Lloyd's of London unlikely to cancel ships' insurance

LONDON (AP) — Iraq's claim that it attacked Persian Gulf shipping Friday sent some tanker insurance rates up 150 percent. The Saudi oil minister said he feared the West "might panic" and the gulf oil route would close for lack of insurance.

But a leading underwriter at Lloyd's of London, Stephen Merrett, told a news conference at the insurance syndicate's headquarters that Lloyd's was unlikely to cancel existing coverage or refuse to insure vessels calling at gulf ports.

"There is no practical possibility of insurance (being) unavailable at terms to and from gulf ports," he said.

A British news magazine estimated world oil prices have been 15 percent to 25 percent higher than they would be if Iran and Iraq were not at war.

Lloyd's raised premiums for voyages to Iran's Kharg Island oil terminal soon after a Baghdad military statement was issued claiming Iraqi jets and warships had attacked a convoy near the Iranian coast and destroyed six ships. Two other vessels were destroyed by floating mines, Iraq said.

The new premiums for a week's coverage in the gulf are 7½ percent of the ship's value, up from 3 percent. Even the previous rate was four times higher than Lloyd's premiums several months ago when the gulf war was quieter.

A typical large tanker now would pay over $4 million for a one-week trip in the gulf to the Iranian oil terminal, compared with $500,000 six months ago.

There was no independent confirmation of the Iraqi statement, which came a day after Baghdad claimed to have hit two other ships in the gulf.

Iranian jets also were in action Thursday, Lloyd's and the U.S. State Department said. A Liberian-registered cargo ship off the coast of Saudi Arabia was set ablaze by a missile from an Iranian F-4, they said.

Lloyd's shipping intelligence unit, which collects information on worldwide shipping casualties, had no confirmation of Iraq's claimed attacks on Thursday or Friday, said spokesman Roger Lowes.

In Geneva, Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani said his country had opened talks with oil customers to deal with a possible cutoff of insurance.

"What we're afraid of is that Lloyd's might cancel insurance for navigation in the gulf, and this is equal to closing the Strait of Hormuz," Yamani told 600 businessmen at a luncheon.

He warned that a resulting oil cutoff could cripple economic recovery in the United States and Western Europe.

"What we're afraid of is that you (the West) might panic, which is natural," he said.

Merrett said the latest premium increase was "surprisingly moderate" given the number of ships attacked. He said Lloyd's, the insurer for most vessels operating in the gulf, had paid out "in the order of 100 million pounds" ($140 million) in war damage claims.

Mondale urges closing Diablo Canyon plant

The Associated Press

Walter F. Mondale, drawing jeers from union workers who would lose their jobs, called for closing the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant on Friday while Gary Hart was in New Jersey urging "worker democracy in the 1980s."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, warming up for his Memorial Day visit to Mexico, castigated Reagan administration foreign policy and called El Salvador's newly elected government "a puppet regime."

The three candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination campaigned on both coasts as Mondale inched closer toward the party's top prize even though Hart won the most recent state contest — the Idaho caucuses Thursday night.

Despite Hart's victory there, Mondale continued to widen his delegate lead over the Colorado senator. Mondale picked up 20 new delegates Thursday to Hart's 12.

While Hart was winning 11 delegates to Mondale's seven in Idaho, state party leaders filled out their delegate slates in Ohio and Delaware, with Mondale picking up nine delegates in the Buckeye state and four in Delaware. Hart gained one delegate in Delaware and Jakson one in Ohio.

On Wednesday, New York Democratic leaders named their last 16 unpledged delegates, all but two of whom endorsed Mondale. One was uncommitted and one for Jackson. Over the two days, the former vice president hauled in 34 delegates to only a dozen for Hart.

In the AP delegate count, Mondale now is just 310 delegates short of the 1,967 he needs to win the nomination. Mondale has 1,657.05 delegates, Hart 989.75, Jackson 307.2, others 55 and 273 are uncommitted. Only 651 delegates remain to be chosen.

Mondale aides discounted suggestions that his appearance at the controversial nuclear plant — located near a major earthquake fault line — was calculated to show the former vice president is willing to invoke the wrath of union members.

"This is no political statement about independence," said Mickey Kantor, Mondale's California campaign manager.

Some of the workers at the rally said they thought otherwise.

"It is a political gesture," said Peter Montoya, an electrician employed by a subcontractor at the Diablo plant.

At a rally in San Luis Obispo, about 20 miles from the plant, Mondale addressed both opponents of the facility and about 200 helmeted workers who would lose their jobs if it were closed.

He said the long history of errors by the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. and continuing new evidence that an earthquake would cause a major nuclear disaster warrant the plant's closure.

Company spokesman Jim Kilpatrick said, "We believe it is irresponsible for Mr. Mondale to inject campaign rhetoric into a matter that is so important to the people of California — specifically, the need for an adequate energy supply in this state."

Vietnam War's Unknown Soldier will be laid to rest

AP Laserphoto

President Reagan pauses after laying a wreath at the foot of the catafalque holding the casket of the Vietnam War's Unknown Soldier. The body will lie in state in the Rotunda of the Capitol until Memorial Day when it will be placed in the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery. From left are, Nancy Reagan; Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., retired Gen. William Westmoreland and Rep. John Murtha, D-Penn.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a solemn tribute to the thousands of Americans who died in Vietnam, the remains of an unidentified serviceman lay in honored repose in the rotunda of the U.S. Capitol Friday, saluted by the nation for which he gave his life.

"We may not know his name, but we know his courage," said President Reagan. "He is the heart, the spirit and the soul of America."

The president placed a wreath of red and white carnations at the foot of the coffin, one of three identical arrangements that were the only flowers in the great circular hall that is between the two houses of Congress.

In the silver coffin lay the only fallen serviceman not identified in the war which ended 11 years ago, and in which 58,012 Americans died. He will be interred Monday at the Tomb of the Unknowns, behind the Unknown Soldier of World War I and between the unknown servicemen of World War II and Korea.

The flag-draped coffin rested on the funeral bier hastily constructed in April 1865 after the death of President Abraham Lincoln. It was the 26th time remains lay in state in the rotunda. Three of those times were for the other unknowns.

Nine presidents have lain on that bier, including John F. Kennedy, Dwight D. Eisenhower and Lyndon B. Johnson. The last person to lie in state in the Capitol was Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, in 1978.

Ruffles and flourishes sounded in the Capitol Plaza and a band played the Navy Hymn.

An eight-man honor guard, representing all the armed services carried the coffin into the hushed chamber, the silence interrupted only by the guard's footsteps and the whirring and clicking of cameras. Uniformed servicemen stood at attention; a scattering of men wearing veterans' caps placed their right hands over their hearts.

The president, dressed in somber black and wearing a light gray tie, held his hands clenched at his side.

Only a dozen senators were there and only 30 members of the House. Congress was not in session this day.

The service lasted 15 minutes. "Now that he is known only to Your grace, he will forever be an influence to all people of this beloved country," said Rear Adm. Neil Stevenson, head of the Navy chaplain corps. Richard Halverson, the chaplain of the Senate, read Psalm 90. And Rabbi Simeon Kobrinetz, director of the Veterans Administration's chaplain service, intoned: "May his self-sacrifice be an inspiration to all Americans."

Reagan said that "this young American understood that freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction. He may not have wanted to be a hero, but there was a need — in the Iron Triangle off Yankee Station, at Khe Sahn, over the Red River Valley."

Green Cappers to be honor guard

WOONSOCKET, R.I. (AP) — A small band of "low-key" Vietnam veterans who never expected much attention will be in the limelight this weekend at Memorial Day ceremonies honoring an unknown soldier killed in Vietnam.

The Green Cappers, a dozen veterans from Woonsocket and Lincoln, have been invited by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinburger to form the nucleus of an honor guard at Monday's ceremony in which the unidentified soldier will be buried at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery.

"All we ever wanted was to be low key and to work to help the image of the Vietnam veteran," said group spokesman Robert Leclerc.

But the Green Cappers keep drawing attention. Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and Rep. Fernand J. St. Germain, D-R.I., got in touch with them as the two lawmakers sought to assure Vietnam combat veterans a place of honor at the ceremony.

The attention didn't stop there. The Green Cappers, who boast Purple Hearts and a Silver Star among their military honors, were also contacted by the Pentagon, officals of veterans organizations and high-ranking military officals in Washington.

"It seems like half of Washington is waiting for us," Leclerc said.

Missing Children's Day marked across nation

The Associated Press

Iowa schoolchildren contributed $782 to the hunt for a classmate, toddlers were fingerprinted in Philadelphia, and Massachusetts officials pledged new efforts to find vanished youngsters Friday as the nation marked Missing Children's Day.

Meanwhile, the father of the Florida boy whose case sparked renewed interest in the problem of missing children appealed for donors for youngsters who face death unless they undergo transplants.

And in San Francisco, parents were asked to bring posters and pictures of their missing sons and daughters to a rally across from City Hall.

According to Alfred S. Regner, head of the Justice Department's Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency, as many as 50,000 children are abducted each year by strangers and 150,000 by parents in custody disputes.

Between 1 million and 2 million children run away from home each year, and 10 percent do not return within six months, he said. FBI spokesman Bill Baker said agency figures showed 21,000 to 29,000 children missing nationwide as of April.

Much of the recent attention focused on missing children was the result of a television movie "Adam," the story of 6-year-old Adam Walsh. Adam was abducted in 1981 from a store in Hollywood, Fla., and his severed head found two weeks later in a canal.

The attempts by Adam's parents, John and Reve Walsh, to find their son led them to persuade Congress to change laws and ease the search of other parents for their missing children.

The NBC broadcast of the movie was followed by pictures of real missing children. Phone calls poured in afterward to a group called Child Find, based in New Paltz, N.Y., helping authorities track down some vanished youngsters.

At a Capitol Hill press conference, John Walsh appealed Friday for donors for children who need new livers, and urged new legislation making it easier for insurance companies to cover the cost of such operations.

He said it was "a national tragedy and a national disgrace" that children die because their parents can't find donors or raise the thousands of dollars needed for the surgery.

In West Des Moines, Iowa, 88 students and staff members of Indian Hills Junior High School presented the parents of Johnny Gosch with $782 they raised to help find the newspaper carrier, who would have graduated from the school this year.

The students rode their bicycles to the Gosch home to present the parents with an envelope filled with checks and cash, some raised by other newspaper carriers.

Johnny's mother, Noreen Gosch, said she was touched by the gesture. Her son was 12 when he disappeared in September 1982.

In Philadelphia, toddlers at a nursery school at the Jewish Y's Northeast Center were fingerprinted under a voluntary program. The records were turned over to parents.

"I think it is an excellent idea," said Ivy Mermelstein of suburban Huntington Valley, whose two children, Leah, 6, and Avi, 4, participated. "If, God forbid, the child is kidnapped, lost or missing, it will help parents and the police find them through the fingerprints. It also makes the kids understand that they should beware of strangers and that there are dangers out there."

Organizers hope to fingerprint at least 15,000 children this Memorial Day weekend, about half of them at the Philadelphia Zoo today.

In Boston, state Public Safety Director Charles Barry announced plans to expand the state police Missing Persons Unit from one trooper to three. The unit aids police departments in gathering information about the 4,300 men, women and children currently listed as missing in the state.

Soviet offensive in Afghanistan causing famine, study says

LONDON (AP) — The current Soviet offensive in Afghanistan could cause widespread famine, according to a British study which says two out of three Afghan children examined by researchers were starving or malnourished.

In another report issued here earlier this week, Jane's Defense Weekly said Soviet planes are dropping "liquid fire" bombs on Afghan rebels and also are using fuel-air bombs that kill anyone within a quarter-mile radius.

The magazine, part of the authoritative Jane's Publications, said the Soviets have been using the weapons since the summer in eastern Afghanistan in a major battlefield testing program. It said the "liquid-fire" bombs shower a tar-like substance on the ground that can burst into flames when stepped on.

The former Afghan charge d'affaires in Moscow defected to Pakistan on Wednesday and condemned the Soviets for "the genocide of my countrymen." The diplomat, Abdul Majid Mangal, returned to Kabul from Moscow six months ago and had been working in the Foreign Ministry.

The report on hunger in Afghanistan came from a government-financed study led by an anthropologist, Frances D'Souza of London University's School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

She said she did not go to Afghanistan herself but directed researchers who slipped into the country last year without the knowledge of the Soviet-backed regime in Kabul. Most of the researchers were university graduates, including refugees and others working with guerrilla groups in Afghanistan.

Ms. D'Souza said much information came from some of the 3 million refugees who have fled to Pakistan since the Soviets sent troops into Afghanistan in 1979 to back the Kabul regime against rebels.

The survey urged the United Nations to ship in food via insurgents.

"The threat of widespread famine is very, very serious and recent unprecedented offensives by the Soviets mean the situation has almost certainly gotten worse within the past six weeks," Ms. D'Souza said.

Last month the Soviets began a major offensive against guerrillas in the Panjsher Valley north of Kabul.

The report said researchers weighed and measured 5,126 children between 1 and 5 years old and found that 62 percent of them were severely underfed or risked malnourishment.

Before 1979, Afghanistan was practically self-sufficient in most foodstuffs, including wheat, but the Soviet Union now provides wheat, sugar and other items, said Ms. D'Souza. She said cotton production, the major cash producer, has dropped 70 percent and rice production by nearly 75 percent.

The report said food prices have risen sharply since the Soviet intervention.

Asked how many Afghans were starving or malnourished, Ms. D'Souza said: "I estimate there are about 500,000 now, over 250,000 in the northwest province and the rest scattered in other regions." She did not give the overall population of the areas surveyed. Afghanistan's population is about 12 million.

The report found there is "severe malnutrition" in two provinces, mountainous Badakhshan on the northeast border with China and adjoining Parwan.

The agriculturally rich northern provinces on the Soviet border, along with large parts of the southern, northwestern and central regions, did "not appear to be suffering acute food shortages," the study said.

Jane's Defense Weekly said the Soviet "fuel-air" bombs detonate in the air, releasing a chemical cloud over a wide area.

Judge dismisses suit of Italian brothers against Cullens

HOUSTON (AP) — A probate judge Friday dismissed a claim by two Italian brothers who already inherited millions from their grandfather, the late oil tycoon Hugh Roy Cullen, but insisted they were entitled to a bigger chunk of his massive fortune.

Baron Enrico di Portanova, 50, and his brother, Ugo, 47, claimed they were cheated by their aunts and cousins of their rightful share to Cullen's estate.

They sued the Cullens, one of the nation's wealthiest families, for $2 billion in a high-stakes gamble to wrest control of 25 percent of the stock in Quintana Petroleum Corp., a holding company set up to oversee some 40 oil and gas firms.

The bitter estate battle was one of the biggest in U.S. history, attorneys said. "It makes Howard Hughes look middle-class," said one lawyer, who asked not to be identified.

ONE PROBATE judge last year unsuccessfully attempted to schedule trials at least three times.

But another jurist, Harris County Probate Judge Bill Bear, said Friday the suit had no merit and would not be tried unless his ruling was overturned on appeal.

"Attorneys have indicated a trial would probably take eight months with a million pieces of evidence or more. It seems like such a waste to spend millions of dollars to try this case," Bear said during a brief session.

Brad Wright, an attorney appointed by the court to represent Ugo, who was declared mentally incompetent in 1966 by an Italian court, said Bear's ruling "absolutely will be appealed."

Attorney Joe Jamail, who represents the Cullens, said he was "ecstatic" about the decision.

THE CULLENS have won. They've been vindicated because they've done nothing wrong," Jamail said.

Enrico di Portanova, reportedly worth an estimated $50 million, earns about $1.1 million a month from trusts set up by his grandfather, known as the "King of the Wildcatters" because he dared to drill deeper than other oilmen and brought in gusher after gusher.

Cullen's biggest strike was the Tom O'Connor Field, about 150 miles southwest of Houston in Refugio County. The 15,000-acre, mile-deep pool pumped five million barrels a year of low-sulphur crude.

STATE

Before his death at age 76 in 1957, Cullen estimated he had given away 93 percent of his wealth. He lavished hundreds of millions of dollars on local charities and gave away several thousand acres of oil-rich land worth about $160 million. The University of Houston and the Texas Medical Center benefited most from the gifts.

But he didn't forget to provide for his family. The remaining 7 percent of the estate made his children and their offspring among the nation's wealthiest.

CULLEN AND HIS wife, Lillie, had one son and four daughters. Their oldest daughter, Lillie, went to California and married Paolo di Portanova, an Italian movie star. But the union, which produced two sons, ended in divorce.

After Cullen's death, the di Portanova brothers, neither of whom was in court Friday, began receiving monthly payments of $5,000 from his estate. The trusts increased in value as the price of oil skyrocketed and permitted the brothers lives of luxury.

But Enrico, then a jeweler in Rome, became convinced he was not getting all that was due him. He moved to Houston in the 1960s to claim his full inheritance. But his relatives gave him the cold shoulder and refused to let him participate in Quintana's investments.

From 1961 until the mid 1970s, di Portanova hired six sets of lawyers to bring his powerful relatives into court. All failed.

A lawsuit was filed against the Cullens five years ago, claiming that di Portanova's three aunts wrongfully transferred Quintana Petroleum stock meant for the di Portanovas to their own husbands in 1964, depriving them of more than $2 billion in investment oportunities.

"THAT'S HOGWASH," Jamail said. "Just because you have the same grandfather doesn't mean you're obligated to cut your relatives in on a deal you made."

The Cullens denied the allegations and further claimed that the stock is "worthless" because Quintana has no assets and merely manages Cullen-owned oil properties. They claimed in court depositions that they don't know the origin or amount of Quintana stock they own.

The Cullens and the di Portanovs once lived in the same fashionable Houston neighborhood, but their relationship over the past two decades has been cool at best.

Family friends said the Cullens referred to di Portanova as a "no-count count." An article in the National Law Review quoted di Portanova as describing the Cullens as "peasants" and vowing to "wash their dirty linen in public."

The lifestyles of the Cullens and the di Portanovas also is a study in contrasts.

THE CULLENS live quietly, far from the flash and frivolity of the international jet set. They shun publicity, but quietly exert great power in the boardrooms of commerce and in the conservative old family society of the Texas superrich.

Enrico di Portanova, a dark-haired, free-spirited man, built the biggest, most opulent villa in Acapulco and, stunned neighbors when he enclosed the sprawling backyard of his Mediterranean-style Houston mansion with glass and steel, and then installed air conditioning.

Once he tried to buy New York's 21 Club as a token of love for his wife, Baroness Alessandra.

Ugo, about 6-foot-4, 280 pounds, also owns a villa in Acapulco, along with two luxury condominums, a 32-acre farm and an $800,000 yacht which has an annual $200,000 maintenance bill, court records showed.

Court refuses inmates' stay ofexecution

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Friday refused to stay the executions of Jay Kelly Pinkerton and Andrew Lee Mitchell, but a federal judge later stayed Mitchell's execution date.

Both were scheduled to die before sunrise Thursday.

Court spokesman Thomas Lowe said the judges voted unanimously against Pinkerton's request. Lowe said he was uncertain of the vote on the Mitchell decision.

Pinkerton, 22, was convicted of capital murder in the 1979 murder of an Amarillo woman during a burglary at her home.

About 11:40 a.m. Friday, U.S. District Judge William Steger of Tyler granted a stay to Mitchell, 40, who was sentenced to die in the 1980 slaying of a 31-year-old Tyler missionary killed during a robbery.

During an interview session earlier this week, Pinkerton said he was not responsible for the death of the Amarillo woman. He also said he did not think the Thursday execution would happen.

"I've never know anyone who has been denied their first stay," he said. "I have nothing to be afraid about. If I thought this was really it, I probably would be scared, but it's not."

Pinkerton said he and Mitchell live on the same wing at the Texas Department of Corrections Ellis Unit but he said he had not spoken with Mitchell about the executions.

Pinkerton said he tries not to think about his death date, the first since his conviction. Instead, he said he corresponds by letter with "many people," studies religion or works on his case.

"I have passed many tests. I was able to rise above it all. But my greatest test will be lying on that death bed. And I know I'm strong enough."

Mitchell refused to talk to reporters during the interview session.

A hearing for Mitchell is set for 9 a.m. June 25 in U.S. District Court in Tyler.

Coloradans solve Robins family mystery

NEW YORK (AP) — Denis and Nancy Keleher and six of their friends in Denver just may be the best sleuths this side of Scotland Yard.

In less time than it took Hercule Poirot to find a murderer on the Orient Express, they solved the publishing crime of the year: "Who Killed the Robins Family?"

They say it took them one night last April to come up with the right answers to the eight nasty rubouts and nab a $10,000 jackpot.

"We were sure we had done our best, but we thought that surely some certified genius would come along and solve it," Keleher, 49, a doctor of internal medicine, said Friday.

"We were delighted we had done so well that the money is not that important," Mrs. Keleher, 44, a registered nurse, added.

The contest, which drew 25,000 entries, was sponsored by William Morrow & Co., publisher of the book by Thomas Chastain and Bill Adler. "Who Killed the Robins Family?" sold 300,000 copies and spent 36 weeks on best-seller lists. Sixty-five newspapers syndicated the quirky murder mystery.

The winners correctly answered 39 of 40 questions surrounding the murders of Tyler Robins, his wife Evelyn and their six children. For each murder, contestants had to solve who killed the character, where, when, how and why.

The Kelehers gave the solutions to the murders: Evelyn and John killed Tyler. Alfred killed James. Steve killed Cynthia. Ava Wingate killed Candace. Louis accidentally killed himself. Ernest Trueaux killed Libby. John killed Evelyn. George Pittman killed Marshall.

Only one question eluded the fearless Denver sleuths: Where was Cynthia Robins killed? Answer: She was on the Orient Express and murdered while the train went through a tunnel.

"There were so many red herrings in the book, you could go off in so many directions," Mrs. Keleher said.

The Kelehers, who say they are splitting the money with their six helpers, will collect the cash today at the annual convention of the American Booksellers Association in Washington.

The others, whom the Kelehers met at a "mystery weekend" where guests play the roles of victimns, detectives and suspects, were: Frank Knotts, Patricia Stewart and Chuck Fisher, all clinical psychologists; Jeanine Stewart, a social worker; Edna Maples, a retired school psychologist; and Grady Maples, a regional director of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Their solutions ran one page for each murder. Co-author Adler said some of the losing entries were substantially longer, and some were bizarre.

"Some one sent in an entry with a bullet hole," Adler said. "Another tied it up with a noose around it."

"People who like mysteries are funny people," Mrs. Keleher interjected.

"Since my first Nancy Drew book as a child, I've been a mystery lover," she said. "I didn't try to solve them; I just enjoyed them."

Her husband was weaned on Ellery Queen. Both Kelehers are fond of the empress of mystery and mayhem, Agatha Christie, who created Hercule Poirot.

"Robins" belongs to a genre of book contests that appears to have started with "Masquerade," the art book that wove a magical treasure hunt between its pages to lead the reader to a bejeweled rabbit hidden in the English countryside.

Pocket Books recently published "Prize Meets Murder," a whodunit with a $15,000 reward.

And just when you thought it was safe to visit the Robins estate in Maryland, another string of strange murders is about to unfold. Chastain and Adler have a sequel: "Revenge of the Robins Family." They've also upped the prize to $10,001.

Holiday weekend should be warm, partly cloudy

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is predicting a partly cloudy and warm Memorial Day weekend.

Today and tonight there is more than an 80 percent chance that it will not rain, although a slight possibility of isolated thunderstorms exists.

Highs today are expected to reach the upper 80s and lows the low 60s. Winds should be from the southeast at 10 to 20 mph.

Friday's high was 96 — just five degrees shy of the record 101 set in 1953. An overnight low of 66 was recorded, 18 degrees warmer than the 48 mark reached in 1950.

STATE

A cold front moving into Texas for the long Memorial Day weekend should trigger scattered thunderstorms along its leading edge, and forecasters predicted high temperatures to average about 10 degrees cooler than usual.

Widely scattered thunderstorms were expected to develop along the front early today from the Davis Mountains of West Texas northeastward into Oklahoma, the National Weather Service said.

On Friday, widely scattered showers fell in the Golden Triangle of Southeast Texas Friday, unassociated with the front.

Northerly winds of 10 to 15 mph were ushered in behind the front in the Panhandle and northern sections of the High Plains. Winds were southerly at 10 to 20 mph elsewhere.

Skies were mostly partly cloudy around Texas, except in rainfall areas. Extreme temperatures Friday ranged from a cool 69 degrees in Dalhart to a warm 99 degrees in Wichita Falls. Elsewhere in the state, readings were in the upper 80s and low 90s.

The weather service said isolated showers and thundershowers were also expected along the upper coast and coastal plains.

Low temperatures early today should range from the 50s in the Panhandle to the 60s in the Hill Country and the 70s along the South Texas coast.

UNKNOWN

No one knows when or where the man fell, but he met the legal criteria for being placed in the Tomb of the Unknowns. He was an American, a serviceman; he died in battle, and he remained unidentified despite a decade of effort.

The first serviceman was buried beneath the 79-ton marble tomb on the third anniversary of Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1921. The unknowns of World War II and Korea were interred there in 1958.

"We pray for the wisdom that this hero be America's last unknown," Reagan said.

The remains were flown from Hawaii to California, then to Andrews Air Force Base outside of Washington. They were driven to the Capitol and carried into the rotunda behind a three-man honor guard. The guard left its American flag behind, to stand at the head of the coffin.

An hour later, the public was allowed into the rotunda to pay its respects to the Unknown. Only a few hundred people waited to circle the coffin. On this holiday weekend, during the first sustained hot weather of the year, Washington residents usually flee the city.

The doors to the Capitol will remain open until two hours before the coffin is carried to Arlington National Cemetery on the traditional horse-drawn caisson.

En route to the cemetery, the procession will pass the new Vietnam Memorial. It will pause there while veterans from 50 states give a salute, then continue on across Memorial Bridge to the cemetery where 189,000 former servicemen and their families are buried.

A Congressional Medal of Honor will be presented then by Reagan.

Mrs. Reagan accompanied the president to the Capitol Rotunda where a crowd of about 800 had gathered, most of the people being members of congressional staffs. There were some representatives of veterans associations, and three veterans in wheelchairs had honored positions near the president.

Gen. William Westmoreland, the white-haired commander of the American forces during the Vietnam war, stood virtually unnoticed behind the president.

Some members of Reagan's official family were there, too: Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, Secretary of State George Shultz, Attorney General William French Smith and the man designated to be his successor, White House counselor Edwin Meese III.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., placed wreaths. Murtha was a Marine colonel in Vietnam.

Meanwhile, the White House released the text of a letter Reagan sent to Anne Hart, vice chairman of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, in an effort to convince the group that the interment of the Unknown Serviceman does not diminish efforts to find those missing in action.

"Our commitment to the issue of American servicemen prisoner or missing in Vietnam will not be diminished, but will be strengthened by the interment mandated by congressional law," Reagan wrote in a letter dated May 7. He was replying to a letter from Mrs. Hart, which was not released.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unidentified serviceman who lies in state in the U.S. Capitol rotunda is one of 58,012 Americans killed in the Vietnam War — a number that is constantly changing as records are brought up to date.

The total as of Friday included 47,318 who died in battle and 10,694 whose deaths were not in combat — victims of traffic accidents, plane crashes, drownings and other causes.

A Pentagon spokesman, Maj. Robert Shields, said there is a continuous process of updating the number of casualties as authorities learn of Vietnam servicemen who died of their wounds and as decisions are made on classifying casualties.

"Tomorrow the figure may be different," Shields said.

VETERANS

When the Green Cappers first made quiet plans to drive to Washington for the weekend, their goal was to simply pass in review of their unknown comrade at the Capitol while the body lies in state. None of them, Leclerc said, thought they'd be able to enter Arlington National Cemetery for the actual burial ceremony.

Instead, they'll be at the center of the ceremony and be greeted by politicians and officials from a host of veterans organizations.

For the Green Cappers, who represent the Vietnam War members of the Alphonse Yelle American Legion Post, the event is deeply emotional.

They share an experience they say few can understand, an experience which gives them a unique bond. That feeling, Leclerc said, makes the weekend deeply meaningful for the group, which believes recognition of the sacrifices of Vietnam veterans is long overdue.

CANDIDATES

He suggested Mondale had been "misinformed" about safety at the plant by anti-nuclear activists.

"Today, the shadow of a devil hangs over you," said Mondale, referring to the English translation of "diablo." "I believe the Diablo Canyon plant is a menace. I believe that plant should be closed now and never re-opened."

While anti-nuclear activists cheered his words, workers shouted: "No votes here, buddy."

Another said: "I thought you were for the working man."

After several years of court fights, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission voted April 13 to permit low-power testing, which is to lead to full commercial generation of electricity by late this summer.

Campaigning in New Jersey just before a flight to California, Hart said: "The city of New Brunswick and New Jersey are on the cutting edge of change in this country. This city is evidence and witness of your willingness to go forward."

Hart has cmpaigned all year as the candidate of new ideas and of the future, and aides say they believe New Jersey, with its growing high technology industry and below-average unemployment may be receptive to his message.

"If you vote for Gary Hart for president, we are going to see real change in the 1980s," he said in New Brunswick.

He said his vision for the future includes worker participation in decision-making and stock ownership plans for employees.

"We must have a vision of worker democracy in the 1980s — stock ownership, quality work circles, help in the management of our companies and the development of a new economic agenda for America," he said.

Campaign aides said he chose New Brunswick for the speech because the city is in the midst of a $250 million urban revitalization program that involves government and private funds.

Jackson, in Atlantic City, N.J., said, "This week we have watched a major, orchestrated scheme, the sham of an election in Central America."

He said El Salvador's president-elect, Jose Napoleon Duarte, "was elected with Reagan's help and support — another puppet regime."

Jackson's comments came the weekend before he is to fly to Mexico City Monday for meetings with leaders from Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama.

Those countries — the so-called Contadora group — are seeking to negotiate a peaceful end to the war in El Salvador where leftist guerrillas are fighting the government.

Jackson also wondered whether it was coincidental that Duarte came to Washington to lobby for more military aid at the same time when five former national guardsmen were convicted in El Salvador of killing four American churchwomen 3½ years ago.

Duarte "just happened to be in Washington. They just happened to get convicted at the same time," Jackson said.

Long trend reversed

Rural and small towns grew faster than metropolitan areas during the 1970s, reversing the trend of the last 150 years. Despite this, America remains a nation of city dwellers, with more than 70 percent of the population living in cities of 50,000 or more.

INSURANCE

That did not include damages in the last three weeks because those had not been assessed yet.

Merrett estimated 30 to 40 ships have been hit in the gulf this year, including in the oft-raided area of the Iranian port of Bandar Khomeini.

Premiums to insure cargoes remained steady, and rates for other voyages also were unchanged, though Merrett confirmed insurers imposed war risk premiums this week on coverage of some ports just outside the gulf.

He cited the possibility of attacks in the Gulf of Oman ports of the United Arab Emirates and Oman, where ships have been collecting and waiting to enter the Persian Gulf.

Traffic in the gulf "has slackened significantly," Merrett said.

Asked whether that was an effect of high insurance rates, he said: "We think that's much less due to the impact of insurance premiums than the proper concern for the owners for the safety of their vessels and crews."

The Economist newsweekly said the attacks on shipping were a test for Saudi Arabia and other moderate Arab states in the gulf. "It is time for the Saudis to put their muscle where their mouth is," the London magazine said in an editorial.

It noted the Saudis have top-flight U.S. F-15 fighter aircraft and suggested they could provide air cover for convoys of tankers in the gulf to keep oil flowing. About 20 percent of the non-Communist world's oil comes from the gulf.

The magazine analyzed world oil prices and estimated the gulf war has kept oil prices as much as 25 percent higher than they would be in peacetime.

William Charles Bechtel, 79, of Midland died Thursday in a local hospital after a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 2 p.m. today in Stanley Memorial Chapel in Tulsa, Okla., with burial in Memorial Park Cemetery. Local arrangements were handled by Ellis Funeral Home.

Bechtel was born July 31, 1904, in Huron, Kan. He lived in Liberty and Independence before moving to Tulsa, where he worked for National Supply Co. until his retirement in 1969.

He was a member of First United Methodist Church in Tulsa.

Survivors include a son, William C. Bechtel of Dallas; a daughter, Mrs. Jack Huff of Midland; a brother, George Bechtel of Mesa, Ariz.; two sisters, Mrs. Glen Hackmaster of Independence and Mrs. Lon Ducan of Coffeeville, Kan.; six grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

The family requests memorials be sent to Hospice of Midland or a favorite charity.

Barry also unveiled new police procedures, endorsed this month by the Massachusetts Police Chiefs Association. Under the new rules, local police will take all missing person reports immediately instead of waiting 24 hours as was previous practice, and will send the reports into state and national crime computer systems.

Also in Iowa, the founder and director of the state Child Find chapter announced that she was resigning. Candy Gilchrist of Des Moines said she got little help from the national group and little support within the state.

"I don't think people in the state want to believe that (child abduction) really happens in this state," she said. "Everyone wants to wants to believe it happens in California and Florida, but that's a lie."

Odessa mayor bruised in 'lovers' quarrel'

From Staff Reports

A bruised Odessa Mayor John Minor appeared on a local newscast Friday evening to issue a public apology for what he termed "an error in judgment."

Minor admitted he had been involved in "a lovers' quarrel" earlier in the day, but "despite my unfortunate conduct...I intend to continue to be the good mayor I have been."

According to an offense report, Odessa police responded to a disturbance call about 2:30 a.m. at the home of Susan Halleck, 3110 N. Dixie Blvd.

Minor allegedly kicked in the door of the woman's home and got into a fight with Tony Alcala, according to a statement from attorney Jerry Lopez, who is representing Alcala and Ms. Halleck. Lopez described Ms. Halleck as an ex-girlfriend, but Minor said he had been with her Thursday evening.

Minor reportedly suffered a bloody nose and black eye and would not turn toward the television camera during his appearance on the newscast.

No arrest was made, according to officer Sidney Lyle. Lopez said the couple gave a statement to police, but will not file assault or trespassing charges.

A gun was reportedly conviscated during the altercation, but Minor said he was not carrying a weapon when he entered the home.

"I lead a very conservative lifestyle," Minor said. "I'm only human. Certainly I am subject to errors, and I made an error in judgment."

"I see no change in my plans for the future," he added. "It will not happen again under any circumstances."

New system of 'restitution centers' off to good start

AUSTIN (AP) — A year ago today, the state got a new way to provide additional facilities for housing criminals while simultaneously having them repay their victims and help offset the costs of keeping them in custody.

Today, officials and lawmakers say, the new system of "restitution centers" appears to be off to a good start as a level of punishment between regular probation and prison for non-violent offenders.

The centers are facilities where convicted criminals are housed at night and on weekends. They work at regular, wage-paying jobs during the daytime and perform community service jobs during off-hours.

Money they earn at their jobs pays their victims, part of the costs of feeding and housing them, support for their families, court costs and fines, and probation and lawyers' fees. The public service work for governmental and non-profit agencies is considered restitution to the community.

"It's an additional tool for judges. It's going to help relieve some crowding in the prisons and be another direction we can send these people," said Dick Lewis, spokesman for the Texas Adult Probation Commission.

"I'm very pleased with the progress that's been made. The support of local officials and state agencies in implementing it has really been a lot greater than I expected," added state Rep. Ray Keller, one author of the legislation which created the centers.

Gov. Mark White signed the bill into law on May 25, 1983. Since then, five centers have opened and several more are on the way. Two currently operate in Harris County and one each in El Paso, Jefferson and Tarrant counties, Lewis said.

By law, the restitution center system is used only for non-violent felons, primarily those convicted of burglary and similar crimes, Lewis said.

Under the law, judges are limited in the types of criminals who can be sentenced to a restitution center. They must have committed non-violent crimes, not have a history of drug or alcohol abuse, be otherwise destined for a Texas Department of Corrections prison and be employable.

"We find them jobs if they don't already have one where their employer agrees (to his or her continued employment)," Lewis said.

After being sentenced to the center, an inmate's progress is reviewed every three months. The first two months after release, a probationer is placed under intensive supervision before being transferred to regular probation.

If a restitution center resident fails to make satisfactory progress, or violates the center's rules or conditions of probation, the court may revoke his probation and send him to prison.

"The centers fill a certain void we have in our corrections system. I think it's an overall part of revamping and providing various tools and alternatives to judges," Keller said.

Lewis said that $4.9 million was available this fiscal year and more than $7 million next year to help plan and establish centers.

He said the five centers now in operation can house a maximum of about 170 men and 25 women.

There have been a few problems in locating the centers in some neighborhoods, Lewis said, although citizens often dropped their most serious complaints after learning that only non-violent offenders were to be housed there.

Keller said officials have found some small problems in the program's first year, but legislators can amend the law to address those.

One problem mentioned by judges, he said, is the outright prohibition against sending criminals with an alcoholic history to the centers.

"That person sometimes is a classic DWI (drunken driving) offender" who judges say perhaps should go to a restitution center rather than prison, he said.

Keller said the Texas law was modeled after laws in effect in some other states, such as Georgia and Mississippi, and he expects the program to grow.

"It's expanded to a greater degree in those states than we have in Texas. Some local leaders have opposed the idea, but in general progress is much better than we thought it would be at this stage," he said.

Interpreter inspiration for deaf students

SHERMAN, Texas (AP) — Friday's commencement ceremonies ended a remarkable teacher-student relationship that has spanned 11 years in the Sherman public schools.

Sammie Mailes, an interpreter for the deaf, has inspired, coaxed, scolded and mothered three deaf students through the intricacies of Sherman High School. She brought them through elementary school, translated the teachers' assignments, sometimes took notes and even tutored a bit.

With no experience in dealing with deaf students, Mrs. Mailes was hired in 1973 as a special education aide here and her supervisor originated the idea for a new program.

"There were five or six children who went to elementary school together. They had a deaf education teacher but for various reasons all but two of the children left," she said. The two remaining children lived in the Crutchfield school area.

"The special education director came up with this idea that these kids could function in a regular classroom if they had someone to interpret for them," she said. The idea was to find someone with a school background who could take notes and tutor. Mrs. Mailes fit that description, even though she knew little about sign language. She and the children learned it together.

"I felt like I was at a period in my life when I needed to do something interesting," she said.

Mrs. Mailes said public schools today routinely "mainstream" deaf students into regular classrooms, but in 1973, it was considered novel. "It was really strange at first to be sitting in a classroom and to look up and see people standing all around the room observing," she said.

As the children advanced, the challenge grew for Mrs. Mailes. "When there were five of the children in middle school, it was OK because they all took the same classes, but in high school their interests changed and they started to specialize. That's when I needed help," she said.

Part of that help comes from another interpreter at the high school, Mrs. Jean Shellenberger. Mrs. Mailes also said the deaf students attend a special class for English and government, which is taught by Mrs. Pat Maddox.

Because the students are all seniors, they are taking vocational classes that don't require as much interpreting.

Reflecting on their 11 years together, Mrs. Mailes said students and faculty have shown remarkable understanding and concern for deaf students. "It's a little different for teachers to have another adult in their classroom repeating everything they say."

Mrs. Mailes said she and her student usually sit at the front of a classroom where the deaf student can see both the teacher and the interpreter. "They really read body language and facial expressions," she said. However, if the lecture is very intense or if the student needs notes for a test, Mrs. Mailes said she takes notes. But most of the time she just interprets for the student by using sign language.

Sometimes it gets interesting. "One day one of my students was running down the hall and the tardy bell was about to ring," Mrs. Mailes recalled. "I was right behind him and this teacher said, 'Stop! Come back here,' but the student continued to run. He got to class, flopped down in his chair — he had made it on time — and this teacher came in behind him and said, 'I told you to stop and I know you heard me.' I walked in about that time and smiled and said, 'No he didn't. He's deaf.'"

Mrs. Mailes said the teacher turned red and apologized, but she told him not to apologize. She told the teacher, "If he needs scolding, go ahead. You tell him and I'll interpret." She said deaf students must follow the same rules as everyone else.

Mrs. Mailes said deaf students don't really see themselves as handicapped. "I guess if you never had something, you really don't miss it," she said.

All three of her deaf students at Sherman High School and one from Tom Bean are graduating. What happens next?

The three Sherman students plan to attend college and the Tom Bean student already is working with his father in construction.

Man sentenced despite plea from 104-year-old mother

DENVER (AP) — Despite an impassioned plea for mercy from his 104-year-old mother, an 84-year-old man was sentenced to four years in prison on an assault charge by a judge who called him a "danger to society."

In imposing the sentence Thursday on Dewey "Pops" Shuey, District Judge Robert P. Fullerton said the defendant had a "propensity" for carrying guns and "firing them at people."

Within the past two years, Shuey has been convicted twice of carrying a concealed weapon and charged with shooting two people, Fullerton said.

"I don't know if because of his advanced years he thinks he has the right to carry a gun and shoot people," Fullerton said. "I think he is really a danger to society."

He said he had no choice but to send Shuey to prison on his plea of guilty to second-degree assault. Shuey pleaded guilty to shooting Joseph Bryant in the hand last December.

In return for the guilty plea, prosecutors dropped charges of theft by receiving and a charge that Shuey tried to kill his 30-year-old girlfriend in February. According to a probation report, Shuey shot Doris Williams in the head, wrist, and hip after he "discovered" her with another man.

Shuey's mother, Lula Franklin, pleaded with Fullerton not to send her son to prison.

"He has taken care of me and all my grandkids," Mrs. Franklin said during a speech in which she called the judge "baby," "darling," and "sweetie."

NATION

Mrs. Franklin, a resident of a Denver nursing home, said Shuey often brings food to her.

After the sentencing, Fullerton agreed to review the sentence in 90 days.

"It just makes me feel awful bad," Mrs. Franklin said. "I don't know what I'm going to do without him. All I can do is pray to God for him (Fullerton) to have mercy."

Mrs. Franklin's adopted daughter, Louise Johnson, said the prison sentence might shorten the lives of Shuey and his mother.

Shuey, who has been in the Denver County Jail since February, "has aged," Ms. Johnson said. "I don't think Dewey could last a year in jail. He is a very sick man. He is very depressed and I think he has learned his lesson concerning guns."

She added that Shuey will no longer be able to contribute to the $1,000 a month that it takes to keep his mother in the nursing home.

"The state pays part and she gets a pension through her (deceased) husband's railroad retirement," she said. "And the other money was coming through Dewey."

Tom Foster, a friend of Shuey's, also said he was concerned that Shuey might survive a long prison stay.

"I'm really worried that he's not going to make it because just in the short time he's been (in jail), he's had two minor heart attacks," Foster said. "Pops has always been a very spry old man, bnt now he's moving very slow."

Reagan raises national debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan signed legislation Friday that allows the government to borrow another $30 billion, raising the national debt ceiling to $1.52 trillion.

Before adjourning for a Memorial Day recess, Congress passed the administration-requested measure to boost the government's authority to borrow to pay its bills.

Treasury Department officials said the previous debt limit of $1.49 trillion had been reached and the increased borrowing authority was necessary to keep government checks from bouncing.

The debt limit has more than doubled since July 31, 1978, when the borrowing ceiling was pegged at $752 billion, and more than quintupled since the middle of 1962, when the limit was $300 billion.

The government's borrowing authority in this century has ranged from a low of $7 billion in 1919. Actual debt reached a low of $1.2 billion in 1916.

This latest increase was only expected to meet government borrowing demands through June, making another hike necessary at the end of next month.

Flood deaths top 200

Floods of all kinds in the United States in 1983 claimed more than 200 lives and caused about $4.5 billion in property damage. At least half the deaths occurred in automobiles.

Klansmen scheduled to go on trial

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Eight Ku Klux Klansmen pleaded innocent Friday to federal charges of violating the civil rights of black protest marchers, and a magistrate issued an arrest warrant for a ninth member who failed to show up.

U.S. Magistrate Edwin Nelson said the nine will be tried before U.S. District Judge William Acker either in late July or August and told their attorneys to meet with Acker later Friday for a pre-trial conference.

The Klansmen, charged with civil rights violations, are accused of breaking through police lines to attack protesters at Decatur on May 16, 1979, a clash that left two blacks, two whites and five law officers wounded. Five of the eight Klansmen also are charged with conspiring to obstruct the FBI's investigation of the case.

Nelson ordered Ricky L. Creekmore of Tuscumbia arrested and set his bond at $10,000 after Assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Barnett said authorities had been unable to locate him.

The magistrate allowed the other Klansmen to sign $500 bonds, telling them not to contact any witnesses or take any other steps that would obstruct justice.

The eight are Roger D. Handley of Morris, Ray W. Steele of Decatur, William D. Riccio of Birmingham, David L. Kelso of Decatur, William J. Mason of Sheffield, Lenwood L. White of Sheffield, Jerry J. Tucker of Cullman and Derane O. Godfrey of Sumiton.

All were described as Alabama members or leaders in the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, with Handley holding the title of state Grand Dragon.

Nelson appointed attorneys to defend Kelso, Tucker and Godfrey after they said they could not afford attorneys' fees.

He set the $500 bonds after Barnett said the prosecution had no specific request on their amounts.

A 10th Klansman, Jack Ray Mize, has pleaded guilty in the case and is to be sentenced later.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference march in Decatur was held to protest the conviction of a black man, Tommy Lee Hines, for raping a white woman. Hines' conviction later was overturned and he was declared mentally incompetent prior to his retrial.

The defendants are charged with conspiring to violate civil rights by forcefully interfering with a march in a manner that resulted in injury.

U.S. District Judge U.W. Clemon, the state's first black federal judge, originally was scheduled to hear the case but withdrew earlier this week because, as an attorney, he had handled Hines' appeal and also had represented the SCLC.

Court of appeals upholds soldier's murder convictions

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A state appeals court Friday upheld the murder convictions of Joseph G. Christopher, the white Army private known as the .22-caliber killer who fatally shot three blacks in a 26-hour period.

In a 35-page decision, Senior Associate Justice Reid S. Moule wrote that the evidence presented at Christopher's April 1982 trial for the first three of four killings "was legally sufficient to support the convictions."

Christopher, 28, was found guilty of the fatal shootings of Glenn Dunn, 14; Harold Green, 32, and Emmanuel Thomas, 31. All three victims were killed in a 26-hour period in Buffalo and suburban Cheektowaga.

Soviets accuse U.S. attaches of taking photographs

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet armed forces newspaper accused four U.S. Embassy naval attaches Friday of taking unauthorized photographs at industrial sites in Leningrad.

It did not, however, make any direct threat to expel the attaches mentioned.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the newspaper report was "a total distortion of the facts."

The daily Red Star listed what it said were at least four incidents of the former and present attaches found photographing such sites in the past year.

Radio Moscow carried a brief, separate report indicating that Soviet civilians helped catch the attaches. It said the "cases have increased in the city in which residents detain diplomats of the United States and other NATO countries as they are carrying out their spying assignments."

Detailing the cases, Red Star said that last month naval attache Lt. Cmdr. Jeffrey Lipscomb and a British colleague were stopped "while taking photos of an industrial site."

WORLD

The paper claimed Lipscomb admitted that "his bosses have obliged him to control the situation at the industrial enterprises of Leningrad."

Another naval attache, Lt. Col. James Furleigh, was accused of taking photographs from moving cars, lying and kneeling positions or through cracks in factory fences.

Red Star said Furleigh and fellow naval attache Lt. Cmdr. William Henry "beat the record" for straying in areas off limits to foreigners in Leningrad and were found 60 miles from the Moscow-to-Leningrad route designated for foreigners.

Red Star ended its article by saying: "Let the gentlemen from overseas not think that they will do their dirty deeds on Soviet soil without punishment."

As in Moscow, areas more than 25 miles outside the Leningrad city center are off limits to foreigners without special permission from Soviet authorities. Travel between cities is allowed only on designated roads.

Red Star also charged that Capt. Samuel Coulbourn, a U.S. naval attache who completed his posting in Moscow last year, was caught last May with a Canadian colleague photographing industrial sites in Leningrad.

Leningrad is one of the Soviet Union's major industrial centers and is believed to contain some of the country's main enterprises for production of military hardware.

Carter tours memorial to those who died in Hiroshima bombing

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter toured a memorial Friday to those who died when an atomic bomb fell on this city and pledged a commitment to efforts to "eliminate nuclear weapons from the face of the earth."

AP Laserphoto

Former President Jimmy Carter, guided by Hiroshima, Japan, Mayor Takeshi Araki, places a wreath on the memorial to those who died at the bombing of Hiroshima.

In the first visit by a current or former U.S. president to Hiroshima, Carter praised the rebuilding of Hiroshima and said: "We know that such a resurrection is not likely to be possible after the next world war, when hundreds of cities might be devastated by thousands of far more destructive nuclear weapons."

He listened quietly as Hiroshima Mayor Takeshi Araki led him through the Peace Memorial Museum and described the damage caused by "Little Boy," the atomic bomb that devastated the city on Aug. 6, 1945. An estimated 118,000 people died.

Another 78,000 were killed when the United States dropped an atomic bomb on Nagasaki three days later — six days before Japan's surrender and the end of World War II.

Araki told Carter that by 1950, the number of deaths attributed to the bombing rose by more than 50 percent in Hiroshima and doubled in Nagasaki. At present, more than 300,000 survivors, known in Japanese as "hibakusha," are entitled to certain benefits for their medical problems.

Carter, his wife Rosalyn and daughter Amy moved silently through the museum. They paused at the final display — the shadow of a man, who was disintegrated in the blast, burned into a set of stone steps.

Carter told an audience of about 1,000 people, mainly schoolchildren on excursions: "It is well that you honor your lost ones with a memorial dedicated to peace...the risk of nuclear conflagration has not lessened; on the contrary, with the breakdown of United States-Soviet negotiations, and the return of a Cold War of vituperation and alienation, the danger is becoming greater."

At a news conference after his speech, he said he came to Hiroshima "to demonstrate as dramatically as I could as a private citizen now and as a former president of a great nation, my commitment to continuing efforts...to eliminate nuclear weapons from the face of the earth."

Carter and his family are in Japan at the invitation of a zipper manufacturing company, Yoshida Kogyo.

Top-ranking policeman killed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos blamed Communist subversives Friday for killing a top-ranking policeman and said it showed "they are definitely planning to undermine the government."

Marcos met with top police and military officials to discuss the Thursday night killing of Brig. Gen. Tomas Karingal, 69, in a suburban Manila restaurant.

Five gunmen pumped more than a dozen bullets into his body as he sat down to eat dinner and then fled in a car, tossing smoke grenades. Two policemen with Karingal were wounded.

The military had earlier said it had uncovered plans by the outlawed Communist Party to disrupt parliamentary elections held May 14. The plans failed and by killing Karingal, "they are trying to get even," Marcos contended.

U.S. nuclear pact presents China with strategic dilemma

PEKING (AP) — China's decision to build as many as a dozen nuclear power plants to overcome a serious energy shortage has set off a scramble for contracts by nuclear suppliers from Tennessee to Tokyo.

The initialing of a nuclear energy agreement on April 30 during President Reagan's visit to Peking paved the way for the sale of reactors by the Tennessee Valley Authority, the state of Washington and U.S. companies whose domestic market has collapsed due to safety worries.

But the Japanese, French, West Germans, British and Canadians have a lead in the bidding for nuclear plants to be built in China by the end of the century to generate 10,000 megawatts of power.

The contracts are worth an estimated $20 billion.

Even the Soviet Union, which helped China develop its first experimental reactors in the 1950s, has reportedly offered to sell reactors to China "without conditions," according to Japanese sources. Peking is expected to decline.

The competition for the Chinese market accelerated May 9 when Vice Premier Li Peng signed a nuclear cooperation treaty with West Germany. Kraftwerk, a subsidiary of Siemens, is among the companies expected to benefit.

In a case of supply-greets-demand, China's interest coincides with a general slowdown in nuclear power developments in the West, leaving reactors either unsold or only partially built.

General Electric has been talking with the Chinese since 1979, but because it took two years to negotiate the U.S. treaty on non-proliferation of nuclear weapons, the Japanese, French and British got in ahead of General Electric, Westinghouse, Bechtel and other American firms.

A senior Chinese government official, speaking on condition he remain unnamed, said "the door remains open" for all suppliers because China wants to explore different nuclear technologies rather than rely on one source.

Final decisions will be based on timing, price and technology, the official said.

Work began a year ago on China's first 300-megawatt pressurized light water reactor at Qinshan near Shanghai, with a Chinese-designed reactor and large pressure vessel from Mitsubishi of Japan under license from Westinghouse.

Tibetans reject claims of reforms

DHARAMSALA, India (AP) — Officials of the Dalai Lama's government-in-exile here reject China's claims of administrative reforms in Tibet and say they are pressing ahead with their demand for complete independence for their Buddhist homeland in the Himalayas.

Close monitoring of the situation, they said in interviews at their headquarters here, indicates only slight increases in religious, political and economic freedoms. China took over Tibet in 1950.

They claim to have found restricted freedom in worshiping in temples, continued poverty, imprisonment of dissidents and persecution of political prisoners.

Some of the 100,000 Tibetans who fled to India with the Dalai Lama in 1959, after the Chinese crushed an anti-Peking uprising in the region, now operate listening posts with sophisticated communications equipment to monitor the situation in Tibet.

Others print pictures of the Dalai Lama, the Tibetan god-king, and anti-Chinese leaflets for smuggling to dissidents in Tibet.

Still others send "travelers" into Tibet to collect intelligence. Through their links with dissidents inside Tibet, they encourage scattered acts of sabotage by Tibetans in their landlocked homeland, the exiles say.

In the last two years, Tibetan revolutionaries have blown up bridges, stolen weapons and attacked Chinese civilians in small-scale sabotage, said Jamyang Norbu, director of the Tibetan performing arts in this mountain town in northern India.

He is one of a young group of Tibetan exiles who want action, even violence, not negotiations with Peking.

"The Chinese treat us like subhumans and we should treat them like killing machines," Norbu said in an interview. "It's no use talking to a totalitarian government which wants nothing but exterminating the Tibetan race and culture. We should stand up and fight them."

But the Dalai Lama disagrees.

"Through violent actions you may gain some temporary benefits," he told a reporter. "But in the long run, it may not help."

His exiled government maintains that so long as political discussions with Peking are under way, there is hope for Tibet to become free and independent.

Ann Kerr, wife of Dr. Malcolm H. Kerr, the late president of the American University in Beirut, receives an honorary degree in his name from Richard P. Longaker, provost of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

Malcolm Kerr receives posthumous degree

BALTIMORE (AP) — Johns Hopkins University awarded a posthumous honorary degree Friday to Malcolm H. Kerr, who was assassinated Jan. 18 outside his office at the American University of Beirut, where he was president.

The doctor of humane letters degree was presented to Kerr's widow, Ann, by Richard P. Longaker, the university's provost and vice president of academic affairs. Mrs. Kerr did not speak at the ceremonies.

Kerr received a doctorate in Arabic studies from Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in Washington, D.C., in 1958.

"Malcolm Kerr was a man of remarkable compassion and personal integrity," said Longaker. "Second only to his dedication to his family was his dedication to scholarship, teaching, and higher education.

"Under his leadership, the American university was a sanctuary where all viewpoints were tolerated. Although he could have left Beirut, he was steadfast in his commitment to the university."

Longaker described Kerr as a "person who blended uniquely intellectual vigor, person gentleness, and a irrepressible sense of humor" and who is "sorely missed."

Before the degree was conferred, Steven Muller, president of Johns Hopkins, asked the audience to stand in Kerr's memory.

Before accepting the position at the American University, Kerr was a political scientist at UCLA for 20 years.

Carson's name enters de Lorean trial

Johnny Carson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Z. De Lorean's chief accuser claimed Friday that the automaker boasted he had "been involved in cocaine trafficking with Johnny Carson," but the witness said he did not believe him. A spokesman for the comedian said there was no truth to the allegations.

"I thought he was puffing. I did not believe it then. I do not believe it now," James Timothy Hoffman said at De Lorean's drug trial. Hoffman, a government informant, says De Lorean solicited his help in a drug deal two years after the statement about Carson.

"Let me make this clear," said De Lorean's attorney, Howard Weitzman.

"He (De Lorean) told you he trafficked in cocaine with Johnny Carson?"

"Yes," said Hoffman who placed the conversation in the spring of 1980, after he says he first told De Lorean he was a drug smuggler.

Carson lawyer Henry Bushkin later issued a statement through Carson publicist Jim Mahoney, saying: "There's absolutely no truth to these allegations. The only involvement Mr. Carson ever had with John De Lorean was an ill-fated stock investment in the De Lorean automobile company.

"Carson was shocked when he heard his name had been dragged into this trial and said the reports of his involvement were totally false."

Hoffman, who turned informant to avoid prison, said De Lorean, then his neighbor in the San Diego area, immediately began talking about "celebrities" he knew who used cocaine and trafficked in it.

"Who did Mr. De Lorean tell you were the celebrity people who were involved in using and trafficking in cocaine?" asked Weitzman.

Hoffman protested answering; the government objected, but after a long conference at the judge's bench U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi instructed the witness to answer.

"The one instance Mr. De Lorean referred to trafficking was with Johnny Carson," said Hoffman.

There were gasps in the crowded courtroom.

Hoffman was asked to elaborate.

"His statement to me was he had had at least one instance of selling drugs for profit," said Hoffman.

"I said, 'Really?' And he said, 'Yeah, with Carson.' I said, "Johnny Carson?' And he said, 'Yes,'" Hoffman testified.

Hoffman added, "It was not my belief that was accurate. I thought he was puffing. I did not believe it then. I do not believe it now, and I think it's ludicrous the defense is dragging someone who is not involved into this case.

"I would not have revealed that statement unless I was forced to," he said.

Carson was a major investor in De Lorean Motor Co., the Belfast, Northern Ireland plant which produced a gull-winged sportscar.

Since the automaker's arrest on October 19, 1982, Carson has frequently made jokes on his TV show about the case — a fact which De Lorean is known to resent.

During a break, Weitzman told reporters he had no idea Hoffman would mention Carson when he asked the question.

"I was shocked," he said. "This had never been told to us."

He said Assistant U.S. Attorney James Walsh first disclosed Carson's name during the conference at the judge's bench.

Weitzman said he thought the accusation was "ludicrous" and "it shows what a liar Hoffman is."

De Lorean, standing nearby as his attorney spoke, shook his head and quipped, "Well, are they going to mention the Pope next?"

The 59-year-old automaker contends Hoffman's entire testimony — the foundation of the government's case — is a lie.

Walsh, in a rare exchange with reporters outside court, said of the Carson mention: "I never gave it any credence. There was no reason to."

In his first full day of cross-examination, Weitzman hammered at apparent contradictions in Hoffman's statements to the grand jury which indicted De Lorean on cocaine trafficking charges.

He noted that Hoffman told the panel that De Lorean boasted of an experience in cocaine trafficking in 1980, that he claimed contacts with celebrities who used and trafficked in cocaine and that he said he had started his car business with cocaine profits.

A transcript showed that Hoffman did not tell the grand jury he disbelieved any of these statements.

"Did you believe he trafficked in cocaine with celebrities when you told the grand jury this?" asked Weitzman.

"I thought it was possible," said Hoffman.

"Did you tell the grand jury you thought it was possible?" he asked.

"No,"said Hoffman.

Carson's name was never mentioned at the grand jury, but Hoffman said he told a drug enforcement agent of the allegation in late June or early July of 1982 and informed Walsh of it before he testified at the grand jury.

De Lorean is charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine in a plan to save his failing car company from bankruptcy.

If convicted he could face a sentence of up to 72 years in prison.

The prosecution contends De Lorean was a willing and eager participant in a drug deal. The defense says he was "set up" by Hoffman and goverment agents who carried out a "sting" operation in which they posed as drug dealers and tape recorded meetings with De Lorean.

Field workers demand sanitation facilities

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pair of shiny portable toilets graced the sidewalk in front of the Labor Department on Friday, the focus of a gathering of farmworker groups demanding basic sanitation for field workers.

"In 1984 to be still arguing about putting toilets and water in the fields is tragic," said Arnoldo S. Torres, executive director of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

"Farm workers have to defecate in the fields, urinate in the fields, work long hours in the hot sun without water," added Charles Horwitz of the Migrant Legal Action Program.

And Valerie Wilk of the Farm Workers Justice Fund pointed out that field laborers are the only group required to show the necessity for toilet facilities at work.

"Construction workers, office workers and others don't have to prove they need toilets and handwashing facilities," she told reporters gathered on the sidewalk.

The news conference came before the start of the third day of hearings on sanitation for farm workers conducted by the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

The government is considering a proposal to require toilets, handwashing facilities and fresh drinking water wherever more than 10 field workers are employed. A similar proposal in 1976 was dropped in the face of opposition from farm organizations.

A consultant to the government has estimated that more than one-third of farm workers have no toilet facilities available and more than half are not provided with drinking water.

Cited as the areas most lacking in these facilities were Southern tobacco farms, Midwestern vegetable farms and apple orchards in the Northeast. The proposal would affect about a half-million farm workers, although the majority would not come under its provisions because they work in smaller groups.

Horwitz of the legal action program said lack of water for workers can lead to dehydration and heat cramps, and the absence of handwashing facilities prevents workers from removing dangerous pesticides from their skin.

In addition, Horowitz said, "lack of toilet facilities can cause bladder diseases, gastrointestinal problems and food contamination."

He said intestinal parasites infect many farm workers, and they may be passed on to consumers on fresh fruits and vegetables picked by those workers.

It should be no burden to provide something that is essential to workers in every other industry, said Chip Hughes of the Farmworker Justice Fund. Failure to provide sanitary facilities is evidence of a "plantation mentality," he contended.

After another hearing in Washington next Tuesday, OSHA will take testimony at sessions in Orlando, Fla., June 5-7; Lubbock, Texas, June 12-13; Toledo, Ohio, June 19-20; and Fresno, Calif., June 26-28.

Mother charged with killing infant son with salt-laced formula

BOSTON (AP) — A 19-year-old mother pleaded innocent Friday to a lesser charge of manslaughter in the death of her infant son from a salt-tainted bottle of formula at a Boston hospital.

Janice Robinson, who had been charged with murder in District Court a month ago, stood impassively before Judge James Donohue in Suffolk Superior Court in a three-minute arraignment.

"This is the first time we have been notified officially of the (manslaughter) charge," said her attorney, Constance Sweeney, just before the session. "It would be interesting to speculate what the grand jury thought of the (murder) charge."

Donohue ordered a a pre-trial conference on June 24. Miss Robinson was free on 1,000 cash bail.

The defendant, who lives with her mother in Springfield and is unmarried, declined to comment after the session, but her attorney said published reports of her fingerprints on salt packets were misleading.

"There was not a 'quantity of salt packets,'" said Miss Sweeney. "At the most there were two packets, each about one-twenty-fourth of a teaspoon. The salt packets are used by parents (at the hospital) every day."

Miss Robinson was charged in the death of her 11-month-old son, Damon, at Children's Hospital Medical Center on March 5 after the child drank the salt-laced formula.

At district court a month ago where she testified at an inquest, she said whoever gave her son the deadly formula should also die. "I didn't do it," she told a reporter. "He was my rock. When I lost him, I lost everything."

Damon had entered the hospital Feb. 27 for tests on a diagnosis of failure to thrive. After drinking the salted formula March 3, he went into convulsions and a coma and then died.

Miss Sweeney said the defendant stayed with her son, sleeping on a nearby cot, as the hospital encourages young mothers to do, and often fed him, but did not give Damon the fatal formula. She added that the only known feedings on the night of the baby's death were made by nurses and that other parents were constantly in the room with Miss Robinson.

Suffolk County District Attorney Newman Flanagan said after the arrest of Miss Robinson last month that physical evidence "gained through a high technology skill" led to the charge.

"We don't have any possible motivation," he added.

Statue of Liberty will get new steel skeleton

NEW YORK (AP) — The Statue of Liberty's old "iron ribs" will be replaced with a new stainless steel skeleton as part of a $39 million restoration project, officials said Friday.

The iron framework used to support the statue's copper skin is badly rusted and weakened, said F. Ross Holland Jr., director of restoration. He said the 1,200 iron bars will be removed and duplicated in corrosion-resistant stainless steel donated by seven American specialty steel manufacturers.

Meanwhile, the National Park Service announced that the statue and its pedestal will be closed to visitors Tuesday and remain closed while the two-year project continues. The island on which it stands and the American Immigration Museum at its base will remain open, said David Moffitt, superintendent of the Statue of Liberty National Monument.

Delivery of the bars will begin in June. After about July 4, visitors will be able to view the fabrication operation. Lee A. Iacocca, chairman of the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Centennial Commission, said that with its new ribs "I am confident that the statue will stand for many years to come."

Crash survivors file suit

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Four survivors of a 1983 Air Canada fire and relatives of 17 of the people killed have filed a "master complaint" alleging negligence in the refurbishing, testing and inspecting of the aircraft.

Lawyer Stanley Chesley said the 78-count complaint filed Thursday in U.S. District Court consolidates earlier suits and adds the manufacturers, producers and sellers of plastic materials used in the plane as defendants. The suit asks punitive and compensatory damages in excess of $10 million per plaintiff.

The Dallas-to-Toronto flight landed at Greater Cincinnati International Airport on June 2, 1983, after a fire broke out in a rear lavatory and filled the cabin with smoke. Twenty-three people died.

Jury finds airman guilty

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — An eight-member military jury has found an airman guilty of charges that he performed sexual acts with six Wichita boys.

Airman 1st Class Raymond Sullivan, 24, stationed at McConnell Air Force Base, was found guilty of 10 counts of committing indecent acts with children. Prosecutors contended Sullivan touched and kissed the boys, one of whom he met through the local Big Brothers-Big Sisters program, in addition to exposing himself in their presence.

Jury investigating ex-mayor

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Federal investigators looking into alleged corruption in Providence city government are checking the campaign finance records of former Mayor Vincent A. Cianci Jr., an aide to Cianci says.

That grand jury is expected to spend up to 18 months investigating, among other allegations, charges that private contractors who did business with the city paid kickbacks to some city employees.

Cianci resigned April 25 after receiving a five-year suspended sentence on an assault charge in an unrelated case and has said he had nothing to do with any corruption. The inquiry already has led to the indictment of three officials from his administration, including a former highway superintendent accused of extorting kickbacks from snow-removal contractors.

Inmates convicted in killings

BENTON, Ill. (AP) — Three inmates of the maximum-security federal prison in Marion will not be eligible for parole for 50 years under sentences handed down in three prison killings.

The stabbing deaths of two Marion guards in October 1983 and a prisoner in 1982 prompted calls by federal officials last year for reinstatement of the federal death penalty, abolished in 1972.

U.S. District Judge James Foreman on Thursday sentenced Thomas Silverstein, 31, Randy Gometz, 28, and Clayton Fountain, 28, to terms ranging from 50 years to life in the killings. Not all were charged in all three killings.

Silverstein and Fountain already were serving multiple life sentences for murder. Gometz was serving a 19-year term for bank robbery and assault. The inmates will not begin serving the latest sentences until they have completed their present terms.

Vatican Bank agrees to pay creditors

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Vatican Bank officials signed an agreement Friday to pay $250 million to creditors of Banco Ambrosiano, which collapsed in one of Italy's biggest financial scandals since World War II.

Rome and London banking sources said the $250 million payment combined with sales of Banco Ambrosiano's assets will come to a total of $406 million, or two-thirds of the total owed to creditor banks.

Banco Ambrosiano collapsed in 1982, leaving obligations of more than $1.2 billion. It had made loans to Panamanian companies in which the Vatican had a financial interest.

Vatican officials have denied any wrongdoing, saying they were victims of an unspecified "hidden project" by Banco Ambrosiano's late president, Roberto Calvi.

In a communique, representatives who signed Friday's pact said: "The parties are pleased to announce that final agreement has been reached in connection with the Ambrosiano settlement, and the documentation has been exchanged and signed."

"This reflects the spirit of reconciliation and cooperation which has characterized negotiations leading up to the agreement and we look forward to cooperating together in the future," the communique said.

The signing of the agreement was shrouded in secrecy. Bankers here for the ceremony met first at Geneva's plush Hotel des Bergues, then moved at mid-day to the European Free Trade Association building, a non-descript office building. When reporters finally tracked them down, they were already celebrating the pact with glasses of champagne.

British banking sources in London, where Midlands Bank and National Westminster bank are joint chairman of a steering committee formed by the creditor banks, said the accord stipulates that creditors will receive at least two-thirds of the money owed them.

Sources in Rome had said Monday that the Vatican Bank had signed a tentative accord to pay $250 million in installments. But the pact is also believed to provide that the amount will drop to $243 million if paid in one lump sum, the Rome sources said.

The tentative agreement was said to have been reached Sunday between Vatican officials, liquidators of Banco Ambrosiano and Banco Ambrosiano's foreign creditors.

The Vatican Bank, officially called "Istituto per le Opere di Religione" (Institute for Religious Works), is a full-service bank for about 7,000 depositors, most of them religious organizations, priests, nuns and ambassadors accredited to the Holy See.

U.S. general criticizes NATO's budget goals

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A slowdown in spending on conventional forces has undermined NATO's ability to deter a nonnuclear attack, the Supreme Allied Commander in Europe said Friday.

Gen. Bernard Rogers criticized the budget goals that NATO defense ministers set last week, which reduced each country's average yearly increase in spending for conventional forces to 3.2 percent through 1990, compared with a 4 percent increase in the previous planning period.

"There's only one conclusion that can be drawn from that fact, and that is that we're moving in the wrong direction," the American general told a forum sponsored by the Center For European Policy Studies in Brussels.

"If attacked conventionally, NATO today would face fairly quickly the very difficult decision of escalating to a nuclear response," he said. "In essense, we have mortgaged our defense to the nuclear response."

One result, he said, was a growing perception among the public in NATO member countries that the West's defense strategy invites nuclear conflict.

Yearly spending increases of at least 7 percent are needed to give the West a "reasonable prospect of deterring a conventional attack" by the East, Rogers said.

He said European and American political leaders are engaged in "wishful thinking" that economic strains in the Soviet Union would force the East bloc countries to slow their rapid military buildup.

Public support for NATO strategy will weaken even further if the Netherlands government decides not to accept its assigned 48 cruise nuclear missiles, Rogers said.

NATO agreed in 1979 to install 572 Pershing 2 and cruise medium-range nuclear missiles in five West European nations to counter an arsenal of Soviet SS-20s nuclear missiles already trained on Europe.

The Dutch government is under severe domestic pressure to back out of the agreement. A decision on Dutch deployment is expected in mid-June. Deployment already has begun in Britain, Italy and West Germany, and Belgium recently began preparation for deployment on its soil.

Soviet Union, North Korea plan joint security measures

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union and North Korea agreed to take special security measures in the Far East because of a "militarist policy" in the region by the United States and Japan, the official news agency Tass reported Friday.

No joint communique was issued at the end of three days of talks between Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko and North Korean President Kim Il Sung, making his first visit to Moscow in 23 years.

But Tass said, "Special emphasis was made on issues of strengthening security in the Far East and the Pacific Ocean zone in the light of intensified militarist policy of the U.S.A and its allies in that region and the growing revanchist tendencies in the policy of the ruling circles of Japan."

The word "revanchist" referred to Japan's desire to recover the four South Kurile Islands, which were seized by Soviet troops in the closing days of World War II.

In Tokyo, the Foreign Ministry called in a Soviet Embassy official on Friday to convey the Japanese government's displeasure with charges Chernenko has made during Kim's visit that Japan is undergoing a revival of militarism.

A statement from Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, saying Chernenko's comments were "totally contrary to facts," was handed to Soviet Minister-Councilor Lyndvig A. Chizhov.

Kim's three days of talks with Chernenko also included ways to expand party and governmental ties and to increase cooperation, Tass said.

The pomp the Soviets accorded to Kim appears to reflect Kremlin desires to pull North Korea more firmly into the Soviet fold, and away from China, which has made a major effort to warm relations with North Korea.

Reagan to bring 'nuclear trigger' on trip to Ireland

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The Irish Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament lost a court battle Friday to stop President Reagan from bringing the so-called "nuclear trigger" with him when he visits the Emerald Isle next month.

Jim Maher, an executive of the Irish anti-nuclear group, charged in Dublin's High Court that Ireland would become a nuclear target, and the lives of its 3.4 million people would be put at risk, if Reagan were allowed to bring with him the codes and electronic equipment needed to launch the United States' missiles in the event of war.

Judge Kevin Lynch rejected the application for an injunction to ban the Irish Republic's government from allowing Reagan to enter the country with the codes and equipment, which accompany the U.S. president wherever he goes.

"It is a matter for the Irish government to decide who to invite and on what conditions," Lynch declared.

However, the ruling was not expected to halt anti-Reagan demonstrations that have been planned during the president's June 1-4 visit to Dublin, Galway and his family's ancestral home in the County Tipperary village of Ballyporeen.

He will fly to Normandy on June 6 to mark the 40th anniversary of the World War II D-Day landings and attend a three-day economic summit in London June 7-10.

Two politicians from Wales will tour brothels in Europe, Asia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Two state politicians from New South Wales will make a 28-day government-financed tour of brothels in Europe and Asia.

"It's obvious this will be the best observed study trip any politician could take overseas," said state Parliament member Peter Collins. "We'll be surrounded by scores of police and public officials."

Collins and fellow lawmaker Pat Rogan plan to visit Thailand, the Netherlands, West Germany, Britain and other European countries to study how other nations regulate prostitution.

German man rams border fence

HANOVER, West Germany (AP) — A man who was wounded when he rammed his car into an East German border fence has been released by Communist authorities, West German officials said Friday. The car hit a chain-link fence mounted with an SM-70, an automatic firing device that sprays shrapnel in all directions when set off.

The 30-year-old man from Diepholz, West Germany was not identified and his condition was not made public. It was also unknown why he drove his car across the border into East Germany last Saturday.

Communist authorities have reinforced 258 miles of the 854-mile border with hundreds of SM-70s to hinder escapes.

Japan wants all-forces exercise

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese government wants to hold an all-forces joint military exercise with the United States "sometime in the future," government officials said Friday.

In the past, each of the three arms of the Japanese Self-Defense Forces have participated separately in joint exercises with their corresponding U.S. forces.

There are no concrete plans for military exercises of land, sea and air forces of both countries, said a government official who asked not to be identified.

Kyodo News Service quoted Defense Agency sources in reporting that the Japanese Joint Chiefs of Staff may hold a joint simulation exercise with the U.S. forces in Japan in 1985 — a step toward a full-scale joint practice.

Bulgaria releases Italian woman

VIENNA (AP) — An Italian woman convicted by a Bulgarian court of espionage-related charges has been released after serving little more than a year of her three-year prison sentence, Bulgaria's state-run news agency, BTA, reported Friday.

The woman, Gabriella Trevisin, 27, was sentenced on April 14, 1983, along with her companion, Paolo Farsetti, who received a prison term of 10 years and six months. BTA made no mention of Farsetti. Unlike Farsetti, Miss Trevisin, 27, made a confession and asked for leniency.

The dispatch, received in Vienna, made no mention of the whereabouts of Miss Trevisin, convicted along with Farsetti of collecting information "representing a state secret." It also did not give the day of release.

According to the indictment, the two Italians took pictures of restricted military installations, including a barracks area, warships, electronic signalling equipment and a border guard patrol.

Teacher leaks proficiency test answers, students claim

HOUSTON (AP) — State officials are being asked to consider whether a Houston high school teacher, accused of leaking answers to students taking a proficiency test, should be disciplined.

The Houston Independent School District has typed and signed statements from students allegedly implicating Walter Hinojosa, an economics and government teacher, district spokeswoman Geri Konigsberg said Friday.

"These are not students who have reason to lie," Ms. Konigsberg said, adding that the students are willing to testify under oath. The district, which questioned Hinojosa about the accusation, claims it also has a tape rec ding of the meeting at which Hinojosa acknowledged the allegations, Ms. Konigsberg said.

"My answer was that I used the proficiency's syllabus, and not the test," Hinojosa, 34, said in an interview Friday. The syllabus is issued to students at the beginning of the course, he said.

The exams are given in 14 subject areas and count for 20 percent of the students' final grade.

Hinojosa has been relieved of his teaching duties at Milby High School since May 17, pending the outcome of a complaint he has filed with the Texas Education Agency Teacher's Professional Practices Commision. However, he remains at the school, answering telephones in an administration office.

"I'm in the business because of the kids and I need to be back in that classroom," he said. He continues to draw his teaching salary.

Milby Principal Claude Brinkley reassigned Hinojosa after a student whom the district refuses to identify said Hinojosa read test questions and provided answers in class.

That student since has recanted his statement, saying Brinkley "pressured and forced" him to sign the statement, according to Gayle Fallon, president of the Houston Federation of Teachers.

"We have statements that those kids were pressured and the statements were twisted around," Hinojosa said.

Brinkley was in conference Friday and could not be reached for comment, his secretary, Joyce Wallace, said.

Hinojosa, who wants his job back, on Thursday sent his complaint to the Teacher's Professional Practices Commission, whose chairman has 60 days to decide whether to hear the case.

The commission could recommend punishment ranging from a letter in Hinojosa's file to dismissal.

Hinojosa said he had handwritten statements from students saying he did not give them test questions or answers.

"Why should we need to get them from him?" one unidentified student wrote Mrs. Fallon. "Most of the tests are all over our campus and the students already have copies."

If the chairman decides not to consider the complaint, the Houston Federation of Teachers could appeal to the full 15-member commission.

Hinojosa last month testified before the panel against Brinkley in a case involving allegations of unprofessional and unethical conduct over use of school funds.

Boy punished because he wears gold earring

WEATHERFORD (AP) — A 14-year-old Weatherford boy was barred from attending a school play day because the eighth-grader's earring was "an extreme dress," school officials said.

Jack "Jet" Wilson was not allowed to join other seventh- and eighth-grade students during a play day after he wore a gold stud earring to school May 17, said Weatherford Middle School Principal Bill Atchley.

Wilson had appealed his case to the school board, which Thursday upheld the decision by school officials.

"In our society, it is not appropriate for men to wear earrings, and not in Weatherford especially," said Faye Donaldson, school board president.

Ms. Donaldson said the board needs to discuss the acceptability of the dress, not the extremes.

Don Jackson, Wilson's a Greater Fort Worth Civil Liberties Union attorney representing Wilson, said the boy had not received sufficient warning that he was in violation of the dress code. Jackson said the dress code is ambigious and does not specifically say boys cannot wear earrings.

The dress code, he said, points out the "extremes in dress" and sets out specific regulations regarding hair length, clothing and facial hairs. The code, however, does not mention jewelry.

"The policy itself is ambiguous, the process of determining what is extreme dress is ambiguous," Jackson said.

David Owen, school board attorney, said the board could not be expected to make rules covering all aspects of the code and must be allowed to make arbitrary decisions.

"If I were an eighth-grade student, I could have a lot of fun coming up with things that you haven't been prohibited yet," Owen said. He said Wilson had received adequate notice that the school board did not approve of his earring.

Owen said Wilson wanted to challenge the dress code and make a disturbance.

Officials said after three teachers warned Wilson of the policy, the third teacher, Anita Ellis, sent the youth to the principal's office.

Vice principal Bill Zinke then assessed punishment.

According to Zinke three other boys have been disciplined for wearing earrings. After being warned, Zinke said, the boys' homes were called. He said after Wilson's warning by teachers and his second offense, the boy was assigned to an isolated classroom.

Although Wilson is a good student and athlete, Zinke said, Wilson would not be able to attend the play day because it was a privilege students earn during the last days of school.

Zinke told Debra Beasley, Wilson's mother, that if Wilson attended the play day, police would be called.

On Thursday, Wilson was suspended for a school incident which his mother says was a result of her son's publicity.

The school year ends Wednesday.

Pheasants could foul up gala cultural event

DALLAS (AP) — A June 2 gala ball could go foul because 700 pheasants earmarked for the main course have been quarantined by federal officials who say the Scottish birds are prohibited in the United States.

Patrons of The Auction for Cultural Arts pay between $100 and $500 for the annual charity event.

But U.S. Department of Agriculture say the pheasants are potential carriers of a virus which causes Exotic Newcastle Disease, a deadly disease in poultry that does not affect humans.

"We're definitely interested in keeping the disease out of this country," said Dr. Althaea Langston, who works in the Maryland office of the Agriculture Department.

The birds were ordered by Henri Boubee, executive chef at the Registry Hotel, through a New York food broker. The hotel executives had originally wanted Swedish birds to serve at the annual charity event, which benefits the Dallas arts groups.

The birds were slaughtered Monday in Europe and arrived at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport Tuesday. They have been packed, feathers and all, with dry ice and locked in a sealed cooler near the airport.

John Dussett, a salesman with Flying Foods, the food brokerage firm commissioned to obtain the birds, said, a "route of exception" by the USDA could get the birds released.

"If the birds are healthy, it doesn't matter if they came from Scotland," Dussett said.

If the birds do not get a release from the Agricultural Department, they will be destroyed or re-exported.

Hotel officials must receive the birds by June 2, or face losing $14,000 that they paid to Olin Johnson, the Swedish food broker.

"If the petition doesn't work," Dussett said, "we'll be put on pins and needles to get the money back for the Registry. We had no written contract, but a gentlemen's agreement with our Swedish contact."

Pedro Prado, the Registry's catering director, said Thursday he will try to get more pheasants from another European country and decide whether or not to send the Swedish birds back.

But Boubee said time is running out.

The hotel cannot get U.S. phesants because this is mating season and the birds destroy each other's tail plumage, an important part of Boubee's dinner plans.

Boubee uses the feathers to create a floor-to ceiling pyramid display, similar to one he created several years ago at the marriage of the daughter of the Emir of Kuwait. It takes him 72 hours to put the creation together.

"Henri says there is no plan No. 2," said Prado. "We will get them. We won't serve chicken, that's for sure."

Grand jury indicts district attorney

McKINNEY (AP) — A Collin County grand jury, after a two-month investigation, indicted District Attorney H. Ownby on charges that he lied about his handling of sexual harrassment allegations against a Plano justice of the peace.

The grand jury also indicted Justice of the Peace Jim Stecki, who allegedly agreed to accept a bribe from a defendant in a hot check case.

Ownby and Stecki both deny any wrongdoings.

Ownby, who surrendered Thursday, was released on a $750 personal recognizance bond.

Stecki, accused of conspiring to commit commercial bribery, was released on a $1,500 bond.

The grand jury charged that Ownby did not testify truthfully about one of the provisions of an unusual contract he negotiated between Stecki and three county employees who had accused the peace justice of sexually harassing them.

Stecki has since resigned as justice of the peace, citing a better job offer. But he is demanding reinstatement.

Singer John Denver won't abandon his folksy road

John Denver

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pop singer John Denver hasn't had a major hit since the late '70s, when the disco beat lured young music buyers away from such tunes as "Sunshine on My Shoulders." But he's not abandoning his folksy road.

"I still think I can make records that today's young fans will buy," says Denver, 40. "But I'm not faking anything for the public either.

"People may challenge my image, but that's OK — there's nothing awful behind it. I try to be honest and decent."

Denver, in Los Angeles for concerts Friday and tonight, hopes to re-cultivate the backing of radio stations which he considered "hypocritical" in ignoring him before he was a star and courting him afterward.

"I resisted getting involved with radio people" because of that about-face, he says. "...When I had the hits and the big following, I didn't have to play their game. But things are diferent now. A lot of what happened was a mistake. I'd like to improve my relations with them."

On a personal note, Denver says his divorce last year from his college sweetheart and wife of 16 years, Annie, was "one of the most unhappy moments of my life."

They keep in touch about their two children. The singer says he's too busy now to try to find another woman, but some of his female fans are ready when he is.

"I'm getting a lot of flowers backstage from women. They tell me they love my music and if I need somebody to talk to they're available. I really do love the flowers and the attention. That makes me feel good."

Mary Evans

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Mary P. Evans, disbarred and sentenced to three years in prison for helping a convict escape, has volunteered to help other inmates with legal problems and will work regularly as a laborer, an official said Friday.

The classification board at the Tennessee Prison for Women decided late Thursday to assign the 27-year-old former attorney to a job unloading supplies in the prison warehouse after determining that she was "able to cope" with prison life, Correction Department spokesman John Taylor said.

Taylor said Ms. Evans had requested one of the prison's two paralegal positions, but they were both filled. Warden Eileen Radecker, however, agreed to let her help other prisoners with their legal problems as a volunteer.

Meanwhile, movie producer Jay Weston said Thursday he hopes to begin filming a "sympathetic" story about Ms. Evans next year and has made her a "six-figure" offer for rights to her story.

Ms. Evans pleaded guilty to helping a client, Brushy Mountain Penitentiary inmate William Timothy Kirk escape last year from a psychologist's office in nearby Oak Ridge. They were on the run for 139 days until FBI agents captured them in Florida last August.

Ms. Evans is eligible for parole near the end of Feburary.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — The Russ Morgan Orchestra isn't a big band anymore, and gone are the grand old hotel ballrooms where thousands would dance to its tunes while the nation listened in on radio.

But to Jack Morgan, that doesn't matter. He is keeping his late father's "Music in the Morgan Manner" alive.

"There aren't many bands doing this sort of thing anymore," said Morgan, interviewed during a recent engagement here. "I think we're the last of our kind still working on a constant basis, and every day that passes we become more rare."

The orchestra's music today is the same that Russ Morgan developed in 1935, the type of smooth orchestral sound that soon evolved into swing.

Morgan, a trombonist, was best known for his "You're Nobody 'Til Somebody Loves You." He died in 1969, and his son has resisted any inclination to jazz up the band's sound.

"We're probably the most authentic to the original sound of any of the hotel-society bands still around," Morgan said. "A lot of the other bands have gone in different directions and aren't the same."

Morgan now plays with nine sidemen, while his father used 17.

Morgan, 43, who joined the band when he was 17, said people ask him if he finds it confining to limit himself to the music his father made decades earlier, and he always says no.

"I'm not doing this for Dad," he said. "There's a lot of me in this music now, too."

NEW YORK (AP) — The national president of Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization, was elected Friday as chairman of the American section of the World Jewish Congress.

Frieda Lewis of Great Neck was elected to a one-year term as head of the section, which represents American Jewish organizations in the deliberations of the World Jewish Congress.

Mrs. Lewis said her first priority would be "to strengthen cooperation and communication between American Jewry and Jewish communities in all other countries in the cause of world Jewry and the state of Israel."

Hadassah is the largest constituent member of the WJC American section, which includes the U.S. Zionist movement and the congregational bodies of Conservative, Orthodox and Reform Judaism.

Hadassah claims to be the largest women's volunteer organization in the United States with more than 370,000 members.

Restaurateur: Ruling kills intimate dining

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was black crepe instead of crepes suzette as Papa Choux closed its Intimate Room with what the restaurant called "A Wake for Romance."

The ceremony — complete with funeral wreath, flowers and undertaker — was held to announce the closure of the restaurant's six curtained booths.

The move followed a sex discrimination suit filed by lesbians Deborah Johnson and Zandra Rolon, who were not allowed to dine in the booths last December.

The case eventually reached the state Court of Appeal, which ruled against Papa Choux.

After the downtown restaurant's petition for a hearing before the state Supreme Court was denied May 18, owner Seymour Jacoby wrote in a newspaper ad that "true romantic dining died on this date."

Gloria Allred, the plaintiffs' attorney, who turned down an invitation to attend the "wake," had a different viewpoint.

"This is not the death of romance," she said. "It is the death of discrimination."

About 100 or so bar patrons, most of them apparently sympathetic to the restaurant's opinion, attended the ceremony, feasting on free hors d'oeuvres and champagne.

The eulogy was given by Bob Malinow of Malinow & Silverman Mortuary.

Malinow began by joking: "Being one of many undertakers who eats here on a regular basis and survives...."

Then he declared "the death of an era...the death of romance...rest in peace at Papa Choux."

USDA survey finds there aren't many nutrients in fast-food menus

The Associated Press

Where's the beef? And the vitamins? And minerals?

The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently looked at a variety of fast-food outlets and their menus to see just how many nutrients you get for your money.

The answer: Not many.

The USDA points out that Americans spend nearly one-third their food dollar at fast-food outlets, up from less than 10 percent 30 years ago.

They questioned 10,000 people, adults and teens, and found they ate anywhere from 8 percent to 28 percent of their meals out.

Then they checked the percentage of the recommended daily allowance of protein, carbohydrate, fat, calcium, iron, vitamins A and C and thiamin the food provided.

The study found no link between the amount of calories consumed and the amount of fast food eaten. It said, however, that people may have lied about the number of calories they ate, underestimating them.

It said they got anywhere from 3 percent to 13 percent less of the vitamins, carbohydrates, calcium and iron.

Among key findings:

—The 22 to 40 year age group got fewer nutrients; it particularly lacked vitamins.

—You can get a good diet at a fast food restaurant, but only if you eat more calories.

—The greatest change in nutrient intake was for the over 60 age group; they got less calcium and vitamins than they needed, although the impact on their diet was minimized becaused they generally ate fewer fast-food meals.

—The diets of most individuals met or exceeded the minimum recommended daily allowances, but certain segments of the population — people 13 to 21, for example — who eat lots of meals out are at high risk.

—Teen-agers are generally the most affected because they eat more fast-food meals.

As a whole, Americans are eating less food — 1,387 pounds last year, or about nine pounds less than the year before. Americans consumed fewer eggs, oils and dairy products, partly because of concern about cholesterol, and more poultry and fresh fruits and vegetables.

Rutherford starts in deep Indy 500 hole

Three-time winner must pass 29 cars

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Johnny Rutherford is back in a deep hole, starting 30th in the 33-car field in Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

The three-time Indy winner was the last driver to start the race as far back as 25th and charge to the victory, accomplishing that feat in 1974.

But, the powerful Texan says he is shouldering a bigger load this weekend if he hopes to get to the front.

"Obviously, it will (be tougher), because in 1974, when I came from 25th to win this race, I had the second fastest car in qualifying," he explained. "We didn't even put a qualifying setup on it. We just took it out to qualify the way we were gonna race."

Rutherford, who was driving for Team McLaren that year, was unable to qualify on the first weekend because of mechanical and weather problems.

"WE WERE technically relegated to the third day of qualifying," he explained. "It was a situation where we had the second fastest car. Foyt was on the pole and I would have been next to him on the front row, but because of a technicality I was 25th.

"As I recall, I came from 25th to third in 12 laps. I would doubt very seriously that you could put Tom Sneva or Mario Andretti or Rick Mears, who have been the quickest here this month, back there (in 25th) and that they could do that. The cars are just too close (in speed) together now."

Since it is going to be tougher this year, Rutherford was asked how many cars he thinks he will be able to pass early in the race.

"As many as you can," the 46-year-old driver replied. "That's the name of the game. It's a race. If you can pass guys, then you pass them. If it becomes a chore, then you wait for them to slip.

"It becomes a giant waiting game. You run along with the guy and watch for his weaknesses and figure out what is happening if you can. Whatever is easy. If I can move up 10 (places), I'll move up 10. If I can move up three, then that's what I'll take. Especially because it is a long day — 500 miles."

RUTHERFORD LATER added victories here in 1974 — again with Team McLaren — and in 1980 — with Jim Hall's Chaparral team. But the veteran racer has fallen on hard times since he won the national championship in 1980.

His last victory came in the 1981 season-opener at Phoenix and, after a long uphill struggle, Hall's team folded at the end of 1982. Rutherford passed up a chance to drive for the new Forsythe Brothers team — for whom Indy-car rookie Teo Fabi won Indianapolis and season Rookie of the Year honors. He then spent a tough season with the Patrick Racing Team last year — missing Indy after crashing in practice and breaking a foot and an ankle.

This year hasn't been any easier, so far.

First, he found himself without a ride and with no sponsorship money to buy one. When he did put together a deal with team owner Doug Shierson to drive in the three 500-mile events (Indianapolis, Michigan and Pocono), he got to the Speedway and found the team's new DSR1 race car was not competitive.

FELLOW TEXAN A.J. Foyt gave him a ride last week in his third entry — a March powered by an experimental Chevrolet V6 — which he was unable to get into the field because of mechanical problems. Finally, Foyt's team bought a new March, quickly put in a Cosworth engine and, after six practice laps, Rutherford qualified it at 202.069 mph.

Rain washed out any chance of practice Sunday and the team tore down the car to modify it for Rutherford and prepare it for the race. They were unable to finish it by Thursday, the last chance before the race to get on the track for practice.

"It's been exasperating, obviously," Rutherford said. "But, then my whole month and maybe the last couple of years have been exasperating.

"The car just wasn't ready. We've done a whole lot of changing to the car since we got it from the Galles team and have done a lot of things that I think have made it a little better. So we'll have to wait until Sunday morning to find out.

"But I think it'll run all right. It's just a race car. No two are just alike, of course. The only side of it that I regret is that I didn't get a chance to get a feel for the car and make some changes before the race to suit my style."

Cubs lose in slugfest

From Staff Reports

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.— The Midland Cubs got off to a fast start, but couldn't stand prosperity, falling to the Arkansas Travelers 10-7 here and falling further into the Texas League Western Division basement.

Midland jumped all over Traveler pitching in the early innings, exploding for two runs in each of the first two at-bats. But Arkansas rallied for four runs to tie in the last of the third.

The Cubs bounced Trav starter Gary Adams with two more runs in the fifth. Adams gave way to John Silkwood, who promptly nuked the Midland attack. The Cubs managed only a hit off of Silkwood, who benefitted from a four-run Traveler sixth to earn his third win against a single loss.

Midland starter Darryl Banks gave way to Jim Boudreau upon having trouble during the sixth, but Boudreau took the loss, falling to 2-5 on the year by allowing four runs to score in his ⅔ innings of work.

Rangers, Astros trade

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers traded infielder Mike Richardt to the Houston Astros for infielder-outfielder Alan Bannister Friday.

Bannister, 32, who was purchased by Houston from Cleveland during spring training, will report to the Rangers Saturday. Richardt, 25, was assigned to Tucson, the Astros' Triple-A farm team.

Indy rookie Michael Andretti talks to his father, Mario Andretti, during recent practice session at the Indy 500. Michael is the fastest rookie in the field with a speed of 207.805 m.p.h.

It's Andretti vs. Andretti

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mario Andretti has two goals in Sunday's $2.5 million Indianapolis 500: to get his elusive second victory in the world's most prestigious race and to share a few wheel-to-wheel, high-speed moments with his 21-year-old son, Michael.

Mario, who won here in 1969, will be starting his 19th Indy race. It will be Michael's first. And a duel, even a brief one, on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway's 2½-mile oval would be special to both of them.

Michael outqualified his famous father two weeks ago, taking the inside of the second row with a four-lap average of 207.805 mph. Mario will start on the outside of the same row after qualifying at 207.467.

"To be honest with you, I kind of look forward to when just he and I are gonna go at it seriously," Mario said. "And then, I hope that we can just have a good laugh about it. Whoever comes out looking better that day will feel real good.

"When the time comes, I feel we're going to have some good, honest racing because I certainly know him, and he knows me, and that's probably the best shot we'll ever have.

"Probably, I'll want to just be sure that I have control of the situation where I am, that I don't slide into him. I won't give him anything. Like anyone else, I'll make him earn it, and I think he'll do the same."

Michael, who approaches racing in the same quiet, easy-going manner as his father, says he, too, would enjoy a wheel-to-wheel battle.

"I guess I'd drive a little differently than I do against other people," Michael said. "Maybe I'd give him a little more room, but I'd drive as hard as I can."

The Andrettis are the second father-son combination in an Indy race, joining Al Unser and Al Unser Jr., who broke the family barrier a year ago.

Al Jr. was penalized two laps last year for passing under the yellow flag to position himself between Al Sr. and eventual winner Tom Sneva when those two were battling for the lead late in the race. Al Jr. said later he was just trying to help his dad.

"I don't really think what he did was right," Michael said, but he made no promise that he wouldn't do it, too.

"I don't know if I would do the same thing or not if I got in the same situation," Michael said. "If my dad could win it, I might help him."

Mario says he and the rest of his family are getting used to Michael's Indy-car racing, which began with three races late in the 1983 season.

"The thing that makes me feel more at ease than I anticipated is the fact that I really feel Michael respects this place," Andretti said. "I've watched him work up to speed every time. He knows that he hasn't got everything handled in a sense he doesn't go out there and say 'Oh hell, this is a piece of cake' and banzai the first lap in there like a lot of guys do.

"That makes me feel good. At least, every time he goes out he wants to know what he's doing. That could be a real plus for him. And, of all places, this place has a way of not really forgiving. Cockiness will be paid for dearly here. I've seen it so many times, you can almost call it. It scares you."

Other veteran drivers, many of whom often are slow to warm to newcomers in a sport where everyone now is running in excess of 200 mph, have accepted the younger Andretti quickly.

'Bubba' gets mad as Gamblers roll

By The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Houston quarterback Jim Kelly completed 20 of 23 passes for 362 yards and three touchdowns, and scored on a 1-yard keeper, to lead the Gamblers to a 54-7 rout of the Jacksonville Bulls Friday night in the United States Football League.

Slot back Clarence Verdin took the opening kickoff 94 yards to score as Houston began a humiliating defeat for the Bulls, whose owner, Fred "Bubba" Bullard, marched onto the playing field late in the second quarter to complain about the officiating.

Verdin also caught a touchdown pass and recovered an onsides kick, and fullback Todd Fowler rushed 15 times for 106 yards and one touchdown for Houston, 9-5.

The Bulls, 4-10, were assessed a 15-yard penalty for unsportsmanlike conduct because of Bullard's confrontation with the officials. The penalty came on a kickoff following Kelly's 39-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Greg Moser, which put Houston up 41-7 with two minutes left in the first half.

The Gamblers' Toni Fritsch, kicking from the 50, toed an onsides kick recovered by Verdin at the Bulls' 37. Just over a minute later Fritsch kicked a 41-yard field goal, one of four for the night, to give Houston a 44-7 halftime lead.

The touchdown pass to Moser came 90 seconds after Kelly's 41-yard pass to Verdin, which was ruled a touchdown based on an interference call against Jacksonville's Kevin Gray, who appeared to have intercepted the ball.

"We've lost three games this season because of poor calls and something had to be done about it," Bullard said later.

"I told them there were some of the worst calls I've ever seen in football and I've been a fan for 40 years," said Bullard, adding he expected to be fined for his action but would sue before he would pay.

Kelly set a USFL passing record of 4,274 yards in a season, surpassing Fred Besana's 3,980 set last year with the Oakland Invaders.

Houston's other touchdowns came on Kelly's one-yard run and his 55-yard pass play to Ricky Sanders in the first quarter.

Jacksonville's touchdown came on Matt Robinson's 57-yard pass play to Perry Kemp in the second quarter.

Denver 27, San Antonio 20

SAN ANTONIO — Denver quarterback Fred Mortensen fired a 32-yard scoring strike to help the Gold to a 27-20 victory over the San Antonio Gunslingers in United States Football League action.

Mortensen, subbing for the injured Craig Penrose, connected with running back Dave Preston with 1:52 left in the contest to halt a five-game losing streak.

Brian Speelman added the game's final point as Denver boosted its record to 8-6. San Antonio, now 5-9, had rallied from 10 points down to tie the score at 20-20.

A blocked punt by Reggie Oliver set up the tying touchdown, which George Works found on a 1-yard dive. Nick Mike-Mayer's extra point tied the score.

Mike-Mayer's ninth consecutive field goal, earlier in the quarter, had drawn the Gunslingers to within 7 points, 20-13.

Denver took advantage of a San Antonio fourth-down gamble, which misfired, to take a 20-10 lead.

Harry Sydney scored on a 3-yard run four plays after Denver took over on the San Antonio 29.

Showboats 31, Bandits 21

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Mike Kelley, a third-string quarterback a week ago, threw for three touchdowns and a club passing record Friday night as the Memphis Showboats surprised the Tampa Bay Bandits 31-21.

Kelley stepped in for an injured Walter Lewis to complete 21 of 26 passes for 284 yards before 27,422 United States Football League fans at the Liberty Bowl. Lewis owned the previous club mark of 264 yards.

The victory was the sixth win against eight losses for the Showboats in their first USFL season. The Bandits, a 10-point favorite going into the game, gave up a seven-game winning streak and are now 10-4.

Kelley, who fell heir to the Showboats' starting quarterback slot when Lewis injured his hand in the 29-14 loss to Oakland Sunday, took the Showboats to a 17-14 first-half lead.

After the Bandits took a 7-0 edge 10 minutes deep into the first period, Kelley used eight plays to get the Showboats in field goal range. Alan Duncan narrowed the score to 7-3 with a 32-yard boot.

Walker, Dupree out of NFL draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Football League club owners concluded their three-day spring meeting Friday after reaffirming their rules that bar teams from drafting players before their college eligibility is completed.

The decision, unanimously approved, will prohibit teams from drafting running backs Herschel Walker or Marcus Dupree when the league holds its supplemental draft on June 5.

League officials also discussed, with an eye toward possible expansion overseas, the staging of additional preseason games in foreign countries.

"Expansion overseas would certainly not be out of the realm of possibility if intent grows," said Dallas Cowboys' president Tex Schramm.

The owners also set player rosters at 49 for the upcoming season and discussed the feasibility of playing a second Pro Bowl game each year.

WALKER, AN All-American at Georgia, left school two years ago to play with the Nerw Jersey Generals of the rival United States Football League. Dupree, a standout as a freshman at Oklahoma, dropped out school in the middle of his sophomore campaign in the fall, then dropped out of Southern Mississippi this winter.

He subsequently signed with the USFL's New Orleans Breakers.

Dupree was signed following a decision by a federal judge in Los Angeles that held the USFL rules against drafting underclassmen were unconstitutional. Since the ruling came in a suit filed specifically against the USFL by former University of Arizona punter Bob Boris, it does not apply to the NFL, but could set a precedent for future cases.

But NFL officials said they were prepared to fight in court to protect their decision to uphold the eligibility rule, which they say is aimed at protecting college football programs.

"We will support our decision in any manner necessary," said Schramm, who serves as chairman of the league's Competition Committee.

The NFL will hold a three-round, supplemental draft of USFL and Canadian Football League players from the class of 1984 who signed contracts prior to May 1, on June 5. Some 250 players are eligible for the draft.

WALKER IS not eligible because of an NFL rule that penalizes a player for leaving school early and signing with another league. The player is penalized one year on his eligibility date, so Walker will be eligible for the supplemental draft next year.

Regarding the growing interest in American football in Japan, England and France, spurred by international telecasts, league officials set the stage for discussions with the players' union to make it easier for teams to play preseason games overseas.

"We want to move into the international market more agressively," Schramm noted. "It is very important to expand to these areas in the future."

To that end, the league will discuss with the players' union the possibility of having teams report a week early to play an additional preseason game.

This past summer, the St.Louis Cardinals and Minnesota Vikings played a preseason game in England.

For the second year in a row, the league will field 49-player teams, four above the minimum set forth in the collective bargaining agreement. The consensus opinion is that returning the squad to 45 would merely make available 112 quality players to the USFL.

On Thursday, the league voted to give place the 1987 Super Bowl in Pasadena, Calif. and the 1988 Super Bowl in San Diego.

Berra bat binge sinks Astros, 6-2

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Dale Berra drove in three runs and John Tudor scattered nine hits as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Houston Astros 6-2 Friday night.

The Pirates jumped on Mike Scott, 2-3, for four runs in the first inning. Singles by Lee Lacy and Bill Madlock and a walk to Jason Thompson loaded the bases with one out. Lacy scored as Astros second baseman Phil Garner booted Tony Pena's high hopper and Johnny Ray followed with a two-run single. Pena scored on Berra's sacrifice fly.

Pittsburgh added two more runs in the third when Pena walked, was forced by Ray and Lee Mazzilli singled. Berra's double drove in both runners.

Houston nicked Tudor, 3-2, for a run in the bottom of the third on singles by Craig Reynolds, pinch-hitter Tony Scott and Enos Cabell. The Astros got their second run in the eighth on Cabell's doubled and Ray Knight's single.

Joe Sambito, Houston's one-time relief ace, pitched two hitless innings. It was the left-hander's first major-league appearance since he injured his elbow April 27, 1982.

It was Pittsburgh's third consecutive victory, equaling the Pirates' longest winning streak of the season, and snapped Houston's three-game winning streak.

Braves 8, Cardinals 4

ATLANTA — Gerald Perry had three hits, scored three runs, drove in one and stole a base and Dale Murphy hit his 10th home run of the season as the Atlanta Braves battered the St. Louis Cardinals 8-4.

The Braves jumped on Dave LaPoint, 5-5, for two runs in the second inning. Bob Horner and Perry led off with singles, Glenn Hubbard doubled for one run and Jerry Royster hit a sacrifice fly.

St. Louis cut the margin to 2-1 in the third on Ozzie Smith's leadoff single, LaPoint's sacrifice and a two-out single by Willie McGee.

The Braves chased LaPoint and increased the lead to 5-1 in their half of the third. Alex Trevino singled off third baseman Ken Oberkfell's glove. After Rafael Ramirez grounded out, Horner was walked intentionally. Perry spoiled the strategy with his second single, scoring Trevino. Hubbard walked to load the bases and Royster delivered a two-run single to chase LaPoint.

Lonnie Smith hit his fourth homer to slice the lead to 5-2 in the fifth. But the Braves widened it to 7-2 in their half after Horner singled and Perry walked. Horner scored on a single by Hubbard and Perry scored when Royster hit into a double play.

Reds 3, Cubs 0

CHICAGO — Tom Hume pitched five strong innings in his first start in five years and Brad Gulden rapped a two-run single in a three-run first inning to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-0 rain-splashed victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Hume, 3-4, allowed only three hits and struck out six in the five innings he worked and Bob Owchinko and Ted Power finished up as the Reds halted Chicago's six-game winning streak with their first shutout of the year.

Power replaced Owchinko after a rain delay of 41 minutes in the eighth inning with men on first and second and nobody out and shut the Cubs down en route to his first save of the season.

Dickie Noles, 2-2, was the loser in making his first start of the season. Noles had one bad stretch when the Reds scored three times after two were out in the first.

Dan Driessen singled and took third on Dave Parker's double before both scored on a single by Gulden. Dave Concepcion then singled home Gulden, who had taken second on the throw to the plate.

Noles allowed only two other hits before departing for a pinch hitter in the seventh inning, both singles to Ron Oester in the fourth and seventh. Each time Oester was erased on double plays.

Hume had made 271 relief appearances since his last start, which was against the Cubs in Chicago July 23, 1979, when he lost a complete game 2-1.

Mets 2, Dodgers 1

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden tied Nolan Ryan's club record for a rookie by striking out 14 batters in eight innings as the New York Mets defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1.

The 19-year-old Gooden, 4-3, allowed only two hits until Pedro Guerrero opened the ninth with his third home run of the season. The injury-riddled Dodgers had hit only two home runs in their previous 17 games, both by Franklin Stubbs.

Jesse Orosco came on after Guerrero's homer and recorded his seventh save, although the potential tying run was thrown out at the plate to end the game. Pinch-hitter Jose Morales singled with two out and R.J. Reynolds doubled to center, but the relay from second baseman Kelvin Chapman cut down pinch-runner Dave Anderson trying to score.

George Foster hit his eighth home run off Rick Honeycutt, 6-2, to open the second inning. In the third, Mookie Wilson doubled with two and scored the decisive on Keith Hernandez's single that caromed off the leg of shortstop Bob Bailor.

New York's Hubie Brooks collected a pair of singles in three at-bats to extend his hitting streak to 19 games, longest in the majors this season.

Padres 7, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Graig Nettles drilled a home run and three singles while Tony Gwynn slammed a triple and two singles as the San Diego Padres beat the Philadelphia Phillies 7-3.

Ed Whitson, 4-3, went five innings and gave up seven hits and all three Phillie runs. Craig Lefferts went three innings and Rich Gossage worked the ninth.

San Diego took a 2-0 lead off Charles Hudson, 5-3, in the first inning when Alan Wiggins singled, Gwynn tripled and Nettles singled.

The Padres made it 5-0 in the third inning, knocking out Hudson on singles by Gwynn, Steve Garvey, Terry Kennedy and Kevin McReynolds. Tug McGraw replaced Hudson after McReynolds' hit and allowed a run-scoring double to Garry Templeton.

The Phillies got one run in their half of the third on singles by Ozzie Virgil and McGraw plus Juan Samuel's sacrifice fly.

San Diego made it 6-1 in the fourth on singles by Gwynn and Nettles and Garvey's sacrifice fly.

Expos 3, Giants 2

MONTREAL — Miguel Dilone scored from third base on Tim Raines' eighth-inning grounder to give the Montreal Expos a 3-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Dilone started the inning by hitting a slow bouncer to shortstop Joe Pittman, whose throw sailed into the dugout for a two-base error. Dilone went to as Bryan Little grounded out to the right side.

Raines then hit a chopper to third baseman Tom O'Malley, who looked toward the plate before deciding to throw to first as Dilone scored, pinning the defeat on San Francisco reliever Greg Minton, 1-3.

Montreal's Jeff Reardon, 2-1, pitched 1⅔ innings of scoreless relief for the victory.

Cooper gains quarterfinals

From Staff Reports

FORT WORTH — The Abilene Cooper Cougars didn't score many runs in their three-game series with Fort Worth Arlington Heights, but they scored enough to win the regional playoff and advance to the quarterfinal round.

The Cougars not only failed to put many runs on the scoreboard, but were out-totaled 11-7 in the three games. However, they won the first game on Tuesday in Abilene by a 3-1 count, were shelled in game two Friday, 9-2, and immediately followed with a 2-1 victory in the nightcap of the doubleheader.

The series victory improves Cooper's season record to 26-8 and moves them into the quarterfinals against the winner of today's Fort Worth Southwest-Lubbock Monterey game. That series is tied at 1-1. On Tuesday, Monterey pounded Southwest 11-3 only to have the favor returned Friday, 13-2.

In Friday's first game, Cooper held a 2-1 lead going into the bottom of the sixth inning. Arlington Heights rallied for eight runs off reliever Mike Hood to claim the victory. In the nightcap, Cooper scored both runs in the third inning while Arlington Heights collected a home run from Steve Gauntt in the fourth.

Longhorns blank Cardinals, 6-0

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — University of Texas freshman Greg Swindell pitched his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the first inning and never lost control again on the way to a 6-0 victory over Lamar in the NCAA Central Regional Baseball Tournament Friday night.

The Longhorns face the University of Nevada-Las Vegas in a winner's bracket game today, while Lamar dropped to the loser's bracket for a game against Oklahoma.

Nevada-Las Vegas Mel "Junior" Stottlemyre, a sophomore, gave up 11 hits but held on for a 2-1 victory over the Sooners in Friday's early game.

NCAA Baseball Playoffs

Texas shortstop Jamie Doughty provided most of the Longhorn offense in the later game by knocking in two runs with a second inning homer and another with a triple in the sixth inning.

Swindell, who improved his record to 12-1 and the Longhorns' to 55-12, struggled in the first inning when he gave up two hits and a walk to load the bases with one out.

Then, he struck out Lamar's Dennis Dresden on a full count and forced Jeff Williams to ground out to end the inning.

Lamar never even threatened after that. The Southland Conference champs put only six more runners on base — two of them on Texas' errors.

Cardinal ace Keith Silver went the distance for the losers. He gave up six hits and dropped his record to 12-2. Lamar dropped to 43-20.

In the first game, Redshirt freshmen Bobby Witt of Oklahoma gave up only two hits in defeat, but wildness kept him in trouble. He hit four batters and walked five.

Texas A&M 11, Grambling 5

STILLWATER, Okla. — Mike Scanlin, Tony Metoyer and Kevin Smith pounded home runs for Texas A&M, and the Aggies turned back Grambling 11-5 Friday to stay alive in the NCAA Midwest Regional baseball tournament.

The Aggies earned the right to play the loser of the Oklahoma City-Oklahoma State game in an elimination contest this afternoon.

First baseman Buddy Haney had three hits and four RBI for Texas A&M, the Southwest Conference runner-up. The Aggies improved to 41-20, while Grambling fell to 29-17 and was eliminated from the NCAA playoffs.

The winner of the regional earns a berth in the College World Series.

Grambling had taken a 3-0 lead after three innings, and was on top 5-3 in the bottom of the sixth.

Rangers punish White Sox, 11-0

By The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Charlie Hough allowed only three hits and Larry Parrish and Mickey Rivers drove in three runs each as the Texas Rangers trounced the Chicago White Sox 11-0 Friday night.

Hough picked up his third win against six losses, striking out seven and walking four. Tom Seaver became the fifth pitcher in major-league history to strike out more than 3,300 batters, but took the loss, dropping to 4-4.

The Rangers opened the scoring in the second on a single by Buddy Bell, an RBI double by Parrish and a run-scoring single by Marv Foley.

Texas broke open the game with seven runs in the third inning on six hits.

Bell doubled and scored on Parrish's homer to left, his fifth of the year. Pete O'Brien doubled and Foley was intentionally walked and Jim Anderson reached on shortstop Jerry Dybzinski's error, allowing O'Brien to score and Foley to move to third.

Curtis Wilkerson continued the onslaught with a single to center to score Foley, finishing Seaver. Reliever Salome Barojas gave up Bill Sample's double, scoring Anderson, and Rivers then singled home Wilkerson and Sample.

Texas made it 11-0 in the fifth as Foley doubled and scored on Wilkerson's third single of the game. Wilkerson moved to second on the throw home, to third on an error by right fielder Harold Baines and scored on Rivers' infield hit.

Twins 7, Brewers 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Kent Hrbek drove in two runs with three hits and Gary Gaetti drove in two runs with two hits, leading the Minnesota Twins to a 7-4 vicotry over the Milwaukee Brewers.

John Butcher, 3-2, struck out four and walked none in eight innings. Ron Daivs pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

Minnesota took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Hrbek's single that scored Kirby Puckett, who had singled and moved to second on an infield out.

The Twins reached Jaime Cocanower, 3-5, for three more runs in the third inning. Randy Bush's bloop single drove in Dave Engle with two outs and Gaetti delivered a two-run double.

AL Roundup

Houston Jimenez doubled to lead off the Minnesota fourth and scored on Puckett's single, knocking out Cocanower and fetching reliever Bob Gibson. Two more runs scored on Hrbek's groundout and Tom Brunansky's RBI infield single.

Milwaukee scored all of its runs in the fifth. Roy Howell singled and moved to third on a double by Jim Sundberg. Howell scored when catcher Engle dropped Teufel's throw home on an infield grounder by Dion James.

Robin Yount then doubled to score Sundberg and Ben Oglivie's single drove in Yount.

Gibson struck out nine in his three innings, including six straight batters.

Royals 8, Red Sox 5

BOSTON — Darryl Motley drove in five runs with a bases-loaded triple and a tape-measure homer and relief ace Dan Quisenberry earned his 12th save as the Kansas City Royals stopped the Boston Red Sox 8-5.

Motley, who had driven in eight runs in 35 games, put Kansas City in front to stay with his line triple to right-center off Boston starter Bobby Ojeda, 4-4, in the third inning.

In the fourth, the muscular outfielder blasted a ball that cleared the screen high atop the left-field wall and landed on a warehouse rooftop across Lansdowne Street for his fourth home run of the season.

Motley's slugging offset three hits apiece, including homers, by Boston's Mike Easler and Rich Gedman.

Blue Jays 5, Indians 1

TORONTO — Dave Stieb checked Cleveland on three hits over eight innings and George Bell continued his torrid hitting with a two-run double to pace the Toronto Blue Jays to a 5-1 victory over the Indians.

Stieb, 6-1, who picked up his first win since May 15, held the Indians hitless over his last five innings. Stieb struck out five and walked three before Dennis Lamp pitched the ninth, allowing two hits.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Blue Jays, who have won nine of the last 10.

Toronto jumped on Neal Heaton, 2-4, for three runs in the first inning. Damaso Garcia led off with a single and Jesse Barfield drew a one-out walk. Bell, who entered the game with a .345 batting average, lined a two-out double to left, scoring both runners, and Willie Upshaw followed with a triple.

Winborn, Bergoon set Stampede pace

From Staff Reports

The team of Craig Winborn and Sid Bergoon roared to a two-stroke lead at Ranchland Hills Country Club's 19th annual Stampede golf tournament with a first round 67.

Winborn and Bergoon, competing in the championship flight, tee off at 9:45 this morning in the second round of the 54-hole event.

Craig Adams and Bill Baker trail Winborn-Bergoon by two after an opening round 69. Baker won last year's Midland City Championship.

D.R. Hicks-Dub Huckabee and B.G. Scott-Mie Mullins are tied in third three strokes behind the leaders.

A similar dogfight is taking shape in the first flight. Dan Bailey and Mike Locker nailed down the first-round lead with a 69, but five teams are within four strokes of the lead. In second by a stroke are John Ryan and Tim Nesbitt.

Morris Howell and Charles Gaines lead the second flight by two with a 70. Three teams are trailing Howell-Gaines in second place.

IN THE tourney's third flight, Fritz Brandes and Buddy Redden combined for a 72, but are followed closely by Bob Young-Bobby Gleason (73) and two teams at 74.

Ralph Viney and Bill Gilluly posted one of the days' best rounds with a 71, and the team is racing away from the fourth flight. Second place John Berry-Bobby Woods trail by three, and they hold second by two strokes over the nearest challengers.

Gene Howard and Jim Underwood own a two stroke lead over Jim Agnew-Bill Smith in the fifth flight. Howard-Underwood carded a first-round 75.

Raymond Barnett and Truman Gaskin shot a 76, good for a two stroke edge over Ralph Huggins-James York in the sixth flight. Seventh flight leaders Beck Adkins and Davey Cruzan (76) have a slim stroke advantage over Clyde Greene-Eugene Thomas.

The eighth flight could be hotly contested. Elmer Brimberry and Guy Cantrell paced the first round with an 83, but a team at 84, two at 85 and two at 86 mean the decision is still uncertain.

Al Manulik and Newt Page ripped to a 79 in the ninth flight for the first round lead.

Unhappy JoAnne Carner takes Corning lead

LPGA Roundup

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — JoAnne Carner shot a 69 Friday and took the lead after two rounds of the $150,000 Corning Classic, then criticized the LPGA for making some other tour events into "putting contests."

Carner's two-round total of 4-under-par 140 put her one stroke ahead of Ayako Okamoto, Sharon Barrett and tour rookie Sherri Barrett.

Winds of 20 to 30 mph helped keep scores high as 81 players made the cut with scores of 12-over-par 154 or better.

Pat Bradley, the leading money-winner on the Ladies Professional Golf Association Tour, was alone two strokes off the pace and said her round of 71 was "nothing spectacular."

Pat Meyers fell 143 after adding a 74 to her opening-round 69, which had been good for second place.

Four back at even par were M.J. Smith, Martha Nause, Betsy King, Jo Ann Washam and Mary Hafeman.

First-round leader Debbie Hall ballooned from a 68 to a 79, taking 20 putts for her last nine holes compared to 26 for the whole circuit Thursday.

"My putter just kind of decided to rebel," said Hall, 24, whose first-round lead was her first in two years on the tour.

Defending Corning Classic champion Patty Sheehan coupled a 73 with her opening 76 to stand nine strokes out of the lead.

Carner and about five other top money-winners were scheduled to meet privately Friday night with Tournament Director Ed Gowan to discuss players' complaints that tees and pins are being set in a way that ruins the fairway game.

"They've strived for low scores," Carner said. "We've gotten a little out of line, where putting is everything. You have to play terrible to miss a green."

Jan Stephenson — who Carner said was not directly involved in the discussions — announced Monday that she would skip the Boston Five Classic in Danvers, Mass., because the course plays too short.

Stephenson had said she liked the Corning course, but she added a 79 to her opening-round 71 to stand 10 strokes off the pace.

Crenshaw magic goes to putter

PGA Roundup

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Masters champion Ben Crenshaw used his magic putting touch to coax a hard-won 70 from gusty winds and take a one-stroke lead over his host Friday in the second round of Jack Nicklaus' Memorial golf tournament Friday.

"Gosh, this is a hard course to play in the wind," Crenshaw said after posting his 36-hole total of 138, six under par.

"But some days," he said, "you have a feel for the wind."

And, he admitted, almost blushing, that 12 one-putts and a chip-in helps a bit, too.

Crenshaw, who used a putter he received as a 15th birthday present to win the Masters last month, required only 22 strokes with that short stick on the glass-slick greens. He played the last six holes three under par and, on those six holes, needed only five putts.

"I do have a good feel for it," said the man recognized among his peers as one of the great putters the game has produced.

"I scrambled very well, and that's what you have to do on a day like this at Muirfield Village," Crenshaw said.

Consider his performance over the last six holes in the gusty, shifting winds.

He missed the green on the 13th — and promptly chipped in from 60 feet for birdie.

He got the ball on the green in regulation on the next two holes, and dropped birdie putts of 15 and 10 feet.

But Ben missed the next three greens — and got it up and down on all of them, saving pars with putts of 7, 7 and 6 feet.

"It's great to be young," said Nicklaus, with a shake of his head at that putting string. Nicklaus, 44, the tournament host, founder and course designer, had a share of the top spot until he 3-putted from 25 feet on the 18th hole. He, too, had a 70 and reached the tournament halfway point at 139, one stroke back.

"It was tough. The conditions were very difficult," said Nicklaus, who last won a tour tournament in 1982. "That was as good a round of golf, managing my game, as I've played in a long, long time."

A highlight of his effort was a one-iron shot to four feet that set up an eagle-3 on the fifth hole.

British Open titleholder Tom Watson and PGA champion Hal Sutton were at 144. Watson had a second round 72, Sutton 73.

SWC adopts new format

AUSTIN (AP) — The Southwest Conference on Friday approved a new postseason basketball tournament format that will bring eight of the league's nine teams to a three-day tournament at a single site.

The new system replaces a tournament that included all teams, with early-round games played at different sites.

The 1985 tournament will be held at Reunion Arena in Dallas on March 8-10.

Faculty representatives who set the conference rules also voted Friday to adopt the 45-second shot clock for the entire game during regular season play. The shot clock is not used in the postseason tournament.

Under the previous rule, the 45-second clock was turned off during the final four minutes.

In an effort to keep cheerleaders, mascots and photographers away from players during basketball games, the conference set a six-foot restraining line at the baselines.

Also Friday, the faculty representatives set a spring sports schedule that will not interfere with final exams at any member school.

Cavaliers fire Tom Nissalke

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Just as Tom Nissalke thought things were starting to fall into place for the Cleveland Cavaliers, the National Basketball Association club fired him Friday, leaving him without a professional coaching job for the fourth time in his career.

Nissalke, who guided the Cavaliers to their best record in four years this season, said he was "absolutely shocked" by the decision to let him go with two years remaining on his contract.

He said he was fired after he refused to resign.

"I came into a situation that was probably the worst in pro basketball, and with a lot of help from the staff, we had become at least respectable," Nissalke said by telephone from his home in Salt Lake City. "It looked like with another good draft we were starting to turn the corner."

Nissalke, 49, was 53-113 in two years at Cleveland, including 28-54 this season when the Cavaliers finished fourth in the NBA's Central Division.

He took over a team that had gone 15-67 two years ago, brought in days before the start of the 1982-83 season by Harry Weltman, who had just been hired as as general manager by former owner Ted Stepien.

It was Weltman who fired Nissalke, saying he decided a change was needed because the team had not made as much progress as expected "especially during the later stages of the campaign."

"Our younger players, in particular, after showing promise early in the year, began to stagnate as the year progressed," Weltman said at a news conference.

"We feel that a change is in order at this time that will allow all of our players more of an opportunity to realize their potential and should result in the continued improvement of the club," he said.

Weltman and Nissalke were reported at odds over lack of playing time given younger players — rookies Roy Hinson, Paul Thompson, Stewart Granger and John Garris, and second-year man John Bagley.

Weltman said a search for a new coach would begin immediately.

Nissalke was dismissed from coaching jobs in Seattle in 1973, San Antonio in 1975 and Utah in 1981. He resigned from American Basketball Association jobs with Dallas in 1972 and Utah in 1976, and an NBA job with Houston in 1979.

His career coaching record is 370-508, including 248-391 in nine NBA seasons.

Nissalke said he had no idea his job was in jeopardy when Weltman called him Wednesday night and asked for a meeting. He said Weltman told him he wanted to discuss some matters involving his contract.

But when they met at a local hotel Thursday after Weltman flew to Salt Lake City, Nissalke said he was asked to resign, and when he refused he was fired.

Nissalke said he wouldn't resign because to do so, "I'd have to be lying because I'm not going to work this hard in a situation and get it to where we're beginning to turn the corner and then walk away from it. I just couldn't do that."

French Open names seeds

PARIS (AP) — The world's two top-ranked players, John McEnroe and Martina Navratilova, were seeded first Friday in the men's and women's divisions of the $1.8 million French Open tennis tournament, which starts here Monday at Roland Garros Stadium

The 25-year-old New Yorker is hoping to become the first American to win the event in 29 years. Injury-free for the first time since he's played here, the brilliant but temperamental left-hander has posted 35 consecutive wins since January.

But he has never made it past the quarter-finals here.

Jimmy Connors, seeded third behind Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, will play Eric Fromm in an all-American match. Last year, Connors lost to Noah in the quarter-finals.

Lendl, 24, still looking for his first Grand Slam title, will face Matt Mitchell of the United States.

In the women's division, Navratilova meets France's Nathalie Tauziat as the naturalized American makes her second bid for the Grand Slam — consecutive French, Wimbledon, U.S. Open and Australian titles, worth $1 million in bonus prizes.

Navratilova's main challenge will come from defending Chris Evert Lloyd, seeded second. She will play West Germany's Heidi Eisterlehner when the women begin play Tuesday and Wednesday.

Three magic in marathon

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Alberto Salazar, Greg Meyer and Tony Sandoval are the favorites to grab the three places on the U.S. men's marathon team in today's trials, but each enters the race with questionable status, leaving the way open for several others in the field of 175.

Salazar owns the fastest marathon time in history — 2 hours, 8 minutes, 13 seconds but he has been troubled by an iron deficiency this year and more recently by a foot injury.

Meyer has won the 1982 America's Marathon at Chicago and the 1983 Boston Marathon but he has been troubled by a stress fracture of the right foot and more recently by bronchitis.

Sandoval won the 1980 Olympic Trials after finishing fourth in 1976 but he has not raced much in recent years because he was completing medical school.

If any of the three experiences problems in today's 26-mile, 385-yard scenic jaunt which begins in Buffalo and ends in Niagara Falls, Ontario, there are many other runners capable of breaking through.

Among them are Bill Rodgers, a 1976 Olympian, the former American record holder and a four-time winner of the Boston and New York City marathons; Ron Tabb, the fourth-place finisher in the 1980 trials and a member of the 1983 World Championship team after finishing second at Boston; Benji Durden and Kyle Heffner, second and third, respectively, in the 1980 trials, and Garry Bjorklund, Rudy Chapa, John Tuttle, Ed Mendoza, Dan Schlesinger, Dr[illegible] Gordon, Mike Layman, Randy Thomas, John Lodwick, Kirk Pfeffer, Pete Pfitzinger and Bob Hodge.

With 11 of the runners having bettered 2:12 last year, the race, over the flat, point-to-point course, is expected to be extremely fast.

The fastest, off his previous performances, figures to be the enigmatic Salazar.

He never has been beaten by an American in the marathon. He never has lost a marathon in the United States, winning the New York City Marathon three times and the Boston Marathon once.

He has run five sub-2:10 marathons; no other American has run more than two. And he has the world-best time for a marathon, plus American records on the track for 5,000 meters (13:11.93) and 10,000 meters (27:25.61).

But he has not won a marathon since the 1982 New York City race. He has been beset not only by physical but emotional problems recently. And he suffered the first two defeats of his marathon career last year, finishing fifth in the Rotterdam Marathon and fifth in the Fukuoka Marathon in Japan.

For this race, the usually outspoken Salazar has carefully avoided the media, refusing to be contacted at his home in Eugene, Ore., then hiding out in Canada.

Markets worried about banks' health

NEW YORK (AP) — Bank stocks rebounded Friday from a downturn caused by unfounded rumors of further instability in the financial system.

Analysts said there was no basis for the latest crop of rumors, but acknowledged that the discouraging words fell on fertile ground. There are widespread worries about the health of the nation's major banks following the $7.5 billion rescue of Continental Illinois National Bank in Chicago last week.

"At times like this, fear seems to feed on itself," said Arthur Soter, a banking analyst at the investment firm of Morgan Stanley & Co. "I'm not convinced we'll get much of a respite."

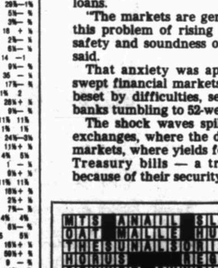
Soter said the recent rise in interest rates has focused attention on international debt problems and credit quality.

Developing nations have a foreign debt of $810 billion, according to the World Bank, and rising interest rates on their loans are making it harder to meet payments. American banks have a big chunk of those loans.

"The markets are genuinely concerned about how this problem of rising interest rates will affect the safety and soundness of the banking system," Soter said.

That anxiety was apparent Thursday as rumors swept financial markets that more large banks were beset by difficulties, sending the stocks of a dozen banks tumbling to 52-week lows.

The shock waves spilled over into global foreign exchanges, where the dollar plunged, and to money markets, where yields fell sharply on short-term U.S. Treasury bills — a traditional haven for funds because of their security and liquidity.



Answer to today's Crossword Puzzle

Buckner traded for Eckersley

CHICAGO (AP) — First baseman Bill Buckner, a former National League batting champion, Friday was traded by the Chicago Cubs to the Boston Red Sox for right-handed pitcher Dennis Eckersley, a former 20-game winner.

"It's an end of an era for the Chicago Cubs," said Cubs General Manager Dallas Green, who engineered the trade in which the Cubs also got minor league infielder-outfielder Mike Brumley.

"I'm happy and excited to be going to Boston," said Buckner. "It's a new league and a new park. You don't know how good you have it until you don't play."

Buckner packed his bags before the Cubs played Cincinnati Friday and said good-bye to his former teammates.

"It's been fun being on a team that has been playing so well," said Buckner, referring to the first-place Cubs. "In Jody Davis, Ryne Sandberg and Leon Durham, they have three of the finest young players in baseball."

Buckner thanked everyone from Green to his various managers and the Wrigley family, former owners of the team. Then he broke down emotionally before regaining his composure and adding: "I'm looking forward to going to Boston."

Buckner, 34, throws and bats left-handed and won the National League batting title in 1980 with a .324 batting average. He had a .296 lifetime average going into this season.

He was relegated to the bench after the Cubs made a trade with Philadelphia to acquire outfielders Bob Dernier and Gary Matthews. Leon Durham was shifted to first base leaving no room for the disgruntled Buckner.

Buckner originally broke into the majors with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1971. He was acquired along with shortstop Ivan DeJesus in a trade for outfielder Rick Monday and pitcher Mike Garman before the start of the 1977 season.

Eckersley, 29, broke into the majors with Cleveland in 1975 when he posted a 13-7 record. In March of 1978 he was traded to the Red Sox and went on to have his best season with a 20-8 mark. Last year he slipped to 9-13. His biggest moment came in 1977 when he pitched a 1-0 no-hitter against California while with Cleveland.

Buckner batted .280 last season with 16 home runs and 66 runs batted in. Currently he has a .234 average with no home runs and only two runs batted in.

Eckersley has a 124-102 lifetime record and was 4-4 this season with Boston with a 5.01 earned run average.

Manager Jim Frey had a talk with Buckner after the trade was made.

"I told Buckner our immediate need was to take care of our pitching situation," said Frey.

"This helps our situation and it helps Billy to go somewhere where he can play," said Frey. "He had become an angry young man although he hadn't caused me any problems. I hope he can go to Boston and enjoy playing again, something he hadn't been doing the last couple of months."

Detroit's pitchers having ball

By Wayne Lockwood
Copley News Service

When the Detroit Tigers dashed away to an 18-2 start this season, the world of baseball sniffed and dared them to do it again.

Alas, the Tigers were not up to this challenge. The best they could do during the next 20 games was 17-3. Obviously, the pressure is beginning to tell. At their present a rate of decline, the poor fellows will win only 117 games or so.

IN VIEW of such an alarming trend, it seemed time to check for signs of panic among the Motor City nine. Where better to start than with pitching Coach Roger Craig, the man responsible for what generally is considered the weakest element of this team?

Roger joined Detroit in 1980 at the behest of Manager Sparky Anderson and carefully has crafted a staff that won 92 games last year and has seemed merely immortal so far in 1984. Still, Tiger pitching is hardly overwhelmed by respect. Sure, people say, this team is strong up the middle. Sure, they have some guys who can make a baseball disappear rapidly. But how are they going to get anybody out?

There have been cries of skepticism — particularly from Baltimore pitching coach Ray Miller and Orioles catcher Rick Dempsey. Just wait, their pitching isn't good enough. That's the refrain.

"I don't think our guys get the credit they deserve," Craig said. "I guess we'll have to wait until the end of the season and see what happens. I know this: I wouldn't trade this staff for any other staff in the American League."

IT IS difficult to see why anyone would want to. While the Tigers have hit well during their early run, the pitching staff has allowed fewer hits and fewer runs than any other.

The Tigers' top three starters — Jack Morris, Dan Petry and Milt Wilcox are on track for 20-victory seasons. The bullpen? Well, the Tigers have gone into the opponents' half of the seventh inning with a lead 30 times, and 30 times they have won. 'Nuff said.

"Nobody expected us to be this good, obviously," Craig said. "But I told Sparky in spring training that we were going to break some records and do some things. We knew we were going to have a good defense and a good offense. The question was our pitching. Our pitching was decent last year, not bad. But everything has sort of come together this year."

There are various reasons for this, in Craig's view. Morris and Petry have an added year of maturity. Reliever Aurelio Lopez has solved the problem of gout in his pitching hand.

"He was our most valuable player the first two months of last season," Craig said. "Then he had problems with his fingers. Now he's pitching like that again."

BUT THE most significant stroke may have been the addition of reliever Willie Hernandez, acquired from the Phillies.

"He kind of stabilized everything, made everything better," Craig said. "We didn't have a left-hander before. Now, it's like we have two of them because he can pitch so often."

The Tiger staff has something else, too. It has Roger Craig.

"A genius," Anderson said.

"Sparky talks a lot," Craig said, pausing. "But he's usually right."

Schnellenberger leaves Maimi

MIAMI (AP) — Coach Howard Schnellenberger, who two weeks ago labeled as "hogwash" reports that he was set to leave national champion Miami for the United States Football League, announced Friday he signed a lucrative contract with the USFL's Washington Federals.

Schnellenberger, who will serve as president, chief operating officer and coach of the struggling professional team, said he is confident that he will be able to turn the club around when it moves to Miami for the 1985 season.

Flanked by members of his family and new Feds owner Sherwood Weiser, Schnellenberger said the decision to leave the university was one of the toughest in his life.

"The University of Miami has been good to Howard Schnellenberger. The University of Miami has grown and developed and is what I think now is a very, very competitive football program, one that is competitive with any other football program across this great land," Schnellenberger said during a news conference at a swank Coconut Grove hotel owned by Weiser.

"I am certainly going to be involved in it (UM program), and I'm certainly going to be it's biggest fan and I'm going to do everything I can to make sure this is a smooth transition," he added.

WEISER CALLED Schnellenberger's decision a great day for the city of Miami. He emphasized that he is committed to building a winning football team.

"We're prepared to make the investment to get it done," he said.

The Federals reportedly offered Schnellenberger a five-year, $3 million package that would also guarantee him a six-figure salary for life.

The coach said earlier this week that he was "99 percent sure" that he would take the USFL job provided Weiser followed through with plans to move the Feds to Miami.

Although a franchise shift has not been officially announced by the USFL, Weiser said Friday that the team will soon be known as the Miami Federals.

Miami Athletic Director Sam Jankovich, who has initated a national search for a new head coach, says he hopes to name a replacement for Schnellenber within two weeks.

Schnellenberger said one of the reasons he' was willing to leave was that new budget guidelines established by school President Edward Foote will make it difficult for the Hurricanes to continue to perate a top-notch program in coming years.

The 50-year-old coach took over a struggling program in 1979 and led the Hurricanes to a five-year record of 41-36, including a 31-30 Orange Bowl triumph over Nebraska that gave Miami its first national championship in January.

In the 10 years prior to Schnellenberger taking the Miami job, the school had experienced six coaching changes and enjoyed only two winning seasons — both 6-5 campaigns.

Schnellenberger guided the Hurricanes to a 5-6 finish in his first season but followed with records of 9-3 and 9-2 the next two years. Miami's Peach Bowl appearance in 1980 was the school's first post-season trip in 13 years, but the Hurricanes were prohibited from accepting a bid in 1981 because of NCAA probation.

WITH HEISMAN Trophy hopeful Jim Kelly, the school's all-time leading passer, sidelined most of the season, Miami went 7-4 in 1982 and then captured the national title by winning 11 straight after a season-opening loss to Florida.

After the Orange Bowl victory over Nebraska, Schnellenberger repeated a standard answer he'd offer when mentioned as a possible candidate for various coaching vacancies in recent years. "When I took this job, I said I intend for it to be my last."

He said this week, however, that financial security afforded by the Federals' package as well as the opportunity to become involved in management and still stay in Miami made it difficult to spurn the offer.

Often referred to as an offensive genius, Schnellenberger served as an assistant under Blanton Collier at Kentucky from 1959-60 and as Alabama's offensive coordinator helped the Crimson Tide and the late Paul "Bear" Bryant win two national titles between 1961 and 1965.

Schnellenberger's contract with the university paid him $250,000 and was to run through the 1988 season.

Israel views 'Black Hebrews' with alarm

DIMONA, Israel (AP) — In 1970, about 50 American blacks arrived in this Negev Desert town saying they had come to settle in the land of their forefathers and to end what they said was their slavery in the United States.

The "Black Hebrews" now number about 2,500 members and the cult is being viewed with growing suspicion by local authorities and government officials who said in interviews that they are seeking their expulsion from Israel.

"We're sitting on a keg of dynamite," said Mayor Eli Hilali of Dimona. "It's a state within a state...an isolationist group with no legal status that educates its children on racist teachings."

"The state of Israel cannot and will not agree to the cult remaining in Israel," said Yehoshua Kahane, deputy director-general of the Ministry of Interior.

The solution, Kahane added, was for the group to return to the United States, although Israel would be willing to let individual members remain for humanitarian reasons.

However, the task is complicated by the fact many of the Black Hebrews have renounced their American citizenship. U.S. officials say they can only return if they apply for visas like any other foreign national.

Israeli officials indicated in the recent interviews that they are reluctant to expel the cultists outright for fear of harming relations with African nations and blacks in America.

"If we kicked them out, everyone would be crying racism," said Kahane.

The leader of the Black Hebrews, former Chicago bus driver Ben-Ami Carter, told a visiting reporter that his supporters in the United States were acting to prevent the cult's expulsion.

"We have influential friends working through the State Department, in Congress," he claimed.

Carter also said he believed he was destined to lead a "spiritual revolution and form a new type of Messianic government in Israel."

Sect members regard themselves as descendants of the Biblical Israelites but have no legal status here. The Israeli Supreme Court ruled in 1972 that the cultists were not Jews and therefore ineligible for automatic Israeli citizenship.

Authorities have long banned the entry of Black Hebrews into the country but contend that many sneak in with false passports.

Their numbers also have been swelled by a high birth rate. Women do not practice birth control and every male is entitled to take seven wives.

Most live in overcrowded stone barracks on the edge of Dimona, a town of 30,000, and several hundred others live in Arad and Mitzpeh Ramon.

Their village looks like a kibbutz, an Israeli collective farm, with its small houses, stone paths and well-tended flower beds. At its hub are a communal vegetarian store and a dining room which also serves as a meeting hall.

The women wear flowing robes and turbans in vivid colors and the children bow in deference to any adult they meet.

Defectors from the cult have told reporters that Carter commands obedience through his total psychological and financial hold on the members. They claim rebels are flogged or forced to wander in the desert. Their claims could not be independently verified.

Three days a week the cult is banned from consuming salt as part of a strict vegetarian diet that Carter enforces; health authorities maintain the diet has led to deaths from malnutrition.

If you have questions about your life, Christ has the answers. Discover those answers with us this Sunday at Northwestern Baptist Church.

They have not died in vain — those who paid with their lives the last full measure. Today, Memorial Day, is the day to remember Lexington, Gettysburg, Coral Sea, Okinawa, Normandy, Viet Nam and Korea.

We need only to look at the cemeteries of the world to realize the supreme sacrifice that was called for that we might be secure. As they bravely died, so we must bravely live.

Let us nobly remember those who laid themselves between our country and her foes. This is Memorial Day.

Clergy, laity meet to discuss document

By RITA GILLMON

RELIGION

Brother Jeffrey Gros, a member of the Christian Brothers order and director of the Faith and Order Commission for the National Council of Churches, met with ecumenical leaders in San Diego recently to discuss the document "Baptism, Eucharist and Ministry," published in 1982 by the World Council of Churches.

The document includes a "significant amount of convergence" according to some, enough to allow a closer relationship among the churches. But Gros said others feel that more is necessary.

Gros said the document is a culmination of a 50-year process carried on among Christian churches throughout the world, and will be better understood by those who have also followed the dialogues going on between individual churches: such as Roman Catholics with Anglicans, with Lutherans, with Pentecostals and Reformed; Lutherans with Episcopalians, with Reformed and with Orthodox Christians.

Gros' denomination, Roman Catholic, is not a member of the NCC or WCC, but has observer status and participates in all the doctrinal discussions.

"There are so many dialogues going on that it is difficult to keep track of what has been agreed upon in the different conversations," Gros said. "It would be interesting to check some of them against the others. To have someone say, 'Look, you said this about Communion in this dialogue, but to us you said...,' and then see what happens."

Gros said the WCC and the NCC are both heavily involved in this kind of ecumenical work. "It shows that theology and liturgy are not being slighted in order to emphasize social work," he said.

He said the study of the scriptural background for the things people do in their various churches often leads a denomination's leaders and theologians to question their own structure in a way that an outside challenge could not do.

"I am finding that the churches are being challenged to find where their authority resides. All the churches have some system of hierarchy, but they are not always clearly spelled out," Gros said.

Denominations are being asked to make a response to the BEM document. It spells out areas of agreement and disagreement among the churches. Every Roman Catholic Diocese in the United States has been asked to make a response to the document, as have bishop's conferences around the world.

Gros said the volume of paper will be formidable and will all pass for analysis through the hands of a monk at Taize, an ecumenical religious order in France.

"In some churches, nothing will happen unless there are requests from the grass roots for a study of the document. Baptist congregations, for instance, would not like to be told by a national office that they should study it," Gros said.

The document was studied at the Vancouver meeting of the WCC last year, and the Lima Liturgy, which incorporates the agreements in it, was celebrated there.

Gros said he expects response to the BEM document to be wide-ranging.

"I expect as much difference in response among the Catholic bishops as there is from the range of Protestants," he said.

He said that the most difficult section, as well as the most promising, will be the section on ministry.

"Most laity did not realize the dimension of division on ministry. Catholic laity are finding their neighbor's ministry is not recognized by the Catholic and Orthodox Church," Gros said.

He said some denominations have tried to skirt this issue.

"The Lutheran Church in America has already responded (to BEM) in spite of small participation. They said nothing about the three-fold ministry," Gros said. The LCA is currently wrestling with this issue with the American Lutheran Church in their attempts to build one Lutheran church.

The three-fold ministry refers to the orders of bishop, priest and deacon, held to by Catholic, Orthodox and Anglican churches as a permanent sacramental reality, and not merely an office held for a time.

The Rev. Jack Lindquist, LCA minister and professor at the University of San Diego, said the churches are going to have to recognize that the pastoral office of word and sacrament came from Christ and is a matter of supreme importance.

"You can't accept one canon from the ancient church, i.e., the New Testament, and then reject the other canon, i.e., Holy Orders, with any degree of credibility," he said.

The Preschool Choir and the Primary Choir will also present special music. The Rev. Frank Johnson, Kelview's pastor, invites the public to attend.

Regular services will resume June 3.

West Texans elected to Presbyterian assembly

Several West Texans have been elected commissioners to the General Assembly of the 3.2 million-member Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., as well as one youth advisory delegate being elected from Midland.

The Assembly convenes Tuesday and adjourns June 6. Commissioners are the voting delegates to the highest policy making body of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A.

Commissioners from this area are the Rev. Rodney Peacock of Pyote and Tom Koger of Big Spring. Laura Renick of Midland is the youth advisory delegate.

Election of a moderator for presiding officer on the second day of business and election of a stated clerk (chief ecclesiastical official) on the next to the last day of the Assembly are highlights among a wide array of issues and proposals for consideration by the largest governing body of the newly reunited Presbyterian Church.

Issues which will be covered during the Assembly include Central America, the Middle East, arms control and disarmament, a paper against the naming of a U.S. ambassador to the Vatican, difficulties in the Philippines, acid rain, alcohol-related problems, money and politics, the United Nations Decade for Women and the hunger crisis in the U.S.

Also on the agenda is a study paper and recommendations on divestment that asks churches and church agencies to consider the possibility of disposing of stock in corporations doing business with the Republic of South Africa.

Business sessions will be held in the Phoenix Civic Plaza Convention Center.

Couple to lead ad interim ministry at First Christian

The Rev. Hugh M. Riley will arrive in Midland on June 1 to begin an ad interim ministry with First Christian Church.

Rev. Hugh Riley

He and his wife, Marjorie Bash Riley, live in Albuquerque, N.M., where they retired after serving churches in Dallas, Louisville, Ky., and Los Angeles, Calif.

Educated at Drake University and Vanderbilt, Riley also has an honorary doctorate degree from Texas Christian University.

He began his work experience in the field representative in the industry. From there, he went to local pastorates as an ordained minister. He has also worked as a fund raiser and consultant for the regional office. Recently he has been performing ad interim work principally for churches in the Texas region.

Mrs. Riley taught school for several in the Los Angeles schools, she specialized in the early childhood education. She and her husband have said they "enjoy the rich life of many fireSides."

A reception and coffee for the Rileys will be given in the church parlor June 10 following the worship hour.

The public is invited to attend.

Drama will highlight Methodist conference

The premiere performance of a drama production commissioned for the bicentennial year celebration of the United Methodist Church will highlight the events of the annual Northwest Texas Conference to be held in Abilene Wednesday through June 2.

The production "The Lines of Grace" will be presented by the AD Players of Houston, with Jeannette Clift George directing. The play is set for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Abilene Civic Center. The public is invited to attend this free production.

The remaining conference events will be held at St. Paul United Methodist Church, which is hosting the 75th annual meeting of Methodist churches in the Northwest Texas Conference.

The play stresses the heritage of the United Methodist Church from its beginnings to the present time. It is based on a quote from Psalm 16:5-6 which reads "The Lord is the portion of my inheritance and my cup. Thou dost support my lot. The lines have fallen to me in pleasant places. Indeed my heritage is beautiful to me."

The conference will open with an address by Bishop Louis W. Schowengerdt at 9 a.m. Wednesday in St. Paul UMC's fellowship hall. Schowengerdt will present his State of the Church address at 11 a.m.

Business sessions, committee reports and worship services will comprise the main portion of the 4-day conference. The Ordination Service is set for 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the church auditorium.

The guest speaker for the conference is the Rev. Harry Vanderpool, pastor of Central United Methodist Church, Albuquerque, N.M. He will officiate at the Ordination Service and will address worship services Thursday and Friday at 11 a.m., Friday at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday at 10 a.m.

In the area of higher education, conference officials will hear presentations from Dr. Thomas K. Kim, president of McMurry College; Dr. James E. Kirby, dean of Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University; Dr. Roy B. Shilling, president of Southwestern University at Georgetown; and Dr. Joe E. Elmore, president of the Texas Methodist College Association.

A slate of 10 workshops have been scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. Friday in different classrooms at the church.

The workshops and the designated speakers are:

Presbyterians reject God 'Our Mother'

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — The Presbyterian Church of Scotland has brushed aside a study group's suggestion that God could be addressed as "Our Mother" instead of "Our Father."

The group suggested that God is not necessarily a male deity and that the characteristics attributed to God in the Bible resemble "everything that is best in the female way of being human."

On Tuesday, the church's 1,600-delegate General Assembly voted to receive but not to discuss the report on "The Motherhood of God," prepared by the 11-member church group. A week-long annual conference in the Scottish capital opened last Saturday.

The seven-woman, four-man panel, including one female and three male clerics, represented the 76,000-member Woman's Guild and the church's panel on doctrine.

It was divided on whether "the Father of Our Lord Jesus Christ" could be addressed as "God Our Mother." A minority asserted that "although they acknowledge gratefully the motherly qualities of this Father, they believe that to call God 'Mother' would be illegitimate, and cause hurt."

Anne Hepburn, the Woman's Guild national president, told the conference that the report had not been "a discussion of the gender of God."

Black station on cable

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Keith Willis' radio station is not available on your car radio. But it can be found if you have cable TV.

And, for many people, this unconventional form of radio has filled Columbus' void in black-oriented radio programming. CTNT is the city's only 24-hour station for black interests.

After seven years as a disc jockey and music director at WVKO here, Willis left in 1left in 1982 in a controversial switch of the FM station from black-oriented programming to soft rock, and a change of call letters to WSNY.

The format switch sparked a campaign by black leaders to have the station license rescinded by the Federal Communications Commission. The coalition, which later dropped the appeal, argued the black community had been deprived of a valuable communications link.

At the same time, Willis and a friend, Michael Boyd, were unsuccessful in their efforts to launch the city's first black-owned-and-operated radio station.

"We had looked for a radio station to buy back in the '70s before we even looked at cable radio. We really couldn't secure financing," Willis, 34, said. "Then I started getting complacent at WVKO until the new owners, Franklin Communications, came in and said 'Wake up.'"

THEIR renewed efforts in 1982 proved equally frustrating.

"There were just no frequencies available here. I was getting ready to go to work in Buffalo, N.Y., when a friend from Detroit suggested I look into cable radio.

"I started thinking about it because Columbus is almost completely wired for cable, unlike a lot of other cities."

Last fall, Willis and Boyd finally created CTNT, which sends its stereo sound via private phone lines and can be received in homes with cable connections. CTNT is available for $2 a month to most of the city's cable subscribers. Four cable TV companies in the Columbus area claim more than 150,000 subscribers.

"This wouldn't necessarily work in a lot of other markets, especially those with other black radio stations," said Willis, the station's general manager. Boyd is executive vice president of operations.

Daylight-only WVKO-AM offers the only other black-oriented format in the city.

CTNT, which Willis says stands for "Cable Dynamite," started with $30,000 and is dependent on advertising. Disc jockeys work gratis, but Willis hopes to start paying salaries by mid-summer. Fully aware that cable is a longshot gamble at success, Willis also decided on an innovative format.

"Album-oriented rhythm and blues is my own format. We do play Billboard singles, but we try to concentrate on the album cuts or the longer versions of singles," Willis said.

CTNT'S news is aimed at the local black community. The president of the City Council delivers a weekly 15-minute commentary and Willis plans a talk show.

CTNT operates free of FCC regulations because it is transmitted via cable rather than airwaves. The only area of the city it does not reach are predominantly black neighborhoods served by the city's black-owned cable company, KBLE.

Willis is trying to strike an agreement with KBLE, which he said wants CTNT to cover each subscriber's installation costs, a tab usually paid by the subscriber and one, Willis said, CTNT can't afford.

"We get so many calls from people in the KBLE area asking why they can't get us. They say, 'What's the problem?'" Willis said. "He (KBLE owner William Johnson) assumes subscribers aren't willing to pay the $10 installation fee," Willis said.

Cindy Wallace, Johnson's administrative assistant, said, "Mr. Johnson doesn't want to pass off any costs to the subscribers, but I don't know what the negotiations are at this time."

Corpus Christi Bishop Rene Gracida

Catholic spirtual hub also run as business

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The spiritual center for 315,000 South Texas Roman Catholics is also a multimillion-dollar business, and its bishop compares his role to that of a corporate director.

Rene Gracida tends to the spiritual needs of the Diocese of Corpus Christi, but is also concerned with the bottom line on a ledger.

"At times I do feel like the chairman of the board of some large corporation like AT&T," Gracida said. "Especially when I have to make decisions pertaining to budget operations."

Gracida oversees a complex organization of 130 branches, 200 employees, assets of $25 million and a $3 million annual operating budget.

"My biggest challenge is to keep in my mind almost constantly that the temporalities — money, property, material possessions — must serve the spiritual purposes and aims of the organization and not vice versa," said Gracida, 60, who moved to the Texas Gulf Coast from Miami last year.

The diocese, headquartered in Corpus Christi, has more than 130 branch operations including 77 parishes or main churches and 57 missions or rural churches spread across 17,300 square miles between the coastal city and Laredo.

With assets of $25.4 million, the diocese ranks sixth out of 13 dioceses in Texas. Only Galveston-Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Austin and Fort Worth have greater assets.

The Galveston-Houston diocese claims a net worth of $342 million while the assets of the Brownsville diocese total just $18 million.

Gracida supervises 104 full-time and 20 part-time staffers in addition to 78 priests. The annual payroll including medical and retirement benefits runs $966,000.

The diocese owns but pays no taxes on 1,600 acres of property spread through 22 counties. Each parish is surrounded by about 10 acres and mission grounds average 1.5 acres. Sanctuaries, school houses, a rectory, meeting halls and vehicle and storage buildings are also part of church assets.

Diocese headquarters resemble other sophisticated business offices with a data processing center, construction and property manager's offices, archives, central files, print shop, accounting and offices for a chancellor and two assistants adjacent to the bishop's office on prime downtown real estate.

His work experience has prepared him well for managing the affairs of his business.

A graduate of the University of Houston where he majored in architecture, Gracida practiced privately in Houston before entering the priesthood 25 years ago.

"I know something about business law and I had actual experience in the real business world in finance and construction," he said.

From 1969 to 1972, he served as treasurer and chief fiscal officer of the Archdiocese of Miami, an area of 800,000 Catholics.

An associate called Gracida a no-frills business operator, realistic and conservative. He can look at a set of books and immediately pick out the financial strengths and weaknesses.

It didn't take much savvy to spot the weakness in the books Gracida inherited in Corpus Christi in 1983. The diocese had overspent by $400,000 and the 1984 deficit was projected to be $700,000.

"Obviously I had to take some drastic actions," he said.

Rather than cut programs or employees, Gracida asked individual Catholics to dig deeper into their pockets and contribute to a new program he called the Catholic Sharing Appeal.

The parish appeal raised $1 million, more than three times what a similar appeal the year before had produced.

Gracida placed half the money in the diocsean coffers to cover the deficit and operate charitable programs and will return the rest to parishes to be used for programs.

The bishop wants to raise another $1 million next year and return $600,000 to the parishes.

Gracida denies the Catholic Church is rich.

"Everything is relative. The Church has a lot of money, yes. But it also has a lot of people with a lot of very basic needs," he said.

Texan tries to improve horses' stamina

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Many of today's horses are in terrible condition, lacking the stamina to make it to the winner's circle.

Often, cutting horses and race horses perform well at the beginning of their events, but fade at the end. Devil's Bag, favored to win this year's Triple Crown, instead retired from racing because of a bone fracture, an injury that can be caused by fatigue.

A Texas A&M researcher is looking into horses' physical fitness, and thinks research on human athletes may help the equine variety find more stamina.

Dr. Gary D. Potter, a professor of animal science, says a procedure human athletes use to boost their energy levels may improve horses' performance, too.

High levels of glycogen, a carbohydrate stored in the muscles and liver, improve stamina by providing an extra burst of energy when the athlete begins to tire. Runners have learned to raise those levels by working out and eating few carbohydrates, and then stocking up on carbohydrates in the days before a race.

Potter, funded by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, is now working on a way to apply that procedure — muscle-glycogen loading — to horses. The results, he said, are encouraging.

"We know for a fact that the muscle-glycogen level in the muscle is significant in determining whether a horse performs up to par," he said. "But we need to research into the relation between the level stored and performance."

Potter and a graduate student, Don Topliff, didn't know at first whether they could load horses' muscles at all.

"The horse's digestive system is tricky and hard to manage," Potter said. "We didn't know if we could do it, because you have to put the horses on a low-carbohydrate diet...and then work the snot out of them."

But they managed to reduce the glycogen levels and then to feed the horses enough carbohydrates to get a rebound effect. The horses' muscles stored as much as 1½ times the normal amount of glycogen.

Tests of the horses' fitness, however, were inconclusive.

"Once they were depleted, we put them on a treadmill and they couldn't go," he said. "But then we overloaded their muscles and found that overloading was important in some, but not all, of the horses. But we did find that we could return them to normal performance."

Potter said the research into improving performance grew out of a concentrated study of horses' overall fitness.

"We started in 1975, asking what we know about horses' physical fitness," he said. "We found that we didn't know much. There had been little research into athletic performance, and the evaluations were mostly subjective."

So A&M researchers began developing techniques to measure a horse's fitness, including a treadmill that allows scientists to capture a horse's exhaled breath and to take blood samples during exercise. They didn't like what they found, Potter said.

"It looked like horses were not very fit," he said. "And now that we know more about fitness, it looks like stored energy levels in many horses are low.

"Race horses look like their muscle-glycogen levels are depleted; a lot of them are skinny. They run well for a half-mile or so and then run out — perhaps they burned up their energy, warming up. That's just speculation, but it seems to make sense."

Potter said the same problem may beset other horses: cutting horses that can't summon up the energy to cut a calf from the herd in the last few seconds of a competition, or quarter horses that do well in preliminary races but lose the main event. And losing the race may not be the horse's only problem.

"One of the most significant factors in injury is fatigue," Potter said. "If you don't know where the horse's fatigue level is, and you take him farther, he's a high candidate for fatigue-related injury."

Who will be next chairman of state education board?

AUSTIN (AP) — Just who will be the next chairman of the powerful State Board of Education is stirring interest among the 27-board members who will hold the election next January.

That is, if the expected special session of the Legislature does not do away with the present elective board as the governor wants.

Gov. Mark White, following recommendations of the Select Committee on Public Education, has proposed that the elective board be scrapped and that he be allowed to appoint nine members to a new board that would administer Texas public schools.

White's recommendation is not included in the draft education reform bill now being considered by Senate and House education committees. Another bill likely will be introduced to accomplish the change during the special session of the Legislature.

Joe Kelly Butler, 72, a Houston oil man, has been board chairman for the past nine years. But he was defeated for re-election in the May 5 Republican primary by Mary Bishop, 38, who operates a Houston building maintenance firm.

There were no Democratic nominees in Butler's district.

Butler and H. Ross Perot, head of the Select Committee on Public Education, have clashed repeatedly over Perot's ideas for an appointed board and some other school reforms.

Perot says Texas education cannot be improved until the state gets rid of the elective board.

Several current members of the state board have said they believe Butler will remain as chairman until his term ends, or at least until after a legislative session.

When reporters call Butler's office a secretary tells them: "Mr. Butler has no desire to talk to the press."

There are no announced candidates to succeed Butler, but at least two members voice interest.

"I'm interested," said Will Davis, a prominent Austin attorney and former state Democratic Party chairman. "It's something I plan to talk about with other members of the board."

Mary Ann Leveridge of East Bernard she would accept if the board elected her.

"I'm not a real political animal but I want to do everything I can to give children of Texas good public education,"said Mrs. Leveridge, who has been on the board since 1975.

DEAR ABBY

Husband spoils dinner by his flirtatious appetite

DEAR ABBY: I wish you would say something about husbands who take their wives out for dinner, then proceed to get overly familiar with the waitress. My husband does this frequently, and it spoils my dinner.

He always manages to engage the waitress in some kind of small talk that has nothing to do with the menu — complimenting her on her hair, her shape, her smile, etc. Some waitresses act pleased; others do not appreciate it.

This is one of the few complaints I have had about my husband throughout our 31-year marriage. — DESERVES BETTER

DEAR DESERVES BETTER: It won't be easy to change a man's habits after 31 years, but you can try. Don't chastise or criticize him; use a more gentle and appealing approach. Say, "George (or whatever his name is), when you get chummy with the waitress, it humiliates me. Please don't do it anymore."

If he claims he doesn't mean anything by it, repeat your little speech. And if he says he will "try" to overcome the habit, ask for permission to help him by giving him a small kick in the ankle should he "forget."

DEAR ABBY: If any of your readers have had upper arm plastic surgery, I hope they will write in and share the results because I am considering it.

I am a 64-year-old woman who would love to wear sleeveless dresses, but I am embarrassed to show my upper arms. The flesh just hangs and looks terrible.

The rest of my body is trim and firm. I'm a 9-handicap golfer and I'm in good shape physically, but no amount of exercise has firmed up these flabby upper arms.

Would plastic surgery help? I can't imagine tightening up that area without leaving some kind of scar — and, of course, I don't want scars on my arms.

Please let me know. — FLABBY IN FLORIDA

DEAR FLABBY: Another person's experience with plastic surgery may not apply to you. Much depends upon how you heal, how much elasticity remains in your skin, and how much "flab" must be eliminated in order to firm up your upper arms.

See a board-certified plastic surgeon and find out what is involved in this type of surgery. Ask the surgeon to let you see some of his work — then decide.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter from the bride with three fathers: She was undecided as to which one should give her away. None of these men own her, and her husband will also not own her. She is her own person and does not need "giving away." That is a custom based on ancient societies where women were owned by fathers until they were owned by husbands.

Instead, if this is a large wedding with a processional, the bride should walk down the aisle with her fiance. — METHODIST PASTOR IN CHICAGO

DEAR PASTOR: It has also been suggested that for those who find the "giving away" ritual in the marriage ceremony offensive, it may be deleted. And the marriage will be no less valid for its omission.

POSITIVE THINKING

Personality adjustment... a skill anyone can learn

I was walking through a large industrial plant with a man famous in the personnel field. "What," I asked him, "are the necessary qualities for a successful career in industry?"

His reply was prompt. "Number 1, the ability to work harmoniously with other people. Number 2, common, ordinary, everyday intelligence. Number 3, the motivation to work hard, to apply oneself, to give the job all it demands. And number 4, technical skill."

I was surprised at the order of his listing and would have expected him to put technical skill first and intelligence second. But, instead, this expert told me that people succeed or fail, first of all, to the extent they are able to get along with people.

Fortunately personality adjustment is a skill which anyone can learn. It is learning to emphasize the points of agreement rather than the points of disagreement. And, of course, it is important to bring out the best in people.

In a divorce case, the quarreling couple was before a judge to settle the details of the division of their joint property. The last item on their list was their wedding picture.

"He's not going to get that picture," the wife told the jurist. "It's the best picture of me ever taken. I'm going to keep it."

"But it's the best picture of me I have," said the husband, bristling. "I want it."

The judge held the picture up and looked at it speculatively. "I can see it's a fine picture of each of you. How long ago was it taken?"

"Twenty years ago," they answered together.

The judge continued to examine the photograph, looking up now and then to study the acrimonious pair. "You certainly were a nice looking couple. I never saw a prettier girl. The face of this girl in the picture is sweet, her eyes kindly." He looked directly at the woman. "You have changed, haven't you?"

"What do you mean?" she bridled.

"You would still be pretty if you had that same sweet look," he said. Then he turned to the man. "You seemed a fine, idealistic fellow here in this picture. But I don't see that in your face now. You both had something when this picture was taken that I do not see in you now," the judge sighed regretfully. "I guess the only solution is to cut it in half." And he picked up a pair of scissors.

They both stopped him. "Let us have the picture, your Honor, and give us a few minutes to talk it over," they said. They went into his private chambers and when they came out they actually looked different. "We see now that we've magnified our differences," they explained. And they went away resolved to get back to the basic unity the wise judge had found in their wedding picture.

Drycleaning plant root of problem

WILLIAMSTOWN, Vt. (AP) — Raymond and Centhy Duff can look out the window and see that spring has arrived in the Vermont countryside. The trees are leafy in the bright sunshine. A stream gushes down the road and the laughter of youngsters in a schoolyard drifts up the hill.

But then there's that strange humming sound coming from a small metal box in the living room. It shatters the stillness, and the impression that all is at peace in this town.

"You'd never think something was wrong around here," Mrs. Duff said. But it is.

That sparkling stream is contaminated with toxic chemicals and those kids down the hill go to class in a building where the air is tainted with low levels of dangerous pollutants.

The metal box is checking for airborne chemicals in the home of Duff's father.

Duff's father's house became the temporary home of the Duffs and their teen-age son, Brent, when the state Health Department released test results last month saying the air in their own house just across the road wasn't safe to breathe.

The Duffs packed their clothes, moved some beds and dressers and thought they were safe. But the problem followed them. New tests have revealed slight contamination in the air at Francis Duff's home.

The suspected source of the pollution is the Unifirst Corp. drycleaning plant on a hill overlooking the two Duff homes, a few other houses and the town's elementary and high schools.

The state says that during the past decade, tetrachloroethylene, which according to the Health Department is suspected of causing cancer, has been flowing into the soil around the plant through leaks in an improperly constructed manhole. The manhole was sealed off last year, 10 years after the facility began operations.

Traces of benzene, also suspected of causing cancer, were found at both of the Duff homes, at one other home and in the air at one school. Health officials suspect the drycleaning plant may have been the source of the benzene, although benzene isn't normally used in the drycleaning process.

Tetrachloroethylene was a foreign word to the Duffs and other residents.

"I didn't know what it was the first time I heard it," Raymond Duff said. "Now it's all we talk about."

Health officials believe water poluted with drycleaning chemicals is running down the hill and under the homes and elementary school. The high school is right next to the plant, while the elementary school and homes are downhill from both buildings.

The problem appeared last year, with signs of contaminated w ll water and soil, but the winter's freeze stopped the flow. The spring run-off has fed the flow and swelled the controversy.

The Duffs have filed a lawsuit against Unifirst. The state, which became involved last year after hearing about complaints of nausea and headaches from the plant's neighbors, also has sued, seeking cleanup of the pollution.

None of the suits has reached the trial stage, but the company has been ordered to suspend drycleaning.

Unifirst, then called Interstate Uniform Services, got the required state permits for its plant, but there is a dispute over whether it later violated those permits in its treatment of waste.

Unifirst lawyers have declined to return phone calls asking for comment on the case. Michael Ruttner, general manager of the plant, said Unifirst planned a meeting Monday to discuss the lawsuits and other issues and would have a statement afterward.

In the meantime, Duff, a contractor, is building a new home for his family in a neighboring town. He estimates his old home, a large 16-year-old ranch, is worth "upwards of $100,000," but he knows he can't get that much for it now.

"It's kind of weird to come in here," Mrs. Duff said as she showed visitors around the spacious home. Curtains are still hanging, most of the furniture is still in place. The cookie jar is full and Brent Duff's poster of a buxom blonde still hangs on his bedroom wall.

Eugene and Sheila LaPerle and their five children also have been told by the state that they should move from their home near the plant. But the granite-shed worker and his wife can't buy a new house unless they sell their old one and they had trouble finding a big apartment at a rent they could afford.

"We found a camp. It's only temporary, but at least we'll have a roof over our heads for a while," said Mrs. LaPerle. She and her husband also plan a lawsuit against Unifirst.

The whole town has been affected in one way or another.

A citizens' group calling itself the Committee for Health and Safety has publicized the pollution problems, mainly through a brief school boycott.

But "people really have mixed feelings," said Ellen Daniels, a clerk at the General Store. "Property values are way down and nobody wants to buy a house here."

"As soon as we mention Williamstown, a red flag goes up," said Jay Hooper, chief broker for the Vermont Realty Exchange in Montpelier. "No one wants to move there."

Levi Strauss to close some of its plants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Levi Strauss & Co., citing inefficient plant use and higher fabric and advertising costs, on Friday announced plans to close about 10 percent of its facilities and said its second-quarter profit would drop 85 percent from a year ago.

The giant apparel maker also forecast full-year earnings about 50 percent behind those of its last fiscal year.

The news sent Levi Strauss' common stock tumbling $3.50 a share, to $26.75, in late New York Stock Exchange trading.

Robert D. Haas, the company's president and chief executive, said in a statement that Levi Strauss planned to close "excess facilities representing about 10 percent of total square footage in the United States and Europe."

Martin Krasney, the company's director of public relations, said it was not yet known how many employees would be laid off because of the cutback. Most of Levi Strauss' manufacturing plants are in the South and Southwest, Krasney said.

In its second quarter of a year ago, ended May 28, 1983, Levi Strauss earned $43.1 million, or $1.02 a share, on sales of $664.8 million. For its full fiscal year ended last Nov. 28, the company earned $194.5 million, or $4.61 a share, on sales of $2.73 billion.

Gentile or Jew — prison officials join in debate

TYLER, Texas (AP) — For thousands of years, Hebrew scholars have argued about what it means to be Jewish. Recently, federal prison officials in Northeast Texas joined in the debate.

In a Texarkana courtroom in March, rabbis were outraged when prison officials suggested that for security reasons, inmates claiming to be Jewish had to be "tested" to make sure they were not lying.

A jury in U.S. Magistrate Pete McKee's court ruled in favor of a handful of former prison officials and a retired Jewish doctor. They decided officials did not violate inmates' constitutional rights when a kosher food program was closed after a retired anesthesiologist told officials none of the inmates in the program was Jewish.

Kosher dietary rules are found in Chapter 11 of the Old Testament Book of Leviticus and are followed by some religious Jews. In general, they prohibit Jewish people from eating pork, shellfish, and from mixing meat and dairy products.

The controversy started in 1980, in the Texarkana Federal Correctional Institution when one kosher-keeping inmate, Clifford Noe, complained to prison officials non-Jews were in the program.

NOE, NOW in Mississippi state prison on fraud charges, says the presence of non-Jews destroyed the program's integrity.

Prison officials asked several rabbis to come to the prison to decide if some of the inmates had lied.

But the rabbis refused, claiming Jewish law forbids what one rabbi called "background checks." Only before a marriage are such matters investigated, says Rabbi H.P. Uriel Smith of Shreveport, La.

"I told them I had to accept it. I wasn't going to start playing games with who was and who wasn't Jewish," Smith explained.

But prison officials saw trouble brewing in Noe's accusations.

"In terms of Jewish law, if you choose to hold yourself out as a Jew, most would honor your word. That's fine on the street, but our position was you'd have the potential for violence," says Chris Erelwine, an attorney in the South Central Bureau of Prisons Regional Office in Dallas. "We balance everything against the security of the institution, including religious rights."

AFTER THE rabbis refused to participate, officials telephoned Dr. David Geigerman, past president of the Texarkana B'nai B'rith. Geigerman quizzed the inmates for 10 minutes on their knowledge of Judaism and Zionism. He then told prison officials none of the prisoners was Jewish.

So officials closed the kosher kitchen, and inmates were told they had to attend Jewish religious classes with Geigerman if they wanted to be recertified.

Noe and Harvey Dail, another kosher-keeping inmate, sued the former warden, assistant warden, assistant prison chaplain and Geigerman. They claimed the test was unconstitutional, the kosher program was unfairly taken away and the requirement of taking classes violated their right not to have religion forced on them by the state.

After the initial suits were dismissed by another magistrate, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals appointed attorneys for the inmates and ordered a trial.

Four years ago, the kosher kitchen attracted a handful of FCI's nearly 900 inmates. Dail, who worked in the prison about a year as kosher cook, says meals consisted of beef bologna, salami or hot dogs, an "overabundance of eggs," and occasionally chicken. Kosher meat, more expensive than regular meat, was rarely served.

Bureau of Prisons attorney Erelwine says a new program, "Common Fare," was started in December to satisfy the dietary restrictions of 29 ethnic and religious groups, including Muslims, vegetarians, Hare Krishnas and religious Jews.

The lanky, blue-eyed Dail, now in a Tyler halfway house, was not dismayed by the jury verdict which awarded no monetary damages to him or Noe. He says he expects justice from an appeals court.

A FORMER body shop operator in Tyler, Dail won notoriety in 1971 for breaking a U.S. millionaire out of a maximum security Mexican prison in a daring helicopter escape. The exploit was made into the Charles Bronson movie, "Breakout."

He was sentenced to prison in 1979 after he admitted his involvement in a murder-for-hire scheme against a witness in a multimillion-dollar narcotics ring.

Dail explains his mother is Jewish, but refused to disclose where she lives, adding "she doesn't agree with what I'm doing."

He admitted he first filed the suit "to keep my mind busy researching the First Amendment violations." But he adds that his interest in religion, latent until he went to prison, is legitimate.

"There's a lot of frustration and hostility at being incarcerated. You have a lot of spare time, and I used the spare time for study and reflection," Dail says.

Europe's "Car of the Year." Your car for the future.

Audi 5000S Sedan

Audi When Audi created the new 5000S, they did more than design the most aerodynamically efficient sedan ever. They did it with style. Elegant, luxurious style.

That's why 53 journalists from 16 countries voted the Audi 5000S Europe's "Car of the Year." Drive it. You'll call it #1, too.

SAAB HAS MORE CARGO SPACE THAN BMW, AUDI, AND VOLVO. COMBINED.

Four of Europe's most desirable sports sedans have the following amounts of cargo space: Saab 3-door, 56.5 cubic feet; Audi 5000, 16.0 cubic feet; Volvo GLT Turbo, 13.9 cubic feet; BMW 733i, 22.5 cubic feet.

As you can see, Saab has more cargo space than all three of the others. As you can imagine, Saab is a lot more useful than any of the others when you pack up the summer house, provision your boat, load up sporting gear for a long weekend, or make an impulsive purchase at a tag sale.

Of course, only the Saab has a rear seat that folds down, so the others may claim that it has an unfair advantage.

That's right. It does have.

SAAB The most intelligent car ever built.

Practicality makes perfect.

Practically speaking, the new Honda Civic DX Hatchback is a perfectionist's dream. Because its modest price is perfectly balanced by loads of helpful features.

Its rear seats not only fold down to expand the rear cargo space, but do so independently of each other. The steering column adjusts obligingly. There's also a 5-speed manual transmission, power-assisted ventilated front disc brakes, remote hatch release, rear wiper/washer and remote-control outside rearview mirror. And automatic transmission with lock-up torque converter is available.

Its best feature, though, is the engineering quality that makes Honda the highest in owner loyalty of all leading import cars.*

Come see the 1984 Honda Civic DX Hatchback. Your next step will become perfectly clear.

"COMPROMISE HAS NEVER BEEN MY STYLE..."

"...So when I moved to Midland, Oakridge Apartments was the only logical choice. As far as I'm concerned, there's not a better community around. Oakridge is brand-new. It's in an ideal location. It's very well-managed. Plus, it has the extras other communities don't. I love the indoor spa and sauna, and the community clubhouse and pool. And the custom kitchens with built-in microwaves, woodburning fireplaces and great storage are features I simply don't want to be without. The quality, of course, is uncompromising. Like me!"

THE SOLUTION
S&W Homes Inc. of Midland Presents

We at S&W Homes Inc. of Midland are constantly trying to find new ways to help you qualify for home ownership and make living there, physically and financially comfortable.

As a matter of fact, you can choose from 15 to 30 year fixed rate financing, all the way to graduated payment plans. You can choose a financing plan with a low down payment, or if you prefer, you can put more money down and lower your payments. And of course, we offer VA financing with no down payments whatsoever.

To get a better idea of the alternatives, take a few moments and compare some of our most popular plans in the chart. And if you want to discuss which plan best fits your needs, or want us to tailor a plan to fit you, visit us at our sales office at 4725 Country Club or call 689-8031.
