State spending up despite austerity plan

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — For the third month in a row since Gov. Mark White announced his austerity plan, state spending increased in May, Comptroller Bob Bullock announced Monday.

White's chief budget officer, however, said he was pleased with some of the trends in Bullock's spending report, adding that he does not expect to see an absolute reduction until "sometime in the late summer or early fall."

Bullock's office cleared $2.36 billion in checks in May, up 80.5 percent from the September-through-February average of $1.3 billion. Much of that increase came because of large payments for Texas schools, refinancing of veterans land bonds and payments on an unemployment debt.

White asked all state agencies and universities to institute a 13-percent spending reduction plan effective March 1 in response to Bullock's projection that falling oil prices would leave the state $1.3 billion short by the Aug. 31, 1987 end of the current fiscal period. Since then, spending has averaged almost $1.9 billion per month, up 41.5 percent from the monthly average in the six preceeding months of the fiscal year.

For the general revenue fund, the state's main checking account towards which White had targetted his reduction plans, spending in May increased 2.6 percent. Bullock's office cleared $404.1 million in checks from general revenue last month, compared to the six-month average of $393.8 millon.

Since March 1, general revenue spending has exceeded the average by a total of $64.5 million. To achieve the $1.3 billion savings by Aug. 31, 1987, monthly spending must average $302.8 million over the next 15 months.

At the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, May spending for all funds totalled about $500,000, up 9.8 percent from the September-through-February average. General revenue expenditures jumped 8.1 percent above the six-month average.

In May, UTPB showed general revenue increases in payroll, office leases, travel and utilities. Since March 1, UTPB general revenue spending has increased in all of White's targetted areas except personal services contracts and capital outlay. The number of full-time, non-student employees paid from general revenue accounts has increased 26.1 percent with the addition of 52 workers.

Bill Hamilton, White's budget director, said agencies have told him they can cut spending by $615 million to $625 million by the end of the biennium. Although state expenditures increased again in May, Hamilton said Bullock's report "shows some encouraging signs."

Eleven blacks killed in strike marking riot

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government said today 11 blacks were killed during and after a nationwide general strike marking the 10th anniversary of the Soweto uprising, but claimed its security clampdown prevented widespread disturbances.

Millions of blacks stayed away from their jobs Monday to mark the anniversary. Hundreds of companies and stores closed, and few blacks were on the streets of Johannesburg. This morning, blacks returned to work.

"Nowhere was there mass unrest," government spokesman Leon Mellet said today. "The incidents of violence were isolated."

Mellet, at a news conference in Pretoria, said four of the 11 blacks killed between daybreak Monday and daybreak today were shot by security forces, while the others were believed to have been killed by other blacks.

Excluding recent battles among blacks in squatter camps near Cape Town, it was one of the highest 24-hour unrest death tolls in the past two months.

Mellet said the extensive security operation Monday, which was accompanied by tough restrictions on news reporting, thwarted what he said were plans by the African National Congress guerrilla movement to create "mass disruption."

"It is now more clear than ever that the people of South Africa reject the ANC and its violence," he said. "However, the ANC will now become more desperate. For this reason, the security forces will continue to take the necessary measures to maintain law and order."

Before the government announced a ban on gatherings linked to the anniversary, anti-apartheid groups had planned rallies nationwide. There were unconfirmed reports that blacks planned a protest march in Soweto, and the ANC urged blacks to engage in civil disobedience Monday.

According to independent accounts, the political rallies all were called off and the only significant anniversary gatherings were church services. No widespread civil disobedience or marches were reported.

AT&T, striking union reach tentative pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and a union representing 156,000 striking telephone workers today reached a tentative settlement on a new contract, a union spokeswoman said.

Under the agreement, the strike by the Communications Workers of America could end as early as Sunday, said Rozanne Weissman, the union spokeswoman.

Details of the accord were not immediately available.

Ms. Weissman said the tentative national contract agreement was reaching during a bargaining session this morning.

The settlement, however, is still subject to the successful completion of separate bargaining agreements with six different AT&T units and ratification by CWA members. A midnight Saturday deadline has been set for wrapping up those negotiations.

Bargaining talks on the six separate agreements are continuing in New Jersey, she said.

Tax district's review board holds hearings

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

What's got the attention of property owners these days is taxes.

"More than anything, a lot of them are concerned with taxes that they'll pay more so than the value of property," said Chief Appraiser Roland Wilkinson of the Midland Central Appraisal District. "I think a lot of them think they will be paying more taxes, and that may be true. But the Review Board by law isn't allowed to address that issue."

The district's Review Board, which considers taxpayers' complaints on property values, is into a two-week session at the district's headquarters in Dellwood Mall at Illinois Avenue and Midkiff Road.

Charles Juni, a Midland consulting geologist, contested the values of his house at 1500 Douglas St. and other properties, but didn't get the satisfaction which he got from the Review Board last year.

"It looks like you're in pretty good shape," Review Board chairman Jim Rhotenberry told Juni.

Juni didn't complain about that. And he said he wasn't upset when values starting climbing during the recent boom, which has subsided. "I wasn't complaining on the way up," he said. "I'm complaining on the way down."

His real concern was taxes.

"The only thing the board can address is appraisals," Rhotenberry said. The tax rate and taxes are "solely dependent on what the taxing entities do." Appraisals by law are to be based on 100 percent of the fair-market value.

Basin thunderstorms stir little damage

From Staff and Wire Reports

Thunderstorms persisted across Texas today, while light showers replaced the high winds and torrential rains that visited the Midland-Odessa area Monday night.

Although winds gusted up to 61 miles per hour, a spokesman with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said he knew of no reports of damage as the result of the storms that apparently toppled power lines and uprooted trees in the the Dallas area.

Wind gusts there averaged 40 to 50 mph, and cool air from the storms dropped temperatures from 90 degrees to 68 degrees in less than hour, said Chris Sohl, a forecaster with the National Weather Service in Fort Worth.

Midland police and sheriff's departments said there were no reports of damage or injury caused by the heavy winds. A sheriff's department spokesman said, however, there were a few reported cases of television sets being blown out by lightning.

Senate may approve tax overhaul, preserve special breaks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, marching toward approval this week of a landmark overhaul of the federal tax code, appears ready to preserve scores of special tax breaks buried in the legislation when it was drafted by the Finance Committee.

Legislators also indicated today they were prepared to insert a provision that would allow only farmers to average their income over the three years to figure their taxes.

Currently, virtually all taxpayers can take advantage of income averaging. But the pending bill would do away with that practice.

Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the Finance Committee chairman, has indicated to farm state senators that he would not block an amendment for $350 million to preserve income averaging for farmers.

"The indication that we got was that it would be taken care of on this bill," Andrews said. He added that Packwood agreed after a separate amendment to create rural enterprise zones was withdrawn.

Packwood, meanwhile, told a League of Women Voters rally today that passage of the entire bill is likely late tonight or on Wednesday.

"We have momentum on our side," Packwood said.

If all the right things happen, "we'll give you the most significant tax reform for the betterment of America that you've seen in half a century," Packwood said.

After the Senate gives what is expected to be overwhelming approval to the bill, negotiators from the House and Senate will meet to draft compromise legislation. The House passed its version of the measure late last year.

Packwood said Monday that those negotiations will not begin until after Congress returns from its Fourth of July recess.

Through seven days of consideration, the legislation remains intact except for one amendment.

Last Friday, the Senate agreed to a move by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, removing a $50 million tax break for Union Oil Co. of California — Unocal.

Budget writers will continue talks, aim for Gramm-Rudman targets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate budget writers say they'll continue fiscal 1987 budget talks with the House even though President Reagan has rejected their latest compromise offer.

At the same time, lawmakers and the administration said they plan to work within a $144 billion deficit target mandated by the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law despite indications the Supreme Court is likely to strike down the statute's main enforcement provision.

The president's budget director, James C. Miller III, on Monday formally rejected the latest budget proposal by a bipartisan group of Senate budget writers. The plan would hold back an increase in military spending and some popular domestic programs unless Reagan approves a tax boost.

"We believe the great majority of the American people have made it clear they do not want their taxes raised — and the President has promised them that he will not do so," Miller said in a letter to Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M.

The letter reiterated the administration's position, widely rejected in Congress, that selling government holdings is the best way to raise money.

Domenici last week told other lawmakers it was time to "play hard ball" with the White House on the budget, and on Monday he brushed off the White House rejection.

"There's nothing new. There's nothing different. And it's about what I expected," he said in a statement.

Domenici planned to meet today with Rep. William H. Gray III, chairman of the House Budget Committee, to discuss the Senate offer. Gray has expressed reservations publicly, and House leaders refuse to support a tax boost unless Reagan does.

But budget aides, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said the two chairmen were making progress working out the differences in private talks.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said he would like to complete action on the spending plan before the the July 4th recess. Asked if the White House would get a budget to their liking, Dole said: "Probably not."

Budgeters already considering deficit law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even though the Supreme Court has yet to announce a ruling, congressional and administration budget officials already are charting next steps on meeting deficit-reduction targets without the full discipline of the Gramm-Rudman law.

"It makes it a lot tougher," Budget Director James C. Miller III conceded on Monday, responding to an ABC News account that the Supreme Court had decided, 7-2, to strike the central triggering mechanism of the new law.

Miller and other officials involved in the budget process said such a ruling had been widely anticipated and they had no reason to doubt the veracity of the ABC report.

Leaders cited two major options if the court does rule in such a fashion: meeting the deficit targets through a poltically difficult vote by Congress; or changing the Gramm-Rudman triggering mechanism to overcome constitutional objections.

Neither course was viewed as easy.

"What I personally fear is chaos," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., who was the chief House negotiator in drafting the Gramm-Rudman law, "(and) that there will be no action to reduce the deficit and we would be unable to pass some legislation to correct (the law)."

The law provides for a series of deficit-reduction steps, declining to a zero deficit — a balanced budget — by 1991. The target for fiscal 1987, which begins this Oct. 1, is $144 billion.

Meeting that target will require nearly $50 billion in spending cuts or tax increases, with the annual budget deficit now hovering at about $200 billion.

A fallback provision in the Gramm-Rudman law calls for Congress to vote to meet the measure's declining deficit steps, meaning introducing a bill to carry out the spending cuts needed to meet the target and sending it to the president for his signature.

But such a course — endorsed by the Reagan administration — would require tough spending decisions by lawmakers in an election year, the kind of decisions the automatic-cut mechanism might have circumvented.

Reagan would be willing to sign legislation carrying out the cuts, Miller said. And, "We would certainly hope they (Congress) would 'fess up to thier responsibilities under Gramm-Rudman" by passing such a measure, he told reporters.

"The president is thoroughly committed to the Gramm-Rudman process. ... Even if the Supreme Court were to toss out all of Gramm-Rudman on grounds of unconstitutionality, the president would still press for his program of reducing the deficit to zero over the five-year period," Miller added.

An alternative strategy being mentioned on Capitol Hill is to amend the Gramm-Rudman law to change the triggering mechanism.

The original law gave the power to carry out the mandated spending cuts to the comptroller general, an appointed official generally regarded as an employe of Congress.

To avoid separation-of-powers claims, proposals have been made to change the status of the comptroller general to require his nomination by the president and confirmation by the Senate — as other executive-branch officials. Another proposal would give the spending-cut powers directly to the White House Office of Management and Budget.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who along with Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., is an original sponsor of the law, said he favors changing the law to make the comptroller general a presidential appointee who cannot be fired by Congress.

"There'll be a Gramm-Rudman II," Gramm vowed. "I'm not about to let Congress off the hook on balancing the budget."

Gramm said if the high court finds a problem with the law, then "we'll go back and fix it."

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the apparent court decision could result in a new round of congressional wrangling. "I assume it means another battle on the debt ceiling," he said.

The original Gramm-Rudman bill was an amendment tacked onto 198[illegible] legislation to raise the debt ceiling to allow the government to borrow more money to finance its operations. Legislation to further raise the debt ceiling is expected to be before both chambers again shortly.

Since the Gramm-Rudman law took effect, there have been many cutbacks in government services — all part of an initial $11.7 billion spending cut ordered on March 1.

Just Monday, U.S. court officials said they were delaying new non-criminal trials at least until October because of a lack of funds.

Federal agencies have cut back on publications and in some cases employees' hours, national parks have reduced maintenance, Job Corps centers have closed in six states, and Congress has reduced its hours and its staff.

Gramm feels court's ruling delayed because of leak

HOUSTON (AP) — A news report that the U.S. Supreme Court would issue a ruling on the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget bill kept the court from doing so, one of the authors of the bill said.

"My guess is, given the leak, the Supreme Court is unhappy and is deciding to show the leaker by holding it up," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, told 750 people attending a Houston Chamber of Commerce luncheon on Monday.

The court had announced previously it would hand down three decisions Monday. But it announced only two, neither involving the balanced budget law.

"I' ve told the President and I've told the Sen. (Robert) Dole that if the Supreme Court strikes down significant provisons of Gramm-Rudman, there'll be a Gramm-Rudmann II. I'm not about to let Congress off the hook on balancing the budget," he said.

Dole, R-Kansas, is the Senate majority whip.

Gramm said if the high court finds problems with the bill, then "we'll go back and fix it."

ABC News reported Sunday that the court would announce in a 7-2 ruling Monday that the legislation violates the constitutional separation-of-powers doctrine.

The network had reported that the court was about to announce a decision striking down the law's provision giving important powers to the comptroller general, an officer of Congress.

The Gramm-Rudman law calls for eliminating the federal deficit gradually by 1991. If the deficit rises above yearly targets, automatic spending cuts go into effect. The comptroller general, who heads Congress' General Accounting Office, is in charge of ordering the across-the-board cuts.

Gramm, who referred to the ABC report as a rumor, said the problems with the comptroller general's role in the budget process would be easy to correct.

"To this point, the only challenge is the involvement of the comptroller," Gramm said. "If that's a problem, it's a problem with a 1921 law. We can correct that by simply repealing the offending provision."

A three-judge appellate panel said on Feb. 7 that, by calculating the precise amount of budget cuts for each federal agency and program, the comptroller general would be exercising "the sort of power normally conferred upon the executive."

Gramm said there is a fallback provision in the bill to get around using the comptroller. Congress also could amend the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921, which gives Congress the ability to remove the comptroller. That provision in the 1921 law creates the separation-of-powers problem, Gramm said.

In 1978, ABC carried leaked reports from the Supreme Court over a period of two weeks.

One was the court's ruling on a controversial New York case involving newspaper efforts to gain entry to pretrial proceedings. The high court determined

TAXES

WITHIN MIDLAND COUNTY, six taxing boards will be setting their 1986 tax rates this year. They are the City Council for the city of Midland, the Commissioners' Court for Midland County, the boards of trustees for the Midland and Greenwood Independent School Districts, the Midland College board of trustees, and the Midland Memorial Hospital's board of directors.

"I'm trying to keep them (taxes) down and keep them within reason," Juni said. "The bottom line is taxes are still going up."

Replied Rhotenberry: "There's no guarantee that taxes are going up."

"My income is decreasing, I'll assure you of that," Juni said.

Rhotenberry suggested that Juni would have to "get after" the taxing boards if he wanted to monitor the tax rates and to encourage minimal taxation.

"They are going to have to give," Juni said. "There's no two ways about it."

After his meeting with the board, Juni said he backed "1,000 percent" the efforts of petitioners, including Midland lawyer Charles "Bro" Seltzer, who are urging each of the six taxing bodies to control taxes and to share "in these hard economic times." The petitioners contend that any tax-rate increase would be "improper and unfair."

Juni said the taxing bodies are going to have to "bite the dust" just "like we independents are."

MIDLAND homeowner Michael Petrosky got satisfaction after he complained about what he deemed a too-high appraisal on his house. The district had considered his garage as liveable quarters, but it was not, he said. The board suggested that he get with a district appraiser to re-adjust value of his house.

"I'm sure I am going to get satisfaction," he said.

Another homeowner, Bernard Lankford, protested the appraised value of his Saddle Club Addition house. The district valued the house at $349,000, but he said the "realistic value" was $325,000.

"I'm been trying to sell that house forever," he said. "I've not got an offer."

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

"What's happening out there," said Review Board member Sara Carr Newsom, a real-estate broker, "people are not buying high-priced homes."

The board took no action on Lankford's request but decided to investigate other houses in the Saddle Club area to ascertain values before possibly altering the appraised value of the house.

"We've got to keep equitable treatment of everybody in your neighborhood," Rhotenberry said.

But the board lowered the appraised value of a "landlocked" tract belonging to Lankford from $60,000 to $40,000.

YOO SUN LEE, a karate instructor, got some relief via increased depreciation on his business property off the Andrews Highway.

Rhotenberry explained that whether or not property values go up, down or stay static "just depends on the nature of the property and it's location."

Upon the request of Midland lawyer Burgess Wade, the board dropped the value of Village 36 property (the TG&Y department store lease) from $500,000 to $300,000. Wade noted that the properties in Village Shopping Center in an older business section in south central Midland are falling in value. More and more retail businesses seem to be locating in north Midland.

Since mid-May, after the appraisal district mailed out notices of property values and the estimated effective tax rates of the six taxing entities, more than 400 taxpayers have met with district appraisers to discuss valuations. Of the 105,000 property accounts in Midland County, approximately 76 percent are real estate, 14 percent is mineral, and 10 percent is personal, which includes business inventory, drilling rigs, machinery and equipment, mobile homes, boats, airplanes, and recreational vehicles.

"We used to have a lot more value in those drilling rigs than obviously we do now," Wilkinson said. He said that the "best way" he has heard the current value of those rigs described in these days of an economic slump is "a dime on the dollar." And the rigs' contribution to the tax base virtually is immeasurable — less than one-quarter of 1 percent.

Overall, countywide appraisals this year dropped 10.6 percent, he said. Still taxpayers may be paying about the same or more in taxes than they paid last year.

"Even if the values were going down," Wilkinson said, "they (taxpayers) are going to pay approximately the same amount in taxes they paid last year with higher values. "If their values did not decrease by at least 5 percent, then the possibility exists that they will be paying somewhat more (in taxes) this year than they did last year."

For May, the general revenue items White has pinpointed for reduction — salaries, contracts, leases, travel, utilities, capital expenses and construction — were down 6.2 percent from the six-month average.

Since March 1, average monthly spending in those categories is off 4.3 percent.

"That's a favorable trend," Hamilton said. "It's going to be a program that's going to have to build, and this is just three months into an 18-month average."

Hamilton said that if the report could show spending incurred, rather than the processing of checks for many expenses already in the works on March 1, overall spending might have been down this month.

"A $10 million swing (in general revenue) would put us in the negative," he said. "We're that close."

Babies doing well; Adult donors sought

Associated Press

Baby Jesse was reported alert and active six days after his heart transplant, while a Kentucky infant with a transplanted heart showed improved kidney function, hospital officials said.

A 32-year-old man in Pittsburgh and a 40-year-old woman in Tucson, Ariz., are waiting as doctors search for suitable human hearts to replace the artificial hearts beating in their chests.

The first woman to receive a temporary artifical heart implant was making progress after pancreas surgery.

In Loma Linda, Calif., Jesse Dean Sepulveda was being weaned Monday off supplemental oxygen and was listed in serious but stable condition, the Loma Linda University Medical Center said.

"He's real cuddly and he seems very interested in his environment," said nurse Joyce Brockman. "He tries to grasp at objects and occasionally has a healthy temper."

In Louisville, Ky., Robert Dean Cardin, formerly known as Baby Calvin, was still on a type of dialysis, but his kidney function had improved, officials said.

Robert's parents, Patricia and Wendell Cardin, said they were overwhelmed by the national attention their son got when Baby Jesse received a heart before Robert did. Robert had been on a donor organ waiting list longer than Jesse.

"We're just plain country people and this is a little hard for me to adjust to," Patricia Cardin, 30, told a news conference at Kosair Children's Hospital. "We're hoping we can take him home in a few more weeks and get back to a normal lifestyle."

In Pittsburgh, Edmund McDermott of Scranton remained critical but stable condition early today, four days after he received the Jarvik-7 pump as a temporary, life-saving device at Presbyterian-University Hospital.

In Tucson, Bernadette Chayrez, the first person to be given mini-Jarvik implants twice, remained in serious but stable condition Monday at University Medical Center.

"She commented that she is feeling better than she ever has," said hospital spokeswoman Jan Rooney.

Ms. Chayrez received her first implant Feb. 3 and was given a human transplant four days later, but her body rejected the human organ and a second plastic and metal pump was implanted Feb. 9.

Mary Lund, the first woman to receive an artificial heart, was "very awake, alert, oriented and fairly comfortable" Monday in Minneapolis after surgery at Abbott Northwestern Hospital last Thursday to remove part of her pancreas, said Kristin Johnson, spokeswoman for the Minneapolis Heart Institute.

Lund, 40, of rural Kensington, Minn., was given a mechanical implant last December, and she received a transplanted human heart on Jan. 31.

Excedrin pulled from some store shelves

AUBURN, Wash. (AP) — Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were pulled from store shelves after authorities confirmed that a cyanide-laced capsule caused the death last week of a 40-year-old woman.

Sue Snow, a bank manager, was found collapsed in her home by a relative last Wednesday, said Officer James Monnett of the Auburn Police Department. She died later that day at a hospital.

The King County medical examiner's office confirmed Monday that Ms. Snow died of acute cyanide poisoning, and Auburn police said cyanide was found in Excedrin capsules discovered in her home.

Auburn Mayor Bob Roegner declared a public emergency Monday, and all Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were being pulled from store shelves in the Auburn area. Authorities believe Ms. Snow, who was married and had two daughters, purchased the capsules in Auburn a couple of days before she died.

There were 56 capsules left inside the 60-capsule Excedrin bottle found near where Ms. Snow collapsed, said Christopher Rezendes, assistant director of investigations for the Seattle office of the federal Food and Drug Administration.

Several of the remaining capsules contained significant amounts of cyanide, Rezendes said.

But Monnett said that as of late Monday night, no cyanide contamination was found in any of the bottles pulled from store shelves and tested by the FDA.

Police were advising Auburn residents particularly to avoid Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules that have the lot number 5 H 1 02-Aug. 88 on the package, the same lot number as the bottle that was found in Ms. Snow's home. Excedrin is made by Bristol-Myers.

The Seattle-King County Health Department notified the local FDA office of the incident Monday afternoon, Rezendes said.

"The FDA has indicated to us that this appears to be an isolated, local incident," said Harry Levine, a vice president of Bristol-Myers in New York.

Prior to the anniversary, major black leaders in South Africa did not advocate violence.

Mellet said the worst violence Monday was in the eastern part of Cape province, where three of the four reported killings by security forces took place when blacks allegedly attacked police patrols with firebombs.

Mellet said four of the blacks believed killed by other blacks had been burned to death and the other three were shot.

The 11 deaths raise to 42 the toll from unrest since a nationwide state of emergency was declared Thursday.

The death toll includes two white women and an Indian woman killed in a car-bombing Saturday night and 39 blacks, 11 reported killed by security forces and 28 by other blacks.

This morning, black workers who stayed home Monday returned to their jobs in large numbers. The Putco bus service which shut down in the Johannesburg area Monday, reported 80 percent of its normal 670,000-commuter capacity Tuesday.

The government said it was banning live transmissions by foreign television crews, further tightening the news restrictions which accompanied Monday's riot commemorations.

Indictments in works for five 1983 killings

HENDERSON (AP) — A Rusk County official said he may pursue capital murder indictments against four people in connection with the 1983 execution-style slayings of five people abducted from a Kentucky Fried Chicken Restaurant in nearby Kilgore.

District Attorney William Ferguson mentioned the case Monday in comments at a county budget hearing. It marked the first time officials have commented on the precise number of suspects.

After the budget hearing, Ferguson declined to elaborate on possible suspects, details of the county's case or when it would be presented to the grand jury, the Tyler Telegraph said.

At the budget hearing where he discussed the high cost of capital murder trials, Ferguson said he was trying to hold off the FBI and Texas Rangers who are pushing his office to present the cases to the July session of the Rusk County grand jury.

The grand jury meets the first Monday of every other month and is due to convene July 7.

Slain in the 1983 case were Mary Tyler, 37; Opie Ann Hughes, 37; David Maxwell, 19; Joey Johnson, 20; and Monty Landers, 20. All but Landers were Kentucky Fried Chicken employees.

The bodies of the five, all of whom were shot to death, were found in a Rusk County oilfield. Four of the five were slain execution-style, with the body of Ms. Hughes found about 20 yards from the other bodies.

Although $2,000 was taken from the restaurant cash register, investigators said the case did not fit the pattern of a simple robbery.

"The Kentucky Fried Chicken case doesn't make sense in its entirety," Kilgore Police Chief C.R. Headen said months after the slayings. "Robbery may have been the motive, but there's a good chance it's going to be related to drugs."

Headen said he suspected more than one person was involved because the killers were able to take their victims out the back door of the restaurant, load them into a vehicle on a busy street and drive away without attracting attention.

Headen, who replaced former Police Chief Johnny Bradley four weeks after the murders, said investigators had a list of suspects last spring.

"We have a pretty good idea of who the suspects are, all the names within a certain group, but we just don't know which names," he said.

Winner of judge's race to be picked from hat

GATESVILLE (AP) — The two county judge candidates got into the race prepared to run it to the finish — win, lose or draw.

It turned out to be a draw, with the winner decided by a third party picking a name from a hat.

"You might say all the marbles are in one bag. Or hat, or whatever you put them in," quipped Justice of the Peace Larry McDonald, who is challenging 16-year incumbent Coryell County Judge Doug Smith.

A recount Monday from the June 7 runoff election for county judge produced a 1,530-1,530 vote tie.

Both McDonald and Smith said they didn't like the way the winner would be be decided today, but they said the Texas Election Code prescribes "drawing lots" in the case of a tie in a vote recount.

McDonald had asked for a recount when he came up six votes short in the runoff. A neutral party probably will reach into a hat with the names of both candidates and pull out the winner, he said.

"I don't think that's any way to pick a county judge," he said. "But that's what the election code calls for. If that's the way the law is worded, yes, I guess we will be there. I feel grateful to have the opportunity."

Smith also expressed reluctance at the method, but said he'll be there for the drawing, too.

"I don't like to do it, but we've got to do what the law says. We've got legislators down there making them for us," Smith said.

The winner will coast to victory in November because no Republican is running for the office.

McDonald outpolled the 16-year Coryell County judge in the primary, 1,671 to 1,493. But in the runoff, Smith regained the lead, 1,528 to 1,522.

The recount showed 10 more votes than were counted in the runoff, but the election code says the recount is final.

The Coryell County judgeship isn't the only tie that came out of the Texas primary election.

A recount in Falls County showed a 963-vote deadlock between district clerk candidates Chester Tate and J.D. Phipps, who were vying for second place and a chance to take on leader Larry Hoelscher in a runoff.

Farm Aid funds rural relief plans in 37 states

AUSTIN (AP) — Rural relief programs in 37 states are benefitting from about $4.3 million spent or committed so far by the Farm Aid project, officials say.

The project has $2.7 million remaining in its relief fund, which organizers hope will be bolstered by proceeds from a second Farm Aid concert scheduled for July 4 in Austin.

Among the programs funded to help debt-ridden farmers are food pantries, telephone hot lines, legal services, community outreach programs and scholarships, officials said.

The first concert at Champaign, Ill., which cost about $2 million to produce, and subsequent solicitations through advertisements have attracted about $9 million in donations, said Farm Aid director Carrolyn Mugar.

Bill Wittliff, an Austin screenwriter who helps oversee the funds, said the total changes daily because donations continue to come in.

Funds are deposited in a Champaign bank, but donations from Farm Aid II will be kept in an Austin bank, Wittliff said.

Singer Willie Nelson, organizer of the Farm Aid project, has made all decisions on spending the funds and signed the outgoing checks, Wittliff said. Nelson has received suggestions from many sources, he added.

The 14-hour Farm Aid II concert July 4 at the University of Texas' Memorial Stadium will include more than 50 entertainers and bands. The concert will be carried live on the cable television channel VH-1. Viewers will be asked to phone in pledges.

Nelson isn't predicting how much money Farm Aid II might raise.

Farm Aid is administered from the singer's studio at Briarcliff, near Lake Travis, and from a small office in Cambridge, Mass., with a staff of two full-time and two part-time employees.

Ms. Mugar, who runs the Massachusetts office, said Nelson's personal secretary, Jody Fisher, also does a considerable amount of Farm Aid work but isn't on the payroll.

Wittliff said he is helping Nelson with Farm Aid as a favor to the singer and because he developed an interest in farm problems while researching and writing the film "Country," which centered on the failure of a Midwestern family farm.

"So many of the farmers are so far gone it's not a question of them losing their land — they're going to lose the land — but how do you save them to where they can leave with a little bit of dignity?" he said.

"What Farm Aid tries to do is help farmers help themselves. Willie decided early on that money should go to where it could do the most good for the most people.

Worker recalls hitchhiker's claims of abuse

KERRVILLE (AP) — A hitchhiker walked onto the grounds of a state fish hatchery and told a worker there he had been chained up and held at gunpoint at a nearby ranch, the worker testified in the trial of three men accused of kidnapping drifters and forcing them to work.

Charles Shaw, a technician for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission, also testified he had served on the grand jury that returned organized crime indictments against the three defendants.

Shaw was called Monday as a defense witness, but his testimony ultimately backfired on lawyers defending Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr., 55; his son Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr., 33; and former ranchhand Carlton Robert Caldwell, 21.

The three are charged with conspiracy to commit aggravated kidnapping and murder in the March 1984 death of Anthony Bates.

Prosecutors allege Bates and others were lured with the promise of work to the Ellebrachts' sprawling Hill Country ranch. Then he was forced to stay.

The state also claims Bates was tortured to death with an electric cattle prod, then his body burned at the ranch.

Earlier testimony indicated Bates was held under water in a natural spring during the torture sessions.

The defense called Shaw to testify about daily temperature readings he took of the water in the spring, which flowed into a canal that fed a pond at the nearby fish hatchery.

But when prosecutor Ron Sutton took over questioning, Shaw told the court he ran into a hitchhiker who said he had escaped from the Ellebracht's ranch in the fall of 1983.

Shaw said he was on the grounds of the fish hatchery when he noticed a man "dressed like a hobo."

"He appeared to be extremely nervous and scared," Shaw said.

"He said he had just escaped from the Ellebracht ranch where he had been kept in chains and under the gun," Shaw said.

"He said he didn't want to talk to the police, he just wanted to get as far away from Kerr County as possible," Shaw said.

Shaw said he telephoned the sheriff's office and reported the story and when the Ellebrachts were indicted a few months later, he repeated the story to a Texas Ranger.

Then, under re-questioning by defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, Shaw was asked if he had been a witness to the grand jury that indicted the Ellebrachts.

"No I wasn't a witness before the grand jury. I was on the grand jury," Shaw said.

Another witness, Joe Waterson, 54, of Giddings, testified he and his father hunt deer every year on a lease on the Ellebracht ranch.

Waterson said none of the workers indicated they were being held against their will.

'Bloodbath' result of 'ongoing feud,' officials say

HAWKINS (AP) — A violent family quarrel in which authorities claim a young man shot and stabbed his parents and sister and brutally injured two nephews was the result of "an ongoing feud," investigators said.

Paul Owen Beasley Jr., 27, was charged with two counts of murder Monday in the deaths of his mother, Ruth Johnson Beasley, 62, and his sister, Linda Beasley Birkinbine, 37, of Euless. He was being held in lieu of $1 million bond, said Teri Fox, a Wood County Sheriff's dispatcher.

The two women died Sunday of gunshot wounds to the face and throat and also had been stabbed, said Chief Deputy Jimmy Roberts, who called the scene of the crime "a bloodbath."

"There are indications of both knife and gun wounds, but we cannot tell which (wounds) are guns and which are knives," Roberts said.

"This was caused from an ongoing feud that has been going on for, well, we don't know how long," he said.

Beasley had gone to his parents' home to celebrate Father's Day when a family quarrel ensued, Roberts said.

Beasley's father, Paul Owen Beasley Sr., 70, was in critical condition Monday at Tyler Medical Center from a gunshot to the head and a knife wound on his neck, according to Roberts and hospital officials.

The suspect's 2-year-old nephew, Matthew Birkinbine, was in fair condition with a lacerated throat. Another nephew, Chad Beasley, 9, of Arlington, was treated and released after breaking his leg as he escaped.

Chad had been severely beaten, but escaped when he and Matthew were thrown out of a two-story window, Roberts said.

"It was a bloodbath," Roberts said. "Inside the house we found two shotguns, two knives and a pistol."

He said the weapons were sent to Dallas for forensic analysis.

Roberts said a deputy went to the rural Beasley home, six miles north of Hawkins, on a disturbance call Sunday afternoon.

A neighbor of the Beasleys stopped him to tell him the 9-year-old nephew said Paul Beasley Jr. had shot his grandparents.

Roberts said Beasley surrendered to the deputy.

UT group will speak loudly, carry big bullhorn for tests

AUSTIN (AP) — A University of Texas administrator, a communications engineer and the president of the UT Students' Association plan to make a lot of noise this week to test sound levels at sites proposed for student demonstrations.

The three were asked Monday to undertake the project by a special committee expected to make recommendations this summer to President William Cunningham on whether to change the UT rules governing demonstrations.

The plan grew out of discussions on noise disruption during a meeting of the panel.

The three will use a sound truck loudspeaker, an amplified lectern and a bullhorn to simulate some of the noise that would occur at a demonstration, and to see what the effect is inside buildings near the proposed rally sites.

The tests will be coordinated by Bill Stephens, a communications engineer in the UT utilities office; Glenn Maloney, assistant dean of students; and Andrew Chin, president of the Students' Association.

UT administrators have said they are concerned that changes in the current rules could result in the usual business of the university being disrupted by noise from rallies.

Cunningham appointed the committee, chaired by Law School Dean Mark Yudof, after the rules were challenged this spring in unauthorized anti-apartheid rallies.

Two student groups have proposed that the West Mall and the Main Mall, the area in front of the UT Tower, be designated as "free speech areas," where demonstrations could be held at any time without permission of UT officials.

Maloney, Chin and Donny Jansen, a student arrested in one of the rallies this spring, appeared before the committee Monday to discuss the student proposals. The proposals, which were given to the committee last week, were made by a Students' Association task force and a group of arrested students.

The university currently has two free speech areas, at the Texas Union patio and on the East Mall, but students have objected that they are too small or are in places where rallies would attract few people.

UT rules also allow rallies on the West Mall, but only with a permit and only between noon and 1 p.m.

Yudof asked that results of the sound tests be given to the committee this week, since the panel plans to report to Cunningham soon.

Numismatist premieres Sesquicentennial medals

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston numismatist said Monday he hopes to sell 25,000 gold and 200,000 silver versions of the Texas Sesquicentennial medallion minted by his firm.

The state's Sesquicentennial Commission will get 2 percent royalties from the sales. The medallions, which are exempt from the state sales tax, cost about $6 each for the silver version and $375 for the gold.

The gold medallions will cost slightly less for buyers who purchase 10 or more, according to Dr. George Vogt, president and chairman of Colonial Coins Inc. of Houston.

Vogt's company had the medallions made at a Mesa, Ariz., mint. That mint has been purchased by Colonial Coins and will be moved to Houston, Vogt said. So far, about 5,000 silver and 300 gold medallions have been made.

Two Dallas firms also have been authorized by the Sesquicentennial Commission to make similar medallions.

Vogt on Monday sold the first two gold medallions to Houston state Rep. Ralph Wallace, who pushed the legislation that exempted the medallions from the state sales tax.

Sesquicentennial Commission director Patrick Terry said the royalties will be passed on to the Texas Tourist Development Agency and the Texas Commission on the Arts.

The medallions feature both sides of the state seal.

"We didn't even know until this year that there was a back side to the seal," Wallace said.

He said the Texas medallions could be an attractive investment alternative for people who do not want to buy gold or silver coins minted by other countries.

Ex-ESM officials unaware of fraud, lawyers say

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Defense attorneys for two former officials of ESM Government Securities Inc. admitted Monday that massive fraud had been committed by the firm, but said their clients knew nothing about it.

Charged in a 44-count federal wire and mail fraud indictment are Nicholas B. Wallace, former ESM president, and Stanley Wolfe, who controlled the wiring of ESM money and monitored securities pledged to secure loans.

The indictment charges that Wallace and Wolfe were co-conspirators in a scheme to conceal and falsely report the financial conditions of ESM through false and fraudulent journal entries and financial statements.

ESM's collapse in March 1985 left 69 investors, including several municipalities, with $315 million in losses and led to a crisis among Ohio savings and loan organizations, many of which were major customers of the Fort Lauderdale-based securities firm.

Attorneys for Wallace and Wolfe told the jury of five men and seven women the fraud was masterminded by ESM's late chief financial officer Alan Novick and chairman of ESM's board, Ronnie R. Ewton.

"Mr. Wolfe and council do not quarrel that a massive fraud was perpetrated on the American public," said Paul Lazarus, Wolfe's attorney. "What our contention is, is that Wolfe didn't know about this scheme."

Lazarus said those working at ESM relied on an audit done by Jose L. Gomez of the Alexander Grant and Co., which showed the company was solvent.

"(Wolfe) was an officer with basically no authority. This scheme was hatched by a very smart and very evil man," Lazarus said, referring to Novick. "You will see Mr. Novick gave authority to no one else."

Lazarus said that Novick and Ewton bribed Gomez into producing a financial statement which showed the company making a profit when in fact the company was going broke. Novick died of a heart attack in his office in November 1984.

"Up until the day (Novick) died, he represented to the company that the investments were super and that they represented millions and millions of dollars," said Al Thomas, one of Wallace's attorneys.

Thomas described his client as a puppet president who signed all company correspondence because as far as he knew, everything was all right.

The prosecution also told the jury the company's financial statement was a fraud, showing a healthy, growing firm when ESM was going broke, lending money it didn't have and using the same securities as collateral time and again.

STATE IN BRIEF

Houstonians' 'goodwill' gifts damaged by rain

HOUSTON (AP) — Just as Goodwill Industries was recovering from a devastating fire, it was hit with more bad luck as a heavy downpour and a leaky roof soaked more than $20,000 worth of newly donated clothing.

"Most of the wet clothes are salvageable if we could dry them, but we lost our industrial dryer in the fire, so it's a Catch-22 situation," Goodwill president Steve Lufburrow said Monday.

A three-alarm fire Friday gutted Goodwill's main warehouse in Houston, prompting a plea for donations of used clothing.

Houston-area residents complied over the weekend — sending four semitrailer-loads of clothing to an old building across the street from the destroyed warehouse where Lufburrow decided to move Goodwill operations.

Monday, 125 Goodwill workers sorted and priced the clothes.

Then massive thunderstorms moved into the area, dumping two inches of rain — which cascaded onto the clothes in the temporary headquarters.

Documents being restored

AUSTIN (AP) — Experts in a University of Texas laboratory are working to halt the deterioration time has caused to two of the state's most significant historic documents.

The documents are the Texas Declaration of Independence from Mexico, adopted at Washington-on-the-Brazos on March 2, 1836, and the letter written by Alamo commander William B. Travis in which he declared, "I shall never surrender or retreat."

Work on the two documents is being conducted by the conservation laboratory of UT's Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center.

Don Etherington, assistant director of the center, said Monday that the work should be completed in time for the documents to be exhibited at the state fair, scheduled for Sept. 26 to Oct. 26.

Among steps being taken are an analysis of the paper and ink, raising the alkaline content of the papers, reinforcing weakened edges, mending fractures in the paper, encapsulating the documents in clear polyester holders that keep out air, and fitting them into frames which contain a special material to retard ultraviolet light.

Female impersonator held

HOUSTON (AP) — A 32-year-old female impersonator, who was on the run for more than two months, was arrested at his parent's home in Houston in connection with the slaying of his female roommate, authorities said.

John Clifford Youens remains in the San Jacinto County Jail where County Judge Mike Jeffrey set his bond at $200,000, San Jacinto sheriff's spokesman Robert Brumley said.

Youens was arraigned before State District Judge Miron Love early Monday before being released to the sheriff's department.

Gramm joins 'brain trust'

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, has joined the "brain trust" of former Gov. Bill Clements' gubernatorial campaign, it was announced Monday.

Gramm will join 10 others as part of the GOP candidate's executive committee, said Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary, in a phone interview from Clements' Dallas headquarters.

"Sen. Gramm is a man of principle, integrity and intelligence," Clements said. "Sen. Gramm is a leader in Texas as well as across the nation. He will have a major role in my campaign. I will rely on his wise counsel."

Parents try to find out daughter's condition

Lisa Riggs

DALLAS (AP) — The parents of a teen-aged girl who was visiting the Soviet Union when she became ill were "on the phone more than 24 hours" trying to learn her condition or find a way to get visas into the country.

Finally, by late Monday night they learned from the U.S. embassy their daughter, 17-year-old Lisa Riggs of Irving, was in the critical care unit of a Moscow hospital, but no doctors were available to give the embassy details of her condition.

The girl's mother, Cheryl Riggs, said she was told her daughter probably would require intensive care for a week after suffering an asthma attack on Sunday.

"Our information is they will find out today whether she is stable enough to be transported out," Ms. Riggs said early today. "If we can transport her out to a more accessible country, then we wouldn't need visas (to visit her)."

She said Germany was mentioned as a possible site for the transfer.

The teen-ager and several other students from suburban Irving were on a tour of several eastern European countries.

While in Moscow, "they went to a circus and were seated at the very top. (Lisa) has asthma. When they got to the top of the stairs, she collapsed and quit breathing," Ms. Riggs said.

Medics administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation, but a teacher who traveled with the teen-ager in an ambulance said she was still being given CPR when he last saw her.

The girl's mother said she learned of her daughter's asthma attack at 4 p.m. CDT Sunday when a teacher, Betty Salter, called her from the American embassy in Moscow, she said.

"Since then we've been on the phone more than 24 hours trying to get into Russia or to get people here to help us get information," said Ms. Riggs, who added that she had contacted members of Congress and the State Department.

Gramm spokesman Larry Neal said issuing a visa to the Soviet Union is a difficult process, but because Gramm's office dealt with a similar situation recently they have been able to help the couple. He predicted the girls' father, Gordon Riggs, would be able to secure a visa by today.

Ms. Riggs, a nurse, said she was particularly concerned because, "I know all the things that can go wrong." She said her daughter had never been so ill with an asthma attack before.

The trip by students from Irving's MacArthur High School originally was scheduled for a stop in Kiev, but was rescheduled after the Chernobyl nuclear accident. Although several students dropped out after the accident, Ms. Riggs said her daughter still wanted to go.

"I could see she was real excited about going and was proud of the fact she had paid for it on her own. I didn't really have any qualms about her going," Ms. Riggs said.

TSTA lawyer: Literacy test discriminatory

TYLER (AP) — A lawyer for the state teachers association argued in court that the state's literacy test is discriminatory and violates a 1971 federal desegregation order.

Frank Petramalo Jr., lawyer for the Texas State Teachers Association, said Monday in a federal court hearing that a little more than 18 percent of the black teachers failed the test, while only 1 percent of the whites failed.

"That establishes without a doubt a prima facie case of racial discrimination," Petramalo told U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

But lawyer Kevin O'Hanlon, representing the Texas Education Agency, said the exam scores merely illustrate the need for teacher testing.

"Certainly the state recognizes that minorities are not performing as well as Anglos on the test. But the state takes that as an indictment of the education system — that we're not doing a good enough job teaching these kids. That's why the tests were implemented," he said.

The arguments were part of a one-day hearing on whether the TSTA should be allowed to intervene in the 16-year-old statewide school desegregation case still under Justice's purview.

The judge took the issue under advisement Monday without making a ruling.

O'Hanlon urged the judge to reject the case, saying the final effect won't be known until teachers who failed the test in March take it a second time June 28.

In a related issue, lawyers for three minority organizations on Monday dropped their request for an injunction after learning that college graduates who haven't passed the required Pre-Professional Skills Test can still get jobs as teachers under an emergency employment plan.

The G.I. Forum, the League of United Latin American Citizens and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had sought an injunction allowing education graduates who had failed the test to teach in public schools until the legality of the examination is determined.

Justice did not rule on the test's legality Monday.

NATION in brief

Experts to draft plan for radiation warnings

RENO, Nev. (AP) — International experts will meet next month to draft an agreement requiring nations to warn their neighbors if a nuclear accident spews radiation outside their borders as the Chernobyl accident did, an official of an international nuclear power agency says.

The proposed agreement, and another pact covering emergency aid after such an accident, could be endorsed as early as September when the 112-nation International Atomic Energy Agency holds a general meeting, said Morris Rosen, director of the agency's division of nuclear safety.

Nuclear experts will meet July 21 in Vienna, where the agency is based, to work out drafts of the agreements to be submitted to the general meeting Sept. 29, Rosen said in an interview Monday.

Mayors' talks continues

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Samuel R. Pierce Jr., the secretary of housing and urban development, says urban America can no longer expect the federal government to be "lavish with the public purse."

"I know this is difficult to accept," Pierce said in a speech to be delivered today to the U.S. Conference of Mayors. "It's like the rich and generous uncle who suddenly cuts off his relatives."

"Well, your rich Uncle Sam no longer has the wherewithal to support his former habits of generosity," Pierce said. "In fact, as we all know he's in debt, deeply."

Pierce said that despite their dire complaints, most cities are healthy and can bear a bigger share of paying for local needs.

Mayors of both parties have used the convention to criticize the Reagan administration for seeking to end big-urban aid programs like general revenue sharing and to slash by half or more other domestic programs.

53 injured in collapse

GREENPORT, N.Y. (AP) — The collapse of a 500-foot-long set of bleachers, which injured at least 53 spectators, may have been caused by muddy ground underneath, said an emergency official.

The 10 rows of bleachers collapsed while a crowd waited for a traveling circus to begin its show at a shopping center Monday, officials said.

One infant suffered a fractured skull and five people were hospitalized following the collapse of about 10 rows of seats, but officials described most of the injuries as minor.

"It was a circus, and there were children there and adults, and it was complete chaos," said Columbia County Emergency Management Director Marty Tuczinski. "People were yelling and screaming."

Those injured, who were waiting at 6:15 p.m. for the Toby Tyler Threering Circus to begin its show, fell from as high as 10 to 15 feet, said Tuczinski.

Traffic helicopter crashes

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A traffic reporter and helicopter pilot died when their aircraft crashed during a live television broadcast as thousands of viewers, including the reporter's parents, watched spinning pictures from an onboard camera.

Monday's accident killed reporter Julie Ann Silvers, 26, known on the air as Julie King, and pilot William Buddy Smith, 34, said Duval sheriff's Sgt. Steven Richardson.

Cameraman Brett C. Snyder, 22, was in serious condition at University Hospital, said Katherine M. Green, a news producer for WTLV-TV.

Ms. Silvers, a reporter for WAPE radio whose traffic reports were also broadcast on WTLV, had just finished her report at 6:44 a.m. when she seemed to gasp, said WTLV producer Mary Johnson. She then uttered her last words: "Uh, we'll check on that condition," shortly before the Hughes 500 crashed and burst into flames, Ms. Johnson said.

One dies on playground

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A man who wanted to show a playground audience that his semi-automatic rifle was not a toy opened fire into a crowd, slaying one person and seriously wounding several others, police say.

Police Lt. William Beasley said a 22-year-old man was arrested near the park shortly after the shootings Monday. He said a 13-year-old boy also was questioned.

Beasley said some witnesses thought more than 10 shots were fired. He said there were conflicting reports on how many people were struck by shots, and that the estimate ranged to five.

The man pulled a .22-caliber rifle with a sawed-off barrel from a shopping bag at the Auer Street playground, and was taunted that it was just a toy, Beasley said.

Bus victim identified

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A woman who had been listed as missing since the May 30 crash of a tour bus that plunged into a river near Walker, Calif., was identified on Monday as the 21st victim of the nation's second worst bus accident in history.

The Mono County sheriff's office in Bridgeport, Calif., identified the woman as Meryle Ruth Martin, 68, of Venice, Calif.

Her body was found in the Walker River June 9, but a positive identification could not be made until her dental charts were obtained, said sheriff's Lt. Dave Smith.

NBC plays Abbas tapes for Justice Department

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NATION

LOS ANGELES — Videotapes of interviews with terrorist Abul Abbas have been shown to the Justice Department, which is investigating the Palestinian accused of plotting the Achille Lauro hijacking, says the head of NBC News.

In the NBC interview, Abbas said his group would begin launching attacks inside the United States. The day after the May 5 broadcast, the State Department accused NBC of encouraging terrorism.

But Lawrence K. Grossman, the news president, speaking Monday, defended the interview with Abbas as newsworthy and said his department was not a law-enforcement agency.

Parts of the interview were broadcast May 5 on "NBC Nightly News," and more is to be broadcast today on NBC's documentary "The Achille Lauro: A Study in Terror."

Abbas, leader of the Palestine Liberation Front, will be tried in absentia in a hijacking trial of four men beginning Wednesday in Genoa, Italy, where the luxury liner set sail on its October cruise of the Mediterranean.

Abbas was aboard the Egyptian airliner that American fighter jets forced to land at Sigonella air base in Sicily after the hijacking. On board with him were the four alleged hijackers, who were detained by Italian authorities.

But Italy, saying it had no evidence then to hold Abbas, let him go and he left for Yugoslavia. Later, Italy issued an international arrest warrant for him, but by then he had disappeared.

A U.S. citizen, Leon Klinghoffer, was slain in the cruise-ship hijacking.

The Justice Department, which is conducting a criminal investigation of Abbas, was interested in a statement on the May 5 broadcast by correspondent Henry Champ that said Abbas "freely admits responsibility for the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship, the Achille Lauro."

However, no videotape was shown of any such remark by Abbas and federal criminal lawyers would like to know if it exists.

In an interview in this week's edition of L'Espresso, an Italian magazine, Abbas is quoted as saying that it was his intervention that led to the hostages' freedom and that Klinghoffer was not slain by the hijackers.

Justice Department officials had hoped to persuade NBC to provide the material without having to issue a subpoena, thus avoiding a furor over the case, sources in Washington told The Associated Press.

Champ agreed not to disclose Abbas' whereabouts as a condition for the meeting.

NBC recently allowed Justice Department officials to see the videotape and transcript of the interview and will give the agency copies of the tape and the transcript, Grossman said Monday.

Justice Department spokesman John Russell refused to comment on Grossman's remarks.

UTPB's support

Last week's outpouring of public support for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin caused the chairman of the Select Committee on Higher Education to label the presentation "one of the most persuasive" to date.

That was the object, of course, and it should have changed some minds on the committee about closing the university.

The people of this region don't want to lose UTPB. What's more, they're willing to converge on the state's capitol to lobby against any action that would result in the university either being closed or merged with another existing university.

It was encouraging to witness the large number of individuals, a big percentage from Midland, who were willing to travel to Austin to show support for a university that has been besieged with controversy at times in its history.

Tom Wageman, president of RepublicBank First National Midland and a member of the UTPB Development Board, captured the emotion of the UTPB issue when he told the Select Committee: "It took us almost 90 years to get our university. We waited a long time and now that we have it, we want everyone to know how important it is to our future."

Wageman is correct. While it may be true that a number of residents from the Midland-Odessa area could commute to Lubbock to attend Texas Tech University or to other outlying schools, it wouldn't be the same. It wouldn't be our school — our university.

It took a long time for some residents to acquire that sense of UTPB belonging, but now it is identified in that way and with each successive threat of closure the protection instinct becomes stronger.

State Rep. Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring, noting he was pleased with the local support for UTPB, commented, "I'm not sure we shouldn't request a push for more money toward economic diversification and perhaps UTPB can be the catalyst."

Why not? Rather than concentrating on ways to get rid of the university, the select committee should capitalize on the emotion generated by the threat of closure to garner further support for UTPB and all institutions of higher learning in Texas.

After all, isn't it the purpose of colleges and universities to teach problem-solving rather than problem avoidance?

Another View:
Reagan's absurdity

President Reagan tried to explain in person Wednesday why he is turning his back on the SALT II arms-control treaty. He was even less persuasive on television than he was when he put it in writing last month, and the written effort itself made very little sense.

His message at the press conference was that he is prepared to scuttle SALT II because the action might somehow lead to reductions in nuclear weapons. He complained that members of Congress who oppose the new policy do not understand what he is trying to do. Small wonder.

Reagan was at least less outrageous, and more vague, than Richard N. Perle, the Pentagon bureaucrat who has emerged as Reagan's head coach on arms-control avoidance. Perle, an assistant secretary of defense, explained the policy shift to Congress last week by telling its members that they had a choice on SALT II: They could stand with Reagan or stand with Moscow. While Reagan insisted on television that no final decision had been made, Perle seemed to think that it was settled, telling Congress that it was rubbish to think that the arms race would intensify without SALT II.

As viewers could tell on Wednesday, explaining why abandoning an arms-control treaty will make the United States more secure is a tall order, even for veteran explainers at the State Department.

Without limits, the Soviet Union could expand the explosive power of its nuclear arsenal faster and with less effort than could the United States. If the Soviets have been cheating on weapons and tests with a treaty, the field for building and testing anything that comes to their minds would be wide open without a treaty. Technically, the treaty died last December, but until Reagan's decision both Moscow and Washington had pledged to honor it as long as the other did.

Specialists in defense agree that there have been Soviet violations, but they disagree over whether the violations are serious. The White House calls the violations "grievous." Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, says that in military terms the violations "don't amount to a hill of beans."

Aspin is one of several members of Congress who want to write nuclear-arms limits into the defense budget so that the Pentagon could not buy any piece of equipment that would breach the terms of SALT II.

Even if the limits in the defense budget were non-binding — a shot across the White House bow, as some members see them — that would be going too far. Congress has properly impinged on administrative policy in such isolated cases as funding for the Nicaraguan contras and money for anti-satellite weapons, but a SALT II defense budget would be too broad and too clumsy. There is a better way to bring the broad issue of arms control to a head and to a decision.

The president has taken his position. It is an absurd and dangerous position for the nuclear world of the 1980s, and it should become a major issue in the November elections for the House and the Senate. Americans should make it clear to him this fall how absurd his position is by voting for Republicans and Democrats who see arms control as an essential factor in keeping the nation's guard up without breaking into the dead heat of another arms race.

On this date:

In 1789, the Third Estate in France declared itself a national assembly and undertook to frame a constitution.

In 1940, France asked Germany for terms of surrender in World War II.

In 1944, the Republic of Iceland was established.

In 1963, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down rules requiring the recitation of the Lord's Prayer or reading of biblical verses in public schools.

In 1972, the eventual downfall of Richard M. Nixon's presidency began with the arrest of several burglars at the Democratic national headquarters in Washington's Watergate complex.

Ten years ago: President Gerald Ford ordered the U.S. Embassy to evacuate Americans from Lebanon after the assassination of Ambassador Francis Meloy Jr. and another U.S. diplomat.

Five years ago: The Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization broke off talks after rejecting the government's latest contract offer, and Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis warned that the Reagan administration would not tolerate an illegal strike.

One year ago: Lebanese Shiite leader Nabih Berri announced that all of the Americans who'd been held hostage on a hijacked TWA jetliner had been moved to an undisclosed location in Beirut and that he controlled their fate.

Nixon's back but Watergate never left

WASHINGTON — Fourteen years after the "third-rate burglary" that led to the first presidential resignation in history, Richard Nixon has emerged once again on the national scene as a respected confidant of President Reagan. He has gone from the cover-up of Watergate to the cover of Newsweek, his status as an unindicted co-conspirator conveniently ignored by the revisionist pop historians.

Jack Anderson

But if Nixon does have the nine lives of a cat, it must be a black one. Evidence continues to bubble to the surface that Nixon brought misfortune to the American public when he set out to engineer his re-election in 1972 by whatever means necessary.

One still-unresolved mystery of the Watergate scandal involved Greek-American businessman Thomas Pappas. An investigator for the Watergate special prosecutor concluded in a report that Pappas — who admittedly cooperated with the CIA "anytime my help was requested" — was the conduit for illegal contributions to the Nixon-Agnew re-election campaign from Greek businessmen in 1972. He had performed the same service in 1968, funneling money to the Nixon-Agnew campaign from the Greek military junta, according to House Intelligence Committee testimony in 1976 by the former U.S. ambassador in Athens, Henry Tasca.

Since the Greek junta's central intelligence service was not only the source of the funds sent to the Nixon-Agnew campaign via Pappas, but was itself being subsidized by the CIA, this meant that the American spy agency was indirectly contributing to the Republican candidates.

Documents prepared by the special prosecutor's staff and recently discovered in their files by Greek journalist Elias Demetracopoulos indicate that Pappas had also solicited at least $25,000 for the Nixon-Agnew campaign from a Greek businessman who subsequently was awarded a fuel contract for the U.S. Sixth Fleet.

The prosecutors stopped short of calling the campaign contribution a quid pro quo for the fuel contract, but they did note that the Pentagon had received lower bids for the fuel. Pappas' own company was given a sub-contract.

Pappas was also suspected by prosecutors of contributing some of the money demanded by the seven men arrested for the June 17, 1972, burglary at the Watergate offices of the Democratic National Committee. He told prosecutors, however, that the only money he had provided was a $50,000 personal loan to Attorney General John Mitchell to buy an apartment.

"Some documentary evidence indicates that those involved in the cover-up may have expected funds for it from Pappas," one special prosecutor report says. Notes seized from convicted Watergate figure Dwight Chapin referred to a meeting with Pappas and contained the cryptic notation: "7." The prosecutors said: "We have no explanation of the meaning of this notation, although it has been suggested that there were seven (original) Watergate defendants."

Indeed, one of the many references to Pappas on White House tape transcripts during the cover-up period was this one by Nixon: "I think it's a matter of fact, though, that somebody said be sure to talk to Pappas because he's being very helpful on the, uh, Watergate thing."

And when White House counsel John Dean asked Mitchell if he had asked Pappas for money for the burglars' defense, Mitchell replied that he had.

Demetracopoulos was the first to uncover the Nixon-Pappas connection in 1968, long before the Watergate scandal broke. He took his evidence to the Watergate office of Democratic Party Chairman Larry O'Brien. In fact, Demetracopoulos is now convinced that it was Nixon's fear of what he may have told the Democrats about the illegal foreign campaign contributions that led to the fateful mission of the White House plumbers 14 years ago.

Footnote: Pappas is living in seclusion and could not be reached for comment on these latest disclosures. Meanwhile, Christopher Hitchens of Nation magazine recently conducted an investigation and agrees with Demetracopoulos' theory of the Watergate break-in.

Soviet moves in Nicaragua pressuring Tip

WASHINGTON — Even though the House has grown a little warmer toward giving President Reagan $100 million for anti-communist guerrillas, more and more Soviet arms are pouring into Nicaragua in an effort to beggar U.S. aid to the contras as too little, too late.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

White House officials are preparing to deliver that message in confidential briefings this week for Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and lesser Democratic leaders. Nobody is hoping to convert the speaker's deep and emotional opposition to the contras. The president's men just want to ease the intensity that for weeks has kept the issue from a House vote.

To do that, Reagan and his aides pray O'Neill will consider the implications of the Soviet buildup in Sandinista armed power. He will be advised that more Soviet arms have reached Nicaragua this year than in all of 1985 and that Soviet pilots are actually "test-flying" just-delivered helicopters.

If help for the anti-communist resistance is further delayed, the Soviet buildup could make the Sandinista forces so strong that the military balance in Nicaragua would be frozen. The contras then never could be transformed from a ragtag band to a serious operational force with a chance of changing the regime in Managua.

Such warnings have not previously been received with respect in the Democratic hideaways of Capitol Hill. Aided by a handful of Republican defectors, an overwhelming majority of House Democrats has voted to block contra aid. But small, scattered signs of change give the president new hope.

Rep. Olympia Snowe, a liberal Republican from Maine, has told head counters she probably will switch and vote yes when the contra aid bill comes up (even though, a colleague told us, "she will be handringing all the way"). Also included in a group of fence-sitting House members that recently visited Central America was Rep. Richard Ray, a moderate Democrat from Georgia. He also leans toward a switch.

White House insiders believe they have acquired allies among House Democrats who could help the president mitigate O'Neill's wrath over the contras as killers of babies and nuns. These congressmen heard sharp attacks on the Sandinistas in private talks with Central America's four democratically-elected presidents, from Costa Rica, Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador — much sharper than is heard in public.

That may reflect Reagan's efforts to pump up support for the contra plans by talking on the telephone to his Central American counterparts. One president received the impression that while Reagan does not want to send any U.S. troops to Nicaragua, he will if he has to.

But the rapid Sandinista military buildup also explains the trend of the fence-sitters to Reagan. Until now, no Soviet pilot has ever been known to fly a combat aircraft for or in a country hostile to the U.S. on the American mainland. According to White House sources, Soviet "technical assembly personnel" and test pilots are handling the new batch of MI-8 helicopters that arrived at Corinto last month.

The MI-8 is a top-of-the-line Soviet counter-insurgency weapon, designed for quick movement of troops, short-range reconnaissance and rapid supply for combat units. The Sandinistas, however, have a little problem with these new helicopters: no pilots to fly them.

Since speed in the Nicaraguan buildup is seen by Moscow as imperative in the interest of beating resumed U.S. aid to the contras, there was no time to train local pilots before the helicopters arrived. Instead, the Kremlin risked a negative response in Congress and a Reagan administration reaction by sending Soviet pilots. They are flight-testing and training, but not flying combat missions as of now.

Another development that will be carefully analyzed for the speaker is completion of the new Sandinista military port of El Bluff on the Caribbean, the first major harbor on the Atlantic side of the isthmus. The new military harbor transforms the supply-line problem, cutting weeks from future arms deliveries from the Soviet Union and Cuba. Until now, Soviet supply ships have had to circumnavigate South America and unload at Corinto on the Pacific side, the only harbor in Nicaragua safe for large ships.

Tip O'Neill over the years has paid more attention to stories of atrocities than the Soviet military and even strategic threat on the American mainland. Now he is being asked to look at hard intelligence in hopes that he will hasten congressional action before it becomes too late to matter.

CHARLEY REESE

Lawyers responsible for 'insurance crisis'

The American Academy of Trial Lawyers reminds me of the little boy whose parents find him in the kitchen besmeared with blackberry jam.

Charley Reese

"Did you get into the jam?" the parents ask.

"No, not me," he says, smiling through the jam. "Somebody else had left the jam on the counter with the lid off and the cat got into it with his feet and then, while I was trying to clean up his mess, the cat smeared it all over my face."

To hear the American Academy of Trial Lawyers tell it, the current liability crisis is the fault of the insurance companies, doctors, manufacturers, the news media, politicians, the president, and perhaps even God. Trial lawyers themselves, however, are as innocent as if they had just been born in a manger as a result of immaculate conception.

In truth, of course, they are not innocent. They prospect for gold in the wasteland of torn flesh and bitter tears. They have taken an honorable profession and a sensible principle — that people injured by others' negligence should be made whole — and distorted both beyond recognition. They have seized the people's courthouse and are charging them an enormous fee for access to it. To defend their mining claims, they use phony arguments as ruthlessly as a Colombian drug dealer uses bullets.

Well, I am not a Utopian, a lawyer-hater, or an insurance company lover. I don't expect lawyers to be a band of angels any more than I expect that of any other group. All humans are flawed folks with a vested interest in the hope that God is more merciful than he is just.

The argument, however, that the current crisis in liability is nothing more than an elaborate plot by the insurance industry to mask their greed and to besmirch the good name of the trial lawyers flies about as well as an elephant with clipped ears.

It is not within the power of the insurance companies to generate the huge increase in lawsuits and claims. From 1974 to 1985, product liability cases filed in American courts increased by 758 percent. Malpractice claims against doctors jumped from 10,568 in 1979 to 23,545 in 1983.

You could, if you are naive enough to believe the trial lawyers, assume that is the fault of doctors and manufacturers of products. Or, you might think it has something to do with the excessive number of lawyers in the country, some 600,000: more per capita than any other nation on earth.

It is also difficult to understand how an insurance company could be feathering its own nest by refusing to sell insurance. If, as the lawyers argue, there is no problem with excessive claims and excessive awards, then why would an insurance company not be willing to sell its product?

What lawyers — both trial lawyers and those lawyers sitting as judges — have done is change the old concept of liability. It used to be that to collect for damages, you had to prove negligence. Technically, that is still true except that the legal definition of negligence has been expanded to infinity. The injured party's role in his own injury is not even a factor.

The lawyers have succeeded in creating a legal definition of liability and negligence which imposes on manufacturers and doctors the burden of omniscience and infallibility. In some cases, it goes beyond that to requiring supernatural powers. A lawn mower manufacturer, for example, is supposed to foresee that a doctor with a bad heart will precipitate a heart attack by trying to start a mower with a minor defect that makes it difficult to start. That would require supernatural powers on the part of the lawn mower manufacturer since not even the doctor knew he had a bad heart.

The plain fact is that the lawyer has no interest in suing unless he can collect big bucks. So lawyers have done everything they can to find the deep pockets, no matter how remotely connected to the incident. And judges have let them get away with it, thus creating case law which is an abomination to reason.

Since the lawyers will not clean up their own act, there is no choice but for legislatures and the Congress to do it. It needs to be done, not to protect the insurance industry, but to protect a wonderful judicial system which lawyers are destroying.

Shuttle engines have risk of failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The space shuttle main engines, "built at the edge of, or outside of, previous engineering experience," may have a risk of failure many times greater than that estimated by NASA management, according to a report by Nobel physicist Richard Feynman.

Moreover, Feynman concluded, the NASA troubleshooting on the engines "is closely analagous to the deterioration seen in the rules" for the booster rockets whose failure caused the Challenger catastrophe.

In a 13-page personal report that focuses attention on the shuttle's most complicated component, the Rogers commission member described the problem-solving process as "a slow shift toward decreasing safety" at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

By way of example, Feynman said NASA had changed the definition of what constitutes a turbine blade failure, making "the crack problem not a flight safety problem, but merely a maintenance problem."

He also reviewed the shuttle "avionics," — that is, the computer system that guides shuttle ascent, descent and orbital maneuvers — and found NASA's work in developing and problem solving was exemplary, even though the hardware is 15 years out of date.

Feynman's study is to be published next month by the commission as part of an appendix to last week's commission report, but Feynman provided copies at a news conference last week in California. He is traveling in Great Britain and could not be reached Monday for elaboration.

NASA spokeswoman Shirley Green said, "We have no comments on Dr. Feynman's views, but we are aware that he is a distinguished physicist, a dedicated member of the commission who devoted a lot of time to his study."

Feynman noted that "the engine is a much more complicated structure than the solid rocket booster," and added, "Generally, the engineering seems to be of high quality and apparently considerable attention is paid to deficiencies and faults found in operation."

Nonetheless, his paper draws parallels between how both the liquid-fuel main engines and the solid-fuel booster rockets were tested and certified by NASA and how NASA has responded to problems within each.

Feynman reports that NASA's estimate of the odds of a disastrous engine failure are the same as its estimate of a booster failure — one in 100,000.

But Feynman said engineers at Rocketdyne, manufacturer of the main engines, calculated a one in 10,000 chance of failure. He added: "Engineers at Marshall (Space Flight Center) estimate it as one in 300, while NASA management, to whom these engineers report, claims it is one in 100,000. An independent engineer consulting for NASA thought one or two per 100 a reasonable estimate."

The commission's main report pointed out that NASA had never deliberately tested the main engines to the failure point to see what their limits are, and urged that be done.

In his report, Feynman suggested a proper engineering analysis would conclude that one out of 100 booster rockets would fail catastrophically. NASA's estimate for a "loss of vehicle, loss of human life" shuttle accident was one in 100,000 and Feynman wrote: "We could properly ask, what is the cause of management's fantastic faith in the machinery?"

In framing his report, Feynman said that during the Jan. 28 Challenger flight, "the three space shuttle main engines all worked perfectly.... The question arises, however, as to whether, had it failed, and we were to investigate it in as much detail as we did the solid rocket booster, we would find a similar lack of attention to faults and a deteriorating reliability. In other words, were the organization weaknesses that contributed to the accident confined to the solid rocket booster sector or were they a more general characteric of NASA?"

His conclusion: "It is evident that the flight readiness reviews and certification rules show a deterioration for some of the problems of the space shuttle main engine that is closely analogous to the deterioration seen in the rules for the solid rocket booster."

The three main engines — located in the rear of the orbiter — are fed by liquid fuels from the large rust-colored external tank. They provide more lifting power for their weight than any previous rocket engine, Feynman said.

"It is built at the edge of, or outside of, previous engineering experience," he wrote.

He listed a series of problems with the engines which he said have probably been solved.

But he said either uncorrected or perhaps uncorrected were: turbine blade cracks in high pressure fuel turbopumps, turbine blade cracks in high pressure oxygen turbopumps, high pressure fuel turbopump turbine sheet metal cracking, bearing spalling, and a vibration at 4,000 Hertz making some engines inoperable.

"In a total of about 250,000 seconds of operation, the engines have failed seriously perhaps 16 times," Feynman said. He described most of the problems as "the early difficulties of a new design," because "13 of them occurred in the first 125,000 seconds (of engine firings) and only three in the second 125,000 seconds." Each engine fires for about 500 seconds during a flight.

Feynman said "it is not unreasonable to guess there may be at least one surprise in the next 250,000 seconds, a probability of one in 500 per engine per mission."

Focusing on one vexing problem, Feynman said engine turbine blades have cracked much more quickly than expected.

"It is claimed that the (safety) criteria are not abandoned, and the system is safe, by giving up" civilian aircraft standards "that there should be no cracks, and considering only a completely fractured blade a failure."

"With this definition, no engine has yet failed," Feynman said. He said NASA believes it can inspect for cracks between flights and swap out the bad blades before they break and force an engine failure.

Shuttle pilot's widow criticizes NASA's 'terrible judgments'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The report on the Challenger disaster shows that NASA officials exhibited "incredibly terrible judgments" before the ill-fated space shuttle was launched, the widow of the shuttle's pilot says.

Jane Smith

Jane Jarrell Smith said Monday that she avoided reaching any conclusions until the presidential commission completed its investigation and published its report.

Her comments, made as she was visiting family members in Charlotte, were the first extensive public response to the commission's report by a close relative of a shuttle crew member. Her husband, Michael J. Smith, and six others were killed when the Challenger exploded Jan. 28.

"The report reflects incredibly terrible judgments, shockingly sparse concern for human life, instances of officials lacking the courage to exercise the responsibilities of their high office and some very bewildering thought processes," Mrs. Smith said in a statement published in today's editions of The Washington Post and The New York Times.

"We hope that, from this tragedy, we have learned above all to hold allegiance to the sacredness of human life, to have the courage to place safety first and to honor those who have the strength to honor truth," the statement said.

"I'm sure that Mike, having been a test pilot ... and having had the lives of others in his hand, would not have compromised the safety of the mission," she told the Times in a telephone interview. "If this had happened to a friend, I'm sure he would have been incensed."

Mrs. Smith, who grew up in Charlotte, told The Charlotte Observer that she had spent the last five months adjusting to life without her husband and learning to live with the television images and newspaper stories about the disaster.

"It's still very hard to pick up a paper and that's what you see ... It was a shared national joy that turned around in how many seconds? In 73 seconds," she said.

In its report released June 9, the commission headed by former Secretary of State William P. Rogers concluded the accident was caused by a failure of a joint in the shuttle's solid rocket booster. National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials went ahead with the Challenger launch despite warnings about the faulty seal, the commission said.

The report "appeared to be thorough and accurate," Mrs. Smith told the Post.

She told The Charlotte Observer she has spent part of the time since the tragedy working with relatives of other shuttle victims on plans for a museum in the Houston area to serve as a memorial for the crew, she said.

"It will be called the Children's Challenge Center for Space Science," she said. "It will be an educational facility for teachers as well as students, a learning center for the whole country."

There was talk of a granite monument or some such to honor the seven, Mrs. Smith said, but "we felt like a living tribute would be more in keeping with our spouses."

A police officer leads an Elk City, Okla., woman from a downtown Oklahoma City law office after a three-hour standoff Monday. The woman, not identified by police, threatened suicide in an effort to receive payment in a wrongful death suit.

No charges expected in law firm standoff

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A woman who threatened suicide in a downtown Oklahoma City law office if she did not receive her share of a wrongful death settlement will not be charged, but authorities will try to get her "the mental health help that she needs," a police pokesman said.

The woman entered the law office of Lampkin, McCaffrey and Tawwater late Monday afternoon, and after arguing with her attorney, threatened to shoot herself with a handgun, said police spokesman Capt. M.T. Berry.

The law office is located on the second floor of the Sheraton Century Center mall, a busy complex that includes a luxury hotel, offices and shops.

The woman's two children, ages 12 and 14, remained with the woman after an undetermined number of office workers were evacuated, Berry said, but were never in danger.

Two hours after the standoff began, one of the children was released unharmed, Berry said, and negotiations began.

About an hour later, the woman came out from a back room and "pulled out the gun and pressed it to her head" when she came face to face with a police tactical unit in the law firm's front offices.

She was told to return to the back room or put the gun down, and moments later, she surrendered the weapon and was taken into custody, Berry said.

Berry said no charges were filed, and none were expected, saying it was in best interest of woman that she receive psychiatric help.

The woman was released to the custody of the Oklahoma County Mental Health Unit, and the children were released to the custody of a grandmother.

Authorities refused to release the names of the woman or her children.

But Larry Tawwater, an attorney with the law firm identified the woman as Melba Jean Holland, 31, of Elk City.

Berry said the woman felt as though she had been treated unfairly by the law firm.

"She wants $124,000 in cash that she claims is her part of a settlement in a wrongful death case," Berry said. The lawsuit concerns the death of her husband, who died in an accident.

Tawwater said the lawsuit was a product liability case that stemmed from the death of Mrs. Holland's husband, who burned to death when a tractor-trailer truck caught fire while Holland was in the process of filling it with a flammable liquid.

He said a $400,000 settlement had been reached in the lawsuit in December, but the five plaintiffs — Mrs. Holland, two of Holland's children from a previous marriage and the man's parents — could not agree on how to split the sum.

A federal judge decided the case about a month ago, Tawwater said, "and that's when she really became distressed."

He said the woman felt the amount she had been awarded was not satisfactory.

"She apparently was demanding her share of a settlement awarded in the case, but they told her that it could not be made until the waiting period in the appeal process is up," Berry said.

The spokesman said the firm twice offered the woman a check in the amount she demanded, but she refused it, demanding instead cash.

The woman's mother, Denia Appleton, told The Daily Oklahoman that Ms. Holland told her, "There is no help, Momma. I've got two kids I've made promises to and I'm not able to keep them."

She believed that for once in her life she had a fighting chance, Ms. Appleton said.

U.S. unprepared to break with Kabul regime

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has rejected a request by Afghan guerrillas that he break relations with the Soviet-backed Kabul regime, but rebel leaders say they will establish their own government and seek sophisticated arms to defend it.

Reagan told the Afghans on Monday that although recognition was important, it was too early to make a decision. He also said any negotiated settlement to the fighting must provide for withdrawal of all Soviet troops from Afghanistan and a method of permitting the Afghans to determine their own form of government, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said.

"Our goals are identical: the freedom of Afghanistan. The Soviets must not believe that aggression pays," Speakes quoted the president as telling the four leaders during an Oval Office meeting.

Following the meeting, the guerrilla leaders vowed to continue their fight against the government in Kabul, which is backed by an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops.

"The first thing the mojahedeen (Moslem guerrillas) intend to do is to declare a government in the liberated area, which is about 80 percent of Afghanistan," rebel official Burhanuddin Rabbani said.

Another Afghan leader, Sebghatullah Mojadedi, told reporters, "We need anti-aircraft forces, sophisticated weapons, so that we can protect this area from bombing" and from attack.

The rebel leaders set no timetable for establishing a government.

The leaders of the Itahed-I-Islami Mojahedeen, also known as the Afghanistan Resistance Alliance, met with Reagan and congressional leaders to press their campaign for more military and humanitarian aid, and for wider international recognition.

The alliance, formed last year, unites the seven main guerrilla groups battling to overthrow the Kabul government.

They seek to represent Afghanistan next year at the Islamic Conference, a regular meeting of Islamic nations, and ultimately to win a seat at the United Nations.

Rabbani told Reagan of "casualties and atrocities" inflicted by the Soviets, and at the end of his presentation, Speakes said, Rabbani "indicated that he would like to have official diplomatic recognition of the resistance effort."

Speakes said Reagan replied that recognition would be "premature to resolve now."

Maintaining the U.S. Embassy in Kabul is part of "our efforts to be helpful to the resistance and our efforts to continue working with the Afghan people to overcome the Soviet aggression," Speakes explained.

Administration officials refused to disclose the amount of covert aid they have channeled to the Afghan rebels over the years, but according to published reports, it amounts to hundreds of millions of dollars.

Speakes said, "The United States has always pledged to support the efforts of the freedom fighters in Afghanistan. I will not be more specific."

The Afghan leaders denied reports the United States had supplied them with advanced laser-aided Stinger anti-aircraft missiles.

AMA encouraged to take lead in tough crackdown on smoking

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association, criticized by one member as a "Johnny-come-lately" on the issue, is being asked to lead the fight for a tough crackdown on smoking including tighter curbs on tobacco sales.

"The surgeon general years ago took the lead. We should have been the organization taking the lead," St. Louis physician Dr. George M. Bohigian told an AMA public health committee Monday at the organization's annual meeting.

"I think it's kind of a shame that the AMA has been Johnny-come-lately on this issue," he said.

The committee heard a spate of reports and resolutions aimed at tobacco use and will make recommendations on them today to the AMA's 386-member House of Delegates, the policy making body of the 271,000-member organization.

AMA delegates voted last year to support legislation to ban tobacco advertising across-the-board. AMA trustee Ronald M. Davis reported at Monday's committee meeting that such legislation was introduced in Congress last week.

In Washington, D.C., a spokesman for the Tobacco Institute countered by saying a recent poll commissioned by his organization among 1,030 Americans found cigarette advertising was viewed as the least important of six issues organized medicine might address.

"The public was much more interested in seeing the AMA address the high costs of medical care."

WEATHER

Midland officially received only a trace of rain during the storm. However, precipitation varied in other parts of the county as Greenwood residents reported as much as an inch fell there. About .75 of an inch of rain fell near Tower Road southwest of Midland and .15 of an inch fell at the Midland Farmers' Co-op.

Co-op spokesman Hoot Leonard said it was too early to tell what, if any damage occurred to cotton crops in the wake of the sand storm. "With the electricity from the lightning and the heavy sand, the cotton usually gets burned pretty bad. But it'll be a few days or so before we know just how bad it is," he said.

Today, showers and thunderstorms occurred from the Edwards Plateau and the hill country, across South Central Texas into the southeast section of the state.

The stronger thunderstorms were in a line that stretched from northwest of San Antonio to Eagle Pass and over the upper Texas coast.

Elsewhere, dense fog formed over the extreme northeast corner of the state, where visibility was only one-fourth mile.

Statewide, temperatures were mostly in the 60s and 70s overnight, with early morning readings ranging from 62 at Amarillo to 81 at Corpus Christi.

Monday night, according to a spokeswoman for Dallas Power & Light, about 4,000 Dallas residents were without power for almost an hour after heavy winds and rain downed six major power lines across the city.

Six construction workers, repairing a window washing system at the Allied Bank Tower in downtown Dallas were stranded for several minutes when the storm and its 30 to 40 mph winds caught them by surprise.

Four men on scaffoldings below the 15th floor were lowered to safety, said Ric Moore, vice president of Criswell Development Co. But wo men working on the 44th floor clung to the scaffolding for almost 15 minutes until they were able to climb into an open window.

Bad weather conditions at the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport forced several large jets to divert to Abilene Monday.

Bob Vick of Abilene, vice president of Chaparral Airlines, said two American Airlines 727s, an American DC-9 and a Braniff 727 were diverted to Abilene for up to four hours.

Four boaters were left in distress on a lake near Fort Worth after winds reached 62 mph, authorities said. A small motorboat apparently capsized during the storm, but all three men aboard swam safely to shore, lake patrol officer Red Barton said. A small sailboat with one passenger also foundered and had to be towed in, Barton said.

The weather "changed from calm to 30-40 mph winds in 5 or 10 minutes," Eagle Mountain Lake Fire Lt. Bill Crawford said.

McLemore gets call from above

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Shortly after Midland was eliminated from the Texas League West first-half title chase Sunday by El Paso, the Angels were dealt a second loss.

This time, however it was a loss every minor league ball player hopes for. It's the kind of loss every minor league manager strives for: The promotion of a player.

Angels' second baseman Mark McLemore was back in Midland Monday while the rest of the team remained in the border city to finish first half of the season. McLemore is packing his things for a trip to Edmonton's Class AAA Pacific Coast League Trappers.

He caught a plane to Canada this morning and hopes to be in the Trapper lineup tonight. It isn't the Major Leagues, but it's only one step away.

"I'd like to be there (Majors) now, but it's all up to them," said McLemore. "You never know when it will happen, if it happens."

McLemore says the call wasn't much of a surprise.

"Well, I was hoping for it," said McLemore. "I wasn't really looking to hard for it because I had to concentrate on the first half of the season here. But, it's very welcome. I thought I was playing well enough to get the promotion. It was just a matter of time, I guess."

IN A sport where a player can be mired down at one level for years, McLemore has made a steady climb toward his goal of Major League baseball.

"I graduated from Morse High in San Diego and went into the pros in June of '82," said McLemore. "As a matter of fact, it was four years ago today, almost."

From high school, McLemore went into rookie ball in Salem, Ore., in 1982 and from there progressed to Peoria and Redwood in Class A before coming to Midland last season for AA experience.

Midland manager Joe Maddon believes it's only a matter of a brief amount of time before McLemore takes the final step.

"If he does well enough the next couple of months he should be in the Big Leagues by the end of the season," said Maddon. "There's no reason why he can't be brought up when they expand the roster."

Maddon said he received the call for McLemore a few days ago, but was told to keep him "until we were eliminated from the race. I told him Sunday night. I'm very happy for him. It's something he's worked hard for and he deserves the opportunity. I can't wait unilt the next whistle blows for him in Anaheim."

McLEMORE HAS had a great first half with the Angels. In 63 games, he collected 75 hits in 237 at bats for a .316 average, hitting nine doubles, one triple and one home run for 30 RBI.

As a leadoff hitter, McLemore has on on-base average of .428 and scored 54 runs. While he lacked exceptional power at the plate, McLemore made up for it with his speed, stealing 38 bases in 45 attempts.

Defensively, McLemore has committed only 13 errors this year.

"When you combine his on-base average with his hitting average, it makes his numbers even more incredible," said Maddon.

And, that's why he's been sent up.

"Because he's playing well," said Bill Bavasi, farm director for the California Angels. "Our job is to get these guys to the major leagues and we're taking McLemore one step closer because he's playing so well right now."

Also, there appears to be some trouble at second in Edmonton. According to Trapper Public Relations Director Steve Smith, three players have seen time at second base.

"The last couple of games Gus Polidor has been at second and he's usually a shortstop," said Smith. "Early in the season we were playing Craig Gerber at second but he's been hurt.

"Norm Carrasco has played second base most of the time but we heard they wanted to try Polidor at second."

Now, it appears McLemore will be the new second baseman. Maddon says the move to Edmonton isn't so McLemore can ride the AAA bench. They intend to play him.

Randall belts homer in 11th to save Angels

From Staff and Wire Reports

EL PASO — James 'Sap' Randall lifted the Midland Angels to a wild 16-15 Texas League victory over El Paso Monday night with an 11th inning home run to end the Diablos' come-back bid.

Pitching was nearly non-existent as hitters for both teams unloaded for big nights.

Raul Tovar led the RBI charger for Midland with four while Billie Merrifield and Jeff Schaefer collected three hits each as did El Paso's Bob Nandin.

Diablo Jesus Alfaro increased his hitting streak to 22 games and Steve Stanicek upped his to 14.

Midland jumped out to a big lead, jumping out to a 14-6 advantage after five innings only to see it blow away in the sixth with a six-run El Paso rally.

The Angels added another run in the top of the seventh and gave up three more in the bottom of the inning to tie the game at 15 where it remained until Randall's game-winning blast in the 11th.

ELSEWHERE, THE Jackson Mets have taken their quest for the first-half championship in the Eastern Division race down to the final game.

The Mets trailed the Arkansas Travelers by percentage points going into Monday night's head-to-head battle, but claimed a one-game lead with one game to play by routing Arkansas 10-2.

The win means that whoever wins tonight's game in Jackson will be the Eastern champ for the first half. Arkansas would be in front again by scant percentage points if it can win.

In other TL games San Antonio won its fourth straight game by shutting out Beaumont 3-0 on the road; and Tulsa edged Shreveport 2-1.

Jackson got two runs in the first inning, two more in the fourth, four in the sixth and two in the eighth. In the big sixth inning, Rick Lockwood singled, Doug Gwosdz doubled, and Kevin Elster walked to load the bases. Lockwood scored on a single by pitcher Kurt Lundgren.

There are still TV $s despite TV sanctions

FORT WORTH (AP) — While serving two years of NCAA sanctions prohibiting live television appearances, the University of Florida will recoup approximately $200,000 in monetary losses through an extensive cable-delay system.

In addition, for the first time in history the Gators' entire home football schedule for 1986 is sold out.

Southern Methodist, which will serve its one-season television ban this fall, recently announced a package with Channel 21 for same-day, tape-delay telecast of six of its 1986 football games. Those telecasts will net the school approximately $15,000.

But the Mustangs' program will remain in the public eye, thus at least preventing the total lack of visual exposure that a television ban is designed to create.

Has modern technology taken the ping out of one of the NCAA's most-utilized hammers?

Yes, and no.

Rookies need time to shine

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the favorite phrases of NBA scouting chief Marty Blake is "immediate gratification."

Blake believes that virtually every player taken in the first round of today's NBA draft could eventually become a star. The problem, Blake says, is that teams and their fans want rookies to step in and become a big contributor from the first game.

Such "immediate gratification" rarely occurs, according to Blake.

"It doesn't work out that way," he said. "Houston had Ralph Sampson No. 1 and Rodney McCray No. 3 three years ago and the Rockets still finished last. You can't look at the success of a rookie class just by looking at its first years. It takes two or three years at least."

But Blake called the 1986 draft the most outstanding in a decade.

"Even if Philadelphia and Boston were picking 23rd and 24th instead of 1-2," Blake said, "they would get a good player because this is an outstanding draft. You can't expect immediate gratification from these players, but many of them will be stars in the future."

Philadelphia and Boston picked first and second in the draft because of earlier trades with the Los Angeles Clippers and Seattle, respectively, and their good luck in the draft lottery on May 11.

But the 76ers and Celtics — and every other team — said little in advance about their plans for the draft, unlike previous years when many picks could easily be predicted.

"Nothing is cut and dried," 76ers General Manager Pat Williams said. "You can't lock in the first few picks like in past years."

With so many potentially good players in the draft, Williams said teams might have been fearful of making a glaring mistake.

"You could look very bad in this draft," Williams said. "There's no delineation of players. Who really knows whether Chris Washburn will be as good at his position as Pearl Washington will be at his. Teams probably should be picking this time according to need."

After Philadelphia and Boston, the first-round draft order was Golden State, Indiana, New York, Phoenix, Dallas, Cleveland, Chicago, San Antonio, Detroit, Washington, New Jersey, Portland, Utah, Denver, Sacramento, Denver, Atlanta, Houston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, the Los Angeles Lakers and Portland.

Washburn, 6-foot-11, and 7-foot William Bedford of Memphis State led a group of underclassmen with a chance of being drafted in the first round. Other top early eligibles were St. John's All-America Walter Berry, Cedric Henderson of Georgia (who played in Italy last season), Washington of Syracuse and John Williams of Louisiana State.

Top seniors included Brad Daugherty of North Carolina, Len Bias of Maryland, Kenny Walker of Kentucky, Chuck Person of Auburn, Dell Curry of Virginia Tech, Ron Harper of Miami, Ohio, Maurice Martin of St. Joseph's, Anthony Jones of Nevada-Las Vegas, Johnny Dawkins and Mark Alarie of Duke and Brad Sellers of Ohio State.

"It's a deep draft, one through 40," Pacers chief scout Tom Newell said. "There are not any impact players, but a lot of contributors."

"It's just like Las Vegas," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "You know when people gamble you always can lose, but the casinos have things figured so they've got all the percentages. That's how they built all those hotels on the strip. That's what we're trying to do — play the percentages."

'Hot Rod' cleared of point shaving

AP Laserphoto

John 'Hot Rod' Williams carries his son out of a New Orleans court room after being found not guilty on all counts of sports bribery.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A six-member jury cleared John "Hot Rod" Williams of point shaving charges and the former Tulane University forward made plans for a professional basketball career that has been in limbo for a year.

Williams was acquitted Monday of five counts of conspiracy and bribery, charges that could have cost him 17 years in prison and $35,000 in fines. Tulane abandoned its men's basketball program in the wake of the point shaving scandal and allegations of numerous NCAA violations disclosed at the same time.

Williams was arrested on March 26, 1985, indicted two days later and tried for the first time in August. That trial ended abruptly in a mistrial and Monday's verdict came on the sixth day of his second trial.

"It's been rough on me, but now I can get on with my life," Williams, 24, said Monday after being found innocent.

The Cleveland Cavaliers gambled a second-round choice on Williams in last year's draft, picking him despite a letter circulated by the National Basketball Association warning that he could not play in the league as long as the legal cloud hung over him.

Cavs owners George and Gordon Gund have paid Williams' legal expenses, although they had to withdraw their contract during the preseason when Williams' first trial failed to clear up his legal status.

Monday, the Cavaliers said Williams is under contract to Cleveland.

"The Cleveland Cavaliers are delighted that John Williams has been found innocent of all charges," the team said in a release from its offices. "We have at all times been confident that John would be vindicated when the matter finally came to trial.

"The Cavs have signed a contract with John and look forward to him being an important part of the team in the years ahead."

Normally, a player unsigned for a year becomes a free agent, but NBA general counsel Gary Bettman said Monday Williams is a special case, and the Cavs retain his rights.

Hough's no-hit bid turns into nightmare 2-1 defeat

AP Laserphoto

Texas pitcher Charlie Hough grimly walks off the field after losing first a no-hitter and then the game in a disasterous ninth inning at 'Wally World'.

Associated Press

Texas knuckleballer Charlie Hough was two outs away from baseball immortality when he stepped into "Wally World."

The 38-year-old Hough needed only two outs for the first major-league no-hitter since the last day of the 1984 season, when pinch-hitter Jack Howell reached on a three-base error by left fielder George Wright and rookie sensation Wally Joyner singled to right-center field to tie the game 1-1, ending the no-hit bid.

Wright came on as a defensive replacement for Gary Ward in the bottom of the ninth, and dropped Howell's fly after a long run toward the left-field foul line.

Joyner reached second on a dancing knuckleball that waltzed away from catcher Orlando Mercado for a passed ball. The Rangers walked Reggie Jackson intentionally, after Doug DeCinces struck out, to face George Hendrick.

Hough, 5-3, worked the count to 3-2 and Hendrick swung and missed, but the knuckler again eluded Mercado and danced away. Joyner, running with the pitch, never broke stride and scored as Hough failed to cover home plate, giving the Angels a bizarre 2-1 victory at Anaheim Monday night.

"It was just a mental lapse on Charlie's part, not to cover home," Joyner said.

"I just flat out blew it," Hough said. "It was definitely my fault. We'd have had the guy (Joyner) if I had just walked up there."

Mercado, who was charged with a passed ball on the game-winning play, said he saw Hough pointing to throw the ball to first, but he (Mercado) was 20 to 25 feet from home plate.

"I expected Charlie to be at home plate," Mercado said. "I forgot about Hendrick. I have to look for Wally."

Overshadowed in Hough's no-hit attempt, was the brilliant pitching of winner Kirk McCaskill, 6-4. McCaskill allowed only four hits, walking three and striking out 10. The Rangers scored an unearned run in the second when center fielder Gary Pettis dropped Toby Harrah's drive for a two-base error and Steve Buechele singled.

In his previous start last Wednesday, Hough pitched 13 innings against the Minnesota Twins in a game won 6-2 by the Rangers in 16 innings. In that game Hough allowed only one hit over his final eight innings.

"I've had as good a knuckleball or better," Hough said. "I've probably had better stuff. I had pretty good stuff tonight. You should win ..."

"The strangest, you talk to guys in this room in the game for 20 years, they'll tell you it's the strangest game they've seen," McCaskill said. "It was great to be involved in it. It's unbelievable."

Joyner, who leads the AL with 19 homers, had another reason to celebrate. He turned 24 years old on Monday and stills leads the fans' balloting at first base for the All-Star Game.

The last no-hitter pitched in the majors was by Mike Witt for California on Sept. 30, 1984 against Texas at Arlington. The last no-hitter at Anaheim was by the Rangers' Bert Blyleven, a 6-0 victory over the Angels on Sept. 22, 1977.

American League

Red Sox 10, Yankees 1

Roger Clemens pitched a four-hitter for his 12th victory without a loss and Jim Rice drove in four runs with three singles as Boston extended its first-place lead over New York to 4½ games in the AL East.

Clemens' start is the best in the major leagues since Ron Guidry opened the 1978 with 13 straight victories. The major-league record for consecutive triumphs at the start of a season is 19 by Rube Marquard in 1912.

"I'm not surprised by my success," Clemens said. "I've been throwing the ball well."

The Red Sox broke an eight-game losing streak against the Yankees and did it by rapping 16 hits, including three apiece by Rice, Tony Armas, Don Baylor and Rey Quinones. Guidry, 4-7, lost his sixth straight game, getting pounded for five runs in less than three innings.

Tigers 5, Orioles 4

Alan Trammell's two-out double snapped a sixth-inning tie and Tom Brookens hit a three-run homer in the eighth after Baltimore intentionally walked Pat Sheridan.

Frank Tanana, 7-4, won for the Tigers, who had lost 12 of their previous 16. John Pacella, who was purchased from Class AAA Nashville of the American Association on Monday, came on to rescue the Tigers from an eighth-inning jam to earn his first save.

Leading 2-1 in the eighth, Alan Trammell walked and stole second. And the Orioles walked Sheridan to get to Brookens, who crossed up the strategy with his first homer of the season.

"You try not to let an intentional walk affect you," Brookens said. "It wasn't like they were picking on me ... at least, I hope not. But you always have that little extra when it happens."

Mike Young hit a three-run homer to bring the Orioles close in the eighth.

Royals 3, A's 2

Rudy Law doubled home the go-ahead run in the 11th inning to give Kansas City its victory over Oakland behind the combined six-hit pitching of rookie Scott Bankhead and two relievers.

Willie Wilson walked to lead off the 11th against Jose Rijo, 2-5, who came in to start the inning. After Argenis Salazar struck out, Wilson stole second and Law followed with his double. George Brett was intentionally walked and George Orta drove in Law with an RBI single to give the Royals a 3-1 lead and their eventual winning run.

"He (Law) has had a great year for us," Manager Dick Howser said. "I don't know where we'd be without him."

Blue Jays 9, Brewers 2

Garth Iorg drove in three runs and Ernie Whitt, George Bell and Tony Fernandez hit home runs to give Toronto 12 homers in its last five games and a victory over Milwaukee.

The Blue Jays won their third consecutive game as Doyle Alexander, 5-3, and Don Gordon combined to scatter 10 hits. Gordon pitched the final four innings for his first major-league save.

"When we're playing right, we don't have an easy out in the lineup," said Iorg, who drove in his runs with a single and a sacrifice fly.

Umps short-change Pirates with quick rainout call

Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Pirates felt like someone had pulled the plug on them.

"That's the quickest I've ever seen a game called in any league. This has to go down in the Guinness Book of World Records," Pirates General Manager Syd Thrift said after Monday night's rain-shortened 4-1 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals.

The contest, the Pirates' fifth straight loss, was called in the top of the sixth inning at Three Rivers Stadium after two rain delays totaling 39 minutes. The Pirates felt the umpires reacted precipitously, considering that National League instructions direct the umpires' crew chief to wait 75 minutes after the first delay in play and 45 minutes after a second delay before calling a game.

"I've never heard of any game being called in less than 45 minutes," said Pirates Manager Jim Leyland, who said he would file an official protest. "We didn't get something we had coming."

Jack Clark homered to back Danny Cox's four-hit pitching as the Cardinals climbed past the Pirates by a half-game into fifth place in the NL East. Cox, 2-5, maintained his mastery over the Pirates, who have beaten him only once in nine career decisions. An 18-game winner in 1985 who won only once in his first six decisions this season, Cox blanked the Pirates after allowing Barry Bonds' solo homer in the third inning.

Clark's leadoff homer in the second was his seventh of the season and the 28th of his career against Pittsburgh. The Cardinals scored their winning run in the fourth on an RBI single by Willie McGee.

A half-hour after the game was called by crew chief John Kibler, it had stopped raining and the Three Rivers Stadium outfield contained only several small puddles.

"We didn't want to keep going out there and taking the tarp off and covering it again and having the pitchers warm up and sit back down," Kibler said. "The weather forecast wasn't good and there were tornado warnings in the area. We didn't want to start play again for the betterment of everybody."

National League

Mets 4, Expos 1

Darryl Strawberry singled home the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning as New York scored three times to beat Montreal in a game delayed for more then two hours by rain. The victory fattened the Mets' lead to 11½ games over the Expos in the National League East.

Wally Backman started the Mets' winning rally with a one-out single off Jeff Reardon, 6-4, and stole second to move into scoring position for Strawberry. One out later, Len Dykstra singled home two insurance runs for the Mets.

Doug Sisk, 1-1, pitched two innings to pick up the victory.

The Mets carried a 1-0 lead into the bottom of the eighth, but the Expos tied it on a one-out walk to Tim Raines and singles by Hubie Brooks and Tim Wallach off reliever Roger McDowell.

Cubs 7, Phillies 5

Leon Durham's two-run homer and a two-run double by Shawon Dunston helped make Jamie Moyer's major-league pitching debut a success as Chicago defeated Philadelphia.

Dunston's double capped a four-run fourth and knocked out Steve Carlton, 4-8. Durham hit his eighth homer off reliever Tom Hume in the fifth.

Moyer, a 23-year-old left-hander summoned from Iowa on Saturday, was aided by some careless base running by the Phillies, who had two runners thrown out at the plate and another at third base. Lee Smith pitched 1 2-3 innings for his ninth save.

After the Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the top of the fourth, the Cubs came back with four in the bottom of the inning and never trailed again.

"I was looking for a slider and got it," Dunston said of his double in the fourth. "I was ready with the bases loaded and I just wanted to make contact."

Braves 4, Reds 3

Ken Oberkfell's third hit, a run-scoring single in the 10th, lifted Atlanta over Cincinnati. Dale Murphy had walked with one out and took third on Bob Horner's third single of the night before Oberkfell came through with his game-winning single off John Franco, 0-4.

Atlanta relief pitcher Gene Garber, 3-1, picked up the victory with one scoreless inning of relief. Garber has now pitched 18 1-3 innings of scoreless relief in his last 12 appearances.

The Braves had tied the game at 3-3 in the ninth on a two-run homer by rookie shortstop Andres Thomas.

Philadelphia's Glenn Wilson is out as Chicago catcher Steve Lake applies the tag at the plate at Wrigley Field Monday.

Padres 4, Giants 0

Andy Hawkins pitched a seven-hitter and Garry Templeton highlighted a three-run seventh inning with a two-run single as San Diego defeated San Francisco.

The game was scoreless until the sixth when Marvell Wynne hit a one-out solo homer off reliever Bill Laskey, 1-1.

Sixers deal Malone, top pick

Three team swap gives Cavs first choice

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — The Philadelphia 76ers traded all-star center Moses Malone to the Washington Bullets and surrendered the No. 1 pick in today's NBA college draft in a deal with the Cleveland Cavaliers, the Associated Press learned.

Philadelphia got 6-9 Roy Hinson from Cleveland and the Cavaliers' No. 8 first-round pick in the draft.

The 76ers sent the 6-foot-10 Malone to the Bullets for 6-10 center Jeff Ruland and 6-9 forward Cliff Robinson.

Philadelphia officials had expected to have a difficult time reaching a new contract agreement with Malone, 31, who came to the 76ers from Houston in 1982-83 and led them to the championship in his first season. Malone reportedly makes $2.2 million a year.

The stunning trades were made before the midnight (EDT) trading deadline, but were not made known until this morning.

The new first-round order of selection after Cleveland was Boston, Golden State, Indiana, New York, Phoenix, Dallas, Philadelphia, Chicago, San Antonio, Detroit, Washington, New Jersey, Portland, Utah, Denver, Sacramento, Denver, Atlanta, Houston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, the Los Angeles Lakers and Portland.

NBA scouting chief Marty Blake believes that virtually every player taken in the first round of the NBA draft could eventually become a star. The problem, Blake says, is that teams and their fans want rookies to step in and become a big contributor from the first game.

Such "immediate gratification" rarely occurs, according to Blake.

"It doesn't work out that way," he said. "Houston had Ralph Sampson No. 1 and Rodney McCray No. 3 three years ago and the Rockets still finished last. You can't look at the success of a rookie class just by looking at its first years. It takes two or three years at least."

But Blake called the 1986 draft the most outstanding in a decade.

Philadelphia originally had the No. 1 pick after a trade with the Los Angeles Clippers. Boston had No. 2 after a trade with Seattle. Philadelphia and Boston also had good luck in the draft lottery on May 11.

Before today's trades were revealed, 76ers General Manager Pat Williams said this was a different type of draft, where many picks could not easily be predicted.

"Nothing is cut and dried," Williams said. "You can't lock in the first few picks like in past years."

With so many potentially good players in the draft, Williams said teams might have been fearful of making a glaring mistake.

"You could look very bad in this draft," Williams said. "There's no delineation of players. Who really knows whether Chris Washburn will be as good at his position as Pearl Washington will be at his. Teams probably should be picking this time according to need."

Washburn, 6-foot-11, and 7-foot William Bedford of Memphis State led a group of underclassmen with a chance of being drafted in the first round. Other top early eligibles were St. John's All-America Walter Berry, Cedric Henderson of Georgia (who played in Italy last season), Washington of Syracuse and John Williams of Louisiana State.

Zimmer rejoins Yankee staff

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Zimmer has rejoined the New York Yankees as a member of the coaching staff, the club announced Monday.

Zimmer, 55, replaced Gene Michael, who left the Yankees to become manager of the Chicago Cubs. Zimmer spent the initial part of the 1986 season as the Cubs third base coach.

This is his second tenure with the Yankees having served as the third base coach during the 1983 season.

He played 11 years in the majors and was a manager for nine years spending five seasons with Boston Red Sox, two seasons with the Texas Rangers and two years with the San Diego Padres.

Hurt Boggs sidelined

NEW YORK (AP) — Wade Boggs of the Boston Red Sox, leading the major leagues with a .380 average, was not in the starting lineup for Monday night's game against New York because of continued rib problems.

Boggs hurt his ribs last week when he fell in his Toronto hotel room while pulling off his cowboy boots.

TV

"A television ban is of an institutional nature," said David Berst, head of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's enforcement division. "It has a financial impact. And because we feel a television appearance enhances the image of an institution, the lack of appearance is a factor in recruiting.

"And yes, the tape-delay broadcast does soften the blow. But delayed telecasts have never been part of the TV sanction."

DESPITE APPEARANCES, NCAA-imposed television sanctions have not been relegated to the status of a library lion, intimidating only in appearance.

"The financial aspect is great," said Richard Giannini, a Florida associate athletic director who put together the extensive cable package.

Florida's network blankets the state and, through various sports channels, has exposure in most major markets throughout the country.

"We figure that our two years of TV probation cost us approximately $1.3 million," Giannini said.

The more visible a program — the more it has been winning — the more it begets appearances on national television. Thus, a television ban delivers the winning programs the hardest blow.

"It's not as forceful as it was a few years ago before television revenues dropped," SMU athletic director Bob Hitch said. "But it's still pretty bad."

Hitch was talking of the period after the Supreme Court voided the NCAA television package. Though the 1983 court ruling took the NCAA out of the television packaging business, the court subsequently ruled that the NCAA had the right to use a television ban as a form of punitive action against rules violators.

"Based on our having the same number of appearances (two ESPN, one ABC) as a year ago, we'll lose about $520,000 in revenue this year," Hitch said. "As a result, we're facing the toughest budget year since I've been at SMU. And it's going to be a real fight to get through it."

Rather than endure a year's television sancion this fall, TCU volunteered to forfeit some $343,000 in TV-related revenue for the past two seasons in its recently concluded NCAA case. Because the Horned Frogs program is one that has not enjoyed great success in some time, the actual revenue loss pales beside a program such as Florida's or SMU's.

"The loss of monies and exposure depends really on where a school stands in the national picture," TCU athletic director Frank Windegger said. "But budgets are built around that television revenue to help balance them. To say just where we'll feel our loss is hard to say. But we'll feel it."

Though the revenue loss may play havoc with budgets, Berst said, "In many cases, we've found that the money lost isn't always considered that seriously.

"We've had a number of schools come to us and say they'd rather pay a substantial amount of money than endure the ban on television and post-season competition."

Giannini echoed that sentiment.

"Our main goal was to augment our national exposure rather than recover lost revenue," he said.

"In a way, the (television) ban has compensated for itself in some ways. It's augmented our marketability in some ways and it's certainly helped our radio network. We've been fortunate in that with past reserves, greater season ticket sales and fund raising, the impact on our school has not been as great as those schools which don't enjoy the kind of success we do in those areas. But all things considered, we'd much rather be able to appear on live television."

THANKS TO modern technology, the Gators in fact did appear on live television last fall.

Florida opened the 1985 season against Miami. The Turner Broadcasting System had requested a feed to WTBS in Atlanta from the Florida network for highlight purposes. The live signal was beamed via satellite. Much to their delight, many Florida fans found they could pick the signal up on backyard satellite dishes. Some restaurants and bars in Florida did the same thing, profitably packing their establishments and prompting strongly worded letters from WTBS lawyers advising them of the illegality of pirating the super-station's signal.

Similar scenarios have taken place in recent years surrounding games being tape delayed by the universities of Illinois and Southern California when those schools were under television sanctions.

Keith Miller followed with a walk to score another run. Jeff McKnight reached on a fielder choice to score Elster. And Gwosdz scored on the walk. Randy Milligan had RBI single to score Lundgren.

Lundgren improved his record to 4-5. Joe Magrane, 8-4, was the losing pitcher.

Tulsa got its both its runs against Shreveport in the first inning. Kevin Bootay scored on a balk and Bob Gergen drove home Jerry Browne with an RBI single.

Shreveport's only run came when Romy Cucjen tripled in the fifth and scored on a single by Everett Graham.

Kirk Killingsworth, 4-1, was the winning pitcher over John Burkett, 1-4.

HOT ROD

At an impromptu news conference on the courthouse steps after the verdict, Williams avoided saying he would be playing for the Cavs, even when asked specifically.

"I'll be somewhere, and I'll make the team," he said.

Williams' reluctance to answer was on the advice of his lawyers, an apparent ploy to use the threat of free agency as a bargaining wedge in contract talks.

Williams, at 6-foot-11, is an inch taller and substantially bulkier in the upper body than he was when he left Tulane. He played center at Tulane and was used at power forward when he made the all-star team last year in the United States Basketball League.

Keith Lee, whose name figured prominently in Williams' trial, played both power forward and small forward for the Cavs last season.

Lee was an all-American at Memphis State in 1985, and prosecutors said Williams deliberately guarded Lee loosely, allowing him to score freely in one of the games allegedly fixed. Memphis State, a four-point favorite, beat Tulane by 11 points in that game after Lee hit three quick baskets to open the second half and erase a six-point Tulane halftime lead.

The other game that prosecutors say was fixed was at Tulane against Southern Mississippi. Tulane, a 10-point favorite, won 64-63.

A plot to fix a game at Virginia Tech never came off, prosecutors said.

Most of the testimony against Williams came from six young men who admit being part of a conspiracy — three former Tulane teammates and three East Coast fraternity brothers.

Forwards Clyde Eads and Jon Johnson testified under grants of immunity. Substitute point guard Bobby Thompson testified as part of a plea bargain, as did Gary Kranz of New Rochelle, N.Y.; David Rothenberg of Wilton, Conn., and Mark Olensky of Fair Lawn, N.J., the fraternity brothers.

The six testified that Eads and Johnson met Kranz through cocaine deals and began to provide him with stolen basketball equipment in return for drugs. Rothenberg saw the chance for a betting coup and suggested the point shaving, and Olensky provided the gambling expertise, the six testified.

Class 4A baseball to resume Friday?

AUSTIN (AP) — The University Interscholastic League on Monday scheduled the Class 4A baseball semifinals for Friday evening in Austin, provided that all court cases involving the tournament have been settled.

The games will be at Disch-Falk Field here at 6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Friday, with the title game at 7 p.m. Saturday, UIL director Bailey Marshall said.

"This schedule is being set on the assumption that all litigation is settled or dropped and that the court settlements allow the games to be played on these dates, times and location," Marshall said. "We regret that these court actions have delayed the tournament and, for the sake of the players, we hope the tournament can be resumed and completed."

If litigation prohibits play by Friday, the UIL will "give serious consideration to cancellation of this year's Conference 4A tournament, since many of the players have obligations that will prohibit them from playing later in the summer," Marshall said in a statement.

At least seven motions have been filed in four different courts over a disputed quarterfinal series between Austin Westlake and Waco Richfield.

The legal battle started after Westlake beat Richfield in the first game June 5 and rain delayed games 2 and 3. Pressed for time, the University Interscholastic League invoked a 27-year-old rule and decided that Westlake should advance to the state tournament.

Not happy with the rule, Richfield supporters filed suit.

State District Judge Juan Gallardo in Austin then ruled that the tournament could not proceed unless Westlake was one of the teams.

Later Wednesday, State District Judge Homer Salinas in Edinburg issued a restraining order on behalf of Mercedes, which would have faced Westlake, saying the tournament couldn't be played before 1 p.m. June 13 or after 8 p.m. Friday.

The other teams that won quarterfinals are Snyder and Brenham.

Dollar climbs

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rebounded sharply against European and Japanese currencies on a surge of technical trading today, while gold continued to fall.

Dealers said the dollar's sudden climb after Monday's drop was not based on any fundamental change in market perceptions of the currency. They said short-covering moves were pushing it up.

Short-covering occurs when a dealer buys a currency to cover earlier speculative deals based on the expectation that the currency will fall.

West German markets were closed for a holiday, but elsewhere in Europe the dollar gained about 2.5 pfennigs against the German mark after drifting below the 2.20-level Monday for the first time in a month.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to 166.80 yen from Monday's 165.45 yen. It recovered after losing 10.85 yen in the past two weeks.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.507, compared with $1.523 Monday.

Gold, which had tumbled about $9 an ounce on Monday, fell further in Europe early today. The fall began when expectations that the South African crisis would push the metal through the $350 barrier failed to materialize.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $337.10 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $339.60. At midmorning the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $337.30.

In Zurich, the bid price was $337.35, down from $339.50 late Monday.

The Hong Kong market was closed for elections held by the Hong Kong Chinese Gold and Silver Exchange Society.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.07 a troy ounce, down from Monday's $5.08.

Senate allows special tax exemption for Phillips

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted overwhelmingly Monday to keep a special tax exemption for one oil company in the tax-revision bill that seems almost certain to be passed this week.

The measure would exempt the Phillips Petroleum Co. from paying an excise tax on money it plans to withdraw from the company pension plan. Phillips would use the money to help pay debts accumulated in fighting off hostile takeover bids in 1984 and 1985.

The Senate voted, 74 to 13, to defeat an amendment offered by Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, that would have eliminated the special rule for Phillips. The exception, if it becomes law, would save Phillips $106 million in taxes over the next five years, according to staff experts.

The vote was in contrast to one taken Friday, when the Senate agreed with Metzenbaum and voted, 60 to 33, to remove a special tax break for another oil company, the Unocal Corp.

The difference, senators said, was that the Unocal rule would have protected the company not from new provisions of the tax bill but from the present law. The Phillips exception, on the other hand, would exempt the company only from a new tax that does not exist now but would be added by the Senate bill.

The Phillips vote was the only one taken Monday. It cleared away more underbrush as the Senate moves to pass comprehensive tax-revision legislation before the end of the week. The bill would reduce tax rates substantially and restrict many deductions and other tax preferences. Many senators expect the legislation to be approved unanimously.

The most significant amendment still to be dealt with would reduce the bottom tax bracket to 14 percent and raise the top rate in the bill to 35 percent. Under existing law, tax rates range from 14 percent to 50 percent. The Senate bill, as it stands now, would have only two brackets — 15 percent and 27 percent.

The sponsor of the amendment, George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, acknowledged at a news conference Monday that his proposal would probably be rejected.

But he said he hoped it would be reconsidered when the Senate goes into conference with the House of Representatives on tax legislation. The purpose of his proposal, Mitchell said, is to give greater tax relief to middle-income taxpayers and less to the wealthy.

Phillips began adding to its debt burden in late 1984 when it blocked a takeover bid by T. Boone Pickens, the Texas oilman. It did so by agreeing to buy back Phillips stock he owned, resulting in a $90 million profit for Pickens, in exchange for his pledge to stay away from the company for 15 years.

In March last year Phillips secured a similar pledge from Carl C. Icahn, the New York financier, to call off his takeover bid for Phillips and leave the company alone. It agreed to buy back Phillips stock Icahn owned, resulting in a $50 million profit for him.

These battles put Phillips in a precarious financial position. Its debt leaped from $3.4 billion in late 1984, before Pickens made his move, to $8.6 billion in April 1985. Phillips then began an aggressive program of debt reduction, and by the end of last year its debt was down to $6.8 billion.

The Senate tax bill, in general, would introduce a 10 percent excise tax on money that companies withdraw from their pension plans. But Phillips, which has said it intends to remove more than $400 million from its pension plan to help pay off its debt, would be exempt from the tax. The measure would also give Phillips an extension of time before it would be required to fully apply new restrictions on the use of foreign tax credits.

The special Phillips provision is one of more than 175 so-called transition rules in the Senate bill — each applying to a particular company, individual or project. The stated purpose of such rules is to prevent taxpayers in special circumstances from being unduly harmed by a new tax law. Actually many of the rules were put in the bill because of the political influence of the sponsor or the beneficiary.

David L. Boren, an Oklahoma Democrat who sponsored the Phillips exception, argued that it was a legitimate transition rule that could enable the heavily indebted oil company to survive.

"It does not prevent Phillips from doing something they could not do under current law," Boren said.

Metzenbaum questioned the "logic" of exempting Phillips "from the 10 percent tax everybody else is going to have to pay when they terminate a pension plan."

But Sen. Bob Packwood, the bill's floor manager, who voted against the Unocal rule Friday, defended the Phillips rule Monday. Without it, said Packwood, R-Ore., Phillips would have to withdraw even more money from its pension plan just to pay its taxes.

The Texas Department of Agriculture treated local officials to an outdoor shark barbecue and shrimp boil as part of its Taste of Texas program. The affair was put on in an effort to promote the Texas seafood industry.

State trying to promote seafood

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

Tex-Mex may be the most widely known Texas cuisine, but the Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA) is out to promote a lesser known Texan specialty — seafood.

Local residents were treated to barbecued shark and a Cajun-style shrimp boil at Water Wonderland's Ranger Camp Catering Hall Monday night. Hosted by the TDA, local restaurant representatives, food service directors, supermarket managers, public officials and media representatives were invited to taste seafood delicacies in order to raise consumer awareness about the seafood industry in Texas.

The shrimp feed was an extension of the Department's Taste of Texas program, designed to identify and promote Texas-grown and processed food products, not just in the Lone Star state, but in other parts of the U.S. and in foreign countries.

TDA assistant commissioner for marketing and agricultural development John Vlcek, explained that, "Texans like to buy home-grown products as a matter of pride and loyalty. For other parts of the world, it's the mystique of Texans that helps create new markets."

"This is an effort to promote the Texas seafood industry. Previously, we have not been involved much in the industry, but in cooperation with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, we became involved with this project," stated Ben Delgado, associate deputy commissioner with the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Delgado said the seafood marketing program is funded by the Texas seafood industry through a portion of the license fees paid by commercial fishermen. He emphasized that tax dollars are not being used for the program and referred to it as "a good example of the private sector and the state working together for economic development."

Ralph Rayburn, executive director of the Texas Shrimp Association, said: "We want to promote seafood as a fun food." He added that a backyard shrimp boil can be more economical than a cookout with steaks. "Now that there is greater demand for seafood, the price is being mitigated. Seafood is very competitive with beef and other meats.

"Most seafood sold in the U.S., however, is sold in restaurants. People just don't buy it in grocery stores because they are unsure how to prepare it."

TDA home economist Carol Ware agreed. "The challenge to us is to educate consumers on how to select and prepare seafood. By working with the media, home economists in the public schools and local extension services, the Department is hoping that Texas can be recognized as a seafood state."

And rightly so. In 1985, Texas' total value of seafood harvested was about $175 million. Of that number, $161 million was from the harvest of shrimp. "In 1985, Texas led all states in the value of shrimp caught. Shrimp is by far the most popular seafood, according to national restaurant surveys, and Texas is a big shrimp state," reported Rayburn. Off-vessel sales of Texas seafood accounts for more than $190 million annually.

Rayburn thinks with some effort, Texas can be recognized as a seafood state, in addition to a beef, oil and agriculture state.

The seafood cookout held in Midland was the third such promotion, preceded by tastings in Amarillo and Lubbock. TDA director of promotional marketing Paulette Schwartz said the area was chosen because the Department wanted to put forth an effort to acquaint West Texans with the benefits of Texas seafood.

Describing seafood as "the perfect food for fun, fitness and flavor," Schwartz said that while per-capita seafood consumption has been steadily increasing nationwide, "there is plenty of room for increased sales in West Texas."

TEXAS SEAFOOD FACTS

- The commercial seafood catch in Texas, in descending order of volume, consists of shrimp, oysters, blue crabs and finfish.
- The annual harvest of seafood in Texas totals around 100 million pounds with an ex-vessel (or dockside) value of almost $200 million.
- The seafood industry's total contribution to the Texas economy, including processing, marketing and distribution, is estimated at $600 million.
- Texas ranks fourth in the U.S. in annual seafood harvest (exceeded only by Alaska, Louisiana and Massachusetts).
- Americans eat around 14 pounds of seafood per capita annually, which is about one-tenth the consumption of red meat.
- Per capita consumption of seafood in the U.S. increased by 17 percent between 1974 and 1983 and is still increasing.
- Almost 70 percent of all seafood is consumed away from home, probably because most consumers do not consider themselves sufficiently knowledgeable about buying and preparing seafood.

Higher OPEC output causes prices to fall

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International

Oil prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange declined Monday on a report that OPEC is producing as much as 19 million barrels a day for the highest output level in 2 ½ years and aggravating the global oil surplus.

West Texas intermediate — the benchmark U.S. crude — for immediate delivery on the Merc fell 15 cents to $13.66 a barrel. The crude rose by $1.02 a barrel last week in a largely technical rebound.

Unleaded gasoline for July delivery tumbled by 1.52 cents to 43.03 cents a gallon, and leaded gasoline dropped 1.75 cents to 42.77 cents. Home-heating oil skidded by 1.91 cents to 37.79 cents a gallon.

But on the U.S. spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, West Texas intermediate climbed 25 cents to $13.80 a barrel. Britain's North Sea Brent crude gained 30 cents to $12.30 a barrel on the European spot market.

Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, an authoritative oil journal based in New York, estimated OPEC production may have reached 19 million barrels a day despite an agreement by a majority of cartel members to curtail output.

The journal said stepped-up production by Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Libya, Iran and Iraq has pushed total OPEC output to a 2 ½-year high.

In mid-April, 10 of OPEC's 13 oil ministers decided to reduce the cartel's production to 16.3 million barrels a day by July 1 in a bid to shore up sagging oil prices and to persuade outside producers to curb their output. At that time, OPEC officials said the 13-nation group was pumping 17.6 million barrels a day.

Oil specialists estimate world oil supplies are running at least 2.5 million barrels a day above current demand.

Analysts said it was unlikely the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would be able to agree at its summer meeting in Brioni, Yugoslavia, beginning June 25 on new output quotas for each member nation since production far exceeds the July 1 target.

Arab oil sources said some OPEC members have revved up production prior to the Brioni meeting in a calculated effort to win higher national output quotas.

Oil prices have fallen by more than 50 percent from an average $28 a barrel in December, when OPEC abandoned production and price controls in a campaign to regain its "fair share" of the world market from non-OPEC members.

Norway, Mexico, Egypt and several other outside producers have expressed a willingness to rein in their production but only if OPEC can come up with a solid accord to restrain its own output.

U.S. rig count climbs 12

HOUSTON (AP) — For the first time since December, the number of oil and gas drilling rigs at work in the United States increased this week by a dozen, the company that keeps track of industry statistics announced.

The rig count climbed to 698 this week, 12 more than last week's all-time low of 686, the Hughes Tool Co. reported on Monday. Before 1971, the lowest number at work was 805 rigs in April 1943, said Hughes Tool officials, an oil tool maker that has kept industry statistics since 1940.

Oil prices have plunged more than 50 percent, from about $32 a barrel in November to current levels hovering around $14. Since Dec. 23, the rig count had dropped steadily from 1,995, officials said. In contrast, 4,500 rigs were active in December 1981.

More than 1,000 rigs have been idle since December, when oil prices began their sharp decline, the company said.

Decline seen in home construction

Concern over tax breaks contributes to downturn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing construction slipped 7.4 percent in May, the biggest decline in a year, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said that new homes and apartments were constructed at an annual rate of 1.89 million units in May compared to 2.04 million units in April.

Housing has been one of the few bright spots in the economy this year as the lowest mortgage rates in a decade generated a boom in construction and sales. Starts remained above the 1.9-million-mark from January through April, a pace not seen since the 1977-78 housing boom.

The big May decline occurred entirely in the construction of large apartment units, which plunged 21.9 percent, the biggest decline since a 35.6 percent drop in February 1985.

Analysts said that overbuilding in the apartment segment plus concern about the possible loss of real estate tax breaks contributed to the big decline.

Construction of single-family homes remained steady at 1.26 million units last month while construction of apartment units of four units or less rose 1.2 percent.

The 7.4 percent May decline followed a 4 percent April increase and was the largest drop since a 9 percent plunge in May 1985.

Building permits, considered a good sign of future activity, also fell sharply in May, declining by 5.3 percent to an annual rate of 1.79 million units. This followed a 2.8 percent increase in April and was the biggest monthly decline since a 7.7 percent drop last October.

By region, the weakness was concentrated in the Midwest and Northeast. Housing construction slumped 33.2 percent in the Midwest to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 247,000 units. In the Northeast, which has been the hottest region this year, starts fell 24.8 percent to an annual rate of 252,000 units.

Housing construdtion rose 5 percent in the South to an annual rate of 839,000 units and advanced 2.8 percent in the West to a rate of 550,000 units.

KCC infill drilling order criticized at rehearing

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — The Kansas Corporation Commission Monday came under fire from opponents of infill drilling who claim the KCC was not authorized to approve the practice in the Hugoton natural gas field.

The argument was one of many made during a rehearing Monday on the KCC's order allowing infill drilling in the giant Hugoton Field. Testimony was given on several aspects of the lengthy order, but the overriding concern seemed to be the KCC's jurisdiction in the matter.

The commission hopes to conclude the rehearing Tuesday. Steve Menaugh, KCC spokesman, said the KCC will have 30 days to issue an order following the rehearing. At that time, anyone dissatisfied with the decision could appeal to a district court in one of the Hugoton Field counties in southwest Kansas.

J.D. Steelman, attorney for Northwest Central Pipeline Co., Monday said the commission acted outside its limited jurisdiction by issuing the order.

"This is obviously a case of the commission trying to bootstrap itself into a jurisdiction that it is not authorized under statute," Steelman said.

The general counsel for KPL Gas Service, John Rosenberg, said the commission's sole consideration should be conservation. He said there is no proof that infill drilling is needed in the field. Rosenberg said the KCC's order was not based on "subjective, competent evidence."

On April 24, the three-member commission approved infill drilling for natural gas in the 2.7 million-acre field. The order would allow two wells to be drilled on each 640-acre "proration unit" of the field, rather than just one as established in 1944.

The commission ruled infill drilling would be phased in over four years, beginning Jan. 1, 1987. In the first year, infill drilling would be permitted in 25 percent of the units, with 50 percent allowed in the second year, 75 percent in the third year and 100 percent in the fourth year.

The commission and supporters of infill drilling contend it would more efficiently drain the gas field, thus preventing waste.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Mobil, Diamond Shamrock hit big in Wyoming

DALLAS (SWN) — Diamond Shamrock Exploration Co., a subsidiary of Diamond Shamrock Corp., has completed a crude oil discovery well in Campbell County, Wyoming. Diamond Shamrock is operator of the well and has 25 percent interest. The remaining 75 percent interest is held by Mobil Oil Corp.

The well, designated the Barnett Federal No. 23-33, produced 986 barrels of 34.9-degree gravity crude oil and 212,000 cubic feet of gas per day during production testing on a one-inch choke.

The oil discovery was drilled to a total depth of 12,323 feet and perforated for testing in the Minnelusa formation between 12,074 and 12,092 feet. The new field discovery if located approximately three miles northwest of the nearest Minnelusa oil production in the West Fork Field.

Texas Crude wins contract dispute with TXO

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Crude, a privately held oil and gas producer in Houston, has been awarded $108 million by a state district court jury after winning a lawsuit against Texas Oil & Gas.

The suit, which Texas Crude filed in Cherokee County in July 1985, said that TXO's Delhi Gas Pipeline Corp. breached a gas purchase contract with Texas Crude.

In a statement, TXO President Forrest Hoglund said the award is "shocking and excessive."

"Our attorneys are studying the situation and we will certainly appeal should a judgment be entered," Hoglund said Wednesday.

An oil analyst said the jury award reflects a recent trend in which courts are finding against some pipeline companies which have sought to abrogate purchase contracts for high-priced natural gas in a glutted market.

Penalty for early withdrawal of IRA not always same

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My individual retirement account is in a two-year bank certificate of deposit, due to mature Jan. 18, 1987. By federal law, CDs and savings accounts were deregulated, effective April 1, 1986.

If I redeem my IRA CD before its maturity date, how much of a penalty will I have to pay for early withdrawal?

Doyle

A. That depends on a number of things.

If you're 59½ or older, there is not now — nor has there ever been — a federal regulation that you must pay an early withdrawal penalty for cashing an IRA CD before its maturity.

Although early withdrawal penalties apply to most CDs, banks and savings and loan associations covered by federal deposit insurance have always been allowed to waive those penalties when IRA CDs are cashed before maturity by anyone who is at least 59½ years of age or is permanently disabled.

But, and this is a mighty big BUT, banks and S&Ls have never been required to waive that penalty. It's up to each bank and S&L to establish its own policy. Some hard-nosed bankers insist on extracting that penalty.

The April 1 deregulation of bank and S&L deposits does not change the early withdrawal penalties on CDs opened before that date. If you're hit with such a charge, it will be the penalty set at the time you purchased your CD.

For CDs with maturities of more than one year opened between Oct. 1, 1983, and April 1, 1986, federal regulations set minimum early withdrawal penalties at the loss of three months' interest.

Here's another big BUT. That was a minimum. Banks and S&Ls were allowed to set penalties larger than that minimum. Many did. If your CD contract calls for a higher early withdrawal penalty, you'll be stuck.

Because of the end of federal regulation, banks and S&Ls are not required to levy early withdrawal penalties on CDs opened after this past April 1. However, that doesn't mean they are prohibited from doing so.

Each bank and S&L is free to set whatever early withdrawal penalty it chooses on its CDs. Everyone who puts money into a CD should check the withdrawal penalty feature, as you should have when you opened your IRA CD.

Q. When my husband passed away in 1982, most of our money was in joint certificates of deposit, in his name and mine. To pay for his funeral and other expenses, I had to cash a $10,000 CD. Our savings and loan association charged a large early withdrawal penalty.

After reading in your column that no such penalty should apply to the survivor of a jointly owned CD, I inquired at our S&L. A vice president there said, "That's a relatively new rule. It didn't apply when you cashed your CD."

Can you tell me exactly when that rule was promulgated?

A. August 2, 1979.

That rule, laid down by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, clearly states, "No early withdrawal penalty shall be applied to withdrawals after the death of an account owner, if the withdrawal is made by any other owner of the account or by the authorized representative of the decedent's estate."

That S&L VP either doesn't know his business or is giving you the brush-off. Go back and demand a refund of that penalty you should not have paid.

A similar rule covered CDs at banks for many years before 1979.

Q. For a single, 70-year-old female, would you say it is better to have $20,000 in certificates of deposit or in a no-load, tax-deferred annuity?

A. Unless you have so much other income that you are in a high income tax bracket, my choice would be CDs.

Don't believe, for one minute, that any annuity is "no-load." The person selling it collects a commission — another word for load.

• • •

Q. Can I avoid the delay in cashing bearer bond interest coupons by taking the coupons directly to the interest paying agent?

A. Sure. The interest paying agent will cash each coupon on its due date. If that agent is located near you, that's the smart thing to do.

Local man doing fine after heart transplant

By HOLLY LONGABERGER
Staff Writer

"As far as I know he's the first to have a heart transplant in the Permian Basin," said Bonnie Fox, wife of heart transplant patient Jerry Fox in a telephone interview from Houston.

The Foxes are from Midland and led a normal life until late last year. Ms. Fox was a director of clinical services at Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin and Fox a district sales manager at Hy-Bon. They have two children. Kyndra, age 13, is Ms. Fox's daughter from a previous marriage while Fox has a daughter, Tami, age 22.

Then Fox became ill in December.

"He became very ill with pneumonia and the doctor thought the virus had attacked the heart muscle. This caused congestive heart failure, in which the lungs and heart filled up with fluid," Ms. Fox said.

This resulted in myocarditis — an inflammation of the heart and cardiomyopathy — a swelling of the heart, she added.

The first major episode of the illness occurred in March, when Midland doctor Richard Reese discovered the congestive heart failure.

"He was the one who started talking about a heart transplant and made arrangements with the transplant program at St. Lukes (Hospital) in Houston," she said.

Her husband was accepted into the heart transplant program in April, Ms. Fox said. He had another major episode of illness in May.

He was in Midland Memorial Hospital for a week and was then transported by an air ambulance to St. Lukes. She said the heart transplant team found a heart in two weeks.

"We think it came from a 23-year-old male athlete in Amarillo and was transplanted on June 10."

Dr. Howard Frazier and Dr. Michael Duncan performed Fox's operation. Dr. Wayne Dear and Dr. Patrick Hogan are his physicians in Houston.

She said the operation took about three hours. "The procedure is simple; it's the risk of infection and rejection that's hard."

Her husband came through the operation fine and is doing "fantastic," Ms. Fox said.

"The first year is extremely critical," she stated. "If he survives the first year, he will have an 80 percent chance to led a quality life. Without this operation he would have died."

A heart biopsy, which is a test run on a little piece of the heart to see if the body is accepting it, was performed yesterday.

Ms. Fox reported today that he was in stable condition after the biopsy and is doing very well.

The cost of the heart transplant operation is "hundreds and thousands of dollars," she added.

They do have medical insurance to pay for the medical expenses, she said, but she does not know how much it will cover. The Western State Bank has also set up a trust fund to help pay for the expenses.

"We're just living day by day," Ms. Fox said.

A very hard part of the procedure was being completely uprooted, she claimed. Within 24 hours of her husband's transport to St. Lukes, she had stored all the furniture and gone to Houston.

"When we come back we will have to start over again," she said.

When Fox gets back to Midland and is able to work, his boss at Hy-Bon has said his job will still be available, according to Ms. Fox.

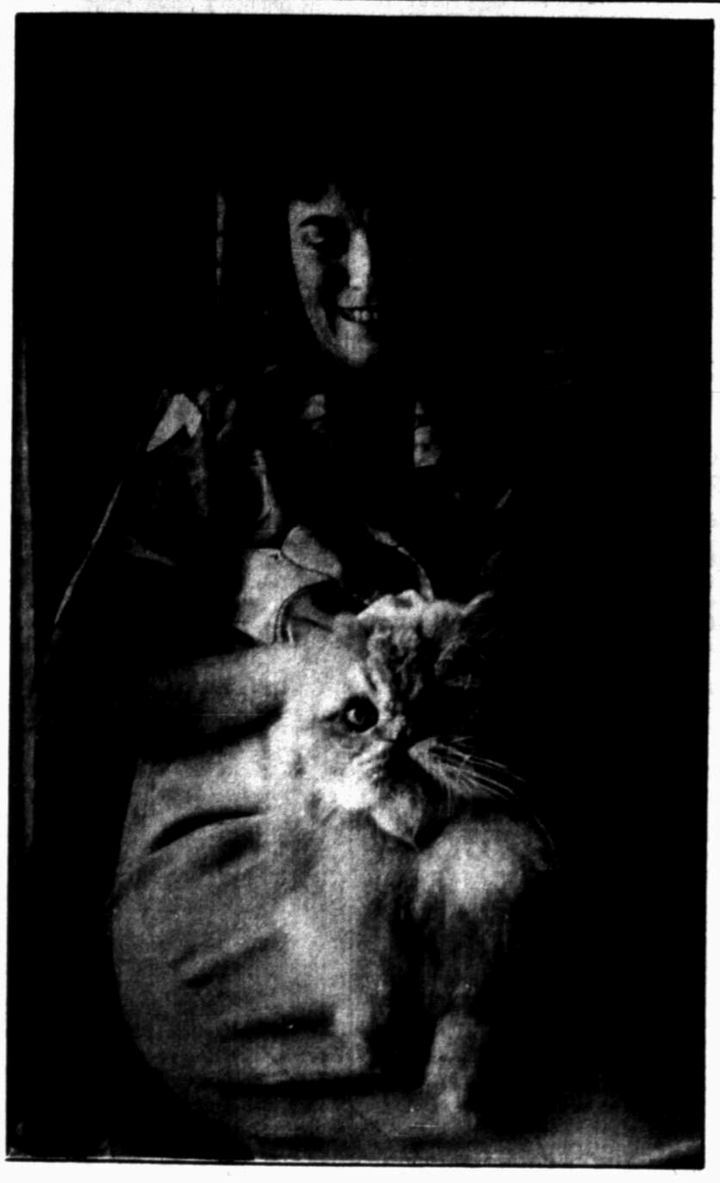
Ms. Fox, however, was asked to resign.

"I've received the letter yesterday asking for my resignation," she stated.

But, she stressed that she will deal with things one day at a time.

"I have a very realistic attitude. It is much easier now that he's had the operation," Bonnie said.

She continued, "All of this is hard to believe. It's so unreal. We are so excited he has a chance to live."



Ester McHean, above, president of the West Texas Cat Club, playfully teases four cats. At left, Karen Frigon, a club member, combs the hair of her cat. The club is seeking new members and will be holding bake sales and arts and craft sales during the fall to help pay for a cat show.

West Texas club 'cat's meow'

By HOLLY LONGABERGER
Staff Writer

It's the cat's meow.

That is what the members of the West Texas Cat Club think about their chapter.

Created in 1978 by Ester McHean, her husband and four others in Odessa, it is a chapter of The International Cat Association.

The purpose of the club is to sponsor and promote all breeds of cats, not just pedigrees, said Ms. McHean, club president.

"And," she added, "we wanted to see how many cat fanciers there are in the area."

The club meets every first Tuesday of the month at the Water Purification Plant, 5608 Midland Drive Ms. McHean said. It has a program every month.

For example, she said, a veterinarian will come in and talk about cat health care. The club also discusses grooming, first aid and swaps cat stories.

Karen Frigon, owner of a world champion Red and White Persian, added that another reason for the cat club is "it is just fun to get together with other cat lovers."

The West Texas Cat Club also is a service to the community, Ms. Frigon said.

"We educate people on how to take care of their cats. A lot of people don't know or don't think cats need attention," she stated.

There are 20 members in the club, most of whom have house cats. Ms. McHean, who has 10 cats, shows them, but she added that a person does not have to show his cat or even own a cat to be in the club.

Club member Linda Barricklow said that she did not even own a cat when she joined.

"We joined because we wanted to know more about cats," she said.

To keep its charter the club must sponsor a cat show, but, due to the lack of funds, Ms. McHean said they will sponsor a ring at the Fort Worth Cat Show next January.

"Our last show was three years ago," she said. "We're aiming for a show next year."

Ms. McHean said the club will be holding bake sales and arts and craft sales during the fall to help pay for a cat show.

The club also raises money for the Humane Society and Animal Shelter, and tries to help them whenever possible. The club is in the process of creating an adopt-a-cat program in conjunction with local radio stations.

The club needs more members in order to become more active, Ms. McHean said. For more information about the club contact Ms. McHean at 699-6662.

PUC hearings to begin on Cap Rock request

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Public Utility Commission hearings will begin Friday morning on Cap Rock Electric Cooperative's request for a $1.4 million rate hike request.

David Pruitt, Cap Rock assistant manager, said rates for residential customers should increase by about 3.5 percent if the commission approves the plan as submitted. While base rates would increase substantially, Pruitt said a reduction in fuel charges would eliminate up most of that increase.

Cap Rock buys its power from Texas Electric Service Co., and the coop's customers will benefit from TESCO's recent reduction in fuel charges.

The Stanton-based coop serves 9,070 customers in a 13-county West Texas area, with about 2,500 customers in Midland County. "A lot of our growth has been in the Midland-County area," Pruitt said.

The new rate structure will eliminate an old benefit given to users of more than 600 killowatt-hours of electricity per month. In its place will come a rate plan that charges more for power in the summer months than from November through April.

"We put together a committee of 20 of our customers, and the customers decided how the rates were going to be designed," Pruitt said. "Nobody else has ever done that."

Pruitt said Monday he had just received a copy of the PUC staff's recommendations in the case, which suggested "nominal adjustments" that Cap Rock will likely accept.

Customers who would like to comment on the rate increase may appear at the PUC's hearing room A at 9 a.m. Friday in Austin. Pruitt said he does not expect the hearings will last more than one day.

Odessa trial may end sooner than expected

By FRANK TROMBLEY

ODESSA — The kidnapping-aggravated sexual assault trial of a 33-year-old former Midland man in 244th District Court may end sooner than expected.

District Judge Joe Connally informed the jury of seven men and five women late Monday afternoon he expected that he and attorneys would begin preparing the charge sometime this morning after defense attorneys Tom Hirsch and Anthony Foster called their final witness in the case against their client, William Mitchell Dyer, who is accused of abducting and repeatedly raping a 13-year-old Odessa girl June 13, 1985.

Through testimony Tuesday, Hirsch has tried to refute evidence and testimony presented by prosecutors Eric Augesen and Dennis Cadra linking Dyer to the alleged incidents. Hirsch and Foster have maintained continuing objections to references to identification of Dyer derived from hypnotic sessions Ector County sheriff's investigators had with the young victim.

Calling a nurse with experience handling sexual assault victims from Midland Memorial Hospital, Hirsch attempted to show the examination conducted by medical personnel at Permian General Hospital in Andrews failed to show physical trauma evidence usually consistent with the rape of a 13-year-old virginal girl. The nurse stated the report, which she described as little more than a standard MMH accident report, did not contain the type of injuries she would expect a 13-year-old victim to suffer as a result of forcible rape.

In cross-examination, assistant District Attorney Cadra countered by asking the nurse if she could conceive of any circumstances where traumatic injuries, such as tears in the genital area, might not occur. The nurse admitted she could conceive of such circumstances.

Earlier, the young victim pointed out Dyer as the man who kidnapped her from near Water Wonderland and repeatedly raped and sodomized her during the more than two hours he held her captive. She testified she accepted a ride with the man after he warned she shouldn't be walking because that there were "a lot of weird people out there" who might hurt her. The girl stated she had arrived at Water Wonderland about 11 a.m. and was supposed to ride home with friends, but got separated from them and so began walking home.

Dyer was arrested and charged in Ector County on four counts of aggravated sexual assault and one count of aggravated kidnapping. He has been indicted in Andrews County on one count of aggravated sexual assault.

Dyer is accused of taking the girl from Midland County, into Ector County, to Andrews County and then back into Ector County, where he dropped the girl off near a friend's home in Gardendale.

Restaurateur came to rest in Texarkana

By ROBERT KERR

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — When Spero Cotseone arrived in Texarkana in 1950, his track record hardly indicated he would stay for good.

During the two decades before that he had wandered from Greece to Chicago to West Texas to the Gulf Coast. Along the way, he opened and closed a string of restaurants, making money about as often as he went broke.

But after 36 years in Texarkana, he's still here, still operating the same restaurant, and unlikely ever to leave — or go broke.

"I couldn't leave Texarkana," says Cotseone, who immigrated from Greece in 1929. "I go downtown, everybody wave; I know everybody. I go in a department store, they know my name. I make a world of friends and earned a lot of respect. That makes me feel good."

His Spero's Cafe has been in continuous operation longer than any other restaurant in Texarkana. And Cotseone, 70, has been in the restaurant business virtually every day of his adult life.

He arrived in Chicago at the age of 14 from a tiny village in Greece near Tripolis. "I had to learn the language. I didn't know any English," says Cotseone, who still bears a trace of his Greek accent.

His father had gone to Chicago several years before and started a chain of restaurants there. The chain had grown to 31 by 1929. "I was brought up in restaurants," Cotseone says.

But in 1934, the chain went under with the Great Depression, and Cotseone's father returned to Greece. A couple of years later, Cotseone headed south to see if his luck might improve in Texas.

AP Laserphoto

Spero Cotseone stands in front of the restaurant that bears his name in Texarkana, Texas. At age 70, Cotseone doesn't put in 18-hour days anymore, but he still comes to work each morning.

In 1936, he and several partners opened a food stand at the Texas Centennial celebration staged at the state fairgrounds in Dallas. "But we didn't do too good with it," Cotseone recalls. "Too many partners."

So he set off by himself to follow the oilfield boomtowns in West Texas. "Every time a new oil field strike came in, I would go there and open a new restaurant."

When the busts began to outnumber the booms, Cotseone found himself broke again. So he settled in Lubbock for a few years before moving to the coast and opening restaurants in Beaumont and Port Arthur.

While there, Cotseone got to know Texarkanian Charley Pappas, who hunted geese near Beaumont. Cotseone's wife had never liked the coastal climate, so when Pappas suggested Coseone move to Texarkana, it sounded like a good idea.

Cotseone opened a little cafe on West Ninth Street and served chicken, hamburgers and seafood. But the going was rough at first. The crowds that now line up outside Spero's on Friday and Saturday nights did not come until much later.

"When I first came here, nobody knew me," he says. "I couldn't even borrow money from the banks. I had to have someone else sign for me."

"The only things I know for success are hard work, treat your fellow man right and keep your word. Things were not always good, not always busy like they are now. Sometimes I have to tell the people I owe money to, 'I don't have it. I get it to you when I get it.' And they always say 'No problem,' because they know I keep my word."

"In those days, I worked no less than 18-hour days every day. On Sunday we closed, but that's when we have to take everything apart, clean it and put it back together."

Whenever things got slow, Cotseone ran specials. One that remains legendary with his oldtime customers was the "nickel hamburgers" of 1955.

"We had it on the radio all day: 'Nickel hamburgers, six for a quarter.'" Cotseone says. "We stopped traffic out front. They had to have the highway patrol out there directing traffic. We bought every hamburger bun in Texarkana, and then we sent a truck to Shreveport to buy more."

When he moved his restaurant into the brick building it occupies today, employees carried everything out of the old one and into the new one on a Sunday. On Monday morning, the relocated restaurant opened without missing even one business day.

Spero's offers a few Greek items on its menu, but the big sellers are steak and seafood. The faces in the restaurant are usually familiar ones, both the customers and the employees.

Two men expected to be charged in man's murder

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two men were expected to be charged late this morning with murder in connection with the killing of a 55-year-old man whose badly decomposed body was found in a pasture in the 5500-block of Sierra Drive in far west Odessa.

Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss said the body of the man, whose identification was being withheld pending notification of next of kin, was found as a result of an inquiry by a niece and a statement made by a jail inmate.

Kloss said Peace Justice Jimmy Harris ordered the body of the man sent to Dallas for an autopsy to determine the cause of death.

According to Kloss, a 37-year-old man already jailed on another charge provided investigators with information that led to discovery of the man's body. The second suspect, a 31-year-old man, was arrested at his north Goler Avenue home about 5:30 this morning.

Kloss said a niece of the man came into the sheriff's office about 7 p.m. Monday and reported the man had not been seen since June 3.

The condition of the man's body made it impossible to make a preliminary determination of the cause of death, Kloss said, but information from an informant indicated the man had been struck on the head with an unknown weapon.

The two men were expected to be arraigned on murder charges before Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles before noon today.

Malnutrition may have caused collapse of Mayan civilization

HOUSTON (AP) — A University of Houston anthropologist says the sudden end of the Mayan civilization, regarded as a centuries-old mystery, may have been due to malnutrition and disease.

And Professor Rebecca Storey said her findings may be a lesson for today's Third World.

"What we can learn from the Mayans is that too quick a growth and not enough conservation procedures for your agriculture leads to eventual environmental degradation," she said.

Ms. Storey said she has studied 500 to 600 Mayan skeletons in Honduras at one of the largest Mayan ruins and concluded most residents had very poor health during their lifetimes.

"On a lot of these skeletons, I see a lot of children who suffered periods of sickness that lasted long enough to stop their growth," Ms. Storey said.

The types of diseases shown by the skeletons were probably respiratory and intestinal, she said.

Total proof that malnutrition caused the Mayans to abandon their grand cities in the jungles of southern Mexico and Central America cannot be found, she said.

Anthropologists still are puzzled why the Mayan ruins were deserted while dozens of Mayan tribes continued to live simply in other parts of the area, she said.

Scholars have long been fascinated with the Mayans, who were ahead of their time for art and culture and knew the concept of zero long before the Western world discovered it, she said.

"They were this very advanced civilization living in this kind of tropical jungle," Ms. Storey said. "Then all of a sudden it just seems to all disappear from about the 8th and 9th century."

Texoma site of legal scholar's latest research

By KIM ESTES

PRESTON PENINSULA, Texas (AP) — Dr. Ann Thomas, a legal scholar and visiting professor at Southern Methodist University's School of Law, has chosen the serenity of Lake Texoma to conduct her research into biological and chemical warfare.

This project is only the latest in her lifelong search to understand the past and to contribute something of value to the future.

At the age of 7, she became an American citizen and settled on the choice of law as a career.

"I was so impressed with the judge that day that I decided to become a lawyer," she recalls. Born in Middleburg, Holland, Mrs. Thomas and her parents moved to New York City when she was 2 years old.

"It was a great day," she says, when she and her parents became citizens. "It was very important. In those days they gave you a big book and you had to learn everything."

She taught herself to read at age 4, enrolled in college at 16, law school at 20 and earned her law degree at 22.

Holding a doctorate in constitutional and international law, she has written "Semantics of International Law," which has been published in at least five different languages.

As a lawyer, Mrs. Thomas has been in the Foreign Service, with stints in South Africa, Holland, England and Spain.

In Johannesburg, South Africa, she served as vice consul of labor. Although times then were untroubled, Mrs. Thomas says she understands why that nation now suffers so much turmoil.

"I enjoyed South Africa," she recalls, "At that time, before the nationalists got in, (Prime Minister Christian) Smutz was working to totally integrate society. After he died, the nationalists took control...The nationalists," she adds, "are ultra, ultra conservative and that's why they (the South African nation) are the way they are today.

"It's so very, very hard for these people who are so fanatical...'old testamentally.' They are more dangerous than the nuclear bomb," she said.

During World War II, Ms. Thomas served at The Hague in Holland. It was a "sad job," she recalls, notifying Dutch families when their relatives were combat casualties.

"When I came in, everything was stripped," she recalls. The Germans had even confiscated wiring, leaving the country without electricity.

Also, "Dead children were laying on the street...they died of starvation," Ms. Thomas says. "Americans dropped a lot of food but the Germans said they would kill the people if they took it."

Eventually, Ms. Thomas moved back to the U.S. "The Foreign Service is an almost rootless existence."

And, after nine years of separation, she and her college sweetheart, A.J. Thomas, married and joined the faculty at SMU. He eventually became dean of the law school, and their happy visits to Lake Texoma convinced her to retire here.

During their 34 years of marriage, the couple wrote 13 books together and helped organize an international lawyers program now recognized as second only to Harvard.

Now widowed, she isn't ready for the rocking chair at age 66. She's merely changing course. She intends to write a cookbook with recipes for preparing striper filets and leeks. She also will lecture SMU law students in October on the Texas constitution, and deliver introductory lectures in August to a new class of foreign lawyers arriving in Dallas.

She said she also wants to teach older Americans about the U.S. Constitution.

Mrs. Thomas says her extensive travel has convinced her that no system of government gives its citizens more protection or greater opportunity to develop their greatest potential than the system that most Americans take for granted.

AUTOPSY——

The two then made an unsuccessful attempt to locate the body, which was later found in the bathroom. A white poodle apparently belonging to the victim was also found dead at the scene.

A smoke alarm was found located in a hallway in the house, but authorities could not determine if it was operating at the time of the fire. According to reports, the fire, which apparently was caused by a cigarette left on a chair in the living area, could have started Sunday night, as it failed to break through a roof or window.

Eddie Brooks (left) and Sandy Hayes announce that their shops at 2000 N. Big Spring are now open. Be sure to browse through Eddie's Sugar Cube and the Hummingbird Nest this week.

Eddie's Sugar Cube, the Hummingbird Nest to have grand opening this week

As you walk into the little remodeled house that bears the names Eddie's Sugar Cube and the Hummingbird Nest, you feel as though you've stepped right into someone's dream. In fact, the cake decorating and silk flower shops are Eddie Brooks' and Sandy Hayes' dreams come true. "You have to have a dream before it can come true," they said.

Eddie, who has 14 years experience in the cake decorating business, and Sandy, who has always enjoyed making silk and dried flower arrangements, opened their shops last week at 2000 N. Big Spring.

Whether you prefer to display your creative talents decorating the traditional sheetcakes, or if decorating cute "character-type" cakes is more your style, or if you simply want to learn how to decorate cakes, Eddie's Sugar Cube will meet your needs.

With over 30 cake pans to choose from, ranging from basic round and square, to hexagon and heart shaped, to Holly Hobby, Cabbage Patch, Ziggy and the Star Wars character, R2-D2, you are sure to find one that appeals to you.

If decorating wedding cakes is more your bag, Eddie's has a full-line of supplies including 12 sizes of pillars, cake fountains and set ups in three styles, and porcelain and blown glass bride and groom sets for the tops of cakes.

If your sweet tooth is craving white or dark chocolate lollipops or mints, you are sure to satisfy it at Eddie's. There you will find all the component parts for making custom-made candy. Candy molds of all sorts and a rainbow of colors will suddenly make you feel creative.

Are you a beginner? Don't worry, Eddie's will supply you with an assortment of books that will guide you through the experience of decorating your first cake. Or if you feel you need a little bit more instruction in either cake decorating or candy making, classes will be offered in the fall.

Other items that Eddie's carries include cake, candy and pie boxes, separator plates, decorator bags and tips, cooling racks, and cake turntables.

Although most of the merchandise is for sale, some of the pans, wedding cake fountains and other supplies - such as a Kopy Kake machine for changing the size of designs for cakes - may be rented.

It is obvious when you enter the Hummingbird Nest that making silk flower arrangements is Sandy's specialty. Beautiful silk flowers, an assortment of ribbons, and straw hats, baskets and wreaths cover the walls of this quaint little shop.

Relics of the past, such as a 1910 National cash register made in Paris, an antique pump organ, old quilts and antique linens, are scattered throughout the store adding flavor to the shop while they lay waiting to be picked up and bought.

The Hummingbird Nest also has quality consignment goods. Some of them include handmade keepsake books, ceramic ducks and bunnies, delicate, limited edition porcelain dolls of all sizes, and a beautifully painted four and half foot tall carousel horse - which displays some of the custom artwork one artist can do.

Although there are many prepared silk flower arrangements to choose from, Sandy will take orders and custom-make arrangements to satisfy anyone's tastes. She will also sell flowers, ribbons and baskets to those customers who feel like being a little creative themselves.

Making flower arrangements is not the only area where Sandy is creative.

She also makes Cabbage Patch dolls - these are different from the original ones though. these Cabbage Patch dolls lie in beds that look like heads of cabbage! And, you even have your choice of a green or purple cabbage.

Sandy also has may cute and original ideas using baskets. If nothing else were to interest you - her gift ideas using baskets would. She has placed anything from dolls to animals to champagne in them - making them appropriate for almost any occasion.

Like Eddie's Sugar Cube, the Hummingbird Nest will also offer classes for making silk flower arrangements in the fall, if there is enough interest.

Both Eddie and Sandy are excited about their new businesses and are willing to help anyone who has an interest in what they sell.

They said that if they don't have what you're looking for, whether it be a particular cake pan, candy mold, or even a particular antique, they will gladly find the item for you.

Wednesday through Saturday this week is Eddie's Sugar Cube and the Hummingbird Nest's grand opening! Eddie and Sandy invite you to stop by to have some coffee and visit with them in their new shops.

The two shops are open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. The shops will be open at other times by appointment.

Eddie and Sandy say they also have an area in the house which is available for rent for a compatible shop. Perhaps, your dream can come true, too.

Find a waterbed store you can count on and sleep in peace

Waterbeds, which have become increasingly popular and varied in style in recent years, have been around for a long, long time, said a local waterbed dealer.

It all started in the days of Cleopatra, when men hauled water across the desert in camels stomachs. It was too hot to sleeping comfortably on the ground. The men began sleeping on the large bags of water, creating the first water beds!

After the big fire in Paris in the 1800's and the fire in Boston in the later 1800's, doctors discovered that patients who were floated on a bed of water would heal faster.

Finally, in 1966 a professor at the University of California in Berkley developed the design for the modern day water bed. By 1969 or 1970 the revolutionary bed was being marketed on the west coast.

Since that time water beds have come a long way.

In 1980, less than five percent of Americans surveyed owned waterbeds, but that figure climbed to nearly 10 percent by 1985 – with almost 20 percent of consumers surveyed planning to buy a waterbed. One big reason is that, since the early '80s, major furniture manufacturers have jumped on the waterbed bandwagon. Now the same sources which make quality furniture for dining rooms and conventional bedrooms are in the "flotation sleep" business. So, unless you like the distressed pine and art nouveau etched glass look, you're no longer limited to it. Now waterbeds are available in many exotic hard woods. From Queen Anne to Milan, sophisticated style influences have changed what waterbeds look like.

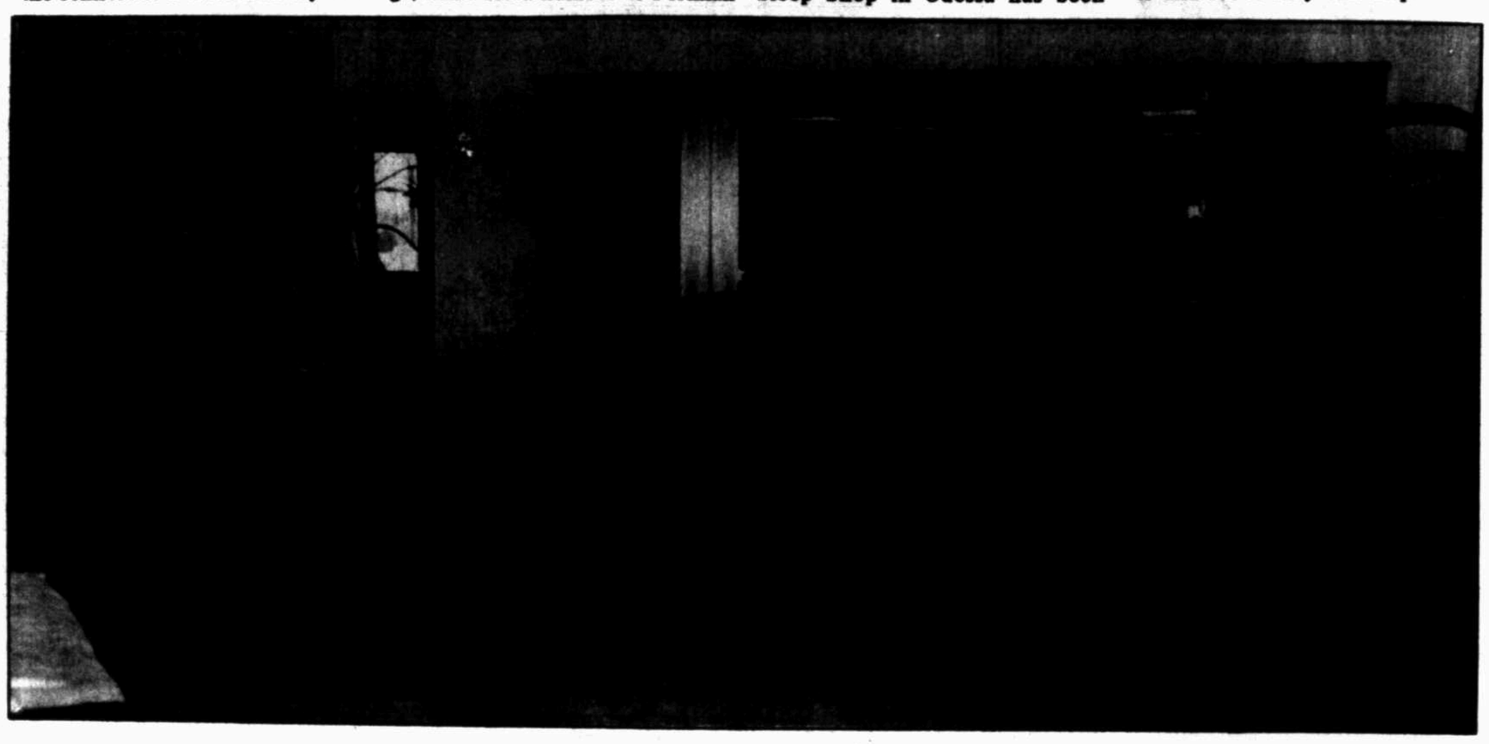
A new European look is available this year at waterbed stores."Full flotation" waterbeds now come in full-motion, semi-motionless, or motionless styles. Baffles, dividers or fiberfill inside the mattress determine how much "wave" action occurs. All full flotation mattresses need the firm support of frame and platform, which is why they're also called "hard-sided waterbeds."

"Soft-sided waterbeds," or "hybrids," have a self-contained frame inside the damask-covered ticking of a conventional-looking mattress. Inside this frame, water-filled cylinders or sections provide waterbed comfort. In some cases, sections or cylinders can be filled to provide different degrees of firmness. So if he wants more support for his shoulders and she wants more for her lower back, they can each have it their way. You can use conventional sheets and bedframes for hybrids, two more reasons why they're often the choice of first-time flotation users.

Whatever the style of the waterbed, comfort is still the main reason for its popularity. Many full flotation waterbeds now come equipped with heaters that allow you to customize the temperature for each side of the bed. For arthritis, cramps, or just weekend-athleteitis, heated waterbeds beat the old hot water bottle by a nautical mile. The warmth issue aside, most people find waterbeds more comfortable than conventional bedding because you're actually floating on them. Your weight is evenly distributed, which eliminates virtually all pressure on bones or wounds. Waterbeds are preferred by hospitals as the best sleeping surfaces for premature infants, burn victims, the elderly and the bed-confined who are prone to bedsores. For patients like these, the comfort of a waterbed may be a matter of life and death, but waterbeds can also make a beneficial difference to people with more prosaic discomforts, from pregnancy to insomnia.

Though many dealers come and go, there are a number of Permian Basin water bed dealers that are well established and proven dependable. For instance, the owners of Waterbeds De'Lite have been in the waterbed industry since 1971 and in the West Texas area since 1977. The Sleep Shop in Odessa has been around a while, and Odessa's Big Sur is part of the nation's largest waterbed chain.

If you love your waterbed but have had trouble with your waterbed dealer, visit a reputable dealer and see if they can help.



Waterbed styles have certainly changed. Now many hardwoods, like this solid oak, are being used to give a waterbed feel, without a waterbed look.

Adventure Travel brings risk of European travel in to perspective

Roberta Timinskas (left to right), Charmaine Hackney, Amy Leach, Patsy Welmaker and Polly Wellmaker of Adventure Travel say, "Get your bags, it's time to go to Europe." Call 683-4211 to arrange your summer trip.

According to the travel experts at Adventure Travel in Oakridge Square, this is a great year to tour Europe.

Patsy Welmaker, owner of Adventure Travel, says it is important to put the terrorist threat into perspective. While more than 6 million American traveled to Europe in 1985, only 10 were killed as a result of terrorist incidents. Compare that to the figure which reveals that 45,000 Americans were killed in motor vehicle accidents last year. 100 Americans were killed by poisonous animals or plants (in the latest year for which data is available). Another 100 were killed by lightening in 1985.

It's no wonder that Robert Bentley, an assistant director of policy for the State Department's Office of Counterterrorism, has said that terrorist acts have created a "psychosis in the U.S." He said that travel is safe, but urged Americans to be prudent and use common sense. After all, the number of Americans killed through terrorist activity throughout the world last year, he said, was close to the number of people who die while stepping out of their bathtubs.

In addition, Adventure Travel agents say that Europe is an exceptional travel value this year. Even though the dollar is weakening some, they say Europe is still affordable. In fact, they say tour prices have not drastically increased, and, in many instances, have not changed at all from last year.

The American Express Europe SuperBreaks vacation packages are one of the tremendous values in European travel. SuperBreaks are week-long air/land inclusive vacations from 25 U.S. cities that give you the freedom you want and the value you deserve.

They're easy, convenient and high in value!

From theatre in London, to art in Paris and dining in Rome - everyone has their own special way to enjoy Europe. So SuperBreaks has vacations to fit every taste and take advantage of the still very strong dollar.

If you want to explore Europe at your leisure, this is ideal for spending a week in your favorite city. London is the place to be for great shopping, wonderful sightseeing and fabulous theatre. Or, you can take time to sample the delights of Paris — Europe's most beautiful capital. You'll relax at cafes on the champs Elysees and check out next year's fashions, then enjoy the world's finest dining and most famous nightspots after dark.

Or perhaps you'll want to tour both London and Paris. SuperBreaks will start you off with guided sightseeing and then you'll be on your own to shop, explore museums or take optional excursions to the surrounding countryside.

Choose Rome and discover 2000 years of history combined with marvelous food, wonderful people and exciting shopping.

You may choose one of the SuperTours which lasts 12 to 17 days. SuperTours take you beyond the cities, whether through the British countryside by motorcoach or to Rome, Florence, Venice and Milan by train. Champagne Country, Strasbourg, Dijon are part of the La Belle France tour, while the England and Scotland tour is highlighted with visits to Stonehenge, London, Bristol, Stratford, Wales, Edinburgh and York. British Highlights and Ireland make up a third tour, and that's just the beginning. Italy, Greece and Switzerland are included in other tours.

Freelance itineraries include a host or hostess to answer any questions or assist in making sure you make the best use of your free time. On the escorted tours, a professional tour manager accompanies you throughout your stay in Europe.

Included in the fun package is round trip air fare, a choice of hotels in up to three price categories for six nights, round trip transfers between the airport and your hotel, a continental breakfast daily, guided half-day sightseeing, baggage handling, taxes and service charges, a host or hostess and an American Express Vacations travel bag.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Wednesday, June 18, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Patience is the key to new financial gains. Hold off on a major move until February. The best time for a wedding is December or April. Travel opens important doors. A job offer deserves prompt investigation. Athletes and educators should have an especially rewarding year. Consult an attorney before signing a contract. A child helps you mature. You discover strengths you did not know you had.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Sen. John D. ("Jay") Rockefeller IV (D-W.Va.), baseball great Lou Brock, singer Paul McCartney, New York Times pundit Tom Wicker, bandleader Kay Kyser, money columnist Sylvia Porter, singer Jeanette MacDonald.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Postpone travel. You are apt to accomplish more by staying close to home. The emphasis is on striking a better balance between work and rest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are probably better off going it alone unless you enjoy having to explain your actions. A candid talk relieves tension.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Protect your reputation by steering clear of people who behave in an erratic manner. Your best relationship is with someone who gives you honest answers. Avoid giving co-workers anything to gossip about.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Co-workers may rely on you too much. Stand your ground. An older person asks questions you are reluctant to answer. Protect family privacy by refusing to comment. Romance begins to intensify.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Welcome new investment and real estate opportunities. An older person may act in a mysterious manner. Avoid probing or you could spoil a deligh.ful surprise! Romance has its usual ups and downs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Not a good day to attempt anything on a grand scale. Be content to tie up loose ends. Changes tend to work in your favor. Take a wait-and-see attitude in romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Proceed with caution where money is at stake. Avoid buying things on credit. An attractive member of the opposite sex shows new appreciation for your efforts. Know the difference between love and infatuation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emotions run high today. Keep your temper in check. Exercise is an ideal way to burn up excess energy. A last-minute invitation could lead to new romance. Wear something elegant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An excellent day to take care of pressing personal obligations. Romance and finances could vie for your attention this afternoon. The gains you make today will prove long-lasting. Count your blessings!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Watch what you say and do in front of critical people. Romantic and social encounters enjoy favorable influences this afternoon and evening. New marital harmony is possible. Forget past grievances and mistakes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your earning power grows but so do cash outlays. Look for ways to reduce domestic spending. Seek cooperation from family members. A practical approach works best when discussing a delicate matter.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Unexpected phone messages bring good financial luck today. Exercise special caution when around machinery. You need to get out and about more. Widen your social circle. Offer a helping hand to a newcomer.

Opening lead: Queen of ◇

Sometimes the loss of a trick in a suit is inevitable. When you surrender it, however, can be of crucial importance. It certainly was on this hand from a recent rubber bridge game.

North's heart cue-bid showed spade support and a near opening bid without necessarily guaranteeing first-round heart control. After East raised the bidding level, South decided there was not enough room to determine exactly what could be made, so she chose the practical bid of six spades.

Declarer won the opening diamond lead in dummy and, since the contract would be a laydown if trumps were 2-1, cashed the ace of spades. West's heart discard did not bother declarer unduly. Since a club could be discarded on the ace of hearts, the contract was safe as long as declarer could ruff a diamond on the table.

The thoughtless play would be to try to cash the king of diamonds. As the cards lie, East would ruff that and return a trump, and declarer would be stranded with a diamond loser—down one.

Even an experienced declarer could go wrong on this hand. Correct technique is to give up a diamond trick at once by leading a low diamond from hand. The defenders have no counter. Suppose West wins and continues with a third diamond. Declarer ruffs with dummy's king of spades, cashes the ace of hearts for a club discard and then takes the marked finesse for the jack of trumps. After drawing the last spade, declarer can claim the rest. In all, he scores seven trump tricks and a ruff, a heart, two diamonds and a club.

Advertisers earn Clio Awards

NEW YORK (AP) — Television commercials for John Hancock Financial Services took top honors Monday night as the 1986 Clio Awards were presented for advertising excellence.

The 27th annual awards attracted 21,709 entries from 53 countries. In the U.S. television category, 68 Clios were awarded in 54 categories in a program at the New York State Theater at Lincoln Center. Another 37 Clios were awarded for international television advertising.

Three John Hancock commercials, called "How Much Are You Making," "Football Retirement," and "Dual Income," won the Clio for best national campaign among U.S. entries. Called "Real Life, Real Answers," the campaign was produced by Pytka, a company based in Venice, Calif.

Pepsi-Cola took multiple honors for its "Archaeology" spot which showed a professor and his students rummaging through the remnants of our generation at some distant date, unable to identify a rival's cola bottle.

The spot won Clios in the non-alcoholic beverages category for the advertising agency BBDO of New York which conceived it; for the New York-based music production company Elias Productions, and for Pytka.

The Clio awards were first given out in 1960 and are named after the mythological Greek muse Kleo who proclaimed, glorified and celebrated history, great deeds and accomplishments.

Clio awards for radio and print advertising were presented earlier this month.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ads for toys, beverages, financial services and other products are drawing the ire of consumer activists, who charge they have to police misleading advertising because the government no longer does.

The Federal Trade Commission "can be counted on to turn the other cheek" to false advertising claims, Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., charged Monday at the second annual Harlan Page Hubbard Memorial Awards for bad advertising.

Named for a pioneer in the promotion of patent medicines, the lemon-topped Hubbard awards are given out by a coalition of consumer and public interest groups.

Singled out for criticism at the ceremony were ads for Audi cars, Upsy Baby dolls, Arby's roast beef, the U.S. Committee for Energy Awareness, Virginia Slims cigarettes, Colt 45 malt liquor, Household Finance Corporation, G.I. Joe toys and New York Air.

While the FTC wasn't eligible for one of the trophies, Gore said it should have been nominated anyway, since it is deceptive for the commission to describe itself as a consumer protection agency.

Hampton

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Jazzman Lionel Hampton will fill in for and pay tribute to his late mentor Benny Goodman at the city's Riverbend Festival, organizers said.

Goodman, a clarinetist, had been scheduled to headline the 10-day festival's jazz revue on Friday. Hampton agreed to take over the spot after Goodman died last week at his New York apartment at age 77.

"Lionel and Benny had remained close friends since they played together 45 years ago and Lionel went to console the Goodmans as soon as he learned of Benny's death," said Russell Linnemann, chairman of the festival's entertainment committee.

"Right from the start...he said he wanted to play a lot of Benny Goodman as a tribute to his friend," Linnemann said.

The 73-year-old vibraphonist worked for Goodman from 1936 to 1940 before starting his own orchestra.

Petty

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The City Council will take up the question of whether Bob Dylan and Tom Petty are too loud for local residents.

The rockers were scheduled to perform outdoors at Civic Stadium on July 29, but noise control officer Paul Herman refused last week to grant the True Confession Tour a variance from city noise regulations.

Herman said the high-volume sound would damage the hearing and raise the blood pressure of nearby residents.

The Exposition-Recreation Commission, which operates the stadium, has appealed Herman's decision to the council, which will take up the matter Wednesday.

NEW YORK (AP) — His father's face is known the world over, but being the president's son apparently does not give Ron Reagan carte blanche or ready recognition.

The younger Reagan, in fact, soon could be asking millions of Americans "Do you know me?" in a commercial for the American Express credit card.

"It's a typical 'Do you know me' commercial. You know the name but can't place the face," said Jerry C. Welsh, executive vice-president of marketing for American Express.

The ad, which was completed last week, must be approved by American Express executives before it runs, said Welsh.

"Until we see the film and judge its effectiveness, we don't know if it'll make it" on the air, he said.

Welsh would not say how much Reagan was paid for his appearance.

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — The lead singer of the heavy-metal band Motley Crue has been sentenced to 30 days in jail after pleading guilty to manslaughter and drunken driving in an accident that killed one person and injured two others.

Vincent Neil Wharton, 24, was ordered by a Los Angeles County Superior Court judge to surrender July 14 at the Gardena City Jail. Wharton, who has long, blond hair and a rowdy stage image, wore a gray, three-piece suit to court on Monday. He did not speak with reporters.

Under a plea bargain, Wharton agreed to pay restitution to the victims and be placed on probation. He could have been sentenced to four years and eight months in prison. The amount of restitution was not disclosed.

The December 1984 head-on crash killed Nicholas Dingley, 24, a passenger in Wharton's car and the Scottish drummer for a band called Hanoi Rocks.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington state congressman who was rushed to a hospital for abdominal surgery last week has been released and has gone home to recuperate.

Rep. Rod Chandler, R-Wash., was released from Bethesda Naval Hospital Monday and is expected to return to Capitol Hill in a week.

"He said this weekend he felt just great, so they let him out this morning," said Chandler's press secretary, Steve Witter.

Chandler, 43, received emergency surgery last Wednesday after being rushed to the hospital from his House office when he complained of extreme stomach pains.

He was diagnosed as having mesenteric adenitis, a viral infection of the lymph node.

Chandler is in his second House term.

Sunglasses become status accessory

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Who's kidding whom? Sunglasses are not just glasses to wear in the sun. They are Statements with a capital S.

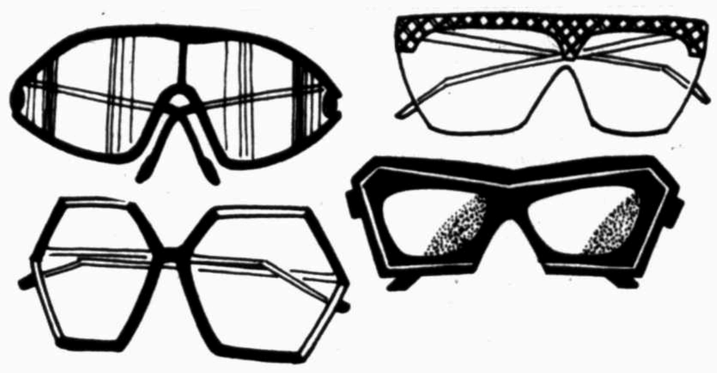
Sunglasses, which were originally conceived 2,000 years ago by the Chinese who placed wet tea crystals over their eyes to block glare from the sun, have gone above and beyond the call of duty. Sunglasses have emerged from the category of a simple solution for squints to an outward sign of upward mobility. They have been catapulted into accessory celebrity.

"It all boils down to the fact that sunglasses are an aid to being seen more than they are a seeing aid," says James Pritts, vice president of marketing for Sola North American Sunlens Division, Rochester, N.Y., the world's largest manufacturer of sunglass lenses.

"Three aspects go into the purchase of sunglasses," Pritts says. "No. 1 is the amount of attention people want to attract to themselves. Secondly, you have people that would buy sunglasses with lenses shaped like hearts who want people to stop and look. It is like the woman who wears a miniskirt on Fifth Avenue.

"Third," Pritts says, "is the transformation aspect. Sunglasses allow people to transform themselves. It's like Halloween. People will wear a style they think transforms their look to another image."

Thanks to the movies, MTV, television and People magazine, sunglasses have become tokens of tribute from fans to high-profile wearers. "It has spurred the sale of sunglasses," Mauri Edwards, spokesman for the Sunglass Association of America, says.



SUNGLASSES HAVE become big business. In 1985, 160 million pair of sunglasses were sold in the United States, according to Edwards.

From the street vendors of Manhattan selling the $2 imports to the optician selling $250 designer frames, the sunglasses industry, according to the 70-member Sunglass Association of America, has grown from $885 million in sales in 1984 to its current $1.3 billion.

Carrollton, Texas-based Sun Mark Inc. is the second-largest sunglass retailer in the United States. According to a release from Sun Mark, sales of sunglasses in all stores increased 40 percent in 1984, and 55 percent in 1985.

It is a growth echoed throughout the industry. According to Norm Salik, director of marketing services for the Sunglass Division of Bausch & Lomb, Rochester, N.Y., 47 percent of all the money spent on sunglasses in the United States last year was for sunglasses costing more than $20.

"We have had a considerable growth of sales on the upper end; it is a market growing very fast," says Gerry Fultz, vice president of marketing for Optyl, the Norwood, N.J., company responsible for the market infiltration of Christian Dior, Porsche, Dunhill, Playboy, Saphira, Vienna and Surjet labels of sunglasses. In April, according to Fultz, Optyl launched its latest: Boeing (like the jet) sunglasses, priced from $150 to $225.

"I think a lot has to do with modern economic behavior and the individual's interest turning more to himself," Fultz says. Because of that narcissism, he says, "More people are buying sunglasses and buying sunglasses at a higher price tag than they ever have done before."

ACCORDING TO Pritts, "People have very specific personalities associated with the style of sunglasses."

Jack Nicholson wears his sunglasses at night to basketball games. Michael Jackson wears them to award ceremonies, maybe even to bed. Elvis Costello wears John Lennonesque glasses in People magazine. Jackie Onassis may not be able to edit without them.

None of that is anything new. Roy ("Pretty Woman") Orbison started wearing sunglasses both night and day in 1963 when he left his regular glasses on an airplane and wore his only pair of prescription sunglasses in his concert. In a "Today Show" interview last week, Orbison explained that his black, Buddy Holly shades have become his trademark.

The at-times unbearable Chicago Bear Jim McMahon models a dozen different pairs in the latest Honda Scooter commercial. Bruce Willis wears his Blues Brothers blacks in "Moonlighting" whenever he feels the urge for a song. Tom Cruise wears aviators in "Top Gun" because he plays a fighter pilot, and because he's Tom Cruise. Sylvester Stallone dons blue reflectors in "Cobra."

"The biggest trend in sunglasses," according to Salik at Bausch & Lomb, "is the emulation of movie stars.

" 'Cobra' and 'Top Gun' are 1½-hour commercials for sunglasses," says Salik, who in 1985, placed Bausch & Lomb sunglasses in 55 movies and 30 television shows. This year, we have placed sunglasses in 45 movies just through May."

Salik adds, "All you need for the year is one 'Top Gun.' 'Risky Business' has paid for all our involvement in the movie business for the next 25 years."

THE NORWALK, Conn., headquarters of the Sunglass Association has a 10-member Hall of Frame. The lineup: Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Jackie Onassis, John Belushi, Elton John, Grace Kelly, Greta Garbo, Jack Nicholson, Julie Christie, Diane Keaton and Anthony Quinn.

According to Edwards, this November, the association will choose its 1986 "Shady Personality of The Year." Last year it was Don Johnson, and, Edwards says, a contender for the 1986 title is McMahon.

"People need celebrities as points of orientation," Fultz says. "People try to create a certain look and a certain atmosphere around sunglasses. They can focus on the type of image they want to project."

If you would rather keep your own personality, but allow your sunglasses to provide the entertainment, Looksound Sunglasses from Sanger Harris in Dallas, are $35 with an attached, built-in FM radio. "We sold hundreds of them the first week," says Becky Powell, spokesman for Sanger's.

Experts have agreed for decades that sunglasses should block the harmful ultraviolet rays in sunlight. The cornea needs to be protected from prolonged exposure to those rays, which may cause photochemical changes in the eye, leading to cataracts and other serious eye problems.

Dr. Michael Simons, vice president of professional affairs for Pearle Vision Centers, suggests when shopping for sunglasses that you check in the mirror to see if your eyes can be seen clearly through the lenses. If so, the lenses may not be able to screen out ultraviolet light.

BUT WHATEVER sunglasses you wear, most sunglass experts agree that the choice you make is a telling one.

"Sunglasses have a lot to do with how you wish to be viewed," explains Fultz of Optyl. "It used to be that you would spend a lot of money on a house or a car. But most encounters are one on one and don't occur at home or in the car. You can't carry your house with you, so if you are going to make a lasting impression, you are going to have just yourself. Because of that, sunglasses are beginning to play a major role."

Summer's swimsuits sparkle

By LUCRETIA STEIGER
Copley News Service

Put on your dark glasses, tuck in your tummy and prepare to be dazzled — there'll be a lot of light reflecting from swimsuits this year.

In the summer of '86, the sleek second-skin, one-piecers (called maillots - or mios - in the industry) will be rich enough in gold or silver thread to qualify for space in the safe-deposit box.

But that's not the only swimsuit trend.

Competing with the bright metallic threads are suits decorated with huge slices of abstract fruit designs in even brighter colors. There are plenty of flower prints, too, for those who like garden variety in their swimsuits.

Look to the men's underwear department for inspiration. One of the trendiest suits seems to have been inspired by those cotton knits.

Spare and plain, such suits are in severe contrast to the brightness of most of this year's suits, but as one expert observed: "Fashion is what looks new and fresh to the eye." That philosophy could springboard these simple suits into definite winners.

All in all, getting dolled up to loll around the beach or pool this summer should be easy: There's something for everyone. Here's a rundown on the splashier trends of the season:

GLAMOUR. The woman who chooses this look is resplendent in a body-hugging suit gleaming with shimmering gold or silver thread or other metallic decoration. Her cover-up is likely to be as shining as her suit, a diaphanous silver or gold shirt that looks more like evening at the country club than daytime on the beach. She also might like sequined suits, which glitter even more strongly, or a suit decorated with rhinestones in various colors.

LAYERS. This is for someone who likes mixing and matching, and wears one suit, or part of a suit, over another suit or even a part of another suit. The suit looks different every time she wears it. For example, an orange one-shoulder suit can mix with a pink one-shoulder suit. A purple half-suit can layer overall.

PRIMITIVES. Think Tahiti, fern prints; Gauguin, lush island motifs; landscapes, African motifs, earthy colors for suits; sarongs and native skirts for cover-ups. Make your own hip wrap cover-up with a yard or two of primitive-pattern print cotton or even slippery poly-cotton blends.

"Animal prints — including snakeskin touches — are popular, as are geometrics."

A new touch in prints is a Memphis print with bold graphic squiggles and jigsaw shapes inspired by the home furnishing trend that began a few years ago in Italy.

COMFORT. This is for the woman who has got one of those bold bodies, honed to perfection, and she underplays it in cotton ribbed knit swimsuits that look distinctly like men's underwear. These suits have no bra, not much shaping, little or no Lycra for stretch, no obvious glamour and often little color. What they do have going for them, however, is comfort.

But their fashion impact could make waves this summer.

Closet organization important

DALLAS (AP) — Many women begin their day by gazing into an unorganized closet and lamenting, "I have nothing to wear," but with a little planning that needn't happen, says Rosemary Gwin, former fashion model and owner of a Dallas-based image consulting firm.

"Chances are these women have a fantastic selection of fashionable wardrobe items," she says. "However, they are lost among a collection of clothing that should have been discarded long ago.

"Do not think of the closet as a storage area," advises Mrs. Gwin, whose business, Timeless Elegance, was founded to help women organize their wardrobes and develop their own personal style.

Mrs. Gwin recommends reviewing the closet every two months as a way of staying in touch with yourself, as well as becoming organized to dress quickly and efficiently, allowing more time for other things.

Organizing the closet is a four-step process, she says. It begins with separating blouses, jackets, skirts, pants, dresses, sweaters and vests into groups, with hangers all facing the same direction. Within each group, cluster items by color.

Step two is designed to weed out items that no longer support or enhance your lifestyle and involves removing any worn out or dated clothing, as well as anything that has not been worn in two seasons.

Next, separate the remaining clothes into three groups: clothing that is loved and worn, garments you feel ambivalent toward, and those items which need recycling.

In determining into which pile a garment fits, Mrs. Gwin suggests, ask the questions: How do I feel about this? Do I love and wear it? Am I ambivalent about it?

After making the decision, items you are ambivalent about should be placed in the back of the closet and clothes that are loved and worn should be placed at the front.

The same process should be repeated to organize accessories, including bags, belts, shoes, hats and scarves.

Finally, clothing to be recycled should be taken to a used clothing store or thrift shop, shared with friends or given to charity.

Before taking garments for recycling, be sure items are clean, pressed and on hangers. In most cases, the store will price the garments and may ask the giver to provide an original purchase price.

Perfume bottles almost 3500 years old

Copley News Service

As early as 1500 B.C. the Egyptians were producing glass bottles and jars by covering silica-paste cores with molten glass and digging out the core after the container hardened. These containers were then colored brightly and used mainly to hold cosmetics and perfumes.

Drugs, Pill can be risky together

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I was very interested to read your column wherein a reader described the suppressing action of certain antibiotics on oral contraceptives.

As a member of the dental profession who considers himself well-read and who prescribes antibiotics routinely, I must confess that I was not aware of these facts.

A quick survey of my colleagues suggests that it has yet to reach the dental profession in significant numbers.

You would be performing a well-appreciated public service by noting those specific antibiotics in your column. Thank you. — DONALD A JOHNSON, D.D.S., RICHFIELD, MINN.

DEAR DR. JOHNSON: I called my trusty pharmacist, David Powell, who was kind enough to share this information published by pharmaceutical companies for physicians and health-care professionals.

"Oral contraceptives may be rendered less effective and increased incidence of breakthrough bleeding may occur by virtue of drug interaction with rifampin, isoniazid, ampicillin, neomycin, penicillin V, tetracycline, chloramphenicol, sulfonamides, nitrofurantoin, griseofulvin, barbiturates, phenytoin, primidone, phenylbutazone, analgesics, tranquilizers (e.g. diazepam), and anti-migraine preparations. Oral contraceptives may alter the effectiveness of other types of drugs, such as oral anti-coagulants, anti-convulsants, tricyclic anti-depressants, anti-hypertensive agents (e.g. guanethidine), theophylline, vitamins, hypoglycemic agents, clofibrate, glucocorticoids and acetaminophen."

Further, women who use oral contraceptives "should not smoke. The combination of cigarette smoking, especially heavy cigarette smoking, and oral contraceptive use greatly increases the risk of heart attack."

DEAR ABBY: You need a short course on the subject of retirement. It's not wonderful for everyone. After the retiree has traveled, gone fishing, painted the house, played with the grandchildren and sat around the house doing nothing, terminal boredom sets in.

As the wife of a husband who has been retired for two years, I would like to state that he is retired, I am not. I still have the groceries to buy, the food to prepare, the dishes to do, the laundry, cleaning, etc. My husband is from the school that all of the above is woman's work — and at 66 he isn't about to change nor does he want to.

When do I retire? — ANGRY IN ATLANTA

DEAR ANGRY: Never, if you honestly believe that your husband can't change. At 66, he's just a kid. Men fall in love, sire children and just begin to live at that age.

They can also learn how to cook, shop for groceries, do the laundry, the dishes and clean the house. Think positive, and direct your displeasure to your husband, not me. If you expect nothing, you'll get less.

DEAR ABBY: My father was a wonderful man. No girl ever had a better dad. Everyone who knew him loved him. His name was Robert E. Kreiger. He played football for the Philadelphia Eagles and piloted 30 missions over occupied Europe during World War II.

Dad smoked three packs of cigarettes a day. Just two months after he was diagnosed as having lung cancer, he died. He had just turned 60.

Please, dads, don't smoke. — HIS DAUGHTER

Who's kidding whom? Sunglasses are not just glasses to wear in the sun. They are Statements with a capital S.

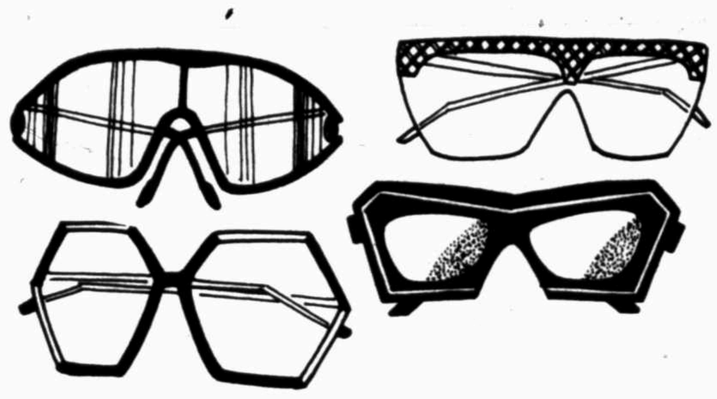
Sunglasses, which were originally conceived 2,000 years ago by the Chinese who placed wet tea crystals over their eyes to block glare from the sun, have gone above and beyond the call of duty. Sunglasses have emerged from the category of a simple solution for squints to an outward sign of upward mobility. They have been catapulted into accessory celebrity.

"It all boils down to the fact that sunglasses are an aid to being seen more than they are a seeing aid," says James Pritts, vice president of marketing for Sola North American Sunlens Division, Rochester, N.Y., the world's largest manufacturer of sunglass lenses.

"Three aspects go into the purchase of sunglasses," Pritts says. "No. 1 is the amount of attention people want to attract to themselves. Secondly, you have people that would buy sunglasses with lenses shaped like hearts who want people to stop and look. It is like the woman who wears a miniskirt on Fifth Avenue.

"Third," Pritts says, "is the transformation aspect. Sunglasses allow people to transform themselves. It's like Halloween. People will wear a style they think transforms their look to another image."

Thanks to the movies, MTV, television and People magazine, sunglasses have become tokens of tribute from fans to high-profile wearers. "It has spurred the sale of sunglasses," Mauri Edwards, spokesman for the Sunglass Association of America, says.



SUNGLASSES HAVE become big business. In 1985, 160 million pair of sunglasses were sold in the United States, according to Edwards.

From the street vendors of Manhattan selling the $2 imports to the optician selling $250 designer frames, the sunglasses industry, according to the 70-member Sunglass Association of America, has grown from $885 million in sales in 1984 to its current $1.3 billion.

Carrollton, Texas-based Sun Mark Inc. is the second-largest sunglass retailer in the United States. According to a release from Sun Mark, sales of sunglasses in all stores increased 40 percent in 1984, and 55 percent in 1985.

It is a growth echoed throughout the industry. According to Norm Salik, director of marketing services for the Sunglass Division of Bausch & Lomb, Rochester, N.Y., 47 percent of all the money spent on sunglasses in the United States last year was for sunglasses costing more than $20.

"We have had a considerable growth of sales on the upper end; it is a market growing very fast," says Gerry Fultz, vice president of marketing for Optyl, the Norwood, N.J., company responsible for the market infiltration of Christian Dior, Porsche, Dunhill, Playboy, Saphira, Vienna and Surjet labels of sunglasses. In April, according to Fultz, Optyl launched its latest: Boeing (like the jet) sunglasses, priced from $150 to $225.

"I think a lot has to do with modern economic behavior and the individual's interest turning more to himself," Fultz says. Because of that narcissism, he says, "More people are buying sunglasses and buying sunglasses at a higher price tag than they ever have done before."

ACCORDING TO Pritts, "People have very specific personalities associated with the style of sunglasses."

Jack Nicholson wears his sunglasses at night to basketball games. Michael Jackson wears them to award ceremonies, maybe even to bed. Elvis Costello wears John Lennonesque glasses in People magazine. Jackie Onassis may not be able to edit without them.

None of that is anything new. Roy ("Pretty Woman") Orbison started wearing sunglasses both night and day in 1963 when he left his regular glasses on an airplane and wore his only pair of prescription sunglasses in his concert. In a "Today Show" interview last week, Orbison explained that his black, Buddy Holly shades have become his trademark.

The at-times unbearable Chicago Bear Jim McMahon models a dozen different pairs in the latest Honda Scooter commercial. Bruce Willis wears his Blues Brothers blacks in "Moonlighting" whenever he feels the urge for a song. Tom Cruise wears aviators in "Top Gun" because he plays a fighter pilot, and because he's Tom Cruise. Sylvester Stallone dons blue reflectors in "Cobra."

"The biggest trend in sunglasses," according to Salik at Bausch & Lomb, "is the emulation of movie stars.

" 'Cobra' and 'Top Gun' are 1½-hour commercials for sunglasses," says Salik, who in 1985, placed Bausch & Lomb sunglasses in 55 movies and 30 television shows. This year, we have placed sunglasses in 45 movies just through May."

Salik adds, "All you need for the year is one 'Top Gun.' 'Risky Business' has paid for all our involvement in the movie business for the next 25 years."

THE NORWALK, Conn., headquarters of the Sunglass Association has a 10-member Hall of Frame. The lineup: Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Jackie Onassis, John Belushi, Elton John, Grace Kelly, Greta Garbo, Jack Nicholson, Julie Christie, Diane Keaton and Anthony Quinn.

According to Edwards, this November, the association will choose its 1986 "Shady Personality of The Year." Last year it was Don Johnson, and, Edwards says, a contender for the 1986 title is McMahon.

"People need celebrities as points of orientation," Fultz says. "People try to create a certain look and a certain atmosphere around sunglasses. They can focus on the type of image they want to project."

If you would rather keep your own personality, but allow your sunglasses to provide the entertainment, Looksound Sunglasses from Sanger Harris in Dallas, are $35 with an attached, built-in FM radio. "We sold hundreds of them the first week," says Becky Powell, spokesman for Sanger's.

Experts have agreed for decades that sunglasses should block the harmful ultraviolet rays in sunlight. The cornea needs to be protected from prolonged exposure to those rays, which may cause photochemical changes in the eye, leading to cataracts and other serious eye problems.

Dr. Michael Simons, vice president of professional affairs for Pearle Vision Centers, suggests when shopping for sunglasses that you check in the mirror to see if your eyes can be seen clearly through the lenses. If so, the lenses may not be able to screen out ultraviolet light.

BUT WHATEVER sunglasses you wear, most sunglass experts agree that the choice you make is a telling one.

"Sunglasses have a lot to do with how you wish to be viewed," explains Fultz of Optyl. "It used to be that you would spend a lot of money on a house or a car. But most encounters are one on one and don't occur at home or in the car. You can't carry your house with you, so if you are going to make a lasting impression, you are going to have just yourself. Because of that, sunglasses are beginning to play a major role."

Summer's swimsuits sparkle

Copley News Service

Put on your dark glasses, tuck in your tummy and prepare to be dazzled — there'll be a lot of light reflecting from swimsuits this year.

In the summer of '86, the sleek second-skin, one-piecers (called maillots - or mios - in the industry) will be rich enough in gold or silver thread to qualify for space in the safe-deposit box.

But that's not the only swimsuit trend.

Competing with the bright metallic threads are suits decorated with huge slices of abstract fruit designs in even brighter colors. There are plenty of flower prints, too, for those who like garden variety in their swimsuits.

Look to the men's underwear department for inspiration. One of the trendiest suits seems to have been inspired by those cotton knits.

Spare and plain, such suits are in severe contrast to the brightness of most of this year's suits, but as one expert observed: "Fashion is what looks new and fresh to the eye." That philosophy could springboard these simple suits into definite winners.

All in all, getting dolled up to loll around the beach or pool this summer should be easy: There's something for everyone. Here's a rundown on the splashier trends of the season:

GLAMOUR. The woman who chooses this look is resplendent in a body-hugging suit gleaming with shimmering gold or silver thread or other metallic decoration. Her cover-up is likely to be as shining as her suit, a diaphanous silver or gold shirt that looks more like evening at the country club than daytime on the beach. She also might like sequined suits, which glitter even more strongly, or a suit decorated with rhinestones in various colors.

LAYERS. This is for someone who likes mixing and matching, and wears one suit, or part of a suit, over another suit or even a part of another suit. The suit looks different every time she wears it. For example, an orange one-shoulder suit can mix with a pink one-shoulder suit. A purple half-suit can layer overall.

DETAILS. The fan of details likes side drapes, ties, shirring, gathers, buttons, belts and sashes, all of which are dressing up some of this year's trickier suits.

PRIMITIVES. Think Tahiti, fern prints; Gauguin, lush island motifs; landscapes, African motifs, earthy colors for suits; sarongs and native skirts for cover-ups. Make your own hip wrap cover-up with a yard or two of primitive-pattern print cotton or even slippery poly-cotton blends.

"Animal prints — including snakeskin touches — are popular, as are geometrics."

A new touch in prints is a Memphis print with bold graphic squiggles and jigsaw shapes inspired by the home furnishing trend that began a few years ago in Italy.

COMFORT. This is for the woman who has got one of those bold bodies, honed to perfection, and she underplays it in cotton ribbed knit swimsuits that look distinctly like men's underwear. These suits have no bra, not much shaping, little or no Lycra for stretch, no obvious glamour and often little color. What they do have going for them, however, is comfort.

But their fashion impact could make waves this summer.

Closet organization important

DALLAS (AP) — Many women begin their day by gazing into an unorganized closet and lamenting, "I have nothing to wear," but with a little planning that needn't happen, says Rosemary Gwin, former fashion model and owner of a Dallas-based image consulting firm.

"Chances are these women have a fantastic selection of fashionable wardrobe items," she says. "However, they are lost among a collection of clothing that should have been discarded long ago.

"Do not think of the closet as a storage area," advises Mrs. Gwin, whose business, Timeless Elegance, was founded to help women organize their wardrobes and develop their own personal style.

Mrs. Gwin recommends reviewing the closet every two months as a way of staying in touch with yourself, as well as becoming organized to dress quickly and efficiently, allowing more time for other things.

Organizing the closet is a four-step process, she says. It begins with separating blouses, jackets, skirts, pants, dresses, sweaters and vests into groups, with hangers all facing the same direction. Within each group, cluster items by color.

Step two is designed to weed out items that no longer support or enhance your lifestyle and involves removing any worn out or dated clothing, as well as anything that has not been worn in two seasons.

Next, separate the remaining clothes into three groups: clothing that is loved and worn, garments you feel ambivalent toward, and those items which need recycling.

In determining into which pile a garment fits, Mrs. Gwin suggests, ask the questions: How do I feel about this? Do I love and wear it? Am I ambivalent about it?

After making the decision, items you are ambivalent about should be placed in the back of the closet and clothes that are loved and worn should be placed at the front.

The same process should be repeated to organize accessories, including bags, belts, shoes, hats and scarves.

Finally, clothing to be recycled should be taken to a used clothing store or thrift shop, shared with friends or given to charity.

Before taking garments for recycling, be sure items are clean, pressed and on hangers. In most cases, the store will price the garments and may ask the giver to provide an original purchase price.

Perfume bottles almost 3500 years old

As early as 1500 B.C. the Egyptians were producing glass bottles and jars by covering silica-paste cores with molten glass and digging out the core after the container hardened. These containers were then colored brightly and used mainly to hold cosmetics and perfumes.

DEAR ABBY

Drugs, Pill can be risky together

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I was very interested to read your column wherein a reader described the suppressing action of certain antibiotics on oral contraceptives.

As a member of the dental profession who considers himself well-read and who prescribes antibiotics routinely, I must confess that I was not aware of these facts.

A quick survey of my colleagues suggests that it has yet to reach the dental profession in significant numbers.

You would be performing a well-appreciated public service by noting those specific antibiotics in your column. Thank you. — DONALD A JOHNSON, D.D.S., RICHFIELD, MINN.

DEAR DR. JOHNSON: I called my trusty pharmacist, David Powell, who was kind enough to share this information published by pharmaceutical companies for physicians and health-care professionals.

"Oral contraceptives may be rendered less effective and increased incidence of breakthrough bleeding may occur by virtue of drug interaction with rifampin, isoniazid, ampicillin, neomycin, penicillin V, tetracycline, chloramphenicol, sulfonamides, nitrofurantoin, griseofulvin, barbiturates, phenytoin, primidone, phenylbutazone, analgesics, tranquilizers (e.g. diazepam), and anti-migraine preparations. Oral contraceptives may alter the effectiveness of other types of drugs, such as oral anti-coagulants, anti-convulsants, tricyclic anti-depressants, anti-hypertensive agents (e.g. guanethidine), theophylline, vitamins, hypoglycemic agents, clofibrate, glucocorticoids and acetaminophen."

Further, women who use oral contraceptives "should not smoke. The combination of cigarette smoking, especially heavy cigarette smoking, and oral contraceptive use greatly increases the risk of heart attack."

DEAR ABBY: You need a short course on the subject of retirement. It's not wonderful for everyone. After the retiree has traveled, gone fishing, painted the house, played with the grandchildren and sat around the house doing nothing, terminal boredom sets in.

As the wife of a husband who has been retired for two years, I would like to state that he is retired, I am not. I still have the groceries to buy, the food to prepare, the dishes to do, the laundry, cleaning, etc. My husband is from the school that all of the above is woman's work — and at 66 he isn't about to change nor does he want to.

When do I retire? — ANGRY IN ATLANTA

DEAR ANGRY: Never, if you honestly believe that your husband can't change. At 66, he's just a kid. Men fall in love, sire children and just begin to live at that age.

They can also learn how to cook, shop for groceries, do the laundry, the dishes and clean the house. Think positive, and direct your displeasure to your husband, not me. If you expect nothing, you'll get less.

DEAR ABBY: My father was a wonderful man. No girl ever had a better dad. Everyone who knew him loved him. His name was Robert E. Kreiger. He played football for the Philadelphia Eagles and piloted 30 missions over occupied Europe during World War II.

Dad smoked three packs of cigarettes a day. Just two months after he was diagnosed as having lung cancer, he died. He had just turned 60.

Please, dads, don't smoke. — HIS DAUGHTER

Firefighters untangle wreckage of a subway car blasted by a bomb. One passenger was killed in the accident Monday.

Santiago bomb kills one

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A bomb exploded early Monday in a subway car, killing one person and wounding six others, the army said in a communique.

It reported another bomb went off in the main downtown station where the city's two subway lines intersect, causing some damage and interrupting service but inflicting no casualties.

The communique said a subway passenger, Jorge Campos, died in a military hospital two blocks from where the bomb went off in the Tobalaba station in eastern Santiago. It reported one of the wounded victims was in serious condition.

Ludolf Lausen, the director of the Santiago subway system, said the blast in the subway car occurred at 6:56 a.m., 36 minutes after the bomb went off in the downtown Los Heroes station,.

Service was suspended at several points along the 15.5-mile system that carries an average 420,000 passengers daily.

No individual or group asserted responsibility for the attacks.

Alberto Cardemil, a top-ranking official at the Interior Ministry, called the attacks "criminal acts by terrorists" who he said "are trying to block the normal advancement of Chilean institutions."

Soviets 'out of sight' in space program

LONDON (AP) — The United States, for all its spectacular space successes, is 10 years behind the Soviet space program, says the latest edition of Jane's Spaceflight Directory published today.

In terms of space experience, the Soviets are so far ahead of the Americans "that they are almost out of sight," editor Reginald Turnill wrote.

Their cosmonauts have spent more than 4,000 days in space compared with the American astronauts' 1,587, he wrote.

"Worse, the U.S. experience is largely based on short flights, giving no more than three days at a time of uninterrupted materials processing and crystal growth experiments," Turnill said.

The Soviets' advanced Salyut space station Mir is already in place, but "for all NASA's brilliant interplanetary successes, the U.S. space station is receding into the mid-1990s and NASA ... (is) now 10 years behind the Soviets in the practical utilization of what President Nixon so long ago dubbed 'this New Ocean,' " he wrote.

"The Soviet lead in space is now almost frightening," wrote Turnill.

Turnill's assessments came in the introduction to the 1986 directory, published by the company that produces the authoritative Jane's reference works on aircraft, military vessels and weapons systems.

He wrote that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration had a 100 percent flight safety record for 25 years and "no transport system can hope to maintain such perfection in the face of human fallibility."

Consequently, the biggest surprise about the Challenger space shuttle disaster on Jan. 28 was that NASA had made no contingency plans for the space program, he wrote.

Turnill wrote that because of the Challenger disaster, plans to use the shuttle as the West's main satellite launcher had failed beyond recovery.

He said another result of the Challenger explosion was that short-term launch costs, such as insurance, will soar. This will put pressure on satellite makers to increase capacity and, most of all, longevity.

Turnill's article noted that the United States has said the Soviets' heavy-lift booster system could be used for launching heavy military payloads, including ballistic missile defense weapons, as well as for assembling very large modular space stations.

Such modules, say the Americans, could be fitted out as reconnaissance platforms, nuclear power substations, or laboratories for various types of research and experiment.

Once deployed, such a space station would provide the Soviets with a manned space-based military capability for missions such as reconnaissance, command and control.

Turnill called the superpower dispute over the U.S. "Star Wars" space-based defense weapons system a "phony controversy."

Duarte says peace talks are a step forward

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte says a new round of peace talks may reduce the hatred built up between leftist rebels and the government after seven years of fighting, but cannot resolve all of their differences.

"Dialogue is not a solution," Duarte said in an interview Monday with The Associated Press. "A successful dialogue will not mean that we'll come out of there with everything solved. That is impossible."

On June 1, at the end of a two-hour speech marking the second anniversary of his inauguration, Duarte proposed that a new round of talks be held next month or early August saying, "I want to end the war."

"When I see the space for a political action, my first emotion is in the direction of peace," Duarte said in the interview. "I say I'll go out and talk because I have at least the chance to tell them what I think and the people will know I'm doing my best."

Two rounds of talks in 1984 ended in a stalemate. The war between the government and the rebels is in its seventh year. More than 61,000 have died, and hundreds of thousands of people have been displaced or fled the country of 5.2 million.

The Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, an umbrella group of five leftist armies, and its more moderate political arm, the Democratic Revolutionary Front, which frequently have called for a resumption of negotiations, accepted Duarte's proposal.

However, neither side appears to have altered positions that brought the talks to a standstill 18 months ago.

Duarte still is calling on the guerrillas to put down their arms and take part in the political process. The rebels refuse to put down their weapons and continue to call for a share of power, a joint army incorporating the guerrillas, and new elections.

The United States, which puts about $1.5 million a day into this Massachusetts-sized nation, supports Duarte. "My position is not extremist," Duarte said.

"What I'm saying is, 'Change your minds from hatred to tolerance, abandon the method of violence,' " he said. "This is not the method for getting power."

Alleged hijack mastermind speaks out as trial nears

GENOA, Italy (AP) — Abul Abbas, alleged mastermind of the hijacking of the cruise ship Achille Lauro, was quoted in an Italian magazine as saying his intervention led to the hostages' freedom and averted a catastrophe.

Abbas, leader of the Palestine Liberation Front, will be tried in absentia in the hijacking trial that begins Wednesday in Genoa, where the Italian luxury liner set sail on its October cruise of the Mediterranean.

L'Espresso magazine, in its edition on sale this week, also quoted the statement attributed to Abbas as saying that Leon Klinghoffer, a wheelchair-bound passenger from New York, was not slain by the hijackers.

It reported Abbas said that Klinghoffer, 69, perhaps "died from fear" during the hijacking and that Syria, which refused to accept the hijacked ship, "made a show" of finding his body washed up from the sea.

The magazine — like the court prosecutors — noted that Klinghoffer's body had two gunshot wounds.

L'Espresso said that Abbas, indicted as Mohammed Abbas, made his declarations in a document, written in Arabic, that arrived at the magazine last week.

It said every page of the document carried the stamp of the Palestine Liberation Front, a splinter group of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Abbas' whereabouts is unknown.

WORLD in brief

Chernobyl burn termed 'severe' by Gorbachev

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Monday the Chernobyl nuclear disaster had proved "a severe trial," but praised workers for coping with its consequences and did not criticize the handling of the accident.

Speaking to the 307-member Central Committee at its first meeting since the April 26 accident, Gorbachev formally thanked thousands of people involved in the cleanup at Chernobyl and the evacuation of more than 100,000 people from the area.

On Monday, according to the official news agency Tass, Gorbachev said that the "Soviet people have forcefully demonstrated organization and patriotism" in coping with the disaster, the world's worst nuclear accident.

Terrorists derail train

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (DPA) — Terrorists derailed a passenger train and bombed a bazaar in Peshawar city, near the Afghanistan border, killing four persons, including three policemen, in incidents Sunday night and Monday.

Reports from the city, capital of the troubled Northwest Frontier Province, said an anti-tank mine placed under a railway bridge about 12 miles east of Peshawar overturned two coaches of the train Sunday night, killing one passenger and injuring 35 others.

On Monday, a time bomb hidden in a fruit crate in a city bazaar exploded, killing the three policemen, injuring seven others and 10 shoppers.

Ancient tomb rifled by robbers

By JOHN F. BURNS
New York Times News Service

PEKING — An ancient nobleman's tomb that archeologists had described as one of the most significant discoveries ever made here has been opened and found to be virtually empty, apparently because a gang of grave-robbing gamblers made off with its contents at least 700 years ago.

"Archeologists drew almost a complete blank in their search of the inner tomb," the official New China News Agency said Saturday in a report of excavations at the tomb site, thought to be between 2,200 and 2,800 years old. The site is in Fengxiang County of Shaanxi Province, about 90 miles west of the ancient Yellow River capital of Xian.

Instead of precious relics of the kind usually found in such tombs, the news agency said, diggers found only pieces of bone, shreds of silk and flax clothing, and "gambling implements" of a kind popular in the Tang and Song Dynasties, which lasted from the 7th to the 13th centuries A.D. The agency said this indicated that "the grave robbers were most probably gamblers of the time."

At an earlier stage of the excavation, archeologists said they believed that the tomb was that of a Duke Jing of the Qin state that existed between the 9th and 3d centuries B.C. But the report by the New China News Agency said that close examination of 2,000 objects found earlier in an outer part of the tomb had not even confirmed the identity of the occupant.

Street gang problem new to Managua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Police report a rise in crime by street gangs in Managua and maintain it is a social problem that is new to Nicaragua.

They say they are trying to determine why gangs, calling themselves the Spanish equivalent of the Sharks, the Dragons, the Cobras and the Savages, have formed.

According to recent local news reports, gangs roaming the streets of their neighborhoods have raped and killed a teacher, beaten a man to death and stabbed a policeman.

"The phenomenon of juvenile gangs requires a profound analysis to determine who it is that is really committing the crimes," Commander Doris Tirejino, chief of the Sandinista police, told a news conference.

She said the Interior Department, the Education Ministry, the Nicaraguan Sports Institute and other government agencies are studying the problem.

Police also say the gangs have entered schools where they terrorized students and teachers.

Teachers interviewed at the Diriangen school, which was attacked by stone-throwing youths in May as teachers and students cowered inside, said the director of the school now carries a pistol.

The teachers added that after the youths smashed several windows with rocks, the director dispersed the gang by firing the pistol into the air.

"It has become very dangerous," said Ines Mejnard, the assistant director of the combined elementary and high school. "The gangs rob students both outside and inside the school. Sometimes the gangs come in the school and threaten us with switchblades."

Prelate ends Lebanon trip

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Cardinal John J. O'Connor of New York wound up a three day visit to Lebanon today, saying he had failed to deliver messages to American hostages from their families in the United States.

"I made many queries about the hostages, but I was unable to perform my mission of delivering the messages I carried for them from their families in the U.S.," O'Connor told a news conference.

He spoke at the Maronite Catholic Cathedral of Bikirki shortly before taking off for Rome to brief Vatican officials.

The Roman Catholic prelate said he would not go to Damascus, Syria, as he had planned because he was not invited.

"I was not invited to visit Damascus and I only go where I am invited. I am willing to go anywhere in the world for peace," he said.

O'Connor arrived in Lebanon Saturday and met with various religious and political leaders in Christian east Beirut. He also crossed the Green Line into Moslem west Beirut for a two-hour meeting with Sheikh Hassan Khaled spiritual leader of the militarily weak, but economically powerful Sunni Moslem community.

Shiite Moslem groups are believed to hold the five missing Americans.
