Rebels kidnap city man

Family discloses information after eight months

Lewis Manning

■ Lewis Manning reportedly has been moved from hut to hut in undisclosed locations in Colombia, South America.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

When at home, Lewis A. Manning, 53, regularly dines out with his family on Fridays. But the Midland man didn't make the gathering last night and has missed the get-together for more than eight months now.

His absence from the family outings is not by choice.

Kidnapped by Colombian rebels, Manning reportedly has been moved from hut to hut in undisclosed locations in Colombia, South America.

He was taken from a mining camp in the jungle near Quibdo, Choco, Colombia, on Feb. 23 by a group claiming affiliation with The National Liberation Army of Colombia.

The rebel faction has demanded $1 million for Manning's release.

"It's a very emotional strain," said Alan Manning, the 30-year-old son of the kidnapped man. "Our faith in God has been the reason we've been able to deal with the situation."

In addition to Alan, the family includes Manning's wife, Donna, two brothers, Bob and Tom, a sister, Janie Etheredge, all of Midland, and a daughter, LuAnn Wallace, and two grandchildren of Houston.

Since ransom demands were made, the family has been silent about the kidnapping until now.

"We didn't want to hamper any of the nego-

Sentencing

Donald Allen Turner received a 15-year prison sentence Friday after having his 10-year probation — for three counts of indecency with a child — revoked in 142nd District Court. Turner, 51, of Midland had been charged with 10 counts of child molestation in 1989. After a mistrial in 1990 he entered a plea-bargain agreement with the district attorney in which he pleaded guilty to three counts in exchange for a 10-year deferred adjudication sentence./6A

California fires

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. — Fire crews seized a lull in the winds Friday to beat down wildfires as they braced for more of the hot, dry conditions that drove flames through cities and canyons, burning 700 homes and more than 150,000 acres. Four of 13 blazes that raged Tuesday and Wednesday from Ventura County to the U.S.-Mexico border were extinguished, and others were surrounded by fire breaks. But firefighters feared that the return of Santa Ana winds, which blow in from the deserts east of Los Angeles, could whip up new firestorms. Wind gusts to 40 mph were expected.

Gays in military

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court opened the way Friday for the Pentagon to implement its "don't ask, don't tell" policy allowing expulsion of declared homosexuals but preventing questioning of recruits about sex. The justices granted the Clinton administration's emergency request to temporarily limit enforcement of a federal judge's order banning military discrimination against homosexuals nationwide.

Speaker: Lawyers threaten citizens' constitutional rights

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Environmental extremism has put the Constitution of the United States and the American way of life at risk, and should be resisted strongly by citizens, says William Pendley, president and chief legal officer of the Mountain States Legal Foundation.

Speaking at the annual luncheon meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Pendley related a long list of environmental "horror stories" in which he claims constitutional rights of citizens had been violated by overly aggressive government lawyers.

"There is a move to deprivitize land in this country, and ranchers, loggers, miners and oilmen are in-

The cold front moved into the basin in the early morning hours Friday, dropping temperatures from 61 degrees at midnight to the upper 30s by late afternoon, the spokesman said.

Residents in northwest Midland reported a steady fall of snow flurries mixed with rain at about 2 p.m. Friday, but no accumulations resulted. High winds around lunchtime kept businessmen and women bundled up as they crossed the downtown streets with umbrellas in hand.

PBPA honors 'finder of oil' for 52 years of service

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

A world-class finder of oil and gas was honored Friday by an all-American presenter, as Midland Geologist George R. Gibson, received the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's 1993 Top Hand Award from his old friend George E. MacKinnon, Judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington D.C.

The award created by PBPA to honor members of distinction in the petroleum industry was awarded to Gibson for his 52 years of service in the oil industry and for his role as a Mobil geologist in finding a number of major fields in the Basin, including: Pegasus field in Upton County, Fluvana field in Borden County and the Vealmoor, Good Ranch and Spraberry deep.

Present at the presentation was a large contingent of Gibson family and friends, including Norman E. Borlaug, winner of the 1970 Nobel Peace Prize, for his role in developing high-yield grains that increased food in developing countries.

An accomplished athlete, Gibson was a guard on the famous 1927 University of Minnesota football team that went undefeated and tied Notre Dame, during the reign of Knute Rockne, on its own field.

Playing next to him, at center, was George MacKinnon, a walk-on from Grand Junction, Colorado. In presenting the Top Hand Award to Gibson, MacKinnon recalled those early years of football. "Everyone was a walk-on. There were no athletic scholarships and all the players went to class." It creasingly being pushed off the land," Pendley said.

He described the battle going on over environmental extremism as a battle for the Constitution and the sanctity of the individual and private property.

"The Fifth Amendment to the Constitution states that the government cannot take private property without just compensation, and when the government decides to take private property by regulation, they have violated the Constitution."

He noted that a classic case was the state of South Carolina Vs. David Lucas. In the case that went to the Supreme Court, the state of South Carolina told Lucas that even though other homes were nearby, he could not build on his beachfront property because it would obstruct a view. South Carolina eventually lost and had to pay Lucas for the property, but then built houses on it to realize its highest use.

In another case, Pendley related the story of a rancher who had been fined $4,000 for killing an endangered species. The endangered species was a grizzley bear that had been killing penned sheep then turned on the rancher in his own front yard.

"We have to put people back into the environmental equation," he said. "We cannot let snails and owls become more important than people."

Pendley, former Assistant Secretary for Energy and Minerals of the Department of Interior during the Reagan Administration, now travels extensively throughout the U.S., speaking for property rights, environmental accountability, limited government and constitutional rights.

He said the primary task of Rocky Mountain States Legal Foundation was to sue the federal government over such issues, noting that the environmental groups have the insider position in moving their agenda forward.

"Environmental groups are encouraged by the administration to sue, then Attorney General Reno, calls the government lawyers on the case and tells them to roll over or not resist."

He said that government lawyers who step over the line in ethics, when trying environmental cases, get only a bad review. But, when private lawyers go too far, they are fined $25,000 a day.

Corporation completes 2nd discovery well

Staff report

Parallel Petroleum Corp. Friday announced it has completed its second Canyon Reef discovery well, the Corning Loudamy No. 29-1, in the Horseshoe Atoll area of Howard County, through the use of three-dimensional seismic imaging.

After production testing for 48 hours at various rates using various choke sizes, the well flowed at a calculated rate of 658 barrels of oil and 3.01 million cubic feet of natural gas per day on a 16/64-inch choke, officials said.

Based on those test results and production rules established by the Texas Railroad Commission, the company intends to produce the well at approximately 800,000 cubic feet of natural gas per day plus associated oil (estimated at 100 barrels per day). The well is shut-in pending execution of a definitive gas contract presently being negotiated.

The company owns a 60 percent working interest (47.5 net revenue interest) in the Corning-Loudamy before payout and a 70 percent working interest (55.4 percent net revenue interest) thereafter. Parallel owns working interests ranging from 60 percent to 80 percent in approximately 5,000 gross acres in Howard County.

Parallel will spud its third Horseshoe Atoll Canyon Reef 3-D well on the Howard County acreage, the Schuelke No. 28-1, within the next week.

The Corning-Loudamy is approximately three miles from the Noret-Jones No. 1, Parallel's first 3-D seismic Canyon Reef discovery well completed in October 1992.

The Noret-Jones potential for 720 barrels of oil and 1.08 million cubic feet of natural gas per day on a 17/64-inch choke.

The company currently has drilled its first 3-D seismic test of the Fusselman formation in Howard County. The Hamlin No. 16-1 was drilled to a total depth of 10,448 feet, and the company intends to complete the well in the near future. Parallel owns an 80 percent working interest (62 percent net revenue interest) in the well.

In the Texas Panhandle, Parallel is a 25 percent working-interest participant in what is believed to be the first well in the Dalhart Basin utilizing 3-D siesmic.

The Cedar Draw No. 1 in Hartley County has begun drilling toward a targeted total depth of 6,800 feet to test the Granite Wash formation. The well is operated by Corlena Oil Co., an Amarillo-based independent, which headed a group that conducted 3-D seismic testing on approximately 70 square miles in the area.

Oil industry calls on federal, state government for relief

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Government — both state and federal — has been called on to work with the domestic oil industry to improve both the industry's fortunes and the economy in general.

That was the theme of the breakfast Friday that kicked off the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's 31st annual meeting.

It was sounded first by Mary Scott Nabers, one of the three Texas Railroad Commissioners.

Referring to a controversy that ignited Tuesday when Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary was quoted in an interview as saying that the independent oil producer was "a dying breed," Nabers told the gathering that in response, she had asked O'Leary to come to Texas.

She said that she had told O'Leary that "we want a summit with you in Texas. We'll give you ideas on helping the industry and show you the barriers that have been put up that hinder the producers. And you'll meet the most important people in the world, those who actually drill and produce the oil and gas."

But, she added, "I don't think she'll come."

Still, she said, she and the other two Railroad Commissioners — Jim Nugent and Barry Williamson — have united in efforts to bring the Texas oil and gas industry some relief. Because, she said, "you are our future in the 21st century."

One new commission program, the result of legislation passed during the last legislative session and signed into law by Gov. Ann Richards, asks state producers to notify the commission of new field discoveries.

"In return, we'll send you a numbered certificate," Nabers said. "And if we get to number 521, we'll give every oil and gas producer in Texas a $10,000 severance tax credit. And if we reach the magic number of 721, we'll give you a $25,000 tax credit. And if you have an idle, unproducing well and you bring it back into production, you'll get a 10-year exemption."

She urged those listening — and those not in attendance — to let the commissioners know what incentives are needed and wanted and what government action would be most meaningful in helping the industry.

"If you get that information to us, we'll fight hard for you in the next legislative session," she promised.

Just prior to Nabers' comments, Permian Basin oil companies were honored for outstanding efforts last year with the "Best of the Southwest" awards by Southwest Oil and Gas World magazine.

Hart Publications and Southwest Oil and Gas World editor Don Lyle presented awards in "Best Well," "Best New Technology," "Best Environmental Project," "Best Advanced Recovery Project" and "Best Field Improvement Project."

Trend Exploration Co.'s No. 23D Powell "4-A," a 1,751 bopd well that extended the Cobra (Wolfcamp) field in Glasscock County received the Best Well citation.

Amoco's short-radius, horizontal-completion tool brought it the "Best New Technology" citation.

Marathon Oil Co.'s Hobbs office was cited for "Best Environmental Project" for an employee-built upland game habitat and silencing of its pumpjack motors. Marathon also won "Best Advanced Recovery Project" for its work in the Yates Field.

And Chevron U.S.A. won "Best Field Improvement Project" for its $29 million effort to produce an additional 15 million barrels of oil from the Arrowhead field in Lea County, N.M.

Such innovations will be key to the future survival of the domestic producer, said Bill LeMay, director of New Mexico's Oil Conservaton Division.

Currently, the former Midlander and West Texas geologist told the audience, New Mexico's gas production is headed toward a second consecutive record — 1.4 trillion cubic feet this year — and oil production is up. Yet there is some bad news.

"The bad news is, as you know, gas prices are doing OK but oil prices have not kept up. We're projecting a tough time because we don't see any real increases in oil prices," he said. "That's why we need to use every tool, such as 3-D seismic, to find the fields that are still there. We've trimmed the ranks so that those that are left are the muscle of the business, long-time people who know the business."

He said his division has pledged to work with other government agencies, such as the Bureau of Land Management, to eliminate regulation duplication, enforce those regulations that make sense, and work with the oil industry "to get the last drop of oil out of the ground."

Another innovation that should help the industry, he said, is a new program called "Onguard," an electronic data filing program that the division is sharing with the state's land office and tax and revenue office. It goes on-line the first of the year.

As it is put into place, he said, producers will be able to gather their production data, "pick up the phone, dial us and, with the punch of a button, transfer your production data to our database with no manual handling of paperwork."

Of course, getting comfortable with the program will take time and be painful for both producers and the state, he said, but LeMay said he is convinced it will serve as a model for other states.

FRONT: Temperatures drop in Basin

(From 1A)

The combination of freezing rain and winds consistently in the 20-25 mph range kept Midland school children from enjoying their day off from classes. Two brave boys skateboarded down the sidewalks of Big Spring Street around 3 p.m. before scooping up their skateboards and making a run for a nearby convenience store.

According to the NWS spokesman, the cold front came from the north and was caused by an upper air disturbance moving eastward. It should move down to the Gulf of Mexico by Saturday morning, he said.

Another upper level disturbance, this one by way of Mexico, moved northerly into Midland Friday afternoon, the NWS spokesman said. Less than an inch of rain was recorded. He said it will move slowly eastward and should be out of the region by Saturday also.

The spokesman said chances of snow flurries died out with the movement of the systems out of the area. He said the temperatures should rise to between 45 and 50 degrees this afternoon with lows getting down to the upper 20s tonight.

Today's forecast also calls for sunny skies with winds out of the northwest at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be clear.

Sunday's weather should be warmer with a high near 65. After a high of 61 degrees — which was at midnight on Friday — the low reached 34. The record high for that date is 90 set in 1933. The record low is 29 set in 1991.

WEATHER WATCH

STATE

Temperatures ticked down by the minute Friday and flurries sugarcoated the Texas Panhandle as gusty north winds ushered in the season's first deep cold snap.

"It's still yuck out there," said Lila Cooley, who was cooking meatloaf and catfish lunches at the Hartley Truck Stop. She said almost one inch of snow had accumulated in Hartley, 70 miles northwest of Amarillo.

Cotton farmers considered the freeze good news.

But the National Weather Service urged Texans to protect their pets, tender plants and pipes.

During a 30-minute period in Lubbock, the mercury dropped seven notches to 35 degrees as gusty north winds ushered in the season's first deep cold snap.

Elsewhere, winter advisories were posted for the New Mexico mountains and parts of mountainous Colorado. Between 6 and 10 inches of snow fell early Friday in Rye, Beulah and Cuchara in Colorado.

TAKE: Colombian rebel faction kidnaps city man

tiations," Manning said.

But the possibility of inaccurate reports by the news media prompted the family to come forward, he said.

Alan Manning, the family-designated spokesman, said caution in releasing information "keeps us from offending anybody and closing the door down the road from any help."

The older Manning's life was detoured while working at an exploration and mining site for Gold and Resources Company International, owned by his brother Bob and headquartered in Midland.

"He (Lewis Manning) had left Midland just two or three days before that. He had been down there before that for month-and-a-half and two-month intervals," Manning said.

The militants attacked the mining camp, stole all valuables and small equipment, and took the Midland man. The company later shut down the mining operation.

The National Liberation Army, or Ejercito de Liberacion Nacional (ELN), has been profiled as a Marxist-Leninist political organization opposing the Colombian government and claiming to seek agrarian reform, the family has learned. U.S. officials informed the family that the rebel group was formed in July 1964 and is trained and supported by Cuba.

"At this point they do not seem to be guided by a specific ideology and to continue 'the fight' and support themselves, they have resorted to extorting money from wealthy Colombians and foreign businessmen," according to a Manning-family statement.

During his captivity, Lewis Manning has been permitted to write letters to his family, who have received two batches, the last dated Aug. 6.

"He just speaks of personal things and his faith in God," Manning said. "I think he's being treated OK and he's ready to come home."

The family doesn't feel Lewis Manning will be killed by his captors.

They do feel that a rescue mission by Colombian special military forces — the only option offered by U.S. and Colombian officials — would greatly risk his life.

Through non-governmental channels, Bob Manning has corresponded with the rebels via letters but to no avail. In mid-September, the family was falsely led to believe Lewis Manning would be released.

The family refrained from discussing the current state of negotiations.

"It's not going to help telling that right now," Manning said. "Things move real slow."

Colombia recently passed strict laws regarding paying ransom for the release of hostages. The family said this has greatly hampered the ability to get Lewis Manning released.

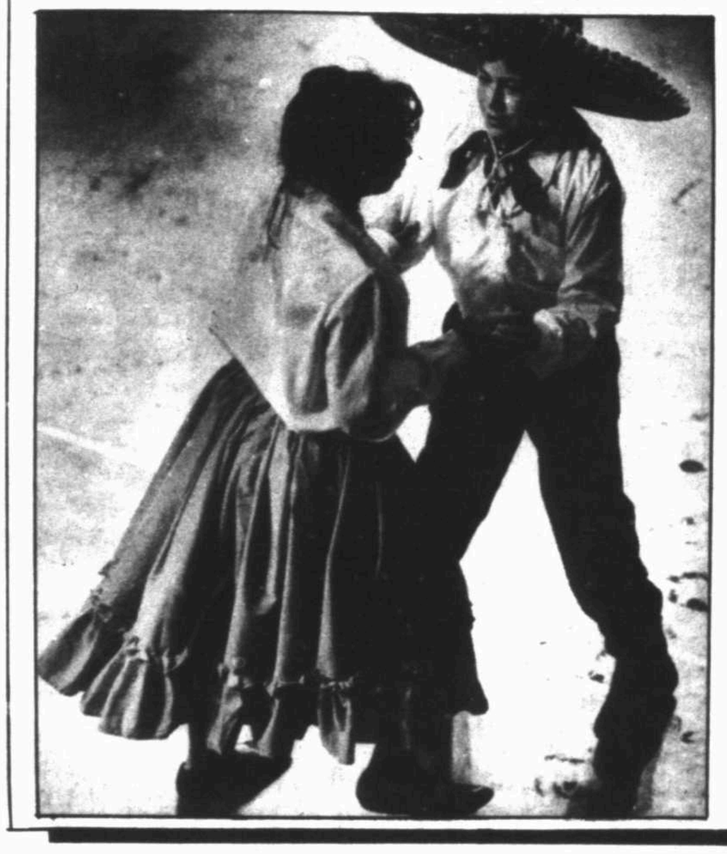

Gary Sheaffer, spokesman for the State Department's bureau of consular affairs in Washington, D.C., said that agency cannot discuss any specific measures being taken, which never include negotiating with the kidnappers.

The family added that efforts toward Manning's release are no closer today than when he was taken.

"This is always something you think's going to happen to someone else and read about," Manning said.

Donations for the Manning family can be sent to the Golf Course Road Church of Christ, Attention: Gail Parham, 3500 Golf Course Road, 79703; or to the Lewis Manning Rescue Fund, Attention: John Grist, Midland American Bank, 401 N. Colorado, 79701.

FIRE: MISD dismisses officer

dent, confirmed Friday that Miller was "terminated" Thursday afternoon. He declined to elaborate on the circumstances of the dismissal citing "those are personnel matters that are confidential."

However, Miller said he was told by school officials that he was being fired because of "unsatisfactory performance of duties . . . but my annual evaluation rating was outstanding and indicated I was performing above expectations."

Miller speculated he was discharged as a result of "political turmoil," calling himself a scapegoat for the school district.

He said he wrote a letter to the accreditation commission during the public hearings regarding the Midland Police Department. Miller said in that letter he indicated the police were not supporting the MISD to their full capabilities.

'I performed my duties in the best interest of the school district.'

—John Miller

"The school district wasn't getting support from the P.D. and other area agencies," Miller said. "For example, last week a student brought a .45 (caliber firearm) to school with three rounds in the clip. I took him to Culver (Youth Home) on Friday night and within an hour they cut him loose."

"At a detention hearing for the same boy on Tuesday the court didn't feel he needed to be detained . . . there are a number of agencies who are not supporting the school district to help make it safe," Miller said.

"I performed my duties in the best interest of the school district," Miller said.

Sgt. David Garcia, public information officer for the Midland Police Department, said he had no comment on Miller's remarks.

Miller said he has filed an appeal in the matter Thursday, which will result in a hearing within five business days following the filing. He said the Texas State Teachers Association, a statewide teachers' organization, would have someone present to represent him at the appeal hearing.

Miller indicated he has an attorney in Dallas advising him on the situation.

SPEAK: Writer talks about surviving as minority

spiration pushed Anaya to excel academically and to later become an award-winning author celebrating the Chicano experience.

"I learned how to survive," Rudulfo said, recounting his experience of attending school in the village of Pasturo, N.M. "When a teacher put the perfect breakfast on the board — eggs, toast and orange juice, I thought of my breakfast of tortillas and frijoles con papitas (beans with chopped potatoes)," he said, garnering laughs from a standing-room-only crowd in Midland College's Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

"When someone said: 'Hey Paco, what did you have for breakfast?' The correct answer was: 'Eggs, toast and orange juice.' I learned to say that. I learned to survive. But that is not what education should be. It's not about surviving. It's about growth, self-esteem and being a self-actualized human being," Anaya said.

Educators from New Mexico, Texas, and Mexico listened to the author during an afternoon session of the Texas Association for Bilingual Education's 21st Annual Conference.

The author spoke to just a portion of the 1,100 participants who had registered for the four-day conference by Friday.

Teachers and administrators packed into the MC auditorium to hear the author who emerged as one of the most widely read Hispanic writers during the 1970s and 1980s. His semi-autobiographical novel "Bless Me Ultima" features a young boy who learns to speak English in school while retaining "his cultural heritage in his heart."

A professor at the University of Mexico in Albuquerue, Anaya has also written short stories, including "The Farolitos (small lanterns) of Christmas." It was recently published in Houghton-Mifflin's line of literature-based multicultural textbooks for Texas public school classrooms.

"There is no longer any doubt about the role of bilingual education in this country or in the global economy," Anaya said. "We need to build bridges between countries."

He said more than changing economies, NAFTA (North American Free-Trade Agreement) "will change forever the hearts of people and children on both sides of the (U.S./Mexico) border."

"Racism is a reality in our world. It's why students so often don't have self-esteem," Anaya said. "You can take the most intellectual child on the face of the earth, but if you consistently tell that child they don't have ability, then that child will become another dropout statistic."

Anaya was introduced by El Pasoan and former Midlander Elvia Hernandez. Ms. Hernandez was the former executive director of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Teresa Marmolejo, one of the convention organizers, noted that "an incredible amount of detail work has been handled by lots and lots of volunteers reflective of the whole Midland-Odessa community."

Ector County Independent School District donated the use of school buses to provide transportation for conference attendees. ESICD and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin also loaned clerks to help with registration.

"Pulling off this four-day event, which involved presenters from coast to coast, and close to 2,000 people (counting all of the classroom and curriculum vendors) has been a real community effort," Ms. Marmolejo said.

"With help from the chambers, businesses, schools and colleges, business and education locked hands to present this," she said. "It's been wonderful."

At Friday night's Teacher of the Year Banquet at the Holiday Inn, the Texas Association for Bilingual Teacher of the Year for 1993 award was presented to Julia H. Guajardo of W.G. Love Accelerated Elementary School in Houston ISD. First runner-up was Raul Orlando Ramon of Corpus Christi ISD and second runner-up was Irene Garcia of Northside ISD.

Dozens of concurrent sessions will be presented at Midland College today, as the final day of the conference continues for a half-day only. The conference will culminate with an awards luncheon and honoring "Commitment to Education" at the Holiday Inn Convention Center. Keynote speaker is Josue Gonzalez of Teacher's College at Columbia University.

Convicted child molestor receives 15-year prison sentence

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Donald Allen Turner received a 15-year prison sentence Friday after having his 10-year probation — for three counts of indecency with a child — revoked in 142nd District Court.

Turner, 51, of Midland had been charged with 10 counts of child molestation in 1989. After a mistrial in 1990 he entered a plea-bargain agreement with the district attorney in which he pleaded guilty to three counts in exchange for a 10-year deferred adjudication sentence.

A condition of that probation included that he commit no other crimes. Earlier this month 142nd District Court Judge George Gilles found recent molestation allegations against Turner true and Friday revoked Turner's probation.

Turner is alleged to have fondled two friends of his 8-year-old daughter.

Turner could have been sentenced to two to 20 years in prison for each of the three counts or be allowed to remain on probation. Defense attorney Paul Williams asked for Turner's probation to be continued with the requirement that Turner be involved in the sexual offender program. Midland County Assistant District Attorney Robin Sams contended that Turner should get the maximum sentence allowed.

Gilles sentenced Turner to 15 years for each count, which will run concurrently, or at the same time.

Turner admitted in court he was guilty of the charges and he "needs help." However, Turner contends he did not fondle the girls for sexual gratification.

Turner said he admitted his guilt to his wife of 16 years and his 14-year-old daughter and the 8-year-old.

Williams asked Turner what he thought should happen to him.

"I want desperately to be a good citizen . . . I have a deep sense of loyalty to my country, my family and my community," Turner replied. "I want to stop whatever it is causing this . . . I would like to be cured of this."

Turner indicated although he received three years of rehabilitative counseling as a result of his original conviction in 1990 he never had any counseling for sexual deviancy.

During cross examination by Ms. Sams, Turner was asked if he denied being a pedophile.

"It is a hard realization to come to," Turner said. "I probably am. But, it was a realization, when you think of a pedophile ... you think of someone thinking of erotic behavior with a little girl ... that is not what I am."

Turner also characterized pedophilia as similar to alcoholism or drug addiction.

Both of Turner's daughters and his wife testified in his behalf. The 14-year-old daughter sobbed as she told the judge that sending her father to prison "would really hurt. It would hurt us all."

Turner's wife, Susan Turner, said "it would kill me" if her husband was incarcerated. She said it would be "absolutely devastating" to the family.

Williams asked her if Turner had been a good husband and she replied "I couldn't have asked for anyone better."

During closing arguments, Williams indicated the "system" failed Turner by not providing him with any counseling or programs to treat sexual offenders. He said he felt the sexual offenders' probation program would be the best place for Turner to get help while remaining with his family.

"This man deserves a chance to have that treatment," Williams said. "And consider this loving family and not break up that family."

Ms. Sams responded to Williams' statements as she stood in front of Turner and pointed at him. "Has the court failed him? No. Donald Turner has failed himself."

"He had his shot at rehabilitation," Ms. Sams said. She added that the same sex offenders' program available in probation is also offered in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice institutions.

The judge took a 15-minute recess to determine his judgment before returning the sentence. He allowed Turner to remain free on his bond until Friday. He is to report to the Midland County Sheriff's Department at 4 p.m. to begin serving his sentence.

Following the hearing, Ms. Sams said she was pleased with the judge's decision. She said the two cases which were alleged as the reasons to revoke the probation may be prosecuted as separate cases, but the final decision has not yet been made.

The prosecutor said there is no statute, prior to a new one enacted on Oct. 1, that would set a minimum of time required to be served before Turner will be eligible for parole. She said "there is no way to know."

Natural gas industry gets prepared to meet reasonable winter demands

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

As the country prepares for cold weather, the natural gas industry stands ready to meet any reasonable demand this winter, says Nicholas Bush, president of the Natural Gas Suppliers Association.

Bush visited Midland Friday to discuss natural gas issues and trends during the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's annual meeting.

He told those attending his talk that the industry is capable of supplying, from production and storage, 2.6 trillion cubic feet of natural gas during any month this winter, well above record demand of 2.4 Tcf seen in 1979.

"There is a commitment in the industry, from the wellhead to the burner tip, to make this winter work, so natural gas can be known as a reliable commodity," he said.

And if there are shortages during the winter due to extraordinary events, he said producers should not be apologetic.

"We should worry if we can't supply a reasonable winter," he said, adding that "one winter does not an industry make."

He said studies have determined the U.S. has natural gas reserves in the area of 1,300 Tcf to 2,200 Tcf, at least a 65-year supply.

Studies have also found that demand has risen steadily since 1986, approximately 3.5 percent annually in all sectors — residential, commercial, industrial and power generation — despite a weak economy. In 1995, demand is expected to rise to 22 Tcf and to 25 Tcf by the year 2000.

Another bright spot for the industry is the Clean Air Act, a push toward alternative fuels for transportation and President Clinton's recently announced initiative to ease global warming, both of which would benefit natural gas because it is a clean-burning fuel.

Another area of promise is electric power generation, particularly in the Northeast. Bush told the group that even if they didn't want to attack that market, "in the Northeast alone, if the Environmental Protection Agency will level the playing field, it will impact all markets by as much as 75 cents per Mcf."

Still, he said, to meet these opportunities, the industry must produce adequate reserves to meet demand.

"The key question is, what does it take to move the resource to reserves?" he asked.

The first key, he said, is adequate pricing. Pricing, he said, must be competitive pricing. And pricing, he added, is currently being impacted by technology, which lets producers reduce their risk of finding oil and gas. More accurate technology is bringing more reserves to the marketplace and is pressuring prices.

As the natural gas industry looks to the future, it can expect to be changed by, first of all, Order 636 from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which is revamping how pipelines do business.

This is good, Bush said, because "it must become easier to buy natural gas, especially the larger industrial customer. This industry has been too complicated and not consumer friendly. It must work hard at making it easier to buy natural gas and technology will play a part in that."

This technology, in the form of electronic bulletin boards, will revolutionize purchasing by allowing gas purchasing from a PC.

"I predict, in the near future, someone can sit down at his PC and buy and sell gas and monitor its delivery all in one step."

In addition, the industry is developing marketing centers where they are needed, intrastate hubs, storage hubs and local distribution company hubs.

At the same time, Bush predicted there will be several hot issues facing the industry in the near future as it reacts to the impact of demand and technology.

Those issues include capacity release, continued developing of the gas futures market and gathering.

Reports: Israel to present plans for Gaza withdrawal

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel will present plans next week for a gradual pullout from the occupied Gaza Strip and the release of thousands of Palestinian prisoners, newspaper and army radio reports said Friday.

In other developments, an Israeli was reported stabbed and kidnapped by masked Palestinians on the occupied West Bank, and a Cabinet minister said some Jewish settlements might be dismantled.

The newspaper Haaretz, quoting Palestinian and Israeli negotiators, said Israel's plan for a phased military withdrawal from Gaza would be introduced Monday when talks on giving Palestinians autonomy resume in Egypt.

The first stage would be a pullout from refugee camps, where Palestinian police would take over, the paper said. No details on other stages were given.

By the terms of the accord between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the withdrawal is to begin Dec. 13 as part of an autonomy plan that would start in Gaza and the town of Jericho on the West Bank.

Army radio said Israel would also present a timetable for freeing many of the 9,500 Palestinians that Israel says are in jail for fighting the occupation. The releases would exclude those convicted of killing or wounding Israelis.

A spokesman for Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin declined comment on the Haaretz and army radio reports.

Talks in the Egytian resort of Taba have so far been stuck on prisoner releases. Palestinians have been disappointed that only about 600 were freed this week. They would like to see at least 8,000 out of jail.

Israel has slowed the releases partly in response to continued attacks on Israelis by those opposing the peace accord, and because the move is unpopular among Israelis.

On the West Bank on Friday, four masked Palestinians reportedly stabbed and abducted a Jewish seminary student from the Beit-El settlement near Ramallah. An Arab man was also reported forced into the escape car.

Angry Jewish settlers blocked two major roads and stoned Palestinian cars in retaliation. They also rampaged through the nearby Arab refugee camp of Jalazoun, stoning cars and homes, and burning a tractor and a car.

It was the second attack on Israelis this week in the territories. No one has claimed responsibility, but Palestinian groups opposed to the peace accord have threatened to escalate violence against Israelis to try to wreck the peace process.

A Cabinet minister was quoted Friday as saying that some Jewish settlements in the occupied territories would have to be dismantled for peace.

Police, workers suffer injuries in airport melee

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — More than a dozen airline employees were arrested and several policemen were injured in an hour-long melee Friday between riot police and protesting workers at Lisbon's airport.

Thousands of TAP-Air Portugal workers stormed out of a union meeting and marched to the departure terminal to protest the ailing state airline's plan to freeze salaries and cut at least 2,500 jobs.

No flights were canceled and only one flight was delayed, said TAP spokesman Alvaro Fernandes.

The workers and riot police clashed when the officers formed a line to prevent the protesters from entering the terminal.

At least six policemen suffered cuts on their hands and faces when workers grabbed lumber from a nearby construction site and charged the police line, then fell back and threw bricks and rubble.

One worker suffered head injuries and a broken leg and at least seven others were injured when police beat workers who rushed into the departure terminal, TAP employee Adalino Ramos said.

The workers rushed from the meeting after union leaders informed them that despite a government promise to help pay off the airline's debts, the company still intended to freeze salaries and cut the work force to 7,500 workers.

Previous demonstrations against the plan have been relatively peaceful. On Thursday, some 2,000 workers marched on the tarmac for an hour.

TAP predicts losses of up to $212 million this year, driving the company's total debt to $719 million. The government has pledged $578 million to pay off TAP's debts but has not said if it will provide the firm with operating funds.

Military leader asserts right to kill, revive plan for Aristide's return

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Giving up the effort to get ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide back home by Saturday, the United Nations fought to preserve a plan for his eventual return.

The ruling army's chief claimed the right to change or even void the pact.

The U.N. special envoy to Haiti, Dante Caputo, said Friday the plan "remains fully in force as the only valid framework for the solution of the crisis in Haiti." He called for an emergency meeting to try to salvage it.

The plan technically expires on today, its deadline for Aristide's return. It was thwarted by Aristide's right-wing opponents, including soldiers who sent the popular leader into exile in a bloody September 1991 coup.

Caputo said representatives of Aristide, the military and other Haitian leaders would be invited to meet in Haiti, possibly next week, to discuss Aristide's return, an amnesty and separating the army and police.

President Clinton criticized Haiti's military for not stepping down, but welcomed the meeting proposed by Caputo.

"I have called President Aristide and Prime Minister (Robert) Malval today to reaffirm America's commitment to finding a negotiated settlement to the crisis," Clinton said in a written statement Friday.

In Haiti, a right-wing political movement flexed its muscles by shutting down the capital and parading through otherwise empty streets, some members displaying automatic weapons. There were more troops than usual on patrol.

Several bus drivers who defied the strike were stopped by civilian gunmen and forced to discharge their passengers, private Radio Metropole reported.

Under the U.N. plan, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras and other top officers were to step down before Aristide's scheduled return on Saturday. But the military has refused to comply, and Aristide has said he will not return until the military leadership surrenders power.

"The military may have won the battle this time, but they didn't win the war. In many ways this is a conflict for the soul of this country," U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager told reporters.

In a four-hour interview and call-in program on Radio Liberte, Cedras claimed the U.N. plan was invalid after Saturday unless both he and Aristide — who co-signed it — decide otherwise.

"The two who signed it must decide" whether the agreement will be extended, Cedras said on the show.

Caputo, flanked by the ambassadors of Venezuela, the United States, Canada and France, cautioned Haiti's military government not to try to appoint an interim president. The diplomats were deciding whether to recommend stronger sanctions.

U.N. extends Somalia mission for two weeks

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — The U.N. mission in Somalia was extended on Thursday for two weeks while the Security Council decides whether to change its mandate by placing less emphasis on searching for Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, the Somali faction leader, and more emphasis on promoting political reconciliation among the warring clan-based factions.

In the resolution, the council reaffirmed its commitment to "undertake an in-depth consideration of its humanitarian, political and security activities" in Somalia, which will be based on a report by Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali to be submitted before Nov. 18. He is expected to lay out the problems of enforcing a mandate with the dwindling number of U.N. peacekeeping troops in Somalia.

Earlier this month, the United States set a March 31 deadline for withdrawing American soldiers from Somalia after 18 American soldiers were killed in a battle with Aidid's forces. Subsequently, other countries like France and Belgium have said they would withdraw their troops by the end of this year.

U.N. sources said that after March 31 the peacekeeping force would drop from 28,000 to about 11,000.

Diplomats said they expected that in 1994 the council would reduce the mandate to a lightly armed peacekeeping force.

U.N.: Yugoslavia terror campaign scars children

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — A two-year campaign of terror in the former Yugoslavia has brought deep psychological scars among children there, according to an adviser to the United Nations.

Rune Stuvland, who heads a psychological relief effort for the United Nations Children's Fund in the former Yugoslav republics, said children often are deliberate targets in the campaign of terror and ethnic cleansing.

"It's easy to be overwhelmed by such tremendous levels of suffering," Stuvland told the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry at its annual meeting here on Thursday.

In Sarajevo, which has been under constant shelling for 17 months, nearly all children in one survey conducted by the relief effort said they had narrowly escaped death from shelling and sniper fire.

More than 81 percent said they believed they would be killed at one time or another. More than half saw someone who had been killed and nearly a quarter witnessed the killing of someone they knew. Nearly one in five reported witnessing a massacre.

Stuvland showed a chilling videotaped interview with a young boy paralyzed by shelling, who described the event: "I went to play with a ball, then I saw something red. Then I thought I didn't have my legs anymore."

"The shelling has increased in the last few weeks, and it is an absolutely absurd place," Stuvland said. "Children have to be told how to run, how to seek shelter."

In Croatia, where an estimated 500,000 homeless people and refugees exist, Stuvland's program is training school psychologists and art teachers to provide psychological assistance to children.

In a study of 5,825 children in 20 schools that began a year ago, nearly a third of the refugees and more than a quarter of the displaced children had the highest level of psychological distress.

Scandal over German blood supply widens

BERLIN (AP) — The death toll in Germany's scandal over AIDS-tainted blood won't be known for years. But a sure casualty is the public's trust in the safety of blood supplies.

In just two days:

■ A plasma firm was accused of trying to save money by breaking a law that requires blood donations be tested individually for HIV, the AIDS virus.

■ Alerts went out Thursday to 53 German hospitals and one in Austria to impound products from the company, UB Plasma of Koblenz. At one Berlin hospital, patients got 147 units of possibly contaminated plasma from the firm in the past year, and the search was only beginning Friday.

■ A Munich firm is said to have relabeled and sold UB Plasma's blood products, telling doctors it had been tested and was safe.

■ Officials said tainted blood products were exported to Greece and Saudi Arabia from another company based near Frankfurt.

■ Der Spiegel news magazine reported heroin addicts were donating blood as recently as last week and being paid $21, despite a ban on donations from intravenous-drug users, who are considered a high-risk group for AIDS.

Authorities started probing UB Plasma after three patients who received the company's products last year tested HIV-positive.

That made the scandal a current problem — different from early October, when the government accused health officials of covering up 373 cases of HIV infection stemming from tainted blood in the early 1980s, before reliable HIV tests were developed.

Now the accusation is of deliberately violating the law over the past two years — when the science of avoiding contaminated blood was well advanced.

In Berlin, the city Health Department said Friday that UB Plasma had supplied 159 units of plasma, of which 147 were used in one hospital.

"The number of patients is clearly under 100," said Detlef Orwart, deputy head of the department. But he said it would be several days before other hospitals had searched their records and reported back.

It was suspected that four companies had resold UB Plasma products, Orwart told The Associated Press.

UB Plasma's manager and co-owner, Ulrich Kleist, and his deputy, Bernhard Bentzien, were arrested Thursday. A judge ordered them held Friday on accusations of fraud and violation of pharmaceutical law.

Koblenz prosecutor Norbert Weise said Bentzien confirmed the company had illegally mixed blood donations together before it was tested. The method, called pooling, is cheaper but can lead to inaccurate results.

In Bavaria, the chief physician at the city clinic in Passau, Dr. Hans Nusser, said UB Plasma's products had been relabeled and resold by the Munich company AB-O Plasma.

Nusser said AB-O Plasma "assured us that the product came from donors known to them and that it had been tested" for HIV.

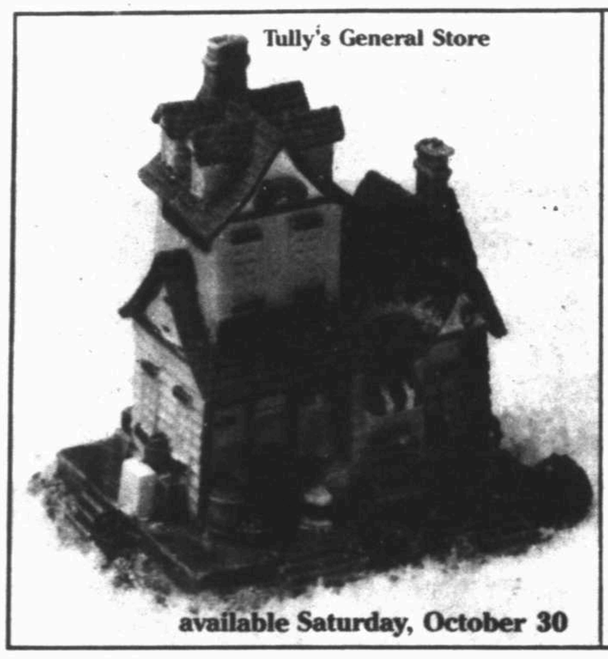

The clinic said the products had been used in the last three months on eight emergency patients, five of whom died from non-AIDS-related causes. The other three were notified to come back for HIV tests.

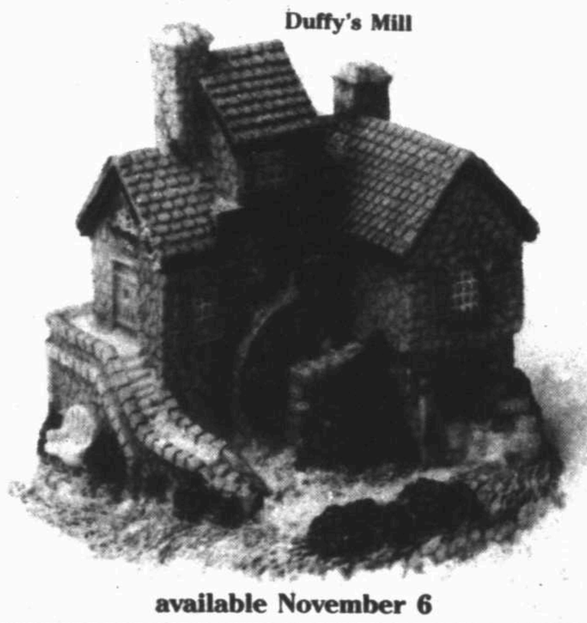

Dr. Walter E. Hitzler, head of the national Blood Transfusion Center, said on national ZDF television Friday his center does not pay for donations. He said banning the practice would keep drug addicts from selling their blood.

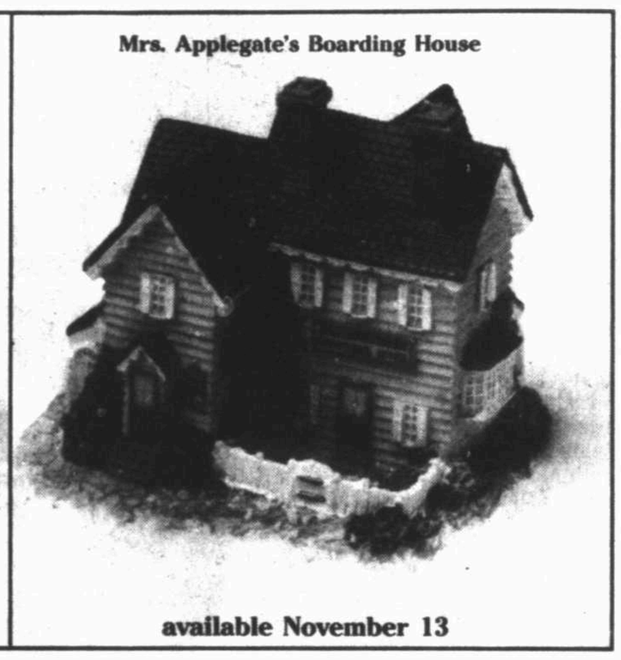

"The commerce has to be taken out of the blood-donation business, then we'd have secure blood supplies," he said.

Parliament voted Friday to set up a special committee to determine how to help victims of tainted blood and to debate measures to assure safe supplies.

AWARD: PBPA honors 'finder of oil'

was a system, he said, that produced some of the nation's top leaders and professonals.

MacKinnon, who studied geology, said he might not have had the energy credentials necessary to make an award to a distinguished petroleum geologist if it had not been for the fact that he helped push through the Alaskan Pipeline.

He said that liberal democratic judges on the Appeals Court, took a cue from environmental extremists, and were prepared to sabotage the Alaskan Pipeline by delaying the decision for two years, the next time the court met.

"I told them there might not be a next time," MacKinnon said. Outraged at the position of his fellow judges, MacKinnon took an unprecedented step. He wrote his own opinion, and calling their position indefensible asked Congress to pass a law that would override the decison of the democratic judges.

"Congress responded quickly to pass a law, that would not only allow the pipeline to be built, but also acted to remove the Federal Appeals Court from further jurisdiction on the pipeline. It was the greatest public rebuke of any court."

MacKinnon said he was glad that history had proven his actions and opinion right. "I think I performed a very substantial service to the national oil industry and the nation."

The serious event of receiving a major award was ended on a lighter note as the audience was entertained by Dr. Bill Thorn, one of America's most popular banquet speakers.

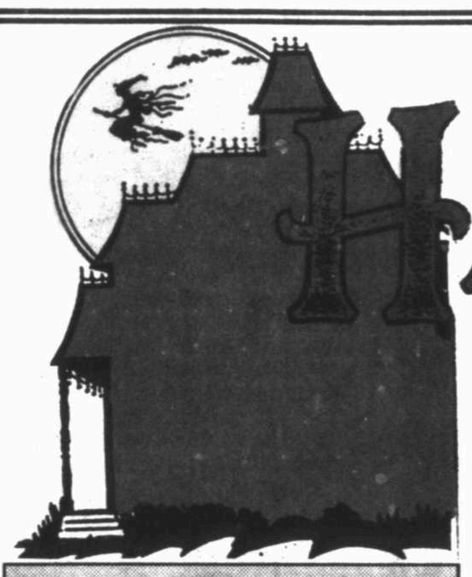

A graduate of Hardin-Simmons University and Southwestern Seminary, Thorn kept the audience in stiches, as he delivered joke after joke on the process of aging.

Military judge reduces sentence of Marine convicted of espionage

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — A former Marine Corps embassy guard sentenced to 25 years in prison for spying for the Soviet Union had his sentence reduced Friday to 20 years.

The action will make Clayton J. Lonetree eligible for parole consideration immediately because he has already served a third of the 20 years, said Maj. Ron L. Rodgers, the government prosecutor.

"That and 50 cents will buy you a cup of coffee," responded Lee Calligaro, Lonetree's lawyer.

Calligaro had said an appropriate sentence would be something close to the nearly seven years Lonetree already has served since his arrest in December 1986.

Earlier Friday, Lonetree, 31, testified that his greatest sense of loss was never being allowed to wear the Marine Corps uniform again. He was the first Marine ever convicted of spying against the United States.

"There is no one in the world who abhorred my conduct more than myself," he said at his hearing before Lt. Col. D.A. Anderson, the military judge who reduced his sentence.

Lonetree was convicted in August 1987 of espionage and other charges related to his duties as a guard at the U.S. embassies in Moscow and Vienna.

The U.S. Court of Military Appeals upheld Lonetree's conviction last year, but set aside his sentence and ordered a new hearing.

Calligaro introduced documents Friday indicating that Lonetree's spying caused little harm. Several officials at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where Lonetree is serving his sentence, testified that he is a model prisoner with excellent work habits.

Lonetree, testifying in the same Quantico Marine Base courtroom where he was convicted, told of a childhood during which he was bounched back and forth between his parents.

Calligaro asked Lonetree if his parents, both of whom were present for the hearing, gave him love. "Very little," Lonetree said.

But when he joined the Marines and went to the U.S. embassy in Moscow, he met a Soviet translator, Violetta Sanni, and fell in love.

"I became pretty much obsessed with her," Lonetree said. "I thought of her all the time."

Evidence at Lonetree's court-martial indicated Ms. Sanni introduced him to a KGB agent known as "Uncle Sasha." Lonetree gave the agent blueprints of certain areas of the Moscow embassy and the identities of U.S. intelligence agents in Vienna. The case against Lonetree was built largely on his confession.

SSC project director announces resignation

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Roy Schwitters announced his resignation as project director for the Superconducting Super Collider on Friday as President Clinton signed legislation terminating the $11 billion atom smasher.

Schwitters, 49, was considered one of the nation's most promising young physicists when he came to Texas in 1989 to oversee construction of the particle accelerator. In addition to ramrodding one of the largest and most complex construction projects in history, the former Harvard professor served as the collider's chief spokesman and top lobbyist.

Shuttling between Texas and Washington, Schwitters earned a reputation as a relentless advocate who never tired of explaining the project to lawmakers with little expertise in high-energy physics.

But the prospect of dismantling his dream held little appeal.

"I'm a scientist. I came here to build the SSC, and that's not going to happen," he said in explaining his decision to step down.

Schwitters tendered his resignation in a letter to John Marburger, the chairman of Universities Research Association, a consortium of universities that was building the collider under contract to the Energy Department. Schwitters said he would remain in the director's job until a replacement is named.

After he steps down, Schwitters plans to work as a consultant to Universities Research Association in seeking alternative uses for the unfinished project. The 54-mile underground accelerator, just south of Dallas-Fort Worth, was about 20 percent complete when Congress voted to shut it down last week.

Clinton made the project's demise official Friday by signing a $22 billion spending bill that included a collider-killing amendment. Critics successfully argued that the atom smasher, which was designed to provide clues about the building blocks of matter, was not worth the cost.

"I think a lot can be salvaged," Schwitters said. "We are the world-class leader in superconducting work."

Although widely respected for his scientific credentials, Schwitters came under fire in Congress from lawmakers who questioned his ability to oversee a large-scale construction project.

Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary, who ordered an extensive review of the project's management in July, announced plans in August to strip Universities Research Association of its responsibility for project construction. But O'Leary also indicated that Schwitters would remain in charge of the collider's scientific aspects.

"He walked into a situation where you had to be almost superhuman to just survive, must less succeed," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, who praised Schwitters' performance. "He basically dedicated his life to building and operating the super collider. It's got to be a real disappointment to him."

Schwitters, who expects to remain with the collider for as long as a year, said he is uncertain about his long-term plans. His options include a possible professorship at the University of Texas in Austin and a sabbatical at a particle accelerator in Switzerland.

In the meantime, Schwitters said he is looking forward to spending more time with his family.

"We have a lot of catching up to do," he said.

Spokesman defends senator's attempt to help potential witness

AUSTIN (AP) — A spokesman for U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison on Friday defended her attempt to help a potential witness in her official misconduct case keep an $88,000 per year state job.

Wayne Blevins, executive director of the Teacher Retirement System of Texas, said Mrs. Hutchison called him and two system board members concerning Michael Barron of Austin.

Barron, Mrs. Hutchison's former deputy state treasurer, was charged with three counts of destroying government records and evidence and official misconduct.

A TRS executive, Barron was called back to work after seven days on leave when Mrs. Hutchison telephoned his bosses at the Texas Teacher Retirement System and asked that they reinstate him.

"She spoke very highly of Mike," said Blevins. He said Mrs. Hutchison's comments affected his decision to reinstate Barron, but "it wasn't pivotal."

Mrs. Hutchison's spokesman, David Beckwith, said there was nothing wrong with her trying to help Barron.

"She was one of a number of people that vouched for him. She's not about to walk away from people simply because (Travis County District Attorney) Ronnie Earle has included those people in his terrorism."

A grand jury last month indicted Mrs. Hutchison, 50, on charges that she used her previous office as state treasurer for personal and political purposes, then destroyed records as part of a coverup.

Those indictments were dismissed earlier this week when her attorneys discovered there was an ineligible grand juror. A new grand jury is investigating the allegations.

Another board member, A.W. "Dub" Riter of Tyler, said he also was contacted by Mrs. Hutchison.

Riter said Mrs. Hutchison called him when the board initially was considering Barron for the post, and again when the allegations about wrongdoing at the Treasury Department began surfacing.

He could not recall whether Mrs. Hutchison contacted him before or after Barron had been indicted. But he said he didn't consider the call inappropriate because she had talked to him about Barron's work in the past.

"She just said she thought he was outstanding and was totally deserving of our support," Riter said. "We think he's done an outstanding job for us."

Marshal resigns, blames rudeness on stress of son's pending execution

FORT WORTH (AP) — A deputy marshal admits he was rude, but says he was under tremendous stress because of his son's impending execution.

Deputy City Marshal Frank McFarland resigned under pressure Thursday, two days after a loud encounter with residents outside a City Council meeting. He said he was told he'd be fired if he didn't resign.

"I'm not mad at my boss," McFarland said. "I know he didn't have a choice. The decision to put me out was from the highest level of city government."

McFarland said he was under "tremendous stress" Tuesday because his son, death row inmate Frank Basil McFarland, was scheduled to be executed that night.

"My wife and I left (for Huntsville) that night to go witness," he said.

An appeals court issued a stay for the younger McFarland just five minutes before his scheduled lethal injection Wednesday morning. He was sentenced to die for the February 1988 killing of Terri Lynn Hokanson, who was raped, stabbed 43 times and dumped outside a Hurst Church.

The elder McFarland, a six-year veteran of the marshall's office, was one of two security officers on duty for Tuesday's meeting, where a group of residents from the Stop Six neighborhood in east Fort Worth came to press an earlier request for a civilian review of a September police shooting.

McFarland said one of the residents cursed him as he left, so he followed him outside.

"I wanted to get his name. He wouldn't tell me his name. I told him I guess I would see him in Stop Six. That's it."

After that, the residents came back to the council chambers cursing and yelling at McFarland, accusing him of threatening the man.

"It was an error in judgment," McFarland said.

City Marshal Norman Donoho said the incident is being investigated. He said McFarland cited "a better job opportunity" as the reason for leaving.

Analysts: NAFTA could dilute Mexico

By Michelle M. Schoenung
N.Y. Times News Service

MEXICO CITY — Wearing a red-white-and-blue T-shirt emblazoned with the words "give me liberty or give me death," the Indian man held tightly to his seat as the crowded city bus rounded a corner.

Symbols of America are everywhere on the streets of Mexico City. American music blares from nightclubs, McDonald's golden arches are nestled among the most historic buildings, and Spanish-speaking Mexicans salute each other on the street with "hi" and "bye."

Until now, Mexico has been able to strike a balance between American pop culture and its historical tapestry of Indians, mariachis and tortillas.

But some people say that if the North American Free Trade Agreement wins ratification in the U.S. Congress, the Mexican lifestyle could change drastically.

"The hamburger could replace the taco," said Roberto Bermudez, sociology professor at the Autonomous University of Mexico. "We could be looking at the loss of our cultural environment."

A flood of modern conveniences such as microwave ovens could help breed a more fast-paced, materialistic society like that in the United States, he said.

"I see no reason why the infiltration of American culture would decrease and every reason why it would increase," said Mary Kelly, director of the Texas Center for Policy Studies.

Though city dwellers may notice more fast-food restaurants and chain discount stores, those most affected culturally may be Mexicans who live in rural areas.

"The biggest effect is going to be on the peasant," said Angus Wright, an environmental studies professor at California State University in Sacramento.

He said Mexico's farmers, most of whom subsist on small plots, can't compete technologically with farmers in the United States.

"Someone with five hectares (12.5 acres) of land in Mexico is not going to be able to run out and buy a tractor," he said. "As a result, we are going to see a lot of displaced rural people."

At least 5 million people are expected to move to urban areas such as Mexico City, a city already bursting at the seams with poor people who block traffic and sidewalks as they peddle goods and beg.

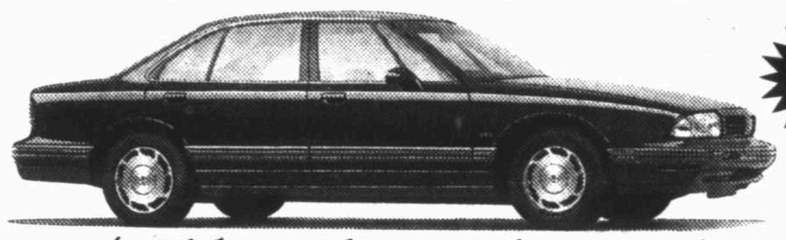

"This will be a grave social explosion," Bermudez said. "With access to things they never had, people will eventually stop using the old ways."

This influx of former farmers will also increase overcrowding and racial tensions, said Wright.

"You can look at this in a very romantic, misty-eyed way," Wright said. "The influence of the rural Indian culture is what makes Mexico so different, and this is going to deplete at a rapid rate."

Couples share open-road adventure

By Bill Whitaker
Associated Press Writer

ABILENE — If the Abilene Roadriders had lived as cowboys a century ago, they would've had no problem choosing between a horse and a lady.

Simply put, each would've ridden with both.

Today, the men of the Abilene Roadriders are pretty much the same, except now they combine a love for motorcycling in the great expanses with an all-too-rare passion for sticking close to their spouses.

And just to prove the point, 11 of them joined their wives one sunny autumn afternoon this month in renewing their wedding vows.

"We just got to talking about how we'd had good marriages and good relationships," 47-year-old Jennifer Pucilowski explained. "We're a group that really does well together, as individual couples and as a club. I mean, the whole Roadriders is family.

"And, you know, there're so many people today who aren't doing well."

So, during the playing of "Wind Beneath My Wings," the men lined up next to their bikes, the women faced off with them, then the couples renewed their vows. Dr. Tom Milholland, 49, chairman of Abilene Christian University's marriage and family therapy department and a veteran Roadrider, did the officiating, taking care to include his own wife, Sandra, in the ceremony.

New wedding bands were also involved, though, Jennifer quipped, they were expandable "to go with the fingers and the waistlines."

The ceremony even included Betty Wheatley, who's unique to the group in that she absolutely refuses to ride on a motorcycle with husband Weldon, 53, or anyone else. She once rode with Weldon to Ruidoso, N.M., she said, and "I held my breath the entire way."

After the vows, someone asked why Betty didn't get into the proper spirit of all this motorcycle-riding.

"I sing. He rides a motorcycle," she said. "He doesn't sing so why should I ride a motorcycle and be miserable? But I do enjoy the fellowship."

For the record, these bikers aren't the shaggy, rowdy types that come to some minds when bikers are mentioned. As a group, they're clean-cut, all-American types. In fact, their number includes no less than Abilene Police Chief Dwain Pyburn and his wife, Bobbie.

To quote one member, "There's probably not a tattoo in the group."

And if the men are going to get away from it all — whatever "it all" happens to be — they're likely to take their wives along for the ride.

"We enjoy motorcycling for what it does socially, meeting other people," Joel Whittemore, 35, said of himself and his wife, Maria. "That, and the road trips. But the biggest thing is we don't stay cooped up in the house just staring at each other."

With Joel and Maria, married 11 years, each has a cycle, but most women in the club ride in back, such as 45-year-old Jan Gilliam. She took up riding with husband Merv, 45, because their kids are gone, "and, well, sometimes that's when couples drift apart."

Some couples even have in-helmet intercom systems so the roar of the motorcycle doesn't drown out conversation during long treks into the area.

Not that wives' talking doesn't sometimes prompt the men to want a bit of solitude. For instance, Liz Aguilar, 40, strongly suspects her husband, Joe, 41, takes definite action in this particular regard. However, she can't prove it.

"He claims I'm not plugged in right," Liz said, "but I know he's got me on mute."

Other couples have developed a form of communication even without the intercom system. For instance, sign painter Jack Rosser, 51, says his wife, Dianna, 49, who works in personnel at First National Bank, practices a primitive form of Morse code.

"She hits me on the helmet," he explained. "One lick for 'Slow down' and five for 'Slow down right now.'"

Even with her own motorcycle, Maria Whittemore, 35, hasn't always been able to keep up with her man's passion for the open road. She recalls how once her husband was "two miles up the road before he even realized I was still back at a red light."

Of course, there are other passions involved in this club — mainly, food. More than one member said (and quite sincerely) that the Abilene Roadriders motto is, "We ride to eat." To that end, they've become well-versed on the best places to eat.

Taylor's Cafe in nearby Lawn is a favorite. So is Simply Taylor's in Ballinger with its chicken enchiladas. But club members have gone beyond West Texas enough that they could easily put together a guidebook to the best places to eat in the United States.

Brady Ganson, 59, who works at Max's Kawasaka-Honda in Abilene and usually rides with wife Bea in tow, just recently returned from a motorcycle odyssey across Alaska. When asked for particulars, he just looked down at his shoes and said: "Well, we ate mostly."

And when asked why eating dominated a trip into someplace as huge and rugged and diverse as Alaska, he explained: "Well, we never knew whether the next restaurant we saw would be the last."

The group also knows the down side of traveling, such as when the Rossers and another couple explored the Hill Country without hotel reservations. That time, Dianna recalls, "we had to stay all night in Johnson City Park, sleeping on park benches."

Still, the club has held together since the 1970s, thanks to a couple of driving passions.

School board members complain about state recycling requirements

AUSTIN (AP) — School districts are supposed to separate and collect juice box drinks under a new state recycling law. But a school board group says they're having a hard time finding recyclers to take the waste.

"We have heard from several school districts saying we are trying to comply with this law ... Nobody wants this stuff," said Nancy Cotton of the Texas Association of School Boards, especially citing rural districts.

She called the requirement an example of several state mandates that "are well-intentioned, but they're not always well thought-out."

"Our primary purpose is educating kids," Ms. Cotton said Wednesday. "These are good things, but if the state would help us carry them out, that would be nice."

But a sponsor of the law says school districts won't be asked to do the impossible.

Rep. Robert Saunders, D-La-Grange, said companies producing such packaging have been contacted by the state and are putting target programs in place to collect the used boxes. He said if they don't, school districts might prefer permanent drinking containers to disposable packages.

"I don't think companies want to get out of the business of producing this particular packaging," he said.

School districts that can't recycle the boxes could still discard them, Saunders added.

The association has long complained that the state doesn't fund all it requires of school districts. Last year, it put out a study saying several state mandates, such as smaller class sizes, cost more than $1.5 billion in 1991-92.

The recycling law was among new state provisions that the school board group says create problems, without putting a price tag on them. Among others are:

— A law meant to ensure that teachers who received bonuses under a merit pay system don't lose the extra money because the system was abolished.

The association said the Texas Education Agency has interpreted the law to forbid school districts from ever increasing other teachers' pay to eliminate the difference between them and those who had been on the career ladder.

TEA general counsel Kevin O'Hanlon said the law requires the bonuses to be counted as part of teachers' base pay, so he didn't think the money could be used against the teachers when local salary supplements are handed out. But he said that doesn't prevent school districts from developing local merit pay systems.

Association spokeswoman Margaret LaMontagne said that prevents school districts from adjusting salaries for equity reasons and represents unwarranted state interference in local salary matters.

— A conflict-of-interest law for school board members that the association has said is so vague that it could force thousands to resign. The association has won a temporary injunction against the law.

Despite the complaints about some requirements, association executive director Billy Walker said lawmakers this year "All in all ... were fairly responsive to our plea for no more mandates and for mandate relief.

"Now if we can get lawmakers to start passing the bucks along with the programs, we'll be taking a giant step closer to adequately funding our state's public school system," he said.

Woman's curiosity leads to lost sibling

ALICE (AP) — Eight years after her father died, Lisa De Reese kept wondering about a woman's name he had tattooed on his right forearm.

Her father, Sam Magaro, had told her the tattoo reading "Sherry Lynn" represented a military vessel on which he once had served. As she grew older, she suspected it might have been an old girlfriend.

In August, Mrs. De Reese finally learned the truth from an uncle: The tattoo marked the birth of a half-sister during a previous marriage by her father.

The discovery led Mrs. De Reese to yet another: Her mother also had children by a previous marriage — four siblings, one of whom died nine years ago, Mrs. De Reese never knew she had.

Mrs. De Reese arranged reunions this month with her previously unknown siblings: Sherry Lynn Grunwell of San Antonio, Nancy Asbery of Capitola, Calif., Paul Reineck of Auburn, Calif., and Pamela Carranza of Duarte, Calif.

"We all had a lot of mixed emotions, but basically, it was happy. It was joyous," said Mrs. De Reese.

Before Magaro's 25-year marriage to Mrs. De Reese's mother, he had been married and had a daughter named Sherry Lynn, who now runs a day-care center in San Antonio.

He also had another daughter, born in Germany, whom Mrs. De Reese still wants to meet.

"It just happened so fast. From one week to the next, I have six other brothers and sisters," Mrs. De Reese said.

Mrs. De Reese's mother, Joyce Magaro of Harlingen, said her first marriage ended when her ex-husband left her with four children under age 5. Mrs. Magaro said her in-laws forced her to give up the children. Later, fear of rejection kept her from contacting them.

"Years went by and I could not interrupt somebody else's life. I just didn't want to hurt anybody," Mrs. Magaro said.

"I guess I probably walked to the telephone to pick it up a thousand times ... I felt like they might not accept me."

Two months after Mrs. De Reese discovered her siblings, she and her mother flew to California, where they spent a week with family members they had never known.

"My mother was always very sad around the holidays, and I never knew why," Mrs. De Reese said. "On the way to the airport, she said, 'Now I can finally heal.'"

Mrs. Magaro, 65, said: "It was the most positive thing that has ever happened to me. The best word to describe how I feel is 'complete.' I have never felt that before."

A brother who died nine years ago was the one who suffered most from the disruption, family members said.

Mrs. Asbery, 34, said her youngest brother was shifted from one relative's house to another and became a runaway at age 14. He died of AIDS.

"He got the brunt of all of this," Mrs. Asbery said.

Mrs. Asbery said she had begun searching for her birth mother several months before she heard from Mrs. De Reese.

"I think the timing was right for everybody," Mrs. Asbery said. "All of us needed a little bit of growing up before we could do this."

Young adults in Hong Kong take interesting English names

By Barbara Basler
N.Y. Times News Service

HONG KONG — Britain's most indelible influence on the Chinese who populate this colony may be in name only. From the Hong Kong bank clerk with Canine on her name tag to the insurance broker who calls herself Neon, many Hong Kong Chinese choose English names.

Tens of thousands of young Chinese are taking English language names each year. It is not uncommon to encounter sophisticated Chinese in Hong Kong with names like Sherlock, Lenin, Apple, Psyche, Creamy or Cinderella.

Even in these final years of British rule, with dour Beijing bureaucrats waiting to take over the territory in 1997, teachers and parents say the cachet of a Western name has never been stronger, with more young people than ever before opting for English names.

Some highly Westernized Chinese parents in Hong Kong give their children Western names at birth, but most who have such names choose their own, as did Neon Chan. She selected her name from a dictionary because "I liked the meaning — colorful, bright."

Westerners sometimes remark that her name is unusual, but some Chinese complain about it. "They say Neon is a boy's name," she said with a laugh.

Rachel Wong, a Hong Kong native who taught school there for years, said people here like to have English language names "because it shows they are Westernized. "These names set them apart from the mainland Chinese and even from people in Taiwan," she said.

While many Hong Kong Chinese take traditional names like Jane or David, a number choose names that tend to puzzle, amaze and delight Westerners — names like Civic, Scholastica and Open.

Most simply add the new name to their official Chinese name, so the new names do not involve any legal changes. But the names do wind up on business cards and office doors, and are the official names they use in dealing with foreigners.

Asked how he chose his name, Civic Wong, a technical supervisor said: "I didn't take my name because of the car. I chose it because I liked the sound. I thought about Civil Wong, but Civic just sounded better."

He conceded that his name might seem strange to some Westerners, but added, "I know three other Civics."

The practice of taking an English name, which really took root only 15 or 20 years ago, began as a way of identifying with the ruling class, or being identified by it. Now, the English language name is not just a colonial convenience, it is a local Chinese custom.

"Today, taking an English name is a kind of rite of passage for many Chinese here," said Cathy Tsang-Feign, a psychologist and newspaper advice columnist.

"In talking to young people and their parents it seems that it is now the fashion for Hong Kong teen-agers to select an English name, even those who speak little or no English," she said. "It's a way of asserting their individuality, and their independence."

The practice is so widespread that there are even Chinese language books published that purport to give the most auspicious English name for a Chinese person, based on his birthday.

"I chose my name from a book of names," said Egmont Lam, the owner of a manufacturing company. "As I recall, the name means sword of wisdom."

Italians strive to appease tower of Pisa

PISA, Italy (NYT) — It might be termed a triumph of physics and engineering over time and gravity. It might also be called something of an eyesore.

But, however it is appraised, the gray 400-ton mass of lead ingots stacked at the base of the leaning tower of Pisa has achieved its goal: the tower has not, so far, toppled over.

What's more, reversing 800 years of the tower's slow tilting, the ingots have begun to pull the 187-foot pillar of white marble back toward the vertical.

The change is less than one-sixth of an inch from the 16 feet by which the top of the tower overhangs its base, but it is cause for celebration.

"This is a very modest movement," said Michele Jamiolkowski, a Turin University professor who heads an international panel of 13 experts supposed to prevent the leaning tower from leaning so far that it tumbles altogether. "But it is of great importance because it's the first time the tower is going the other way."

What that means, said Carlo Viggiani, a Neapolitan engineer on the committee, is that those who want to save the tower have won "5 or 10 years" in which to search for a more elegant and enduring solution than the lead ingots, which act as a counterweight to the tower's own 14,000 tons of marble.

In a land where conservation and preservation often fall prey to politics or procrastination, the experiment seems a departure from what Culture Minister Alberto Ronchey called the "superhuman task" of guiding projects to restore and conserve Italy's vast array of decaying antiquity through the minefields of politics and shadowy interest groups.

"You can come up with all kinds of ingenious solutions, you can try all kinds of devices — even with limited means — to repair the damage suffered for too long by our historical and artistic heritage," he said.

Man to discuss origins of New Age Movement

Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave., will be hosting James Walker of the Watchman Fellowship, Sunday.

Walker, a former member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will be speaking during the 6 p.m. worship service on the New Age Movement, tracing it's beginnings in ancient Hinduism and following it's assimilation into modern Western thought.

Walker also will teach a class at 4:45 p.m. on how to witness to members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints with the "Book of Mormon." According to the Watchman Fellowship, "Most Mormons believe that this book is far superior to the Bible and is the "most correct book," although it has been changed in over 4,000 places."

Participants will also learn about false Mormom prophecies and other problems within Mormonism, said a release from "Rooster" Fletcher, minister of single adults and activities at Crestview Baptist.

Church to present two Women's Day programs

Wayside Church of God in Christ, 1311 Cherry St., will be the setting for two Women's Day programs today and Sunday.

Today's service begins at noon and features missionary Dorothy Johnson, wife of Superintendent C.S. Johnson of Alexander Temple Cogic.

Guest speaker during the Sunday morning service will be missionary Dorothy McNally of Deliverance Tabernacle, San Angelo.

Theme for the Women's Day programs is "Who Can Find a Virtuous Woman?"

Session will be held for men, women and children. Visitors are expected from Lubbock, Big Spring and San Angelo.

Music will be provided by, among others, The Blessed Notes.

The services are dedicated to Mary Weatherspoon, wife of former Superintendent Willie Weatherspoon. Also being honored are the present superintendent and Katherine Weatherspoon, sister of the Rev. Kenneth Weatherspoon.

All are welcome to attend.

As I drove through the countryside on that bright and brisk day in late October, the swirling leaves fragmented my view, so that I slowed to a stop alongside the road where I perceived a most fantastic vision...

Spanning the horizon was a stage, and on that stage was a myriad of majestic dancers adorned in their festive fall finery of orange and red and gold, swaying to and fro, keeping time with the woodwinds as they swept melodically through the trees, reflecting the brilliant light from above.

Moments later, I blinked back to reality and resumed my travel through the colorful autumn countryside. I marveled at the power of the imagination as it had influenced my perception of what I had "seen" seconds before.

God, the ultimate Creator, has given us the gift of imagination. He has also given us the gift of choice...of how we choose to perceive our world. Let us worship God each week, opening our hearts to the power of the Master, in order that we shall be influenced to perceive our lives as more positive and meaningful.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Church plans carnival

The Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church Christian Education and Sunday School Board is sponsoring an "All Saint's Night Chili Carnival," from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday at Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church, 401 S. Adams St.

Chili Supper tickets are $3 and there will be cakes, pies, food, fun, fellowship, popcorn and caramel apples, pickles, games, best dressed Bible character contest and prizes.

Donations will be used to purchase Christian education equipment for the Church.

■ Missionary returns

Delisa Bushman, daughter of Darrell and Darla Bushman of Midland, returned last week from a 16-month voluntary mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Bushman

Miss Bushman will speak at a special service at 10:50 a.m. Sunday in the Chapel at 4508 Gateway. Visitors are welcome. An open house will be held in her honor Sunday from 7-8:30 p.m. at 4504 Pasadena.

"Serving on a mission opened my eyes to problems that face our society and taught me how to interact with diverse types of people," said Miss Bushman, who called it the best spiritual experience of her life because she learned to totally rely on God.

Proselyting and teaching the gospel of Jesus Christ were her primary duties, but she also served as mission recorder and helped out in the mission office.

Miss Bushman plans to return to Brigham Young University in January where she will continue her major in International Relations and Middle Eastern studies.

■ 5-day event slated

MONAHANS — A five-day spiritual event initiated by The International Year of the Family called "A New Parish for the Family" will be held at St. John the Evangelist Catholic Church here.

The event begins with the weekend masses Nov. 5 and 6 and continue with mission talks at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 7 through 11.

The Rev. Daniel McCaffrey, S.T.D., will be presenting the mission. McCaffrey serves on the staff of the Pope Paul VI Institute, Omaha, Neb., a national institute for the study of human reproduction. He holds a doctorate in sacred theology from the University of St. Thomas Aquinas (Angelicum), Rome.

Upon being ordained a priest in 1958, he served eight years as a missionary in Pakinstan followed by more than 20 years as a catholic military chaplain in the U.S. Army Chaplain Corps, serving in Vietnam, Korea, Germany and Honduras, as well as numerous army installations throughout the United States.

Upon retiring from military service in 1991, McCaffrey spent six months as administrator of St. Stephen's Catholic Church, Midland. He joined Pope Paul VI Institute in 1993.

All interested parties are invited to attend. For more information call 1-943-5114.

■ More religion/4B

■ Reformation observed

Hope Lutheran Church, 2003 N. A St., will observe Reformation Sunday at both the 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. services Sunday.

Reformation marks the time when Martin Luther nailed his 95 theses to the doors of the church at Wittenberg, Germany in 1517, thus openly seeking change for the Catholic Church.

Hope's Adult Choir, directed by Leabeth Quinn, music director and organist, will sing during the second service. The church's pastor, the Rev. David Herman, will preach at both services.

Sunday School for all ages is from 9:20 to 10:10 a.m. For more information call the church, 683-1336. All are invited to attend.

■ Celebration planned

The Living Way Church Children's Ministry is hosting a Hallelujah Night Celebration Sunday.

Games, contests, prizes, refreshments and a new Gospel Bill vodeo will be part of the event. This one-hour presentation will feature Gospel Bill Gunter and the Dry Gulch gang.

Hallelujah Night begins at 6 p.m. at the church, 5415 W. Alta St.

The church will conduct family services at 10:30 a.m. Sunday. Children and youth will participate in the service which will minister to all ages. There will be puppet skits and songs as well as some "special" visitors. The church's minister, the Rev. James Whitaker, will deliver the message.

■ 'Encounter' series set

Ranchland Heights Baptist Church has begun a six-week series of services and studies called "Fresh Encounter" led by the pastor, the Rev. Lucian Rudd.

Sunday morning messages cover such topics as "God's Standard for the Family," "Religion versus Reality," and "Substitutes for God." The evening study hour and messages deal with God's pattern for revival and spiritual awakening.

Worship services are at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. with the evening study hour beginning at 6 p.m.

This Sunday night worship hour will feature the music department in the regular Fifth Sunday Singing program.

For more information call 683-1947 or 697-4471.

The public is invited to attend.

As I drove through the countryside on that bright and brisk day in late October, the swirling leaves fragmented my view, so that I slowed to a stop alongside the road where I perceived a most fantastic vision...

Spanning the horizon was a stage, and on that stage was a myriad of majestic dancers adorned in their festive fall finery of orange and red and gold, swaying to and fro, keeping time with the woodwinds as they swept melodically through the trees, reflecting the brilliant light from above.

Moments later, I blinked back to reality and resumed my travel through the colorful autumn countryside. I marveled at the power of the imagination as it had influenced my perception of what I had "seen" seconds before.

God, the ultimate Creator, has given us the gift of imagination. He has also given us the gift of choice...of how we choose to perceive our world. Let us worship God each week, opening our hearts to the power of the Master, in order that we shall be influenced to perceive our lives as more positive and meaningful.

■ Missionary returns

Delisa Bushman, daughter of Darrell and Darla Bushman of Midland, returned last week from a 16-month voluntary mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Bushman

Miss Bushman will speak at a special service at 10:50 a.m. Sunday in the Chapel at 4508 Gateway. Visitors are welcome. An open house will be held in her honor Sunday from 7-8:30 p.m. at 4504 Pasadena.

"Serving on a mission opened my eyes to problems that face our society and taught me how to interact with diverse types of people," said Miss Bushman, who called it the best spiritual experience of her life because she learned to totally rely on God.

Proselyting and teaching the gospel of Jesus Christ were her primary duties, but she also served as mission recorder and helped out in the mission office.

Miss Bushman plans to return to Brigham Young University in January where she will continue her major in International Relations and Middle Eastern studies.

Witt stays with A's

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bobby Witt, the winningest pitcher for the Oakland Athletics last season, will be back with the team in 1994.

The A's Friday exercised their option to retain him for next season at a salary of $3.25 million. The club would have had to pay a $500,000 buyout if the option had not been exercised.

Witt, obtained from Texas in August 1992 as part of the Jose Canseco trade, led the A's in wins (14), complete games (5), strikeouts (131) and innings pitched (220) last season.

Boone gets 2nd talk with Astros

HOUSTON — Minor league manager Bob Boone returned for his second interview with the Houston Astros Friday concerning the club's vacant field manager's position.

"It's exciting but I don't know what Houston is thinking," Boone told KRIV-TV of Houston. "As time goes on you start thinking more and more about it but at the same time it might not be, so maybe I shouldn't think too hard about it."

Second half finishes Dogs

■ Midland High leads San Angelo after the first quarter but the Bobcats rack up 344 yards in the second half to win 50-7.

By Bill Petitt

SAN ANGELO — For Midland High it was unfamiliar territory. All season long the Bulldogs have had to play catch up after poor first quarters.

This time the Bulldogs were leading District 4-5A rival San Angelo 7-6 after one quarter and trailed just 14-7 at halftime.

But the second half was a coach's nightmare as the Bobcats racked up 344 yards of offense in the final two periods and outscored Midland 36-0 for a convincing 50-7 win here Friday night.

With the win San Angelo improves to 4-5 overall and 2-3 in District 4-5A play. Midland remains winless at 0-9 and 0-5.

San Angelo used the rushing of backup running back Toby Davis in the second half to put MHS away.

Davis, who had carried only four times for four yards all season long, rushed for 222 yards and three touchdowns on just nine carries.

"It was the first time I have seen a lot of playing time," said Davis. "This week in practice I was getting a lot of reps. They were rotating me and Gary (Morgan) a lot."

Morgan rushed for 80 yards on 13 carries and three touchdowns.

San Angelo, which averaged 139 yards per game rushing, piled up 393 yards against the Bulldogs' defense on the ground.

"They were playing five inside and six outside to cover our passing attack," said San Angelo coach Dan Gandy. "It was our seven against their five."

The Bobcat passing game, which was averaging almost 170 yards per game, was limited to just 114 yards.

But San Angelo quarterback Byron Bode scrambled for 36 yards rushing and kept the MHS defense guessing as San Angelo played the option game.

"The whole difference in the game was that we moved the ball and scored when we had the wind at our backs in the third period," said Gandy. "Midland moved the ball, but when we stopped them on the one-yard-line, it took a lot out of them."

Coats was stopped at the one on fourth-and-goal at the two. The Bulldogs, trailing 21-7, had traveled 73 yards into a stiff 20 mile-per-hour wind from the north.

"After that the tempo completely changed," Gandy said.

Midland High scored on its first possession of the game, a five-play, 59 yard drive that was highlighted by a Paredes to Coats 27-yard pass. Coats capped off the drive with a three yard run for a 7-0 lead. It was the first lead of the season for Midland High.

San Angelo scored late in the first quarter after a low punt by Jeremy Hernandez was returned 13 yards by Morgan to the Bobcats' 42. Bode completed a 23-yard pass to Bennie Dupre and Bode ran for 25 yards on the drive. Morgan scored from the five but Dwight Allison blocked the extra point by Scott Foster.

On the first play after the kickoff, Coats fumbled at the Bulldog 19. Michael Prather recovered the fumble and San Angelo took it in for the score on a one-yard run by Morgan. Bode ran in the two-point conversion for a 14-7 lead.

Bulldogs running back Roy Coats rushed for his fourth 100-yard-plus

Rebels not excited in 28-6 win

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

DALLAS — Midland Lee will be awarded a 28-6 victory over Dallas Jesuit here Friday night, but old Mother Nature was the overall winner, producing a howling wind, light snow flurries and numbing cold that left both teams trying to go through the motions of getting this one over.

"We just couldn't get too excited about this game," said Lee coach Earl Miller. "It didn't mean anything and you couldn't expect our kids to play very well under the extreme circumstances with a game that has no meaning, a long road trip and tough weather.

"Still, we played good enough to win. The only thing I'm disappointed in is that we gave a lot of kids an opportunity to play and they didn't play very well."

Lee looked like it would blow 2-6 Jesuit out of town early, scoring the first two times they got the ball, the first on a 36-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Courtney Turner to halfback Marlon Henry and the second on a two-yard Turner run for a 14-0 lead with 6:42 still left in the first period of play.

The TD connection had Henry outracing Jesuit's Mike Burkhart into the open at the end zone and catching a perfect pass from Turner on a fourth down play.

"We tried that pass earlier in the series, but Courtney didn't see me." Henry said. "I came back and told him, and he laid it right in my hands."

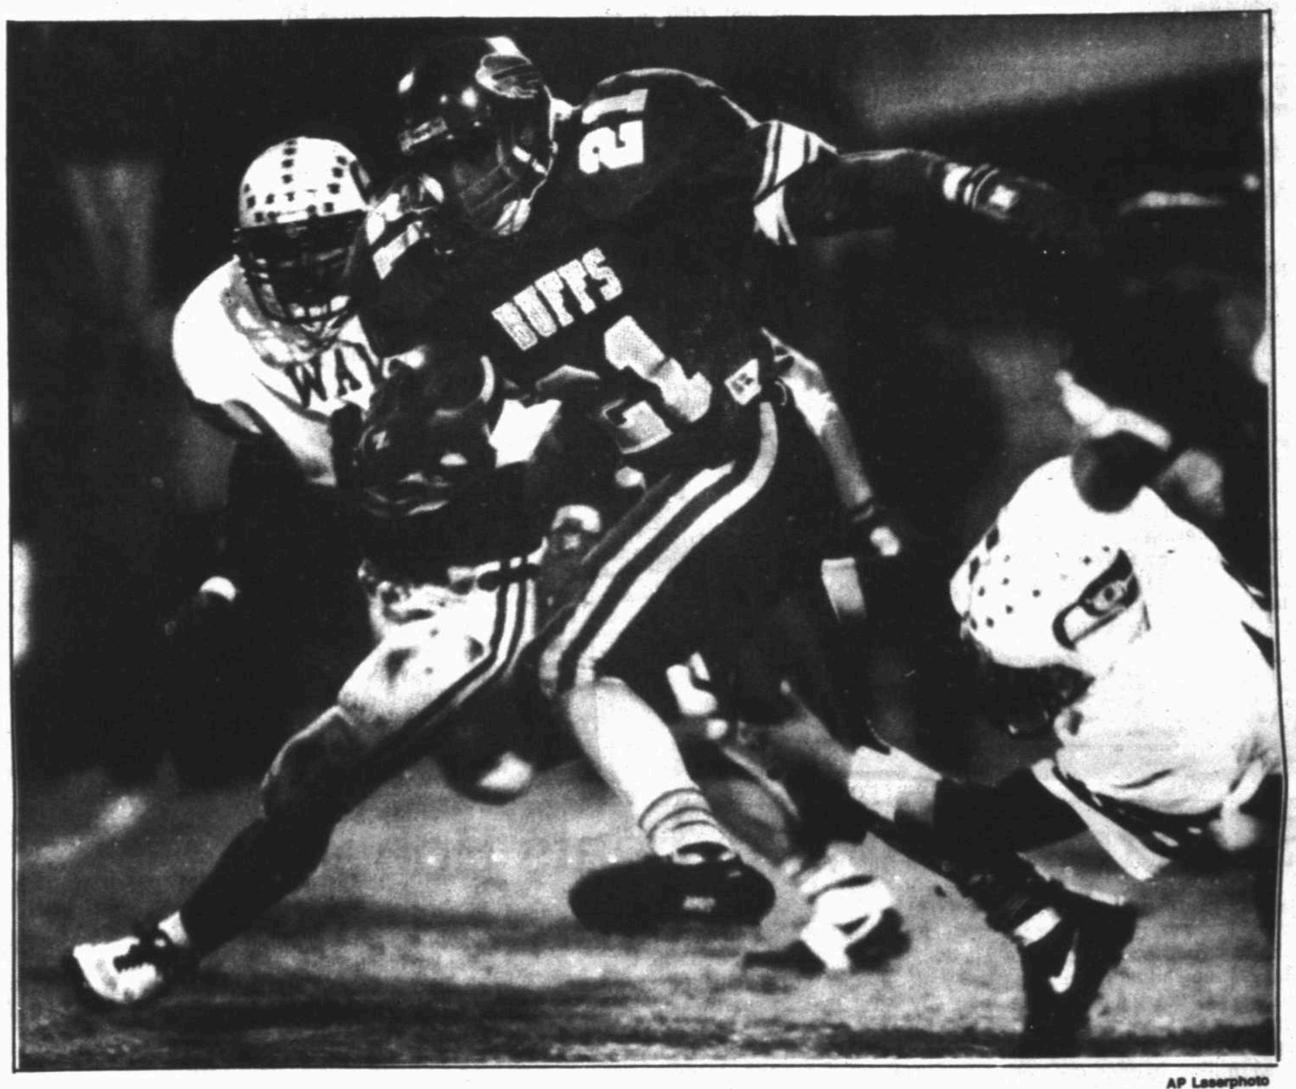

But Lee just fizzled the rest of the half after a 62-yard run by Jesuit quarterback Steve Graham, who has been injured most of the year, set up a Ranger touchdown to cut the margin to 14-6, where it stayed through the half.

"We just didn't get it going in the first half," Turner said, "but we played pretty well in the second half."

Jesuit held a 97-14 lead in total yardage after the first quarter and a 103-75 margin at the half as the Lee offense died.

But Lee answered the second half bell when Turner broke a 46-yard run to the Jesuit four where Henry scored the second of his three touchdowns on the night. Lee ended the scoring in the fourth period on a Henry two-yard TD run.

Stanton's Jerele Lee, whose 240 rushing yards put him over 1,000 for the season, bulls past Wall's Cory Braden (40) and Chad Box (11) in Stanton Friday night. Wall, ranked fourth in Class 2A, beat Stanton 61-27.

STANTON — On a cold and chilly night in Stanton, the Wall Hawks put the Buffaloes in the deep freeze until next year with their 61-27 District 6-2A win Friday night.

The loss virtually ended any chance Stanton had of entering the Class 2A playoffs.

But early in the game Stanton, 3-3 in league play and 5-4 overall, was giving the state fourth-ranked Hawks all they could handle.

After Wall (5-0, 8-0) executed a 59-yard scoring drive to take the initial lead, the Buffaloes stampeded right back with a 70-yard drive of their own. Two key plays kept the drive going when Jerele Lee, who finished with 240 yards, gained 26 of those yards on the swinging gate play to open Stanton's first offensive series.

With Stanton staring at third down and 11 from the Wall 45 yard line, quarterback J.J. Ortiz lofted a 20-yard pass to Michael Martinez to the Wall 25.

Three plays later, Ortiz got sneaky as he kept the pigskin for a 15-yard touchdown run to tie the game at 7-7 with 6:29 left in the first quarter.

But the Hawks were almost unstoppable after that. They took the lead for good when Cory Braden slashed his way in from 12 yards out with 3:53 remaining in the first period.

The Buffaloes would not die as they marched from their own 37 to the Wall 35.

But on fourth-and-10 Ortiz was chased out of the pocket and tripped up from behind falling short of the first down and turning the ball over on downs.

The Hawks followed that up with a 65-

Tech, Texas still harbor bowl hopes

By Michael A. Lutz

Texas and Texas Tech have losing records and bowl ambitions.

Texas (2-3-1, 2-0) is still trying to reach the Cotton Bowl and the Red Raiders, (2-5, 1-2) and haunted by a five-game losing skid, are trying to salvage their season and qualify for post season play.

■ SWC Roundup

Texas Tech beat Rice two weeks ago to snap its losing streak and coach Spike Dykes doesn't think he has to do much motivating to get the Red Raiders ready to play in Austin where they've won only three times in a series that began in 1928.

Former Bulldog dubbed project now starting on Longhorn offensive line

By Bill Petitt
Staff writer

When former Midland High offensive lineman Joe Phillips signed on with the University of Texas two seasons ago some skeptics called Phillips a project-type player.

Phillips

Phillips silenced any of those remaining skeptics after starting for the Longhorns last Saturday in Texas' 37-10 win over SMU at the Alamodome in San Antonio.

The former Midland High standout made his first start after the 'Horns moved guard Dan Neil to center and moved center Trent Elliott to a backup position.

"It really didn't come as a surprise to me," said Phillips, now a sophomore. "During the week I had an idea during practice that I would probably start. We normally rotate in and out and once we stopped rotating, I figured that I would be starting.

"Although Trent is a good player, Dan is heavier than Trent and they wanted more size up front."

Offensive line coach Pat Watson added, "We'd like to keep Dan at center because were a little short handed and we want to keep some kids coming along. Because of Joe we have been able to work Dan at center. He has helped us at depth situation."

The move paid benefits for Texas as they piled up 411 yards of offense against SMU, their largest offensive output since a 566-yard effort against Rice in a 55-38 win on Oct. 2.

The win put Texas at 2-0 in Southwest Conference play and 2-5 over-

"I think the off-date (prior to SMU) came at a good time for us," said Phillips. "We re-focused and are doing real well now."

Watson said, "He's playing real well right now and continued to improve each week. He has worked his way up and certainly deserves the starting position.

"Joe has really improved in the weight room as far as upper body and lower body strength. He worked a lot during the summer," Watson said.

Phillips came out of MHS after being named to the Associated Press and Texas Sportswriters Association all-state team and earned honorable mention All-America by USA Today.

with a lot of tradition and history. There will be a lot of people at the game. I don't think you have to say a lot to the team."

Texas Tech still could qualify for a bowl if it sweeps the rest of its games. Texas still could earn the Cotton Bowl berth with four victories, including one over Texas A&M, in its final five games.

The Longhorns may be unbeaten in SWC play but they still rank behind the No. 11 Texas Aggies, (6-1, 4-0), trying to become the first team in SWC history to go unbeaten in league play through three straight seasons.

The Aggies have won 19 straight SWC games and will try to protect their streak against Southern Methodist (1-4-2, 1-2-1) at Kyle Field today. Houston (1-4-1, 1-1-1) plays at Texas Christian (3-4, 1-2).

Baylor (4-4, 2-3) and Rice (4-4, 1-3) have open dates.

Texas and Texas Tech will match struggling defenses and talented skill players on offense.

"Our defense has to slow them down and our offense has to keep up with them," Texas coach John Mackovic said. "They've scored at a bigger rate than we have. Our offense has to put points on the board. It lends itself to a higher scoring game."

The Longhorns defensive assignment will be stopping Tech running back Bam Morris and wide receiver Lloyd Hill.

"We have to make sure Bam doesn't just run through the line but we can't over-commit to the run and let Lloyd Hill run down the field," Mackovic said.

The Raiders must find an antidote for improving quarterback Shea Morenz and wide receivers Mike Adams and Lovell Pinkney.

"I think the offenses are similar and they match up alike," Dykes said. "Our ability to stop them and their ability to stop us certainly is where the balance of the game will be."

Dykes has been popular in West Texas but the Raiders' slide this season is wearing thin. The student newspaper called for his dismissal but Dykes remains supportive of his players.

"This year there's been a lot of different reviews," Dykes said. "But the reason I'm so proud of this team is we've played well every Saturday and played hard. Maybe we didn't always get everything we'd like but I'll be surprised and disappointed if this isn't our best performance of the year."

Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum is guarding against overconfidence.

"It would be easy to sit back and say 'Yeah, we're 30-point favorites, if we can just kind of get through the week, we'll be OK,' " Slocum said. "But to me, it has the opposite effect.

"At practice, that's where it happens. If we allow ourselves to not have good practices, then we set ourselves up to have failure on the weekend."

In addition to facing the league's top-scoring team, SMU has extensive defensive injuries and quarterback Ramon Flanigan added a bruised hand to his already bruised shoulder in last week's loss to Texas.

"We've been through a lot at SMU so everybody picked each other up," SMU coach Tom Rossley said. "The coaches picked up the players, and the players picked up the coaches."

Houston coach Kim Helton continues the transition from the run-and-shoot to a two-back offense but the Cougars' progress has been slowed by injuries to the already depleted running backs staff.

Lamar Smith is out for the year leaving TiAndre Sanders and former receiver Donald Moffett as the only healthy runners.

Helton hopes to get Tommy Guy back in the lineup but he doesn't think he'll be able to play much.

"After that, we go back to four wides," Helton said.

A victory over Houston would give TCU a three-game winning streak and back-to-back SWC victories for the first time since 1990.

LEE: Looks for fight with Cooper

(From 1C)

But the North Pole couldn't have been much colder. Still, most Lee players refused to say that it made a difference.

"It would have been hot out there if the wind hadn't been blowing. It didn't really bother us. We just didn't start playing until the second half," said guard Haseeb Rafeek."

But Lee line coach Ronnie Stephens said, "The light snow in the first half was freezing in mid-air and felt like bullets. This made our playoff game two years ago against Sherman in Wichita Falls look like a warm spell."

So, the game nobody wanted is over and Miller is glad. Now Lee must meet Abilene Cooper next with its playoff hopes on the line. Win, and Lee is in. Lose, and Lee stays home for the second consecutive year. Odessa Permian defeated Cooper 15-7 in Abilene Friday to give the Cougars their first district loss.

"Well, it's time for Cooper now," Miller said. "We start preparing for that Monday. We have everything going for us. The game is at our place and we know what we have to do. We just have to go and do it now. We can't talk our way into the playoffs."

Sherrill never said Auburn filled footballs with helium

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi State coach Jackie Sherrill confirms that he complained about footballs used in the Bulldogs' game at Auburn on Oct. 9, but says he never accused the Tigers of using helium.

"I never asked the officials to check Auburn's ball for helium," Sherrill said Wednesday. "The only thing I asked the officials to check is that the balls were not legally inflated. The facts are the balls were not legal balls. The facts are the balls were taken out of the game."

Several Alabama newspapers reported in Tuesday editions that Sherrill's charges had included the use of helium. None of the papers cited a source linking Sherrill with the helium charge, nor did they say whether the alleged charge was made to referees at the game.

Sherrill, who formerly coached at Texas A&M, said the illegally under-inflated balls were the ones being used by Auburn's offense, not State's.

"The officials made Auburn use our balls until they had legal balls to put in the game," Sherrill said.

Southeastern Conference commissioner Roy Kramer refused to respond to Sherrill's comments.

"We've already issued our statement," he said, referring to a Tuesday statement that the matter is closed.

Dallas goalie Moog signs new contract

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Stars goaltender Andy Moog has signed a one-year contract extension for 1994-95 with an option for another season. No terms were revealed.

Moog's 283 career victories and .662 lifetime winning percentage are tops among all active National Hockey League goalies.

Moog, 33, is 4-2-2 in nine games with the Stars this season with a 3.29 goals-against average and a .894 save percentage.

Moog played his 500th NHL game on Oct. 12 against Chicago and he recorded his 18th career shutout against St. Louis four days later.

PHILLIPS: MHS grid star now starting for UT

(From 1C)

Phillips was recruited by the David McWilliams regime and has made the adjustment from one head coach to another with present Longhorn coach John Mackovic.

"It really hasn't been that tough since I redshirted my first year (McWilliams' last season)," said Phillips. "I really didn't learn that much of the offense my redshirt year. I didn't have to unlearn like some of the others."

This week Phillips will make his second start against Texas Tech in front of a regionally televised contest this afternoon.

Phillips will be opposite Tech defensive tackle Dusty Beavers — a senior from Ruidoso, N.M. who has been thrust into a starting role after defensive tackle Chris Ori suffered a knee injury prior to the start of the season and has not been able to completely recover.

The Longhorns outman the Red Raiders along the offensive line and Phillips and Co. look to continue its improvement offensively with redshirt quarterback Shea Morenz. Morenz completed 18 of 25 passes for 269 yards and two touchdowns in last week's win.

"Shea's getting better everyday. The whole team has confidence in Shea," said Phillips.

The same confidence that Phillips has in silencing those skeptics.

Stich won three matches — including one "dead" singles match against Edberg — as Germany routed Sweden 5-0 in the Davis Cup semifinals last month.

The fourth-seeded German, who now has three wins over Edberg this year, beat Swedes Mikael Pernfors and Magnus Gustafsson in his first two matches here.

Edberg, a former two-time Stockholm Open champion, broke for a 3-1 lead in the third set after Stich double-faulted at 15-40.

But Edberg, who's been struggling with his serve, hitting twice as many double-faults than aces (16 to 8) going into the quarterfinal, served poorly in the next game to let Stich back into the match.

"It was frustrating to lose that game," said Edberg, the former two-time U.S. Open champ who has dropped to sixth on the ATP rankings, his lowest since 1984.

"A 4-1 lead would have made a great difference. I was pumped up for the match. But I didn't serve well enough. And I couldn't get the volleys past him when I needed to."

Stich broke back to 3-2 with a final backhand passer at 15-40, then hit another cross-court pass shot by the Swede for the decisive break to lead 4-3.

The German staved off a break point with one of his 11 aces at 30-40 before holding to 5-3. Edberg then saved two match points in the next game before Stich held to close out the match.

"I started badly, but I got into a nice rhythm in the second set returning his serve well," Stich said. "After that it went my way.

Stich will play No. 15 Marc Rosset of Switzerland in the semis. Rosset, the 1992 Olympic champ, edged No. 9 Petr Korda of the Czech Republic 6-4, 7-6 (7-5).

Nokia Grand Prix

The Spaniard's semifinal opponent on Saturday will be Natalia Medvedeva of Ukraine, who ousted Elna Reinach of South Africa 6-0, 6-3.

Second-seeded Conchita Martinez of Spain will face Belgium's Sabine Appelmans in the other semifinal.

Power now rules over finesse

■ Without Jordan, Bird or Johnson, NBA will rely on its bigger and stronger stars to lead the game into the next century.

By Bill Barnard
AP Basketball Writer

After losing its biggest names and signing its largest contracts, the NBA begins a new season relying on some huge players to sustain the growth it has enjoyed for a decade.

■ NBA Preview

Gone are Michael Jordan, Magic Johnson and Larry Bird — players who used skill and intelligence, rather than power.

Jordan's shocking retirement this month leaves a major void, not only in the NBA's visibility, but in its talent in the open court. And the offseason deaths of Reggie Lewis and Drazen Petrovic took away two more players who brought something to the league besides brawn.

Stepping into the spotlight when the 1993-94 season starts Friday night are a large group of large players. Their talents, while impressive, don't feature the flair of Jordan, the passing of Johnson or the cocky 3-point wizardry of Bird.

The last eight NBA Finals MVPs were Jordan (three times), Isiah Thomas, Joe Dumars, James Worthy, Johnson and Bird.

There's not a power player in that bunch, but the top stars in today's NBA —Shaquille O'Neal, Patrick Ewing, Charles Barkley, Hakeem Olajuwon, David Robinson, Karl Malone, Alonzo Mourning, Larry Johnson, Shawn Kemp and Brad Daugherty — use strength as the essence of their games.

Superior quickness gives them the edge over other players their size. Guile is not their style.

Look again, and you'll notice that except for Portland's Clyde Drexler, they are the key players on the teams expected to contend for NBA championships — if not this season, then in the near future.

Look further and you'll see that the Chicago Bulls are not considered to be contenders. Winners of three straight titles, the Bulls' remaining talent and experience may get Chicago into the playoffs, but not out of the Eastern Conference.

"Our season has taken on a new dimension," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "We have a new set of goals in finding a new way to win with a new set of players ... We are a longshot to win the title. I heard we went from 5-2 to 25-1 in Las Vegas."

Jordan's missing 30 points is just the beginning of Jackson's problems.

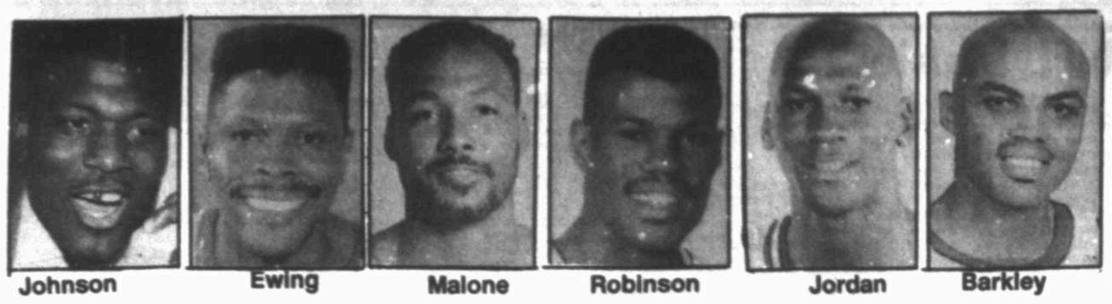

"We are going to be in trouble at times offensively, but against certain teams in certain situations, there might be an even bigger loss on defense," Jackson said. "Pressing defense has been our norm, and Michael has been a key to that. He won NBA defensive player of the year once, but he probably deserved to win it more than that."

The emphasis placed on defense by the Bulls and Detroit Pistons in winning the last five NBA titles has made an impact on players' and coaches' thinking throughout the league.

"Defense is going to be the key," Barkley said. "You can tell by the way we're training that we're emphasizing defense more. I think that, sooner or later, the Western Conference is going to change that myth that that's the difference between the East and West."

Coach Paul Westphal scoffed at Barkley's suggestion that the Suns can win 70 games, but he added, "I wouldn't trade our team for any in the league."

The Portland Trail Blazers, criticized for not having the intelligence to match their talent, added free-agent center Chris Dudley, most recently of New Jersey but formerly of Yale, for defense and rebounding.

Johnson Ewing Malone Robinson Jordan Barkley

"Chris and Buck Williams give us a lot of toughness defensively," coach Rick Adelman said. "We have three guards in Clyde Drexler, Terry Porter and Rod Strickland, and we have six guys up front who have to sort themselves out. The guys who defend are the guys who are going to play."

Seattle, Houston, San Antonio and Utah are the other top teams in the West, led by athletic bodyslammers Kemp, Olajuwon, Robinson and Malone.

Golden State hoped to sneak in among the contenders, but season-ending knee injuries by guards Tim Hardaway and Sarunas Marciulionis means another frustrating season for coach Don Nelson despite the arrival of rookie Chris Webber.

The SuperSonics were bolstered by a trade for guard Kendall Gill, the Spurs traded All-Star forward Sean Elliott for two-time NBA rebounding champ Dennis Rodman, and the Trail Blazers dealt disgruntled center Kevin Duckworth to Washington for forward Harvey Grant.

In the Eastern Conference, which is more directly affected by the retirement of Jordan, veteran teams like New York and Cleveland could be challenged by the young warriors of Charlotte and Orlando.

O'Neal and Mourning, possibly the two best centers ever to enter the NBA at the same time, have better supporting casts.

The Magic, who won the NBA draft lottery in consecutive years, wound up with Anfernee Hardaway and signed him to a $64 million deal that rivaled Webber's contract. Hardaway is expected to start immediately at guard, kicking Nick Anderson to forward and making Dennis Scott a sixth man.

Mourning has the luxury of concentrating on providing the Hornets with inside strength now that the public-relations spotlight is on teammate Larry Johnson, who signed an $84 million, 12-year contract extension. Charlotte also picked up 20-point scorer Hersey Hawkins from Philadelphia to replace Gill.

"The Mourning-O'Neal matchup is shaping up like Russell-Chamberlain," said Hornets coach Allan Bristow. "It's a natural rivalry geographically and they have similar styles. But I still consider New York and Cleveland the elite teams in the East. The way we've accumulated talent in the last few years, we should be a factor, if not this year, then next year. We should be among the elite."

Cleveland, knocked out of the playoffs by Chicago four times since 1988, including twice on buzzer-beating shots by Jordan, figure to benefit the most from his departure. Their new coach, Mike Fratello, says the Cavaliers aren't alone.

"A lot of teams have been haunted by Michael Jordan, not just the Cleveland Cavaliers," Fratello said. "No one in the league was able to dethrone him."

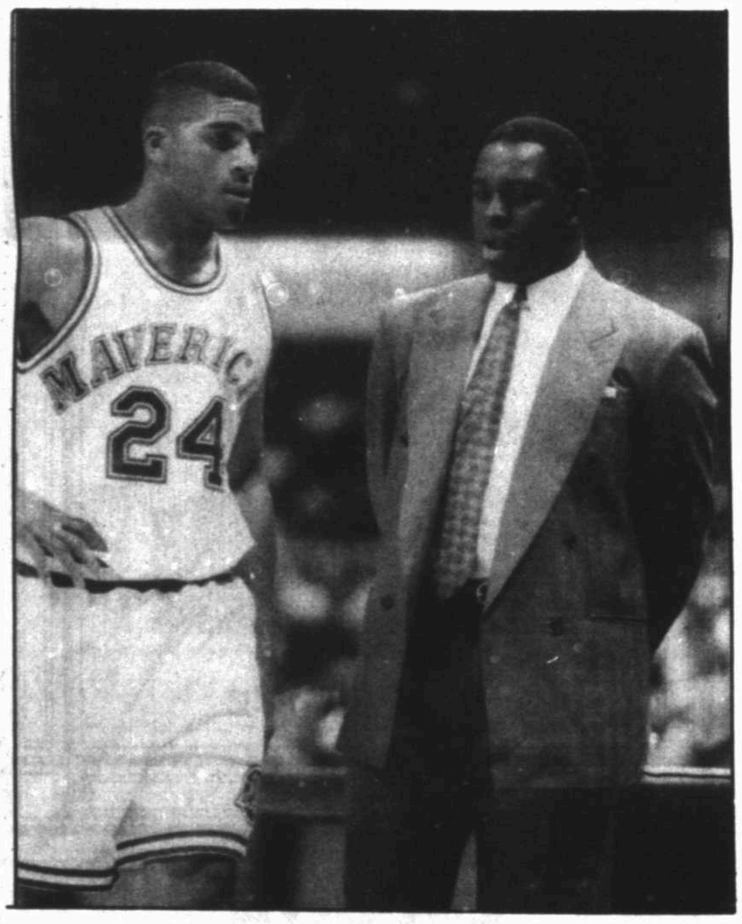

New York, last season's conference runner-up, hopes to ride its defense, the best in the NBA a year ago behind Ewing, Charles Oakley, John Starks and Anthony Mason, to the NBA championship.

"We aspire to the title, and that's a goal of ours, but it's not the be-all, end-all of the season," coach Pat Riley said. "There are a lot of teams aspiring to the title. But it's a mistake to assume it's going to be easy just because Michael Jordan retired."

Life off the court has a good chance to be easy for Johnson, Hardaway, Webber and Shawn Bradley, the Philadelphia 76ers' new 7-foot-6 center. All four signed contracts in excess of $40 million, and since Johnson is the only one with NBA experience, many fear the trend toward huge, long-term contracts.

"My concern with these contracts is that in four or five years, will these players still be motivated?" said Atlanta's Lenny Wilkens.

"These contracts are very dangerous," Milwaukee coach Mike Dunleavy said. "Teams are playing Russian roulette giving $60-$70-$80 million contracts to players who haven't really proved themselves. I'm shocked by these contracts, and some of them are going to be mistakes. I don't see how teams are going to survive under the salary cap if they do turn out to be mistakes."

Buckner finally gets to try out strategies

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — Quinn Buckner has spent the last two years as NBC's studio analyst on NBA games. Now, he gets to put all his theories into practice with one of the worst teams in league history.

■ Mavericks Outlook

The Dallas Mavericks just missed the NBA record book for consecutive losses and losses in one season last year.

Dallas finished 11-71 for the worst record in franchise history. Dallas was 7-14 over its final 21 games to avoid the worst-record tag. At one point, Dallas lost 19 consecutive games.

Buckner, one of only seven players in basketball history to win NCAA, Olympic and NBA titles, hasn't been around losing like he's seen at Reunion Arena.

Bobby Knight, Buckner's coach at Indiana, asked Buckner: "Why would you leave a job where you worked 60 days a year for one where you'll probably work 360?"

Buckner replied: "For the challenge."

Coaching the Mavs will be a challenge although they recently signed talented Jamal Mashburn of Kentucky who will join Jim Jackson as two of the best young players in the NBA.

"This is one of those rare opportunities in life where you get to be part of something from the ground up," said the 38-year-old coach.

Buckner said he can guarantee disenchanted Mavericks fans one thing: "We'll play hard. And we'll try to play smart."

The Mavs will have to do both because of inexperience and injuries.

Jackson, who remained unsigned for the first 54 games, averaged 16 points over the final 28 games after the Mavs finally signed him to the contract he had been asking for all along.

Jackson, out of Ohio State, caught Buckner's eye when he saw the team play.

"He's got character and I think you win with character and people who can play," Buckner said. "You've got to have somebody on the court who can exert authority. I believe Jim Jackson will have the kind of rapport where he can lead his teammates."

Eastern defense wanted

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Spurs aspire to be Eastern Conference tough, and they're hoping Detroit import Dennis Rodman is the demolition man to help them do it.

"We won't be the traditional team that just scoots up and down the court like we did," said Spurs coach John Lucas. "We'll want to win defensively. We'll almost be like an East Coast team."

Almost.

■ Spurs Outlook

The Spurs aren't meddling completely with their Western Conference squad, anchored by All-Star center David Robinson. Forwards Terry Cummings, Antoine Carr and J.R. Reid are back this season. So are guards Dale Ellis, Willie Anderson, Lloyd Daniels and Vinny Del Negro.

But on Oct. 1, the Spurs made a major trade, sending fan-favorite Sean Elliott to the Pistons for Rodman.

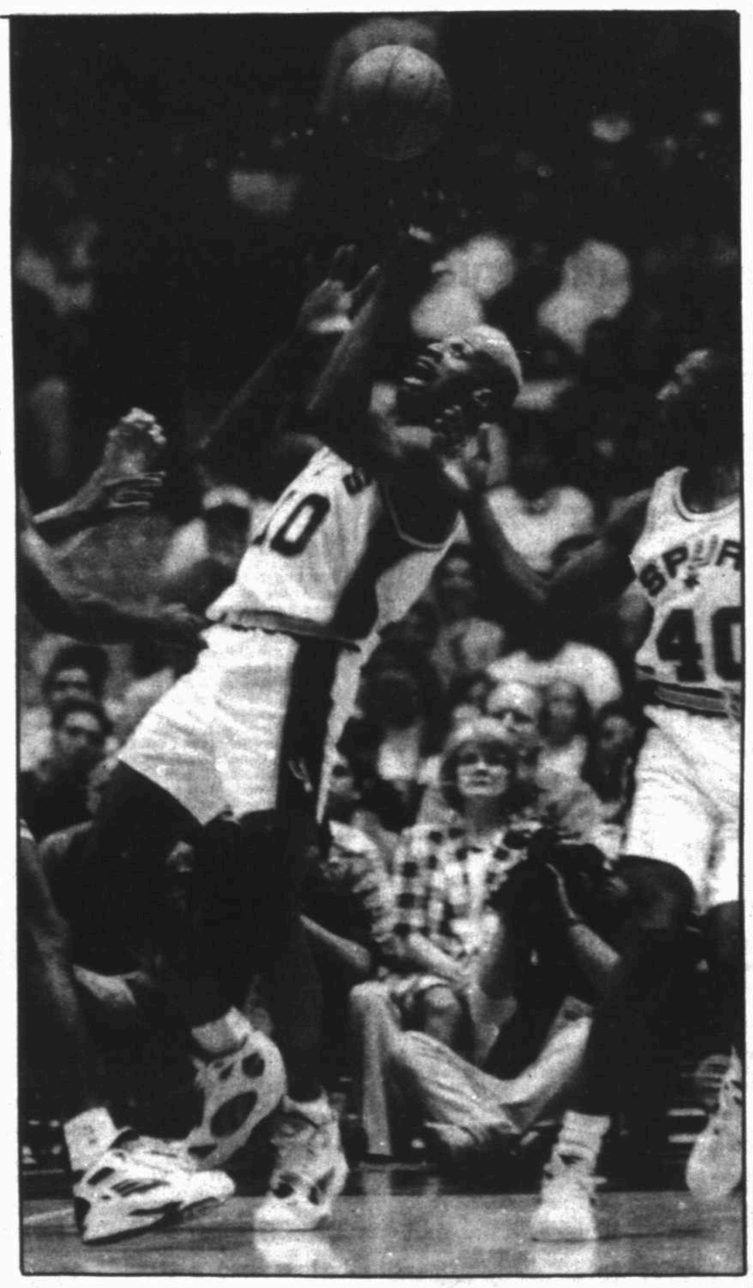

Rodman promised to do for the Spurs what made him the NBA's leading rebounder the past two seasons — when he averaged 18.7 and 18.3 boards, respectively — and what got him named to the NBA All-Defensive team five consecutive years.

"On the East Coast, you have to be real physical. You can't be real soft or you're going to get beat," Rodman said. "I feel like they need a person who can come in and get the job done, no matter what it takes."

Lucas describes Rodman as a defensive blue-collar worker, someone who "gives us defensive insight and intuitiveness that we didn't have before."

Rodman has led San Antonio in rebounding during the exhibition season.

He's also spiced things up for the sometimes sedate Spurs.

San Antonio's Dennis Rodman (10), shown in preseason action, hopes to bring the defensive philosophy from his old team Detroit to the Spurs.

Preseason smooth for Houston

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The preseason has been a smooth ride for the Houston Rockets.

■ Rockets Outlook

For awhile they couldn't shoot straight and coach Rudy Tomjanovich is still trying to boost the team's rebounding percentage. But his biggest worry is the happy problem of having too many good players.

Tomjanovich has some decisions to make before the season opener Friday against New Jersey in The Summit.

"We've got 11 guys that we are trying to work in," Tomjanovich said. "We did a 9½ man rotation last year and that's what I'm comfortable with. Tree Rollins was the ½ because he played only against exceptionally big centers.

"We've got more who can play this year, so that's a nice problem. There's still a problem because it splits minutes and people have to be able to deal with that," Tomjanovich said.

But most of Tomjanovich's problems have been "nice" during the exhibition season. There are no contract hassles. Hakeem Olajuwon is healthy and relaxed. Top draft pick Sam Cassell has been impressive.

Tomjanovich's lineup is set with Olajuwon at center, Otis Thorpe and Robert Horry at forwards and guards Kenny Smith and Vernon Maxwell.

"We still have the rebounding problem," Tomjanovich said. "We're thinking of different ways to work on that."

Errant field goal shooting is improving after an early preseason lull.

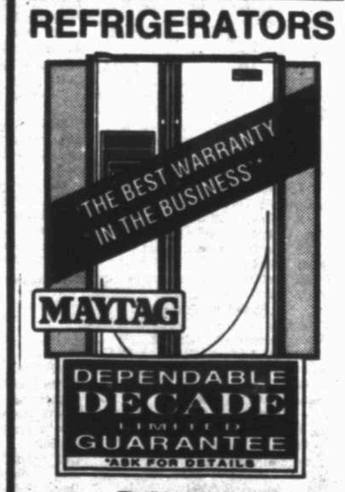

"We've got that back," Tomjanovich said. "We hit 44 percent against New York (on Sunday) and they've been holding people to 33 percent."

Gallagher slumps, Frost ties

AP Laserphoto

David Frost reacts after a birdie putt on the 18th hole to tie Jim Gallagher for the third-round lead of the Tour Championship.

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Jim Gallagher's five-stroke lead evaporated in the sultry air in the $3 million Tour Championship as David Frost tied him, Tom Kite stood a stroke away and Greg Norman charged into contention with Friday's lowest round.

■ Golf Roundup

One day after carding an Olympic Club-record 63, Gallagher slumped to 73. That opened the way for Frost, who posted a second straight 68, to take a share of the lead for the $540,000 top prize in golf's richest event.

Kite would have joined them but for a cypress tree on 18 that caught his second shot in a tangle of branches and dumped it, after a pause, into a bunker, leading to his only bogey on the back nine in a round of 68 that left him at 137.

Norman posted a 67 that brought him within three shots of the leaders as he stepped up his bid for player of the year and top money winner. Norman figures he will lock up the top player award with a victory here to go with his British Open triumph, second-place finish in the PGA championship, the Doral Ryder title and good showings in several other tournaments in what he believes is his best and most satisfying year.

Norman also moved closer to recording the lowest yearly average since the current system for the Vardon Trophy started in 1988. Norman, a two-time Vardon winner, is ineligible for the trophy because he will finish this tournament two rounds shy of the required 60, but his achievement is no less impressive.

The tournament, seemingly all Gallagher's at the start of the day, suddenly became open to most of the top 30 PGA Tour money winners competing through Sunday without a cut.

Scott Simpson, winner of the 1987 U.S. Open here, is bunched with Rick Fehr and Mark Calcavecchia at 138.

"Anybody can win now," Norman said. "Seven, eight, nine under, somewhere around there ought to win."

Despite going from a 72 in the first round to a 67, Norman felt he played better on Thursday and could have had a much lower score with a little luck.

"Yesterday I felt like I left eight shots on the golf course," he said. "It's frustrating. The golf course is more difficult than yesterday. It's a guessing game on the greens. Some were soft at the front, hard at the back. It is very difficult to get a feel for what the ball was going to do when it hit the green."

Frost, a South African who lives in Dallas, showed up with a six-day growth of beard reminiscent of some of the Philadelphia Phillies.

Nichirei Ladies

AMI, Japan — Sherri Steinhauer and Jane Geddes shot an 8-under-par 64, Friday's best score, and led a team of U.S. LPGA players to a 6-2 lead over a Japan team in the Nichirei International.

Steinhauer and Geddes beat Nayoko Yoshikawa and Fusako Nagata, who turned in a 70.

Sixteen players from each tour are competing on the 6,337-yard Ami Golf Club course. Each winning pair receives one point, based on the lowest score earned by each pair on each hole. Each team gets half a point in a tie.

The other American winners were Michelle McGann and Donna Andrews, who beat Fuki Kido and Junko Yasui 66-68; Dawn Coe-Jones and Rosie Jones, who beat Kaori Harada and Chieko Nishida 68-70; and Dana Lofland-Dormann and Helen Alfredsson, who beat Yuko Moriguchi and Tu Ai-yu of Taiwan 66-69.

Kaanapali Classic

KAANAPALI, Hawaii — Bob Murphy, a five-time winner on the PGA Tour, and Tom Wargo, a long-time club professional, shot 6-under par 65s Friday to share the opening-round lead in the $550,000 Kaanapali Classic.

Murphy and Wargo, rookies on the Senior PGA tour, shared a one-stroke lead over Charles Coody, Dave Stockton and Bruce Crampton.

Murphy grabbed a share of the top spot on the strength of birdies on the 15th, 16th and 17th holes of the Kaanapali Golf Club course after trailing Wargo most of the day.

"I played better than I scored," Murphy said. "I put myself in awfully good positions out there. Bermuda greens can be a little frustrating, but overall I'm happy."

Murphy, eighth on the money list with $689,543, is looking for his third victory this season. He won $1.6 million in 25 years on the regular tour, but was hobbled by an arthritic right wrist for much of the past 10 years.

A change in medication late last year brought healing to his wrist and new life to his golf game.

BUFFS: Hawks rule

yard drive. It was culminated when quarterback Chad Box hooked up with Chad Meyers for a 34-yard touchdown pass and a 21-7 second quarter lead.

With Stanton seemingly still in the game, the Hawks put the Buffaloes out to pasture when Lee was stripped of the ball at his own 31 by Braden. Braden then hustled into the endzone.

"I felt that that play did us in," said Stanton coach Bill Grissom. "Up until then I believed we still had momentum on our side until that happened."

Grissom explained that Lee was striving for extra yardage on the play when Braden committed the theft. "I hadn't seen that type of play made in a long time," he added.

The unfortunate play, however, was still very fresh in the minds of the Stanton players. Failing to get a first down, a Stanton punt only went five yards into the stiff 30-35 mph wind and it gave the Hawks a first down at the Stanton 30 yard line.

The Hawks used three plays to score as Braden went in from nine yards out for his fourth touchdown of the night.

Braden scored again with 1:26 left in the half when he teamed up with Box for a 64-yard touchdown play and a 40-7 lead.

The Buffaloes fumbled twice in the half, the second miscue coming when Lee coughed up the ball at his own 11 yard line with 1:04 remaining in the second quarter.

Wall coach Mickey Dodds decided to go for the score instead of running the clock out, which may have made a lot of the Stanton fans hot under the collar on this cool night.

"I am not mean or anything. I just felt we needed the score," Dodds said and Grissom agreed.

"I would've done the same thing. You never know what can happen in a football game," Grissom remarked.

Wall's Jon Medina scored from one-yard out for a 47-7 halftime lead.

The Buffaloes scored their final 20 points of the season in the second half on a 6-yard run by Brad Barnhill, a 2-yard run by Lee, and a 6-yard touchdown pass from Ortiz to Johnny Titsworth.

Grissom finishes up with his first winning season at Stanton, and more importantly, a winning tradition to build on for next season.

Elliott wins pole position in Slick 50 500

PHOENIX (AP) — Bill Elliott led a record assault on the one-mile Phoenix International Raceway oval Friday, winning the pole position for the Slick 50 500 as Winston Cup title contenders Rusty Wallace and Dale Earnhardt qualified sixth and 11th.

It was the second pole of the season and the 45th of his career for Elliott, a former Winston Cup champion who has had a disappointing season, with no victories and 13 top-10 finishes.

Elliott's fast lap of 129.482 mph in a Ford Thunderbird was the best among the 14 drivers who were faster than the track qualifying record of 128.141 set last October by Wallace.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The direct approach will serve you best. Financial progress is especially speedy for those entering partnerships or taking over a family business. Valuable assistance comes from an unexpected source in December. Early in 1994, travel spurs romance and opens the door to new career opportunities.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: movie director Louis Malle, singer Grace Slick, actors Harry Hamlin and Henry Winkler.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Continued moderation in spending is necessary. Loved one is less sensitive than yesterday. Concentrate on a favorite hobby or avocation. A broken romance is possible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You gain valuable insights from someone you never talked to before. A child has a positive influence on your career. A relative who says something in anger does not really mean it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Postpone a major career decision until next week. Continue to woo the object of your affections for a while longer. A change in approach could make you a winner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Put your family first but spend time with other people, too. A far-fetched scheme sounds more reasonable now than it did previously. New acquaintances add excitement to the evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep your suggestions to yourself rather than disrupt a family gathering. Relish the recent changes in your life. Acknowledge mistakes made in the past without dwelling on them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stop judging your children so harshly; be more tactful. Romance is on a smooth course. Confide your hopes and ambitions to someone who will safeguard your secrets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A clean-up program helps you beautify your environment considerably. Inspect sales merchandise carefully before making purchases. Loved ones are in a friendly, receptive mood.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Buying in bulk is a great way for families to reduce their grocery bills. Although your finances are still less than ideal, the situation is not critical.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): All forms of gambling are best avoided. Something said in jest could be taken the wrong way. An apology and small gift is a fine way to make amends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Events taking place at a distance could alter your plans. Travel should be postponed. You can keep things together if you try harder. Host a party with a good friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Not a good day to make new moves. Stick to what you know best and avoid getting involved in other people's marital problems. Prompt home repairs will minimize damage.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emotional and physical well-being have you on a natural high. Games of skill and team activities unleash your star quality. Your efforts to be more gregarious will please loved one.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are quick to love but slow to forgive. They find it very difficult to remain friendly with someone who has done them an injustice. As adults, these Scorpios will be interested in conducting their own investigation into the mysteries of life and death. Medical research is just one field in which they could find considerable success. Energetic and determined, these Scorpios are willing to put in long hours to see a project through to completion.

Kennedy says his remarks jokes about football rivalry

AUBURN, Ala. — Robert F. Kennedy Jr. can't seem to apologize enough for his fightin' words over football.

Kennedy told a University of Alabama crowd on Oct. 6 that he was a big football fan of the Tuscaloosa school.

He said he hated Auburn University, "not just the football team, the whole school and I would say that if I was talking in Auburn."

Kennedy, who lived year in Alabama during the 1970s to write a book about a federal judge, apologized and said his remarks were a joke about the "traditional rivalry between Auburn and Alabama."

This week, he sent Auburn and the media a photo of himself holding an Auburn pennant and wearing an Auburn T-shirt and cap.

Some stores around the Auburn campus have posted Kennedy's remarks in their windows, including a bookstore run by City Council member Trey Johnston.

"I have respected the Kennedy family over the years for what they did in politics," he said. "I was just disappointed that one of the members of the family said something like that. He should be more politically sensitive."

Kennedy, 39, teaches environmental law at Pace University in New York.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. — Stacy Keach played a tough guy on TV, but he's a duffer on the golf course.

Keach, vacationing at The Greenbrier resort, stood back with others Thursday to watch PGA Hall of Famer Sam Snead hit a bucket of balls.

The actor, with a 20 handicap, had his picture taken with Snead, who's golf pro emeritus at the resort.

"This is my second visit to The Greenbrier," said Keach, who was Mike Hammer on television. "I like the food and the golf."

DETROIT — A dinner for soon-to-retire Mayor Coleman Young was missing a key ingredient: The mayor.

More than 1,300 people showed up Thursday night for the $125- to $250-a-plate dinner to raise money for a scholarship fund. But Young, 75, skipped it because of a "mild respiratory infection," said his physician and cousin, Dr. Claud Young.

The mayor has chronic emphysema. The doctor said he ordered Young to stay home and avoid the chilly evening and the large crowd.

"By 6 p.m., we were still debating the issue," Claud Young said. "He wanted to come. Sometimes, he doesn't listen to me. This time he did."

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Shelby Foote, who built his reputation on the Civil War, had an observation or two about the movie "Gettysburg."

On Martin Sheen's portrayal of Robert E. Lee as "nervous and excitable" on the day of the big battle: "That's the way Lee was then. It was very bold of him (Sheen)."

Usually, Lee is depicted as stoic and serene, Foote said.

On Tom Berenger, who played Confederate Gen. James Long street: He "had a beard that looked like he bought it down on Franklin Street," a reference to the strip of bars and stores near the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Foote, 76, was in town this week to participate in a new writer-in-residence program at the school, his alma mater.

The novelist and historian wrote "The Civil War: A Narrative" and was featured at length in the 1990 public television documentary "The Civil War."

A wee baby boom at "CBS This Morning": a boy was born Thursday morning to Andrea Joyce, a sports reporter for the network, and Harry Smith, an anchor of the morning program. The Smith baby weighed 8 pounds, 13 ounces and is named Grady Thomas Smith.

Grady, meet Jared — that's Jared Brandon Cohen, who was born Oct. 15 to Smith's co-anchor, Paula Zahn.

Both mothers had the same due date, Oct. 23. That's not the only similarity: both also received congratulations from the White House.

Thursday, President Clinton videotaped a message to be broadcast Friday morning: "This is an amazing contribution you are all making to the expansion of the American family, and I just want you to know we are all very grateful for that."

Cus D'Amato, who was the dean of boxing managers and trainers when he died in 1985, ran the Gramercy Gym at 14th Street and Irving Place in Manhattan for more than 40 years.

Thursday, officials of a neighborhood revitalization group made sure his name would not disappear from the area.

The gym was razed earlier this year to make way for low-income housing, so the 14th Street Union Square Local Development Corp. erected a sign naming part of 14th Street "Cus D'Amato Way." Floyd Patterson, Jose Torres and Vinnie Ferguson, fighters he managed, participated in the ceremony.

Then the celebration moved indoors with cocktails at the Con Edison building on the block.

Numbers back favored Cowboys

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — You really don't have to be a rocket scientist to understand why the Philadelphia Eagles are a double-digit underdog Sunday against the Dallas Cowboys.

The Eagles have only six sacks.

They lead the NFC in turnovers with 20.

They lead the league in fumbles with 12.

They're 19th against the run, allowing 115 yards per game.

They're 10th against the pass, not too bad, but the Cowboys have the best passing offense in the league with Troy Aikman throwing to Michael Irvin, Jay Novacek, Smith and others.

Dallas' Emmitt Smith in four games has gained 312 yards, more than the Eagles' leader, Herschel Walker with 260 in six.

The Eagles haven't scored a touchdown in the first quarter since the opening game.

The Cowboys, since their opening loss to Washington, have allowed just 11.4 points per game. The defense has given up just 43 points in the last five games, an 8.6 average, and has allowed just one offensive touchdown in the last 11 quarters or one TD in the last 28 offensive possessions.

Since Randall Cunningham went down with a broken leg against the New York Jets in the fourth game of the season, Philadelphia has scored a total 16 points in two losing game, slipping to 4-2.

If all of this isn't enough, one look at the defensive front four starting against the Cowboys delivers a telling message. It isn't Reggie White, Jerome Brown, Mike Pitts, Mike Golic and Clyde Simmons, who just two years ago formed one of the NFL's all-time defensive units.

Try Andy Harmon, rookie Leonard Renfro, backup Gerald Nichols and a wounded Simmons. The Cowboys' Smith must be salivating.

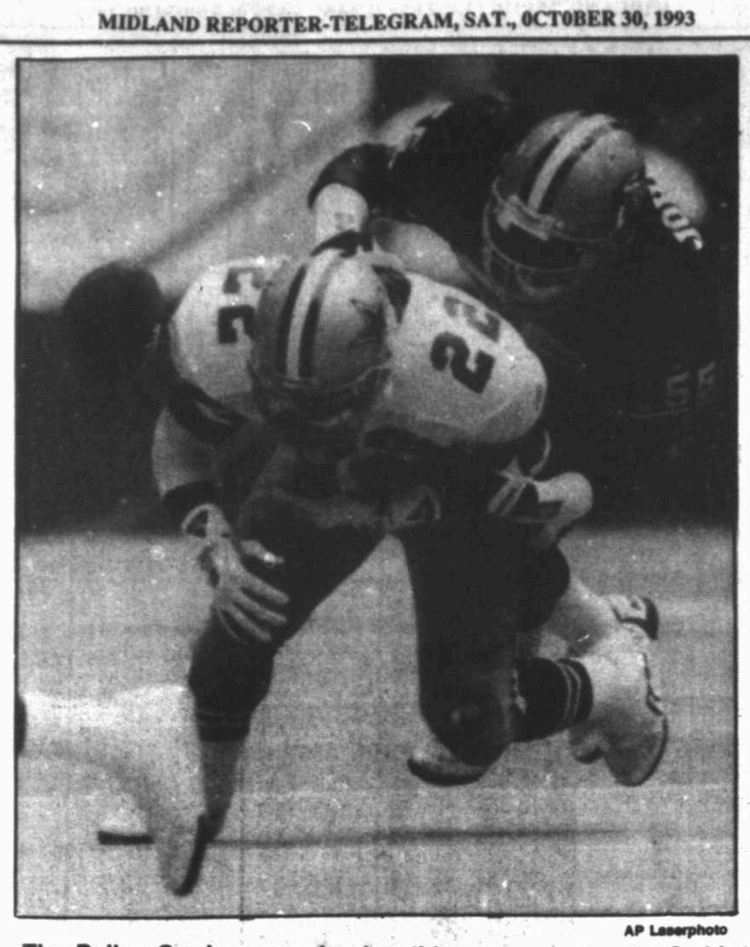

The Eagles have suffered 11 injuries this season, all to first-rate players, including Cunningham and Fred Barnett, one of the league's top wide receivers.

Despite all of the depressing stats, coach Rich Kotite still manages to effuse optimism. His team doesn't look like a winner, but it's still talking like one.

Linebacker Seth Joyner doesn't concede a point to the Cowboys, let alone 10 or 11.

"I don't think anybody is an 11-point favorite over us or anyone for that matter," Joyner said. "Anything can happen on a football field on a given Sunday. The defense is confident.

"We lost a lot of people to injury. We haven't played very solidly at times. But we had some good practices over the bye week. We got back to some basics, got a lot of work done."

The Dallas Cowboys are hoping this scene — Emmitt Smith fumbling — is not repeated this week. The Cowboys play in a key NFC East matchup against Philadelphia Sunday.

Walker, too, expressed hopefulness.

"We got to go out and beat the man we got to beat," Walker said. "Right now it's such a tight race. No one is dominating. Anyone, everyone is getting beat. What you got to do is win as many as you can. This is important for us to get back in the swing of things. Right now we have to beat the Cowboys."

Dolphins to play for tie

Associated Press

■ NFL Roundup

The Miami Dolphins will be playing for a tie Sunday.

Of course, the Dolphins hope to beat the Kansas City Chiefs, and if they do, they will boost Don Shula into a tie with the late George Halas as the NFL's winningest coach with 324 victories.

The Dolphins (5-1), who won last week with Scott Mitchell making his first start at quarterback in place of injured Dan Marino, need to win the home game to be assured of staying in a first-place tie with Buffalo in the AFC East.

Miami is the only team Kansas City quarterback Joe Montana has not beaten in a regular season game. Should the Chiefs (5-1) make Montana 1-1 against the Dolphins, they would eliminate the possibility of dropping into a first-place tie with the Los Angeles Raiders in the AFC West.

Montana did lead San Francisco to a 38-16 win over Miami in Super Bowl XIX.

In other Sunday NFL games, Dallas will be at Philadelphia, the New York Jets at New York Giants, New Orleans at Phoenix, Detroit at Minnesota, Chicago at Green Bay, San Diego at the Raiders, the Los Angeles Rams at San Francisco, Seattle at Denver, New England at Indianapolis and Tampa Bay at Atlanta.

Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Houston and Cincinnati are idle.

Washington plays at Buffalo Monday night.

Cowboys at Eagles Dallas (4-2) will pit the passing of Troy Aikman, the NFC's top-ranked quarterback, and the running of Emmitt Smith against a tough Eagles defense in a bid for a fifth straight victory. Ken O'Brien will be the third starting quarterback this season for Philadelphia (4-2).

Jets at Giants The Giants (5-1) can remain atop the NFC East with a victory over a visiting team that also calls Giants Stadium home. The Jets (2-4) will be trying to snap a three-game losing streak and take a 4-3 lead in the series.

Saints at Cardinals New Orleans (5-2) badly needs a fourth straight victory over the Cardinals, after having lost their last two games. Phoenix (2-5) would like to beat some team other than Washington.

Lions at Vikings The Vikings (4-2), coming off a Monday night win over Chicago, can take a half-game lead over Detroit (5-2) in the NFC Central. Stopping Barry Sanders, the NFL's leading rusher with 726 yards, and Rodney Peete, who has completed 60.2 percent of his passes, should be a stiff test for the Minnesota defense.

Bears at Packers The Bears will try to cash in on their home-field advantage at Green Bay in this battle between longtime rivals, each 3-3 this season. Chicago has won eight of the past nine meetings at Lambeau Field and leads the series 81-58-6.

Chargers at Raiders The Raiders (4-2) hope to benefit again from their new faces of 1993 to at least stay within a game of first-place Kansas City in the AFC West. Rookies James Jett, Raghib Ismail and Greg Robinson have accounted for 415 of the club's 1,309 receiving yards (32 percent). John Friesz will make his second straight start at quarterback for San Diego (2-4).

Rams at 49ers The Rams (2-5) will have to figure out a way to stop the passing of Steve Young if they are to avoid a sixth straight loss to San Francisco (4-3). Young leads the NFL with 145 completions and 1,656 yards and is second with a 68.7 completion percentage. He also is tied with Denver's John Elway for the league lead with 10 touchdown passes.

Seahawks at Broncos Seattle (4-3) is above the .500 mark after seven games for the first time since the Seahawks were 4-3 in 1988. Denver (3-3) has lost two games by 3 points each. It will be the first visit for Rick Mirer, the Seahawks' rookie quarterback, to Mile High Stadium, where Elway is king.

Patriots at Colts This battle at Indianapolis might not be important in the general NFL scheme of things, but it figures to be close and exciting. Nine of the last 10 games between these clubs have been decided by 6 points or less and two of the past three games were decided in overtime. The Patriots are 1-6 and the Colts 2-4.

Buccaneers at Falcons The Falcons (2-5) upset New Orleans last week and are seeking a third straight victory. Tampa Bay trails the series only 6-5, but never has won at Atlanta.

Colleges pursue Archie Manning's son

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — For a 17-year-old high school senior who has completed only one game this season, the quarterback at tiny Isidore Newman High School sure has attracted a lot of attention.

Sports Illustrated has a story coming out on him. ESPN has shot a feature about his career. Newspapers want to interview him. Colleges from around the nation have been calling, and everyone, it seems, wants to put in a word for their alma mater.

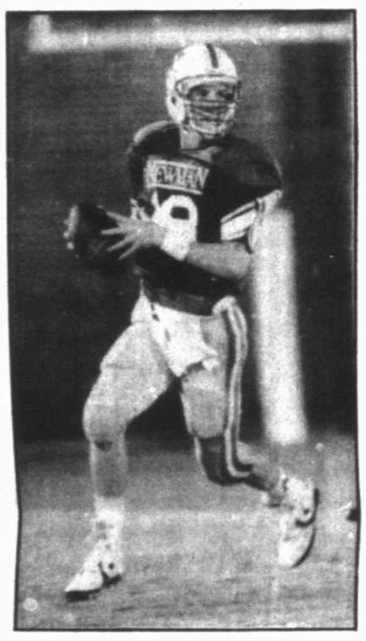

"It's been a little bit hectic," says Payton Manning. "I guess I've heard from about 55 schools and a lot of people who just want to talk to me about where to go."

Manning has more going for him than his famous father, Archie.

"He's the best kid I've ever coached and I've been at it 17 years," said Frank Gendusa, the Newman offensive coordinator and principal. "He's the prototype quarterback — 6-foot-5, 205 pounds with a cannon for an arm. He can throw the football 60-70 yards and hit exactly what he wants."

Manning has led Newman to an 8-0 record this season, completing 107 of 167 attempts for 1,848 yards, 31 touchdowns and four interceptions. A three-year starter, Manning has been very consistent. In his junior year, he had 2,400 yards and 30 touchdowns. As a sophomore, he threw for 2,300 yards and 23 touchdowns. He has only had four losses in his high school career and two of those were in the state playoffs.

"I don't think there is a top 25 school in the nation we haven't heard from," Gendusa said. "You name it and they've contacted us about Payton. Everybody wants him. He's definitely the best quarterback in this area and college coaches tell us he's the best in the nation."

Archie Manning's son Payton Manning looks to pass earlier this month.

Many people think Manning is a cinch to go to Mississippi. After all, before joining the New Orleans Saints, his father dazzled the Southeastern Conference and the nation while there, and his older brother, Cooper, already is at the school.

"I hear all the time that that's where I'm going," Manning said. "Everybody seems to know it but me. It's one of the schools I'm considering, but I really haven't decided yet."

With a 3.3 grade average and a challenging schedule in one of the top academic secondary schools in the nation, Manning could pretty much have his pick of schools.

"I'm going to make all my visits after the season," he said. "Then I want to decide as quickly as possible, both for myself and to let the schools know so they can go on to other people. To be happy, I want to play as soon as possible, and the schools I'm looking at all have good winning traditions."

In addition to Ole Miss, Manning plans to visit Michigan and Tennessee. He has not decided on the other two visits yet.

Archie Manning was named the quarterback of the quarter-century from 1950-75 in the SEC, was a first team all-America and all-SEC while at Ole Miss, set SEC records, and was the MVP of both the Sugar and Gator bowls.

Payton Manning says that's a heavy legacy.

"Anywhere I go there will be pressure," he said. "Everyone knows about my dad and everybody knows about him at college or in the pros. I'm aware of that, but my father has always taught me just to relax and that football should be fun."

That's one of a number of valuable lessons he says his father taught him, and none of them require work on plays or football form.

He can still remember the boos that greeted his father so many Sundays in the Superdome when fans took out their frustration over years of losing.

Despite his Pro Bowl appearances and records that still stand, Archie Manning was the target of more than a little scorn while with the Saints.

"I still remember some of it," said Payton Manning. "He always just let it roll off him, though. It's a terrible thing to go through, but he's taught me how to handle it. He's also taught me that all the good press and publicity can go bad and change on you."

Although his interest in football came from his father, he has never been pressured to play the sport, Manning said. Until this year he played baseball, basketball and football. He dropped basketball because it overlapped with football and would interfere with his college visits.

His parents are not pressuring him about which college to attend, either.

"They always tell me that whatever I decide will be the right decision," Manning said. "My dad says if I go to Michigan they'll still come and see me play. I know that. He's always been ready to back me up so I know he will now."

Jackson gives Mavs first preseason win

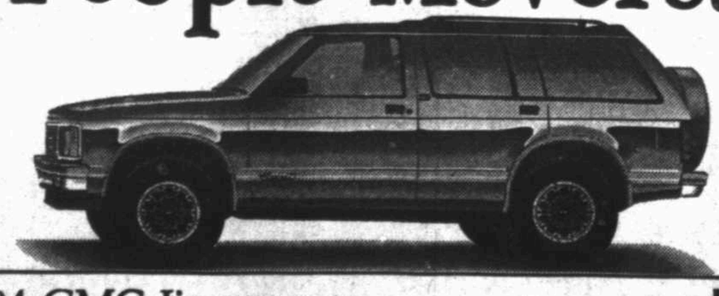

DALLAS (AP) — Jim Jackson scored 10 of his 22 points to help Dallas to a 30-14 lead after one quarter and the Mavericks went on to their first exhibition victory, 91-75 over the Los Angeles Clippers Friday night.

Dallas (1-4) got 15 points and nine rebounds from rookie center Darren Morningstar, who took another step in his longshot bid to survive the final cut.

Rookie Harold Ellis led the Clippers (5-2) with 11 points.

Lafayette Lever and rookie Jamal Mashburn added 11 points each for Dallas.

Welcome to Tim's Nightmare

■ Tim Burton's new stop-motion animated film unwraps pre-Christmas fun, fantasy — and fright.

By Bob Strauss
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Tim Burton's "The Nightmare Before Christmas" isn't exactly going to bring joy to the world. But in many ways, it is a joy to behold.

The most elaborate stop-motion animated feature ever made, it's a nicely bent puppet show that never quite transports us beyond the knowledge that we're watching puppets. Although "Nightmare's" three-dimensional ghouls and goblins move more smoothly and with more personality than any we've seen before, director Henry Selick and his army of skilled artisans still can't quite match the kind of fantastic fluidity found in Disney's best cel animation.

However, that feature cartoon crowd hasn't yet come close to the subversive wit producer-creator Burton unleashes here. Blessed with the cheerfully macabre visual sense we've come to expect from the director of "Beetlejuice," "Edward Scissorhands" and the "Batman" movies, "Nightmare" is a clever comedy of misperception that affectionately but thoroughly demolishes holiday pieties.

At the same time, "Nightmare" is a charming children's musical (songs

Paula Poundstone's skewed look at life becomes a weekly comedy-variety show beginning tonight.

By Lynn Elber
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Trust sardonic Paula Poundstone to take a mildly skewed approach to bringing up baby.

Or babies. There's the 11-week-old foster boy she's caring for, who vies for attention during an interview with strategic wailing. And there's "The Paula Poundstone Show," her new ABC comedy hour debuting Saturday.

When it comes to the tot's hair grooming, for instance,

■ 'The Paula Poundstone Show' premieres tonight at 9, on ABC (KMID-Cable Ch. 3).

Poundstone lets one of her six cats do the honors with affectionate licks.

"Would you rather his hair look like my cat's fur or my hair?" she asks, rhetorically. You go with the baby book, she says, but you also go with what feels right.

Same with her new show. The comedian is fighting a series of minor skirmishes with the network to create a program that's a comfortable fit for her, if not cut from typical TV cloth.

"I suppose it's a cross between a variety show and a talk show, I guess. But I don't really have a good one-word description," Poundstone says. "I realize this has somehow bothered people."

There are fresh cautionary tales out there about folks who said they wanted to be different, but had a hard time describing exactly what that meant.

Dennis now menaces home video market

N.Y. Times News Service

Dennis the Menace. PG, 1993. Warner, $24.96.

When you've got a 6-year-old boy around, you don't need George Romero or Stephen King to strike fear in the heat.

We're referring of course to none other the Dennis Mitchell, the tow-headed tyke who can do more damage to a neighborhood than Hurricane Andrew. And in half the time.

Warner Bros. thought this remake of the early '60s TV series would be as big as "Home Alone," what with the Midas-touched John Hughes adapting Hank Ketcham's characters for the screen.

■ New releases

No such luck. Not even with the inspired casting of Walter Matthau as the irascible Mr. Wilson. Not even with newcomer Mason Gamble trying to steal our hearts as the world's most well-meaning pint-sized menace. No.

Director Nick Castle's "Dennis the Menace" is undone by the same brutal cruelty Hughes used in Home Alone I and II.

Vincent Price, shown in character as Roderick Usher, in "The House of Usher," from 1962, died earlier this week of lung cancer.

He gave us quite a fright

By Bob Strauss
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Vincent Price was so good at tickling and terrifying audiences at the same time, it hardly diminishes his multifaceted achievements to declare him the last of the great horror movie stars.

■ An Appreciation

Only his frequent co-star, the equally versatile Peter Lorre, matched Price at projecting gruesome glee.

Price died of lung cancer Monday at age 82. It's nice to think that his spirit is now in an eternal realm filled with the things that he loved and shared so generously on Earth — fine art, gourmet cooking, witty conversation.

But one can't help suspecting that, if Price wound up in a less

Twenty-five songs that shaped the '70s

Patterson

As surely as the 1960s made a comeback several years ago, it appears the '70s are now on the verge of resurfacing. The Bee Gees have released a new album. James Taylor has just come out with a live offering. Several '70s-era situation comedies find themselves flourishing in re-runs on Nickelodeon and other stations.

The people who grew up during the disco decade are now well into their thirties. We're the next generation after the baby boomers. We don't have a name yet, but some marketer somewhere will surely pin one on us before long.

Stop and think for a moment if you will: The Bee Gees. Can we possibly let these chipmunk-voiced crooners return for what would be at least there third go 'round? Wasn't once enough when we heard, "Whether you're a mother or whether you're a brother you'll be Stayin' Alive, Stayin Alive/Ha, ha, ha, ha, Stayin Aliiiiiiiiiiiiivvvvvvvve." Haven't we been fully saturated with the Bee Gees for one lifetime?

The '70s will always go down as the decade of disco. The Good John (Lennon) was out, two other Johns (Travolta and Olivia Newton) were in (God help us).

But there are other recollections of the '70s much more prevalent than Saturday Night Fever and the infernal K.C. and the Sunshine Band.

Here then, is a list of 25 songs that shaped the '70s. They're not, by any means, the most popular songs of the decade, just some of the ones to remember when the '70s resurgence — with all its disco in tow — makes its return.

(This list is meant to fold up and stash in your wallet if you grew up 20 years ago or so. It is then meant to be pulled out and studied if ever we hear Whitney Houston one day singing her version of Donna Summer's "Hot Stuff."

"Life's Been Good," Joe Walsh. Best party song of the decade.

"Stairway to Heaven," Led Zeppelin. The grand-

POUNDSTONE: Another promise to be 'different'

(From 1D)

Remember "The Chevy Chase Show"? Talk show hosted by a tall guy, movie star type, lasted shy of two months? Going in, Chase and Fox Broadcasting Co. said the show would be different. Uh huh.

Now comes Poundstone, echoing those comments. Uh oh.

Granted, Poundstone is not Chase. She's had years of comedy club seasoning; he had one year of "Saturday Night Live." She's shown herself to be adroit and loose in unscripted TV, most recently during the Emmy Awards; Chase fell agonizingly flat working without a net.

And Poundstone, 33, seems to take a more modest view of how much you can stretch the boundaries of television.

"I'm not reinventing the wheel here," she says. "I'm not saying, 'Ooooh it's going to be the most different thing anybody's seen.' "

Modest, too, in other ways. Fox leased a Hollywood theater, performed an elaborate renovation, then grandly anointed it the Chevy Chase Theatre (the name was quickly exorcised post-cancellation).

Poundstone is taping her show in a Los Angeles warehouse, which she has jokingly dubbed the Herb Rucklehouse Theater. "It's just one of her musings," offers an ABC publicist.

Although the comedian would like the show to be broadcast live, for now the network is insisting on tape. Its first airing is 9 p.m. CDT; it settles into an 8 p.m. CST Saturday time slot Nov. 6 (after the time changes).

So what happens for an hour, and what's different?

First of all, Poundstone wants the opening titles to vary each week. A small point, she says, but symbolic of how hidebound the high-stakes, big-money world of TV can be.

"It sounds so silly, and in the scope of the whole world it's a goofy topic, no matter how you look at it," she says.

"But even just that, just saying I want to do the opening different every week, I can't tell you how many hours of meetings I sat in as a result of this idea."

"There will be some sketch stuff, but it's not the driving force of any given night," Poundstone continues. "There will be some celebrities, but it's not celebrity-driven at all."

Expect conversation, but not always with a star. Poundstone is just as eager to talk to the audience or one of the Regular People she plans to invite.

"I love Mary Tyler Moore and I'm really hoping I can get her to come on and do something on the show, but for me that bears the same weight as having the guy who fixes my jukebox."

Expect comedy bits such as one with economists — real economists (what people will do to get on TV) — shouting out their pet theories while spinning on an amusement park ride akin to Disneyland's Tea Cups.

If people don't get a laugh, Poundstone figures, they might get an education.

PRICE: Horrors only a small percentage of work

hospitable eternity, he'd be just as happy strangling and decapitating old cronies like Lorre, Boris Karloff and Basil Rathbone until the end of time.

"Vincent just so obviously enjoyed his work, and he never turned his back on horror films, even if they were just a percentage of the 100 or so movies he made," said Forrest J. Ackerman, founder and editor of Famous Monsters of Filmland magazine and, coincidentally, so close a Price look-alike he could have stepped out of one of the actor's seminal fright films, "House of Wax."

"This leaves a big, black hole in the future of fantasy-horror films. I don't consider myself any replacement for him at all."

Or anyone else, for that matter. "The first time I remember hearing him was as the voice of the Invisible Man (in Price's fourth film, "The Invisible Man Returns," 1940)," Ackerman noted. "That rare combination of charm and cynicism in his voice has sent a little tingle up our spines ever since."

That knowing, slightly fey voice served Price well in all manner of situations.

In what turned out to be his last movie role, Price played the benign mad scientist who created the artistic but feared and misunderstood Edward Scissorhands. Vincent Price was a real artist whose most effective medium was fear. But rather than being misunderstood, it's safe to say that he was beloved by everyone he ever frightened.

PATTERSON: The '70s offered plenty of good music father of hard rock, but at 8:01 in length, only ¼ of this song can be considered "hard," musically at least.

(From 1D)

"Take it Easy," The Eagles. Maybe the beginning of the country-rock era.

"Dreams," Fleetwood Mac. Most popular song from one of the best five or 10 albums ever made.

"The Chain," Fleetwood Mac. Best song from same album, and one of the best songs of the decade.

"Sweet Home Alabama," Lynyrd Skynyrd. Almost 20 years later, it still plays almost anthem-like across the Southern states.

"Oh, Girl," The Chi-Lites. R&B didn't come any smoother.

"Aja," Steely Dan. Only one of the best pieces of recorded music ever. One of the most intricate, yet elegant pieces of jazz-pop to ever see vinyl, and a drummer's masterpiece.

"(I've Been) Searchin' So Long," Chicago. Peter Cetera should've retired after he recorded this. And Chicago should've disbanded.

"Heart of Gold," Neil Young. Still sounds fresh today.

"The Pretender," Jackson Browne. Browne's crowning achievement.

"Piano Man," Billy Joel. Why hasn't someone ever turned this song into a Movie of the Week?

"Livin' For the City," Stevie Wonder. A tragic story of murder and racism in New York City, it's unfortunately just as timely today.

"Teenage Wasteland," The Who. Eat your heart out Nirvana, Pearl Jam. This is how angst is supposed to sound.

"Blinded By the Light," Manfred Mann. Few things sound better in a pair of headphones.

"Breakfast in America," Supertramp. Blatantly commercial, but it sounded so good, who cared?

"Short People," Randy Newman. If he released this song in the p.c. '90s, he'd have to call it "Vertically Challenged People," and that just doesn't have the same ring to it.

"Jersey Girl," Bruce Springsteen. Like hockey, a lot of people in Texas can't relate to his life-in-Jersey themes. From "Born to Run," the Springsteen album against which all others are measured.

"Turn the Page," Bob Seger. If Tom Cruise really knew music, he'd have been lip-synchin' to this, Seger's best.

"Funeral For a Friend/Love Lies Bleeding," Elton John. Classical meets pop in one of the best songs ever recorded. At 11:06, this song could still stand to be about five minutes longer.

"Levon," Elton John. A Bernie Taupin masterpiece.

"Count on Me," Jefferson Starship. One of the last good songs we heard from the Starship before they crashed and burned.

"Layla," Derek and the Dominos. The highlight of the British invasion from the decade.

"Tumbling Dice," Rolling Stones, Linda Ronstadt. It's hard to go wrong with either version, or either artist.

"Shower the People," James Taylor. One of those feel-good songs you can't shake the rest of the day once it gets in your head.

So you see, the '70s weren't that bad, at least musically.

Oh, and ... 26. "Stayin' Alive," The Bee Gees. You may hate it, but I bet you'd listen to at least a few bars of it if you heard it today.

NIGHTMARE: Animated film occasionally drags in spots

by "Simpsons" scorer Danny Elfman) that, despite monsters aplenty, should delight all but the most supersensitive children.

After all, just how scary can a well-meaning beanstalk like Jack Skellington be? The Pumpkin King of Halloweentown, Jack has dedicated his (after-)life to organizing the funnest fright-filled Halloweens we in the real world could possibly enjoy. Jack lives in an "Addams Family"-dream dimension, where everyone from the melting wax-faced man to Sally, the living rag doll, works all year long to create the perfect holiday.

But what these happy horrors don't realize is that every other holiday has a similar town working for it. Despondent over the repetitiveness of the job he does so well, Jack accidentally wanders into Christmastown. Enchanted by the toys, the elves and the general good cheer, the inspired Pumpkin King rushes home to explain the strange concept to his uncomprehending but enthusiastic co-workers.

Since Jack doesn't quite get the gist of Christmas spirit either, the resulting plan has as many loose screws as a "some assembly required" Christmas gift. Jack orders mischievous trick-or-treaters Lock, Shock and Barrel to kidnap this Sandy Claws character (typically, they come back from the first try with a sackful of Easter Bunny).

The freaks then set about improving Christmas, um, their way. Come Dec. 24, Frankenstein reindeer pull Jack's flying coffin into the night sky to deliver tinsel-strewn trauma to the world's waiting children.

Those familiar with the limitations of stop-motion — basically, moving articulated puppets by incremental degrees between single-frame exposures of film — will be greatly impressed by the sheer amount of motion Selick and company cram into any given scene. The depth and detail of the miniature sets is equally awesome, as is the way such animation unfriendly elements as water, fire and fog blend effortlessly into the show.

But once "Nightmare" runs its brief (and occasionally draggy) 75 minutes, you've only seen a show. Even done as best it can be, stop-motion is still too distancing a medium to completely swallow a viewer into a make-believe world.
