

What dangers do pipelines pose?

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — How dangerous to life and property are the many miles of oil and gas pipeline systems buried throughout Midland and Ector counties and what measures are taken to protect the general public?

These are questions being asked in view of the explosion and fire last Saturday that injured at least six people and caused an as yet undetermined amount of damage to a small mobile home park and mobile home sales lot in the 6700-block of Andrews Highway in North Odessa, outside the city limits.

According to Odessa fire officials, the actual cause of the fire may never be known because only the twisted metal skeletal underframe of the first mobile home involved remained after the fire was extinguished just before 9 p.m.

Some facts are known about the situation.

A 10-inch crude oil transmission pipeline, owned by American Petrofina and running from an East Midland tank farm to the Shell-Wheeler plant near Nottrees, west of Odessa, ran through the area and four to five feet underground beneath the mobile home that first exploded and burned.

The pipeline was first installed about 1927 when the area consisted of mostly vacant farm and ranchland.

Until about 10 or 12 years ago, the area where the fire occurred had been a caliche pit. It was gradually filled in and leveled.

About 15 years ago, a bulldozer working in the caliche pit hit the pipeline and it had to be repaired.

At the time of Saturday's explosion and fire, according to Ray Mize, Petrofina pipeline manager, no crude oil had been pumped through the pipeline since about April 1, though crude oil remained in the line.

Normal pressure, he said, would be about 350 to 400 pounds per square inch when oil was being transmitted in the line.

Larry Felio, Texas Railroad Commission pipeline safety engineer, Wednesday estimated static pressure in the pipeline resulting from differences in elevation of as much as 300 feet was about 170 pounds per square inch.

Early Sunday, when Two Rivers Pipeline Construction Co. dug up and replaced about 80 feet of the 10 inch pipeline, it was discovered there was "a 20-inch split along a seam in a section of the pipe."

There was also a bulge in the pipe apparently in the area of the split that was observed after the pipe was loaded on a tractor-trailer rig.

Felio said Petrofina is having the removed pipe tested in an effort to determine why it ruptured. He said sections of the pipe will be subjected to pressure tests to try to duplicate conditions that may have caused the pipe to bulge and split.

Felio said there was no way of telling, at this time, when the bulge and split occurred.

The Railroad Commission official said Monday, crude oil from the pipeline was the source of fuel for the fire once it started burning, but what caused the initial explosion may never be known.

There has been unofficial speculation there may have been a pocket of gas in the pipeline that was forced to the surface by static pressure in the line that could have been trapped under the mobile home and finally ignited by the pilot light or flame of a hot water heater.

Unexplained, however, is the heavy rumble that preceded the explosion.

One witness, Clay Spruill, 27, said he heard the rumble about 3:40 p.m. Saturday, looked out a window of his mobile home and saw the whole rear end of the mobile home owned by Johnny Morris, 40, "expand and suddenly the whole thing was on fire. I've never seen anything like it," said Spruill.

Morris heard the rumble too, looked out and saw fire under his mobile home and told his visiting brother-in-law, Doug Turner, 45, from Azle, to get out.

Morris made it outside, but Turner got only as far as the porch of the mobile home and was blown from the structure by the force of the explosion. He suffered first and second degree burns and has since been transferred to the burn clinic at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio.

Why was the mobile home parked on top of a buried pipeline?

Signs posted by Petrofina clearly indicated the path of the pipeline but there are no restrictions outside the city limits of Odessa or Midland that prohibit putting any structure above any pipeline, be it crude oil or gas.

The responsibility for what is placed above a pipeline rests with property owners, says Felio.

Under Railroad Commission regulations governing new construction, he says, pipeline companies "are not allowed to build within 50 feet of a dwelling without taking extra precautions."

Felio, who worked for the city of Odessa until about 1980 and helped update and compile some of the pipeline maps for the city, says city ordinances prohibit building within about 30 feet of a pipeline.

U.S. to propose new protocols as arms talks resume

GENEVA (AP) — The superpowers resumed talks today on medium-range nuclear missiles and the United States said it planned to propose new protocols on anti-cheating measures in an eventual treaty banning such missiles in Europe.

The talks, which had been recessed for a month, resumed at 10:30 a.m. (4:30 a.m. EDT) with a one-on-one meeting at the Soviet mission between deputy Soviet delegation head Alexei Obukhov and chief U.S. medium-range missile negotiator Maynard Glitman.

The two men shook hands in brilliant sunshine outside the mission and answered a few shouted questions from journalists before beginning their meeting.

Glitman said his delegation would present "some additional protocols during this round...on verification points." He did not elaborate.

During the last round the U.S. side proposed what it said was a full treaty text, including anti-cheating provisions that it said were agreed to by the NATO allies.

Obukhov reiterated the Soviet intention to present its own draft treaty during the round, but refused to say exactly when. He said the Soviets "expect to have a treaty this year."

As the two men met, a Japanese Buddhist monk dressed in white and yellow robes stood outside the gates of the Soviet mission beating a drum and chanting. He said he was praying for peace.

The talks on intermediate-range nuclear forces, or INF, resumed two weeks ahead of the other groups in the Geneva arms talks — long-range forces and space and defense systems.

The INF headstart is designed to give the two sides more time "for agreeing upon formulations to be included in a joint draft treaty" being prepared, Obukhov said Tuesday.

Glitman said in a statement Wednesday that his delegation is ready for "serious, intensive and expeditious negotiations," but will not be bound by a timetable.

"There are grounds for optimism about the prospects for reaching an INF agreement," he said. "Difficult issues remain, however, and much hard work lies ahead of us."

Obukhov said the Soviet draft treaty would detail recent proposals by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev on medium-range and shorter-range nuclear missiles.

Gorbachev's proposals include a call for eliminating both sides' medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe — a proposal also included in the U.S. draft treaty.

This would apply to U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles and to Soviet triple-warhead SS-20s and single-warhead SS-4s, all of which have a range of up to 3,400 miles. Each side would retain 100 warheads on its own territory.

Gorbachev proposed eliminating from Europe shorter-range missiles with a range of 300-600 miles as part of the INF agreement.

The Soviets have about 130 of those weapons in East Germany and Czechoslovakia, according to Western estimates.

West Germany has 72 shorter-range Pershing 1 missiles deployed on its territory, according to Western statistics. West Germany operates the missiles while the United States controls their nuclear warheads.

The West has reacted cautiously to the Gorbachev proposal to eliminate shorter-range missiles. Some North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies have expressed fears that the absence of missiles would leave them vulnerable to Soviet superiority in conventional weapons.

They have proposed the United States instead build up to the Soviet level of shorter-range missiles.

Glitman said this issue still is being discussed within NATO. He has said the U.S. draft treaty contains provisions for equality in shorter-range missiles, but details have not been released.

The official Soviet news agency Tass on Wednesday quoted the Kremlin's top arms control officer as saying Moscow wants a superpower summit this year.

A lone raven perches atop a tall stone-pine tree in Midland as if to croak "nevermore."

Ravens flock to city to forage

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The old black bird is more romantic than his cousin, the crow. And he croaks, said Edgar Allan Poe, again and again "nevermore" in that poem The Raven which begins, "Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary, Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore."

The raven is back — he never left — to his ravenous ways. He has a seemingly insatiable appetite. He relishes everything from nuts and fruits to grasshoppers and carrion — road kills.

Ravens, which are being seen here very often this season, are friends to mankind, said Midland bird rehabilitator Midge Erskine.

"Their big thing is grasshopper control," said Ms. Erskine. "When their young are hatching out in June and July, they feed almost exclusively on grasshoppers. Each nest must consume 1,000 grasshoppers per day. You get a big broodery (colony of birds), and you can see how many grasshoppers they consume. They are marvelous to come into your yard, because they are going to clear out all of your insects."

And with their "powerful beak," which she likened to a pair of pliers, ravens readily crack nuts, particularly native pecans, which are far more tasty to them than the easier-to-crack paper-shell pecans.

And the raven, which has winged into town to forage, is "not as destructive as people say. They are more beneficial than they are destructive," Ms. Erskine said. But they will "go after" young birds to eat if the insect population is down. And like turkey vultures, ravens are scavengers. "They clean up the dead along the highways."

The ravens which live in the Midland area are the white-necked variety. They have a band of black-tipped white feathers about their neck and chest. In the summertime, the birds fluff those feathers to reflect the heat of the sun.

Midland's unemployment falls below 10 percent

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Unemployment in Midland is "finally back under the double-digit barrier" for the first time since last May, Joe Hatcher, office manager for the Texas Employment Commission in Midland, said this morning.

Midland's unemployment figure was logged at 9.3 percent in March, its lowest level since April 1986, when the rate stood at 9.0 percent, he said.

The jobless rate in Odessa improved as well, falling 1.9 percent to 12.7 percent in March.

However, the lower rate is not an indication of across-the-board improvements in job conditions in the two cities, Hatcher warned.

Shrinkage of the available number of workers was the primary force driving the jobless rate down, he pointed out.

Total employment in Midland and Odessa was lower in March than the previous month. But in combination with lower total numbers for unemployed persons, unemployment calculations yielded lower rates in March.

There are no clear-cut explanations to the deterioration in labor force numbers, Hatcher said. "There could be some increase in people leaving the area, but we can't say that for sure based strictly on the numbers."

Regional labor market analyst George Williams with the San Angelo TEC office said this morning that Midland and Odessa were "in line with the statewide trend from February to March." Texas saw a total decline of 120,000 available workers, he said.

"There are not as many new entrants coming into the job market," Williams explained. "People who would normally be in the labor pool — or employed — under better economic conditions, appear to be staying out of the market because of the poor job outlook."

Locally, the job outlook may be improving, Hatcher said. "We've seen about a 10 percent increase in job opening postings over last month."

"We are also encouraged by the quality of the job orders," he added. "They are not just minimum wage jobs. We are getting good job orders for impressive salaries in some cases."

Total employment in Midland during March was 45,600, down 300 from February. The number of unemployed workers fell 700, to 4,700 in March. Those two declines combined to put the total labor force level at 50,300, down 1,000 from February.

Texas parachutist saved during dramatic dive

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A skydiver pursued an unconscious colleague at an estimated 200 miles an hour, caught up with her and opened her parachute seconds before she would have struck the ground in a fall of nearly three miles.

Debbie Williams is said to have been about 3,500 feet and about 10 seconds from the ground when Gregory Robertson pulled out of his headlong dive, propped her into an upright position, yanked her ripcord and then released his own chute.

It was like "trying to catch a football that was flopping down the road at 40 miles an hour," said Bill Rothe of Andrews, Texas. Ms. Williams' fiancé and also a skydiver. He had been watching from the ground.

Ms. Williams, 31, of Slaton, Texas, and a veteran of about 50 jumps, had been knocked unconscious when she collided with a fellow diver, Guy Fitzwater, during what was to have been a formation drop at a day-long skydivers rendezvous Saturday near Coolidge, about 50 miles southeast of Phoenix.

Observers said she hit the ground flat on her back. She remained hospitalized Wednesday in serious but stable condition under intensive care with several broken ribs, extensive internal injuries and a lung contusion, a Scottsdale Memorial Hospital spokesperson said.

Larry Hill, owner of the Skydive Arizona site where the rendezvous was being conducted, said the amazing part wasn't so much that Robertson caught up, since that sort of thing is done regularly in skydiving formations.

"What's amazing," Hill said, "was that he saw this happen and was able to do something."

Robertson, who said he has made about 1,500 jumps, landed safely and resumed his own diving later, explaining that it was just another day of skydiving and that skydiving "is what I like to do."

Ms. Williams, Fitzwater and four others were to have linked hands after jumping from a plane at about 13,500 feet.

Midlander questioned in early morning shooting death

From Staff Reports

A Midland man was being questioned this morning at city jail in connection with the shooting death of a 33-year-old man shortly before 1 a.m., police said.

Ruben Huitron, 33, was shot once in the chest with a .30 caliber rifle about 12:45 a.m., according to police.

He was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room, but died a few minutes after arrival, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

The suspect, about 35, was arrested shortly after the shooting at a residence near the intersection of County Road 1196 and CR 116, police said.

According to police reports, the victim and several of his relatives were in a residence at 511 W. New Jersey, when a car drove up and someone shouted the victim's name. The car then stopped, then drove a short distance to Connell Street and again stopped.

Police said the victim was shot as he walked toward the car.

House OKs bill that would make rape of spouse illegal

AUSTIN (AP) — A state lawmaker has once again won House approval of a bill that would make rape of a spouse illegal, and said she is optimistic the Senate will approve it this year.

The House gave final approval Wednesday to the bill, sponsored by Rep. Debra Danburg. In a previous legislative session, a similar measure won House approval before dying in the Senate.

Under current state law, a person sexually assaulted by his or her spouse cannot have the spouse charged with rape.

On Tuesday, Rep. Jim McWilliams added to the bill a provision that would also allow prosecution of an individual who has AIDS "in the bloodstream," but doesn't inform his or her spouse before sexual contact.

Ms. Danburg, D-Houston, said she thought the amendment was irrelevant, but allowed it because she was afraid any opposition would kill the bill.

Rep. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville, said the amendment would cause "many more problems than we're going to solve."

"That amendment is not medical fact. AIDS is not blood stream," said McKinney, a medical doctor.

House tentatively OKs open container bill

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House, historically the stumbling block for anti-drinking and driving bills, Wednesday tentatively approved a ban on drinking alcohol while driving.

Although some legislators said drinking a beer on the way home from work is a Texas tradition, the House passed the so-called open container bill on a voice vote. A final vote is expected today.

An almost identical bill cleared the Senate earlier in the legislative session, and Senate sponsor Bill Sar-pallus, D-Canyon, said the Senate will agree to the minor House changes and send it to the governor, possibly as soon as Friday.

Gov. Bill Clements has said he supports the open container bill. The law would take effect in the fall.

Reps. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, and Bill Blackwood, R-Mesquite, carried the bill in the House, where there was virtually no debate on what is usually a controversial measure.

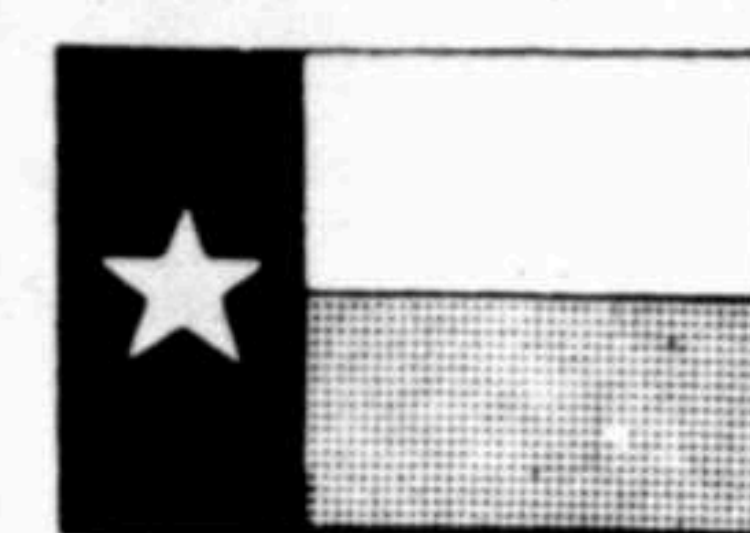

"I think the issue has been debated so much that folks just decided that was the formula they wanted to go with," said Wilson.

Under the bill, a driver cannot have an open container of alcohol, although passengers still could drink. An law enforcement officer has probable cause to stop a driver if the officer suspects the driver is drinking alcohol. If found guilty, the driver faces a maximum fine of $200.

"It may not be as strong as some people would like for it to be," House Speaker Gib Lewis said, "and certainly it's too strong for some other people... Hopefully it'll do what the intent was, and that's save lives."

"It may not be as strong as some people would like for it to be," House Speaker Gib Lewis said, "and certainly it's too strong for some other people... Hopefully it'll do what the intent was, and that's save lives."

The open container legislation had strong backing from the Department of Public Safety and Mothers Against Drunk Driving and faced no organized opposition. Some House members, however, complained that the law punishes the great majority of Texans who have one "roadie" for the sake of the few who cannot drink and drive responsibly.

Previous versions of the bill were tougher, prohibiting any alcohol in the vehicle and calling for stiffer penalties.

LBB finds budget bill discrepancy

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House budget writers, who worked long hours to complete an austere 1988-1989 appropriations bill last week, voted to spend about half a billion dollars more than they originally thought, the Legislative Budget Board reported Wednesday.

The $38.98 billion spending bill, which the Appropriations Committee still must approve formally, would require about $2 billion more in new taxes than Gov. Bill Clements has said he would allow. When the committee finished its deliberations on the bill around 3:30 a.m. April 17, most of the members thought they had written a $38.4 billion budget.

LBB Director Jim Oliver, who completed the analysis Wednesday, said the discrepancy points out the hazards in "seat-of-the-pants estimates."

"We didn't have any idea it was this high," said committee Chairman Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, who pointed out that it was still about $1 billion less than the $40 billion spending plan the Senate passed last week.

"There's no way we can accept the Senate bill," he said. "They're going to have to come a long way."

The committee will take a formal vote on the bill Monday or Tuesday, Rudd said, adding that he believes the panel will approve it on a close vote. The "pit bulls," a group of young conservatives on the committee, hopes to chop several hundred million more from the bill before the last vote, Rep. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville, said Wednesday.

Rudd and the "bulls" have agreed not to touch it without House Speaker Gib Lewis' OK, but said Democratic Rep. Rick Perry of Haskell. "If nothing happens, I think it's going to have a real struggle getting out of committee."

Oliver Wednesday released specific spending figures for a few individual agencies.

The bill would spend $882 million in state dollars on the Texas Department of Corrections and allocate an additional $300 million in bonds for prison construction. That $1.18 billion total is 37 percent above current TDC spending levels.

Also Wednesday, Gov. Bill Clements emerged from a meeting with Comptroller Bob Bullock, blasting Treasurer Ann Richards for her warnings that parts of state government could close in September if lawmakers don't balance the budget by June 1. "The Treasurer needs to talk in terms of a certified budget and quit talking about some kind of a fictitious budget and fictitious numbers," Clements said.

"It is not helpful to the state of Texas, it certainly does not attract business, it does not encourage industry to move to this state when we are getting this constant drumming about not meeting our cash-flow requirements and going broke and issuing hot checks and all these kinds of extreme statements that have no real purpose."

Woman to be tried for perjury

CONROE (AP) — A woman accused of lying to support her father's alibi in a sensational murder case is scheduled to stand trial next month on a charge of aggravated perjury.

State District Judge John Martin denied two defense motions Wednesday to dismiss the indictment against Vanessa Fontenot, 25, of Channelview. A May 11 trial date was set.

Miss Fontenot's defense attorney, Lewis Dickson of Houston, argued that the indictment should be thrown out because it was vague about which of Miss Fontenot's statements were false.

Hurley Fontenot was acquitted in February 1986 by a Polk County jury of murder in connection with the April 12, 1985 shooting death of Hui-Daisetta coach Billy Mac Fleming.

Fontenot, a former school principal, and Fleming had dated the same woman, who was a school secretary.

Fontenot's daughter was indicted on the perjury charge four months after he was acquitted. Part of his defense was that he was in Houston the afternoon that Fleming was killed. He said he called his daughter from Houston.

According to the indictment, Miss Fontenot told grand jurors the month after Fleming was killed that her father called her in Austin the morning of the murder.

But during her father's trial eight months later, she told jurors she was mistaken when she testified before the grand jury. The call from her father actually came in the afternoon, she said.

Dallas doctor testifies that he experimented on dead babies

HONOLULU (AP) — A Dallas doctor, who was Honolulu's medical examiner from 1980 until April 1985, told a court Wednesday he had dropped dead infants on their heads to conduct medical research.

Dr. Charles Odom, now employed by the Institute of Forensic Science in Dallas, testified Wednesday in the case of Malcolm Greyson, 35, who is on trial for the 1983 murder of his 7-month-old son.

Odom, Honolulu's medical examiner from 1980 until April 1985, said he had conducted such experiments, but not on Greyson's son, Eric.

Odom was indicted last month in Louisiana on charges that he falsified autopsy records, failing to include that he had caused skull fractures during autopsies on two infants who had died of crib death in Lafayette, La.

Odom said he conducted the experiments on the two infants to prepare for testimony in the trial of Air Force Sgt. Christopher Lee Dugan, who is accused of causing his 6-month-old son's death. The trial is to begin in August.

Greyson in 1985 was convicted of murder in the death of his son, but the state Supreme Court last year awarded him a new trial. Greyson's attorney, Daphne Barbee, questioned Odom briefly Wednesday about his medical research experiments.

MHMR head says report invalid

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's commissioner of Mental Health and Mental Retardation urged U.S. District Court Judge Barefoot Sanders Wednesday to investigate personally before issuing any new orders in the court case involving state schools for the mentally retarded.

Dr. Gary E. Miller also asked that a hearing be held to test the validity of a report issued in March by Dr. Linda O'Neal, an expert consultant monitoring the court-approved agreement in the case, which alleged mistreatment of retarded patients at state schools.

The report, made to the Dallas court, was critical of state efforts at schools in Austin, Denton and Fort Worth.

"We have told the court that it is our belief that the findings, conclusions and generalizations contained in her report about the three state schools are completely invalid," Miller said.

Miller said his investigation showed the reviewers hired by Ms. O'Neal did not have proper training and the size of the sample taken was too small.

Lightning Whelk made state shell

AUSTIN (AP) — With a lustrous white Lightning Whelk next to him, Gov. Bill Clements signed a resolution Wednesday designating the shell as the state seashell.

"I've never seen one this large," said Clements when he was presented with the shell, which was found off the Texas Gulf Coast.

Brazosport Museum of Natural Sciences officials asked Sen. Buster Brown, R-Lake Jackson, and Rep. John Willy, R-Angleton, to sponsor the resolution.

Jackson says 'super primary' would be advantage if he decides to run

AUSTIN (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who says he is exploring the possibility of another presidential bid, believes next year's multi-state Southern "super primary" would be an advantage for him.

"I feel good about it because I am a Southerner. I have lived in the region. I have served in the region. I would think my years of service would be a factor in the Southern primary," Jackson said Wednesday.

Jackson, who unsuccessfully sought the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984, told reporters he hasn't yet decided to launch a new campaign.

"At this point, the campaign is in formation. We are in the exploratory period," he said.

"To make the final decision, we must have a broad base of leadership...The support base is growing. We must have adequate money to build the infrastructure. We have the know-how and the raw numbers to win. But we need the resource base to do it," Jackson said.

Jackson said he believes he has a track record that should appeal to the Democratic Party.

House Speaker Gib Lewis listens as the Rev. Jesse Jackson addresses Texas lawmakers Wednesday.

he said. "I am the championship Democratic voter registrar in America today."

In a speech to the Legislature, Jackson said he favors an oil import tax to provide needed money to offset the national debt and support the U.S. energy industry.

It would "get us back on the path to energy independence and get the oilfields of America working again," Jackson said.

"The Southwest needs some help from the Northeast. When New York went bankrupt...the Southwest did not secede. We must all share the burden of the Southwest economic depression. After all, it's just one America," he said.

An import fee, he said, would increase domestic exploration, raise money to help offset the federal government's massive deficit and address legitimate concerns about national security.

Jackson also urged help for U.S. family farmers, supporting a moratorium on farm foreclosures as "a grace period" for restructuring their debt.

Doctors link prenatal lead levels with slowed mental growth

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Evidence of slowed mental development in babies exposed to tiny amounts of lead while in the womb suggests that the level of the material considered dangerous for pregnant women should be lowered, researchers say.

In a report published today, doctors linked prenatal lead levels with somewhat poorer mental growth during the first two years of life. The children who got small amounts of lead from their mothers' bodies were not considered retarded. Some were even above average, but their mental growth was slower than expected.

"I think it should be regarded as an indication that something is going on that may be quite worrisome," said Dr. David Bellinger, who directed the study at Children's Hospital in Boston.

Bellinger said the finding may mean that the fetus is more sensitive to lead's toxic effects than small children are. If so, he said, "it may not be appropriate to use the same exposure guidelines for the fetus and for children."

Bellinger's research, conducted on well-off, mostly white babies, will continue to track the children to see if they have trouble keeping up when they reach school age.

Dr. Kim Dietrich of the University of Cincinnati conducted a similar study on poor black infants and came to similar conclusions.

"If we see these effects in pre-schoolers and school-age kids, then we do probably have quite a significant health problem, and we need to eliminate all sources of lead exposure, particularly for pregnant women," Dietrich said.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control considers lead levels to be unacceptable for children if they are higher than 25 micrograms for each deciliter of the youngster's blood. A microgram is one-millionth of a gram.

The Boston researchers found that mental development is slowed if fetuses have lead levels above 10 micrograms per deciliter — one-tenth of a liter — of blood.

That study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, was conducted on 249 children. Doctors determined their prenatal lead exposure by taking samples of umbilical cord blood at birth. They divided them into three groups: Those with blood levels under 3 micrograms, those with 6 or 7 micrograms and those between 10 and 25 micrograms. Two-thirds of the babies in the highest group had levels between 10 and 15.

During the next two years, the researchers checked the babies' mental development by administering tests that measure such things as the youngsters' ability to stack cubes and solve simple problems.

Those born with the highest lead levels consistently did worse than babies exposed to lower levels. By age 2, those with the highest exposure had average scores on the development test of 111, compared with 119 in the low-exposure group. On this test, 100 is considered to be average.

"These aren't kids who would be identified as having developmental problems," said Bellinger. "They just were not doing quite as well as they would have had they not had this amount of lead in them."

The researchers assume that lead entered the mothers' bodies from such sources as auto-exhaust fumes and dust from lead paint, and it was then passed to the fetuses.

The babies studied were chosen from 11,837 infants born between 1979 and 1981 at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. Ten percent of these babies had pre-birth lead levels greater than 10 micrograms per deciliter.

However, the researchers noted that the amount of lead in the air has fallen substantially since then as drivers switched to unleaded gasoline.

The newest monument proposed for Washington would ring the Ellipse, center, with a mile of trees, providing a living and blooming memorial behind the White House to slain police officers. Two rows of blooming trees would ring the Ellipse, a half-mile circumference circle of lawn between the White House, left center, and the Washington Monument, foreground. The proposal is to be formally unveiled before a federal planning commission on Thursday.

Memorial to slain police officers proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The architect of a proposal to turn the Ellipse behind the White House into a tree-lined memorial to slain police officers says his design is radical in its simplicity.

Backers of a Law Enforcement Officers Memorial were unveiling their proposal today before the National Capital Memorial Commission, which must agree to any site and design on the park grounds.

"It's very different from most memorials, which are sanctuaries unto themselves," said Davis Buckley, a Washington architect whose firm came up with the plans. "Its simplicity is what's so radical about it."

The designers are seeking approval in concept of the design and site, which is among the most prominent in Washington. Two other federal commissions also would have to approve the design and site as plans are refined.

The design consists of 500 to 600 trees to be planted full-grown in a border around the Ellipse, which now is bordered mainly by parked cars.

The designers say if the concept is approved, they hope to add some element such as a flag pole, marker or design in the pathway to commemorate the officers, 1,500 of whom were killed on duty in the past 10 years.

The blooming trees, of a variety yet to be decided, would be placed in two rows, 10 feet apart and 25 feet tall, their tops and sides trimmed flat.

The limbs would intertwine to form a canopy of foliage over a walkway around the half-mile in circumference lawn that separates the White House and Washington Monument. There would be two breaks for entrances to the grassy center.

Buckley said his design would be in keeping with the plan for the District of Columbia laid out by the French engineer Pierre Charles L'Enfant 200 years ago.

"In many ways, it's a gift to Washington to complete the L'Enfant plan," Buckley said. "It highlights the Ellipse and reinforces the geometry of the area."

The project is planned by the National Law Enforcement Memorial Fund, which won congressional authorization in 1984 for a monument to law officers killed in the line of duty.

The fund, formed by more than a dozen organizations of law enforcement officers, is trying to raise $5 million to construct the memorial. Jan C. Scruggs, who conceived of the idea for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and led it to completion through intense controversy over its design, is heading the project.

"It's a brilliant design because it makes a historic part of Washington, the Ellipse, into the beautiful area that city planners intended," he said.

The Ellipse, just below the White House south lawn, is where the national Christmas tree is situated each year. It attracts thousands for baseball and other activities, and is ringed by hundreds of cars and concession vendors.

The design would not remove the road or parking but would shield them, the designers say.

Craig Floyd, executive director of the fund, said the site and design are supported unanimously by the fund's board of directors, which includes police chiefs, officers, police union leaders and families of slain officers.

White House in 'hot water' over hot tub

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House employees' exercise room used to have some showers and a few weights. The new spruced-up, expanded version has more weights, space for aerobics classes and a hot tub that seats eight.

A hot tub? That's right. For $5,300, the White House Athletic Center bought both the eight-person hot tub and a dry sauna. The cost, according to Liz Murphy, deputy White House press secretary, will be borne by employees who join the center and pay an annual fee of $148.

The decision to buy the hot tub came after the center's board of directors checked exercise facilities at other federal agencies and found that a hot tub and dry sauna "were two of the things the other agencies had that they kept telling us were a really big draw."

But besides drawing federal employees interested in reducing job-related stress, the hot tub has drawn media attention to the facility.

It was, in fact, the subject of the first questions at presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater's regular news briefing Wednesday.

"Eight-person hot tub?" one reporter called out.

Another urged Fitzwater, a little stocky himself, to put on his Spandex tights and join the other exercisers.

Billionaire Boys leader convicted of murder

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Joe Hunt, the man behind the Billionaire Boys Club, expressed shock at his conviction of first-degree murder in a case where there was no body, and insisted the victim would turn up alive.

Hunt

Hunt, 27, convicted by a state Superior Court jury of first-degree murder and robbery in the shotgun slaying of Ronald Levin of Beverly Hills, faces the death penalty or life in prison without the possibility of parole.

"It's just astonishing," he told reporters after Wednesday's verdict. "I think it's a tragedy because Ron Levin's alive, and I'm sure he'll be found in the next couple of years with the sort of visibility he had recently."

Levin, a self-described con man, vanished June 6, 1984, after tricking Hunt in a commodities hoax. His body has not been found.

Hunt and his attorney, Arthur Baren, claim Levin is alive and perpetrating the ultimate con on Hunt and his band of young investors — prep school buddies who hail from some of Southern California's most socially prominent families.

The case enters the penalty phase May 11, when the same jury will decide Hunt's sentence.

"My only responsibility is to keep my chin up, and that's what I do best," Hunt said before he was ordered held without bond.

Court spectators gasped as the verdicts were read after the jury deliberated for a little over two days. Hunt wiped his face with his hand and looked at jurors, then his girlfriend, who was crying in the first row.

"I was very happy," said Martin Levin, the victim's father, who was in court with his wife, Carol. "He was guilty...and I'm glad they got him. I wish he would die."

The case was a difficult one for the prosecution, which had to convince the jury Levin was dead even though there was no corpse.

Complicating matters was testimony from two witnesses who claimed to have seen Levin alive after his alleged murder. Last week, a City News Service reporter said he saw Levin in September at a movie.

"When you work so hard and so long for something, obviously you're pleased when you get the result you were looking for," said Deputy District Attorney Fred Wapner.

Wapner said Levin was killed in retaliation for tricking Hunt's group in a commodities investment hoax. He alleged Hunt shot Levin, disfigured his face with shotgun blasts, and then buried his body in remote Soledad Canyon.

Wapner and Baren, still under restrictions of a court-imposed gag order, commented briefly on the verdicts.

"I'm extra-disappointed," Baren said.

Kuwaiti ships to fly American flags

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has agreed in principle to let Kuwaiti ships hoist American flags in the Persian Gulf, the State Department says.

Officials say the flags would guarantee the ships and oil tankers military escort in the Gulf, where ships are threatened by Iran as part of that country's war with Iraq.

Kuwait has asked for 11 ships to be protected. The agreement was made known Wednesday. Details must be worked out, however, the department says.

Kuwait has already chartered three ships from the Soviet Union in an effort to ensure safety for its shipping in the Gulf.

Women's issues shift

WASHINGTON (AP) — The women's movement is shifting from social issues to pocketbook issues affecting working women, the national president of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs says.

"The direction of the women's movement changes today," Mary Ray Oaken declared Wednesday, conspicuously sporting a red purse as the group's symbol of the economic problems faced by women. "Forty-four million women carry a purse to work each morning. Those women want that purse to carry more money home at night."

Soviets denied U.S. visas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has denied entry visas to two Soviet journalists on grounds they might take part in spying or other subversive activities.

Department spokesman Charles Redman, at a briefing Wednesday, gave no details on why the visa applications for Vladimir Simonov and Boris Koralev were rejected.

The pair were to visit the United States with separate groups, whose other members were allowed in the country. Simonov was to visit the U.S. with 21 other Soviets as part of a tour sponsored in part by the New York-based Campaign for a People's Peace Treaty, which supports nuclear disarmament and closer ties between the two countries. Koralev was one of three journalists invited by the Black Press Institute.

Victims of bridge fall found

AMSTERDAM, N.Y. (AP) — The body of an eighth victim killed in the collapse of an interstate highway bridge has been recovered 50 miles downstream in a Hudson River marina, a state police spokesman said today.

The body of a seventh victim had been found Wednesday in the cab of a tractor-trailer submerged in Schorhar Creek, which was spanned by the Interstate 95 bridge that collapsed April 5.

State Police Lt. Mike Wright said the body recovered from the truck cab was believed to be that of John Ninham, 39, of Green Bay, Wis., the driver of the truck owned by Schneider National Carriers Inc. of Green Bay.

Company officials had said Ninham was hauling wood pulp to Corinth, N.Y., and has been missing since the disaster on the interstate, also known as the New York State Thruway.

The truck cab was the fourth vehicle found after the collapse, in which four cars and the tractor-trailer plunged 80 feet into the rain-swollen creek. Ten people are believed dead, but only eight bodies have been recovered.

A body found Wednesday in the Hudson River near New Baltimore has been identified as Evangelina Shive of New Hampshire, state police spokesman Robert Armet said today. The body was found in Shady Harbor Marina about 50 miles downstream from where the Thruway bridge collapsed.

Mrs. Shive was traveling with her husband to Texas during the time of the bridge collapse. His body was pulled from the creek almost two weeks ago.

Bakker colleagues report lower pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six of Jim Bakker's fellow television evangelists report salaries much lower than the $1.6 million the former PTL leader and his wife, Tammy, made last year, according to a published report Tuesday.

Of the six, Bakker's successor at PTL, Richard Dortch, made the most — $350,000 in 1986, including $220,000 in bonuses and $80,000 toward retirement, USA Today reported.

Dortch, who has made $270,000 so far this year, said Tuesday that he will work without pay for a year. On PTL's daily broadcast, Dortch said, "God has spoken to my heart, and he will provide for my needs."

Salaries reported by other TV evangelists:

— Jerry Falwell: $100,000 a year, no perks.

— Billy Graham: $74,500 with no extras.

— Pat Robertson: $60,000 from Christian Broadcasting Network, donated back to the network. Robertson said he lives off book royalties and appearance fees.

— Robert Schuller: $80,000 plus a $50 Christmas bonus, the same as that given all employees at his Crystal Cathedral in Garden Grove, Calif.

USA Today also contacted W.A. Criswell, pastor of the largest congregation in the Southern Baptist Convention, the 27,000-member First Baptist Church of Dallas. Criswell said he makes $48,000.

Search for log of AIDS tested persons 'frantic'

WASHINGTON (AP) — City officials are searching frantically for a confidential log of people who underwent AIDS testing, insisting at the same time that security for medical records has been tightened since the book disappeared.

"Our goal right now is to retrieve the book and prevent anything like this from ever happening again," Public Health Commissioner Dr. Reed Tuckson said Wednesday.

Tuckson and other city officials would not confirm anything about the contents of the log, saying any disclosure of its contents would violate federal law. Sources close to the investigation, speaking only on condition of anonymity, told the Associated Press the book concerns tests for exposure to acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"It is considered a criminal offense to publish or discuss confidential information that may be contained in the documents in question," acting District of Columbia Corporation Counsel Frederick Cook Jr. said in a statement delivered to news organizations Wednesday.

The log has been missing from the clinic at the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Services Administration since last Friday. The Washington Times, quoting anonymous sources, said it contained about 500 names.

Private health care providers said they are concerned not only about the log's disappearance but also about its very existence.

"If this is all true, why was a log even kept?" said Jim Graham, director of the private Whitman-Walker clinic, which does a large majority of AIDS testing in the city.

"It demonstrates the need for anonymous testing," said Steve Smith, chairperson of the Metropolitan Washington Committee on AIDS issues. "There's a world of difference between confidential testing and anonymous testing."

The alcohol and drug agency is located in the city's industrial corridor, near Capitol Hill, and its patients generally are low-income city residents who come in for alcohol or drug abuse treatment.

Some city officials said use of the log for blackmail was "a theoretical possibility," but others said it is unlikely anyone treated at ADASA is subject to such a threat.

"You're talking about people, most of whom need public assistance," said Graham. "It's not likely, if there is such a list, that prominent persons subject to blackmail are on it."

AIDS is a contagious, fatal disease that attacks the body's immune system, rendering it incapable of resisting other diseases and infections. No cure has been found. The chief victims have been homosexual men and intravenous drug users.

A positive result from the test in question does not show that a person has AIDS, only that the person tested has been exposed to the AIDS virus.

"It's going to be very difficult now for people to come in to be tested for the No. 1 health threat of our time," Tuckson said after news reports about the log circulated Wednesday. "People may die because of this." He said they may be dissuaded from being tested because of the news.

Nuclear accord gives world hedge

Talk about nightmares. Consider the terrifying implications of a rogue regime such as that of Libya's Moammar Gadhafi acquiring not only a nuclear bomb but also the means to deliver it accurately over long distances with ballistic missiles.

The potential for international blackmail stemming from, for example, Col. Gadhafi's having the capability to threaten Paris and Rome with nuclear missiles is incalculable. Such a scenario underscores how the threat of nuclear proliferation is magnified by the spread of ballistic-missile technology in the Third World.

And it underscores as well the importance of the agreement reached last week by the United States, Japan and five other industrial nations to check the transfer of technologies related to ballistic-missile design. The pact marks the first attempt to limit nuclear proliferation by controlling the hair-trigger delivery systems that make atomic weapons so threatening and destabilizing.

It is no coincidence that many of the same countries that aspire to nuclear weapons — Libya, Pakistan, India, Israel, Iraq, Brazil, Argentina — are also trying to develop tactical ballistic missiles.

The international accord, negotiated in secret during the last four years, was accepted by most of the Western countries currently capable of exporting ballistic-missile components or technologies — Britain, France, West Germany, and Italy, in addition to the United States and Japan. Other nations that already have built powerful ballistic missiles, such as the Soviet Union, China, India, and Brazil, have been invited to adopt the same controls.

At present, the United States and all of its allies are totally defenseless against nuclear warheads delivered by ballistic missiles. The potential spread of ballistic missiles among unstable Third World regimes is one more reason President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative should be pursued with vigor. It offers the only hope of intercepting nuclear missiles launched by accident or by a Third World renegade such as Gadhafi.

Managing the nuclear threat demands an array of steps, from superpower arms negotiations to strict controls on the export of nuclear materials and weapon technology. The seven-nation agreement creates a new tool to help contain the dangers of the nuclear age.

Pacemaker patients on time bomb?

WASHINGTON — In 1985, after a three-year investigation, a special Senate committee issued a report titled "Pacemakers Revisited: A Saga of Benign Neglect." Our own recent investigation shows that both the saga and the neglect continue.

The most startling discovery our reporter Lisa Sylvester made was that there is no way that someone depending on one of the sometimes life-sustaining devices can be sure of being notified if his or her pacemaker has been recalled by the manufacturer as potentially defective. Neither the manufacturer, the physician nor the federal government is legally bound to warn pacemaker patients that they could be wearing a deadly device. Manufacturers are expected to notify the doctors and hospitals who bought the devices when a model is being recalled as defective — but they're not required to.

Physicians are expected to notify their patients — but they're not required to. And the Food and Drug Administration, which regulates the multi-billion-dollar industry, isn't even expected to notify the people most concerned when a potentially deadly defect is discovered. It's not FDA policy.

"The system doesn't work that way," an FDA spokesman explained. "FDA doesn't get involved."

A recall-notification "system" that holds nobody responsible is obviously foredoomed to failure. But if proof were needed, it was dramatically provided a few months ago by Charles Stein of Orlando, Fla., who runs a non-profit watchdog group called Pacemaker Recall Data Bank.

Stein's efforts were written up last November in the American Association of Retired Persons' magazine. The results of this publicity were astonishing — and alarming. Stein's office was inundated with mail from pacemaker patients. Some of their pacemakers had been recalled by the manufacturer as long as four years ago. None of the patients had been notified that their pacemakers were even suspected of being defective.

Two thousand of those who wrote Stein were wearing a pacemaker or lead (the wire connecting the device to the heart) that had been the subject of a Class One Recall. The FDA's definition of such a recall is "a situation in which there is a reasonable probability that the use of, or exposure to, a violative product will cause serious, adverse health consequences or death."

Stein received about 5,000 additional letters from patients implanted with pacemaker leads that had been cited at a 1984 congressional hearing for having been investigated as potentially dangerous.

David Duarte of FDA's Center for Devices and Radiological Health said it is up to the manufacturer to notify physicians and hospitals of a recall, but there is no law requiring the physician to pass the word along to the patient. Asked about this, Duarte said, "Well, it's his patient."

"It just wouldn't be logical and humane to contact the patients," said Jim Merritt of the FDA's recall branch. There is "no real requirement" that doctors let their patients know, he said. The FDA, he added, "tries to hold the firms responsible for 100 percent" notification of doctors and hospitals when the agency learns of a Class One Recall of pacemakers.

But the FDA is evidently willing to settle for less. In 1985, when Cordis Corp. of Miami ordered 28,831 pacemakers recalled, the company sent out 5,197 notices to doctors and got back a 79 percent response. "The FDA was satisfied," a Cordis spokesman said, "and agreed we had gone out of our way to notify the physicians."

MONEY & THE MOB: As if federal banking officials don't have enough on their plates, a Justice Department source told us that organized crime is making a determined effort to take over banks and savings-and-loan associations. This has already led to an explosion in financial institution fraud cases — 7,000 prosecutions in 1984, involving losses of $382 million. Losses due to fraud are expected to reach $3 billion in 1987, and about eight out of 10 cases involve insiders. The FBI has never seen so many banks and thrifts go under because of ties to mobsters. More people are being assigned to these cases by the bureau.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Rustlers are still prowling the Old West, only it's irrigation water, not cattle, they're after. And the Interior Department, which should be playing Marshal Dillon, is helping the black hats soak the taxpayers. Interior officials have reversed the rules that were supposed to enforce limitations on the amount of taxpayer-subsidized water a farmer could have. Agribusiness giants will be able to evade the law by creating smaller parcels on paper and avoid the congressional limits. Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., calls it "a fraud being perpetrated on the Congress and the taxpayers." We couldn't agree more.

Another View:

Bill still falls short

It now seems certain that Congress will approve some form of legislation to guard the nation's elderly against the high cost of care for long-term illnesses.

The House Health Subcommittee has sent to the floor a bill to finance this care by raising Medicare premiums and by expanding the definition of taxable income. The latter action would mean increasing the taxes of the wealthier half of the nation's elderly.

The subcommittee's bill would allow Medicare to cover all hospital expenses, with patients paying a maximum of $520 for their care. Medicare also would provide full hospital coverage for 364 days a year, compared with 59 days now. Coverage for patients in skilled nursing facilities would be expanded to 150 days from the current maximum of 100 days.

This bill is an improvement over a catastrophic proposal by the Reagan administration, but it still falls short in many ways. First, there is likely to be much debate over the proposal to raise the taxes of elderly recipients who happen not to be poor.

Subcommittee economists estimate that 54 percent of Medicare beneficiaries would have to pay higher taxes under the bill. Second, questions certainly should be raised about the fact that the elderly — regardless of income — would be required to pay an extra $4.10 a month for physician services. Even that modest hike would impose a hardship on millions.

Nor does the bill take into account the fact that 37 million Americans under the age of 65 lack health insurance and are every bit as vulnerable to catastrophic illnesses as the elderly are. These are among the issues that ought to be addressed as the catastrophic illness bill works its way through the House and Senate.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, April 23, the 113th day of 1987. There are 252 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: April 23, 1564 is generally regarded as the birthdate of the English poet and dramatist William Shakespeare. He died on the same date 52 years later.

On this date: In 1348, King Edward III of England established the Order of the Garter.

In 1789, President-elect George Washington and his wife moved into the first executive mansion, the Franklin House, in New York.

In 1791, the 15th president of the United States, James Buchanan, was born in Franklin County, Pa.

In 1896, the "Vitascope" system for projecting movies onto a screen was demonstrated at a music hall in New York City.

In 1940, about 200 people died in a dance hall fire in Natchez, Miss.

In 1954, Hank Aaron of the Milwaukee Braves hit the first of his record 755 major-league home runs, in a game against the St. Louis Cardinals. The Braves won the game, 7-5.

In 1968, the Methodist Church and the Evangelical United Brethren Church merged in a ceremony in Dallas to form the United Methodist Church.

In 1969, Sirhan Sirhan was sentenced to death for the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy. The sentence was later reduced to life imprisonment.

In 1985, the Coca-Cola Company announced it was changing the secret flavor formula for Coke, the world's best-selling soft-drink. Adverse public reaction forced the company to resume selling the original formula.

Ten years ago: Oil well "blowout" experts flew to the North Sea to try to cap a burst pipe spreading a huge oil slick, creating major pollution.

Five years ago: For the first time in 17 years, the government reported a monthly decline in consumer prices. According to the government, the consumer price index fell a seasonally adjusted three-tenths of one percent in March.

One year ago: In New York, death claimed movie director Otto Preminger ("Laura" and "Exodus") at age 80, and composer Harold Arlen ("Get Happy," "Stormy Weather" and "Over the Rainbow") at age 81.

Today's Birthdays: Actress Janet Blair is 66. Former actress and U.S. ambassador Shirley Temple Black is 59. Fashion designer Halston is 55. Singer-songwriter Roy Orbison is 51. Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, is 49. Actor David Birney is 48. Actor Lee Majors is 47. Actress Sandra Dee is 45. Actor Herve Villechaise is 44. Irish nationalist Bernadette Devlin McAliskey is 40. Actress Joyce DeWitt is 38. Actress Valerie Bertinelli is 27.

Thought for Today: "...We are such stuff/As dreams are made on, and our little life/Is rounded with a sleep." — From the play "The Tempest," by William Shakespeare (1564-1616).

'Zero option' enhances Alaskan basing idea

WASHINGTON — Arms-control fever, a malady that often causes summit dementia, is raging in the nation's capital. So, in an attempt to lower the temperature, the Reagan administration should think about Alaska. The reason for doing so takes us back to last October's outbreak of the malady and the dementia.

James Schlesinger's scathing assessment of the Reykjavik summit (as ill-conceived as the 1961 Vienna summit, the worst outcome since the blow-up of the 1960 Paris summit, the most utopian expectations since Yalta, 1945) is illustrated by, among other things, this: At Reykjavik, President Reagan, on the spur of the moment, accepted Gorbachev's proposal that the "zero option" be not quite zero.

Gorbachev's idea is that both sides withdraw their longer-range intermediate forces (INF — the U.S. Pershing II and cruise missiles, the Soviet SS-20s), but that each side keep launchers for 100 warheads in their own territory, with the Soviet 100 being in Asia, meaning east of the Ural.

As long as even a small force is licensed, the Soviet Union will be licensed to maintain production lines, testing and training of crews. These functions pose two problems. First, they would provide an infrastructure for a rapid expansion of INF forces if the Soviet Union decides suddenly to break out of an agreement. Second and more important, those functions also would complicate verification of any agreement because they would enable the Soviets to expand their capabilities under the guise of maintaining their residual force. That is no minor matter when dealing with a regime that has the Soviet record of noncompliance with agreements.

Assume, as it probably is wise to do, given the fever, that the United States is unwilling to insist that any INF agreement achieve zero, world wide. On that assumption, it is necessary for the United States to deploy its 100 in Alaska. From there, they would be able to strike serious Soviet military targets. However, the reason for deploying them there is political as well as military.

On ABC, Nitze said: "It is important for us not to give up the right to have them in Alaska, and we have not. And we've insisted on that. And we never did agree at Reykjavik that they wouldn't be in Alaska, and we didn't agree in Moscow that they wouldn't be in Alaska. So there is this difference between the two sides with respect to Alaska which exists today."

Nitze's somewhat oblique formulation, and the echoing absence of any stated intention to put the 100 in Alaska, may be explained by anxiety about Alaskan opinion. Remember the successful resistance (from all those conservative people) out there in Reagan Country when there was talk of basing the MX missile on "racetracks" in Nevada.

One reason the United States should nevertheless put its 100 in Alaska was made clear when, also on ABC, Viktor Karpov, the Soviet arms negotiator, was asked if the Soviet Union would object to that. He said, "Yes, sure" and added: "You see the situation now is that no medium-range missiles of the Soviet Union are deployed in a way to reach United States territory, even Alaska."

Karpov is off the point. In fact, he is off several points. One is that the Soviet 100 in East Asia would have a political-military mission, as the Japanese, Chinese and Koreans can attest. If the U.S. 100 are anywhere in the United States other than Alaska, they would have no mission.

However, the more important point is this: Soviet SS-20s could be deployed east of the Urals and still be able to strike Europe as deep as London. So under the agreement, SS-20s could strike the territory of NATO allies. And the linchpin of NATO is the doctrine that the United States would regard an attack on any NATO ally as an attack on the United States.

Therefore, if the United States were to accept the Soviet impertinence of dictating where in the United States the U.S. 100 can be, the United States would further weaken the already tenuous "coupling" of Europe and the United States. It would be folly to further advance the Soviet goal of "decoupling" by allowing the Soviet Union to establish the principle that there is a fundamental difference between their being able to strike NATO territory with their 100 and the United States being able to strike Soviet territory with the U.S. 100.

If the President can not achieve zero, worldwide, he at least must deploy the residual force on the real estate we bought from Russia.

ART BUCHWALD

Trouble starts when the beds aren't made!

Time magazine devoted a recent cover to the breakdown of service in the United States. Nobody seems to be able to get anyone to help them anymore.

"There is a simple reason for this," Frankie Melnick told me as we stood in line at the airport watching an airline attendant take 32 minutes to prepare one luggage tag.

"What is that?"

"All the trouble started a generation ago when the youth of America were permitted to grow up without making their beds."

"Why did we allow it?"

Melnick said, "It had to do with the wars. Men went off to fight and when they were asked what they were fighting for they couldn't think of anything so they said, 'I am fighting so my children will never have to clean up their rooms again. Our kids are going to become doctors and lawyers and investment bankers, and paid-up members of the Democratic and Republican parties, and they are not going to be distracted by household chores.'"

"I recall saying the same thing to my kids," I said as we inched slowly toward the ticket counter. "I remember years ago holding one of my children in my arms and saying to him, 'I will see to it that you will never have to stoop over your your clothes as long as you live. I kept that vow — or let's say my son kept it for me. Whenever his mother or I yelled at him he replied, 'If I have to think about my room I won't have time to think about the human condition.'"

"We did it because we thought we loved them," said Melnick. "The message we sent out was 'When you lie down in your bed, there is always a dear person in your life who will make it up for you. This is not because that person necessarily loves you, but she can't stand walking by every day looking at your room.'"

"So you think," I asked, "that service has broken down in the United States since we let the kids have a free ride in their bedrooms?"

Melnick said, "You could make a case for it. The non-bed-makers are screwing up the entire government because they never used a laundry hamper. The retail business is filled with people who spent their childhood dumping their pants and skirts on the floor. There are millions of men and women in their prime who have never figured out what to do with a hanger."

We moved up a foot in line. "I assume that attendant trying to issue an airline ticket never had to make up his bed."

"It's worse than that," Melnick said. "The pilot of our plane didn't have to either."

I told Melnick, "I'm happy to say that we have been very strict parents in our family. Neither my wife nor I will tolerate a dirty room."

"How do you do it?" Melnick asked.

"We make the kids keep their doors closed so we can't see what is on the other side."

The man standing behind us said, "You don't necessarily have to be neat to do well in your profession. My son is a surgeon and he never made a bed in his life."

"Who adjusts the sheets for him before he operates?"

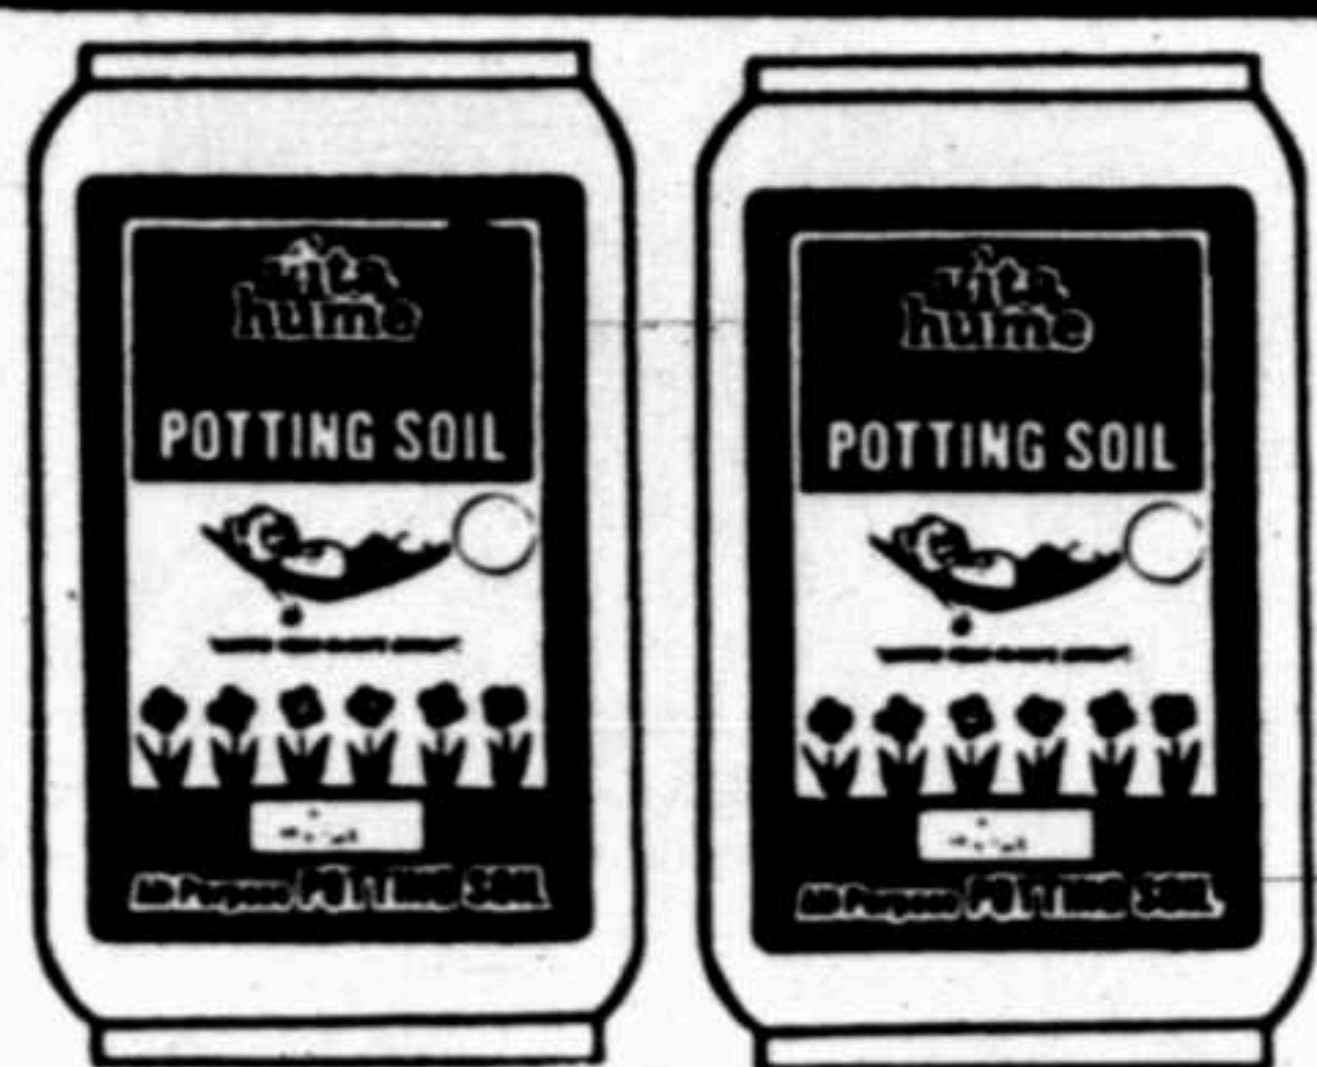

"His mother."

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Garza, Andrews, DeWitt, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight, partly cloudy with low near 50. Wind southeast 5 to 15 mph. Friday, partly cloudy and warmer with high near 80. Wind southeast 10 to 15 mph.

Warmer weather is anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for partly cloudy skies and warmer temperatures for Friday. The high should be near the 80-degree mark. Winds will be out of the southeast at 10-15 mph.

Tonight, with winds out of the southeast at five to 15 mph, the low will be near 50 degrees. Skies will be partly cloudy.

Wednesday's high of 65 was 31 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1965. Today's low, recorded at 6 a.m., was 12 degrees above the record low of 37 set for this date in 1944.

STATE

Scattered light rain fell over deep South Texas early today. The National Weather Service said the precipitation was caused by weakening upper level low pressure system over Mexico.

This low pressure system also caused mostly cloudy skies over the southern part of the state. High pressure at the surface over the south central United States produced generally clear skies over the rest of Texas.

The wind over the state was generally light, around 5 mph, and from variable directions.

Overnight temperatures ranged from 42 at Marfa to 66 at Galveston, Beeville and Kingsville. Readings were generally in the 50s over North Texas and the 60s across South Texas.

NATION

Rain and thunderstorms dotted the Midwest today but fair weather prevailed elsewhere across the nation.

Light rain spread from Iowa across northern Illinois and Wisconsin into Michigan. A line of showers and thundershowers extended from western Ohio into eastern Kentucky.

Dry weather with seasonable temperatures dominated elsewhere, although a few showers dotted the northern plateau region and fog and drizzle lingered along the middle Atlantic Coast early today.

Today's forecast called for rain from the lower Great Lakes across the upper Ohio Valley and the Appalachians; thundershowers scattered over Alabama and the Florida Panhandle; light rain scattered across Illinois, Indiana and lower Michigan; and rain scattered over south Texas.

County personnel may have to be cutBy RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

County commissioners may have to cut the budgetary bone with personnel or salary reductions this year if they decide to absorb a predicted 8 percent tax-base decline and not raise taxes, according to the county auditor.

"If the tax base decreases again this year...and the county absorbs the decrease...as we did last year, we would be faced with a very probable reduction in personnel or salaries," said County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin.

A reduction in personnel will mean a concurrent drop in county services, he predicted.

The commissioners are not going to be as lucky this year as last, when they were able to assimilate — without a tax increase or noticeable effect in services — an 11 percent decrease in the tax base from $5.12 billion to $4.6 billion.

The four-month county budgeting process begins within the next few weeks when Jarnagin issues memos to the 25 department heads requesting budget proposals, he said.

Directors from two of the county's three largest departments said that putting together next year's budget will be a difficult.

"It's going to be very tough," said Library Director John Deats, who added that he will search for about $86,000 extra to run the department's Midland Park Mall branch library.

For the past two years, the facility has been drawing operating expenses from a special fund. The fund — set up out of a Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. settlement stemming from the October 1983 failure of the First National Bank of Midland — will run out next February, Deats said.

Monies to keep the branch open must be found without hurting the main library's current $813,000 operating budget, he said.

Deats hopes the branch library will not have to be shut down.

"Our board feels there is an extremely strong case for keeping it open," said Deats of the branch that accounts for about 22 percent of overall library circulation.

"It'd be a shame to close it down, not for a lack of interest or use, but because of budgetary reasons," he said.

The sheriff's office, which — with 79 employees — is the largest county department, also is faced with a difficult budget planning session, Sheriff Gary Painter said.

"It will be hard putting it (the budget) together without asking for an increase, but we can do it," he said. "But if we cut anymore we'll be cutting services to the citizens."

Painter said his department needs more cars, but will try to stretch out the lives of its older vehicles.

Road and Bridge Department Director Albert Stewart said he doesn't expect any problems in tightening his budget for the second consecutive year.

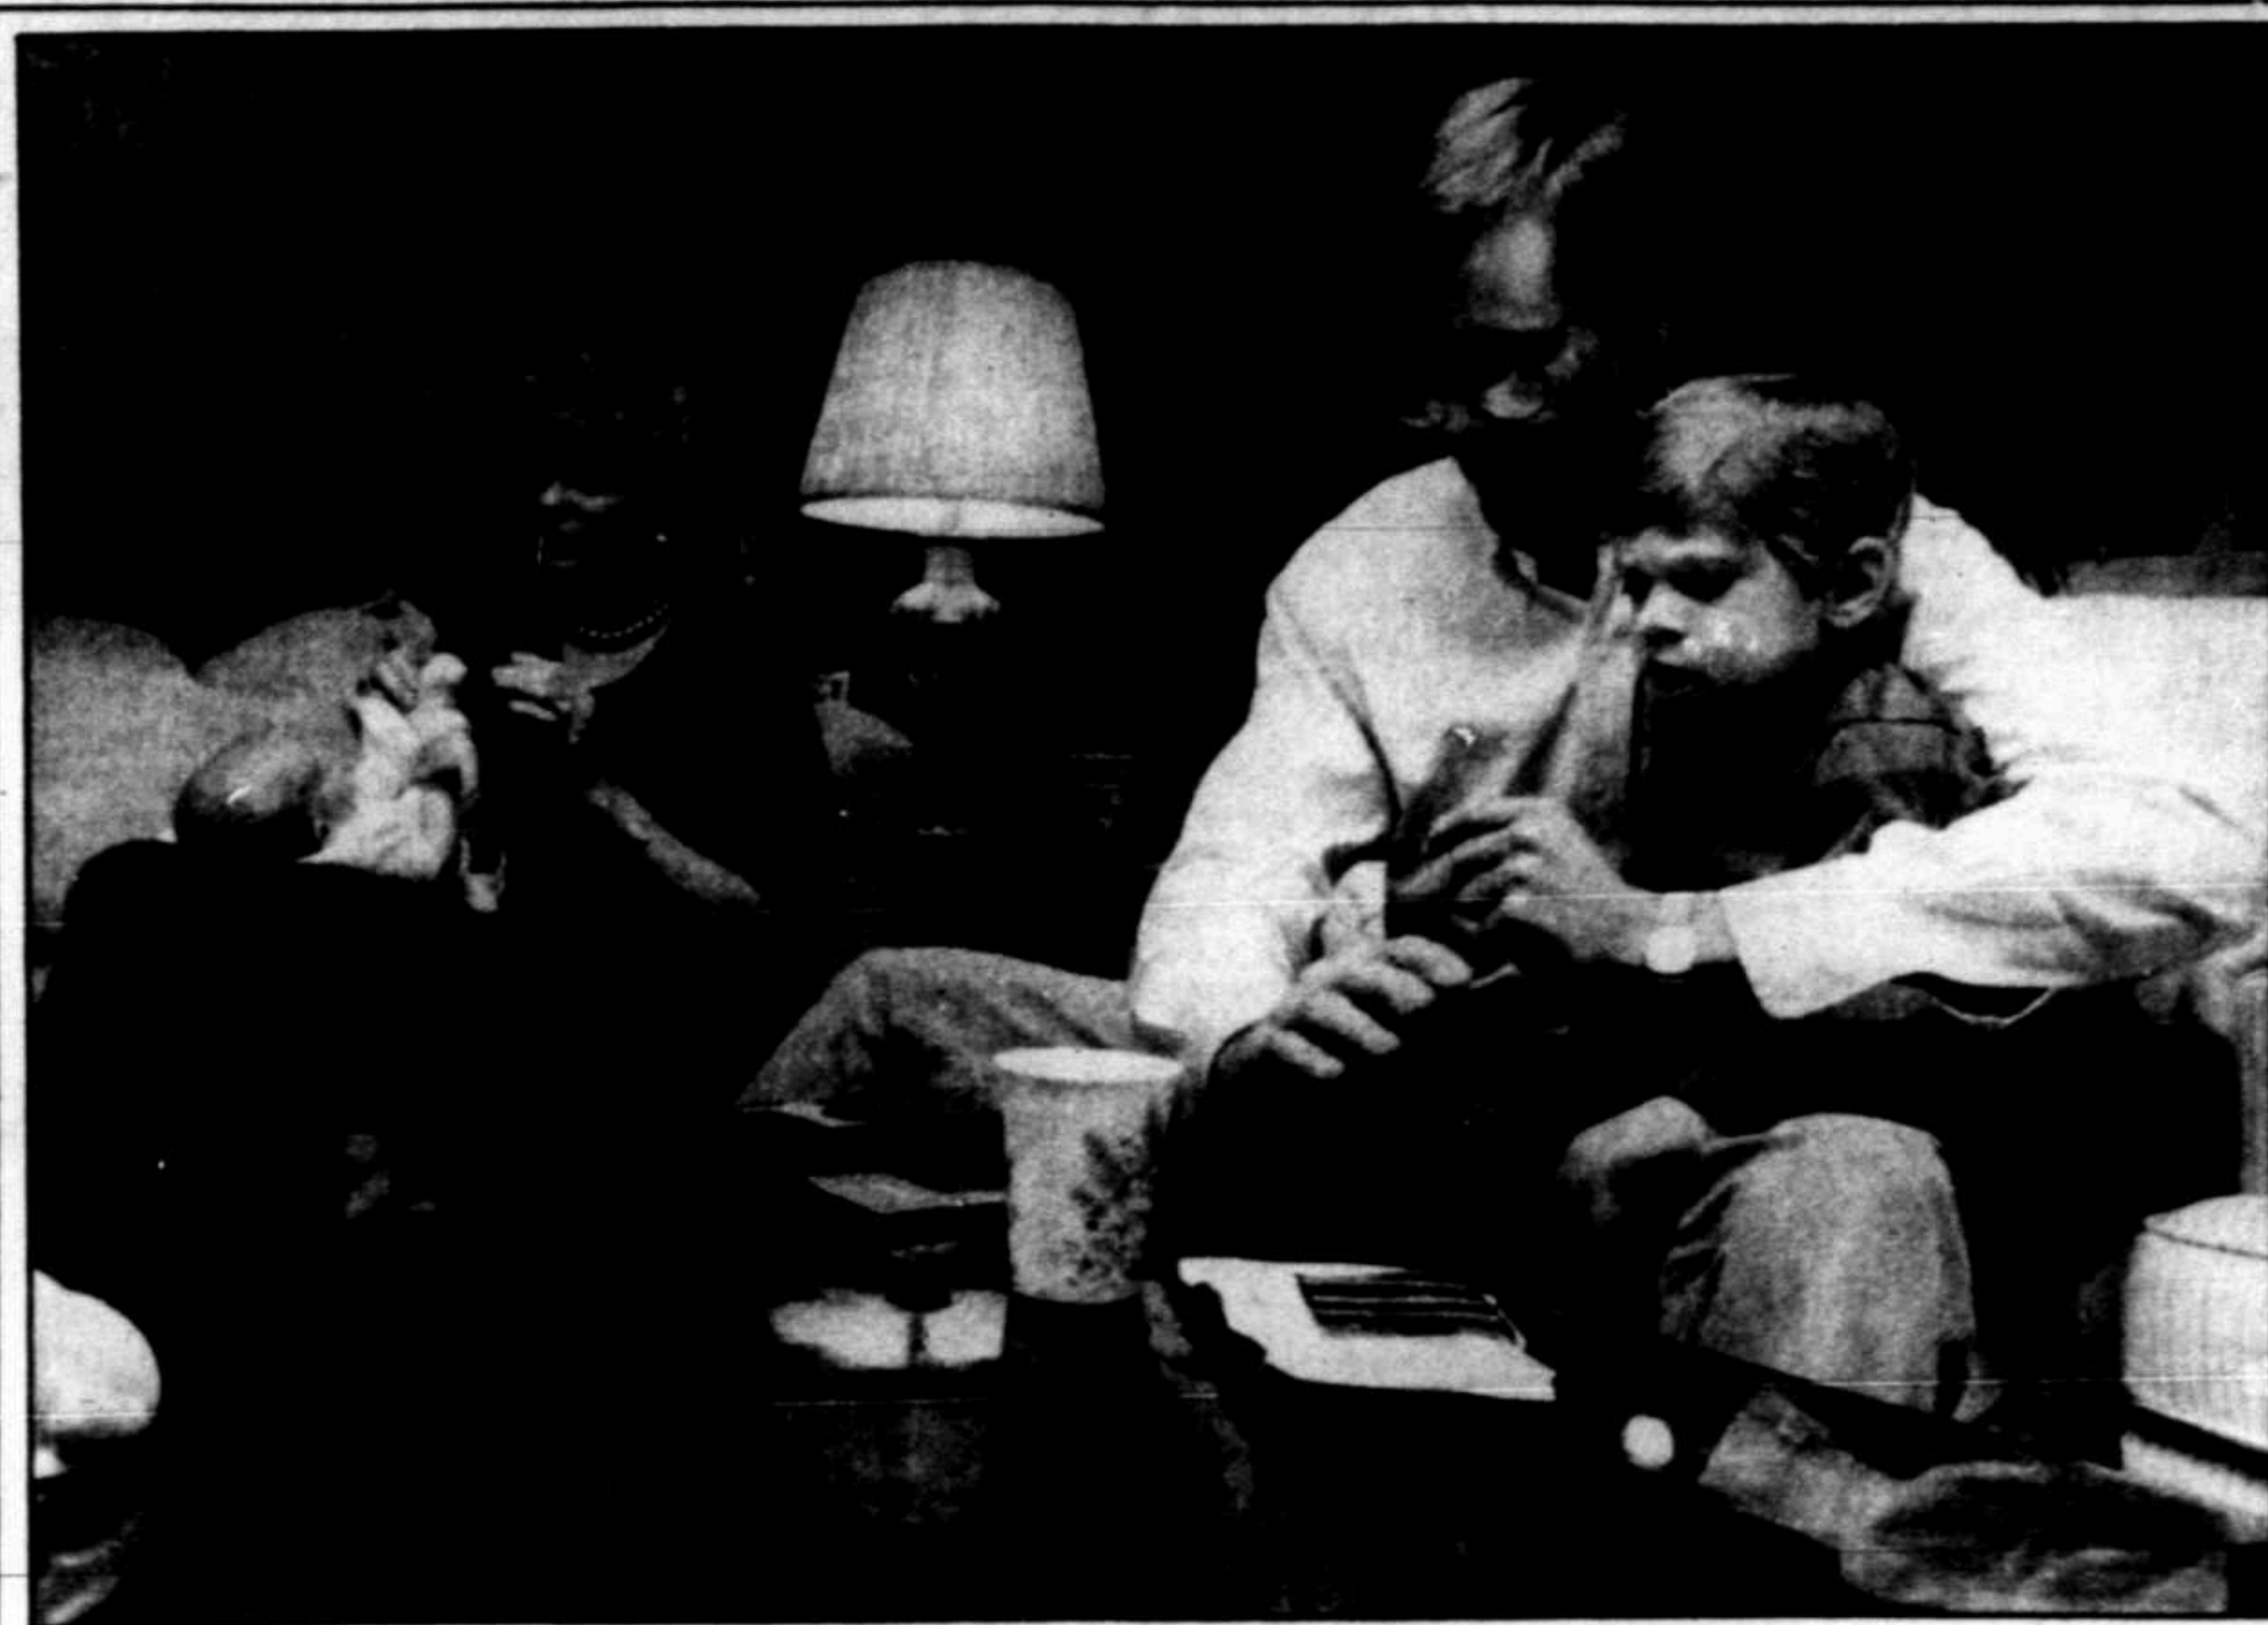

"We have gotten along fairly well with what they set for us this year," Stewart said.

By late May or early June the department heads will go before the Commissioners Court to justify their budgets, Jarnagin said.

After the individual budgets are presented to the court, Jarnagin then will estimate what funds the county can bring in from property taxes and fees.

Jarnagin will set up three separate tax rate "scenarios" based on his prediction of Midland County property values.

MISD board says taxes may have to be increasedBy JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland school trustees painted a grim financial picture for taxpayers attending Wednesday's budget workshop. If the economy doesn't turn around soon, several claimed that even severe budget cuts may not keep them from having to seek a sizeable increase in tax revenues.

Although final figures won't be agreed upon for several months, trustees examined areas of the Midland Independent School District budget which may be subject to cuts. Those areas include programs, staffing, utilities, insurance, supplies, travel and capital outlay.

Board members also studied the current tax rate, cost per student, reserves, tax levy and homestead exemption during the three-hour session, with four members of the public in attendance.

"I don't think we ought to eliminate the programs we already have in place," Mike Conaway told fellow trustees.

Fred Newman also called on the board to adopt the philosophy of maintaining present programs, but urged the trustees to move cautiously on budget matters.

"After we find out what state funding and what the local tax levy is going to be, then we can all belly up to the bar and talk about how we're going to make sure we have the best quality of education in Midland," he said.

Only Betsy Robinson advocated "spending money to save money."

She said Midlanders could live with a 10-cent increase in taxes — her proposal to implement a mentoring program for teachers, hire coordinators for guidance and counseling and computer software, install security systems in the secondary school libraries and raise starting teacher salaries from $19,000 to $20,500.

Many of these would "eventually pay for themselves," she said.

Last year trustees carved $53,000 from the previous year's budget and raised taxes by 4 percent to 79.9 cents per $100 valuation.

The 1986-87 budget included cuts of more than $1 million in payroll costs and fringe benefits to compensate for an average 4 percent increase in teacher salaries.

Expenditures for capital outlay also were down $368,000 and MISD spent $55,000 less on supplies and materials despite an increase in enrollment.

Board President Bill Jackson said MISD may not escape further cuts this fiscal year and instructed the staff to study programs that may be consolidated rather than being eliminated.

"I wonder how much money we might save by grouping some of these programs?" he asked.

The president also called on the staff to study the district's vocational program, class enrollments, transportation, maintenance and custodial staffing, and energy and travel costs.

Christopher Martin Davidson was just 23 months old when what his parents and pediatrician believed to be a mysterious virus took over most of his body's vital organs. After hospital stays in Dallas and Midland, they all believed the malady had been cured.

One month later, Chris, now 6 years old, was diagnosed with Type 1 or insulin-dependent diabetes, which is also called juvenile diabetes. Chris' pancreas — the organ in the body that produces insulin — had been damaged by the virus.

It took Kay Vandiver on the other hand, 23 years to develop the same kind of diabetic condition. Mrs. Vandiver displayed all the classic symptoms of Type 1 diabetes — thirst, hunger and frequent urination, she said.

Working as a dental hygienist at the time of her diagnosis, Mrs. Vandiver, 34, always shunned foods with high sugar contents, she said. Her family displayed no history of the disease; it was just one of those things, she remembered.

FAA reports near-collision between aircraft near Midland

From Staff and Wire Reports

While the Federal Aviation Administration contends the number of near-collisions, including one near Midland, is a poor barometer of air-line safety, a rash of such reports by commercial pilots is raising new questions about safety in the skies.

The FAA confirmed Wednesday that within about a two-hour period at dusk Sunday three jetliner pilots had close calls with smaller planes in Texas and California. In each of the incidents, based on preliminary reports, the pilots said the other plane came within 500 feet.

David Gibson, air traffic manager at the Midland Airport Traffic Control Tower, said this morning he would release a statement about the near-collision later today.

Gibson was unable to provide any other details about Sunday's event involving a Southwest Airlines Boeing 737 descending toward Midland. The pilot reported he had to suddenly climb to pass over an unknown private plane, clearing the aircraft by 200 to 300 feet.

A controller advised the Southwest pilot of traffic "at 12 o'clock" — or straight ahead — when the two planes were about a mile apart, and the pilot acknowledged he had the other plane in sight.

Nevertheless, the Southwest pilot reported he had to momentarily abandon his descent and climb, as the smaller plane passed 200 to 300 feet below the Boeing 737. FAA spokesman Steven Hayes said that the smaller plane was flying under visual flight rules and that such traffic advisories are provided pilots as workload permits.

The incidents occurred less than a week after it was revealed that the pilots of four jetliners reported similar encounters with smaller aircraft on April 10. Last year there was an average less than one such incident a day.

Hayes said Sunday's reports are not necessarily unusual. He criticized disclosure of the pilot reports, which became known Wednesday when alluded to by the chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board in a speech in Chicago.

NTSB Chairman Jim Burnett, who provided no details of the incidents, charged that the FAA "is either underestimating the seriousness of the problem...or lacks the courage or capability" to deal with air traffic control shortcomings.

Burnett in the past has urged the FAA to maintain tight controls on the number of aircraft allowed into the air until the air traffic controller workforce is more seasoned and expanded.

FAA officials, meanwhile, attempted Wednesday to play down the significance of the three near-collision reports stemming from the incidents Sunday and April 10. Agency officials also argued most near-collisions involve at least one plane flying under visual flight rules outside the direct responsibility of air traffic controllers.

"Only in aviation do you see people counting near-accidents," FAA Administrator Donald Engen told reporters Wednesday, hours before the three Sunday incidents became public. He described a near-collision as a "non-event" that "we look at critically" but is no indicator of the likelihood of an actual collision.

Some aviation safety experts, including members of the NTSB and leaders of aviation-related committees in Congress, have argued that near-collisions give a clear indication of the air traffic control system.

Street commission seeks input

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

A governmental body's invitation for citizen objections might be an unusual event, but that's exactly what City Street Commission members are hoping to hear during a Monday public hearing on reconstruction of Wadley Avenue.

Commission spokesman Conrad Coleman said Wednesday that the hearing is scheduled for 7 to 9 p.m. at Theatre Midland for residents and business owners along Wadley between I and Garfield streets, the half-mile stretch up for reconstruction.

"We'd like to hear their objections so that they feel they have a pipeline to the City Council," said Coleman, who pledged that the comments in turn would be relayed to the council prior to construction start.

"This is a first to my knowledge — the first time they've had a public hearing on something like this in advance of it," Coleman said.

Overpass construction planned for Texas 191

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The state's budget crunch will apparently not stand in the way of improvements to a main highway link between Midland and Odessa.

Contracts for construction of two overpasses on Texas 191 in Midland County are scheduled to be let by the Department of Highways and Public Transportation in July and September of this year, Richard Phillips, a highway department spokesman in the Odessa office, said Wednesday.

The contract for the overpass at Loop 250, Texas 191-158 will be let for bids in July and construction will get under way within 60 days after the contract is awarded. Construction cost of the Loop 250 overpass will be about $4 million.

The contract that will put an overpass over the intersection of County Road 1788 and Texas 191 will be put out for bids in September, with construction to begin around the end of November. Cost of construction is set at about $3.75 million, according to Fred Nelly, highway department engineering specialist.

The County Road 1788 contract will include widening the road from two to four lanes from near the entrance to Midland Regional Airport.

The two overpasses and 1788 widening, Nelly said, are part of the highway department's 10-year plan. The two projects will each require about 18 months to complete.

When Texas 191 was planned and constructed, Nelly said, two additional overpasses were planned for construction in Midland County, between Loop 250 and 1788, and at least two in Ector County, at East Loop 338 and the entrance to Mission Dorado.

However, no additional construction on Texas 191 is in the current 10-year plan, he said, that the other overpasses will be built as traffic demands require.

Nelly said traffic on 191 has remained fairly constant, about 8,000 to 10,000 vehicles per day since it was opened nearly three years ago.

According to Nelly, construction won't interfere greatly with traffic and it won't be necessary to divert traffic except when pillars are being set.

Cattle inspector's reputation survives even though he's gone

There's a quality that endures beyond the grave and ultimately is far more important than gold and other riches which "you can't take with you."

Reputation. Old-timers, especially in West Texas, respect and breathe it.

One fellow who carried his reputation well was an old cowboy-type named Howard McDaniel.

"He was a gentleman's gentleman," Martin County Sheriff Dan Saunders said of his old friend, who was an inspector for the Texas &

Todd

Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association. "If he told you something, you didn't need a lawyer or a notary public," said the sheriff. "You didn't have to write it down and put it in a safe-deposit box. His word was all you needed."

Word has it that McDaniel was the type of fellow with whom you could do business — in these modern times — on a handshake and the spoken word as in the days "back when."

"He was a fine fellow who respected the rights of others and their opinions whether he agreed with you or not," Saunders said.

The hearty McDaniel was tall and impressive, and, said the sheriff, he "was well respected by ranchers and peace officers. He was very stately. If you had built him with a hammer, you wouldn't hit him another lick."

As an inspector, McDaniel was a special Texas Ranger who tracked down rustlers and stolen cattle, saddles and tack, ranch equipment taken by pilfers. His was a job out of the Old West.

"He was the kind of fellow everybody liked to see coming whether you were working cattle or if he just came by to visit a friend," said Don C. King, secretary-general manager of the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, which has 32 (minus one) inspectors who serve 14,000 ranchers in Texas and Oklahoma. McDaniel, who worked out of Midland, had been with the 1877-founded association for 23 years.

McDaniel too soon, it seems, died at age 66 a few days ago.

"He was just a top cowboy, top cowman, top officer, and just a top fellow all the way around," said King. "He had a gentle way of handling things, and even thieves he arrested respected him. He was highly respected by his peers."

McDaniel was a "quiet-spoken fellow" who wore "kind of a half smile."

"You always felt a little better every time you visited with Howard," King said. "He was the kind of fellow who made you feel better. He bought a little sunshine. He was an excellent inspector."

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter recalls McDaniel as the "kind of individual who when he told you something, it was true. If you needed help, he was always around. It was a hard funeral to go to."

The sheriff said that if a fellow officer ever wanted a partner to work with, McDaniel "would be the man to work with."

Old-time cowpuncher C.M. Edwards, who knew McDaniel well, said, "You could have never met a better fellow" than McDaniel. "He was good lawman, but he was for the people, too. I worked with him quite a bit. He was a good cowboy. He was a good roper and brander."

McDaniel, who was born and bred in ranch country, ranched, and in addition to working for Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, he worked several years for the American Quarter Horse Association. For a spell, he was a deputy sheriff for his friend, long-time Midland County Sheriff Ed "Big Ed" Darnell, after he had opposed Darnell in a sheriff's race in 1980.

"Once he got acquainted with you," Edwards recalled, "he knew you every time. He was a nice, nice fellow."

His reputation is something to be cherished.

"Whatever anybody says good about Howard McDaniel, that's the way it was," said Edwards, who had known McDaniel since the 1940s. "I don't believe I ever heard anyone say a bad word against him. He was liked by everybody that knew him."

James W. "Jim" Strawn, 61, of Midland died Wednesday afternoon at a local hospital. Services will be Friday, 3:30 p.m., at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. A.L. Hall, a retired Baptist minister, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park. Strawn was born Aug. 13, 1925 in Lubbock. He attended Lubbock High School. He was captain of his football team in 1942 and graduated in 1943. He joined the U.S. Navy during World War II. Upon receiving his discharge, he returned to Lubbock and was an apprentice machinist. He moved to Midland in 1946 and established Jim Strawn Machine Shop on West Wall. He later moved to Florida Street and enlarged his operation to include automobile parts and machine shop. The company name was changed at that time to Strawn Industrial & Supply and Strawn Petroleum Company. He was also an independent oil operator. Strawn was a member of the First Baptist Church and the Founder's Club. Survivors include his wife, Dorothy I. Strawn; one son, David Jones of Odessa; five daughters, Sheila Strawn Brown of Houston, Debbie Strawn Peters of Cleburne, Muriel Strawn Ney of San Angelo, Elizabeth Strawn of Austin, and Lola Strawn of Lubbock; three sisters, Mava Ferguson and Dorothy Pate, both of Lubbock and De Ann Hendricks of Goodwill, Okla.; and eight grandchildren.

DIABETES

According to the National Center for Health Statistics, the life expectancy of diabetes patients like Chris and Mrs. Vandiver at diagnosis is one-third less than for a person without the disease. And the threat of complications — heart disease, kidney, blindness, stroke and nerve damage — tend to lead those afflicted and their family members to less-than-optimistic views of the future. At 8 a.m. May 2 — a Saturday — the Midland chapter of the American Diabetes Association will sponsor the first annual John J. Redfern Jr. "Memorial Bike Ride Plus" at Midland College and Greentree Country Club.

One can choose from three distances in the bike ride — a 1.1-mile loop around the college; a 4-mile distance around the Greentree "loop"; and a 15-mile distance to Greentree from the college and back again, said one of the event's organizers, Steve Davidson.

The money will be raised from pledges the riders collect, said Davidson, Chris' father.

The kind of diabetes diagnosed in Chris and Mrs. Vandiver usually occurs in children and young adults and is characterized by the absence of insulin in the body, Davidson said.

Persons with Type I diabetes must rely upon daily insulin injections for survival and must monitor their blood sugar levels daily as well, he said.

Diabetes is characterized by an excess of sugar in the blood and urine. It is an incurable disease that affects the way the body utilizes energy. It disrupts the body's ability to produce or properly use insulin, the hormone originating in the pancreas that converts sugar (glucose) and starches into energy.

Another strain of diabetes — Type II or non-insulin dependent — usually occurs in later life. Ninety percent of all diabetes are diagnosed with this second malady. The disease usually strikes people over the age of 35 who are overweight. While insulin may be prescribed in a few of the Type II cases, the disease usually is controlled through diet and exercise.

Both Davidson and Mrs. Vandiver say the bottom line when speaking about diabetes is that insulin is a treatment and not a cure. A life-threatening situation can arise at any moment, they said.

Mrs. Vandiver recalled one such event that occurred last June, when she went into shock while driving home from work on Loop 250. Her blood sugar level had dropped to dangerously low level.

Paramedics told her later as she was coming to in the back of an ambulance, she had miraculously pulled her car over to the side of the road. She said they found her totally incoherent; a condition very characteristic of an attack of that nature.

In the hospital, doctors got her blood sugar level back to a normal level and she was fine...until the next time.

Davidson remembers a time the family, his wife Jan and Chris, was all at home in various parts of the house doing different things.

The father remembers he had gone to take the trash out to the alley behind the house. Chris was playing happily on the back patio.

Upon return, Davidson found his son passed out on the ground, a victim of a low blood sugar attack. The condition was brought under control within minutes, the father said, but highlights the occurrence as an "average" day in the life of a diabetic.

Because insulin, discovered in the 1921, can do no more than help regulate blood sugar levels — a less-than-perfect imitation of what the pancreas is supposed to do — one may think hope is dim.

Yet strides are being made. In rare cases, at least for now, pancreatic transplants are a partial answer. Researchers look for a cure for the disease by investigating its viral aspects and possible genetic origins, said Jan Davidson, Chris' mother.

Experts say that treatments for diabetes Treatment have improved greatly.

The development of home blood glucose monitors enables patients to quickly and accurately check their blood sugar levels. Using the meter enables patients to adjust their insulin dosage to maintain better control.

In addition, insulin pumps have been developed that constantly infuse small amounts of insulin into the body to approximate the action of the pancreas.

Still, diabetics' lives are a case study in routine and discipline, both Mrs. Vandiver and the Davidsons agree: No sugars or starches; everything eaten at a designated time.

Translated, it means Chris can't eat birthday cake on his seventh birthday. Mrs. Vandiver has to find something she can eat, when her dinner partners are "pigging out" on Mexican food.

But both families hope research, financed by donations and benefits such as the May 2 bike ride, will lead to a cure. Proceeds from the John J. Redfern Jr. Memorial Bike Ride, which Davidson said should be at least $3,000 considering there are about 150 riders, will go to the state office of the American Diabetes Association (ADA).

For people wanting to join in the fun — and help those like Chris and Mrs. Vandiver — sponsor sheets are available at the ADA office at 2209 N. Big Spring, Suite J.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Medicare seminar planned

From Staff Reports

"Medicare Benefits for Older Americans," a free seminar sponsored by Midland Memorial Hospital, is scheduled for Saturday, May 9, from 9 a.m. to noon at MMH's Health Science Auditorium.

Designed to provide insight into the Medicare program and its recent changes, the seminar will cover topics such as an overview of benefits, what to expect should one enter the hospital, an update on pending legislation regarding catastrophic illnesses and medical services available in the home. The speakers are locally recognized experts in their fields, including registered nurses with many years experience in home health and nursing homes, representatives of Arthur Anderson & Co. (a national accounting firm) and MMH financial experts.

Parking has been reserved for participants in the northeast parking area bordered by "N" Street and Ohio Avenue. Registration is limited to the first 50 individuals who call to sign up in order to facilitate discussion. Early registration is encouraged to ensure a space.

To register, and for more information, please contact Sheri Phillips, MMH, at 685-1504 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Toastmasters to meet

From Staff Reports

The Midland-Odessa Toastmasters Clubs will be hosting the District 44 Spring Conference Friday and Saturday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa in Midland.

Clubs from San Angelo, Lubbock, Abilene, Big Spring and Andrews in addition to Midland and Odessa will attend.

Toastmasters International is a worldwide non-profit educational organization devoted to the improvement and development of individual communication and leadership skills.

Among the activities on tap during the conference will be the International and Tall Tales Speech Contest. Additionally, there will be educational programs for those in attendance.

Main speaker will be Mary Margaret Doykendoff, international director for Toastmasters from Phoenix, Ariz.

During the conference, former Midland mayor Thane Atkins will be honored with a special recognition of his past community involvement. The general public is invited.

Freddy Fender to perform

From Staff Reports

Freddy Fender will perform Friday at Crown Royal Club, 1110 Scharbauer Drive.

The dance, which features Willie and the Continentals, begins at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $10 in advance and $12.50 at the door. For more information call 684-7775 or 1-337-9248.

Joe Golding asked administrators to present a report of state revenue losses that may be passed on to the district next year.

According to a Legislative Budget Board analysis, MISD could lose almost $1.3 million in state aid under Gov. Bill Clements' proposed budget.

The analysis takes into account the cap Clements proposed to cover growing enrollment, changes in the career ladder for teachers, vocational education funding and a new formula for figuring bank taxes.

The document maintains that MISD would lose $67 in state aid per student for the 1967-68 school year. With almost 19,000 students, the cut would cost the district $1.27 million and force a 4 percent local property tax increase to cover that much in losses.

Bill would establish judges' campaign fund

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Appellate judges could receive campaign money from the state by refusing to accept private contributions under a bill a House panel considered Wednesday.

The plan would set up a Judicial Campaign Fund with money generated from increased court costs and would distribute the money to appellate court candidates who agree to participate in the public financing system.

The House Elections Committee sent the bill to subcommittee.

Several judicial reform bills are floating around in House and Senate committees. The so-called merit selection bill calls for the appointment of appellate judges, partly to stem the flow of special interest money into judicial races.

Sponsors say expensive judicial races payed for by special interests or lawyers who regularly practice before those judges taint the system and give the appearance of impropriety.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen and sponsor of the measure, said the public-finance method usually would eliminate any appearances of conflicts of interests. The courts have ruled that laws restricting the amount of money a candidate can spend are unconstitutional unless the race involves some type of public financing.

Schlueter proposes total public financing of all appellate candidates in the general election with a $500,000 limit. A candidate could choose to opt out of the public-finance system, but would be limited in raising money to $250 per contributor with no political action committee donations allowed.

In primary races, appellate candidates could receive personal donations of $250 until the beginning of March, about a week before the primary. Then candidates for chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court could receive $250,000 from the state, and all other appellate contenders could get $150,000 from the state fund for the primary.

The steep increase he proposes in certain court fees, Schlueter said, will be worth it compared to the integrity added to the system.

John Hildreth, executive director of Common Cause of Texas, a group that has long advocated public financing for many elections, said Schlueter's plan would limit special interest money in judicial races while still giving citizens the right to vote in those races.

COUNTY

An estimated tax value on local property will be set May 15, said Roland Wilkinson, Chief Appraiser of the Midland Central Appraisal District.

In line with county predictions, Wilkinson has estimated that the hospital and school districts also face an up to 8 percent decline in their tax bases.

The city faces an almost 6 percent decrease in its tax base, he said. The drop is lower for the city because of a lesser number of mineral interests.

"We'll continue to see some decline, but it will not nearly be as precipitous as the decline in the '66 tax roll," Wilkinson said. "I believe we've seen the worst."

House panel agrees on bilingual education funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee settled on funding for primary and secondary bilingual education programs in the coming year with a compromise that projects funding to current programs but allows for expansion.

Wednesday's agreement in the Education and Labor Committee calls for funding of traditional bilingual programs at 1987 levels, but would allow any additional funding for fiscal 1988 to be divided more freely between traditional and alternative programs.

Education Secretary William Bennett has said that if the committee increased the cap on alternative funding, the administration would request an additional $24 million in bilingual education funding.

CAMPUS CHATTER

Showcase being planned

By KELLY DODSON

Hey, all you Bulldog fans, it's that time again. Hope all of you had a fantastic Easter. That four-day weekend really helped.

Since we're in the last six weeks of the year (yea), things are getting busy. On Friday, San Jacinto will have a dance from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Midland Youth Center. Sounds like fun. On Sunday, the MHS Class of '77 Reunion committee will have a meeting from 3:5 p.m. at the MYC. On Saturday, May 2, the Junior Assembly "Catch a Wave" dance will be held at from 8-11 p.m.

The biggest project right now at MHS is Showcase '87. Showcase is sophomore orientation. Every organization and club will have a display. It's really fun and something that should not be missed. It will be Monday night, May 4. Any donations can be sent to the school and will be greatly appreciated.

It is that time of the year again. The nervousness and butterflies are back. It is election time.

Cheerleader tryouts and student council office elections are slated for today. Good luck to all the candidates.

The track season ended this past Saturday. We are really excited for a bunch of our track stars. They did a great job this year.

The baseball team is still going strong. We are still in the district race so show your support. Come to the games.

We'd like to wish some of our famous Bulldogs a happy birthday, including Mr. Kelly, Tricia Linehan Golding and Doc Dodson. We won't tell their ages.

Don't forget these important happenings. Until next time, think purple.

From Staff Reports

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer Real Estate Examination Review from 7 to 10 p.m. May 1 and from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. May 2.

The course will include a review of the Real Estate License Act, real estate economics, estates, titles and transfer of title, principal-agent relationships and real estate math.

The course will also include study techniques and test-taking strategies followed by a practice exam. Course will be taught by Margaret Semple. Course fee is $60.

For information, visit the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

Bicycle safety program slated

From Staff Reports

The Midessa Optimist Club will conduct a bicycle safety program 10 a.m.-3 p.m. Saturday in the parking lot of K-Mart, at the corner of Illinois and Midland Dr.

The children will learn more about the safe operation of bicycles. Bike Masters of Midland will be performing bike inspections.

Video One, located at 4706 N. Midkiff in North Park Center, has 8000 movies in stock. Rentals are $2.50 every day, and children's movies are just $2.00 each. Video One is open seven days a week. Hours are 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday to Saturday and 12 noon to 10 p.m. Sunday.

Late Night at Joey's presents The Shades

The Shades will be at Joey's this Friday and Saturday from 9:30 p.m. to 2 a.m. Joey's, located in the Mesa Verde Shopping Center at 2215 N. Midland Drive, continues to bring the best in live entertainment. The Shades specialize in the music of the 50's and the 60's. Come out and have a great time!

Late Night at Joey's is happy to have The Shades this Friday and Saturday night, April 24 and 25. The Shades will perform from 9:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m.

The Shades, one of the hottest local bands in this area, play a good variety of music, specializing in the 50's and 60's era.

Terry Hancock, doing most of the vocals with some harmonica tastefully thrown in from time to time, has a special way of involving the audience.

Every good band needs a lead guitar and keyboard player and these are handled quite well by Randy Keys. When he is on stage, he displays an energetic if not a driving force for the band.

Last but certainly not least is the rhythm section—Brad Swinehart on bass and Bill Alther on drums. They do a really good job of holding the whole band together, and also supply that good, solid beat which makes dancing to The Shades' music a lot of fun.

By the way, Bill, the staff at Joey's would like to wish you a happy birthday!

While on the subject of good bands, the staff at Joey's would like to let our customers know about some good entertainment coming to Joey's in the future. Appearing on the 29th and the 30th of May, a Friday and a Saturday night, Gary P. Nunn and his band will be performing. Joey's had such a good, sell-out crowd performance and will have Rusty and his band back on July 3 and 4.

As a way of saying thanks for coming out and supporting live entertainment, all Late Night at Joey's customers will receive their first beverage "on the house".

Joey's, in addition to providing good entertainment and excellent food (including steaks, seafood, prime rib, gourmet burgers, and the best chicken fried steak in the area), offers the above in a nice, clean comfortable atmosphere with plenty of lighted parking for your convenience.

Joey's also features a premium well in their bar, along with a great wine list, for those who care to partake.

So, this weekend, if you have plans to go out and eat and then do some partying and dancing, make Late Night at Joey's and Joey's Restaurant your choice. Joey's, at the corner of Midland Drive and Neely, guarantees good times every weekend.

Parrots Eatery for your next dinner, lunch

Enjoy your next lunch or dinner at Parrots Eatery, where you can savor sandwiches and salads in a cozy atmosphere.

Parrots Eatery, located in Plaza Center at Garfield and Wadley, is between Baskin Robbins and Radio Shack.

Open for just one month, Parrots Eatery has branched into Midland after 5 years of business in Odessa.

The restaurant has a varied menu which includes sandwiches, hamburgers, chalupas, nachos and soft tacos. All bread is baked fresh daily, and you may choose french or whole wheat for your made-to order sandwiches.

Sandwich selections include ham and cheese, roast beef, turkey and the combination.

Light eaters will enjoy Parrots' newest selection, chicken salad tacos, served in flour tortillas. Other salads, including tuna, are also available.

Your favorite soft drinks are on hand, and you can also enjoy longneck beer.

If you are too busy for lunch or dinner, the convenience of take out is at your fingertips. Call 683-3655 to place your order.

Hours are 10:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday to Thursday and 10:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Remember, for lunch and dinner, make Parrots Eatery your next stop.

Diedre Nicholson, owner of Shrimp Etc., at #10 Plaza Center, invites you to enjoy fresh seafood from their menu and delicious appetizers, including oyster chowder, oysters on the half shell and crabmeat stuffed jalapenos.

Shrimp Etc. is open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., with serving hours 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. Happy Hour features 75¢ beer and wine.

Ranger Camp under new management

The Ranger Camp (next to Water Wonderland) is under new management.

Roy Taylor and Nora Pointer, formerly of Odessa's Farmer's Market, invite you to enjoy candlelight table service Friday and Saturday evenings from 5 to 10 p.m. at Ranger Camp.

Relish an evening of live entertainment by guitarist/singer Larry Pointer while enjoying the Ranger Camp steak special for two. Or pick something from a menu that includes char-broiled breast of chicken to a spicy Mexican dish.

Enjoy your favorite beer, wine or soft drink with your dinner and we know you won't be able to pass up the tempting array of home baked desserts.

Now you can arrange for your club or organization to use the Ranger Camp for parties, banquets, business dinner meetings or church fellowship functions. Or let Ranger Camp cater at the location of your choice. Services are available for groups from 30-1,200.

And if you're looking for a good place to have lunch, Ranger Camp is the answer.

Monday through Friday 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. you can choose from a mouth-watering variety of foods prepared in Ranger Camp's immaculate kitchen. Roast beef, fried fish, fajitas, chicken fried steak and barbecue are just a few of the items you can select from Ranger Camp's cafeteria-style serving line.

All buffet meals are served with your choice of garden fresh vegetables, spicy camp fried potatoes or mashed potatoes with gravy for only $4.50. And if you are on the run Ranger Camp can pack your lunch to go.

Come out to Ranger Camp today and enjoy the great food and cozy atmosphere. You're sure to become a regular!

Plane's passengers collect $73,000 for sick Israeli girl

LONDON (AP) — Passengers moved by the plight of a critically ill 4-year-old Israeli girl raised $73,000 in a spontaneous collection during a flight from Tel Aviv to London, an airline official said.

An employee of the Israeli airline El Al said the 450 passengers aboard Wednesday's Flight LY315 passed the hat after hearing Maron Kadosh was flying to London for a possible liver transplant.

Maron's mother, Tova, 29, told reporters: "It is unbelievable. I cannot find words to thank the people for what they have done. It is a wonderful thing."

She said the money would go toward medical expenses. Liver transplant surgery is not available in Israel.

Dr. Akiva Fradkin, a pediatrician traveling with Maron, said the 4-year-old has a "very serious liver condition, and we believe the transplant is the last hope."

However, Alan Gavurin, assistant administrator at King's College Hospital in London, said the cause of the girl's malfunctioning liver is yet not known.

Maron was taken by ambulance from Heathrow Airport to the hospital, where she was reported in stable condition. She was sitting up in bed and watching television Wednesday afternoon, Gavurin said.

Mary Curry, the hospital's deputy administrator, said Maron would undergo tests before a decision is made on whether she would be a suitable candidate for a transplant.

The cost of the medical treatment was not disclosed, but Mrs. Curry said an Israeli charity, the Whole World Organization, has agreed to cover some expenses.

The El Al employee, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said children gave their pocket money, while "one or two very influential people on board, certain millionaires on board, gave heavily in a spontaneous movement of charity."

Planes hit Tamil guerrilla targets; Crowd demands president resign

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Warplanes bombed more Tamil guerrilla targets today, and a crowd outside the president's house shouted demands for his resignation over a surge of ethnic violence that has killed nearly 400 people.

Government spokesman Tilak Ratnakara said air force planes struck four targets on the rebel-dominated Jaffna peninsula. Warplanes hit the same region, at the extreme north of this island nation off India, on Wednesday.

Ratnakara said he had no immediate information on casualties from today's raids. He said the air attacks would continue "as and when necessary."

Parliament was called into emergency session to discuss the week-old escalation of the civil war.

"Old man! If you can't solve this problem, let us do it," shouted the crowd of about 400 people outside the home of President Junius R. Jayewardene, who is 80.

The capital is under a "round-the-clock curfew, but it was lifted for four hours to allow people to buy necessities."

Sri Lankan Freedom Party, both staunch opponents of the Jayewardene's proposals to grant limited autonomy to the minority Tamils in an effort to end a nearly 4-year-old civil war.

Police pushed back the demonstrators but some were allowed to wait to present a letter demanding Jayewardene's ouster.

Since Friday, Tamil terrorism and combat between Tamil separatists and the mostly Sinhalese government forces has killed at least 374 people.

The past week has been the bloodiest since a Tamil attack on the army and subsequent anti-Tamil rioting sparked the civil war in 1983. The Tamil rebels want to set up an independent homeland in the island's northern and eastern provinces.

In Colombo during the curfew break, residents jammed bakeries and markets to stock up on provisions. Soldiers armed with automatic weapons patrolled the main streets, stopping and searching cars.

The curfew was imposed after the capital's main bus terminal was bombed Tuesday, killing at least 108 people and possibly more than 200. Another 295 were injured.

Five more Argentine generals resign

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Five more generals retired in the shake-up of the restive Argentine armed forces and the Supreme Court delayed military atrocity trials that sparked three mutinies in a week.

Defense Minister Horacio Jaunarena assured the nation Wednesday that "absolute normality reigns" at all army garrisons. He said the drastic reorganization of the service would be completed today with the swearing in of new chief of staff Gen. Jose D. Caridi.

Caridi was named to the army's top post Monday to replace Gen. Hector Rios Erenu, one of 24 high-ranking officers who either retired or were fired since the mutinies began April 15.

Five generals retired Wednesday, joining 10 who left active duty Monday. Among the most recent retirees was Gen. Ernesto Alais, who headed loyalist troops that surrounded a rebel camp near Buenos Aires last Sunday.

Of the 15 generals being replaced, those who were not dismissed retired in keeping with Argentine army tradition because they were senior to Caridi or to his new deputy, Gen. Fausto Gonzalez. The mutinies — in the western city of Cordoba, in suburban Buenos Aires and in the northern city of Salta — all ended without bloodshed. The rebels outside Buenos Aires gave up Sunday after President Raul Alfonsin went personally to their garrison.

The Supreme Court moved Wednesday on the issue of trials of military men accused of crimes including murder, torture and kidnapping committed during a crackdown on leftists and suspected leftists under rightist military governments from 1976 to 1983.

The high court asked federal courts throughout the country for detailed reports on the status of all such trials now pending before them. Legal sources said the action would delay the trials indefinitely.

Amnesty for an estimated 250 officers who face human rights charges was among the chief demands of the past week's mutineers.

Jaunarena told the Senate on Wednesday that the administration "is not studying any proposal for an amnesty law."

Redfield homers lift Angels to 9-8 win over Dodgers

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Joe Redfield, Midland's foiled again hero, belted a two-run homer in the last of the eighth to give the Angels a 9-8 Texas League win, their third straight, over San Antonio's Dodgers Wednesday night.

Redfield's homer to left was his second of the game and gave him seven for the season. It also capped a four-hit night in which the native Californian also hit a triple.

As a matter of fact, Redfield, who also had the game winning hit Tuesday night in Wichita, has hit homers and triples in the same game three times this season. But each time has come up short a double.

"I was thinking about the double," he said shaking his head. But instead of hitting for the cycle, he had to settle for another ho-hum homer, and 12 total bases for the night.

At this rate, teammates will be pulling for him to fall flat on his face all season, if that's his idea of failure.

UNTIL REDFIELD'S homer, Midland, after a 2-0 lead in the first, had spent most of the night playing catchup.

They did in the seventh when Ty Van Burkleo tripled and scored on Stan Holmes' single. John Hotchkiss and Edwin Marquez then singled Holmes around to make it 7-7.

San Antonio punched over an earned run in the eighth with third baseman Walt McConnell delivering the RBI single and starter Dave Martinez, who hung tough all night despite 12 hits, was faced with his fourth defeat of the young season.

Redfield's homer made the Austin native a winner with Vinicio Cedenio nailing it down with a runless ninth for his second save.

Doug Jennings singled with one out in the eighth and newcomer Rick Adams came in to run.

"With an 0-2 count, I was just trying to hit the ball," described Redfield. "Elchorn (Dave) threw a fantastic sinker on the outside corner and it dropped just below the strike zone. Then he got a slider up in the strike zone." And that was ball game.

Martinez went eight innings and "With the kind of stuff he has, they wouldn't have gotten 12 hits if he'd just come inside more often," reviewed Joe Coleman, the California Angels' roving pitching coach.

Redfield's other homer led off the fifth and also cleared the left field barrier. He scored on a third strike passed ball after tripling in the third.

REDFIELD, WHO signed with the Mets out of Cal-Santa Barbara as a junior, has been around a few years and last year played at Charlotte, an Orioles farm club, in the Southern League and hit 14 homers.

"I shared third base and DH with Tommy Dodd, who had an incredible year. He hit 28 homers before being called up and then I got to play more regularly." So between them they hit 42 homers, not bad for one position.

This spring Redfield was traded to the Angels, in exchange for a catcher.

"We were breaking camp at West Palm Beach," said Redfield, who by now was property of Atlanta, "and I was to report to Richmond when I was told I'd been traded."

So Redfield drove to Midland and reported sight unseen, as it were, to the Angels.

"I love the park," he says. "In fact, I have felt relaxed here from the first day."

And who's going to dispute a .348 average and a league leading 23 RBI.

HALO HOOPS — Rick Adams was added to the roster and Mitch Seoane released. "We hated to release a young player like Seoane," said Manager Max Oliveras. "But Bill Bavasi (of the Angels front office) saw Adams available and felt his triple A and major league experience could help the club." Adams, from Montclair, Calif., was with San Francisco last year, although sideline by a knee injury, and was not offered a contract this year. "He can play anywhere and he's a battler," says Coleman. "He has been in the organization before."

Marty Reed, 1-0, will go for the Angels against the Dodgers in tonight's second of the five-game series. Redfield had a single, triple and homer in an earlier game this season. "Then they brought in the right fielder to pitch and he got me out twice with some kind of dinky knuckler."

Williams expects Chaps at nationals

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

While coach Joe Williams and the Midland College tennis teams can be forgiven for taking conference tournaments for granted, don't expect the Chaparrals to overlook anyone at the Region V tournament this weekend in Waco.

Though Williams fully expects both his top-ranked women's team and his second-ranked men's team to qualify for the National Junior College Athletic Association tournaments with a first or second place finish, he doesn't foresee a cakewalk. Not with powerful McLennan playing host.

"I look for us to qualify both teams for nationals, but McLennan will tell us more about what we're up against on the national scene," Williams said. "Their men's was ranked above us early in the year and they've always had some great individuals in women's play. They're also used to the heat and humidity in Waco — and we'll be playing on their home court."

The Chaps will also be bearing the pressure of being the favorite in both men's and women's play. Last year the MC men relished the underdog role and surprised McLennan to win the regional. This year when play starts Saturday, the shoe is on the other foot.

"Being ranked above them puts more pressure on us, we are expected to win," says Eric Lingg, MC's No. 2 singles player and No. 7 in the NJCAA rankings. "Last year we really wanted to get them, this year they are after us."

LINGG, A native of Tournai, Belgium, teams with Jean Remy Rousset to form the top doubles combo in the NJCAA. The pair is undefeated in 13 matches this spring and has yet to lose a set. Including the fall season, Lingg-Rousset are 20-1 and have defeated 10 university level tandems, including Texas Tech, TCU, UTEP and New Mexico State.

He has also just signed a letter of intent to finish his collegiate tennis at Texas Christian, currently ranked 11th in the NCAA. By returning for his sophomore season at MC, Lingg turned down a chance to join the ATP professional tennis circuit.

"I had a sponsor and everything, but I thought it was important to get a degree, you never know what will happen in tennis," Lingg said. "The chance to go on the circuit should still be there when I finish at TCU."

Bethea dies of self-inflicted gunshot wound

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — Larry Bethea, a former first-round draft choice of the Dallas Cowboys, died today of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, police said.

Sgt. Lynn Pearson of the Newport News police said a .38-caliber automatic handgun was found near Bethea, who had a gunshot wound to the right temple.

"Evidence in the shooting indicates that Mr. Bethea apparently committed suicide," she said.

Bethea, 30, was a defensive lineman for the National Football League team from 1978 to 1983. He was brought to Hampton General Hospital by a Newport News ambulance at 2:05 a.m., said hospital spokeswoman Jan Dunning.

"He had a very faint pulse and blood pressure and was actually pronounced dead at 2:08 a.m.," she said. "He did have a gunshot wound on the right side of the head and that was the probable cause of death."

Bethea's body was taken to the Norfolk crime lab for an autopsy, she said.

On Jan. 23, Bethea was given a suspended four-year prison term for stealing $64,000 from his mother.

Newport Circuit Judge J. Warren Stephens also ordered Bethea to serve two years on probation and re-

Deshaies proves point as Astros blank Braves, 6-0

Associated Press

Pitcher Jim Deshaies of the Houston Astros is trying to send a message to manager Hal Lanier.

Deshaies pitched seven innings of shutout ball and struck out 11 Wednesday night in his first start of the season, as the Astros defeated the Atlanta Braves 6-0 for their eighth home win in as many games. Deshaies started last season and had a league-high 12 wins for a rookie, but he had pitched in only one-third of an inning before Wednesday night, giving up three runs on two hits Saturday against Cincinnati.

"It's a big win for him after he was bumped into the fifth spot after spring training," said catcher Alan Ashby.

Lanier agreed.

"It's one of the best games he's pitched for us. My biggest concern was that he had that long layoff starting, and you hope he has his control and rhythm. And after the first inning, he did. When you throw 94 pitches and strike out 11, you've got your rhythm," the Houston manager said.

Deshaies survived a rocky start. The first three Braves reached base in the first inning on two walks and a single, but a pickoff of Braves centerfielder Al Hall and strikeouts of Dale Murphy and Ted Simmons got Deshaies out of the jam.

Astros second baseman Bill Doran gave Deshaies all the support he needed when he got an inside-the-park homer to lead off the bottom of the first. Doran hit a line drive to right center that Hall and Murphy both missed with outstretched gloves, allowing the ball to roll to the fence.

Hall retrieved the ball and fired to cutoff man Glen Hubbard, but by that time Doran was around third and 40 feet from home.

The Astros added two more runs in the fourth when first baseman

Glenn Davis hit his second home run of the year on an 0-2 pitch from Atlanta starter Dave Palmer. They got another run later in the inning when Palmer walked Deshaies with the bases loaded.

Dodgers 5, Giants 3

One night earlier, Alex Trevino had come to the plate as a pinch-hitter after Mike Marshall had homered, then circled the bases while taunting opposing Manager Roger Craig of San Francisco.

The pitcher was reliever Scott Garretts, and his first pitch sent Trevino sprawling to the ground and the two teams rushing onto the field.

Wednesday night, Trevino again was pinch-hitting against Garretts. This time he swung at the first pitch, hitting a game-winning two-run double as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Giants 5-3.

Padres 6, Reds 3

Kevin Mitchell drove in a career-high four runs to lead San Diego over Cincinnati. Mitchell knocked in a pair of runs with a third-inning double and hit a two-run homer in the sixth.

The third baseman came into the game with just one homer and three RBI.

Expos 7, Phillies 3

Tim Wallach's leadoff homer and Mitch Webster's bases-loaded triple highlighted a six-run sixth inning and Montreal went on to defeat Philadelphia.

Neal Heaton, 2-1, overcame a shaky first inning to get the win, allowing four hits, striking out five and walking one in 7-2-3 innings before being relieved by Andy McGaffigan.

Mets 8, Pirates 7

Tim Teufel drove in New York's first three runs, and Mookie Wilson and Kevin McReynolds homered before the Mets held on to edge Pittsburgh.

The Mets led 7-1 before Pittsburgh made a run for the lead, capped by ninth-inning home runs by Sid Bream and Barry Bonds.

Ron Darling, 2-0, contributed a run-scoring double and was credited with the victory after allowing four runs and seven hits over 6-2-3 innings. Gene Walter, David Cone and Jesse Orosco followed Darling, with Orosco earning his fifth save as the Mets downed the Pirates for the 17th time in their last 18 meetings.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 4

Hitting only 157 going into the game, Andre Dawson connected for his third career grand slam to cap a five-run seventh inning and power Chicago over St. Louis. Dawson's home run, his third of the year, came off St. Louis relief ace Todd Worrell.

The Cards, with Jack Clark hitting the first of his two solo home runs, had built a 3-0 lead after four innings.

But in the Cubs' seventh, Leon Durham and Gary Matthews, pinch-hitting for winner Rick Sutcliffe, 3-1, both singled. Bill Dawley, 0-2, relieved St. Louis starter Tim Lincecum after Bob Dernier walked to load the bases. Dawley then walked Ryne Sandberg to force home Durham before Worrell relieved and gave up Dawson's bases-loaded homer.

Former 'Dog off to Canada

Williams signs two-year pact with Ottawa

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO — Former Midland High running back Wesley Williams, Class of '82, will be returning to the football field this season after a year off. And, like the Spring of 1986, he'll be playing on foreign soil.

Williams, the last back to rush for more than 1,000 yards for the Bulldogs, signed a two-year contract Wednesday to play for the Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League.

This is the second time Williams has played pro football out of the country. Last year Williams led the Bologna Warriors to the Italian Football League Super Bowl title, rushing for 160 yards and two touchdowns against the Pesaro Angels and was named the game's Most Valuable Player.

"It's closer to home and something else good about it is a couple of coaches from Jacksonville, the team from the USFL that drafted me, are also in Ottawa so I already know people there," said Williams, who is currently finishing up his business management degree at Angelo State University.

After his year with Bologna, where he rushed for 2,500 yards and scored 30 touchdowns, Williams returned to the United States and had a tryout with the National Football League Washington Redskins but didn't make the cut.

About his reprieve from another off-season, Williams said, "I feel great about it but I knew I'd be playing somewhere."

"We had a camp in Dallas at the Cotton Bowl, it was like a mini-camp," said Williams. "I had just signed with my agent and he said Ottawa was interested in signing me before that training camp and then they said they wanted to see me a bit at the camp. After the first day they signed me but I didn't sign the formal agreement until today (Wednesday)."

"I'm looking forward to it," concluded Williams. "I know I'll have a good time up there."

Yanks roll to ninth straight

Associated Press

The New York Yankees were determined to play better at home this year. So far, they couldn't be doing any better.

Rickey Henderson and Ron Kittle hit two-run homers Wednesday night and the Yankees won their ninth straight game by beating the Detroit Tigers 4-1.

All nine victories came at Yankee Stadium as New York went 9-0 on its first homestand of the season. The Yankees are 12-3 overall, their best start since 1949.

The Yankees, who were just 41-39 at home last year, are only 1 1/2 games behind Milwaukee in the American League East despite the Brewers' season-opening 13-game winning streak.

"We're playing well," said Manager Lou Piniella, whose team is on the road for 22 of its next 29 games. "We're getting good pitching, we're playing well defensively and tonight we got two timely home runs."

The Yankees won despite getting just three hits, the homers by Henderson and Kittle and a bloop single by Willie Randolph. New York again played mistake-free ball, having committed only six errors this season.

Bob Shirley won his first game since Sept. 6, 1985. He pitched 5-1-3 innings and allowed four hits, including a home run by Terry Harper, his first hit in 14 at-bats this season.

Red Sox 1, Royals 0
Bob Stanley pitched a four-hitter and Dwight Evans had an RBI single in the fourth inning as Boston beat visiting Kansas City.

The Royals have been shut out in four of their last five games. The Red Sox have won four of five.

American League

Stanley, 2-2, retired the first 13 batters before Bo Jackson doubled. Stanley struck out four and walked none.

Danny Jackson, 0-2, walked Jim Rice leading off the fourth. Rice took third on a single by Don Baylor, who was tagged out in a rundown between first and second. Evans followed with his run-scoring single.

Athletics 7, Angels 6
Stan Javier's first major-league homer, a three-run blow, helped Oakland open up a 7-0 lead, enough to hold off host California.

The Athletics scored twice in the first inning against Mike Witt, 2-2, on Mark McGwire's RBI single and a bases-loaded walk to Mickey Tettleton. Tettleton singled home a run in the third and Javier followed with his homer.

The Angels started their comeback against Curt Young, 2-1, on an RBI single by Brian Downing and a solo homer by Wally Joyner.

Gary Pettis got an inside-the-park homer in the fifth when Oakland center fielder Dwayne Murphy and right fielder Mike Davis collided. Davis was carried off on a stretcher after suffering a concussion and Murphy's right knee, which hit Davis' head, was to be X-rayed.

Orioles 3, Rangers 2
Ray Knight, the AL's top hitter, walked with the bases loaded in the 10th inning, leading Baltimore over Texas.

The visiting Orioles loaded the bases on a single by Alan Wiggins and a walk to Rick Burleson off Matt Williams, 0-1. Greg Harris retired Cal Ripken Jr. on a line drive, walked Eddie Murray and then struck out Fred Lynn. Knight, batting 423 and 3-for-7 in his career against Harris, walked on a 3-1 pitch.

Dave Schmidt, 2-0, pitched 1-1-3 innings for the victory. The Rangers tied the game with one out in the ninth on Pete Incaviglia's solo homer, his sixth, off Mark Williamson.

Blue Jays 6, Indians 3
Garth Iorg hit a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the ninth inning off reliever Steve Carlton and Toronto won in Cleveland.

Singles by Ernie Whitt and Kelly Gruber, a sacrifice and an intentional walk loaded the bases for Iorg. Carlton, 1-2, then left after walking Lloyd Moseby, and George Bell hit a grounder that skipped between third baseman Brook Jacoby's legs, allowing two runs to score.

Mark Eichhorn, 2-0, escaped a bases-loaded jam in the eighth. Tom Henke worked the ninth for his second save.

Jacoby hit a solo homer in the fourth, giving the Indians home runs in 11 straight games.

Mariners 4, Twins 3
Harold Reynolds singled home the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning and lifted Seattle over Minnesota.

Mike Kingery singled off George Frazier, 1-2, and Rey Quinones and Reynolds followed with singles. Mark Langston, 2-2, pitched a seven-hitter and struck out nine.

Quinones' second home run of the season made it 1-1 in the fifth. Al Newman, who tripled and scored in the first inning, hit a two-run single in the fifth that gave the host Twins a 3-1 lead.

Mavs favored against Sonics

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks are 10-point favorites to bounce the Seattle SuperSonics in the first round of NBA Playoffs after whipping them five times in the regular season, but they are wary of former Maverick Dale Ellis.

Dallas, the Midwest Division champions, host the Sonics Thursday and Saturday nights in Reunion Arena before traveling to the West Coast in the best-of-five series.

Game three is set for Seattle on Tuesday night with game four on Thursday if needed. The Mavs would have the homecourt advantage on Saturday, May 2 should it come down to a fifth game.

Ellis, buried deep on Dallas' bench, was obtained by the Sonics in exchange for guard Al Wood.

Ellis averaged almost 25 points per game to the 7 points with the Mavs. Wood has played sparingly for Dallas.

"I knew I was good enough," Ellis said. "Last year I was watching the guys who were averaging 20 points per game and now I'm one of them."

The 6-foot-7 Ellis was a first round draft pick in 1983.

"In Dallas most people thought my game was shooting from the perimeter but I've proved this year I can do other things," he said.

Ellis shot 51 per cent from the field and also was deadly from 3-point range.

Dallas Coach Dick Motta said "I know Dale would love to have a great game against us in Reunion. It will be a challenge to stop him."

Los Angeles forward A.C. Green (45) and Dallas' Rolando Blackman (22) fight for a loose ball in a recent game. The Lakers and Mavericks are seeded one-two in the Western Conference.

Motta said he knew Sonics' Coach Bernie Bickerstaff had to love the underdog role coming into Reunion.

"They don't have anything to lose because there is no pressure on them," Motta said. "The pressure is on us. We have to be very careful we don't look past them."

Guard Derek Harper said "We dominated Seattle during the regular season but we know we can't take them for granted."

Seattle made that mistake in 1984. After compiling a 4-1 regular season against Dallas, the Mavs won the playoff series 3-2.

The Mavs had their finest regular season in history at 55-27.

NBA Playoff Pairings

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Sketches of the best-of-five first-round NBA playoff series, with prediction of their outcomes (numbers indicate regular-season placing within each conference):

EASTERN CONFERENCE

No. 1 Boston vs. No. 8 Chicago — The Celtics spent the final weeks of the regular season concentrating on getting healthy, and even Bill Walton, who appeared in only 10 games all season, played on Sunday when they held on to first place in the East by beating Atlanta. Michael Jordan, the only player other than Wilt Chamberlain to score 3,000 points in a season, wasn't enough to keep the Bulls from being swept 6-0 by Boston in the regular season, so there's no reason to expect the playoffs to be any different. Boston in three.

No. 2 Atlanta vs. No. 7 Indiana — The Hawks and Pacers split the regular-season series 3-3, but Atlanta, with Dominique Wilkins and the deepest bench in the NBA, won't let Indiana sneak up in the playoffs. The Pacers, with six players scoring 900 or more points, are balanced, but will be hard-pressed to win their first-ever NBA playoff game. Atlanta in three.

No. 3 Detroit vs. No. 6 Washington — Could be one of the most competitive first-round series, with Pistons toughs Bill Laimbeer and Rick Mahorn doing battle with Bullets center Moses Malone, who is itching for playoff action after missing the post-season with an eye injury last year. Washington needs a hot-shooting series from All-Star guard Jeff Malone to counter the offensive brilliance of Isiah Thomas and Adrian Dantley. Detroit in five.

No. 4 Milwaukee vs. No. 5 Philadelphia — This series is hard to figure. The Bucks are steady performers and could win easily if the 76ers are flat or if Charles Barkley or Maurice Cheeks aren't sufficiently recovered from injuries. The 76ers are inconsistent, beating the Bucks 3-2 in the regular season, but splitting with both New Jersey and New York.

who finished 24-58. Here's a hunch that the real Sixers will show up, extending Julius Erving's career for a few more days. Philadelphia in four.

WESTERN CONFERENCE

No. 1 Los Angeles Lakers vs. No. 8 Denver — A year ago, the Lakers beat Houston four out of five games in the regular season, only to lose to the Rockets 4-1 in the Western Conference finals. Magic Johnson, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, James Worthy and Co. won't let that happen again, at least against the Nuggets, who lost five straight to the Lakers this season. Los Angeles in three.

No. 2 Dallas vs. No. 7 Seattle — The Mavericks, after winning their first Midwest Division title, believe they're ready to challenge the Lakers for superiority in the West. Dallas may not be ready for that, but should be able to handle the Super-Sonics, who have three 23-point scorers in Dale Ellis, Xavier McDaniel and Tom Chambers. Seattle could have caused more trouble if it hadn't lost defensive-minded center Alton Lister to injury. Dallas in three.

No. 3 Portland vs. No. 6 Houston — The Rockets, touted as the up-and-coming power in the West for the next decade, faltered this season as Ralph Sampson struggled with injuries and the team lost Mitchell Wiggins and Lewis Lloyd to cocaine abuse. The Trail Blazers adjusted better to the loss of center Sam Bowie with a broken leg and won 49 games. But a vote for Portland would be a vote for Steve Johnson over Akeem Olajuwon. Houston in five.

No. 4 Utah vs. No. 5 Golden State — The Warriors are making their first playoff appearance in 10 years, and only reserve forward Greg Ballard has any significant postseason experience. Golden State has two All-Stars in Joe Barry Carroll and Eric Floyd, and an outstanding rebounder in forward Larry Smith, while the Jazz had no All-Star selections. But Utah plays well as a team and forward Karl Malone developed into a top-notch performer by season's end. Utah in five.

Another former M-Angel gets call to Anaheim

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The California Angels placed outfielder George Hendrick on the 21-day disabled list Wednesday and called up former Midland Angel right-handed pitcher DeWayne Buice to replace him on the roster.

Hendrick suffered a fractured finger on his right hand Tuesday night while batting against Oakland's Gene Nelson. Hendrick claimed he was struck by a pitch, but the home plate umpire ruled that Hendrick was hit on the hand as he fouled off the pitch.

Buice, 24, was 1-1 for Edmonton of the Pacific Coast League, with two saves and a 1.08 ERA in eight innings this season.

He was 2-1 for the Angels this spring with a 4.80 ERA in 15 innings spanning nine exhibition games.

NBA decides to add four teams to league

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA, refusing to choose between what it considered two equal Florida applicants, accepted both Miami and Orlando into the league Wednesday along with Charlotte, N.C., and Minneapolis.

Charlotte and Miami will be admitted for the 1988-89 season. Minneapolis and Orlando will follow a year later, primarily because their new arenas are not as close to completion.

Each expansion franchise will pay an entry fee of $32.5 million.

"It just wouldn't have been fair to choose between two equal Florida applicants," Commissioner David Stern said after the announcement, which came after a four-hour meeting. "We decided that the only proper thing to do was take both."

Since April 2, when the NBA's Expansion Committee recommended that Minneapolis and Charlotte be accepted along with either Orlando or Miami. In the weeks since that recommendation, which Stern said was based on the committee's instructions from the Board of Governors that three teams be invited, two Florida cities have exchanged barbs.

"Much has been written about the deficiencies of those two cities, but in fact the problem for the board was choosing between them," Stern said. "Because of the support demonstrated in Miami and Orlando, and the civic pride and involvement by both government and fans, we couldn't do anything but choose both."

The commissioner said the governors' vote was unanimous, although only an 18-5 majority was required.

The dilemma between Miami and Orlando simply was that they are in the same state," said Phoenix Suns owner Richard Bloch, chairman of the Expansion Committee.

Explaining why only Charlotte and Minneapolis were in the original recommended, Bloch said, "If we were limited to three expansion teams, we didn't feel that two of them could be in the same state."

Two expansion drafts, one in 1988 for Charlotte and Miami and one in 1989 for Minneapolis and Orlando, and college drafts will be used to stock the four new teams.

Each of the 23 existing teams will protect eight players in each expansion draft and each will lose one player. In the college drafts of 1988 and 1989, the new teams will choose eighth and ninth.

The location of three of the four teams in the East complicated the divisional alignments, so the governors adopted a rotating system that has little regard for geographic location.

In 1988-89, Charlotte will compete in the Atlantic Division and Miami in the Midwest, with Sacramento moving permanently to the Pacific.

In 1989-90, Charlotte and Minneapolis will compete in the Midwest, Orlando in the Central and Miami in the Atlantic.

In 1990-91, Minneapolis and Orlando will move to the Midwest, Charlotte to the Central and Miami will stay in the Atlantic.

Lingg is one of three sophomores that anchor an experienced Chaparral team, quite a change from last year when just one of six players was a sophomore. Joining him are Rousell, the nation's top-ranked juco player and the favorite at the regionals in Waco, and Herve Rousseau. Rousseau is playing at No. 5 where he won an NJCAA national title last season.

JOHAN DYSHOLM plays No. 3, Gilles Ameline is No. 4 and Lars Nordmark plays at No. 6. The men's NJCAA national tournament will be May 25-31 in Tyler.

The women have been ranked No. 1 all season and are odds-on favorites to defend the NJCAA title won last year on MC's homecourt.

"We should earn close to the top seed in all places, but we're playing on real fast courts down there and that's not our style of play," Williams.

Rachel Wilson should be back after having her wisdom teeth pulled last week to team with Caroline Bhagandas as the No. 1 doubles pair.

Bhagandas, a freshman, fills the bill as MC's No. 1 singles player while Natasha Koprivica, Helen Schildknecht, Rebecca Nevarez, Sara Hancock and Wilson round out the roster. Koprivica and Schildknecht both won NJCAA singles titles as freshmen.

Navratilova struggles but claims victory

HOUSTON (AP) — After a good start, Martina Navratilova had problems with her serve, but still had little trouble advancing past Laura Gildemeister of Peru in the second round of the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Houston women's tennis tournament at Lakeside Racquet and Athletic Club.

Navratilova, seeded No. 1, had four aces in a 6-3 first set triumph Wednesday, then struggled in for a 6-4 decision in the second set.

"It was spotty," the 30-year-old Navratilova said of her serve. "When they aren't going in, you can't be too happy. But it was there when I needed it."

In other top singles matches, No. 2 seed Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia eliminated Louise Allen of San Antonio, Texas, 6-2, 6-1 in the last of the first-round matches; No. 3 seed Chris Evert defeated Marianna Perez-Roldan of Argentina, 6-2, 6-1; and No. 4 seed Zina Garrison of Houston disposed of Elise Burgin of Baltimore, 6-0, 6-0.

A second-game service break enabled Navratilova to jump to a 3-0 lead. Gildemeister, who held serve the rest of the first set, couldn't break Navratilova's serve.

"At the beginning of the match, I was a little out of it," said 23-year-old Gildemeister.

"I was nervous because I didn't want to lose bad. Every time you play against a great player, you try to play better than you usually do. There are a lot of people watching, and you don't want to lose 0 and 0 in less than an hour."

Navratilova broke in the first and fifth games of the second set to forge a 4-1 lead. But, Gildemeister battled back to tie the set 4-4.

"I played two lousy games in a row," said Navratilova. "There was nothing to be happy about. I lost my concentration when I should have put the match away."

In her next match, Navratilova will face Lori McNeil of Houston, who advanced Wednesday when Andrea Jaeger of Saddlebrook, Fla., withdrew because of bursitis in her right shoulder.

Evert's quarterfinals opponent will be Kate Gompert of Rancho Mirage, Calif., who needed only 65 minutes Wednesday to defeat Mercedes Paz of Key Biscayne, Fla., 6-1, 6-2.

Gompert broke Paz's serve twice in both sets to coast to the victory. Evert jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first set before Perez-Roldan broke back cutting the lead to 3-2.

Gold recovers

LONDON (AP) — The dollar hit a record low today against the Japanese yen in Tokyo and fell slightly against most currencies in early European trading. Gold and silver prices rose sharply.

Bullion dealers said prices were fueled by the dollar's weakness.

In London, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended gold price of $453 a troy ounce, up from $444.50 late Wednesday.

In Zurich, gold was selling at a bid price of $452.50 at noon, up from $444.50 the previous day.

Silver prices jumped 45 cents a troy ounce on the London market, where the metal was selling at a bid $8.30 compared with $7.85 the previous day. It was the second time in three days that silver had traded above $8 an ounce.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a record closing low of 141.15 yen from Wednesday's 142.70. Later, in London, it was quoted slightly higher at 141.55 yen.

A dealer at a private bank in Frankfurt said the market could soon decide to push the dollar below 140 yen and 1.80 West German marks and challenge the central banks to intervene to try to keep the dollar stable.

"The real test is still awaiting us," he said.

U.S. economy sees fastest growth in three years

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. economic growth shot up at an annual rate of 4.3 percent in the first three months of 1987, the fastest growth in almost three years, the government reported today.

However, the surprisingly strong rise in the gross national product, which came almost entirely from a buildup of business inventories, masked substantial weakness, analysts said, and was likely to be reversed in the current quarter.

The Commerce Department said the GNP performance was up substantially from a weak 1.1 percent rise in the October-December quarter last year and was the fastest expansion rate since the economy grew at a 5.0 percent pace in the second quarter of 1984.

The pickup in economic growth was accompanied by a rise in inflation. An inflation index tied to the GNP rose at an annual rate of 3.8 percent in the first three months of the year, up from a 2.7 percent rise in the fourth quarter and the biggest jump in prices since a 4.0 percent rise in the first quarter of 1984.

The increase in prices came from a sharp rise in energy costs, which had been falling for most of 1986, the department said.

While the GNP growth figure was the best showing in almost three years, analysts discounted the rise because it was concentrated almost solely in a rebuilding of depleted business inventories.

Inventories grew by a giant $59.5 billion in the first three months of the year, reflecting a big rise in automobile stockpiles. The inventory restocking was occurring, however, at a time when final sales were dropping at an annual rate of $20.4 billion.

This 2.2 percent drop in sales was the first quarterly decline since the third quarter of 1982, the lowpoint of the last recession.

The combination of falling sales and rising inventories is expected to translate into sluggish activity in the current quarter as factories are forced to cut back on production to reduce unwanted stockpiles.

The big jump in economic growth in the first quarter following the weak fourth quarter continued a seesaw pattern of the last two years as the economy has been stuck in a pattern of essentially sluggish growth, held back by a huge U.S. trade deficit.

The trade performance was the one bright spot in the report. The trade deficit shrank by $13.8 billion in the first quarter. The improvement came from an 11.1 percent decline in imports, which offset a 1.6 percent drop in exports. These figures differ from the government's monthly merchandise trade report because they factor out the effects of inflation.

While in dollar terms imports have continued to rise, the increase has reflected higher costs brought on by a weaker dollar.

Settlement leaves banker 'flat broke'

DALLAS (AP) — A former executive of a defunct savings and loan has settled a federal racketeering civil suit by agreeing to give up virtually everything he owns, plus $100 million in future earnings.

Spencer H. Blain Jr., former chairman of Empire Savings and Loan Association, has acknowledged making more than $21 million in personal transactions while serving in his $30,000-a-year position at Empire, but the assets he is immediately surrendering are valued only at about $3 million.

Although it was the largest such settlement, the government and Blain's attorney acknowledge he may never pay the full $100 million.

"As strange as it sounds, most of the money is just gone," his attorney, Deborah Goodall, said Wednesday. "Spencer is now flat broke."

Federal regulators closed Empire on March 14, 1984, saying the association had used questionable lending practices, particularly in a condominium development near Dallas.

The failure cost the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. $300 million to reimburse depositors and manage the thrift. The agency sued Blain in 1985, accusing him of being part of an elaborate racketeering scheme to defraud Empire of more than $140 million through fraudulent land and construction loans.

Under the agreement between Blain and the FSLIC announced

Blain

Wednesday, Blain has surrendered $700,000 in cash, his $750,000 home, a house in Steamboat Springs, Colo., a variety of notes related to properties he already has sold, his interest in several land transactions, his personal vehicles and his interest in 132 oil wells.

"The settlement agreement strips Blain of virtually everything he owns," the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said in a statement.

In addition, Blain will have to report everything he earns or acquires during the next 10 years. Those assets will be subject to forfeiture until the $100 million is paid off, the bank board said.

Blain, who agreed to cooperate with the FSLIC in continuing investigations into the failure of Empire Savings, could not be reached for comment. Repeated phone calls late Wednesday by The Associated Press to his homes in Dallas and Colorado went unanswered.

In consenting to the agreement, Blain, who became chairman of the thrift in 1982, neither admitted nor denied wrongdoing.

The settlement affects only the civil action against Blain, and criminal action is still possible, board spokesman Jack Smith said.

The board said 83 people have been convicted of criminal charges in the Empire failure, with 36 sentenced to prison and 39 to probation. Eight await sentencing.

At a 1984 congressional hearing, bank board Chairman Edwin Gray said Empire's demise involved "one of the most reckless and fraudulent land investment schemes this agency has ever seen."

Gray said Empire based its loan amounts on appraisals that were "grossly inflated" by "land flips" in which the land was sold and resold many times within a small group.

Local secretaries observe national honorary week

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

"When a petroleum engineer goes on vacation, the company doesn't get a Kelly engineer," observed Henrietta Hagan, 1987 Secretary of the Year for the Permian Basin chapter of Professional Secretaries International and president-elect of the group. "His work waits for him to come back. But without us, the office doesn't run."

Wednesday was Professional Secretaries Day, the highlight of Secretaries Week, which was first declared by the Secretary of Commerce in 1952. "The week is meant to bring to management's attention that we are professionals, not just clerks," explained Hagan, a secretary at BHP (Americas). "It also stresses to secretaries that we need to stay current in our skills and knowledge." She added that the week was started by PSI, "not the florists and card people."

Locally, the day was observed with a luncheon at the Holiday Inn Country Villa, at which 144 were expected. The luncheon was hosted by the local PSI chapter, which currently boasts 52 members.

Guest speaker Fred Poe, Midland city manager, told the gathering that secretaries definitely had a place in the future, that businesses would continue to need their services.

"With the current economy, secretaries now have the opportunity to work to shape their own role in Midland's future, and their commitment is the key to that: their commitment to makes the changes necessary to come through these economic times, the commitment to be good secretaries, the commitment to a team concept, which is the goal of a lot of us to come through this."

Bosses traditionally take their secretaries out to lunch or send them flowers during this week. Diane Chamberlain, manager of La Bodega, said that her lunch business increases 20 to 25 percent during this week. And Cynthia Talboys, owner of North Park Florists, observed that restaurants are her main competition during this holiday. She and Phillip Marquez, owner of Midland Flower Shop, both said a slowdown in orders this year indicates the economy is still a bit weak. "You've heard the expression fair to partly cloudy?" Marquez said. Talboys added "Mother's Day is our busiest holiday. Everyone has a mother. Not everyone has a secretary."

As nice as a bouquet of flowers or lunch at a nice restaurant is, secretaries would prefer the chance to broaden their business knowledge and skills. "We suggest education and training," said Candace Louis, national spokeswoman for PSI. "Send your secretary to a seminar or symposium. Buy your secretary a subscription to a professional publication."

Asked what she would like to receive during Secretaries Week, Hagan replied: "Recognition all year long. Everyone likes to be told they're doing a good job."

Credit 'check-up' necessary for good consumer health

EDITOR'S NOTE: Second of a two-part series.

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Ordinary people, who in better times never missed a due date on a bill, find themselves pressured by hard economic times and scrambling to stay afloat. In the meantime, many wonder what damage is being inflicted on their long-spotted credit ratings.

J.B. Manning of Credit Data of the Permian Basin explains how consumers can find out what their credit report says and steps to take to maintain a good rating.

Q. How does a consumer find out what is in his or her credit report?

A. Two ways: The more common way is for the consumer to be refused credit. The company to whom the application was made is required by law to provide the name of the credit bureau whose information was the basis for the denial. Then, provided there has been a credit denial, the bureau must provide — free of charge — a complete copy of the consumer's file.

However, every consumer can request a copy of the report from a bureau at a charge, usually between $5 and $15. The only additional information needed to prepare a report is name, Social Security number and current address (plus previous address, if current is less than two years old).

Q. What happens if there is incorrect information in the file?

A. That's certainly not unheard of in light of the massive number of records and pieces of data being maintained, but the error rate is amazingly low considering. However, if an error is uncovered, the first step is to officially "dispute" the account. The Fair Credit Reporting Act requires that the bureau investigate all challenged entries in a file to determine the validity of the report. If the bureau finds that the entry is accurate but the consumer is still unsatisfied with the item in question, he or she may place up to a 100-word explanation of the disputed account into the file.

Also, if an adverse item is deleted or an explanation added, the consumer can compel the bureau to inform and issue revised reports to all credit grantors who received the report in the preceding six months.

Q. Where does a credit bureau get its current and historical credit data to report to subscribers?

A. Typically, at least in part, from the subscribers who request data on other applicants. Banks, retailers, commercial credit companies and other firms who need information on new applicants will provide payment data on current account holders to credit bureaus they work with. In addition, collection agencies and other firms with first-hand knowledge of payment patterns and debt often report to bureaus as well.

Q. So, you'd say it's a good idea to check your credit rating from time to time, whether you plan to need credit or not?

A. Definitely, we recommend an annual 'credit check-up' just like going to the family doctor. If an error creeps in, it's easier to correct if it's fairly fresh and it also reduces the chance for an unpleasant surprise after you file a credit application.

Checking with more than one bureau, possibly even all five is a good idea as well, because it is impossible to know which bureau (or possibly more than one) the prospective creditor subscribes to.

Q. If credit bureaus are national networks, why doesn't an individual's credit rating necessarily follow him around the country?

A. The degree of integration between regional offices and local franchises within any bureau varies. That is why if you know you're going to be moving to another region, it is a good idea to have a local bureau send a copy of your report to the new area. That will enable you to better establish credit relationships with retailers and other businesses near your new home.

Q. Credit bureaus conjure up a real 'Big Brother' image. What else is in their files?

A. Despite popular misconceptions, credit bureaus do not accumulate subjective material — morals, marital life, drinking habits, or other things gleaned from interviews with neighbors or coworkers. That is the domain of "investigative reports," commonly referred to by insurance companies or employers. Those reports are prepared by a different type of bureau.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Big blocks often involve more than one buyer, seller

By BILL DOYLE

Doyle

Q. On most days, more than 100 million shares of stock are sold on the New York Stock Exchange. Some days, it's more than 200 million. Who buys all that stock, especially on days when the market takes a large drop?

A. An old Wall Street expression goes: "There's a buyer for every seller." Actually, that's not completely accurate. If you sell 100 shares of stock, it's likely that one person or institution will be the buyer. But when a large number of shares — a "big block" — is involved, there often are two or more sellers or buyers.

Nonetheless, there always are buyers in the marketplace. Some, like you, are individual investors. Others are institutions, such as bank trust departments, pension funds, mutual funds and insurance companies. Institutional investors and traders account for more than 75 percent of all stock market transactions.

When share prices on a stock exchange are tumbling, "specialists" often are big buyers. A specialist is an exchange member whose chores include maintaining a "fair and orderly market, insofar as reasonably practical" in stocks assigned to him. Every stock traded on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange and the regional stock exchanges around the country has a specialist.

A specialist is supposed to buy and sell for his own account, thereby risking his own capital, when there is a disparity between supply and demand. If XYZ stock closed yesterday at $25 a share and, at today's opening, the highest price anyone is willing to pay is, say, $23, the specialist in that stock is supposed buy any shares put up for sale and pay a reasonable price — $24 or thereabouts.

In the over-the-counter market of stocks not traded on stock exchanges, broker-dealer firms acting as "market-makers" perform somewhat similar functions.

Q. I have just begun to pay attention to the stock market and I do not understand what "points" mean in dollars and cents. For instance, a stock I have been watching was quoted in the paper at "42" about three months ago. Today, it is at "50 5/8." If I bought 100 shares at 42, how much would I have started with and how much would I get by selling at 50 5/8?

A. OK, back to basics. In stocks, a point is one dollar. The fractions are parts of a dollar. The smallest fraction usually is one-eighth, although very low-priced stocks trade in sixteenths and even thirty-seconds.

In your example, you would have paid $4,200 plus brokerage commission when you bought and received $5,062.50 minus brokerage commission when you sold.

It should be noted, in bond trading, a point is 1 percent of face value. Because most marketable bonds come in $1,000 minimum face value denominations, a point in a bond is $10. A bond quoted at "99" is worth $990 per $1,000 face value in the marketplace.

Q. How do I find out where to buy stocks at $2 a share?

A. By contacting a number of brokerage firms, until you find one handling "penny stocks" — the nickname for those trading below $5 a share. Many brokerages refuse to touch penny stocks, because the vast majority of such issues are little more than a crash shoot.

At the risk of stirring up the animals and bringing in screaming-mad letters from some brokers, I recommend Atlantic City or Las Vegas over penny stocks.

Q. Can buying shares of stock be done through the mail?

A. Sure, but you'll have to open an account with a brokerage firm first. With that accomplished, you can place buy and/or sell orders by mail or phone.

Although some investors make frequent visits to brokerage offices, lots of others never see their brokers face-to-face. If you prefer the mails, you can handle things that way, but using the phone is much easier.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Arco testing possible Caballos find

From Staff Reports

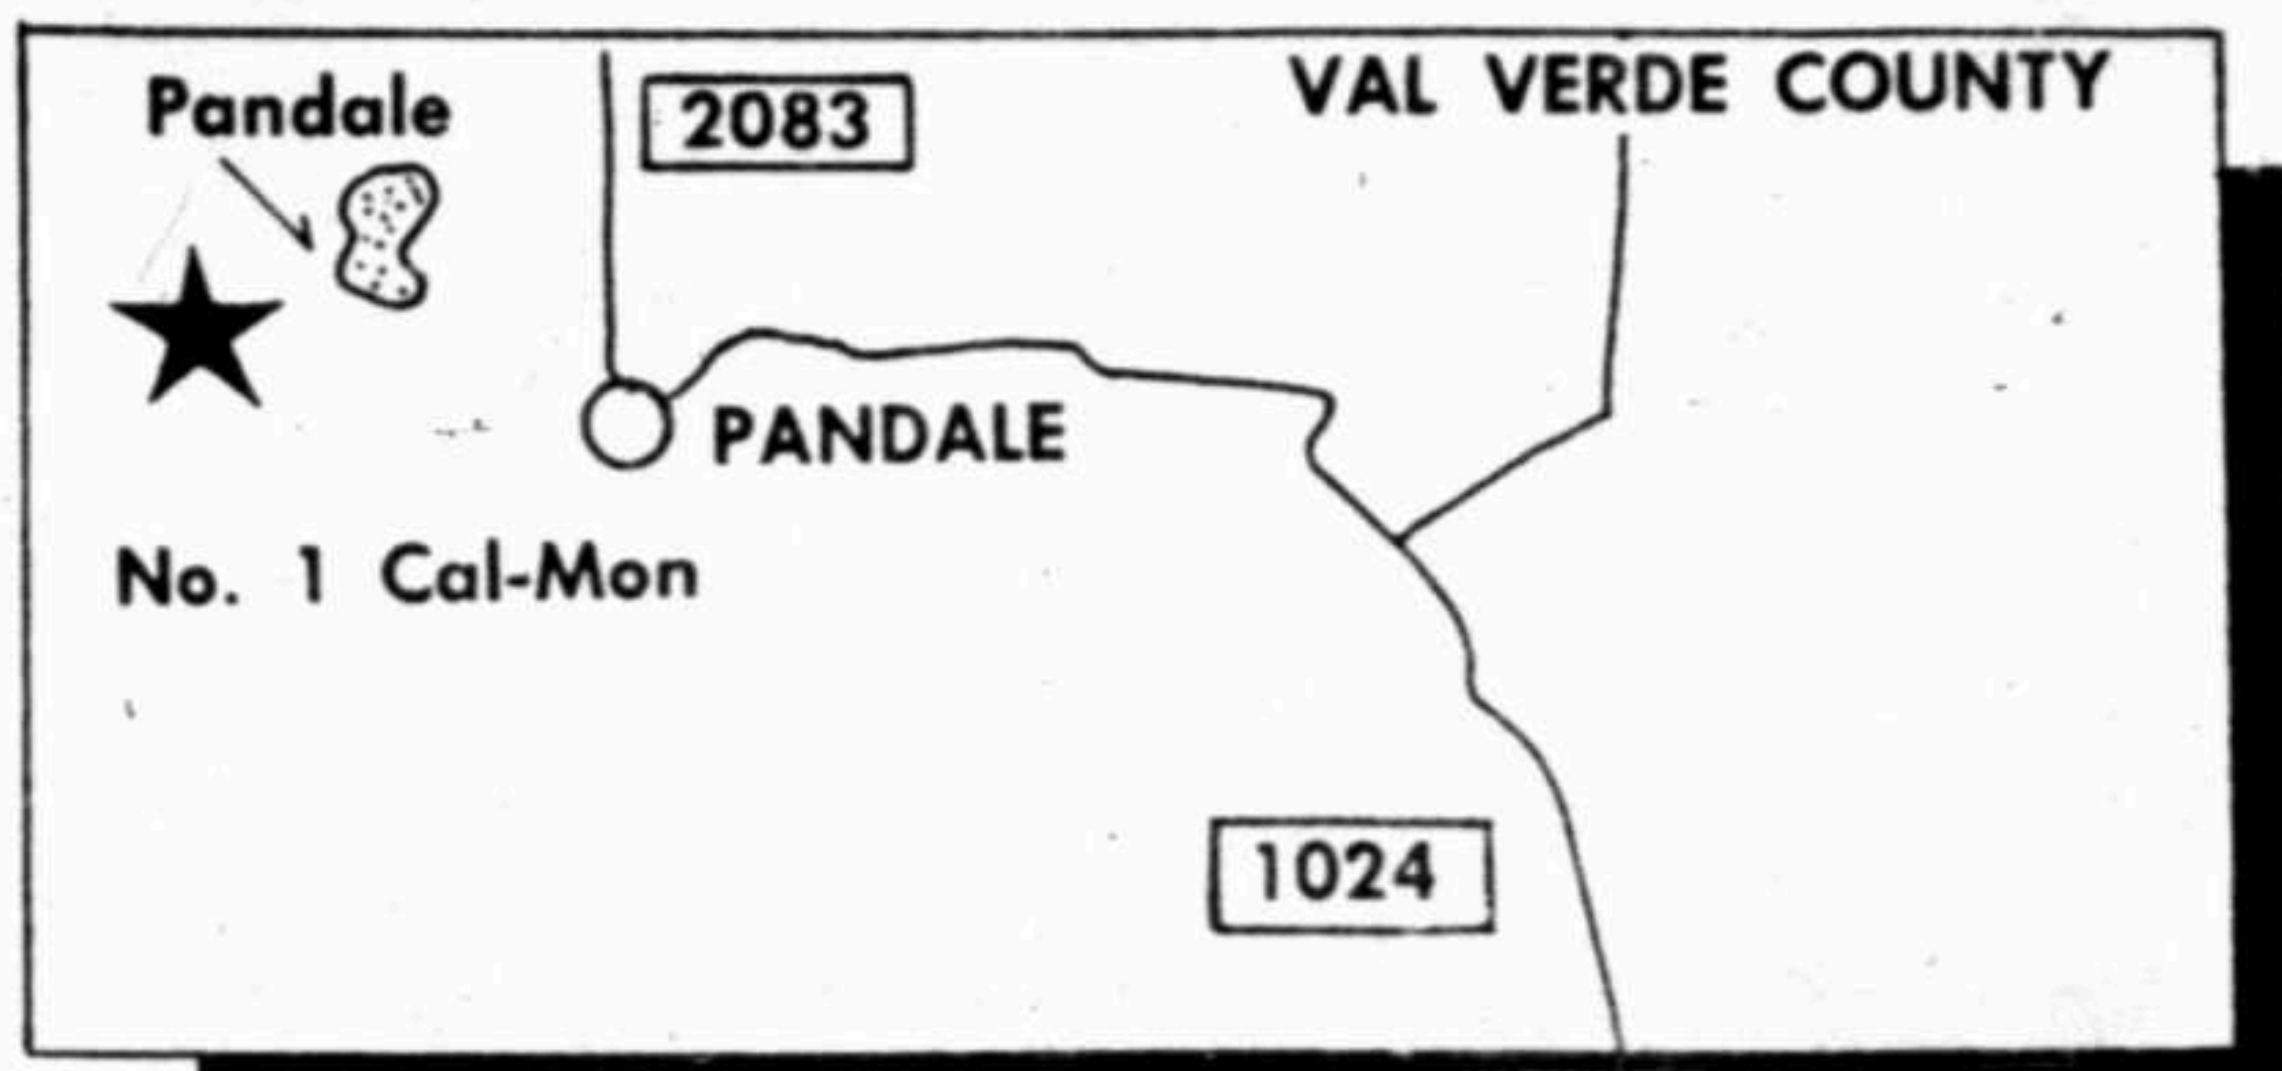

A 10,000 ft. explorer in Val Verde County may yield a Caballos gas discovery for ARCO OIL & GAS CO. The No. 1 Cal-Mon was drilled to a total depth of 7,000 ft. After three drill stem tests, the well was plugged back to 3,449 ft. and perforated in the Caballos zone at 3,372 to 3,410 ft. Following a fracturing job consisting of 42,000 gals. gel, 67,000 lbs. 20/40 sand and 24,000 lbs. 10/20 sand, the well flowed 75 barrels of load water on various chokes in a 10 1/4 hour test.

A retrievable bridge plug was set at 1,208 ft. with two sacks of sand on top. The Caballos was perforated from 1,194 to 1,208 ft. after three barrels of 10 percent acetic acid was spotted across the interval. After swabbing seven barrels of load water, the interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe acid.

The Caballos was squeezed with 200 sacks of Class C cement with 2 percent CaCl₂ with 100 sacks Class C with 2 percent CaCl₂ with 5 lbs. per sack of 20/40 sand. The operator then nipped up a wellhead, moved off the pulling unit and shut in the well pending production tests.

Midland Farms well flows 287 barrels oil

An Andrews County wildcat has been completed as a new Devonian producer in the Midland Farms Deep field.

AMOCO PRODUCTION CO., Andrews, potentiated the No. 158 Midland Farms to flow 287 barrels of crude, 679 Mcfd and 234 barrels of water on a 28/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 400 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 11,038 to 12,073 ft., which had been acidized with 6,000 gallons of 15 percent HCL and fractured with 115,000 gals. 20 percent HCL. Gas-oil ratio is 2.366:1.

Permitted as a 12,600 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 12,168 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 12,150 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation 3,087.6 ft., include the Wolfcamp at 8,430 ft., Atoka "F" at 10,000, Devonian at 10,885, and the Fusselman at 11,925 ft. Pay was topped at 11,038 ft.

and 3,296 ft. from west lines of Section 2, Block 42, T-2-N, G&MMB&A survey, 16 miles southeast of Andrews.

Amoco recently completed the No. 175 Midland Farms Deep Unit, also a 12,600 ft. wildcat, to pump 27 barrels of crude, 17 Mcfd and three barrels of water from perforations 8,570 to 8,598 ft. A third wildcat, the No. 162 Midland Farms Deep Unit, is being drilled.

Texaco completes 154 barrel producer

TEXACO, INC., Midland, has completed a third Cherry Canyon producer and southern extension to the Brushy Draw field.

On potential test, the No. 3 Lovington "AY" pumped 154 barrels of 36 gravity crude, 188 Mcfd and 339 barrels of water from perforations 4,994 to 5,038 ft. The interval was acidized with 6,500 gallons 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 83,000 gallons of gel and 226,000 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 1.221:1.

Scheduled as a 5,150 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,320 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 5,680 ft. Pay was topped at 4,994 ft.

Location is 1,857 ft. from north and 2,027 ft. from west lines of Section 3, Block 57, T-1, T&P survey, 13 miles northwest of Orla.

Eldorado field gains southeast extension

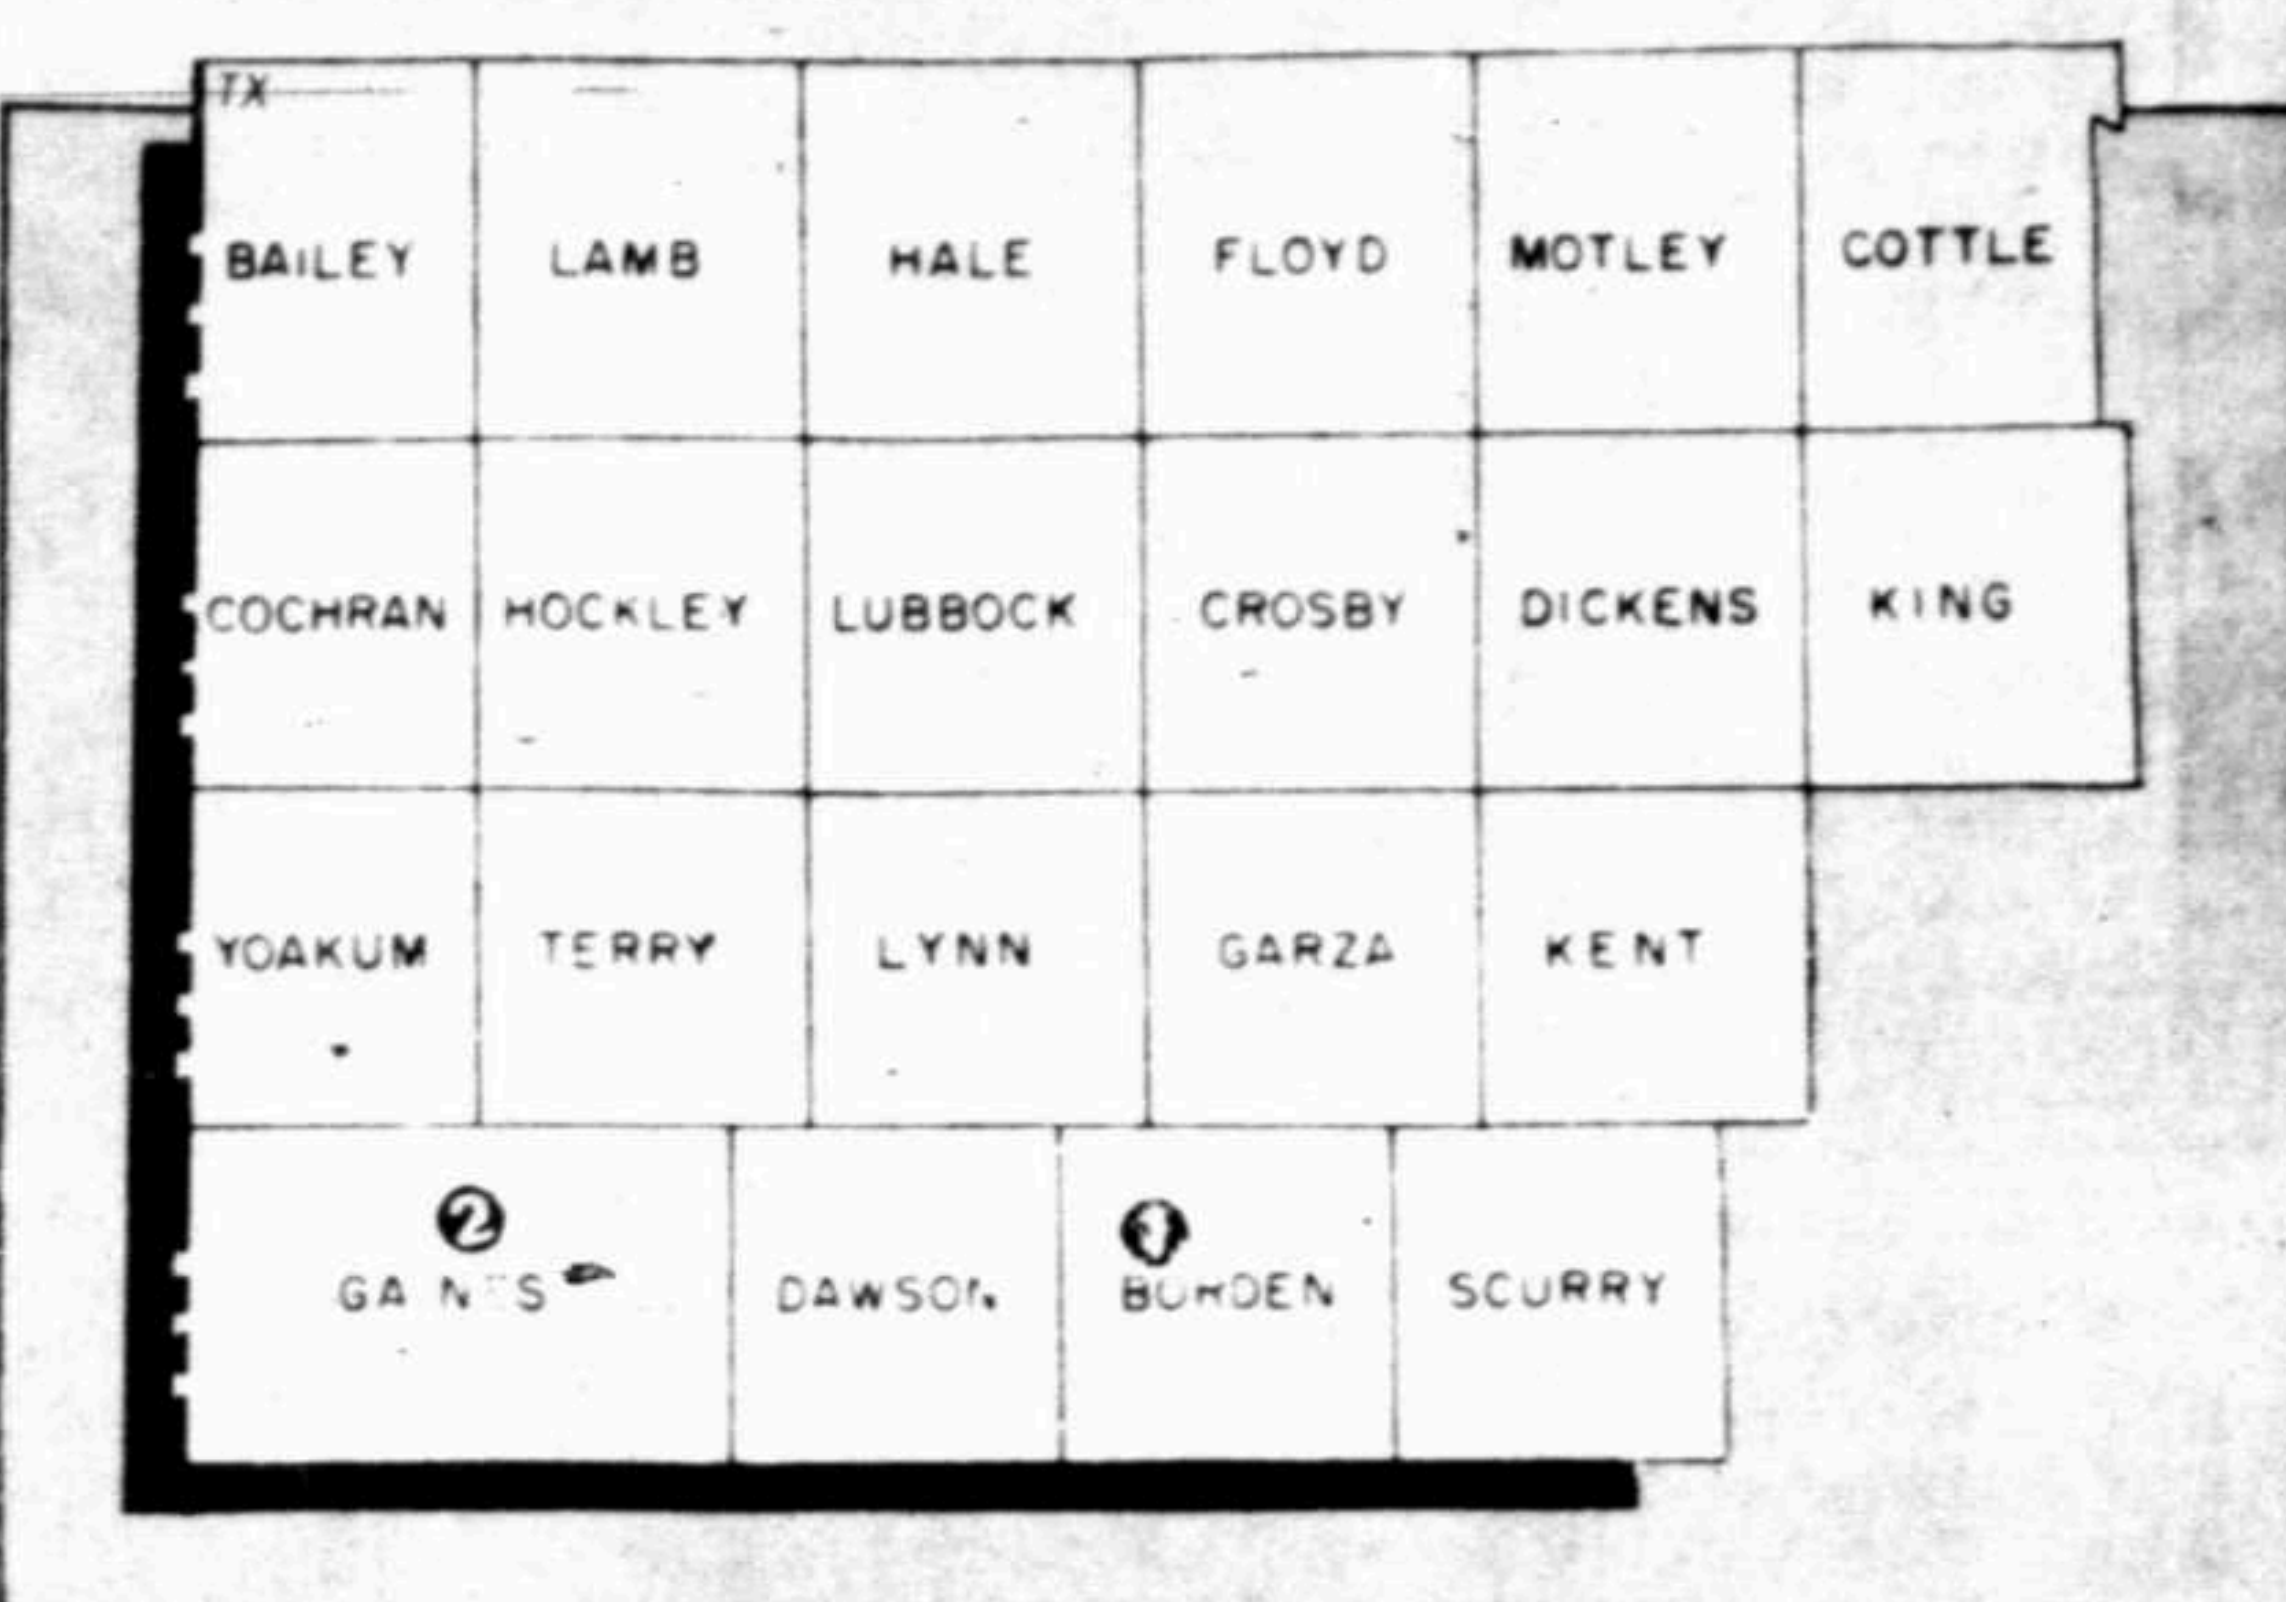

The Eldorado field of Schleicher County gained a new Canyon gas producer, extending production in the field 3/4-mile southeast.

REGAL DEVELOPMENT, Eldorado, finalized the No. 2 Enoch-Sada Ellen for a calculated absolute open flow of 920 Mcfd. Production is from perforations 6,249 to 6,260 ft., which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons acid and fractured with 23,000 gallons frac.

Permitted as a 6,400 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 6,375 ft. and was plugged back to 6,350 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,370 ft.

Location is 1,140 ft. from south and 2,017 ft. from east lines of Section 27, Block LL, TCR survey, nine miles north of Eldorado.

Graham-McCormick has loss of $11 million

COVINGTON, La. (SWN) — Graham-McCormick Oil & Gas Partnership, a publicly-traded master limited partnership, reported its results of operations for the three and 12 months ended December 31, 1986.

During the fourth quarter of 1986, operations produced a net loss of $11,573,000, or $6.60 per Unit, on revenues of $5,712,000. This compared with a net loss of $830,000, or $1.10 per Unit, on revenues of $6,754,000 for the fourth quarter of 1985. The net loss for the fourth quarter of 1986 is primarily due to a $10,569,000 non-cash charge resulting from a writedown of the value of oil and gas properties.

Mesa Offshore Trust announces distribution

HOUSTON (SWN) — Mesa Offshore Trust announced the Trust income distribution for the month of April 1987. Unit holders of record on April 30, 1987, will receive a distribution amounting to $5,945,078.44 or $0.022593 per unit payable on July 31, 1987.

Lone Star Gas honors 1,250,000th customer

WACO (SWN) — Installation of a gold gas meter at a Waco home marked a milestone for Lone Star Gas Co., signifying that the company reached one and one-quarter million customers for the gas utility. The new home of Waco attorney Richard McCall, and his wife Jill, was selected for the honor.

The meter was donated by the manufacturer, Rockwell International, specifically for this celebration. The McCalls will receive a complementary gas grill and gas light for their new home.

Summit Energy extends current exchange offer

DALLAS (SWN) — Summit Energy, Inc. announced that it is extending the pending offer to exchange six of its Common Shares for each of its 569,000 outstanding $1.80 Cumulative Convertible Preferred Shares. Summit is currently discussing with two separate companies the possibility of a consolidation of Summit's operations with either of such companies through a merger, sale of assets or otherwise. To permit the holders of Preferred Shares to be fully informed concerning these matters, management has determined to extend the expiration of the Exchange Offer to 5:00 p.m. Dallas, Texas time on June 23, 1987.

Panhandle Eastern directors declare dividend

HOUSTON (SWN) — The Board of Directors of Panhandle Eastern Corp. has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share on the common stock outstanding, payable June 15, 1987, to shareholders of record on May 22, 1987.

Waco (SWN) — Installation of a gold gas meter at a Waco home marked a milestone for Lone Star Gas Co., signifying that the company reached one and one-quarter million customers for the gas utility. The new home of Waco attorney Richard McCall, and his wife Jill, was selected for the honor.

The meter was donated by the manufacturer, Rockwell International, specifically for this celebration. The McCalls will receive a complementary gas grill and gas light for their new home.

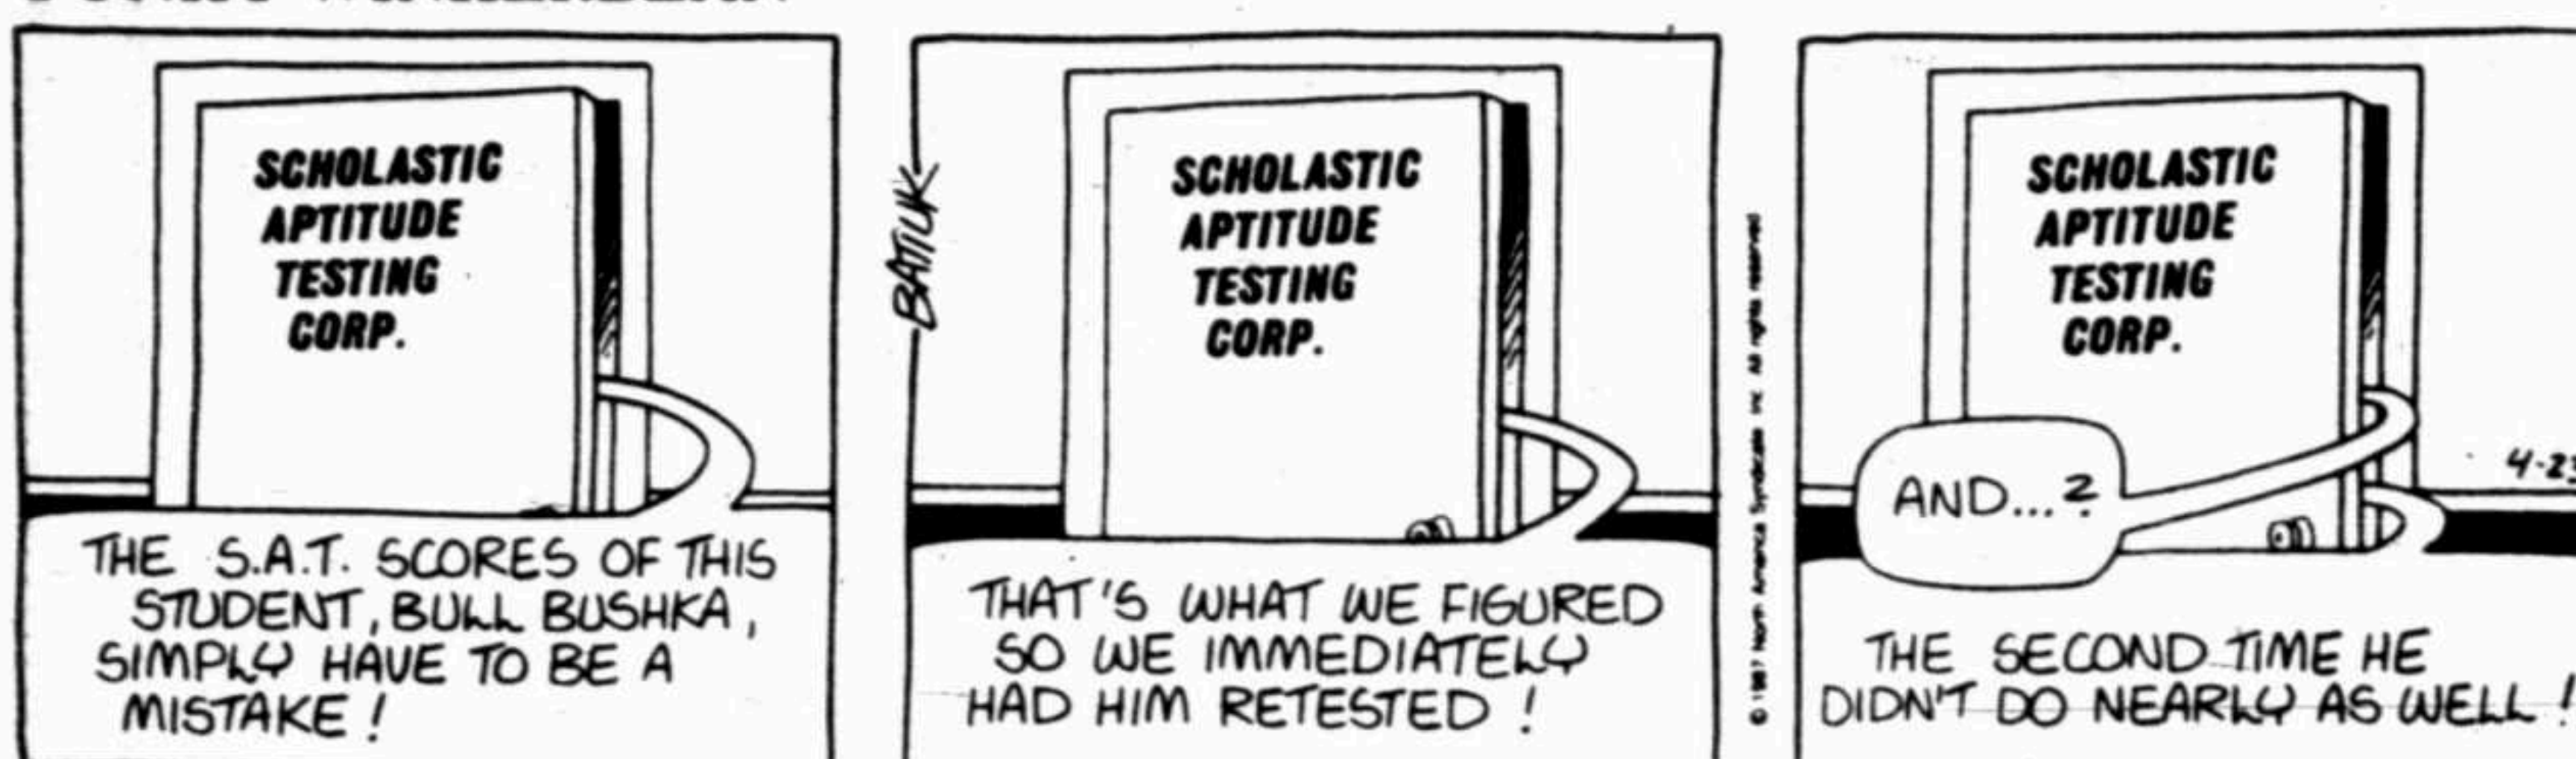

Lone Star Gas was formed in 1908. It took nearly 60 years to reach the one-millionth customer mark, and 19 years to grow to 1.25 million customers, adding an average of over 13,100 customers yearly since 1968.

FRIDAY, APRIL 24, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY:

A desire for wealth will grow in the year ahead. Go for it! Two incomes are possible. Get a credit matter straightened out as soon as possible. You find a way to slip easily into a new environment. Your personal magnetism reaches a peak in April. Be less domineering at home and your loved ones will become happier and more confident. Remain true to your values.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES:

Actress-dancer-author Shirley MacLaine, superstar Barbra Streisand, poet Robert Penn Warren, singer Shirley Boone, actress Jill Ireland, artist Willem de Kooning.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A financial situation improves when you level with family members. They want to help. Do not take everything that is said this week and too seriously. A thoughtful gesture will work magic in romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A new book could captivate you. You find yourself in a power position at a social event. Family relationships are more important to you than outside relationships. Speak from the heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The weekend will have its ups and downs. Get household chores out of the way early in case you receive an unexpected invitation. Call a family member and confide. There is strength in numbers!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Friends may not be all they pretend to be when the chips are down. Choose your family's traditions over ideas proposed by prospective in-laws, but be tactful. Get out and socialize this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Visit a sibling or parent. You may not know exactly where you stand, but you instinctively do the right thing. You receive new public recognition when you become less emotional about business decisions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Develop your physical abilities. Travel lifts your spirits and could provide the setting for an exciting romance. Contact friends at a distance - they have good news to share! Write more letters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A promise is kept. You are overjoyed! Inside information will help you beat out the competition. Romance will need a more sensitive approach. Stop asking for reassurance and act confidently. Avoid issuing ultimatums.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Disregard the words of someone who may have ulterior motives. You receive some news that will put more money in your savings account. Do not take a loved one for granted. Show appreciation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You know how to turn on the charm when it comes to getting your views across. Be careful, however, not to overdo it. A trip could combine business with pleasure. Take mate along if you can.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You receive valuable information from an unknown supporter. Those who have been through a rough time now see the light at the end of the tunnel. Enjoy a platonic relationship the way it is.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Let others know what is on your mind. Awards and scholarships are available for the deserving. Push too hard for an answer and you will get one you do not like. Family members are cooperative.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Taking a selfish approach will boomerang. Stop and think things through. A generation gap will close if you become a better listener. Welcome constructive suggestions, no matter who makes them. Be open minded.

Dear Charlie:

I have often seen hands in team matches where both North-South and East-West have played in the same strain. In a match between two of the top teams in France, a new record was set on this deal—one team reached the same from different sides of the table!

At the first table, Michel Lebel elected to gamble on three no trump after his partner had preempted with three diamonds in first seat. West led his fourth-best heart, and everything hinged on the diamond finesse. Declarer had high hopes when he ran the ten of diamonds and it held, but these were soon dashed when West showed out on the second round of the suit. He eventually went down three tricks.

At the other table, South passed his partner's preempt and West reopened with a double. My favorite partner, Paul Chemla, chose to bid three no trump with the East cards,

After the ten of diamonds was allowed to hold the first trick, North won the second diamond and continued the suit. Even though Paul played the heart suit correctly to lose only one trick in setting up the suit, he had to concede five tricks—two spades, a heart and two diamonds—for down one.

Purists might observe that the high cards were split evenly between the two sides, and with only 20 points neither side should be in game. However, North-South needed only to find the king of diamonds right to romp home with nine tricks, so I wouldn't fault them greatly.

As ever,
 Omar

Dallas high school student will soon toot his own horn on 'Tonight Show'

DALLAS (AP) — Seven years of practicing on someone else's trumpet have finally paid off for Roy Hargrove, who can soon toot his own custom-made concert-quality horn thanks to fellow player Doc Severinsen.

Hargrove, 17, earned a billing in a June concert with the "Tonight Show" bandleader last week, when the youngster was named to an all-star band at the Musicfest U.S.A. jazz competition in Chicago.

Officials of the competition, sponsored by Down Beat magazine, told Severinsen that Hargrove was unable to buy a trumpet. Severinsen offered to buy him one, said Bart Marantz, director of jazz studies at the Arts Magnet High School.

Hargrove, who also won a $5,000 scholarship to the Berklee College of Music in Boston, says he took up the trumpet when he was 10. "I really wanted to play the saxophone, but I had this cornet that my dad used to play, so I started fooling around with that," he said Tuesday.

NEW YORK (AP) — The program tonight opens with still images of young Ronald Reagan, accompanied by the song "You Do Something to Me."

This is the first of three 1-hour broadcasts scheduled this year for "The Jennings-Koppel Report," a new entry by ABC News in prime-time, featuring anchors Peter Jennings and Ted Koppel.

Though it is pre-empting the network's "20/20" newsmagazine show tonight, Jennings says he hopes that "Jennings-Koppel" will eventually mean more news in prime time.

"If management can get us time — in this case, you know, we are pre-empting — but if it works over time, and we get more time for information programming, all the better," Jennings said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

Tonight's broadcast promises an engaging and thoughtful combination of discussion, interviews and film clips examining Ronald Reagan's presidency in the context of Reagan's roots.

"We've got 21 months left in the Reagan presidency, but he has already left a legacy," Jennings said. "We thought it was a good time to go back and look at his beginnings and see what got him into the Iran affair."

"The thing about the Iran affair is that the president's management style is really brought into focus, the kind of things Ronald Reagan did for years got him in trouble in this case, and it's never gotten him in trouble before."

"What is it about this president that has left him, even at the end of the Iran affair, with a place in the heart of the American people?"

Jennings, anchor of "World News Tonight," and Koppel, anchor of the network's late-night news show, "Nightline," sit in chairs and talk about Reagan, occasionally turning to a large monitor for still photos and film clips, some from early Reagan films.

In one, "Murder in the Air" from 1940, Reagan plays an agent guarding a secret Navy defense plan called the "inertia projector." Cut to Reagan as president, proposing the so-called "Star Wars" defense system.

as governor of California, is shown describing a woman's right to an abortion as "self-defense," as he signs California's liberal abortion law.

"He has sounded consistent over the years," Koppel says in a rough script for portions of the program not available for previewing. "But so often he has talked us in one direction, while walking us in another. We wouldn't have let Jimmy Carter get away with it, or Richard Nixon, or Lyndon Johnson. They, after all, may have been comfortable in the job, but they were awkward in the role."

Jennings and Koppel eventually conclude that the conflict in Nicaragua came to embody Reagan's view of the world as a simple matter of good vs. evil and led to the Iran-Contra scandal that has rocked Reagan's presidency in its penultimate year.

Jennings describes Reagan as a "lucky" politician. He had no Vietnam war. The Iran affair, while damaging, has not been as crippling as, say, a Watergate. The national debt will not become more than an abstract concept until after he leaves office.

The real legacy Reagan leaves behind is embodied in his most elusive quality. Jennings notes that "no presidency before this one was so often judged as if it were a performing art. I shudder when it's suggested that politicians who come after him will have to succeed first on television."

ABC is also airing an ambitious documentary Friday, "The Bomb Factories," a critical look at poorly maintained factories where nuclear weapons are manufactured under the supervision of the Department of Energy. Richard Threlkeld reports on the results of a six-month investigation.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Former Chief Justice Warren E. Burger says the Constitution's bicentennial celebrations finally are taking shape.

Burger, chairman of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution, said Philadelphia still has a lot of ahead for the celebrations.

"You've got to raise money and all the other things. It's not an easy assignment. But I am sure it is going to work out very well," he said.

That is where it happened and that is where the whole country, and really the whole world, should be looking on the 17th of September," said Burger, who was at Princeton University on Wednesday to receive the James Madison Award from the American Whig-Closophic Society, a debating group.

NEW YORK (AP) — A landlord has moved in court to evict opera composer Gian Carlo Menotti from his rent-controlled apartment.

Claridge Gardens Inc. contends that Menotti should not be allowed to keep the two-bedroom apartment for the controlled price of $799 a month, which is low by Manhattan standards, because it is not his primary residence. The law says a tenant must stay in an apartment at least six months of the year for it to be considered a primary residence.

The landlord cited an October story in The New York Times that said Menotti, 75, owned a home in Scotland.

Menotti, best known for his work "Amahl and the Night Visitors," admitted in court papers that he stays in the apartment only about three months a year, but said it has been his home for 23 years and he has no other.

Journalist says Linnas charges against him

(P) — A Soviet journalist said that a suspected Nazi war criminal was being held in isolation over by U.S. authorities has been placed in isolation where he is under strict surveillance.

The man, who was identified as Karl Linnas, is being held in Tallin, capital of the Soviet republic of Estonia.

Linnas was accused of being involved in a Nazi concentration camp at which thousands of Jews were killed in the killings of 12,000 Polish women and children.

Linnas was arrested in absentia, to death. Linnas was innocent.

Linnas was held in Tallin on a special Aeroflot flight last night.

Linnas' deportation showed with U.S. officials who put him on board, Czechoslovakia, where he was arrested, Soviet authorities.

70 Iranians killed

(AP) — The main Iranian rebel army claimed Wednesday its fighters had killed a column of 500 government Revolutionary Guards in the mountains of northwest Iran.

The Mujahadeen Khalq (People's Army) announced the ambush occurred Sunday near a town in the Kurdish-inhabited area that straddles the Iran-Iraq border.

Yitzhak Shamir, Foreign Minister and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, the initial section of the report on financial transactions in the area, the radio said.

The report would be sent early next week to investigators.

The board will continue work on the report, which is based on the former director general of the Mossad, David Kimche, businessman Alon Y. Davik Nimrodi, and Amiram Omer's counter-terrorism

Turn chaos to cash by managing papers

By JAY GOLDINGER
Copley News Service

Nothing is more maddening than searching for a scrap of paper that could cost you hundreds or thousands of dollars if you can't find it. A stock certificate, a guarantee, a receipt, a life insurance policy, proof from a financial transaction that took place 10 years ago.

Too many of us live out of the proverbial shoebox year-round. We pile up important papers to file later and forget them. And then can't find these financial records at tax time or when we have to apply for a loan.

But now is as good a time as any to organize your personal finances. By starting now, you will have a full year organized when tax time rolls around again next year.

In fact, here's how to turn chaos into cash by managing your most important papers, by becoming your own personal money manager. Sure, it would be nice to have an accountant or bookkeeper on your retainer to do it for you, but you can organize yourself in less than 10 minutes a day and save a minimum $500 a month in professional fees.

Jean Ross Peterson, a college lecturer on personal record keeping, advises people not to be overwhelmed by the dozens and dozens of details it seemingly takes to keep track of their money. In her nifty $5.95 paperback "Organize Your Personal Finances" (Betterway Publications) she tells us to "organize, don't agonize." Fine, but how?

TAKE A simple but hard-nosed approach to caring for your cash, Peterson advises. "The first step is into a bank and the first lesson is that all banks are 'piggy banks.' They want to turn a profit first, make a friend second," she says.

True. So, shop for a banker who will be there when you need him or her in a pinch, find out the fees they charge (some charge $15 an hour to verify transactions, some do it free) and "hire" them by banking there. Forge a relationship.

Next, order a big checkbook. The kind you keep in a desk, not your wallet or purse. Peterson says small checkbooks encourage impulse spending. Carry one bank credit card for "spare cash" and keep the rest in a desk drawer if your balances are bloated from Christmas or if you use them too freely. Meanwhile, imprint only your name and address on your checks, no phone number or other ID. Don't make it easy for scoundrels or telephone salespeople to get to you.

Bill paying shouldn't be a trauma, either. Instead of waiting until the end of the month and spending an hour or two writing checks, separate bills into piles according to their due dates, suggests Peterson. It's less painful because you don't feel like you've depleted your checking account in one fell swoop. More importantly, you pay bills on time — not before, so creditors can work on your money, and not afterward, so you run the risk of late charges or, worse yet, a blotch on your credit.

Meantime, don't trust your memory. Identify what the money was for on every check written. And reconcile your check book at the end of the month to make sure you and the bank's computers agree. This sounds so basic, it's laughable. But, remember, computers and the people who operate them make mistakes. Just as any corporate comptroller. After all, you are the comptroller for yourself and your family.

SET UP a filing system. Again, this sounds absolutely fundamental, but I can tell you that even some of the most sophisticated investors don't have one. Peterson recommends an accordion-fold file for $7. But I feel that a two-drawer metal file cabinet with a lock is a solid investment. Used or new, they range from $25 to $65.

Then, type gummed labels for the following 18 categories: auto/transportation, clothing, deductibles, insurance, investments, legal, medical/dental, pleasure, taxes (state/federal), shelter, utilities, income, warranties/guarantees, personal, professional/non-deductible, inventory/photos and serial numbers, credit cards, credit card purchase statements. Use broad categories rather than a lot of specifics; makes filing easier, says Peterson.

I'd like to add a couple points, under investments, make separate file folders for stocks, bonds, certificates of deposit, mutual funds, savings accounts. That makes it easier to find documents, statements, dividend information or other things you always need in a hurry but can never lay your hands on.

Next, you need to invest in a safety deposit box at your bank or savings and loan. This is pure protection against burglaries, flood, fire or the disasters that you think will never happen to you. Avoid the private depositories popping up in shopping malls. They go out of business as fast as they open.

Peterson suggests using your safety deposit box for certificates of birth, marriage, death and divorce, stock and bond certificates, insurance policies, military documents, titles to real property — house, auto, apartment building — your pension plan and other legal documents that are difficult to replace. Then type up a list of everything in your safety deposit box and file under "personal."

ALSO, IF you have the recurring urge to splurge, lock up your credit cards and charge plates in your box. More practical than cutting them in half and mailing them back to the bank or department store.

But the backbone of any system is not paper (receipts, reports) but hard facts: the account numbers, names, addresses and phone numbers that you must have at your fingertips when an emergency occurs. And an emergency can be anything from death to a letter from the IRS. (Lots of people think that's a form of death.)

Here, Peterson suggests buying a three-ring notebook with dividers and plenty of paper. On each tab, write one of the following categories: support team, auto/transportation, household, income/deductibles and investments. Then, you simply start listing the hard facts that affect your life and your family.

For example, under support team, you list information on all members — your lawyer, your CPA or tax adviser, doctors, minister, priest or rabbi, broker and investment advisers, banks and your charge cards. Anything from account numbers to information on different documents should be listed in this notebook.

Contests simmering for capable cooks

By LINDA ANDERSON

At my house, we're used to lunches of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and dinners of spaghetti-Os and bananas, but for people who actually cook — and who are accomplished at it (yes, Virginia, some people are excellent cooks and may your best friend be one) — there are several cooking contests simmering. Some of the contests even provide financial reward. For example:

■ The American Veal Association's Favorite Veal Recipe Contest is accepting entries until midnight May 22. Participants must be over 18 years-old, and recipes must be original — and of course be veal dishes. More than one recipe can be entered, but each winner can only claim one prize.

Prizes are $1,000, grand prize; $500 second prize; and $300 third prize. Send recipes to Favorite Veal Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 733, Des Moines, Iowa, 50303.

■ Kraft has (at least) two contests going. One is the 1987 Kraft Marshmallow Creme "Easy Secret Ingredient" Recipe Contest, featuring — you guessed it — marshmallow creme. Rules say each recipe must contain at least one 7-ounce jar of Kraft marshmallow creme. Categories are (A) frozen desserts; (B) desserts: baked or refrigerated; or (C) sweet etceteras, including beverages, candies, soups, sauces, etc. (Fudge recipes are not eligible.)

Prizes are a $5,000 grand prize, three $1,000 first prizes, 11 second prizes of $100 each and 100 runner-up prizes. Contest opens May 1 and entries must be postmarked by midnight Sept. 30 and received by Oct. 9.

For rules and regulations send your name and address to Rules, Kraft Marshmallow Creme "Easy Secret Ingredient" Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 11192, Chicago, Ill., 60611.

■ The second Kraft-sponsored recipe contest is the "Philly" Hall of Fame Recipe Contest. The contest opened April 1 and can be entered until June 30. Recipes must contain at least one 8-ounce package of Philadelphia Brand cream cheese. Categories are (A) cookies and desserts, (B) cheesecakes, (C) appetizers and snacks and (D) main and side dishes. Grand prize for the winner in each category is described in the press release as "a luxurious trip to San Francisco for two in January 1988."

For more information and contest rules, check specially-marked packages of "Philly," or send self-addressed stamped envelope to Rules, "Philly" Hall of Fame Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 4912, Chicago, Ill., 60690-4912.

■ Uncle Ben's Country Inn Brand Rice Dishes Recipe Contest is open now through July 1. Recipes, prepared with any of the nine Country Inn Brand rice dishes, must be in either of two categories: main dishes or salads.

Winners will receive all-expense paid trips to a selected inn — grand prize winner's vacation will be seven days and six nights, while the two (one from each category) first prize winners will stay a weekend at the inn.

In addition to containing at least one package of a Country Inn Brand rice dish with seasoning packet, each recipe must be accompanied by a proof-of-purchase.

For official contest rules, send name and address to Uncle Ben's Country Inn Brand Rice Dishes Recipe Contest Rules, P.O. Box 11166, Chicago, Ill., 60614.

And if anyone needs a dish sampled before entering it in any of these contests, just let me know ...

Abuse of over-the-counter drugs causes serious illness

By MARIAN FARR

Abuse of over-the-counter drugs can lead to vitamin deficiencies, psychological dependence and delay in treatment of serious physical illnesses.

Some people don't think of over-the-counter drugs such as laxatives or cough syrups as drugs, but they are. Many people take a pill or tonic as a magical cure-all, rather than placing their confidence in a physician.

Farr

Self-diagnosis and self-medication with almost any type of over-the-counter drug can have possible side effects.

■ Aspirin is the most widely used medicine in the world. It's a pain reliever, but excessive use has been known to cause kidney damage, ulcers and anemia.

■ Laxatives used over a prolonged period may be habit forming. Stimulant laxatives shouldn't be used when abdominal pain, nausea or vomiting are present.

■ Repeated use of mineral oil may affect the absorption of calcium, phosphates and vitamins A and D.

■ Diuretics are used to purge the body of excess water, but they can produce a wide range of side effects, including rash, headaches, constipation, dizziness, sweating and a tingling feeling in the arms and legs. Also, diuretics can cause the user to lose too much natural salt from the body.

■ Diet pills used indiscriminately can lead to a psychological dependency for the drug.

■ Caffeine taken in pills to help you stay awake will temporarily increase alertness. Large doses can also cause rapid or irregular heart action, muscle twitching, agitation and possibly even convulsions.

■ Cough medicine typically contains a mixture of two to five drugs. A few mixtures contain as much as 50 percent ethyl alcohol, which is the equivalent of 100-proof whiskey.

■ Sleeping pills usually contain antihistamines to induce drowsiness and drugs with other sedative properties. After prolonged use, sleeping pills disrupt healthy, normal sleeping habits. Some of the possible side effects are blurred vision, rapid pulse, dizziness and dryness of the mouth.

Over-the-counter drugs are useful for minor ailments that last a short time. But taking them constantly may be postponing treatment for a serious illness. If symptoms persist, make an appointment with a doctor and find out for sure what is wrong. Then follow the doctor's advice for proper medication.

Chain letters can violate law

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Chain letters seem to be varied in their approach, particularly recent letters reported to the BBB.

There are federal laws governing various uses of the U.S. Postal Service which chain letters could violate. This type of letter is being challenged by the Postal Service because it conflicts with postal lottery, false representation and fraud statutes.

Many chain letters offer a prize (such as a lot of money). Receiving this prize depends upon the chance that following recipients participate in accordance with the letter's terms. Payment of a fee to sponsors listed in the letter is a requisite.

A chain letter may base its claim of legality on elements of the scheme, such as providing "reports" or other items of alleged value to payers of the "participation fee." Such elements do not immunize this chain letter scheme from challenge under the postal laws.

According to the U.S. Postal Service, the printer cannot be held accountable in the scheme unless he mails the letter for his client.

If you are approached about a chain letter or have any questions, call the Better Business Bureau at 1-800-362-4433.

DEAR ABBY

Son's musical beds game breaks house rules

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband's 24-year-old son, Clyde, does not live with us—he lives with a young woman. Clyde asked if they could spend the night at our home after attending a reception in our area. At bedtime, I offered the young lady our guest bedroom. Clyde was assigned our 14-year-old son's bedroom, and our son was given a sleeping bag.

Clyde and the lady went upstairs to get ready for bed. Shortly thereafter, my husband and I retired. At 3 a.m. the lights were still burning in our son's bedroom, which remained unoccupied. (They obviously disregarded our wishes that they occupy separate rooms.)

The following morning at breakfast, our 14-year-old son was aware that this unmarried couple had slept together and made the comment that maybe now he would become an "uncle!"

If my stepson can come into our home and share a bed with his girlfriend, what would prevent our son from assuming that it would be OK for him to do during his courting time?

Neither my husband nor I said anything to Clyde the next morning, but we were certainly upset about his judgment. What do you think? — OLD-FASHIONED AT 50

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: Your stepson and his live-in ladyfriend should have respected your wishes in your home. You need not label yourself "old-fashioned" for disapproving of an unmarried couple sleeping together in your home.

In your home, you set the rules—in their own home, they can sleep five in a bed if they wish. You and your husband should have said something the following morning in the presence of your 14-year-old to impress upon him that you do not approve of unmarried couples sleeping together.

DEAR ABBY: My son is in the eighth grade, and I was horrified by the following comment his English instructor wrote on his assignment: "Is this original? What does this go to do with insects taking over?"

Abby, I am neither a literary genius nor an English grammarian, but I do know the difference between correct and incorrect grammar.

I wrote a note on the back and corrected her blatant error, but my son refused to give it to her. What are your thoughts? — APPALLED IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR APPALLED: I think you overreacted. The teacher obviously made a careless error. I think your son used excellent judgment.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday, a very dear friend of mine died after losing a long and painful battle with lung cancer. Although she would not want anyone to cry over her death, I hope that the flood of tears she caused by leaving us will extinguish more than a few cigarettes.

If my friend's tragic death is to have any meaning, let it be to change our government's idiotic policies toward tobacco. Part of it pays farmers to grow it; another part warns people not to smoke it; yet a third explores ways to make it "safe."

Abby, don't ever relax your campaign to get smokers to stop smoking, and to urge those who don't, never to start! — AL STROHLEIN, SAN DIEGO

DEAR AL: You can count on me to carry on my anti-smoking campaign—and that's a promise.

DEAR ABBY: With reference to an "indoor multilevel parking facility," I think your description covers it perfectly. Though I have never heard one called such, I immediately knew what you were referring to.

As for the Indianapolis reader who criticized you for it, I think he belongs in an indoor multilevel padded confinement facility, government-managed. Very truly yours, ROBERT H. TRAMMELL, ANDERSON, S.C.

Shopping in mall no longer rite of spring

By Stephen Frank
Hearst News and Feature Service

For serious shoppers, a trip to the department store is a rite of spring. Increasingly, though, it's a rite being performed without setting foot in a shopping mall as catalogs, television and home computers replace the mall for many buyers.

An estimated 60 million Americans shopped by mail last year, purchasing $50 billion in merchandise. Clothing led the charge, accounting for 30 percent of sales. According to Maxwell Sroge, a mail-order consultant based in Chicago, the $50 billion total was 12 percent higher than 1985 catalog sales. That growth rate was double the increase in retail sales.

Convenience is the key to the mail-order industry's success. "In about 70 percent of U.S. households, no adult is home during the day to do the shopping," Sroge said. "That's the biggest reason for the increase."

Mail-order consumers may not have much time to shop, but they do seem to have plenty of money to spend. According to a study by Mediarnk Research, the typical mail-order customer earns more than $30,000 a year. The researchers also found that these buyers are between 35 and 44, live outside a metropolitan area, are college graduates and have at least one child living at home.

JUST AS specialty shops and boutiques have challenged the big department stores for customers, specialty catalogs are at the cutting edge of the mail-order industry. What began with Sears, Roebuck & Co.'s encyclopedic general merchandise catalog has splintered into offerings from more than 4,000 specialty publications.

A partial list includes catalogs specializing in everything from bathing suits to woodworking tools. There are catalogs for maternity clothes, golf accessories, art supplies, auto accessories, household gadgets, children's clothes, outdoor gear, wine, model ships and seeds. There's even a catalog for pond and water lilies.

The latest wrinkle in mail-order merchandising is the sale of catalogs in bookstores and newsstands. Rather than waiting for what shows up in the mailbox, the shopper can browse through a rack of catalogs that generally sell for $1 or $2.

"Today's catalogs are the special interest magazines of our time," said Jay Walker, chairman of Catalog Retail Corp., a catalog distribution firm based in New Canaan, Conn. "Discovering a dozen new catalogs is like discovering a new shopping mall."

WHILE CATALOGS are the armchair shopper's bible, modern technology also has turned television sets and home computers into consumer tools. There are currently 43 television home shopping shows broadcasting to 50 million homes. Television shoppers see an auction-style display of goods for sale, which they can order by phone.

On-line computer information services are also competing for mail-order business.

"If you have a personal computer and buy a modem, then you can tap into any of these services," said Jan Bowers, a spokeswoman for CompuServe, an on-line service based in Columbus, Ohio. The service, with 345,000 users, offers an "electronic mall" as one of its data bases. The "mall" has offerings from 102 different merchants, from major retailers to small stores.

To shop in an electronic mall, the computer user pays a one-time database subscription fee and an additional charge for time spent browsing through the catalog of stores. When shoppers want to make a purchase, they simply enter their credit card numbers and the merchandise is shipped to their home.

Insect detectives search out disease

Copley News Service

The magic of fireflies is being used to detect harmful bacteria in drinking water.

Researchers at the University of California at San Diego say what they've learned about fireflies will also help stop urinary infections and aid the fight against other basic bacteriological disease.

It seems the good doctors at UCSD have simply discovered a way to copy the luciferase enzyme, which normally converts light energy to chemical energy in fireflies, and have inserted it into harmful bacteria.

Once that's done, they just turn out the lights and look for the disease.

Decision likely won't close capital punishment issue

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

The Supreme Court's refusal to rule that the death penalty is implemented in a racist way removes the last major argument against capital punishment, but the fight over the practice is not over, opponents and supporters agree.

An Oklahoma public defender predicted the 5-4 decision would unleash a flood of executions, and the California attorney general said it makes it more likely a death sentence will be carried out in that state. Seventy people have been put to death in this country the Supreme Court in 1976 allowed states to resume executions.

While law enforcement officials welcomed Wednesday's ruling, civil rights advocates condemned it as a disturbing return to days of rampant racism.

The nation's highest court rejected the appeal of a black Georgia prisoner who offered evidence that those who kill whites in that state are far more likely to be sentenced to death than those who kill blacks.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, writing for the court, said attorneys for Warren McCleskey had not proved that there was any racial bias in his case.

"That's very, very good news," said Mark Rotert, head of criminal appeals for the Illinois attorney general. "We're going to have one less issue to resolve in capital litigation."

"This decision is a throwback to the days of slavery and Jim Crow, when it was murder to kill a white but not murder to kill a black," said Harvard Law Professor Alan Dershowitz. "A majority of the Supreme Court has become part of a lynch mob which is encouraging racist injustice."

"It will open the floodgates. I would not be surprised if we had 100 to 150 executions between now and the end of the year," said Bob Ravitz, chief public defender for Oklahoma County, Okla.

"There are now no issues left before the Supreme Court that would hold up executions. So all executions are going to go forward," said Ron Dusek, spokesman for Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox. Texas has 250 prisoners under death sentences.

David Whitmore, legal director for the American Civil Liberties Union in New Orleans, said nearly a dozen of the 47 inmates on Louisiana's death row had staked their hopes for survival on the McCleskey case.

McCleskey, who is black, was convicted of murdering a white Atlanta police officer in 1978.

"This was the last broad-based issue that the court needed to address, but it by no means means that death-penalty opponents will be stymied in finding some other issue to raise," said Jim Coman, a senior deputy attorney general for North Carolina. "There will be another issue that will replace the white victim issue," Coman said. "I just don't know what it will be."

"It won't speed up anything, but that's one more issue they can't use now," said Jack Morris, who handles death sentence cases for the attorney general's office in Missouri.

In California, Attorney General John Van de Kamp said the court's action "undoubtedly will have an impact on all death penalty cases in California."

If the decision had gone the other way, "it would be very questionable whether we could ever have a death penalty in Georgia," state Attorney General Michael Bowers said Wednesday. He said he will move swiftly to seek new execution orders for four or five death-row prisoners whose appeals have been exhausted.

"I do not expect wholesale executions, but I do think, sadly enough, that we are going to get back in the business of killing people, not only in this state but in states throughout the South," said George Kendall, an ACLU attorney in Atlanta.

"It is our hope that in another day, in another case, that the dissent in this case, which spoke so eloquently about the sad history of racism, we'll get five or six of those votes and end this nonsense once and for all."

The Rev. Tim McDonald, coordinator of special projects for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in Atlanta, called for civil disobedience "to totally disrupt the legal system and to put a screaming halt to that machinery that continues to grind up lives as if they're animals."

Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, called the decision deeply disturbing, but said the court must be obeyed.

"I suppose we'll have to try to find another case where the facts are better and will more dramatically illustrate what we're trying to prove," Hooks said.

"For the moment, it will be an end to the constitutional claim that race is an impermissibly significant element in death-penalty decision-making, but it is not the end of the fight," said Henry Schwarzhild, director of the ACLU's capital punishment project.

"What it does is tell people there won't be any major movement away from the death penalty in quite a while," said Lester Bower, an inmate on Texas' death row. "They've shut the door for quite a while and it'll take a pretty good crowbar to get the door open."

Little surprise voiced on Texas' Death Row

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — There was little surprise on Texas' Death Row after the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling in a major capital punishment case removed most remaining barriers to continued executions.

On Wednesday, the high court voted 5-4 to uphold the Georgia death penalty law, saying the statute was constitutional despite statistics that show blacks convicted of killing whites are more likely to get the death penalty.

It is the latest in a series of Supreme Court rulings in recent years that have narrowed legal avenues for halting executions.

"What is does is tell people there won't be any major movement away from the death penalty in quite a while," said inmate Lester Bower. "They've shut the door for quite a while and it'll take a pretty good crowbar to get the door open."

Clifford X. Phillips, a black man scheduled to die by lethal injection for his conviction of the slaying of a white Houston woman, said he held little faith in the court to begin with.

"I don't put my faith in the institutions of society," said Phillips, who prefers to be called by his Islamic name, Abdullah Bashir. "I think things will get worse long before they get better."

Phillips said he lost interest in the legal process after the 1982 execution of Charlie Brooks, the first of 22 men to be executed in Texas since the Supreme Court allowed the death penalty to resume. Phillips said continued interest in legal matters would have driven him to suicide.

"I've learned how to put my life above things I have no control over," he said.

Fellow death row inmate Jim Vanderbilt said the ruling did not surprise him.

"Bang, bang, bang," Vanderbilt said, noting that the court already has struck down arguments from death penalty opponents citing disproportionality of sentences and qualifications of jurors.

"The court doesn't pay any attention to statistics," Vanderbilt said. "It was dead in my mind before it got started."

Vanderbilt said a ruling against the death penalty in the Georgia case could have meant commutation for all of the 250 men and women on Death Row in Texas, which leads the nation in the number of executions.

Of the 22 people executed, 12 have been white, six Hispanic and four black. About 40 percent of the Texas Death Row inmates are black.

Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, said the decision leaves no issues now before the Supreme Court that would hold up executions.

"So all executions are going to go forward," Dusek said. "This had the potential of stopping all executions in Texas. It could have had a far-reaching impact."

In recent Texas cases that have invoked the Georgia case, Anthony Williams, a black man convicted of killing a white girl in Houston in 1978, won a stay last week less than a day before he was to receive lethal injection.

Elliott Rod Johnson, a black Port Arthur man convicted of killing a white Beaumont jeweler, also won a stay using the pending Georgia case as a precedent.

Supreme Court's decision called 'racist'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The future of capital punishment seems to have been assured by the Supreme Court in a decision that death penalty foes call an example of "simple racism."

The court Wednesday ruled that state death penalty laws can be valid despite statistics indicating they are carried out in racially discriminatory ways.

The 5-4 decision upheld Georgia's death penalty system even though killers of white people in that state are far more likely to be condemned to death than those who kill blacks.

The court, led by Justice Lewis F. Powell, said statistics indicating a pattern of racial bias in sentencing convicted murderers is not enough to prove constitutional violations.

Defendants must prove their own sentence was tainted by such bias, the court said.

In previous decisions, the court had allowed statistical evidence to prove illegal discrimination in employment and unlawful racial bias in selecting criminal juries.

The ruling dashed what many death penalty opponents considered to be their best chance of saving hundreds of the nearly 1,900 men and women on death rows nationwide, removing their last legal claim.

Justice William J. Brennan, writing for the court's dissenters, said changing the sentence of some convicted murderers to life in prison "is not too high a price to pay for a death penalty system that does not discriminate on the basis of race."

Powell was joined by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia.

Joining Brennan in dissent were Justices Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens. Marshall is the only black on the court.

"It will open the floodgates," Oklahoma public defender Bob Ravitz predicted. "I would not be surprised if we had 100-150 executions between now and the end of the year."

Similar predictions by legal experts over the past decade have proved inaccurate. Since the Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976, 70 U.S. prison inmates have been put to death by electrocution, poison gas, firing squad or lethal injection.

Numerous procedural safeguards, many of them mandated by the high court, remain in force. Death row inmates often succeed in postponing their executions for years.

"This decision is a throwback to the days of slavery and Jim Crow, when it was murder to kill a white but not murder to kill a black," said Harvard law professor Alan Dershowitz. He called the ruling "simple racism, and a majority of the Supreme Court has become part of a lynch mob."

"What they are saying is that white life can be made more valuable than black life," said Rick Harris, a Montgomery, Ala., lawyer opposed to capital punishment.

Mark Rotert, an Illinois prosecutor, called the ruling "very, very good news." And other law enforcement officials predicted that the decision will help clear some of the chaos in death penalty litigation.

The ruling upheld the death sentence given Warren McCleskey, who is black, for the 1978 murder of a white Atlanta policeman.

McCleskey's legal arguments were entwined with a statistical study by a University of Iowa law professor, David Baldus.

In his study, Baldus examined every Georgia murder conviction from 1973 to 1978 and found that people who killed whites were four to 11 times more likely to receive the death penalty than were those who killed blacks.

Contacted in Iowa City, Baldus said, "The proof that was presented in this case was quite comparable to proof that is presented routinely in employment discrimination cases, and evidence of this type would customarily have been held sufficient to establish a claim of purposeful discrimination."

Since 1984, the high court has rejected two other broad attacks on capital punishment.

It ruled that death sentences may be meted out even if state courts do not try to determine whether others convicted of similar crimes were treated more leniently.

And it ruled that death penalty opponents may be barred from serving as jurors in determining guilt or innocence in capital cases, saying that rights to a fair trial are not violated if such exclusions result in "conviction-prone" juries.

One significant capital punishment case remains on the Supreme Court's docket. The justices agreed last February to use an Oklahoma case to decide whether the death penalty is a valid punishment for convicted murderers who committed their crimes before they were 18 years old.

About 35 current death row inmates were condemned for murders committed as juveniles.

Execution of minors to be debated by court

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — An Oklahoma case accepted for review by the U.S. Supreme Court may give it the opportunity to decide another major question regarding the death penalty: whether states can execute minors.

Fifteen states, including Oklahoma, have on their death rows people who committed their crimes before they were 18 years old. Three such people have been executed since the Supreme Court restored the death penalty in 1976.

The court agreed on Feb. 23 to hear the appeal of William Wayne Thompson, who was sentenced to die for a 1983 murder committed when he was 15 years.

"The fact that the court has agreed to accept this case ... makes me think that this will bring the definitive ruling on whether a minor can be put to death," Assistant Attorney General David Lee said Wednesday.

Henry Schwarzhild, director of the American Civil Liberties Union's capital punishment project, said in New York that he also expected the Oklahoma case to be the next major capital-punishment decision.

But Harry "Rick" Tepker, a University of Oklahoma law professor who is handling Thompson's appeal, called such predictions speculative.

The justices could choose to base its ruling on other issues in the case and ignore the age question, as they did in a similar case in 1981, he said.

Or, Tepker added, "they may use it a basic case to decide whether the death penalty applied for crimes committed by adolescents while they are still children is cruel and unusual punishment."

The high court on Wednesday rejected the appeal of a Georgia prisoner who claimed that his death sentence reflected a pattern of race prejudice. Attorneys said the appeal was one of the last broad issues to be raised against capital punishment.

Associated Press

Monday, April 23, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

The Society of the Sons of St. George met today. Founded in Philadelphia in 1772, the Society had not been active for the past decade due to feelings existing here for things English.

William Rees billed the Commonwealth for staking the new trees in the State House Yard.

Benjamin Franklin, president of Pennsylvania, was today elected president of the reactivated and reorganized Pennsylvania Society for Promoting the Abolition of Slavery. The Society, begun in 1774, published its new constitution today, in which it professed a duty to assure freedom to all the human race, especially those held "in bondage by fraud or violence."

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Congress received the report of its secretary of foreign affairs, John Jay, in which he proposed specific instructions for ambassador to England John Adams to meet with the king to demand payment for American slaves taken away by the British troops during the war. Adams also was to press again for the British surrender of the forts on the American frontier, as agreed by the 1783 Treaty of Peace.

James Madison, member of Congress from Virginia, sent news to the ambassador in Paris, Thomas Jefferson, about the recent Massachusetts elections.

"Mr. Hancock takes the place of Mr. Bowdoin. His general character forbids a suspicion of his patriotic principles, but as he is an idolater of popularity, it is to be feared that he may be seduced by this foible into dishonorable compliances."

Continuing, Madison sent word on the upcoming Convention in Philadelphia:

"The prospect of a full and respectable convention grows stronger every day. Rho. Island alone has refused to send deputies. Maryland had probably appointed by this time. Of Connecticut alone doubts are entertained. The antifederal party in that State is numerous & persevering. It is sd. that the elections which are now going on, are rather discouraging to the advocates of the Convention. Pennsylvania has added Doctor Franklin to her deputation. "There is some ground to calculate on the attendance of Genl. Washington. Our Governor, Mr. Wythe, Mr. Blair, and Col. Mason will pretty certainly attend."

DELEGATES TODAY

George Washington recorded "poor success in fishing today." He also signed an agreement with his gardener, Philip Bator.

Robert Morris, Philadelphia merchant and banker, extended an invitation to Martha and George Washington.

"I hope Mrs. Washington will come with you & Mrs. Morris joins me in requesting that you will on your arrival come to our House & make it your Home during your Stay in this City. We will give you as little trouble as possible and endeavour to make it agreeable. It will be a charming season for Travelling, and Mrs. Washington as well as yourself will find benefit from the Journey Change of Air &c...."

George Mason wrote fellow Virginia delegate Gov. Edmund Randolph from his home at Gunston Hall to suggest they allow a day or two en

LOOKING BACK

Washington and His Gardener George Washington signed an agreement with his gardener, Philip Bator, before departing Mount Vernon for Philadelphia. The usual provisions for sober and diligent conduct were called for along with faithful and industrious performance.

Washington was likewise obliged to furnish Bator with shoes and clothing. The agreement specifies a coat, vest, and breeches as "befit a man of his station." In addition, Bator was to have a working jacket and breeches of homespun, two white shirts, three checked shirts, two pair yarn stockings, two pair of thread stockings, two linen handkerchiefs, two pair of linen overalls, and "as many pair of shoes as are actually necessary."

The final provisions dealt with a subject that was doubtless dear to Bator's heart: remuneration and liquor allowance. Bator was granted "four dollars at Christmas, with which he may be drunk 4 days and 4 nights; two dollars at Easter also at Whitsuntide, to be drunk two days; a dram in the morning, and a drink of Grog at Dinner or at Noon. (Whitsuntide was the seventh Sunday following Easter; also called Pentecost or Ascension Sunday.)"

Grog was rum mixed with equal parts of water. It was named for its inventor, British Adm. Edward Vernon, who was wont to wear a grogram cloak while on deck. Vernon's nickname was "Old Grog." Washington's brother Lawrence had named their estate Mount Vernon in honor of the admiral.

Man pleads no contest to umpire battering charge

WESTMINSTER, Calif. (AP) — A judge has ordered a 40-year-old man to write a 1,000 word essay on sportsmanship after the man pleaded no contest to attacking a teen-age baseball umpire who had made calls against his son's team. Robert Foster also was fined $500 Wednesday by Orange County Judge Michael Beecher and ordered to perform 80 hours of community service.

Foster pleaded no contest after being accused of heckling a 16-year-old umpire and punching the boy at a Huntington Beach little league game last June.

Foster originally denied the charges and said the umpire, Christopher J. Elson, was rude to him and his wife as they watched their 15-year-old son play.
