Administration won't alter budget cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, predicting the economy will sour again later this year, insists the president's tax and budget-cutting package should not be sidetracked by the, unexpectedly strong economic growth recorded for the first quarter of 1981.

President Reagan's economic spokesmen said Monday's report that the nation's economy grew at its fastest rate in nearly three years does not dampen the need for the program the administration is trying to push through Congress.

Nor do the robust economic figures alter forecasts of a sluggish economy for the rest of this year, contended Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, and David A. Stockman, Reagan's budget director.

In an effort to build support for his revitalization proposals, Reagan and his top advisers have spent the last few months describing the economy as being in deep trouble and in need of quick, dramatic remedies.

However, the Commerce Department reported that the real gross national product — the value of all goods and services produced in the quarter after discounting for inflation — grew at an annual rate of 6.5 percent. The figure was substantially higher than economists had predicted.

Stockman said the report was welcome news but cautioned that the figures "are hardly indicative of any trend" that Congress should consider as it ponders the president's program.

"Ours is a permanent program designed to deal with embedded problems" in the economy, the budget director said.

Weidenbaum said government and private economists agree that the rest of the year will see "a slow-growth economy." The consensus is that the economy will show a slight decline in the second quarter and an increase of about 1.5 percent for all of 1981, Weidenbaum said.

He added that the brisk economic growth of the first quarter should not "overshadow the fact that inflation and unemployment show little sign of near-term improvement."

The growth rate, helped along by strong consumer spending, showed the biggest quarterly gain since a 9 percent rise recorded in the second quarter of 1978.

Real GNP rose 3.8 percent in the final three months of 1980 as the economy recovered from a severe spring recession. For all of 1980, the economy declined 0.2 percent, the first full-year contraction since 1975.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige acknowledged that gloomier figures might improve chances of congressional passage of Reagan's tax-cut and spending-reduction proposals.

Baldrige conceded that fast economic growth could revive fears of a new surge in inflation that might be fueled further by the 30 percent cut in personal income tax rates Reagan is proposing for the next three years.

However, Stephen Entin, a deputy assistant treasury secretary for economic policy, said the rapid expansion of the economy in the first quarter makes "tax cuts even more important."

"We're not trying to stimulate consumption," which could bring worse inflation, he said. "We're trying to increase capacity before the economy bumps into it and the squeeze forces a halt to growth."

The administration's tax cuts are designed to increase savings and investment needed to expand facilities and create new jobs, he said. Those who see the tax cuts as merely stimulating demand, and thus adding to inflation, "are simply wrong," Entin said.

Although most private economists predict growth will slow or stop in the April-June quarter, Washington economist Michael K. Evans said at least some gain can be expected.

"The economy is not really going to be much weaker in the second quarter," he said, though neither he nor the most optimistic other analysts are forecasting anything like another 6.5 percent gain.

Several economists have pointed out that the first-quarter figure was high at least partly because of strong consumer spending, which could have been influenced by heavy promotional activities such as the successful auto-rebates program.

Bush practicing his 'hard-sell' technique on Dallas businesses

DALLAS (AP) — Using a "hard-sell" approach, Vice President George Bush told members of the Dallas business community that nothing short of the president's economic package will cut taxes and rein government spending.

The country can expect a balanced budget "by 1984," he said Monday, if the entire Reagan program can be put into effect as of June 30.

Bush acknowledged that President Reagan's economic proposal has come under severe criticism by Democratic members of Congress, but he said an alternative plan from the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee would offer only "short-term" benefits and was a "poor" imitation of the Reagan plan.

Bush, returning to his home state for the first time since the assassination attempt on the president, said the country "can't afford to accept substitutes that would water down or otherwise weaken the cure needed for our country's economic recovery."

Reagan's program calls for cuts in government spending, expected to affect about 300 federal agencies and programs, and a three-year, 30 percent, across-the-board cut in income tax rates.

About 40 health and social services programs and numerous grants would be affected by the cuts in government spending, aimed at a budget savings of $48.6 billion, Bush said.

States would receive aid in block grants, versus categorical grants, and it would be up to the state to decide how to spend the money, Bush said amid applause from more than 1,000 businessmen and women.

The Democratic compromise calls for a one-year cut of varying amounts, changes in brackets to offset inflation, and savings and investment incentives.

But Bush said the president "is in no mood to compromise."

"President Reagan's program must not be diluted if it's to bring about the economic recovery the American people need, want, and indeed, mandated last November," he said.

Bush also pushed a Reagan proposal for regulatory relief in American industry.

An example, he said, is Reagan's recently announced plans for cutting back regulations in the automobile industry. Bush said the plan calls for "reviewing" regulations such as time limits allowed companies for compliance with environmental standards and passive restraints, such as air bags.

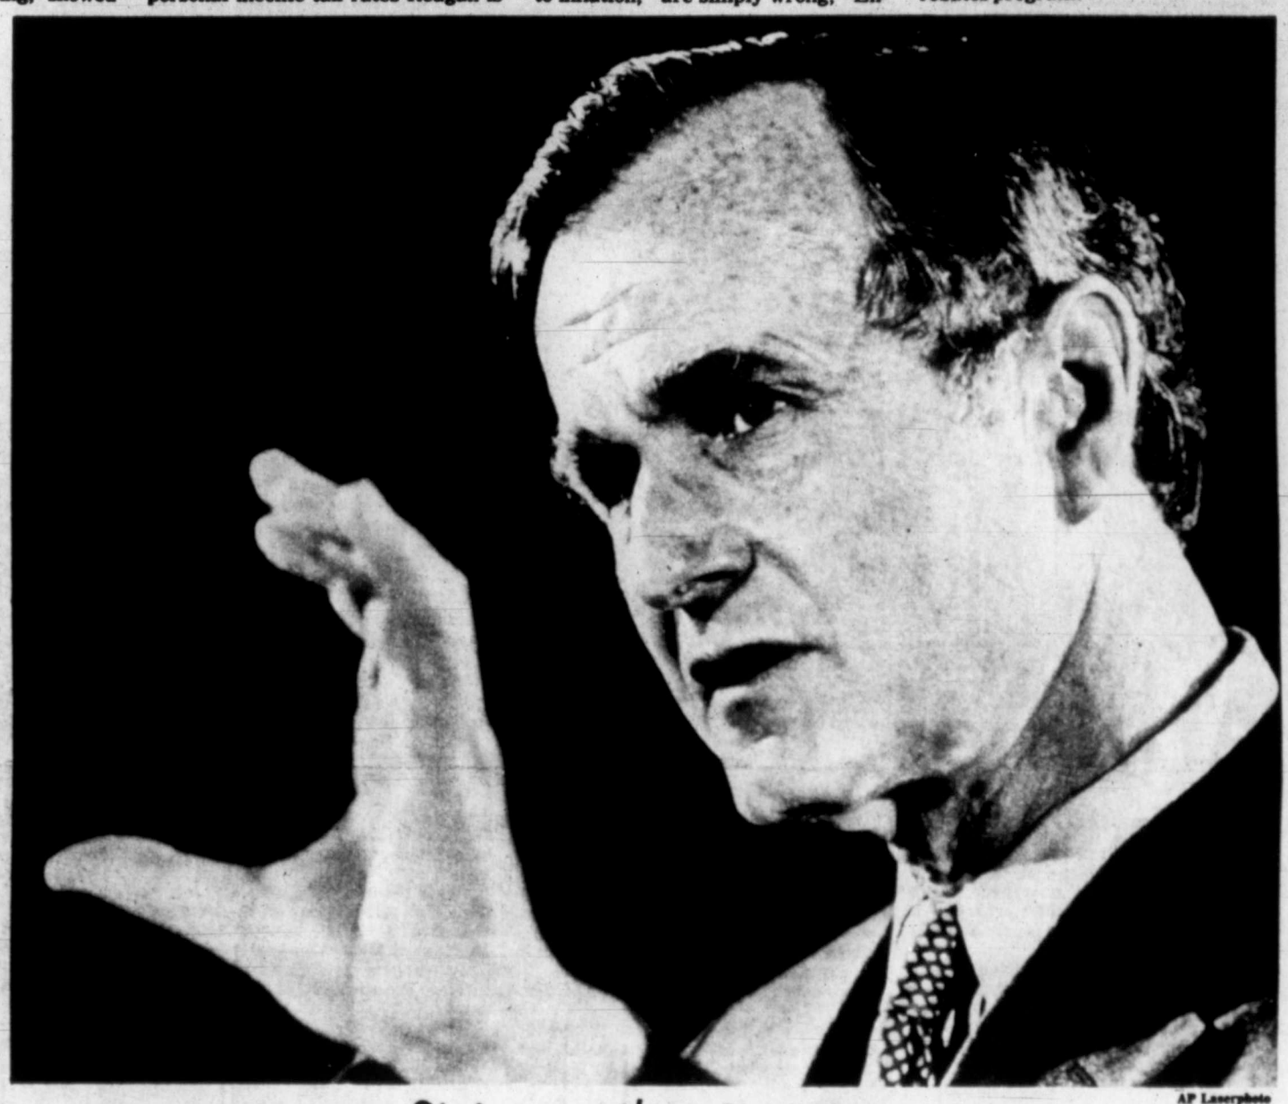

In a question and answer session after his remarks, Bush defended the adminstration's position on El Salvador and offered his viewpoint on how to deal with immigration problems involving Mexico.

Bush said the Justice Department is reviewing the "whole immigration" issue and that one possible solution would be to "register" aliens crossing the border into the United States.

The registered aliens would be permitted to "come into this country for a period of time to work," he said.

"A possible solution would combine legalization with a sensitive program to help Mexican industry (along the northern border)," he said. "This may solve some of our (immigration) problems."

Bush also said the United States was responsible for "checking the flow of weaponry (from communist countries) into El Salvador."

WASHINGTON—His name sounds much like the President's and even the White House press staff has been known to mispronounce it. But Donald Regan, Secretary of the Treasury, is only one of Reagan's top generals directing the battle for passage of the President's economic recovery program.

Regan's forte is the tax cut portion of the program, and that's what he spent most of his time explaining during a briefing for Sunbelt media representatives in the executive office building. Although legislators on the opposite side of the philosophical fence have agreed to the need for budget cuts, it is the tax reduction portion that has been controversial.

He answered a statement made earlier in the week by U.S. Rep. Jim Jones, D-Oklahoma, that the Administration was willing to compromise on a one-year tax cut rather than the President's request for 30 percent over three years.

Explaining that members of the Treasury Department had been sent out to explain the package to 23 Democratic congressmen, Regan said "Jones misunderstood and thought we were trying to compromise. He was the only one to gain that impression."

"You know the Congress keeps looking at the executive branch and saying 'we want to be in on the launch, as well as the landing.' Fine. We're trying to bring them in on the launch.

"The Democrats constantly say they don't understand supply-side economics. We tell them, 'sit down, we'll talk to you about it.'"

His serious demeanor belies an underlying dry touch of humor, which Regan throws into conversations in on offhand manner. Answering a question about the President "being sore" over Jones's statement that the Administration was ready to compromise on that tax cut, Regan replied, "You're right, the President was sore in more ways than one that day." He was referring to Reagan recovering from a gunshot wound to the chest.

Continuing, Regan remarked that, "The President feels his program is the right one. He does not want to compromise. He was elected to get that program passed.

"By standing still and standing firm with that program, the others are now moving toward us," he said of various legislators. "Three or four months ago, they were asking will there be tax cuts or will there be budget cuts. Now they're saying 'How much.'"

(Sung to the tune of "I feel pretty")
"Ronald Reagan, Donald Regan.
"I get Reagan and Regan confused.
"And it bugs me 'cause their names are always in the news.

"Then there's Stockman, David Stockman.
"He's the terror of Old OMB.
"Starving orphans, so the nation can end poverty.
"But we've got Al Haig, old Al Haig.
"Who makes trouble each time that he speaks.
"Can't stop talking, he's responsible for all my leaks."

According to Regan, the marginal tax rate for a median-income family of four has jumped from 17 percent in 1965 up to 24 percent in 1980. And under current law, it would grow to 32 percent in 1984. But the President's tax cut plan would keep it at almost the same level over that period with the tax rate at 23 percent in 1984.

This step, he claimed, "will play a significant role in rejuvenating the economy."

He pointed out that the President wants his program to become effective in July and is hoping that Congress will get it passed by that time so Reagan can sign it into law. This program, according to the head of the Treasury Department, "is the only plan that can offer real hope for the future with 13 million new jobs and an in-

IRA hunger striker near coma

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA hunger-striker Bobby Sands was reported about to go into a coma in Belfast's Maze Prison as young Roman Catholics rioted in Londonderry for the sixth night.

Sands, 27, was in the 52nd day of a fast demanding political status for jailed guerrrillas of the Irish Republican Army. Government officials reported he was growing "progressively weaker." His family said he could no longer keep water down and was about to lose consciousness.

John O'Connell, a doctor who with two other members of the Irish Republic's Parliament visited Sands Monday, estimated that he had five to six days to live. O'Connell said a prison doctor told him the starving man was in danger of a cardiac arrest.

Another visitor said although Sands was suffering from headaches and failing eyesight, he was lucid and resolute.

"I got the impression that Mr. Sands was determined to die," said O'Connell. But the British government also was adamant. "The government will neither negotiate with the prisoners nor concede to the principle of political status," said David Mitchell, a spokesman for the Northern Ireland Office.

As Sands' condition worsened in the hospital wing of the Maze, his supporters set vehicles ablaze, built street barricades and threw blast bombs at the police in Belfast, and for the sixth night pelted the police and British troops with stones, bottles and gasoline bombs in Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second largest city and a stronghold of Roman Catholicism in the Protestant-majority province.

Catholic leaders appealed for calm in Londonderry, where, on Sunday night two 18-year-old rioters were killed by a British army Land-Rover during street clashes. The army and the police said they were killed accidentally, but their fathers said it was a "clear case of murder." The army said it was making a full investigation.

Sands, who is serving a 14-year sentence on gun charges, has vowed to fast to his death unless the government concedes that the IRA fight against British rule in Northern Ireland is political and gives imprisoned guerrillas political status. This would entitle them to wear their own clothes instead of prison uniforms, do no prison work, mingle freely and have more visitors.

British soldiers pass a bus set afire during rioting in Roman Catholic West Belfast Monday — the sixth straight day of violence in Northern Ireland. The rioting erupted as Bobby Sands, an imprisoned Irish Republican Army Guerrilla on a hunger strike, was reported near death. The 27-year-old Sands, who has gone without food since March 1, is demanding that jailed IRA guerrillas be treated as political prisoners and not as criminals. Related Story on Page 1A.

State to appeal prison decision

Appeal By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — State officials, stunned by a ruling from a federal judge ordering massive prison reforms on a strict timetable, say they intend to appeal the ruling "as quickly as possible."

The final decree in a nine-year-old lawsuit filed against the state's prison system came Monday from U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice after he turned down a request from state officials who had asked for a 30-day delay.

The 26-page decree orders reductions in the prison population, no more than one prisoner per cell by 1983, one guard for every six prisoners by 1982, no more than 500 inmates per prison unit by the end of next year, and says new prisons must be situated at least 50 miles from a big city.

At present, most cells house two to five convicts and there are 11 prisoners for every guard. The prison population has more than doubled in the past 10 years.

Texas Attorney General Mark White called Justice's ruling arbitrary and costly and said the federal judge "exceeded his authority."

"We'll ask for a stay of this order, and hopefully that will be granted and will permit us an orderly appeal," said White.

He said the single-cell order alone could cost Texas taxpayers $3 billion.

"There is no requirement for private rooms for prisoners," White said. "We're not required by the Constitution to build a hotel facility for the prisoners."

The ruling was Justice's final execution order after he issued a sweeping prison reform memorandum last December. It came as the result of a lawsuit filed in 1972 by eight convicts who claimed living in the prison constituted cruel and unusual punishment.

The 248-page memorandum handed down in December described "shocking" conditions in the Texas prison system, with inmates crowded into tiny cells with no privacy and living without adequate sanitary or recreational facilites.

At that time, Justice told both sides to agree on specific remedies and return to him with recommendations so he could write the final order. Several points of agreement were reached in February, but others remained unresolved.

Then, last month, Justice Department officials under the Reagan administration said they were willing to compromise with state officials on several unresolved issues in the nine-year-old lawsuit. But on Monday, Justice denied their joint request for a 30-day delay to try to reach a settlement.

Points White hoped to resolve by negotiation involved single cells for prisoners, building new prisons in rural areas and limiting units to 500 inmates — all issues decided in Justice's final decree.

"It would be difficult to describe how this could get any worse," White said as he scanned the order before leaving the federal courtroom here.

In Washington, Gov. Bill Clements said he was "disappointed" at the ruling and said Justice "ignored our attempt to reach a reasonable compromise, but I suppose that should come as no surprise."

Clements said he planned to meet today in Washington with U.S. Attorney General William French Smith.

In a separate move, the federal judge also appointed former University of Toledo law professor Vincent Nathan as special master to oversee the changes required by the order. Nathan, 43, served as special master in previous cases involving the federal penitentiary at Marion, Ohio, and the state prison system of Georgia.

Justice's ruling effectively would impose a one-prisoner-per-cell rule on Aug. 1, 1983. The judge said as of that date, "no prisoner shall be assigned with another prisoner to a cell containing 60 square feet or less." Most of the prison system's 9,000 cells contain 45 square feet.

The order further says by Nov. 1, 1983, the population of the prison system must be equal to the number of cells "plus the number of persons who can be housed in dormitories that afford 60 square feet."

White said such changes were arbitrary and costly.

"You're talking about several billion dollars," he said. "To set these arbitrary limits is indictative of how poor a place the courtroom is to determine prison policy."

flation rate of less than 5 percent by 1986."

If that tax cut is passed on time and in the form that Reagan wants, Regan predicted Americans could start seeing it show up in every worker's paycheck in October.

And for businesses who have seen a slowdown, Regan said they should see a change within a year. "Without it, I don't think we'll see anything but a repetition of the last four years — stop and go, up and down . . . no real recovery."

Stacks of charts have been prepared by the White House on the effects of Reagan's tax cut proposals.

A person making $10,000 a year income currently is liable for $374 in taxes for a family of four, with the Administration's plan, that family would pay $322 in 1982, which is 13.9 percent less. For 1983, that family would be responsible for $291, or 22.2 percent less; and in 1984, it would be $265, or 29.1 percent less.

Taking a family of four on $50,000 income, the tax liability today is $9,323. But in 1982 it would be $7,940, down by 14.8 percent. In 1983, the tax figure would be $7,154, down by 23.3 percent, and in 1984, taxes would amount to $6,809, or 27 percent less.

And as the salary scale reached into the $100,000 to $200,000 bracket the tax figure reductions would be less, making these people pay a higher amount of taxes.

By 1984, families in these brackets would see tax reductions of 24 and 16 percent, respectively.

Comparing this to Rep. Jim Jones' plan, White House figures show that the Administration would be allowing $118.1 billion in tax cuts by fiscal year 1984. Jones, meanwhile, is calling for $36.8 billion in tax cuts by the same time frame.

Regan defends the President's three-year tax proposal, saying, "We cannot balance the budget through higher taxes. We must provide the kind of multi-year tax rate cuts that will inspire investment confidence."

Reagan's activities remain limited

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recuperating President Reagan, not yet ready to appear in public, is relying on private meetings and telephone calls to help rekindle momentum in Congress for his proposed tax and spending cuts.

The president invited seven governors to a private session in the living quarters of the White House today, and aides said he also was making his way gradually down a list of about two-dozen telephone calls to wavering members of Congress.

The governors were Democrat Forrest James of Alabama and Republicans David Treen of Louisiana, Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, James Rhodes of Ohio, Bill Clements of Texas, Robert Orr of Indiana and Pierre du Pont of Delaware. They were described by White House officials as supporters of the administration's program and represented the first outside group to meet with Reagan since he was wounded in an assassination attempt March 30.

In addition, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the president has jotted down a few thoughts for a nationally broadcast economic speech he intends to make in the near future. No date has been set, but some aides say the address could come next week, when Congress returns from a two-week recess.

Meanwhile, Speakes said Reagan now is spending about five hours a day working on official business.

On Monday, for example, he had two meetings with top aides Edwin Meese III, James A. Baker III and Michael Deaver, received a written national security briefing, made a few phone calls to members of Congress and looked over paperwork.

But he remained upstairs while his wife, Nancy, represented the first family at the annual Easter Egg Roll on the South Lawn, an event attended by thousands of children accompanied by adults.

Speakes indicated security concerns dictated that the president not attend.

Reagan has not been seen by reporters or the public since he returned to the White House from the hospital on April 11, although his aides report he is making a strong recovery from a gunshot wound to his left lung.

Speakes said he did not anticipate Reagan would return to the Oval Office this week.

"We're not pushing him, the doctors aren't pushing him and he'll be his own judge," Speakes added. "If he wants to come he'll come."

In the interim, administration officials concede that the momentum behind Reagan's economic package has slowed since the assassination attempt last month.

"I would much prefer to see him in the office working," one aide said.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige also said he felt Reagan's recuperation has slowed the push on getting the administration's economic recovery program through the Congress.

The president is asking for massive budget cuts and a 30 percent, across-the-board cut in personal income taxes over three years to help revitalize the economy.

That program suffered a setback two weeks ago when the Senate Budget Committee rejected a budget drawn to the president's tax and spending specifications. Administration officials say they can reverse the vote by satisfying three conservative Republicans who provided the margin of defeat because they were concerned about the potential deficit for 1984.

In the House, which appears to be almost evenly divided, the administration is vying for enough support from conservative Democrats — mostly from the South — to pass the president's budget instead of an alternative plan backed by the Democratic leadership.

With Reagan out of sight, Vice President George Bush, members of the Cabinet and dignitaries such as former President Gerald R. Ford are visiting Democratic congressional districts in the South, holding news conferences and meetings to urge support for Reagan's package.

Bush, who traveled to Texas and North Carolina on Monday, was slated to appear along with other top administration officials before a group of 200 visiting journalists today.

Ford, who spoke by telephone with Reagan on Monday, agreed to push for the president's economic program in a lecture already scheduled for later in the week in Searcy, Ark.

The administration invited a group of about 180 county officials from around the country to the White House for a series of briefings by Bush and other White House officials on Wednesday.

Midland police probing theft, burglary reports

Several theft and burglary complaints were under investigation by city police today.

Julian Brown, 1609 Harvard Ave., told officers $3,300 in cash and assorted jewelry were taken from his residence sometime between 1:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. Monday. The family was reportedly working in the front yard when the burglary occurred.

Assorted tools valued at $442 were taken in a reported burglary of the J. C. Penney store, 212 N. Main, sometime Sunday night. A locked tool room was pried open to gain access to the tools.

Four wash wands with 15-foot hoses attached to them were reported stolen from the Alamo Car Wash at 4406 W. Illinois, while Mrs. Mike Sharp of 2501 Metz Place said assorted kitchen items worth $105 were taken in a burglary of her residence.

And Juanita Ramirez, 1411 Orchard Lane, reported the disappearance of a $79 record player from her home.

Sheriff's deputies were investigating a reported burglary at 7606 Bankhead Highway. The break-in occurred shortly before 9 a.m. Monday. Details were not available by press time.

Police, Fire Roundup

A house burglary at a Midland residence over the weekend resulted in the loss of more than $6,100 worth of furniture, silverware and jewelry.

Midland Police today continued their investigation into the burglary of the residence at 1500 Harvard. Victim was Betty Lynch, according to police reports.

Apparently the residence was burglarized between 9 a.m. Friday and 3:18 p.m. Sunday. The burglary was reported to police by Marceline Lassater, whose address also is listed as 1500 Harvard Ave.

Police said entry to the residence was gained by prying open the back door on the north side. Virtually every room in the house was entered and ransacked. Police reports indicated two different types of shoeprints were found in one location.

Listed among items taken were a microwave oven valued at $400, and a wooden chest containing silver flatware, silver bowls and other items valued at $3,000.

Also taken were a stereo system valued at $500, a cassette recorder valued at $150, a single-lens reflex camera valued at $500, a metronome valued at $75, various pieces of jewelry valued at several hundred dollars, a stereo headphone set and a microphone.

Total value of the items taken in the break-in was listed at $6,125.

Burglars broke into the Borden Milk Co. building at 2405 W. Missouri Avenue, cut open the company safe and took $5,700 in cash and checks, according to police reports.

The burglary occurred between 6 p.m. Saturday and 10:30 a.m. Sunday, and was reported to police by Raymond Sessom of 3328 Providence Drive, manager of the firm.

According to police reports, burglars entered the building through a westside door then pried open a closet door to get to tools inside the facility. They utilized an acetylene torch and a bottle of oxygen inside the facility to cut the top of the safe and then reached down into it to get the money and checks.

More than $1,600 in cash was taken, along with some $4,100 in checks, police reports indicated. But the exact amount was not immediately determined.

Midland firemen were called to a fire in the 600 block of W. Pennsylvania Avenue shortly before 6 a.m. Sunday and spent three hours battling a fire there in houses that were being demolished.

One fireman, Wayne Burchett, reportedly suffered minor injuries when he fell at the location.

Cause of the fire was not immediately determined, but the fire report indicated there was no damage as a result if the blaze.

Economy gain biggest since 1978

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national economy grew at a brisk annual rate of 6.5 percent in the first three months of this year as recovery from last year's recession apparently picked up speed, the Commerce Department reported today.

The increase was the biggest quarterly gain since the 9 percent recorded in the second quarter of 1978, department analysts said.

However, economists inside and outside government are forecasting a quick slowdown in the growth rate over the next few months as inflation and high interest rates take their toll on consumer spending.

The new report said the "real" gross national product — the inflation-adjusted value of all goods and services — rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 6.5 percent to $1.51 trillion in the first quarter of this year after rising 3.8 percent in the last three months of 1980.

The inflation adjustment measures current GNP in 1972 dollars. Without the inflation discount, GNP grew 14.9 percent to an annual rate of $2.83 trillion in the first three months of this year, the report said.

Commerce's GNP implicit price deflator — a broad measure of inflation — rose at an annual rate of 7.8 percent in the January-March period, down substantially from 10.7 percent in the final quarter of last year.

Real GNP had risen 2.4 percent in the third quarter of last year, but the second quarter's 9.9 percent drop was enough to drag the rate for all of 1980 down to a 0.2 percent decline, the first yearly decline since 1975.

Continued strength in consumer spending helped keep the economy rolling in the first three months of this year, the new report indicated. Economists have said heavy retail promotional activities — including the big auto price rebate programs — have contributed to that spending.

Personal consumption expenditures rose a seasonally adjusted $54.4 billion in the first quarter, the report said.

But that was almost $6 billion more than the increase in after-tax income, and most economists have predicted that Americans will not keep spending at such a brisk pace over the next six months or so.

An improvement in the import-export balance also helped GNP rise, with net exports of goods and services rising $1 billion in the first quarter after dropping $21.2 billion in the final three months of last year.

Analysts in general are forecasting slow growth — or no growth at all in the April-June quarter, with the economy possibly picking up again in the second half of the year — at least partly depending on what Congress decides to do about a tax cut.

At the White House, Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, issued a statement saying that the "nice start" to the year should not "overshadow the fact that inflation and unemployment show little sign of near-term improvement."

Man sues for damages he received in LSD tests

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — Calvin Sweet says he sacrificed his mind for his country.

He was 19 in 1957, an Army radar operator at Fort Stewart, Ga., when he volunteered for a testing program in return for removal from his service record of a report of an infraction — being absent without leave for six days.

He says Army doctors dosed him with LSD and the experiment left his physical and mental health in ruins.

The trial of a $3.9 million lawsuit Sweet has filed against the federal government was opening here today.

Cynthia Larsen, a Justice Department lawyer, said the lawsuit is the first of several similar suits to reach trial.

Sweet testified in pre-trial proceedings that doctors at the Army Chemical Warfare Laboratories at Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland gave him LSD three times, assuring him there would be no after-effects.

The government contends there's no proof Sweet was given LSD, although it acknowledges he took part in the experiments.

Sweet said he had few problems before the experiments.

The South Dakota native, who dropped out of school after the 8th grade, joined the Army in 1955 and spent 16 months in South Korea before being stationed at Fort Stewart.

After the tests, he said, he began suffering from "mental problems and sometimes bizarre behavior." He returned to South Dakota after his discharge in 1959 and held nine low-paying jobs in the next two years, always leaving because "my nerves just couldn't take it."

"At times my legs would feel very weak and my body would have the sensation that it was shrinking," he said. He was troubled by an upset stomach, difficulty sleeping, and fits of anxiety and depression.

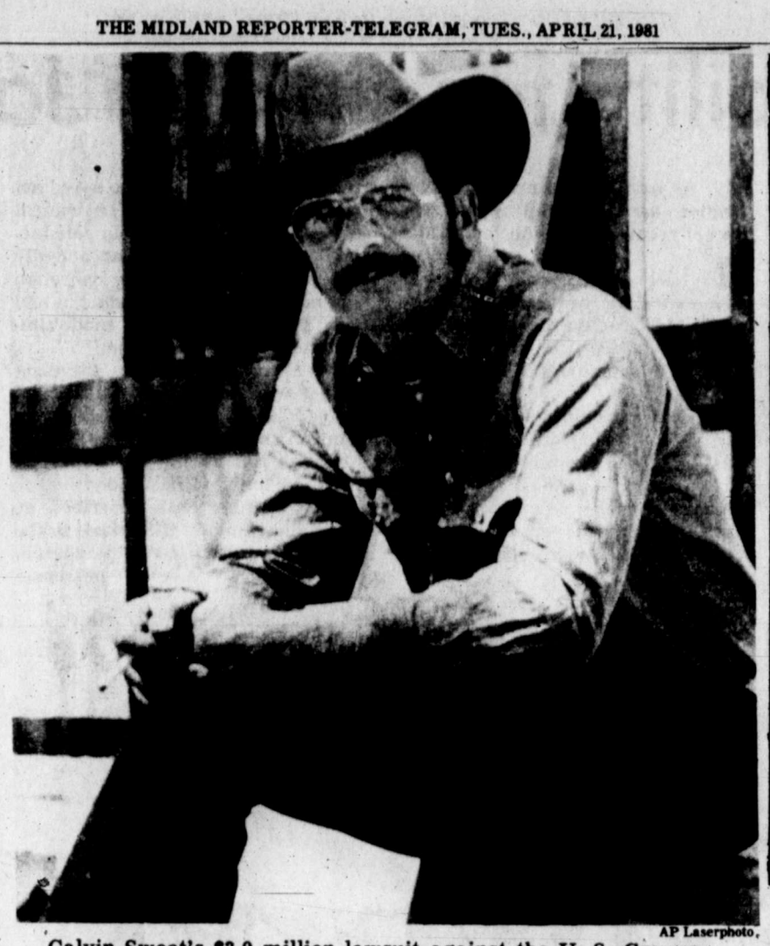

He married, became the father of six and re-enlisted in the Army in an effort to get a steady job. He was discharged within a year.

"My report stated that I was a very nervous, high-strung individual, susceptible to breakdowns of unknown causes," Sweet said.

Over the next 19 years, he held 57 jobs, mostly at service stations and construction sites. His marriage broke up and he needed treatment for "a problem with alcohol."

He now draws a monthly disability payment of $291.

"I am presently suffering from paranoia, schizophrenia and chronic depression," he said in a pre-trial deposition.

Navy accepting liability for sinking Japanese freighter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is accepting liability for the sinking of a Japanese freighter, a move that Japan says still fails to provide an adequate explanation for the collision with an American nuclear submarine.

The Navy's brief statement Monday said that accepting liability was not the same as pinning blame on the skipper of the submarine, Cmdr. Robert D. Woehl, or any of its crew.

Woehl's sub, the George Washington, collided with the 2,350-ton Nisson Maru, bound for Shanghai with a cargo of cotton, in the East China Sea about 110 miles off the southern tip of Japan on April 9. The captain and one crewmen of the freighter are missing and presumed drowned; 13 other crewmen were rescued.

The Navy said Secretary John Lehman "accepts liability ... in order to preclude lengthy litigation and to permit the Navy to enter promptly into negotiations with all involved parties."

Japanese lawyers have estimated that claims for loss of the ship and cargo and on behalf of the crew would total about $4.2 million. Since the Navy secretary is limited by law to payment of $1 million for a single claim, any amount over that must be approved by Congress.

The Navy said its liability extends only to actual damages because punitive damages and reparations are not recoverable under admiralty law.

The Navy said its action "in no way is intended to predetermine" any responsibility on the part of Woehl, 41, a native of Palo Alto, Calif., on his fifth tour of submarine duty, or any of the crew.

The Navy has started an investigation of the incident in Guam, where the George Washington is based.

In Tokyo, a spokesman for the Japanese Foreign Ministry said the Navy's action accepting liability showed "good faith in coping with the incident."

But the spokesman, who asked not to be identified, added: "The incident has not been explained to our satisfaction. We don't know what actually took place, why a rescue operation was not immediately conducted and why a report was not made immediately after the collision."

The George Washington, traveling at shallow depths in the East China Sea, surfaced undamaged after the collision but "sighted the vessel steaming away in no apparent distress," the Navy has said.

The weather was described as foggy and rainy. A U.S. plane in the area was ordered to conduct a search, but sighted "no vessels or personnel in distress," the Navy said the day after the incident.

The United States has been heavily criticized in Japan not only for failing to conduct a rescue operation, but also for waiting 24 hours to announce that a U.S. vessel was involved.

Foreign Minister Mafayoshi Ito warned earlier of a "danger that the relationship of trust between the United States and Japan would be affected."

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said, "I look forward to the results of the investigation being conveyed to the Japanese side" before he meets with President Reagan in Washington next month.

U.S. leaders from President Reagan on down have apologized.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told Ambassador Yoshio Okawara of the acceptance of liability in a private meeting before it was announced.

The Navy denied that it was pressured by the White House or the State Department to accept liability so soon after the collision.

"This was not a political decision," the Navy said in response to questions, citing a similar decision after a submarine collided with a Greek ship in 1978."

Haig warns Saudis against arms push

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has warned Saudi Arabia that the entire U.S-Saudi arms package could be jeopardized if the oil-rich country continues to push for sophisticated command-post aircraft.

This does not sit well with the Saudis.

Haig conveyed his warning to Saudi Arabia on his trip there two weeks ago, sources said Monday.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, responded to the warning on a Sunday interview program: "We got a promise from this government that it will be done and we think it will be done. . . . We should have it as a one-package deal."

In question are five AWACS — Airborne Warning and Control System — planes that the administration wants to sell Saudi Arabia in a deal also including late-model Sidewinder missiles, bomb racks and long-range fuel tanks for the 62 F-15 fighters the kingdom has ordered.

Israel has strongly objected to the sale, saying the AWACS planes, which can control air strikes and monitor air traffic from 250 miles away, would leave it "naked" in any future war with Arab countries.

The administration has said Americans would crew the planes until 1985, and Yamani said his country would not fight Israel.

Since Congress, where Israel has many supporters, can veto the deal by majority vote of both houses, the Reagan administration could face a foreign policy setback that could sour relations with an important oil supplier.

If the AWACS sale were presented to Congress by itself, it would be even less likely to win approval, which is why the package approach is being considered, said the sources, who asked not to be identified. The National Security Council made the decision to go ahead with a package approach on April 1, just before Haig left for the Middle East.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger is reported by some sources to have argued in favor of the one-package approach at that meeting, while Haig favored putting off the AWACS decision.

Sources reported Haig does not disagree with the decision to supply the AWACS, only with the timing of the transaction.

The administration could wait until after the Israeli elections in June in the hopes opposition there would cool and give U.S. officials more time to win over opponents and press Saudi Arabi for concessions in return. But such a delay, Yamani said, "would be interfering in Israel. . . . I don't think you intend to do that and I think the sooner the better."

In one of his few on-the-record statements on the subject, Haig told an interviewer last Friday that if the package went to Congress and were rejected, it "would clearly represent a grievous setback in American relationships with Saudi Arabia."

But he also said that "I don't think we will proceed under the assumption that we're going to lose."

Meanwhile, two members of former President Carter's Cabinet said their administration was "favorably disposed" but did not promise to sell AWACS planes and F-15 equipment to Saudi Arabia.

"The Carter administration . . . neither bound the American government nor precluded the new administration from doing its own evaluation of the proposed sale," said a letter from former Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie and formr Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said the letter was in response to an inquiry he sent to Muskie and Brown after seeing such arguments attributed to administration officials.

Missile deployment changes proposed

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton has added his voice to those opposing the proposed deployment of the multi-billion-dollar MX missile system in Texas.

The state legislator submitted a written statement at a public hearing in Amarillo Monday at which Air Force officials solicited public comment on the MX missile proposal.

Clayton's statement was read aloud by state Rep. Chip Staniswalis, who said he was representing the Texas House speaker. Clayton, in whose district the MX missile system has been proposed for deployment, said the Air Force wants to take 80,000 acres of "prime agricultural land out of production."

"I'm opposed to the use of farm and grazing land for the missle site when other, nonproductive land is available," Clayton said in the statement.

Nearly 100 other Panhandle area residents told Air Force officials Monday they want no part of the proposed defense system.

Two dozen speakers, including representatives of state government and area farm organizations, told the Air Force officials the MX system should be built somewhere else.

"The MX system must not be placed here," said Potter County Commissioner Mark Ensign. He read a resolution approved by commissioners that said location of the missile system in Potter County would result in "great destruction of invaluable agricultural land."

Ensign said there could be "no doubt" that the MX installation would "adversely impact this area, its environment, economics and people."

"They do not support this inordinate expenditure of tax funds for an unproven gamble based on the theory of the con man's shell game," Ensign said of Potter County residents.

He said the system should be deployed on land already owned by the federal government or at sea, where its missiles could be carried by submarines.

An ambulance moves through a police roadblock near the Chattahoochee River in Southwest Atlanta Monday, carrying the body of what may be the 25th in a string of murders of young, black Atlantans. Below, the body is unloaded at the Fulton County Medical Examiner's Office, where it was identified as that of Michael C. McIntosh, 23.

Similarities may add to Atlanta list

ATLANTA (AP) — Like the two adults whose slayings are being investigated by a child-deaths task force, 23-year-old Michael C. McIntosh had a slight build. Like five of the 24 victims, his body was found disrobed along a river.

Police were investigating these and other similarities today to determine whether McIntosh's death should be turned over to the task force, which is investigating the deaths of 24 young blacks and the disappearance of one other over the last 21 months. No decision will be made, police said, until the results are in from an autopsy being performed today.

A farmer found the nude body Monday in the Chattahoochee River near where the bodies of two other young blacks were found three weeks ago. The slayings of those two, 13-year-old Timothy Hill and 21-year-old Eddie "Bubba" Duncan, are among those being investigated by the task force.

Joseph Bell, 15, the 24th victim on the task force list, was found Sunday in the South River in southeast surburban DeKalb County. He was clad only in undershorts, and medical examiners ruled Monday that he probably had died of asphyxiation, the same cause of death as at least 12 of the other victims.

The first of the five victims found along rivers was discovered in November.

Fulton County Assistant Police Chief Louis Graham said McIntosh, who had a criminal record, lived alone on the city's southwest side — near where two of the other victims were last seen.

Only two of the cases assigned to the task force so far involve adults, and in both those cases, like McIntosh, the victims were small in stature. The two earlier adult victims were described by police as mentally-retarded.

Graham said that while there is no record that McIntosh is retarded, "based on what we learned tonight ... there's the possibility that he might have been slow."

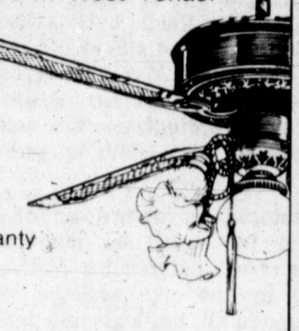

McIntosh stood 5-feet-5 and weighed 120 pounds when he was arrested last fall, Graham said.

Spring gets lovelier

Springtime is a lovely time in the Permian Basin, but thanks to the efforts of the city of Midland and the Chamber of Commerce's Visual Improvement Project Midland's springtimes are going to be even more lovely in coming years.

Motorists traveling down Scharbauer Drive will see numerous pecan trees, planted in a joint venture by the city and the VIP group. In all, there are 210 pecan trees being planted in a several-block section along the banks of Scharbauer Draw.

The project is a commendable one, just like the VIPs that were previously performed—the 162 live oaks planted along Wall Avenue and the 180 live oaks planted at Midland Regional Airport.

port.

Making the project all the more impressive is the fact that VIP projects are funded entirely through private donations. In fact, many of the pecans now being planted along Scharbauer Drive were purchased with donations from landowners along that thoroughfare.

The planting of the trees, incidentally, is only the first phase shrubs and buffalo grass will be planted along the creek banks.

This all is another example of the civic pride which has flourished in Midland so long. Once complete, the beautification project along Scharbauer Drive will have made that drive one of the most beautiful in the city. It truly will be one of the city's beauty spots and it's all the result of dedicated effort by some fine Midland residents.

All Midlanders owe them a debt of gratitude for making our lives a little more pleasant in a beautiful way.

Fighting crime in court

Attorney General William French Smith took over the Justice Department with a promise to give top priority to the problem of violent crime in America. That he picked the right target has been confirmed with the release of the annual FBI crime reports.

The Uniform Crime Index for 1980 shows a 13 percent increase in violent crime — murder, rape, assault and robbery. That's the sharpest increase in a single year since 1975. When crimes against persons are lumped in with crimes against property, such as burglary and theft, the overall crime index shows an increase of 10 percent.

What the Justice Department can do about these frightening statistics remains to be seen. Smith told a congressional committee in March that a task force within the department is working on an anti-crime strategy.

Although the annual crime statistics are reported by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, they are gathered from 12,000 separate law enforcement agencies, mostly local police departments. This serves to emphasize that the federal government is a limited participant in a war on crime that is fought principally at the community level.

An increased investment of federal funds in fighting crime does not appear likely. The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which poured billions into grants to local police departments in the last decade with few measureable results, was largely dismantled by the last Congress. Nor have the FBI and the Drug Enforcement Administration been spared from the budget squeeze by the Reagan administration.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, April 21, the 111th day of 1981. There are 254 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 21, 1966, surgeons in Houston made what was said to be the first implant of an artificial heart in a human.

On this date:

In 753 B.C., according to tradition, Rome was founded by Romulus.

In 1509, Henry VIII became the king of England upon the death of Henry VII.

In 1836, Texans led by Gen. Sam Houston defeated a Mexican force in the battle of San Jacinto, thereby assuring the independence of Texas.

And in 1954, U.S. Air Force planes began flying French troops from France to Indochina to bolster precarious French positions.

Ten years ago: President Nixon asked Congress to provide more than $3 billion for foreign aid in the 1972 fiscal year.

Five years ago: Egypt and China signed a military accord in Peking.

One year ago: Barbara Timm held a 45-minute emotional meeting with her hostage son at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and described him as being in excellent health and cheerful.

Nation should reassess benefits for its veterans

Charley Reese

The veterans organizations are in a tizzy over the proposed cuts in the Veterans Administration budget, especially those organizations in states with heavy veteran populations.

I think, however, it is time to re-assess the whole business of veterans benefits. The nation owes a debt to two categories of veterans: those who served in combat and those who made a career in the service.

A nation which asks its people to risk their lives and limbs in war should not break faith with them. If they come home injured or sick, it should care for them.

There is another category of veterans, however, who do not deserve that much concern and that is that category of people like me who did their hitch and came home. When my turn came, we were in between wars. There is no reason in the world for the government to incur a lifetime obligation to provide me with any benefits at all.

In short, veterans benefits should be reserved exclusively for those who serve in war zones and those who make the military service a career. Our system is one of a citizen's army in which each of us is expected to take a turn on watch. We shouldn't have to be bribed to do it.

I have a problem even with programs designed for "Vietnam Era" veterans. Just because someone served a hitch far from the sounds of gunfire in Southeast Asia should not qualify him for any special treatment. That should be reserved exclusively for those who actually fought in the war, which incidentally is only about 10 percent of the Vietnam Era veterans.

The Congress should re-write the veterans laws and make them far more discriminating than they now are. If it would do so, there would be plenty of money and facilities to provide the care for those who really earned it.

A service-connected disability ought to be just that, an injury or illness which occurs directly as a result of one's military duties. Just because a person gets sick or hurt during the period of time he happens to be in the service should not, in my opinion, qualify him for veterans benefits.

I knew a bureaucrat once who had served six months in the Army during peacetime before getting a medical discharge for a stomach ulcer. For the rest of that guy's life, he claimed the benefits of a disabled veteran. That's ridiculous.

To those who endure the hardships of war and to those who give their country a lifetime of service, we owe an unpayable debt, but to those peacetime short-timers or draftees who were lucky enough to avoid combat, we owe nothing.

In fact, I think it's obscenely immoral to give a man who spends his service time in safety and comfort the same benefits as the man who spends his time in the hell of war. That is a basic injustice that the Congress ought to eliminate.

I'm by legal definition a veteran, but a veteran of what? Nothing but 18 months of training and routine service. The only injury I incurred was when a popsickle stuck to my lip one afternoon at Ft. Bragg. The only dangerous places I went were bars. This country has done far more for me than I could ever do for it.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Park encounter sends diplomat to Moscow

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON—A Russian ciplomat believed to be a KGB agent got himself mixed up in some tawdry capitalist decadence recently while kdrunkenly trolling for khomosexual adventure a few blocks from the White House at 5 in the morning.

Within hours, the gay secret agent, Yuriy Igorevich Osipow, was shipped back to Moscow, where he may still be trying to convince KGB interrogators that his fantastic version of the affair is true. A far likelier account was obtained by my associate Les Whitten from an eyewitness to the undiplomatic episode and from a secret police report.

Osipov's "cover" at the Soviet embassy was a job in the cultural exchange office. But it wasn't culture he was looking to exchange in the predawn hours of Feb. 24. When he ventured into Malcolm X park after a marathon drinking bout that had begun the prvious evening at an embassy reception about a dozen blocks away.

Drunk and disheveled, Osipov was a most unintelligent intelligence agent even to venture into the park. It is a known hangout not only for homosexuals, but for muggers, and was the scene of a recent murder. U.S. counterspies have concluded that Osipov was probably seeking a homosexual tryst.

But there was no "probably" about it, according to Sammie Smith, a husky 19-year-old black man who was crossing the park on the way home from a visit with his girlfriend.

Smikth said the Russian was ardently importuning a known homosexual when two men started jostling him. Obviously as a prelude to rolling the inebvriated stranger. Smith said he talked the two out of their intended robbery and volunteered to help Osipov find some documents he had lost in the scuffle. Then he and osipov drove off in the Russian's car.

The amorous spook "tried to grab my privates," Smith recounted. The overture was indignantly repulsed; both Smith and his friends attest that he is strictly a ladies' man.

The frustrated Russian parked outside a drugstore and tried to strangle Smith—who showed my associate bruises on his throat to prove it. Smith's testimony was also supported by a bystander, Reginald Ten Eyck, 24, who strolled over to see what was happening. "The white man was choking the brother," Ten Eyck told police.

Osipow drove off at Ten Eyck's approach, and was next spotted by a Metropolitan Police patrol traveling "at a high rate of speed." The cop pulled the car over at 5:20 a.m. beyond declaring that he was a diplomat and that he had been robbed, Osipov refu8sed any information until an embassy official, summoned kby police, arrived on the scene.

The Soviet official, Vladimir Vikulov, a political officer, spoke rapidly with Osipov and then gave detective James Pawlik this weird story: without explaining what he had been doing in Malcolm X Park, Osipov claimed that "two black men . . . tried to make (me) perform oral sex on them." When he refused, Osipov said, he was robbed of diplomatic papers, his watch and some cash. He jalso claimed that Smith was involved in the robbery. But did not explain how. Smith, kon probation for a drug charge, emphaticllay denied the charge, and indeed was not arrested.

As for the driving violationk Osipov explained through Vikulov that he hasn't been driving. "Somehow the person who drove the car hopped over from the driver's side to the passenger side" when the police car pulled them over, he said. The Russian also claimed there was a man with a knife in the back seat, who "somehow" leaped out and fled without the policeman catching sight of him.

For diplomatic reasons, the police have clamped a firm lid on the episode. The first page of the official report states: "This report is the property of the Metropolitan Police Department, Washington, D.C. neither it nor its contents may be disseminated to kunauthorized personnel or agencies."

As for the Soviet Embassy, they would confirm only that Osipov had been at the embassy party and had been sent back to Moscow. Asked what happened, Vikulov murmured diplomatically, "it is difficult to judge."

Two faces of Henry: The National Secuity Council under Henry Kissinger was supposedly above the "dirty tricks" thatr characterized the Nixon White House. But at the NSC's request, the FBI dutifully submitted raw data and rumors that falsely accused a prominent Greek exile of sexual and other misconducts.

The smut reports from the G-men to the NSC occurred from 1972 to 1974, when Kissinger was in charge, according to documents that have now been declassified. One FBI report, sent "per request of a A. Russell Ash, National Security Council," detailed a supposed romance the Greek bachelor, Elias Demetracopoulos, was having with a beautiful Washington socialite. Another linked him to Daniel Ellsberg, the former NSC aide who leaked the "Pentagon Papers"—and whom Demetracopoulos doesn't even know. Other reports dealt with the exile's credit cards and checking accounts.

Ash, now retired, said khe was simply the "conduit" between the FBI and nNSC officials from Kissinger on down. He said he doesn't remember requesting reports on Demetracopoulos. Kissinger, through a spokesman, also cannot recall asking for such reports.

But Demetracopoulos, who was the sharpest thorn in the side of the militaryu junta that ruled Grfeece at the time, was no favoreite of the Nixon White House. Indeed, at one point, Nixon's aides sought to deport him back to Greece where he would have faced torture and possibly death.

INSIDE REPORT

Budget committee's action could spell trouble for Reagan

Evans

Novak

WASHINGTON—Green eyeshade worship of the sacred balanced budget, persistently followed a by a Republican Party during half a century in the minority, was behind the Senate Budget Committee's peculiar conduct April 9 that could spell serious trouble for Ronald Reagan.

Defection by three righjt-wing Republican senators to defeat the budget resolution, 12-to-8, is of no orerriding importance in itself, it does create a political problem that the White house will have to work out over the Easter recess. Irrtrievably, it slowe down the Reagan economic program's momentum.

But the broader danger for president Reagan is the show of Rebublican susceptibility to Democratic taunts of deficit spending. If Republican members of Congress fall into the Democratic trap of holding Reagan's tax rate reductions hostage to accusations of apostasy in worshipping the balanced budget, Reagan's program is doomed. Clearly, the President has not yet convinced his party that only through lowering tax rates today can the budget be balanced in some tomorrow.

Tax ratge reduction is not only the cutting edge of Reagan's program to revitalize the economy but is the prime target for the opposition. Democrats first held tax cuts hostage for spending cuts, a tactic that failed when Reagan produced budget reductions larger than anybody thought possible. Within the last two weeks, the tactic was changed to put emphasis on the balanced budget in the plan put forth by the chairman of the Democratic-controlled House Budget Committee, Rep. James Jones of Oklahoma. In essence, Jones was projecting a balanced budget by severely limiting tax reduction, exaggerated in its budgetary impact because of static revenue estimates not accounting for growth.

This proved unusually effective because of Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mixico, budget committee chairman in the newly-Republican Senate. Domenici has struck a stern Republican bookkeeper's pose toward tax rate reduction. It was far less important, he stressed, than moving toward a balanced budget.

Domenici's inclinations along this line were enhanced when he hired as a committee staff economist Preston J. Miller of kthe Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank, an institution known as a hotbed of anti-tax cut sentiment. The bank's 1979 annual report, prepared by Miller, was a screen against the Kemp-Roth tax cut. In 1980, Miller wrote: "The proposed tax cuts will result in less revenue for the government year in and year out and will thus be inflationary." Only a balanced budget will save us, lhe declared.

Miller is regarded as the principal influence behind Fail Fosler, selected by Domenici as the committee's chief economist. With an MBA in finance, she has forecast interest rates markedly higher than the Reagan Administration's. Consequently, Fosler estimates national debt service $9 billion higher than does Reagan in fiscal year 1983 and $10.3 billion higher in fiscal year 1984. In effect, the committee's Republican staff is betting on the Reagan staff program to fail.

Domenici himself sparked a recent blowup by refusing to take budget director David Stockman's I.O.U. for unspecified spending cuts in fiscal years 1983 and 1984, the kso-called "out years." That bookkeeping nicety created not only a deficit but also a bounty for Democrats desperately seeking a hold on the Reagan program.

Sen. Bill Armstrong of Colorado, who unlike lDomenici is a strong advocate of tax rate reduction, argued that the deficit resolution on the floor would invite destruction of Reagan's tax program. Two freshman Republicans, Iowa's Charles Grassley and idaho's Steve Syumms, agreed. The three defectors, added to the happy Democratic minority, killed the resolution.

Stockman came trotting over from the House side of the capitol when he learned of unexpected trouble in the Senate but had no solution. The White House inexplicably never even engaged the problem. President Reagan could have averted the embnarrassment with a few phonc calls to Republican senators (Symms said as much). From the hospita, Reagan would have been irresistible.

All the commotion is about spending and revenue projections for two and three years hence. Thus, Stockman must now find programs to show reductions in the out years, needless reductions in the out years, needlessly revving up still more enemies that the Reagan program does not need.

But the real menace is what budget-balance worship does to tax reduction. Another freshman Republican member on the Budget Committee, Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana, perceived this. kjl"Do you realize," he asked Symms after the vote, "That you just voted to kill Kemp-Roth?"

The day before the Senate Budget Committee ran amuck, Rep. Jack Kemp had declared that Republicans no longer worshiped at the shrine of the balanced budget. In truth, however, Republican lawmakers have been bowing down to the old idol for the past several weeks, goaded by the Democrats. The folly that led Herbert Hoover to raise tax rates almost depression has not died in the Grand Old kjParty. The need for a recuperated Ronald Reagan, who was elected on promises of economic growth through tax cuts and not a balanced budget, has been dramatized once again.

The Newspaper BIBLE

WARMING AT THE DEVIL'S FIRE

The soldiers lit a fire in the courtyard and sat around it for warmth, and Peter joined them there.

A servant girl noticed him in the firelight and began staring at him. Finally she spoke: "This man was with Jesus!"

Peter denied it! "Woman" he said, "I don't even know the man!"

After a while someone else looked at him and said, "You must be one of them!" "No sir, I am not!" Peter replied.

About an hour later someone else flatly stated, "I know this fellow is one of Jesus' disciples, for both are from Galilee."

But Peter said, "Man, I don't know what you are talking about." And as he said the words, a rooster crowed.

At that moment Jesus turned and looked at Peter. Then Peter remembered what He had said--"Before the rooster crows tomorrow morning, you will deny Me three times." And Peter walked out of the courtyard, crying bitterly.

Now the guards in charge of Jesus began mocking Him. They blindfolded Him and hit Him with their fists and asked, "Who hit you that time, prophet?" And they threw all sorts of other insults at Him. Luke 22:55-65

Buffalo mayor buffaloes way to second term

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — He's blunt, salty and loves a good fight. In this largely blue-collar city, he disdains union chieftains, denies charges of indifference to the black community and has been accused of everything from insensitivity to lacking "class."

For all that, Mayor James D. Griffin appears to be a shoo-in for a second term come November. While leaders of his own Democratic party watched in dismay, the Republican Executive Committee here Monday endorsed him as their candidate.

Griffin also has the endorsement of the Conservative and Right-to-Life parties.

Like New York City Mayor Edward Koch, Griffin is a political loner with a knack for stepping on the wrong toes and getting away with it.

While serving as a state senator before becoming mayor, Griffin described bankers as having "hearts like caraway seeds." Today in Buffalo, they're among his greatest fans.

The business community especially appreciates his encouragement and stewardship of a multimillion-dollar downtown revitalization program.

Often using federal funds as seed money for private capital, the projects include hotels; housing, retail and bank buildings downtown and on the waterfront; and a $440-million rapid transit system.

"I wish he'd be mayor for a long time," said Charles Diebold III, president of The Western New York Savings Bank. "He's a modern-day Daley. He says it the way it is. He's tough, and he gets it done."

Griffin, in fact, calls the late Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley one of his favorite mayors: "We come from the same mold. He kept his friends. He was a family man. He was an honest man."

The mayor's critics, like George K. Arthur, majority leader of the city's Common Council, observe that Griffin did not start the renewal projects, but followed through on plans made earlier by others.

Buffalo, which has some 400,000 residents, is the second largest city in New York. Its largest employer is General Motors Corp., and it is a major milling center made up of strong ethnic neighborhoods — Polish, Italian and Irish.

Late last year, six black men were slain here in killings that remain unsolved.

Arthur, a black who said he is considering running against the mayor, accused Griffin of "benign neglect" of the black community, contending that redevelopment funds should be spent on neighborhoods.

Griffin says, "The neighborhoods have never been better."

Bill to extend insurance blocked by Senate panel

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Senate committee has blocked a bill that would extend insurance benefits to persons who receive psychiatric treatment on an out-patient basis.

A mental health volunteer and a psychiatrist urged the Senate Economic Development Committee on Monday to approve the proposal, stating it would provide better care for some and would be cheaper.

The committee, however, voted 7-1 to send the bill to a subcommittee.

Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, was the lone holdout for committee approval of his proposal.

"For some patients day care and home at night is the best course," said Carolyn Negley, the volunteer chairman of a day treatment facility in San Antonio.

She said such treatment allows patients "to keep in touch with the real world — that's what this bill is all about."

Dr. Martin Giffen, a psychiatrist on the faculty at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio, said the cost of 24-hour hospital psychiatric care is $130 a day. "For that you could get a week or more of day care treatment," he said.

Traeger's bill would require insurance policies that offer hospital coverage for psychiatric care also to pay for day treatment.

Forrest Roan, an Austin lawyer representing Mrs. Negley, said the bill would "help reduce the cost of coverage to insurers. We think it will benefit the consumer and benefit the insurance industry."

Giffen said psychiatric day treatment often is "more humane and to the point and cheaper, too."

Robert Blevins of the Texas Life Insurance Assocyation and Ronnie Volkening of Blue Cross-Blue Shield opposed the bill.

Lyndon Olson of the State Insurance Board said the board had no position on the proposal.

Houston proposed sleeping ordinance

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston City Council has proposed an ordinance some residents might find hard to take lying down.

The council wants to enact a measure to prohibit sleeping in city buildings, on public sidewalks, roadways, squares and even in public ditches. Offenders would be fined up to $200.

Municipal Court Judge Felix Stanley suggested the ordinance which will be considered Wednesday by the council, saying he is alarmed at the number of relatives and friends of prisoners who sleep on benches and along hallways in municipal court buildings on weekends.

The problem arose after responsibility for operating the bonding office was tranferred recently from the police department to the court.

Staffing of municipal courts is reduced on weekends, while the number of prisoners awaiting disposition of cases may reach 200, Stanley said.

The city has banned sleeping in lobbies of commercial office buildings, theaters, bus terminals, railway stations, in parks and on playgrounds, but has no regulations for city-owned facilities.

"It (the law) might even apply to some judges," he said.

Firefighters and other city officials who must sleep on the job would be exempt, he said.

Court asked to block sale of family's assets

HOUSTON (AP) — The brother of slain oceanographer John Wanstrath has asked a Houston probate judge to prevent Markham Duff-Smith from selling any property he inherited from the estate to post bond on three capital murder charges.

Duff-Smith — the accused mastermind in the 1979 shooting deaths of Wanstrath, his adoptive sister, Diana, and the couple's 14-month-old son, Kevin — received more than $430,000 in cash, bonds, jewelry, furniture and property from the $800,000 estate.

George Wanstrath asked Probate Judge William Bear on Monday to enjoin Duff-Smith from disposing of remaining property. He also asked to be named temporary adminstrator of the estate.

Duff-Smith, a 34-year-old inventor, is being held on $150,000 bond and waiting trial.

Earlier this month, Allen Wayne Janecka was convicted in the Wanstrath murders and sentenced to death. On Monday, Janecka's attorneys requested a new trial, claiming the arrest warrants were invalid.

Testimony in the seven-day trial implicated Duff-Smith in the slayings originally ruled double murder-suicide as well as the 1975 strangulation of his mother, Trudy Duff-Smith Zabolio.

Duff-Smith's business associate, Walter A. Waldhauser Jr., has pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of murder. Waldhauser is accused of hiring Janecka to kill the Wanstraths.

Reagan orders freeze on new booklets, films

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Organic Gardening: Think Mulch" and "Common Sense in Buying a New Car" may be among the first casualties of a Reagan administration drive to reduce federal spending on government publications and films.

Charging that federal agencies waste too much money on "unnecessary and expensive" public relations, President Reagan is ordering a freeze on new booklets and films and is seeking reports on how to trim existing projects.

Production of films and other audio-visual products costs the government more than $100 million a year, Reagan's Office of Management and Budget estimated Monday as it announced the president's freeze.

The budget office did not have a specific estimate on the cost of publishing government books, pamphlets, magazines and other printed materials. But, said Edwin L. Harper, OMB deputy director, "obviously a tremendous amount of money" is involved.

"The federal government is spending too much money on public relations, publicity and advertising," Reagan said in a statement released by his White House press office.

"While we have a duty to keep the citizens of this country informed about government programs and activities, we should not use this as a license to produce films, pamphlets and magazines that do not truly serve the public interest," he said.

"During these difficult economic times, we cannot afford to waste time and money on activities that have limited benefit to the people of this country."

The Defense Department, for example, publishes 645 different pamphlets.

Bush gives quick response

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Vice President George Bush, stumping for the administration's economic proposals with the fervor of a political campaigner, had a quick response for those who would differ with President Reagan's tax and spending cuts.

"They weren't elected president, and he was," Bush said Monday evening as he addressed a cheering group of North Carolina businessmen and Republican state leaders.

Bush appealed for broad public support, clearly hoping that it would yield votes in the House and Senate, where Reagan's economic package has run into criticism and counterproposals.

Describing himself as a "poor substitute" for the president, Bush boosted the Reagan program in a speech to 1,000 people at a Civic Center gathering of chambers of commerce officials from Raleigh and nearby Durham and Chapel Hill.

He later held a private session with some of the state's GOP state legislators and new Republican state Chairman Dave Flaharty at a Raleigh hotel.

Bush said Reagan will not waver on the fundamentals of his program, a reduction in the growth of government spending, a 10 percent income tax cut each year for three years and reduced government regulation.

"He is not in a mood to compromise," Bush said in a brief news conference. "He does not intend to compromise and I don't think he feels he has to compromise in order to get it through."

The vice president's North Carolina visit followed a stop in Dallas on a tour devoted to promoting the Reagan package in the face of an alternate program put forward by Democrats, which calls for a one-year tax cut of varying amounts.

In Dallas, Bush said the country can expect a balanced budget "by 1984," if the entire Reagan program can be put into effect as of June 30.

Bush said the Democratic alternative plan would offer only "short-term" benefits and was a "poor" imitation of the Reagan plan.

Bush, returning to Texas for the first time since the March 30 assassination attempt on the president cut-short a trip to his home state, said the country "can't afford to accept substitutes that would water down or otherwise weaken the cure needed for our country's economic recovery."

"We're getting to the crunch on this economic program," he said in Raleigh. "We're getting to a time when we really need people to be heard from.

"Give us your support for these fundamentals, and let everybody fine tune it later on," he added.

Appearing with Bush was North Carolina's senior Republican senator, Jesse Helms, who briefly sought the vice presidential nomination won by Bush at the Republican National Convention in Detroit last July.

Helms, seeking to keep Reagan to the political right, originally was unenthusiastic about the nomination of Bush. He offered a bit of an explanation for that Monday night.

"I didn't know George all that well," Helms said, "prior to his receiving the nomination in Detroit."

Bill collecting policy changed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doing a complete about-face from previous policy, the Reagan administration is recommending that federal agencies hire private bill collectors to mop up bad debts of at least $24 billion.

The General Accounting Office up to now had said the use of such firms was illegal unless Congress authorized it, as was done for the Department of Education. If other agencies could not collect on their own, they had to give up or turn the debt over the the Justice Department to try to collect through a lawsuit.

The switch, announced Monday by Attorney General William French Smith because of "growing losses on uncollectable debts," took effect Friday with publication of new rules in the Federal Register

The GAO said U.S. citizens owed $139 billion to the federal government and foreigners owed another $52 billion at the start of the current fiscal year last Oct. 1. The government estimated that would result ultimately in a loss of $7.6 billion, a 49 percent increase in the past two years.

Chuck Gruber of the GAO's accounting and financial management division stressed that not all of the money owed was delinquent. He said the government was still collecting figures for delinquencies, but that as of Sept. 30, 1979, they amounted to $24 billion, of which the largest category was $13 billion in unpaid taxes.

Other large delinquent amounts by department included $2.2 billion owed to Education, $1.9 billion to Health and Human Services, $1.3 billion to Agriculture and $1 billion to Housing and Urban Development.

In the Federal Register statement, the government noted that the use of private collection firms had traditionally been opposed because of "the dubious reputations and methods of collection agencies."

Agnew's tax records will appear in court, but he won't

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The former vice president is not expected to attend, but Spiro T. Agnew's tax records have been ordered into an Annapolis courtroom as the state seeks repayment of bribes he allegedly accepted while governor.

The state is seeking repayment of more than $200,000 plus interest in the trial, which was opening today with preliminary motions.

Circuit Judge Bruce C. Williams refused last week to order Agnew, who resigned the vice presidency in 1973, to appear as a witness. But Williams directed Agnew's lawyer, Thomas R. Harrison, to turn over some of the former vice president's tax records.

Included in those records was the settlement which Agnew, then Richard Nixon's vice president, negotiated with the Internal Revenue Service after pleading no contest to a charge of federal income tax evasion in 1973.

Federal prosecutors alleged in 1973 that Agnew received money through an alleged kickback scheme involving state construction contracts. The prosecutors alleged that the scheme extended back to the time Agnew was Baltimore County executive in the mid-1960s.

Agnew has maintained he is innocent of the charges. He was elected governor in 1966 and resigned in 1969 to become vice president.

Details of the settlement with tax authorities had been kept secret.

However, the Washington Post said today that Agnew paid $172,000 in taxes, penalities and interest on unreported income from 1967 to 1972 under the agreement with state and federal tax authorities.

The newspaper quoted Harrison as saying Agnew paid about $158,000 in federal income taxes, penalties and interest in early 1974. Documents in the civil case show Agnew paid more than $14,000 in Maryland income taxes, penalties and interest in December 1974, the Post said.

Myron Mintz, another of Agnew's lawyers, said Agnew paid the extra taxes for the five years from 1967 to 1972 under protest.

The Post said the documents show Agnew reported taxable income of about $316,000 for the five years.

However, the sources of the money that allegedly went unreported for tax purposes have not been disclosed.

Jerome B. Wolff, who served as Agnew's state roads commission chairman, also is a defendant in the suit and has agreed to testify, according to documents filed in court last week. He is expected to be dismissed as a defendant after he testifies.

Feinberg denies acting as bagman

NEW YORK (AP) — Abscam defendant Alexander Feinberg says he bragged, boasted and appeased during a meeting with undercover FBI agents posing as frontmen for an Arab sheik but he did not act as a bagman for New Jersey Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr.

The incriminating promises he made to the agents were in hopes of getting a $100 million loan to finance a Virginia titanium mine, he explained Monday while testifying in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn.

"Perhaps I'm stupid," Feinberg said, "but I still believe it's (the mine) potentially a very fine investment."

Williams, a 22-year Senate veteran, and Feinberg, a 72-year-old lawyer from Cherry Hill, N.J., are charged in a nine-count indictment with bribery and conspiracy in connection with Williams' alleged agreement to accept a free, hidden 18 percent interest in the titanium mine. In return, the senator allegedly agreed to use his influence to help the venture get military contracts.

During testimony Monday, Feinberg said that every time government contracts or Williams' hidden interest were mentioned it was by Mel Weinberg, a convicted swindler hired by the FBI to help set up Abscam.

"These things were always suggested by Weinberg — the subject matters, the twists," Feinberg said. He said he often told Weinberg and other government agents: "You don't need to do it that way. We'll do it my way, the legitimate way, the kosher way."

The defense is expected to plead entrapment.

Among the other defense evidence introduced Monday was a secretly recorded telephone call between Feinberg and another Abscam target, Joseph Silvestri, a Keyport, N.J., developer.

At the time of the call, made Feb. 2, 1980, six hours after news of the Abscam probe was disclosed to the public, Silvestri was in the offices of federal prosecutors but told Feinberg he was at home.

On the tape, Feinberg insisted he and Williams had done nothing wrong. "It was a legitimate mining deal," he told Silvestri, who still faces charges on an indictment stemming from his dealings with former Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., convicted of Abscam offenses last year. At the time of the call to Feinberg, Silvestri was making a futile attempt at plea bargaining.

When Silvestri asked under prodding from the government lawyers what he should do if FBI agents questioned him, Feinberg advised: "just tell them the truth, Joe. . .because I know we did nothing wrong."

Throughout the day Feinberg defended his actions as captured on audio tapes and videotapes. He denied he was Williams' bagman and said he knew "of no such person that exists."

As for when he assured the agents about Williams: "He'll help us," Feinberg maintained all he meant was that the senator would make introductions and "open the doors" at the appropriate governmental agencies. "In my mind, making a phone call is 'opening the doors,'" Feinberg testified.

Feinberg explained taped claims of influence by himself and Williams over members of the New Jersey Casino Control Commission as "boasting and bragging."

Already four government employees from New Jersey — two FBI agents and two U.S. Justice Department lawyers — have testified for the defense that they attended an Abscam strategy meeting where Weinberg was criticized for "putting words in people's mouths."

Feinberg said he "knew that Senator Williams could not guarantee contracts," and insisted his co-defendant would have made those introductory telephone calls only after he had fully disclosed his interest in the mine.

Such disclosure was not made at the time Abscam broke, he explained, because stock certificates for the mine were worthless without the $100 million "Arab" loan to finance the venture.

Hoffman facing prison

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Yippie leader and 1960s counter-culture hero Abbie Hoffman, who came out of hiding after seven years to begin a new life, today faced the beginning of a three-year prison term for selling cocaine and jumping bail.

Despite a tearful plea to Gov. Hugh Carey to grant him a full pardon, and despite numerous letters of support from friends and celebrities including Woody Allen and Candice Bergen, Hoffman was to surrender to court officials today for assignment to a state prison.

When Hoffman, 44, appealed to Carey on April 8, he said he was afraid of being killed in prison, of homosexual rape and being forced to take drugs if he "acts up."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, April 22, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You share this birthday with actor Eddie Albert, who continues to be one of Hollywood's busiest people. Those born on this day tend to have many different irons in the fire. In the months ahead, make an effort to tackle one thing at a time. Otherwise, someone in a position to help you may get the impression you are impractical. Greater financial success is indicated. Do not be surprised, however, if employment problems slow you down at times. Friendships of long standing prove especially rewarding late in the year. Mix in good company and romance will be better than ever.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pay more attention to personality and appearance. A direct approach brings the best results. Conversation with authority figure will have an excellent outcome. Find new ways to express your feelings to loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A personal relationship will be put to the test. Someone will show a new loyalty. Suppress a tendency to be lazy. Plunge into work! Limit shopping to the bare necessities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your worries about an older person's health may be unfounded. Check test results. Someone shows new admiration and respect for you. Your ability to cope with difficulties is most impressive. Romance looks very promising.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): This is not a good time to change jobs. Be orderly about financial matters. Reinvest any profits you receive from a sale of stock back into the business. Be realistic about a personal relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Business is rewarding today even if you do not exert great effort. Friends are a source of support, encouragement. Postpone travel. An interest in community affairs will lead to new friendships.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Other people's mistakes may cause delays. A business sideline or favorite hobby will yield extra income. Finish what you start. A reorganization plan at work may put you in a management position.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not spend savings. Let the money you have accumulated gain interest. Show wisdom where affairs of the heart are concerned. Look ahead to the summer. Start diet if bathing suit fits too snugly!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Seek expert advice if thinking of starting a new business. Influential associate or banker can provide the backing you need. Be friendly toward your co-workers. You may want to ask for a favor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Handle business affairs with more diplomacy. Excessive haste could slow you down in the long run. Good grooming is very important now! Show mate you really do care.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You deserve the best and are likely to get it now. Others come to appreciate how very special you are. Be on the lookout for new opportunities for romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Listen to what others have to say. You could learn a valuable lesson. People on both sides of an issue have important points to make. Plan ahead for summer vacation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Look for better ways to spend your leisure time. Dwelling on past mistakes, disappointments is counterproductive. Romance will prove to be a stimulating diversion. A new feeling of optimism is in the air.

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

One of the best played hands to have crossed our desk is this example from the trials to select the British team for last year's Olympiad. South was a young British star, Roman Smolski.

Once North showed at least a tolerance for hearts with his bid of two no trump, South elected to gamble on the heart game.

Had West made the normal lead of the ten of clubs, declarer would have had few problems. Unfortunately for South, West hit upon the double-dummy opening of a low spade. Declarer played the king from dummy and, when the queen dropped, declarer was in a parlous state—looking at all four hands, it seems that declarer must lose a trump, a diamond, a club and a spade ruff, since he has no quick entry to his hand to draw trumps.

However, declarer was not about to give up. At trick two he led a low club from the table. East could have defeated the contract had he played low—West would win the ten, give East a spade ruff, and a diamond shift by East would allow the defenders to score two more tricks. But East inserted the jack of clubs—and we must confess that we would probably have done the same. He shifted to a diamond, and the ten was covered by the jack and won by the ace.

Now declarer found a second brilliancy in the hand. He led the queen of clubs from dummy and, when East covered with the king, declarer did not ruff. Instead, he discarded his remaining diamond. There was now no way that East could get to West for a spade ruff.

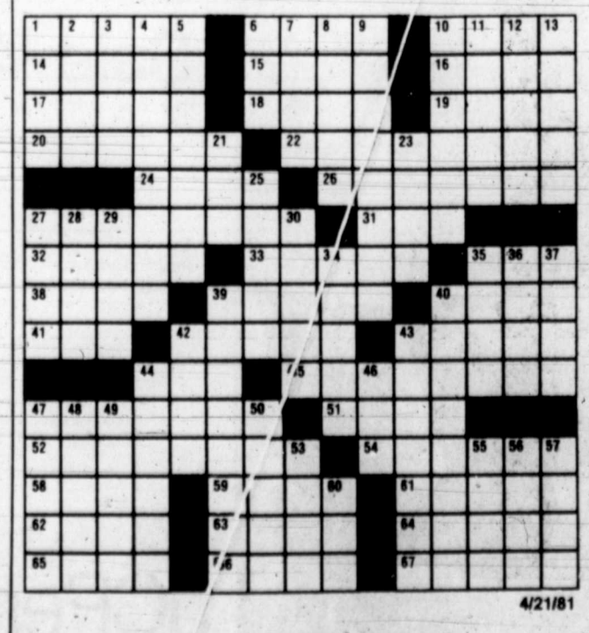

East tried by leading a third club, but declarer ruffed high and led a trump to the queen and ace. East played another club, but declarer again ruffed high, and his remaining hearts were just good enough to draw the outstanding trumps, after which declarer could claim his contract.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Employee of Daniel testifies about his drinking LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — A 66-year-old grandmother who was hired as a nanny by former Texas House speaker Price Daniel Jr. says she saw Daniel drink to excess and slap his wife Vickie during a week-long stay at the couple's Liberty ranch home three years ago.

Dorothy Williams of Houston said she was hired to care for the Daniel's young son, Franklin Baldwin Daniel, now 3, shortly after the child was born.

She testified in a child custody suit Monday that the first time she met the former state legislator, he "couldn't walk straight" because he had been drinking. Daniel once deliberately poured a glass of liquor on the floor, then demanded that Mrs. Daniel clean it up, she said.

She also said she saw Daniel slap his wife in the face during an argument at their home.

Earlier Monday, a real estate broker testified that he disassociated himself from Daniel in 1977 because of the former Texas House speaker's drinking and marijuana use.

David Parker of Liberty, testifying in the sixth week of a child custody suit filed against Daniel's widow, said the woman who filed the suit telephoned him a few days after Daniel was shot to death and told him he "had better not say anything else against (Daniel)."

Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, is trying to wrest custody of her brother's two young children from Mrs. Daniel, claiming she is an unfit mother and prone to violence.

It was during a 1976 visit to Daniel's law office, Parker testified, that he saw the former Texas House speaker smoking a cigarette "that had a pungent, acid odor of marijuana."

David Parker of Liberty said he knew about marijuana from his experience in the National Guard and that he had attended sessions on drug abuse.

Parker said he had dropped by Daniel's law office on a Sunday afternoon and found him "leaning back in his chair, feet up on his desk, smoking. I startled him, and he ducked down and put his hand under the desk."

When Daniel realized who Parker was, he offered him one of the cigarettes, he said.

"I was angry and disgusted after I left the office," said Parker, who is married to Susan Daniel Parker, a first cousin of the Daniel family.

Bilingual ruling may be delayed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White says he probably will ask a higher court to delay implementation of U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's ruling that Texas must offer bilingual education in all public school grades.

White told a news conference Monday a request for a stay is "under contemplation" and "the odds are more likely we will."

A stay would block implementation of the order until appeals are exhausted.

White also suggested that the current policy of providing bilingual education only through the third grade might be unconstitutional.

"Constitutionally, we would be safe with K-5 (kindergarten through fifth grade) and intensive English instruction for all who need it," he said.

The attorney general claimed Justice's order goes so far as to require high school chemistry to be taught in Spanish.

White also said he is not about to let the Texas Education Agency hire its own lawyer for the appeal of Justice's decision.

Although State Education Commissioner Alton Bowen said more than two weeks ago the State Board of Education had asked White to let it hire an outside lawyer, White said, "I have no such letter in my files."

Pressed on whether he had ever seen or received such a letter, he acknowledged the board "had asked me to consider" giving permission to hire outside counsel.

"I'm not going to certify anybody to run the lawsuit," White said. Under state law, a state agency must be represented in court by the attorney general unless the attorney general certifies the agency may hire its own lawyer.

The state prison system also has asked White to let it hire its own lawyer for a case attacking the constitutionality of Texas' penitentiaries but White has refused.

White contends that if federal appeals courts uphold Justice's decision on bilingual education, 20,000 additional Spanish-speaking teachers would have to be trained and hired.

Schools may stay closed for term

CHILLICOTHE, Texas (AP) — Two public school buildings may remain closed for the rest of the school year because of contamination by toxic insecticides that were sprayed in them last month by Chillicothe school board members, a local official said.

Chillicothe schools have been closed since April 1, when between 60 and 80 students and teachers suffered adverse reactions from Lindane and Toxaphene, two chemicals that were sprayed inside the schools in an effort to rid them of an infestation of head lice. The chemicals normally are used on livestock.

Tests conducted by the Texas Health Department show the chemicals may have been absorbed by the paint on the schools' interior walls, a department spokesman said.

"This may mean they'll have to clean off the old paint and repaint the schools," said Dr. M. J. Woltjen, director of Region IV services of the health department.

Students began attending makeshift classes in three area churches on April 13, about three weeks after the schools were last sprayed with chemicals on March 27.

The students may have to finish the school year in the church classrooms, said Dr. Roy Fisher, Chillicothe's city health officer.

"I'm almost sure the state will recommend the stripping and repainting of the schools, which means we probably won't reopen until next year," he said.

"This may be a needless precaution, but it would probably satisfy a lot of people's minds."

Health department officials have supervised the cleaning and testing of the schools for the past two weeks.

Woltjen said Monday that the concentrations of the chemicals found in wall paint and in scrapings from furniture inside the school remain high. Additional tests were made Friday, the results of which will be disclosed at a meeting of state health officials Wednesday in Austin.

"People up here are ultracautious now," Fisher said. "We've been through the careless stage, and now we want to be extra careful."

Students and teachers complained of headaches, nausea, runny eyes and skin rashes shortly after the chemicals were sprayed by school board members and the city school superintendant, Monte Pannell.

Earlier, nearly half of the students attending the city's high school and grade school were found to have "nits" — eggs deposited by head lice — in their scalps.

Relatives gather for Aggie Muster

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Relatives of deceased graduates of Texas A&M University will gather in 306 locations around the world today for the reading of the Aggie Muster, a roll call of all students and former students who have died in the past year.

The military-like ceremony, celebrated each year since 1883, honors all students and former students who have died since the last muster.

Aggies will gather in every major city in the United States and around the world from Manama, Bahrain; Tokyo; Jakarta, Indonesia; Honduras and Singapore to Spain, the Philippines and South Africa.

Ceremonies this year will be held at the foot of the Statue of Liberty and at West Point. In the past, one of the most famous Musters was held on Corregidor in World War II just before the island fell to the Japanese.

Flatter elevators could save lives

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Grain elevators could be safer if they were flatter like those in some foreign countries, says a scientist investigating the April 7 blast at the Corpus Christi Public Elevator.

Many American grain-handling facilities, such as the one here that exploded killing eight, are tall with conveyor belt systems to move grain located inside, said Dr. Veron L. Grose, a member of the National Academy of Sciences.

A tall building offers more efficient land use and easier emptying of grain from silos, he said.

Flatter construction, as used in Australia and Turkey, does not have "near the potential for explosions," he added.

Investigators have not determined what sparked the volatile grain dust within the elevator to explode and rip apart the massive concrete structure. Damage is estimated at $30 million.

Concentrations of grain dust often are high around the grain-moving equipment, the horizontal conveyors and vertical "legs" that use a bucket system to move grain up the elevator.

Grose said placing the conveyor system outside the complex significantly reduces hazards because an enclosed space is necessary for an explosion.

"If they're not buried inside concrete and steel, the damage potential is greatly reduced," he said. An explosion at a Mobile, Ala., elevator caused significantly less damage because the conveyor system was outside, he said.

The Corpus Christi Public Elevator had a reputation as a safe facility.

"This was a clean house, so it kind of pushes us in the direction of looking at the conveyor system and the legs," Grose said.

An unusual feature found by investigators is an enclosure of the conveyor belts.

"The steel covering keeps belt-generated dust from flying around the elevator but "you can't open them to see what the concentrations are around the belts," the scientist said.

The dust control system sucks out dust from the encased belts, but Grose added, "We still don't know if it pulled off enough or in the right places."

"It's very hard now that it's blown apart to say how good it was," he said of the dust control system.

Several wrongful death suits have been filed by families of blast victims. Three of those injured remain in critical condition at local hospitals.

Cattle inventories remain low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers and feedlot operators continue to hold cattle inventories below levels of a year ago, according to the latest Agriculture Department figures.

As of April 1, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Monday, cattle being fed for the slaughter market as of April 1 totaled 9.76 million head, down 4 percent from a year ago and 12 percent less than two years ago.

The report said that was the smallest April feedlot inventory since 1975.

For some time, analysts have been predicting gradually tightening supplies of beef, pointing to higher prices for producers and consumers alike this spring and in the months to follow.

One factor will be the effect of hog producers cutting back on production this year. Others will include the weather and how pastures and crops shape up in the months ahead.

According to the quarterly report, which covers cattle feedlot operations in 23 major beef states — they account for 95 percent of U.S. output — marketings of fed cattle totaled 6 million head. That was down 2 percent from the first quarter of 1980 and 11 percent from the same period in 1979.

In its quarterly report last Jan. 19, the department said cattle marketings in the first quarter were indicated at 6.29 million head.

Placements of new cattle in feeding pens in the January-March period, at 5.15 million head, were down 1 percent and 12 percent, respectively, from the first quarters of 1980 and 1979.

AGRICULTURE

The report said cattle feeders expect to market 5.54 million head from April through June, down 2 percent from the second quarter of last year and 10 percent below two years ago.

Looking at the seven states which are examined each month — and produce about three-fourths of the nation's beef — April 1 inventories at 7.86 million head were down 7 percent from a year earlier and were 15 percent lower than two years ago.

Those states are Arizona, California, Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Texas.

By states, the April 1 feedlot cattle inventory and its percentage of a year earlier, included:

Arizona, 346,000 head on April 1, up 7 percent from a year earlier; California, 526,000, down 5 percent; Colorado, 665,000, down 5 percent; Idaho, 203,000, down 15 percent; Illinois, 490,000, up 4 percent; Indiana, 240,000, up 2 percent; Iowa, 1.23 million, down 8 percent; Kansas, 1.1 million, down 2 percent; Michigan, 145,000, down 3 percent; Minnesota, 405,000, up 1 percent; Missouri, 80,000, down 6 percent; and Montana, 39,000, down 20 percent.

Also, Nebraska, 1.45 million, up 4 percent; New Mexico, 145,000, down 25 percent; North Dakota, 38,000, down 10 percent; Ohio, 150,000, down 9 percent; Oklahoma, 267,000, down 5 percent; Oregon, 60,000, up 13 percent; Pennsylvania, 70,000, up 3 percent; South Dakota, 310,000, down 10 percent; Texas, 1.52 million, down 12 percent; Washington, 154,000, up 1 percent; and Wisconsin, 125,000, up 4 percent.

Cattle cloning could help in search for better beef

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M University veterinary scientists are experimenting with cloning to see if they can produce healthier, heftier cattle.

Researchers will use genetic engineering, or recombinant DNA, to insert genetic material from one strain of mammal to the embryo of another.

"This study will concentrate on adapting microinjection and cell nuclei fusion techniques already developed in mice to cattle ova," said Dr. Duane Kraemer, a pioneer in embryo transfer studies who will oversee the microinjection work.

He will work with Dr. James Womack, a geneticist, in the project supported by the Hillcrest Foundation of Dallas, which provides grants for biomedical research.

Womack is "mapping" cattle genes that include 60 fairly small chromosomes, the part of the cell nucleus containing DNA, the basic genetic code.

Like a good roadmap, a good gene map is necessary before researchers begin to remove pieces of genetic material and implant them in the genes of other cells.

Mapping, Womack said, is the location of specific genes, the basic units of heredity made up of DNA, at the spots they occupy along specific chromosomes.

"Gene mapping is necessary to permit transmission of only the desirable traits — resistance to disease, for example, or a larger size — from one species or strain to another," he said.

Womack said mapping entails joining genetic material from one animal to tissue culture lines with which scientists are familiar, such as that of a hamster or mouse.

As the hybrid cell grows, scientists can trace and study changes in genetic material through enzyme analysis.

Womack said that while the technique of somatic cell hybridization is a decade old, successful hybridization of cow and mouse cells necessary for mapping bovine genes was reported in the scientific literature only two years ago.

The researchers said one of the current limitations on selective breeding of livestock has been the time needed — usually several generations — to fix one or more desirable genetic trains within a herd or breed of cattle.

Fire ants foresaking South for Pacific, scientists say

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Hordes of fire ants — known for their painful sting and their habit of attacking their prey in massive numbers — may be headed for the Pacific coast in an unchecked migration from the deep South, scientists believe.

The high temperatures and lack of moisture in the West Texas desert normally would halt the natural spread of fire ants in that direction, said Dr. Brad Vinson, a Texas A&M University Agricultural Experiment Station researcher. But if they are transported by man, the ants may be able to establish in watered lawns or irrigated areas all the way to California.

The insects already have pushed as far west in Texas as Corpus Christi, San Antonio and Dallas, leaving behind thousands of new colonies.

Fire ants do not appear different from many of the other ants in the United States, Vinson said. The difference is in their sting, one of the most potent in the insect world for their size. Fire ants can inflict repeated painful stings that will form a pustule or small white sore within 24 hours.

The ants were accidentally imported to the United States in 1920 from a South American cargo ship bringing coconuts to Alabama. Since then, they have spread throughout the South, infesting 190 million acres in Texas, Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, and North and South Carolina.

Vinson said insecticides are already on the market that are capable of controlling the ants on a limited scale. These include Dizainon, Imidan (which is not approved by the Environmental Protection Agency for use by Texas homeowners) and Mirex, formerly used as a bait to attract and kill the female workers, but later banned because of some undesirable effects it had on many non-target animals and birds. There was also some indication that the bait killed native ants, providing fertile ground for future fire ant infestation.

Farmer in tractor mishap dies

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A 73-year-old Hillsdale County farmer who was pinned under his tractor for four days earlier this month has died of complications caused by the accident, a funeral home spokesman says.

Leon E. Hagaman of rural Amboy Township, near the Michigan-Ohio border, died Sunday at the Universtiy of Michigan Hospitals in Ann Arbor. He had been hospitalized since April 5, when he was pulled from beneath the tractor at his farm.

Summer water shortages forecast following survey of snowpacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new survey of mountain snowpacks points to some shortages of water in parts of the West this summer, a government report says.

It was issued jointly by the Agriculture Department and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration of the Commerce Department.

For months, the light snow accumulations have pointed to water problems later this year, most notably in areas that have few reservoirs for storing of water. The latest report was based on surveys made April 1.

Norman A. Berg, chief of the Soil Conservation Service, said Monday that the final survey of this season will be made May 1. But for much of the region, the pattern for the coming months appears clear.

"Many water users in the West will face critical supply problems unless there is a lot of rain throughout the summer," Berg said.

Mountain snowpacks in the West normally reach maximum depths on April 1, Berg said. But the latest survey "revealed little change" from March 1, he said.

THERE'S A TIME AND A PLACE TO CARRY ON.

Some airlines ask you and your carry-ons to share the same seat space. So you end up with an attache where your feet are supposed to be. Or a tennis racket between your knees.

But not when you fly Continental.

We already have plenty of overhead storage for your briefcase or overnighter. And we're adding new carry-on compartments to every 727.

Our new compartments are specially designed so you can hang up your garment bag. That extra suit will arrive a lot less rumpled, which is why you put it in a garment bag in the first place.

We don't think you should share a seat with anything except your own two feet. So we've increased our carry-on space. And you'll enjoy a more comfortable flight.

That's not all either.

As soon as the plane lands, you can get right off with your bags. So next time fly Continental. Because now there's a time and a place to carry on. Call your travel agent, company travel department or Continental at 563-2100.

Officials check wreckage of a commuter airliner which crashed with a single engine plane in mid-air Friday afternoon near Loveland, Colo. Fifteen persons were killed in the crash. The single engine Cessna held parachutist and the Air U. S. plane was on its way to Gillette, Wyoming from Denver.

NTSB officials piecing together wrecked planes

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board are trying to piece together the wreckage of the Cessna 206 that collided with a commuter airplane, killing 15 people.

Eleven federal investigators worked all day Monday in a hangar at the Loveland-Fort Collins Municipal Airport to determine the angle at which the planes collided during their flights Friday.

An Air U.S. twin-engine commuter plane bound from Denver to Gillette, Wyo., plunged into a wheat field "almost perpendicular to the ground," killing all 13 people on board, said NTSB investigation spokesman Ira Furman.

Four skydivers aboard the single-engine Cessna parachuted to safety. The parachutes of two other skydivers opened but the men were dead when they landed.

About 95 percent of the Cessna was recovered from the crash site. Furman said the investigators found what appear to be propeller and paint marks on the Cessna, apparently from the Air U.S. craft.

Furman disagreed with reports form an Air U.S. spokeswoman that the skydivers' plane was off course at the time of the collision.

"There was no established course for that plane," he said, adding that Air U.S. personnel assisting the NTSB investigation have not charged the Cessna with flying off course.

A computer specialist will assist in determining the angle of collision and other information from records. The data will be sent to Washington, and NTSB officials will complete the investigation, issuing a report on the cause of the crash in a few months, Furman said.

Audits of air traffic control tapes gave "no indication that either plane was aware of of the other, no indication air traffic controllers advised them of one another," Furman said.

Pilot missing after crash

TAOS, N.M. (AP) — A state police investigation into the crash and explosion of a twin-engine airplane at the Taos airport lacked one major item — the pilot.

The pilot survived the crash and explosion Monday and walked to the nearby airport terminal noticeably shaken. However, after telling authorities there he was going to a hospital, he disappeared.

A check by state police of area hospitals failed to turn up any trace of the unidentified man.

"Nobody could find the pilot," said Steve Quintana, airport manager. "He radioed in and said he was taking off and about three minutes later we heard sputtering noises and we saw him come back."

Driver had poor record

DENISON, Texas (AP) — The driver of a car that collided with a van near Denison Saturday, killing Dallas nightclub owner Sam K. Kendrick, his son and another youth, lost his driver's license last year after receiving a dozen traffic citations since 1976, police said.

Joseph Turgeon, 20, whose vehicle crossed a median strip and struck Kendrick's van broadside on U.S. Highway 75 near Denison, has been charged with driving while intoxicated, driving with a suspended license, failure to stop and render aid and leaving the scene of an accident.

Turgeon was uninjured in the accident, but Kendrick, his 9-year-old son Marshall and a friend, Carl Amoeda, 14, were killed. Another youth, Kevin Kirk, 9, was in guarded condition Monday at Texoma Medical Center. Seven other passengers in Kendrick's van suffered less serious injuries.

Turgeon's driving record includes a dozen citations dating back to 1976, Denison Police Chief E.C. Eubank said. Turgeon's drivers license was suspended on Oct. 10, 1980.

"You can suspend the licenses of bad driver," Eubank said, "but it doesn't matter to them. They're going to drive anyway."

Sergeants to appeal fines in abortion-related case

BOSSIER CITY, La. (AP) — Two Air Force staff sergeants plan to appeal their convictions and fines for wearing uniforms during anti-abortion prayer vigils even though they may not lose their stripes.

Maj. Rod Duchesne, a spokesman for Barksdale Air Force Base, said Monday a military appeal had upheld the penalties against Phillip W. Byrd, 34, and David P. Burton, 29.

He said Maj. Gen. Jack Watkins, commander of the 1st Strategic Aerospace Division at Vandenberg Air Force Base, upheld the convictions and $100 fines, but ordered them provisionally reinstated at the rank of staff sergeant.

When they were convicted in February, Byrd and Burton were demoted from E-5 staff sergeant to E-4 senior airmen — a move that meant a loss of monthly pay ranging from $72.90 to $137.70. Their housing allowance was also reduced by about $28.

Duchesne said the loss in rank was suspended for six months — conditional on their continued good behavior.

"We're still going to appeal it," said Burton. "I'd expected it. It's just like a rubber stamp to me."

They have one final military appeal — which the plan sometime this month — to the Air Force Judge Advocate's office in Washington. Further appeals are possible through the federal court system.

The review of the sentence was automatic under the military justic system. Usually the commander who convenes the court martial reviews the judgment, a base spokesman said, but to avoid any charge of improper involvement, Col. Guy Luke stepped aside as reviewing authority.

The two sergeants are represented by Christian Law Associaton lawyers from Cleveland and have drawn support from the Moral Majority and other groups.

The Rev. Bill Burrows, pastor of Merrywoods Baptist Church in Haughton, who arranged the prayer vigils, could not be reached for comment.

A court-martial panel of five officers deliberated only 37 minutes Feb. 23 before finding the two guilty — a decision Burrows called a gross miscarriage of justice.

The airmen had joined other members of the church in daily vigils during their lunch hour, kneeling in a field across the street from the Bossier City Medical Suite, an abortion clinic.

The men argued they were abiding by a June 11 agreement with Col. Jack Farris, 2nd Wing bomb commander at Barksdale, who they said agreed to let them continue their prayers if they covered all military insignia.

They put on over-shirts and continued to take part in the vigils until their immediate superior warned them Dec. 1 not to appear in public in half uniform, half civilian clothing.

Scout rescues woman

WOODSTOCK, Vt. (AP) — Acting on instinct, a 17-year-old Boy Scout dove into the cold waters of the raging Ottaquechee River, saving the life of a Massachusetts woman whose brush with death almost turned a raft race into a tragedy.

"I thought she was horsing around," said John Loftus, who spotted Liz Rocha of Tauton, Mass., from the river bank. "Then I saw she was turning blue. And she was beginning to panic. On impulse, I jumped in after her.

"It just happened so fast. Anybody would have done it," Loftus said.

The rescue came Saturday moments after Ms. Rocha and several others aboard the raft were dumped into the water during the Fourth Annual Ottaquechee River Raft Race.

At least three others from the raft, made of inner tubes strapped to a board, were able to right the craft and continue the race.

But Ms. Rocha wasn't so lucky. After she entered the water, she lost her life preserver and began floundering in the rapids.

Although the water was only about waist deep, slippery rocks below the rapids made the footing unsteady.

"I kept trying to find my footing. But I couldn't stand up." Loftus said.

He struggled to hang onto Ms. Rocha, who was too frightened to respond to his commands.

"She was panicking. I kept yelling at her to kick. But she wouldn't," he said.

Finally, with Ms. Rocha under his arm, Loftus swam near the rocky shore where spectators pulled them on land.

"It'll probably be a few days before John realizes what he did, that he really saved someone's life," said Dwight Camp, a member of Boy Scout executive board in Vermont.

Leading fashion designers ready to bury blazer

As the fashion designers along New York's Seventh Avenue kicked off a two-week siege of fall fashion previews Monday, the man-tailored wool suit was missing, the cotton button-down shirt was utterly absent.

"The blazer is dead. They don't buy that stuff anymore. Everyone wants a softer look," said Irene Newcomb, owner of the Gray Rose, a store in Colorado Springs, Colo., who was picking from among the fall offerings on Monday.

If that's what they want, good — because that's what New York designers are offering.

Don Sayres called his fall line "decorative and romantic." Jon Haggins called his "sophisticated." Carol Horn called hers "elegant yet wearable."

Dominic Rompollo didn't call his anything at all. He just sent out the models: In peach and teal knit sheaths with padded shoulders and matching shawls; in broad-shouldered, slim tunics over narrow skirts; in drab green knit dresses that fall in swirling folds from the collar-bone.

Like Haggins and others, Rompollo is offering dresses that harken back to the 1920s — soft fabrics that cling as they drop to the hips, where the fabric is gathered and flares out into ruffles.

The blazer may be dead, but the jacket is not. It has several surviving incarnations:

Don Sayres offers a brown velvet tuxedo with a soft, double-breasted jacket. He has a "bolero" — a small, closely fitted jacket that stops at the waist — to be worn with wide "cuffed mid-calf pants."

Similarly, Sayres is showing the "box jacket," a handsome waist-length flannel item with knife-pleats down the front. There's also the Sayres smocked jacket, full and soft, and the Sayres windbreaker, frequently in soft leather.

If most folks think of fall as a time to wear rusts, browns, tans, drab greens, Sayres does not. The man is bold. He puts a magenta flannel tunic over a green gaberdine skirt; he tops a magenta pair of crepe de chine pants with an orange and magenta crepe de chine blouse with a pleated collar.

Pleats and ruffles are in — at the chin, down the front of blouses. Sayres is offering alpaca sweaters with doubly-flounced collars.

Rompollo's trousers are mostly soft, narrow, heel-length. Sayres offers a straight-legged trouser that a woman who dresses for success might recognize, and he's also showing trousers with leggings.

Pastor refuses to wed couple

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A newly married couple said they were shocked when a white Baptist minister who was set to marry them last week refused after he learned the bride-to-be was black and her fiance was white.

"He said he was very sorry but he didn't believe in mixed marriages," said Mrs. Kasper, the former Patricia Bice. "I was really hurt, I was in shock, but I didn't say anything."

Her husband, Gary Kasper, added that: "It was terrible. He shouldn't have done it."

The Rev. Robert L. Farrington said he never performed an interracial marriage and would not in the future. He said those were his convictions, not necessarily those of his church.

"I told them it was just against my personal convictions," said Farrington, assistant pastor of Temple Heights Baptist Church.

The couple was married anyway on Friday, but at a wedding chapel, not the church they had chosen.

Kasper is a 24-year-old sergeant at MacDill Air Force Base.

Preparations had been made through a secretary at the church, Mrs. Kasper said after the marriage. "Everything was going smoothly."

On Thursday, the night before the intended wedding, they went to the church.

DEAR ABBY

Housekeeper Taken To Cleaners

Dear Abby: I'm a 35-year-old divorcee in love with a 39-year-old professional man I'll call Ben. Ben is divorced and has custody of his two sons, 7 and 10.

Ben and I started seeing each other last November. In January he lost his housekeeper, so he asked me to move in with him. He said I would stay in the maid's room and we'd tell the boys that I was the housekeeper so as not to upset them.

I do all the housekeeping and cooking and look after the boys. They're good kids, but they are a handful. Ben and I have to sneak around to see each other. I saw more of Ben when I had my own place.

"Mr. G." (as I must call him in front of the boys) frequently goes out in the evening and stays out until morning. Women call him here and I have to take their messages. I am hurt and jealous. Also, I don't like being treated like a servant.

I love Ben but I don't know how much longer I can stay in this job. I used to make between $350 and $400 a week as a cocktail waitress. This housekeeper's job pays $200 a month. What do you think of this setup? And what should I do?—UNHAPPY HOUSEKEEPER

DEAR UNHAPPY: I think the setup is wonderful—for Ben. Resign your job as housekeeper and tell Ben you were much happier being a waitress and his girlfirend.

DEAR ABBY: While visiting my 25-year-old daughter in her college town, I extended an invitation for dinner to include her semi-serious boyfriend, who is by no means poor. He selected an expensive Japanese restaurant. The food was excellent and the evening pleasant.

When the bill came, I put my money on the little tray. When the change was returned to me, I left what I considered to be a fair tip.

As we were leaving, the gentleman took a couple of dollars out of his wallet and put them on the tray! I felt humiliated. But said nothing. Am I wrong to feel that I was made to look cheap?—SACRAMENTO MOM.

DEAR MOM: I doubt that the gentleman's intention was to humiliate you or make you look "cheap." He may have acted clumsily, but since he's obviously generous, "semi-serious" about your daughter and "by no means poor," as a favor to your daughter, don't make waves.

DEAR ABBY: I was married three years ago, but for some reason or another I have managed to send out only a fraction of the thank-you notes I owe for my wedding prcsents. I feel just awful about this and it's been a heavy burden on my mind.

Should i just forget about them, or start writing them even though they are terribly late? If I should write the, how can I possibly explain my lateness? — ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: Of course you should write those thank-you notes! A late thanks is better than none. Don't try to "explain" your lateness, but do apologize for it. A simple, "Please forgive my inexcusably tardy acknowledgment of your wedding gift." etc.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to write letters for all occasions." Send $1 plus a long, stamped envelope to Abby, Letters Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Clock Thermostats

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Residents of 20 states who installed automatic clock thermostats in their homes during 1980 received a state tax credit in addition to federal incentives, an industry survey shows.

In 11 states, the added incentives were offered if the device was installed as part of a renewable-energy system, according to the survey released here by Honeywell. Seven other states granted tax breaks for installation of the thermostat alone and two offered special bonus plans as part of conservation tax programs.

The state tax breaks ranged from 100 percent deductions in Arkansas and Montana to deductions of 20 to 40 percent in California, Colorado, Oregon and Rhode Island.

Ruling on mentally retarded may not be permanent

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court ruling that the mentally retarded are not guaranteed treatment in neighborhood settings is a major setback for groups pressing for greater rights for institutionalized mental patients, but it may not be permanent.

The justices voted 6-3 Monday to overturn lower court rulings that had used a 1975 federal law designed to prohibit so-called "warehousing" of the retarded as a basis for finding that mental patients had a "right to treatment" in settings "the least restrictive to personal liberty."

The court's decision overturned rulings that would have required the transfer of 1,200 patients at the Pennhurst State School and Hospital in Pennsylvania.

The justices said they agreed that "conditions at Pennhurst are not only dangerous, with the residents often physically abused or drugged by staff members, but inadequate for the 'habilitation' of the retarded."

But they said Section 6010 of the Disabled Assistance and Bill of Rights Act does not directly require the state to pay for better treatment for the patients at Pennhurst.

Writing for the court, Justice William H. Rehnquist said, "We are persuaded that Section 6010 . . . does no more than express a congressional preference for certain kinds of treatment."

The court noted that Congress did not provide for enforcement of the section, such as threatening to withdraw federal aid to state mental health programs that did not meet the section's standards.

But the decision was not necessarily a final word on mental patients' rights to treatment. The court left unanswered whether the Constitution or other federal laws give mental patients a right to least-restrictive treatment.

The lawsuit was filed on behalf of Terry Lee Halderman and the other patients at Pennhurst.

Ms. Halderman's attorney, David Ferleger of Philadelphia, said "the saddest part of the decision is that it puts off for at least another year the resolution of what to do with these antiquated institutions."

In other actions Monday, the court said the city of Memphis, Tenn., did not discriminate against the city's black residents by closing a street that linked black and white neighborhoods.

The court, in a 6-3 decision, said the city closed West Drive to through-traffic at the request of residents of the predominantly white Hein Park neighborhood for legitimate reasons: to reduce the danger and annoyance of heavy traffic.

The decision, however, drew a sharp dissent from the court's only black member, Justice Thurgood Marshall, who wrote that such reasons have too often been "little more than code phrases for racial discrimination."

At the same time, the court refused to block temporarily a racial desegregation plan for St. Louis schools that might include pupil exchanges with schools in surrounding suburbs.

Missouri officials had asked the justices to stay a lower court ruling that required preparation of a voluntary pupil plan until it could file a formal appeal to the Supreme Court.

The high court, meanwhile, refused to kill a federal government lawsuit aimed at desegregating two elementary schools in Ocala, Fla.

Rejecting an appeal from Marion County school officials, the justices upheld an appeals court decision which ordered a trial of the government's suit seeking "specific performance" of desegregation promises made by the school district when it sought federal funds.

The court also agreed to decide whether Richmond, Va., civil rights investigators who pretended to be apartment-hunters can sue a landlord for alleged racial discrimination.

Banks, crime on state ballots

By The Associated Press

While voters in Minot, N.D., were deciding if they wanted to run a bank, residents of crime-plagued Oakland, Calif., were casting ballots today on a special $37 million anti-crime tax measure.

Residents of Michigan's 4th Congressional District, meanwhile, were selecting a successor to David Stockman, who gave up his seat to chop the federal budget for President Reagan.

Oakland Mayor Lionel Wilson conceded he was "quite concerned" about the prospects for obtaining the two-thirds majority needed under tax-cutting Proposition 13 to authorize property tax increases.

"It's important to try and win it," Wilson said. "But at least as important is to demonstrate majority support."

Oakland, a city of 339,000, experienced a 7 percent increase in its crime rate in 1980, while the size of the police force has declined 14 percent in four years, the mayor said.

Two Youngstown, Ohio, teachers look over the latest contract proposal Monday morning on the steps of their strike headquarters. Later, over 1,000 teachers ratified the new wage package by a voice vote. The teachers and the school board agreed on a two-year 12.5 percent wage hike and planned to reopen schools today.

Ohio teachers, board agree on wage hike

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Strike-weary teachers and the financially pressed school board, agreeing on a two-year 12.5 percent wage hike, reopened schools today with everyone present for the first time in two months.

"It felt good to look at the schools and see the kids waiting out front for the first bells to ring. . . . I think everybody is happy today. I read that in all their faces," said Assistant Superintendent James Jarvis.

He said "everything seems to be fine," with attendance close to normal.

A late snag in separate negotiations between the board and an AFL-CIO affiliated group of custodians, maintenance and other non-teaching employees had threatened late Monday to prolong the school shutdown, but a settlement was reached.

Earlier in the day, some 1,050 militant but happy striking teachers ratified an end to their 36-school-day walkout during a packed union-hall meeting. The session was called by strike leaders to explain the 16-page contract document.

Teachers responded with thunderous "ayes" to the pact, with only a scattering of disapprovals. The seven-member board then unanimously approved the pay raises, hammered out in marathon talks last weekend.

School officials then met later in the day with some 550 non-teaching members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, who were seeking reimbursement of 13 days of pay and other benefits which they lost when refusing to cross teachers' picket lines.

A prolonged strike was averted when a plan for extra work days satisfied the non-teaching employees, an AFSCME source said.

Instructors had said that if the AFSCME group called a walkout, they would honor picket lines.

The teachers' walkout, which began Feb. 20, paralyzed education for the system's 17,000 public students. Schools were shut down, except for a brief reopening March 24-25. The attempt to restart classes failed, however, since few pupils and teachers showed up.

"We have just about everything we wanted. A very favorable settlement," said Robert Vargo, spokesman for the Youngstown Education Association, following Monday's vote.

Constance Hall, the group's outside negotiator, said a settlement was reached by growing community pressure to get schools back in session and a state requirement that schools open Tuesday in order for the board to continue to receive state education funds. State law requires that the district have classes 180 days a year by June 20, a figure possible in Youngstown only if classes resumed today.

Under the pact, teachers' base pay moved from $11,000 a year to $11,690 for the 1981 year. That will be boosted another 3 percent to $12,041 effective Jan. 1, 1982, and hiked another 7 percent in mid-1982, if voters approve a school levy in June.

Mandatory busing attempts dropped

6LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two civil rights groups say they plan no further attempts this year to reinstate mandatory busing for school integration, and have been asked by anti-busing forces to aid efforts to make voluntary integration a success.

On Monday, as 7,300 school children settled into new classrooms under a voluntary busing plan in the nation's second-largest school district, the state Supreme Court denied without comment an American Civil Liberties Union petition aimed at blocking the end to mandatory busing.

ACLU attorney Fred Okrand said the organization planned no further attempt to reinstate the program for the remainder of the current school year.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had had a petition pending before U.S. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist, but decided Monday to drop it.

The civil rights group decided it did not "wish to cause yet another pupil reassignment during the current school semester," according to a withdrawal notice filed in Washington with the Supreme Court.

Over the weekend, Rehnquist turned down an NAACP request to halt the voluntary busing, but did not issue a ruling on the organization's challenge. He had said he would do so after hearing from school board attorneys later this week.

The first school day in three years without mandatory busing went smoothly Monday as 7,300 students returned to neighborhood schools for the last 10 weeks of the term.

Some 23,300 first- through ninth-graders at 153 schools were involved in the busing plan that the school board voted March 16 to dismantle after Easter vacation. But 16,000 chose to continue riding buses so they could finish the school year where they began it.

Resistance threatening drug probe

Hollywood rebels against investigations

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Despite assurances from a congressional aide that "we have no intention of asking people to name names," Hollywood resistance is threatening to scuttle an investigation of drug abuse in the entertainment industry.

"We are tired of people always starting their investigations with Hollywood just because it is prominent and will generate publicity," said Kim Fellner, spokeswoman for the Screen Actors Guild. "We know that alcohol and drug abuse exist in our industry, but in no greater proportion than in the rest of society," she said.

"These hearings have overtones of the 1950s," said actor Ed Asner of CBS-TV's "Lou Grant," quoted in this week's People magazine. "We can't blow the whistle on commies anymore, so we blow the whistle on people who snort."

The House Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control is to begin hearings here Wednesday in an effort to "focus attention on a problem that has once again grown to epidemic proportions," said Phil Leshin, an aide to committee chairman Rep. Leo C. Zefferetti, D-N.Y.

"The whole town of Hollywood is coked out of its head," actor Robert Blake has said. A number of actors and actresses have been arrested for investigation of possession of cocaine, which is often taken through the nose by sniffing or "snorting."

As late as Monday, Zefferetti and Leshin were scrambling to line up celebrities as witnesses. Two of those who had been scheduled to testify backed out, saying they feared the hearings would lead to a blacklist like the one of people suspected of being communists. Sen. Joseph McCarthy conducted hearings in the 1950s to investigate alleged communist subversion in the U.S. government. A number of Hollywood figures refused to testify before a House probe of alleged communist subversion in the entertainment industry.

"The perception is the industry has closed ranks and said, 'We're not going to testify,'" Leshin said of this week's hearings. "Everyone's clamming up."

Among them are actress Cathy Lee Crosby of "That's Incredible," who last year asked the panel to correct "the false picture that the majority of celebrities are druggies."

Kathie Wasserman, a spokeswoman for Miss Crosby, said the actress decided not to go along this time becase she felt the committee was investigating "who's taking drugs in Hollywood."

"I don't know why they're so paranoid," Rep. Thomas Railsback of Illinois told People. "I think there must be a very serious problem."

Leshin said producer Alan Horn, president of Tandem Productions-TAT Communications, and actor Phil McKeon, who plays Tommy on the CBS series "Alice," are expected to testify before the committee.

Other witnesses will include Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and California Attorney General George Deukmejian.

"Some people have tried to cast Zefferetti and some committee members as McCarthy types who are trying to get people to name names and build a blacklist," Leshin said. "This is simply not true.

"What Mr. Zefferetti is trying to do is to develop a federal strategy for dealing with a problem that has reached epidemic proportions."

Ms. Fellner said SAG was "not making a recommendation to our members one way or the other" regarding the hearings.

Drugs apparently lead to man's death

LYONS, Kan. (AP) — A 20-year-old man who had taken LSD and other drugs bled to death after crashing into a house through a window screaming that he was being chased by "demons or devils," police say.

"He came in screaming, fearing for his life, I understand," Police Sgt. Bill Thompson said.

Thompson said William Beierle, who smashed his way into two houses before dawn Sunday, appeared to be incoherent and hallucinating. Thompson said witnesses reported that Beierle screamed that "demons or devels" were after him.

Beierle, who bled to death from a laceration of an artery in his upper right arm, had been drinking with two companions Saturday afternoon, Thompson said. The officer said one of the companions reported they drove 30 miles to Hutchinson Saturday night and acquired LSD, amphetamine and marijuana.

Thompson said that when they returned to Lyons, they went to the home of Beierle, whose parents were out of town. The companion said Beierle went to bed but later crawled through a window and left.

Police said Beierle kicked in a door in the neighborhood Sunday morning, awakening a woman who fled from the house with her three children. The woman called police who started a search of the neighborhood.

Meanwhile, Thompson said, Beierle crashed through a double-pane window in a nearby house and cut himself again as he attempted to go through another window.

Police said the bleeding victim walked into the bedroom of an elderly woman who lived in the house, struck her and then went into a bathroom. Thompson said the bathroom door, which had a faulty lock, apparently became locked accidentally when Beierle closed it.

The woman crawled to the room of her 90-year-old brother and waited behind a locked door with him until police arrived. Beierle was found dead on the floor of the bathroom. The woman was not seriously hurt.

U.S., Mexican officials to discuss drug flow

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Drug enforcement and police officials from throughout the United States are being invited to meet with their counterparts in Mexico in an attempt to stop the flow of dangerous drugs across the border.

A series of three-week forums, sponsored by the Law Enforcement and Security Training Division of the Texas Engineering Extension Service, will be held in Mexico City beginning April 26 for police chiefs, sheriffs, district attorneys, judges, drug agents and others.

"Drug traffickers on both sides of the border know each other all too well," said Ira A. Scott, law enforcement division head at Texas A&M University. "Now it is time for the people fighting narcotics distribution to work just as closely together."

Scott said the law enforcement officials plan to meet with the Mexicans on their home ground, examine how they handle drug-related activities and exchange operational techniques, resources and strategies.

"The forums are designed for peer interaction among command-level personnel and high-echelon decision-makers," Scott said.

U.S. participants in the International War on Crime forum will meet with the attorneys general of Mexico and their staffs; Gen. Arturo Durazo Moreno and Gen. Rafael Navarro Mendoza, two of the highest ranking police officials in Mexico, and their staffs, and top prison officials and officials of the Mexican equivalent of the Drug Enforcement Agency.

Activities reported in District 8

A wildcat, locations and completions were announced over the weekend in Texas Railroad Commission District 8.

HOWARD WILDCAT:

McCann Corp. of Big Spring will drill a 9,500 foot prove 4.5 miles southeast of Bif Spring.

The No. 2 Flanagan "A" is located 660 feet from the south, 467 feet from the west lines of section 18, block 31 of T-1-S, T&P survey.

The location is 3,500 feet southwest of a dry and abandoned hole, No. 1 Howard drilled to 7,465 feet and abandoned on April 11, 1970. It is also 1 mile southwest of No. 1 Choate, a depleted oil production with the total depth of 9,352 feet and abandoned on May 2, 1964 in the South Hutto Field.

MITCHELL LOCATION:

Texas International Petroleum Corp. of Oklahoma City will drill a 25,840 foot deep well in the prolific Dixon Field five miles north of Silver.

The No. 23 Edwin Parks is located 1,980 feet from the south and 660 feet from the east of section 2, block 12 of H&TC RR Co. survey.

It will be drilled to 7,070 feet for Ellenburger; Strawn at 24,469 feet; Odom at 24,917 feet and Mississippian at 25,840 feet.

The location is one mile east of No. 1 Barkley, a dry and abandoned location drilled to 6,362 feet and abandoned on April 8, 1956.

WARD FIELDTEST:

Hi—Po Inc. of Monahans will drill a 2,500 foot well four miles west of Royualty in the Payton Filed.

The No. 2 Boradland was originally drilled as a wildcat by Holborrk & Page Co. to the total depth of 8,521 and was plugged and abandoned June 15, 1963.

The location is adjacent to No. 1 G. R. Bentley, a dry and abandoned wildcat and 1,700 feet northwest of No. 1 P. L. Bordland, a completed oil production. Both these wells are below 2,500 feet.

WARD OFFSET:

Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. of Midland has potentialed a 6,316 foot west offset to the Scott (Cherry Canyon) Field one mile southeast of Barstow.

The No. 1 Barstow "26" is located 3,200 feet from the northeast and 660 feet from the northwest lines of section 38, block 33 of H&TC survey.

It is flowing 48 barrels of 41.8 gravity oil, 45,000 units of gas per day and 180 barrels of water with the gas to oil ratio of 938:1 and flowing tube pressure of 150 PSI.

Perforations were made from 6,109 to 6,121 feet with 1,500 gallons of acid and fractured with 10,000 gallons of acid and 17,000 pounds of 20/40 sand.

Top of pay depth is 5,756 feet and the plug-back depth 6,150 feet with the ground-level elevation at 1,560 feet.

It was drilled in the Delaware pay at 4,770 feet and Cherry Canyon at 5,756 feet. The test was originally contracted for 6,500 feet.

WARD LOCATIONS:

Chama Petroleum Co. of Dallas has finaled two prolific tests four miles southeast and northeast of Monahans.

The 5,660 foot No. 1 Sealy Smith foundation is located 1,320 feet from the north and 660 feet from the east lines of section 19, block A of G&MMB&A survey.

It is pumping 100 barrels of 36 gravity oil and 110 barrels of water per day with 25 lbs. of casing pressure through perforations made from 4,792-5,288 feet with 4,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 36,000 gallons of acid and 54,000 pounds of 20/40 sand.

Top of pay depth is 4,792 feet. Ground-level elevation 2,730 feet and a 5½-inch casing was set at 5,710 feet.

The Glorieta pay was reached at 4,790 feet and Clearfork at 5,029 feet.

The second field test, 5,621 foot No. 2 Sealy Smith Foundation is located 1,980 feet from the north and east lines of section 19, block A of G&MMB&A survey.

The well is pumping 100 barrels of 37 gravity oil and 120 barrels of water per day with the casing pressure of 20 pounds through perforations made from 4,516 to 5,283 feet with 6,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 60,000 gallons of acid and 100,000 pounds of 20/40 sand.

The top-of-pay depth is 4,516 feet, ground-level elevation of 2,741 feet and a 4½ inch casing was set 5,700 feet.

The Glorietya pay was reached at 4,516 feet and Clearfork at 5,055 feet.

Society of Petroleum Engineers slate meeting

The Permian Basin section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will hold a buffet meeting today 5:30 P.M. at Ranchland Hills Country Club. Professor James T. Smith will be the main speaker.

Smith, chairman of the Petroleum Engineering Department at Texas Tech University will present a layman's application of type curve analysis." He will explain the basic concept of type curves emphasizing the analysis of well test data which is difficult to interpret using conventional means due to formation damage or wellbore storage.

He has served on the society's continuing education and textbook committees and has chaired the SPE Editorial Review Committee in 1978.

SPE is an international society of 40,000 engineers, scientists and managers which disseminates technical information related to the production of energy resources through wellbored.

The social hour begins at 5:30 p.m. followed by dinner and program at 6:30 p.m.

Acquisition announced

The acquisition of Oilfield Lines Inc. located in the Big Spring Industrial Park by Kiddie Inc. will result in increased production consequently resulting in increased employment possibilities Oil Inc. board chairman Charles S. Christopher said.

Through there will be no administrative changes, employment is expected to go up 150 openings by the end of the year and 200 more next year.

Oil Inc. manufactures oil field equipment specializing in drilling rigs and claims to have two of the largest machine shops in the world.

Grove Manufacturing, a Kiddie division, might locate a plant in Big Spring, Christopher said.

Area projects announced

Chalmers Operating Co. Inc. of Abilene has completed the No. 1 Pierce "10" six miles northeast of Maryneal in Nolan County.

The lower Strawn lime oil discovery pumped 50 barrels of 39 gravity oil plus 50 barrels of water in 24 hours from perforations made from 6,570 to 6,580 feet with a gas oil ratio of 500 to 1.

The well is bottomed at 6,965 feet with a 4½ inch casing set on bottom

Location is two miles south of a 5,994-foot Strawn oil production in Withers Field in section 10, block X of the Texas and Pacific survey.

• • •

Also in Nolan County, the R. L. Adkins Corp. of Sweetwater has staked a location for a 7,200-foot wildcat six miles southeast of a 5,506-foot lower Canyon oil production in the Maryneal, South Field.

Location is 1,993 feet from the south line and 660 feet from the west line of Section 69, Block X of the Texas and Pacific survey.

Texas Oil and Gas Corp. of Midland has announced plans to drill an 11,000-foot wildcat trest in Lynn County, six miles southwest of the town of New Home, one mile northeast of a 9,803-ffot Strawn Lime oil production in the Tahoka Field, and ½ mile northeast of an 11,028-foot wildcat failure.

The new test is the No. 1 Powell "D" located 660 feet from the south line and 1,980 feet from the west line of section, 140, block 12, of the EL&RR survey.

BORDEN COUNTY:

Nortex Gas and Oil Co. kof Midland has filed application to drill an 8,800-foot new field wildcat in Borden County, 12 miles northeast of Gail and ½ mile southwest of an 8,381-ffot wildcat failure.

Designated the No. 4 Jones "469", location is 2,310 feet from the south line and 990 feet from the west line of section 469, block 97 of the H&TC survey, and 1¾ miles south of an 8,232-foot Mississippian oil production in the Seven J, West Field.

KING COUNTY

Medders Oil Co. of Wichita Falls has completed the second well and 3/8 mile extension in the Pitchfork (Tannehill) Field.

Producing from perforations made from 3,693-3,702 feet, the No. 2 Pitchfork-Maverick "B" pumped 128 barrels of 36 gravity oil in 24 hours with a gas oil ratio of 8 to 1.

Commission calls for Yates test

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Railroad Commission voted Monday to authorize a 45-day test if the Yates Field can produce oil at a rate of 150,000 barrels a day without damaging the reservoir.

Commissioner Mack Wallace called the West Texas field "one of the last great remaining oil fields in this nation."

The Yates Field was discovered in 1926 and has produced more than 784 million barrels of oil. Remaining recoverable reserves are estimated at 1.25 billion barrels.

"I am not yet convinced that long-term damage to the reservoir can be averted" if a higher rate of production is approved, Wallace said.

Marathon Oil Co. asked the three-member commission to increase the field's most efficient rate (MER) from 125,000 barrels to 150,000 barrels. In 1976 and 1978, at Marathon's request, the commission raised the MER from 50,000 to 100,000 barrels and to 125,000 barrels, respectively.

Wallace said the commission "must be as certain as is reasonably possible that an increase in the MER for the Yates Field will not cause irreparable reservoir damage and deprive this state and the nation of a needed energy source for the long term."

He said a five-day production test in March had not provided sufficient data to support an increase in the MER.

Under Wallace's motion, the commission staff would oversee a 45-day test at 150,000 barrels a day, then return to 125,000 barrels a day, pending a commission decision.

Script is different, but Dodgers whip Astros again

HOUSTON (AP) — The script was different but the outcome was the same as the Los Angeles Dodgers continued their hot streak and the Houston Astros kept sliding deeper in the National League West standings Monday night.

The Astros had been getting fine pitching and poor hitting. But Monday night the pitching wasn't good enough to make up for the lack of hitting as the Dodgers took a 5-2 victory.

The victory gave Los Angeles a 9-1 record while Houston lost its fourth straight, falling to 2-8, seven games behind the division-leading Dodgers.

In other NL games, the Montreal Expos nipped the Philadelphia Phillies 9-8, the St. Louis Cardinals whipped the Chicago Cubs 6-1 and the San Francisco Giants pounded the San Diego Padres 9-0.

The Los Angeles winning streak brought back memories of 1977 when the Dodgers ran off and left the rest of the division.

"I think this might be better," said Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda. "I feel better right now about being 9-1. But we've got a long way to go and a lot of games left."

Houston Manager Bill Virdon wasn't happy with his team's start.

"It's worse to start bad or finish bad than at any other time of the season," he said. "We just have to put some wins together."

"To lose at the start like this is depressing," said Houston third baseman Art Howe. "But all I'm thinking about is tomorrow and how to get us out of this."

Someone suggested that a team meeting might be in order but pitcher Joe Niekro figures "a couple of wins would do us more good."

The victory was also the fourth straight over Houston for the Dodgers, who lost a one-game playoff to the Astros for the division title last year after sweeping a three-game series to catch them. Although there is no revenge motive, second baseman Davey Lopes has gained a certain amount of enjoyment from the victories over Houston.

"Any time you beat a team with the experience of winning the National League West, you get a great deal of satisfaction. They're one of the teams we have to beat," he said.

Houston has been losing because of subpar hitting in spite of fine pitching. The script changed somewhat Monday night when the Astros rapped out 11 hits and their pitchers issued eight walks.

Loser Joaquin Andujar, 0-1, loaded the bases with walks to lead off the game. A two-run single by Steve Garvey and an RBI hit by Ron Cey staked Los Angeles to an early 3-0 lead before a batter was retired.

Houston narrowed the count on sacrifice flies by Jose Cruz and Alan Ashby in the first two innings but Pedro Guerrero's run-scoring double and Mike Scioscia's sacrifice fly restored the Dodgers' three-run lead.

Burt Hooton, 3-0, was the winner while Dave Goltz was credited with a save.

Expos 9, Phillies 8

Jerry White's three-run pinch homer in the eighth inning broke a 6-6 tie and Montreal hung on for the victory over Philadelphia.

White connected on the first pitch from Phillies relief ace Tug McGraw and then veteran Woodie Fryman came out of the bullpen to shut off a two-run Philadelphia rally in the ninth and save the victory.

"I went up to the plate looking for a strike and that's exactly what it was," said White.

McGraw described the pitch as a slider. "But I got it up higher than I wanted to," said the left-hander.

Cardinals 6, Cubs 1

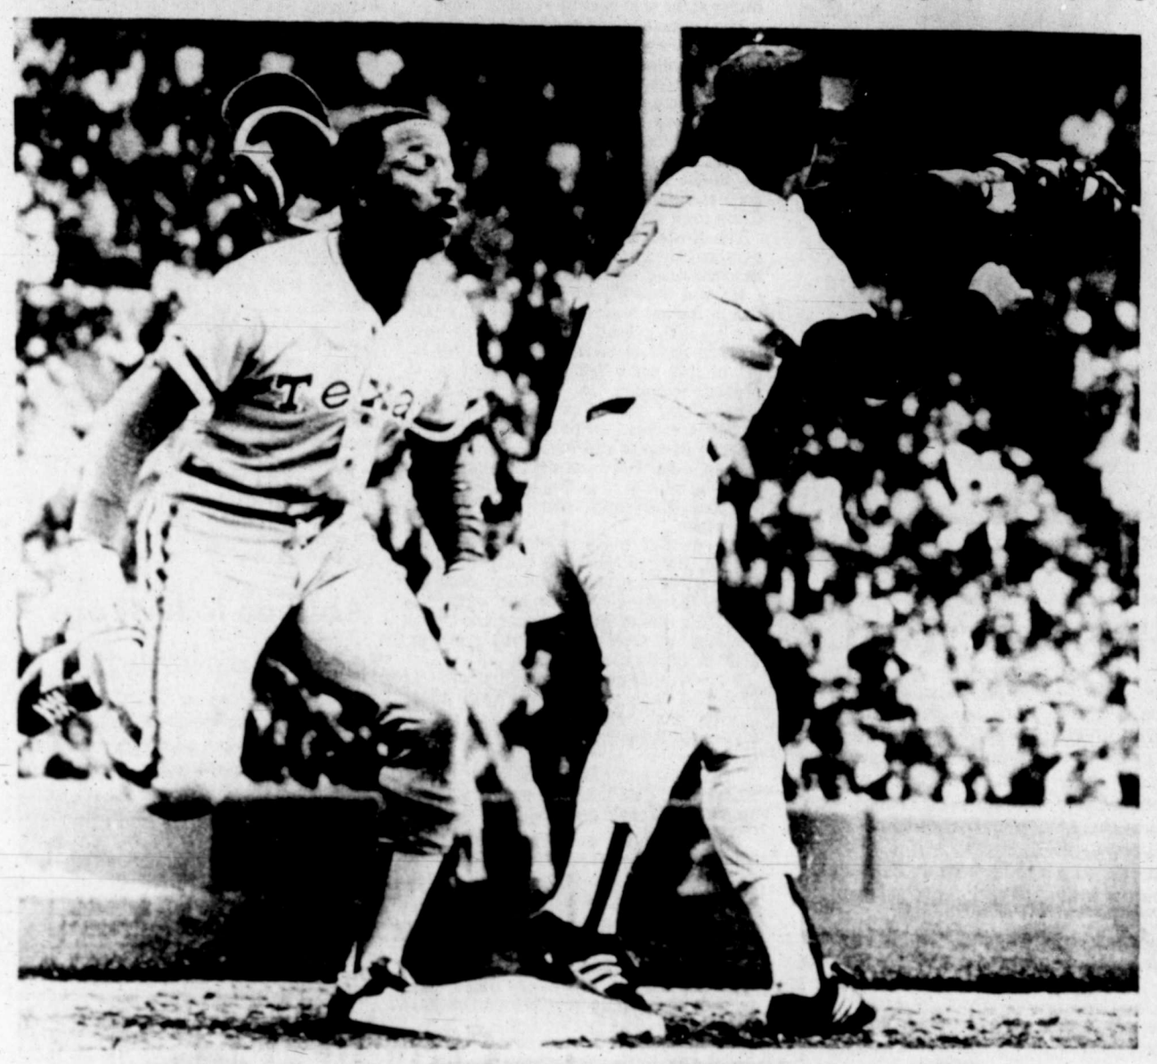

Keith Hernandez drilled three doubles, driving in one run and scoring two others for St. Louis as the Cards won their fourth straight and sent Chicago to its seventh consecutive loss.

Bob Forsch, Jim Kaat and Bruce Sutter combined for a three-hitter.

Hernandez doubled home the Cards' first run in the first inning, then doubled and scored in the third on George Hendrick's single and doubled and scored on Ken Oberkfell's two-base hit in the eighth. Tom Herr added a bases-loaded triple to clinch the victory for the Cards.

Giants 9, Padres 0

Vida Blue scattered seven hits in 7 1-3 innings and Enos Cabell drove in three runs with a pair of singles. The victory gave Blue a lifetime record of 8-0 against the Padres. Cabell singled two runs across in the fifth and another in the seventh while the Giants erupted for six runs in the ninth, two on a double by Jack Clark.

Mickey Rivers' helmet goes flying as he is out at first base in Boston Monday. Boston's Tony Perez takes the throw and the Red Sox went on to defeat the Texas Rangers.

A's are never satisfied

By The Associated Press

Some people are never satisfied. Take Art Fowler, pitching coach of the high-flying Oakland A's.

In rolling to a 12-1 record, the A's have thrown four shutouts, including Matt Keough's five-hit 3-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins Monday night. The Oakland staff has not allowed more than three runs in any game while completing 11 of 13 starts and Fowler's flingers have allowed only 17 runs in 117 innings for a team earned run average of 1.31.

You'd think any pitching coach who ever lived would be pleased with that kind of record.

"The one area we've been lacking in is we've been giving up too many walks," says Fowler. "I just tell them to get the ball up to the plate, and when they hit their spots more consistently they'll be even better than they have been."

In other American League action, the Cleveland Indians downed the Kansas City Royals 4-2, the New York Yankees trimmed the Detroit Tigers 6-2, the Boston Red Sox defeated the Texas Rangers 4-2, the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Toronto Blue Jays 5-4 in 12 innings and the California Angels beat the Seattle Mariners 6-1. The Baltimore-Chicago game was postponed by cold weather.

Keough, 3-0, struck out six and walked one. He has allowed only one run and 15 hits in his three outings — his earned run average is 0.33 — and has pitched two shutouts against the Twins. Keough was backed by home runs from Mike Heath and Rob Picciolo off Jerry Koosman.

"I was a little worried about this game after the loss on Sunday," Manager Billy Martin said, referring to the end of the A's record 11-game season-opening winning streak in the nightcap of Sunday's doubleheader.

"You have to be concerned when a streak ends that a team will go in the dumps," he said. "To me, this was our most important game of the year so far. It proved that we're back on the beam again."

The Twins say that beam may be slightly illegal.

"They all throw spitters when they have to in critical situations," said Minnesota's Roy Smalley, who struck out with two runners on base in the ninth inning. He said Keough fanned him on a spitter.

"They don't throw it all the time, but every one of their pitchers will throw a wet one when they have to. I've been in the game long enough so that I won't swing and miss at a sinker by five feet," Smalley said.

Indians 4, Royals 2

Cleveland, like Oakland, is getting some pretty good pitching. John Denny and Dan Spillner stopped Kansas City on six hits and the Indians scored twice in the ninth inning on an error and a passed ball to defeat the Royals, whose runs were unearned. The Indians haven't allowed an earned run in their last three games.

Bo Diaz greeted Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry with a single with one out in the ninth that sent Toby Harrah, who drew a walk from loser Paul Splittorff, to third. Ken Brett came on and second baseman Rance Mulliniks booted Jorge Orta's grounder, allowing Harrah to score. Diaz scored on catcher Jamie Quirk's passed ball. Andre Thornton homered for the Indians, his first since 1979. He missed all last season with a knee injury.

Yankees 6, Tigers 2

Reggie Jackson and Oscar Gamble slammed consecutive home runs with two out in the first inning, helping extend Rudy May's consecutive-game regular-season winning streak to 11 over two seasons. May, 3-0, scattered seven hits, including a Kirk Gibson homer.

With Jerry Mumphrey on first via a single in the first inning, Jackson punched an opposite-field home run to left off Dave Rozema. It was Jackson's first home run of the season and his 411th lifetime. Gamble followed with a long solo shot to right-center. Dave Winfield added a pair of RBI singles and also scored on a single by Gamble.

Red Sox 4, Rangers 2

Dwight Evans hit a towering two-run homer to back the seven-hit pitching of Mike Torrez as Boston spoiled Texas Manager Don Zimmer's return to Fenway Park. "I didn't know where to stand in the dugout," said Zimmer, who was with the Red Sox for seven years as coach and manager.

Brewers 5, Blue Jays 4

Cecil Cooper singled in the 12th inning and scored on Ben Oglivie's triple as Milwaukee snapped a four-game losing streak. The Brewers tied the score with three runs in the ninth on singles by Ted Simmons, Roy Howell and Gorman Thomas, a bases-loading walk and then a hit batsman and another walk.

Angels 6, Mariners 1

Fred Lynn hit a two-run homer and Geoff Zahn benefited from three key double plays while scattering 10 hits. Lynn's second home run of the year came with two out in the first inning and scored Rick Burleson, who singled. The drive off Jerry Don Gleaton carried 400 feet to left-center field.

Mel Hall goes wild as Cubs rip Diablos

EL PASO - Midland Center Fielder Mel Hall singled, doubled and homered twice to drive in four runs here Monday night to lift the Cubs to a 12-6 Texas League Baseball victory.

The Cubs struck for seven runs in the first inning and never looked back as Norm Churchill went the distance to pick up his second win of the year against no defeats.

Hall started the first with a leadoff homer to left. After two El Paso errors, Jack Upton hit a two-run double and Dave Owen later followed with a three run double. Owen had three hits in five trips to the plate.

Hall also hit a towering homer to right in the sixth and an RBI single in the seventh to continue his barrage. Tom Grant hit a solo homer in the fourth for the Cubs. Craig Kornfeld had an RBI double in the eighth and Randy Lavigne got a sacrifice fly for the Cubs' other run in the seventh.

Churchill struggled on the mound, giving up 15 hits including Willie Lozado's solo homer in the fourth. Lozado has an 11-game hitting streak going to open the Texas League season.

Churchill's biggest problem, however, came in the sixth when El Paso scored three times. The damage was done by Ron Koenigsfeld with a two-run single and a run scoring double by Dave Schroeder.

The Cubs blasted out 12 hits off two El Paso pitchers, seven of them for extra bases. Rick Kranitz, now 0-3 on the year, took the loss with six innings of work before a crowd of 2,260. He gave up nine runs, but only three were earned.

The two teams square off again tonight in the second game of the five-game set. Midland returns home Saturday to face Amarillo at Cub Stadium.

Pack nips Monahans

MONAHANS - The Midland High Bulldogs broke open a 7-7 tie here Monday in the top of the fourth inning to capture a 9-7 non-conference baseball victory over the MMonahans Loboes.

Jerry Zachery scored Tim Davis from third with a fielder's choice and then came home on a single by Teddy Bartley for the final margin. Bartley knocked in three runs to lead the pack attack.

Jose Carrasco, just moved up from the Junior Varsity, got the win in relief when he came in to replace starter Doug McLean in the third with the bases loaded and two outs and the score knotted at 7-7. Carrasco got a fly ball to get out of the inning and later Joe Delagarza came in to replace Carrasco to complete the runless relief performance.

MHS is now 9-9 on the year, but as of press time, it looked as if the Bulldogs would have to postpone the game scheduled today at Memorial Stadium with the Big Spring Steers. District 5-5A has been unable to get in a second half game due to rains the past week.

MHS scored four runs in the first, but Monahans came back with six in the second and one in the third while MHS was scoring three in the third for the 7-7 tie.

Confusion reigns in NHL

By The Associated Press

Heading home.

The New York Islanders return to Long Island eager to end their National Hockey League quarterfinal playoff series with the Edmonton Oilers. The St. Louis Blues go back to the Checkerdome wondering what hit them in Madison Square Garden. The Philadelphia Flyers, shellshocked and confused, return to the Spectrum looking for the formula that got them to the Stanley Cup finals last spring. And the Buffalo Sabres head back to the Aud just happy to be alive.

All four playoff series switch sites on Wednesday night standing at 3-1, with the Islanders, Rangers, Flames and North Stars ahead. They got that way on Monday when:

The Islanders took Edmonton thanks to a 5-4 overtime triumph earned on defenseman Ken Morrow's goal.

The Rangers, who finished 13th in the regular season to St. Louis' second, scored a convincing 4-1 verdict built on two goals and an assist by Steve Vickers.

The Flames, who had never won a postseason series prior to this year, edged the Flyers 5-4 on two goals by utility forward Randy Holt in the third period.

The Sabres, after dropping three straight to Minnesota, won in overtime when Craig Ramsay poked in a rebound of a shot by Andre Savard at 16:32 of the extra session.

Islanders 5, Oilers 4, OT

Morrow, a member of the gold medal-winning United States Olympic hockey team last year, scored just two goals all season. But he got his second career overtime tally with a long shot that was going wide of the Oilers net when it hit Edmonton defenseman Lee Fogolin, changed direction and eluded goalie Andy Moog.

"On a shot like that," said Morrow, "you just want to make sure you get it past the first guy. When I let it go, it looked like it was going wide of the net . . . it must have hit something."

Edmonton had taken a 2-0 lead only 5:19 into the contest but the Islanders tied it before the end of the first period and led 4-3 after two sessions.

In the third period, the Oilers completely dominated, outshooting New York 9-1 until Brett Callighen tied it at 7:00. Each team had several chances to win it in regulation but, in the OT, it was all New York. The Islanders took the only five shots of the period.

Rangers 4, Blues 1

Vickers, a nine-year veteran who was a part-timer this season, tipped in a slapshot by Ulf Nilsson on a second-period power play, then had his 20-foot drive ricochet off the stick of the Blues' Blake Dunlop and past goalie Mike Liut in the third period.

He also assisted on Ron Duguay's game-winner, a play on which Duguay and Vickers broke in on Liut and, after the goalie made a sensational save against Vickers, Duguay backhanded home the rebound.

"That second goal was from out of my range," said Vickers, who has made a living of connecting from right by the crease, which is where his first goal came from.

"The first one was more like me.

"It's really exciting. We're on a roll, getting good goaltending and confidence. There is a fever going through this room and everybody has caught it."

The Blues got caught with a leaky defense in New York and need to make major adjustments if they are to make a comeback.

"We came in here wanting to win a game," said defenseman Jack Brownschidle, "but we haven't been on the top of our game. We'd better turn it around Wednesday night."

Flames 5, Flyers 4

The Flyers, who lost to the Islanders in the finals last season, also need to make some changes. Calgary won its third straight from Philadelphia with Holt — who didn't score all season — providing the heroics.

Holt banged in Jim Peplinski's rebound at 10:00, then slapped in Peplinski's drop pass from 35 feet at 14:26.

"They brought me along slow but it's paid off," said Holt, who saw action in just 48 games this season.

"We seemed to have made ourselves a little bit of a hole — in fact it's a big hole," said Flyers Coach Quinn. "We didn't play as well as we did the night before. The Flames played better."

Sabres 5, North Stars 4, OT

Buffalo stayed alive despite blowing a 3-0 lead by recovering from Bobby Smith's tying goal with only 1:06 left in the third period and winning on Ramsay's tally. It was the first loss in six postseason games for Minnesota.

Similarities are striking between Sixers, Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — The similarities are striking.

In each of the past two National Basketball Association seasons, the Boston Celtics and Philadelphia 76ers split their season series 3-3 and the Celtics edged the 76ers for the Atlantic Division title and a playoff bye.

In both playoffs, Philadelphia swept its opening mini-series in two games, while Boston swept its opening Eastern Conference semi-final in four games. The 76ers took both their conference semi-finals.

Last season, the 76ers overwhelmed the Celtics, four games to one, in the conference finals to advance to the NBA title series against Los Angeles, the eventual champion.

This season?

Boston, which hasn't played for eight days, hosts Philadelphia, which played Sunday, in the first two games of their conference final Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Last year the Celtics weren't challenged in their first playoff series (with Houston) and we were with Atlanta. This year, though, Chicago tested them (in the semi-finals). That helps their game," said Philadelphia's Julius Erving.

"Boston will be determined because of what happened last year. They're a different team. They're better than they were, which means we have a lot of things against us. We'll have to be at our best."

Last season, Philadelphia had an advantage over Boston with its inside game. But this season, with the addition of intimidators Robert Parish and Kevin McHale, Boston has developed a potent inside game of its own.

The 76ers also have improved over last season, primarily with the sharpshooting of rookie guard Andrew Toney.

Form favors Houston

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — If they follow form, the Houston Rockets figure to beat the Kansas City Kings in the opener of their best-of-seven National Basketball Association Western Conference finals tonight since the Kings have the home court disadvantage.

In 10 playoff games against the defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers and San Antonio Spurs, the Rockets have won exactly once at home. The Kings, in 10 playoff games with Portland and Phoenix, have won twice at home.

Tonight at 9:05 p.m. CST they tip off to see who becomes the first sub-.500 team since the 1958-59 Minneapolis Lakers to advance to the NBA championship series. The Kings and Rockets both finished the regular season 40-42.

"The dumbest thing is to criticize teams like us for making it because you'd take away any chance of the Cinderella type of thing," said Rockets Coach Del Harris. "If you eliminate teams like us, all you'd have is more Boston-Philadelphia games on TV. This is what sports is all about. It's about a team that doesn't have the credentials of another team and making it. It's Walter Mitty, Horatio Alger and Johnny America.

Still, it's the first time since the 1966-67 St. Louis Hawks that a sub-.500 team has made it to a conference final.

"As far as I know, neither of us cheated to get to this spot. We've beaten all comers and if you do that, there's no way anybody can say you don't deserve to be at this position," said Harris.

The Kings have been injury-weakened since Feb. 22 when playmaking guard Phil Ford was lost to an eye injury. Ford hasn't played since, and Otis Birdsong, one of the NBA's finest shooting guards, played only parts of two of the Phoenix games because of a sprained ankle.

Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons has said repeatedly that Ford will not play "Until he tells me he can see."

"I have to be realistic. Phil has not played in about eight weeks," Fitzsimmons said.

Moses Malone, a supreme rebounder, could give the Rockets a big edge inside. Malone has averaged almost 30 points and 14 rebounds in the playoffs. Calvin Murphy is averaging more than 25 points and set an NBA record for free-throw accuracy this season with a .958 mark.

Free-throw shooting is one of Kansas City's weakest spots, but Fitzsimmons has gotten heroic performances from Ernie Grunfeld, Ford's replacement, and Reggie King, a 6-foot-6 power forward who's led the team in the playoffs with almost 21 points and 10 rebounds.

Seko pulls upset over Rodgers in Boston Marathon

BOSTON (AP) — Japan's Toshihiko Seko, a speed merchant with physical endurance to burn, appears ready for an all-out shot at the world marathon record after his Boston Marathon victory, but his coach may have other plans for the immediate future.

Seko, 24, avenged one of his rare defeats Monday and ended Bill Rodgers' domination of the Marathon. He shaved one second off the American distance king's course record in winning the 85th annual run in 2 hours, 9 minutes, 26 seconds.

Two years ago the Japanese sensation pressed Rodgers to the fastest marathon in U.S. history before losing by a narrow margin. On his return, he put Rodgers away with about six miles to go and then wore down unheralded Craig Virgin on the hills.

Seko's training both in speed and on the hills during 26 days in New Zealand before coming here paid off. He breezed over three hills, including famed "Heartbreak Hill" which proved his undoing in 1979, but missed the generally recognized world mark of 2:08.33 set by Derek Clayton in Belgium 12 years ago.

Asked about his future, Seko, whose three Fukuoka International victories and the two Boston visits represent his only marathons since late 1978, said through an interpreter: "I don't know. Ask my coach."

Coach Kiyoshi Nakamura hedged a bit before mentioning a possible 10-kilometer race in Prague July 19. Nakamura may want his young protege to try for shorter distance records.

Seko appeared to be in command after easily clearing "Heartbreak Hill," although Virgin, also a speedster running only his third marathon, hung tough. Seko pulled away as he passed Rodgers' sporting goods store with less than four miles to go.

"I ran my own race, set my own pace, even though I knew where he (Rodgers) was all the time," Seko said. "I've been training for the hills and they didn't bother me today. I just didn't want to have to fight at the end."

Then, turning to Rodgers, he said, "I'm sorry I broke your record."

Rodgers, 33, bidding to become the first runner to win the Boston Marathon four years in a row, said "Toshihiko was better than anyone here today."

Virgin hung on for second in 2:10.26. John Lodwick was fourth in 2:11.33, followed, in order, by Malcolm East in 2:11.35, Finland's Jukka Toivola in 2:11.52, Dennis Rinde in 2:12.01, England's David Chettle in 2:12.31, and Colombia's Victor Mora-Garcia in 2:12.55.

New Zealand's Allison Roe, 24, ran the world's second fastest women's marathon in winning her division in 2:26.45, only 64 seconds slower than the winning time posted by Norway's Greta Waitz in New York last year. Local favorite Patti Catalano was second in 2:27.51, followed by 1979 Boston champion Joan Benoit in 2:30.15.

Brookens gets well

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit third baseman Tom Brookens' three weeks on the disabled list is set to expire today, and Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson is expected to reactivate the 1980 season regular.

J.R. complains about attention

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros pither J.R. Richard could have lost his life last July 30 to a stroke. Now the once-powerful strikeout artist says his comeback attempt may be overshadowed by the Astros' season opening slump.

"I think I'm more concerned about myself than they (Astros) are," Richard said Monday during batting practice prior to a game against Los Angeles. "I think I'm going to start working out on my own, start doing more things that I should do."

Richard, placed on the Astros' 60-day disabled list at the start of the regular season, says he's 90 per cent ready to pitch in the major leagues, but the Astros, who have lost eight of their first 10 games, aren't spending as much time with him.

"I think it's self-explanatory," said Richard, who collapsed on the Astrodome floor last July with what was described as a major stroke. "They are concerned about not winning so I'm not doing half the things I was doing in spring training, like catching ground balls and doing the things I was doing."

Despite his life-threatening stroke, Richard reported to the Astros spring training camp at Cocoa, Fla. and put himself through a strenuous 2½ hour workout his first day in camp and has tried to whip himself back into shape.

He feels now, however, that the Astros slump has detracted from his comeback effort.

"I think it's going to be up to me and I'm going to have to worry about the things I should be doing," the 1980 National League All-Star starting pitcher said. "It's going to be me pitching and not them."

Richard, who has taken daily batting practice during the Astros' current home stand, admits he's not ready to pitch in the major leagues.

"I don't think I should be out there now and make an ass out of myself," Richard said. "I'm going to say I'm 90 per cent ready."

But the prideful Richard doesn't want to play at 90 per cent.

"I don't want to come back just because people are crying for me to come back," Richard said. "When I come back I want to be full force."

Richard said when the Astros go on the road after their current home stand, he intends to begin working out at Texas Southern University here, "with some coaches I've met over there."

"I don't think we are going to hurry anything," Richard said. "We will all take our time to see how things go on a day by day basis. We haven't set any timetables."

Astros pitching Coach Mel Wright watches Richard's daily pitching workouts but he does not push his former ace pupil.

"He doesn't get treatment different from any of our pitchers," Wright said. "If any of them says he doesn't feel like throwing, then he doesn't throw."

Wright said Richard currently was throwing 20 to 25 minutes during his sessions on the mound. "That's about all I ask any of our pitchers to do," Wright said. "He's doing about the same things now pitching wise that he did in spring training."

Wright and Astros Manager Bill Virdon agree with Richard that he is not ready to pitch in the maior leagues but neither will say when Richard might be available.

"Considering where he started from, he's made tremendous improvement," Wright said. "But I don't know of anybody who can say when he'll be ready."

Virdon also admitted to being preoccupied with the immediate problems of a disastrous losing streak.

"We are getting into a situation now were we can't watch him as closely," Virdon said. "They are going to set something up for him while we are on the road."

Richard says he has no concerns about any phase of his baseball ability. If there are detractors, so be it.

"They can say what they want," Richard said. "But nobody knows the way I feel. Nobody can tell that but me."

Japan's Toshihiko Seko breaks the tape as he crosses the finish line Monday to win the 85th Boston Marathon in record time of 2:09.26.

Rodgers gives away No. 1

BOSTON (AP) - Bill Rodgers, wearing a big "1" on his shirt and a gracious smile, pointed to the "2" on his Japanese Conqueror's stomach and held up one finger at the post-race news conference.

The language barrier was broken. Silently, Rodgers got across his message that it was Toshihiko Seko, and not himself, who was No. 1 Monday.

"Toshihiko was obviously fitter than anyone there ... He was very determined to win," Rodgers said after finishing third, behind Seko and Craig Virgin of Lebanon, Ill, in the 85th Boston Marathon. "I felt good at the end. I tried to push it, Seko and Craig were too strong."

The Boston Marathon had become the personal road to glory for the hometown hero from nearby Stoneham, Mass.

He was shooting for an unprecedented fourth Boston Marathon victory in a row and his fifth overall. Not only did he miss that, he also lost his race record of 2:09.27, set in 1979 when Seko was runnerup, 45 seconds behind.

Seko, 24, nine years younger than Rodgers, crossed the finish line Monday in 2:09.26. Rodgers still has the fastest time among Americans and doesn't think he's over the hill after running his third fastest Boston Marathon and fifth fastest marathon.

"I guess it hurts a little, losing my record. But, on the other hand, I think I proved I'm capable of running with the rest of the world even though I'm 33," he said. "He (Seko) is in his prime and I'm on the edge of mine ... at 33 years of age, 2:10:36 (his time) isn't so bad.

Fifteen miles into the race, Rodgers was in second place, and Seko was sixth. About a mile later, descending a hill out of Wellesley, Rodgers' side began to hurt, he said.

"I had to pull back for a while," said Rodgers. "I didn't think I could win then. I didn't think I could get third place."

But two miles later, he felt better. Although he thought Seko was out of reach, he later saw Virgin slowing down and felt he could take over second place.

"I saw Craig with about two miles to go and he looked like he had a lot of fatigue," Rodgers said. "I know Craig, if anything, is tough." Virgin held on to finish eight seconds ahead of Rodgers but a full minute behind Seko.

"I'm relatively happy with my race," said Rodgers, who plans to run here again next year. "I wasn't going to beat Seko today. Seko trained for it, worked for it. His heart was in it 100 percent.

"You go through a period in your life as an athlete when everything is focused on victory," he added. "Seko is like that now ... I may be a little past that stage."

MJBA signup begins soon

Thursday and Friday are registration dates for 13-16 year-olds and tryouts will be held April 29, 30 and May 1 for sophomore and high junior baseball leagues, it was announced by the Midland Junior Baseball Association.

Sign up time is 5 p.m. and a makeup day for registration is 9 a.m. Saturday.

McEnroe wins crown

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe needed more than two hours to defeat sixth-seeded Sandy Mayer 6-7, 6-3, 6-3 Monday night to win the singles championship of the rain-delayed $75,000 Jack Kramer Tennis Open.

Mayer won the first set by capturing the tie-breaker 7-5 but McEnroe, the second-ranked singles player in the world, came back to earn the victory and the $15,000 top prize. Mayer collected $7,500.

Each player broke the other's service once in the first set to force the tie-breaker.

In the second set, Mayer broke in the second game to take a 2-0 lead but the 22-year-old McEnroe broke back in the third game, again in the fifth, and a third time in the ninth to win the set.

In the third set, there was only one service break — McEnroe broke his 29-year-old opponent in the fourth game.

The match, which lasted two hours, 11 minutes, was delayed nearly an hour by light rain.

The tournament at the Los Angeles Tennis Club was scheduled to end Sunday but delayed until Monday night because of heavy rain over the weekend.

Following the singles match, McEnroe and Ferdi Taygan faced the team of Butch Walts and Tom Gullikson for the doubles championship.

Schooler signs with Rice

HOUSTON (AP) - Four Texas high school track and field standouts have signed letters of intent to attend Rice University next year, Track Coach Steve Straub announced Monday.

Gawain Guy of Pasadena's Dobie High School, ranked No. 1 in the state in the 1600-meter, Craig Hughes of Houston's Northbrook High, ranked No. 2 in the state in the 3200-meter, Greg Johnson, also of Dobie High, and Robert Schooler of Midland Lee High will attend Rice next year, Straub said.

Johnson is ranked seventh in the state in the 1600-meter and 10th in the 3200. Schooler was the runner-up in the 1980 Texas 5A Cross County Championship and is a high school Cross County All-American.

Bergman, Leonard traded for Mike Ivie

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - The San Francisco Giants traded discontented first baseman Mike Ivie to the Houston Astros for Infielder-Outfielder Dave Bergman and Outfielder Jeff Leonard Monday.

Ivie, who feuded last year with former Giants Manager Dave Bristol and for a brief period quit the national league team, had expressed a desire to be traded this season after failing to win a starting spot under new manager Frank Robinson.

"Mike just felt he would be better off playing somewhere else," said a Giants spokesman.

The 28-year-old, six-year major league veteran hit .294 in limited duty this season. Last year, Ivie played in 79 games, hitting .241 with four home runs and 25 RBI.

Bergman, 27, was used mainly as a pinch-hitter this season by the Astros. Getting one hit in six pinch appearances - a home run, he hit .256 in 90 games last year at Houston.

Leonard, 25, was the Sporting News' choice as N. L. Rookie of the 'Year in 1979, when he hit .290, but last season, his average dropped to .213. The Giants have assigned him to their Pacific Coast League Team in Phoenix.

Bergman is scheduled to join the Giants in San Diego Tuesday, while Ivie will be in Houston for the Astros' game against Los Angeles.

MC women are in fifth

OKLAHOMA CITY - The Midland College Women's Golf Team stands in fifth place after the first round of the 54-hole Oklahoma University Women's Invitational here Monday.

Oklahoma State leads the tournament after a 300 team score Monday with Oklahoma right behind with a 302. Midland College's 324 follows Oklahoma State No. 2, 317; and Nebraska's 321.

OU's Durea Mitchell leads the medalist chase with a 72. MC's scores were Debra Kargetta, 78; Wendy Swift, 78; Michelle Wilks, 81; Deborah Latham, 87; and Sheryl Bunton, 91.

MC Coach Susan Holland said the weather was cool and damp, but no hindrance to the playing conditions.

The second round of the tournament is today while the final round will be held Wednesday.

Laughlin's key single gives Raiders a split

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Rusty Laughlin's two-out single in the bottom of the ninth inning drove home the winning run as Texas Tech beat Texas A&M 7-6 Monday in the second game of a Southwest Conference Baseball Doubleheader.

The Aggies won the opener, 4-2, behind the relief pitching of Perry Swanson.

The Raiders trailed 6-4 entering the ninth inning of the second game when Swanson, who pitched in both games, gave up three consecutive hits to load the bases.

Gene Segrest sent home the Raiders' fifth run on a sacrifice fly and the tying run scored when Aggie third baseman Tim Boyes attempted a force play at second.

Mark McDowell was the winning pitcher for the Raiders, while Swanson took the loss for the Aggies.

In the first game, the Aggies went on top to stay in the fifth when Clint Heard singled and scored on a fielder's choice groundball off the bat of Joe Paul Bramhall. Aggie starter David Flores claimed the win. Raiders pitcher Kyle Farenthold was the loser.

The doubleheader improved Tech's SWC record to 5-10 and its season mark to 25-17. A&M is now 5-9-1 in conference play and 25-15-1 overall.

Stanhouse may start battle cry

An AP Sports Analysis
By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

America has always been a great country for mottos.

"Tippecanoe and Tyler, too!"

"Don't Tread On Me!"

"Fifty-Four Forty or Fight!"

Well, next November, when that lodge of benevolent despots who own major league baseball teams teams gathers for the annual auction of free agent players, some sympathetic soul ought to wave a new flag in front of their noses.

"Remember Don Stanhouse!"

Ah yes, Don Stanhouse, known to friend and foe as Stan the Man Unusual. Occupation: Relief pitcher. Current status: Unemployed. Income due: $1.3 million, give or take a few thousand. No wonder President Reagan wants to revamp unemployment benefits.

Stanhouse was released the other day by the Los Angeles Dodgers, a development that cast an immediate pall over the clubhouse, which was his sandbox. He and teammates Jerry Reuss and Jay Johnstone were the Dodgers' Three Musketeers, or perhaps Three Stooges, romping through life with a light-hearted comedy routine that kept their teammates in stiches.

There was, however, one serious problem. Reuss was an 18-game winner and a no-hit pitcher last season. Johnstone has been a productive major league hitter for 15 years and batted .307 in 1980. They can play in the sandbox. Stanhouse spent most of last season on the disabled list, appearing in just 21 games and managing only 25 innings. Out of the sandbox for him.

An unconditional release can be a traumatic experience for a baseball player. It means you're unwanted, considered to have no further value as a player. But Stan the Man was able to handle the shock quite well, insulated by that $1.3 million payoff.

He may be a flake — there is plenty of testimony to that — but Stanhouse was smart enough to convince Dodger decision makers that he was a worthwhile free agent investment a year ago.

Stanhouse had been a reasonably efficient reliever for the Baltimore Orioles, although there is evidence that he put a few of the gray hairs in Manager Earl Weaver's collection. His antics off the field — before Reuss and Johnstone joined his act — prompted Baltimore pitcher Mike Flanagan to give him the quaint nickname Stan the Man Unusual. His antics on the field — 51 walks in 73 innings in 1979 and 52 walks in 75 innings in 1978 — prompted Weaver to call him Full Pack because that's how many cigarettes he forced the manager to go through every time he got to the mound.

His reputation notwithstanding, the Dodgers happily packaged a pile of Peter O'Malley's petty cash and signed Stanhouse as a free agent. This despite being burned with a big bucks contract for Terry Forster, who had pitched 16 innings the season before they signed Stanhouse, and 12 more last year.

The point, of course, is that pitchers are fragile. The human arm was not designed for throwing baseballs. It can break down without warning and when you guarantee fat contracts for people who make their living this way, you're flirting with disaster. See Wayne Garland, Don Gullett, Skip Lockwood and Bill Campbell, among others.

The owners, however, remain undaunted. They refuse to be discouraged and when they have to pay off a fat contract like Stanhouse's, they merely shrug and pass it off as a business mistake, hurrying on, anxious to try again.

So you can be sure that when the next re-entry draft arrives, the owners will be thinking mottos. It will be "Damn the Torpedoes, Full Speed Ahead."

Guaranteed.

Nebaska Wranglers defeat Diamonds

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Rosie Walker scored 39 points to lead the Nebraska Wranglers to a 99-90 victory over the Dallas Diamonds in the championship game of the Women's Professional Basketball League Monday night.

Walker hit on 12 of 16 shots from the field and on 15 of 17 free throw chances while her team was holding Diamonds star Nancy Lieberman to 12 points, 14 under her average.

The Wranglers used a 10-2 spree late in the contest to build an 88-80 lead and got seven free throws in the last 74 seconds to win the best-of-five series, three games to two.

Walker scored six early points and the Wranglers broke on top 12-4 before Dallas took a 17-16 advantage and the game was close the rest of the way before a crowd of 3,500.

Sparky becomes modest

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Sparky Anderson brought the second hottest baseball team in the American League — the Detroit Tigers — into New York's Yankee Stadium this week and immediately donned the cloak of modesty.

He shrugged off the excellent start of his own club and preferred to talk about the amazing spurt of Billy Martin's Oakland A's.

"We're actually not playing that well," said the snow-haired field boss, who won two world championships, four National League pennants and five division titles with the Cincinnati Reds in the 1970s. "Of the first nine games, we only had a couple I would call good ones, yet we won seven.

"We were lucky. We have some tightening up to do. We can compete with anybody but we're about three players away from being outstanding. We need more speed, another dependable starting pitcher and a player who can give us punch at the plate.

"Now you take Billy Martin and the A's. There's a difference in our styles but there's no question they are faster than we are, have a stronger pitching staff and they're ablaze with desire.

"You have to give Billy credit for that."

Sparky, nattily attired in a gray plaid suit, white shirt and tie, lit a pipe after devouring a waffle at the Tigers' hotel headquarters.

"I said before the season started that the A's and the Baltimore Orioles were going to be the best teams in the league," he said. "Nobody's got better pitching than those two clubs. The A's have the best outfield in baseball (Dwane Murphy, Tony Armass and Ricky Henderson). They catch every ball. All three have speed and are run producers."

World Bank's lending practices to be studied

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea's new chief justice has fired 37 judges, including six of his 10 Supreme Court colleagues, in a sweeping shakeup of the nation's judiciary, the government announced today.

The announcement gave no reason for the action, which included a shift in the assignment of many of the country's 351 other judges.

However, after his appointment last Friday, Chief Justice Yoo Tai-hung told reporters he would not re-appoint judges who were accused of dishonesty or were considered incapable of performing their duties.

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivia's military president had denied reports that two of his predecessors have been arrested for allegedly conspiring against his embattled 9-month-old government.

But Gen. Luis Garcia Meza told a news conference Monday that one of the former presidents, retired Gen. Hugo Banzer Suarez, agreed "voluntarily" to remain at his ranch.

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki has decided that Japan should speed up its planned military buildup, setting 1987 as the target for completion, even though it could mean increasing military expenditures above the traditional ceiling of 1 percent of the gross national product, officials said today.

Suzuki's announcement was the first time a prime minister has set the target date for the buildup outlined by the Defense Agency in 1976.

Fighting escalates again in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops and Lebanese Christian militiamen exchanged artillery and rocket fire through the night in Beirut, driving about 100,000 residents into basements and bomb shelters and forcing the closing today of Lebanon's main international airport.

Newspapers reported 21 people killed and more than 80 wounded by the shells and rockets that blasted residential districts on either side of the so-called Green Line dividing Moslem West and Christian East Beirut.

"The gates of hell were loose," said the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio station after dawn brought a lull in the duel.

Public Works Minister Elias Hrawi ordered Beirut International Airport closed until further notice after 10 artillery and rocket rounds hit the field on the southern edge of the capital. All incoming international flights were diverted to Larnaca, Cyprus, or other airports.

The airport was closed briefly on Monday after several shells hit a runway.

The new fighting Monday and Monday night broke a 13-day-old cease-fire that halted eight days of Syrian-Christian fighting in Beirut and the eastern Christian city of Zahle. But there was no official announcement it had collapsed.

Each side blamed the other for the latest round of fighting as Lebanon's Christian President, Elias Sarkis, and its Moslem Prime Minister, Shafik Wassan, meet representatives of the two sides in a bid to restore the truce.

Scores of tank and artillery shells and rockets fell Monday on residential areas on both sides of the city, killing at least two civilians and wounding 20 in West Beirut. There was no report of victims in the Christian sector.

U.S. Embassy Vice Consul Steve Patterson was slightly injured when a stray bullet smashed through a window of his West Beirut apartment and struck him just below the waist, embassy spokesman Boulos Malek said.

Guns on boths sides continued to pound the port district, which has remained closed since shortly after the Syrian-Christian power struggle began on April 2.

Two leftist Moslem groups allied with the Syrians said they were firing Soviet-made missiles into the Christian port city of Jounieh, 12 miles north of Beirut. The Christian Phalange Party's radio station said Jounieh was under artillery attack.

In Tel Aviv, meanwhile, a military spokesman said one civilian was wounded early today by Palestinian guerrilla rockets fired across the Lebanese frontier into the northern Galilee town of Kiryat Shmona. Israeli artillery returned fire across the border, a spokesman said.

A Lebanese provincial government spokesman said Israeli jets were flying over the area, apparently spotting targets for the Israeli artillery.

On Monday, hundreds of Israelis cut short Passover vacations as guerrillas fired three volleys of Soviet-made Katyusha rockets into resort areas in northern and western Galilee.

No Israeli casualties were reported in three waves of rocket fire Monday. Israel responded with air strikes on two suspected guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon and several hours of artillery fire aimed at the Palestinian rocket batteries, the Israeli military command said in Tel Aviv.

Lebanese provincial authorities said the air strikes killed or wounded nine people.

The Israeli command reported one Israeli officer killed and two Israeli soldiers wounded when the Palestinian gunners shelled the southern Lebanese city of Marjayoun, the headquarters of Maj. Saad Haddad's renegade "Free" Christian enclave along the Israeli-Lebanese border.

A spokesman said the Israelis were helping their Christian militia allies search for landmines when they were killed. Israel has acknowledged keeping about a dozen liaison officers in the buffer zone but has denied reports that it has several hundred troops there.

The search for landmines was made after three Christian militiamen were killed and one was injured Easter Sunday when their two jeeps hit mines.

In reprisal, Haddad's militia made a long-range artillery attack that killed 16 Lebanese in the port city of Sidon. Then Moslems in Sidon set fire to the city's Maronite Christian and Greek Catholic cathedrals, and the militia on Monday shelled the port city of Tyre.

Pope John Paul II today condemned his fellow Christians for the Easter shelling of Sidon, expressing his "most energetic" disapproval of the "unjustified" attack.

36th anniversary marked of Soviet-Polish treaty

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet newspapers marked the 36th anniversary of the Soviet-Polish Friendship Treaty with new calls today for Polish Communists to act firmly to keep their country in the socialist camp.

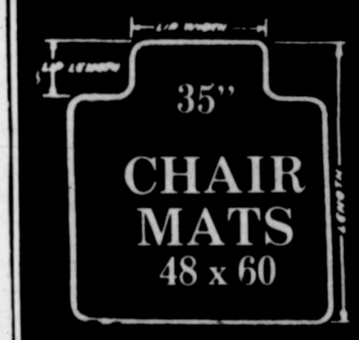

The commentaries followed the line set forth earlier this month by President Leonid I. Brezhnev, that he was confident the Polish leaders would defeat the "counter-revolutionaries."

"One should believe that the Polish Communists, with the support of all real Polish patriots, will be able to give the necessary rebuff to the intentions of the enemies of the socialist system which are also the enemies of the independence of Poland," said the military newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda.

Still hewing to Brezhnev's line, it added: "The Polish people can firmly rely on the unwavering support of the Soviet people."

Repeating a standard Soviet theme, the paper said counter-revolutionaries supported by "outside forces" have created anarchy and are "striving to turn the development of events in the country into a counter-revolutionary course." But it said the "new leadership of the Polish Communist Party and government and all honest people and true Communists are working to overcome the crisis situation."

Rival youth gangs rampage in London

LONDON (AP) — White teen-agers rioted at seven English seaside resorts while black West Indian youths ran wild at three Easter holiday fairs in London, police said.

Easter violence at the shore first erupted in the 1960s with fights between rival youth gangs of sharply dressed "mods" and garish "rockers." This year they were joined by shaven "skinheads" and outlandishly-clothed "punks" in Easter Monday rioting.

The gangs arrived on mopeds, motorcycles and trains and surged through Southend, Brighton, Margate, Great Yarmouth, Scarborough, Weston-super-Mare and Bournemouth. They fought running battles with each other and with the police, upset picnicking families, smashed shop fronts, attacked lone strollers and looted drinks from bars and cafes.

More than 300 arrests were reported.

Southend police said they took racist leaflets decorated with swastikas from some of the youths. Mobs of youngsters and girls gave the police Nazi salutes and shouted "Sieg heil!"

One 17-year-old drowned when he fell from the girders under Brighton's Palace Pier.

Meanwhile, youths of West Indian descent went on the rampage at the Finsbury Park and Ealing Common fairs in north London and at Wanstead in the eastern part of the city. A total of about 1,600 black teen-agers were involved, Scotland Yard estimated.

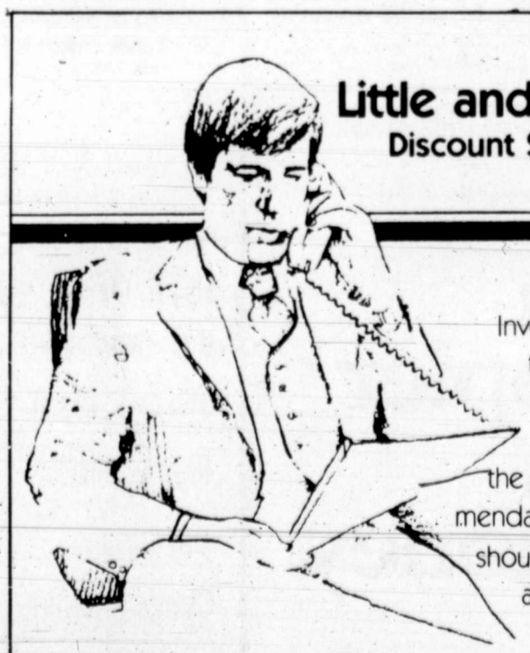

The three districts had not previously seen such violence. There were 50 arrests and 17 policemen injured, the Yard said.

Police, who were out with anti-riot shields, said there was no apparent reason for the outbreaks and that the teen-agers just seemed to go "berserk." Eyewitnesses at Finsbury Park said the first victim was a Pakistani beaten up on a fairground by West Indian teen-agers.

The police said dozens of shops were looted and passersby were attacked with bricks and bottles. Scotland Yard Cmdr. James Dickinson's nose was broken when he was kicked to the ground and booted in the face. His deputy, Chief Supt. Pat Carson, was thrown through a shop window and attacked as he lay among the broken glass. Several of his ribs were broken.

Reporters said they saw bricks thrown at passing buses and a police car set ablaze with a gasoline bomb. Taverns and hotels were attacked and three subway stations had to shut down.

Notice to Telephone Customers

WE ARE PROPOSING CHANGES IN THE RATES FOR INTERSTATE SERVICES.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, consistent with action by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), has filed a new schedule of rates which increases charges for all Long Distance calls made out-of-state within the Continental U.S., and for all calls between the U.S. and Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands, and for certain calls between the U.S. Mainland and Hawaii and Alaska.

The new schedule provides for a uniform increase of 16 percent for most interstate services in accordance with the FCC decision authorizing a 12.75 percent rate of return. AT&T has requested permission to implement the new schedule five days after the effective date of the FCC's decision. This increase is needed because of higher costs resulting from inflation and is only the second general rate increase in the last five years.

Rates for the following Interstate Services will be increased by the same percentage:

- All Interstate Long Distance Calls
  - Within the Continental U.S.
  - Between the U.S. and Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands
- Most Private Line Services
- Facilities for Other Common Carriers
- Interstate Wide Area Telecommunications Service (WATS)
  - Within the Continental U.S.
  - Between the U.S. and Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands
- All VHF Maritime, Coastal Harbor, High Speed Train, and Air-Ground Services.

In certain cases rates for Long Distance Service and WATS between the U.S. Mainland and Hawaii and Alaska will also be increased.

THE FOLLOWING EXAMPLES ILLUSTRATE THE NEW RATES APPLICABLE FOR LONG DISTANCE INTERSTATE CALLS.

Interstate Dial-Direct One-Minute Rates

Examples	Full Rate Weekday	35% Discount Evening	60% Discount Night & Weekend

Ed and Rita Siwik, parents of Edward Siwik, a University of Michigan student slain in a dormitory shooting spree on the University's Ann Arbor Campus last week, mourn their son's death at a graveside service Monday in Southfield, Mich.

Lawyer: Student doesn't know why he's in jail

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A University of Michigan psychology major arraigned on two counts of murder in the shotgun slayings of two fellow students doesn't know why he's in jail, his lawyer says.

Leo E. Kelly Jr. "makes no association between his being in jail and the incidents Friday," defense attorney William Waterman said after Kelly was arraigned Monday in District Court.

Kelly, a 22-year-old junior from Detroit, did not enter a plea, although previous defense attorney George Parzen, who withdrew from the case, had said Kelly would plead temporary insanity.

No bond was set and Kelly faces another court appearance May 6 before District Judge S.J. Elden.

Meanwhile, one of the shooting victims, Edward Siwik, 19, of Detroit, was buried Monday in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery in Southfield. The funeral of the second victim, Douglas C. McGreaham, 22, of Caspian, was being held today.

Waterman declined to comment on his plans for Kelly's defense.

Parzen had said Kelly had taken an overdose of drugs before the shootings and was "very, very sick."

Parzen had declined to identify the pills, saying only that Kelly obtained them two months ago from a doctor for an "emotional ailment" and was "loaded up on them" the night before the shootings.

Lynwood Noah, an assistant county prosecutor, said he saw no evidence Kelly was on drugs.

The shootings occurred early Friday after a firebomb set a minor blaze on the sixth floor hallway of Bursley Hall, a dormitory that houses 1,100 students.

As students fled their rooms, at least three shotgun blasts were fired by someone crouched in a doorway. Police later arrested Kelly in his dormitory room and confiscated a sawed-off shotgun.

No motive has been offered.

Five inmates escape from maximum-security prison

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — More than 100 searchers were combing the woods near here today for a convicted murderer and four other inmates, all described as dangerous, who cut through two fences and fled Florida State Prison.

Guards fired at the inmates from watchtowers as the five fled into the darkness from the maximum security prison.

The Monday night escape was the second from the north Florida prison in nine days and the biggest since 10 inmates broke out in August, officials said. On April 11, an escapee killed a state trooper and held a woman and her baby hostage before being recaptured.

The five, all kitchen workers dressed in white shirts and pants, should be considered armed and dangerous, said Corrections Department spokesman Vernon Bradford.

Investigators were trying to determine how the men managed to escape, he said.

Bradford identified the escapees as Dennis Michael Pickle, 30, serving 32 years on robbery plus assault with intent to commit a felony and escape; Ralph Raphael Magna, 28, serving life plus five years for first-degree murder and breaking and entering; Louis Ayendes, 34, serving 10 years for robbery; Manuel Talavera, 36, serving 120 years for robbery and false imprisonment; and Raymond Despres, 31, serving 18 years for breaking and entering with intent to commit felony and escape.

In an apparently unrelated incident, two inmates were thwarted in an escape attempt about 3 a.m. Sunday, Bradford said.

He said the two, whose names were not released, sawed through their cell bars and, armed with a knife, escaped onto the cell block.

They took a correctional officer and a steam plant employee hostage and led them into the prison yard toward a pickup truck, Bradford said, but the civilian was able to jump into the truck, drive away and alert a tower guard.

Burglary suspect rescued from chimney hide-out

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The calm of an Easter Sunday morning made possible the rescue of a burglary suspect who eluded arrest by hiding in a chimney and then got stuck there for six days.

Glenn Clark, 25, of Trenton was arraigned Monday on burglary and theft charges a day after firefighters freed him from the chimney "by breaking out bricks with hammers and chisels," said Chief Fire Inspector Eugene Puckace.

Clark became trapped April 13 as police searched the three-story building occupied by Reiss Men's and Boy's Shop. Another suspect was arrested on burglary charges during the initial search.

But Clark's cries for help apparently went unheard until Easter Sunday, when a woman who was walking her dog heard his faint cries and called police and firefighters.

"That was fortunate," said Sgt. Ronald Cole, one of the officers who traced the voice to a perch 16 feet below the top of the chimney. "During the week, there is so much noise and traffic no one could have heard him."

Clark had spent the time in total darkness.

"When we found him, he said he thought it had only been two days," Cole said.

"Once they got him out of the wall, he was almost mummified," said Cole. "His left arm was bent over the top of his head, and there was no circulation in it."

Sgt. Nick Krupa, a police department spokesman, said Clark and an accomplice allegedly tried to burglarize the men's clothing store the night of April 13 when a burglar alarm went off. Edward Harriston, 30, of Trenton was arrested when police arrived at the scene with patrol dogs.

"Another suspect ran past them, but when they checked the building they couldn't find him," Krupa added.

Lottery scheme 'too simple'

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — It was a simple scheme: rig the Pennsylvania Lottery drawing so a few people could get rich quick and nobody would be the wiser. It was a little too simple.

No one got rich, and eight people found themselves facing an array of criminal charges. The fatal flaws, investigators say, were ignorance of the lottery system's intricacies — and greed.

After several months' investigation, a state grand jury accused the eight of rigging the April 24, 1980, Daily Number drawing at WTAE-TV in Pittsburgh.

Now, six of them plan to testify for the state. The other two, former television emcee Nick Perry and Edward Plevel, the suspended Lottery Bureau district manager, face a Common Pleas Court trial next month.

The grand jury concluded that Perry, who was host of the nightly drawing, was the mastermind, Plevel the inside man, in a scheme which resulted in a record $3.5 million payout when the number 6-6-6 popped up on pingpong balls used in the drawing.

They are charged with theft by deception, rigging a publicly exhibited contest, criminal mischief, criminal conspiracy and perjury. Plevel also is charged with unsworn falsification.

Investigators say if betting had been limited to about $100,000 every six months, the scheme might have gone undetected. But somewhere along the line, the grand jury says, Perry issued the order to "bet heavy."

The grand jury said Peter Maragos, his brother, James, and James' wife, Jean, bought more than 10,000 Lottery tickets of various combinations of "4" and "6" at at least a dozen locations. Another brother, Jack Maragos, also bought winning tickets, the panel said.

So many tickets were bought, the grand jury said, that people were paid to cash partial lots of the $1.2 million in winning tickets.

During one court appearance, Peter Maragos testified he borrowed $32,000 from a bank to buy tickets. Peter and Jack Maragos and Perry were business partners in a food vending business.

Peter Maragos also testified that he and Perry discussed the scheme over the telephone and at the church they both attend. He said after the drawing, he delivered a total of $35,000 to Perry at two meetings — one at a cemetery and the other behind a shopping center.

Investigators say the accused were apparently unaware the Lottery Bureau's computer system recorded the sales for that day — revealing unusually heavy betting patterns on the numbers "4" and "6" in the Philadelphia area.

As the evidence mounted, the four Maragos family members agreed in December to be state witnesses — giving the prosecution its first inside look at the alleged conspiracy.

In return for their testimony, Peter and Jack Maragos pleaded guilty to reduced charges in the hope of gaining five-year probationary sentences. Under a similar agreement, charges against James and Jean Maragos would be dropped after they testify for the state.

Part of the agreement involved the Maragos family making restitution, and officials say they have recovered more than $700,000 in cash and unredeemed winning tickets.

In addition, Joseph Bock and Frederick Luman, two former television stagehands implicated by the grand jury, decided in March to join the Maragos family as state witnesses in an effort to get lighter sentences.

At his January preliminary hearing, Bock testified he weighted the bogus pingpong balls, except those numbered "4" and "6", by injecting them with white latex paint. He said he affixed store-bought numbers and letters to make them look like the official balls.

Bock testified he brought the bogus balls to the television station in a brown paper bag and minutes after the drawing burned them in an old paint can in his shop.

The grand jury said it was Luman who actually switched the balls in the drawing machines — three glass boxes containing numbered balls that dance on a current of air. When a small door is opened at the top of the box, one ball is sucked into a trap, thus producing one digit of the winning combination.

A year after the scandal broke, lottery officials say the legal betting business is better than ever in Pennsylvania. Lottery Bureau Director Lynn Nelson estimates gross sales for the fiscal year ending June 30 will be at least $430 million. The Daily Number drawing, one of four lottery games conducted by the state, accounts for about 70 percent of the gross revenue, he said.

Cambodian prince seeking support

PEKING (AP) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Cambodia's exiled chief of state, appealed to China and the United States today to arm and support a 100,000-man "Sihanoukist" army to join Khmer Rough guerrillas in the fight to oust Vietnamese forces from Cambodia.

"It is in the interests of China and the United States" to sponsor such a force, Sihanouk declared in an emotional two-hour news conference in Peking. But he said he was "not optimistic" about his chances for getting that support.

Sihanouk said he was being pressured by Chinese officials to form a United Front with his old foes, the Khmer Rouge, to fight the estimated 200,000 pro-Soviet Vietnamese in Cambodia.

However, he said he would not lead such a United Front unless he had direct control of the resistance and a 100,000-man force to balance the 30,000 radical communist Red Khmer guerrillas, who already are fighting the Vietnamese in western Cambodia.

"If China rejects my demands for aid to my army, then my chances are in the hands of the Reagan administration, and if they reject my call, then my plan is a failure and I remain in political retirement," he said.

"I could not preside over a United Front if China did not supply a Sihanouk army with weapons, ammunition and aid. Chinese aid to a Sihanouk army is the main condition for a United Front," the prince said, adding that he spelled out his terms in a meeting Monday with China's Foreign Minister Huang Hua.

Diplomatic sources said China has promised limited aid and has told the Cambodian exile to look to the United States, and other Asian countries for aid. Sihanouk is to meet here this week with the Japanese ambassador and representatives of the alliance of South East Asian nations.

The prince said he now has about 2,000 poorly equipped guerrillas under his command, "but I can immediatly get 100,000 young men from the (refugee camps along) the Thai-Cambodian border, if I can get weapons and ammunition."
