Baker takes Bush role

Officials: Secretary to direct campaign effort

Eagleburger becomes likely successor

By Barbara Crossette
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A move by Secretary of State James A. Baker III to the White House would be likely to leave the State Department in the hands of Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger and the outlines of U.S. policy virtually unchanged, administration officials said Tuesday.

Several officials said that to their knowledge the move, which is expected to occur in August, had not yet been discussed by Baker and Eagleburger.

In Congress, several Democrats complained that President Bush — whether he decides to leave Baker's seat vacant or fill it with a new secretary — would be "decapitating" the department in the eyes of a world facing multiple crises, putting politics ahead of statesmanship.

At a minimum, Democratic members of Congress say, Baker should resign formally so that WASHINGTON — Secretary of State James A. Baker III will leave his post next month to return to the White House as President Bush's senior policy adviser and effective head of his re-election campaign, several administration officials and Republican political strategists said on Tuesday.

Baker, the president's closest friend, his political partner for the last 15 years and his 1988 campaign manager, is expected to resign as secretary in mid-August, shortly after a scheduled visit to the United States by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, those officials said.

A formal White House announcement of the move, which was apparently decided by the two men during a fishing break at Baker's Wyoming ranch last week, has been withheld to allow Baker to make a visit to the Middle East and Asia this week without diminishing his status as secretary of state.

City's jobless rate surges to 5-year high

■ Unemployment hits 8.4 percent because of growth in labor pool.

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Midland's unemployment rate jumped to a five-year high during June, according to figures released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

Despite an increase in the number of Midlanders with jobs, the city's unemployment rate climbed a full percentage point to 8.4 percent from May to June because of growth in the labor pool.

June's rate was nearly double the 4.8 percent rate seen a year earlier. The rate was last at this level in September 1987, when it was 8.5 percent.

In Odessa, the unemployment rate surged 1.7 percent, to 11.7 percent from 10 percent in May.

There were 51,000 Midlanders in the civilian labor force, up from 49,900 in May and 50,000 in June 1991.

Of those in the labor force, 46,700 were employed, up 500 from 46,200 in May but down from 47,600 a year earlier.

Still, there were 4,300 Midlanders without jobs, up from 3,700 in May and 2,400 in June a year ago.

The TEC attributed the surge in local unemployment to the traditional entrance of graduates and other summer-job seekers into the market, adding that there are more job seekers than there

Gloomy skies battle sun for position

During one six-hour period, more rain falls in Midland than in any other town in America.

For a place where they say it doesn't rain much, it rains quite a bit in Midland.

During the six hours ending at 1 p.m. Monday, more rain fell in Midland than any other town in America — .81 inches.

Isolated West Texas showers dumped a total of .83 inches of precipitation on the city by 9 p.m., causing minor flooding on several city thoroughfares, including Garfield Street and A Street. Light rain began to fall at dusk and threatening skies hinted there could be another storm before midnight.

Traffic on Monday moved at a relatively normal pace despite the drainage problems, police said.

Isolated showers throughout West Texas were expected to move east and weaken by late Monday evening, said observers at the National Weather Service in Midland. Monday's early storm, associated with an upper-level low-pressure system, originated in Southwest Texas.

Total rainfall for 1992 is now at 16.95 inches, making 1992 one of the wettest years in Midland history, thus far.

"We're still well short of the record for one year. We tallied 32.13 inches in 1986. But we may yet reach that," an NWS observer said.

Gloomy skies battled the sun for position throughout the day but generally lingered over the area bringing several five- and 10-minute showers all day. Two rainbows appeared in the eastern sky an hour before nightfall.

One hundred percent relative humidity, resulting from high levels of moisture in the air and low morning temperatures, greeted Midlanders for a second day Monday but should drop closer to the

Judge dismisses charges against 'suicide doctor'

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — More murder charges filed against Dr. Jack Kevorkian for helping chronically ill people commit suicide were dismissed Tuesday because the state has no law against assisted suicide.

A prosecutor said he would appeal.

Oakland County Circuit Judge David Breck dismissed first-degree murder charges in the Oct. 23, 1991, deaths of Sherry Miller and Marjorie Wantz. An earlier first-degree murder charge against Kevorkian, involving an Oregon woman who had Alzheimer's disease, was dropped in 1990.

LOS ANGELES — Fox Broadcasting Co. beat one of the Big Three networks in the weekly Nielsens ratings for the first time in its six-year history, according to figures released Tuesday. Boosted by big audiences for its teen-age dramas "Beverly Hills 90210" and "Melrose Place," Fox finished third with a 7.3 average last week, ahead of NBC's 7. CBS was first at 8.5 and ABC was second at 7.7. Each A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings point represents 921,000 homes. All of the Big Three networks were hurt by dismal ratings for their coverage of the Democratic National Convention.

RAIN: Clouds to give way

average of 30 percent to 35 percent today, observers said.

Today's forecast calls for morning cloudiness with mostly sunny skies the remainder of the day. However, there is a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms in the afternoon. Highs should be in the lower 90s and south winds should be at 10 to 20 miles per hour. Tonight should be fair with a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the upper 60s, according to the NWS.

Thursday should be mostly sunny with a high in the lower 90s.

After an overnight low of 66, Tuesday's high reached 82, compared with the record high for that date of 103 set in 1981. The record low for that date is 58 set in 1988.

The extended forecast calls for a slight chance of thunderstorms on Friday with partly cloudy skies expected on Saturday and Sunday. Highs should range from 90 to 95 with lows in the mid-to-upper 60s.

STATE

Thunderstorms rumbled across most of Texas on Tuesday, largely the result of a tropical-like airmass in place over the region.

Heavy rains accompanied some of the storms. San Antonio received .72 of an inch in about 90 minutes, while Victoria recorded .62 of an inch.

Showers and thunderstorms developed over the Concho Valley, Edwards Plateau, Trans Pecos, Permian Basin, Texas Panhandle, and all across South Texas.

A low-pressure system centered near Del Rio continued to pull moisture from the Gulf of Mexico into North Texas. As surface heating neared its maximum, scattered showers and thunderstorms developed over western and central sections of North Texas.

Mostly cloudy skies over North Texas have helped to keep afternoon temperatures below normal for mid-July. Mid-afternoon temperatures in the region from Central Texas to North Texas ranged from 74 at Stephenville, where a thunderstorm was in progress, to 90 at Waco.

Afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 80s in South Texas. In West Texas, readings ranged from 78 at Midland to 93 at El Paso.

A flash flood watch was in place for the Hill Country and the Edwards Plateau.

The National Weather Service said rains can be expected again today across the state. Highs should be in the upper 80s to 90s, with lows in the 70s.

NATION

Rain and storms extended across the Plains to the East Coast on Tuesday, and temperatures plunged to record lows around the upper Great Lakes.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over much of the Plains, the lower Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the Ohio Valley, the central Appalachians, the eastern Gulf of Mexico states and Georgia.

Showers and thunderstorms also extended along the coast of North and South Carolina.

Heaviest rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT was 0.81 of an inch at Midland, Texas.

Showers and thunderstorms also extended over the Pacific Northwest and the northern Rockies.

Air that was unusually chilly for the season slid southward and settled over parts of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan.

The cool air was pushing eastward and lower temperatures were expected during the night and early today in upstate New York in the St. Lawrence Valley, Adirondacks and northern Green Mountains.

Scattered frost was possible during the night in northeastern New York state and northern Vermont.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ROLE: Baker shifts to White House next month

(From 1A)

Tuesday night to confirm or deny rumors of a change in Baker's status. "Nothing new to report; the president has not indicated any changes," said a deputy press secretary, Judy Smith.

In his new post, with a nondescript title like counselor to the president, Baker will be charged with placing Bush back on the political and policy offensive after months of languor, and insuring that the campaign marches to a precise beat set by the Oval Office, according to the officials who spoke of the plans.

"He'll have carte blanche" to coordinate activities at the White House and the Bush re-election operation, one strategist said.

With barely 100 days to campaign until the Nov. 3 election, Bush aides said, the move speaks of the desperation felt by some Republican political advisers, who see the president sinking in the polls and hesitant in the face of attacks by a resurgent Democratic Party enthusiastic about its ticket of Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas and Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee.

That anxiety also has led to speculation that Bush will drop Vice President Dan Quayle from the ticket, a step White House officials say is highly unlikely but not out of the question. Baker is believed to have opposed the selection of Quayle, then an Indiana senator, for the ticket in 1988.

The unease also reflects the muddled state of the White House, where a string of political and social upheavals, from Patrick J. Buchanan's renegade candidacy to the Los Angeles riots to the abortive campaign by Ross Perot, have kept policy makers off balance, constantly on the defensive and unable to take consistent positions.

"They've been getting horrible advice," said one top Republican political strategist who, like others, refused to be named. "All year, it's been ready, aim, aim, aim, aim, aim. It's just the worst possible year to be paralyzed."

At least until November, Bush is expected to replace Baker with Lawrence S. Eagleburger, the deputy secretary of state and a veteran diplomat. He would serve as acting secretary.

But Eagleburger is not without political problems. He has been a magnet for criticism of the administration's handling of the breakup of Yugoslavia, and his long association with former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has made him anathema to Republican conservatives.

Officials could not rule out the possibility that Bush might still appoint a new secretary of state, but they said that would allow Senate Democrats to hold confirmation hearings that could become a field day for attacks on Bush's foreign policy. Under federal law, Bush need not name a permanent successor for 120 days after Baker's resignation, a deadline that would fall after the election.

Bush's campaign problems have prompted speculation for months that Baker would ride to Bush's political rescue, and while it was roundly denied for months, the president himself openly invited the speculation last week in Wyoming. There, Bush told reporters he was not "inclined" to rule out Baker's shift to the White House and that "all options are open."

Although Baker's shift to the White House is now a certainty, officials and other advisers said Tuesday, much else about the administration's political and personnel plans remains either tightly held or the subject of rumors.

Baker would leave the State Department at a turning point in American foreign policy, with Middle East peace talks moving toward firmer ground and the shards of the old Soviet empire peaceful for the moment.

His political plans for the period after the election could not be learned and may not even be fixed, but administration officials have suggested he might seek to return as secretary of state, a job he appears to relish, in a second Bush term.

Senior Bush aides have said Baker is considering taking a leave of absence from his State Department post instead of resigning, but the political and legal pitfalls of such a move are widely believed to rule it out. For one thing, such a move would leave the administration vulnerable to political attacks that it was functioning with a "part-time" secretary of state in a time of great world change. Then, too, a leave of absence by the secretary of state might have implications for succession to the presidency.

By returning to the top of the White House and campaign staff, Baker will replay roles he has repeatedly performed in the last dozen years for both Bush and former President Ronald Reagan: master political strategist, domestic policy czar, presidential consigliere.

In his new post, Baker will assume many of the responsibilites for setting domestic policy and day-to-day White House management now borne by Bush's chief of staff, Samuel K. Skinner, officials said.

SUCCESSOR: Speculation turns to Eagleburger

(From 1A)

full authority can be given to Eagleburger or another appointee and the State Department, now run by a close circle of Baker confidants, is not left on hold.

Baker is expected to resign rather than take a leave.

"We are making the painful transition into a world where regional conflict in breaking out everywhere," Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said, adding that Eagleburger has the experience to take charge of policy operations but might not accept a caretaker role.

"There is no more important job in the United States government than the secretary of state and that office has to be up and running at all times," Moynihan said. "We can't put off crises until December. They don't arrange crises according to our electoral calendar."

Administration officials and policy analysts suggested that while Baker's preference might be to go on leave from his job in the hope of easily returning as secretary of state after the election, a leave would be unworkable, and politically unwise. But they contend that major policies are in place and functioning and could probably weather a three-month hiatus under an acting secretary. There is less certainty about how the administration would cope with an unexpected crisis.

Eagleburger has not been a member of Bush's inner circle of advisers, suggesting his influence would be limited. As a longtime associate of Henry A. Kissinger, the former secretary of state, Eagleburger has never been popular with conservative Republicans.

The Middle East peace process, given a boost by the election of a new government in Israel and Baker's trip this week to the region, can move mostly of its own volition to a new round of talks between Arabs and Israelis, probably in September.

Eagleburger already has taken much of the responsibility — and been the target of Democratic criticism — for policy in other areas, such as Yugoslavia and the former Soviet Union. But the deputy secretary, who is directing Administration aid efforts to Russia and other republics, would have to take on the added task of persuading Congress to back the Russian aid package, which has yet to clear the House of Representatives.

Beyond his involvement in policy on Yugoslavia and the former Soviet republics, Eagleburger has also taken prominent roles in areas for which Baker has had little interest. In many such areas, most notably the continuing standoff on Haiti, the secretary of state has left assistants in charge.

The president, the secretary of state and the national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, long ago established a pattern of debating the most important policies among themselves, sometimes also involving Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, or a few other officials.

Eagleburger has remained largely outside this circle.

In the department, only a handful of officials — among them Margaret D. Tutwiler, the spokeswoman; Dennis B. Ross, director of Policy Planning, and Robert B. Zoellick, the department counselor and also the under secretary of state for economic affairs — have had regular access to Baker.

JOBLESS: Unemployment soars to 5-year high are available jobs. What job growth there is, the TEC said, is in seasonal occupations such as landscaping.

This year's summer growth in unemployment exceeds regular rates, according to the TEC. Traditionally, Midland sees a .8 percent increase in unemployment during the summer months, while Odessa usually sees a 1.1 percent rise.

Midland was ranked 17th among the TEC's metropolitan statistical areas, tied with Brazoria. Odessa was 24th.

Bryan-College Station had the lowest unemployment rate in the state, 4.6 percent, followed by Austin with 5.7 percent, Amarillo with 6 percent, San Angelo with 6.6 percent and Abilene with 7.3 percent. McAllen-Edinburg-Mission had the highest rate in the state, 17.5 percent.

Statewide, the rate jumped to 8.3 percent, its highest level since March 1988. It stood at 7.3 percent in May.

"We now have approximately 742,600 individuals trying to find jobs, and this has pushed our statewide rate to the highest level we have seen in four years," Texas Employment Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers said.

The number of jobless Texans rose during the month by 97,800. But Ms. Nabers said all the reasons for the surge aren't clear.

"While we can blame some of the rise in unemployment on summer job-seekers entering the work force, we cannot explain why the rate is the highest it has been since March of 1988," Ms. Nabers said.

Every region of the state appears to have problems. Ms. Nabers said major layoffs throughout the state affect the situation and continue to negate signs of growth.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

(From 1A)

sician-assisted suicide remains an alternative," he said.

"This is the way it always should have been," Kevorkian said at a news conference. "This is a medical service. It always was."

Breck said his ruling came because Michigan has no law against assisted suicide. He also said prosecutors failed to show Kevorkian tripped the devices that Miller and Wantz used to die.

Oakland County Prosecutor Richard Thompson, who filed all three murder cases against Kevorkian, said Breck was "legislating from the bench."

"This (ruling), if left unchallenged, would make Michigan the only state in our nation that legalized active euthanasia," Thompson said about his planned appeal.

But Kevorkian said the state is blazing a path in people's rights to decide to die if they are chronically ill.

"Michigan leads the country and the civilized world outside of the Netherlands," where euthanasia is legal, Kevorkian said. "Are you going to watch people suffering in agony when we have the power to do something about it?"

Breck suggested that Kevorkian stop counseling chronically ill patients who want to die until legislative action is taken, "because you may may force the Legislature to take hasty, and perhaps improvident, action."

Kevorkian said he had no immediate plans to assist a suicide, but, "I would if the case were extreme."

Legislative action is unlikely before fall, when the Legislature returns from its summer break. One bill that would make assisted suicide a felony has gotten through the Senate but has not come up yet in the House.

"We have more consumer protection for people buying a car than we do for people making this type of decision," said state Sen. Fred Dillingham, sponsor of that bill.

Gov. John Engler wants quick action by the Legislature "before Michigan gets known as the suicide state," spokesman John Truscott said Tuesday. "It's the Legislature's responsibility."

In California, voters will decide this fall whether the terminally ill should have the right to seek a doctor's help to die. A similar measure was rejected by voters in Washington state last November.

Rita Marker, director of the International Anti-Euthanasia Task Force of Steubenville, Ohio, said she was disappointed Breck didn't allow the case to go to trial.

"We've already seen that Dr. Kevorkian is very prone to placing himself in the headlines by standing on the dead bodies of disabled women," she said, calling Kevorkian a "medical serial killer."

Miller, 43, of Roseville, suffered from multiple sclerosis. She used a machine to inject a lethal dose of drugs. Wantz, 58, of Sodus, a victim of chronic pelvic pain, inhaled carbon monoxide.

Kevorkian also was present when Susan Williams, 52, who suffered from multiple sclerosis, killed herself May 15 by inhaling carbon monoxide. No charges have been filed but a coroner ruled the death a homicide.

In June 1990, Janet Atkins, a 54-year-old Portland, Ore., woman suffering from Alzheimer's disease, died after Kevorkian hooked her up to a machine.

Presidents of Bosnia, Croatia sign pact

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The presidents of Bosnia-Herzegovina and Croatia signed an agreement late Tuesday pledging to fight together to expel Serb forces from their republics, should world peace efforts fail.

It represented a formalization of the sometimes shaky alliance of Croats and Muslims that emerged in Bosnia when the two ethnic groups voted for independence from Yugoslavia Feb. 29. That vote touched off a war with Serbs opposed to secession.

Presidents Franjo Tudjman of Croatia and Alija Izetbegovic of Bosnia signed Tuesday's accord in Zagreb, Croatia. It established diplomatic relations and provided for dual nationality.

Izetbegovic and a Bosnian government delegation flew out of their besieged capital's airport during one of two brief periods Tuesday that the runway was open for relief flights.

U.N. peacekeepers dodged mortar shells at the airport while European Community mediator Lord Carrington pleaded with both sides to stop fighting.

Bosnian officials reported scores of deaths in and around Sarajevo. Reports said Gorazde, 30 miles to the southeast, continued to be hit hard by the Serbs. Bosnia's press agency said Goarzde's streets were "covered with blood."

Central Sarajevo was relatively quiet by early Tuesday evening. But Bosnian defense officials said fighting raged with renewed intensity in Dobrinja near the airport, with Serb gunners outside the southwestern suburb targeting its mostly Muslim defenders.

At one point, Dobrinja was being hit by about 20 mortar shells a minute.

Tudjman and Izetbegovic urged the United Nations, the United States and the European Community "to undertake real and effective measures to ... stop the aggression" against Bosnia and Croatia, the Zagreb agreement said.

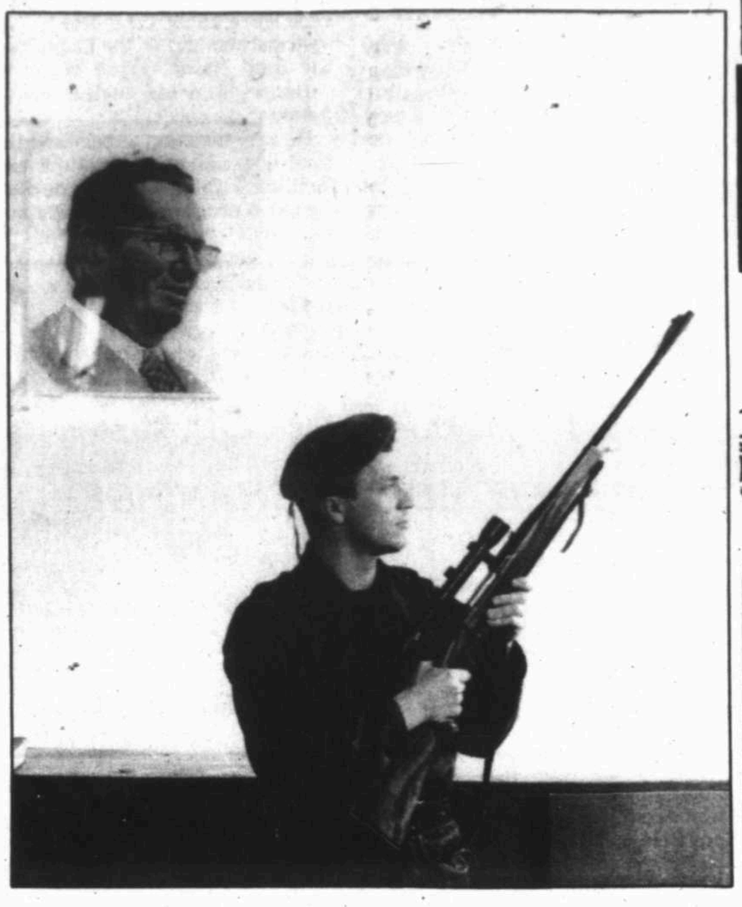

"If the efforts of the international community prove unsuccessful," both states would "undertake all necessary forms of military cooperation and coordinate their operations for the definite repulsion of the danger that threatens them."

The accord stressed that Bosnian Croat militias would respect the authority of the Sarajevo government.

Bosnian Muslims fear that radical Bosnian Croats, under militia leader Mate Boban, may be plotting with Radovan Karadzic, the ultranationalist chief of Bosnia's Serbs, to carve up Bosnia, leaving the Muslims as the odd men out.

Tuesday's pact described the autonomous region of Herzeg-Bosna declared last month by Boban as a temporary region, to be "brought in line as soon as possible with the constitutional, legal order of Bosnia-Herzegovina."

Carrington, speaking in Belgrade, blamed Muslims and Serbs for the failure of a truce that was supposed to have gone into effect Sunday for 14 days.

Doctors add to reports of AIDS-like disease

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (NYT) — European and American doctors added new reports Tuesday to earlier descriptions of patients with an AIDS-like disease but no detectable evidence of infection with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

The reports raised several possibilities. The new condition, reported in about 30 patients, may be caused by a third variant of HIV. Or it may be a deficiency of the immune system caused by some other condition or agent. The new agent might be a microbe or some environmental factor.

American health officials appealed to doctors Tuesday to report any similar cases to the Federal Centers for Disease Control. They said the case reports would be used in an intense effort to determine precisely what factors were shared by the men and women with the AIDS-like illness. They said the cases might not be linked.

Several researchers have said privately that they believe they have found evidence that patients with the mysterious condition have been infected with previously unidentifed microbes or mutants of HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. But they have not formally reported their findings.

If a new microbe is involved, a screening test to protect the blood supply can be developed after it is isolated, the health officials said.

"We do not know of any evidence of transmissibility," Dr. James Allen, who directs the National AIDS Program Office in Washington, said at a news conference. He said that because the mysterious cases are rare and because the blood supply is subjected to rigorous testing, transfusions are safer today than ever.

But Dr. James Curran, an AIDS expert at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, said here it was not clear whether the known cases represent a new syndrome or a variety of rare medical problems that pose no threat to the nation's health.

It is also possible that some long-standing, rare disease of the immune system is being identified now because doctors concerned about AIDS are giving new attention to their patients' immune systems.

The plea resulted from a special session of the meeting at which Dr. Jeffrey Laurence of Cornell University Medical Center in New York City described five such cases that are due to be reported soon in the Lancet, a British medical journal.

He said his team had identified a possible culprit virus and had submitted a report about it to another medical journal. But he refused to discuss it.

He said specimens from the patients had been sent to researchers elsewhere for additional testing and checking because state of the art laboratory tests were being used to try to detect a new agent.

In an unusual plea, Dr. Anthony S. Fauci, head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Disease, cited the potential public health problem in urging authors of papers to demand approval from scientific journals to release their findings early. Editors of journals have said they would waive their usual embargoes on papers that relate to public health problems.

The step recommended by Fauci is intended to speed up sharing of data and samples for immediate laboratory investigation to avoid the many months of delays that can occur while the papers await publication.

Laurence said his team had shared its findings with the Centers for Disease Control, including information about the virus they are investigating. But he acknowledged that, as happens in many laboratories, some of his samples had been contaminated with prosaic, stray viruses that happened to be in the laboratory.

Tensions are rising in Iraq, inspectors say

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A team of U.N. weapons inspectors that left Baghdad on Tuesday said tensions are rising in the Iraqi capital because of the standoff over their colleagues' demands to search Iraq's Agriculture Ministry.

"The security situation is growing more tense," said Richard Hooper, leader of a nine-member nuclear inspection team that was in Iraq for eight days. "We essentially quarantined our team to the hotel."

He said demonstrations against another U.N. team standing watch outside the ministry since July 5 had become almost constant. Baghdad has rejected the inspectors' demands to enter the ministry, which is said to contain documents about Iraqi missiles.

Chanting demonstrators have pelted the U.N. inspectors' cars with eggs and vegetables and slashed their tires in demonstrations over the past three weeks. Rolf Ekeus, the U.N. official in charge of weapons inspections, said in New York that the demonstrators were coming too close to the inspectors.

"The behavior is quite threatening. We are very upseat and fearful for the safety of our persons," Ekeus, head of the Special Commission, told The Associated Press. He said the standoff would not continue much longer.

"It won't go on. You will soon see something," he said, without elaborating.

The U.N. Security Council issued no ultimatum along with its demand Monday that President Saddam Hussein's government allow a search of the ministry.

But Britain's U.N. ambassador, David Hannay, said military action had not been ruled out. And one Security Council member, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a limited number of air strikes against Iraq was likely if no resolution of the affair is reached within 10 days.

Iraq's U.N. ambassador was defiant in the face of a possible military intervention. "Throwing a bomb of two in Baghdad or here or there is not going to change Iraq's position," Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbari told reporters.

The United States has based warplanes in the region since the Gulf War.

In Washington, the State Department said existing Security Council resolutions provide the authority to use force. "We are not ruling out any options, including those of a military nature," spokesman Colin Cleary said.

The official Iraqi News Agency reported that Iraq renewed efforts to have U.N. inspectors from "neutral" countries inspect the Agriculture Ministry. The proposal has fallen on deaf ears at the United Nations.

Meanwhile, oil prices dropped slightly on world markets after rumors spread that Saddam had been killed. In New York trading, the price for August delivery of light, sweet crude oil fell 12 cents a barrel to $21.67 but later recovered when the rumors appeared to be groundless.

The Iraqi News Agency, meanwhile, quoted unidentified diplomatic sources as saying Saudi Arabia's King Fahd was the target of an assassination attempt by his guards. King Fahd made his regular weekly appearance on television Tuesday night, although the appearance generally is pre-taped.

Under terms of the Gulf War cease-fire, U.N. inspection teams are seeking to dismantle Iraq's nuclear, chemical and biological weapons programs and its long-range missiles.

Saddam's government has said the attempt to search a civilian agency is an affront to Iraqi sovereignty.

Hooper and members of his team said their colleagues outside the Agriculture Ministry were the target of nearly incessant demonstrations. Marchers carry Iraqi flags and chant "Down with Bush, long live Saddam," he said.

The number of Iraqi security officers also has multiplied in the downtown area around the ministry and the hotel where the inspection teams stay, the team members said.

Hooper, an American, said he was convinced the Iraqi authorities would ensure the safety of the U.N. team because of warnings from the Security Council. "They're well protected," he said.

An Iraqi official also said the team members were in no danger.

Hassan Mohammed Amin, head of the Iraqi team accompanying the U.N. inspectors, said Iraqi officials were doing their best to prevent harassment of the inspectors, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

Hooper said his nuclear team's mission was successful.

He said his team supervised the final destruction of buildings and facilities related to Iraq's nuclear weapons program at Tarmiya and at Sharqat north of Baghdad.

Egyptian head accepts invite to visit Israel

CAIRO, Egypt (NYT) — President Hosni Mubarak met Tuesday with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel and said he had accepted an invitation to visit Israel, the first such trip by an Egyptian head of state since President Anwar el-Sadat's path-breaking visit to Jerusalem nearly 15 years ago.

"Mr. Rabin invited me, but frankly speaking, I need no invitation," Mubarak said after the 90-minute meeting. "Whenever I find it convenient I will go to Israel. My response is positive to Mr. Rabin."

The decision to travel to Israel, although no date was announced, gives a significant boost to the efforts of Rabin to build bridges with the Arab world, much of which is still distrustful of the new Israeli prime minister, and is also seen as a bold gamble by an Arab leader usually noted for his caution.

"It seems," said Ephraim Dowek, the Israeli ambassador to Egypt, "that we are beginning a new phase in our relations with Egypt, and hopefully in our push toward the peace process."

Egyptian officials were equally enthusiastic.

"The meeting reflected the mutual understanding between President Mubarak and Prime Minister Rabin," the Egyptian presidential press secretary, Mohamed Abdel Moneim, said. "They are both military men, both war heroes and both practical. They go very well together."

The Egyptian president, who refused to meet with former Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel, and who has repeatedly spurned offers to visit Israel since taking office in 1981, has banked on Rabin's sincerity in calling for a peaceful settlement with the Palestinians in the occupied territories and with Israel's Arab neighbors.

Sadat, who after his November 1977 trip to Israel signed the 1979 peace accord with Israel, was assassinated in 1981 by Muslim extremists opposed to the treaty. Mubarak, who as vice president was with Sadat during the attack, presided for a decade over an Egypt that was ostracized and shunned in the Arab world because of its relations with Israel.

"I know that he generally supports peace," Mubarak said of Rabin.

Although Egypt, the only Arab nation that has signed a peace treaty with Israel, has diplomatic ties with Israel its relations have remained distant and at times cold.

Rabin said that one of the points the two men had discussed concerned the effort to improve relations between the two countries.

Franking abuse hits new highs

"Watch what they do, not what they say," is good advice for judging politicians, especially on issues that involve re-election. Consider U.S. Rep. John Doolittle's two-faced approach to the congressional free mailing privilege known as franking.

Doolittle, a California Republican, gained a measure of renown this year as one of the "Gang of Seven" — GOP freshmen who denounced congressional perquisites, including the unfair advantage enjoyed by incumbents who mail letters at taxpayers' expense. That particular perk has been under fire for several years now.

Yet Doolittle, facing a contested primary and general election, has not hesitated to blanket his district with franked mail, the Capitol Hill newspaper "Roll Call" points out. The latest tally from the House Clerk's office shows that between January and March, Doolittle rang up an amazing $184,000 in postage. The National Taxpayers Union Foundation says that amounts to 1.4 million pieces of mail — 4.4 letters to each address — in just three months.

Apparently, many members of Congress do not consider the mailing privilege to be an unfair advantage for those who hold public office. At least their use of the franking privilege does not show it.

Doolittle was not the only faithful correspondent. Between January and March, the House spent $10.7 million on letters home — almost twice the 1991 figure. The House is now required to issue detailed quarterly reports on franking. But citizens who hoped the embarrassment of disclosure would deter brazen electioneering underestimate how brazen some members can be.

Serbians plan a 'permanent solution'

WASHINGTON — Serbia's claim that a spontaneous Serbian militia and not the Yugoslav army is committing mayhem on Sarajevo can be disputed by the most casual study of that war-torn country.

Our reporter Michael Viner, just outside the city, engaged a Yugoslav army officer in conversation. After giving the gift of a bottle of whiskey, Viner got the kindly warning from the uniformed officer to be off the streets at 4 p.m. that day.

Anderson

With eerie clockwork, the afternoon shelling of Sarajevo began, another illustration of the coziness and cooperation between the Yugoslav army and the supposedly nongovernmental militia.

An even higher officer, a major, confided to Viner that the Belgrade government was guiding the whole war effort. He told of Serbia's plan for a "permanent solution" of the Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina "problem." His words were reminiscent of Nazi Germany's "final solution" for Jews.

The major said it was Serbia's aim to destroy not just the dwellings and offices of Croats and Muslims, but their memorials, shrines, churches and mosques — everything with religious and cultural importance.

"We are doing what the Israelis are not doing to the Arabs. We don't want them to have anything to go back to," said the major. "We are thinking of what we call a 'Greater Land' for Serbia."

The irony is ghastly: It was Croatia that sided with the Nazis in World War II, and Serbia, whose leaders now use this Hitlerian phraseology, that fought the German invaders.

The Bush administration recently condemned the escalation of Serbian attacks on Sarajevo, but is still denying that any military efforts by the United States are in the offing. The most promising developments — peace talks scheduled to take place in London among Serbian, Bosnian and Croatian representatives — have yielded disappointing results. At some point, U.S. and European humanitarian efforts could develop into a military operation, but not one likely to involve a ground fight.

Saber-rattling by the seven major industrial democracies, who have been demanding an end to the Serbian military offenses in Bosnia and Herzegovina, have done little to reverse the reign of terror. As if to underscore the point, Serbian nationalist forces recently marked the 100th day of the Sarajevo siege by exploding four power-transmission lines that served the city.

Yugoslavia was a federation of six republics until about a year ago, with Serbia the biggest and most powerful. As that federation has dissolved, a new Yugoslavia has been formed, consisting of only Serbia and Montenegro — equalizing the governments of Yugoslavia and Serbia.

"CONFIDENTIAL FUNDS" — The Secret Service is in charge of protecting presidents, vice presidents, their families, visiting heads of states and major presidential candidates. And sometimes performing the vital protection involves an element of espionage. Informants aren't cheap.

That's why the "confidential funds" were created for the Secret Service's use — to provide the funds to pay rewards for "services or information leading to the apprehension of criminals" or to pay for expenses "of a confidential nature."

But a recent investigation by the Treasury Department's inspector general found that in too many cases these funds were going to buy steak dinners, or coffee and doughnuts not related to work, and in one case even dinner for Indianapolis Motor Speedway officials "for their cooperation with the vice president's visit at the Indianapolis 500 race."

The Secret Service spent $601,000 on confidential funds during the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, 1990. Treasury investigators reviewed nine of the 79 separate funds across the country. Six of those funds were used in ways that weren't related to confidential matters, including $5,344 for ineligible meals, $1,011 for ineligible social events and $1,646 for unrelated conferences and computer supplies.

Neighbors need to work together for protection

Observance of National Night Out is Tuesday, August 4, 1992. National Night Out is a program that emphasizes the need for neighbors to work together to help protect their neighborhoods against criminal activities. The Midland Police Department is proud to be a part of that special night. This will be our chance to show support and unity in a community-police effort. Community pride and unity are strong attributes within the Midland community. This will send a message to the criminal element declaring that Midland will not tolerate criminal activity in our neighborhoods.

To accomplish this objective, we must work together as a team. Tuesday night, August 4, 1992, the Midland Police Department and the Midland Crime Prevention Commission will join forces with local Neighborhood Watch groups to generate support and participation. The Midland Police Department strongly urges every citizen to participate in this effort.

Neighborhood Watch is a crime prevention program that works and we strongly support this idea. If you have interest in starting a Neighborhood Watch program, contact the Midland Police Department Crime Prevention Unit at 685-7130 or 685-7131.

Clinton's policies may hinder rather than help

An old adage says, "Give a man a fish and you've fed him for a day. Teach him to fish and you've fed him for life."

Billy Clinton and the Democratic party tell us that they not only want to teach us to fish but to buy us all a brand new rod and reel. This sounds pretty good. I need a new rod and reel. However, a little investigation reveals that to afford all the new rod and reels, they are going to have to sell the old fishing hole. Makes a fellow wonder where he is going to be able to fish.

Carver students help others while they learn

I would like to thank the students of Carver ODL. They came to my home for their last four weeks of vocational and basic living training program and they did a great job cleaning my home.

I also came to realize how important this program is to the students for their own benefit.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, July 22, the 204th day of 1992. There are 162 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on July 22, 1942, gasoline rationing involving the use of coupons began along the Atlantic seaboard during World War II.

On this date:

In 1587, a second English colony was established on Roanoke Island off North Carolina.

In 1796, Cleveland was founded by Gen. Moses Cleaveland.

In 1916, a bomb went off during a Preparedness Day parade in San Francisco, killing 10 people.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

1992 campaign focuses mainly on 'choice'

NEW YORK — If Russia can abandon Commuism, the Democratic Party — in a New York minute — can say goodbye to income redistribution, the essence of liberalism.

"Growth" — the economics of the bigger pie — is the unabashed message of Clintonomics. "Why not change from a party with a reputation of tax-and-spend," intoned the keynote lecturer Barbara Jordan, "to one with a reputation of investment and growth?"

Safire

While Republicans want to stimulate that growth through tax reduction, Democrats want to stimulate growth through government "investment" (never say "spending") in training and technology. Different painless paths, same growth goal.

Ex-liberals will continue to waggle a vestigial digit at FDR's "economic royalists," but they know that not even confiscation of the incomes of millionaires will put a dent in the deficit. The Clinton platform admits that the passion to redistribute income is as outdated as the cold war.

If conservatism has won, why are conservatives in danger of losing in '92? We can rightly claim that the "misery index," adding inflation to unemployment, is half that of the dismal Carter years, with today's interest rates falling and the stock market rising, but who cares? President Bush is running against a party that is stealing his clothes of growth.

The ticket of the broad shoulders, Clinton and Gore, is electable, as the Perot aberration is not (that summertime tent is not a political home, and will fold). The buoyant Democrats offer a contrast to the present lassitude and rhetorical aimlessness of the Bush White House.

In a nutshell, the 1992 campaign is about aspects of personal freedom embodied in the word "choice." In education, health care and product or environmental regulation, Republicans stress personal choice and local option, while Democrats prefer national standards and less choice; but when it comes to abortion and the toleration of dissent, Democrats are for personal freedom while Republican dogma calls for national prohibition or restrictions.

How have the Democrats, in convention assembled, presented their aspects of freedom? Not as well as I had hoped; in his desperation to differentiate his convention from the divisive gatherings of the past, Bill Clinton shut down dissent.

He was right to demand a pre-convention endorsement from Jesse Jackson before giving him a speaking slot, because the irreverent reverend has chosen the celebrity of talk-show host to the nitty-gritty of political office. (He called King Herod "the Dan Quayle of his day" in a silly display of Salome tactics.)

But Clinton was wrong to demand prior allegiance from Jerry Brown, who came with 600 hard-earned delegates. This allowed the far-out Californian to pop off on prime-time newscasts before he was begrudged speaking time from the podium. The foolish Clinton muscle-flexing showed an intolerance of diversity and a tendency to be a sore winner.

The same desire to run a well-dressed, orderly, Republican-style convention slammed the door on anti-abortion dissenters. Gov. Robert Casey of Pennsylvania, whose state's abortion restrictions were upheld in the superb Supreme Court decision reaffirming Roe v. Wade, was shut out. Clinton's message: No prolifers need apply.

That politics of exclusion opens an opportunity for Republicans at their Houston convention. In contrast to the lockstep-enforcement in Madison Square Garden, the anti-abortion Bushies could give podium time to pro-choice Republican women. A respectful hearing — with a stern no-booing admonition from the GOP convention chairman — would dramatize the "big tent" idea and the intolerance of the Democratic Convention.

But that is next month's controversy. For Democrats coming home to their party today, it makes good sense to acknowledge defeat of an economic ideology, to come up with an adaptation that can be labeled a third way.

Such "me-tooism" makes sense. What rings false, however, is the spectacle of the party of the people on its best behavior, meekly following its script.

Clinton's platform "covenant," like the word "convention," is rooted in the Latin convenire, "to come together, agree." His followers rightly agree on wrenching ideological change. But must Democrats forsake their lusty diversity in aping Republican discipline? Sometimes party unity asks too much.

Faithful delegate waits for Perot's return

I thought that the Democratic Convention had ended last week, so I was surprised on Monday to see a lone delegate sitting in Madison Square Garden. He was holding a balloon and shouting "Perot, Perot."

Sensing a story, I asked, "What on earth are you doing?"

"I'm waiting for Perot."

"Perot quit last Thursday."

"He couldn't quit. He's the 'White Hope' of the Democratic Party."

"In what way?"

Buchwald

"Perot is in a position to siphon off enough votes from Bush to make it possible for Clinton to win. His name is on every Democrat's lips. He wouldn't do that to us just when we could smell victory."

"Democrats are known for backing the wrong horse."

"Perot was our secret weapon. The Republicans have spent so much time figuring out what to do about Ross that they have given our boy a free ride. We've prayed every night that the little fellow wouldn't get derailed or flame out before election day."

"I guess he decided that politics wasn't his game."

"But Perot's not a quitter. That's why the Democrats respect and love him. He's done all our Bush-bashing for us. We've been trying to figure out ways of helping Ross in his campaign. I am President of Democrats for Perot."

"But you're the only person in the Garden."

"Maybe now, but when the networks find out that there is still a Perot delegate left their camera crews will return. They'll put anything about Perot on the air."

"What will you say?"

"We will ask Perot to reconsider and we'll do anything to keep him in the race. We'll get Mario Cuomo to make Perot's nominating speech."

"That's heavy. Will Cuomo do it?"

"It's no big deal for the governor. All he has to do is change the name. Instead of Clinton he inserts Perot."

"Will the Democrats give Perot money to revive his campaign?"

"It's there for the asking. But we don't want to hurt his feelings. Perot is a proud man and if he thought that money was the key to his success he would turn off on politics."

"Well, he's not coming back. Did you ever think just a year ago that your fortunes would be so closely aligned with that of a Texas billionaire?"

"I didn't, but my brother Larry did. He said, 'There is a cute guy in Texas who happens to have a few bucks and he is worth 10 Jerry Browns. The people are sick and tired of the Republican and Democratic parties and Perot is willing to put up his own money to take on both parties. He's everything the Republicans are afraid of — pro-family, rich and conservative, and a big fan of Murphy Brown.'"

"It really doesn't look as if he's going to show up."

"He has to soon because all the helium is escaping from my balloon."

Bus carrying Girl Scouts crashes

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A bus filled with Girl Scouts missed a curve on a mountain highway Tuesday, rolled over and slid more than 100 yards upside down. Forty people were injured, four seriously, officials said.

"They were pretty fortunate, considering the damage to the bus," said Don Abshier, a supervisor for Mercy Ambulance of Las Vegas and one of the first rescue workers to reach the scene, in Toiyabe National Forest about 40 miles northwest of downtown Las Vegas.

The girls, ages 7 to 14, and their leaders were returning from a week at Foxtail Girl Scout Camp at Mount Charleston, a 12,000-foot peak and popular recreation area, said Shellie Williams, a spokeswoman for the Frontier Girl Scout Council in Las Vegas.

The cause of the crash was under investigation.

The overturned bus was discovered shortly after noon by a Nevada forestry conservation crew.

'They were pretty fortunate, considering the damage to the bus.'

— Don Abshier

Abshier said that when he arrived the bus was on its roof and lying across the highway. He described the section of the road where the accident occurred as fairly straight and not too steep.

"The kids were kind of upset. They were panicked about not getting to reach their moms and dads," Abshier said.

Highway Patrol Lt. Rick Lange said it didn't appear anybody was thrown from the bus. He said the bus was owned by Western Coach Service Inc. in Las Vegas.

A dispatcher at the bus company, Ed Ketchmore, said he knew nothing about the crash and that company officials were working on the investigation and not in the office.

Helicopters took the four hurt the worst — a 36-year-old woman, two 12-year-old girls and a 9-year-old girl — to University Medical Center. They were in serious condition, said hospital spokesman Dale Pugh.

"Oh daddy, it was terrible," one girl told her father as she hobbled on one foot from an ambulance at the hospital. The girl's father refused to give their names.

Last July, seven people were killed and 47 hurt when a bus carrying Girl Scouts crashed on a mountain road outside Palm Springs, Calif. Authorities said that vehicle's brakes failed.

NTSB rules 27 missing screws caused crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — A commuter plane that nose-dived last year into a field near Houston, killing all 14 aboard, crashed because 47 screws were missing from the tail's horizontal stabilizer bar, the National Transportation Safety Board ruled Tuesday.

But the missing screws were just the tangible evidence of failures by Continental Express and the Federal Aviation Administration to oversee proper maintenance at the airline's Houston Intercontinental hangar, the NTSB said.

"Safety has to start at the top and it doesn't happen by accident," said Susan M. Coughlin, the NTSB's acting chairwoman.

"It was clear to the board that Continental could have done a better job of establishing the importance of adhering to (maintenance) procedures and beyond that ensuring that they did," she said.

NTSB member John K. Lauber felt the board did not go far enough in assessing blame, saying the Continental Express "corporate culture" led to the maintenance breakdown that caused the crash.

The board voted 3-1, with Lauber dissenting, to accept a report that blames the airline, but doesn't accuse it of fostering a culture that would encourage sloppy maintenance.

"I think we are willing to admit this was a shoddy operation on the night of the accident," Ms. Coughlin said.

Fourteen people died in the crash last Sept. 11 of the twin-engine turboprop Embraer-120 near Eagle Lake, west of Houston. The plane was on a 90-minute flight from Laredo to Houston.

NTSB investigators Tuesday exhaustively chronicled the errors and communication lapses that caused the screws to be left off the leading edge of the plane's horizontal stabilizer, needed to keep it horizontal in flight.

When the leading edge fell off while the aircraft cruised at 260 knots, the plane was forced into an uncontrollable violent downward spin, the investigators said.

The Brazilian-made plane lost its left engine, left wing, horizontal stabilizer and a 9-foot de-icer boot, apparently in the seconds before impact.

The day before the crash two Continental Express workers replaced the right de-icer boot, while an inspector removed screws holding the upper left boot. The inspector did not inform the incoming shift supervisor or anyone else verbally or in writing that he had removed the screws, NTSB investigators said.

They said the airline's own maintenance procedures were regularly avoided.

Buscapade pushes Dems' ticket as youthful, energetic

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — The Clinton-Gore bus tour, rolling toward its final stop Tuesday, spent five days emphasizing youthful vigor, avoiding controversy, and using homespun symbols to sell the Democrats to the heartland.

In a West Virginia steel town and in Ohio farm country, the Democrats talked about unfair imports. Health care was the topic in Columbus, Ohio. Job training was stressed from the first day to the last, from Camden, N.J., to the end.

But what Bill Clinton and Al Gore had to say shared the spotlight with where they were and how they got there. Simply put: The motorcade was the message.

"We're showing we know America," said David Wilhelm, the campaign manager. "These are not goofy liberals. These are the guys who are in touch. These are the guys who are taking a bus trip through middle America."

As the buses motored through town after town, the spectacle proved irresistible. The campaign drummed up crowds even at remote highway stops, and people squealed at the two handsome young couples as though they were rock stars.

"Clinton Stands Tall In Corn Country," blared one morning headline.

Tuesday morning was typical. When the caravan pulled into a southern Indiana wayside to pick up Gov. Evan Bayh, a couple hundred people kept them busy for half an hour signing posters and posing for pictures.

And that was a small crowd. In rural Utica, Ohio, thousands waited for hours to hear the ticket deliver its message. So, too, in McKeesport, Pa. Local television stations sent crews in helicopters to show the motorcade rolling through their areas.

Once on sight, the candidates modeled clothing designed to fit with whatever they were doing — dark suits to talk about health insurance, blue jeans, jackets and hard hats for the steel mill. Clinton even chewed on a piece of straw as he sat on a hay bale talking with farmers.

Bypassing, for the most part, the huge national media contingent trailing behind, the candidates held town meetings and took questions from regular folks.

There was occasional drama. At a job training program in Louisville, Ky., 16-year-old Deidre Hayes asked Clinton to crack down on dads who skip out on their child support — including her own father.

But mostly, there were pretty pictures.

From the start in New York to the end in St. Louis, there were no announcements, no news conferences and few interviews, almost nothing that would get in the way of the message that Clinton and Gore are young, energetic guys fighting for the common people.

Florida executes triple murderer

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — A triple killer who missed an earlier execution date by just two hours was put to death in Florida's electric chair Tuesday.

Edward Dean Kennedy was led into the gray execution chamber shortly before 7 a.m. After he was strapped into the oak chair, he said: "Peace be with you all," adding in Arabic: "Allah akbar," or "God is great."

Iman Rabanni Mahammad, a spiritual adviser who sat outside Kennedy's cell overnight, described the condemned man as remorseful in his final hours.

Kennedy killed Floyd Cone Jr. and Florida Trooper Bob McDermon after he escaped from prison on April 11, 1981. At the time he fled the Union Correctional Institution, Kennedy was serving a life term for the 1978 murder of a motel clerk.

On Monday, a letter from Kennedy was delivered to Floyd Cone Sr. by Gainesville lawyer Susan Cary, who said one passage read: "The blood of your son is on my soul forever."

Cone, who watched the execution, said he forgave the inmate but also said "justice has finally been carried out after a far too long delay."

On May 1, Kennedy, 47, had received his last rites and was just two hours away from dying when the U.S. Supreme Court postponed his execution.

Last week, Kennedy's attorneys were turned down by the Florida Supreme Court and U.S. District Court in Orlando.

Former POW: People must take action

■ Retired Navy captain claims Vietnam-era servicemen still being held prisoner and nation must force government to bring them home.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

The American people must act now or remaining prisoners of war in southeast Asia "will be killed and it will be a dead issue," a Vietnam War-era POW said at a Tuesday news conference.

McDaniel

Eugene B. "Red" McDaniel, a retired U.S. Navy captain, said he hopes recent information that indicates POWs still exist will incite Americans to insist the U.S. government take action.

"I think we have an opportunity to get it resolved now if the American people stand up," said McDaniel, American POW spokesman, and founder and president of the American Defense Institute of Alexandria, Va.

"The White House is stone-walling. They are unwilling to declassify that information and bring those men home. Until the American people demand that, it won't happen," he said.

McDaniel cautioned the consequences — in addition to the death of the POWs — if action isn't taken.

"A country that will abandon its fighting men is capable of anything," he said.

But the questionable actions of the U.S. government began years ago with a cover-up and continues, according to McDaniel.

"We've taken Marxist ways from the Soviet Union and applied them in our country," he said.

"Some reason we (the American government) don't want them to come home," he said. Today, the cover-up persists "because it would be an impeachable offense," McDaniel said.

But media reports and other investigations have substantiated the possibility of surviving POWs, he said.

"The Pentagon admitted last week to the families (of missing servicemen) that they (the government) had been lying for 25 years," he said. "They (government officials) said, 'We lied to the families because of the covert action of the war,' " McDaniel said.

Reportedly 244 service people were abandoned by the government with the possibility of almost half still alive, McDaniel said that the Pentagon admitted.

But McDaniel estimated the number of current POWs to be as high as 800, based on media reports. The fate of about 3,000 Americans involved in the war are questionable, he added.

Documenting McDaniel's findings, the American Defense Institute recently produced a video that reportedly reveals the evidence that American POWs may still be alive in Southeast Asia.

The 58-minute video, "Americans Abandoned" will premier Aug. 9 on a Los Angeles cable television station and will be released to other media.

McDaniel hopes the film will boost the public's concern and make it a presidential campaign issue.

"The truth will surface," he said.

But Americans must act promptly, McDaniel said.

"You don't leave fighting men in captivity for 25 years," he said.

TWC to begin treating Ector's contaminated ground water

Staff report

The Texas Water Commission has announced that the electrochemical treatment of the chromium-contaminated ground water at the Odessa I and IIS Superfund sites will begin sometime around Aug. 1.

The sites are located outside the northwest city limits of Odessa in Ector County. Both sites contain chromium-contaminated drinking water supply wells that served residential, commercial and industrial properties.

In September 1984, Odessa Chromium I and IIS were proposed to the National Priorities List (NPL) of hazardous waste sites, making them eligible for corrective action under the Superfund program.

Contaminated ground water will be recovered from wells and pumped through the treatment plant to remove the chromium. The recovered water will be treated and then reinjected into the aquifer. The chromium-contaminated sludge residue from the water will be disposed of at an appropriate waste disposal facility.

The treatment process is expected to take approximately four years to reduce the chromium levels below the Federal Drinking Water Standard which is less than 0.05 mgl.

"The TWC and the EPA express their appreciation to the community for its cooperation throughout the project," said Jesus Garza, TWC executive director. "We're pleased to begin work, and look forward with the community to the day when the site is successfully cleaned up."

Students dissect sharks as part of museum program

There's something fishy going on at the Petroleum Museum. And it's decidedly not for the squeamish nor faint of heart.

It all started late Tuesday morning when a dozen Midland youngsters came face to face with one of the most feared sea animals known to man — sharks.

Fortunately, the sharks were dead, and the children were armed with dissecting equipment.

Delicately probing the somewhat oily shark bodies and braving a fishy smell, youngsters enthusiastically tried their skills at dissecting the spiny dogfish sharks as part of a four-day summer program.

"We only had one (participant) turn white and asked to be excused," said Jane Phares, director of programs for the museum.

A former elementary school teacher, Ms. Phares darted from table to table answering questions and giving instructions to the junior "scientists."

Gregg Strauss, 9, picked up a pair of scissors and gamely cut into his shark, while another youngster at his table winced.

Later, when viewing a piece of shark flesh under a microscope, Gregg said the flesh appeared "salty."

"It looks like it has some little sprinkles of salt all over it," he said.

The young man said the program swayed his opinion on science courses. "I used to think science was no fun. Now I like it," he said.

Becky Hartman, 11, said she gained a respect for the meat-eating fish. "This is fun. I'm learning a lot about sharks and I like them," she said.

Water panel has no plans to regulate ground water

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

GARDEN CITY — Despite the fact that in April the Texas Water Commission deemed the Edwards Aquifer an underground river in a plan to bring it under state control and to prevent excessive pumping, the commission says it has no plans to regulate Texas ground water.

The Edwards Aquifer is the primary source of water for San Antonio, New Braunfels and San Marcos and farmers and ranchers in South Central Texas.

TWC Chairman John Hall of Austin and TWC Commissioner Peggy Garner of McCamey on Tuesday assured Glasscock County farmers, ranchers and members of the Glasscock County Underground Water Conservation District (GCUWCD) that they have no designs on regulating ground water.

"We are not going to try to take over your job," Ms. Garner, the former Upton County judge, told GCUWCD members. "We don't want to hurt agriculture."

Hall, who grew up in rural Southeast Texas, told the gathering in the Glasscock County Courthouse that TWC's major bout with San Antonio is "not your fight."

Later Tuesday, Hall spoke to the members of the Permian Basin Underground Water Conservation District (PBUWCD) in Stanton.

Since Monday, the commissioners have been "barnstorming" in Lubbock, Plains, Wichita Falls and Big Spring to assure members of five West Texas underground water conservation districts and farmers and ranchers that the TWC has "no interest" in regulating ground water throughout Texas.

Hall said he would prefer a "legislative solution" for the Edwards Aquifer "if the Legislature wishes to establish itself as the sole authority" over the aquifer.

The Midland area and northward beyond the High Plains is over the Ogallala Aquifer.

"The San Antonio region has 1.5 million people and about 700,000 jobs totally dependent on a single source of water that is completely unmanaged," Hall said.

San Antonio population is projected to double to 3 million in 30 years.

"There is not yet a single plan on the drawing boards for securing additional water supplies (for San Antonio)," Hall said.

WATER: Panel meets with farmers, ranchers

(From 1B)

And without a management plan for the aquifer, "cities, agriculture, industries and other users can do nothing to stop a large user from virtually pumping the Edwards dry," he said.

Ms. Garner said the TWC's focus on San Antonio "is not an attack on the 'right-of-capture' concept."

"We are simply trying to solve a problem that threatens a major Texas community," Ms. Garner said.

Texas law gives domestic and industrial water use "priority over agriculture," Ms. Garner said.

As a result, "farmers need management of the Edwards more than any other group to protect their inherent rights in the future," Ms. Garner said.

If the Texas Legislature were to "let everyone pump like they want to," Ms. Garner said, "then when the springs go dry in San Marcos and New Braunfels, on a hot summer day when there's not a lot of water in the Edwards, ... it's going to be on the Legislature's" conscience and not on the TWC.

"We (TWC) were appointed to take care of the water in the state of Texas," Ms. Garner said. "If we can look at something that is a big problem, and we don't have guts enough to do anything about it, we ought to get out of that appointed position and let them put somebody in there that's mean."

While TWC is assuring West Texans that it has no plans of regulating ground water, the Sierra Club is suing in federal court for protection of endangered species in Comal and San Marcos Springs by limiting the pumping from the Edwards Aquifer.

TWC plans call for up to 450,000 acre-feet per year to be drawn from the Edwards Aquifer without endangering the water source, Ms. Garner said.

San Antonio has agreed to limit its take to 170,000 acre-feet, and 100,000 acre-feet would be shared among New Braunfels, San Marcos and neighboring communities.

"That would leave agriculture with 180,000 acre-feet," Ms. Garner said. "San Antonio would have less than agriculture."

Norman Kohls, who farms and ranches in Glasscock County, was concerned over San Antonio's failure to diversify its water sources while zeroing in on ways to "attract business."

Kohls feared restrictions on farmers' and ranchers' use of water in the San Antonio area.

"It just seems like every time the wheel is fixing to come off of the wagon, someone in agriculture ends up being pulled in," Kohls said.

Kolhs, who said he was "in agreement" with TWC on the problem, said that San Antonio will either "have to recycle water or build some dams" on rivers to create lakes "without punishing our friends" in agriculture.

"They've got rivers down there," said farmer Jerry Hoelscher, who suggested that San Antonio build dams on rivers to create reservoirs to supply water to the city.

Hall agreed.

"That's right," Hall said. "There are alternatives."

But San Antonio does not "have an incentive to move to an alternative water supply," Hall said. The cost of pumping an acre-foot of water from Edwards Aquifer is $65, while the cost of pumping from reservoirs would be $300 per acre-foot.

"That's a lot of money" when computed on 170,000 acre feet of water per year, Hall said.

Mark Hoelscher, PBUWCD manager, said "we would be fools to say the Edwards doesn't need to be regulated.

"When you agree to vote for a ground water district, you have agreed that you may want to limit or manage the quantity of water that you pump," Hoelscher said. "That's part of the underground water conservation district."

Lenorah farmer-ginner Myrl Mitchell said in Stanton that San Antonio planners and businesses "are not planning far enough ahead."

"They build loops around the city; that's great. They build amusement centers; that's great, helps their economy. Yet they are not planning to take care of the future — the water."

Speaker to discuss anti-Semitism

Staff report

ODESSA — The Permian Basin B'nai B'rith Lodge 2409 will sponsor a program beginning at 6:30 p.m. today featuring Mark Briskman, director of the North Texas-Oklahoma region of the national organization of the Anti-Defamation League.

Briskman will be discussing the "growing problem of hate crimes and anti-Semitism."

The meeting will be held at the Temple Bethel, 1501 N. Grandview, in Odessa.

Their names are not forgotten

■ Several Texans with famous names don't mind the attention their monikers bring.

By Zeke MacCormack
Associated Press

AUSTIN — George Bush says he'd be just as happy if someone else was calling the shots at the White House.

That's because Bush — George Thomas Bush of Jollyville — has had enough ribbing over his presidential-sounding name.

"They call me 'Mr. President' and say, 'Read my lips,' " and offer me broccoli all the time," said the 46-year-old carpenter.

"I can't afford to lose my sense of humor or I'd be mad all day," he said.

"The bad part is the phone calls. The other night someone called at 3 a.m. and said, 'This is Ross Perot, and I'm not voting for you,' " said Bush.

Childish wisecracks come with the territory for people saddled with celebrity monikers. But having a famous-sounding name also can be fun.

University of Texas student Jennifer Snow White isn't bothered by the dwarf jokes and come-ons from wannabe "Prince Charmings."

"My parents called me Snow White my whole life so I just never changed," said White, 21.

"Every new encounter, someone has a joke about it," said White. "A lot of people wonder why my parents would be so mean. I don't think of it as being mean. I just think of it as a unique name," said White, who collects the memorabilia of her animated counterpart.

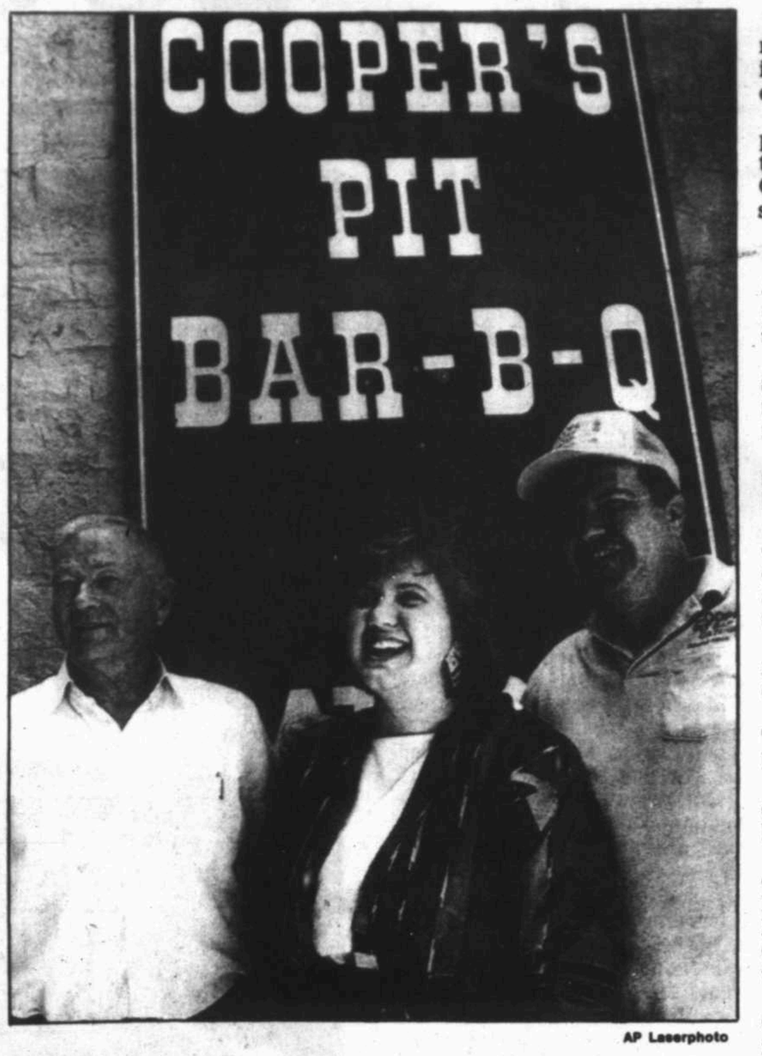

Snow's father, Billy White, said, "We really didn't go for the name for humor. We really thought it was a pretty name."

It's not bad being Ann Richards in Texas these days, even if you're not the governor.

"I get a lot of phone calls for her," said Angela "Ann" Richards, 36.

Her life of mistaken identity began in 1990 when she moved to Austin from Washington.

"During the campaign they called and offered to send a lot of money. Once I got an invitation to the Democratic convention, or something like that, that was like $1,500 a plate," she said. "It was in Washington, D.C., and I couldn't afford the plane fare."

Austin-area residents Jack Frost, left, Elizabeth Taylor and Gary Cooper say they don't mind the attention that comes with having a famous name.

A lifetime of cracks about nose-nipping didn't keep Jack Frost of Georgetown from giving the same name to his son.

"The best thing my mother and father ever did was name me Jack," said Frost, 65, superintendent of schools in Georgetown from 1969-'88.

"I've honestly enjoyed the name and all the attention ... so I just thought I would keep it going," he said.

Round Rock Police Sgt. James Bond is used to being called "007" and having people check his pens for hidden cameras or rocket launchers.

Sharing names with Ian Fleming's fictitious superspy is mere coincidence, as Bond is the family's fifth-generation James Bond.

"It draws some laughs now and then," he said, but sometimes he's required to show proof of identification while on police calls.

Sharing titles with a tequila manufacturer has been both profitable and costly for Austin real estate broker Jose Cuervo.

"It's an advantage to me because people remember my name when they see my sign," said Cuervo, 55. On the other hand, he said, "They steal my signs constantly."

The native of Colombia said, "My father was completely against any kind of beverage that contained alcohol, so it is funny that he named me Jose Cuervo."

Alma Mathews of DeLeon had settled on "Elizabeth" as the name for her daughter long before she married Earl Taylor.

"I didn't even realize she had a famous name until I sent in her birth certificate," she said.

Her daughter, Elizabeth Taylor of Georgetown, enjoys the notoriety even though appointments and hotel reservations are sometimes canceled by doubting clerks.

"My parents just lost their minds for a few minutes," she explained.

"I have a lot of fun with it" said Taylor, who would like to meet Elizabeth Taylor, the actress.

She did meet Richard Burton once, but of course it wasn't that Richard Burton.

"I did the backup news on the college radio station, and Richard Burton, another student, was the DJ," said Taylor, director of the Georgetown Convention and Visitor's Bureau.

Round Rock restaurateur Gary Cooper wasn't named after the famous cowboy actor, but he doesn't mind the celebrity status his name provides.

"About once every day or so someone says something about it. I get called 'High Noon,' and 'Hangin' Tree,' " he said.

"A name like that never hurts because people never forget your name," he said.

Austin resident Steve Martin said he rarely thinks about his comic name, but others often find delight in it.

"When you meet someone you see a spark in their eye, and you think you have brought a little magic into their life by sheer force of personality. But you haven't — you just have a famous name," said Martin, 40, a creative director for an advertising agency.

POW: McDaniel's group makes film

(From 1B)

McDaniel said he could not have survived his time as a POW without the thought that the United States would rescue him.

While serving in Vietnam in 1967, McDaniel's aircraft was shot down and he spent six years as a POW in North Vietnam's infamous "Hanoi Hilton."

McDaniel endured brutal torture at the hands of his captors, yet never allowed them to learn that before the war he had flown highly secret, practice nuclear weapons missions against simulated Soviet targets.

After his release in 1973 and return to the United States, McDaniel became a leading advocate for a full accounting of American POW/MIAs, and a sharp critic of what he said is the U.S. government's attempt to cover up the issue.

McDaniel was awarded the the Navy Cross, the U.S. Navy's highest award for bravery. He was also decorated with two Silver Stars, the Legion of Merit with Combat "V," the Distinguished Flying Cross, three Bronze Stars with Combat "V," and two Purple Hearts for wounds received from the North Vietnamese.

McDaniel is author of a book entitled "Scars and Stripes" that describes his years as a POW.

history of the Permian Basin — which was once under water — were incorporated into the lesson.

The classroom also abounded with anatomical charts of sharks, charts listing the different species, and a detailed poster depicting "life on a coral reef."

Mary Ruth Perkins, museum educator, said the shark class was taught previously as a GEM (Gifted Education Midland) program at Carver Center.

"We have had programs during the summer for children 5-12, and we try to use the museum exhibits and grounds," she said.

A display of fossils, sharks' teeth and a wealth of books on the subject matter covered tables in the classroom.

But the highlight of the class was handling the sharks.

Several youngsters described the experience as "awesome," but noted that fish for lunch didn't "sound very tasty."

The class — which is geared for children age 10 and older — will continue 10-11:30 a.m. today and Thursday.

Teen who preached against violence is killed

AUSTIN (AP) — A June graduate of Austin's LBJ High School, who had preached on street corners against black-on-black crime, has been killed in a drive-by shooting in Houston that police said was committed by a black man.

Edward Earl Franklin, 18, an active member of the Nation of Islam, a religious organization composed of Black Muslims, was killed after he and three LBJ classmates drove away from a Houston club.

A 5-foot-10, 220-pound tackle on the LBJ varsity football team, Franklin was known as "Big Earl" and "Big E," an aggressive player who was gentle off the field. He was planning to study at Austin Community College.

A man that the Austin youths had looked at in the parking lot of the Hi Rollers Club followed them and fired several shots, killing Franklin and injuring the driver, said officer H.F. Chisholm of the Houston Police Department homicide division. Franklin was shot three times.

Houston police were seeking a black man described as 6 feet tall, in his 20s, driving a light yellow or cream-colored four-door Jeep Cherokee.

Heath Maxwell, 19, was shot once in a shoulder and another time in an arm, said Houston homicide Sgt. Ronald Doyle.

Two other passengers, Robert Doyle, 19, and Andre Knox, 18, were not injured, Chisholm said.

Houston homicide Sgt. Sharon Durham said the shooting was probably a case of mistaken identity.

Erma Allen, Franklin's mother, said her son stood every Saturday on Austin street corners and preached against drugs and what ultimately took his life: black-on-black crime.

"All he spoke about were his black sisters and black brothers," said Allen. "He said we need to unite as opposed to killing each other."

Apiary inspectors to trap killer bees

AUSTIN — The Texas Apiary Inspection Service is placing bee traps along U.S. 290 from Austin to Hempstead to detect pioneer swarms of Africanized bees as they move north.

Apiary service officials said the pioneer swarms, like scouts, precede the larger bee population in its migration.

The boxes entice the "killer" bees with their color, shape and size. They are sprayed with a manufactured chemical similar to the one bees emit to attract one another.

"It's what bees would send off to each other to say, 'Hey, come along with me,' " said Kathleen Davis, spokeswoman for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Texas A&M. "They get a whiff and they say, 'Wow, that's great and the house looks great too, so let's move in."

To motorists, the traps resemble tool boxes or mail boxes hanging from trees. John Fick, an inspector with the apiary service, advises motorists to keep their distance "to be sure that they are not confronted with bees."

City may ban officers from taking home guns

CORPUS CHRISTI — A shooting involving an off-duty airport security officer has prompted the city to begin studying a proposal that would make it illegal for the officers to take their weapons home.

City Manager Juan Garza said the proposed ordinance would reinforce a longstanding policy that security officers only enforce the law within airport boundaries.

George Hext, the city's aviation director, would not comment on specifics of the proposal, which was prompted by the shooting last May of an unarmed man.

The victim, Steven R. Lowe, was shot in the face by an off-duty airport safety officer and a reserve deputy constable who are accused of bursting into his apartment.

Both officers have been charged with aggravated assault and are scheduled to got to trial Sept. 8, said Mike Hummell, an assistant district attorney.

Lowe is suing Nueces County and the city of Corpus Christi for the shooting.

Three men arrested in string of robberies

ALAMO — Authorities have arrested three Pharr men accused of storming homes and terrorizing residents while posing as undercover police officers.

Authorities said the men dressed in black, wore black ski masks and brandished weapons when they broke into homes looking for drugs and money.

The break-ins occurred within the past two weeks in Alamo and Campo Alto, said David Neubauer, spokesman for the Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department.

About six men were involved in each of the robberies, Neubauer said.

The three arrested, Ramon De La Cerda, 17, Jaime Franco, 19 and Edwin Olivarez, 19, were arraigned Monday on charges of aggravated robbery and burglary of habitation.

Peace Justice Rosa Trevino set bonds ranging from $200,000 to $300,000.

Authorities are searching for a fourth suspect.

Soldiers to begin transfer to Fort Hood

WASHINGTON — The Army will begin transferring more than 12,000 troops from Louisiana to Fort Hood in Texas, following announcement Tuesday of approval on a final environmental impact statement.

The realignment of the 5th Infantry Division Mechanized from Fort Polk, La., will begin immediately, the Army secretary's office said. A tentative timetable called for transfer of the first of 33 units to begin in September.

In June, the Army had approved the environmental statement, which examined any possible adverse effects of moving about 12,300 troops. The Army also plans to increase civilian staff at Fort Hood by about 500.

Most units will move over a one-year period to minimize the number of enlisted personnel housed in non-modernized barracks and reduce disruptions to families and military operations, the Army statement read.

Many prisoners serve less time, study shows

AUSTIN (AP) — Convicted criminals in Texas are getting longer sentences, but all except the most serious offenders are serving less time in prison, according to a study released Tuesday.

The report by the Texas Criminal Justice Policy Council also said that new policies to increase prison time served "would further aggravate prison overcrowding."

Tony Fabelo, executive director of the Criminal Justice Policy Council, said more rehabilitation and drug treatment programs are needed to reduce the number of inmates who commit crimes after they are released.

He added, "Increasing the time served in prison can only occur if balanced by a significant increase in community corrections diversions for offenders presently sentenced to prison or a significant increase in prison capacity."

The council researches the criminal justice system. Its board is chaired by Gov. Ann Richards. The report is part of an effort by lawmakers to change the penal code when the Legislature meets in regular session in January.

The median time served by a state prison inmate has fallen from 15.5 months in 1985 to 11.2 months in 1991, a decrease of 27 percent, according to the report.

Meanwhile, the median prison sentence has increased 20 percent, from five years in 1985 to six years in 1991.

The number of offenders admitted to prison in Texas has nearly doubled since 1985, from 25,635 to 44,593.

Volunteers close Perot headquarters

DALLAS (AP) — Tuesday was the last day of work for most of Ross Perot's remaining staff, leaving only a handful of mournful aides to shut down what was once a poll-leading presidential campaign.

Perot's headquarters took on the appearance of a wake, staff lamenting the loss of the campaign, volunteers still hoping for a resurrection, and celebrating what was once a bright and shining campaign.

Tom Luce, Perot's longtime lawyer and campaign chairman, was busy packing boxes and declined to take phone calls.

Fast-made office friends were urging colleagues to stay in Dallas, but several said plans were uncertain.

After Tuesday, "only a skeleton crew will remain," said spokeswoman Sharon Holman. "We're not sure how long it's going to take to get our house in order. We still have financial reports, all kinds of things."

Perot's phone bank volunteers wanted to keep the telephones up and running but the operation was slated to close today.

"A lot of people are fighting to keep it alive to keep communication with the other states," said Rose Roberts-Cannaday, phone bank coordinator. "We're still alive. We got well over 400 calls (Monday). We're staying real busy today."

"The callers all want him to stay connected," she said. "People just don't want it to die."

The phone bank, which proved to be a potent grass-roots organizer and symbol of Perot's outsider rebellion, opened March 12 and at times handled thousands of calls each hour. The phone bank crew was planning a meeting of their own to make future plans.

"They want to keep a group going forward, creating a brain center here in Dallas and also an accountability group to keep an eye on politicians in Texas," Ms. Roberts-Cannaday said.

Workers have been trucking away equipment from the campaign headquarters, closed to reporters since Saturday. Requests to interview departing workers were denied. Perot offered workers severance pay through November, aides said.

As the Dallas operation wound down, Perot supporters around the country were pressing ahead with their efforts to put him on the November ballot.

On Tuesday, Perot's name was certified for ballots in Indiana and South Dakota, bringing to 26 the number of states carrying his now-defunct independent candidacy. Supporters filed ballot petitions in West Virginia and Missouri on Monday.

Needy may get extra food from GOP convention

HOUSTON (AP) — GOP convention planners are devising a plan to distribute excess food from the upcoming event to thousands of hungry people in Houston.

The plan involves collecting food from GOP convention-related functions at the Astrodome complex, the George R. Brown Convention Center and delegate hotels and then distributing it to charitable agencies that serve meals to needy people throughout Houston.

In addition, private groups throwing parties and receptions during the Aug. 17-20 convention also are being urged to work with the End Hunger Network and donate excess food.

"Say they expect 5,000 at a reception and pay for 5,000 meals and only 4,000 people show up. That food doesn't have to go to waste," Mary Keegan, founder and chairwoman of the End Hunger Network, told The Houston Post. "That food can go to the hungry."

A similar program used during last week's Democratic National Convention in New York produced an estimated two tons of usable food that went to feed the hungry.

Ms. Keegan and convention officials are working together to target the larger GOP festivities where there likely will be surplus food. They're also developing a system of trucks and manpower to retrieve the unused edibles.

The End Hunger Network works with restaurants, hospitals, cafeterias, hotels and other food outlets to distribute excess food to 30 charitable agencies in Houston.

Deputy charged with murder in ex-wife's death

BEAUMONT (AP) — A Jefferson County sheriff's deputy Tuesday was charged with murder, accused of gunning down his ex-wife in front of the county courthouse.

Bond was set at $100,000 for Dan Smith, 32, of Beaumont, Jefferson County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman Cindy Price said. Smith, who remained jailed, has worked as a deputy for 4½ years, first as a corrections officer and then as a patrol officer since June 1991, Ms. Price said.

Beaumont police officer and spokesman Billy Blankenship said investigators continued questioning Smith about the shooting Tuesday.

"We still have no motive at this time," he said.

Kathy Lee Rideau Smith, 33, was shot four to six times about 30 feet from the courthouse's main entrance shortly before 4 p.m. Monday.

Justice of the Peace Vi McGinnis said Ms. Smith was going to a courthouse appointment with sheriff's department internal affairs investigators to complain that the deputy — her ex-husband — had been harassing her.

Ms. Smith argued with the uniformed deputy, whom she encountered as she walked with her mother and other family members. The deputy then shot Ms. Smith in the head, mouth, abdomen and hand with a 9mm automatic pistol, Ms. McGinnis said. Smith immediately surrendered to sheriff's deputies inside the courthouse.

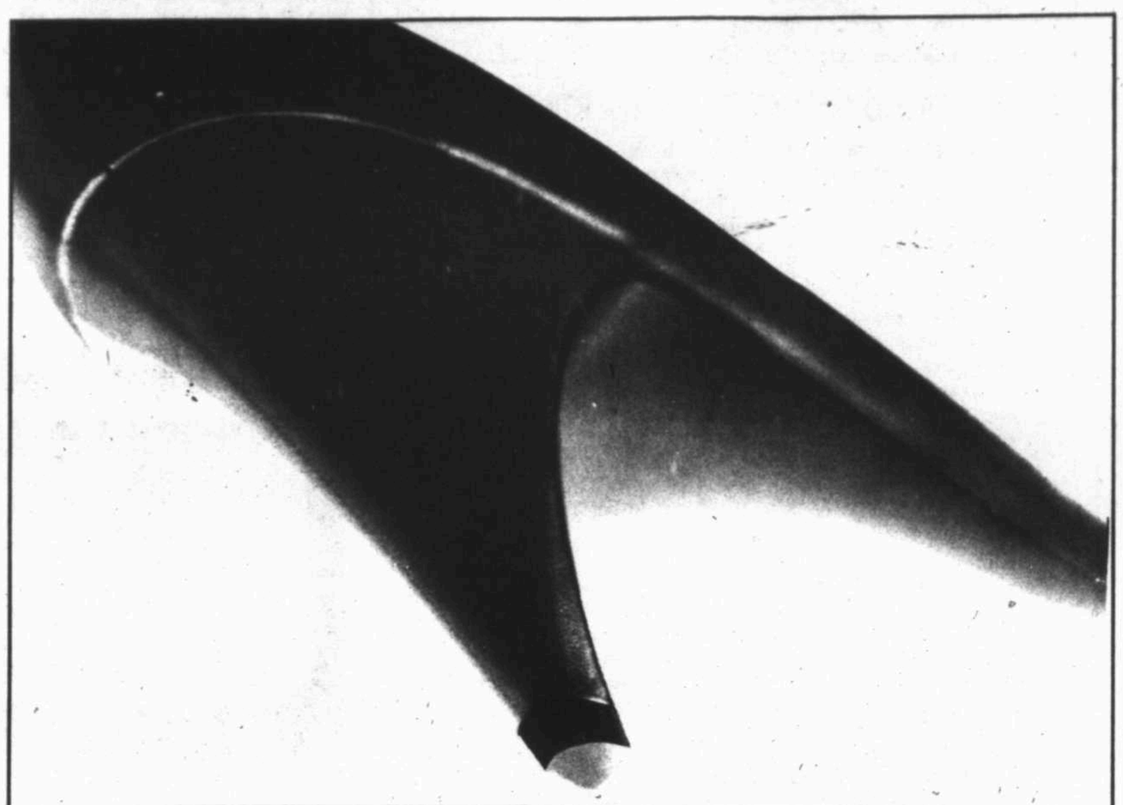

Ms. Smith died at short time later at a local hospital.

Smith had sought the divorce, but after the marriage ended, "he would never leave her alone," said J.R. Rideau, the victim's brother.

Homemade chocolate ice cream topper is quick, easy, tasty

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Stir up a homemade chocolate-y ice cream topper almost as you fast as you can say "banana split" or "hot fudge sundae." Well, maybe not that fast, but how about 5 minutes or less in your microwave oven?

Don't be fooled when melting the chocolate. In microwave cooking, chocolate pieces keep their shape — even when heated. Stir them and you'll find they're as soft as silk.

While most folks swear by the pure chocolate version of this speedy topper, you can also create different flavors, such as coffee-tinged mocha, timeless peanut butter, breathy mint, or good ol' nut.

CHOCOLATE TOPPING
1 6-ounce package (1 cup) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
¼ cup milk
¼ cup light corn syrup
2 teaspoons desired liqueur (optional)

In a 2-cup measure cook chocolate, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1½ to 2½ minutes or until soft enough to stir smooth, stirring once. Stir in milk and syrup. Cook, uncovered, on high for 1 to 2 minutes more or until warm. Stir until smooth. Stir in liqueur, if desired. Serve over ice cream. Makes about 1 cup (8 servings).

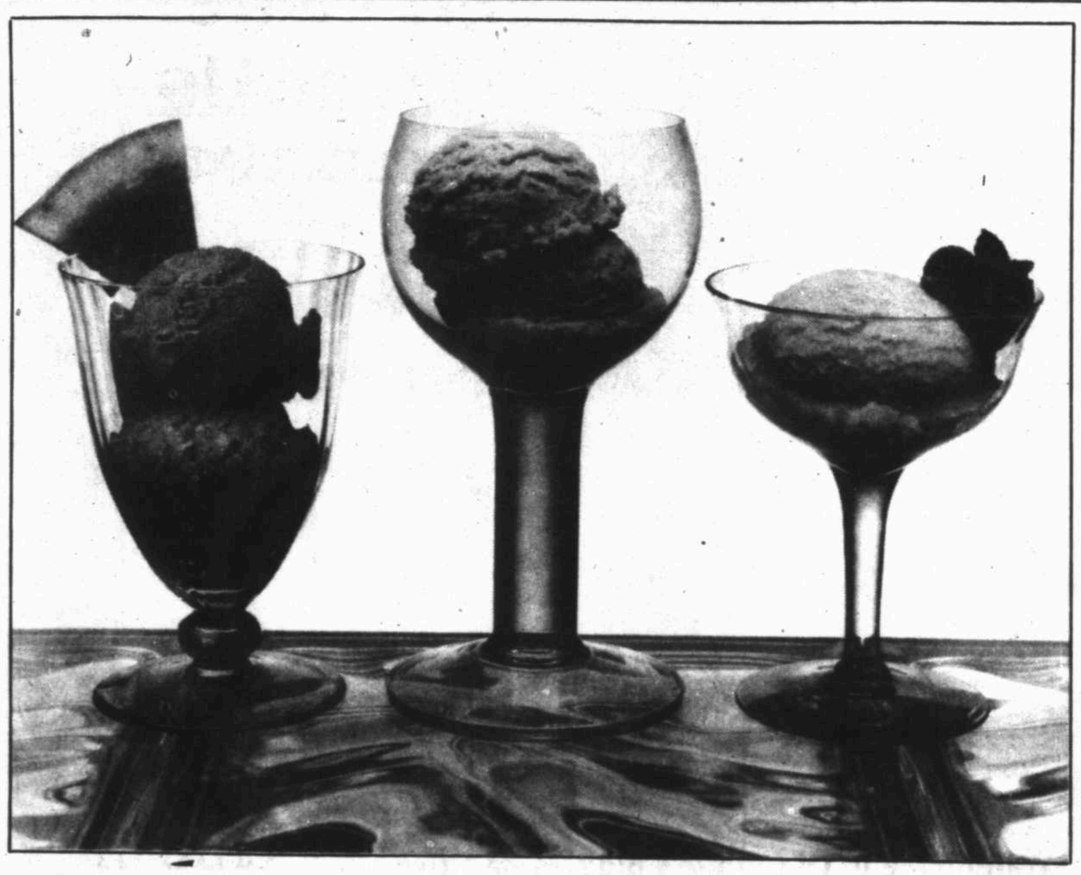

MOCHA TOPPING: Prepare Chocolate Topping as above, except stir in 2 teaspoons instant coffee crystals with the milk and corn syrup.

PEANUT BUTTER 'N' CHOCOLATE TOPPING: Prepare Chocolate Topping as above, except stir in ¼ cup creamy peanut butter with the milk and corn syrup.

MINTY CHOCOLATE TOPPING: Prepare Chocolate Topping as above, except stir in 10 crushed colored butter mints with the milk and syrup.

NUTTY CHOCOLATE TOPPING: Prepare Chocolate Topping as above, except stir in 2 tablespoons chopped nuts with the milk and syrup.

Scream for ice cream

Whether eaten by itself or topped with your favorite topping, ice cream is a summertime dessert favorite.

Ice cream is topper for this summer dessert

Associated Press

Here's an elegant summer dessert that takes only five ingredients — and just minutes to prepare. Chocolate fudge ice cream is the topper for fresh strawberries, flavored with a hint of mint and Burgundy wine.

Burgundy Strawberries is the creation of chef Michel Richard of Citrus in Los Angeles. "When I developed this recipe, my goal was to show that a sophisticated dish doesn't have to be complicated or time-consuming," Richard said.

BURGUNDY STRAWBERRIES
4 ounces Burgundy wine
3 tablespoons sugar
10 chopped mint leaves
1 pint strawberries, cut in pieces
1 quart chocolate fudge ice cream

In medium bowl, mix wine and sugar. Add mint leaves, pour over strawberries. Let marinate 3 hours. Serve strawberries in four individual shallow bowls; top with chocolate fudge ice cream. Makes 4 servings.

Lunch to be skipped

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Society for Foodservice Management will have its annual conference in Boston Sept. 13-16 and plans to skip lunch one day and donate the cost of the meal to a hunger relief group. The society will donate $9,000, cost of one lunch for conference attendees, to the Second Helpings food bank program in Boston. The association of business and industry noncommercial foodservice professionals will have seminars on topics such as "Food Fright: The Great Food Safety Debate" and "Managing 'Knock Your Socks Off' Service."

Espresso frozen dessert is creamy, has almost no fat

Associated Press

Take the heat out of summer with an icy Espresso Freeze with Raspberry Sauce. This frozen dessert is made with non-fat yogurt and cottage cheese, which gives it a creamy consistency — but almost no fat.

The recipe takes just six ingredients and can be prepared in minutes. Serve with a sprig of mint and a dash of cocoa powder.

ESPRESSO FREEZE WITH RASPBERRY SAUCE
1¼ cups non-fat vanilla yogurt
1¼ cups non-fat cottage cheese
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons ground espresso or espresso powder
2 egg whites
2 cups fresh or frozen raspberries
2 tablespoons sugar

Puree yogurt and cottage cheese with 3 tablespoons sugar in a food processor or blender until smooth. Add espresso grounds and egg whites; continue to mix until smooth. Pour into a medium-size bowl; freeze until firm. Before serving, remove from the freezer, break into large chunks and blend again until smooth. Freeze for 15 more minutes. Meanwhile, puree raspberries and 2 tablespoons sugar in a food processor or blender until smooth. Strain if desired. Spoon equal amounts of raspberry sauce onto eight serving plates; top with Espresso Freeze. Makes 8 servings.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Low-fat cheese can be tasty

By Linda Anderson

Time for a modern fable: Once upon a time a bunch of medical researchers discovered that too much fat in the diet is hazardous to your health. Because of this, all the people in the land decided to start cutting back on fat consumption in an effort to maintain or establish healthier lives.

Anderson

This meant that some favorite foods were eliminated or severely restricted in some diets, causing dietary hardships for many.

Cheese lovers were hard-hit by this new philosophy, and didn't know what to do. On one hand, cheese can be very high in fat. On the other hand, many, many foods, such as broccoli, hamburgers and casseroles, are improved with the addition of cheese.

What to do? Cheese lovers all over the land rose up in protest. "Why can't we have a cheese that tastes good and is low in fat?" they cried.

Food manufacturers heard their cries, and, sensing a way to soothe the multitudes (and turn a tidy profit at the same time), decided to give it a shot. Soon, many food manufacturers began marketing "low fat" or even "fat free" cheese products.

Cheese lovers flocked to the supermarkets to try these new wonder foods, hoping that they would be able to enjoy the food they love without having to worry about high fat.

Several cheese lovers live at my house, so we too couldn't resist trying a couple of these "healthier" cheeses to see if they are as good as we hoped.

One is Smart Beat American flavor cheese product; the other is Kraft Free non-fat pasteurized process cheese product. I know, they aren't real cheeses, but real cheeses are higher in fat.

Smart Beat cost $1.79 for an 8-ounce, 12-slice package. Kraft Free cost $2.99 for a 12-ounce package containing 16 slices.

Smart Beat's label claims it is "Fat Free" in big letters; also that has "No Cholesterol" and that each slice contains 30 calories. Kraft Free also carries label advertising claiming it is "Fat Free" and that it has "Low Cholesterol." However, each slice of Free contains 45 calories, according to the nutrition label.

But when you get down to the nitty-gritty, what is important is taste. Low-fat isn't going to do you much good if it tastes too bad to eat.

Heart Beat tasted definitely artifical. I don't know any other way to describe it. Its texture felt artifical; its color was a little off; its taste was artifical and bland to the point of no flavor at all.

Kraft Free was better. It looked and felt like ordinary cheese, and in flavor, came close — not quite the real thing, but close. The fact that it was more expensive might be a problem for some, but cheese lovers will appreciate its flavor and texture.

Healthier cheese still has a way to go before it tastes just like real cheese, but for now, this is close enough.

Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

DEAR ABBY

Men who wear hats indoors lack courtesy

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Ever since I moved to South Texas, I have been annoyed by the lack of common sense and courtesy displayed by men who wear baseball and cowboy hats indoors — particularly in churches, classrooms and theaters. Apparently, it has never occurred to them that not only are they being rude, but they are also blocking the view of most people seated behind them.

Van Buren

I assume that these men have never been informed that it is impolite to wear their hats and caps indoors.

Since this may be a new subject to your readers, let me paraphrase Llewellyn Miller's Encyclopedia of Etiquette on this subject:

Men are required to remove their hats on entering places of worship during a prayer, burial, dedication or wedding; during the raising or lowering of our flag or while the flag is passing in a parade; during the Pledge of Allegiance; on entering the inner lobby of a theater; and on entering a restaurant. — DAVID L. LAUGHLIN, REFERENCE LIBRARIAN, KINGSVILLE, TEXAS

DEAR MR. LAUGHLIN: Thank you for the above information — particularly that which concerns the American flag. However, in most instances, religious tradition outranks social etiquette, so if you should visit an Orthodox synagogue in South Texas, you will find Jewish males wearing hats — not necessarily cowboy hats, but their heads will be covered with small skull caps called "yarmulkes."

DEAR ABBY: A few years back, you published a letter in which a reader told you off, saying that God alone was the only truly qualified "family planner."

I clipped it out to save and now I can't find it. If you recall that letter, will you please run it again? I thought your answer was one of your best. — RUTH COMSTOCK, LA JOLLA, CALIF.

DEAR RUTH: I found it:

DEAR ABBY: Since God alone can create life, and since God alone knows what tomorrow brings, HE alone is truly qualified as a family planner.

How did a smart girl like you ever get taken in by Planned Parenthood? — A LONG-TIME ADMIRER

DEAR ADMIRER: I read the figures on the population explosion and saw pictures of thousands of starving children born of parents who did not want them and could not feed them. I then concluded that a just God could not possibly have given life to innocent children only to doom them to death by starvation in their infancy.

DEAR ABBY: When I read your column in The Kansas City Star regarding mistakes in grammar and pronunciation, I was disappointed that no one mentioned the oft-quoted phrase: "A mind is a terrible thing to waste."

I cringe every time I hear it, and wish someone would phrase it right: A mind is not a terrible thing — "It is a terrible thing to waste a mind" is what is meant.

Thank you for setting the record straight. — MS. NAOMI BOYCE, BONNER SPRINGS, KAN.

DEAR MS. BOYCE: It is indeed terrible when a mind is wasted because the person lacked the funds to attend college. The United Negro College Fund adopted those words for its national fund-raising slogan. Bill Cosby and Oprah Winfrey have been generous beyond description in support of that cause.

DEAR ABBY: I understand that one of your hobbies is collecting anecdotes about U.S. presidents. I have one which is said to be true of President Harry S. Truman:

While speaking to a group of farmers, Truman repeatedly used the word "manure." His wife, Bess, was in the audience with one of her friends who whispered to her, "Bess, can't you get Harry to say 'fertilizer'?"

Bess replied, "It took me 30 years to get him to say 'manure.'" — HY KIPNIS, NORTH LAUDERDALE, FLA.

Hillin substitutes for injured Allison

Associated Press

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — Team owner Robert Yates and crew chief Larry McReynolds have hired Bobby Hillin Jr. to relieve or substitute for injured driver Davey Allison in Sunday's DieHard 500 at Talladega Superspeedway.

The announcement was made Tuesday by telephone from Lehigh Valley Hospital, where Allison was upgraded from stable to satisfactory condition despite a restless night.

Hillin, a 28-year-old from Midland whose only NASCAR victory came in this event in 1986, has a part-time schedule with Martin Birrane's Team Ireland this season but was not scheduled to drive at Talladega. The deal is only for the one race, with Yates and McReynolds expected to sign a road racing specialist to help out at Watkins Glen on Aug. 9 in the next Winston Cup event.

The 31-year-old Allison came away from a spectacular and frightening accident on Sunday at Pocono International Raceway, in which his car flipped 11 times, with a broken and dislocated right wrist, a fractured collarbone and two broken bones in his right forearm. He also had a badly bruised and swollen face.

Allison underwent surgery Sunday night to repair extensive ligament damage and the bones in the broken right wrist and alleviate pressure from the swelling, which had the doctors worried about his circulation. A team spokesman,

The Midland Angels return home to Angels Stadium tonight with the opener of a 10-game home stand.

The Tulsa Drillers hit town for a 7 p.m. start tonight and will be here for five games before the Shreveport Captains visit Midland for five. The Angels are coming off a 10-game road trip to Tulsa and Shreveport. Midland was 4-6 on the tour, but won its last three games.

The Angels are 16-12 in the second half of the Texas League season and lead the Western Division by two games.

Brave-Royal trade

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Braves sent struggling relief pitcher Juan Berenguer to the Kansas City Royals on Tuesday for 1989 National League Cy Young Award winner Mark Davis.

Berenguer, a key member of the Braves' bullpen in the first part of 1991 until he was injured, was 3-1 with a 5.13 ERA and one save this season.

Davis has struggled since saving 44 games for San Diego in 1989. This year he was 1-3 with a 7.18 ERA for the Royals.

"We believe Davis has the capability of regaining the ability level he displayed with the Padres in 1988 and 1989," Atlanta general manager John Schuerholz said. "We believe this move will help us solidify our bullpen for the remainder of the season."

Daniels a Spur

SAN ANTONIO — Trouble-plagued guard Lloyd Daniels signed a two-year contract with the San Antonio Spurs on Tuesday, joining Jerry Tarkanian, who recruited Daniels when the coach was at UNLV.

Daniels, 24, will take part in the Spurs' free agent and rookie camp Saturday through Monday. He participated in a three-day minicamp with the Spurs in June.

Specifics of the contract were not disclosed.

"I'm just happy to be here and glad to be getting the opportunity," Daniels said. "It's a dream to be playing in the NBA."

Daniels, a schoolboy and playground star in New York, has never played in college or the NBA. Daniels' stay at UNLV ended before it really began when he arrested in a crack cocaine house in Las Vegas.

Daniels said he is looking forward to finally playing for Tarkanian, who takes over as the Spurs coach this season.

"You've got to be patient with him," Tarkanian said. "This is all going to be new to Lloyd. This is going to be an adjustment."

Daniels most recently played with the Long Island Surf of the United States Basketball League, averaging 23.7 points, 6 rebounds and 7.8 assists during a 16-game season.

QB Beuerlein knows place

■ With Troy Aikman healthy, Steve Beuerlein is a valuable NFL commodity who's happy to man the clipboard.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — If anything, Steve Beuerlein knows his place. He's a well-paid, second-string quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys who isn't bother because he has to practice with the scrubs.

Beuerlein

"For now I'm happy where I am and there's nothing I can do about starting ahead of Troy Aikman," Beuerlein said. "I know my role. At Dallas I realize I'm not going to be the starting quarterback so why torture myself? I can deal with it."

Beuerlein became one of the hottest quarterbacking properties in the NFL after the 1991 season. He took over for an injured Aikman and got the save in a 24-21 victory over Washington. Then he led the Cowboys to four regular-season victories and a playoff victory over the Chicago Bears.

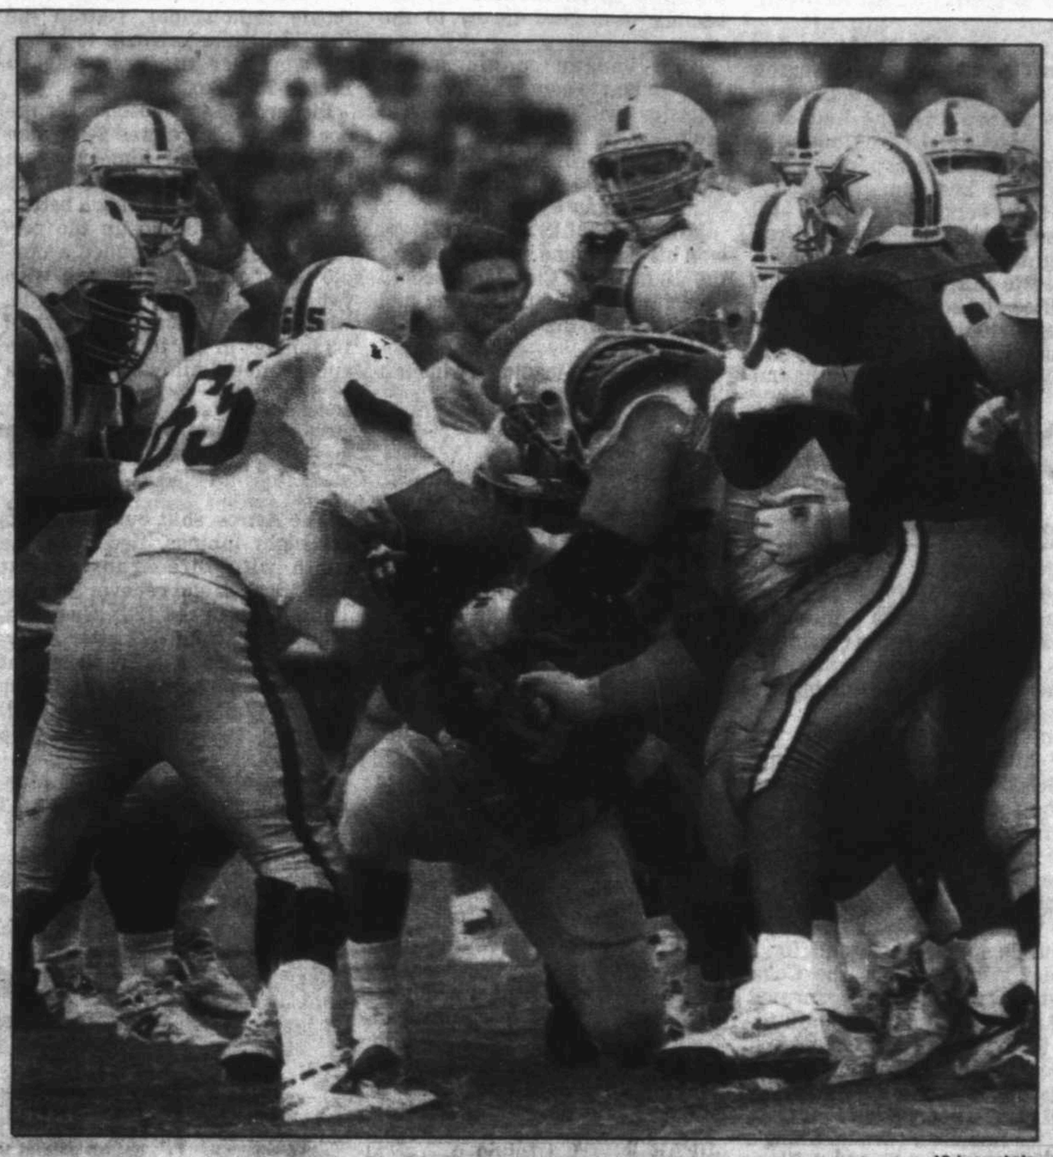

"I heard the Cowboys got a lot of offers for me but I didn't figure I would be traded," he said.

The Cowboys and coach Jimmy Johnson learned a valuable lesson. You have to have a solid backup quarterback, not just some kid from college holding a clipboard.

"At least last season made it clear what I am capable of doing in the NFL," Beuerlein said. "I don't think (Los Angeles Raiders owner) Al Davis ever thought I could play at this level. I knew I could play when I was with the Raiders, but Jay Schroeder was Al's guy.

"We beat some good teams in that playoff stretch drive. It

Raiders, Cowboys scuffle

Associated Press

AUSTIN — It didn't take long for hostilities to break out Tuesday when the Los Angeles Raiders visited the Dallas Cowboys training camp for three days of work.

Dallas defensive tackle Russell Maryland and Los Angeles Raiders guard Steve Wisniewski tangled in a typical football fight before they were separated.

Each landed several blows to the other players' helmet.

"It was my first football fight since I was a redshirt freshman at Miami," Maryland said.

"I thought I got a few cheap shots from Wisniewski and I wasn't going to take it."

Simms signs for $1.6 million, still Giants' backup

Associated Press

MADISON, N.J. — Phil Simms ended a one-day holdout by signing a reported one-year contract that will pay him $1.6 million to be the New York Giants' backup quarterback.

Simms, who missed the opening of training camp on Monday because he was not signed, refused requests for interviews on Tuesday after the team's morning practice at Fairleigh Dickinson-Madison.

One obvious reason is that Simms does not want to discuss the quarterback situation. There will be no competition for the starting job between Simms and Jeff Hostetler this year.

Hostetler, who won the job in training camp last year, has been named the starter by coach Ray Handley, marking the first time that Simms won't be given a chance to earn the starting spot in his 14 seasons with the club.

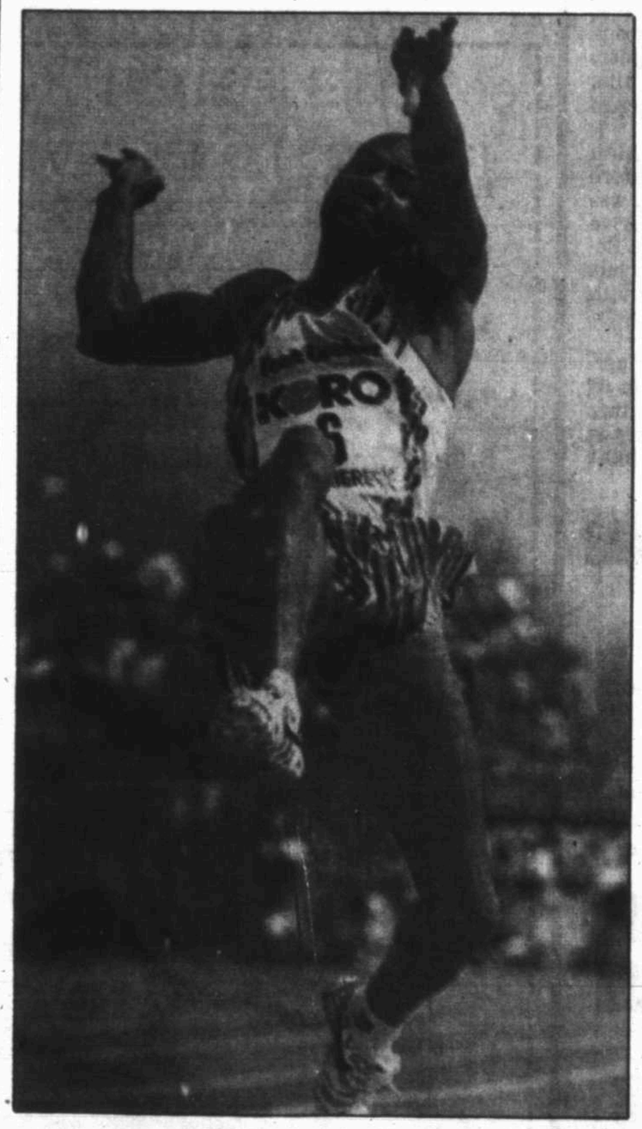

"I have nothing but admiration for the way he has handled every situation he had been in," Handley said. "He's handled everything well in all the nine years I've been here. He's always prepared and ready to go."

Hostetler started the first 12 games for the Giants last season before sustaining a season-ending back injury.

Simms, who will be 37 in November, started the final four games last season after Hostetler was hurt. He completed 82 of 141 passes for 993 yards, eight touchdowns and four interceptions in 1991.

But once the season ended, Handley ended any speculation that there would be another quarterback derby in training camp this season by annoucing the starting job belonged to Hostetler.

Last week, Handley further confused Simms' status by indicating that the club might considering trading one of its five quarterbacks if the right deal came along.

'Dream Team' wins final tune-up, 111-71

Associated Press

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — Magic Johnson and Michael Jordan were the princes of basketball in the principality of Monaco Tuesday night.

Johnson and Jordan had the crowd chanting their names at Stade Louis II arena, including Princes Rainier and Albert, as Team USA won 111-71 in a pre- Olympic exhibition against France.

"They've seen us on television here, but most of them never in person, so they wanted to see us in person," Johnson said. "I guess they made me minister of basketball tonight. I didn't expect anything like this."

Johnson was especially crowd-pleasing with eight points and 11 assists, many of them on spectacular passes. He was asked to go up to the royal box after the game to accept the handshake of Rainier and his son, while many in the crowd went on the court below.

Jordan scored 21 points, 17 in the first half when the United States started slowly against the French national team.

"The crowd showed a lot of respect for us," Jordan said. "At home the opposing crowd usually respects you but they don't show it. This crowd didn't boo us at all."

Charles Barkley scored 14 of his 21 points in the second half and also was a crowd favorite with five dunks. Clyde Drexler scored all of his points on four dunks for an American team which was rusty from the outside, missing six of seven 3-pointers.

"Any basketball fan should like to see us play," Barkley said. "We try to be as athletic as we can — run and dunk and playing defense."

The game was the final tuneup for the Olympics for the United States, a prohibitive gold-medal favorite. The Americans conclude their training period in Monte Carlo on Friday and will play their first game at Barcelona on Sunday against Angola.

After that comes another medal favorite, Croatia.

"The games I'm looking forward to are the ones against the best teams — like Brazil, Croatia, Lithuania and Germany," Barkley said.

Chris Mullin, who scored 16 points for the Americans, was often misidentified by the French-speaking public address announcer as John Stockton, who is still recovering from a broken leg.

Larry Bird, who missed most of the Olympic qualifying tournament at Portland with a stiff back, started for the United States, playing only 16 minutes with two points.

"It's hard to judge how Larry played because he was so tentative," coach Chuck Daly said. "But the whole team was rusty."

Palmeiro homers lift Texas to win

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Rafael Palmeiro hit a three-run homer in the 10th inning moments after a bench clearing melee as the Texas Rangers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 6-3 Tuesday night to end a four-game losing streak.

The melee broke out when Dickie Thon slid hard into second baseman Scott Fletcher. Both players came up swinging and the benches emptied. After the field was cleared, Dan Plesac relieved Darren Holmes (3-4) and surrendered Palmeiro's homer, his second of the game and 11th of the season.

Terry Mathews (2-4) pitched 2 1-3 innings for the victory, allowing three hits and one run, but he failed to protect a lead for Nolan Ryan.

Ryan has left three games against Milwaukee this season with Texas ahead, only to have the bullpen relinquish the lead each time. He allowed seven hits with two walks and four strikeouts in 6 2-3 innings Tuesday.

The Brewers tied the game at 3 in the eighth inning when Greg Vaughn doubled off Mathews, moved to third on a Robin Yount sacrifice and scored on Darryl Hamilton's single.

Palmeiro hit his first homer off Bill Wegman in the seventh, and the Rangers took the lead when Jeff Frye's grounder with the bases loaded was booted by Brewers shorstop Pat Listach.

Wegman also allowed a home run to Juan Gonzalez, his 20th, in the second, which snapped an 0-for-23 skid.

Wegman has allowed 22 home runs this season.

The Brewers, blanked on three hits by the 45-year-old Ryan through five innings, scored two in the sixth. For the second straight night, an error by Gonzalez keyed the rally.

Molitor and Greg Vaughn singled, and Molitor scored on Hamilton's line drive sacrifice fly, just beating Gonzalez's throw to the plate.

With Vaughn running, John Jaha singled to center and Vaughn scored when Gonzalez — who had dropped a fly ball Monday night to spark a three-run Milwaukee rally — let the ball go under his glove.

Indians 5, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Jose Mesa won his first game as a member of the Indians as Cleveland scored four runs in the first inning and held on to defeat the Minnesota Twins.

The AL West-leading Twins lost their second straight game, the first time since June 16 they have lost consecutive games.

Mesa (4-9), acquired on July 14 from Baltimore for minor league outfielder Kyle Washington, held Minnesota to five hits over 6 2-3 innings, striking out two and walking three. Steve Olin pitched the final 1 1-3 for his 18th save.

Kevin Tapani (10-6), who was 9-1 with a 3.39 ERA in his last 13 starts, lost for only the second time since May 6.

Jim Thome hit a solo homer off Tapani in the fourth inning, but the major damage was done in the first when the first five batters reached base and four scored.

Royals 8, Red Sox 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hipolito Pichardo, Kansas City's 22-year-old rookie right-hander, retired the first 17 batters en route to a one-hit win over the error-plagued Boston Red Sox.

Pichardo (5-4), whose career minor league record was 9-21 when the Royals called him up from Double-A Memphis in April, struck out four and did not walk a batter.

Luis Rivera broke up the perfect game when he pulled a double down the left-field line with two out in the sixth. Pichardo, who had never gone longer than 6 1-3 innings in his 18 major league appearances, allowed only five balls to be hit out of the infield.

After taking a 2-0 lead in the fourth, the Royals parlayed three hits and three errors into six unearned runs in the fifth.

Brian McRae was safe leading off on a throwing error by pitcher Joe Hesketh (4-7) and Gregg Jefferies doubled him to third. With one out, Kevin McReynolds was walked intentionally, loading the bases, and when Wally Joyner was safe on first baseman Mo Vaughn's fielding error, McRae and Jefferies scored.

White Sox 10, Orioles 7

CHICAGO — Steve Sax's two-run single highlighted an eight-run eighth inning and lifted the Chicago White Sox to a win over the Baltimore Orioles.

Baltimore starter Rick Sutcliffe, looking for career win No. 150, took a 7-2 lead into the eighth. But after Frank Thomas reached on an error and George Bell, Robin Ventura and Shawn Abner singled to drive in two runs, Sutcliffe was lifted.

Pat Clements relieved and hit Lance Johnson with a pitch to load the bases, and Carlton Fisk followed by greeting reliever Todd Frohwirth (3-1) with a base-clearing double that tied the game at 7.

The win went to Terry Leach (2-3).

Roche wins 16th stage

Associated Press

Tour de France

LA BOURBOULE, France — Former champion Stephen Roche was an easy winner Tuesday in the 16th stage of the Tour de France while defending champion Miguel Indurain retained the overall lead.

Roche, a 32-year Irishman, crossed the rain-spattered finish line 46 seconds ahead of Russian Viacheslav Ekimov to win the hilly 132-mile stage between Saint-Etienne and La Bourboule.

Spaniard Jon Unzaga came in third four seconds later, followed by a pack that included Indurain. The Spaniard maintained a 1-minute, 42-second lead over Italian Claudio Chiappucci with five stages remaining in the world's most prestigious cycling event.

"I feel great for me, my wife and my kids because we had to work a lot to succeed," Roche said. "This was one of my most beautiful victories."

But for the rest, including Andy Hampsten of Boulder, Colo., in third place 8:07 behind, the race has been all but academic since Indurain buried the pack in the Alps last weekend. Hampsten was 13th Tuesday, finishing in a pack 57 seconds behind Roche.

Hampsten, who won a climbing stage Sunday, has replaced Greg LeMond as the main American hope in the competition. LeMond, a three-time champion, quit the race Sunday, a day after falling far out of contention.

The stage victory was one of the few Roche has been able to savor since dominating the sport in 1987, when he won the Tour, the Giro d'Italia and the World Championship.

Back problems have betrayed the power in his legs in recent years and he has bounced from team to team. For his current squad, Carrera, he rides in support of Chiappucci.

Roche broke away from the fog-shrouded pack about 15 miles from the finish, just before the difficult Croix-Morand hill. The breakaway left Indurain in his wake but in no danger of losing the leader's yellow jersey.

Flat stages over the next two days give Chiappucci little chance to gain on Indurain going into a make-or-break time trial Friday. The Spaniard is expected to dominate that discipline.

A relatively flat stage Saturday will bring the riders closer to Paris for the traditional finale Sunday on the Champs-Elysees.

Cubs end Reds' 4-game streak, 1-0

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Kal Daniels hit a solo homer and four Chicago pitchers combined on a three-hitter as the Cubs beat the Cincinnati Reds 1-0 Tuesday night.

The Cubs stopped Cincinnati's four-game winning streak.

Tim Belcher (8-9) allowed just four hits in seven innings, but Daniels' fifth homer of the season, in the fourth, did him in.

Jeff Robinson, making his first start in nearly two years, gave up three hits in 4 2-3 innings.

Robinson was pressed into service when Shawn Boskie strained a muscle in his back, and for a second straight night the Cubs' emergency starters performed well in the early innings until tiring. Mike Harkey, making his first major league start since April 1991, also held the Reds scoreless until the fifth Monday night.

After Robinson gave up a single to Bip Roberts and walked Barry Larkin in the fifth, Ken Patterson (1-1) relieved and got Paul O'Neill on a grounder.

Patterson pitched a scoreless sixth before leaving for a pinch hitter. Jim Bullinger worked two innings and Bob Scanlan pitched the ninth for his fifth save.

Padres 4, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Bruce Hurst shut down Philadelphia before tiring in the ninth inning and the San Diego Padres held off the Phillies for their fourth straight victory.

Hurst (9-6) gave up nine hits, walked none and struck out three in 8 1-3 innings. He won for the eighth time in his last 11 decisions.

Hurst left with runners on second and third, and both eventually scored as Randy Myers gave up Darren Daulton's RBI grounder and an infield single to Stan Javier. Myers got Ricky Jordan on a ground ball for his 17th save in 22 chances, and second save in two nights.

Hurst blanked the Phillies until the sixth when Lenny Dykstra hit his third single and scored as Dave Hollins, hitting in a career high eighth straight game, doubled to make it 4-1.

Terry Mulholland (9-7) worked eight innings and allowed all four runs on nine hits. He also walked none, struck out four and lost his third consecutive decision.

National

Mets 5, Dodgers 2

NEW YORK — Eddie Murray's two-run, tiebreaking double highlighted a four-run eighth-inning rally as the New York Mets beat the Los Angeles Dodgers in Brett Saberhagen's return from the disabled list.

In a contrast of styles early in the game, Saberhagen was popping some of his pitches at 93 mph while Tom Candiotti had the Mets off-balance with his slow knuckleball.

Saberhagen gave up one run and five hits in five innings, throwing 67 pitches. The two-time Cy Young Award winner acquired last winter from Kansas City had been sidelined since May 15 with tendinitis in his right index finger.

Candiotti carried a one-hitter and a 2-0 lead into the seventh when Dave Magagan led off with his second homer of the season, a fly ball down the right-field line. After a walk to Howard Johnson, Candiotti had to leave the game because cracked finger nail on his right hand.

Expos 5, Giants 1

MONTREAL — Ken Hill, whose status as a starter was in question because of a sore right wrist, won his sixth straight decision and the led the Montreal Expos past the San Francisco Giants.

Marquis Grissom tied an Expos' record by stealing four bases and Larry Walker hit a two-run homer as Montreal sent San Francisco to its fifth consecutive loss. Grissom scored twice, once by bowling over Kirt Manwaring in a play that sent the Giants catcher to a hospital for X-rays on his left shoulder.

Hill (11-4) gave up five hits, struck out six and walked three in 6 1-3 innings.

Expos manager Felipe Alou waited until a few hours before game time to decide that Hill was OK after being hit by a line drive in the dugout last Friday. Mel Rojas shut out the Giants on two hits for 2 2-3 innings for his seventh save.

Astros 4, Pirates 3

HOUSTON — Rookie Juan Guerrero hit his first home run in 65 major league at-bats, connecting with one out in the 12th inning as the Houston Astros beat Pittsburgh.

The Astros, shut out on six hits for eight innings, tied it in the ninth with three runs against Doug Drabek and reliever Stan Belinda. Then in the 12th, Guerrero, who was batting .172 after entering the game as a late replacement at shortstop, homered off Roger Mason (2-6). Doug Jones (7-6) pitched two innings for the victory.

Mason also was the loser Monday night as the Pirates blew a 7-3 lead after four innings and fell 11-8.

The Astros improved to 9-3 in extra innings, the best mark in the majors.

Braves 9, Cardinals 7

ST. LOUIS — The Atlanta Braves won their 10th straight game the hard way, blowing a five-run lead before Sid Bream's RBI double in the 12th gave them the victory over St. Louis.

The Braves won for the 34th time in their last 44 overall, and moved to within one-half game of first-place Cincinnati in the NL West. That's the closest the defending NL champions have been to the top since April 12.

Atlanta has also won nine extra-inning games, tied with Houston for most in the majors.

Astros sale nears completion

Associated Press

HOUSTON — An agreement in principle for the sale of the Houston Astros and the Astrodome lease is expected to be announced later this week, sources close to the negotiations say.

Sources told The Houston Post and Houston Chronicle that a deal between Temple businessman Drayton McLane Jr. and Astros owner John McMullen could be reached today, at the earliest.

Representatives of both parties have ironed out most of the remaining details without McLane or Astros owner John McMullen being involved.

"I think you can count on his statement last week about something being resolved on the Astros sale by the end of this week," McLane's public-relations director, Christi Lucksinger, said.

One source said that only one thing remains to be determined before the announcement is made.

"They just have to decide when they want to pull the trigger."

Culpepper, Patton sign at OC

ODESSA — Two Midlanders have announced their signing of letters of intent to play baseball at Odessa College, as Midland High's Dewayne Culpepper and Midland Lee's Jimmy Patton inked with the Wranglers.

Culpepper and Patton, cousins, have been foes in high school ranked for three years but will be reunited on the OC team.

The left-handed Culpepper played center field and pitched for MHS. He hit .370 in District 4-5A play this season and had the lowest ERA on the team at 3.43.

Patton, a right-handed pitcher, has battled arm injuries for two years but went 3-3 in 1992. He also batted .333 for the Rebels.

From Reporter-Telegram staff reports.

HILLIN: Elliott leads for season

(From 1C)

Brian VanderCook, said the incisions remained open Tuesday and would not be closed until the swelling goes down sufficiently.

Despite the seriousness of the injuries and the fact that Allison is expected to remain hospitalized for several more days, the plan on Tuesday was for the second-generation to drive one or two practice laps on the 2.66-mile Talladega oval on Saturday and take the green flag on Sunday in order to earn series points.

The 33rd-place finish on Sunday cost Allison the series lead that he has held for most of the season, with Bill Elliott taking the top spot by nine points.

Hillin, driving for Birrane, finished 25th in the race.

Yates said that hiring a driver "was a super tough decision, but we need to get on with our program and get the seat and the uniform made."

He said a number of drivers called to say they were sorry about Allison's accident and also to offer their services. Yates said hiring Hillin for this weekend was a decision made by the entire team after five or six group discussions and imput from Bobby Allison, Davey's father and a competing team owner, NASCAR and team sponsor Texaco-Havoline.

"There were many elements to consider," McReynolds said. "Among the key elements were driver size, racing experience and success at Talladega."

He also pointed out that it was important to the team that Hillin, in his stint as substitute for injured Kyle Petty last year, "brought the car home in one piece. That is very important to this race team."

Hillin said, "I hate the circumstances, but I've told Robert that I want to and I can do a good, solid job and that I'll do anything he asks me to do. Obviously, I'm happy to get the call to help them out."

VanderCook said Dr. Harry Stephens and his medical team discussed with Allison Tuesday building a special cast that would allow him to hit his hand over the gearshift lever and the steering wheel without any further damage to the injured area. He said they also discussed a timetable that would take Allison off painkillers for a long enough time before he would get into the team's Ford Thunderbird to allow him to be clearheaded.

He would continue to use ice and aspirin to keep the swelling and pain under control.

Allison's spirits were buoyed Tuesday by a visit from Indy-car star Michael Andretti, who lives in nearby Nazareth, Pa., and shares the same sponsor with the NASCAR drivers. Mario Andretti, Michael's father, had called on Monday to see how Allison was doing and ask if his son could visit.

BEUERLEIN: One year on contract

(From 1C)

opened up a lot of eyes. Some people thought: 'This guy who got a bad deal with LA can play.'"

Beuerlein, starting his fifth season, hadn't played in an NFL game in a year and a half when he relieved Aikman.

Beuerlein almost certainly will sign with another NFL team after this season. But he's not saying he definitely will leave the Cowboys.

"I'd like to have a chance to make my own mark in this league," Beuerlein said. "I guess it would come down to just how creative an offer the Cowboys make. There are a lot of things to be considered.

"I could stay with a successful team that will be great for a lot of years without too much wear and tear on my body."

With Aikman's history for injury, the NFL could be seeing more of Beuerlein in 1992.

"I've made it clear to Troy that I'm not competing for his job," Beuerlein said. "For now, I'll just go with the flow."

COWBOYS: Coach unhappy about fight

(From 1C)

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson wasn't pleased about the scuffle.

"Tempers flare and things like that happen when you get two teams together," Johnson said. "I don't want it to be a habit. I'm not as concerned about the fight as I am 15-yard penalties.

"We were the least penalized team in the NFL last year and I want to keep it that way."

The Cowboys and Raiders will work against each other in two-a-day sessions through Thursday. The Raiders will fly to Phoenix later for more work against the Cardinals.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JULY 22, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The more direct you are now, the more successful you will be. A family member really does love and admire you. In September, you stand up to an employer or supervisor who is wrong. Someone seeks your services as a consultant after deciding they cannot afford to hire you full time. Think about starting an at-home business in early 1993. Your self-discipline is a tremendous asset! Next March may not be the right time to put a property on the market. Wait a while.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: poet Stephen Benet, actors Terence Stamp and Albert Brooks, singer Bobby Sherman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Some things are so beautiful they are meant to be shared. The difference between looking good and feeling great is all in your state of mind. A makeover boosts your spirits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Professional tips will put cash in your pocket, so follow through. Make the most of an opportunity to earn more money. Seize a chance to meet members of the opposite sex.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Advance planning will improve your chances for a promotion. A fateful meeting opens new doors to both financial success and romance. Curb a strong urge to spend money on luxuries.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Go slow and trust your intuition. Save forceful action for another day. A protective, nurturing role shows off your best qualities. Anyone who comes to you for help will receive good advice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Attend to basic business matters. Family members will be more understanding than usual. Romance takes on new luster when financial worries subside.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A new partnership could affect every facet of your life. Get all promises in writing to avoid future confrontations. Anyone with doubts should seek legal advice before signing a contract.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance is all-important to you now. Say "yes" to a loved one. You must meet work deadlines to protect your reputation. Look at your efforts in a realistic light.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone displays an independent streak. Be firm but fair with small fry. You could find yourself attracted to a newcomer who shares your interests. Show more tenderness to a loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your ability to communicate ideas is a tremendous asset. Exchanging views freely with your romantic partner lets loved one know exactly what is in your heart and on your mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be more receptive to the suggestions of someone who has your best interests at heart. New emotional rewards will stem from community or church involvement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your intuition helps get you back on track. Yes, your mate or partner is on your side! Explain exactly how things stand financially. Divide your time more evenly between business and pleasure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Favorable trends enhance your image. The financial outlook is rosy. Shortcuts help you reduce expenses, but neglecting your domestic duties will cause dissension.

TODAY' S CHILDREN are born communicators with an excellent ear for nuance. They instinctively understand what is not being said! A career in journalism or diplomacy will suit these farsighted Cancerians to a tee. They enjoy learning other languages and will want to live abroad at some point. Although these Cancerians are quick to offer advice, they seem loath to take it. They pride themselves on being self-reliant.

Opening lead: Three of ♣

It would seem that 12 tricks in spades present no problem on this deal from a rubber bridge game. However, a clever deceptive play by East led declarer astray.

Note that North felt no compunction to insist on playing in the good six-card heart suit. With an eight-card spade fit confirmed, North cue-bid the ace of clubs and bounced into slam when South cooperated with a diamond cue-bid.

West led a club, taken in the dummy. Trumps were drawn in three rounds, ending in hand, and a heart was led to the ten. East ducked smoothly! Declarer cashed the ace of hearts, discarding a diamond, and continued with the queen. When East followed with a low heart, only one heart was outstanding, the king, and declarer "knew" the monarch was with West. Declarer ruffed confidently, and received a mortal blow when West discarded a diamond. Since declarer could no longer set up and use the long hearts, South crossed to the remaining high club and tried the diamond finesse in an effort to limit the damage to down one. No luck.

There might be some argument in support of South's decision to play for the overtrick had this been a duplicate pair event. However, at rubber bridge declarer had made an egregious blunder. All declarer had to do was discard on the third heart instead of ruffing. If West held the king, there would be three good hearts in dummy to provide parking places for declarer's remaining minor-suit losers. Then East's bit of chicanery would have gone for naught, but what a small price to pay to defeat a vulnerable slam!

Springsteen is back with a new album and a new style

NEW YORK — Bruce Springsteen, making a comeback after a contemplative if hectic 3-year hiatus, says he "Bruced out" on his own public image.

"All my rock 'n' roll answers had fizzled out," Springsteen says in the Aug. 6 issue ofRolling Stone in his first in-depth interview in years.

Springsteen

"The whole image that had been created — and that I'm sure I promoted — it really always felt like, 'Hey, that's not me.' I mean, the macho thing, that was just never me," said the man fans call "The Boss."

Springsteen left the road in 1988, entered therapy, divorced and remarried, moved from his native New Jersey to Los Angeles, and fathered two children.

"I didn't want to be one of those guys who can write music and tell stories and have an effect on people's lives, and maybe on society in some fashion, but not be able to get into his own self," he said.

His changing lifestyle is reflected in two new albums, "Human Touch" and "Lucky Town," which have songs about marriage and children. While selling more than 1.5 million copies apiece, they didn't dominate the charts like his past albums.

"I don't take that personally," said Springsteen, whose U.S. tour begins Thursday in New Jersey.

"I want to sing about who I am now. I want to get up on stage and sing with all of the 42 years that are in me."

KEY WEST, Fla. — James Dickey says he's reached the age of feeling expert about writing. The 69-year-old poet and author made the remark on receiving the first Conch Republic Prize for Literature.

"When you're coming up to 70, you takean inventory of your life and you tend to reflect a little more having arrived at the mastery of some kind of idiom," Dickey said. "I would far rather take a master class in guitar from Segovia when he was 80 than when he was 25."

Dickey

Dickey, known for his novel "Deliverance," was honored at a reception inaugurating the weeklong Hemingway Days Festival. The award is for a writer "whose life's work reflects the spirit of Key West," though it was Dickey's first trip to the Florida Keys.

The festival, which ends Sunday, includes a writers' workshop and conference, poetry and fiction readings, a Hemingway Look-Alike contest, a short story competition, and a party at the Hemingway Home and Museum.

BRUSSELS, Belgium — King Baudouin, who underwent two operations in the past year, used his traditional independence day speech on Tuesday to quell rumors that he would soon hand the throne to Prince Philippe.

"Now that the doctors have given me back my excellent health, I will be glad to continue to serve you during many more years," he said in a radio address.

King Baudouin, 61, had prostate surgery last September and a heart operation in March.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — This year's nominees to the Country Music Hall of Fame are singers Don Gibson, Merle Haggard, George Jones, Willie Nelson and Ray Price, the Country Music Association announced Tuesday.

Only one of the five will be chosen for induction to the Hall of Fame during the CMA Awards Show show on CBS-TV Sept. 30.

Leading the list is Nelson, who has spearheaded five FarmAid concerts during a 30-year career. His hit records include "To All the Girls I've Loved Before," a duet with Julio Iglesias; "On the Road Again"; and "Always on My Mind."

Haggard spent three years in San Quentin Prison for burglary, then launched a country music career that earned him the title "the poet of the common man." His hit records include "Okie From Muskogee," "If We Make It Through December" and "That's the Way Love Goes."

Jones, former husband of country queen Tammy Wynette, first recorded in 1953. His hits include "He Stopped Loving Her Today," "The Race Is On" and "She Thinks I Still Care."

Price is known for the pop-country hit "For the Good Times."

Gibson wrote and recorded "I Can't Stop Loving You" and "Oh Lonesome Me."

Energy prices held steady on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

West Texas Intermediate for August delivery slipped 1 cent to $21.78.

Natural gas for August delivery rose 2.1 cents to close at $1.770 per thousand cubic feet.

Lower-grade sour crude fell 6 cents to close at $19.55.

Bank closed

DALLAS — First Southern Trust Company of Dallas was shut down on Tuesday after efforts failed to recapitalize the institution, Texas Banking Commissioner Catherine Ghiglieri said.

Ms. Ghiglieri said a recent examination identified losses that depleted the company's capital.

The examination also revealed numerous violations of law, extensive net operating losses, and excessive contingent liabilities, she said.

First Southern Trust had 1,515 fiduciary accounts totaling about $250 million, officials said.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar was mostly lower Tuesday after the Federal Reserve Board gave no indication it planned further moves to support the U.S. currency.

The dollar rose in cautious European dealings Tuesday after the Fed and other central banks intervened Monday to help support the sagging greenback. The dollar even bounced a bit as Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan told a congressional committee a weak dollar would not help with the coming recovery from the recession.

Analysts said the market did not get the reassurance it wanted from Greenspan that the Fed would support the dollar.

By the close in New York, the dollar fell to 1.4870 against the German mark, down from 1.4935 at Monday's close.

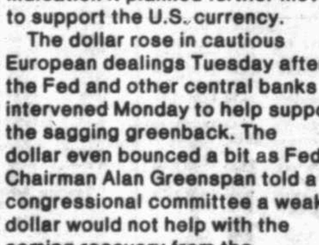

The dollar closed in New York at 125.25 Japanese yen, down from 125.45 yen Monday.

Stocks rebound

NEW YORK — Stock prices rebounded Tuesday after two days of steep declines, as the market got a boost from overseas gains and a round of buying tied to technical factors.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 5.41 to 3,308.41 by the close. Earlier, the leading indicator was ahead almost 20 points before computer-driven selling drove it lower.

Advancing issues narrowly outnumbered declining ones on the New York Stock Exchange.

Fed chief offers faintly upbeat view

■ Jobless rate to remain above 7 percent through election year, Greenspan predicts.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve, gave an only faintly upbeat forecast Tuesday, saying the economy would gain momentum soon.

But he failed to say how soon and added that the jobless rate — the most politically sensitive economic indicator in an election year — would remain above 7 percent for the rest of 1992.

Greenspan's testimony before Congress is likely to give the White House little encouragement that the economy will bolster President Bush's faltering re-election campaign.

The Fed chairman characterized current economic activity as dull and gave no firm indication that it would pick up before Election Day.

Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, the Democratic presidential nominee, who leads Bush in the public opinion polls by 20 points or more, has made the Republicans' stewardship of the economy a central campaign theme.

The Democrats contend that Republican policies have mired the nation in its longest slump since World War II.

In his testimony, Greenspan, the nation's most influential economic policy maker, rejected the idea of a triple-dip recession, saying the economy "is likely to strengthen moderately" between now and the end of 1993. He added that the jobless rate, now 7.8 percent, would fall to a range of 6.5 to 7 percent by the end of 1993.

"I expect that the economic expansion will soon gain momentum, which lower inflation should help to maintain," he said. He said industrial production was increasing in July, based on preliminary reports, after declining in June.

Greenspan appeared before the Senate Banking Committee, as he is required by law to do twice a year, to discuss monetary policy and the state of the economy.

The hearing was unusually testy, with several senators attacking the Fed chairman for acting too slowly to cut interest rates and asking why they should believe this forecast when several of his recent predictions had been wrong.

In his testimony, Greenspan made these other points:

■ It would be risky to use fiscal stimulus, like increased spending, to spur the economy, because that would produce a higher deficit and could push up already high long-term interest rates. Some Democrats in Congress are considering such a package of fiscal stimulation.

■ The U.S. economy would not benefit from letting the dollar fall. On Monday, the Fed joined a dozen other central banks to buy dollars, in an effort to keep the currency from falling to record lows against the German mark.

■ Cutting the capital gains tax rate would help lift investment — a position he espoused even before he became Fed chairman. The Bush administration plans to push Congress to pass a capital gains tax cut and a tax credit for first-time home buyers, among other measures, to enhance growth. Many Democrats frown on cutting capital gains taxes, believing it would help the rich while doing little to stimulate investment.

Smith Corona types an end to U.S. plant

CORTLAND, N.Y. (AP) — Smith Corona, the last American typewriter maker, announced today it will move manufacturing operations to Mexico within the year, eliminating 775 full-time jobs.

G. Lee Thompson, chairman and chief executive officer, said Smith Corona will leave 370 employees in Cortland to maintain its worldwide engineering, product design, customer service and administrative support divisions.

An additional 100 temporary jobs will be lost in the move, which will begin after the federally required 60-day plant closing notification deadline expires. The move is expected to be finished in approximately one year, company officials said.

Smith Corona joins a growing list of companies that have moved manufacturing to Mexico, where labor rates are a fraction of the cost in the United States. The migration has aroused alarm in the U.S. labor movement, which contends hundreds of thousands of jobs have been lost already.

The Smith Corona move also comes as the United States and Mexico are nearing completion of a historic free-trade pact.

Three parties file objections to Continental bid

By David Ivanovich
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Two major creditors and the company's shareholders have objected to financier Charles Hurwitz's bid for Continental Airlines.

Houston-based American General Corp., IBM and the Official Committee of Equity Security Holders filed objections Monday with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Delaware.

The three are opposing the $350 million offer submitted by Hurwitz's Houston-based conglomerate, Maxxam, that would give Hurwitz 72 percent of the carrier.

Continental and Maxxam officials declined to comment on the objections. A hearing on the matter is scheduled for today.

"American General is asking the court to improve the bidding procedures in order to ensure that Continental gets the best possible bid," said Jim D'Agostino, American General's senior vice president. "We would like to ensure that the cash is kept within Continental and not expended at this point."

Officials at the giant financial services and insurance firm estimate Continental owes them about $180 million, only $50 million of which is secured by gates and flight kitchens at Los Angeles International Airport.

Under the terms of the Hurwitz proposal, Maxxam and its partners would control 72 percent of the airline, with the option to purchase as much as 81 percent. The creditors would then divide up the rest.

American General, in its filing, argued that limits imposed by Hurwitz effectively keep other bidders from making offers.

The Hurwitz-led bid stipulates that any competing bid be at least $400 million, $50 million more than that offered by Maxxam and investment banking firms Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette and Kidder, Peabody & Co.

"To require potential competing bidders to exceed the Investment Group's offer by $50 million ... will ensure that there are no competing bids," American General complained.

If the company were to accept another offer, Hurwitz's group would be paid what is known as a break-up fee ranging from $8 million to $12 million.

Calling such a break-up fee "excessive," American General officials fear such a fee could have a "chilling effect on competing bids."

American General also argued that the Hurwitz proposal creates a Catch 22 situation for any other investor, because the third party would be forced to submit a bid before being provided the necessary information to do so.

"It is ludicrous to believe that any rational party would or could submit such a substantial offer absent detailed information from the company," American General argued.

Sears to settle, pay $200,000

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Sears Roebuck and Co. agreed Tuesday to pay $200,000 to settle allegations arising from a fraud investigation of its New Jersey auto repair shops.

Sears officials said they also were talking with California authorities, who have said they want Sears banned from performing car repairs in their state because of consumer-fraud allegations.

In New Jersey, Sears also agreed to pay $3,000 to the state for not posting consumer-rights notices in six shops. It said it would post the signs within 10 days.

Under reforms announced June 22, Sears will also stop paying commissions to car repair employees, eliminate goals for selling specific products and hire outsiders to pose as consumers and check on workers.

Results from those independent "shopping audits" will be reported quarterly to the state Division of Consumer Affairs for the next 18 months. Sears also agreed to immediately settle any consumer complaint already filed with the division.

"Sears kept its word," New Jersey Attorney General Robert Del Tufo said, "and has now formalized its commitment in this agreement."

Two men mug young teen after the Democratic Convention

JOSHUA (AP) — When Richard Stephens, a 17-year-old history buff and Joshua High School student council member, decided to volunteer at last week's Democratic National Convention, he was warned about New York City, its creative con artists and sometimes dangerous streets.

Stephens' grandmother told him to hide his money in his sock because no thief would think to search his feet. His parents suggested that he empty his wallet of cash, avoid the subway and try not to look like a kid from Joshua, Texas, pop. 2,112.

But Stephens said he probably looked just that way as he walked through Times Square early Thursday morning, still high from the excitement of the convention, wearing a button with Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton's picture on it, and his volunteer credentials swinging from his neck. That's when, near the corner of 48th and Broadway, the friendly man in the suit approached him.

"I'm thinking that it's great to have a New Yorker finally talk to me. A lot of people there were really kind of rude," said Stephens, who figured the man, who kept pace beside him and talked about what a wonderful president Clinton would make, was another dedicated Democrat.

Then another man stepped from a doorway, suddenly blocking his path, he said.

"Being from Texas and all, I know guns. And that guy had a .357-caliber Magnum," Stephens said.

The second man, also wearing a suit, pressed the gun against Stephens' ribs. Both men searched Stephens' pockets. But Stephens thought he saw a glimmer of hope.

"I'm thinking they might be cops and they're just harrassing people from out of town," Stephens said. "So I asked to see their badges. I asked to see some credentials. But the guy with the gun said, 'Shut up or I'll kill you.'"

The men took $140, including the $20 hidden in Stephens' sock. They left him $2.50 in change, and after a brief inspection, rejected the $10 Rolex watch he had bought earlier in the week. Two police officers, who Stephens said he spotted drinking coffee and eating pastries in a squad car, searched the area for the two stick-up men, but they had no luck.

New York City Police Department officials, who confirmed the mugging, said it is one of only three involving delegates or volunteers during the weeklong convention. Stephens said he thought the incident is a good example of the results of Reagan and Bush economic policies.

'People got to eat somehow . . . I hope they catch them and they pay for their crime. But it's a good example of what's going on out there.'

— Richard Stephens

"People got to eat somehow," he said. "I hope they catch them and they pay for their crime. But it's a good example of what's going on out there."

Kairen Stephens, Richard's mother, said her family has a long history of political involvement.

"Richard started out as soon as he was able to wear a button on his diapers," said his mother, who wired her son extra money after the mugging. "I was a little worried about the trip to New York. But he's very resourceful and he is independent. It meant a lot to him."

Stephens, who has worked on several local Democratic campaigns, said that he plans to help woo voters to the Clinton-Gore ticket this summer. He has already seen some emotional opposition to his candidate.

On Thursday afternoon at Madison Square Garden, Stephens was confronted by a man protesting Clinton's pro-choice stance on abortion, he said. The man, holding a large picture of what he said was a human fetus, shoved Stephens and screamed that Clinton needed to be saved from his immorality.

"That was a little more unsettling than the gun thing," Stephens said. "No one knew how he got into the delegates area. I think the Secret Service had to throw him out."

Stephens, a high school senior whose bedroom is decorated with the faces of Democratic candidates from years past, said that he will remember the convention for its great speeches, a joke that Rep. Joseph Kennedy told the young volunteers about Vice President Dan Quayle and, best of all, a slow dance with Al Gore's 18-year-old daughter, Karenna at a post-convention party.

"She's pretty," Stephens said. "But the Secret Service guys kind of danced right around us. We couldn't really talk."

Columnist offers to replace Perot for $1

AUSTIN (AP) — A newspaper humor columnist, saying he feels sorry for disillusioned Perot supporters, Friday offered to take up their banner — for a few bucks.

Austin American-Statesman columnist Mike Kelley said he doesn't want much from the thousands of ex-Perot volunteers. Just $1 each.

"This will accomplish a couple of things," his column said. "It will give you an even greater stake in our cause than you have now. And it will bring me lots and lots and lots of money..."

Kelley said he and Perot have many things in common.

"Look, Perot is from East Texas. I am from East Texas. He talks funny. I talk funny. Eerie, isn't it?"

The humorist also said he and Perot also hold exactly the same views on the big issues of the day.

"I believe the budget deficit is a bad thing and that we have to get in there and fix it," he wrote.

Education? "We have to get in there and fix it."

Health care? "We have to get in there and fix it."

The environment? "Get in there and fix it."

But despite the similarities, Kelley said there are important differences between himself and the Dallas billionaire.

"Perot said Thursday he was getting out because he couldn't win. I have utterly no illusion that I can win and so have no reason to leave you suddenly in the lurch," Kelley wrote.

He also mocked Perot's claim that he didn't "have any desire to be president."
