MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. F.

"The play is the thing" if the player is an artist. "The play is the thing" if its interpreters walk the boards and make living realities of the characters they portray. More musical to mortals than the whispered tones of the celestial choir is the human voice if that voice is modulated, soothing and capable of playing upon the heart strings of an audience. It is a short span, this life of ours, from the cradle to the grave and those who enjoy it to the full in a safe and a sane and a cultured way are those who get the most out of it. Life shouldn't be all gloom. Life shouldn't be all play. Life shouldn't be all work. Life shouldn't be all study. Life shouldn't be all prayerful meditation. There is a happy medium and the playhouse affords it. All human beings need sunshine like all plants need sunshine. One joyous laugh is worth more to the world than a million funereal groans. This reminds H. N. F. that Gene Lewis and Olga Worth and their carefully selected and very versatile co-players are in possession of the Wichita theater and daily they place before the playgoers the stage successess of the period, the farce comedies which have scored in the leading cities of the English-speaking world and amassed fortunes for their producers and fame and fortune for the playwrights. Knowing whereof he speaks, H. N. F. says and says it without blinking that the Gene Lewis-Olga Worth Stock Company may have peers in the land but no superior playing stock under Southern or Western skies. This is a broad statement but it cannot be challenged. This company which, during its short stay here has charmed all and fascinated many who have visited the Wichita theater, is one of the most expensive, carefully selected and popular stock companies in America. It isn't a jumped-up road show, it isn't a musical comedy frivol, running largely to legs and lingerie, with an angel producing the coin and a fairy spending it. Gene Lewis is a gentleman as well as a finished actor. Olga Worth is a refined and intellectual woman as well as a finished actress and the members of their company are of the same mental and social calibre. This is testimonial of the people of Dallas where the company plays in its own beautiful summer theater and where its home has been for six brilliant and successful seasons. Character is the thing, just as strongly as the play is the thing and where men and women in the world of art and song and drama and literature have been given and have taken the acid test it speaks a verdict which tawdry or fulsome purchased praise cannot buy or thoughtless and uninformed critics of the playhouse cannot bury. "Turn to the Right" held the boards last week. It is a play that touches the soul as well as the heart. There are many sermons in it. There is a vast deal of mother love in it. There are side lights of real life in it as well as sweet pictures which create an atmosphere permeated with the delighted aroma of new-mown hay. H. N. F. witnessed its production in New York four years ago and he isn't complimenting the local company when he says that he thoroughly enjoyed it on opening night at the Wichita theater, in Wichita Falls, "away down here in Texas." Do you love farce comedy that is a scream from the rise to the fall of the curtain? Do you love a play that is so provocative of merriment that from beginning to end an audience is convulsed with merriment and infectious laughter? Well, if you do "Sick-a-Bed," is the scream and the Gene Lewis and Olga Worth players are the makers of this wholesale gladness of heart and mind and soul, doing justice to the snappy lines and more than justice in making the climaxes which are called for by the playwright in his creation of a three-act slayer of thue devils and chaser away of Mr. Gloom and family. Gene Lewis and Olga Worth are here for an eight weeks' engagement. David Heileman, the producing manager, has provided them with eight real New York and London successess for their Wichita Falls engagement. After its remarkable run in American cities "Turn to the Right" was sent to London where the American company presented it and captured on the first night the sedate and self-satisfied Mr. John Bull and family. They are playing yet over there. "Sick-a-Bed" has been a screaming success on Broadway and elsewhere. "Acquittal" will be presented the coming week and it is one of the most powerful plays of its kind yet staged in America. There are heavy royalties on these plays, there are costly accessories in the way of senic adornment for Mr. Lewis and Miss Worth are insistent and inexorable when it comes to detail and the scenic artist, the costumer, the stage carpenter and the property man are men and not masters. Long ago in the city of Dallas, where these players are so well known and have been so eminently successful H. N. F. coined the praise "flowers for the living—if the living are deserving." This bouquet fashioned under the bluest of skies in that land "where the west begins" is tossed into the laps of Gene Lewis, Olga Worth, their versatile co-workers and manager who are playing their first engagement in the City Built on Faith. May the engagement be a success financially as it has been and will continue to be from an artistic viewpoint.

There were three real soldiers in one bunch in the city of Wichita Falls Tuesday—Major W. L. Culbertson of Wichita Falls, Major Clark A. Adams of Crowell and Captain S. A. Hankins of Quanah. These national guardsmen were not Y. M. C. A. Majors assigned to the dangerous and nerve wrecking work of laying chocolate barrages at Argonne or elsewhere in France or Flanders. All were guardsmen before the great conflict; all were trained at Camp

Limiting Merchant Fleet Big Problem Facing Army Parley

Changed Conditions Render Merchant Vessels Instruments of War—Control of Future Shipbuilding by National License May Be Proposed at Meet.

By HERBERT COREY.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Today the United States owns a merchant marine. It has 1,450 steel vessels, of which one-third are very good indeed, one-third are fair, and one-third are what the cat brought in.

How much of a merchant marine will the United States have when the Arms Parley is over

That may sound like a foolish question. But is is not. It is a certainty that in some form or other the question of limiting the marchant marine fleets of the conferring nations will be brought before the Arms Parley. The United States Shopping Board is now considering this question. Admiral F. T. Bowles, one of the American authorities on commercial shipping, has been placed in charge of the technical examination.

Need Merchant Fleets in War.

The reason why the national ownerships of merchant fleets are to be considered by the Arms Parley is primarily that the character of war has changed. War is no longer between army and army and fleet and fleet, but between nation and nation. A commercial fleet in time of war is just as much an instrument of war as is a fleet of warships or battle cruisers. Without an effective commercial fleet today no nation could wage an offensive war.

Troops and provisions and the munitions of war could not be transported. No nation—not even the United States—could afford to maintain in times of peace an effective fleet of military transports. The United States has maintained such a fleet in the past, which has been quite sufficient to its peace time needs. But the outlook is that this fleet will be lessened in numbers. It is too costly for peace time maintenance.

"We will be forced to what other nations have done," a financial authority told me some time ago. "We will rely upon our mercantile marine for transports. We can do that, for we now have a mercantile marine. Before the war we did not have one."

Potential Vessels of War.

Therefore the limitation of the mercantile marines of the conferring nations is quite as pertinent a question for the consideration of the Arms Parley as is the limitation of the fleets of war. The change in the manner of making war has also forced a change in the construction of mercantile vessels. It may be assumed that hereafter practically all vessels will be built with gun platforms ready for the installation of guns. The delay consequent upon the installation of these platforms heretofore compelled will be done away with. The commercial vessel of the future is a potential vessel of war.

The fact that today the American mercantile marine is very largely owned by the government has only an indirect bearing on the main question, that of the limitation of the commercial tonnage of the various nations. It is the intention of the administration to dispose of all the government owned vessels to private individuals or wholly American companies as rapidly as possible. The mercantile tonnage in the possession of the other conferring governments is negligible and will likewise be sold to individuals as rapidly as possible.

Apportionment of Tonnage.

Therefore, the Arms Parley will be called upon to decide—or rather to reach an agreement—as to the amount of tonnage which the various nations may possess through their nationals. It may be that arguments will be presented to the effect that the United States, which has been for years a non-wartime nation, now owns more than its fair share of the tonnage of the world. It is possible that a redistribution of tonnage may be suggested. Control of future shipbuilding by national license may be offered for the consideration of the conference.

The United States Shipping Board is very seriously taking up the matter of the ownership of the vessels it has to dispose of. That they will be sold only to Americans is a certainty, both in law and policy, but whether they shall be sold to companies which operate too large a proportion of their fleets—or even any vessels whatever—under foreign flags remains undecided. This has become evident through the examination of P. A. S. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine, by the Shipping Board recently.

Important Point Pending.

The I. M. M. is owned almost entirely by Americans, and no suggestion is made that the small proportion of foreign capital invested has ever sought to interfere with its direction. Seven-eighths of its million tons are under foreign flags, however—the precise figures being 125,632 tons American, 883,746 British and 17,507 Belgian.

Through a contract entered into with the British government, the effect of which was strengthened by the British shipping acts of 1919, it is evident the Ship Board feared a control might possibly be exercised by the British government, through the British Board of Trade, which is a governmental body, which might be injurious to American interests. No decision has yet been rendered by the Shipping Board on this point.

COURT ACTION DENOUNCED BY S. GOMPERS

"Such Actions Making Impossible Law Abiding and Patriotic Labor Unions," Says Union Chief.

Declares If Continued Working People Will Defend, Selves and "Find Plenty to Help Them."

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1. — In statements commenting upon the injunction against miners union activities in West Virginia issued by Federal Judge Anderson at Indianapolis, President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, said today that such actions "are making it impossible for us to have a law abiding, patriotic and national labor organization of American citizens," while Harry Olmsted, representing the operators association of the Williamson field, said that "the ruling * * * frees the coal industry of the nation and restores the rights of individuals, both operator and miner to contract with each other as guaranteed by constitution and the laws of the United States.

"Judicial actions of Judge Anderson and others like him * * * take the possibility for progress out of the hands of the national labor movement," Mr. Gompers said.

"It becomes quite apparent," said Mr. Olmsted, "that this situation has brought to life the question as to whether the United Mine Workers of America is to be recognized as stronger than the government."

Continuing Mr. Gompers said:

"If order, well regulated, reasonable labor activities are so treated, the working people will find some way to protect themselves, to proceed to protest against such things as are contained in Judge Anderson's decision. The workers will make short shrift of the conservative leadership they have now and will easily find

DEPOSE WHITE AS LEADER OF PARTY TUESDAY

Victory Considered Gained by Cox Forces at Expense of Followers of Wm. G. McAdoo.

Appointement Calls Forth Expressions of Satisfaction From Democrats in Congress.

By Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 1.—The Democratic party today chose former Congressman Cordell Hull of Carthage, Tenn., as chairman of its national committee and entrusted in his leadership the task of returning the party to power in the nation in 1924.

George H. White of Marietta, Ohio, retired to the party ranks, there to help in the struggle for the ideals of Democracy.

The change in leadership which has been held by Mr. White since July, 1920, when he assumed the chairmanship at the call of former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, the party's nominee for president was assured early today, when, after conferences lasting practically all night, it was announced that all elements of the party had agreed upon either former Assistant Secretary of State Breckenridge Long of St. Louis and Washington, D. C., or Mr. Hull.

The names of Mr. Long and Mr. Hull as compromise candidates are understood to have been put forward by the opponents of Mr. White and were declared acceptable by Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi and his two colleagues on the committee as chairman, White's representative.

Retiring Chairman White announced that Mr. Hull's selections was " a very happy one" asserting that he had not been closely allied with any of the candidates at the San Francisco convention.

WATSON BRINGS GRAVE CHARGES AGAINST A. E. F.

Statement That Soldiers Executed Without Trial Provokes Storm in Senate; Flatly Contradicted.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Flat charges by Senator Watson, democrat, Georgia, that many American soldiers in the A. E. F. had been hanged in France without court martial or trials, stirred up a storm in the senate today which resulted in the adoption by unanimous vote of an order for an investigation, at which the Georgia senator will be asked to present proof of his charges.

A special committee headed by Senator Brandegee, republican, Connecticut, was appointed to make the inquiry after Senator Watson had refused to present his charges before the senate military committee, because he said it was not impartial. Other senators appointed on the investigating committee were Ernest, Kentucky and Willis, Ohio, republicans, and Overman of North Carolina, democrat. Senator Pomerene, democrat, Ohio, was also appointed to the committee, but who was unable to serve and another democrat in his place will be selected tomorrow.

None of the committee by agreement are members of the military committee. The first meeting will be held tomorrow, but only to decide upon procedure, and hearings will go over for several days.

Bitter Exchanges

Bitter exchanges between Senator Watson and Chairman Wadsworth of the military committee and other republicans, marked the debate which preceded the vote for an impartial inquiry into charges. Senator Wadsworth denied vigorously that any American soldiers had been executed without trial, while Senator Watson reiterated emphatically his charges and when criticised for refusing to present his evidence to the military committee, agreed to submit it to some other investigating body.

A photograph of a structure which Senator Watson described as a gallows from which Americans had been executed figured prominently during the heated exchanges. Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, said he also had been showed that or a similar photograph, but that he did not regard the evidence sufficient to warrant bringing the matter to the attention of the senate or country, although two former service men had vouched for its authenticity.

New Challenges Statement

Senator New, republican, Indiana, entered the debate to submit information which he said he had received from the war department that of the members of the A. E. F. who had been condemned by court martial, only nine had been executed whereas Senator Watson had said that at least 21 had been hanged, many without having been tried, from the gallows, which he said, was shown in the photograph.

Examination of army records made today by Secretary Weeks revealed that none of the men executed in France during the war were charged with a military offense, desertion or cowardice, or aiding the enemy. The total number of executions by the army, he said, was ten. There were no executions, the secretary said, until after careful and searching inquiry and a full trial.

Parade Declared to Be Most Inspiring in America Since Lincoln's Review of Union Armies.

Pershing and Foch, Diaz, Beatty and Jaques, Rodman and LeJeune Review Marching Hosts.

By Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 1.—America's war heroes, reunited in peace, passed in review here today before Marshal Foch of France, supreme allied military commander, and war time chiefs of the entente nations who led them to victory. Veterans from every state in the union marched in the great pageant of the country's one time armed strength—the annual parade of the American Legion. It was probably the greatest demonstration of its kind the legion will ever have as it brought together again the great leaders of the war and a stream of marching legionnaires that may never again be surpassed in numbers. Approximately 40,000 veterans were in line, according to the best estimates.

Several hundred thousand spectators jammed the parade route to acclaim the veterans and the distinguished visitors from abroad.

Marshal Foch with General John J. Pershing, General Armando Diaz of Italy, Lieutenant General Baron Jacques of Belgium, Admiral Earl Hugh Rodman of the American navy Beatty of Great Britain and Admiral and Vice President Coolidge, and Major General John A. LeJeune, watched the parade from a big reviewing stand.

Men in civilian clothes marched shoulder to shoulder with those who had again donned their uniforms, brought together in the Democracy of common service. The old spirit of discipline and training was evident throughout the parade, however, as the veterans strode along in platoon formation and snapped salutes to the reviewing officers.

Preceeded by the military band which President Obregon of Mexico sent to the convention as a mark of courtesy, the allied leaders rode at the head of the procession until the reviewing stand was reached. There they dropped out and took the places allotted them. They formed a distinguished company, including Vice-President Coolidge and the governors of several states already there.

Marshal Foch and General Pershing arrived first. In their party was Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, the American flying ace. They were followed closely by General Diaz and General Jacques with Admiral Earl Beatty and Admiral Rodman not far behind.

The officers had hardly time to settle themselves before they were compelled to salute the colors flying in front of motor cars bearing the thirty-five Congressional Medal of Honor men, and the parade had officially begun.

The state delegations moved past in alphabetical order, with Alabama the leader. The Alabama legionnaires were headed by Lamar Jeffers, representative in congress and wearer of the Distinguished Service Cross. Almost three hours elapsed from the time the Alabama contingent swung past until the last man of the Washington state posts had received the salutes of his former commanders. The parade began with a bright sun lighting up the scene and ended when the purple shadows of Missouri autumn evenings blend with the heavier shades of dusk. The huge crowds in the roped off streets which had been pushed back with difficulty for hours by police, military and civilian, stayed until the last, as did the allied chieftains, all of whom declared the spec-

CLAIM NEARLY ENOUGH VOTES FOR SALES TAX

Half Total Republican Memberships and Many Democrats Expected to Support Proposal.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Sales tax proponents in the senate claimed tonight to have close to the necessary majority to put through one of the three alternate plans offered by Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, as a substitute for the miscellaneous excises contained in the pending tax revision bill.

Canvasses of the senate made tonight while the luxury and nuisance taxes were under debate, were said to have shown at least half of the total republican membership prepared to support the sales tax. Senator Smoot also claimed a number of democratic supporters.

Those behind the Smoot plan said their calculations tonight gave assurance of not less than 42 republicans and three democrats or only four short of a majority of the senate. Counting the number of senators now in Washington, they claimed to have close to enough votes to carry them to victory.

A more official, but incomplete canvass of the republican membership showed 29 for sales tax and only seven against, with five doubtful.

Sales tax advocates have been conducting a quiet but earnest campaign in the senate for several days. This was followed tonight by a charge from Senator King, democrat, Utah, that the tax bill was being strig ed of the miscellaneous excises with a view to making a sales tax more logical.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Luxury and nuisance taxes held the center of the senate stage today and tonight with party lines obliterated for the first time since the revenue revision bill was taken up five weeks ago. So many of this class of excises were voted out of the bill that the charge was made from the democratic side that there was a movement a-foot to strip the measure so as to make necessary the adoption of a general sales tax.

This was denied by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania in charge of the bill, who said it was not the time to bring forward a sales tax. He assured the senate that even if all the items proposed for repeal went out of the bill, there would be a margin of $10,-000,000 between the government income and outgo.

The sales tax discussion was accepted as notice of the fight that is to come when Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, brings up his proposal for such a tax, probably Thursday. The Utah senator introduced today two modified and alternate sales plans. One proposes a 1 per cent levy on all manufactured goods where sales exceed $6,000 a year and the other proposes a general turn over tax of one-half of one per cent where the sales exceed $6,000.

Senator Smoot previously had offered an amendment providing for a general manufacturers' sale tax of 3 per cent with certain exemptions, this to be in lieu of all the miscellaneous taxes. His new plan would replace many of miscellaneous excises and would provide for a 10 per cent tax on corporations in place of the 15 per cent rate tentatively agreed upon by the senate.

Ku Klux Klan of Travis County Has Nearly All Important Peace Officers on Its Roster, Grand Jury Reports to Judge Who Ordered Investigation

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 1.—Reporting formally to Judge James R. Hamilton of the criminal district court today on results of the investigation by the court's order into activities of the Ku Klux Klan in Travis county, the grand jury under foremanship of Guy A. Collett, said that "the sheriff of Travis county confesses having joined the order and paid his entrance fee of $16.50."

A deputy sheriff, not named, assigned by the Travis county sheriff to investigate the Jeddie Jones tar and feather party, "availed himself of his legal right to refuse to testify when your grand jury asked him the question if he had ever joined the Ku Klux Klan."

A city detective, not named, likewise "availed himself of his legal right to refuse to answer a question which might tend to incriminate him, when he was asked by your grand jury whether he had ever joined the Ku Klux Klan."

The chief of police—"also refused to answer the same question propounded by your grand jury."

The police commissioner in turn "availed himself of his legal right to refuse to answer the same question after he had been warned by the county attorney and told that the law afforded him the privilege."

The grand jury returned no indictments under the white capping act or any other true bills in connection with the Ku Klux Klan investigation.

In connection with the statement regarding refusal of the various peace officers to answer questions whether or not they belonged to the Ku Klux Klan, the report says:

"No criticism is intended in the statement, that these peace officers availed themselves of the legal right not to incriminate themselves, because every citizen in the state of Texas regardless of the office he holds has the legal right to refuse to testify under such conditions, but it is offered merely to develop how effectual is the shroud of secrecy of the "Invisible Empire" and were it not for the court's ruling on question two, in the opinion of October 20th regarding immunity testimony, this investigation would have been hopelessly hobbled."

In connection with the report made public yesterday, there was submitted a secret report containing a "long list of names" presumably of members of the Ku Klux Klan in Austin. Regarding this secret list, the public report says:

"In the long list of names submitted to the court in a secret report, no one acquainted with our citizenship could fail to find many who would not through design break or defy our laws, but who would or have subjected themselves to the hazard of war that this nation might endure. The names transmitted to the court were a part of secret report because of the gravity of its data. Permit, if it is proper, a study of the effect of publicity of a list of blanknmen."

The Travis county grand jury has been called back for December 5.

DRIVER HELD IN JAIL PENDING INVESTIGATION

J. C. Hampton, Laundry Employe, Gives Self Up Tuesday Morning; Stories of Fatal Accident Differ in Points.

Following an extended investigation by county officials which included a session of a court of inquiry, J. T. Hampton, laundry employe living at 206 Mill street was lodged in the county jail Tuesday on a charge of negligent homicide, as the driver of the car which late Monday night struck a Hallowe'en party of young people, composed mostly of high school students on the Iowa Park road, resulting in the death of Miss Onita White, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. White, 1611 Kemp boulevard and injury to several others.

Hampton surrendered to the police Tuesday morning after officers had been unsuccessful in locating his whereabouts after searching until sunrise Tuesday. Hampton is held at the county jail pending further investigation.

Officers and officials following the investigation declared that it was miraculous that no other fatalities resulted when the car ploughed through the group of twenty to twenty-five masqueraders as they stood by the side of the truck while a tire was being repaired preparatory to their continuing on their pleasure ride to this city.

According to the story told officials by the young people when the car was brought to a stop a short distance beyond the truck, there was not more than a half dozen in the party of 26 that had not been struck with the machine running over several of them.

Found Under Car.

Melvin Hobbs, son of Henry Hobbs, local oil operator, who was himself knocked down and run over by one rear wheel, declared that when rushed to the aid of the others, accompanied by two other boys, he found the victim, Miss White, beneath the car, struck there. Miss Juanita Prince, who stood with their arms around each other when the car struck them, and Edgel Elliot, lying under it, as Miss Hershie McMillan and other high school girl against the radiator of the car seated on the fender of the machine. Others had been knocked down and were lying along the side of the road.

The party of young people which was chaperoned by Mrs. W. S. Cowling and Mrs. Pearl Schrock had left the city earlier in the evening on a truck ride. They had ridden several miles and were returning from Iowa Park when a tire came off the truck about four miles west of this city.

According to their statements some of the boys aided in repairing the car while the majority of the party huddled together in an attempt to keep warm on the right side of the car next to the edge of the pavement. One of the boys had gone to pick up some wood to build a fire, some of the girls complaining of the cold.

Stories Differ

The story as told by the occupants of the car and the members of the party differs in several respects.

At the time the accident occurred Mrs. May Fields occupied the front

LONNIE GRIFFIN RE-ARRESTED FOR SHOOTING

R. H. Taylor, Former Burk Policeman, Declared in Critical Condition Following Shooting.

Griffin Apprehended at Randlett, Okla., After Being Released Tuesday on Bond of $2,500.

Lonnie Griffin, charged with shooting R. H. Taylor, former Burkburnett policeman, Monday night at Burkburnett, who was released Tuesday after perfecting bond of $25.00, was rearrested late Tuesday at Randlett, Okla. The arrest was made at the instruction of Sheriff Fred Smith, after he had visited Taylor at the Martin hospital at Burkburnett, where it was declared that the stricken man has little chance for recovery. The Oklahoma officers immediately set out for Wichita Falls with Griffin, who, according to Sheriff Smith, will be lodged in the county jail here until further developments in the case become known.

The shooting of Taylor occurred on street corner near the Burkburnett First National Bank.

According to a statement made to Sheriff Smith Tuesday afternoon by Taylor, who was said to believe himself in a dying condition, Griffin was walking near to where Taylor stood when he was heard to make a remark about Taylor concerning a vagrancy charge, on which Griffin was tried in the county court some time ago. In the alleged dying statement Taylor asserted that he made a reply and took about two steps toward Griffin when he pulled his pistol and fired. Taylor asserted that he was unarmed. Deputy Sheriff H. C. Akin declared that three other witnesses testified that Taylor was unarmed.

According to information given by friends of the two men there had been trouble between Taylor and Griffin for several months. Griffin was reported to have been convicted in the justice court at Burkburnett and to have immediately appealed the case to the county court here, where he was acquitted. Taylor, who prior to that time was a member of the Burkburnett police force, was a witness in the case and it is declared by friends that the trouble began about this time.

Griffin is the son of City Marshal Griffin of Burkburnett, under whom Taylor was said to have been serving prior to the vagrancy trial.

His bond was set at $5,000 Tuesday morning by Justice Dave Threet in a preliminary hearing on a charge of assault with intent to murder. The bond was later reduced to $2,500 in a hearing before Prosecuting Attorney Randale. Immediately after the bond had been perfected Griffin left the city.

He was located late Tuesday by Sheriff Fred Smith at Randlett and his rearrest was ordered.

An unsuccessful effort was made Tuesday by physicians to locate the bullet which lodged in Taylor's body. It was reported to have entered the abdomen, just below the left rib and ranging downward to have struck the spleen. Surgeons announced their intentions of operating again Wednesday, if the patient is sufficiently strong, in an effort to locate the leaden missle. His chances for recovery were declared remote.

WITNESS TELLS DYING WORDS OF B. F. ALLISON

Trial Dick Hamilton, Accused as Slayer Charlie Postmaster, Opens Monday at Henrietta.

Special to the Record News.

HENRIETTA, Nov. 1.—The evidence of Ed Rhodes, who testifies to hearing the dying statement of B. F. Allison, postmaster at Charlie, in which he declared that "the man who had shot him was the same man who had a short time before purchased a cigar from him," was the most important testimony brought before the jury here today in the case of Dick Hamilton, charged with murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Allison last winter.

Allison was killed by a masked man, just as he was leaving his place of business, which included a small grocery store and post office. The evidence against Hamilton is declared largely circumstantial.

Drs. L. P. Ammons and Holden were the first witnesses to be called by the prosecution. Mrs. Wyatt and the widow of the deceased were also called to the stand. Mrs. Allison testified to seeing the masked man with two guns.

The prosecution is expected to close before noon Wednesday. The selection of the jury was completed shortly before noon Tuesday.

UNIDENTIFIED SHIP OFF FLORIDA COAST

By Associated Press.

JACKSONVILLE, Florida, Nov. 1—A three masted schooner found drifting off the southeast coast of Florida was towed to St. Johns bar today by the coast guard cutter Yamacraw. The vessel supposedly a victim of the recent hurricane had not been identified tonight and nothing was known here of the fate of its crew. The schooner's bottom had been newly painted red.

THOUSANDS OF LEGIONNAIRES GREET BUDDIES

tacle had made upon their minds an indelible impression.

All spoke particularly of the execution of the pretty custom followed by the color bearers in dipping departmental and post standards and holding aloft the Stars and Stripes. The American leaders were particularly gratified, they said, to know that the legionnaires had not lost the art of marching in the three years since the armistice was signed.

Marshal Foch said he could not resist the impulse to give his impressions to the country which is his host and an official statement issued by him said:

After speaking of the wonderful organization which the legion must have done to secure so smooth and so successful a day, the marshal expressed through Count de Chambrun how much he had been impressed by the dignity and beauty of the long drawn pageant.

"It shows," said the marshal, "the thing that war has done.

"It had brought out, through suffering ,that which is dignified and strong and beautiful in men's souls. It has done that for us, and for you and for all who fought with us in the long struggle. It was that dignity and strength of soul which I saw today in these marching comrades of mine. Coming to America has enlarged my vision. I found it necessary to see things on a bigger scale. Today was beautiful."

Dozens of bands made the parade a continual blare of martial and popular music. Each state delegation had one or two along and some as many as half a dozen. Kansas had eight. In nearly every instance there was a drum major and their skillful tactics elicited continual applause from the crowds. Colorado's seven-foot drum major was an especial attraction.

The whole parade was colorful, but in the opinion of many observers in the reviewing stand never more so than when the big Illinois delegation moved by with thirty five large American flags held in close formation with the white departmental and dark blue post standards just behind and overlapping.

The Illinois contingent, which is one of the largest ones at the convention yelled itself hoarse shouting the name of Colonel Milton J. Foreman, its candidate for national commander.

To Kansas went the honor of having the largest number in line, approximately 40,000 men and women moving past the stand and consuming more than an hour. Missouri was second in the number of marchers, with Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas contending for third place.

General Pershing was especially interested in the Missouri and Nebraska departments, leaning over as they passed and explaining to Marshal Foch that they represented his two home states, Missouri, the state in which he was born, and Nebraska, where he makes his home.

When the delegation from Lynn county, the general's birth place passed, it did not salute but waved a welcome to him. He waved back and shouted words of greeting to members he recognized. The Lincoln, Nebraska, post, which claims him as its member, carried his picture on a standard.

The St. Louis posts, led by Harry C. McBride, drew much applause as they passed. Several hundred men were included in the marchers.

The Pike county, Missouri post, led a pack of hounds. Fifteen of them were on one leash and stretched entirely across the street. As the men approached the stand they fired a rifle salute, and their band struck up "you've got to quit kicking my dog around," a tune familiar to all Missourians. When they had passed the stand the band paused, the riflemen fired another salute, the band caught the tune again and the marchers proceeded down the street.

Twenty posts and about 2,500 men came behind the Oklahoma departments flag. The men were in regulation army uniform and six Indians in native regalia led the color touches. One soldier carried a real papoose. The bands included the one from the state university and the players wore red sweaters and white trousers.

Three color bearers headed the Texas aggregation, two carrying the Stars and Stripes and the other the Texas state flag, the only state flag seen in the parade. A. J. Reinhart, state adjutant, commanded the fifteen hundred persons in line. Texas also had the only decorated float in the parade.

who declined to be quoted however, contend that Mr. Hull's selection as chairman is a distinct victory for the Cox-White element and as distinctly a defeat for the McAdoo element, which was opposing the Ohio man. Publicly, however, all assert they are well pleased with Mr. Hull and insured him their loyal support. Reports that Daniel C. Roper, former internal revenue commissioner is to be made chairman of the national executive committee in accordance with the compromise agreement on the chairmanship, could not be certified tonight. The new chairman said he had not yet given the personnel of the executive committee consideration, but that he expected to make its announcement within a few days.

As one of the first efforts under his leadership, Mr. Hull said he wanted to "decentralize" authority by throwing greater responsibility on local organizations. He recommended close co-operation between the national, state and local committees as a means of success. He also urged that women be more completely represented on the local committees.

HOUSE MEMBERS APPROVE CHANGE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Selection of Cordell Hull as chairman of the Democratic National committee, was warmly approved today by democrats in congress, especially by members of the House in which he served 14 years.

House democrats called a conference for tomorrow at which resolutions will be adopted commending the action of the committee in putting Mr. Hull at its head and "congratulating the party."

Just after announcement of the meeting was made in the House, Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, the democratic leader, obtained permission to print in the Congressional Record an article by Mr. Hull on "the economic consequences of the defeat of the peace treaty."

During most of his long service in the House Mr. Hull was a member of the ways and means committee. He wrote the income tax law and was regarded by republicans and democrats alike as an authority on taxation laws.

Mr. Hull was defeated for the House in the last campaign.

Roosevelt, democratic vice presidential candidate in 1920.

In a letter to the committee which met today at St. Louis, Mr. Roosevelt said he did not think it sufficient to obtain expressions of the political beliefs of the entire party every four years and suggested that this should be done at least every year.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Great Britain, it was indicated in authoritative quarters today, will replay to the recent note of M. T. Chitcherin, foreign minister of soviet Russia, offering conditionally to assume the debts of old Russia, up to 1914, by the dispatch of a note pointing out that the soviet's offer mentions only the imperial state debts, which are only a part of the Russian total. DRIVER HELD PENDING PROBE OF FATALITY seat with Hampton with Miss Etta Bussey, a sister of Mrs. Fields and Clyde Griffin in the rear seat, according to their statements. They were driving an Interstate car.

They declare that they saw the party some distance away and sounded their horn. Not driving faster than 20 miles an hour, Hampton said he continued toward the truck expecting that they would hear his horn and give him sufficient space to pass. He declared that they apparently paid no attention to the car approaching from the rear, and when too late to stop his car he was compelled to drive into the crowd.

Hampton and the others in the machine declared that the truck was sideway in the road and for that reason he drove to the right of it instead of the left as is customary when passing a car from the rear.

Says Boys Threaten

Hampton denied that he left the scene of the tragedy. He stated that he heard several of the boys making threats against the driver of the car should they find out who it was and he thought best not to reveal his identity at that time. He said he gave all the assistance he could to the injured and did not drive away until Misses White and Prince were placed in a car and started for this city.

Hampton surrendered himself early Tuesday morning to Chief of Police Morgan who turned the case over to county officials for investigation.

Emphatic denial was made by several members of the party regarding the statement said by officers to have been made by Hampton.

On Right Side, Say

The car, according to members of the party, was on the right-hand side of the road and parallel to it being not more than four feet from the right edge of the 18 foot pavement. Hobbs said that he and three other boys were fixing the right rear tire with majority of the party standing with overcoats thrown around them between the truck and the right edge of the curb. He said he saw a car approaching some distance away and when he again looked the car was upon them.

He and others declared that they heard no warning signal from the car. Some declared they were none of the party on the left side of the truck on which side cars had previously passed them.

Hobbs said there was no tail light on the truck but that they had a red lantern sitting on the pavement near the right rear wheel as they repaired it. Occupants of the automobile say they had been unable to see the truck due to the fact there was no tail light on it.

Dozen Bruised

Miss Juanita Prince, who was at first thought to have been seriously injured, was removed to her home, Thursday from the Wichita General hospital. She was injured in the head with other minor bruises. She was taken to the hospital Monday night with Miss White, who died a short time after she arrived there.

Over a dozen in the party received minor bruises with Etzel Elliot confined to his home with injuries which are not considered serious.

Members of the party included: Misses Mamie Vincent, Onetta White, Leone Smith, Juanita Prince, Birdie McMillan, Ruby Yowell, Clara May Oakley, Francis Cowling, Pearl West; Pyrl Bashara, William Pardo, Etzel Elliot, Melvin Hobbs, Norwood Hebner, Jack Moore, Herschel Bell, Joe Bell, Irene Dunaway. Mrs. W. S. Cowling and Mrs. Pearl Schrock accompanied the party as chaperones.

Rowig; all sailed over the seas with the Panthers division; all saw service in France and Flanders and Major Adams and Captain Hankins received wounds on the field of glory that was gory. Captain Hankins was one of the winners of the distinguished service medal and Major Adams although a young man, was a veteran of the Spanish-American war when he responded to the call a second time and crossed the Atlantic with two millions of his countrymen to fight and die if need be that Old Glory might float high in the European heavens as it has ever floated on the continent of North America. He received wounds in the Spanish-American war; he received wounds in the World War and now, like Major Culbertson and Captain Hankins, he is doing his best to build up a national guard organization in Texas second to none in all the forty-eight states. "I have served in all the wars that have come in my time" said Major Adams "and am ready to serve in another whenever it is necessary in defense of Old Glory and the institutions of democratic government." Captain Hankins did not say, "Me Too," but he looked it. There are times when looks are as powerful in their meaning as the spoken word. These three buddies were together during the day planning a program that will strengthen the National Guard in this section of Texas which include the Northwest, the Panhandle and the Plains country and where the units formed will be composed of men of the type of Culbertson and Adams and Hankins and true types of the large army of Texans who wore the uniform of their country in war time.

Non-Partisan Bank Survives; Leader Jailed

By Associated Press.

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 1.—While opponents of the non-partisan league in North Dakota succeeded in ousting three league endorsed state officials in last Friday's recall election, they failed in their efforts to pass an initiated law providing for liquidation of the state bank of North Dakota.

The measure to liquidate the bank, which was established as part of the league's program for state ownership of industries, went down to defeat by a majority of from 4,000 to 6,000, as did also three proposed constitutional amendments and five other initiated laws.

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 1.—A. O. Townley, president of the non-partisan league, left here today for Jackson, Minn., to serve a ninety day sentence in the county jail there. Mr. Townley was convicted of violation of the state sedition act.

BRITAIN FAVORS SMALLER NAVIES, DELEGATE SAYS

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—British delegates to the conference on limitation of armaments will go to Washington resolved that, short of compromising the safety of the empire, or its sea security, they will go to almost any length to meet any other great naval powers in a mutual and proportionate effort to relieve their people from the burden of competitive armament.

That announcement was made today by Lord Lee of Fareham, first lord of the British admiralty and one of the official delegates of his country who arrived on the Olympic with other delegates to the conference from Italy, China and Japan. The other delegates also spoke hopefully of the conference.

others to go with them on a different course.

"I cannot for the life of me, understand how a man like Judge Anderson cannot understand that the labor demands that he hears today are the minimum to which conservative leadership has been able to reconcile the membership of unions."

Mr. Gompers was asked if the "checkoff" system of collecting miners' union dues, also forbidden by the Indianapolis injunction, was included in his defense of the union activities.

"It has existed more than 20 years by mutual agreement," he replied, "and I cannot see why a judge interferes today.

"The decision is all part and parcel of the attempt to repress and subdue labor, that is prevalent now, of the 'open shop' campaign and for that Judge Anderson is a leader and not an impartial judicial officer. He has thrown his whole power and influence against the workers—against the men and women who toil."

The ruling of Judge Anderson as embodied in the injunction order, Mr. Olmsted said, "will restore the merit system and result in closer individual relationship between employer and employe."

"I feel, however," he added, "that a great duty has arisen because of the effect of this injunction which can only be performed by the operators doing all they can to make their employes known and feel that they arebeing fostered and kept alive by radical labor leaders to the detriment of not only employer and employe, but the public as well.

"There will be substituted for organized force and arbitrary action, co-operation—a condition that will afford the employers of labor the splendid opportunity so long denied them, to again get in close personal touch with their employes and in a spirit of mutual interest, workout in harmony problems which are so vitally concerned."

"We hope the employers of labor will take every advantage of this opportunity and so act with and toward their employes that the results of such action will produce a better understanding on the part of those whose labor and cause laboring men everywhere to feel and know that the greatest success is only made possible by individual initntive, individual effort and individual work."

A state dinner was given tonight in honor of the distinguished guests of the legion.

CITIZEN COMMENDS RECORD NEWS STAND ON HARDING SPEECH

I am pleased to have occasion to personally commend the Wichita Falls Record News for its attitude toward President Harding, with regard to the race equality issue, which he seemed to endorse, in his recent speeches in Birmingham, Ala., and Atlanta, Ga., and which seems to be sought more or less by the republican party.

I do heartily endorse every word of the news item to which I refer, and which appeared in the October 30 issue. I would that same should not be allowed to escape the eye of every man and woman voter of this city and county.

I am a fireman on the W. F. & N. W. Ry., have been a resident of Wichita Falls for past three years, and am a strong believer in genuine democracy.

She Thinks So, Anyway

The feminist orator was found up as she addressed the gathering of mere men.

"Women," she shouted, "have in all time and in all countries been the mainspring of national existence. Who was the world's greatest hero? Helen of Troy! Who was the world's greatest ruler? Queen Victoria! Who was the world's greatest martyr? Gentlemen, who, I say, was the world's greatest martyr?"

And with one voice that immense crowd of men arose and cried:

"My wife!"—Tulsa World.

CONDEMNATION DR. JOHN RICE IS PROTESTED

Action of North Texas Methodist Church Conference Criticized in Minority Report.

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 1.—On the closing day of the North Texas conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the Rev. W. T. Whiteside of Terrell, who presented the original board of educational report which was radically amended to include mention of Dr. John A. Rice, in connection with other pronounced expressions, submitted a minority protest against the action of the conference taken on Saturday last. The protest maintained that the amendment as passed, cast an unfair implication of unorthodoxy on all teaching in Methodist schools, whether their names were mentioned or not, and decried the condemnation without a trial of Dr. Rice. "Dr Rice is not a member of the North Texas conference and is not in any sense answerable to it for his teachings," the Rev. Mr. Whiteside insisted. The conference voted not to allow the protest to be entered in the journal of proceedings. Among those who signed the protest with the Rev. Mr. Whiteside were W. W. Armstrong, E. W. Anderson, C. W. Hearn, John W. Beck, C. O. Shugart and G. M. Gibson.

Although inflexible with regard to the "heresy resolution" and Dr. Rice the majority conceded one point which had been contended for Saturday by the minority. The Rev. G. C. French of Commerce asked and was granted permission of the conference to amend the report by striking out that clause which asked the S. M. U. trustees to accept at once Dr. Rice's resignation, substituting an expression of gratification that the resignation has in fact been accepted. The Rev. Mr. French said the only question he had been concerned with was the competence of the executive committee to accept a faculty resignation without a meeting of the whole board of trustees, but that now he is convinced the committee is so empowered.

When Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, presiding, cut short what he termed the "postscripts" to the Rice incident Dr. H. A. Boaz, president of S. M. U. asked the conference for its confidence in the university's administrative officials. He offered to resign if his services were not giving entire satisfaction. He was assured by several that the conference reposes entire confidence in him and his faculty.

A memorial presented with its concurrence by the committee, asking the general conference to strike from the church name the word "South" was overwhelmingly defeated. The conference, however, overruled the committee's non-concurrence in a memorial asking that the general conference amend the discipline so that the bishops will be elected for a term of years instead of for life, as at present.

The Rev. John R. Allen of [illegible] Hill criticised the publishers of the Texas Christian Advocate during the course of debate on a $500 appropriation to pay office expenses of Dr. A. J. Weeks, editor. The Rev. Mr. Allen insisted that the publishers should bear the additional expense.

DEBT FIGURES STAGGER THE MIND.

Any time figures get up into the millions the average man loses all sense of proportion. From then on hundreds of millions, billions are only rows of ciphers; but in the New York Journal of Commerce, Frederick Austin published complete figures on International Finance authoritivley compiled.

For example, if we say the national debt of the United States was $1,028,564,000 in 1913; $17,005, 431,000 in 1918; and $24,974,936,000 in 1920, while it is obvious that it has increased some twenty-four times, it is difficult to bring it home to the individual. But, if we put it this way: The debt of each individual—each person's share of the national debt—in 1913 was $11, and today each person's share of the debt is $225, that makes it clear enough, for $11 and $225 are sums well within common experience.

If there are five persons in your family, including the baby, your share of that debt is $225 times five, or $1,126.

The total pre-war national debts of the world was $43,200,931,000; by the armistice this was swelled to $214,075,373,000; today the world owes $265,305,022,000. It is a lot of money!

Among the major belligerents the increases are extremely heavy—except in Japan. In 1913 Japan owed $1,241,997,000 and today her debt only amounts to $1,300,000,000, comparatively speaking a paltry increase.

Every other nation in the world has seen its debt increase greatly, the United Kingdom's national debt, for example, has grown from $3,485,818,000 to $39,314,000,000; but this does not include the colonial debts. Canada's increase is from $554,391,000 to $1,935,946,000. Without going into details the total indebtedness of the British empire in 1913 was $8,121,932,000, while now it reaches $48,045,148,000.

On the entente side, France in 1913 led the world in debts with $3,346,129,000, and now, irrespective of the French colonies, owes $46,025,000,000, only a little less than Germany's $48,552,000,000.

Now to put these figures in pocket-book terms, the French, with the heaviest per capita obligation in the world; owed in 1913, $160 for every individual in the republic; today each resident of France owes $1,650; for a family of five persons, this is $5,750. Great Britain comes second now, although in 1913 she was third. The British personal obligation was $78, now it is $850. Germany in 1913, was more happily placed than any other big European power; her inhabitants owed only $18 per individual; but today, exclusive of the debts of the individual states, each German is responsible for $800.

Similar figures might be worked out for every nation in the world, but sufficience is indicated to show that the weight of affairs falls heavily on every living soul in the world.

In 1914 the nation debts of the world amounted to 44,100 million dollars, and each year of the war sent the total mounting up; it was 56,900 million dollars in 1915; 120,485 million dollars in 1916; 199,100 million dollars in 1917; 225,300 million dollars in 1918; 248,000 million dollars in 1919, and 225,000 million dollars in 1920.

At 6 per cent the nations of the world will have to pay each year the enormous sum of 18,000 million dollars in interest alone.

A leading New York bank has made a survey and its returns show that not more than one million persons are now unemployed in the United States. There is a mistake out somewhere. Two or three days before the strike order was rescinded a New York newspaper printed a story that there were five million idle men and women in the United States ready to step into the shoes of the two million railway employes, the very instant that the aforesaid employes vacated their shoes. If the bank's survey is correct, four million idle men and women found jobs last week.

Announcement has been made that the Standard Oil Company has acquired a controlling interest in the Pacific Oil Corporation by the purchase of stock in the open market. It had been said that the Standard of California had held a large block of the stock but not sufficient to give it control. Now the amount lacking has been acquired. Pacific oil, at 47 last week, established a new high record for the year, the low price of the year being 27.4. There is money in petroleum for those who have the capital and know how to play the game.

Charles Cason, director of public relations of the Chemical National Bank of New York, is in Texas and has traveled extensively over the state in the last few weeks with a view of studying economic conditions. Banker Cason sees a hopeful sign in recent price changes which, he says, are in the direction of stability. Here is hoping that he is a prophet and not a professional publicity agent.

Three new prohibition agents have been stationed in the city of San Antonio. Why the sending of reinforcements? Lest we forget, the largest brewery in the Alamo city has been made over into a cotton mill and the second largest brewery into an ice cream and vinegar plant. Gone are the so-called "good old days."

Senator Tom Watson of Georgia did not fancy President Harding's Birmingham speech. Senator Watson never gives approval to the utterance of any living American with the sole exception of the sayings and writings of Tom Watson of Georgia.

CHATTERER FIXES UP HIS HOUSE

"Phew!" exclaimed Chatterer the Red Squirrel as he scrambled up to his new house. "life is certainly very exciting these days. First Shadow the Weasel almost catches me and I have to leave the Green Forest, and then Black Pussy, that pesky cat from Farmer Brown's, almost catches me; I wonder what will happen next. One has to have one's ears and eyes open all the time. Yes, sir, it certainly is very exciting. Now, I must fix my new house for the winter and hurry to lay in a new store of food. It's a mighty good thing that nobody but Tommy Tit the Chickadee knows where my new house is. Even Sammy Jay's sharp eyes haven't discovered it yet, and as for Peter Rabbit, I don't believe he'll ever find it. I think it was very clever of me to think of taking the old house of Drummer the Woodpecker for my new one. Wouldn't he be surprised if he knew that I was here?" Chatterer chuckled. He was thinking of how he had stolen Drummer's eggs from that very hollow in the old apple tree in the spring, and how little he had thought then that he ever would be living there.

The idea of living in Drummer's old house had come to Chatterer all in a flash the very afternoon he had come up to the Old Orchard after being driven out of the Green Forest by fear of Shadow the Weasel. He had hunted all along the old stone wall for a place to make a new home and hadn't found a single place to suit him. He had sat up to rest and just by chance he had happened to look over to the old apple tree he remembered so well, and right in a flash the great idea had come to him. Everybody knew how dreadfully he had been punished by Drummer the Woodpecker for stealing his eggs in the spring, and no one would think of him going to live in Drummer's house after that. It certainly was a great idea. You see Drummer had long ago given up the house himself. He had no use for it after he had brought up his family, and so it was standing empty.

Sammy Jay had gone back to the Green Forest. Peter Rabbit had gone back to the dear Old Briar Patch and Black Pussy had sneaked back to Farmer Brown's house for that saucer of milk, so now there was none to interfere with Chatterer and his work. After he had rested a few minutes he ran down the old apple tree and over to a pile of dry leaves along the stone wall. In a few minutes he was back in the apple tree with as many as he could carry. He looked this way and that way to make sure that none was watching, and then whisked inside Drummer's old house. When he got ready to come out again he first peeked out to be sure that no one was about. When he was sure, absolutely sure, he darted out and down after more leaves.

"Now I must fix my new house for the winter and hurry to lay in a new store of food."

So Chatterer worked as hard as ever he could, taking leaves and soft grass and strips of soft lining of bark into the hole in the apple tree, and never once forgetting to watch out that no one saw him. At last he had enough for a warm, comfortable bed and had fixed it just to suit him. Now let the wind blow

And bring the white snow

As soon as ever it pleases;

I'll be warm and snug——

As a bug in a rug.

And don't care a snap when it freezes.

So said Chatterer as he finished his bed making. And then suddenly he remembered that he hadn't anything to eat when the snow should come and cover the ground.

Rippling Rhymes

PANTING TIME

Out in the woods the leaves are dropping, there'll soon be snow and sleet and slush, and we should do our early shopping, and thus avoid the Christmas rush. When I was young I had my reasons for thinking time a laggard knave, and wearily I viewed the seasons, that crept like mourners to a grave. For when we're young the world's before us, tomorrow is the day of fate, and languid hours but peeve and bore us, it is a punishment to wait. But when we're old the world's behind us, we are but relics of the past, and all the fleeting hours remind us that any one may be our last. And now the hours seem in a hurry, like racing figures on the screen, and swift the seasons scoot and scurry, as though propelled by gasoline. The autumn rain today is slopping, the wind is bleak, the sky like lead, reminding me of Christmas shopping which should be done two months ahead. But yesterday you heard me scolding because the summer heat was great, and now I'm ranting, on beholding a threat of winter at the gate. There is no halt in my endeavor to use the moments as they fly, for panting Time toils on forever, and takes the steepest hills on high.

The First Commandment With Promise

By DR. FRANK CRANE

(Copyright, 1921, by Frank Crane.)

The Fifth Commandment of the Decalogue is called the First Commandment with Promise. It is the injunction to "Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long in the land."

This idea may seem a little antiquated in these times. But it is based upon the unchanging principles of human nature; and a neglect of it cannot fail to bring the disaster which always comes to an infraction of natural law.

In a great city the other day a peculiar case was brought before a magistrate.

A silly mother, of a type all too frequent, sustained her two half-grown daughters, says the daily news item, in resisting their father's authority when he reproved their manners and forbade them to go out alone at night, whither they wisted, and to remain out until all hours. "The father complained to the magistrate. The mother, rudely brought to reason by experience, seconded him, confirming all he said. The magistrate confessed, however, his inability under the law to coerce the wayward girls. So there is no alternative for these parents between submitting to the disorderly will of their children and the disastrous expedient of turning them out of the house to pursue their own headstrong and probably vicious course."

This sorry drama will find an echo and a parallel in many a home.

The problem of bringing up children is not one that can be dismissed with an axiom. It is complicated and baffling; for it is, after all, the problem of life itself.

It is all the more complex because the intention of the parents is almost uniformly good. They want their children to be happy, and whatever mistake they make is usually traceable to that cause, and not to any evil intent.

The difficulty usually is that the quick and thoughtless road to this objective is indulgence. The parents do not wish their children to think hard of them and therefore subject them to as little restraint as possible.

Of course there are other parents who exercise too much restraint from an equally right motive, and, unfortunately, the results of one error are often as disastrous as those of the opposite.

The tendency, however, of modern times is to overindulgence. This arises from ignorance of the importance of discipline.

There is no foundation for happiness except self-mastery; and children who are trained to know no masters but their own desires and to obey no will except their own whim are pretty sure to come to grief.

The spectacle of young people who have no regard for the advice of their parents is all too common.

It is perhaps the bitterest experience of fathers that the wisdom and judgment which they have accumulated by long years and many a hard knock is often lightly disregarded by the child.

In other times the parent exercised the right of life and death over the child. We have gone far from this; and many parents have renounced even the right of discipline and abandoned the sacred duty of seasonable correction.

One thing at least young people might learn: that there is nothing quite so unlovely in the eyes of cultured people as disrespect on the part of the young for father and mother.

Factors In Cancer

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1921, by The Associated Newspapers.)

Cancer, as numerous medical speakers are this week emphasizing, is a distinctly curable disease if taken in hand in good season. The medical orators, however, cannot speak with equal assurance of its preventability, for the reason that uncertainty still obtains as to the cause or causes of cancer.

This much, though, is known—that cancer, whatever its ultimate cause, has as a provoking cause any condition that involves chronic irritation of some part of the body.

Thus, at all events in the case of persons predisposed to cancer, smoking would seem to be a factor in its production, particularly pipe smoking. I quote from a bulletin of the United States Public Health Service:

"Cancer of the lip and mouth has been known to come from burns, from pipe stems, from constant irritation from bad teeth, and among East Indian races from chewing the betel nut.

"Cancer of the external abdomen in the natives of Kashmir, never observed among other races, arises from burns from kangri baskets of live coals, which these mountaineers wear as a kind of warming pan. Cancer of the oesophagus is observed in the Chinamen who eat their rice too hot, while it is absent in the women, who eat their rice cold at a second table."

Avoidance of excessive smoking, periodic visits to the dentist—especially with a view to repairing jagged teeth or correcting badly fitting dental plates—and repression of any overfondness for hot foods, would therefore seem to be among measures calculated to lessen the occurrence of cancer.

So would avoidance of excessive meat eating, if the view now held by certain authorities as to the constitutional nature of cancer is correct. We find the famous Dr. William J. Mayo suggesting:

"Cancer of the stomach forms nearly one-third of all cancers of the human body. So far as I know, this is not true of the lower animals or of uncivilized man. Is it not possible, therefore, that there is something in the habits of civilized man which acts to produce the precancerous condition?

"Within the last hundred years four times as much meat has been taken as before that time. If flesh foods are not fully broken up, decomposition results and active poisons are thrown into an organ not intended for their reception and which has not had time to adapt itself to the new function."

Then there are those who incriminate excessive salt eating as a cause of cancer. Whether or no they be correct, this much is certain—that excessive salt eating produces nervousness and other conditions of ill-health and if for this reason only should be avoided.

Some day, no doubt, research will establish beyond question the nature and the one final cause of cancer. Until that day comes the wise course is to avoid, so far as possible, whatever provocative causes may be suggested by medical observation. Cancer is not a disease to be recklessly ignored until it makes its dread appearance.

HOME NURSING and HEALTH HINTS

By M. JESSIE LEITCH

SWABBING THE THROAT

The little boy who had a sore throat looked fearfully at the doctor as he approached.

He had memories of a painful tonsil operation, and the very thought of opening his mouth filled him with dread.

It was only after the doctor had flaunted a very bright buffalo nickel that the small boy consented to open his mouth at all. He was one of the small boys who live in dingy houses "on the district," and he knew more about public clinics and less about fresh air and sunlight than a small boy should know when he is "six going on seven."

Explaining to the boy's mother, a picturesque Polish woman, the doctor ordered that the child's throat be swabbed, and went away.

Neighbor Goes In to Help.

The next day he came, to find that the child's throat was much worse, and the bottle of mixture he had left was uncorked. The little bundle from the dispensary, containing tongue depressors and applicators, was also unwrapped.

So a neighbor was called in, and because she had a steady hand and a brave, friendly attitude toward the world in its frailest spots, she undertook to teach the Polish woman about swabbing throats.

There was much in the friendly little clinic that other mothers may avail themselves of.

The women learned, together, that in swabbing throats, as in most treatments of the sick, it is necessary to gather together all the articles one needs before one begins the treatment. Thus there is no confusion and no delay.

May Use Spoon as Depressor.

The tongue depressors, little flat stripes of thin wood, one purchases at any drug store. In emergency, however, as every woman knows the handle of a spoon may be used to depress a tongue, though the spoon must be instantly boiled after use.

A tongue depressor is used once and burned.

Applicators also may be purchased at drug stores.

They are slim strips of wood like long toothpicks, around which one wraps a little swab of absorbent cotton. This must be wound on the tip of the applicator very tightly, lest one loses the cotton in the bottle of mixture which is to be swabbed upon the throat.

A newspaper, folded to receive the discarded applicators and depressor, must be provided, though a paper bag will do. Paper must be burned at once, and is thus cleaner than a basin as a receptacle for waste.

Finally, one uncorks the bottle of mixture which is to be used, and pours a small portion of it into a medicine glass, recorking the bottle at once lest any be spilled.

Mother Learns Quickly.

The little Polish boy with the sore throat was seated in the light, and his mother was instructed to wash her hands. This is an important part of all sickroom procedure.

Placing the glass of mixture where she could reach it easily, the mother, with a flash of understanding, depressed her child's tongue, being careful not to let the wooden depressor touch the back of his throat. She pressed down on the high curve of his reluctant tongue, dipped the applicator in the mixture and triumphantly swabbed the back of his throat.

And the small boy, astounded that at last his mother had taken matters into her own hands, submitted with less fuss than usual, and as all mothers of small boys will understand, he came in time to look with respect upon the process of throat-swabbing.

Watching the Parade

By JOHN PILGRIM

Old Bill Canuck came back from the west the other day. I hadn't seen Bill for years. Then he was an ordinary sort of a man. He had plenty of ability and plenty of force, but he didn't get any team work out of himself. Out west he seems to have found himself. He has money—which is important but not all-important—but there is something more. He is The Boss. He is in command.

"What happened, Bill?" I asked.

"It is the old gambler's secret," said he, with a grin.

Then he wouldn't tell me anything more. But after I had pestered him he finally told the story.

"I was in a gambling house one night," said he, "out near Vancouver. The man who ran the place was a quiet, kindly, picturesque old man. Never had much to say. That night the raiders came down on the house. They climbed up a stairway and knocked on the door.

"'Open up,' they said, 'in the name of the law.'"

Bill said the old gambler rose from the table, took a big gun out of the drawer, and leaned against the door.

"You can't cross me," he said. "I've paid you enough. Now, I'm leaning against the door. If you shoot through it you can't miss me. In ten seconds I'm going to shoot through the door. If you're there I'll kill some of you."

Bill said he could hear the feet of the raiders—clump, clump, clump—as they went downstairs. He got to talking to the old gambler. He wanted to know why he should have played that situation in that unusual way.

"If you play this game of life wide open," said the old man, "putting everything you have into each play, you'll most likely win. Ninety-nine men out of every hundred will weaken before a bluff that isn't a bluff at all. Maybe the hundredth man might not weaken, but you may never meet the hundredth man."

So there's Bill Canuck's new philosophy. Not every man can practise it, but those who can will likely win.

TODAYS' VAUDEVILLE HEADLINER, "THE BABE AND THE JUDGE."

Ruth: Greetings and felicitations, judge. How do you feel?

Judge Landis: Fine, my boy; fine.

Ruth: Don't say that.

Landis: Don't say what?

Ruth: Don't say "fine." I don't like the word.

(Laughter from the mentally undeveloped in the top gallery.)

Ruth: Judge, I've some good news for you.

Landis: What is it, Babe?

Ruth: You know all this difference of opinion between you and me over my barnstorming trip?

Landis: Yes.

Ruth: Well, it's all right now—I've decided to FORGIVE you.

Landis (staggering): You've decided to what—?

Ruth: To forgive you. I realize you didn't mean any harm.

Landis (flabbergasted): But—

Ruth: It's all right now—but don't let it happen again.

Landis (indignantly): Well, I like that!

Ruth: I thought you would. Say by the way, why do they call you Kenesaw Mountain?

Landis: Because I'm very hard to cross.

Ruth: Haven't you ever been crossed?

Landis: Yes, but the fellows who did it always knew they had been through some tough climbing and some stiff falls.

Ruth: By the way, judge, I understand by the papers you had some trouble getting me on the 'phone. Couldn't you get my number?

Landis (resolutely): Kid, I always HAD your number.

Ruth: I mean my telephone number, judge?

Landis: I have that, too.

Ruth: What is my telephone number?

Landis: Suspension-Four-One.

Ruth: Change it to "Clemency-Two-One, will you judge?

Landis: I had considerable trouble getting a connection.

Ruth: Did you bawl out the hello girl?

Landis: I had to bawl her out four times.

Ruth: That gives central a base on bawls.

(One egg from the first balcony.)

Ruth: By the way, didn't you once fine the Standard Oil Company $29,000,000.

Landis (proudly): I did.

Ruth: Did they pay it?

Landis: Er, er no.

Ruth: Why not?

Landis: I decided that I got that much value in publicity out of it.

Ruth: You're not thinking of tackling any $29,000,000 fine on me are you, Kenesaw?

Landis: Don't talk in such small figures. Both of us are out of that class now.

Ruth: You said a mouth-full-to-capacity that time, Ken. But, on the level, judge, where is there any difference between me making money on the side barnstorming and you making it beachstorming?

Landis: The Bar Association forgot to put anything in the rules covering my case. Speaking of jokes, Babe, do you know why your head reminds me of a ballplayer's glove after an error?

Babe: No. Why?

Landis: Because there's nothing in it.

(Two tomatoes from the orchestra circle.)

Ruth: And do you know why, instead of being in my class, judge, you remind me of a busy ballplayer?

Landis: No. Why?

Ruth: Because your seldom leave the bench.

(Closing chorus: "Bank, bunk, bunk, the boys are bunking," by the entire company.)

The Daily Story

A XANTIPPE TAMED

Copyright, 1921, by W. Werner

When Mrs. Bright went out into her tiny flower garden and found Tilburina Garth's fox terrier in the act of burying a bone, among her delicate cosmos she "boiled over," as she would have expressed it. "Boiling over" came not so much from the sight of her ruined flowers and the big hole which Pet was hastily covering, as from the fact that this was the third time the same thing has occurred. Once her pansy bed and suffered, once her gladiola and now her cosmos, just in the pride of pink-and-white bloom.

Mrs. Bright picked up a small stone. She did not expect to hit Pet; but she was so angry she had to do something. So she aimed the stone, and to her astonishment hit Pet on his spotted nose. He streaked home ki-ying, while Mrs. Bright gazed after him with satisfaction at the chubby, good-natured face.

As Pet raced across the adjoining lawn the door of the Garth house opened and Tilburina came out. She bowled toward Mrs. Bright like a huge puffball blown before the wind. Tilburina, besides being large and stout, had light hair and a double chin. She wore eyeglasses and she had on her buff silk. Mrs. Bright saw that much before the encounter.

"You may just as well understand, Mrs. Bright, once for all, that I won't have my dog stoned!" cried Tilburina.

Mrs. Bright was a little woman. She stood still and looked at Tilburina. "He was burying bones among my cosmos," she said, "I can't have that, you know. It's the third bone he's buried in my flower garden in a week. I've worked too hard with those flowers."

Tilburina beat one hand upon the other. The eyeglasses fairly hopped on her nose. "My dog can bury bones where he chooses. He doesn't know any better."

"Oh, no!" protested Mrs. Bright.

"And the next time you stone him," said Tilburina, "there'll be more to it. You see if there isn't. I'll put up a fence between these two houses that will keep every bit of sun away from your old garden, and you'll have to pay for half of it!"

Mrs. Bright lost some of her color. She felt beaten and helpless. Turning she went into her house and cried.

Mrs. Bright had known Tilburina Garth long before she married little Joe Garth, when she was a pampered girl at home. All her life Tilburina had bullied folks into letting her have her own way. Little Joe Garth, who was as nice a man as ever lived, did not dare call his soul his own. Tilburina told him what he should eat and wear and how he should act. In the same way she bossed her immediate neighborhood. She was a tyrant, but people endured her because they could do nothing else. Mrs. Bright's husband, who was one of those who let Tilburina have her own way, said that she reminded him of Xantippe. He had got that notion from an old book he had read, but he never tried to oppose her.

"He won't now," thought little Mrs. Bright. "If I tell him he'll merely say, 'What's the use of making a fuss, Mary. If you do she'll put up that fence and you can't stop her.' I suppose I shall just have to submit to that dog digging up my posies. But sometimes I do wish that Tilburina would get her come-uppance."

Mrs. Bright cried a little more and then she cooked the supper and tried to compose herself to accept the inevitable.

When Pet came over to sniff at the place where he had buried his bone she did not even drive him away. She had had enough of Tilburina for that day.

When Mr. Bright came home she did not tell him what had happened, and he noticed nothing. He had a new book to read and as soon as he had eaten his supper he retired to his morris chair. Mrs. Bright went out to sit on the porch with her sewing and to wait for some neighbor to come and chat with her.

As she sat, she could look into the Garth's back yard. Joe was there in his shirt sleeves working in his garden. Joe was a small, light-haired man with an abstracted look who had married Tilburina Whitcomb because she wanted him to, and he didn't have the courage to deny her. Mrs. Bright liked Joe and now, as she watched him, she thought it a pity that he had no chance to assert himself. Even his work was overseen by Tilburina, who sat, large and dominant, on the back steps directing, pointing and advising in her slightly nasal tones.

Suddenly there was a streak of white, and Pet, the foxterrier, rounded the corner of the house with another large bone which he has just gone to the meat market to get. Dashing heedlessly past Tilburina, he landed in the very vegetable bed that Joe was at work upon, dropped the bone and began to dig furiously.

For a instant Joe stared, astonished, watching the carrots fly in every direction, then he hit Pet with the hoe. Pet dropped the bone, gave one kiyi and fled to his indulgent mistress. Tilburina got up, and, picking up the dog, held him in her arms while she faced her husband.

"Joe!" she said distinctly. "You let Pet bury his bone there if he wants to. He doesn't know any better and I won't have his feelings hurt."

Joe stood looking at his wife. Mrs. Bright looked at them both. She was tingling with indignation and sympathy for Joe. Of course, Tilburina would have her way; she had never opposed her in all the nine years they had been married. Tilburina set Pet down upon the ground, speaking softly and commiseratingly to him.

"S'all bury his bonies wherever um wants to," she said.

Suddenly Joe spoke. "No, he won't. Not in my garden, he won't."

"What's that?" Tilburina faced her husband in astonishment.

"I say," shouted Joe, "that he won't bury bones in my garden. He can do it in other folks' if they'll stand for it, but if he does it here I'll tie him up." The sight of the disrupted carrots must have inspired him, for he gave the bone a kick that sent it flying out of his way. "More than that, I'll sell him. I'll give him away!" cried Joe.

Tilburina advanced upon her husband. "Joe Garth, do you know you're making a scene?" she said. "You go right straight into the house and stay there."

It was then that Mrs. Bright was made to hold her breath, for instead of Tilburina leading Joe away, Joe caught hold of Tilburina and led her. "You go into the house and stay there!" he cried. "I'll let you know madam, that I'm your husband and master here. I never have had my own way, but I'm going to now. This is where you quit."

It did not seem possible that little Joe's grip upon the large Tilburina could be forcible enough to impel her; it must have been that there was something compelling in his personality. At any rate Tilburina went in, and Joe shut the door upon her. Then he got a rope out of the tool house, fastened it to Pet's collars and tied him up.

Mrs. Bright was bending attentively over her sewing when she heard her name spoken, and looking up, saw Joe standing before her.

"Mrs. Bright," said Joe, "does that dog of mine bury bones in your flower garden?"

"Well, yes," gulped Mrs. Bright.

"Well, he won't do so any more. It's a shame. You ought not to put up with it. You're too good a neighbor to have to stand such things. I'm sorry that you did not come to me and tell me."

He turned and went toward home. His head was held very high and his eyes sparkled. He looked a foot taller than usual. Mrs. Bright watched him admiringly. Through a window Tilburina watched him, too. She was wiping her eyes.

ORGANIST TO BE HEARD IN CONCERT.

Clarence Eddy, Dean of the American Guild of Organists, will be in this city on Thursday, November 10 at the First Baptist church, in concert.

This promises to be one of the rare musical treats of the season. Accordign to the musical papers of this country, Mr. Eddy is conceded to be one of the world's greatest organists. The Diapason has this to say of Mr. Eddy:

"There are not many cities in the United States in which the name of Clarence Eddy is not a household word and his accomplishments are equally well known in Europe. He has given recitals and has dedicated new organs in every state of America. In Chicago alone, Mr. Eddy has presented nearly four hundred recitals. The directors of the great expositions which have been given in this country or abroad always have hastened to avail themselves of the services of an artist whose skill and whose musical inspiration are as remarkable as the skill and the inspiration of Mr. Eddy. So he has played the organ in the great exposition of Vienna, Philadelphia, Paris, Chicago, San Francisco, St. Louis, etc. His repertoire comprises practically everything that has been written for the organ. Most of the composers whose talents have been associated with composition for the instrument have written works specially for Mr. Eddy and have dedicated them to him. Possessed of this vast experience it is not surprising that the success of Clarence Eddy as a teacher has been of phenomenal worth. His pupils are living testimonials to his skill. Not only has he devoted loving care to the development of the gifts for organ playing of a multitude of pupils, but by his Organ Method he has helped even those who have not been able to come under his direct instruction."

No admission will be charged, but a free-will offering will be taken to defray expenses and go towards the payment of the organ recently installed. The committee in charge has arranged for extra seating space in order that they may take care of some two thousand people.

Fashions for Americans

Sleeves continue to be the most interesting single point of nearly all blouses, as well as dresses, of the present season vintage, and in blouses especially the dropped shoulder is very popular. Such a shoulder is featured on the blouse shown in today's sketch, a dainty costume model combining brocaded and plain chiffon. The upper part of the sleeve fits the arm quite smoothly, the fullness being let in beneath the velvet, cire, or metal ribbon band. The straps of ribbon attached to this band and set into the waist with the sleeve give a pretty trimming touch the whole arrangement helping to emphasize the dropped shoulder. The blouse proper is quite plain, and with just enough fullness to avoid a basque-like line.

An unusual number of blouses are shown this season that feature a fabric or color combination, and certainly this should play right into the hands of the economically inclined woman, who does her own sewing or has her clothes made at home or by the neighborhood dressmaker. The remnant counters offer as attractive materials for blouses as they do for children's clothes and hats, and with fabric and color combinations approved, it is a very easy matter to find blouse material practically among the odds and ends.

Brocades of various sorts combine well with plain silk chiffon and Georgette, and wool fabrics are frequently combined with sheer silks with excellent effect. One very smart blouse recently seen was made of rust colored velour in a fine light weight, combined with chiffon in the same shade. Another smart blouse combined black duvetyn with gray chiffon, the duvetyn forming a peasant bodice, with sleeves of the sheer gray material. A black satin waistcoat blouse had wide bell sleeves of silver gray chiffon. The waistcoat was embroidered in silver thread and fastened with metal buttons in the silver tone.

Open Doors In Business

Fruit Growing.

This branch of agriculture is probably the most promising for either man or woman. It has its hard side for women inasmuch as it requires physical strength to care for it and it is hard for a woman to depend on help since most men do not want to take orders from a woman.

If a woman can study the subject thoroughly until she knows well how it should be done, and if she herself is strong, and if she has the ability to manage men's labor skillfully, there is no reason why she may not succeed at it as well as a man for fruit will grow with feminine care as well as with masculine.

Either in the agricultural college or working with a successful fruit grower all the details of pruning, spraying, picking and packing should be learned, as well as the kinds of fruit best adapted to the climate, soil and market available. The matter of help and transportation should be determined before embarking in any certain locality.

In making a beginning in this business it is well to have expert advice such as may be gotten at the agricultural college, and also to talk with other fruit growers in the immediate vicinity.

By adding small fruits such as berries, etc., and even grains and garden truck and some stock and bees, while the trees are growing, the land may be made profitable in the first year. It takes not less than twenty-five acres to make a desirable fruit farm and from 500 to 1000 trees to make a good business.

This is good work for the daughter on the farm to begin with her father's care that the business may grow as she is growing in knowledge and skill in it.

THE BALANCED MEAL

Choosing a balanced ration is not as difficult as it seems. It is possible for the housekeeper, with a few simple principles in mind, to accomplish the feat, without having to talk learnedly of "calories" and such mysterious measurements as will probably never become practical to most of us.

We must know something of what the body needs and something of the composition of foods, and then see that it has some of each needful sort each day. Each meal does not have to be balanced. If the day's ration is balanced, that is sufficient.

The body's needs are three; building foods, energy foods, regulating foods. No one article of diet is entirely in one class as foods are composite and contain something which is upbuilding, something energy-supplying and something regulating; but for convenience we class sources of the food element they provide.

To provide a balanced ration choose one article from each of the three following groups:

Building Foods.

Meats, fowl, fish.
Milk, whole, skimmed, buttermilk.
Eggs.
Cheese.
Beans, peas, lentils.
Nuts.

Energy Foods.

These are the fats, sugars and starches.
Oil, butter, fat meat.
Cream, nuts, cheese, chocolate.
Sugar, syrups, honey.
Dried fruits contain fruit sugar.
Grains products: Flour, macaroni, oatmeal, cornmeal, rice.

Regulating Foods.

Mineral salts and tonic acids.
Milk, egg yolk and whole grains.
All kinds of fruits and vegetables.

A wide variety should be eaten, as they contain different combinations and are very necessary. If only a few are chosen and the rest discarded, one is likely to suffer the lack of some most needed element.

WIRES FORETELL WEATHER.

If you live in the country where there are plenty of telephone and telegraph wires and have an ear and a mind that is observant, it is an easy thing to let wires be your weather prophet.

Predictions as to state of the weather can be made from twenty-four to thirty-six hours in advance by an appreciation of the pitch, strength, and quality of the tones produced by the wires. Rains, now, and storms can be fore told with considerable certainty.

High shrill notes precede heavy but brief falls of rain or snow, while deep humming tones indicate rainfalls which are both brief and light. Buzzing tones indicate a change in the weather; indefinite soft, humming tones of medium strength indicate a longer continuance of damp weather.

It is sufficient to describe the tones in mere words. They must be heard repeatedly in order that the mind may form consciously or subconsciously an idea of the weather condition to which they correspond.

Bacteria arising in stored coal causes deterioration, under certain conditions of exposure.

JOE PATE SOLD TO TOLEDO MACKMEN ARE SIDETRACKED

FORT WORTH, Nov. 1.—Paul LaGrave, business manager of the Fort Worth club of the Texas league, today returned to John H. Farrell, president of the Association of Minor League Professional Baseball Clubs, a check for $1,900 as part payment of a claim by the Philadelphia Americans on Joe Pate, star pitcher of Fort Worth. LaGrave notified Farrell that Pate has been sold to the Toledo club of the American asgociation.

TIRED BUSINESS WOMEN START BASKETBALL

A long time ago, some of the girls at the Business Women's Club began talking of basket-ball—then there was "Springtime," and all the work incident thereto. Now everything's smoothed out and they have time for two or three hours a week of basket-ball—more or less as the interest developes.

Miss Louise Kodekek launched the thing in the first place by talking the boys down at the Legion Hall into loaning the ball, whether one night a week, or just exactly how much is not known—but anyway the Legionnaires have sponsored basket-ball for the "tired business woman." Ethel McDowell, who has a reputation for doing things and getting them done, and does not mind serving as chairman on any number of committees, for she can always find someone who is tickled to death to carry out the plans her fertile brain thinks up—as we were saying, Ethel is at the "moment of going to press," whipping a team or two into line and by next Tuesday night a regular team will be in the field fully equipped with suits and what-not. Of course they need a basket-ball, but what is a little thing like that? With the ball, and Ethel on the job, and the girls already making their gym suits, it is safe to say there will be at least two jeams on the floor in practice before the week is out. Of the girls interested, we remember the following names offhand—Ramie Mathis, Ethel McDowell, Irita Ott, Agness Blalock. But we got all basketballed up trying to remember more.

GREEN SHOWS LIST OF 300 CREDITORS

Listing approximately three hundred individuals and firms as creditors and showing liabilities of $2,358,457.08 with assset of $477,985.52 the petition in bankruptcy of Clois L. Green, local oil operator was filed Tuesday morning in federal court here. According to federal officials the liabilities represent the largest amount involved in any bankruptcy suit that has ever been filed at the local federal office.

The voluntary petition in bankruptcy of Leonel P. Crenshaw, also a local oil operator, who has in the past been associated with Mc Green in several oil transactions was also filed Thursday. His assets are listed at $41,071.71 with liabilities of $238,136.71.

Green during the boom days of Burkburnett and K. M. A. oil development of one to two and half years ago was one of the most widely known operators in this section. He was secretary of the Burk Waggoner Oil company, driller of the discovery well of the Northwest field in May of 1919. Following the sale of the holdings of the company to the Ryan Petroleum company in one of the largest deals of the Burkburnett field, Green with companies, partnerships, and acting alone soon became prominent in oil development throughout this section. He was associated on several large oil transactions with R. M. Waggoner of this city.

During the early part of 1919 there was probably no local firm of oil operators more widely known than that of Waggoner and Green. Always quick to follow up any wildcat or extension development they made large purchases around practically every strike that has been made in this section of the state which gave promise of opening a new oil pool. More recently their operations have been carried on on a more conservative basis.

Following are the liabilities and assets listed in the bankruptcy petition of Mr. Green:

Liabilities:
Taxes and debts due United States	$ 90,000.00
Taxes due states, counties	1,710.74
Wages	810.00
Other debts preferred by law	400.00

Song of the Cheerful Grin

By "NICK" CARTER

In an address to members of the University Club yesterday Judge John C. Kay stated that "youth has a song of life to sing."

Youth Has a song of life to sing,
And each to his own sweet lay,
Must mould his voice to his song of life
As the potter moulds his clay.

Some there are who will sing of fame,
Who will bend and struggle and strain
To climb to the summit o'er other men
Of lesser muscle and brain.

And some will sing of the cup that cheers,
Of the flare of a dainty dress,
Of the warmth of love and the life they find
In the welcoming caress.

But I've just one song that I care to sing
Here in this vale of sin;
Only one song that is known to me—
The song of the Cheerful Grin.

Riches? Aw, shucks! They are not for me;
No, not in the fix I'm in,
But singing my song I go stumbling on—
The Song of the Cheerful Grin.

Fame? Oh, I'll never reach the top,
For down in the maddening din
I stop too often to thrill my tune—
The Song of the Cheerful Grin.

Just give me the right in this misty life,
When some pal is blue and all in,
To perk him up with a whistling call—
The Song of the Cheerful Grin.

Let me earn a living and leave me alone,
Nor ask that some goal I win;
Let the jester sing at the foot of the throne—
The Song of the Cheerful Grin.

ONLY FOUR LEFT IN COUNTRY CLUB GOLF TOURNEY

Horace Robbins went down to defeat yesterday afternoon in the Golfers' Magazine cup tournament, losing to "Doc" Burleson, 2 down in an 18-hole struggle over the links of the local country club. W. U. McCutcheon also took the measure of Will Gray, with the result that the big field has now narrowed down to A. E. Myles, who reached the finals Monday, C. J. Norton, Burleson and McCutcheon. The last two named are scheduled to meet this afternoon, and the winner in turn will meet Norton for the honor of tackling Myles in the final 36-hole battle for the cup.

Cow Used at Hi School Is Lost

"The cow, which high school boys attempted to hoist in into the Senior High school building Monday night escaped that indignity, but what we want to know now is where the cow did go," Police Chief Morgan declared Tuesday.

The cow which the boys had intended installing in the building was reported to police to be the property of John Short, who lives near the building. At a late hour Tuesday police declared that no trace of the missing bovine had been obtained.

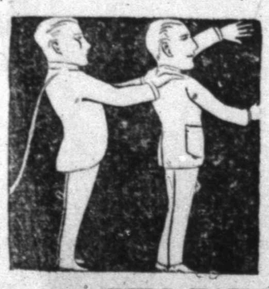

CALOMEL IS A DANGEROUS DRUG

Next Dose May Salivate You, Loosen Teeth or Start Rheumatism.

Calomel is mercury; quicksilver. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't strat your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.

BROWN UNIVERSITY, OUT OF RUNNING, BUILDS FOR 1922

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 1.—Coach Edward N. Robinson of Brown is looking forward to 1922 and 1923 and those who have followed the Bruins this fall are confident that Robinson will have powerful teams next fall and the season after.

The veteran Brown coach had but little to work with this fall and he told the undergraduates from the start that he was going to build for the future and that freshmen and sophomores would get a better show this season than they ever did before, for it is these gridiron warriors whom he plans to use next year in 1923 to have Brown back on the football map once more.

All season long the Bears have been having players on the injured list and this has handicapped Coach Robinson more than a little bit. However, the Bears have not made such a bad showing at that when it is taken into consideration that there are only four veterans on the team and so many injuries to contend with.

Robinson tries to pick out the fighters for his eleven. Any time a player shows a desire to quit under for it is these gridiron warriors whom fire it is usually the bench and the second or third team for him until he can learn to fight, and this is one reason why Brown teams always have plenty of fight and spirit on the gridiron.

This year the star players of the Brown eleven are Captain Shupert, right halfback; Shurtleff, center; J. H. Barrett, left guard, and Gilan, right tackle. All are doing their best to have Brown win the majority of the games on its 1921 chart and to install fight into the players who will be holding down varsity berths at the Providence institution of learning next season.

WISDOM and WORSE

By C. F. C.

Golfers may force J. Will Gray to accept defeat from time to time, but can never humble his proud and haughty spirit. When Will and W. U. McCutcheon were approaching the fifteenth green yesterday, with merely three holes left to play off their match in the Golfers' Magazine tournament, a spectator asked Gray how the match stood.

"Oh," said Will, cheerfully, drawing his trusty mashie from his bag, "I'm ONLY three down."

Tommy Cochran was beaten by Lloyd Weaver on the 18th green in a gruelling match in which Cochran had to concede a handicap of 21 strokes. Bad judgment on Tommy's part cost him his chance to carry the match to extra holes, but he at least finished with a drive that made the spectators' eyes stick out. The wind was behind the players as they stood on the 18th tee, and Cochran realized that a hard-hit drive straight on the pin might carry his ball into the deep ditch guarding the green. Instead of using an iron, however, and playing safe, Tommy elected to use his driver and play north of the green to No. 16 fairway—and I rise to state that it will be a long, long time before anyone else stand on No. 18 tee and drives out of bounds across No. 16 fairway! Cochran's ball went out just northeast of No. 16 tee, and roll and all that drive must have been close to 350 yards. Of course, there was a full sweep of wind behind it, but wind or no wind it was a mighty wallop—and it cost Cochran the match!

Morris Norton, son of "Bill" Norton, who is himself a golfer of no mean ability, is Wichita Falls' rising star of the links. The youngster (I don't believe he's over 13) is playing as pretty a game, all things considered, as any member of the local Country Club. A shrewd observer, who has watched the boy closely for some time, told me yesterday it was his opinion that young Norton, if his game isn't rushed too fast, should some day rank with the finest in the state.

"Bill Tilden swings a racquet mean,
Babe Ruth a nasty bat;
Jim Barnes in one can reach a green,
Jack Dempsey knocks 'em flat.
These birds are A-1 in their line,
But so am I, Lord knows;
I'll take them on at any time
At my game—dominoes."
—R. M. T.

Those guys are good, I too admit,
But give me credit, Mister;
I'm the only bird at cribbage who
Has ever beat my sister.

Electra won't play football in Wichita Falls unless the grass burrs are dragged from Athletic park. We don't blame the Electra players for disliking the grass burrs—but, Mister Chairman, we rise to a point of disorder, namely: Would Wichita Falls high school have a football eleven at all if the players said they wouldn't practise on the stones, rocks, pebbles, bricks, glass and dust of the junior high school grounds?

Even the conservative papers of the East fell hard for the report that Miller Huggins would lose his job as pilot of the Yankees in 1922. The Philadelphia Public Ledger only two days before Huggins was offered his 1922 contract stated that "it is commonly known that Miller Huggins will not be top sergeant of the Yankees at the beginning of the next season" while farther on in the same story the Ledger's sport authority added that "it is a certainty that Huggins will be let out."

But Huggins signed up, and thereby proved that there ain't no such animal in baseball as a "certainty."

The Texas Longhorns and Vanderbilt Commodores played recently in Dallas to a gate of more than $26,000—and it was considered a pretty good pile of "jack" for these parts. But when Michigan and Ohio State clashed at Ann Arbor two weeks ago, the gate receipts were $100,000, paid admissions totaling more than 41,000 and the figures breaking all records for Western university football games. And if Michigan and Ohio State can attract a gate like that, what will the receipts be this year when Harvard and Yale meet, or, better still, when the Army and Navy, two of the toughest teams in these United States, tangle on the New York Polo Grounds in their annual display of hostilities?

20,000 MAY SEE LONGHORNS AND AGGIES BATTLE

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Nov. 1.—A huge bowl with sides of wood, iron and steel has been gradually forming at the stamping ground of the Texas Aggies as sections of seats have been added to take care of the football fans, the number of which has constantly increased as the season advanced and the race for the pennant grew more exciting. As a result, for the game last Friday with the Oklahoma Aggies there were accommodations on the sides of the field for 14,000 persons.

Now the ends of the bowl are being constructed which will give accommodations for 6000 more. Just one gathering to witness an athletic contest in the South would fill such seating space—the crowd that witnesses the annual Thanksgiving game between the Texas Aggies and the University Longhorns—and for that game alone are the enormous preparations, which are causing such building activities in College Station, going on today. Six car loads of lumber are being woven into the structures at the ends of the field.

The sale of this space will begin today. One-half of it has been allotted to Theo. Bellmont, athletic director at the University of Texas for the University crowd, and he will alone take reservations for seats in those sections allotted for occupation by the faithfuls of the orange and white. The other half of the space will be sold by James Sullivan, business manager of athletics at the A. & M. College, to those who want to be seated in sections roped off by streamers of maroon and white.

TEXANS LOSE IN HOUSE FIGHT ON ROAD AID BILL

Leading Fight on Floor Representative Claude Hudspeth Vigorously Denounces Measure.

Declare Such a Law Would Add to Centralization of Power, Depriving States of Rights.

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS,
Record News Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Despite the unanimous opposition of the Texas and Arkansas delegation, the house today adopted by a vote of 194 to 36 the conference report on the federal aid good roads bill.

This action followed the refusal of the house by a vote of 253 to 36 to carry the motion of Representative Hudspeth of Texas for recommittal of the measure to conference with instructions to eliminate the objectionable features which the Texas delegation believe will necessitate an amendment to the state constitution.

The measure now goes to the senate, where Senators Culbertson, Sheppard and Caraway are prepared to carry on the fight lost in the house today.

Hudspeth vigorously denounced the provisions that would force Texas to amend its constitution in order to participate in federal aid funds and declared that even if the constitution were amended to meet the requirements of the measure that a single taxpayer could tie up the funds in any county by enjoining the local road commissioners from turning them over to the state highway commissioners.

Favored by One Texan

The only Texas member to vote for the adoption of the conference report was Representative Wurzbach of San Antonio, although he had previously voted with Hudspeth for recommittal. He said he thought it might be a good thing if Texas did amend its constitution.

State Rights

All the members of the Texas delegation declared they were in favor of good roads and also in favor of federal aid in their construction but that they would oppose the encroachment on states' rights by federal authority.

Some of the Texas members believe that by a strained construction of the state laws that the state could participate in federal aid funds without amending its constitution, but that there would still be the danger of injunction suits by tax-payers. These funds are provided by a vote of the local tax-payers, they said, and the tax-payers undoubtly would be unwilling to surrender control of this money for use in other parts of the state.

Another criticism voiced by several Texans is that the measure pushes a little further the movement to centralize the powers of the federal government over the states.

Four provisions in the bill were picked out as objectionable and included by Hudspeth in his motion to recommit with instructions to strike them out.

The Provisions

The first of these provisions that the term, state funds, includes funds raised under authority of the state, or any political or other sub-division, an dmade availbale for expenditure under the direct control of the state highway department.

The second provision gives to the secretary of agriculture authority to approve in whole or in part the highway system as designated by state highway departments, or to require modification or revision.

The third objectionable provision reads as follows: "That before any project shall be approved by the secretary of agriculture for any state such state shall make provisions for state funds required in each state, such state shall make provisions for state funds required in each state or such states by this act fo reconstruction, reconstruction and maintenance of all federal aid highways within the state, which funds shall be under the direct control of the state highway department."

The other provision which applies specifically to Texas and Arkansas, without, however, mentioning them by name, reads as follows: "That in any state where the existing constitution or laws will not permit the state to provide revenues for the construction, reconstruction, or maintenance of highways, the secretary of agriculture shall continue to approve projects for said state until three years after the passage of this act, if he shall find that said state has complied with the provisions of this act in so far as its existing constitution and laws will permit."

The entire bill was dictated, several Texans declared, with the primary consideration of benefitting the tourists rather than for the improvement of local communities.

Care must be used in giving outdoor treatment to redhaired, fair skinned patients, as their skin does not tan deep enough to be a protection from the intense heat of the sun.

This warming of the body by the suns' rays tones it up and has an appreciable effect in making it immune to disease. It has also been found that more than two and a half times as much sun heat is required to burn the skin in comparison with fire or steam heat.

Napoleon's Ideal Woman

The great Napoleon, in response to a question once asked by a lady, replied "My ideal woman is not the beautiful society belle or the butterfly of fashion, but the matron who reaches middle age in complete preservation of health, with stalwart children by her side."

There are a great many women of middle age who owe their good health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that famous medicine for female ills. For almost fifty years this wonderful medicine, compounded of roots and herbs, has been restoring suffering women to health.

MELBA'S NAMESAKE MAY WIN FAME

Melba McCreery.

"If it's a girl I hope she'll be a great singer like Melba," said Father McCreery to Mother McCreery while they were awaiting the arrival of the stork at the McCreery home. "And if it is a girl we'll name her Melba." said the mother. And a girl it was. They named her Melba McCreery. And now this namesake of Melba's is ready for her debut as a singer with the Metropolitan Opera company, and many critics say that she has a great future—a chance to become in truth a second Melba. The great Melba herself has wished the girl success.

INDIANS GET NEWSPAPER PRINTED IN SHORTHAND

The "Kamloops Wawa," issued in an outlying locality of the Frazer river district, in British Columbia, is printed in shorthand.

The origin of this enterprising sixteen-page weekly newspaper arose through the labors of a French-Canadian priest named Le Jeune. While teaching himself the Indians' vocabulary he experienced difficulty in noting down the sounds used by the natives in pronouncing their words. Then he thought of shorthand signs, and found them admirably fitted for his task.

The Indians' Own

The mysterious "talk language" excited immense curiosity, and soon the Indians set about mastering the intricacies of shorthand.

On Le Jeune transposing certain religious works into shorthand, the instant popularity of the printed booklets, and the desire of the Indians to learn the news of the day, prompted him to publish the week's happenings in phonetic shorthand. He printed a few sheets by means of a copying machine. After a few months he had special type cast, and the paper is printed today on the machines of a journal published in the nearest town.

This novel newspaper has a circulation of more than two thousand copies a week.

A Family Duty.

Six-year-old Paul was misbehaving in the school ranks when his 9-year-old sister from her place in the next row happened to notice him. Immediately she walked from her place to him and administered a good shaking and a command for him to stand still.

"Why did you shake him, Virginia?" her teacher asked after they were in their room.

"Because if I hadn't shook him his teacher would," she retorted.

The questioning teacher smiled. "But I can't see, if he had to be shaken, what difference it made whether you or the teacher did it."

"I can," Virginia was positive. "I wanted to keep it all in the family."—Tulsa World.

Here's Little Jump of Only About 5 Miles

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 1.—Sergeant Encil Chambers of Post Field, Fort Sill, Lawton, Oklahoma, today broke what officials say is the record for high altitude parachute jumping when he leaped approximately 26,000 feet from an army airplane piloted by Lieutenant Wendell Brookley, also of Post Field. The stunt was performed in connection with the American Legion flying meet. Sergeant Chambers' descent took 18 minutes.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 1. Paul Wilson of Ithaca, New York, flying a scout plane in the altitude test of the American Legion aerial circus here this afternoon, escaped uninjured when his plane in landing on the field hit a rut and stood on its nose. Wilson, who is a favorite for the Legion's air derby rate tomorrow, had attained a height of 22,000 feet before descending. The propeller and landing gear of his machine were broken.

She Had Heard of Them.

Admiral Eberle, new head of the Pacific fleet, said the other day to a San Francisco reporter:

"Your questions, young man, show a good deal of naval ignorance. You are like the young lady who said:

"'Oh! What are those great, funny looking things?'

"'Them's men-o-war,' her companion, a boatman, answered.

"'How lovely,' said the young lady. 'And what are those funny little things behind them?'

"'Tugs, miss.'

"'Yes, naturally! Tugs-of-war. How stupid of me,' said the young lady. 'I've often heard of tugs-of-war, of course.'"—Columbus Dispatch.

WILD ANIMALS OF THE RANGE ARE WIPED OUT

Since 1915 Government Hunters Have Killed a Total of 156,150 Predatory Beasts of Prey.

Texas Leads Sixteen States in Number of Wolves Disposed of With a Total of 1,566 During the 6 Years.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1.—Since 1915, when Uncle Sam turned hunter of wild animals that roam the western ranges and prey on the farmer's livestock, he has accumulated a game bag the like of which was never before witnessed in history, according to reports to the Biological Survey, United States Department of Agriculture, just made public.

By trap and gun the government hunters have killed a total of 156,150 predatory wild animals. That period represents the time of government activity in that kind of work. The result of this labor is of incalculable benefit to the farmer and stockman.

Listing the predatory animals which go to make up the kill total, the inventories of the 6-year campaign are as follows: 406 bears; 17,842 bobcats and lynxes; 133,604 coyotes; 668 mountain lions and 3,630 wolves. The figures represent the total game bag of the government hunters, varying in number from 200 to 500, and the kill of state employees engaged in co-operative campaigns. The total shows the number of scalps taken; it does not include the large number of animals killed by poison. Probably the figures would be doubled if those animals, too, were placed in the list. Many poisoned animals, however, are never found.

During the fiscal year, 1921, figures show the total number of predatory animals killed was 27,637, classified as follows: 89 bears, 2,468 bobcats and lynxes, 24,258 coyotes, 128 mountain lions and 594 wolves. the average destruction by these animals is estimated to be, for each wolf and mountain lion, about $1,000 worth of livestock; each coyote and bobcat, $50 worth; and each stock-killing bear, $500 worth. In view of these estimates an idea may be obtained of the tremendous damage averted by the government's skilled hunters. Those figures are averages; in some cases, notably that of the Custer wolf, the depredations of individual predatory animals have reached much higher figures. The Custer wolf was estimated to have killed at least $25,000 worth of cattle before it was disposed of not long ago.

The figures cited above represent the government's activities along this line in the sixteen states of Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington and Wyoming. During the 6-year campaign more predatory animals were killed in Nevada than in any other state due largely to the fact that that state was the first to conduct a co-operative campaign with the federal government, starting in 1918. The total killed in Nevada, not including animals poisoned, is placed at 32,068. Utah comes second with 21,712; Texas, third, with 18,602; Idaho, fourth, with 16,018; Oregon, fifth, with 12,524, and Washington sixth with 10,015.

Texas leads the sixten states in number of wolves disposed of, the total being 1,566 during the six year campaign, or more than 40 per cent of the total number of wolves killed in all sixteen states. Wyoming ranks second in number of wolves killed, with 480; New Mexico third, with 441; Montana fourth, with 239; Arizona fifth with 183, and Utah sixth with 170.

In the number of coyotes whose scalps have been taken by government hunters and in cooperative campaigns, Nevada leads with 27,173; Utah is second with 18,767; Texas, third, with 14,830; Idaho, fourth, with 14,454; Oregon, fifth, with 10,351, and Washington, sixth, with 9,631.

In six states the number of bobcats and lynxes disposed of during the six years runs into four figures as follows: Nevada, 4,864; Utah, 2,669; Texas, 2,199; Oregon, 2,045; Idaho, 1,418, and New Mexico 1,292.

Arizona and New Mexico account for nearly two-thirds of the total number of mountain lions killed, their totals being 255 and 170, respectively. In Utah, 71 mountain lions were killed; in Oregon, 43; Colorado, 36; in California, 29; and in Nevada, 24.

In all the states, except Arkansas, Oklahoma and South Dakota, state authorities cooperate with the federal government in the campaigns.

A FLYING GAS CLOUD.

A cloud of glowing gas has been discovered flying through space at a speed of 1,125 miles per second.

Readers may be relieved to know that it is traveling away from us, but even if it were coming our way there would be nothing to fear, as many thousands, perhaps millions, of years must elapse before it could reach us.

How it manages to remain intact while traveling at such a dizzy speed is a mystery. Equally mysterious is the manner in which it was able to get up such a speed.

The most probable explanations are that it has been shot from some gigantic sun belonging to a universe of stars far beyond those we can see, or that it is a gradual accumulation of gases which ultimately will be formed into stars such as we see around us at night.

The Healing Sun.

Medical science has discovered that those who tan deeply do the best in the outdoor treatment for tuberculosis. The sun warms the skin and the surface blood is carried to the heart and gradually the entire body responds to the rays of the sun. The surface of the body warmed by the sun can endure a temperature of five degrees more than if warmed by stoves, steam heat or hot water.

Roses were formerly the symbol of silence, hence the Latin phrase "sub-rosa," meaning "under the rose," and so, "in confidence."

ROYAL DUTCH HOLDINGS MAY CHANGE HANDS

Formation of New Concern to Take Over American Interests of the Company Is Reported.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The formation of a new oil company to take over the American properties of the Royal Dutch Petroleum company is said to be one of the developments in the recent merger of the Union Oil, but also, according to report, the Roxana Petroleum company, the Shell company of California and the Ozark Pipe Line company, owned by the Roxana. Officials of the Royal Dutch and the Roxana Petroleum company, as well as the Union Oil company of Delaware, who could be reached, refused to confirm or deny the report, but one of the officials connected with the latter corporation admitted that a statement covering the details of the Union Oil and Royal Dutch transaction would be issued probably early next week.

That the Royal Dutch interests are losing no time to operate the properties of the Union Oil is indicated by advices received from the West that the Ozark Pipe Line company, the subsidiary of the Roxana Petroleum company, is making connections with the Wolverine Oil and the Eddystone properties in the Southwestern Oklahoma fields. The last two named companies are owned by the National Exploration company, which, in turn, is controlled by the Union Oil of Delaware.

South American Fields

Signs pointing to more intensive development campaign in the South American oil fields came to light when reports were received that the General Asphalt company had brought in a new 50,000-barrel well on its property. For some time past local and foreign oil producers have been looking to South America as a possible source for replacing oil fields becoming exhausted in other sections of the world.

The development of known fields in South America is considered the more important in view of reports from Mexico that many wells are going to salt water. The development of salt water in some of the important fields in Mexico is said to have been rapid during recent weeks and current production to be in the neighborhood of 350,000 barrels daily, compared with some 600,000 barrels at the beginning of September and some 1,500,000 barrels at the beginning of the year.

Texas Company Sulphur Beds

Wall Street again heard the report that the Texas company is about to segregate its sulphur properties from its oil properties. This report was circulated in the financial district some time ago, but no official confirmation was obtainable. It is said now, however, that the plans are nearing completion and that these will call for the formation of a new company to take over the sulphur properties, this new company to be operated as a subsidiary of the Texas company. Stockholders of the Texas company, according to the report, will receive stock in the new company on a share-for-share basis.

Wild-Catting in Mexico

The Atlantic Gulf Oil Corporation, a subsidiary of the Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies Steamship, has completed plans to carry out "wildcatting" operations on its oil lands in Mexico, according to reports in the financial district. The company owns and constructs leases in various parts of the unproven oil lands of Mexico. The company production from its two wells in the Amatlan field is about 15,000 barrels daily.

MEMPHIS

MEMPHIS, Texas, Nov. 1.—Several new residences are being erected in the city. They are all of the latest modern type and add substantially to the progress of Memphis.

The road bond election for $100,000 for bridges and past county indebtedness failed to carry by a small margin. This election was held some 60 days ago and carried by a nice vote but technical defects in the election proclamation caused it to have to be held over with the above result.

Memphis now has a full organized chamber of commerce band, under the directorship of Paul James, who recently was brought from Las Vegas, New Mexico, for this position. The band gives public concerts once a week.

A large number of bijackers on a small scale and poker players galore are being rounded up by local officers. They are the "camp followers" of the large number of cotton pickers who are in the county.

The sweet potato curing plant, erected in Memphis by local capital to develop the "Live at Home" program of the county is a complete success. The house is of 10,000 bushels capacity and uses the government method of curing. The plant is full and could get much more stock if room was had. The first section of the plant has finished the curing process and is now marketing cured potatoes. A contract with the dining car service of the Denver railroad has been made to furnish them sweet potatoes for the dining cars. The potatoes raised in the county this year are of a fine grade and good marketable size.

FALLING OF AWNING NOW IN COURT

The trial of the suits of W. B. Harris against W. F. and C. H. Parker, Saul Lebensen and Ike Bergolosky in which the plaintiff is asking for $30,000 damages as a result of injuries alleged to have been sustained when the awning broke down in front of the store building on Indiana street owned by the defendants opened Tuesday in the 30th District court before Judge P. A. Martin.

According to the plaintiff's petition he was caught under the frame awning when over a 100 feet of it broke loose from the side of the buildings and fell to the sidewalk in February. The awning was said at the time to have fallen due to a collection of snow on it following a storm. Others were injured at that time.

Harris, who is an elderly man, according to his petition sustained two fractured legs and other injuries. The trial of the case will probably be completed today.

CARD OF THANKS.

SERVICE FOR FELLOWMAN IS URGED BY KAY

Service for one's fellowman is above earthly riches, or selfish attainments, Judge John C. Kay told members of the University club in a talk Tuesday noon at the Wichita club rooms. In pointing out the opportunities of service in Wichita Falls at the present time, he said the greatest service the club could perform in helping the cause of education, which he declared was paramount, was in doing their part to secure an institution of higher learning for Wichita Falls.

"Wichita Falls, is to my mind, the largest city in the state if not in the United States which does not boast of a single institution of higher learning," he said. "One of the greatest services we in Wichita Falls can do for the youth is to make such a seat of higher education possible," he added.

Service can be rendered, he said, first by being true to oneself, and secondly by good citizenship. By good citizenship, he declared he meant, intelligent use of the rights of citizenship.

"The school teacher is in reality one of the biggest figures in the life of a community, yet they are the poorest paid. Education cannot be overemphasized in importance, and the good of the community, the state and the nation will suffer as long as the value of education is unrecognized.

Entertainment for the day consisted of two excellent baritone solos by Charles Angle, accompanied by Miss Ruth Chandler on the piano.

The program committee for next week's program, will consist of Judge Guy Rogers, and Messrs. Dixon and Walsh and Norris Ewing, president, announced at Tuesday's meeting.

WICHITA DISTRICT OF KATY LEADS IN SAFETY CAMPAIGN

With a record of not a single personal injury during the period between October 18 and 31 on the Wichita Falls district of the M. K. & T. railway, the "No Accident" drive closed at midnight Monday. This record puts the local district of the Katy and W. F. & N. W. on record as the only district on the entire Katy lines which did not report a single personal injury during the drive, according to F. W. Grace, division superintendent.

The success of the campaign, Mr. Grace says, shows that extreme care can reduce the number of personal injuries due to accidents to a minimum.

The latest reports of the eight largest banks in Germany show an increase of 68,000 depositors.

MAY COME TO GRIEF BY TRAFFIC LAW

Over 70 per cent of the 290 arrests made by city police during the month of October were made for violation of the traffic ordinance, according to the reports shown on the police docket.

The various charges included defective mufflers, no lights, wrong parking, turning in the middle of the street, reckless driving and other charges and totaled 157. Fines were paid in nearly all cases.

Charges of vagrancy, under which many doubtful cases are booked, and gaming were next in numbers for single charges.

A large number of arrests under charges of theft, in several of which cases officers declare they have undefeatable evidence, were on the October docket.

Although the charges of drunkenness were numerous, they ran slightly behind the charges of gaming and vagrancy. Several raids on dice games in which six to eight men were arrested assisted in raising this figure.

GOV. M'KELVIE OF NEBRASKA SOUNDS SLOGAN

Readjustment of Exchange Value Must Be Effected Before There Can Be a Return to Normalcy.

He Predicts an Era of Unusual Prosperity Ahead of the Cornbelt Section of the United States.

STATE OF NEBRASKA, Executive Office, Lincoln, Nov. 1.—To the Record News: In a general letter that was issued from this office last July, a review was made of conditions as they were in Nebraska at that time. A favorable report was then made of the prospect for crop yields.

For your further information, I am attaching a copy of the Nebraska Crop Reporter for the month of October. From this you will see that the yield of wheat in the state is reported at fifty-five and one-half million bushels, and the yield of corn is approximately two hundred, seventeen and one-half million bushels. Both of these yields are larger than the ten year average, but they are slightly lower than for the year 1920.

At this writing more than one-half of the wheat crop has been sold. The larger portion of this marketing was done in August, immediately following the harvest. According to a report that I received from the banks throughout the state in August, the marketing of the wheat crop resulted in a reduction of about 10 per cent in farmers' obligations, and a 10 per cent increase in deposits. Generally, it eased up money matters throughout the wheat-belt of the state and the banks there are in a somewhat better condition now than in the strictly corn growing and livestock area.

There is a good deal of last year's corn still on the farm. This, in addition to the present crop, will represent the largest amount of corn that Nebraska farmers have ever had on hand during a single crop period. The price for corn is so unfavorable that it will not move very rapidly and consequently will not contribute a very great deal to immediate business improvement. Ultimately a great deal of the corn crop will be marketed through livestock at prices that will undoubtedly be profitable to the farmer. Returns from this source should begin to be reflected within the next sixty days and will continue to increase gradually during the succeeding six months' period. It is from this quarter that we may now expect the most substantial relief for farmers.

No one can foretell the price that will finally prevail for the present corn crop. If freight rates should be reduced to a pre-war level, that would add about five cents per bushel to the farm price of corn in this state. This, however, would not be sufficient to encourage a general movement of this crop. Market prognosticators seem to think that the price will be considerably increased, and that before another crop is grown, a price will have been attained that will encourage a general marketing of the crop. Meanwhile, the farmer feels a great deal better to have this large crop on hand, even with low prices prevailing, than to have nothing to sell when prices are high.

The condition of banks throughout this state is better than it has been at any other time during the present year. It seems improbable that there will be any failures of an important nature and the credit relief that promises to come into the state through the war finance corporation and other sources will undoubtedly enable the weaker ones to regain a position of comparative strength and soundness.

So far as general business conditions throughout the state are concerned, it would be fallacious to say that anything like normal has been attained. Prevailing prices of certain staple farm products are the lowest that they have been in twenty-five years. With large yields even these low prices would not be so bad were it not for the comparatively high level of prices that prevails in other quarters. Excessive freight rates, high wages, high interest rates, high retail prices, and high taxes all fall with very great force upon the farmer, and until this condition has been changed through an equalization of values, no hope should be entertained of a general business revival.

One needs only take a look at Bulletin No. 999 of the U. S. Department of Agriculture to know what is the matter with business throughout the country at the present time. I quote the following paragraph therefrom:

"Compared with a five year average before the war as 100, the purchasing power of farm products at prices paid to farmers in June, 1921, were as follows: Corn 61, oats 60, barley 53, wheat 93, rye 101, buckwheat 101, flax seed 55, beans 81, cotton 51, cotton seed 52, hay 68, cabbage 111, onions 73, potatoes 64, sweet potatoes 80, peanuts 48, apples 91, chickens 116, eggs 77, butter 83, milch cows 80, beef cattle 69, veal calves 73, sheep 66, lambs 79, wool 58, hogs 67, horses 45. The low purchasing power of farm products has made it impossible for farmers to buy the normal amount of other things and has been a contributing cause of unemployment."

Since Bulletin No. 999 was issued, there has been a decline in the price of certain staple agricultural products that are grown in this region.

I do not know of anything that could be more conclusive of what it is necessary to do now in oder that the general business depression may be overcome. A readjustment of exchange values between raw farm products and finished materials must be effected before there can be a permanent return to anything like normalcy.

Meanwhile, what shall be the course of the prudent business man? Shall he simply await results, confident in the belief that everything will come out all right and that he will receive his share of the returns when a satisfactory solution has been attained? Or shall he view the situation with fear and trembling, reluctant to pull an oar that he does not absolutely have to stroke in order to save his business life? If either of these courses is followed by business throughout the country, then the route to recovery will be a slow and arduous one.

In my opinion this is a time that demands courage, a strong belief in the final out-come and a determination on the part of every one to do his share in order that the pulse of the nation's business may be stimulated. Undoubtedly, those who do less than their part will share in the benefits that will ultimately accrue, but the one who is far out in front when normal conditions do return will be the one who makes the greatest effort along safe and sane lines now.

The country, generally, will be prosperous when agriculture is prosperous, and I predict that there lies ahead of the corn-belt farm an era of unusual prosperity. Agriculture was the first to take its losses and it will be the first to return to normal. It is an industry of great potential resourcefulness over a period of years; and the present era of depression is only temporary.

Nebraska ranks well at the top in the production of the major staple farm products. The diversity of its crops insures it against the ill effects of drouth and other calamity. Whenever agriculture is prosperous anywhere, it will be prosperous here. Very truly yours,

SAMUEL R. McKELVIE,
Governor.

It has just mobilized fifty fat men and fifty fat women in a reducing squad which hopes to lose 5,000 pounds or more by the middle of November, when Health Commissioner Copeland will present the heavyweights at the health exposition as an example of what stout persons can do in the way of becoming more becoming.

VALLEY IS TRYING OUT NEW DEVICE

Something new in railroad circles, known as the "Speeder," which is said to be the work of an army of men in ditching cuts, widening banks and shaping ballast, has been delivered to the Fort Worth and Denver railroad here and assigned for service on the Wichita Valley.

The machine, which represents the latest developments in railroad engineering equipment, weighs 7,000 pounds and is pulled by a locomotive on the track.

The Point of View.

A cricketing anecdote is told in which a British colonel figures. The colonel was captain of a team at Poona. When he tossed with the Hindu skipper that worthy cried, "heads," and, as the coin came down "tails," the colonel said he would go in.

"No sir," said the wily one; "we wish to go in first, if you please."

"But we won the toss," answered the colonel.

"Pardon me, sir," replied the mild Hindu, "we won the toss!"

"My good man," said the colonel, "you cried 'heads' and it came down 'tails' uppermost."

"Exactly, sir; but we always cry which side comes underneath!"—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Association of Credit Men Hold Meeting Tuesday

Interchange of ideas between various members of the Credit Men's Association of Wichita Falls was stressed by members as the most effective method of arriving at ideal credit conditions at the regular semi-monthly meeting and dinner of the association Tuesday evening at the Kemp hotel. The discussion of credit matters relating to firms represented by the membership present took up most of the time following the dinner.

The meeting was well attended, about 40 members being present. John Hunt, of the Wichita Mill and Elevator company, president of the association, presided.

Among the good things which have been accomplished by the association in the two months it has been functioning as given by John W. Thomas, secretary of the association, is a decrease in the usual problems of credit common to wholesale concerns.

COAL STRIKE IS THREATENED BY JUDGE'S RULING

By Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 1.—A nation-wide strike of coal miners seemed inevitable tonight if operators heed the injunction issued by Federal Judge A. B. Anderson, which prescribed the "checkoff" of union dues.

A telegram sent late today from headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America after it had been definitely learned that the injunction was not yet in effect, advised union officials to regard discontinuance of the "checkoff" as breaking the existing wage agreement.

The telegram signed by President John L. Lewis, Vice-President Phillip Murray and Secretary William Green, said:

"Any abrogation or setting aside of any part or section of this agreement, including the section providing for the checking off of dues and assessments cannot be regarded as other than a violation of the agreement, and should be treated accordingly by the district officers and local unions."

While no course of conduct for union officials was outlined by the telegram, it was said authoritatively that the international officers regarded the strike as the union's only weapon to enforce a contract. The telegram was sent to officials in 16 states where the checkoff provision obtains and where 350,000 of the 550,000 union miners are employed.

The text of the telegram follows.

"As a result of the disagreement between the United Mine Workers of America and the coal operators in the fall of 1919 it was suggested by the government of the United States that miners and operators submit all their differences to a commission appointed by the president of the United States, said commission to have full authority to render an award covering every proposition involved. The United Mine Workers agreed to this program and the commission in due time rendered an award which they decided must be written into the form of an agreement by and between the coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America to be in full force and effect until March 31, 1922. Following the rendition of this award by the United States bituminous coal commission, functioning under governmental authority, the president of the United States in a letter addressed to the coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America commanded both sides to meet in joint conference and duly execute such an agreement as directed by the bituminous coal commission. This was done and the agreement was duly signed in New York City on March 31, 1920. It is therefore obvious that said joint agreement honorably entered into and executed in due form under the direction of the government of the United States cannot be modified or changed in any of its provisions until the date of its expiration, March 31, 1922. Any abrogation or setting aside of any part or section of this agreement, including the section providing for the checking off of union dues and assessments cannot be regarded as other than a violation of the agreement and should be treated accordingly by the district officers and local unions within your jurisdiction."

The states into which the message was sent were: Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kentucky, Michigan, Iowa, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Wyoming, Montana and Washington.

Sale of Beer To Sick Will Start Quickly

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Letters are to be sent to brewers advising them that beer already manufactured and held in stock may be sold for medical purposes, under the new treasury regulations, internal revenue Commissioner Blair announced tonight.

Sale of this beer for the sick could begin at once under the proper permits, Mr. Blair declared, adding that there would be no delay in the issuance of permits to brewers whose applications were without flaw. The bureau, he said would not allow any red tape to stand in the way of immediate distribution of beer for medical purposes.

To permit beer held in de-alcoholizing plants to be used as medicine "takes a strained construction" of the law, according to a formal statement issued tonight by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the anti-saloon league. "We are not so much interested in this," he said, "as we are in the enforcement of the provisions which prevent any applicants from getting a permit who has violated either state or federal law or regulation there under. This applies both to the brewer who makes his application as well as to the druggist who will get a permit to sell it."

Brig. Gen. and Mme. Payot, photographed on arrival in New York.

Brig. Gen. Charles Payot, a member of the staff of military advisers to the French delegation at the arms conference, has arrived in the U. S. with Mme. Payot. General Payot, during the last years of the war, was chairman of the military board of allied supplies. Prior to that he was in charge of all services of supply in the French war zone. Prior to the war he had collaborated, in the French war college under General Foch, with the British government in the evolution of a plan for utilization of French railways in the event of an attack by Germany from the northeast and east.

Legion Tries Dunk Perkins; Novel Defense

Charged with having gained admission into the post by representing that he had seen service in the late war when as a matter of fact he had only served in the National Guard during that period, and of having eaten the entire refreshment outlay prepared for a recent meeting to the embarrassment of Ma Burdick and other members of the Woman's Auxiliary, Perkins Dunk was tried Tuesday night at a meeting of the Pat Carrigan post of the American Legion.

After considerable evidence had been introduced the case was withdrawn from the jury by Judge Albert Taylor and the accused acquitted the court holding that he was not mentally capable of committing crime of any kind.

The trial featured the meeting of the post which members of the Woman's Auxiliary also attended.

R. C. Thaxton acted as judge advocate in the case reading a long list of charges in addition to the feature charges mentioned above. The accused was defended by Guy Rogers and Sam Holliday. No defense was offered other than the alleged mental incompetency of Dunk.

Joe Kell, Dr. T. J. Strong, Dr. O. W. Wilson, E. J. Bartels, and Zeb Nixon were witnesses in the case. The trial was conducted with as little order as possible with the accused and spectators frequently relieving the monotony by suggestions. The acquittal was pronounced immediately following the final plea allowed the accused.

The legion headquarters were decorated by the Woman's Auxiliary for the occasion. A dance followed the trial. Refreshments were served during the evening.

JUVENILE WARD IS NOW EMPTY

For the first time since the first of the year, the women's and juvenile jail at the courthouse was empty Tuesday night. Although seldom crowded, the jail since the incoming of the Sheriff Smith administration has always had at least one occupant.

Tuesday Mrs. C. E. Ousley, secretary of the Welfare Council took Ethel and Gertrude Dollar to the Home of the Good Shepherd at Dallas. They were the only two inmates of the jail located on the third floor of the courthouse. Both girls were recently adjudged delinquents.

MEETING OF BETA DELPHIANS POSTPONED

The meeting of the Beta Delphian society, scheduled for Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. T. Meredith, 1605 Eleventh street, has been postponed until next week, because of illness in the family, it was announced late Tuesday.

Former Gob Eats, Sleeps, Swims and Dances Chained to Bicycle; To Visit All State Capitols

Handcuffed and chained to a bicycle, which he has set out to ride to the capitol city of every state in the United States. Tony Pizzo, former member of the United States navy and experienced bicyclist arrived in Wichita Falls Tuesday en route to Austin, which will make his third objective in the long jaunt.

The trip was begun in Denver, Colorado, as a result of a wager with a bicycle company of that city. He came here from Santa Fe, N. M., which was his second capitol to be visited.

Pizzo, eats, sleeps, drinks, bathes and lives at all times chained to his bicycle.

In 1919 he made a trip from Los Angeles to New York, similarly handcuffed to his machine. This trip required five months and fourteen days and a return trip was made the next year in six months and 20 days. He expects to make this trip in about two years.

The handcuffs were locked and sealed on Pizzo's wrists by Governor Shoup of Colorado, and cannot be opened until Pizzo has completed his circle of the nation. A reward of $500 is offered for anyone who can open the handcuffs or chains without cutting, according to a card carried by Pizzo.

Pizzo announces that he takes his bicycle with him when he goes for a swim or to a dance. A dane, he says is easy, "I just drop the chain around her shoulders, hold the bike in one hand and away we go."

He met with a slight accident on the road near Vernon Saturday night when an automobile crowded him into a ditch, breaking one of the bars and severely lacerating Pizzo's wrists.

He makes his expenses by sale of postcards and by exhibiting moving pictures of his 1919 trip at theaters. He expects to remain in Wichita Falls until about Monday noon, recuperating from injuries received in the Saturday night crash. He is making his headquarters at the Hurley and Fletcher barber shop.

The mining industries of Belgium are now employing more workers than they did in June, 1913.

Scurry Says Headquarters S. C. V. Here

Judge Edgar Scurry, elected commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans at the recent reunion at Chattanooga, announced Tuesday that this city would probably be selected as the headquarters for the organization in its educational and historical work. Judge Scurry, who with S. Y. Ferguson and W. M. Haigler, represented this city at the reunion, returned Tuesday from the reunion of the Confederate Veterans Sons of Confederate Veterans and the Southern Memorial Association which held its annual convention at Chattanooga, Tenn., October 24 to 28, inclusive.

The work of the organization of sons of veterans, Judge Scurry states, consists chiefly in combating false and prejudiced histories of the war and seeks to keep these influences out of the public schools and libraries of the Southland. In the past few years, he said, they have been very successful, having prevented the adoption of biased histories in large schools in the South.

Among the appropriations voted by the sons at the recent convention, Judge Scurry said, a sum of $1,000 to add to a like sum contributed by the Daughters of the Confederacy to build a memorial at Harpers Ferry, to the loyal negro slaves who, not only refused to follow John Brown's plan to assassinate their masters but who disclosed his plot.

All of the delegates to the Chattanooga convention report a profitable and inspired session. There were about 200 regularly elected sons present at the convention, Judge Scurry said, and the sentimental side of the reunion, which each year reports fewer comrades he reports was touching and full of the spirit of the old South.

GEORGE HAWKINS TAKES NEW DUTIES

George Hawkins, former city detective and sheriff Tuesday assumed his duties as special investigator for the county and district attorney offices. He was recently employed in that capacity by the city council and county commissioners' court.

Civic League Gets Flying Start at Tuesday Luncheon

Tries Out Luncheon Plan Used Successfully by Men's Clubs; Slogan for 1,000 Members for Coming Year.

With its initial trial of the luncheon-social-business order which business men of Wichita Falls have found so successful for several years, the Civic League, Tuesday noon at the Kemp hotel took a flying start for the coming year's work, with a meeting that was successful in every manner. More than 200 were present, many new members were secured, and the enthusiastic reception of the plans of the different departments for the coming year bespoke a season of accomplishment.

Mrs. Kemp presided for the first time since her election to office, and there was a full board representation, for the executive meeting preceeding the luncheon, and for the luncheon.

The slogan, "One thousand members for 1922" and the first sounding of the "Pay Your Poll Tax" campaign cry, formed keynotes of the meeting, with various ambitious and highly interesting reports and plans form the department chairman as additional high lights.

Mrs. T. B. Smock, former president and Mrs. Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald were the two speakers, Mrs. Smock explaining the league's work with the department divisions, and Mrs. Fitzgerald expressing, after a short summary of the changing position of women in the world, her pleasure at the opportunity for membership in the Civic League.

Mrs. Kemp's introduction of Mrs. Smock was the occasion for a bit of repartee, Mrs. Smock querying her as to just what she meant by "old president," to which Mrs. Kemp replied that on a former occasion Mrs. Smock had called her "emeritus."

Mrs. Smock Talks.

Mrs. Smock took the family as a means of comparison to explain the Civic League's functioning. The city council, she said, she would place in the relation of father, and would designate it in her talk as "pa," and the Civic League as the mother, henceforth called "ma." In a semi-humorous vein, but nevertheless making every point doubly clear, she outlined the work of the various departments, how that when the head of the house was so busy with his job of caring for the family in a material way, it behooved the maternal parent to see to the health, the morals, the entertainment, and the home environment of the family. The city beautiful department corresponded to the home beautifying instinct, which led women to make their homes attractive, first, and then to desire to make their city attractive.

The sanitation department was an expression of the desire to keep the home clean and safe for the children, spread out to take in the municipal family. The public affairs department took a motherly interest in the big family, in safeguarding their morals, and correcting and helping when the laws of society were broken. The market committee cares for the food needs of the family, the extension department keeps the family from becoming too selfish, spreading their good things out to others, the entertainment department gave the family good times. And the citizenship department helps educate "ma" into the use of her newly acquired franchise, and to keep tab on "pa" and "the children" in their exercise of franchise.

"Sometimes, you know," she said, "the children are able to 'put it over pa' but they have a hard time getting by ma."

Mrs. Fitzgerald, who has recently moved to Wichita Falls, spoke of her pleasure in being a part of the growing city, and pledged her activity in any way.

Tells of Campaign

Bringing in a personal touch, Mrs. Fitzgerald told of a campaign in which she worked as publicity director under J. A. Kemp, the fight for the conservation and reclamation amendment to the constitution, which made the Big Wichita Irrigation project possible.

"I have never served under a greater general," she said, "and I look forward with great and pleasurable anticipation to serving under the wife of that great general."

Mrs. Kemp in opening the program, gave a few words of greeting. "I view this gathering with both intimidation and encouragement," she said. "Intimidation for fear that the thing I have undertaken will prove too large, and encouragement for the prospects of such success as will be possible, with this support."

She introduced the chairman of the departments and the officers making their reports, making an interesting comment on each report, or each plan.

Reader Reports

Mrs. W. S. Curlee, chairman of the City Beautiful department, told of the plants for the coming year, particularly stressing the planting of trees along the paved highways of the county, and encouraging the beautifying of the residence sections by the individual homes.

Mrs. M. H. Glover, chairman of the sanitation department occasioned considerable amusement when she announced that this department was being used as "the goat" by numerous housewives. "They call and say they don't want to report their neighbors, for fear of making them mad, so they ask us to do it, and we do." The city sanitary department's co-operation was mentioned appreciatively by Mrs. Glover.

The poll tax payment campaign was given its first mention by Mrs. D. O. Long, chairman of the study department, in her report on tasks accomplished and tasks set for further work.

Mrs. L. W. Perham, public affairs chairman, included in her report an account of the activities in assisting various welfare organizations, and in independent activities.

The splendid organization of the North Side Civic League, and it's accomplishments during the year featured the report of Mrs. N. O. Monroe, chairman of extension work. Mrs. Monroe also told of the civic organization among the negro women; and it's achievements.

Mrs. J. M. Isbell, chairman of membership, reported 600 members, exclusive of the newly acquired members, spread the slogan, "One Thousand Members for 1922," and cordially invited all those present not members to join.

Enlarged plans for the open air market, conducted by the truck growers, under the auspices of the Civic League, were discussed briefly by the chairman of the market committee, Mrs. H. S. Crawford. Wider possibilities for the truck growers, and a fresher supply of food, and all without conflicting with the retail merchants, resulted from the market even on a small scale, Mrs. Crawford stated.

Makes Report for Self

The entertainment department chairman, Mrs. B. Frank Johnson, was excused from making a report, the president pointing out that the beautifully arranged luncheon, and the splendid attendance constituted Mrs. Johnson's "report."

The reports of the secretary, Mrs. Lilian Montgomery, and the treasurer, Mrs. R. E. Shepherd, were read and accepted.

Mrs. Kemp closed the department reports with an appeal of co-operation and assistance for the Y. W. C. A., sketching briefly some of its accomplishments in the past. Her call for volunteer workers was generously responded to.

Mrs. Kemp was elected delegate to the State Federation of Women's Clubs, to meet this month in Fort Worth and Mrs. Smock was elected alternate, Mrs. Bentley Bacon taking the chair to present this motion. The date of the election was voted changed from January to October, to conform to the state year calendar.

Music Program

The brief, but very enjoyable musical program emphasized the social phase. The luncheon was opened with the first verse of "The Star Spangled Banner," with Mrs. F. R. Collard at the piano.

The first course was accompanied with a string trio, Messrs. Bebb, Ellis and Wilson.

Miss Louise Clark, harpist, delighted her audience with a brilliantly played "Mazurka" on her gilded instrument, and responded to the demand for encore with "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny." Miss Clark's contribution to the program was appreciated both for its novelty and for its artistry of rendition.

Mrs. T. C. Brownell, another recent addition to the musical life of the city, was the vocalist of the day. Her program number was a del Riego arrangement of "A Castilian Lament" and she responded with an encore number. Mrs. Collard played her accompaniment.

Decorations Effective

Each of the twenty-four tables was decorated with flowers, and several League members took advantage of the opportunity offered to entertain several guests. One of the largest of these parties was that of Mrs. L. B. Haines.

The flowers were taken from the tables at the close of the luncheon, to the hospitals, the gift of the forty-eight named "hostesses" who assisted Mrs. Johnson and her committee in the entertainment.

Women's Club Plans Banquet

Plans for a banquet to be given on Tuesday evening, November 15 with local business men and members of the cast who took part in the club play, "Springtime" as guests, were outlined by Miss Frances Brooks chairman of the social committee and afterwards discussed at the business session of the Business Women's club Tuesday evening.

A group of the members also decided to form a basketball team, and money to finance the undertaking to be furnished from the club treasury.

A feature of the meeting was the reading of articles written by the members for the weekly prizes given by the Railey Printing Company and the Wilford Harrison Drug Company.

Miss Ruth Broom was awarded the Railey Printing Company prize, for writing the best article on good suggestions for the social entertainment of the club.

Miss Mary Hanks won the other given for the new member who wrote the best article on "Why I Joined the Business Women's Club."

FIVE MORE JOIN CHURCH AT REVIVAL

Five additions to the church, three by letter and two by confession of faith were made Tuesday evening at the First Christian church, following a powerful sermon from the subjete, "Almost Persuaded to Be a Christian," preached by the Rev. James T. McKissick. The five additions Tuesday evening makes a total of fifty-two additions to the church since the evangelistic services were commenced ten days ago.

The text of the evening was divided into four leads by the speaker, as follows:

Almost—the station just short of obedience.

Persuaded—the power of the spoken word.

To be—man's part in the plan of salvation.

Christian—the name.

Emphasizing his address with texts from the Word of God, Dr. McKissick quoted some fifty passages of scripture at various intervals.

The song service for the evening was directed by R. E. Shepherd, who also sang a solo.

"Why Halt Between Two Opinions" is announced as the subject for Dr. McKissick's sermon Wednesday evening.

Some Chest-Nuts

One or two stories have been told of hustling American tourists "seeing the world." Here's another:

A tourist dashed up to the British museum in a taxicab, ran up the steps, and said to the man in uniform at the door:

"Still got the Elgin marbles?"

"Yes, sir; of course, sir," replied the attendant.

"All right. Now about the Assyrian-winged bulls near the lunchroom."

"They're still there, sir."

"German air-raiders during the war didn't damage your fine mummy display upstairs, I hope?"

"No, sir; not at all, sir. But won't you step inside, and look around for yourself, sir?"

"No, thanks. I'll just take them as per catalogue," answered the tourist. "You see, I've got St. Paul's, Westminster Abbey, the Tower, the South Kensington Museum, the Wallace collection to do this morning, before I catch the Oxford train, give the college the once over and catch a connection with the Stratford express so as to see Shakespeare's house before dinner."

An absent-minded professor invited a number of learned Scotsmen to visit some interesting ruins in his neighborhood, and to do honor to his guests he donned Highland dress for the occasion.

There was to be a luncheon in a large marquee on the lawn, and when the master of the house appeared in all the glory of the kilt, the astonishment of Jane, the housemaid, was great.

Thinking her master was in one of his vacant moods, she rushed upstairs, and in a few minutes reappeared on the lawn with a pair of the professor's best trousers.

She blushed as she said, pointing to the bare knees of the astonished Scot: "Please, sir, you've forgotten these."

Charles Scott, safety expert, delivered an address in Baltimore recently, when, by a coincidence, the entertainment feature which preceded his talk was an "impalement act by a couple of vaudeville performers." In that connection Scott recalled the following story:

"An impalement act expert of the early days used as his assistant a beautiful young woman, who posed fearlessly against a wooden background while the 'artist' outlined her figure with knives, spears and battle-axes. At the finish of the act the girl would step smilingly from her framework of cutlery and bow to the audience. On one occasion, however, when the girl became ill, the man had to scour the town for some one to take her place, and the only one he could find with nerve enough was a girl who was homely enough to curdle milk by looking at it. When the man poised the first knife, took careful aim and sent it hurtling toward the board, a gruff voice in the gallery was heard to exclaim: 'Gosh If he ain't missed her.'"

"I want to advertise for a man," said a woman approaching the advertisement counter in the newspaper office. "I want a man to carry coal in the winter, shovel snow, mow the lawn in summer, tend the flowers, mind the children, wash dishes, sweep the front porch, run errands, and all that kind of work—in short, I want a man who will always be around the place and can be called upon for any kind of hard work. He must be sober and reliable, of good appearance, not over 30—"

"Pardon, madam," said the clerk, "we cannot accept matrimonial advertisements."

Manna Still Falls

Manna is found now in the regions of Upper Mesopotamia and Kurdistan and along the Persian frontier.

It falls in the form of dew during September, October and November, and lodges upon the leaves of oak trees. It hardens immediately and assumes the form of a grain.

Early in the morning it is gathered by spreading sheets beneath th trees, which are shaken, and the manna is then collected and stored for winter, to be used as a food or shipped to Bagdad for sale in the bazaar.

The manna falls on other vegetation, including grass, but all of it is lost except that gathered from the oak leaves. It is sweet and is eaten by the natives as a substitue for sugar or honey.

Pundita Ramabai, a widow, is known as the pioneer uplift worker in India.

SUGAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—There was more activity in the local raw sugar market today, but no change in quotations which range from 4.08 to 5.11 for centrifugal. The business was all through the committee, including 95,000 bags to local refiners and 19,000 bags to Savannah at 2 1-2 cents, cost and freight, equal to 4.11 for centrifugal.

The raw sugar futures market was more active and prices were weak under scattered liquidation and selling by Wall street and commission houses, prompted by prospects for increased arrivals from Cuba. Closing prices were six to ten points net lower. December 2.48; March 2.31; May 2.40; July 2.48.

The refined market was unchanged at 5.20 to 5.30 for fine granulated. There was a moderate inquiry but the demand was again confined to prompt shipments only.

Refined futures were nominal and unchanged, with no transactions reported. Closing bids: December 5.40; March and May 5.35.

COFFEE

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Early irregularity was followed by renewed strength in coffee futures today with all more active positions making new ground for the movement. The opening was 3 points higher to 11 points lower with December soon selling off from 8.55 to 8.50. December sold up to 8.70. July rallied from 8.08 to 8.30 compared with 8.19 at the close of the previous day and the market closed at net advances of 9 to 21 points. Sales were estimated at about 103,000 bags. December 8.70; January 8.55; March 8.33; May 8.23; July 8.30; September 8.25.

Spot coffee quiet; Rio 7's 8 7-8 to 9 cents; Santos fours 11 3-4 to 12 3-4.

CHICAGO PRODUCE

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Butter lower; creamery extras 43c; eggs higher, receipts 7,450 cases; ordinary firsts 43@46c. Poultry alive, higher; fowls 14@21½c; springs 20½c; turkeys 29c; roosters 15c.

Stocks

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Changes occurring in today's moderately broad but irregular stock market again were influenced almost entirely by adverse technical tendencies and bearish professional operations. Ails held their recent lead as the most active issues but speculation in that group became increasingly confusing on the more unstable course of Mexican petroleum and prominent domestic shares. Dealings in rails were relatively nominal, industrials, steels, motors and affiliated types were under intermittent pressure to the accompaniment of lower price schedules actual or prospective diminished earnings.

Tobaccos reacted on rumors of a "trade war" and further losses among food, chemical and rubber and several of the mail order and merchandising specialties were traceable to similar causes, Sears Roebuck's smaller October sales being a case in point. Mixed quotations ruled at the close, sales amounting to 625,000 shares.

Considering the heavy transfer of funds incidental to November payments, the money market was comparatively easy. The 5 1-2 per cent opening rate eased to 5 per cent at midday and held. Foreign exchanges again reacted, the slight setback in sterling being associated with the Irish situation. Reaction in continental remittances were moderate. Bonds were featureless. Total sales, par value, $13,850,000.

Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Wheat prices collapsed today to new low records for 1921. The break followed persistent liquidation in a market that was without any robust support. There was a nervous finish, 5 1-8c to 6c net lower, with December 1.02 to 1.02 1-4 and May 1.06 7-8 to 1.07 1-4. Corn lost 1 3-4@1 7-8 to 2 1-2c and oats 1 1-4 to 1 3-8c. In provisions the outcome ranged from 17c decline to a rise of 2 1-2c.

Bearish sentiment which predominated from the outset in the wheat trade received fresh impetus on account of estimates from British sources that the world's crop total was 88,000,000 bushels larger than a year ago. Another depressing factor was announcement that stocks of grain afloat in Buffalo harbor would hereafter be included in the United States visible supply figures. No acute weakness, however, developed until mid-day when attention was directed to reports that congestion of railroad and port facilities at Galveston had tied up much grain for which the country owners were unable to get their money very rapidly. Conditions at New Orleans were also reported as embarrassing with 1,200 cars of grain on track there unloaded. Under such circumstances holders liquidated freely and in the final hour the descent of values proved swift. Exporters were said to have taken advantage of the six cent drop which occurred, but the market made no important rally and the amount of purchasing for Europe could only be guessed.

Corn and oats went down grade with wheat. Oats reached the lowest level this season and corn nearly so.

Propositions were bearishly affected by setbacks in hog values as well as in grain.

Cotton

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The cotton market was very unsettled today but a break below the 18c level brought in an improved demand and after selling off to 17.85 for January there were rallies of 40 or 50 points with that delivery closing at 18.27. The general market closed strong at a net advance of 5 to 15 points.

An opening advance of 2 to 9 points was not a full response to relatively firm cables and after some irregularity, the market became very weak during midday under Southern and local selling. Some stop orders were uncovered on the decline which carried all active positions into new low ground for the movement with December selling at 17.92 and March at 17.82 or about 125 to 150 points below best prices touched on last week's ginning figures. This carried the market back to nearly the lowest level of last month on more active positions, and below the 18c level for January there was a decided increase of trade buying. This started a covering movement which became very active in the last half hour, sending some of the latter deliveries into new high ground for the day, with May selling at 18.00. December closed at 18.37 and March at 18.22. Reports of a continued slack spot demand seemed to be partly responsible for the midday break, but except for some selling orders from the Atlantic, there was not a great deal of pressure from the South. Private cables reported an early decline in Liverpool in response to the weakness of American markets yesterday, followed by rallies on covering and trade buying. Owing to the holiday in New Orleans, there was not much business from that source.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Aside from November, which held steady, cottonseed oil responded to scattered local selling on the heaviness displayed in other commodity markets and dullness in trade demand. November closed unchanged and later deliveries 12 to 16 points net lower. Sales 24,300 barrels. Tenders 9.00 barrel. Price 7.25 bid; prime summer yellow spot 8.25@8.75; December 8.70; March 9.06; May 9.26, all bid.

Livestock

FORT WORTH, Nov. 1.—Generally steady prices were paid for cattle today, but the market was slow on cows. Steers met with a fairly good demand, the range of the market being from $2.50 to $5.65. Fat cows were barely steady with Monday's decline of 25 to 40c, but the canner trade was fairly active and somewhat stronger, good canners ranging up to $2.25. Calves were disposed of readily on a strong to higher basis. No good light calves arrived, but good heavies made $6 to $6.25. Receipts amounted to 3,000 head of cattle and 3,500 calves.

Early bids on hogs were around 10 to 15c lower through sympathy with losses at other centers, but when sales were made they looked steady to 10c lower only. Two cars brought $7.75 and other deals were within a range of $7.25 to $7.60. Pigs sold fully steady at $7.50 to $7.75. Hog receipts reached only 500 head.

Fresh receipts of sheep amounted to 25 head, but a few holdovers were available in addition. The market was active and steady. Ewes reached $4, wethers brought $4.50 and goats sold at $1.75. Quotations:

ACTOR'S DEPOSITION IN ARBUCKLE CASE FAVORS DEFENDANT

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Lowell Sherman, motion picture actor and a guest at the party in the San Francisco hotel apartment of Fatty Arbuckle, which preceded the death of Virginia Rappe, another guest, today made a sworn statement denying that Arbuckle at any time was in a room alone with the girl. Arbuckle now is awaiting trial on a manslaughter charge.

Sherman declared that Miss Rappe complained of being ill and was carried into Arbuckle's room and that Arbuckle was in the room only when others were present.

TRIAL OF BURCH FOR MURDER OF KENNEDY PASSED TO MONDAY

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—The case of Arthur C. Burch, charged with the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, was continued today until next Monday to give the district attorney's office time to prepare affidavits to combat an application for a trial to test Burch's sanity, made by defense attorneys. The case of Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain, indicted jointly with Burch, was continued to the same time.

Mrs. Obenchain in a statement to the press appealed to "the citizens of Los Angeles" not to "prejudge" her. She declared she knew of "no facts or circumstances which would in my opinion prove Arthur C. Burch guilty," and called upon Burch to take the stand and tell the truth if he had any information or evidence "which tends to show me guilty." She added "there is no reason why Arthur Burch and I should break, fall out or testify against each other."

SEA-WATER AS MEDICINE.

A London business firm is carrying on a profitable trade—in sea-water!

Trawlers are sent regularly from London to the Dogger Bank to collect sea-water for London hospitals and doctors.

As a natural medicine for nasal troubles and infantile cholera this new remedy is in great demand; it is also used for injections for rheumatism.

Specially fitted out vessels are used to collect the Dogger Bank sea-water, which is remarkably free from contamination. After the water is collected it is sealed and kept in ice until its arrival in port.

TRIA LOF OKLAHOMA BANDIT NEARING CLOSE

By Associated Press.

PINE BLUFF, Ark., Nov. 1.—The case of Tom Slaughter, Oklahoma bandit, on a charge of having murdered Bliss Adkisson, a trusty guard, when Slaughter attempted to escape from the state farm at Tucker, September 18, was expected to go to the jury late today, according to attorneys for the defense. The state rested at 10 a. m. and the defense had the case since court recessed at noon.

A dozen deputy sheriffs are on duty in the court and armed guards patrol the court house grounds. The defense this morning attempted to show that Adkisson was killed by shots fired by guards and not by Slaughter.

Clark to Talk To Wichita Club On "The Outlook"

C. H. Clark, who, as is characteristic with practically all of the oil fraternity, is an optimist, will talk to the members of the Wichita club today, his subject being the outlook, according to an announcement by A. H. Britain, president of the club, Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Clark is to speak in place of Frank Kell, originally scheduled, who will be away from the city.

Members of the Wichita club who were apprised of the announcement of Mr. Clark's impending address Tuesday expressed considerable anticipation toward the talk, as Mr. Clark on the occasion of the last annual meeting established for himself not only a reputation as an optimist, and keen thinking business man, but as a more than ordinary humorist and poet highly entertaining after dinner speaker.

Permanent Health Clinic for Negro Children Opened

With the assistance of F. R. Barnwell, representative of the Public Health association, the Wichita County Red Cross organization inaugurated the health clinic for negro children of Wichita Falls on Monday. The health clinic has now become established for negroes as well as white children, Red Cross officials announced Tuesday, and will be continued monthly.

Sixty children were examined on Monday, their records kept on score cards, so that their future advancement may be checked. Dr. O. W. Wilson, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, and Dr. H. H. Means, dentist, assisted in the examinations, two negro physicians, Drs. King and Welch making the general examination. The Red Cross home nursing service corps assisted the physicians in the examinations.

The children averaged in fair condition, according to reports, with less prevalence of underweight than is reported from the white children's clinics. Much interest was manifested in the work by the school teachers, and the mothers, it is stated, and it is felt that the permanent institution of the health work will be met with much success.

Barnwell's visit to Wichita Falls covered Sunday and Monday and was filled with engagements with the negro population. Sunday he gave a lecture at the A. M. E. Church, illustrated with stereoptican slides. Monday in addition to the clinic he talked to the school children of the Booker T. Washington school, as well as conferring with members of the Social Civic League, the negro women's organization which operates as a mothers' club, and as a branch of the Civic League.

Economy measures announced last week by Police Commissioner Fitts, following a call by Finance Commissioner Shepherd for a reduction in expense budgets in which he especially mentioned the police department, were put into effect Tuesday. The members who were announced as released were, as given Sunday by the Record News. Mrs. S. B. Crozier, Y. W. C. A. secretary and travelers aid, who tendered her resignation a week or two ago; George Hawkins, who Tuesday accepted the new city-county position of special investigator; and W. T. Bennett and M. T. Autoist Deserts Machine When It Sticks in Sand

Police were searching Tuesday for what they declare is the 'most indifferent' Ford owner yet encountered.

According to City Detective Bob Hembree, who was in charge of the investigation, a man approached the home of Jerome Hoepfner, 2 1-2 miles from Wichita Falls on the Burkburnett road, late Monday night and told him he could have a Ford automobile if he would pull it out of a sand bed.

Accordingly, Tuesday morning, Mr. Hoepfner pulled the car out of the sand, but notified police and asked that they locate the owner.

The machine, which had a tool pusher body on it, was said to have a register number belonging to F. G. Dennis of Burkburnett.

The recovery of two machines stolen Monday night was also reported Tuesday at the police station, both cars indicating they had been used by joy riders. They were found on Maple street.

Two thefts by auto strippers were reported Tuesday. A casing and rim was reported stolen from a large touring car belonging to J. F. Davis of Electra and a casing was reported stolen from C. H. Evans, 1826 Lucille street.
