Reagan says he supports oil, gas bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told Republican members of Congress who represent oil states they had his full support for a bill aimed at helping domestic oil and gas producers, the White House and participants in the meeting said Tuesday.

The bill was introduced last month by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and others after consultation with the Energy Department. It does not include any direct provision aimed at raising prices, such as import quotas or taxes that some industry figures have sought in the wake of a 50 percent price collapse.

Reagan has opposed such measures.

One of the provisions calls for a study of an import fee. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Texas, said, "I'm encouraged that the president is willing to look at that component of the bill. He's endorsing the study. I think that's not going to be a useless act."

Reagan already has convened an inter-agency committee to consider ways to help the industry.

A statement from White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president told the meeting, "America must never again be dependent upon unreliable foreign sources of oil."

The 20-minute meeting included Boulter and Reps. William Dannemeyer of California and Henson Moore of Louisiana, Gramm and Sens. James McClure of Idaho and Don Nickles of Oklahoma, Interior Secretary Donald Hodel and Energy Secretary John S. Herrington.

Moore is seeking a Senate seat and Nickles is running for re-election. Asked if the meeting were not simply a pre-election device to help Republican candidates, Moore replied: "I don't think the timing has anything to do with it. We were pushing for this meeting months ago," and it took that long to line up industry support.

Nickles and Gramm, in a letter to colleagues, said the American Petroleum Association, the Natural Gas Supply Association, the Independent Petroleum Association of America and the Texas Indepedent Production and Royalty Owners were supporting the bill.

The bill provides for, among other things, repeal of the so-called windfall profits tax, which does not apply at current prices and repeal of restrictions on use of natural gas as a boiler fuel, which the House already has passed as a separate bill.

It also would open natural gas pipelines to all shippers, direct that half the oil for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve be obtained from domestic producers, the only ones currently being solicited; and provide limited exemption from antitrust laws for small natural gas producers to form selling combines.

McClure, who is chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, said the package could not pass if it were a subject of partisan debate, and he expressed hope that it would attract Democratic support in the Senate.

Senate passage would put "great pressure on the House," Moore said.

The senators said they would try to attach the bill as a rider to higher-priority legislation because it otherwise would get lost in the rush to adjournment.

Oil show exhibitors increase

From Staff Reports

Despite an economic downturn, the Permian Basin Oil Show, scheduled for Oct. 15-18, will have a record number of exhibitors, officials say.

At latest count there were 538 exhibitors, an increase over the 521 exhibitors featured at the 1984 oil show.

"We have an increase in the number of exhibitors this year because economic conditions have forced some of the exhibitors to cut back on the number of spaces they have occupied in the past years," Woody Gregory, 1986 oil show president, said.

"In one respect this has helped the Permian Basin Oil Show this year because it has allowed many companies which have been on the waiting list to be able to get exhibit spaces, and with this I think that we will have a better balanced show.

Jay Alvey, executive director of the oils show since 1960, said he is confident every last space will be sold by the time the oil show opens at 10 a.m. Oct. 15.

The oil show hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Oct. 15 and 16, 1 to 6 p.m. Oct. 17 and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 18. Attendance Oct. 15 and 16 is restricted to petroleum personnel only and no children are allowed on the grounds during the two-day period.

Registration also is required for attendance Oct. 15 and 16 and no one will be permitted on the grounds without a registration badge.

Oil show officials say they expect 150,000 to 200,000 persons to attend the show the first two days.

To expedite registration, the Registration Committee will set up pre-registration centers throughout the area.

"Through these 10 pre-registration centers we are hoping most everyone in the Permian Baisn will be registered by the time they come to the oil show on Wednesday and Thursday," said Michael Thompson, Registration Committee chairman.

"For those who are unable to pre-register, we are hoping there will be no more than a 10-minute wait in line to register once they reach the main gates of the oil show grouds.

Pre-registration centers will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Oct. 13 and 14. The centers are located in:

— At the entrance to the oil show grounds at the Ector County Coliseum Complex, 42nd Street and Andrews Highway.

— Midland Center, 105 N. Main St.

— Old Country Club Building, 402 N.E. Mustang Drive, Andrews.

Joan Baskin, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, listens to Terryl Bechtol, guest speaker at the Chamber's Annual Meeting and Luncheon Tuesday.

Midland's 'spirit of volunteerism' applauded

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

"It doesn't matter how many times you are down — what matters is how many times you get up."

That was the message Tuesday at the 63rd Midland Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting. Speaker Terryl Bechtol applauded the "spirit of volunteerism" that has allowed the local chamber to flourish and grow at a time when it might be easy to get discouraged.

The meeting officially began the chamber's new year as Wayne Merritt, Chief Executive Officer at United Bank, took over as president.

Outgoing president, Joan Baskin, presented an annual report of chamber activities, highlighting major goals the group has achieved during the past year.

Calling it a privilege to serve "a unique town in an unusual year," the chamber's first female president pointed to the successful formation of the Permian Basin Bid Center; the "Shop the Petroplex" campaign; further development of the UTPB Center for Energy Diversification and the Super Collider; and the Chinese sister-city project as major accomplishments by the chamber membership in the past 12 months.

"The people who volunteered their time to chamber activities represent the tenacity, character and strength necessary to make things happen in West Texas," Ms. Baskin stated.

"The ability to take liabilities and turn them into assets, to take challenges and turn them into opportunities, is what makes an organization successful," she continued.

In looking toward the new work year, Merritt said, "We see low product prices and high vacancy rates and unemployment. But we can still be optimistic about the future because of the commitment and talent of the people who have volunteered their time and service to the Chamber of Commerce."

"Midland has a 101-year heritage of meeting the challenge."

Merritt expects the chamber's focus to fall heavily in the areas of diversification and economic development during the coming year. He stressed economic development funding, capital project coordination and an active participation in governmental affairs that affect the Permian Basin as primary objectives during his term.

Luncheon speaker Bechtol, who is a resident of Florida, as well as past national president of the Jaycees and a winner of the George Washington Honor Medal, devotes much of his time speaking to U.S. and international chambers of commerce and has authored several books and magazine articles.

Says Bechtol: "To be successful, chambers must concentrate on people. This country was built by volunteers who wouldn't quit."

Midlanders will be urged to say "no" to drugs this month as the Council Against Substance Abuse (CASA) continues its war on chemical abuse with "Midland Says No to Chemical Abuse Month."

Throughout the month, members of CASA will participate in events to raise public awareness about substance abuse and show how Midland is at the forefront of the War on Drugs in Texas.

CASA member and Midland school board representative Betsy Robinson said the events are designed to "generate an understanding and a sense of pride among our students and citizens in the fact that our civic leaders and our school system have taken a strong stand against substance abuse and programs are being looked at as models in other communities.

"Communities statewide are requesting copies of our school policies and this October, members of CASA and PUSH (Prevention Using Student Help) have been invited to speak at the Texan's War On Drugs Adult Leadership Conference in San Antonio to describe the 'Midland Plan' to other communities," she said.

Among the highlighted activities scheduled for the month-long celebration is a citywide "Just Say No" rally Oct. 25 at ClayDesta Plaza.

The event, sponsored and coordinated by PUSH, will feature Midland Independent School District bands, cheerleaders, athletes, pep squads, drill and dance teams who will join in with "Just Say No" cheer and chants.

Realtor says economy poised for slow growth

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The president of the Texas Association of Realtors says indications are the economic downturn in the state has "bottomed out" and he believes the economy is positioned for "slow, steady growth."

Houston Realtor Conrand Bering Jr., in an interview at the Holiday Inn Centre where the Odessa Board of Realtors hosted a Region 6 meeting Tuesday, said he based his belief on a study done by the Real Estate Research Center at Texas A&M University, which additionally showed that "the foundation of the area is sound and solid for good growth here in the Odessa-Midland area."

Though Bering said the term "vulture" — not a particularly flattering one when used in reference to out-of-state investors who take advantage of economic downturns in order to reap a profit — is apropos.

Hobby criticial of failure to deal with entire deficit

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Legislature concluded 53 days of special session debate and compromise over the historic state deficit Tuesday, approving an $872 million tax increase and $511.7 million in budget cuts.

Called to Austin to address a $3.5 billion shortfall, lawmakers left town with the state still facing a projected $682 million deficit by the Aug. 31 end of the 1987 fiscal year. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby criticized the House for preventing legislators from dealing with the entire deficit.

"It (the session) did serious damage to the state," Hobby said. "I guess we're lucky it didn't do more."

Other state leaders praised the Legislature's actions.

"We've been faced with the toughest economic times since the Great Depression," said Gov. Mark White, who called the two special sessions. "And we have been able to deal with the fiscal problems, solving those problems for this biennium and also saving education."

House Speaker Gib Lewis acknowledged that the session, particularly the tax bill, could create problems for some lawmakers in the November elections. "None of us wanted to do it, but I think it was the proper thing to do," Lewis said.

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, postponed Senate action on the tax bill and spending cuts for five hours and 13 minutes, filibustering against the temporary increase in sales and gasoline tax rates. Engaging in partisan exchanges with Democratic senators, Brown complained that the Democratic-majority Legislature had not made deep enough cuts.

"Are we doing everything we can do to put our state on a balanced budget...and make sure our state agencies are operating efficiently?" Brown asked. "I think at this time the answer to that has to be 'no.' "

Brown ended his filibuster at 6:27 p.m. after television stations in Austin, Houston and Dallas had used his remarks live on the evening news.

After Brown completed his extended debate, the Senate voted 25-5 to approve the 1.125-percent increase in the sales tax and 5-cent-per-gallon increase in gasoline taxes. The higher state taxes take effect Jan. 1 and expire Aug. 31.

The bill also gives voters in most small and mid-sized cities and counties the option of enacting an additional 0.5-percent sales tax to either finance public transportation systems or in exchange for a property tax reduction.

Senators then voted 29-1 to accept the compromise $511.7 million package of budget cuts. That bill reduces higher education spending by $200 million — including $692,000 from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. It cuts the Department of Human Services $86 million; the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation $22.6 million and the Department of Health $12.6 million. It also eliminates a 3-percent pay raise for state employees and reduces the state payroll by nearly 2,000 workers.

"Higher education has been damaged," Hobby said after the Senate adjourned at 7:25 p.m. "It will take years to recover from it."

The House adjourned at 2:14 p.m. after Lewis turned around 24 votes from the day before to secure immediate effect of a key bill allowing the Treasury to delay transfering until February about $60 million a month into two state pension funds. Rep. Betty Denton, D-Waco, failed to convince House members that the "loans" could damage the Teacher Retirement Fund and State Employees Retirement Fund and that the state would avoid writing hot checks without the loans.

"What good is it going to do for (Comptroller) Bob Bullock to issue a check (to the pension funds) if you haven't got the money," Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, asked Ms. Denton. "What good is a hot check going to do for the Teacher Retirement System?"

With Lewis casting the first "aye" vote, the House reconsidered Monday's 82-47 vote and approved the bill 106-33. The state will repay the loans, with interest, over the last eight months of fiscal 1987.

White's staff said the governor would sign the retirement fund bill and the tax bill Tuesday night.

Considering the number of key issues legislators addressed during the special sessions, Lewis called the final product "almost equivalent to a regular session." Major new laws passed since the first session convened Aug. 6 will:

— Legalize pari-mutuel wagering on horse and greyhound racing. Voters will decide the issue at a referendum on the Nov. 3, 1987 general election ballot;

— Approve for the first time interstate and branch banking in Texas. A constitutional amendment legalizing branch banking will appear on the Nov. 7 ballot;

— Move party primary elections from the first Saturday in May to the first Tuesday in March, allowing Texas to join 14 other southern states in the "Awesome Tuesday" regional primary for presidential nominations;

— Help reduce the paperwork burden on public school teachers and give school districts greater authority to discipline unruly students; and — Give the Board of Pardons and Paroles greater discretion in releasing prison inmates convicted of violent crimes.

Issues considered but not passed include: a constitutional ban on state income taxes, a state-run lottery, creation of a hazardous waste research center at Lamar University and a major revamping of the state tax structure.

Hospital confuses dead monkey with lost fetus

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A woman says she just wants to know "where our baby's body is" after a hospital lost the remains of her stillborn child and insisted a dead monkey was the human fetus.

Constance Lowder, 37, of suburban Wexford, and her fiance, Wilbur Bergman, said Mercy Hospital never explained how it lost the body and confused the remains with a monkey fetus wrapped in linen and found at a laundry service used by the hospital.

"They treated me really shamefully, very unprofessionally...No one of any authority ever tried to contact me," Ms. Lowder said Tuesday.

"I would just like to know where our baby's body is...Someone has to give me some answers," she said.

"They told her they lost the baby, then they come up with a monkey," Ms. Lowder's lawyer, Foster Stewart, said of hospital officials. "The next thing they'll tell her is she had a monkey."

Mercy spokeswoman Mary Donnelly said that while the hospital cannot explain how the monkey remains ended up in the laundry, "several institutions in the Pittsburgh area, who use a common laundry facility, may be involved in research using monkeys."

Allegheny County Coroner Joshua Perper said Tuesday that Pittsburgh police were investigating the discovery of the monkey and the disappearance of the infant's remains.

"There are important public health questions that have to be resolved," Perper said, indicating he was concerned about the possibility of exposing people to infection by mixing laundry from hospitals and research facilities.

Mercy still is trying to locate the remains of the fetus, Miss Donnelly said Tuesday. She would not comment on Ms. Lowder's statements that the hospital treated her badly.

Ms. Lowder, in her sixth month of pregnancy, gave birth to the stillborn baby Aug. 5.

Four days later, she learned the hospital had lost the body.

"I went to the funeral home to make the arrangements and two women from Mercy were there. They informed me they couldn't find the body," she said.

On Aug. 8, Perper said, Mercy Hospital officials asked him to identify fetal remains that were found at the laundry used by Mercy.

Perper said he reported to hospital officials that the remains were those of a monkey.

But Sister Joanne Marie Andiorio, president and chief executive officer of Mercy, insisted in a Sept. 24 letter to Perper that "there are a number of facts and circumstances giving rise to our belief" the remains were those of Ms. Lowder's fetus.

It was only after Dr. J. Lawrence Angel at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington confirmed Perper's conclusion that Mercy officials agreed to stand by them, the coroner said.

Miss Donnelly said the Smithsonian results indicate the discovery of the monkey remains and the loss of the infant and are "two issues (that) are not to be confused."

"This is just another complicating twist to the problem," Perper said. "If they say those remains have nothing to do with Mercy, why did they come in the first place and say it was their fetus? Why did they continue to press on that point? They can't have it both ways."

Stewart has asked Perper for an open inquest in the case.

Ms. Lowder said she suffered a miscarriage in November at Pittsburgh's Allegheny General Hospital, and that she and Bergman "decided to go ahead and try again."

She said that when she felt labor pains she asked Bergman to take her to Mercy Hospital, a Catholic institution, because she is a Roman Catholic.

"I thought I'd get better treatment there," she said.

Daniloff cheered on return to work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicholas Daniloff, welcomed back on the job by hundreds of cheering co-workers today, said he favors the mini-summit in Iceland next week because more superpower contact is a "good thing."

Daniloff, 51, the U.S. News & World Report correspondant who arrived back in the United States Tuesday from Moscow where he was detained for a month on spy charges, told his fellow workers, "I'm incredibly moved."

He was to meet with President Reagan this afternoon at the White House.

The journalist and his wife, Ruth, spent the night in a luxury hotel across the street from his office. As he entered the U.S. News lobby atrium, hundreds of people on the ground floor and near upper railings shouted, clapped and cheered. Daniloff greeted a few with hugs.

"What happened to me could happen to anyone," he said.

Daniloff said he had a special appreciation for the United States after his ordeal because this country stresses the dignity of the individual. His case, he said, "became special."

Propeller breaks during Voyager's final test flight

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Two pilots who hope to be the first to fly nonstop around the world without refueling suffered a setback when a propeller on their experimental aircraft broke during a final test flight.

The twin-engine Voyager was forced to make an emergency landing at Edwards Air Force Base after the mishap, which occurred Tuesday as the crew was checking adjustments designed to improve the plane's stability in turbulence.

Peter Riva, a Voyager spokesman, said two of the six bolts that fasten a propeller to one engine broke, causing the propeller to become unbalanced and break off. Part of the engine then tore away from its mounting, he said.

The vibration set up by the unbalanced propeller also caused a small leak in one of the plane's fuel lines.

The planned global flight must begin by the end of November in order for the aviators to have satisfactory weather.

"We could still go this year," Voyager spokeswoman Wanda Wolf said Tuesday.

Teen dies after jogging collapse

ROUND ROCK, Texas (AP) — A 15-year-old collapsed while jogging during a high school physical education class and later died at a hospital, school officials said.

The student was identified as Benjamin Baldridge, a freshman at Round Rock's Westwood High School.

The youth collapsed Tuesday after running about 200 yards before a game of volleyball, school officials said. They said Baldridge had complained of not feeling well, then ran a short distance more and collapsed.

Volunteer firefighters administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation; and the youth was alive when taken to Round Rock Community Hospital, officials said. He died a short time later.

The boy's father, Daniel Baldridge, said his son was "the picture of health," and regularly lifted weights and played softball and basketball.

He said the youth had passed all physical examinations without difficulty.

Responding to a question about "Vulture Funds," Bering said the phrase is used to describe "people who have been laying back, who pulled their investments out of Texas because of skyrocketing prices and then the sudden fall, who recognize that we have bottomed out and the time to buy is now. And they are coming back to Texas," he said.

According to Bering, this is occurring in no particular area, but generally in many areas "because there are some outstanding buys in land, in office buildings and commercial structures, which are potentially good long-term investments."

"If you see or hear of vulture funds coming in," the Houston Realtor said, "that's one of the best harbingers there is."

Bering said he doesn't mean to imply that we're going to have a skyrocket turnaround. "We don't want to soar and burn again," he stated, "I would rather see slow, steady growth."

According to Bering, housing in the Midland-Odessa area has become somewhat more affordable because of decreased real estate prices and interest rates, but the area still lags behind Houston as far as the Affordability Index is concerned. The difference in the number of foreclosures is a primary reason, he indicated.

The Houston Realtor said that in August alone Houston had 4,000 foreclosures and "it's been going up all year long."

As to the Texas real estate market as a whole, Bering described it as "a kaleidoscope" because in El Paso, Lubbock, Amarillo and some other parts of Texas "we have a very good residentail real estate market." He said the market as a whole "has seldom been more favorable to the buyer than it is now."

Drops in prices and interest rates alone, Bering said, should encourage the buyer, "but if that doesn't, let me add this. There are more houses on the market, probably (more) than we've ever had at one time before in almost every city in the state. So the selection and location and amenities and price have never been better."

As to foreclosures, Bering said the sale of foreclosed property in an area can, depending on what price such property brings when sold, significantly impact on local real estate prices because lower prices can alter "comps" within a given area. Comps, or comparable prices, are derived from "what a willing buyer has paid a willing seller."

As to federal tax reform, Bering said, "All the incentives for homeownership have been retained in the bill, that is, complete deductibility of mortgage interest and real estate taxes and Homestead exemptions on first and second homes."

Bering termed the current climate for prospective homebuyers never "quite as advantageous in years as it is now and especially in this (Midland-Odessa) community."

Officials: Lawyers excluded from Zakharov plea bargain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Department officials say U.S. lawyers were excluded when Secretary of State George P. Shultz completed negotiating a plea bargain for an accused Soviet spy that violated Justice Department guidelines.

The officials, speaking on condition they not be identified by name, said they did not know the meaning of some actions taken during the brief appearance by Gennadiy Zakharov, the Soviet United Nations employee, before a federal judge in Brooklyn, N.Y., Tuesday morning.

Zakharov entered a plea of no contest, which means that he neither admitted guilt nor claimed innocence but agreed to be convicted and sentenced. Just before he left this country on a flight to Moscow, Zakharov again proclaimed his innocence, saying, "I am not a spy."

Zakharov's no-contest plea before U.S. District Judge Joseph M. McLaughlin violated Justice Department guidelines issued in 1980. These guidelines oppose no-contest pleas unless the government is allowed to present a public statement of the evidence it has gathered in the case, known as an offer of proof.

This was not done in Zakharov's case, although the purpose of the guideline is to undermine defendants who later try to proclaim their innocence.

The department's 1980 guidelines, Principles of Federal Prosecution, state that the government should agree to let a defendant plead without admitting guilt "only if the defendant is willing to accept without contest a statement by the government in open court of the facts it could prove to demonstrate his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt."

One Justice official, angry about the outcome, said: "There were no lawyers present when the arrangement was negotiated. Even (Shultz's Legal Adviser Abraham) Sofaer was excluded," this official said. Shultz is an economist, not a lawyer.

Shultz worked out the agreement in sessions with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in New York and Washington over the last several days, these Justice officials said.

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland would not comment on Zakharov's court appearance.

Another top-level Justice official, who would not allow use of his name, said that McLaughlin's decision to "waive" sentencing on two counts against Zakharov was not equivalent to dropping those counts.

But when pressed about what "waiving" did mean, this senior official indicated he did not know, by saying: "If that had been a question on my bar exam, I would have failed it."

Several other Justice officials said they could not explain the concept of "waiving" sentencing.

On a third count, McLaughlin suspended sentence and imposed a five-year probation during which Zakharov is barred from returning to this country.

Peace activists listened silently as bomb burst

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — About 500 physicians and peace activists gathered at the Nevada Test Site to urge the government to halt nuclear weapons' testing as scientists detonated an underground nuclear test.

Authorities arrested 139 of the demonstrators Tuesday, including noted astronomer Carl Sagan, who crossed a symbolic white line marking the boundary to the test site.

It was the 17th announced underground nuclear test since the Soviet Union declared a unilateral moratorium on testing Aug. 9, 1985.

"We must push for the termination of this madness," said Dr. Bernard Lown, co-president of the International Physicians for Prevention of Nuclear War.

The blast had a yield of up to 150,000 tons of TNT, the maximum allowable under the Limited Test Ban Treaty. It was detonated at 6:30 p.m. EDT after being delayed for 7½ hours by strong winds.

The arrests came an hour after the powerful explosion rocked the desert floor from 2,000 feet beneath the desert. There was no noticeable ground motion at the protest site, and Department of Energy officials said the demonstrators were in no danger.

"It was thoughtful of the DOE to explode a nuclear weapon during our demonstration," Sagan said. "We appreciate their attempt at sensitivity."

Diet confusion alleviated in ADA's new guide

NEW YORK (AP) — Women confused by a barrage of diets designed to fight fat, osteoporosis and cancer may find new guidelines from the American Dietetic Association a health plan they "can live with forever," the organization's president said.

The guidelines, released Tuesday, distill earlier recommendations for combatting obesity, osteoporosis, cancer and menstrual troubles, said Anita Owen.

"What we have done is take all the recommendations and put them into a diet pattern that people can live with forever," she said.

At an association news conference, experts cautioned that only indirect or weak evidence links calcium to osteoporosis prevention, or low-fat, high-fiber diets to cancer prevention, but they said the recommendations were consistent with what is known.

Lawrence Garfinkel of the American Cancer Society said in a telephone interview Tuesday that the guidelines "sound in general pretty sensible."

The dietetic association's news conference was financed by the National Dairy Board.

The guidelines, which generally resemble standard recommendations for fighting particular diseases, include:

— Eat a daily variety of three to four servings of low-fat dairy foods, two servings of low-fat meat or meat alternates, four servings of vegetables and fruits, and four servings of whole grain breads and cereals.

— Limit total fat to no more than one third of daily calories, and select a variety of saturated, polyunsaturated and monounsaturated fats. Choose low-fat meat and milk.

— Eat at least half of daily calories from carbohydrates, especially complex carbohydrates such as those in beans, peas, pasta, vegetables, nuts and seeds.

— Eat a daily variety of fiber-rich foods, such as fresh fruits with skin, vegetables, whole grains and legumes.

— Include three or four daily servings of calcium-rich foods, such as low-fat milk, yogurt and cheese, broccoli, sardine, or canned salmon with bones, and collard greens.

— Include plenty of iron-rich foods daily, such as lean meat, liver, prunes, pinto and kidney beans, spinach, leafy green vegetables and enriched and whole-grain breads and cereals.

Women should avoid smoking, limit salt intake, exercise for 20 minutes three days a week, restrict alcohol to one or two drinks a day if they drink and use vitamin and mineral supplements only in special circumstances, the guidelines say.

Those circumstances may include pregnancy and breast-feeding, old age, calorie-restricted diets and certain medical conditions.

Women should maintain a "healthy body weight," and dieters should generally eat no less than 10 calories per pound of body weight, the guidelines say.

NATION in brief

Legislation to make work incentive plan permanent

WASHINGTON (AP) — An incentive begun in 1981 to encourage handicapped people to work would become a permanent part of the Supplemental Security Income program under legislation passed by the House.

The demonstration program, which provides mentally and physically disabled people with Medicaid and partial SSI benefits after they begin working, was due to expire next June.

Fifty-five thousand disabled people have participated since 1981, but because the program has been temporary, critics argue that many others did not participate because they feared it would be terminated, causing them to lose important medical benefits.

The House passed a permanent extension of the program on a voice vote Tuesday. A similar bill sponsored by Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., is pending in the Senate.

Organ network to be 'fair'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen says the creation of a single national computer network for finding human organs should ensure fairness for often-desperate Americans in need of transplants.

Bowen announced Tuesday that a $379,200 federal contract has been awarded to the non-profit United Network for Organ Sharing Inc. of Richmond, Va.

The organization will combine its network with a separate list kept by the North American Transplant Coordinators Organization of Pittsburgh, Pa. It will also take over the Pittsburgh organization's 24-hour telephone hotline.

Bowen said the unified computer network "will improve access to donor organs and ensure fairness in the allocation of organs." About 10,000 Americans are waiting for kidneys, livers, hearts and other organs.

Disaster aid on the line

WASHINGTON (AP) — A measure prohibiting the Reagan administration from scaling back federal aid to local communities ravaged by floods, tornadoes and other natural disasters has been approved by the House.

The legislation, passed on a voice vote Tuesday, would bar the Federal Emergency Management Administration from reducing the federal share of disaster aid from 75 percent to 50 percent.

A similar measure was approved by the Senate as part of the highway bill. But it is unclear whether both houses will be able to reconcile the differences between the two measures before Congress adjourns for the year.

President Reagan has threatened to veto the bill.

Bad drivers hunted down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation designed to help states catch up with commercial truck and bus drivers with bad driving records has passsed the House and Senate.

A bill creating a central clearinghouse to collect arrest data on drivers and to ensure that operators have only one license passed the House on Tuesday. Similar provisions are contained in the drug bill passed by the Senate, also on Tuesday.

Under the current system, some drivers hold licenses in many states and produce a different one each time they are stopped for a violation by police.

Goldwater accuses Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., says President Reagan has double-crossed Taiwan since taking office in 1981.

Goldwater, who is retiring from the Senate after this year, told a dinner audience Tuesday that Reagan used to talk in favor of Taiwan while running for president but after winning election "the thing he did was to double-cross Taiwan."

Goldwater was not specific in the speech he made to the Committee for a Free China, a private group formed in 1972 that is opposed to the Communist government in Peking.

Missile uses star as target

WASHINGTON (AP) — An infrared anti-satellite missile successfully "used the energy source of a distant star as the 'target'" in a test flight over the Pacific Ocean off California, the Air Force says.

The missile was fired from an F-15 jet fighter around 6:45 a.m. EDT Tuesday, the Pentagon added. It was the fifth "live fire" test of the weapon in two years and the second in as many months.

Biblical artifacts airlifted from Holy Land to New York museum

JERUSALEM (AP) — Americans are getting their first chance to see the Dead Sea Scrolls and other biblical and prehistoric artifacts without having to visit the Holy Land.

The 200 pieces, some of them more than 10,000 years old, were secretly airlifted to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York last month from Israel's national museum.

Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek, who founded and chairs the museum board, said it took five years to persuade the Met to exhibit the Israeli artifacts.

"The Met was afraid of vandalism of terrorism if they showed an Israeli exhibit," Kollek said in an interview.

But New York Mayor Edward Koch helped persuade the museum board last year "that if you stop the exhibition you play into the hands of terrorism," Kollek said.

Kollek, 75, said this is the first time that these treasures from the 20-year-old Israeli gallery would be shown in the United States.

"It is very prestigious for us that we have made this grade," he said.

> "The Met was afraid of vandalism or terrorism if they showed an Israeli exhibit.

> — Teddy Kollek

The items, which will remain on display through Jan. 4, are a panorama of biblical and pre-biblical history and include majestic statues made of volcanic stone, utensils carved in bone and gold jewelry. They span 11 centuries, from the prehistoric era to the period of the Roman Empire's rule in Palestine 2,000 years ago.

Kollek also has contributed from his own private collection a tiny stone "Seal of Jeremiah" dated to the eighth century B.C., the era of the temple built by King Solomon.

The seal is believed to have been attached to a ring owned by a man named Jeremiah, but who lived about a century before the prophet.

Three Boeing 747s were needed to haul the heavy crates of priceless relics, said Israel Museum spokesman Mike Segel.

One of the heaviest items is a two-ton statue of a lion made of grey basalt volcanic rock. The carving comes from northern Galilee, and is believed to have stood at the entrance to a Canaanite temple that was destroyed by the biblical warrior Joshua around 1,250 B.C.

Another attraction is a stone block remnant of the second Jewish Temple built by King Herod more than 2,000 years ago. The block bears a Hebrew inscription that says, "to the place of trumpeting," where temple musicians hailed the Jewish Sabbath on Friday evenings.

The most precious relic is the Habakkuk Commentary of the seven fabled Dead Sea Scrolls, which are the oldest biblical manuscripts ever found. Habakkuk was a minor Old Testament prophet. The scroll is a commentary on that book and was written in the first century A.D.

After the exhibition in New York, the exhibition will be in Los Angeles and Houston, and possibly Tokyo.

Our Interest Is In You, Midland.

For our part in helping support this year's United Way... we're sponsoring a United Weigh.

Everyone is invited to come by our Plaza Center location... Wadley and Garfield... Monday, October 20, thru Friday, the 24th, from 8:30 am until 4:30 pm, and participate.

Here's how it works: We'll have a scale in the lobby of our Plaza Center facility. When you come in and weigh... either individually or collectively... we'll record that weight. Petroplex will then contribute a penny-a-pound to the United Way for every pound recorded.

So, bring yourself, and your friends, to Petroplex in the Plaza Center and join the weigh-in. Make Petroplex pay... it's a good way to help the United Way.

Midland... our interest is in you.

Zakharov pleads no contest; flies home to Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet U.N. employee Gennadiy Zakharov, who pleaded no contest to spying charges in a New York court, arrived home today aboard an Aeroflot flight and left the airport by a special exit, fellow passengers said.

Soviet passengers who were aboard the regularly scheduled flight said they had seen Zakharov on the plane and that he was taken out of Moscow's Sheremetyevo Airport through a special exit.

Zakharov, who pleaded no contest to the espionage charges Tuesday, was ordered to leave the United States under the same superpower accord that freed U.S. reporter Nicholas Daniloff, who had been charged by the Soviets with spying.

"I am not a spy," Zakharov said after leaving the U.S. District Courthouse in Brooklyn, where Judge Joseph M. McLaughlin placed him on five years probation and ordered him to leave the United States within 24 hours and not return for five years.

"I didn't do anything wrong," Zakharov said a few hours later at Dulles International Airport outside Washington before boarding the Aeroflot flight. "I hope to come back to this country in five years."

WORLD

The charges against the 39-year-old physicist could have brought a sentence of life in prison.

Zakharov's departure ended a monthlong superpower stalemate over his arrest and that of Daniloff, and came the day after the Soviets freed the U.S. News & World correspondent and allowed him to fly to the West.

Zakharov was arrested Aug. 23 on a subway platform as he allegedly tried to pay an FBI informant $1,000 for classified documents on military jet engines. The informant said he was recruited by Zakharov in 1983.

McLaughlin waived sentencing on the most serious counts of conspiracy and receiving documents counts, each of which carried a maximum sentence of life in prison.

He then suspended sentence on the third count of obtaining documents, which could have resulted in a 10-year term.

In pleading no contest, Zakharov neither admitted guilt nor claimed innocence. Zakharov told the judge he understood the agreement and said his plea was voluntary.

When asked at Dulles airport, however, whether he understood the meaning of the no contest plea, Zakharov said he "didn't understand the procedure."

U.S. delays expulsion of diplomats

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Many of the 25 Soviet U.N. diplomats the United States ordered expelled by today for purported spying have left, but U.S. officials said they heeded a Soviet request and gave those remaining a two-week grace period.

The announcement of the expulsion delay came Tuesday after the superpowers resolved the dispute over American reporter Nicholas Daniloff and Soviet physicist Gennadiy Zakharov, a U.N. employee.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, at a news conference in Washington, said the Soviets had requested the grace period during the course of his discussions with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

Shultz insisted the U.S. administration had "run out of...patience" with what he called Soviet espionage at the United Nations, but said Washington was willing to consider Soviet objections.

"In discussing this issue, some questions have been raised about some members of the group — and we're willing to hear what they have to say about that," Shultz added.

The Soviets maintain that none of the 25 ordered expelled is a spy.

Daniloff, U.S. News & World Report's Moscow correspondent for 5½ years before being charged with espionage, returned to the United States on Tuesday, while Soviet U.N. employee Zakharov arrived in Moscow after pleading no contest in a U.S. court to charges of spying.

Shevardnadze, in a news conference at the Soviet U.N. mission, repeated the Soviet contention that none of the 25 U.N. diplomats was a spy and that both sides will try to resolve the dispute at a superpower summit in Iceland Oct. 11-12.

"They say these people are spies. No one has proved this and no one can prove it," Shevardnadze said.

The United States in March ordered the Soviet U.N. mission reduced in phases from 275 to 170 by April 1988, maintaining that about a third of the Soviet diplomats were spies.

The figures included staff members of U.N. missions of the Ukraine and Byelorussia, two Soviet republics that have separate seats on the world body.

When the Soviets appeared to balk at the order, the United States handed them a list of 25 diplomats it definitely wanted out by today, the first deadline of the phased reduction.

Shevardnadze said six or seven of those on the expulsion list left before the order was announced.

"Others are at work here (at the U.N. mission). Some of them are experts, well-known diplomats, people who are helping me in preparing for my meetings here. I am saying by this that there are no spies among them," he said Tuesday.

Shevardnadze said the Soviet Union would take "major and very sensitive measures" in retaliation for the U.S. order unless the matter is resolved at the meeting in Iceland between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Official: Hijackers on suicide mission

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Four armed men who hijacked a Pan Am jumbo jet and killed 20 people were on a suicide mission and may have planned to destroy the plane in flight, a government official said today.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the investigation into the Sept. 5 hijacking of the Boeing 747 in Karachi turned up evidence that the hijackers intended to blow up the plane and kill the approximately 400 passengers and crew members once they were airborne.

"There is now an indication they would have blown up the plane in the air," said the spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity. He declined to describe the evidence that led to that conclusion.

The hijackers, disguised as airport security guards, seized the plane at Karachi airport as it was loading passengers before heading for West Germany and New York. The three-man flight crew escaped, immobilizing the aircraft.

The 17-hour takeover ended when the plane's lights failed and the hijackers detonated hand grenades and opened fire on the passengers with automatic weapons, passengers and other witnesses said. Twenty passengers were killed or died later of wounds.

Pakistani security officials reported recovering grenades and other explosives from the plane.

The investigators have not achieved any breakthrough because the hijackers were maintaining "a hard silence," the spokesman said.

The hijackers were on a suicide mission and had reconciled themselves to die, so they are indifferent to the death sentences they face if convicted, he said, adding: "The hijackers have a rather suicidal approach to the whole issue."

Wise decision

This may be the day of the anti-drug campaign, but then it may be time for just such a day. So it should come as no surprise that the National Collegiate Athletic Association has announced plans for a multimillion-dollar program to combat the use of drugs among student-athletes.

Beginning in November, the NCAA will randomly test individual competitors in 74 post-season intercollegiate championships and 19 football bowl games. Those who test positive for illegal drugs or legal, albeit dangerous, substances such as anabolic steroids, will be declared ineligible. Moreover, any championship team that has a drug user on its roster will forfeit its title.

Obviously this tact was needed to serve notice that substance abuse will no longer be tolerated among college athletes who are role models to thousands of American youngsters. It should also prompt individual college athletic departments to accelerate their anti-drug efforts.

Approximately 90 universities and colleges already have drug-testing programs and the number increases weekly in the wake of the cocaine intoxication death of Maryland basketball star Len Bias last June. The following month, three star players from the University of Virginia football team were charged by federal prosecutors with conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Of course, drugs are not new to college sports. They were used after World War II when athletes began taking amphetamines to enhance their performance. The conventional wisdom was that "uppers" would forestall fatigue, alleviate pain and otherwise stimulate aggressive play. During the late 1950s and early 1960s, anabolic steroids became so commonplace in football, wrestling, weight lifting and track and field that non-users were considered to be at a disadvantage.

Modern-day athletes are particularly susceptible to drug use, given society's casual attitude toward getting high. A case in point is Greg Louganis. The Olympic gold medalist admitted last week that he used drugs while he was winning diving championships in high school and college. His substance abuse was prompted, he said, by peer pressure, a powerful incentive for many youngsters to experiment with drugs.

The NCAA's tough stance could encourage individual athletes to ponder the consequences of drug use.

NCAA Director Walter Byers was on target the other day when he said that any effective nationwide campaign against drugs must begin by reducing consumption. Perhaps the NCAA's testing program can hasten that reduction by changing some attitudes about the use of drugs on college and high school campuses alike.

That's needed. If this country is going to take an effective stand against the use of drugs, it must be taken at all levels. Use of drugs must become socially unacceptable — for the athlete and the non-athlete alike.

Another View: No to moratorium

Congress threatens to impose on the White House the constraint Mikhail Gorbachev has long sought — a moratorium on testing nuclear weapons. Its motives are wholly different but the result would be the same: a severe weakening of the president's bargaining power and of national security.

What Gorbachev seeks in a test ban is a halt in the modernization of American strategic weapons, and a free ride to hamstringing the president's "Star Wars" missile defense. Nuclear tests are necessary for development of the nuclear-pumped X-ray laser, one of Star Wars' most promising components.

Even those who consider countrywide missile defense unworkable should not want to undercut the president's bargaining position in the now-promising Soviet negotiations. A test ban would also freeze the quality of America's strategic deterrent and thus award the Kremlin its two mostly ardently sought objectives for nothing in return.

How could Congress even contemplate such willful self-damage? The House, in all good will, seeks simply to end the arms race by freezing innovation in nuclear weaponry. It has voted for a one-year moratorium on nuclear tests of more than one kiloton. Les Aspin, the embattled chairman of the Armed Services Committee, is under strenuous pressure from liberal colleagues to make this position prevail in conference with the Senate.

But those who twist Aspin's arm are demanding two contradictory things. Many also support the single-warhead Midgetman missile — less tempting, far costlier target — as an alternative to the vulnerable 10-warhead MX. How could Midgetman be made reliable if there's a test ban? As its sponsors well know, a one-year moratorium is likely to become a permanent injunction. That would also prevent reliability testing of the D5 warhead for the accurate Trident 2 missile and disrupt programs to protect command and control facilities from the effects of nuclear weapons.

Midgetman's design is not final but even if it uses the Mark 21 warhead approved for the MX, that must be adapted to withstand the stress of housing the missile in mobile trucks instead of silos. Failure to test the new design, or any other new weapon, would be pure folly.

That points to a deeper flaw in the House's vision: the simplistic belief that the arms race is driven only by technology and can be halted by stifling innovation. The arms race is driven primarily by mistrust, and not all changes in nuclear weaponry are bad. Warhead size reduction, stable basing and improved security contribute greatly to a safer world.

For too long, the administration opposed a test ban on the ground that it could not be verified. Just because that argument was a smokescreen does not mean there are no valid reasons to test. A quota on tests, which some propose in place of a ban, has the logic of neither position. Further limits on testing are highly desirable, but only after the arms race itself has been constrained. Until then, Congress had better not throw away the key to the technology that assures America's nuclear shield and provides our greatest leverage in negotiating genuine controls.

Would-be Mexican leader kidnapper?

WASHINGTON — One of the worrisome things about the Mexican regime is the arrogance and contempt for the law shown by too many top officials.

Jack Anderson

The natural result of more than half a century of one-party domination. Elections are stolen, the treasury is looted and Mexicans who are courageous enough to expose the rampant corruption do so at the risk of harassment, financial ruin or worse.

Now there is convincing evidence that the Mexican minister of the interior, Manuel Bartlett Diaz, who could become president in two years, used the power of his high office to arrange the illegal kidnapping of his niece and nephew from a religious commune in Venezuela three years ago. He then bullied the weekly news magazine Proceso into killing the children's story by sending police to threaten the editors.

The magazine's publisher, Julio Scherer Garcia, has finally revealed the long-suppressed story in a recently published book. It includes the full text of the original story by news editor Enrique Maza; we have verified the account from affidavits and government sources in Mexico City. Here is how the man who would be Mexico's next president abused his power, first to oblige his in-laws and then to cover up his own misdeeds:

In San Diego de los Altos, Venezuela, a religious community was organized about a decade ago that attracted "pilgrims" from throughout Latin America, including a Mexican couple named Carter and their five children. The wife is the sister of Interior Minister Bartlett.

The Carter family settled in the Venezuelan community in November 1982, but in the summer of 1983 the parents returned to Mexico for a visit and had a change of heart.

The father flew back to Venezuela to collect his belongings and the three youngest Carter children, Maria Teresa, 19; Juan, 17, and Jose Antonio, 15. The two older children, Santiago and German, were both married and legally could make their own decisions. So could Maria Teresa, the 19-year-old, under Mexican law.

Maria Teresa and Juan begged to be allowed to stay in the commune, and Carter agreed to let them, with their adult brother Santiago keeping an eye on them. Jose Antonio, the 15-year-old, returned to Mexico with his father.

But the parents soon decided they wanted the two other teenage children with them as well. They enlisted the help of the powerful Bartlett.

On the night of Nov. 1, 1983, Venezuelan federal and local police officers scaled the wall of the religious community and broke into the home where the two Carter children were staying. They took them away at gunpoint, confiscating their passports.

Within a week, the teenagers were flown home in a state-owned Aeromexico jet that had been dispatched to Caracas expressly to fetch them. They were the only passengers; a Mexican embassy official assisted in their deportation. In Mexico City, their parents — and Bartlett — were waiting on the tarmac and whisked them home, where two dozen armed guards were posted.

But on Nov. 21, Maria Teresa escaped and took her story to Proceso. In a sworn statement, she denounced her uncle's "abuse of power." On Nov. 23, Juan also escaped, and signed a similar affidavit. Their two older brothers, Santiago and German, denounced the abduction in a Venezuelan newspaper.

But not a word of the story appeared in Mexico. Bartlett learned from his sister that Proceso was about to print the embarrassing story. He sent high-ranking police officials to the magazine's office to ask that the story be withheld as a favor to Bartlett. When that didn't work, Bartlett's minions threatened the editors with all the power of the police.

Aware that others who exposed official wrongdoing have been jailed or even murdered, Proceso's publisher decided the story wasn't worth the risk. So it was spiked — until now.

WHITE HOUSE PIPELINE: Washington gossip columnists would be the last to admit it, but the capital's cocktail circuit has been lacking a prime source of titillation recently: the once formidable backbiting between the National Security Council and the State Department, a battle that fortified a whole generation of tale bearers in this chatty city.

The reason is simple: The National Security Council, under its director, Adm. John Poindexter, is now completely overshadowed by Foggy Bottom and its boss, Secretary of State George Shultz. Poindexter is not only far from a household word in the country at large — he's barely known even in Washington power circles. Not for him the inspired leaks of such Machiavellian predecessors as Henry Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski. Foreign policy is firmly in the State Department's hands, which is presumably the way President Reagan wants it. But it's tough on the gossip industry.

JAMES RESTON

Illiteracy problem more a crisis of literacy

WASHINGTON — There have been two comments in recent days on the level of American education, the first by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan, for which he has apologized, and the second a report on literacy by the National Assessment of Educational Progress that was commissioned by the U.S. Department of Education.

James Reston

Nakasone had told the members of his ruling Liberal Democratic Party that Japan had become "a highly intelligent and highly educated society," adding that it was "much more so than America on the average. In America there are quite a few black people, Puerto Ricans and Mexicans. On the average, (America) is still very low."

This was taken here as a racial slur, though the Japanese government explained that the prime minister had meant only that Japan's educational task was easier because it is a society with a single race, without the complexities of America's racial diversity. "I would like to express my heartfelt apology," the prime minister said later.

That dealt with the question of manners. The literacy study, which was conducted by the Educational Testing Service at a cost of $2 million, dealt with the facts. Here are some of its conclusions:

— Only 6 percent of Americans in their early 20s read below the fourth-grade level. Only 5 percent cannot meet "routine and uncomplicated tasks" such as filling out a job application.

— Almost 100 percent of adult Americans could sign their name on a Social Security card or find the expiration date on a driver's license. But only 20 percent could figure out from a bus schedule when the next bus would arrive.

— The problem of illiteracy was more serious among American adult blacks in their 20s. Eighteen percent, the report said, read below the fourth-grade average compared with 4 percent of whites and 8 percent of Hispanic young adults.

— All told, about 20 percent of young adults could not read as well as the average eighth grader, though 98 percent of those studied had finished the eighth grade. And 38.5 percent could not read as well as the average 11th grader.

The report, entitled "Literacy Profiles of America's Young Adults," was based on a survey last year of only 3,600 young people between the ages of 21 and 25. Thus it is subject to many different interpretations.

The reaction to its findings produced less of an uproar than Nakasone's remarks. The Japanese prime minister was on the front pages, while the literacy report was back among the cigarette ads.

"The United States is not awash in illiteracy," Secretary of Education William J. Bennett observed, "but most of our young people are not very literate...For the $263 billion America spent on education last year, we should do better than this."

That may be the most hopeful official statement out of Washington since President Reagan promised to balance the federal budget; but other observers seem equally ambivalent.

"The results are much better than expected," said Gregory Anrig, president of the Educational Testing Service. "The country has reached a 95 percent level of literacy. No other country has achieved that. There is still a problem for the remaining 5 percent...but the real need is to work with the much larger proportion of the population that already can read but doesn't read well enough to cope with this technological society."

The report was published after two national television networks had dramatized the illiteracy problem and suggested that the number of illiterate adult Americans was about 23 million, or 12 to 15 percent of the population. A foreword to the report put the figure at about 10 million.

Either way this is not merely a problem but a national disgrace that is obviously getting less attention than it deserves. Washington may not be "awash in illiteracy," but it is awash in reports on arms control, drug control, deficit control, population control, divorce and illegitimacy control, and now education control, which influences all the others.

Unlike the problems of arms control or border control, the problem of illiteracy is not primarily a government responsibility but a potential disaster that must be addressed by the nation as a whole: by the schools, the churches, the communities and particularly the American family, which itself is in trouble.

"I have to greatly change my heart," Nakasone said. "I'm going to make more and more effort." On the question of illiteracy, the rest of us who love our children could say the same.

ART BUCHWALD

It all began when they said 'This is a test!'

It all started when someone got the idea to test horses for drugs.

Then somebody else said, "As long as we're doing it for horses, why don't we test football players?" It seemed like a good idea, except the baseball teams complained that if the authorities were screening football players, they should do the same for baseball players. The track stars said they wanted to be in on it too, and before you knew it, they were testing basketball players, croquet teams, wrestlers and bowlers.

Art Buchwald

A female volleyball team in Alaska went to the State Supreme Court complaining that men were being tested 10 times as often as women. The court ruled that women were entitled to equal drug checks under the law.

Although the dope screening started in sports, it soon hit the civilian population.

Politicians urged that every schoolchild in America be tested. Corporations gave all employees little paper cups as they lined up for their paychecks.

Banks demanded drug checks on customers in exchange for mortgages. No one could use a credit card unless he had a favorable report from the lab.

The Army, Navy, Air Force and the Marines declared mandatory testing for our boys in uniform. And the White House ordered everyone from the Secretary of State to the lowly Secretary of Agriculture to bring in samples before a Cabinet meeting.

President Reagan declared that everybody in Nicaragua had to be tested by the contras, who were already tested by the CIA.

There was some hell to pay when the White House leaked a story that all heads of state would have to take a drug test before they met with the President. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was particularly disturbed when they sent her a kit in the diplomatic pouch.

To show there was nothing to it, President Reagan took a test. As everyone suspected, the President passed it with flying colors, and Nancy was shown giving him a kiss when the results were announced.

Drug screening became the most serious obstacle to foreign relations.

One of the big stumbling blocks to holding a summit concerned the question of whether or not Gorbachev would take a drug test. The Soviets insisted that Mr. Reagan had to take their word that Gorbachev was not on dope. The Americans held out for on-site inspection.

Not only the White House but other branches of government are now insisting on checks for drug use. Congressional candidates are filming commercials holding up the results of their tests on television and demanding their opponents to do the same.

A suggestion to have the nine members of the Supreme Court take a test before deciding a case was greeted with stony silence by the Court. The reason is that the Supreme Court will have to decide sooner or later whether mandatory screening is constitutional or not. And if they take the test and fail, they could be held in contempt.

I don't wish to give the impression that everyone in Washington is being checked on a regular basis.

Many of us are just being subjected to random testing when we're in a public place.

I've only been randomly tested three times — once when I was drinking from a public water fountain outside Jesse Helms' office, once when I bought boxer shorts at Bloomingdale's, and once when I asked Attorney General Ed Meese at a press conference if he was having trouble understanding the Constitution of the United States.

Miners stop work to mourn 177 dead miners

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — At least 250,000 black miners stayed away from work today to mourn 177 workers killed in a gold mine fire, industry and union officials said. It was the largest protest ever among the nation's nearly 600,000 black miners.

The Chamber of Mines, the industry organization, called for five minutes of silence at noon in 100 mines across the country, and the blowing of whistles to commemorate those who died in the Sept. 16 underground fire in the General Mining Union Corp.'s Kinross gold mine.

The National Union of Mineworkers, which claims 250,000 members, called for an all-day stay-away and a spokesman, Marcel Golding, was quoted by the South African Press Association as saying 250,000 workers inroughout the country responded to the call.

The mining industry provides over 60 percent of South Africa's foreign currency earnings. The black miners' work stoppage hit hardest at the gold mines, which alone account for 50 percent of the revenues.

The mining houses declined to speculate on the effect of the work stoppage. South Africa produces 637 metric tons of gold a year, an estimated 1.7 metric tons a day.

John Kingsley-Jones, spokesman for the country's largest mining house, Anglo American Corp., said 150,000 of the company's 180,000 black mineworkers did not report for their morning shifts. He said they would be docked a day's pay.

Cyril Ramaphosa, general-secretary of the National Union of Mineworkers, said 154,000 of the 220,000 miners in the Orange Free State and the Western Transvaal had not reported for their early morning shifts.

The country's biggest gold mines are in those areas, but the eastern Transvaal also has many smaller mines.

Businessmen in Johannesburg's black township of Soweto planned to close early in memory of the dead miners, 172 of them black and five white.

There were unconfirmed reports from Soweto residents of sporadic clashes with security forces when high school students boycotted classes in support of the miners.

At General Mining Union Corp., spokesman Harry Hill said 70 percent of the company's 97,000 gold mine workers "had availed themselves of the offer to take the day off in observance of the day of mourning...."

He said half of the 14,000 coal miners also had stayed away.

"The situation at the mines at present is calm and it is hoped that in view of the solemnness of the situation the peaceful observation of the day will be maintained," Hill said.

Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Co., the smallest of the six major houses, said 10,000 of its 30,000 gold miners went out, and that they would be docked pay but not otherwise disciplined.

Rand Mines said just 2,000 black chrome and coal miners in a force of 85,000 employees didn't report for work, and mines were working normally.

Gold Fields of South Africa spokesman Attie Roets said only 350 coal miners out of a total black workforce of 84,000 had supported the action. The National Union of Mineworkers does not have recognition agreements on many Gold Fields mines.

Philippine government won't release Communist leader

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Authorities today ruled out the immediate release of a top communist leader whose freedom has been demanded by leftist rebels before they will continue peace talks with the government.

However, a government negotiator said the release of Rodolfo Salas, whom the military identified as commander of the rebel New People's Army, could be added to the peace talks' agenda.

Presidential spokesman Teodoro Benigno said official documents indicated Salas also is chairman of the underground Communist Party of the Philippines, which formed the New People's Army in 1969 to wage a "people's war" against the government.

Benigno said the military was placed on alert nationwide to guard against any communist reprisals for Salas' arrest.

Salas, his wife and his driver were arrested Monday night at a Manila hospital, where he underwent a medical checkup after an operation to remove a goiter.

President Corazon Aquino told a meeting of military leaders and government negotiators today that the arrest was "a commendable accomplishment," according to Benigno. "In the meantime, the government keeps the door open for a cease-fire," he quoted her as saying.

Benigno said Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile told the meeting the arrest weakened the communist leadership and "it will take them some time to look for a replacement."

Salas, 38, allowed to talk to reporters briefly, said he underwent "20 hours of continuous interrogation" by the military. "I was not harmed," he said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

The possibility of tunderstorms is in the National Weather Service forecast for tonight and Thursday, according to forecasters at the NWS office at Midland Regional Airport. There is a 30 percent chance of storms tonight, some possibly severe. The possibility of thunderstorms decreases to 20 percent on Thursday.

The low for tonight is predicted to be in the middle 60s with winds out of the southeast at 10-15 mph. Thursday's high should be in the upper 80s accompanied by southerly winds at 10-20 mph. Cloudy to partly cloudy skies will cover the Midland area tonight through Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 86 was 18 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1977. This morning's low of 65, recorded at 5 a.m. at the NWS, was 23 degrees above the record low set in 1966.

STATE

Severe thunderstorms roared across western areas of North Texas and the low rolling plains of West Texas early today.

And low clouds and fog combined over the High Plains during the early morning hours, prompting the National Weather Service to issue travelers advisories because of low visibility.

The heavy thunderstorms formed along a line stretching from the the low rolling plains into Oklahoma.

Several severe thunderstorms were issued during the night and early today for counties in North texas and western sections of North Texas.

Scattered showers and a few thunderstorms were also being reported over middle and upper sections of the Texas coast.

The storms early today were not as severe as the one that struck near Winters, about 40 miles south of Abilene Tuesday night.

A tornado touched down Tuesday night eight miles northwest of Winters, knocking down utility poles and damaging some barns and cotton trailers, the National Weather Service said.

NATION

Warm temperatures continued early today from Florida to New England, while severe thunderstorms dropped baseball-size hail over parts of Oklahoma and dense fog made traveling hazardous in Texas.

Gusts of 80 mph accompanied the storms and hail around Oklahoma City.

The risk of more locally heavy rains from thunderstorms have prompted flash flood watches across parts of the southern Plains and Mississippi Valley.

Flash flood watches were in effect for much of Oklahoma and Missouri and parts of Arkansas and Kansas.

Don't expect Landry to buy former assistants dinner

IRVING (AP) — Tom Landry has former assistants throughout the NFL, but he doesn't buy them dinner when his Dallas Cowboys come calling. It's business, you understand.

"I don't think you can concentrate in a social atmosphere," Landry says. "That's why I don't see 'em until I seem them across the field. We don't go out to dinner or socialize."

For the second straight week, Landry will be taking on a former assistant. This time it's Denver Coach Danny Reeves in a Sunday afternoon game in Mile High Stadium. They've never matched X's and O's against each other before.

Landry is fresh off a 31-7 victory Monday night over another former assistant, Gene Stallings.

"It's always a special game to go against someone you worked with," Landry says. "But you don't think that much about it when the game starts."

Landry is 11-2-1 against his former assistants.

Asked in a telephone hookup with the media if that bothered him, Reeves said, "Coach Landry has a record like that against everybody else, too. I thought he should have been Coach of the Year last season for winning the NFC East."

Reeves said it is nevertheless exciting to go against Landry.

"We're trying to mold our organization here like the Cowboys," he said. "Just about everything I do I learned from him."

Reeves joked that the only time Landry let him call plays from the press box "was when it was third and long. I never got to call any of those first-and-10 plays."

Landry said Reeves reminds him of himself.

"Danny has a great football mind, and he kind of played (in the NFL) like I did," Landry said. "Neither one of us was very fast but we were smart enough to learn the game itself.

"I remember Danny was a free agent (running back), and we really couldn't find a spot on the roster for him. However, he had a knack for the big play so we kept him. He's smart, capable and has always been a competitor."

The Cowboys, who are 3-1 overall against the Broncos including a 27-10 victory in Super Bowl XII in 1978, lost 41-20 to Denver in 1980.

"It's tough to play a Monday night game then go there," Landry said. "We just tell our players not to think about the altitude. We don't worry about it because there is no way you can get used to it. There's no sense getting there early."

Reeves said the altitude could hurt Dallas.

"It's hard to breathe when you first get here," Reeves said. "It's like going to Dallas when you're not used to the heat. It's a definite advantage."

Landry could have one of his big guns back for the 2 p.m. clash — running back Tony Dorsett, who missed the St. Louis game with knee and ankle problems.

"Tony has a chance to work on Thursday or Friday," Landry said. "He's feeling better and some of the soreness is gone. If Tony is ready, he will start."

Landry said he is glad he worked Herschel Walker at tailback when he signed with the Cowboys in August.

"My number one objective was to have him (Walker) learn the tailback position in case Tony was hurt," Landry said. "Well, here Tony is hurt and it was very important that Herschel played as well as he did."

Walker, making his first NFL start, rushed for 82 yards on 19 carries and caught five passes for 57 yards and a touchdown.

Landry said Walker would continue to be used "in the best interests of the team. The main thing is to score and win. I love to see Herschel run and catch. But Dorsett is running as good as I've seen him."

Mojo upsets Rebel girls in volleyball

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland Lee Coach Janice Baulch wasn't too happy with the way her Rebels played volleyball Tuesday night, suffering a 15-7, 15-8 loss to District 4-5A opponent Odessa Permian at Lee Gym.

"They (the Rebels) played like crud and Permian played wonderfully," said Baulch, whose Rebels failed to hold early leads in both games in suffering the straight-set loss.

"We never did start anything. It never ceases to amaze me when a whole teams falls apart like that," continued Baulch. "Well, maybe one or two played okay but basically the whole team played lousy."

THE PANTHERS, who trailed but were never in serious jeopardy in either game, simply overpowered the Rebels. It was a performance Permian coach Katie Hanson was happy to see.

"It's about time. We've been kind of playing around lately and, because of one thing or another, thing's haven't been working out. We needed this win."

Trailing 3-1 in the first game, Hanson's Panthers rallied for four fast for a 5-3 edge and never looked back, running up an 8-3 advantage before Lee was able to hold onto the ball long enough to score a point, much less attempt a rally.

The second game was a lot like the first, only worse. Lee built up 4-1 and 7-2 leads before the Panthers came storming back to knot the score at 8-8. Permian cruised for the final seven points and the 4-5A victory.

It almost seemed like the second game was over with Lee still in the lead at 8-6. It was the last spark of life the Rebels showed as they failed to score another point despite eight more serves.

The Panthers returned the ball to their court on each occasion.

Overall, Lee is 10-13 on the year and 2-2 in 4-5A action while the Panthers improved to 8-12 and 2-3.

IN OTHER district action Tuesday, San Angelo moved into sole possession of second place with a 3-1 record, defeating Abilene Cooper, 12-15, 15-9, 15-3. Cooper fell to 2-3 on the year.

Saturday, the Rebels will need to find their missing emotion as they travel to one of the toughest volleyball roads in the state to take on the San Angelo Bobcats at 2 p.m.

Midland High, which had an open date Tuesday and is unbeaten in 4-5A play, is home against Odessa High, also at 2 p.m.

Flutie courts lowly Packers

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Doug Flutie, the 1984 Heisman Trophy winner from Boston College, wants to play in the National Football League. The winless Green Bay Packers are looking for a quarterback to run their ball-control offense.

Both might get their wish.

"We watched him in his college career," Green Bay Coach Forrest Gregg said Tuesday before Flutie's first NFL tryout. "He can be a very, very exciting football player.

"He was a quarterback that everyone said was too small, yet he got the job done and he got it done with flair," Gregg added. "He's a winner."

Tom Coughlin, a former Boston College assistant and a big Flutie booster, is an assistant to Gregg, who says the collegiate offense made successful by Flutie is similar to Green Bay's new offense.

Flutie, who has said he can't run any NFL offense, indicated Coughlin was a go-between in his initial contacts with the Packers.

"I'm anxious to find a spot for myself in the NFL. I've been working out regularly ... so I feel like I'm in pretty good shape, and my arm feels pretty good.," the 5-foot-9, 176-pound Flutie, who played a year for the New Jersey Generals of the idle United States Football League, said. "The reason I'm here is because the opportunity is here. If this opportunity goes by the boards, then maybe it will be somewhere else."

Gregg is seeking a remedy for a sick offense — the Packers have scored only two touchdowns in four games this season under the direction of third-year pro Randy Wright and veteran backup Vince Ferragamo. Rookie Robbie Bosco of Brigham Young has been on injured reserve the entire season with a sore shoulder, and it's unknown when he'll return.

In addition to Flutie, Gregg worked out Chuck Fusina, who quarterbacked the USFL champion Baltimore Stars. Fusina, 6-1 and 195 pounds, played sparingly for Tampa Bay after being drafted by that NFL team in the fifth round in 1979.

"I like him," Gregg said of the former Penn State quarterback. "He's been a successful quarterback. He's a veteran, knows what he's doing. He looked good in the workout."

Fusina is a free agent, but Flutie's situation is more complicated. The Los Angeles Rams selected Flutie in the 11th round of the 1985 draft and still own his rights.

However, the Rams acquired rookie Jim Everett from the Houston Oilers last week, then gave Flutie permission to work out with the Packers. Flutie, meanwhile, is in the process of finalizing an agreement with Generals' owner Donald Trump to free him from a personal services contract.

"I'm looking, but I can't make a move yet," Flutie said. "Hopefully, because of the situation with Trump settling, there will be more opportunities."

Flutie's attorney, Bob Woolf, said there is a verbal agreement with Trump that has yet to be signed. He said he would like Flutie to have more NFL tryouts, but added: "That remains to be seen. I'm not precluding Green Bay."

He also said he more concerned with Flutie playing football than with the size of an NFL team's media market as Green Bay has the smallest in the league.

"Doug's very anxious to play. He's been a pain in the neck to me," Woolf joked. The size of the market "doesn't bother me at all. ... That (the commercial aspect) usually takes care of itself."

At a Tuesday news conference, Gregg said he would talk to the Rams following Flutie's tryout. After a closed late afternoon workout in the Packers' indoor practice facility, Gregg declined comment when asked if he would pursue negotiations with the Rams.

But he indicated the Packers would not pursue Flutie at any cost.

"We'll have to base this on what we think is good for us, not necessarily what they (the Rams) are asking."

"It may come to nothing," Flutie said. "I'm just happy for the opportunity."

Jabbar on verge of signing pact extension

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, at 39 the NBA's senior player and all-time leading scorer, is on the verge of signing a one-year extension of his $2 million contract with the Los Angeles Lakers, it was reported Wednesday.

But the 7-foot-2 center told the Los Angeles Times that serious financial problems he's faced in recent years aren't forcing him to extend his playing career.

"At the end of this season, if I feel good about next year and the Lakers feel good about me coming back, then I'll come back," Abdul-Jabbar said. "I'm playing now because I want to play, and the Lakers want me to play. I think I belong."

"I'm not going to play just to be taking down a check," he added. "I still want to contribute, and if I have something to contribute, I'll stay another year."

Abdul-Jabbar is suing Tom Collins, his former agent and business manager, for $55 million. He alleges that mismanagement of funds and fraud have left him unable to pay debts, but said he is not seriously in debt.

"At this point, I can't speak forever, but the financial thing we've been able to keep at bay," Abdul-Jabbar said. "But it's been very difficult and it's still not resolved yet. That's all I can say about it."

Abdul-Jabbar had previously indicated he would retire after the coming season. But he said in the interview that he's talked to Lakers General Manager Jerry West for more than a year about extending his contract, and that serious negotiations began in July.

West said Tuesday that "the signing of Kareem is imminent." He indicated that Abdul-Jabbar will earn at least $2 million for the 1987-88 season.

Abdul-Jabbar's lawsuit against Collins, filed July 18, alleges that Collins mismanaged Abdul-Jabbar's finance to such an extent that Abdul-Jabbar was frequently required to borrow money from Collins in order to meet living expenses.

Dallas' Reunion Arena rocks in NHL's one-night stand

DALLAS (AP) — It was only a one-night stand for the National Hockey League, but a capacity crowd at Reunion Arena went out of its way to let the Edmonton Oilers and the Detroit Red Wings know that they'd be more than welcome to return.

The arena was filled to the rafters with 16,656 fans as the Oilers defeated the Red Wings 3-1 Tuesday night. The contest was the first NHL game ever in Texas and the first ice hockey game at Reunion, which opened in 1980.

For Kenneth Engstrom of Dallas, the evening was a chance to lobby for the return of professional hockey to the Dallas-Fort Worth area — a sport that has been absent since the NBA's Dallas Mavericks arrived on the scene in the early 1980s.

The now-defunct Central Hockey League's Dallas Blackhawks are more than a faded memory for Engstrom, who said he became hooked on the sport while watching a minor league club in New Haven, Conn.

"I was a season-ticket holder to the Blackhawks," he said. "I never missed a game."

The Blackhawks never saw the inside of Reunion, relegated instead to the State Fair Coliseum, better known for hosting rodeos and a faint smell of the four-legged occupants that shared it with minor-league hockey players.

Standing outside the arena before the game began with a sign demanding "We want a hockey team now," Engstrom suggested there was a large underground of displaced Texas hockey fans who would much rather spend their winter months watching the NHL instead of the Mavericks.

"We're here in force to show our support for hockey," said Engstrom, clad in a somewhat faded red Blackhawks jacket that saw its better days when the home team was battling its arch-rival CHL foe, the Fort Worth Wings.

After the first period, Engstrom stood up, unfurled his sign and drew repeated loud cheers from the crowd.

Unclear was whether the crowd was more enthused about the idea of hockey in Dallas or the chance to see a modern hockey legend.

Keeping Friday in perspective

How does one place Midland Lee's 38-6 thumping of Midland High in perspective?

Normally, this game would have been the regular season finale for both teams. The teams learned to absorb a loss in that game, take the year off and go on.

This one is different. It was like the start of the season. No District 4-5A football fan in West Texas places much emphasis on non-conference games anyway. District 4-5A is the name of the game. That's where playoff berths are earned. It's the blood that pumps the West Texas sports heart.

So naturally, talk hasn't stopped since Lee's mashing of the Bulldogs. The season is still new, but you would think that a death tune had been sung for MHS. It's a natural response — just like a knee jerk when bashed with a hammer.

The results were convincing enough. No one in their right mind would say that Midland High played well enough to win the game. No one in their right mind would dare say that the Rebels didn't look quite impressive.

Those are facts we should live with. Those are facts that Lee and MHS must live with. Lee was good, but the season isn't over. MHS was bad, but for them too, the season isn't over.

Two factors kill football teams — overconfidence and the lack of same. Those are factors that could be facing our two teams for the rest of the season. One victory or one loss doesn't make a season with two playoff berths up for grabs.

There is no question that Friday night's game was in the "big one" category. It turned out to be more of a media event that a football game, but that's the way a lot of games turn out.

OK, so the Bulldogs got bombed in this one. No one is trying to change those facts. The results were plain enough to see. Lee was better — much better — last Friday night. And maybe, the Bulldogs have a reason to hang a few heads. But this year should be different. After all, MHS is just one miracle away from being right back in the thick of the league race.

That miracle would have to come against No. 2 state ranked Odessa Permian this Friday in Odessa. Football was made for miracles. Why not shoot for one? It would be a victory that would lift the spirits of the community on both sides of town. There's probably not a person in Midland who wouldn't like to see the Bulldogs knock off a Mojo. It's in our blood.

The season shouldn't be over because of a demoralizing loss. Sure, things are tough for the Purple Pack right now. But unlike losses to Lee in the past, it doesn't have to last a year. It takes only one week this year to turn the tide — to put the community behind them once again. It's worth gunning for.

Lee played against MHS as if it had something to prove. Coaches and team members all complained over the fact that they didn't get the respect they felt they deserved — even from their own fans. Maybe, they proved the point Friday, but they should remember that feeling the rest of the year.

Respect in the world of football is a weekly thing at best. "What have you done for me lately?" Lee's players should keep that in mind.

Lee isn't the Rodney Dangerfield of District 4-5A any longer. People are now talking of another playoff trip for Lee. It's what one impressive victory can do for you. One impressive loss has exactly the opposite reaction among fans.

Lee is a youthful team. Nine of Lee's 12 returning lettermen were sophomores a year ago. The Rebels are young and green in many respects. This is the year that they must play on emotion to overcome the lack of experience. We saw Friday what they can do when they play with emotion.

Both teams should play the rest of the season like they still have something to prove. Then there will be memories that both sides of town can relish.

Daingerfield unanimous pick in Class 3A

Associated Press

Defending state champion Daingerfield received a unanimous 27 first-place votes as the No. 1-ranked team in Class 3A in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll.

San Antonio Holmes in 5A, Lubbock Estacado in 4A, Refugio in 2A and Valley View in A retained the top billing in their classifications.

Daingerfield defeated Henderson 36-6 last week and received a 270-239 edge over second-place Cuero. The rest of the 3A list remained unchanged through the No. 9 spot.

AP Prep Poll

Huffman Hargrave, ranked 10th last week, was replaced by Littlefield following a 24-0 loss to No. 8 Port Arthur Austin.

Temple was the lone loser on the 5A list, dropping out of the top 10 after a 53-28 loss to Westwood. Port Arthur Jefferson moved into the No. 10 position as the replacement.

Lubbock Estacado defeated cross-town rival Lubbock Dunbar 53-14 and received 22 first-place votes and a 262-241 margin over runnerup McKinney.

Carthage dropped from No. 4 to No. 6 following a scoreless tie with Mount Pleasant and Sweetwater dropped out of the top 10 after a 22-17 loss to Big Spring. Wichita Falls Hirschi became the No. 10 team.

Refugio also gained 22 first-place votes to continue its lease in 2A followed by Eastland, Shiner, San Antonio Cole and Goldthwaite, all unchanged from last week.

Second-ranked Flatonia was the only loser in A and dropped to No. 8 after a 25-21 loss to Schulenburg.

Bob Sebra throws blanks at Mets

Associated Press

The last time that Montreal rookie Bob Sebra pitched against the New York Mets, he lost a shutout on a two-run homer in the ninth.

He didn't want the same thing to happen again Tuesday night.

"I was afraid that if I did lose the shutout, I might lose the game, too," Sebra said.

This time, he hung on to pitch a two-hit, 1-0 beauty over the National League East champions. It was the second victory within a month over the Mets for Sebra, who beat them 9-1 on Sept. 8.

In only three innings did Sebra allow the league's top-hitting team to send more than three batters to the plate. The rookie right-hander struck out four, walked two and gave up only a second-inning double to Gary Carter and an infield single to Len Dykstra in the sixth.

When he beat the Mets last time out, Sebra had a shutout going until Darryl Strawberry homered in the ninth.

"I remember losing the shutout on the last pitch to them and I didn't want to do it again," Sebra said.

While the Montreal hurler was quieting the New York bats, his teammates weren't exactly hitting up a storm. Montreal managed just seven hits, six of them against starter Ron Darling, 14-6.

They got just enough out of Mitch Webster's league-leading 12th triple in the first inning. Webster scored the game's only run when Tim Raines, who went 0-for-3 and saw his league-leading batting average drop two percentage points to .335, grounded out to short.

"He didn't really hit it good," said Darling of Webster's triple. "It just kind of went off the end of the bat. I settled down after that and I thought I pitched well. But he just out-pitched me tonight. When you give up only two hits to the best hitting team in the league, you've done a great job and you deserve credit for it."

Giants 6, Astros 5

Candy Maldonado's sacrifice fly scored Randy Kutcher in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving San Francisco a comeback victory over Houston.

The victory went to left-hander Mark Davis, 5-7, who struck out five in three innings of hitless relief. Reliever Aurelio Lopez, 3-3, suffered the loss.

After the Astros went ahead 5-1 in the sixth, the Giants rallied for three runs in the sixth, chasing Houston starter Bob Knepper, and tied the score at 5-5 in the seventh on Will Clark's RBI single.

Braves 8, Reds 7

Bob Horner drove in three runs with a double and a homer to lead Atlanta over Cincinnati.

Winner Rick Mahler, 14-17, gave up seven hits in 7 2-3 innings before needing relief help. Gene Garber, the fourth Atlanta pitcher, gave up a sacrifice fly to Tony Perez and RBI double to Kurt Stillwell in the ninth before posting his 24th save.

The Braves broke the game open with a four-run fifth, highlighted by Horner's two-run double. The Atlanta first baseman then homered in the seventh to give the Braves an 8-3 led.

Bill Gullickson, 14-12, was the loser.

Phillies 9, Cubs 2

Von Hayes homered twice, doubled and drove in five runs and Bruce Ruffin scattered eight hits as Philadelphia defeated Chicago.

Hayes hit a solo homer in the first and a three-run shot in the third off loser Drew Hall, 1-2, and increased his league-leading run scored total to 106. The homers were his 18th and 19th of the season.

Ruffin struck out six and walked two in gaining his ninth win against four losses.

Cardinals 5, Pirates 3

Andy Van Slyke drove in three runs with a homer and a two-run single in a 3-for-3 night to help St. Louis beat Pittsburgh.

Winner Danny Cox survived a rough start to even his record at 12-12, retiring the last 14 batters he faced. After permitting two runs and three hits in the first two innings, Cox allowed just four hits and one run over the final seven innings to complete his sixth game in his last 10 starts.

Rick Rhoden, 15-12, failed for a sixth straight time to get his 16th victory. He has lost his last five decisions.

Padres 11, Dodgers 8

Reliever Ken Howell walked Kevin McReynolds with the bases loaded and Marvell Wynne followed with a three-run triple as San Diego scored four runs in the bottom of the eighth inning to defeat Los Angeles.

Jeff Hamilton had homered in the top of the eighth off LaMarr Hoyt to tie the game 7-7 before the Padres launched their game-winning rally.

Leary continues Tiger taming

Associated Press

Milwaukee's Tim Leary doesn't want to be known as just a Tiger-tamer. He wants to dominate other American League teams the way he has handled Detroit.

Leary pitched his second four-hit shutout over the Tigers this season, a 5-0 victory Tuesday night. Leary blanked Detroit 1-0 on June 20.

"I have no explanation for it," the Brewers' right-hander said. "If I pitched this well all the time, I'd be a lot better than 11-12. Maybe next year I can throw this well against all the other teams."

Particularly if he master the breaking pitch.

"I've been working on the split-fingered fastball the last couple of weeks," he said. "I've been struggling with the breaking ball, so I only threw three sliders."

Paul Molitor had two doubles and scored a run to lead the Milwaukee offense. The Brewers have won six of their last seven.

"There's a winning atmosphere with all the young guys coming up through the organization," Leary said.

Rangers 9, A's 5

Ruben Sierra hit a three-run homer in a seven-run Texas third inning and Tom Paciorek added a two-run single as Kevin Brown won his major league debut.

Brown went five innings, allowed two runs on six hits, walked none and struck out four. Mike Loynd earned his first save with four innings of two-hit relief in his first appearance out of the bullpen this season. He struck out seven.

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't nervous when I went out there," the 21-year-old Brown said. "But I was able to control my nerves and after the first two innings, I felt pretty comfortable out there."

Yankees 5, Blue Jays 2

Rickey Henderson added to his American League record and Dave Righetti closed in on a major league mark as New York beat Toronto.

Henderson hit his ninth leadoff home run of a game this season to spark a four-run first inning. Righetti retired the last seven Blue Jays for his 43rd save, two shy of the major league record of 45 by Dan Quisenberry and Bruce Sutter.

"Deep down, I don't care if I save 15 or 50," Righetti said. "I want us to win."

Jesse Barfield hit his league-leading 37th homer of the season for Toronto.

Don Mattingly went 1-for-3 with an intentional walk, keeping his batting average at .349, nine points behind Boston's Wade Boggs.

Orioles 6, Red Sox 3

Despite a 4-for-4 night by Boggs, AL East winner Boston fell when Baltimore's Cal Ripken's double drove in the tie-breaking run in the top of the 10th inning. Mike Young followed with a two-run single.

Boggs had two doubles and two singles. His first double of the game was Boston's 311th of the year, breaking the club record set in 1979.

Rick Dempsey homered for Baltimore.

AL Roundup

Twins 10, Indians 9, 10 innings

Tom Brunansky's two-run double with one-out in the bottom of the 10th capped a 20-hit Minnesota attack. Kent Hrbek led off the 10th with a single and, with one out, Roy Smalley singled, Brunansky then followed with his double up the left-center field alley.

Joe Carter's one-out single in the top of the 10th scored Otis Nixon for a 9-8 Cleveland lead. Carter previously had a two-run single.

Ernie Camacho, who hadn't given up a home run in 55 1-3 innings, surrendered a game-tying homer to pinch-hitter Al Woods in the bottom of the ninth.

Ron Washington, who had four hits and scored three times, and Kirby Puckett homered for Minnesota, while Chris Bando had a homer for Cleveland.

White Sox 5, Mariners 4

White Sox 5, Mariners 4

Reid Nichols was a double hero for Chicago. He tied the first game with a pinch-hit single in the ninth inning, then gave the White Sox a victory with a 10th-inning bases-loaded single.

In the second game, Nichols' homered in the eighth for the winning margin.

"I know my role because it's one I've had for five years, and I have to prepare myself mentally for it," said Nichols, a backup outfielder.

In the opener, Jerry Hairston doubled to open the 10th inning and Carlton Fisk singled him to third before Nichols won it.

Because of torrential downpours in the Chicago area the last several days and up until gametime, only 147 fans were in the stands when the doubleheader began. A total attendance of 8,528 was announced.

Angels 8, Royals 4

Kansas City walked Wally Joyner, who had three RBI, to get to Reggie Jackson in the sixth inning. Jackson lined a two-run single to cap a five-run California rally.

"He's swinging the bat real good right now," Joyner said of Jackson. "He has always done it throughout his career at this time of year. He is swinging the bat too good to give him an opportuntiy to hit."

Chuck Finley, 3-1, picked up the win with 5⅔ innings of scoreless relief.

Baseball fans ignore final games while waiting for playoffs to start

Associated Press

There were 147 fans on hand when the first pitch was thrown to start a twi-night doubleheader in Chicago, and crowds of more than 10,000 attended major league baseball games in only six of 13 cities Tuesday night.

The doubleheader between the White Sox and Seattle Mariners eventually drew 8,528, more than three times the number — 2,763 — who saw the Cincinnati Reds play the Braves in Atlanta.

With no dvisional races remaining, fans stayed home in droves. In San Diego, where the Padres met the arch-rival Los Angeles Dodgers in their continuing battle to avoid the cellar in the National League West, only 9,455 showed up to see the home team move into a fifth-place tie.

The only large crowd of the night was in Boston, where the American League East champion Red Sox played Baltimore before 26,339.

Other small crowds were 6,908 at Texas, 5,605 at Minnesota, 5,160 at Milwaukee and 6,068 at Montreal.

Despite the small crowds, major league baseball achieved a milestone Sunbay when Pittsburgh went over the one-million mark in home attendence. It was the first time every club in both leagues surpassed the million mark in the same season.

Daingerfield unanimous pick in Class 3A

Associated Press

Defending state champion Daingerfield received a unanimous 27 first-place votes as the No. 1-ranked team in Class 3A in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll.

San Antonio Holmes in 5A, Lubbock Estacado in 4A, Refugio in 2A and Valley View in A retained the top billing in their classifications.

Daingerfield defeated Henderson 36-6 last week and received a 270-239 edge over second-place Cuero. The rest of the 3A list remained unchanged through the No. 9 spot.

AP Prep Poll

Huffman Hargrave, ranked 10th last week, was replaced by Littlefield following a 24-0 loss to No. 8 Port Arthur Austin.

Temple was the lone loser on the 5A list, dropping out of the top 10 after a 53-28 loss to Westwood. Port Arthur Jefferson moved into the No. 10 position as the replacement.

Lubbock Estacado defeated cross-town rival Lubbock Dunbar 53-14 and received 22 first-place votes and a 262-241 margin over runnerup McKinney.

Carthage dropped from No. 4 to No. 6 following a scoreless tie with Mount Pleasant and Sweetwater dropped out of the top 10 after a 22-17 loss to Big Spring. Wichita Falls Hirschi became the No. 10 team.

Refugio also gained 22 first-place votes to continue its lease in 2A followed by Eastland, Shiner, San Antonio Cole and Goldthwaite, all unchanged from last week.

Second-ranked Flatonia was the only loser in A and dropped to No. 8 after a 25-21 loss to Schulenburg.

Bob Sebra throws blanks at Mets

Associated Press

The last time that Montreal rookie Bob Sebra pitched against the New York Mets, he lost a shutout on a two-run homer in the ninth.

He didn't want the same thing to happen again Tuesday night.

"I was afraid that if I did lose the shutout, I might lose the game, too," Sebra said.

This time, he hung on to pitch a two-hit, 1-0 beauty over the National League East champions. It was the second victory within a month over the Mets for Sebra, who beat them 9-1 on Sept. 8.

In only three innings did Sebra allow the league's top-hitting team to send more than three batters to the plate. The rookie right-hander struck out four, walked two and gave up only a second-inning double to Gary Carter and an infield single to Len Dykstra in the sixth.

When he beat the Mets last time out, Sebra had a shutout going until Darryl Strawberry homered in the ninth.

"I remember losing the shutout on the last pitch to them and I didn't want to do it again," Sebra said.

While the Montreal hurler was quieting the New York bats, his teammates weren't exactly hitting up a storm. Montreal managed just seven hits, six of them against starter Ron Darling, 14-6.

They got just enough out of Mitch Webster's league-leading 12th triple in the first inning. Webster scored the game's only run when Tim Raines, who went 0-for-3 and saw his league-leading batting average drop two percentage points to .335, grounded out to short.

"He didn't really hit it good," said Darling of Webster's triple. "It just kind of went off the end of the bat. I settled down after that and I thought I pitched well. But he just out-pitched me tonight. When you give up only two hits to the best hitting team in the league, you've done a great job and you deserve credit for it."

Giants 6, Astros 5

Candy Maldonado's sacrifice fly scored Randy Kutcher in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving San Francisco a comeback victory over Houston.

The victory went to left-hander Mark Davis, 5-7, who struck out five in three innings of hitless relief. Reliever Aurelio Lopez, 3-3, suffered the loss.

After the Astros went ahead 5-1 in the sixth, the Giants rallied for three runs in the sixth, chasing Houston starter Bob Knepper, and tied the score at 5-5 in the seventh on Will Clark's RBI single.

Braves 8, Reds 7

Bob Horner drove in three runs with a double and a homer to lead Atlanta over Cincinnati.

Winner Rick Mahler, 14-17, gave up seven hits in 7 2-3 innings before needing relief help. Gene Garber, the fourth Atlanta pitcher, gave up a sacrifice fly to Tony Perez and RBI double to Kurt Stillwell in the ninth before posting his 24th save.

The Braves broke the game open with a four-run fifth, highlighted by Horner's two-run double. The Atlanta first baseman then homered in the seventh to give the Braves an 8-3 led.

Bill Gullickson, 14-12, was the loser.

Phillies 9, Cubs 2

Von Hayes homered twice, doubled and drove in five runs and Bruce Ruffin scattered eight hits as Philadelphia defeated Chicago.

Hayes hit a solo homer in the first and a three-run shot in the third off loser Drew Hall, 1-2, and increased his league-leading run scored total to 106. The homers were his 18th and 19th of the season.

Ruffin struck out six and walked two in gaining his ninth win against four losses.

Cardinals 5, Pirates 3

Andy Van Slyke drove in three runs with a homer and a two-run single in a 3-for-3 night to help St. Louis beat Pittsburgh.

Winner Danny Cox survived a rough start to even his record at 12-12, retiring the last 14 batters he faced. After permitting two runs and three hits in the first two innings, Cox allowed just four hits and one run over the final seven innings to complete his sixth game in his last 10 starts.

Rick Rhoden, 15-12, failed for a sixth straight time to get his 16th victory. He has lost his last five decisions.

Padres 11, Dodgers 8

Reliever Ken Howell walked Kevin McReynolds with the bases loaded and Marvell Wynne followed with a three-run triple as San Diego scored four runs in the bottom of the eighth inning to defeat Los Angeles.

Jeff Hamilton had homered in the top of the eighth off LaMarr Hoyt to tie the game 7-7 before the Padres launched their game-winning rally.

Leary continues Tiger taming

Associated Press

Milwaukee's Tim Leary doesn't want to be known as just a Tiger tamer. He wants to dominate other American League teams the way he has handled Detroit.

Leary pitched his second four-hit shutout over the Tigers this season, a 5-0 victory Tuesday night. Leary blanked Detroit 1-0 on June 20.

"I have no explanation for it," the Brewers' right-hander said. "If I pitched this well all the time, I'd be a lot better than 11-12. Maybe next year I can throw this well against all the other teams."

Particularly if he master the breaking pitch.

"I've been working on the split-fingered fastball the last couple of weeks," he said. "I've been struggling with the breaking ball, so I only threw three sliders."

Paul Molitor had two doubles and scored a run to lead the Milwaukee offense. The Brewers have won six of their last seven.

"There's a winning atmosphere with all the young guys coming up through the organization," Leary said.

Rangers 9, A's 5

Ruben Sierra hit a three-run homer in a seven-run Texas third inning and Tom Paciorek added a two-run single as Kevin Brown won his major league debut.

Brown went five innings, allowed two runs on six hits, walked none and struck out four. Mike Loynd earned his first save with four innings of two-hit relief in his first appearance out of the bullpen this season. He struck out seven.

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't nervous when I went out there," the 21-year-old Brown said. "But I was able to control my nerves and after the first two innings, I felt pretty comfortable out there."

Yankees 5, Blue Jays 2

Rickey Henderson added to his American League record and Dave Righetti closed in on a major league mark as New York beat Toronto.

Henderson hit his ninth leadoff home run of a game this season to spark a four-run first inning. Righetti retired the last seven Blue Jays for his 43rd save, two shy of the major league record of 45 by Dan Quisenberry and Bruce Sutter.

"Deep down, I don't care if I save 15 or 50," Righetti said. "I want us to win."

Jesse Barfield hit his league-leading 37th homer of the season for Toronto.

Don Mattingly went 1-for-3 with an intentional walk, keeping his batting average at .349, nine points behind Boston's Wade Boggs.

Orioles 6, Red Sox 3

Despite a 4-for-4 night by Boggs, AL East winner Boston fell when Baltimore's Cal Ripken's double drove in the tie-breaking run in the top of the 10th inning. Mike Young followed with a two-run single.

Boggs had two doubles and two singles. His first double of the game was Boston's 311th of the year, breaking the club record set in 1979.

Rick Dempsey homered for Baltimore.

AL Roundup

Twins 10, Indians 9, 10 innings

Tom Brunansky's two-run double with one out in the bottom of the 10th capped a 20-hit Minnesota attack. Kent Hrbek led off the 10th with a single and, with one out, Roy Smalley singled. Brunansky then followed with his double up the left-center field alley.

Joe Carter's one-out single in the top of the 10th scored Otis Nixon for a 9-8 Cleveland lead. Carter previously had a two-run single.

Ernie Camacho, who hadn't given up a home run in 55 1-3 innings, surrendered a game-tying homer to pinch-hitter Al Woods in the bottom of the ninth.

Ron Washington, who had four hits and scored three times, and Kirby Puckett homered for Minnesota, while Chris Bando had a homer for Cleveland.

White Sox 5, Mariners 4
White Sox 5, Mariners 4

Reid Nichols was a double hero for Chicago. He tied the first game with a pinch-hit single in the ninth inning, then gave the White Sox a victory with a 10th-inning bases-loaded single.

In the second game, Nichols' homered in the eighth for the winning margin.

"I know my role because it's one I've had for five years, and I have to prepare myself mentally for it," said Nichols, a backup outfielder.

In the opener, Jerry Hairston doubled to open the 10th inning and Carlton Fisk singled him to third before Nichols won it.

Because of torrential downpours in the Chicago area the last several days and up until gametime, only 147 fans were in the stands when the doubleheader began. A total attendance of 8,528 was announced.

Angels 8, Royals 4

Kansas City walked Wally Joyner, who had three RBI, to get to Reggie Jackson in the sixth inning. Jackson lined a two-run single to cap a five-run California rally.

"He's swinging the bat real good right now," Joyner said of Jackson. "He has always done it throughout his career at this time of year. He is swinging the bat too good to give him an opportuntiy to hit."

Chuck Finley, 3-1, picked up the win with 5⅔ innings of scoreless relief.

Baseball fans ignore final games while waiting for playoffs to start

Associated Press

There were 147 fans on hand when the first pitch was thrown to start a twi-night doubleheader in Chicago, and crowds of more than 10,000 attended major league baseball games in only six of 13 cities Tuesday night.

The doubleheader between the White Sox and Seattle Mariners eventually drew 8,528, more than three times the number — 2,763 — who saw the Cincinnati Reds play the Braves in Atlanta.

With no dvisional races remaining, fans stayed home in droves. In San Diego, where the Padres met the arch-rival Los Angeles Dodgers in their continuing battle to avoid the cellar in the National League West, only 9,455 showed up to see the home team move into a fifth-place tie.

The only large crowd of the night was in Boston, where the American League East champion Red Sox played Baltimore before 26,339.

Other small crowds were 6,908 at Texas, 5,605 at Minnesota, 5,160 at Milwaukee and 6,068 at Montreal.

Despite the small crowds, major league baseball achieved a milestone Sunbay when Pittsburgh went over the one-million mark in home attendence. It was the first time every club in both leagues surpassed the million mark in the same season.

Dr. Jerry L. Cochran

Knee problems can hit teens

In 1903 an Englishman, Dr. R.B. Osgood, and a German, Dr. C. Schlatter, independently described a condition which commonly affected the knees of active teenagers.

They felt that this condition was due to some mysterious loss of blood circulation to a portion of the knee joint. They also noted that more young men seemed to be effected than young ladies. Now almost 85 years later, we know this condition as the Osgood-Schlatter Syndrome.

The patient complains of a painful swelling presenting just distal to the kneecap. This area is called the tibial tubercle and is the site of attachment for the patellar tendon. The quadriceps mechanism is the large muscle that forms the front of the thigh.

It originates from the pelvis and connects to the patella, or kneecap. The patellar tendon then connects the kneecap to the tibia (shin) at the tibial tubercle, so whenever the quadriceps muscle is contracted, the knee extends.

Patients with Osgood-Schlatter Syndrome complain of intense pain at the tibial tubercle when running, jumping, going up stairs or any activity which requires strong contraction of the quadriceps mechanism.

This condition occurs in girls between the ages of eight and 13 and in boys between 10 and 15 years. The tibial tubercle at those ages is composed primarily of cartilage because these people are still growing.

With a high degree of physical activity, some of the patellar tendon is pulled away or avulsed from the tibial tubercle, resulting in the pain, inflammation and swelling.

The diagnosis of Osgood-Schlatter Syndrome is dependent upon discomfort to palpation and swelling at the tibial tubercle as well as pain when a young athlete extends the knee against resistance.

As adults, these patients will often continue to complain of pain, especially when they kneel upon that knee. The swelling develops into a "knee knob" that hurts whenever pressure is put upon it.

Difficulty in treatment is related to the fact that these young people are often excellent athletes. They do not want to reduce their level of activity enough to take the stress of their knees.

Once the patient has this condition, continued stress upon the knee makes the problem worsen. In fact, the patellar tendon can stretch out, leading to patella alta or a "high riding kneecap." In this situation, the kneecap may be situated ½-inch to 1-inch above its normal station, leading to significant mechanical knee dysfunction and pain.

Treatment is to reduce the stress placed on the patellar tendon and tibial tubercle. This is accomplished by reducing the activity level of the patient.

The rule is that the patient should use his or her knee pain as a barometer of their activity. If it hurts, they should not do it.

Gentle, progressing, stretching exercises are started since the quadriceps muscle is often contracted. Prior to stretching, moist heat should be applied to the knee. After exercise, ice should be applied. Frequently, a circumferential strap, placed around the knee at the level of the patellar tendon, is helpful. Anti-inflammatory medications also tend to relieve symptoms.

What is the best protection for the young athlete from Osgood-Schlatter Syndrome? The answer is simple — gentle static stretching of the quadriceps museles. This will stretch out tight quadriceps muscles and reduce the stress upon the tubercle.

Driesell defends policies

Maryland cage boss still wants to coach

By SALLY JENKINS
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Lefty Driesell said Tuesday he wants to coach basketball at the University of Maryland this season and strongly defended his academic policies. In what was his first major public statement since the cocaine-induced death of star Len Bias and subsequent revelations of shortcomings in his program, Driesell said he has nine years remaining on a 10-year contract and "I expect to coach."

Driesell would not comment on the ongoing grand jury investigation into Bias' death and on-campus inquiries into drug use and academic performance of athletes. Chancellor John B. Slaughter has said he will await reports from the Prince George's County, Md. grand jury and two campus task forces before making a decision on Driesell's status.

"I have a contract and I plan to coach," Driesell said. "I have nine years left."

Driesell has said little publicly since Bias collapsed from cocaine intoxication June 19 in his dormitory room. He said he had refused to answer questions on the advice of his attorney, Edward Bennett Williams, and that he scheduled Tuesday's press conference — which was held in his office — when he received approval from Slaughter.

Slaughter said he had approved Driesell's plan for the press conference, but had not forbidden him from speaking to the media previously.

ACCOMPANIED BY an array of charts and armed with a 16-page statement, as well as his undergraduate diploma from Duke University and a diploma signifying his master's degree in education from William and Mary, Driesell denied he has stressed basketball at the expense of academics during his 17-year career at Maryland.

"There have been some inaccurate figures thrown around and some accusations I don't like," he said. "... I think a lot people have gotten the wrong impression of me. I have a strong background in education; that's my expertise ... Most people think of Lefty as some kind of animal out of the sky, because that's my nickname. But my name is Charles Driesell and I have an educational background, and I have probably have more advanced degrees than most coaches in the country. And all of my degrees are in education, so I feel I know a little something about it."

Among the revelations that have jeopardized Driesell's job in the past months: five of his 12 players flunked out last spring and had to apply for readmission to the university, Bias was 21 credits short of graduating when he died and a contention by Prince George's County State's Attorney Arthur A. Marshall that only five black basketball players had graduated in the past 10 years. In addition, Driesell has been harshly criticized by Bias' parents, James and Lonise, who said their son was exploited.

"You don't judge a program by one semester," Driesell said. "You judge it by 17 years."

Driesell said that in those 17 years, 81 percent of his players have graduated and, in the past 10 years, 60 percent of his black players had graduated. He delivered a defense of his program that was similar, he said, to what he presented to the university task force on academics last week.

"You all have investigated me from head to toe, and you ain't found anything yet and you ain't going to find it," he said.

Driesell's figures differ from those of the university. He does not count transfers, players who have left early to go to the NBA or this past season's three seniors, none of whom have graduated. He suggested transfers accounted for the difference in the figures.

According to Maryland figures, which count those players, in keeping with the standard College Football Association criteria, Driesell graduated 56 percent of his players from 1975 to 1981. By the same standard, from 1977 to 1986 he graduated 53 percent. A 17-year figure was not available.

According to figures provided earlier this summer to The Washington Post by the basketball office, four of the 11 black players who entered Maryland from 1972-73 to 1981-82 (the incoming '81 class graduated in 1985) graduated, approximately 36 percent. Driesell's statistics for that period reflect seven of 15 black players "who entered their senior year" graduating, a 60 percent figure.

"I don't think I've compromised my players' educeation," Driesell said.

Driesell also said parents were kept aware of their sons' academic progress.

He took exception to accusations that his players earned "meaningless degrees." Over his 26-year career, which also included nine years at Davidson, Driesell said he has coached 13 doctors and 12 lawyers.

Kramer miffed over NFL fines

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer and at least nine of his teammates have been fined a total of $5,200 for brawling during the season opener against Detroit Sept. 7.

"Why should I pay $400 to have my head bashed in?" Kramer said of the fine issued Monday by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle. "If an offensive lineman can't defend his quarterback, what's left in the league?"

Kramer said he planned to appeal.

The brawl began in the waning moments of the game, which the Vikings lost, when Detroit defensive end Keith Ferguson punched Kramer in the backfield after Kramer threw a pass. Kramer's teammates, including some who left the bench, rushed to assist him.

FERGUSON AND 18 other Lions also were fined. The Vikings penalties range from $400 to $800.

General manager Mike Lynn and coach Jerry Burns refused to disclose who got fined, but Kramer said up to 10 Vikings players were included.

"I think it's ridiculous," said offensive lineman Tim Irwin, who was fined $400. "I never even got to punch a guy. We were protecting our quarterback. Doing our job. Some things are beyond the rules."

The stiffest Vikings penalties were levied against free safety Kyle Morrell and outside linebackers Chris Doleman and David Howard, each of whom was fine $800 for leaving the bench area to fight.

"The guy was sitting there beating up Tommy. Somebody has to do something," Doleman said.

The players must notify the league within 20 days for an appeal.

Another shootout in 1986 doubtful

College Focus

In the 51-year history of The Associated Press' college football poll there have only been 20 showdowns between the No. 1 and No. 2 teams.

The last one took place last weekend when No. 2 Miami knocked off No. 1 Oklahoma 28-16. That made Miami king of the hill, with Alabama moving up to No. 2.

What are the chances of another 1-2 shootout this season? Slim and none, if the rankings stay as they are.

Of the top 11 teams in this week's poll, 10 — all but Oklahoma — have perfect records. Here are the remaining regular-season schedules:

No. 1 Miami: Northern Illinois (0-5), West Virginia (2-2), Cincinnati (2-2), Florida State (1-2-1), Pitt (2-1-1), Tulsa (3-2), East Carolina (0-4).

No. 2 Alabama: Notre Dame (1-2), Memphis State (0-4), Tennessee (1-2), Penn State (3-0), Mississippi State (3-1), LSU (1-1), Temple (2-2), Auburn (3-0).

No. 3 Nebraska: South Carolina (1-3), Oklahoma State (2-2), Missouri (1-2), Colorado (0-4), Kansas State (1-3), Iowa State (2-1), Kansas (2-1), Oklahoma (2-1).

No. 4 Michigan: Wisconsin (1-3), Michigan State (2-1), Iowa (3-0), Indiana (3-0), Illinois (1-2), Purdue (1-2), Minnesota (1-2), Ohio State (2-2), Hawaii (2-1).

No. 5 Penn State: Rutgers (3-0-1), Cincinnati (2-2), Syracuse (0-4), Alabama (4-0), West Virginia (2-2), Maryland (3-1), Notre Dame (1-2), Pitt (2-1-1).

No. 6 Oklahoma: Kansas State (1-3), Texas (1-1), Oklahoma State (2-2), Iowa State (2-1), Kansas (2-1), Missouri (1-2), Colorado (0-4), Nebraska (3-0).

No. 7 Auburn: Western Carolina (1-2), Vanderbilt (0-3), Georgia Tech (1-1-1), Mississippi State (3-1), Florida (1-3), Cincinnati (2-2), Georgia (2-1), Alabama (4-0).

No. 8 Arkansas: Texas Christian (2-1), Texas Tech (2-2), Texas (1-1), Houston (1-2), Rice (1-2), Baylor (3-1), Texas A&M (2-1), Southern Methodist (2-1).

No. 9 Southern Cal: Oregon (2-2), Washington State (1-2-1), Arizona State (2-0-1), Stanford (3-0), Arizona (4-0), California (1-2), UCLA (2-1), Notre Dame (1-2).

No. 10 Arizona: UCLA (2-1), Oregon State (0-3), California (1-2), Southern Cal (3-0), Washington State (1-2-1), Arizona State (2-0-1), Stanford (3-0).

No. 11 Iowa: Michigan State (2-1), Wisconsin (1-3), Michigan (3-0), Northwestern (2-1), Ohio State (2-2), Illinois (1-2), Purdue (1-2), Minnesota (1-2).

IF MIAMI remains No. 1 and Alabama stays No. 2, the only place they can meet is the Sugar Bowl. The reason that pairing is unlikely to happen is that Miami is in the driver's seat and would prefer to stay home and play in the Orange Bowl.

On the positive side, the Hurricanes could pocket all that money as an independent school, wouldn't have to pay any travel expenses and would play on their home field. On the negative side, they would be accused of ducking No. 2, but they already have beaten a No. 1-ranked team.

Every one of the four major bowls — the Rose, Orange, Sugar and Cotton — is dreaming over a possible national championship shootout, although the Cotton Bowl would seem to be a long shot since every Southwest Conference team except Arkansas has lost at least once.

A thought: With bowl games leaning toward sponsorship — the Florida Citrus Bowl, the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl, the John Hancock Sun Bowl, the Sea World Holiday Bowl — and with so many SWC teams either on probation or under some sort of investigation, maybe the Cotton Bowl should line up the NCAA as its corporate sponsor. The NCAA Cotton Bowl. Has a certain ring, doesn't it?

The Orange Bowl appears to have the best shot at a national championship shootout if Miami remains unbeaten and Nebraska beats Oklahoma. The Sugar Bowl is hoping that Alabama or Auburn will be No. 1 and the Cotton Bowl's hopes rest with Arkansas. The Rose Bowl, which pairs the champions of the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences, has four of the top 11 teams in Michigan, Southern Cal, Arizona and Iowa.

Now for a long-shot. What happens if Miami is No. 1 and Penn State No. 2? They would have to play in a bowl without a conference tie-up. Three that come to mind are the Fiesta (NBC), Citrus (ABC) and Sun (CBS) Bowls.

Would the networks or sponsors be willing to up the ante to attract such a matchup? You can bet those bowls would drool at the possibility. Don't forget that the Fiesta Bowl had a Penn State-Air Force match put together last year until Brigham Young beat Air Force.

"Because of the difference in the payoff, the Fiesta Bowl (more than $1 million per team) would have a leg up," says Jimmie Rogers, the Sun Bowl's liaison with CBS.

"Miami would keep $2.5 million if it goes to the Orange Bowl. I don't care how much the networks sweeten the pot, they're not going to sweeten it by $3 million ($1.5 million per team). I don't think CBS would do it and I know ABC won't, although ABC's old management probably would have.

"Most of the TV advertising for the bowl games is pre-sold and the networks couldn't recoup."

Who better to discuss a Miami-Alabama game than Florida Coach Galen Hall, whose Gators lost to Miami 23-15 and to Alabama 21-7, both at Florida Field.

Willie de Wit runs heavyweight record to 13-0-1

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — A relaxed Willie de Wit showed more punching variety, better defense and improved inside fighting ability Tuesday in pounding out a unanimous 10-round decision over Andrew Stokes in a bloody, non-title heavyweight boxing match.

"My in-fighting has improved a lot since June," de Wit, the Canadian champion from Grande Prairie, Altberta said after running his record to 13-0-1. "Defensively I wasn't getting hit with hardly anything."

That summed up what was probably de Wit's best bout since turning professional after winning a silver medal in the 1984 Olympics.

De Wit, who is partially backed by Midland's Ben Tamney, constantly found himself fighting from close quarters and he did so effectively. Although Stokes landed some solid, quick combinations at the breaks, de Wit did more damage with his punishing body attack. And although he caught de Wit with a lot of close shots, few of Stokes's hardest blows found their target.

Stokes, a former Golden Gloves winner from Anderson, Ind., hadn't fought in 18 months and it showed. His ring movement and timing wasn't sharp and that was all the advantage de Wit needed.

Using a combination of quick counter punching, superior inside power and some surprising right-hand leads, de Wit constantly kept Stokes off balance.

He also landed numerous hard lefts, showing no ill effects of the forearm injury that forced this fight to be postponed from last month.

"He was probably my toughest competition so far, but I think I handled him easily," said de Wit, who weighed 208 pounds, 12 pounds less than Stokes and his lightest fighting weight ever as a professional.

In every round, de Wit rocked Stokes with solid lefts and rights. In the second a straight left jab bloodied Stokes' nose and by the fourth round both fighters were covered in blood.

But neither let up in the bout that saw Stokes change his style several times in an effort to escape de Wit's attack.

De Wit punished Stokes in every round but it wasn't until the 10th that he finally knocked him down. Right-hand leads to the ribs twice sent Stokes to the canvas.

"I hit him with about one a round," de Wit said of the right. "You don't want to use it all the time because it can be a dangerous shot. the guy could catch you with a right while you're going down."

Stokes landed some solid blows himself, including a series of rights and lefts in the seventh round that chased de Wit to the ropes.

De Wit played down the moment, saying Stokes "threw a bunch of shots and kind of shoved me off balance a little bit but it was no trouble."

"I was really disappointed in myself because I didn't follow instructions from my corner," Stokes said of his performance. "I wasn't supposed to just stand there and wait to get hit. In my heart I feel I gave this fight away and I feel I can beat him."

Astros find prosperity during Houston oil recession

HOUSTON (AP) — A restaurant near the Astrodome in Houston displayed a banner atop its roof that read: "We are Astro Proud."

Down the road a bit, another sign was affixed to an abandoned storefront. It read: "We've Moved."

Just as the city of Houston and its oil-based economy slipped into a recession, the Astros baseball team found prosperity.

"This should be every player's dream, to be on a team like this — a team that was expected to win in recent years but didn't, and a team that wasn't expected to win this year and did," Astros catcher Alan Ashby said.

The Astros' dream came true Thursday when Mike Scott pitched a no-hitter against San Francisco to clinch the West Division and send Houston to a best-of-seven series against the New York Mets.

But while the Astros' success has been a welcome diversion to the city's woes, the players themselves were none too sure of their future only months ago.

Coming off a disappointing 83-79 season and third-place finish in the National League West, the Astros last winter hired St. Louis Cardinals' coach Hal Lanier to replace Bob Lillis as manager. And with him, Lanier brought a new, more aggressive philosophy that the organization hoped would show instant results.

While reorganizing under Lanier's program, the Astros compiled a 10-18 spring-training record. Despite some successful work on fundamentals that Lanier considered more important than wins and losses, there was concern — not just among fans, but also among players.

"When we came out of spring training we were puzzled and a little down on ourselves," Ashby said. "We'd had a poor spring, and we hadn't yet proved to ourselves that we were at all capable of winning. We went into the season and lost our first two, and all of a sudden we were written off.

"Then," Ashby said, "we started to win."

The Astros went on a 7-1 road trip and ended the month of April with a 14-6 mark, jumping off to an early lead in the West. They lost the lead briefly to the San Francisco Giants, then took over for good on July 21 with their fourth straight victory, three coming against the NL East champion Mets.

"I think it's fair to say the players and fans didn't know what to expect this year," Lanier said. "But I had a pretty good idea of what I wanted to do.

"I didn't worry about the spring training record. It didn't mean anything. And two games do not make a season. The papers were all saying, 'Here we go again. It's going to be a long summer.' But I had a very positive attitude.

"It was a learning period for me and some of the coaches, like Yogi Berra and Gene Tenace. All we had were scouting reports, but I wanted to see this club with my own eyes."

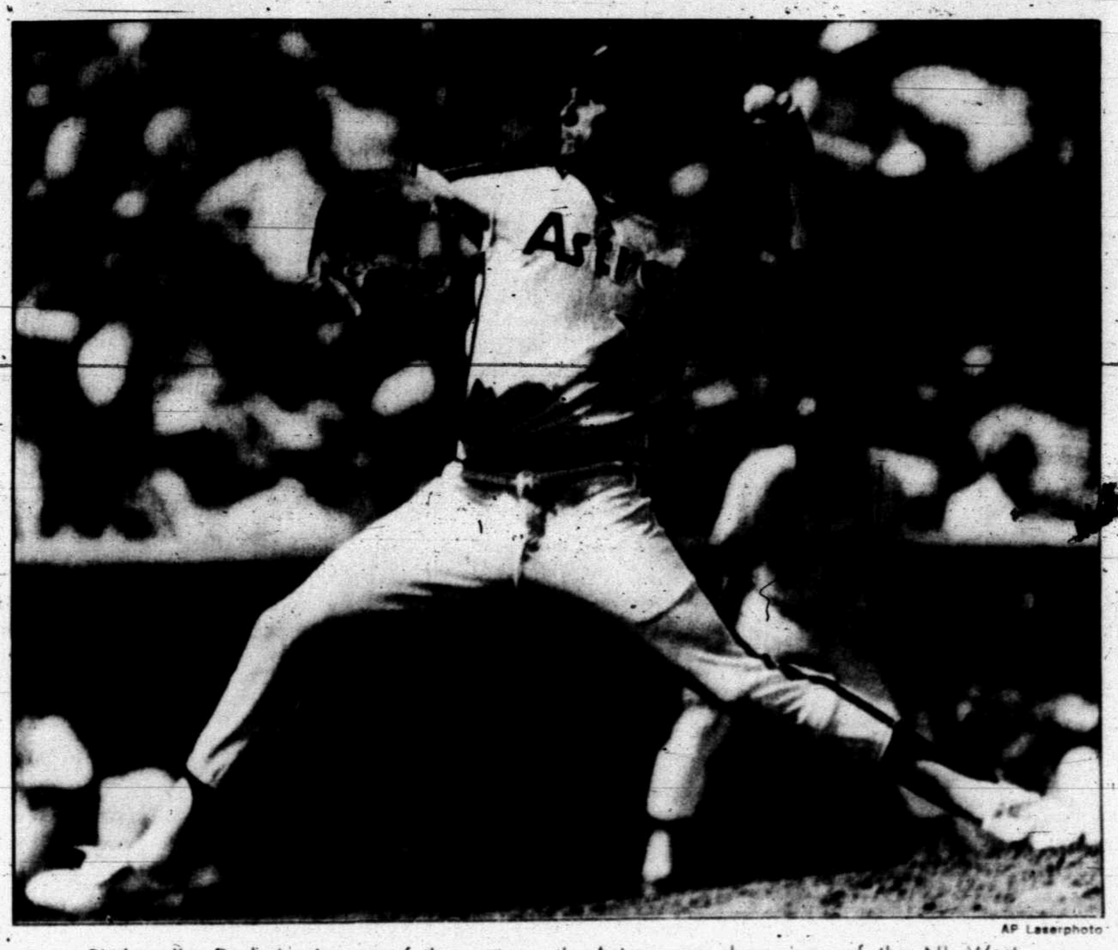
What Lanier could remember seeing of Houston in past seasons was uninspiring.

"I only know what I saw as a coach and what I was told, but it wasn't too good," Lanier said. "Last year, if this club had gone 0-2 then had a little trouble on the road, there would have been a problem. They might have started saying, 'Uh oh.' But I don't think that would ever happen with this club.

"You start saying, 'Here we go again,' and pretty soon those two-game losing streaks turn into six games. I think that's one of the differences between this year's club and last year's."

Another obvious difference has been the emergence of players such as first baseman Glenn Davis, outfielder Kevin Bass and pitcher Mike Scott. Davis has been near the league lead in homers all season and was sure to top the 100-RBI mark. Hitting well over .300, Bass leads the club in hits and is second only to Billy Doran in runs. Scott is the NL leader in strikeouts and the club leader in victories.

For so many years, the Astros were a club tailored to the vastness of the Astrodome, stressing speed, defense and pitching — but no power. Still stressing speed — both offensively and defensively — under Lanier, a key to this club's turnaround has been the power of Davis.



AP Laserphoto

Pitcher Jim Deshaies is one of the reasons the Astros are champions of the NL West.

"You can talk about all the other MVP's in this league, but Glenn Davis has meant as much to this club as any player has to any other club," Doran said. "He's given us the power we've never had before."

Doran, a second baseman, says he doubts the club's previous lack of power was through neglect, although it sometimes appeared that way.

"We were playing the cards handed to us," said Doran, a fourth-year player who came up through the Astros' farm system. "There was no one in the minor leagues who was capable of doing what Glenn does. As soon as Glenn came around, they brought him up. I'm sure they would have liked to have someone like him a lot sooner, but I know I didn't play with anyone like him in the minors."

While Davis, Bass and Scott have received the most national attention, some of the Astros' players and coaches believe Doran may be the club's MVP. Astros Coach Denis Menke thinks Doran has Hall of Fame qualities.

"He has one of the best gloves at second base I've seen," Menke said. "He makes the double play as well as anyone. He reminds me of Bill Mazeroski."

Moving the fences in at the Astrodome may also have changed the team's offense slightly, Doran says, placing more of a premium on power.

"I suppose it means more home runs, but you also get a few more doubles and a few less triples," Doran said. "It's probably also helped the batting averages because the way it was before a guy could go back to the 390-foot sign and catch fly balls. Now, they're off the wall."

The major problem with the Astrodome is the playing surface. A $42 million Astrodome complex renovation, including installation of Diamond Vision and new seats, was finished this year, but the turf has been on the field since 1978. It's faded, badly worn, full of bumpy seams and it looks like someone changed the oil in their car in right field. Some of the players were hoping fans would tear it up after the clinching — like New York Mets fans did at Shea Stadium — so Harris County would have to install a new carpet.

The toughest influence this season to guage, however, has been that of Lanier. There are no statistics for managers, no scouting reports.

"How can you tell?" Doran said. "All you know is the guy takes a team picked to finish fifth by the so-called experts, and look where we are now."

While calling Lanier "a tough, aggressive manager," Ashby also admits that his contribution is "a hard thing to assess." One thing about Lanier, though, is that he "doesn't permit excuses or lack of hustle."

Lanier says one of the first things he noticed about the club was that Lillis had not made very good use of the talent available, especially the speed on the team.

"In the first meeting I had with the players this spring, I told them that I was not what they were used to," Lanier said. "I was not laid back. I was not quiet. If they did something wrong, they were going to hear about it. If they did something right, they'd hear about it, too.

"You might see a water cooler flying around the dugout. That's just me. But I'm also a positive person, and I think that rubs off. I wanted to let them play the brand of baseball they were capable of playing, and I think the players welcomed going from a club that didn't try to make anything happen to a club that played aggressively."

Navy says yes, Marines say no

By HANK WESCH
Copley News Service

Lt. Eddie Meyers watched the Chargers-Raiders telecast Sunday, taking special interest as Navy Ensign Napolean McCallum gained 57 yards on 14 carries for the Raiders.

As he watched McCallum help fill in for injured All-Pro running back Marcus Allen, Meyers couldn't help musing about the void in his life. A Marine supply officer stationed at Camp Pendleton, Calif., Meyers long has sought the opportunity to combine a military and NFL career, as McCallum is doing.

And while McCallum played, Meyers already knew what became public knowledge Tuesday — that Marine Corps Commandant Gen. P.X. Kelley had denied his request for a transfer from Camp Pendleton to a duty station in Georgia so he might be close to the Atlanta Falcons, who signed him as a free agent in 1982.

"I thought, in all honesty, I should be the one playing (in the NFL)," Meyers told The San Diego Union Tuesday from his Camp Pendleton duty station. "I've been the one at the forefront of the cause, but I've done my duty as a Marine officer for the last 4½ years.

"I'm glad it happened for Napolean; he's a friend. But I can't help but wonder why it happened for him and not for me. The Navy has made a great deal of concessions for him. The Marine Corps has not lifted a finger at all for me.

"The Navy and Marine Corps are sister services. How can they be so inconsistent in this situation?"

McCallum, a star running back who graduated last summer from the Naval Academy, chose to spend his mandatory five-year military-service commitment in the Navy. He has been stationed at Long Beach, Calif., and is allowed, as the result of a decision rendered Aug. 20 by Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr., to practice with and play for the Raiders in his off-duty hours.

Meyers, another star running back at the Naval Academy, chose to serve his commitment in the Marine Corps after his graduation in 1982. For the past 4½ years, he has campaigned to be allowed to play for the Falcons. He has used his leave the past five years to attend their training camps.

After Lehman's decision in the McCallum case, Meyers petitioned for a transfer to an Atlanta-area duty station so he might try to make an arrangement with the Falcons similar to McCallum's with the Raiders.

Kelley's denial of the request came in no uncertain terms.

"Lt. Meyers incurred his military obligation to his country when he sought and accepted a free, four-year education at the Naval Academy and a commission in the Marine Corps," Kelley said in a statement dated Monday. "To approve his request for a cross-country transfer to Atlanta, Ga., where there is no appropriate billet for him, would be a shameful waste of scarce defense dollars and a violation of the public trust. He is a school-trained supply officer who is filling a billet at Camp Pendleton which requires schooling, rank and expertise."

Kelley's statement ended by noting that Meyers "will be eligible for release from active duty next June."

Meyers, who said his term of service actually will end May 26, learned of Kelley's decision Friday and received a copy of the statement Monday.

"It's pretty much what I expected, knowing the Marine Corps," Meyers said. "It's no great shock, although I was hoping that for a change something might go my way and I'd get a break.

"The Marine Corps says it takes care of its own, but I don't think they've taken very good care of me in this matter. They've been totally unfair. I may sound like I'm a little distraught, but that's because I am.

"I'm the type of person that I'll continue to do my job here to the best of my abilities. But I just don't understand it."

Meyers disagrees with the idea that his transfer would waste taxpayers' money. "They question transferring me, but no one questions sending a Marine wrestler around the world to compete or assigning an Olympic athlete temporary duty somewhere. The only difference is that I'm going to be paid for what I do."

Dollar's rise slight

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against most major foreign currencies in Europe early today. Gold bullion also edged up in light trading.

The dollar's gains were modest, and dealers described the market as generally quiet and trendless.

They said the dollar continued to draw strength from Tuesday's report of better-than-expected U.S. trade figures.

The Commerce Department reported that the U.S. merchandise trade deficit narrowed to $13.3 billion in August from a revised $16.05 billion deficit in July.

The dollar was not significantly affected by the release of other indicators Tuesday showing continued sluggish U.S. economic growth, dealers said.

—2.0282 West German marks, up from 2.0265

—1.6460 Swiss francs, up from 1.6430

—6.6395 French francs, up from 6.6355

—2.2930 Dutch guilders, up from 2.2885

—1,402.00 Italian lire, unchanged

—1.3883 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3875

The British pound eased to $1.4460 from $1.4480.

The dollar also edged up against Japan's currency, closing in Tokyo at 154.27 yen, compared with 153.63 yen Tuesday. Later today, in London, the dollar was quoted at 154.30 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $425.50 a troy ounce, up from $423.75 late Tuesday.

In Zurich, gold was bid at $426.35, up from $424.50.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $422.78, up from $420.52.

Silver was quoted in London at $5.55 an ounce, unchanged from late Tuesday.

Mexico to get loan package

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under heavy pressure from world financial leaders, commercial banks are agreeing to put up half of a $12 billion international rescue package of new loans for debt-plagued Mexico.

The agreement in principle, reached late Tuesday after ten days of intensive negotiations over terms and interest rates, will help Mexico meet payments on debts totaling nearly $100 billion.

The accord represents a breakthrough in efforts to alleviate the staggering debt of developing nations in Latin America.

In addition to $6 billion in new loans from commercial banks and another $6 billion from official agencies like the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, the package would also allow Mexico to stretch out payments on $43.7 billion over a 20-year period — with an additional seven years of grace.

Final terms of the plan must still be approved by the IMF. But an IMF official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said this approval seemed likely, possibly as early as today.

The agreement was announced by the chief bank negotiator, William R. Rhodes, senior vice president of Citicorp, a New York-based bank holding company.

Major features of the loan package include:

—Loans would be extended to Mexico at roughly three-quarters of a percentage point above a benchmark rate, the London Interbank Offered Rate, which in recent days has been running at close to 6.3 percent for long-term loans.

—Mexico would have 12 years to repay these loans, with an additional six-year grace period built into the accord.

—An additional $1.2 billion in loans could be made available if oil prices fell below $9 a barrel. Skidding oil prices are a major factor in Mexico's current financial plight.

—Another $500 million in loans, half from banks, half from official sources, would be triggered if Mexico's economy in the first three months of 1987 did not grow above a specified level, expected to be set by the IMF at between 3 and 4 percent.

The rescue package, orchestrated by Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker and Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, represents the first major new commercial bank loans pledged since Baker outlined a plan a year ago to help ease the debt burdens of 15 debtor nations.

That plan, known as the "Baker plan," called for $29 billion in new loans over a three-year period to developing nations that took internal steps to spur growth — $20 billion of it to come from banks.

However, until the deadlock on the Mexican package was broken Tuesday, commercial banks had shown great reluctance to participating in the plan.

President Reagan, addressing the annual joint meeting of the IMF and World Bank on Tuesday, praised Mexico, among a handful of other developing nations, for adopting difficult growth-oriented programs like those called for under the Baker plan.

"It is important that these programs ... be fully supported by commercial banks," Reagan said.

That theme was echoed at Tuesday's opening session of the IMF-World Bank session by officials of the two multinational lending organizations and by numerous financial ministers from around the world.

"Today's agreement is subject to the successful completion of ongoing negotiations on the details of various parts of the package," said Tuesday night's statement announcing the accord.

The breakthrough came after marathon negotiating sessions.

Western Savings owner denied restraining order

DALLAS (AP) — An attempt by the owner of Western Savings Association, which in mid-September became the nation's largest thrift to be shut down, to obtain a temporary restraining order to prevent disposal of assets has failed.

Jarrett E. Woods, sole stockholder of Western Capital Corp., parent company of the closed thrift, claims the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's closure of Western Savings was illegal and vowed to seek reversal of the mid-September action.

At a hearing Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders said that Woods is entitled to seek to have the federal agency's action overturned, but said his court lacks jurisdiction to enjoin the appointment of a receiver or to enjoin the receiver's actions until Woods' challenge is ruled upon.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, with claims of mismanagement and shoddy record-keeping, declared Western Savings insolvent on Sept. 12 and transferred its $2 billion in assets to a new group. The thrift was reopened three days later under new management and a new name, Western Federal Savings and Loan Association of Dallas.

The judge said even if he had jurisdiction, Woods had failed to meet the burden of proof that would have been necessary to get a favorable ruling.

Injunctive relief such as Woods sought has been granted only twice — once in California and once in Flordia — and on both occasions, the ruling was later reversed by a higher court, lawyers argued.

"Western Savings is not insolvent, and the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas won't even tell us why they think it is," Woods said the day his thrift was closed.

FHLBB spokeswoman Rebecca Vail said at the time, "The insolvency was caused by speculative lending and regulatory violations, including deficient or nonexistent appraisals, inadequate loan documents, inaccurate accounting, and shoddy record keeping."

Western, whose assets had grown from $34 million to $2 billion over a four-year period, was also "unsafe and unsound" because of high-risk commercial and industrial loans that were going sour, the board said.

Hughes executive predicts OPEC will set price of oil

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA - What happens to the oil industry in the United States, says the vice president in charge of counting drilling rigs for Hughes Tool Co., will depend on whether there is a free market or administered price for crude oil.

I.C. "Ike" Kerridge Jr., who has been with Hughes Tool since 1956, told Permian Basin Economics Club members during a noon luncheon at Mission Country Club Tuesday, he believes in the administered price scenario, where OPEC determines the price of world oil.

Based on recent comments by Sheik Yamani, he said, he believes the per barrel price of oil will range from $18 to $23 over the next two years (1987-88) and that that's the range OPEC is shooting for for the next three to five years.

"And I think it makes some sense," Kerridge said. "At that price, OPEC countries will have levels of income that they can live with. At the same time, if the price does not exceed $23 a barrel, we're not going to trigger another round of massive exploration in non-OPEC countries or a renewal of efforts to develop alternative energy sources."

As to the future of the industry, Kerridge referred to statistics concerning eight publicly-traded oil equipment and service companies in the first six months of 1986.

They reported aggregated losses of nearly $1.2 billion, compared with earnings of $541 million in the first six months of 1985.

"Now some of those losses do include one-time write offs," he said, "but the industry is just not going to be able to discount prices (for drilling) much more and remain a viable industry."

According to Kerridge, drilling costs peaked in 1982 at an average of $108.73 per hole-foot. "We estimate that this year," he said, "that cost will decline to $60, a decline of 45 percent."

He believes drilling costs are near a bottom, though there could be "a little slippage," he doesn't see how costs can go down a great deal more.

Compared to the last week in December 1981, the nationwide rig count last week was 85 percent below that peak year.

"There are not very many substantial industries in the United States that have experienced a decline of this magnitude," stated the Hughes economist. The growth peak of the industry in 1980-81, he said, "Involved the inflow into the industry of an estimated $8 billion in what we would call 'outside money,'" which came from pension funds, insurance companies and speculators.

The rig count in the Permian Basin at the peak of the Boom, he said was 562 rigs running. The low this year, on July 14, was 73, by actual count, a decline of 87 percent.

However, Kerridge said, this number does not really accurately reflect activity because of increases in productivity. In 1981, he said, the average rotary rig drilled about 100,000 feet of hole annually. This year, he said, the average rig will drill about 170,000 feet of hole.

"So, if you make that adjustment," he said, "then the rig count (in the Permian Basin, including the entire state of New Mexico) would be about 121 (rigs running) this year," which would mean, on an equivalent basis, the rig count would be down only 78 percent instead of 87 percent from the standpoint of actual production.

Congressmen seek investigation of Schlumberger

New York Times News Service

DALLAS — Two Democratic congressmen Monday called for the Reagan administration to investigate whether Schlumberger Ltd., the giant oilfield services company, has tried to win contracts from Arab or Moslem countries by agreeing not to do business with Israel.

The congressmen, John Bryant of Texas and Howard Berman of California, also charged that Schlumberger's continued operation of oil well logging services in Libya violated the "spirit and perhaps the letter" of President Reagan's sanctions that forced American companies to end their activities in Libya on June 30.

A Schlumberger spokesman, Seth T. McCormick, said a Treasury Department inquiry last month had determined the company was not subject to the Libyan sanctions because it is incorporated outside the United States, off the coast of Venezuela in Curacao, the Netherland Antilles.

McCormick added that he did not know whether any Schlumberger officials had signed documents agreeing to the Israel boycott. "That kind of thing would be very difficult to follow up on," he said.

Schlumberger's executive offices are in Manhattan and three of its five major research centers are situated in the United States, including one in Ridgefield, Conn.

The Ridgefield center, known as Schlumberger Doll Research, produced techniques that accounted for two-thirds of the worldwide revenue generated by Schlumberger's oilwell logging, or wireline, business in recent years, according to company publications. Schlumberger's total revenues in 1985 were $6.1 billion.

The congressmen provided to reporters a copy of a letter signed last March 18 by a manager of a Schlumberger affiliate in Bangladesh that certified to the Malaysian government that neither it nor any of its affiliates would supply any goods or services produced by countries boycotted under "regulations in force by the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia." The document was submitted as part of a bid made by the Schlumberger unit last Jan. 25.

It has been illegal since 1979 for any citizen of the United States, a company based in the United States or a subsidiary of a foreign-based company operating in this country to boycott Israel as part of its business dealing with Arab states.

The law provides for federal criminal penalties for officers and directors of any company convicted of participating in a boycott of Israel. However, William V. Skidmore, director of the Office of Anti-Boycott Compliance in the Commerce Department, said he was not aware of any cases where penalties had been assessed against individuals.

Wal-Mart, Cullum announce plans for joint venture

BENTONVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. is going into business with another company for the first time, with plans to build a series of combination supermarket and discount stores jointly with the Cullum Cos. of Dallas.

Cullum operates the Tom Thumb supermarket chain. Wal-Mart, based in Bentonville, operates 945 discount stores in 22 states.

Wal-Mart corporate communications director Jim von Gremp said Tuesday that shareholders of both companies were told of the plans on Monday. "We felt Wal-Mart and Cullum shareholders should know what's going on even though the agreements have not been signed," he said.

According to von Gremp, the stores tentatively dubbed Wal-Mart Super Centers will cover more than 150,000 square feet each, with the first stores to open in late 1987. But he said no sites have yet been selected.

"They've not been designed yet but we know they'll be in excess of 150,000 square feet," he said. "There is no floor plan and no known number. Other specifics are not available. We're just getting started on it."

Von Gremp said the plan is part of Wal-Mart's efforts to expand into other retail formats.

He said the new stores would follow Wal-Mart's discount-oriented strategy and be the price leader in their markets. The stores will combine general merchandise such as that found in Wal-Mart stores with a complete grocery, including fresh produce.

Wal-Mart officials hope to sign an agreement with Cullum as soon as possible, von Gremp said. "We feel like the Cullum people are good business people and have expertise in grocery stores," he said.

Wal-Mart has tested other new retailing ideas, such as Sam's Wholesale Clubs, a discount drugstore and arts and crafts stores. What makes the new venture a bit unusual, von Gremp said, is the involvement with another firm.

Cullum said the new venture will probably replace Cullum's warehouse store concept, which Cullum announced earlier this year to compete with self-service warehouse operators such as Minyard Food Stores and Sack'N Save.

Jack W. Evans, Cullum's president and chief executive officer, said a site previously announced as a location for a warehouse-type facility might now be used for a Wal-Mart Super Center.

Portion of Safeway assets for sale

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The holding company acquiring Safeway Stores Inc. in a $4.2 billion buyout says it will sell part of the company to meet its debt payments.

Kohlberg Kravis Roberts, the New York investment banking firm that led the buyout, said it does not expect to have enough money to make required payments on its debt once the merger is complete.

In the documents filed Monday with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Kohlberg did not specify what assets might be sold.

Safeway Stores Holdings Corp., the holding company formed by Kohlberg to take over Safeway, the nation's biggest supermarket chain, borrowed about $3 billion from banks to buy 73 percent of Safeway stock.

Kohlberg also announced Monday that the holding company will issue $1 billion in new bonds to help pay for the merger.

Industry analyst Jonathan Ziegler at Sutro & Co. in San Francisco speculated that Safeway stores in troubled markets such as the Midwest, Texas and Denver may be put up for sale.

Midlander markets emergency alert system

By MELLA McEWEN

Long-time Midlander Donald Young has begun a new business that can be a lifesaver. Young has begun operating EMERGENCY-AID, which markets the Lifecall emergency alert system.

Lifecall is an electronic system that provides the subscriber with the means to receive emergency aid at the press of a button on a transmitter worn around the neck or on a belt. When the button is pressed, a signal is sent to a unit connected to the phone, which automatically dials the Ohio central monitoring station.

At the monitoring station, the subscriber's account number shows up on a swtichboard, and the medical history is brought up on a computer. A code shows whether the subscriber has signaled a fire, police or fire emergency. Lifecall personnel contact the subscriber through a speaker phone that is part of the unit attached to the phone. If there is no answer, the police, fire or other emergency aid is summoned, and neighbors are notified so they can quickly reach the person.

Young says the system costs less than a good console TV, and adds that Lifecall has come out with a new system that costs about half as much. Subscribers can also have a smoke alarm included in their system.

The LOLLIPOP TREE, a children's resale boutique has opened at 4313-A W. Illinois, across from Safeway.

According to Kim Bunsen, who owns the store along with Jill Nelson, the store carries children's clothes, sizes 0-6X, as well as maternity wear, toys, and some nursery furniture and accessories. Bunsen notes that while some of the clothes are new, most of the inventory is second-hand, and that they will take clothes on consignment.

The store's grand opening is Oct. 1

PIP PRINTING, 409 Andrews Highway, is celebrating its first anniversary in Midland with an open house Oct. 1, according to Melinda Malcolm, customer representative.

The store will also have a week-long celebration with cookies and punch and balloons that customers can pop and receive a discount on their order.

The store is managed by Rayburn Davis.

Effective Sept. 1, PRADON CONSTRUCTION & TRUCKING, INC. has purchased Joe D. Hughes, Inc.'s interest in the East Odessa terminal and pipe storage facility. The yard is located at the former Atlas yard just east of Loop 338 between Highway 80 and I-20. The 40 acre pipe storage terminal will be operated as Pradon Trucking, Inc., and former employees of Joe D. Hughes were retained by Pradon.

Pradon has a 17 state ICC authority, a West Texas RRC authority, as well as an intrastate SMC authority. Construction services include building drilling locations, tank battery pads, blading and patching roads, building and busting drilling pits. The trucking division has a full line of tandems, winch trucks, single axles, hot shots and forklifts. The main terminal office is located at 2100 W. 83rd in Odessa, and the yard consists of two truck yards, three shops and 25 acres of storage area.

The company was begun in 1962 by Pete and Alma Pradon. Their three sons have been active with the company since 1972.

The Oil Field Products Group of PFIZER, INC. has announced the opening of its offices at 450 Gears Road, Suite 630, Houston.

The new headquarters location initially will house the administrative and sales staff, according to William E. (Buddy) Parker, vice president and general manager of OFPG, and will serve as world headquarters for its EOR operations.

Formed in 1982, the Oil Field Products Group specializes in xanthan biopolymer chemicals for enhanced oil recovery. Its fermentation-derived Flocon 4800(TM) products are used as mobility control agents in micellar floods, polymer-thickened water floods and alkaline floods.

WALKING THE TRAIL TO GOOD HEALTH

The next time someone tells you to "Go take a hike" consider it good advice! Most exercise experts now agree that walking is one of the very best ways to exercise, for people of all ages.

Hiking can be as simple as a walk through a field or around the neighborhood, or as strenuous as a trek up a mountainside. The only equipment you'll need is a good pair of shoes, a beverage and a snack.

A walk is not only good physical exercise, but also a mental break. Families can spend some quality time together by enjoying the warm summer or fall weather and natural scenery of the outdoors; individuals can take a nice quiet walk for time to think and to release stress.

To keep your energy up on a long walk, take along an easy-to-prepare, portable snack or trail mix. A peanut butter and raisin variation of the classic Marshmallow Treats recipe might be just the snack to keep you going at your peak. Camp-Out Snack Mix is a simple, no-cook mixture Granola-Fruit Bars, energy-rich, make a nutritious addition to a backpack. Pack your snack securely in zipper-top storage bags to fit easily into backpacks or pockets.

To help you get the most from your next hike, here are a few basic tips to keep in mind. Happy trails!

- Wear comfortable, loose-fitting clothing. Long sleeves and long pants protect arms and legs from tree and brush branches, burning sun rays and pesty insects.
- Pack a wet washcloth for wiping sticky hands and tired brows. A plastic storage bag protects the washcloth from drying out or wetting other pack items.
- Travel light, but with energy. Pack snacks that are energy-boosters and easy to eat on the trail. Choose foods that don't bruise or melt in warm weather. Trail mixes and snack bars are lightweight pick-me-ups. Carry snacks in zipper-top storage bags that can be conveniently and securely reclosed.
- Make sure that shoes are comfortable and broken in; blisters may easily form when you walk a good deal. Wool or all-cotton socks keep feet dry as your hike progresses.
- Pace yourself. Warm weather, high altitudes and steep trails can overtire muscles; especially if this is your first exercise in a while. Walk at a comfortable pace, breathing evenly.
- Be prepared for any minor accidents. Scrapes, insect bites and blisters may occur, despite preventative measures. A plastic resealable storage bag containing insect repellent, sunscreen and bandages is lightweight and may come in handy!
- Stop frequently along the way for rests. Rest stops provide ample opportunity to enjoy scenery, to relax your muscles, and to take photographs.
- A cool drink is always welcome, so remember to take along a vacuum bottle or canteen. Small cans or cartons of juice are also lightweight. Put in zipper-top storage bags to protect other items from moisture or condensation. Chill beverages well before packing.

Granola-Fruit Bars

⅓ cup corn syrup
¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 tablespoon margerine or butter
4 cups whole wheat, corn, rice and oat cereal
½ cup finely cut, mixed dried fruit
2 tablespoons sesame seeds

1. In medium-size saucepan, combine corn syrup, sugar and margarine. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to a boil. Boil 1 minute. Remove from heat. Add remaining ingredients, mixing until well combined.
2. Press mixture evenly into buttered 9x9x2-inch pan. Cool. Cut into 1-1/4 x 2-inch bars. Store in zipper-top storage bags.

Yield: 24 bars

Raisin-Peanut Butter Marshmallow Treats

¼ cup margerine or butter
1 package (10 ounces, about40) regular mashmallows or 4 cups miniture marshmallows
¼ cup peanut butter
6 cups oven-toasted rice cereal
1 cup seedless raisins

1. Melt margarine in large saucepan over low heat. Add marshmallows and stir until completely melted. Remove from heat. Stir in peanut butter.
2. Add cereal and raisins. Stir until well coated.
3. Using buttered spatula or waxed paper, press mixture evenly into buttered 13x9x2-inch pan. Cut into 2-inch squares when cool. Store in zipper-top storage bags.

Yield: 24 squares, 2x2 inches

Camp-Out Snack Mix

4 cups corn and rice cereal
½ cup seedless raisins
½ cup peanuts
¼ cup sunflower nuts or seeds
¼ cup diced dates or prunes

Combine all ingredients. Store individual portions in storage bags.

Yield: about 5-1/2 cups

DEAR ABBY

Tired grandma tirelessly baby-sitting

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My brother and sister each have two hard-to-handle children under 5 years old, who (too frequently) are left with my mother to watch. In a few weeks our family will have a reunion at our cabin. This should be a time of rest and relaxation for my mother, who takes round-the-clock care of her own frail mother.

I overheard my brother and sister talking about getting together with other family members to go golfing at the cabin. I'm sure they expect Mom to watch their kids while they play golf.

My mother is the type who can't say no, especially to her family. Poor Mom looks so tired most of the time, and I know it's because her grandchildren run her ragged. I've hinted about this to my brother and sister, but they pay no attention, and I always end up baby-sitting when Mom can't stay awake any longer. At her age, she shouldn't be taking care of kids eight hours a day.

Maybe if they see this in print, it will sink into their thick heads. — T.S. IN ST. PAUL

DEAR T.S.: Don't bet on it. Obviously your hints are not getting through to your brother and sister. It's kind of you to want to help your tired old mother, but unless she herself gathers the courage to say "Enough!" and you quit rushing in to rescue her, nothing will change.

DEAR ABBY: I am so mixed up and hurt I thought I would write to you for advice.

I've been going with this man for five years. (I'll call him Joe.) We both lost our mates seven years ago. I care for him very much and I know he cares for me. We are both in our 60s and have a good relationship.

I got a call from his cousin the other day. She told me that when Joe goes up north, he is going to see another woman. Abby, I need some advice. Should I come right out and tell him what I heard? Or should I keep my mouth shut?

His cousin delights in telling me catty little things about Joe, knowing it upsets me. — ALWAYS THE LAST TO KNOW

DEAR LAST: I don't know what your "good relationship" with Joe involves. If you are his one and only, and he is supposed to be yours, tell him what you heard. And be sure to tell him who told you. If you have no commitments to each other, keep your mouth shut.

DEAR ABBY: I went to the new Presbyterian minister in town for counseling about my homosexuality. (He's about my age.) I gave him a paper I had written about Oscar Wilde. I was very proud of it because it rated an "A" in Victorian literature.

The minister called my father, repeated our conversation, and told him that I had given him "filth" to read!

I am devastated and embarrassed. Why would the minister betray me this way?

Naturally, I feel vindictive, but there was nothing I could do about it. I simply left that church and changed to the Lutheran church. What is your reaction? — BETRAYED IN ARKANSAS

DEAR BETRAYED: The minister's betrayal of your confidentiality is shocking. It is appalling that someone so lacking in integrity and intelligence could be a spiritual leader. Write a letter of complaint to the regional synod or presbytery (the address can be provided by any Presbyterian church in your area) and describe what happened. You would be performing a community service.

DEAR ABBY: I applaud your response to the letter from "Clean and Not Worried," advocating a law requiring everyone to submit to drug testing. You are one of the few people I've heard of who is not willing to jump on the bandwagon in favor of mandatory urine testing.

As a staff sergeant in the U.S. Air Force, I am subject to no-notice, routine drug testing. I have seen what happens when the presumption of innocence and the need for probable cause are disregarded.

In the Air Force, one positive urine sample (which is tested twice but is still not 100 percent reliable) results in a less than honorable discharge. Duty performance is not a consideration. Many lives and families have been ruined by a policy that is based on the false premise that a person is only as good as his/her bodily waste. I would hate to see everyone in this country living with the constant fear and uncertainty that I do.

Too many people in our great country are willing to relinquish the rights that I have pledged to give my life to defend. What a sad state of affairs. — CLEAN BUT WORRIED IN TACOMA

Dance instructor shares dieting tips

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Most of us are fortunate in that our weight doesn't determine our careers, but for professional dancers, staying thin is essential.

Angela Blackledge, a dance instructor at the United States International University in San Diego, discovered just how important diet is when some of her students auditioned for roles in the TV series "Fame." "It seemed that the dancers who didn't make the first cut were the ones who weren't thin enough," she says.

Blackledge believes that most people go overboard when they try to lose weight, instead of folowing a healthy and realistic diet.

"When most people think of a diet, they think of eating four eggs one day and four bananas the next. Actually a diet is a pattern of eating you maintain throughout life, not starving yourself to lose weight and then gaining it back."

Blackledge offers the following advice for struggling dieters:

- Avoid all processed foods.
- Read the labels of all canned foods to learn exactly what you're eating.
- Drink at least 8 glasses of water a day.
- Avoid red meat and most fast foods.
- Remember that food is meant to be fuel for your body, not a social event. It's easy to forget about calories when you're eating out or with friends.
- Find an eating pattern and stick to it.

If you're wondering whether you need to alter your eating habits, Blackledge advises, "People who are not dancers should maintain the optimum weight at which they feel healthy, can move around well and feel they look attractive."

Burrito burgers spicy version of Tex-Mex cuisine

Associated Press

TEX-MEX BURRITO BURGERS

1 pound ground beef
¼ cup chopped canned green chili peppers, drained
¼ cup refried beans
2 slices American cheese, halved diagonally
Four 7-inch flour tortillas

Divide beef into fourths; pat each into 5-inch circle. Season with salt and pepper. Place 1 tablespoon of the peppers and 1 tablespoon of the beans on one side of each patty. Fold patties in half, forming semicircles; seal edges. Grill on an uncovered grill directly over medium-hot coals for 7 minutes. Turn; grill to desired doneness, allowing 6 to 8 minutes more for medium. Top each patty with halved cheese slice during last 2 minutes. Place tortillas on grill for a few seconds to heat.

Serve patties in folded warm tortillas. If desired, top with shredded lettuce, halved tomato slices, sliced green onion and dairy sour cream. Makes 4 servings.

Cookbook devoted to chicken dishes

United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — Last year Americans consumed more than 18 billion pounds of chicken, and that figure can only increase with publication of a new cookbook with one recipe for each of 365 days.

Cheryl Sedaker dedicated "365 Ways to Cook Chicken" to what she calls "the humble proposition that you can never eat too many good chicken dishes," along with the fact that the fowl is nutritious, inexpensive, easy-to-prepare and low in calories.

Here is Sedaker's recipe for Tandoori Chicken, a spicy version of the great centerpiece of many an Indian meal.

TANDOORI CHICKEN

1 3-pound chicken, quartered
2 tablespoon lime juice
1½ teaspoons salt
2½ cups yogurt
2 tablespoons grated fresh ginger
8 garlic cloves, crushed through a press
½ teaspoon ground cardamom
½ teaspoon cumin
¼-½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 teaspoon red food coloring (optional)
Scallions and lime wedges

Remove skin from the chicken and make 2 deep gashes in each piece of meat. Rub chicken all over with 1½ tablespoons of the lime juice and 1 teaspoon salt. Place in a 12 X 8 X 2-inch baking dish.

In a medium-sized bowl, combine yogurt with ginger, garlic, cardamom, cumin, cayenne, black pepper, remaining lime juice and salt. Add the food coloring if desired.

Pour this mixture over the chicken and turn to coat. Cover loosely and refrigerate, turning occasionally, for at least 4 hours or overnight to develop the flavors.

When ready to cook, light charcoal grill or preheat oven to 400 degrees. Grill over medium-hot coals or bake 40 to 45 minutes, turning and basting frequently with yogurt marinade. Garnish with scallions and lime wedges. Serves 4.

New cuts bring different uses for tender lamb

By MERLE ELLIS

I first watched Bill Broscovak work his magic on a carcass of lamb five years ago in the kitchen of the famous old Strater Hotel in Durango, Colo. What he does with a cut of lamb is, indeed, magic. William A. Broscovak is a master butcher, one of the best I have ever learned from, and lamb is Bill's specialty. He works with the American Lamb Council, and quite literally wrote the book on the best way to cut lamb. He has spent a good many years teaching chefs in restaurants all over the country how to best use this fine meat. He's succeeded. Lamb use in restaurants is up over 50 percent in the past five years due in no small measure to Bill's "new look" cutting techniques.

A few years ago, Bill, in cooperation with many renowned chefs from all across America, and Johnson & Wales College Culinary Arts Division, Providence, R.I., devised a new way of cutting a carcass of lamb to yield cuts much more in keeping with contemporary cooking styles. Many more boneless cuts are recommended, such as the Saratoga Roll from the shoulder and the boneless sirloin. The "new look" has provided restaurant chefs (and soon will provide the home cook as the new cuts become available) with beautiful, easy-to-work-with cuts of lamb that can be presented in a great variety of stylish new "trendy" ways, as well as tried-and-true traditional ones.

Many of the nation's finest chefs have contributed their talents, time, energy (and 130 of their favorite recipes) to a beautiful new cookbook devoted to the preparation of many of the cuts of lamb that you will soon see in supermarket meatcases.

The recipes that follow are a few of my favorites from "The New Look of American Lamb."

SELLE D'AGNEAU EN CROUTE A LA GOUSSE D'AIL (Saddle of Lamb in Pastry with Garlic Cloves)

1 saddle of lamb, 7 to 8 lbs
2 heads of garlic
Oil, as needed
8 ounces butter
Salt
Pepper
Thyme leaves
2 pounds fresh spinach
2 pounds puff dough
1 egg

Bone saddle of lamb, trimming off all fat and inedible tissue; keep about two inches of bib. Blanch cloves of peeled garlic; remove and pat dry. Tie both boned saddle parts and sear in boiling oil. Cool roast and remove string.

Prepare rolled roast of the lamb putting butter, garlic cloves and seasonings along the center. Chop fresh spinach (well washed and dried with stem removed) and saute quickly in two tablespoons of butter. Drain. Spread spinach on top of lamb and cover roast completely with puff pastry.

Cook in hot oven for about 30 minutes. Let rest on top of oven for 20 minutes before carving. Serve with zucchini boats stuffed with duxelle and gravy made with stock from lamb bones. Serves 8.

BARBECUED LAMB SONOMA STYLE

1 leg of lamb, 6 pounds or more, boned and butterflied
¾ cup olive oil
½ cup red wine vinegar
½ cup Sebastiani Cabernet Sauvignon
1 (4 ounces) can chopped green chiles
6 cloves garlic, minced or mashed
4 teaspoon Italian seasoning
2 tablespoons hot mustard
1 (8 ounces) can tomato sauce
3 tablespoons honey

Combine oil, vinegar, wine, chiles, garlic, Italian seasoning and mustard. Mix well. Place lamb in shallow dish and pour mixture over it. Turn to coat topside. Cover and marinate overnight, turning again once.

To barbecue, remove meat from marinade and prepare basting sauce by blending tomato sauce and honey into marinade; stirring well. Barbecue marinated lamb over double layer of hot coals for 8 to 10 minutes on each side, basting frequently until done. Serves 6-8.

Saute pans used at home

United Press International

Inspired by their counterparts in professional kitchens, more and more home cooks are abandoning their traditional frying pans for the versatility and greater capacity of the saute pan.

Looking like a cross between the skillet and the high-sided sauce pan, the saute pan is appearing in more and more sophisicated home kitchens because it can be used in more roles and has more capacity than a similar sized frying pan.

The higher sides, usually 2¾ to 3¼ inches compared to a fry pan's 1 ½ inches, mean less grease splatter when frying items such as chicken, keeping the stove and kitchen cleaner.

"The saute pan can do more things for you," said George Munger, cookbook author and pioneering West Coast gourmet cooking teacher.

Vertical rather than sloping sides also mean the cook has more control over ingredents sliding around during cooking.

While both types of pans can be used for sauteing or frying, the fry pan is usually used for items that are slid from the pan after cooking, such as eggs, while the saute pan's food is usually removed with utensils.

When purchasing a saute pan, the home cook should look for extra thick aluminum for best heat conduction and an anodized surface finish such as Calphalon for easy clean-up and to prevent discoloring sauces.

One of the greatest features of the saute pan's side height is that once can use a lid and have enough room for steam expansion when braising. Many inexpensive cuts of meat can be braised easily in the saute pan, creating a one-dish meal in a little under an hour.

In the following recipe, chuck roast or seven-bone blade roast can be substituted for the shanks.

BRAISED BEEF SHANKS

4 meaty beef, veal or pork shanks, about 6 inches in diameter; 2 inches thick
2 scraped carrots, bias cut in 2-inch pieces
2 unpeeled potatoes, cut in 2-inch chunks
2 ribs celery, bias cut in 2-inch pieces
1 cup green beans, cut in 2-inch pieces
2 tablespoons minced fresh garlic
2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons oil
½ cup chicken stock
½ cup dry wine (Sake is ideal)
Fresh ground pepper to taste
Commercial seasoning salt to taste, or 1 teaspoon chef's seasoning. Recipe below

CHEF'S SEASONING

1 tablespoon cracked black pepper
1 tablespoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon celery salt
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
½ teaspoon oregano

In 5-inch or 7½-inch saute pan, brown meat on both sides in butter and oil over medium high heat. Sprinkle with seasoning mix and pepper. Add chicken stock, wine, carrots and potatoes and bring stock to simmer, swirling meat to make sure meat bits on bottom of pan are loosened.

Reduce heat so that stock slowly simmers and cover for about half an hour. Add celery, beans and garlic, stir and cover. Cook for about 15 to 20 minutes more or until meat is tender.

Arrange meat and vegetables on plates and keep warm. Bring stock to the boil, stirring until reduced by about one-third, then pour over meat and vegetables.

WHAT'S COOKING

Home ec teacher sees changes

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Linda Cranfill and students

Linda Cranfill has taught home economics at Greenwood High School for about 10 years, and in that time she has seen major changes in her students.

"When I first started, no boys took my classes," she said. "Since that time it has gone in cycles. I'll have a lot of boys for a year or two and then a few the next year. One year I had half the football team."

She attributes this blossoming interest in home ec classes to "the changing roles of men and women. It's not a disgrace to be able to cook and be a father. Now they accept these things. Before it was woman's work."

However, Ms. Cranfill said she hasn't noticed that many girls interested in traditional "boys' classes," such as shop or drafting. Girls seem to be sticking closer to traditional classes — "in this school they are" — with the exception of agriculture classes. "Quite a few girls are in ag class, but 4-H has always been of big interest, so naturally they would be interested in related courses."

The following recipes are some of Ms. Cranfill's favorites — and her students', both boys and girls.

APPLE COBBLER CRUNCH
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¾ cup nuts
4 cups sliced thin apples or No. 2 can apples
1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
½ cup evaporated milk
⅓ cup melted butter
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg, beaten

Mix sugar with cinnamon and add to apples. Mix flour, sugar, evaporated milk, melted butter, baking powder, salt and egg until smooth. Pour apple mixture into deep-dish pie pan; add flour mixture. Top with mixture of ½ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon cinnamon and ¾ cup nuts. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes.

CHEESE SOUP
½ cup butter
¾ cup diced onion
½ cup finely diced carrots
1 quart chicken stock
1 quart milk
1 cup Cheddar cheese, grated
½ cup finely diced celery
½ cup flour
2 tablespoons cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon soda
Salt and pepper to taste

Melt butter and add onion, carrots and celery. Add flour and cornstarch and stir well. Add stock and milk. Stir constantly until thick and creamy. Add cheese and soda; stir until melted. (Better to add too little soda than too much.)

BETTER THAN ROBERT REDFORD
Bottom:
1 cup flour
½ cup butter, soft
1 cup finely chopped pecans

Mix until crumb-like and spread in pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 15-20 minutes until lightly brown.
Middle:
8 ounces cream cheese
1 cup sugar
1 container (12-14 ounces) frozen whipped topping

Mix cream cheese and sugar; fold in ½ topping and spread over cooled crust.
Top:
1 large package pudding mix or 2 small packages

Mix according to package directions and add rest of whipped topping. Sprinkle with nuts.

BARBECUED BRISKET
6 pounds brisket
½ cup soy sauce
½ cup liquid smoke
Juice of one lemon
1 teaspoon garlic salt
1 teaspoon celery salt
1 teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon MSG
½ cup barbecue sauce
1 package dried onion soup mix

Place brisket in roasting pan. Combine sauce, smoke, seasonings and juice. Pour over meat; cover and marinate overnight.

The next day, bake covered five hours at 275 degrees. Add barbecue sauce and onion soup mix. Bake one hour more. Cool slightly before slicing.

Note: This makes enough sauce for one whole brisket. Cook the whole brisket, then divide and freeze in serving portions.

SWEET POTATO CASSEROLE
2 beaten eggs
3 cups mashed sweet potatoes, baked
½ cup sugar
1 stick butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup brown sugar, packed
⅓ cup flour
½ cup chopped nuts
Marshmallows
Salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Combine eggs, potatoes, sugar, salt, ½ of butter, vanilla, nutmeg and cinnamon. Use this mixture to make first layer.

Cream remaining ½ stick butter and brown sugar; add flour and nuts. Sprinkle over first layer. Bake at 350 degrees 40 minutes. Sprinkle with marshmallows and brown.

FAMOUS GREENWOOD PUNCH
8 cups water
4 cups sugar
4 quarts pineapple juice
4 small cans frozen orange juice, diluted with 12 cans water
½ cup lemon juice
5 large bananas, pureed in blender
4 quarts ginger ale
2 packages strawberry powdered soft drink mix
2 pints fresh strawberries, purred in blender

Blend strawberries and bananas with 2 quarts pineapple juice. Combine 8 cups water and 4 cups sugar; boil 15 minutes and let cool. Add 2 quarts pineapple juice, all the diluted orange juice, lemon juice, bananas and strawberries. Mix thoroughly and freeze.

Remove from freezer two hours before serving. Add strawberry soft drink mix, mixed according to package directions. Add ginger ale at last minute. Serves about 75.

YEAST-RAISED DONUTS
2 packages active dry yeast
1 cup water
1½ cups flour
¾ cup sugar
6 tablespoons margarine
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups flour

Dissolve active dry yeast in warm water. Add 1½ cups flour; cover and let rise until bulky, about 45 minutes.

Cream sugar, margarine, eggs and vanilla until thick and fluffy. Stir in yeast mixture. Add 3 cups flour; knead until smooth, about eight minutes.

Roll to ½-inch thickness. Cut with floured 2½-inch biscuit cutter. Cover; let rise until almost double.

Heat shortening to 375 degrees in deep-fat fryer. Fry donuts, a few at a time, about 3 minutes, turning once. Drain. If desired, fill donuts with jam or jelly using pastry tube. Dust with sifted powdered sugar.

Indian caramel popcorn made on wooden 'cobs'

Associated Press

INDIAN CARAMEL CORN
2½ quarts popped popcorn (about ½ cup unpopped corn)
1 cup packed brown sugar
¾ cups water
¼ cup light corn syrup
¾ teaspoon vinegar
½ cup dried apricots, finely snipped
½ cup raisins
Wooden skewers

Put popcorn in a large roasting pan; keep warm in a 300 degree oven. In a 1-quart saucepan combine sugar, water, syrup and vinegar. Cook and stir until mixture boils; continue cooking to hard-ball stage (250 degrees). Pour over popcorn; stir in apricots and raisins until all is coated. Using buttered hands, quickly shape popcorn into twelve 3½-inch sticks, resembling corn on the cob. Insert wooden skewers into end of each. Store up to several hours in a tightly covered container. Serve the same day. Makes 12.

Sales boosted

NEW YORK (UPI) — Thanks to the boom in wine coolers, wine consumption in the United States last year reached an all-time high, said the latest issue of Jobson's Wine Marketing Handbook.

Americans drank 209.6 million cases of wine in 1985, a 9 percent increase over the previous 12-month period's 192.8 million cases. Overall wine consumption averaged 2.38 gallons per capita in 1985, up from 2.3 gallons per capita in 1984.

Nicolas Furlotte, editorial director of the trade publication, attributed the increase in total wine consumption to the rise in popularity of wine coolers.

Meanwhile, the publication reported that several other types of wine registered decreases in 1985. Dessert wines dropped 2 percent to 21.4 million cases in 1985. Vermouth, at 2.9 million cases in 1985, showed only a slight 0.1 percent decrease.

Champagne and sparkling wine consumption increased somewhat in 1985, with sales going from 16.2 million cases in 1984 to 16.3 million cases in 1985, the publication said.

French plan international cuisine center in Belley

By SUZY PATTERSON
Associated Press

BELLEY, France — "The fate of nations depends on the way they eat," France's first and most famous food critic, Jean-Anthelme Brillat-Savarin, wrote in 1825.

Taking his maxim seriously, the French today plan an international center for the furtherance of cuisine here in his birthplace and hope to improve the health of the world.

"Some of the world's richest countries are not particularly well-nourished," said Denis Defforey, president of France's Carrefour supermarket chain and one of the contributors to the Brillat-Savarin Foundation. "We in France have something to contribute to the world, and the foundation will fulfill a real need."

Mayor Charles Millon of Belley explained at a recent news conference here that the foundation hopes to attract food-oriented tourists and professionals from all over the world. For both professional chefs and amateur cooks, it will offer seminars, courses in French cooking and gastronomic history.

The great chefs of France as well as big business and the government are combining their funds and talents to create the foundation in Belley, a town of about 10,000 people 50 miles northeast of Lyon, in a green, hilly part of the Savoie region.

Food corporations already have donated an initial 2 million francs ($300,000) to the foundation.

In addition to Carrefour, the companies include Accor, Europe's largest hotel-restaurant chain, and BSM, a food-and-drink conglomerate that packages and sells everything from Evian mineral water to Danone yogurt (Dannon in the United States) and Pommery champagne.

In announcing their role in the project, Accor's directors quoted Brillat-Savarin himself: "The discovery of a new dish does more for the happiness of mankind than the discovery of a star."

A judge by profession, Brillat-Savarin is best known for his observations on food and wine in "La Physiologie du Gout," published in English as "The Philosopher in the Kitchen."

He died in 1825, the year his book was published, but presumably he was well-fed to the end. Two maiden sisters devoted themselves to cooking tempting dishes for him when he came back to Belley two months a year on vacation from his work in Geneva.

According to local guides, the sisters were so assiduous that they had to spend about 10 months resting in bed to prepare themselves for culinary feats to please their brother.

When the center is completed casual tourists will be able to view Brillat-Savarin memorabilia and consult a gastronomic library. Aspiring young cooks will be offered the chance to compete for a Brillat-Savarin scholarship.

The foundation also will award an annual prize for excellence in innovative or traditional French cuisine.

Several top chefs will be on a consulting board for the foundation, including Georges Blanc of Vonnas and Alain Chapel of Mionnay, both nearby.

However, the foundation will not be open to the public for several months.

"We're working on details of the seminars and cooking courses," said Dominique Faure, the executive director.

A graduate of the Grenoble hotel school and former executive at Air France's Maxim's restaurant operation, Faure hopes to attract aspiring cooks from all over the world.

"I hope eventually that great chefs will be able to give demonstrations, followed up by practical courses supervised by professionals," he said.

The Brillat-Savarin library is just now being collected, but Faure is looking to a computer-based future.

"I'd like to see people being able to consult computers for recipes and historical information to avoid leafing through thousands of volumes," he said.

"Another possibility is cassettes. We might even be able to create a service for home cooks in the United States through satellite and electronic devices."

Faure added that while it would be nice to be able to call up a Georges Blanc recipe on a computer at home, it also would be helpful for people to come to France to sample foods on the spot.

Brillat-Savarin country is rich in just about everything France offers.

Clockwatchers' chicken cooked quickly

Associated Press

Five minutes preparation time plus 45 minutes cooking time equals an authentic, slow-simmered flavor.

CLOCKWATCHER'S CACCIATORE

8 chicken drumsticks or thighs
1 green pepper, ½-inch strips
1 cup chunky spaghetti sauce
Grated Parmesan cheese

In a medium non-stick skillet place chicken pieces skin side down. Cook over medium heat about 15 minutes or until evenly brown, turning frequently. Drain fat. Add green pepper and spaghetti sauce to skillet. Cover and cook over low heat 30 to 35 minutes or until chicken is tender. Transfer chicken to platter. Stir mixture in skillet; pour over chicken. Pass Parmesan.

American gourmet guidebook, catalog available through mail

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — For those folks who consider strolling through the aisles of a gourmet food shop more fun than visiting the best museums or theme parks, finally there's a book that's also an armchair shopping spree.

"The American Mail-Order Gourmet" by Naomi Black and Mark Smith (Running Press, $12.95) bills itself as "the catalog of hundreds of hard-to-find delectable delights."

It is, however, a good deal more than a listing of places to buy things. It is a lively tribute to quirky free enterprise. It is a bit of a coffeetable book, with plenty of colorful food pictures.

And it's even a little cookbook, with a handful of recipes reflecting the products offered by mail order and the spirit in which they are sold. Here, for instance, is the recipe for Maple-Whiskey Cake from Dearborn in New York.

DEARBORN MAPLE-WHISKEY CAKE

1 jar Dearborn Maple Sauce
⅔ cup raisins
½ cup whiskey
¼ pound unsalted butter, room temperature
1¼ cups packed brown sugar
3 eggs
2¼ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
⅓ teaspoon salt
1 cup sour cream
⅔ cup chopped walnuts
1½ tablespoons grated orange rind

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Soak the raisins in half the whiskey. Grease a 9 or 10 inch Bundt pan. In a mixing bowl, cream the butter, then mix in the maple sauce and brown sugar. Beat in the eggs one at a time. In another bowl, blend together the flour, salt and baking soda.

To the butter mixture, add the flour mixture in three additions, alternating with the sour cream. Beat well after each addition. Fold in the chopped nuts, remaining whiskey, grated orange rind and raisins with their liquid.

Pour into the greased pan. Bake 1 hour, or until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean. Remove from the oven and cool in the pan for 10 minutes. Invert pan onto cake rack. Cool the cake to room temperature before removing the pan. Serve plain or dust with powdered sugar.

"Vegetarian Pleasures" is a good measure of how far vegetarian cooking has come. There are no promises of miraculous improvements to your health. Nor is there mumbo-jumbo about the mystical qualities of vegetarian cooking.

In her menus, organized into sections for quick meals, informal meals, special meals, breakfasts and brunches, Lemlin manages also to avoid two common traps in vegetarian cooking. She doesn't get mired down by the complications of protein complimentarity, nor does she overcompensate for meatlessness by offering rec es thick with butter, eggs and ch ese.

TZADZIKI

½ medium-sized cucumber
1 cup yogurt (preferably low-fat)
2 cloves garlic, minced
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon minced parsley

Peel the cucumber and slice it in half-lengthwise. With a spoon scrape out the seeds and discard. Grate the cucumber on a grater and put it in a medium-sized serving bowl.

Stir in the yogurt, garlic, and salt and garnish with the minced parsley. Chill for at least 30 minutes before serving to develop the flavor.

CURRIED RICE SALAD WITH APPLES AND CASHEWS

1½ cups raw brown rice, cooked and well chilled
⅓ cup raisins
½ cup cashews, toasted
1 medium-size carrot, very thinly sliced
1 small firm, tart apple, cored and diced

Dressing:

½ cup yogurt (preferably low-fat)
½ cup mayonnaise
2 teaspoons curry powder
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ teaspoon minced ginger-root
Dash cayenne pepper
3 cups fresh spinach leaves, cleaned and stemmed
⅓ cup vinaigrette
¼ cup unsweetened dried coconut, toasted

In a large serving bowl toss the cold cooked rice, raisins, cashews, carrot and apple together, mixing well. Raw cashews may be purchased in a health food store and toasted in a moderate 350-degree oven for 10-15 minutes, or until lightly browned. Or dry-roasted unsalted cashews may be used.

In a medium-size bowl mix together thoroughly the yogurt, mayonnaise, curry powder, garlic, ginger-root, and cayenne pepper. Add to the rice mixture and toss to coat. Taste to correct seasoning; it may need salt. Chill at least two hours before serving.

Just before serving toss the spinach with the vinaigrette to coat lightly. Serve the rice salad on a bed of spinach either on one large platter or on individual serving plates. Garnish with the toasted coconut. To toast coconut, place it in a saucepan and heat over medium heat. Toss often until it is fragrant and begins to get lightly browned.

PEACH ALMOND TORTE

½ cup (1 stick) butter, softened
1 cup sugar
½ cup ground almonds
½ cup unbleached white flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 eggs
½ teaspoon almond extract
4 ripe peaches, peeled and sliced ½ inch thick

Topping:

1 tablespoon butter, cut into bits
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons unbleached white flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Butter the bottom of a 9-inch springform pan.

In a large bowl cream the butter and sugar together until blended. Add the almonds, flour, baking powder, eggs and almond extract, and beat until smooth and fluffy.

Scrape the batter into the springform pan and smooth over the top. Arrange the peach slices on top in one layer. They don't have to be neat.

In a small bowl make the topping. Toss together the butter, sugar, flour and cinnamon. Cut the butter into the mixture until it is the texture of coarse crumbs. Sprinkle evenly over the peaches.

Bake for 50-60 minutes, or until golden brown all over. Cool on a wire rack for 10 minutes, then remove the sides of the pan. Serve warm or at room temperature.

PASTA WITH UNCOOKED TOMATO AND FRESH BASIL SAUCE

6 ripe plum tomatoes (about one pound)
3 to 4 cloves (depending on your taste) garlic, minced
1 cup shredded fresh basil leaves (loosely packed)
½ cup chopped fresh parsley
½ cup olive oil
½ teaspoon dried red pepper flakes
½ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste
⅔ pound (10 ounces) pasta such as linguine, spaghetti or vermicelli
⅔ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Wash the tomatoes and pat them dry. Cut out the cores and discard. Cut each tomato in half horizontally and gently squeeze out the seeds.

Dice the tomatoes into 1-inch pieces and place them in a medium-size bowl. Add the garlic, basil, parsley, olive oil, red pepper flakes, salt and pepper to taste. Toss well. Let it marinate at room temperature for at least two hours. Chill it if you marinate it longer. It may be prepared in advance to this point and chilled for up to 24 hours. Bring to room temperature before serving.

Bring a large pot of water to a boil and cook the pasta al dente — slightly firm to the bite. Drain very well in a colander and return to the pot or a large serving dish.

Immediately toss the Parmesan cheese on the pasta. Pour on the sauce. Toss well and serve immediately. When the dish is served it tends to be warm rather than hot; this is fine and the flavor will increase as a result.

The world is beating up on Willie. So Willie's about to beat up on Willie Jr.

Willie hasn't worked in eight months. He stays home every night now, watching Willie Jr. while Sally waits tables down at the corner bar and grill. TV's busted. The fridge is empty. The bills are piling up. And now the kid is crying his head off at 1:30 in the morning. That sends Willie flying from his chair.

Time out, Willie.

Time out to cool off. Punch a pillow. Do some sit-ups. Get hold of yourself before you take hold of the kid. Sure you got problems. But he's not one of them. So why make things worse by hurting a 6-month-old who's just asking for a dry diaper in the only way he knows how? Think about it, Willie. Think about it hard.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Thursday, October 2, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You may be closer to success than you think. Keep the faith and show your determination. This is not the best time for borrowing money, but if a crisis arises, depend on family members. Act confident and others will share your optimism. Avoid emotional scenes in December and your relationships will show new promise. Travel is helpful for business.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Movie critic Rex Reed, actor Moses Gunn, Ad Week editor Clay Felker, Indian spiritual leader Mahatma Gandhi, author Graham Greene, writer Willy Ley, Groucho Marx, poet Wallace Stevens, baseball's Maury Wills, auto racing's Paul Goldsmith.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will make your own luck today. Listen to what an older person has to say -- you benefit from taking his/her advice. Work out a baby-sitting exchange with a neighbor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Success depends on your willingness to make changes or compromises. Rigid, stubborn thinking could cost you a job or mate. A sense of humor will help you weather some difficult hours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A relocation is possible. Apply for a passport. Avoiding people who want to use you will save time and emotional upsets. Perform more household services. Romance seems sweeter the second time around!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be more assertive if loved one takes you for granted. Your candor clears the air. Familiarize yourself with your employer's overall goals. Avoid getting bogged down in details.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Trust your intuition when it warns you of potential danger. Do-it-yourself types can save a lot of money. Bargains abound for comparison shoppers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Children are drawn to you. Show more affection. Use your charm to promote a favorite charity. Watch a tendency to spend more than you can really afford.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Know your talents and shortcomings before applying for a job. Be realistic in your self-appraisal, but emphasize your strengths. Romance intensifies. Avoid demanding too much too soon. Ultimatums could backfire.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Resist an early morning temptation to take a chance on business or community venture. What seems like a sure-fire solution to a delicate problem may not work. A careful assessment pays big dividends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cultivate an individual whose talents would mesh well with your own. Teamwork brings quick success. Better planning will make it easier for you to pay your bills. Domestic tensions disappear.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do whatever is necessary to get the job done right. Travel is inconvenient, but could put you in line for a large financial reward.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An insurance matter can be straightened out if you take the time to sit down with a well-informed agent. Be sure your family knows your long-range plans. Romance turns happy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Shift into low gear until you can see how things really stand. A misunderstanding could upset the balance of power at work. Clear things up quickly before you become a victim.

North America has lagged behind Europe in teaching bridge to young persons. At one point, administrators of the game believed that to teach schoolchildren bridge would be inviting them to ignore homework in favor of the card game. Experience has shown that if children don't want to study, they don't need bridge to lure them away from their lessons. Besides, bridge has valuable attributes for young people. Along with honing their mathematical skills, the partnership aspects teach them to work with other people. Now that the American Contract Bridge League has set up a Bridge Education department, perhaps we can look forward soon to more bridge in schools.

At the recent Summer North American Championships in Toronto, one of the youngest players was 13-year-old Andrew Moss of New York. His mother, Gail Greenberg, is a many-time world champion and his father, Mike Moss, is a well-known tournament player. He came up with sparkling defense on this deal.

As the card lay, Andrew's four-heart contract was headed for a one-trick set. When the opponents bid to four spades, he elected to double rather than compete further.

Andrew led his ace of clubs, and now he had to score a quick club ruff if he was going to beat the contract. He continued with the ace of diamonds, looking for a signal should his partner hold the king. East followed with a low diamond. Showing the aplomb of a veteran, he coolly underled his ace of hearts. East won the king of hearts and had no difficulty in returning a club Andrew for to ruff.

Reagan pays for relatives' gravestones

Ronald Reagan

FULTON, Ill. (AP) — President Reagan, who recently found out that some of his ancestors are buried here, has paid to have the deteriorating gravestones refurbished.

The president asked Boyce Monument Co. of Clinton, Iowa, to spruce up the gravestones of his great-grandfather, Michael Reagan, and two great-uncles, William and Thomas Reagan.

The president's relatives are buried in Fulton's Township Cemetery, formerly the Catholic Calvary Hill Cemetery.

On Memorial Day, passers-by noticed the Reagan markers needed repair. Maxine Mertens of Keystone, Iowa, who has relatives in Tampico, Ill. — Reagan's birthplace — wrote the president to tell him.

"I had no idea there was such a marker or that those graves were there," Reagan responded. "My father was orphaned at age 6, so we know very little of his family except for an old photo of his mother and father."

Reagan asked Ms. Mertens to find a monument company to fix the stones and send him estimates.

"It's not often that you get to do work for someone famous — especially the nation's current president," said Dean Boyce Jr.

Reagan sent them a check with a handwritten thank-you note signed "Best Regards, Ronald Reagan."

ATLANTA (AP) — Jimmy Carter celebrated his 62nd birthday today with something special planned: the dedication of the Carter Presidential Center.

Jimmy Carter

In public ceremonies that were to include President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, the former president and his wife, Rosalynn, were to turn over to the National Archives and Records Administration the deed to almost half of the 130,000-square-foot complex.

The rest of the center, which also houses offices for Carter, two foundations and a public policy "think tank" which he chairs, will remain in the hands of an operating foundation.

Today's activities were also to include a ceremony dedicating a Japanese garden, designed by master gardener Kinsaku Nakane, and a founder's breakfast for the 45 business figures who contributed $15 million of the $25 million in private donations which paid for the center's construction.

Carter said last week that he and his wife conceived of the complex after they left the White House in 1981 as their gift "to the people of our nation for having given us the honor of the highest political office."

The center, construction of which began two years ago, is a complex of four interconnected round buildings set in a loose semicircle around a formal Japanese garden nestled on the side of Copenhill, the hill just east of downtown Atlanta from which Union Gen. William Sherman watched his Civil War troops burn the original city.

The Carter Presidential Library and Museum houses more than 27 million pages of documents from the four-year Carter administration as well as exhibits on Carter's life and the issues he dealt with as president.

The museum exhibit, run by the National Archives and Records Administration, will be open to the public after the dedication ceremony. Tickets are $2.50 for adults, while children under the age of 16 will be admitted free.

Meanwhile, Carter says it was a coincidence that Soviet dissident Yuri Orlov was named co-winner of the first Carter-Menil Human Rights prize the same day the United States announced it had won his freedom.

Carter, who announced the award Tuesday at the center, said Orlov and a human rights organization in Guatemala called the Group for Mutual Support would share the $100,000 human rights prize.

Carter, chairman of the Carter-Menil Human Rights Foundation, made the announcement with the foundation's president, Dominique de Menil, a French-born philanthropist who now lives in Houston.

The human rights awards will be presented Dec. 10 on International Human Rights Day in the Roythko Chapel in Houston, which was built by Mrs. de Menil and where other human rights awards are made each year.

Orlov, 62, was a founder of the Moscow Helsinki group, a committee set up in 1976 to monitor Soviet compliance with the Helsinki accords on human rights, security and cooperation in Europe. In 1978, because of his activism, he was sentenced to seven years in a labor camp and then to five years in exile.

Carter called it "a happy coincidence" that the agreement to free Orlov came the same day that the foundation granted him a share of its first award.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actress Heather Thomas is making remarkable progress from surgery on her left knee and is expected to be released from the hospital this weekend.

Miss Thomas, 29, has undergone corrective surgery on both legs at St. John's Hospital and Health Center since being hit by a car as she crossed a street Sept. 16.

The actress, co-star of the canceled ABC-TV series "The Fall Guy," was in good condition Tuesday, a day after surgery to repair ligament damage to her left knee, said hospital spokeswoman Mary Miller.

The ligaments in her left knee should heal in about three weeks, during which time she will continue to wear a (knee) brace, Ms. Miller said. Meanwhile, the ligament injuries to her right knee have been repaired and are healing very nicely.

Her doctors plan no further surgery and have indicated that Miss Thomas could be discharged this weekend if she continues to recuperate at her present rate, Ms. Miller said.

Prince Edward

EXETER, England (AP) — Prince Edward took a drubbing but went the distance in a boxing match with a fellow marine, his sergeant said.

The 22-year-old prince, youngest son of Queen Elizabeth II, was floored during the three-round regulation bout, but displayed "plenty of grit and determination," Sgt. Bob Fanshawe said Tuesday.

Edward, who graduated from Cambridge University and holds the rank of acting lieutenant, entered the Royal Marines Commando Training Center at Lympstone in southwest England three weeks ago for the year-long training program.

Fanshawe said Edward "came off second best" in last Thursday's contest but he denied newspaper reports that the bachelor prince had suffered a black eye or lasting ill-effects.

Garlic, when used properly, flavors foods to perfection

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Home and professional cooks are using garlic more than ever, perhaps because of a renewed interest in Provencal food. Garlic, a member of the lily family, is indeed the mortar that binds the cuisine of southern France, indispensable in many soups, stews, roasts and sauces.

In the hands of an experienced cook, garlic can be the most versatile and provocative of herbs; in the wrong hands, it is akin to a loaded gun.

Like its relatives, the onion and leek, garlic yields several distinct flavors depending upon how it is prepared. If you have ever tasted pasta with an unpleasantly bitter tomato sauce, more than likely the garlic was burned.

Before adding garlic to any recipe, think about the kind of flavor sensation desired — sweet, astringent, mild, strong. Then consider the various ways to achieve such flavors, either by cooking the garlic whole with the peel left on, whole and peeled, crushed, minced or chopped.

In its natural state, covered with two layers of odorless skin, garlic is timid and sweet. Only when the clove is sliced does an enzyme reaction begin that converts cell tissue into diallyl disulfide — what we recognize as a garlic odor. The more garlic is sliced, chopped or crushed, the more aromatic oils are released. The recipes that follow demonstrate how they can be put to use.

IF I WANT to make a roast chicken that has a faint flavor of garlic, I scatter whole, unpeeled garlic cloves, removing the loose outer white skin only, inside the chicken cavity and around the roasting pan. As the chicken cooks, the cloves in the pan soften. The sweet, mild pulp can be incorporated into a sauce or spread on bread.

Usually the cloves in the chicken cavity are still hard and should be discarded.

For recipes using chicken pieces, such as the following one for sauteed chicken with garlic puree, the unpeeled garlic cloves are added to the skillet along with other sauce ingredients. They simmer in the sauce for about 20 minutes to soften. The cloves are then removed and pressed through a sieve. The pulp can then be blended into the sauce, adding a subtle and slightly sweet edge.

If a bit more garlic flavor is called for, peel the cloves but leave them whole. I often do this for casserole recipes such as potatoes dauphinoise, made with milk, butter, salt and pepper. Before combining the ingredients, I rub the baking dish with a whole peeled clove of garlic and then toss garlic cloves in with everything else. This yields a more evenly distributed flavor than simply slicing cloves and tossing them in with the potato mixture.

Vinaigrette dressings can be enhanced by adding whole peeled garlic cloves to the oil, vinegar and seasonings and letting the mixture sit overnight or longer. This produces a mild garlicky dressing without little shards of acrid garlic throughout.

Chopping and mincing garlic releases its full arsenal of flavor. This method is appropriate for full-flavored sauces — with pastas perhaps, shrimp Provencal, bouillabaisse and so on. When chopping, first halve the clove and remove the bitter green sprout in the center.

Never let garlic turn brown in a hot saute pan; by the time that happens, the aromatic oils will have burned, resulting in a bitter flavor. In fact, I never let garlic turn even golden. The slivers need only be heated thoroughly to detonate their flavor.

SAUTEED CHICKEN WITH MUSHROOMS AND GARLIC PUREE

1 chicken, 3½ pounds, cut in 10 serving pieces
Salt to taste if desired
Freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons olive oil
½ pound small mushrooms, rinsed in cold water and drained well
12 large cloves of garlic, unpeeled
½ cup finely chopped onion
½ cup dry white wine
2 cups chopped fresh tomatoes, peeled and seeded
½ cup chicken broth
4 sprigs parsley
1 bay leaf
3 sprigs fresh thyme, finely chopped, or ½ teaspoon dried
¼ cup finely chopped fresh basil or parsley

Sprinkle chicken pieces with salt and pepper. Dredge them in the flour, and pat to make the flour adhere.

Heat oil in a heavy skillet. When hot, add chicken, skin side down, and cook, uncovered, turning occasionally to brown well on all sides, about 10 minutes. Drain off fat.

Add mushrooms, garlic and onion, and cook, stirring, for about 3 minutes over high heat. Add wine, tomatoes, chicken broth, parsley sprigs, bay leaf and thyme, and stir to dissolve the brown particles clinging to the skillet. Bring to a simmer, and add salt and pepper if needed. Cover tightly, and cook for 20 minutes.

With a slotted spoon, remove garlic cloves, and squeeze out the flesh by placing them in a sieve and pushing pulp through with a pestle or rubber spatula.

Add pureed garlic to skillet, and bring mixture to a simmer. Cook, stirring, for about 2 minutes. Remove bay leaf, and serve with chopped basil or parsley.

Hightower: Farmers should sell directly to consumers

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Sitting in a trendy Manhattan restaurant over a $20 plate of designer vegetables — purple peppers, yellow tomatoes and blue potatoes no larger than a walnut — a diner may not realize how his meal has helped turn a debt-ridden farm into a profitable one.

Jim Hightower, the Texas state agriculture commissioner, says it is possible to make a success of farming by selling specialty produce and other crops directly to consumers.

Although he is not the only agriculture official who wants to dispense with the middleman, Hightower has been thinking about it longer than most. He was head of the Agribusiness Accountability Project in Washington from 1970 to 1976, seeking to publicize federal agricultural policies that endangered the family farm. In 1983, he was elected commissioner, which, he says, has given him "a chance to put workers, small business, farmers and consumers together, to see if the entrepreneurial instead of the bureaucratic approach to government can work."

A native of Denison, the commissioner is every inch the modern Texan, in his conservative business suit and tie, western hat and cowboy boots. In a state plane, he recently flew to San Antonio for a whirlwind tour of Pace Foods Inc., which had been using Mexican peppers in its hot sauces until his agency found a source of Texas peppers that can supply the company for most of the year.

A bundle of nervous energy with a dry wit, he is bursting with ideas, including a project to put Texas wines and produce on restaurant menus in the state. His agency asked restaurants in Houston, Dallas and San Antonio if they would be willing to join such an arrangement. Most said yes — if prices were competitive and supplies uninterrupted. The department is trying to work out those details.

"We're getting this stuff shipped in from Florida and California," said Ann Lindsay Greer, a restaurant consultant in Dallas and an authority on Southwestern food, "and we have such good growing seasons here. Cottage industries are springing up. We now have a place for game birds. We are growing peppers near Lubbock, so why not grow yellow bell peppers? There are wonderful berries, peaches and herbs. Tomatillos grow wild here, so why not cultivate them?"

Last year, Hightower presuaded the Kroger supermarket chain in Houston to buy its watermelons from a cooperative one county away; the chain had bought from Florida in the past. His department helped 15 farmers form a cooperative to insure a reliable supply of melons to the stores.

Texas had only one farmers' market, in Dallas, when he took office; today, 45 are scattered through the state. "Now, every city council wants a farmers' market because consumers just swarm to them," he said.

Although the department is also encouraging farmers to become involved in the lucrative business of food processing, the best-known of Hightower's programs is the Taste of Texas promotion, held in Boston, Chicago, Washington and Tampa, Fla., over the last two years. These road shows — promoting everything from mesquite to wine — have received wide press coverage.

The most difficult part of the farmer-consumer equation is to convince farmers that growing specialty crops will work. But Hightower seems unfazed by the farmers' wait-and-see attitude, saying, "They have been abused for such a long time by government agencies that were set up to help them."

Who are the critics of his programs? "Old-time commodity groups who considered that they had the Department of Agriculture in their pockets," Hightower said. Some, however, say his high profile is part of a plan to run for governor in 1990 — a plan he does not deny.

In the meantime Hightower is expanding programs that have been so successful that, he said, "polls in the election campaign show me running 40 percent ahead of my Republican opponent, Bill Powers."

Flavoring healthful

The thought of flavoring your food with a dark pastelike product made from fermented soybeans and various grains is probably enough to turn your stomach. But this Japanese flavor enhancer could prevent stomach cancer.

Miso, a staple in the Orient for years, has people at the National Cancer Center of Japan excited. A 13-year study showed that people who ate miso every day had fewer cases of stomach cancer than those who did not.

'San Francisco Fudge Foggies' take top honors

By United Press International

NEW YORK — Anybody can leave a heart in San Francisco, but it takes a real trooper to find an inspiration there. Yet that's precisely what Barbara Feldman did.

The inventor of a delectable concoction called San Francisco Fudge Foggies walked off with top honors recently at the Great Chocolate Challenge in New York, a cookoff sponsored by Chocolatier magazine.

Feldman described her Foggy as a creation that's more than a brownie and beyond fudge. The judges for Chocolatier predicted the dessert would assume a place all its own in the repertoires of cooks everywhere.

SAN FRANCISCO FUDGE FOGGIES

1 pound bittersweet chocolate, finely chopped
2 sticks unsalted butter, cut in tablespoons
⅓ cup strong brewed coffee
4 large eggs, at room temperature
1½ cups granulated sugar
½ cup all-purpose flour
2 cups walnut halves, coarsely chopped

Position a rack in the center of the oven and preheat to 375 degrees.

Line a 9-by-13-inch baking pan with a double thickness of aluminum foil so the foil extends 2 inches beyond the sides of the pan. Butter the bottom and sides of the foil-lined pan.

In the top of a double boiler set over hot but not simmering water, melt the chocolate, butter and dissolved coffee, stirring frequently until smooth. Remove the double boiler from the heat.

Cool the mixture, stirring occasionally for 10 minutes.

In a large bowl, using a hand-held electric mixer set at high speed, beat the eggs for 30 seconds, or until foamy.

Gradually add the sugar and continue to beat for 2 minutes, or until the mixture is very light and fluffy.

Reduce the mixer speed to low and gradually beat in the chocolate mixture until just blended. Using a wooden spoon, stir in the flour. Stir in the walnuts. Do not overbeat the mixture.

Transfer the batter to the prepared pan. Bake for 28 to 30 minutes, or until the foggies are just set around the edges. They will remain moist in the center.

Cool the foggies in the pan on a wire rack for 30 minutes. Cover the pan tightly with aluminum foil and refrigerate overnight, or for at least 6 hours. Remove the top foil and run a sharp knife along the edge of the foggies.

Using two ends of the foil as handles, invert the foggies onto a large plate and peel off the foil. Invert them again onto a smooth surface and cut into 16 rectangles.

Unusual produce listed

Hearst News Service

It's getting so you need a degree in botany to shop in the produce section. How do you eat cactus pads? What's that wrinkled-up purple fruit? Are those white, carrot-looking things overgrown turnips or what?

Brant Rogers does have a degree in botany, and one in plant research biology, too. He also has lived in Thailand and Guatemala, and he still finds things in the supermarket that he can't readily identify and doesn't know how to use.

But Rogers is one of the culinary unafraid — willing to try any food and inclined to like everything he tries, even though his young daughter has complained that his taste buds are "dead." As he experiments, the exotic becomes the everyday around his household.

Rogers and his wife, Beverly Powers-Rogers, a computer systems analyst, have written "A New World of Fruit and Vegetables," the first in a planned series of booklets for puzzled produce shoppers. It was written, printed and largely illustrated on their home computer, and it offers uses, recipes, nutritional information and foreign names for everything from tamarind to tamarillo.

In each of the 36 minichapters, the couple describes a particular food plant or family of plants and its preparation, adding the occasional simple recipe. They give the plant's names in English and other appropriate languages (Chinese, Thai, Vietnamese, Spanish, etc.). They even had the names drawn in Chinese, Vietnamese and Thai characters in some cases so shoppers can use the book in foreign markets.

There's a simple drawing to go with each new food, as well as two unusual graphics, one that shows which vitamins and minerals the food offers and another that shows its seasonal availability.

The inexpensive booklet ($3.95 suggested retail) draws together many of the Rogerses' interests — plant science and alternative agriculture, cooking and nutrition, and travel and communication between cultures.

"There are 20,000 to 30,000 plant species that could offer food to use, but mankind makes use of only 2,000 to 3,000 of them," Rogers said. "We in North America regularly use only 20 to 30 fruits and vegetables."

He pointed out that this influx of new fruits and vegetables comes at a time when health experts are saying that a varied diet is a healthy diet, and when some people with food allergies have found it helpful to explore new food sources.

The Rogerses' "A New World of Fruit and Vegetables" is available by writing PRP Systems, P.O. Box 5403, Kent 98064 ($4, tax and postage included).

Exotic fruits described in botanist's new booklet

Hearst News Service

Here's a glossary of exotic fruit, devised with help from "A New World of Fruit and Vegetables" by Brant Rogers and Beverly Powers-Rogers and "Uncommon Fruits and Vegetables" by Elizabeth Schneider (Harper and Row).

■ Cactus pear: Imported from Mexico. This fruit or berry of certain cactus varieties is a lovely rosy-magenta color on the outside and has been mechanically de-spined before it reaches the market. Carefully peel away the skin, pick out the large, inedible seeds and cut the sensationally colored flesh into fruit salads or puree it into drinks or desserts.

■ Cherimoya (custard apple): Grown in California or imported from South America. Cherimoya has a thin green skin, faceted or bumpy. Eat the sweet, mild-flavored, smooth-textured pulp, but discard the seeds. Use in cooked dishes as you would banana.

■ Tomatillos: Imported from Mexico and South America. Under the papery brown husk is a green or yellow fruit rather like an unripe tomato. Use fresh in salads or cook in Mexican-style sauces and stews.

■ Guavas and feijoas: Grown in Hawaii or imported from New Zealand. Hawaiian guavas are green and quite sour when unripe, yellow and sweeter when ripe, and bright peachy-pink on the inside with lots of little seeds. Feijoas are popularly known as pineapple guavas, though they are not of the guava family. They have a piquant flavor. Eat guavas and feijoas fresh (with or without seeds) or make them into jam or jelly.

■ Starfruit (carambola): Grown in Florida, originally from Asia. This whitish-yellow, long, ribbed fruit ranges from very sharp to sweetish in taste. At its best, the flesh is juicy and translucent.

Grand juries want more funds to battle drugs

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The Midland and Ector County grand juries Tuesday called for a doubling of funds for local law enforcement agencies to battle illegal drugs — primarily cocaine, heroin, and marijuana.

The announcement came after a meeting at the federal building in Midland between the grand juries.

"We want the city council and commissioner courts of both cities to set aside funds to be used against the war on drugs," said Jim Richards, foreman of the Ector County grand jury. "In our recommendation we have asked them to double what they actually spend fighting narcotics."

Tuesday's meeting was the last in about a half-dozen held in September, usually in conjunction with local law enforcement agencies, who supplied the juries with the facts about crime and drugs.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said during the meeting a figure of $75,000 was discussed; he said that amount would probably fund two additional positions each at the sheriff's office and police department.

"The budget, the county budget, will come up again in January," Schorre said. "If the commissioners feel that based on this report they want to implement the recommendations, then they can at that time."

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said he could certainly utilize any additional personnel.

"I only have two people assigned to narcotics right now," he said. "I think the meeting is a true and genuine concern of the grand jury. I think their thoughts are valid and real. Being an administrator, the more manpower I have, the more I am going to be able to do."

Richards sent a letter suggesting the cooperative effort several weeks ago to area law enforcement agencies. That letter resulted in about a half-dozen meetings between the two bodies.

"Evidence brought before these Grand Juries in the course of the investigations of criminal cases made it increasingly clear that the by-products of drug traffic through this area of West Texas are taking an incalculable toll," said a statement released by the grand juries.

The statement called for "extraordinary" measures "which will require not only participation of our law enforcement agencies but the cooperation of the members of the Commissioners Courts because of their leadership in the operation of our county government and the stewardship of their resources."

Lt. Earl Luckey of the Midland Police Department said the department has three narcotics officers that earn $80,000 total annually, doubling that number, including new vehicles and funds for informants, would cost about $135,000.

"They (money and resources) are never adequate," Luckey said. "The men we have can't even follow up on more than 20 percent of the info that they're given. They can barely keep up with Crime Stoppers.

"We always welcome additional help, especially in narcotics."

The joint statement also included a recommendation to the state that "inmate capacity in the Texas Department of Corrections should be expanded."

Jimmie Kelly, Midland County grand jury foreman, said the commitment against drugs is necessary, since according to local law enforcement agencies, 80 to 90 percent of crime is related in some way to drug use.

"We have to, as citizens, be willing to provide the resources necessary to enable law enforcement to mount their campaign," he said.

Kelly said the grand juries would soon take their plea in person to the governing bodies in both cities. He said he felt the grand juries' concern would be shared.

"We are not asking for a specific dollar amount," Kelly said. "We know the amount that is being spent now is not enough. we think that citizens in both communities, understand the difficulties we face, we believe that the citizens will do what they can do to eradicate the problem."

Study: Odessa has lead in malpractice suits, Midland ninth

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Figures obtained from the Texas State Board of Medical Examiners showed that statistically, between 1978 and 1984, Odessa led the state in the number of malpractice suits filed against its physicians, while Midland came in ninth among the 27 metropolitan areas studied.

The report showed that 39 of Odessa's 167 physicians — 23.35 percent — had been hit with 59 malpractice suits during the time period.

Twenty-two of Midland's 132 physicians had 31 malpractice suits filed against them which, amounted to 16.67 percent, figures showed.

There is a difference between the number of suits and the number of physicians in these cases because a physician may have had more than one suit filed against him, Ivan Hurwitz, a Board of Medical Examiner spokesman said.

"These numbers are constantly changing however, because someone may file today, for instance, on a case that happened a couple of years ago," Hurwitz said.

During the time frame indicated, 27 claims were settled in Odessa. The total amount paid was $306,850 and the average amount paid excluding the 12 cases which were settled without indemnity was $20,457.

In Midland, 11 cases were settled and the total amount paid was $183,000.

Excluding the four cases settled in Midland without financial indemnity, the average settlement was $26,143.

Texas physicians as a whole, paid out a whopping $54,482,402 in claims between 1978 and 1984 which amounted to an average claim of $50,307.

There were 6,101 claims filed in Texas, including Midland and Odessa, during that period. A total of 2,468 were settled and 1,083 cases received financial rewards.

The report shows that the majority of the 6,101 claims filed in Texas — 2,393 — were a result of a physician failing to operate, while the next largest amount of claims filed — 1,862 — were filed for negligent surgery.

An overwhelming majority of the claims filed in Texas — 5,221 — allegedly happened in the hospital, the report showed.

There were 2,141 doctors between the ages of 35 and 44 filed against, the largest number, with the next largest age group being between the ages of 45 and 54. Out of the 6,101 cases filed, 248 were against women doctors.

However, female physicians paid an average of $59,906 per claim while male doctors paid $49,977 per claim.

When breaking down the claims into specialties, obstetrician/gynecologists, general surgeons and orthopedic surgeons led the pack with 779, 723 and 618 claims filed against them respectively.

The average claim for those three specialties was $26,063 for obstetrician/gynecologists, $51,944 for general surgeons and $67,658 for orthopedic surgeons.

Doctors who got medical degrees in Texas had 2,328 suits filed against them while those who went to medical school in other states or Canada had 2,678 suits filed against them. Those receiving medical degrees in a foreign country had 1,095 suits filed against them.

Such specifics as listed on a state level were not available for the Midland and Odessa areas.

Local stabbing

Bruce Monroe, 31, receives treatment for a stab wound he received this morning. Midland police have two suspects in custody after Monroe was stabbed following a suspected shoplifting at Furrs Supermarket, Big Spring at Scharbauer. Det. Sgt. B.G. Johnson said the stabbing occurred about 9:40 a.m. after Monroe, a store manager, confronted a woman and a male companion in the parking lot. Johnson said the pair fled west on foot and allegedly stole a car at Nice and Clean laundromat, 2201 N. Big Spring. Police said the stolen car was found abandoned a few blocks away. Monroe was treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital, a nursing supervisor said. See related story, page 2A.

Officials push for awareness on area chemical use, storage

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

City officials met with chemical industry representatives for the first time Tuesday to find out who handles hazardous chemicals and what kind of chemicals are being used in Midland.

"The purpose is to make the community aware of chemicals used and stored in the area," said R.G. Edgerton, emergency management coordinator with the city.

Emergency workers also need to know who is knowledgable about chemicals in Midland in case of major spills or accidents, he said.

"We would like more people with knowledge to give advice to the local responders," Edgerton said.

Because chemical handlers know their material best, it's important for them to be talking to local rescue people, he said.

While only four of the 30 companies contacted showed up, organizers said they were optimistic about cooperation between rescue personnel and the industry.

"You've got to kind of start and build this up," Edgerton said.

Tom Sparks, a sales representative with Ashland Chemical Company, said, "Once we get a program started, I believe we'll get some good participation because everyone is interested in having a program like this."

The Midland meeting was initiated by Ashland, which is the largest distributer of industrial chemicals and solvents in Midland.

The next meeting will be Oct. 29 at the City Council chambers.

Sparks said his company is helping set up a Community Awareness Emergency Response group to better inform the city about local chemical handlers and to help city officials draw up plans in case of a chemical spill.

CARE groups are formed around the nation by the Chemical Manufacturers Association.

Eric Metzger, an inspector with the fire department, said there are about 140 companies in Midland identified as chemical handlers.

"We hope we can work with these people. Any communication with these people is good communication," he said.

Fire fighters need to know the chemicals burning because sometimes dousing chemical fires with water could cause more danger, Edgerton said.

"You don't automatically haul out a hose and put water on a fire when you don't know what it is.

"It's important for fire fighters to know what's on the premises so they don't walk into something they don't know about," he said.

Depending on the chemical burning, sometimes it's better to contain a fire and just let it burn itself out, Edgerton said.

Aside from a pesticide spill, which injured some rescue workers several years ago, Midland has had no major spills or fires with injuries, Metzger said.

Edgerton said, "We've been very fortunate. Anything we've had in this area has been very minor, but the potential is definitely there."

Senate adjourns session in memory of state heroes

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate adjourned the special legislative session "in loving memory" of early Texas heroes after a resolution was changed to recognize the contributions of minorities.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, sponsored the original resolution but it was withdrawn and Corpus Christi Sen. Carlos Truan's name was added as a co-sponsor of the revised version.

A comparison of the two versions shows the insertion of the names of Lorenzo de Zavala, Jose Francisco Ruiz, Juan N. Seguin, Jose Antonio Navarro and Placido Benavides among those of Stephen F. Austin, Jim Bowie, Sam Houston, Davy Crockett and William B. Travis — "daring, bold and romantic."

Smith, Snelson plan to 'square off' in debate

From Staff Reports

It's coming down to the wire — election day in Texas is just 34 days away.

In light of this fact, the two 21st congressional district candidates, Republican Lamar Smith and Democrat Pete Snelson, will square off in a debate Thursday at noon at the Holiday Inn Country Villa convention center.

Sponsored by the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and the Midland Reporter-Telegram, the event, which includes a luncheon, gives the men a chance to publically cement their political ideologies and make clear their positions.

Snelson has been in business in Midland for the past 31 years as the founder and president of an advertising agency.

He was elected to the Texas House of Representatives in 1960 and to the Texas Senate in 1964.

He chose to refire from the Senate to make a race for Texas Land Commisssioner in 1982. He lost in a run-off after leading the ticket in the primary.

Smith is a lawyer and south Texas rancher.

He has served as Bexar County Republican chairman, state representative and county commisssioner. He was Tom Loeffler's alternate delegate at the 1984 Republican National convention and has been actively involved with campaigns for Phil Gramm and Ronald Reagan.

The event is open to the public and tickets are $12.

Crime commission wants program in schools

From Staff Reports

The Midland Crime Prevention Commission has agreed to appear before the Midland School Board to urge adoption of an internal Crime Stoppers program for the city's two high schools.

The 15-member commission, appointed by Mayor Carroll Thomas, voted to make the recommendation at a regular meeting Tuesday night.

Under the Crime Stoppers program, students will be able to call the regular Crime Stoppers number, fill out a report, or go to the designated Crime Stoppers person in the school to pass along information about criminal activities. The focus of the program would be property stolen in the school, said Jackie Hamnilton, president of the CPC.

"It is a very good program — it will be the first in the state of Texas," said commission member Maxine Hannifin. She said the program is patterned after a similar, successful program in Boulder, Colo. In that program so far in 1986, 92 cases were reported, and 70 were solved. Stolen property was valued at $11,970, with $9,841 recovered because of the program.

Commission members voted to go before the school board during its Oct. 14 meeting.

In other action, the commission voted to bestow an annual award on an outstanding figure in the law enforcement field. The award, in the form of a plaque, would be presented to one or more individuals each year, either from a law enforcement agency such as the police department or sheriffs office, or a related agency such as the district attorney's office.

Council of Teacher of Mathematics to meet

From Staff Reports

The newly organized Council of Teacher of Mathematics will have its first meeting, 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the Region 18 Education Service Center, La Force Boulevard, located at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Cathy Peazler, director of mathematics for the Texas Education Agency, will keynote the meeting.

The topic of her address will be "The State of the State in Mathematics Education," "Trends in Mathematics Education Across the Nation," "Teaching Mathematics for Understanding" and "Keeping Options Open: Mathematics is Important."

Clare Gifford, the association's interim coordinator, said the organization was founded to foster cordial relations among those persons interested in mathematics education, provide for an exchange of ideas related to mathematics education, provide an opportunity for the professional development of its members and represent the opinions of the membership on issues related to mathematics education.

"Geographically, we are very isolated from the mainstream of what's happening in mathematics education," she said.

"What we're trying to do is get some things going out here and provide an opportunity for mathematics educators to grow professionally."

Ms. Gifford said membership is open to all supporters of mathematics education from the Region 18 area including Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Andrews and Fort Stockton.

MISD seniors earn academic recognition

From Staff Reports

Ten Midland Independent School District high school seniors have earned commendation from the Merit Scholarship Corporation of Evanston, Ill., in recognition of outstanding academic promise.

The students, five from Lee High School and five from Midland High School placed among the top five percent of the more than one million participants in the 32nd annual Merit Program.

Designated Commended Students in the 1987 National Merit Scholarship Program were Lee High School seniors Gregory Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jackson, 2403 Auburn Place; Lance Stewart, son of Ms. Amy Stewart, 1602 Alcove; Jeanne Thurman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Thurman, 3407 Sinclair, Jason Weeden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Weeden, 4463 Hackberry; and Stan Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Williams, 3507 Seaboard.

Midland High School seniors cited were Melanie Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Bell, 2506 Storey; Susan Harbin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Harbin, 2804 Haynes; Karen Jeffcoat, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Jeffcoat, 2408 Camarie; Bill Rulla, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorin J. Rulla, 2508 Gulf; and Shane Steward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Steward, 2208 Seaboard.

An officer of NMSQ, which conducts the program, stated, "The very high test performance of the young men and women who are honored as Commended Students in the Merit Program is indicative of exceptional scholastic ability. We hope that NMSQ's recognition of these high school students will increase their motivation to make the best use of their talents and to develop the skills that will be needed by future leaders of our nation. Being named a Commended Student in this keen competition is a credit to these young citizens as well as to their schools, which play a key role in their development."

Participants entered the current Merit Program by taking the PSAT/NMSQT in October 1985, when they were juniors.

Payment postponements will not effect retirees

AUSTIN (AP) — The Legislature has voted to postpone payments into two state retirement systems, but bill supporters say the action will not effect payments to retirees who depend on the systems.

Speaker Gib Lewis and Gov. Mark White said Tuesday the action benefits the retirement systems by guaranteeing the deferred payments would be repaid with interest.

Under the bill, signed Tuesday night by White, state payments into the Teacher Retirement System and Employees Retirement System, would be deferred until February.

The House approved the bill Monday by an 82-47 margin, but without 100 votes, the payment deferrals would not begin until January, making the bill almost moot in the battle against the budget crisis.

In a final show of his strength on the floor, Speaker Gib Lewis Tuesday mustered the votes needed to put the bill into immediate effect. After deciding to reconsider the vote, the House backed the bill in a 106-33 vote.

White said he would sign the bill as soon as it reached his desk. Senators sent it to him later Thursday by voting approval to minor amendments added in the House.

The action came shortly before the Legislature wrapped up its special session work.

DEATHS

C. Newton Page

Community program gets boost of $7,435

From Staff Reports

Citywide Community Services Inc., of Midland has been approved as a subcontractor for the Area Agency on Agency, effective today.

The agency approved a grant in the amount of $7,435 to be used for a homemaker's salary.

Citywide Community Services is a non-profit charitable organization which provides homemaker, chore maintenance and advocacy programs to elderly handicapped persons. Its staff and volunteers assist in "deep" cleaning residences, general yard work and home health care services to those who are unable to assist themselves.

To be eligible for assistance, a person must be 60 years of age or either physically or mentally handicapped. No one is refused service, according to Hellen Johnson, the program's administrator.

"We receive referrals from the Texas Department of Human Resources, and provide services not offered by other home health care organizations," Ms. Johnson said. She credited volunteers with enabling the group to serve a broad section of the community.

Citywide Community Services was chartered in April 1986 with support from the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

UT professor to lead meeting of archaeologists

From Staff Reports

Creel is associated with the Texas Archeological Research Laboratory at the University of Texas at Austin. He holds bachelor's and master's degrees from UT at Austin and earned his doctorate at the University of Arizona.

He also will offer suggestions for ways society members can participate in and contribute to ongoing archaeological research in West Texas.

The public is invited to attend.

Doctor's diagnosis refuted as 5 ½-year-old takes first steps

By HARRIET GRAVES

BROWNWOOD (AP) — They came running in from every room to see Freddie walk.

It was something long awaited. The 5½-year-old boy, a student in the Brownwood Independent School District's Early Childhood program, took his first steps last week.

Those three little steps brought tears to teacher Gail Hunter, as she watched him haltingly make his way to her outstretched arms.

"We call him 'Lover Boy,'" Ms. Hunter said, because the child shows his affection by often clasping his arms around her neck.

The rejoicing culminated years of patient encouragement from Freddie's parents, Fred and Jane Netherton, and the teachers at the Early Childhood center.

"When Freddie was born they did not give us much hope — he would not walk or talk," Mrs. Netherton said.

At birth, Freddie weighed three pounds, 12 ounces. He stayed in the hospital for four months. Freddie did not progress as other babies and as he grew older, paid no attention to his surroundings.

When he was 3½, the Nethertons enrolled Freddie at Early Childhood. Teddi Mann, his first teacher, described him then as a child who just lay on his back or stomach, but could not roll over by himself. Most of the time his eyes were closed, she said.

By November 1984, he began to roll over, sit up by himself and frog hop across the floor. He was also responding to voices. Freddie kept progressing and it wasn't long before he could pull up to a standing position.

As he grew in the fine and gross motor skills, so did his visual skills and expression language. He began making more sounds.

Mrs. Hunter says much of the credit for Freddie's progress goes to Billiejo Cooley, her classroom aide who has been working one-on-one with him since the fall of 1985.

But Mrs. Hunter says Freddie's success is a "team effort." Not only teachers but even maintenance and cafeteria workers at the Early Childhood center have taken an interest in Freddie and do their part for the handicapped child, she said.

UTPB to be site of John Ben Shepperd Forum on Public Leadership

Two LHS seniors win national writing achievement awards

From Staff Reports

Two Lee High School seniors have been selected as winners in the 1986 National Council of Teachers of English Achievement Awards in Writing.

Vanessa Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Davis, and Jeanne Thurman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Thurman, are among only 700 other students nationwide recognized for outstanding writing performance.

Both were students of LHS English teacher Marilyn Clement when they entered the contest last year.

All compositions were read by two judges — one high school and one college English teacher.

In selecting the winners, the judges looked for writing that demonstrated effective and imaginative use of the English language to inform and move an audience.

A major goal of the Achievement Awards in Writing is to recognize publicly some of the best student writers in the nation.

The winners will receive certificates and have their names printed in a booklet naming the 1986 Achievement Awards winners. The booklet will be sent to directors of admissions and freshman studies at approximately 3,000 two- and four-year colleges in the United States.

Accompanying each of the booklets is a letter recommending that the winners be considered for admission and for financial aid if needed.

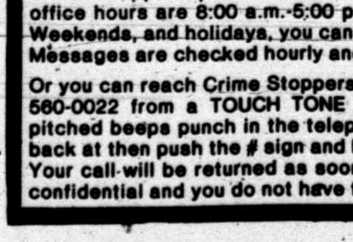
Crimes Stoppers needs tips on Johnny's Barbecue fire

Crime Stoppers is seeking information on the fire that heavily damaged Johnny's Barbecue, 316 N. Big Spring, early on the morning of Sept. 11.

According to investigators, steel bars on a window on the south side of the building were cut to gain entry. Once inside, burglars tried but could not break into a safe in the restaurant's office. Beer and some meat were stolen from a refrigerator, and some meat was found outside the back door. Before leaving, someone set fire to the building.

Police said they have few leads in the case, other than information that two black males purchased a hacksaw and extra blade from Albertsons' on Andrews Hwy. At the scene, investigators found a new hacksaw and extra blade with an attached price tag from Albertsons'.



Crime Stoppers will pay a $1,000 cash reward, this week only, for information that leads to the arrest and indictment of those responsible for the burglary and arson.

Crime Stoppers in Midland can be reached at 694-TIPS, in Odessa at 333-TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identities.

Seven-year-old remains critical after hit by van

From Staff Reports

A seven-year-old Midland boy remains in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital after he was hit by a van Tuesday afternoon.

According to police, Ricky Moseley, 212 A Mitchell St., was riding a bicycle in a private drive near E. Circle Drive about 4 p.m. A late model GMC van, driven by 55-year-old Robert John Hansen, Rt. 10, Box 10148 of Midland, was southbound on E. Circle. Police said the boy was hit after he entered the street from the drive.

A hospital official said early today the boy had undergone surgery and was in the critical care unit at MMH.

Pope visit vital to state's Catholics

AUSTIN (AP) — Next year's visit by Pope John Paul II is an opportunity for Texas Catholics to instill new vitality into the church in the state, the bishop of El Paso says.

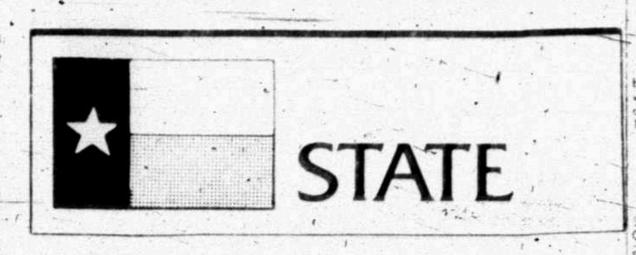
The Most Rev. Raymundo J. Pena said Texas Catholics should rally behind the scheduled papal visit and begin a renewed effort toward evangelizing, or bringing the word of the Catholic faith to others.

"Because his visit will be historic, it is most important that we make it possible for this great event to be the beginning of a new era in Christianity in Texas," Pena said.

Pena's speech was the keynote address Monday for the 20th annual Texas Catholic Conference being held this week. The conference is the statewide organization of the 13 Texas Roman Catholic Dioceses.

Pena said all Catholics should be responsible for the renewed emphasis on evangelization, and he said the process should include all ethnic groups and cultures.

"It is the responsibility of this church — it is our responsibility — to evangelize the Lone Star State. Our challenge is to evangelize the culture, the ethos that is Texas," he said.



The effort, Pena said, should be directed toward non-Catholics and alienated Catholics as well as practicing Catholics. He said Catholic Texans should have the same zeal exhibited by the early missionaries who brought Catholicism to Texas.

Law: Violent offenders not fit for 'automatic release'

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill approved on the final day of the special session makes violent offenders ineligible for a program that triggers automatic release for many inmates.

The House and Senate Tuesday sent the bill to Gov. Mark White, who signed it into law Tuesday night.

Under current state law, inmates must be released under the "mandatory supervision" of the parole board when their actual time served plus "good-time" credit equals their prison term.

Opponents of the law say dangerous criminals are being returned to the street by the program. They cited the case of Jerry "Animal" McFadden, who was out of prison after his third rape conviction when he was charged with murdering one of three Hawkins youths found slain last spring.

McFadden later escaped and led authorities on a three-day manhunt in northeastern Texas before he was captured.

Under the bill approved Tuesday, inmates convicted of crimes such as capital murder, aggravated kidnapping, aggravated robbery or aggravated sexual assault would no longer be eligible for the "mandatory supervision" release program.

House sponsor Bob Melton, D-Gatesville, said the bill "unties the hands of the Board of Pardons and Paroles" by guaranteeing it will review all violent offenders before they are released.

"It makes them do the job they are there for, to say whether someone is rehabilitated enough to be released," Melton said.

The House added an amendment that revises the state's Prison Management Act.

NOTICE OF INTENT TO REQUEST A RELEASE OF FUNDS

Midland County Housing 9-30-86, 10-1-86, 218 W. Illinois, Midland, Texas, 79701 (915) 688-1165

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS

On or about October 8, 1986, the above name Midland County Housing will request the Texas Department of Community Affairs to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended (42 USC Section No. 5301 et. seq.) for the following project:

Midland County Housing
Rental Rehab Project
R85SG480118
Rehab of Rental Property
Midland, Midland County, Texas
$750,000

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within project has been made by the above named Midland County, which documents the environmental review status of the project. The Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying upon request.

Midland County will undertake the project described above with Rental Rehabilitation Program funds from the Texas Department of Community Affairs (TDCA), under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended. Midland County and Jerrie Westmoreland in her official capacity as Executive Director, Midland County Housing, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision making and action, and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, Midland County may use the Texas Rental Rehabilitation Program funds, and Texas will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and related provisions of law cited at 24 CFR Section No. 58.5.

TDCA will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is one of the following bases: (a) That the certification was not in fact executed by the chief executive officer or other officer of Contractor approved by TDCA; or (b) that Contractor's environmental review record for the project indicated omission of a required decision, finding or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (24 CFR Part 58) and may be addressed to:

Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers

MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM
ARE YOU 'WENDY'S KIND OF PEOPLE?'
At Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburger Restaurant we believe in a total commitment to satisfying every customer. We are dedicated to quality--not just talking about it. Our beef is pattied fresh daily at our restaurants. Each sandwich is made to order with the customers choice of condiments. Our sandwiches never sit under heat lamps like the other hamburger restaurants you know. If you share our dedication to quality, you're "Wendy's kind of people", and we want to talk to you.

We are a growing Wendy's operation in the West Texas area committed to hiring only quality individuals who want to be a part of the Wendy's Management team. As a Wendy's Manager, you'll learn that people are your most valuable resource and will be able to lead them to meet our tough standards. You'll relish the opportunity to be closely involved with the daily operation of our restaurants. Experience not required but beneficial. If you're "Wendy's kind of people", and want to recieve the kind of salary and company benefits you deserve, Call David Wikinson at 682-2302.
