on the premises. After all, the brothers keep house pets of some of the delicacies served in these restaurants.

To the rescue with a reservation came a French bistro on New York's West 55th Street, where owner and patrons were joyful at seeing these strange men who get a wild round of applause every time they make their entrance on "Newhart" (Monday nights) with what is now a theme whine, "Hi, I'm Larry. This is my brother Darryl. And this is my other brother Darryl."

To audiences in both studio and home, it's the TV equivalent of a shot of adrenalin.

In 1982, the creators of "Newhart" wrote the characters of three handymen brothers to appear in one episode. They were so well received that they were brought back in the 1983 season for four appearances.

In 1984 they became full-time. To all outward appearances, they give simpletons a bad name.

Yet, from time to time, Larry drops a perceptive remark that verges on brilliance. (Darryl and Darryl never talk, but make eloquently idiotic faces.) No matter what they say, and don't say, they're hilarious.

If it isn't a show-biz adage, it should be: You can't play stupid unless you're smart.

Larry is portrayed by William Sanderson, who received a degree in business administration from Memphis State University (he has never lost his Tennessee drawl), followed by a degree from law school.

After kissing off his education, he went to New York, where he appeared in scores of Off- and Off-Off Broadway shows, among them "Loot" and "Marat-Sade." Once he moved to Los Angeles, he appeared in more than 20 films, including, "Coal Miner's Daughter," "Blade Runner," "Raggedy Man," "City Heat" and "Fletch."

Darryl No. 1 (he's the one with dark hair, which seems to be groomed with salt pork) in real life is Tony Papenfuss, a drama major at St. Cloud State College and the University of Minnesota. In 1974 he went to Hollywood and played both Scrooge and Bob Cratchit in productions of "A Christmas Carol" at the Mark Taper Forum. Later he appeared in the feature "Firefox" and the TV film "World War III."

Darryl No. 2 (he's the one with the blond, curly hair and the look of imminent drool) is named John Voldstad. Born in Oslo, Norway, John was moved at the age of 1 to New York, then later to Minneapolis and eventually Fort Worth, Texas.

He appeared in Los Angeles in a local Shakespeare festival and studied for three years in London's Webber Douglas Academy of Dramatic Arts. On the stage, he's appeared in Shakespeare's "Henry IV, Part I," "Three Sisters" and "Light Up the Sky." He has also had guest shots on "Chico and the Man," "M.A.S.H." and "The Blue and the Grey" mini-series. In the feature "Stripes" he had a costarring role.

These three solid craftsmen admittedly could have gone for the rest of their careers doing good work and never getting any special recognition. Along came "Newhart," and they turned into household names (Lysol is one that comes to mind).

Once they're seated in the French restaurant, the brothers place an order that is something of a surprise — items like a double Beefeater on the rocks, Evian Water...marinated salmon...lentil soup...pate...scrod. (These are things that Larry, Darryl and Darryl would ordinarily cover with a coat of shellac.)

Darryl No. 2, although professionally mute, is eloquent with rolling eyes, quick, jerky head gestures, teeth bared at half-mast over different portions of his lips, combinations of finger movements and an occasional note jotted on a homemade pad.

He has ordered escargot herbes aromatique (snails with herbs). What would the real Darryl order in this restaurant, one wonders? Snails, he indicates, but not cooked. Maybe escargot tartare. "Darryl likes foods from the garden," Larry says.

Tony (Darryl No. 1), an excellent cook in real life, specializes in fettucini Alfredo, stews and goulashes. Once he made a boeuf bourguignon with venison. Darryl, he indicates, might have used squirrel.

"Or woodchuck," says Larry. "Maybe chipmunk or raccoon.... Did you know that 'woodchuck' is also a derogatory term for backwoodsman in Vermont?" Once, on the show, in the restaurant they own (which never has any customers), they did a possum crockpot. Larry adds, "And once we tried moonshine, which I liked."

Sanderson (Larry), ever aware of his manners, says, "Larry always gets nervous where they have cloth napkins." He motions to Darryl No. 2. "Is it bad manners for you to pass me the Evian Water?" he asks, segueing into the fact that the brothers are staying at a luxurious New York hotel (which apparently is secure enough not to reject this unorthodox family).

Just last night, while dining (a word he actually uses) at the hotel's elegant restaurant, they were served by an Egyptian waiter who "was very attentive about pouring the wine," he says, in one of his pseudo-pretentious moments.
