OPEC nears deal on oil-production boost

Bloomberg

OPEC and allies including Russia will boost oil production starting next month, offering relief to consumers after Saudi Arabia secured a last-minute deal to overcome Iran's opposition.

While it fudged some differences between members, the agreement is a victory for Riyadh and Moscow, which for a month have advocated for a production increase to alleviate high prices. It's also a success for U.S. President Donald Trump, who has criticized the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries for inflating the cost of fuel.

"Hope OPEC will increase output substantially," Trump said on Twitter after the meeting ended. "Need to keep prices down!"

OPEC agreed on a "nominal" production increase of 1 million barrels a day, Saudi Energy Minister Khalid Al-Falih told reporters in Vienna. In reality, several ministers said the accord will add a smaller amount of oil to the market — about 700,000 barrels a day— because a number of countries are unable to raise their output.

"OPEC got the message," said Abhishek Deshpande, an executive director at JPMorgan Chase. "The Goldilocks oil price target is just shy of $70 a barrel, that should quiet the complaints from the consumers."

The hope is that the deal is enough to keep oil just under $70 a barrel, although Saudi Arabia and other members are focusing on supply and demand, rather than on a price target, said one OPEC delegate.

The vague language in the communique and lack of real targets could allow Riyadh and others to fine tune their production to keep the market in check. The document didn't mention the specific production hike cited by Al-Falih, instead pledging that the group would focus on restoring its output cuts to the level originally agreed in 2016.

OPEC and its allies exceeded their pledged 1.8 million barrel-a-day production cut by 47 percent last month, according to Russian Energy Minister Alexander Novak. That's about 850,000 barrels a day of additional supply losses that have been largely unintentional, reflecting the collapse in Venezuela's oil industry and long-term declines in Mexican output.

Saudi Arabia has enough spare capacity to offset those losses and keep a lid on prices, but Al-Falih has acknowledged that such a move isn't politically palatable for his fellow OPEC members.

The final communique made no mention of whether the kingdom, or any other member, could compensate for losses

Update on body found in county

James Durbin/Reporter-Telegram

A crime scene investigator with the Midland County Sheriff's Office looks inside a trailer home and the area surrounding it Thursday after a body was reportedly discovered at the residence south of Midland located on West County Road 115.

Painter: Teen confesses in death of 26-year-old man

■ Search continues for Chihuahua, Mexico, man who is suspect in killing of San Antonio man

From staff reports

A 16-year-old male on Thursday confessed to a murder that took place earlier this week and showed Midland County deputies where the alleged murder weapon was located, according to Sheriff Gary Painter.

The teen was taken to Culver Juvenile Detention Center and is awaiting judicial proceedings, according to a press release.

Painter said Midland County deputies received a call about 1 p.m. Thursday that there was a body inside a house in the 2800 block of West County Road 115, south of Midland city limits. The caller claimed to be a relative of the victim, Jordon Baker, 26, Painter said. After investigators received a warrant, they entered the residence and found the body. Precinct 1 Justice of the Peace pronounced Baker dead at the scene and ordered an autopsy at the Tarrant County Medical Examiner's Officer in Fort Worth.

Painter said deputies learned the identities of several people who were at the residence during the time Baker was killed and statements were obtained.

Painter told the Reporter-Telegram earlier Thursday that deputies believe the shooting took place Wednesday, the same day a complainant reported shots fired (maybe as many as four shots) in the area.

The investigation is ongoing and further arrests are anticipated, according to Painter.

SUSPECT SOUGHT

Meanwhile, law enforcement is still searching for the suspect in a shooting death that occurred early Thursday morning at the Whataburger on East Interstate 20.

Julio Cesar Lopez-Beltran is wanted in connection with the death of David Morales, 29, of San Antonio, according to a previous Reporter-Telegram article.

Warrants have been issued for murder and attempted murder, the city's spokeswoman said. Lopez-Beltran, who is from Chihuahua, Mexico, is believed to be armed and dangerous, she said.

"One of several possible scenarios" is that Lopez-Beltran fled to Mexico, Elana Ladd said via text Friday afternoon. "Police have notified the appropriate authorities."

Lopez-Beltran was in a dispute with Morales and another man at about 2 a.m. Thursday, and the dispute escalated in the restaurant parking lot and resulted in Morales and the other man being transported to Midland Memorial hospital with gunshot wounds, according to the previous article.

Morales died as a result of his injuries; the other man was treated and released from the hospital.

The suspect is 5 foot, 11, weighs 170 pounds, has black hair, brown eyes and is blind in one eye, according to the article. If people have information about his whereabouts or see him, they should call 911 Ladd said.

OPEC news pushes oil price higher

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

Despite OPEC's decision Friday to increase oil output, West Texas Intermediate prices rose sharply by nearly 5 percent Friday.

WTI futures contracts for August delivery settled Friday at $68.58 per barrel, up $3.04 (4.64 percent) on the day and up $3.52 (5.41 percent) for the week. It was the highest close since May 24, when the price was $70.71.

OPEC agreed to up production by about 1 million barrels per day (bbl/d), but investors believe the increase will be about 600,000 to 700,000 bbl/d, according to the Associated Press. In the long term, more oil on the market is expected to push prices lower, analysts said.

Rig Count

Wednesday marked the final day of July contracts, which closed at $66.22.

The Energy Information Administration on Wednesday released its production and supplies data for the week ending June 15. Crude oil refiner inputs averaged 17.7 million bbl/d, 196,000 bbl/d higher than the previous week. Refineries operated at 96.7 percent capacity.

Gasoline production averaged 10.1 million bbl/d, and distillates production was about 5.5 million bbl/d.

Commercial crude oil inventories fell by 5.9 million bbl to 426.5 million bbl. The Strategic Petroleum Reserve saw a slight drawdown of 200,000 bbl, leaving 660 million bbl in storage.

Domestic crude production was flat at 10,900 bbl/d. Imports increased by 143,000 bbl/d to 5.868 million bbl/d. Exports rose by 344,000 bbl/d to 2.374 million bbl/d.

Gasoline inventories jumped 3.3 million bbl to 240 million bbl, kerosene-type jet fuel dropped by 1 million bbl to 41.8 million bbl and distillates rose by 2.7 million bbl to 117.4 million bbl.

Plains Marketing posted prices were higher this week, but the differential between WTI "all other areas" and West Texas sour continued to be large. The spread between the crude grades has been $11.70 for the past 16 trading days. A previous Reporter-Telegram report attributed the wide gap to pipeline capacity restraints, which also has kept the price of WTI in Midland at a steep discount to WTI in Cushing and Brent crude, the international benchmark.

"It's textbook infrastructure constraints," Ed Longanecker, president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, told the

Permian rig count falls for 2nd straight week

■ Midland County has 41 rigs, down 1

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

The Permian Basin recorded its first rig count loss in consecutive weeks this year and has fallen the past three of four weeks, according to Baker Hughes data.

The nation's most active basin tallied 474 rigs, down two, this week. Last week, it shed four rigs.

Reeves County remains the hottest area for drilling. It boasts 70 rigs, down one. Eddy County, New Mexico, followed with 49 rigs, down two. Midland and Lea County, New Mexico, each had 41 rigs, with Midland down one and Lea up two.

Other counties with double-digit counts were Loving (35), Martin (35), Howard (26), Ward (25), Reagan (24), Winkler (19), Culberson (17), Pecos (16), Andrews (16), and Glasscock (15).

Railroad Commission District 8, which includes most of the Permian's active counties, fell by two rigs to 318. For other areas with activity in the Permian, District 7B stayed at one rig, District 7C was unchanged at 47, District 8A held at 17 and New Mexico remained at 91.

The Permian Basin had 369 rigs a year ago.

Texas & New Mexico

Texas' statewide total fell by one to 533; of its tally, 383 were in the Permian. The Eagle Ford in South Texas and the Barnett in North Texas each were unchanged at 80 and four, respectively.

Twenty of the Haynesville's 53 rigs were in East Texas, and five of the Granite Wash's 16 rigs were in the Panhandle. Texas' offshore rig count fell by half to one.

New Mexico's statewide count was unchanged at 93. Its pair of non-Permian rigs were in San Juan County in the northwestern part of the state.

At this time last year, there were 480 rigs in Texas and 60 in New Mexico.

US & Canada

Oil rigs nationwide declined by one and natural gas rigs fell by six, dropping the total number of rigs in the U.S. to 1,052. Oil rigs tallied 862, natural gas rigs totaled 188, and there were two miscellaneous rigs.

All offshore rigs were in the Gulf of Mexico, and two rigs were in inland waters.

By drilling trajectory, there were 930 horizontal rigs, down two; 60 vertical rigs, unchanged; and 62 directional rigs, down five.

The most active basins were the Permian, the Eagle Ford, the Cana Woodford (72), the Williston (56), the Haynesville and the Marcellus (53). States with the most rigs were Texas, Oklahoma (138), New Mexico, Louisiana (56) and North Dakota (56).

The U.S. had 941 rigs a year ago.

Canada's rig count jumped by 21 to 160, 10 rigs shy of last year's tally. There were 103 oil rigs, up 16, and 57 natural gas rigs, up five.

On Friday, Plains Marketing priced its WTI at $65.00 per barrel and sour at $53.30.

Both were up $3 on the day and up $3.50 for the week.

While WTI is up for the year, sour is down $1.70. The average price for a barrel of sour is $56.69; for WTI, the average is $61.68, or $3.52 lower than its futures counterpart.

In other futures trading Friday, September contracts jumped $2.77 to $67.63 per barrel, October was up $2.60 to $66.79 and November rose $2.50 to $66.34.

Obituaries

Tommy Barrett Tims

Tommy Barrett Tims, 83, of Midland, Texas passed away on Tuesday, June 19, 2018 in Houston. The family will receive friends on Sunday, June 24, 2018 from 6:00 p.m.- 8:00 p.m. at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home. Funeral services will be held at 10:00 a.m on Monday, June 25, 2018 at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Chapel with Brother Bob Porterfield officiating. Private family inurnment will be held at a later date at Resthaven Memorial Park.

Tommy was born on November 16, 1934 to Minnie Beumah and Thomas Wesley Tims in Okemah, Ok. He moved to Odessa at an early age and always called the Permian Basin home. Being the son of a career oil man, he followed in those footsteps with his own career of 63 years. In 1992 he was recognized by the Permian Basin Oil Show as a "Petroleum Pioneer". Along with his dedication and hard work he enjoyed family, friends and volunteer work. His passion was cooking for benefits including cerebral palsy, Wounded Warriors, cancer patients or anyone in need.

Those left to cherish his memory are daughter Laura Tampke and husband Bill of Houston; son Barry Tims and wife Lori of Valley Mills; daughter Jeanie Holloway and husband Dave of Burnet; son Bradley Tims of Midland; eight grandchildren; three great grandchildren.

He is preceded in death by his loving wife Pat Tims; son Dean Tims; parents; and sister Lea Taylor of Odessa.

The Tims family would like to express their gratitude towards all personal friends of Midland and surrounding Permian Basin including American Legion Post 19.

The family would also like to express heartfelt gratitude to M.D. Anderson Hospital and staff for their excellent care during his battle.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to M.D. Anderson Cancer Research or American Legion Post 19 of Midland, TX.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home & Crematory of Midland. Online condolences can be made at www.npwelch.com.

OPEC

elsewhere. Yet it said the group as a whole should strive for "overall conformity" of 100 percent, which in practice will only be achievable if those nations with spare production capacity step in to fill the gap left by others.

"The lack of specificity is bullish for prices," said Joe McMonigle, senior energy analyst at Hedgeye Risk Management. "It's a mystery oil production increase because we don't really know the final numbers."

Crude actually rallied following the OPEC deal, with U.S. benchmark West Texas Intermediate jumping as much as 4.6 percent to $68.43 a barrel.

The vague language may help to preserve the hard-won unity of the group of 24 oil producers, whose cooperation ended a three-year price slump. It salvages an agreement that was very much in doubt on Thursday evening after Iranian Oil Minister Bijan Namdar Zanganeh walked out of a meeting with fellow ministers, predicting nobody could persuade him to back an increase.

"It wasn't easy, but everyone found a way to navigate the obstacles," said one minister, who asked not to be named discussing the details of the closed-door meeting. "The Iranian resistance was strong and the communique is the art of finding the middle ground."

Iran has bridled at Trump's interventions. Zanganeh has said the U.S. president is to blame for high prices because of his unilateral withdrawal from the international nuclear agreement and the imposition of fresh sanctions that could significantly curb Iran's crude exports.

The deal cements the petro-alliance between Vladimir Putin, the Russian president, and Prince Mohammed bin Salman, the powerful heir to the Saudi throne, which is slowly supplanting OPEC as the main arbiter of the global oil market. The alliance has been successful even as Riyadh and Moscow take different political views in Syria and Iran.

OPEC will meet again today with non-members, including Russia, to ratify Friday's agreement.

After all the internal wrangling, which for weeks has whipsawed oil markets, the group's president said Friday's deal was ultimately about the needs of oil users.

"This agreement that we reached is a testimony that we care about the consuming countries," United Arab Emirates Energy Minister Suhail Al Mazrouei, who is also OPEC president, told reporters. "We listen when they say that they have a concern."

Firm selected to audit Texas A&M's sex assault process

Texas A&M University has selected a Missouri-based firm to conduct an audit of its Title IX sexual assault processes after receiving criticism for its handling of allegations.

The Eagle reports that university president Michael Young announced Husch Blackwell LLP will review how the school investigates sexual assault allegations and shows sensitivity to trauma.

Several current and former female students came forward this month after student Hannah Shaw publicly accused the Texas university of not doing enough to punish her alleged assaulter. Shaw had posted on Twitter that her alleged attacker was allowed to rejoin the university's swim team since being found responsible for sexual abuse in a 2016 Title IX ruling.

The university is also meeting with a group of student survivors to discuss policy changes.

Piece of sunken USS Arizona heading to Texas war memorial

An 800-pound chunk from the USS Arizona battleship that sank during the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor is heading to Texas for display at a war memorial.

The Texas Panhandle War Memorial in Amarillo will receive the rusted steel plate and part of the battleship's weathered wooden deck. The Navy cut the chunk from a section of the Arizona that was removed when the federal government built a memorial over the sunken hull of the ship decades ago.

The Navy has sent 112 pieces from the Arizona to museums and other places around the country, including the National World War II Museum in New Orleans and the Naval Academy. Most are much smaller than the Texas piece and can generally fit in a display case.

Ernie Houdashelt, a Randall County, Texas, judge who coordinated the donation said the memorial will treat the relic with reverence. He noted it's effectively from a cemetery because it's a part of a battleship that lost 1,177 men, many whom remain entombed on board.

The war memorial, which is dedicated to war dead from the 26 counties in the Texas panhandle, plans to unveil the new display on Dec. 7, the anniversary of the 1941 Pearl Harbor bombing.

"It is a really big deal. This is actually a national relic. It's a very sacred piece of America," he said.

The Texas Panhandle War Memorial is outdoors and has plenty of room. It also has a Huey helicopter that was in combat in Vietnam and a F-100 Super Sabre jet that flew over the Korean peninsula.

Navy Region Hawaii historian Jim Neuman said the Navy still has parts from the Arizona and will continue to do what it can to accommodate requests for them

UPS Inc. said Thursday it was loading the piece on a plane in Honolulu and flying it to California. The parcel delivery company, which is donating its services, plans to then drive it by truck to Texas.

South Texas officials survey flood damage, some expect more

Authorities in far South Texas on Friday were surveying the damage to homes, businesses and roads from flooding this week, while some areas are still bracing as runoff causes flooding.

"Our biggest issue is about to start," said Willacy County Emergency Management Coordinator Frank Torres. He added, "We're starting to see water overflowing the levees on a bunch of the drainage canals."

Torres told The Associated Press that his county is downstream from areas that got much more extensive flooding this week. "We expect an overflow throughout the entire drainage system," said Torres, adding that more than 100 homes could be in danger of flooding as the canals overflow in over the next 48 hours or so.

Flooding this week resulted in the rescue of hundreds of people by boat, vehicle and helicopter. The agencies helping with the rescues included the U.S. Border Patrol.

Hidalgo County spokeswoman Julia Sullivan says more than 850 people were rescued in their county in the cities of Weslaco, Donna, Elsa, Mercedes, McAllen, Mission and Alton because of flooding.

Officials were still working to assess the damage caused by the rains that brought more than 15 inches of rain this week to some areas.

McAllen's emergency management coordinator, Kevin Pagan, told the AP on Friday, "Most of the areas of the city, the water has receded and so we're now going into those areas and assessing the damage."

He said that at least 75 to 100 homes in the city got some water inside and added that the number will likely increase.

Eighty-nine-year-old McAllen resident Jeanne Levy told the Monitor in McAllen that she initially brushed off first responders' evacuation requests on Thursday but later realized it was time to leave when her front door opened from a rush of water and debris. Levy said, "I was dumbfounded, because I'm from New Orleans. I've never seen hard rain like that in my life — not even Katrina. It was a nightmare."

Tom Hushen, the emergency management coordinator in Cameron County, on Friday told the AP that it'll take time to get a sense of how many homes and businesses flooded there.

Former NFL cheerleader says Houston Texans body shamed her

A former NFL cheerleader for the Houston Texans says the team abused her by forcing her to duct-tape her waist to make her look thinner.

Angelina Rosa made the claim on Friday while joining a lawsuit filed earlier this month by five other former Texans cheerleaders. They say they were underpaid and subjected to a hostile work environment.

Rosa appeared Friday at a news conference outside NFL headquarters on Friday with prominent women's rights attorney Gloria Allred. She told reporters that on numerous occasions she was "belittled and body-shamed" for not being skinny enough.

There was no immediate comment from the NFL. A Texans spokeswoman has said the team is constantly evaluating its cheerleader program and makes changes as needed.

Today in History

Today is Saturday, June 23, the 174th day of 2018. There are 191 days left in the year.

Today's highlight

On June 23, 1868, Christopher Latham Sholes received a patent for his "Type-Writer," featuring a QWERTY keyboard; it was the first commercially successful typewriter.

On this date

In 1938, the Civil Aeronautics Authority was established.

In 1972, President Richard Nixon and White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman discussed using the CIA to obstruct the FBI's Watergate investigation. (Revelation of the tape recording of this conversation sparked Nixon's resignation in 1974.)

President Nixon signed Title IX barring discrimination on the basis of sex for "any education program or activity receiving federal financial assistance."

In 1993, in a case that drew widespread attention, Lorena Bobbitt of Prince William County, Virginia, sexually mutilated her husband, John, after he allegedly raped her. (John Bobbitt was later acquitted of marital sexual assault; Lorena Bobbitt was later acquitted by reason of insanity of malicious wounding.)

Today's birthday: Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas is 70.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

Note: Bigar's Stars is based on the degree of your sun at birth. The sign name is simply a label astrologers put on a set of degrees for convenience. For best results, readers should refer to the dates following each sign.

A baby born today has a Sun in Cancer and a Moon in Scorpio.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 23, 2018:

This year you tap into your feelings and creativity, and it makes you stronger as a result. You often have wished to have this kind of power; now learn how to use it. Don't subject yourself to others' games. If you are single, you enter a new period where dating seems normal. Someone you meet this year could be significant to your life's history. If you are attached, the two of you open up to new possibilities. This year might be unusually romantic. SCORPIO encourages you to be intense.

ARIES
(March 21-April 19)
★★★★ The unexpected occurs, but the other party involved wants to let go and not worry about what is happening. A power play can backfire if you refuse to get involved. You could be a lot more temperamental than you had anticipated. Be more open. Tonight: Among the crowds.

TAURUS
(April 20-May 20)
★★★★ What occurs around an important event might seem final but probably isn't. Someone else involved could be quite fiery. Try walking in this person's shoes in order to gain more understanding. You could find it difficult to identify with this person. Tonight: Go with a partner's suggestion.

GEMINI
(May 21-June 20)
★★★ Work through a situation, and handle what is going on. Share more with others. You sense a push and pull between you and a friend. Your creativity emerges at work and at home. You will be calmed down by a new friend or flirtation. Tonight: Join friends at a concert or movie.

CANCER
(June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Reach out to someone you care about who needs feedback from you. Your ability to gain a clearer vision and direction during emotional periods emerges. Others respect your judgments and where they stem from. Touch base with an inspirational friend. Tonight: Fun just happens.

LEO
(July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Stay centered, despite what is occurring around you. You might have difficulty gaining a consensus and heading in a certain direction. Your sense of what is possible comes from a different source than usual. Trust your instincts. Tonight: The action is around your home.

VIRGO
(Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Keep opening up conversations by listening and by touching base with a loved one. You are coming from a place of understanding. A partner might not appreciate what is happening. Do your best to not get involved in a power play. Tonight: Be more responsive in a conversation.

LIBRA
(Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Be aware of what is happening around a particular issue. You tend to overindulge and go overboard. You could feel feisty when dealing with a loved one about a money matter. You might need to clear the air in order to connect on a more comfortable level. Tonight: In the limelight.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Be more forthcoming in a discussion. You have a lot of latent but explosive energy, as well as an abundance of compassion. Friends urge you to join them, be it at a baseball game or a fun outing. Others will spontaneously look for you. Tonight: Your popularity is soaring.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Listen to what you are hearing in the ether. Somehow, you have knowledge that could be instrumental and powerful to those around you. Communicating with others could be close to impossible, at least if you are attempting to convey what you know. Tonight: Make it easy.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Friends whisper words you need to remember. You could be quite happy about everything you are experiencing right now. Advance knowledge could be a powerful weapon. Review what has been stated, and head in a new direction. Tonight: Get into the fun of the moment.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Stay on top of your work. You could be overwhelmed by what is going on. You will bring others together in some way today. Do not allow someone else to upset your plans. You have a vision of how the next few days need to play out. Tonight: Accept the limelight graciously.

PISCES
(Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ The further you get from the here and now, the better off you will be. Be sure that if you decide to bring a friend along, he or she can go with the flow and not get uptight about what occurs. This break is for you; you don't need to take care of this person. Tonight: Try something new.

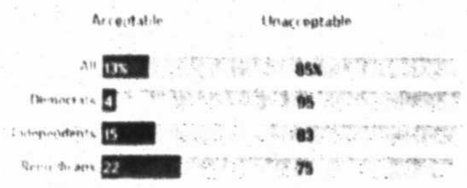
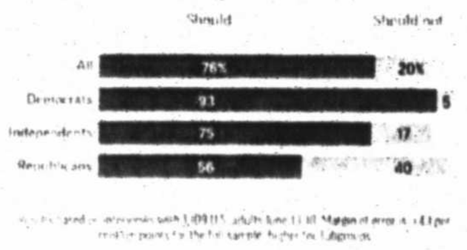
Rejecting presidential self-pardons

Q. Do you think it would be acceptable or unacceptable for presidents to pardon themselves if charged with a crime?



Q. If a president pardons him/herself, should Congress take steps to remove the president from office or shouldn't it?



Results are based on interviews with 1,003 U.S. adults June 11-18. Margin of error is +/- 4.0 percentage points for the full sample. Refer to Topline.

AP-NORC Poll: Americans say no to presidential self-pardons

By Steve Peoples and Emily Swanson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Even in an era of deep political division, Democrats and Republicans agree presidents should not pardon themselves. And if the nation's chief executive ever does so, majorities of Americans in both parties believe Congress should impeach that president.

Those are the findings of a new poll from The Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research, which comes as federal authorities continue their months-long criminal investigation into Russia's intervention in the 2016 election and the actions of President Donald Trump's campaign.

Already, prosecutors have charged four Trump campaign associates — including the one-time campaign chairman, Paul Manafort — with felonies as part of the probe, and special counsel Robert Mueller wants to question the Republican president directly.

Trump raised the possibility of a self-pardon on Twitter earlier in this month, writing: "As has been stated by numerous legal scholars, I have the absolute right to PARDON myself, but why would I do that when I have done nothing wrong?"

By a wide margin, Americans believe Trump is wrong: 85 percent think it would be unacceptable for presidents to pardon themselves if charged with a crime, and 76 percent think Congress should take steps to remove a president from office if they did so.

The survey did not ask about Trump by name, but several poll respondents in follow-up interviews — including some strong Trump supporters — said their feelings would not change when applied to the current president.

"Pardon himself? You might as well cash in your chips and leave office," said Bruce Novak, a retiree from Davie, Florida, who otherwise praised Trump's job performance and vowed to vote for him again in 2020. "It's not at all acceptable. I don't care who you are."

Recent AP-NORC surveys have found strong splits in opinion by party on issues related to Trump and his policies. While eight in 10 Republicans approve of the job he's doing as president, for example, only one out of every 10 Democrats says the same.

But there's little such disagreement on the question of pardons. Three-quarters of Republicans say a president should not self-pardon if charged with a crime, while 56 percent say Congress should impeach a president who did so. More than 9 in 10 Democrats agree.

Brynn Alexander, a 34-year-old registered Republican who lives in Fort Mitchell, Alabama, railed against what she called bias among Mueller's investigators. "They really hate this guy," Alexander said, referring to Trump. But, she added, "I don't think he should pardon himself. It looks bad."

If he did so, Alexander is among the minority of Americans who don't believe that should lead Congress to take immediate action. "I don't think they should automatically remove him. He's doing so much good for the country," said Alexander, a stay-at-home mother of three whose husband is an active duty soldier in the Army.

"Maybe he did do something wrong, but because there's so much bias, it's hard to say," she said.

One of the most sweeping powers granted to a president, pardons are outlined in Article II, Section 2 of the Constitution, which says the president "shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment."

Trump has issued several high profile pardons since taking office, including to former Arizona sheriff Joe Arpaio, who was awaiting sentencing for contempt of court, and a U.S. Navy sailor convicted of taking photos of classified portions of a submarine. In May, he issued a rare posthumous pardon to Jack Johnson, clearing boxing's first black heavyweight champion more than 100 years after what many believe was a racist conviction.

In April, Trump also pardoned I. Lewis "Scooter" Libby, a former top aide to Vice President Dick Cheney, who Trump said had been "treated unfairly" during an investigation carried out by a special counsel.

Despite Trump's declaration on social media that he could pardon himself, it's not clear the Constitution grants him that authority and that question has never been tested in the courts. Trump's lawyer, former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani, has argued that a president "probably does" have the power to pardon himself — but he also insists Trump would never do so.

"Pardoning himself would be unthinkable and probably lead to immediate impeachment," Giuliani told NBC's "Meet the Press" earlier this month.

On that point, James Baker agrees. The 76-year-old Republican from the northern Chicago suburbs has been pleasantly surprised by Trump's job performance. But he says the Constitution doesn't go so far as to allow a president to use the power of the pardon as a get out of jail free card.

"If it ever did get to that point and he's convicted of crimes — it has to be pretty serious to get to that point — then that should stand," said Baker, a self-described history buff. "I don't think anybody should ever have the power to pardon himself.

"No one's above the law," Baker added. "Not even the president."

Julian Castro seizes on border separation while musing run

By Emily Schmall
Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Julian Castro, Former U.S. Housing and Urban Development secretary, is seizing on the outcry over family separation at the border as he explores a 2020 presidential run, telling delegates at a Texas Democratic Party convention in Fort Worth on Friday that the issue underscores "in poignant terms what the stakes are."

Castro presented a montage of TV-news reports on President Trump's "zero tolerance" border policy as delegates in the arena shouted: "free the children!"

Castro has been among a throng of Democrats to denounce the policy that resulted in more than 2,300 children separated from their families.

As Beto O'Rourke, the Texas Democrat running to unseat Senator Ted Cruz, took part in a Father's Day rally at a refugee tent city in Tornillo near El Paso last Sunday, Castro, armed with toys and cards, was denied entry to a children's detention facility in McAllen in the Rio Grande Valley.

He told The Associated Press earlier this week that the family separation policy had "crossed a line."

Castro said the executive order Trump signed two days ago to end the practice is a valid remedy only if children are immediately and humanely reunited with their parents.

"The president may be signing an executive order backing down, which he never does, because he's offended our sense of morality," Castro said. "He's crossed a line, whether he realizes he's crossed it or not."

Since stepping down as HUD Secretary, Castro has launched a political action committee to help Democrats take control of the U.S. House and gain seats in state legislatures.

He visited New Hampshire and was scheduled to travel to Iowa this weekend, but canceled his plans so that he could attend another protest rally in Tornillo scheduled for Sunday.

His twin brother, U.S. Rep. Joaquin Castro of San Antonio, is also expected to appear in Tornillo.

Joaquin ducked a chance to run for governor this year, fueling speculation that he avoided challenging popular incumbent Republican Gov. Greg Abbott so that the family wouldn't have a loss on its political resume and keeping the record clear for Julian's 2020 White House run.

Battleground Texas, a group created in 2013 with plans to engage Texas' rapidly growing Latino population, has dispatched volunteers to register voters at the protest rallies.

"It serves Julian very well, as someone planning and aspiring to higher positions, to be at the front of this," said Oscar Silva, the group's executive director.

The former San Antonio mayor was 26 years old when he was elected to San Antonio's city council.

Castro has been considered a rising star in the Democratic Party since delivering the keynote address at the Democratic National Convention in 2012, and was a contender for a spot on Hillary Clinton's 2016 ticket.

Dalinda Guillen, a convention delegate from Starr County on the Mexico border, said she would welcome a fellow Latino at the helm of the Democratic Party.

"It would say a lot about this country at this moment to have a Latino in such a role," she said.

For some reason, Texas Democrats go to work on a platform

■ COMMENTARY

KEN HERMAN
Austin American-Statesman

FORT WORTH — Texas Democrats are drawing up a legislative wish list. And Rice University football players are planning about playing in the national title game.

Faith, hope and optimism — even in the stark face of reality — are to be encouraged.

Texas Democrats are convening in convention in The Town of Cows. If you're a political party convening in a convention, you might as well conspire and converse about a platform.

And if you're the Texas Democratic Party, you'll want to have legislative priorities on hand in case the voting booth fairy shows up and leaves something unexpected under your polling place pillow.

The party's platform advisory committee went to work Thursday, a week after the Party Firmly in Power convened in San Antonio and produced the 331-plank Texas GOP platform.

(FYI, Thursday's Democratic convention schedule included an evening event with a title that's either very clever or our daily heads-up that the moral apocalypse approacheth: "Still Fing Standing.")

Moments before convening the platform panel into action, state Rep. Celia Israel, D-Austin and platform chair, said she was ready for the task. "I've got my comfortable shoes. I've got my optimistic outlook," she said. Things went so well that only once during the first hour did she have to remind committee members that the task required "active listening."

(Side note: It didn't come up at the platform session, but I'm on board with the party staffer who declared Thursday that free Wi-Fi should be a human right.)

Because it's a difficult topic — and because they're Democrats — the proposed "gun violence prevention" plank sparked some consternation.

Committee member Bill Brannon of Sulphur Springs, a nonurban member of the State Democratic Executive Committee and a candidate for an East Texas state House seat, noted, "This is the section of the platform that's going to get picked apart most by the Republican Party."

So it was good that the first order of business was to insert a word inadvertently (?) left out in the draft of the first sentence: "The Texas Democratic Party the 2nd Amendment to the U.S. Constitution ... "

It was recommended that a verb indicating support should be inserted.

Another discussion ensued when Paul Colbert, a former Houston state representative, said, "We need to write a platform our candidates can run on and not from."

He suggested replacing every mention of "gun control" with "gun safety." Colbert also questioned the proposed plank calling for repeal of laws allowing open carry of firearms.

Such wording, he said, would allow Republicans to claim Democrats oppose hunting.

"You have to be careful about the way these things are worded, because they'll be taken out of context and used against Democratic candidates," Colbert said.

A lively, big-group discussion ensued, ending with Israel deciding "we need a small group to hash this out so we're not staring at each other over a big table."

"Let's move on to something easy," Israel said, "like marijuana."

The draft platform calls for "Texas legislation to legalize possession and use of marijuana and to regulate its use, production and sale."

The committee went with neither "gun control laws" or "gun safety laws," opting instead for "gun laws." And the open carry section was tweaked to call for repeal of laws allowing "open carry of handguns and assault rifles."

The full convention will vote today on the platform.

The platform committee churned through the afternoon, but some early moments captured demographic challenges Democrats face.

Committee member J.C. Dufresne of Cibolo introduced himself as "one of those token gray-haired males from the suburbs." And Robert Williams of Brazoria, in leading the discussion on criminal justice reform, noted the decline in African-American voter turnout and said some younger African-Americans "feel disenfranchised by this party. They feel like their vote is being taken for granted, for good reason if we were all honest."

A Texas Democrat last won a statewide election in 1994. So the truth is there's probably much more that Republicans can do to nudge the pendulum back in a Democratic direction than the Democrats can do for themselves. One-party rule can lead to excess that can make voters say, "Hmm."

Bless their generous hearts, Republicans have been doing their darnedest to help Texas Democrats again become relevant, starting right at the top with the ever-escalating buffoonery of the man who's remade the GOP in his own odd image.

Someday, President Donald Trump is going to hurt himself patting himself on the back.

This week he praised himself for ending the family separation immigration policy he had enacted. Can you get a Nobel Prize for undoing something bad you did your own self?

A final note to reflect a current concern on the mind of at least one Republican.

State Rep. Jonathan Stickland, R-Bedford, tweeted: "Sad to see @SmoothieKing change recipe to my favorite product. Not good anymore. The new cups are horrible & don't keep cold. #lostacustomer."

Life, for all its rewards, is not without its challenges and disappointments.

For immigrants, still no word on when they will be reunited

By Will Weissert, Amy Taxin and Colleen Long
Associated Press

McALLEN — Two days after President Donald Trump ordered an end to the separation of families at the border, federal authorities Friday cast about for jail space to detain them together, leaving hundreds of parents in the dark on when they would be reunited with their children.

Immigration and Customs Enforcement posted a notice saying it is looking into creating 15,000 beds for use in detaining immigrant families. A day earlier, the Pentagon agreed to provide space for as many as 20,000 migrants on U.S. military bases.

Beyond that, however, there was nothing but frustration and worry for many of the parents separated from their children and placed in detention centers for illegally entering the country over the past several weeks.

Some parents struggled to get in touch with youngsters being held in many cases hundreds of miles away, in places like New York and the Chicago area. Some said they didn't even know where their children were.

Stepmother wants family taxi service out of business

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married 2 1/2 years. We have both been married before. I have a son, and he has three daughters. My son is married with two children. He works and is pretty self-sufficient. Two of my husband's daughters live in the same city we do. They are 26 and 28. They don't have cars or driver licenses and live with their mother, who is also car-less.

They often ask us for transportation. While I don't mind doing it once in a while, we are not a taxi service. Occasionally, they'll offer gas money. But my point is, every time the car is started and driven down the street, there is wear and tear on the vehicle. The girls don't step up when it's time to pay repair bills.

This is a constant argument between my husband and me, and I don't know what to do about it. I love my stepdaughters, but in my opinion, they are old enough to be more self-sufficient. Advice, please. — DESPERATE IN RENO, NEV.

DEAR DESPERATE: You're right; the "girls" are old enough. The solution to your problem lies in helping them become independent. This is what you should discuss with their father. There is a public transportation system in your community, and they should be familiar with it. If for some reason that's not workable, perhaps their father could help them pay for driving lessons and/or a down payment on a used vehicle of their own.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance told me that an old friend of mine whom I am close to has kissed him goodbye on the lips twice now. He said the last time she did it, it made him feel uncomfortable and guilty.

I have never seen her do this to anyone else, and to be honest, I was angry about it when he told me. I am the godmother of her child, and I feel awkward around her now. What should I do? Should I let her come to me, or tell her it has been brought to my attention? — IN A WEIRD SPOT IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR WEIRD SPOT: Ideally, your fiance should ask her to stop kissing him on the mouth. However, if he's not up to doing that, tell your old friend your fiance mentioned that the last few times he has seen her, she kissed him on the mouth and it made him uncomfortable. Then tell her that when you heard about it, it made YOU uncomfortable, so please don't do it again.

DEAR ABBY: I was eating a Greek salad at a restaurant the other night, and I started to wonder about the polite way to eat olives with pits. I typically put the whole thing in my mouth, eat the flesh, then pull the pit out with my fingers and place it on a dish. I started wondering if it was rude to reach into my mouth and spit things out in a restaurant. What is the polite way to eat an olive in public? — IT'S THE PITS IN NEW YORK

DEAR PITS: According to etiquette experts the Post family, you have done nothing wrong. The key to disposing of an olive pit is to do it discreetly. (Shield the maneuver with your napkin to avoid offending your companion(s) if you're not alone.)

WASHINGTON — Just when House Republicans needed Donald Trump's backing the most — on their big immigration overhaul — he dashed off a presidential tweet on Friday saying they should quit wasting their time on it.

It's hardly the first time the president has abandoned his allies in a moment of need. Over and over, Trump has proven himself a saboteur, willing to walk away from promises and blow up a deal, undermining the GOP agenda in Congress.

"You just fear that tweet in the morning," said Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen of Florida. The retiring Republican said members of Congress can't help but think, "Oh no, how many policies will you undo by the day's end? Because the day's not over. Heck, it's not even noon yet. How many times could he change his mind?"

On Capitol Hill on Friday, the mood was gloomy, particularly among the more centrist Republicans who have been pushing the party's immigration compromise. That bill would provide $25 billion for Trump's border wall and set new limits on family visas in favor of merit-based entry — but also create a path to citizenship for young "Dreamers." It seemed to be losing — rather than gaining — support ahead of rescheduled voting next week. Trump had publicly backed the bill earlier in the week.

"It's a horrifically chilling signal," said another retiring Republican, Rep. Mark Sanford of South Carolina, who recently lost his primary election after frequently criticizing Trump.

"What the president just signaled is, 'I'm not going to be there.' And therefore I think people will take the cue," Sanford said. "I think it makes immigration reform that much more unlikely."

Republican Rep. Mike Simpson of Idaho said lawmakers who are counting on Trump to provide a presidential nudge should reconsider. "He changes so frequently that anybody who depends on that, I think, is in trouble," he said.

Others, particularly conservative Republicans who don't support the immigration deal, said Trump's actions should come as no surprise. He ran on disrupting Washington, aides said, and that's exactly what he's doing.

In fact, he does it all the time. Last year, not long after House Republicans stood in the Rose Garden with Trump celebrating passage of their replacement for former President Barack Obama's health care law, he mocked their legislation as a "mean" bill. After Congress approved a budget deal to end a government shutdown in February, Trump turned on lawmakers and threatened to veto it.

At a White House meeting this week with some two dozen wayward Republicans who needed nudging on the immigration bill, one lawmaker directly asked the president if he would reverse course on it the way he did when he threatened to veto the budget deal, according to two Republicans familiar with the private exchange.

The president reassured them that would not happen, they said.

"Everybody is sensitive to what the president is saying," said Rep. Paul Cook, R-Calif., who's undecided on the immigration measure. "I think it makes it very, very difficult. ... What he says influences a lot of members."

The assessment of Trump's changes isn't much different at the White House, where officials were caught off guard by his sudden shifts this week on immigration — including his reversal in signing an executive order to halt the separation of immigrant families at the border.

Officials portray a president who increasingly relies on his own counsel, ignoring their advice. They say they follow along with the rest of the country on Twitter to learn what their boss is doing.

"Republicans should stop wasting their time on Immigration until after we elect more Senators and Congressmen/women in November," Trump tweeted early Friday. "Dems are just playing games, have no intention of doing anything to solve this decades old problem. We can pass great legislation after the Red Wave!"

Officials said the president's haphazard actions seem to have less to do with campaign politics — or even his own standing with voters — than ego. He's frustrated with Congress and the media, particularly after the flop of the GOP's health care overhaul last year, which made him wary of fully embracing legislation before it passes.

What is unclear, though, is whether the president realizes the moderate Republicans he is alienating by shunning their immigration overhaul are among those most endangered in the midterm elections.

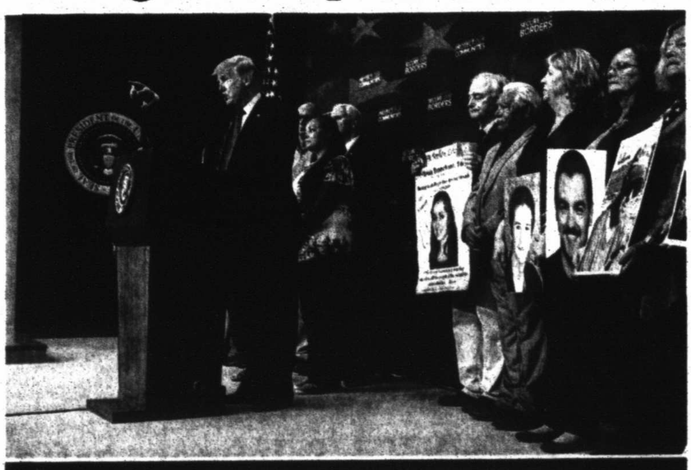
"No one has more to lose in November than the president does when it comes to the majority in the House, because if this majority flips over to being a Democrat, there will be a big push for impeachment," said Rep. Bradley Byrne, R-Ala., who opposes the immigration bill.

House GOP leaders have made it clear they do not expect the immigration bill to pass, but have little choice but to press forward and keep a promise made to moderate Republicans.

One leading architect of the bill, Rep. Carlos Curbelo of Florida, holds out hope that the bill can be revised to gain support.

"What we need from the president is for him to sign a good immigration bill, and he and his team have indicated that he will. That's all we need," Curbelo said.

Besides, said Rep. John Faso, R-N.Y., a supporter of the bill, maybe Trump will change his mind again: "Just wait a few hours, the tweet will be different."



Trump pushes back against border separation uproar

By Jonathan Lemire and Darlene Superville
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump tried to cast doubt Friday on wrenching tales of migrant children separated from their families at the border, dismissing "phony stories of sadness and grief" while asserting the real victims of the nation's immigration crisis are Americans killed by those who cross the border unlawfully.

Bombarded with criticism condemning the family-separation situation as a national moment of shame, Trump came back firing, sometimes twisting facts and changing his story but nonetheless highlighting the genuine grief of families on the other side of the equation.

"You hear the other side, you never hear this side," said Trump, standing with a dozen of what he calls the "angel families" who lost loved ones at the hands of people in the country illegally. He focused on the fact that young migrants separated from parents are likely to be reunited, unlike the victims of murders.

These are the American citizens permanently separated from their loved ones. The word 'permanently' being the word that you have to think about. Permanently — they're not separated for a day or two days, these are permanently separated because they were killed by criminal illegal aliens."

Amid mushrooming bipartisan concern over depictions of terrified migrant children separated from their parents, Trump on Wednesday had abruptly reversed course and signed an executive order to overturn the policy, although up to 2,000 children are still believed to be separated from their parents. But that rare moment of public capitulation was brief from the president, who laced his remarks at a rally in Minnesota that night with hardline immigrants rhetoric that continued Friday. In a tweet, the president raised questions about whether the migrants' hardships really existed.

"We must remain a Strong Southern Border," the president tweeted. "We cannot allow our Country to be overrun by illegal immigrants as the Democrats tell their phony stories of sadness and grief, hoping it will help them in the elections. Obama and others had the same pictures, and did nothing about it!"

Trump's suggestion that the stories were erroneous was likely fueled by revelations Friday about one of the defining images to this point in the crisis, a 2-year-old Honduran girl crying as her mother was stopped by a Border Patrol agent. But the girl in the photograph, who ended up on the cover of Time Magazine this week, was not separated from her mother but detained with her, the child's father told the Daily Mail. Time Magazine said it stood by the image because it captures "the stakes of this moment."

Trump has long chafed at the media's treatment, his fury only growing in the past week when he felt that he did not receive proper credit for his summit in Singapore with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un. He told the Trinity Broadcasting Network, in an interview with former Arkansas Gov. Mike Huckabee set to air today, that he found the news coverage "almost treasonous."

Some conservatives seized hold of the migrant photo faux pas to attack the media, and White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders tweeted, "It's shameful that dems and the media exploited this photo of a little girl to push their agenda."

Other Trump allies have gone even further. Ann Coulter, a conservative pundit, said Sunday in an interview on Fox News that kids at the border were "actor children" who were "given scripts to read by their parents."

Coulter then turned to the camera and said to Trump, "Don't fall for it."

A number of Democrats aggressively pushed back against Trump's claims. Rep. Peter Welch of Vermont said Friday that Trump's assertion was "bizarre" and that the border patrol processing center he visited in Texas in recent days was "nothing short of a prison."

As part of his defense for his zero tolerance border crossing policy, Trump has frequently pointed to — and exaggerated — the threat posed by members of the violent gang MS-13 who have entered the United States. In what was likely not a coincidence, the Justice Department on Friday unsealed an indictment charging 11 suspected MS-13 gang members in connection with the killings of two teens in Virginia. All the suspects were from El Salvador.

But the central piece of Trump's attempts to counter-program against the despairing images at the border was to stand with the "angel families," as he did repeatedly during his presidential campaign, including at the 2016 Republican National Convention. At the somber event at the White House complex on Friday, Trump introduced the families, who delivered heartbreaking tales of their loved ones' lives and, at times, gruesome descriptions of their deaths.

Many of them held large photos of their loved ones, some of which the president autographed. Trump said that one of the victims looked like the actor Tom Selleck.

"Your loss will not have been in vain," Trump said. "We will secure our borders, and we will make sure that they're properly taken care of."

The president also rattled off a litany of statistics that indicated that illegal immigrants commit violent crimes at a far higher rate than U.S. citizens, saying "you hear it's like they're better people than what we have, than our citizens. It's not true."

But his assertion has been contradicted by a number of studies, including one by the Cato Institute and another in the journal Criminology that found that places with higher percentages of undocumented immigrants do not have higher rates of crime.

A Homeland Security report said there were 972 calls reporting crimes to its Victims of Immigration Crime Engagement hotline from April 29 through Sept. 30 last year. The hotline received a total of 4,602 calls including general complaints. The report said some of the calls were made for victim impact statements that lead to the deportation of someone who commits a crime. Victims also testified in immigration court proceedings, and their calls led to the arrest and detention of others.

At the event, Trump also blamed "the mayor of San Diego" for warning citizens about immigration agent raids. But the mayor of San Diego, Kevin Faulconer, is a Republican who did not provide a tip; a mayor who did was Libby Schaaf, a Democrat from Oakland.

Justices adopt digital-age privacy rules to track cellphones

By Mark Sherman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Police generally need a warrant to look at records that reveal where cellphone users have been, the Supreme Court ruled Friday in a big victory for privacy interests in the digital age.

The justices' 5-4 decision marks a big change in how police may obtain information that phone companies collect from the ubiquitous cellphone towers that allow people to make and receive calls, and transmit data. The information has become an important tool in criminal investigations.

Chief Justice John Roberts, joined by the court's four liberals, said cellphone location information "is detailed, encyclopedic and effortlessly compiled." Roberts wrote that "an individual maintains a legitimate expectation of privacy in the record of his physical movements" as they are captured by cellphone towers.

Roberts said the court's decision is limited to cellphone tracking information and does not affect other business records, including those held by banks. He also wrote that police still can respond to an emergency and obtain records without a warrant.

But the dissenting conservative justices, Anthony Kennedy, Samuel Alito, Clarence Thomas and Neil Gorsuch, cast doubt on Roberts' claim that the decision was limited. Each wrote a dissenting opinion and Kennedy said in his that the court's "new and uncharted course will inhibit law enforcement" and "keep defendants and judges guessing for years to come."

Roberts does not often line up with his liberal colleagues against a united front of conservative justices, but digital-age privacy cases can cross ideological lines, as when the court unanimously said in 2014 that a warrant is needed before police can search the cellphone of someone they've just arrested.

The court ruled Friday in the case of Timothy Carpenter, who was sentenced to 116 years in prison for his role in a string of robberies of Radio Shack and T-Mobile stores in Michigan and Ohio. Cell tower records spanning 127 days, which investigators got without a warrant, bolstered the case against Carpenter.

Investigators obtained the records with a court order that requires a lower standard than the "probable cause" needed for a warrant. "Probable cause" requires strong evidence that a person has committed a crime.

The judge at Carpenter's trial refused to suppress the records, finding no warrant was needed, and a federal appeals court agreed. The Trump administration said the lower court decisions should be upheld.

The American Civil Liberties Union, representing Carpenter, said a warrant would provide protection against unjustified government snooping.

"This is a groundbreaking victory for Americans' privacy rights in the digital age. The Supreme Court has given privacy law an update that it has badly needed for many years, finally bringing it in line with the realities of modern life," said ACLU attorney Nathan Freed Wessler, who argued the Supreme Court case in November.

The administration relied in part on a 1979 Supreme Court decision that treated phone records differently than the conversation in a phone call, for which a warrant generally is required.

The earlier case involved a single home telephone and the court said then that people had no expectation of privacy in the records of calls made and kept by the phone company.

"The government's position fails to contend with the seismic shifts in digital technology that made possible the tracking of not only Carpenter's location but also everyone else's, not for a short period but for years and years," Roberts wrote.

The court decided the 1979 case before the digital age, and even the law on which prosecutors relied to obtain an order for Carpenter's records dates from 1986, when few people had cellphones.

The Supreme Court in recent years has acknowledged technology's effects on privacy. In 2014, Roberts also wrote the opinion that police must generally get a warrant to search the cellphones of people they arrest. Other items people carry with them may be looked at without a warrant, after an arrest.

Roberts said then that a cellphone is almost "a feature of human anatomy." On Friday, he returned to the metaphor to note that a phone "faithfully follows its owner beyond public thoroughfares and into private residences, doctor's offices, political headquarters, and other potentially revealing locales."

As a result, he said, "when the government tracks the location of a cell phone it achieves near perfect surveillance, as if it had attached an ankle monitor to the phone's user."

Police shooting of boy spurs more protests, appeals

By Claudia Lauer
Associated Press

Protesters demonstrated Friday for a third day over the fatal police shooting in Pennsylvania of an unarmed black teen fleeing a traffic stop as they sought to get the attention of a nation engaged by the immigration debate, and to pressure officials to charge the officer.

Hundreds of marchers chanting "Who did this? The police did this" shut down a Pittsburgh area highway in the early morning hours, and a small group staged a sit-in outside the district attorney's office later in the day.

Demands for answers to why a police officer shot 17-year-old Antwon Rose Jr. seconds after he bolted from a car grew with an emotional speech by state Rep. John Wheatley at the state Capitol, and a video-taped appeal by the legislator and two other black Pittsburgh area lawmakers for a "thorough and transparent investigation that builds community."

"My heart is heavy right now," Wheatley said, decrying both Rose's death and the street violence that earlier in the week left a young rapper dead. "We cannot casually keep closing our eyes and ears to the fact there's a group of people whose lives seemingly don't matter."

Rose was shot Tuesday night in East Pittsburgh, a suburb of Pittsburgh, after the car he was riding in was pulled over by Officer Michael Rosfeld because it matched the description of a car wanted in a shooting in a nearby town, police said. The car had bullet damage to a back window.

As Rosfeld was taking the driver into custody, a video taken from a nearby house shows Rose and a second passenger running from the car. Three gunshots can be heard, and the passengers can be seen either falling or crouching as they pass between houses. It is unclear from the video if Rosfeld yelled for them to stop.

Interviewed briefly by television station WTAE, Rosfeld, who is 30, said he could not discuss the shooting but that he was getting a lot of support from law enforcement. He is on administrative leave during the investigation.

Authorities said two handguns were retrieved from the car, and District Attorney Stephen Zappala said an empty gun clip was found in Rose's pocket.

Lawyers for Rose's family have said no evidence has been produced that shows the teen posed a threat to police.

In this image released by ABC, Roseanne Barr, left, and Laurie Metcalf appear in a scene from the reboot of the popular comedy series "Roseanne." ABC, which canceled its "Roseanne" revival over its star's racist tweet, said Thursday it will air a Conner family sitcom minus Roseanne Barr this fall.

Give up after scandals? Television history shows otherwise

By Mark Kennedy
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Say this about TV creators in 2018 — they don't give up easily.

Three current shows — "Roseanne," "Transparent" and "House of Cards" — have been crippled by scandal, but each plans to continue without their disgraced stars.

"The bottom line is fundamentally money," said Karen Tongson, a professor of English, Gender Studies and American Studies and Ethnicity at the University of Southern California. "These crews, these actors, these shows that have audiences, that have critical acclaim, are pushed to continue for those reasons."

The reboot of "Roseanne" had an excellent first season in the ratings — it also earned an estimated $45 million in advertising revenue for ABC — when its future was thrown into doubt by a racist tweet by star Roseanne Barr.

On Thursday, ABC said it ordered 10 episodes of a spinoff called "The Conners" after Barr relinquished any creative or financial participation in it, which the network had said was a condition of such a series.

In a statement issued by the show's producer, Barr said she agreed to the settlement to save the jobs of 200 cast and crew members who were idled when "Roseanne" was canceled last month.

"I regret the circumstances that have caused me to be removed from 'Roseanne,' she said, adding, "I wish the best for everyone involved."

A Barr-less "Roseanne" sitcom might get viewers to tune in but Tongson doesn't believe they'll all hang around. "I think people will be curious to see what they try to do with the exit of its lead. But I'm not sure it will hold necessarily," she said.

"People tuned in largely because of the volatility of Roseanne — the character and also the personality," she added. "It has the opportunity to gain different audiences and new audiences by centering certain characters, but I think that some of that tension might be removed."

"Roseanne" isn't alone in trying to forge a new TV path without a key member.

"House of Cards," Netflix's first original series and one that's important for its brand, was rocked last October amid sexual misconduct allegations against star Kevin Spacey. Robin Wright, who co-starred as wife to Spacey's Francis Underwood, will be the focus of the new final season.

And Amazon Studios has said "Transparent" star Jeffrey Tambor won't be on the series when it returns for its fifth season. Two women — an actress on his show and his assistant — allege sexual misconduct; he has vehemently denied it.

Marc Berman, a TV analyst who is the creator of Programming Insider, said any network taking a lead character off a hit show is taking a gamble. But networks are loathe to walk away from a successful show.

"To not have the lead character on any of these three shows is certainly a challenge. It's not impossible, but it's a challenge," he said. "When you do something like this, you have to focus on the ensemble of the show. You have to focus on the other characters."

Tongson notes that "Roseanne," "Transparent" and "House of Cards" — two of which appear on streaming platforms and one on a big network — face different challenges when they restart.

"The thing about all three shows is that they appeal to widely different demographics so there will be different reasons for tuning in for those audiences," she said.

Tongson notes that while Tambor was a prominent character on "Transparent," he's not as front-and-center any more, perhaps meaning that the show can better survive his loss. The series also prides itself on having a diverse production staff with many transgender people represented, something creators want to keep together.

With "House of Cards," while Spacey was without a doubt a central character, Tongson notes that the show has always been about the interplay between Frank and Claire Underwood. "Spacey was both irritant and stimulant for many viewers of that show, so I think they can easily see themselves proceeding without that character," she said.

Television history offers a mixed scorecard of shows surviving without its original star: For every successful one — "Cheers" and "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation" — there's a "Nashville" or a "Spin City" that largely failed.

Hit shows surviving the loss of their stars include "The Office," which bid farewell to Steve Carell after seven seasons and continued on for two more. "Cheers" nicely weathered the loss of Shelley Long and kept going for six more seasons and "NYPD Blue" shrugged off the loss of David Caruso.

Other examples include "Charmed," which survived the loss of Shannen Doherty after three seasons to press on for five more, and "CSI," which kept solving cases until the final 15th season with Laurence Fishburne and Ted Danson after William Petersen walked away from regular duties after season nine. Even the show "Valerie" survived without its star, Valerie Harper.

But "Nashville" couldn't overcome the loss of Connie Britton after season five and ratings plunged for the final season six. And Charlie Sheen couldn't save "Spin City" after the departure of Michael J. Fox. Many believe "The X-Files" didn't succeed without star David Duchovny in seasons 8 and 9.

Berman said he thought "The Conners" might succeed simply because "Roseanne" lasted for 10 seasons. "These characters have been around for a very long time. We know who they are. In some ways, this will give these characters a chance to stand out a little bit more without the central character on the show," he said. "The secret sauce in all these shows is it's not just about this one character."

DuVernay scores another milestone for black female directors

Filmmaker Ava DuVernay has checked off another milestone for black female directors. This week her film "A Wrinkle in Time" crossed the $100 million mark domestically, a first for a black woman.

The film got a late-game boost playing as a double feature at drive-in theaters with the record-breaking "Incredibles 2" this past weekend.

DuVernay said on Instagram that she may be the first but will not be the last.

DuVernay was also the first black woman to get a budget of over $100 million to direct a film. "A Wrinkle in Time" cost around $103 million to make.

The Disney film has now grossed over $132.4 million worldwide, but with marketing costs well over $100 million, "A Wrinkle in Time" is also still not in the black.

Women directors still a rarity on movie sets, according to new DGA study

The director's chairs on movie sets have not changed all that much when it comes to gender and ethnic diversity, according to a new study from the Directors Guild of America.

The study, which was released Thursday, found that female and minority directors remain a relative rarity.

Among the 651 feature films released in 2017 with a box-office take of at least $250,000, only 12 percent of the directors were women and just 10 percent were people of color.

From 2013 to 2017, the percentage of female movie directors has remained in a roughly consistent range of 8 percent to 16 percent, the study found.

"Change is long overdue," Thomas Schlamme, president of the DGA, said in a statement. "Inclusion is a fight we've been fighting with the industry for four decades now, and it's been an uphill battle to get them to change their hiring practices."

He said the guild has pressed for the adoption of a version of the Rooney Rule, the National Football League policy that requires teams to interview minority candidates for head coaching positions.

But he said the industry has been stubborn to change.

"We are committed to keeping at this for as long as it takes," Schlamme said.

Hollywood has seen several female directors helm big-budget movies recently, including Patty Jenkins with "Wonder Woman" and Ava DuVernay with "A Wrinkle in Time." But they remain relatively few in number.

The DGA's study showed that, of movies released in 2017 that grossed more than $10 million, 14 percent were directed by women.

People of color directed about 8 percent of those feature releases.

The percentage of minority movie directors has declined slightly in the last four years, according to the report. Minority directors accounted for 10 percent of movies in 2017 that grossed more than $250,000 and were covered under DGA's contract.

That's a decline from 2013, when minority directors accounted for 17 percent of those movies.

Spurs acknowledge relationship with Leonard fractured

By Raul Dominguez
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — General manager R.C. Buford acknowledges star forward Kawhi Leonard is unhappy with the Spurs.

He remains optimistic the relationship can be salvaged.

Leonard has requested a trade from San Antonio because he is unhappy after missing most of last season with a right quadriceps injury. Buford would not comment on "speculation" of a trade demand, but agreed there is a fractured relationship between Leonard and the only franchise he has played for.

"Kawhi and his family mean a lot to the organization and to the community and while none of wish we are where we are, we're going to do what we can to build the best relationship we can with him," Buford said Thursday night as the Spurs made two late picks in the NBA Draft. "We'll explore all of our options, but the first one would be to do what we can to keep Kawhi as part of our group."

Leonard missed the first 27 games of the season but returned to play in nine games. He complained of discomfort and pain in the leg in his final game. Leonard sought an outside opinion after the Spurs cleared him to play, working with his own medical team in New York in an attempt

Midland High's assistant football coach Jim Conger, photographed Wednesday, is retiring after 16 years teaching and coaching.

Conger left his mark with MHS football program

By Christopher Hadorn
chadorn@mrt.com

One couldn't tell the story of the Midland High football program without mentioning Jim Conger.

For 15 years, Conger unceremoniously served behind the scenes as the assistant head coach and offensive line coach for the Bulldogs from 2002-16, the program's most successful period in history.

Conger was the confidant of head coach Craig Yenzer, who was MHS' longest tenured and winningest head coach at 103-70 during that same time span. Yenzer jokingly referred to Conger as the "drop dead head coach", telling him, "If I drop dead, you're going to be the head coach."

Conger used to reply back, "No, you're not going anywhere because I don't want it."

While the unassuming Conger never had grander visions of becoming a head coach, he had an indelible impact on countless young lives at Memorial Stadium.

Conger, 57, officially retired as a coach and a school teacher with Midland ISD this month. Conger, who has yet to decide on his next journey career-wise, started coaching football and teaching with Floydada in 1985, before moving onto five-year coaching stints with both West Texas State (now known as West Texas A&M) and Liberty-Eylau in Texarkana.

"It's been a long road," Conger said. "It's been good and I have thoroughly enjoyed it. You come to that point in your life, you say 'It's time for me to go, move on and do something else.' Just as equally important, it's time for someone else to come in and do this as well."

Conger and Yenzer had a remarkable run in their 21 years of coaching together, which dates back to Hereford in 1996.

The two helped Hereford reach the 1999 Class 4A state title game, but they will always be remembered in the Tall City for guiding the Bulldogs to the 2002 Class 5A state championship game in their first year, snapping a 51-year postseason drought.

Conger was a part of 10 playoff appearances and 13 playoff victories with MHS.

Even as an assistant, Conger was so respected in the coaching realm that he served on the Board of Directors of the Texas High School Coaches Association from 2010-13.

"Working for Craig for 21 years was quite an honor," Conger said. "He was the ultimate boss, supervisor, head coach, whatever you want to call him. I worked for a couple of great guys, but Craig and I had a great relationship. One of the things that helped me being a coach under him was getting recognition to serve on the Board of Directors. I'm in debt to him for things like that. It was a great experience."

Dirk to Doncic: Mavs tap brakes on inevitable comparisons

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

DALLAS — Luka Doncic didn't get compared to Larry Bird when he was introduced a day after the Dallas Mavericks traded up to get the third overall pick in the NBA draft.

For president of basketball operations Donnie Nelson, that's progress based on his last experience of getting a tender-aged European in hopes of lifting the Mavericks out of the doldrums.

Twenty years later, Dirk Nowitzki is the highest-scoring foreign-born player in league history. Back then, the big German wasn't remotely comparable to Larry Legend — and his rough first two years proved it.

So ask Nelson about a player the Mavericks clearly coveted heading into the draft in Doncic, and he'll choose his words carefully regarding the 19-year-old from Slovenia. Doncic won't turn 20 until after the All-Star break of his rookie season, which is expected to be Nowitzki's record 21st with one franchise.

"Dirk and I had a long talk coming in," Nelson said about the player Dallas drafted days after his 20th birthday in 1998.

"We're obviously very excited to have (Doncic) but he's got a very tough road ahead of him. Dirk wasn't done any favors in his first two years. We are going to steer away from any of those comparisons. Luka is his own guy. He's got his own challenges."

Coach Rick Carlisle dropped a few international names in trying to describe the versatility Dallas thinks is offered by the 6-foot-7 Doncic, who won Euroleague MVP and Final Four MVP honors while helping Real Madrid win the title just days before the draft.

Northern rallies to win 9-11-year-old Texas West District 3 title

By Christopher Hadorn

The Mid City Little League 9-11 year old all-stars gave Northern all it could handle Friday.

Just two days prior, Northern rolled to a 17-1 victory over Mid City in the winner's bracket semifinal at the Texas West District 3 Tournament at Butler Park.

But Northern discovered a vastly different Mid City team in the Texas West District 3 9-11-year-old championship.

While facing elimination, Mid City rode the arm of starting pitcher Homer Hernandez and capitalized off early run-scoring opportunities to lead most of Friday's contest against Northern.

However, Northern overcame a five-run deficit and pulled away with a 9-7 victory over Mid City to take the title. The Northern 9-11 all-stars advanced to the Texas West sectional tournament, which begins July 1 in Lubbock.

Trailing 7-6, Northern (4-0) took its first lead by scoring three runs in the bottom of the fifth.

Northern took an 8-7 advantage when center fielder Crue Collie drove home the go-ahead run with an RBI groundout. Collie spearheaded Northern's offense by going 2-for-3 with a double, an RBI, three runs scored and a walk.

Following Collie's RBI, Cole Neatherlin added an insurance run with a single to center to score Levi Bayley.

In its final at-bat, Mid City (3-2) mounted a two-out rally in the seventh, as Noah Aguilar and Lincoln Reinke had consecutive singles.

But Northern reliever Cam McClinton induced a game-ending pop up, which capped off an impressive comeback as his team once trailed 6-1 after 2 ⅓ innings. McClinton hurled 4 2/3 innings of three-run ball to secure the win.

Mississippi State third baseman Justin Foscue, looks toward second base Friday after tagging out Oregon State's Cadyn Grenier (2) in a rundown between third base and home in the first inning of a College World Series game in Omaha, Neb.

OREGON ST. 12, MISSISSIPPI ST. 2

OMAHA, Neb. — It has been decades since an offense at the College World Series has been as prolific as Oregon State's.

The good times — and the runs — kept rolling for the Beavers in a 12-2 win over Mississippi State on Friday. Oregon State used a five-run second inning to build a big lead, batted around twice and never were threatened thanks to Brandon Eisert's season-long 5 1/3 innings of one-hit shutout relief.

Oregon State joined 1995 Cal State Fullerton as the only teams in CWS history to score 11 or more runs in three consecutive games. The Beavers' 43 runs is the highest total by a team through four games since 2001.

"When you're swinging the bat well, you have a lot of confidence going up and down the lineup," coach Pat Casey said. "We've got a team approach to swinging. I think they have a lot of trust in one another. I've been through spells during the year when we haven't swung the bat well. They're swinging it well at the right time. Certainly it's something I'm excited about."

The Beavers (51-11-1) have staved off elimination three times since losing their CWS opener to North Carolina last Saturday. They beat Washington, North Carolina and now Mississippi State. Another win over the Bulldogs (39-18) on Saturday would send Oregon State to the best-of-three CWS finals for the first time since 2007.

The Bulldogs, trying to return to the CWS finals for the first time since 2013, are not in unfamiliar territory. They were down to their last strike in regionals before beating Florida State in a win-or-go-home game, and this will be the sixth time in 11 games they'll be playing to fight off elimination.

"We've come back many, many times, this group has," MSU interim coach Gary Henderson said. "We'll respond well."

Oregon State won the first of two straight national titles in 2006 after losing its first game in Omaha. The only other team since then to make it to the finals after a loss in its opener was the 2010 South Carolina championship team.

The Beavers' offensive tear continued against a Mississippi State that came into the game having allowed just two runs in 18 innings.

Oregon State is batting .377 and averaging 10.8 runs in Omaha after collecting 15 hits and scoring in double digits for the third time in four games.

ARKANSAS 5, FLORIDA 2

OMAHA, Neb. — Isaiah Campbell limited Florida to two hits over 5 1/3 innings, Arkansas scored four times in five innings against first-round draft pick Brady Singer, and the Razorbacks earned a spot in the College World Series finals with a 5-2 win over the defending champion Gators on Friday night.

Campbell more than atoned for his worst performance of the season when he faced the Gators in the teams' Southeastern Conference opening series in March. He was at his best this time, matching his career high with eight strikeouts and leaving with a 5-2 lead.

Arkansas (47-19) has never gone to the CWS finals since the NCAA Tournament went to its current structure in 1999. The Razorbacks were runner-up in 1979 in their only appearance in a championship game.

Florida (49-21), the No. 1 overall seed, lost for the first time in eight NCAA elimination games. The Gators were looking to get to the finals for the second straight year and fourth time since 2005.

Casey Martin went 4 for 5 and Dominic Fletcher homered for the second straight game to lead the Razorbacks' offense against Singer (12-3) and Tommy Mace.

The Gators managed only three hits against Campbell (5-6), Jake Reindl and Matt Cronin — the fourth time this season they were held to three or fewer and first since May 13.

Campbell's performance was the highlight so far in his comeback from bone spurs in his right (throwing) elbow, which forced him to take a medical redshirt in 2017. The 6-foot-4, 225-pound junior's fastball touched the mid-90s and his slider mid-80s, and he struck out six of the first nine Florida batters and held the Gators hitless until there was one out in the fourth.

Austin Langworthy laced a ball over shortstop for the Gators' first hit, Campbell hit Blake Reese with a pitch, and Brady Smith singled in Florida's first run. Another run came home on a wild pitch to cut it to 4-2.

Trade action slow on first night of NHL draft

By Stephen Whyno
Associated Press

DALLAS — Rasmus Dahlin went first overall to the Buffalo Sabres, Commissioner Gary Bettman was booed relentlessly by the crowd all night and trade chatter didn't amount to a whole lot of movement.

With the exception of one trade by the Stanley Cup champion Washington Capitals, the first round of the NHL draft went off without many surprises. Only two players and a handful of picks were traded Friday night, leaving general managers hoping for more on Day Two.

"That was kind of a boring first day or first round," Philadelphia Flyers GM Ron Hextall said. "It's not typical for this day."

The Sabres picking Dahlin at No. 1 and the Carolina Hurricanes taking Russian winger Andrei Svechnikov at No. 2 got the draft itself off to a predictable start. Montreal taking Finnish center Jesperi Kotkaniemi third and Arizona going a bit off the board with center Barrett Hayton fifth allowed high-scoring Czech winger Filip Zadina to fall to Detroit with the sixth pick.

"I'm telling my agent if they will pass on me, I will fill their net with the puck," Zadina said. "I want to prove them that they have done, like, bad decision."

30. Detroit (from Vegas), Joe Veleno, C, Saint John (QMJHL).
31. Washington, Alexander Alexeyev, D, Red Deer (WHL).

Not a whole lot of big decisions happened Friday night at American Airlines Center. The Sabres taking Dahlin was automatic since they won the draft lottery in April, and the 18-year-old wore a Buffalo Bills hat Friday prior to the selection. Svechnikov got to try on the Hurricanes' draft hat before he was the No. 2 pick just as general manager Don Waddell acknowledged recently.

Dahlin is the second Swedish player to be taken No. 1 and the first since Mats Sundin in 1989. Sundin went on to a Hall of Fame career.

"It's pretty crazy actually," Dahlin said. "He's a legend in the hockey world. It's kind of weird but amazing."

GMs found it weird that there weren't more trades consummated. A few teams swapped picks late in the first round, but the big shakeup came a half-hour before the draft when the Capitals traded veteran defenseman Brooks Orpik and backup goaltender Philipp Grubauer to the Colorado Avalanche for a second-round pick.

The trade netted Washington the 47th pick but most importantly cleared significant salary-cap space to attempt to re-sign pending free agent defensemen John Carlson and Michal Kempny. MacLellan said he was close to getting a deal done with Carlson, so he had to prepare.

"It's hard to do, but we had to create some room to sign some players," MacLellan said.

Grubauer was the first domino to fall in what could be a fascinating goaltending market. Ottawa's Craig Anderson is reportedly available, and Columbus might have to make a decision on Sergei Bobrovsky if like winger Artemi Panarin the two-time Vezina winner isn't willing to talk about a contract extension with just a year left before free agency.

The Capitals and Hurricanes discussed a trade for Grubauer that would've given Washington a higher second-round pick, but MacLellan opted to send the 26-year-old German to the Western Conference rather than giftwrap him for a division rival, and Colorado's Joe Sakic was willing to take on Orpik's salary to get Grubauer.

Northern head coach Eric Neatherlin said Mid City brought out the best in his team, as it was the only squad to challenge his boys during the District 3 Tournament.

Mid City pounced on Northern with three first-inning runs, highlighted by an RBI single from Aaron Bell.

Leading 3-1, Mid City added to its advantage in the second inning when Bell drew a bases loaded walk for his second RBI in as many innings.

Mid City took a 6-1 lead in the top of the third as Brady Young cracked a line-drive double to center, and Hernandez followed with an RBI single to plate Young.

But the game turned in the bottom of third when Northern erupted for four runs to pull within one run.

Northern took advantage of four Mid City errors in the stanza and got a run-scoring single from Gavin Shubert.

Northern tied the game at 6 in the fourth when Ean Shadden doubled home Collie. Shadden was 2-for-4 with two RBI.

Young scored on an error in the top of the fifth to give Mid City the lead again before Northern soared ahead with three runs in the bottom half.

Mid City head coach Lee Martin was not only proud of his team for its fight against Northern Friday, but liked how his boys battled back to defeat Eastern 10-0 in the loser's bracket final Thursday. Martin said Eastern was a very tough team.

MISSIONS 3, ROCKHOUNDS 0
At Nelson Wolff Stadium, San Antonio

TOP HITTERS: Fernando Tatis Jr. led San Antonio by going 3-for-4 with a home run, RBI and two runs scored. Teammate Josh Naylor was 2-for-4 with an RBI.

TOP PITCHERS: San Antonio starter Jerry Keel picked up his sixth win by holding the RockHounds to three hits with three walks and five strikeouts over 7 1/3 shutout innings.

HIGHLIGHTS: Tatis gave San Antonio a 1-0 lead when he hit a solo home run in the third inning. ... The Missions gave Keel some cushion in the fifth when Naylor hit an RBI single and then scored another run by a throwing error by center fielder Skye Bolt.

NOTES: The RockHounds were held to just three hits for the game and could not get a runner on base against the Missions' bullpen. ... This is the fourth shutout loss for Midland this season. ... San Antonio has taken the first two games of this four-game series and the teams will meet again at 7:05 p.m. today.

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Minor threw six solid innings, Shin-Soo Choo homered and the Texas Rangers beat the Minnesota Twins 8-1 on Friday night for their sixth consecutive victory.

Bouncing back from a rough May, Minor (5-4) has thrown three straight quality starts for the first time since throwing six straight in 2014 for Atlanta. He allowed one run and three hits, lowering his ERA for June to 2.84.

Choo's two-run shot off Fernando Romero (3-3) made it 4-0 in the fifth. It was his second homer on Texas' six-game road trip.

Minor faced the minimum number of batters through five innings despite a first-inning single by Brian Dozier to deep left. Dozier tried to stretch for second, but Joey Gallo had a good jump and easily threw him out to end the inning. Minor retired his next 12 batters before Max Kepler doubled to lead off the bottom of the sixth.

Texas Rangers' Ronald Guzman slides behind Minnesota Twins catcher Mitch Garver to score on a single by Shin-Soo Choo during the ninth inning of a game Friday in Minneapolis. The Rangers won 8-1.

Texas opened the fourth with three straight singles off Romero, including a run-scoring hit up the middle by Adrian Beltre. Rougned Odor then drove in Nomar Mazara with a fielder's choice.

The Twins finally broke through in the sixth when Joe Mauer's one-out double scored Kepler, putting runners on second and third. But Minor retired Eddie Rosario and Dozier on popups, ending the threat.

Chris Martin got three outs before Jesse Chavez finished for his first save. Choo, Mazara and Beltre each drove in runs off Matt Belisle in the ninth.

Herrera robs HR, triples in run as Royals beat Astros 1-0

By Kristie Rieken

HOUSTON — Royals rookie Rosell Herrera kept the game scoreless with a home-run robbery in the eighth inning and hit an RBI triple in the ninth, and struggling Kansas City beat the Houston Astros 1-0 on Friday night.

Herrera helped the Royals end a nine-game skid by bringing back Alex Bregman's would-be homer. The right fielder reached over the short outfield wall to snag the first out in the eighth.

Adalberto Mondesi then singled off Ken Giles (0-2) to start the ninth, stole second and took third on a flyout by Whit Merrifield. Herrera then sent a ball to center field to score Mondesi and make it 1-0.

Herrera also had a double and is batting .278 in five games since being cut by Cincinnati and acquired by the Royals.

Danny Duffy pitched six innings of two-hit ball for the Royals, and the bullpen didn't allow another knock. Justin Grimm (1-2) pitched a scoreless eighth and Tim Hill threw a perfect ninth for his first save.

Houston was shut out for the first time since May 11. They still had several opportunities to score because of seven walks but went 0 for 9 with runners in scoring position.

Houston starter Dallas Keuchel pitched six strong innings. He allowed six hits and struck out six, while Duffy fanned seven after being tagged for seven runs in six innings of a loss to the Astros on Saturday.

It was a much-needed win for the Royals, who just wrapped an 0-8 homestand and had lost 15 of their last 16 entering Friday's game.

Alcides Escobar started in center field Friday, snapping a streak of 407 straight starts at shortstop dating to Sept. 26, 2015. That streak was the longest in Royals history and the longest active streak in the majors. It's the first time he's played a position other than shortstop since he joined the Royals in 2011 and the sixth time in his career he's played in the outfield, after appearing in five games there for the Brewers in 2010.

The Royals started Mondesi at shortstop instead. They have said Escobar will also see time at second and third base this season.

"I just think that the time was right," manager Ned Yost said. "He knows that his next career move is probably going to be a utility-type player ... and he's anxious to start showing people that he can handle it."

Escobar, who entered the game 2 for 28, had two hits including a double.

Kevin McCarthy took over for Duffy in the seventh and issued consecutive walks to Evan Gattis and Marwin Gonzalez. Pinch-hitter Tony Kemp then grounded into a force out that left Gattis out at third. But the Astros loaded the bases when pinch-hitter Tyler White reached on a fielder's choice.

Houston came away empty-handed when George Springer grounded into a double play.

Salvador Perez doubled with one out in the eighth and Houston intentionally walked Alex Gordon before Alcides Escobar drew a walk to load the bases. The game remained scoreless when Hector Rondon struck out Paulo Orlando to end the inning.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

American League

RAYS 2, YANKEES 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Six Tampa Bay pitchers combined on a five-hitter, and Tampa Bay beat New York.

Utilizing a bullpen day, the Rays improved to 14-31 against teams with a .500 or better record with the victory over the team with the majors' best record.

Winner Ryan Yarbrough (6-3) entered in the second and allowed one hit in 3 1/3 scoreless innings. Sergio Romo worked the ninth for his fifth save in nine chances.

Willy Adames put the Rays ahead 1-0 with a run-scoring single off CC Sabathia (4-3) in the fourth. Sabathia allowed two runs and nine hits in 5 1/3 innings.

INDIANS 10, TIGERS 0

CLEVELAND — Rookie Shane Bieber struck out nine in a career-high seven innings, Yonder Alonso hit a grand slam and Cleveland beat Detroit for its fifth straight victory.

Edwin Encarnacion also connected for Cleveland, which leads second-place Detroit by six games in the AL Central. Encarnacion finished with three RBIs, and Francisco Lindor added a solo shot.

The 23-year-old Bieber (2-0) allowed four hits and walked one in his third major league start. The Tigers only pushed two runners past first base in his 97-pitch gem, stranding them both at third.

Bieber became the third Indians pitcher with six or more strikeouts in his first three big league appearances, joining Herb Score (eight in 1955) and Luis Tiant (three in 1964).

Tigers right-hander Mike Fiers (5-4) surrendered four runs in five innings. He has one win in his last seven starts.

ATHLETICS 11, WHITE SOX 2, FIRST GAME
WHITE SOX 6, ATHLETICS 4, SECOND GAME

CHICAGO — Lucas Giolito (5-7) pitched into the eighth inning before Xavier Cedeno worked out of a jam, and Chicago snapped an eight-game losing streak by beating Oakland to salvage a doubleheader split.

The White Sox bounced back after getting pounded behind a pair of three-run homers by Franklin Barreto in the first game. They stopped their worst skid since a nine-game rut last July and ended Oakland's season-high win streak at five.

Joakim Soria retired all three batters in the ninth for his 11th save in 13 opportunities. Chris Bassitt (0-3) got tagged for five runs and six hits in 5 1/3 innings in the late game. Barreto connected against James Shields (2-9) to cap a four-run second inning and off Luis Avilan in the eighth. Oakland's Sean Manaea (7-6) went seven innings, allowing one run and five hits.

RED SOX 14, MARINERS 10

BOSTON — J.D. Martinez homered and drove in five, and Boston rallied from a five-run deficit to beat Seattle despite a monster game from Nelson Cruz.

Cruz had a pair of three-run homers and drove in seven, but the Mariners still lost their season-worst fifth straight game, including three earlier this week at Yankee Stadium. Seattle led 4-0 and 10-5 before a wild Red Sox rally fueled by RBIs from eight different players.

Martinez went 4 for 5, including a two-run homer in the sixth and two doubles.

Reliever Matt Barnes (1-2) got the win with one scoreless inning. Juan Nicasio (1-4) took the loss, allowing five runs on four hits in one-third of a lousy seventh inning.

National League

DODGERS 5, METS 2

NEW YORK — Cody Bellinger hit a grand slam to break a scoreless tie in the sixth inning and the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the sinking New York Mets 5-2 on Friday night behind Alex Wood's effective pitching.

Yasiel Puig added a solo home run in the ninth, and the defending NL champions won their 10th straight against the Mets dating to May 2016. Los Angeles has outscored New York 75-20 in those games, winning each of the past eight by at least three runs — a first in Dodgers history against any opponent, according to STATS.

Wood (3-5) outdueled Zack Wheeler (2-6), allowing two runs and six hits in six innings to win his second consecutive start. The left-hander with the funky delivery struck out seven and walked one.

Kenley Jansen fanned two in a perfect ninth for his 19th save.

REDS 6, CUBS 3

CINCINNATI — Eugenio Suarez hit a go-ahead homer off Jose Quintana in the fifth inning, and Cincinnati held on for its fifth straight victory.

The Reds have won the first two games in the series, a recent rarity in the rivalry. It's only the second time in the last two years that they've won back-to-back games in a series against the Cubs. Chicago is 43-21 against Cincinnati over the last four seasons.

Suarez's two-run shot in the fifth inning off Quintana (5-6) gave him a team-high 16 homers and put the Reds ahead 4-3.

Javier Baez drove in a run with a bunt single off Luis Castillo (5-8), and Kyle Schwarber followed with a two-run homer, his third in four games. Castillo went 5 2/3 innings for his first victory since May 24, ending a streak of four straight losses.

Raisel Iglesias retired the side in the ninth for his 12th save in 14 chances.

BREWERS 2, CARDINALS 1

MILWAUKEE — Jones Aguilar homered to break up rookie Jack Flaherty's no-hit bid in the seventh inning, then homered again in the ninth to lift Milwaukee over St. Louis. Both teams got just three hits. The benches and bullpens briefly cleared in the eighth after Eric Sogard slid into St. Louis shortstop Yairo Munoz, who caught a wide throw on a bunt play in the eighth.

Cardinals reliever Bud Norris (3-2) started the ninth by striking out Travis Shaw. Aguilar followed with a drive an opposite-field drive to right for his 16th home run.

Corey Knebel (1-0) pitched the ninth for the NL Central leaders.

PHILLIES 12, NATIONALS 2

WASHINGTON — Odubel Herrera homered for the fifth straight game and finished with four hits, helping Philadelphia rout Washington.

Herrera hit a tiebreaking two-run shot in the third for his 13th homer, matching the club record for consecutive games with a long ball. He has connected in six of his last seven overall.

Herrera is hitting .472 (17 for 36) with six homers, 11 runs and 10 RBIs in his last eight games.

Carlos Santana homered and drove in four runs for Philadelphia, which has won five of six. Santana delivered a two-run single in the first, a two-run homer in the sixth and walked twice.

Zach Eflin (5-2) allowed baserunners in every inning except the first, but limited the damage to two runs over five innings to win his fourth straight start.

Washington's Tanner Roark (3-8) gave up six runs in 4 1/3 innings.

DIAMONDBACKS 2, PIRATES 1, 13 INNINGS

PITTSBURGH — Ketel Marte's two-out single in the 13th inning led Arizona to a victory over Pittsburgh.

Marte's liner into center field off Tyler Glasnow (1-2) scored Jon Jay from second base as the NL West-leading Diamondbacks won for the fourth time in five games. Jay walked to start the rally, then advanced to second on a two-out wild pitch before Marte followed an intentional walk to David Peralta with his winning hit.

Andrew Chafin (1-0) pitched one scoreless inning for the win, and T.J. McFarland notched the first save of his six-year career with a perfect 13th. The game was scoreless until both teams scored an unearned run in the 11th following a pitcher's duel between Arizona's Patrick Corbin and Pittsburgh's Ivan Nova.

ROCKIES 11, MARLINS 3

DENVER — Jon Gray struck out 12 in seven dominant innings, Nolan Arenado homered in a six-run fourth, and Colorado won its fourth in a row by beating Miami.

It was Gray's 12th career 10-plus strikeout game and the fourth this season. He had at least two strikeouts in five of his innings, including striking out the side in the sixth. Gray (7-7) walked none and withstood a solo homer in the third by Derek Dietrich, who drove a 2-0 pitch the opposite way into the left-field bleachers.

Arenado had three hits, including his team-leading 17th homer, a two-run drive. Tom Murphy had two doubles among his three hits and two RBIs.

to return to the court. The 6-foot-7 forward reportedly grew upset that the Spurs had questioned his rehabilitation process.

The Spurs listed him as out on their injury reports for much of the year citing "injury management." While San Antonio was in the playoffs, losing in the first round to eventual repeat champion Golden State, Leonard was rehabbing in New York — which meant that Spurs coach Gregg Popovich, when asked about the situation, deferred all comment to "Kawhi and his group."

"I think all of us would wish that things would have gone differently," Buford said.

The Spurs held a team meeting late in the season where veterans, led by Tony Parker, implored Leonard to return. Leonard said he was unable to due to the injury.

In the 2016-17 season, Leonard averaged a career-best 25.5 points and was third in the MVP voting. The 2014 NBA Finals MVP and two-time NBA defensive player of the year is due just over $20 million next season, and can become a free agent in the summer of 2019. He is eligible to sign a $220 million extension with San Antonio.

He is reportedly willing to walk away from that to play elsewhere, possibly in Los Angeles. "I don't know that timing is a factor in this from today ... he's under contract for another year, our goal is to keep him as part of our program for a long time," Buford said.

MAVS

star Manu Ginobili, Carlisle stopped.

"I really feel it's important that we shouldn't try to compare this guy to anybody," Carlisle said Friday during an introductory news conference that included Doncic and second-round pick Jalen Brunson, who won two NCAA titles in three years at Villanova. "Let him be himself. Let his game takes its own form."

Doncic figures to shape the future of the Mavericks in some form with Dallas coming off consecutive losing seasons for the first time since the second of Nowitzki's two difficult years at the start of his career.

Those 1990s-era Mavericks had 10 straight losing seasons. Combine the drafting of Doncic with last year's ninth overall pick in point guard Dennis Smith Jr. and a still-young leading scorer in Harrison Barnes, and Carlisle expects the losing to stop soon, if not this coming season.

"Last night was symbolic to me that it was kind of a defining moment in this rebuild," said Carlisle, who had just one losing season as a coach before the current Dallas slide. "We're going propel forward with the idea that we've got to start winning games."

Just as he did last year with Smith, Carlisle is declaring Doncic a starter, which means the opening night lineup will have a teenager for the second straight year. Youth partly explains a two-year record of 57-107, including the 24-58 mark last season that landed Dallas the fifth pick before the draft-night trade with Atlanta on Thursday.

Another explanation was an unusually large number of undrafted players, including a young German in Maxi Kleber who grew up watching his countryman become the 2007 MVP and 2011 NBA Finals MVP.

The Mavericks haven't won a playoff series since taking their only title in 2011, and have missed the postseason three of the past six seasons coming off a 12-year playoff streak. Doncic might only get one chance to get Dallas back on track with Nowitzki, the 13-time All-Star who has hinted that 40 is a nice round number as a retirement age.

If this is it for Nowitzki, Nelson sees a trio in Barnes, Smith and Doncic that reminds him of Michael Finley mentoring Nowitzki and point guard Steve Nash and helping the Mavericks end a 10-year playoff drought in 2001.

"Michael Finley was our Harrison Barnes back in the day," Nelson said. "We feel like we've got that here in a different form. There's just some really cool elements to this that take me back and remind me about what it was like 20 years ago when we were watching these young guys."

Just don't remind Nelson about the Nowitzki-Bird comparisons.

PGA Tour: Brian Harman takes 1-shot lead in Travelers

By Pat Eaton-Robb

John Wolfe/Hartford Courant via AP

Brian Harman watches his tee shot on the sixth hole Friday during the second round of the Travelers Championship golf tournament at TPC River Highlands in Cromwell, Conn.

CROMWELL, Conn. — Brian Harman shot a 4-under 66 on Friday to move to 10-under par and watched that hold up for the second-round lead in the Travelers Championship, thanks in part to a 10-second rule.

Harman finished a stroke ahead of Matt Jones and first round co-leader Zach Johnson, who lost a stroke during his round of 68 when his birdie putt hung on the lip of the cup at the third hole for longer than the maximum allowed 10 seconds before falling in, giving him a par.

"After 10 seconds, the ball was moving and at that point even if the ball is moving, It's deemed to be at rest, because it's on the lip," Johnson said. "Don't ask me why, but that's just the way it is."

Harman had his short game working for the second consecutive day, taking 26 putts after needing only 23 during the first round.

"The putter has been really good so far, but I've been in position a lot," he said. "I've had a lot of good looks at it. I'm just able to put a little pressure on the course right now, which is nice."

Jones hit 16 of 18 greens for the second consecutive day, following up his first round 65 with a 66.

Bryson DeChambeau (66), Paul Casey (67) and Russell Henley (65) were two strokes back going into the weekend.

But Johnson, who started on the 10th tee, had the day's most interesting round, which included just two birdies, but one amazing par save. He hit the ball into the TPC River Highland's signature lake on No. 17, dropped across the water near the 16th tee box and then put his third shot within 8 feet of the hole from 234 yards away.

"You can't hit that shot and then not make that putt," he said. "It felt good to get away with that four. That's as good an up and down as I've ever witnessed or performed."

Lanto Griffin and two-time Travelers champion Bubba Watson were at even par coming into Friday.

But both shot a 63 to move into contention heading into the weekend, three shots behind the leader. Watson jump started his round with an eagle on his third hole, the par-5 13th.

"I had some mental mistakes yesterday, and then I didn't make some putts," said Watson. "Today I started out hotter. I made a good shot on 11, our second hole, made the putt, making a solid par putt on 12, and then that freed me up a little bit. Gave me some confidence going into the next hole where I made the eagle."

Rory McIlroy also is at 7 under after a 69. McIlroy, Watson and Justin Thomas (5 under) were grouped together Thursday and Friday, drawing large galleries.

"I definitely helps, Thomas said. "It's fun playing with good friends. You definitely get more momentum when guys are playing well. I obviously couldn't get a whole lot of momentum out there. I was kind of hovering around 1- or 2-under. It was pretty much just Bubba today. Rory didn't play great either and both of us definitely could have had a lot lower rounds"

Defending champion Jordan Spieth, tied with Johnson after an opeping 63, had a 73 to drop into a tie for 25th at 4 under. His round, which started on the back nine, included a triple bogey on the par-5 13th hole and an eagle on par-5 sixth, when he put his second shot within 2 feet of the hole from 276 yards away.

"I don't go to the range after 63s very often, and I was there for an hour yesterday trying to figure out the golf swing," he said. "So it's not like things are on. Sometimes it can get disguised by rounds, but it's not far off. It really is close."

Masters champion Patrick Reed, coming off a fourth-place finish in the U.S. Open, shot a 67 to miss the cut by a shot at minus-1.

Brazil's Neymar, top, celebrates with teammate Douglas Costa on Friday after scoring his side's second goal during the group E match between Brazil and Costa Rica at the 2018 soccer World Cup in the St. Petersburg Stadium in St. Petersburg, Russia.

WORLD CUP ROUNDUP

BRAZIL 2, COSTA RICA 0

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia — After more than 90 minutes of aggravation and exasperation, Neymar and Brazil finally broke through Costa Rica's smothering defense.

Philippe Coutinho scored in the first minute of stoppage time, and Neymar followed six minutes later to give Brazil a 2-0 victory over Costa Rica on Friday at the World Cup.

Unlike Argentina and Lionel Messi, Brazil is still in a good position to advance to the round of 16. Costa Rica has been eliminated.

"The responsibility is huge when you are playing for the national team," Coutinho said. "You have to be mentally strong from the beginning until the end. We fought until the end and we were rewarded."

Neymar dropped to his knees after the final whistle, sobbing in his hands as his teammates surrounded him and then lifted him off the ground.

"We know he had a difficult injury, he went through a very bad patch," Coutinho said through a translator, referring to Neymar breaking a bone in his right foot four months ago. "But his joy at being on the pitch is contagious."

A few minutes before the end, Neymar flopped backward to initially earn a penalty, but the contact was so exaggerated that the referee reversed the call after using video review. Neymar then angrily punched the ball a short time later as Costa Rica's players tried to waste time. It earned Brazil's biggest star a yellow card.

"The joy, the satisfaction and the pride of representing the national team is a lot," Brazil coach Tite said, defending Neymar. "He has the responsibility, the pressure. Everyone shows it in their own way."

Neymar seemed panicked for most of the second half as his shots sailed over the bar or simply missed the mark, and he complained over nearly every call. In danger of ending in a draw, Brazil seemed nervous but composed itself through the seven minutes of injury time.

Coutinho was first to get the ball past goalkeeper Keylor Navas. Rising superbly to meet a header from Marcelo's cross, Roberto Firmino nodded the ball down to striker Gabriel Jesus, who then flicked it to a sprinting Coutinho in the penalty area.

In the seventh minute of injury time, Douglas Costa whipped in a cross from the right and Neymar deftly tapped it into the net.

Both Firmino and Costa had come on as substitutes in the second half.

NIGERIA 2, ICELAND 0

VOLGOGRAD, Russia — Ahmed Musa gave Nigeria its first win at this year's World Cup, and gave Argentina a gift.

Musa scored two second-half goals to help the Nigerians beat Iceland 2-0 Friday and move into second place in the group behind already-qualified Croatia.

Nigeria will face Argentina in its final group match on Tuesday in St. Petersburg. If Nigeria wins, it will advance to the round of 16. But if Argentina claims all three points, it can still advance depending on the result of the other match between Croatia and Iceland.

Musa, Nigeria's all-time leading World Cup scorer with four goals, has played well against Argentina before. His two previous goals came at the 2014 tournament in Brazil in a group match against the two-time champions.

"It's possible I'm going to score another two goals," the 25-year-old Musa said.

On Friday, Musa gave Nigeria the lead in the 49th minute after Victor Moses sprinted deep into the Iceland half and curled a cross to the near post. Musa deftly controlled the ball before slamming it past Iceland goalkeeper Hannes Halldorsson on the half-volley.

Nigeria nearly doubled its lead on several occasions, but Musa made it happen in the 75th minute. He picked up the ball on the left side of the Iceland penalty area, mazed his way past Halldorsson and picked his spot in the Iceland goal.

"I think the control made it more perfect for me," said Musa, who hinted he wants to leave Premier League club Leicester and play for CSKA Moscow.

Iceland, the smallest nation ever to compete in the World Cup, was not as effective as it had been against Argentina when it earned a surprise 1-1 draw.

Still, the European champion quarterfinalists had a chance to get one back but Gylfi Sigurdsson sent a penalty kick over the Nigeria bar in the 83rd minute. The penalty was awarded after a video review showed that Alfred Finnbogason had been brought down by Tyronne Ebuehi.

SWITZERLAND 2, SERBIA 1

KALININGRAD, Russia — Albania's national flag was at the center of Switzerland's 2-1 victory over Serbia on Friday at the World Cup.

Granit Xhaka and Xherdan Shaqiri celebrated their goals by making a nationalist symbol of their ethnic Albanian heritage.

Both players put their open hands together with their thumbs locked and fingers outstretched to make what looks like the double-headed eagle displayed on Albania's flag. The thumbs represent the heads of the two eagles, while the fingers look like the feathers.

"I think about this, I don't want to speak," said Shaqiri, who also took off his shirt after scoring. "In football, you have always emotions. You can see what I did, and it's just emotion, and I'm just happy to have scored the goal. I did it, and we don't have to speak about this."

The gesture is likely to inflame tensions among Serb nationalists and ethnic Albanians.

Shaqiri was born in Kosovo, the former Serbian province that declared independence in 2008. Serbia doesn't recognize Kosovo's independence and relations between the two countries remain tense. Xhaka's parents are originally from Kosovo and they are of Albanian heritage. His brother plays for Albania's national team.

Years of war in Balkans sent many families to western European countries, including Switzerland. The Swiss have dozens of ethnic Albanians in their national soccer program.

Serbia's players did not react to the eagle gestures at Kaliningrad Stadium.

"I don't have any comments," Serbia coach Mladen Krstajic said. "I don't deal with these things. I am a man of sports, and this is what I'm going to stay being."

In the tournament's first come-from-behind victory, Xhaka made it 1-1 in the 52nd minute with a powerful shot through a crowded penalty area. Shaqiri added the other in injury time after running past the Serbian defense.

Their celebrations were emotional and could overshadow Switzerland's victory.

"You should never mix politics and football. You should always show respect," Switzerland coach Vladimir Petkovic said. "It's a wonderful atmosphere and a positive experience and that's what football should be about."

Aleksandar Mitrovic scored for Serbia with a header in the fifth minute.

The win puts Switzerland into second place in Group E with four points, the same as Brazil. The Swiss will advance to the round of 16 if they beat Costa Rica on Wednesday in Nizhny Novgorod. Serbia will face Brazil in Moscow at the same time.

Serbia had chances to score more before halftime. Mitrovic came close in the 19th minute when he controlled a cross from Branislav Ivanovic on his chest and sent a bicycle kick over the bar.

Back at Sonoma, Truex works to build momentum

By David Brandt
Associated Press

Martin Truex Jr.'s win at Pocono three weeks ago served notice that this year's points race might be more than a two-man showdown between Kyle Busch and Kevin Harvick.

Now NASCAR's defending champion is back at Sonoma Raceway, where he's had plenty of success.

Truex won at Sonoma in 2013 and led several laps of last year's road race before engine trouble sidelined him with a disappointing finish. The 37-year-old is one who enjoys switching to road courses — as opposed to the usual steady diet of ovals — and hopes it can help him vault closer to Busch and Harvick in the points standings.

"Any time you enjoy a place and have some success, it seems like the success just comes more and more because you really enjoy it and focus in on it," Truex said. "For me, I just like it here. It's become a good track for me."

Truex is currently sixth in the standings, just behind Brad Keselowski and Clint Bowyer. He's already qualified for the playoffs because of his two victories, so now his team's trying to figure out how to be more consistent.

The past two races have been a good microcosm of the up-and-down season. One week after winning at Pocono , Truex finished 18th at Michigan.

"We'd like to just get a little more consistent," Truex said. "We've had a few bad races throughout the season. We've been really fast — we've got those two wins. But we haven't had as many stage points. Last year we did a good job at winning stages and gathering a lot of points for the playoffs. That's something we've lacked this year and something we're focused on."

Truex said he doesn't expect Busch or Harvick to be any less successful at Sonoma because of the switch to a road course. The two have combined to win nine of 15 races so far this season.

"If you look at it those guys are really good on road courses as well," Truex said. "They've got good numbers here."

Truex said he feels his team isn't far off from where it was last season, when he won eight races and captured his first championship. He praised both Busch and Harvick for great seasons and said his team's working to figure out how to match them.

"We're off a tick from where we were and those guys are just a tick better," Truex said.

CONGER

From 1B

Yenzer and current MHS offensive coordinator Ector Lopez said that Conger had such an influence over the offense that he had the final say on whether a newly designed play could be run.

However, the modest Conger had a different perspective on the matter.

"That's kind of a little bit distorted because (Yenzer) would always say 'You're going to run it, you have to figure out a way to block it,'" Conger quipped.

Yenzer said Conger was a teacher at heart. Yenzer said Conger's offensive line units were always well coached, he inspired his kids to play hard for him and they tended to overachieve beyond their talent level.

Conger said the most important trait he tried to instill in his linemen was mental toughness.

"The biggest thing when it comes to that offensive line is you are unrecognized," Conger said. "You probably have the most unselfish position on the football team. I always told them this, 'There's only two people watching you, me and your mother. And when the yellow flag comes out, everybody knows you did it.'"

At West Texas State, Conger coached both current MHS head coach Tim Anuszkiewicz and former Lee head coach James Morton as running backs in pass protection drills. Anuszkiewicz called Conger the voice of reason within the program and an icon to MHS football.

"He brought a lot of wisdom to the program," Anuszkiewicz said.

After Yenzer retired, Conger stepped away from coaching to work with special ed students at Lee Freshman, which he called a rewarding experience.

"You have to build a relationship with them because I think that's what it is all about," Conger said. "You build that relationship so you can help them. And in turn, they help you. It's ironic because there's a lot of things you learn about yourself. I really thoroughly enjoyed it."

Conger said he couldn't have coached for 32 years without the help of his wife Cristi.

"I was blessed, my wife was so good," Conger said. "She basically raised our daughters (Sydney and Regan) in a lot of these times when I was out. I was out raising other people's kids and she was raising ours essentially."

The Rev. Jon Stasney, left, one of the founders of Midland Habitat for Humanity, receives a photograph of the nonprofit's 150th home during the home's dedication on June 12. Presenting the framed photo is the new homeowners. The nonprofit that was founded in 1991 has had success because of the employees of local companies and organizations and other volunteers who donate their time and resources, according to Executive Director Alynda Best. Workers on some of this year's projects were employees or volunteers from: ConocoPhillips, FTS International, Keller Williams Realty, Laredo Petroleum, Occidental Petroleum, Parsley Energy, Pioneer Natural Resources, PhyTEx Rehabilitation & Sports Medicine Associates, Reliance Energy, Young Professionals Network and University of Texas of the Permian Basin.
