Soviet statement 'a confirmation'

Plans to bolster forces revealed

MOSCOW (AP) — President Yuri V. Andropov says the Soviet Union will enlarge its nuclear arsenal at home, in Eastern Europe and at sea in response to NATO'S deployment of new U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

Most Western leaders said Andropov's statement, carried Thursday by the official Soviet news agency Tass, was little more than a confirmation of long-standing Soviet plans.

However, it was the first time Andropov publicly had disclosed new plans to bolster Soviet maritime nuclear forces. Navy sources in Washington have said several Soviet submarines armed with nuclear weapons are assigned to positions several hundred miles off the east and west U.S. coasts.

In Brussels, U.S. arms negotiator Paul Nitze today called the Kremlin's cutoff of talks a regrettable hardening of the Soviet position.But he said he regretted even more the Soviet decision to increase the numbers and bases of SS-20 nuclear missiles as a response to the new U.S. missiles.

In Bonn, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and French President Francois Mitterrand appealed to the Soviet Union to return to the Geneva talks. The leaders had just concluded a two-day summit in the West German capital.

East German Communist Party chief Erich Honecker called for continuation of the East-West "political dialogue" despite the breakdown of the Geneva talks. Speaking about the acceleration of missile deployment in his country, Honecker said, "As a matter of course, these measures do not cause joy in our country. But they were necessary to foil military supremacy by the United States."

Wired for arrival

Reagan makes low-key reply

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, dismayed by Moscow's announcement of retaliation against the United States for deploying new missiles in western Europe, is keeping his response low key in an apparent effort to prod the Soviets back to the bargaining table.

The Soviet Union has been threatening since March to respond to the new U.S. missiles in Europe with new deployments of its own close to the United States, but the questions of where and how remained unanswered.

On Thursday, Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov announced that the Soviet Union will increase its nuclear weapons at sea, at home and in Eastern Europe.

Reagan's muted reaction to the decision was made in a written statement issued soon after the Soviet news agency Tass relayed Andropov's statement.

"We can only be dismayed at this Soviet statement," said Reagan, who is spending a five-day vacation out of public view at his ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains.

He said Andropov's statement was "at sharp variance with the stated wish of the Soviet Union that an agreement be negotiated" to limit medium range nuclear weapons in Europe.

"While we are dismayed, we are determined to renew our efforts to entirely do away with the land-based intermediate range nuclear missile systems," said the president. "We continue to seek negotiations in good faith."

Reagan was informed of Andropov's statement in a telephone call from his national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, according to deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Andropov said the Soviet Union considers it impossible to continue negotiating with the United States in Geneva because of NATO's decision to deploy U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in western Europe.

In March, Georgi Arbatov, director of the Soviet U.S.A.-Canada Institute, said in an interview in Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, that the United States and Soviet Union were roughly equal in missiles and should stay that way, and if the United States put new weapons in Europe "for the sake of this equality we would have not only to add to our missiles in Europe but also deploy them near American borders."

After the Soviets walked out of the talks to limit intermediate range nuclear forces on Wednesday, the president optimistically told reporters he believed the Soviets would return to the bargaining table "because I think they must be aware, as much as we are, that there cannot and must not be a nuclear confrontation in the world by the only two nations that truly have the great destructive capability."

Cities seeking Soviet partners

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — About 800 cities and towns across the United States have mailed "community portraits" to selected cities in the Soviet Union, hoping to help thaw frosty relations between the two superpowers.

The Portland-based Ground Zero Pairing Project is coordinating the effort, aimed at lessening the chances of a nuclear war. "Make the first strike a knock on the door" is its slogan.

Packages were mailed this week to Soviet communities selected for geography, population and economic characteristics similar to the cities sending the "portraits," said Earl Molander, executive director of the project.

Each city's portrait contains items intended to show the Soviets what the American community is like, Molander said. They include demographic data, photos and books describing the city, and messages from residents, including children.

"I'm sure many people are thinking, 'My, what a naive exercise,'" said Freda Tarbell, a member of the Ground Zero chapter in Erie, Pa., which sent information and photographs to Poltava in the Ukraine. Poltava is the site of Peter the Great's 1709 victory over Charles XII of Sweden, a battle that established Russia as a European power.

"But," she added, "we don't believe this is an exercise in naivete at all. We feel the governments have not been effective in handling the nuclear issue at all, so perhaps we can approach it on another plane."

In Tucson, Ariz., which sent letters and information to its Russian sister city, Novokuinetsk, organizer Roger Hagglund said, "It's about time we recognize each other as brothers and sisters."

"We believe that if we can establish extensive community-to-community communication and exchange, we will have made a major contribution to reducing the polarization between the United States and Soviet Union that seems to be the trend these days," Molander said Thursday.

He said he has contacted a Soviet official in Washington, whom he described as "supportive" of the idea. But organizers remain unsure how the packages will be received by the mayors and councils of the Soviet cities.

Construction parks tree in city street

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Construction at a city park left the Jaycees without a home for their 50-foot Christmas tree, but some intrepid members of the civic organization will light the tree tonight anyway — in Main Street.

The park that was the site of the Jaycees' Douglas fir Christmas tree for 26 years has been ravaged by construction this year.

The thought of Fort Worth foregoing tradition, however, was too painful for Dee Hardin, a Jaycee and head of operations for the city's parks and recreation department.

"I've got five girls and I know what Christmas means," he said.

And it meant finding another place to put up the tree.

"I combed the city," he said. "I looked at 10 parks close to downtown. Everyone had some kind of construction going on. Industry is taking over."

Hardin was ready to scout the stockyards for a suitable site and give up on downtown when a group of business leaders suggested putting the tree on Main Street.

"We had major problems to overcome," he said. "We had to see if we could get the street blocked off, then we had to figure how to keep a 50-foot tree standing and how to put a fence around it."

The Jaycees have been hauling giant Douglas firs from New Mexico to Burnett Park for the past 26 years. But this year the park is torn up from nearby erection of skyscrapers and parking structures.

In Burnett Park, "we had a big hole in the ground we just stuck it in," Hardin said.

Hardin, who says he's not an engineer, drew a sketch of a Christmas tree stand similar to those used in homes and asked Bass Brothers Enterprises to build it. For the fence, he filled nine 55-gallon drums with water, painted them red and used them as decorative fence posts.

"It anyone has a better idea, I'd like to hear it," he said.

A solid wood fence was installed around the stand and the fire department helped string the lights last weekend.

The tree will be lighted this evening, after a parade through downtown.

"I've only heard one or two people say it's a shame we had to break a tradition,' Hardin said. "But I feel like we're starting a new tradition. Burnett Park is a little out of the way. Where the tree is now, it will receive all the downtown traffic. With the courthouse in the background, it's really beautiful."

He said the city plans to plant a permanent Christmas tree in Burnett Park after the construction site is cleared, but Jaycees, who raised $3,000 to put up the Main Stree tree, will continue to do so as long as the city allows it.

PLO factions reach agreement

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — PLO mutineers and loyalists reached agreement today on a plan to end their three-week-old battle and evacuate both forces from the Tripoli area within two weeks, the foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia and Syria announced.

There was no immediate confirmation by Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat or his opponents of the announcement, which came shortly after loyalists and Syrian-backed guerrilla mutineers clashed with mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and machineguns in this northern Lebanese port.

The agreement was announced at a joint news conference in Damascus by Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud al-Faisal and his Syrian counterpart, Abdul-Halim Khaddam.

The accord, read to reporters by Khaddam, calls for a permanent cease-fire in and around Tripoli, a negotiated settlement of the PLO's internal differences and departure of all Palestinian fighters from the Tripoli area.

Prior to the announcement, there was a 90-minute exchange of mortar and machine gun fire between the rival forces in Tripoli which Arafat's aides described as "probing attacks" by the rebels to test loyalist defenses in the city.

Shells fell in a seaside shantytown and the Azmi commercial district during the exchanges. One or two shells landed in the city center and the harbor.

Arafat had been reported ready to bow to the rebels' demands and leave his last Middle East stronghold to avert a bloodbath, provided he got sufficient guarantees for the safety of loyalists and local militia allies he would leave behind.

In Beirut, 50 miles south of Tripoli,warplanes flew low runs over the city early today as Lebanese troops and Shiite Moslem militiamen battled near the U.S. Marine base at the international airport.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said three shots were fired into the Marine base but caused no casualties. He said the shooting stopped when Marines fired a few rounds in return.

Asked whether the incoming rounds were deliberately aimed at the Marines, Jordan said: "They were probably fired in their direction."

White House security tightened

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move that appeared to be designed to foil any Beirut-style bombing, the Secret Service tightened security around the White House during the Thanksgiving holiday by parking seven sand-laden dump trucks at five metal-gate entrances.

White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the move was "not in response to a specific threat," but security also was tightened at the State Department six blocks away, where spokeswoman Anita Stockman said authorities were reacting to "possible bomb threats."

President Reagan and his family were at Reagan's ranch in Santa Barbara, Calif., for a five-day Thanksgiving vacation, ending Sunday.

At the State Department, five entrances were blocked by cars or vans and police cars blocked part of a street that leads to a sixth. Ms. Stockman said "extra security has been taken and will be in effect until we can evaluate this possible or potential threat." The State Department security measures were implemented Wednesday, while the trucks were moved around the White House on Thursday.

The parked trucks at the entrances to the White House grounds were the latest episode in a series of increasingly stringent security measures prompted by a late-night bomb blast at the Capitol on Nov. 7 and the attack on the Marine headquarters in Beirut. The Oct. 23 Beirut bombing, which killed 239 servicemen, occurred when a dynamite-laden truck with a suicide driver at the wheel rammed the Marine barracks.

Last week, in reaction to the Capitol bombing, guards began to use dogs to sniff all cars and trucks entering the White House grounds for explosives. Guards also searched the handbags and briefcases carried by reporters, normally exempt from such measures, in what was described as a spot check.

On Thursday, three dump trucks were parked at the southwest gate across the entrance to the closed-off street separating the White House from the Old Executive Office building next door. Those trucks were outside the fence surrounding the White House.

Another truck was parked on that same street inside the northwest gate; two more were inside gates leading off 17th Street into the Old Executive Office Building and a seventh was on East Executive Avenue, a public walkway on the other side of the building separating the White House from the Treasury.

All the lights on the south lawn of the White House were lighted, which is unusual when the mansion is not in use. A loud buzzer from inside the compound could be heard Thursday afternoon, but later was silent.

The guard dogs could be seen patrolling and sniffing at bushes.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Snow from the Southwest to the western Plains is forecast through Saturday by the National Weather Service. Flurries over the northern Rockies, cold weather in the northern Plains and Great Lakes and mild temperatures elsewhere also are expected.

Cold weekend weather forecast

Family and friends may prove to be the sole source of warmth in the Permian Basin for the remainder of the Thanksgiving weekend.

Partly cloudy skies, cool temperatures and a chance of rain are expected through Sunday, according to an unhappy cold-sufferer from the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Lows tonight should dip into the mid 40s, accompanied by southerly winds of 10 to 15 mph. Saturday's forecast calls for a 30 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms and cooler temperatures. Highs in the middle 60s and gusty winds from the southwest at 15 to 25 mph are expected.

The rest of the weekend will be partly cloudy and cool with a chance of showers or thunderstorms.

The good news is it could be worse. In 1938 the overnight low was a frosty 18 degrees, while today's was nearly twice that — 35 degrees.

The high Thanksgiving Day reached 56, 27 degrees cooler than the record 83 set in 1965.

More snow clogs western states

Northeast gets first taste of winter weather

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

The second snowstorm of Thanksgiving week blocked roads through the mountains of the West today with more than 2 feet of new snow in places while some big cities of the Northeast got their first taste of snowy weather this season.

The death toll rose to 27 in a week of icy weather from the Rockies to the Great Lakes.

In Washington, D.C., roads and bridges were slick as snow fell across northern Virginia and Maryland and eastern Pennsylvania into the Catskills of New York today. While up to 4 inches fell in the mountains, little or no accumulations were reported in most areas.

Much of the East Coast was buffeted with 50-mph winds and heavy rains.

A mixture of snow, sleet and rain made roads slick and slowed traffic in New York City.

Beckley, W.Va., Bradford, Pa., and the New York towns of Binghamton and Utica all reported 2 inches of snow.

The second storm out of the Gulf of Alaska since last Sunday had deposited more than 29 inches of new snow in a Chama area of New Mexico in the 24 hours ending at 5 a.m. MST. About 19 inches of new snow covered Highway 50 at the southern end of the Lake Tahoe Basin in Nevada by this morning.

In Utah, the Park City area had been hit with 16 inches of blowing and drifting snow by this morning and up to 2 more feet were expected in the higher mountains.

Heavy snow also was falling in the mountains of Arizona, where accumulations of up to a foot were expected.

Winter storm warmings were in effect for most of the plateau regions from southeastern Idaho to northern Arizona and across the Rockies of Montana and Colorado. Travelers advisories covered the Sierra Nevada, western Idaho and most of Wyoming.

Temperatures hovered around zero in parts of North Dakota and Minnesota.

Nearly 4 inches of rain soaked the San Francisco Bay area Thursday, unleashing a mudslide that blocked U.S. 50 near Placerville for several hours. The moisture turned to snow as winds gusted to 70 mph in the mountains, causing blizzard conditions at Alpine Meadows ski resort and dropping half a foot of snow at Norden, 45 miles northwest of Lake Tahoe.

About 130,000 people in western Washington — many with half-roasted Thanksgiving turkeys still in the oven — lost power Thursday morning as the new storm blew in and drenched the West as far inland as Idaho, where visibility was down to 100 feet in mixed rain and snow.

Electricity was restored within several hours to 63,000 people in the Seattle area, but 57,000 others were still without power early today. A spokesman for the Snohomish Public Utility District, where 10,000 outages were reported, said "it could be a couple of days before this is taken care of."

While the new storm "doesn't have quite as big a windup" as the system that howled out of the Rockies last Sunday, "it's still a good strong cold front that will bring snow and wind to the Plateau and Rockies today," said meteorologist Nolan Duke at the National Weather Service's Severe Storm Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Duke said it was expected to spread from Montana to northern Arizona, covering territory still digging out from the earlier storm blamed for the deaths of 15 people on roads, 10 in small planes and two elderly Minnesota men who died Wednesday and Thursday shovelling snow.

The snow in Minnesota tapered off to flurries early Thursday, after dumping a record 19.7 inches on Duluth and 11.4 inches on Minneapolis and St. Paul.

There were "hundreds of cars in ditches," said a Minnesota State Patrol information officer. A 93-year-old man died after the car he was riding in was struck by a livestock tractor-trailer that spun on icy Minnesota Highway 22.

The new storm was raising wind speeds in the canyons of Utah, making travel dangerous for light aircraft, campers and vehicles towing trailers, said Duke.

Avalanches were a threat in Utah's mountains, where up to 2 feet of snow fell earlier this week. Two cross-country skiers were briefly buried at the Alta Ski Resort on Thursday before friends located them via signals from their emergency electronic beepers.

As the new storm blew in from the Pacific, the Coast Guard station at Charleston, Ore., reported gusts up to 80 mph. The four-member crew of a 74-foot fishing boat was rescued early Thursday off the Washington coast, about 10 miles west of Moclips, after their boat sank in high seas.

After the power outages Thursday, some residents on Bainbridge Island in Puget Sound loaded turkeys and Thanksgiving trimmings on ferries and traveled to the homes of friends in Seattle who still had power.

The Lewis County sheriff's office said several horses were injured when a barn collapsed in a gust, and the Evergreen Point floating bridge across Lake Washington connecting Seattle and its eastern suburbs was closed for most of the day.

Israel agrees to prisoner exchange

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli officials reluctantly made concessions to free six of their soldiers in exchange for 4,600 Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners, but they say Israel and the PLO remain bitter enemies.

"There is no change in our approach toward the murderers whose only desire is to sow destruction and panic and killing," Deputy Prime Minister David Levy said.

Israel accepted the Palestine Liberation Organization's conditions for the prisoner swap after more than a year of deadlocked negotiations through intermediaries. Israeli officials said there was no direct contact between Israeli diplomats and the guerrilla organization.

"I don't see any change or improvement" in Israeli-PLO relations, Defense Minister Moshe Arens said Thursday. He also denied the exchange deal included guarantees for PLO leader Yasser Arafat's safe passage from his embattled headquarters in the north Lebanese city of Tripoli.

Israel, meanwhile, is hoping to strike another bargain for the freedom of up to six Israeli soldiers it believes are still in captivity following its invasion of Lebanon last year.

"We still have bargaining cards which will make possible another agreement," Arens said, without elaboration.

A radical PLO faction, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, was quoted by Israeli newspapers as saying it would demand 2,250 guerrillas for the two Israelis it is holding.

Former Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir says the PFLP is holding a third Israeli, and Israel says Syria holds three more prisoners.

Israel still holds 290 Syrian soldiers captured during the Lebanon invasion who could be used as leverage for a POW exchange with Syria and the Syrian-backed PLO rebels. It also holds about 2,700 other Arabs convicted of security offenses.

The two-day prisoner exchange, assisted by France and the International Red Cross, ended Thursday when the six Israeli soldiers returned to a hero's welcome after 15 months in captivity, and three Air France jumbo jets flew 1,000 Palestinians, defiantly flashing victory signs, to the Algerian capital of Algiers.

The Palestinians were released from Israel's massive Ansar detention center in south Lebanon. About 3,500 more Palestinians and Lebanese freed from Ansar, along with other suspected guerrillas from smaller lockups in Sidon and Nabatiye, elected to stay with their families in Israeli-occupied south Lebanon.

The Israelis also freed 98 guerrillas from prisons in Israel, more than 50 of them serving life sentences for terrorist assaults, said Prisons Authorities spokesman Shimon Malka. These guerrillas flew with the other Palestinians to Algiers

In London, an Israeli official said in a British Broadcasting Corp. television interview that his government was unconcerned about the outcome of the fighting around Tripoli between forces loyal to Arafat and the Syrian-backed PLO rebels.

"I don't think it makes any basic difference for Israel who survives this war, whether Arafat or his rivals," said Ehud Olmert, a Likud coalition member of the Israeli Knesset's Defense and Foreign Affairs Committee.

The release of the Palestinian and Lebanese captives has been widely seen as a big boost for the sagging political and military fortunes of Arafat and his loyalists.

But Olmert commented: "He may benefit for a day or two but ultimately his problem is not, this time, with Israel but with his own people, and it appears as if most of the Palestinians reject Arafat...

"In order to recover his position, he will have to fight the Syrians and the Palestinians, and as we have said many times in the past, these people appear to be their own worst enemies."

Asked whether Israel was gambling by freeing so many Palestinian guerrillas to fight in the future, Olmert said: "There is a genuine danger. We are aware of it. We have already made certain arrangements in the south (of Lebanon) to face this future danger."

He did not elaborate.

Olmert added, however, that Palestinian organizations were in such disarray that many of the freed captives would find it impossible to reorganize "into an effective terrorist organization."

Some of the departing guerrillas vowed to return to Lebanon and fight the Israelis.

Brig. Gen. Amos Yaron, who helped negotiate the exchange, told a news conference Thursday, "It made me heartsore to see those terrorists boarding the Air France planes, because I know how much it cost us to get them to Ansar and to prison in Israel."

Turkeys arriving for late luncheons

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thousands of people who paid $15 for a Thanksgiving feast, then found the cupboard was bare, are getting their turkeys a little late.

A dozen charities stepped in Thursday to redeem certificates for the promised birds and trimmings. But only two of the groups were operating on the holiday, so those who could not afford dinner on their own had to postpone Thanksgiving until today.

The Ecumenical Coalition of Concerned Americans had promised $45 worth of food to 20,000 people who paid the donation, most through organizations or churches.

Donors got certificates, but only 6,000 turkeys were distributed when the coalition said it was broke and could offer only 7,000 $5 supermarket gift certificates.

"What a terrible way to spend Thanksgiving," said Sylvia Washington, 37, a divorced mother who was supposed to get one of the dinners through the Westminster Neighborhood Association.

Armando Ontiveros, a worker answering a special hotline for coalition certificate holders, said his group received about 650 calls by 4 p.m. Thursday. Bonnie Patton, who also answered the hotline, said most callers said they would redeem the vouchers today.

Coalition spokesman Robert Herstek said earlier this week $300,000 was collected and each person who paid $15 was to receive a turkey, dressing, bread, gravy, vegetables and side dishes such as cranberries and yams.

On Tuesday, he said, the money was gone.

"What can I say? We don't have the food and we don't have the money. I'm very sorry it turned out this way," he said.

Senior Assistant Attorney General Herschel Elkins confirmed Wednesday his office was investigating the coalition, and spokesman Al Albergate said the district attorney's office has been investigating it since Oct. 7.

Russell Lee founded the group in 1977 as a food distribution program in which the needy could pay $11 "membership fees" — plus $15 for Thanksgiving — to cover purchase of food in mass quantities from wholesalers.

The coalition pledged to "eliminate hunger" in Los Angeles County by next summer, and for a time won the backing of several celebrities.

On Nov. 11, the county Department of Social Services banned the group from soliciting contributions.

U.S. may be ceding newsmens' rights

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
European Correspondent, The Hearst Newspapers

PARIS — Without intending it, the U.S. government may be ceding to Third World and Soviet demands for a "New World Information Order," a euphemism for official control of news.

The so-called New World Order for Information and Communications is a scheme concocted by authoritarian Third World governments with enthusiastic Communist endorsement. The proposal has been before the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) for several years where its champions have sought to obtain the imprimatur of international respectability for a "code of journalistic conduct," including the licensing of reporters and news agencies.

The code would be adapted to the "values and needs" of non-Western, under-developed nations. It supposedly would allow the Third World to break the global news "monopoly" allegedly possessed by the Western media, especially news agencies like the Associated Press and Reuters.

The U.S. has taken a lead among Western governments in condemning the idea as nothing more-or-less than a sanction to impose the totalitarian model on most of the world's press. But, at the latest UNESCO General Conference here, there were signs that, by subtle, almost imperceptible stages, the American delegation yielded ground to those who think governments should determine where reporters may go and what they may publish.

U.S. spokesmen strongly deny this. On the contrary, they claimed to have succeeded in blunting the campaign for a tightly structured New Information Order, replacing it by the concept of an "evolving New Order that cannot be imposed."

They pointed out that, as part of a new "conciliatory" atmosphere, the Soviets withdrew a resolution demanding a UNESCO "blacklist" of newspaper and broadcasting organizations which had violated "guidelines" laid down by UNESCO five years ago.

American officials acknowledged that the "new order language still survives." But, they insisted, under U.S. prodding, it had "drifted away from emphasizing the restrictive, obligatory and censorable."

Others are less sure. Joseph Rawley, a High Point, N.C., publisher who served on the U.S. delegation to the conference, allowed as how there had been a "slow degeneration of our strong stand." It had come about through gradual acceptance of the other side's terminology.

An American newsman covering the conference commented that "the Soviets understand the political consequences of linguistics."

Arafat gained the release Thursday by Israel of 4,600 Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners in exchange for six Israeli soldiers captured by PLO fighters in September 1982. But his aides said the exchange was not directly linked to Arafat's predicament in Tripoli.

Thursday also was the first time PLO rebel delegates met with the Suadi mediators in Syria. The rebels earlier had rejected outside mediation.

Hundreds of people in Tripoli and in two nearby refugee camps have been killed in weeks of warfare between Arafat's forces and the rebels who want to oust him from leadership of the PLO.

In the Beirut fighting, the Lebanese army and Shiite irregulars clashed with mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and tank fire from late Thursday night until dawn today, when a local cease-fire was worked out, police said. They had no casualty reports.

The army and militiamen have been battling almost daily in the Shiite-dominated southern neighborhoods of Beirut since Oct. 23 truck-bomb attacks that killed 239 U.S. and 58 French servicemen.

Military jets flew low runs over Beirut throughout the night.

Police and Beirut radio stations said they were unable to determine whether the jets had come from Israel or scrambled off U.S. or French aircraft carriers.

Meanwhile, it was announced that President Amin Gemayel will hold talks with President Reagan in Washington on Dec. 1, two days after Reagan's scheduled meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Moshe Arens.

Deputy White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said in Santa Barbara, Calif., that Gemayel would discuss with Reagan "alternate approaches toward making progress in withdrawing foreign forces from Lebanon."

Survivor doesn't know how wreck happened

BAYTOWN (AP) — The man federal investigators hope will provide the clue to the causes of a freight train wreck that killed four crewmen told two ambulance attendants he didn't know how the accident happened.

James Muchow, 41, of Hempstead suffered broken legs and other injuries when he was thrown from a 13-car Southern Pacific freight train that slammed into a line of parked boxcars Saturday.

Federal investigators have said Muchow, the lone survivor of the wreck, may hold the key to providing information about the accident.

National Transportation Safety Board safety inspector Thurman Toal said his investigation indicates the crew may have been distracted or dozing because the train's brakes apparently were not applied.

Muchow, who was in a caboose directly behind the train's engine, remains in stable condition at Houston's Hermann Hospital.

Muchow "said that although he didn't know why the train crashed, he remembered everything that happened because he was never knocked unconscious at any time either during or after the accident," Roger Lay of Baytown, one of two ambulance attendants who treated Muchow at the scene, told the Baytown Sun.

Toxicology tests on the four men who died in the wreck were negative, meaning none was under the influence of drugs or alcohol, the Harris County medical examiner's office reported.

Autopsies performed earlier indicated the four died of head and chest injuries.

A Southern Pacific spokesman, Tony Aleman, said that the railroad's investigation of the accident blamed it on human error.

Both Lay and Sam Riggins of Crosby, the other ambulance attendant, said they admired Muchow's strength and courage.

"The man was in good spirits considering the circumstances, because the man lying beside him was dead," Riggins said.

FBI arrests striking driver

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The FBI says it has arrested a striking Greyhound bus driver suspected of shooting at a bus and its driver on an east San Antonio street.

The 53-year-old man was being held in the Bexar County Jail after his arrest Thursday, said Bill Dalseg, special agent in charge of the San Antonio FBI office.

Federal authorities planned to file charges against the man today in a federal complaint alleging destruction of an interstate motor vehicle, Dalseg said.

Shots were fired at a Greyhound bus and its driver in San Antonio Wednesday evening, Dalseg said, but the driver was not injured.

The driver told police that two men in a car drove ahead of the bus when it left the downtown station en route to a maintenance garage just after 6 p.m. The driver said that when he neared an underpass on the city's east side, one man in the car shined a spotlight on the bus windshield and moments later a bullet struck the right top side of the windshield.

The driver, whom police did not identify, said he recognized the men as union members who previously had threatened him.

Damage to the bus was estimated at $200, police said.

The second man has not been arrested.

The destruction of a motor vehicle statute "involves a situation in which someone willfully intends to endanger the safety of a person, in this case the bus driver, by damaging a motor vehicle which is used or employed in interstate commerce," Dalseg said.

Greyhound's 12,700 drivers and other workers who belong to the Amalgamated Transport Union struck Nov. 2 over a proposed contract calling for 9.5 percent cuts in wages and benefits. Union officials are scheduled to announce Monday results of voting on the offer, which reportedly contains a 7.8 percent wage cut.

Family finds guests are real turkeys

NEDERLAND, Texas (AP) — Addie Garsea served up a Thanksgiving meal of tortillas and cornbread to her guests. But that's OK; they're just turkeys.

Mrs. Garsea and her husband have had turkeys for pets for the past 10 years. "They're sweet and gentle, and they follow me around all of the time," she said.

The Southeast Texas family bought their current pets — Mr. and Mrs. Tom Turkey — at a local feed store about eight months ago. Tom has grown to almost 40 pounds, and Mrs. Tom is so heavy she can't get off the ground, Mrs. Garsea said.

"I think I'm the only one around that has turkeys for pets," said Mrs. Garsea as she stroked Tom's feathers.

She said Mr. and Mrs. Tom are her third set of turkeys, and she didn't wait long after the death of her last turkey, Pablo, to get replacements.

It seems the turkeys rule the roost at the Garsea house and other pets, including a horse, two pit bull dogs, a couple of chickens and some cats, just have to put up with them.

Stolen street signs burn up Texas fans

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Every year about this time, police and state workers poke around Texas A&M University's annual mammoth bonfire to see if the Aggies have been up to their usual stunt — ripping down "Austin City Limits" street signs and throwing them on the fire.

A purloined sign can mean a jailed Aggie and a big bill for the school.

Not this year, vows Mayor Gary Halter. A sign will be in the towering fire tonight on the eve of the University of Texas football game — but it will be bought and paid for by the school and made specially by the College Station Street Department.

Halter, who also teaches at A&M, says he got the idea after talking with an Aggie attending a hearing for four classmates charged with stealing "Austin City Limits" signs for the bonfire.

"In the '70s I used to be chairman of the A&M bonfire committee...and I was quite aware of the problem of Aggies stealing signs for their bonfire," Halter said. "Every year the people from the highway department would come sniffing around our bonfire. And sometimes they'd find signs and send us bills for $200 or $300."

Each sign costs about $46 to make and post on the roads leading into the capital city, said Carol Ziegler, district engineer of the state Department of Highways and Public Transportation in nearby Bryan. A lot of the signs disappear each year, and the A&M bonfire accounts for quite a few, he said.

Pope blesses free Texas-size dinner

By The Associated Press

Pope John Paul II sent his blessing, volunteers donated food and time and Raul Jimenez Sr., more accustomed to serving Mexican food than Thanksgiving fare, served nearly 500 turkeys to 18,000 senior citizens in Fort Worth and San Antonio.

"The loneliest days for senior citizens are normally the holidays, and it shouldn't be that way," Jimenez said Thursday. "We try to make Thanksgiving a day they'll never forget."

He's been trying for 12 years now. Jimenez' free repast has been an annual tradition ever since the first gathering 11 years ago in Fort Worth, where the food magnate grew up after being born in Dallas during the Depression.

Jimenez, whose growing food company bears his name, said he picked up the tab for the feast because he didn't want senior citizens to be lonely during the holiday.

"It started small and then just grew and grew," he said. "The senior citizens tell me they look forward to it all year. They dance and enjoy themselves and just really have a ball."

Word of the annual Jimenez tradition reached as far as the Vatican, where Pope John Paul II had prepared a certificate of blessing. Archbishop Patrick Flores presented the Jimenez family with the Pope's gift as the event got under way in San Antonio.

Raul Jimenez Sr., right, points out the Mexican food inventory in his warehouse in San Antonio. Jimenez and his company invited 10,000 senior citizens in San Antonio and 7,500 in Fort Worth to a Thanksgiving feast.

"When the archbishop was in Rome the pope asked him what people over here were doing for the poor. The archbishop mentioned our family among several others, so the pope told him he wanted him to make this presentation," Jimenez explained.

Preparation for the dinner for 10,000 in San Antonio called for a shopping list that included 350 turkeys, 200 pounds of giblets, 10,000 packages of cranberry sauce, 1,000 pumpkin pies and 375 whole yams.

"We've had the biggest turnout ever today," said San Antonio coordinator Alice Trevino. "We're not even half way through the day and every chair in the house is filled."

In Dallas, 896 people were served free meals at the Salvation Army. Demand for free meals, which skyrocketed when unemployed workers migrated to Dallas in 1981 and 1982, "has begun to level off with the inflation rate slowing down and the stabilization of the economy," said Carol Frank, director of social services for the agency.

The Fort Worth gathering of 8,000 was moved this year to Billy Bob's, a giant Western honky tonk in the stockyards district.

Jimenez, the son of a neighborhood grocer, shut down production in his Mexican food factory last week and replaced the preparation of tamales and tortilla chips with turkey and mincemeat.

He said he doesn't care how much the lapse in production cost him.

"The Good Lord has been so good to me and my family and I want to pay it back," he said. "My main objective is that we get the job done and done right, and it takes shutting down the plant to do that."

Mary Karges, 75, of Fort Worth attended the dinner using a walker. She said her only child lives in Virginia, so there was no reason to fix a big dinner.

"I'm having such a good time, if my leg weren't broken I'd get up and do a jig," she said with a smile.

Seagull shuts down engine, forces quick return to airport

By The Associated Press

A seagull sucked into a jet engine forced an Air Florida flight's quick return to a Chicago airport, while two United Airlines jetliners aborted takeoffs in California when an engine blew apart on one and smoke filled the cabin of the other.

Passengers were shocked but safe in the three unrelated incidents Thursday, all of which occurred on Boeing 737 jetliners, according to authorities.

The pilot of Air Florida's Flight 3 to Florida turned around shortly after takeoff from Chicago's Midway Airport and landed with just one engine operating after the seagull shut down the other, Loretta Bridgeworth, a spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said.

An air traffic controller said smoke billowed from the dying engine after the plane landed with 124 passengers aboard. The passengers were bused to O'Hare International Airport where they caught an Eastern Airlines flight to Miami, said the controller, who asked not be identified.

At the Fresno, Calif., Air Terminal, about 25 passengers on United Airlines' Flight 1140 to San Francisco slid down escape chutes when smoke entered the cabin from overhead air nozzles.

The smoke, which passengers said they were told came from an air conditioning system problem, delayed the flight for about four hours. Two people complained of unspecified minor pains after the incident, an airport fireman said.

An engine on a United Airlines jet blew apart and scattered debris on a runway in Redding, Calif., as the plane was accelerating for takeoff, but the pilot was able to taxi back to the terminal, officials said.

No injuries were reported among the 69 passengers and five crew members on Flight 1163 to San Francisco, said United station manager Larry Fleshman.

Americans gather for Thanksgiving

By The Associated Press

Millions of Americans stepped out for parades or just settled back to watch football, but Thanksgiving meals formed the holiday's centerpiece as families both intimate and impromptu gathered for the oldest of national observances.

In Massachusetts, where the hardy people of Plimoth Plantation first gave thanks for a bountiful harvest 350 years ago, the family of Marine Cpl. John L'Heureux felt especially blessed Thursday. L'Heureux, a wounded survivor of October's terrorist bombing in Beirut, was home from Lebanon for his first Thanksgiving outside a barracks in three years.

And inside the walls of the North Dakota Penitentiary, it was the biggest day of the year for more than 400 inmates whose friends and relatives came to visit, said Warden Winston Satron.

A half-million people stood in brisk winds and temperatures in the low 30s to watch Detroit's big Thanksgiving Day parade, while parents in New York hoisted tots who screamed and cheered as a helium-filled Superman, Woody Woodpecker and other favorite characters floated past in Macy's 57th annual parade.

"We're not used to this kind of weather," said a shivering Sharon Kaddyama, a hula dancer in the Mililani, Hawaii, high school band before her unit stepped off in New York's chilly drizzle.

Across the nation, those who felt fortunate gave thanks by sharing their time, money and food, providing instant families for others whose holiday would otherwise have been gloomy.

Denis Jensen, who until three years ago was a senior vice president at Arkansas' First National Bank in Little Rock, woke up early to collect homeless people from the emptied streets downtown.

Now the director of the Union Rescue Mission, Jensen oversaw dinners for about 235 people and delivery of food baskets to 200 more.

"I went out and picked up four carloads of hoboes," Jensen said. "They feel unloved."

Minnie Bolds, an unemployed caseworker, displays one of the 60 turkeys she prepared for a Thanksgiving dinner for about 500 senior citizens in Philadelphia Wednesday. Ms. Bolds spent $4,000 of her own money to serve up the turkeys, 500 pounds of roast beef and ham, 500 pounds of salads and 450 pounds of vegetables. "You can't teach compassion," Ms. Bolds said, "you have to do it by action."

Treatment of accused felons varies widely

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department sampling has found that fewer than half the people arrested on state felony charges are prosecuted and only 5 percent are sentenced to more than a year in prison.

The sampling of more than 400,000 felony arrests in four states also found that people arrested for felonies were 12 times more likely to be prosecuted in the Eastern state surveyed than in the Western one.

The department's Bureau of Justice Statistics, which released the figures Thursday, had no explanation for the wide disparity in how states deal with people arrested for felonies.

The bureau called the figures surprising, but warned against drawing broad conclusions from them and said they demonstrate the need for greater reporting on the disposition of criminal cases in the states.

The figures came from an Eastern, a Mid-Atlantic, a North-Central and a Western state. Each state reported on a different 12-month period between 1979 and 1982. Two of the states had populations below 10 million and two above that figure.

The bureau's director, Steven R. Schlesinger, said the states provided the data on the condition that they not be identified by name, because the information has not been "thoroughly verified and they wished to avoid premature speculation and interpretation." One state said its sampling methods may have produced figures not truly reflective of its experience.

The overall data showed that 48 percent of those arrested for felonies were prosecuted. But the Western state prosecuted only 8 percent of these cases, while the Eastern state prosecuted 97 percent. In the Mid-Atlantic state, the prosecution rate was 77 percent, and in the North-Central state it was 70 percent.

Prosecution rates were higher for violent crimes than for the far more numerous property crimes, but the regional differences remained. Overall, 84 percent of the homicide, rape, robbery and aggravated assault cases were prosecuted.

In the Eastern state, the prosecution rate for violent crimes was 96 percent, compared to 27 percent in the Western state. The Mid-Atlantic state prosecuted 78 percent and the North-Central state, 65 percent.

The bureau said these were the first aggregate figures ever compiled on the processing of criminal defendants

Second South Korean child doing well after heart surgery

ROSLYN, N.Y. (AP) — The second of two South Korean children brought to the United States on Air Force One for heart operations was "doing fine" after surgery, doctors at St. Francis Hospital said.

First lady Nancy Reagan, told that 4-year-old Lee Kil-woo had successfully undergone surgery Thursday to repair a hole in his heart, invited him and 7-year-old Ahn Gi-sook to mid-December's White House Christmas party for diplomats' children, said White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

Gi-sook had her operation Wednesday and was "doing well," a hospital spokesman said. President and Mrs. Reagan brought the children to the United States on Nov. 14 as they returned from a visit to South Korea.

Teen-agers charged as adults

BALTIMORE (AP) — Three teen-agers accused of fatally shooting a 14-year-old boy in a school hallway because he refused to give them his $65 jacket have been charged as adults, police said.

Police spokesman Dennis Hill said Ranson Watkins, Alfred Chestnut and Andrew Stewart, all 16, were arrested Thursday on charges of homicide, robbery and a handgun violation. They faced a hearing today.

Eyewitness accounts led to their arrests in the Nov. 18 killing of DeWitt Duckett at Hariem Park Junior High School, Hill said. The youth was shot once in the neck at point-blank range.

California cancels spraying

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California canceled a second spraying of a pesticide used to combat Japanese beetles near Sacramento because a study showed the chemical appears to cause nerve damage and paralysis in animals, state officials say.

Preliminary tests on chickens suggested that Oftanol, which interferes with the nervous system, could cause convulsions, difficult breathing and possibly death in humans, said Barry W. Wilson, a professor at the of the University of California at Davis who did the study.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said Wednesday it was reviewing safety data submitted by Oftanol's maker, Mobay Chemical Corp.

Women take steps toward bastion of male presidency

By BRENDA FINE
Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — JFK did it in 1960.

That a Roman Catholic could become president of the United States seemed to strike a blow that would shatter forever the unwritten barriers of the white-Anglo-Saxon-Protestant establishment. America seemed finally on the road to true equality for its citizens of all races, colors, religions — and of either sex.

But that was 23 years ago. Since John F. Kennedy, all our presidents have been Protestants. They always have been white and male.

Women, a "minority" making up a solid 54 percent of the population, have tried storming the political barricades. Former Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm ran for the presidency back in 1972, although most people considered her candidacy more of a symbol than an actual bid for the office. Such symbolism was double-barrelled, says Chisholm. She has remarked that during her political career she suffered more for being a woman than for being black.

Nevertheless, women are running hard to close the political gender gap. Many have already won their stripes and are regarded as aggressive vote-getters. In November's elections, at least three women captured national attention: Martha Layne Collins, who won an easy 55-to-44 percent victory to become the first woman governor of Kentucky; San Francisco's incumbent Mayor Diane Feinstein, who was re-elected by 80 percent of the vote; and Mayor Kathy Whitmire of Houston, with her resounding 63 percent majority.

With showings like these, can a woman candidate, at least for vice president, be far behind?

The first presidential candidate to publicly commit to a woman running-mate has been Jesse Jackson with his "rainbow coalition." That Jackson is not expected to win the Democratic party nomination makes no difference to some women. That Jackson extended the offer is viewed as positive.

"A few months ago the idea of a woman on the ticket would have sounded radical," says Ann F. Lewis, political director of the Democratic National Committee. "It doesn't now, and that's the first major change in attitude, and perhaps the hardest."

Feminist Betty Freidan, however, is less than impressed. Dismissing his coalition as "purely cosmetic," Freidin says flatly that Jackson's past record is "not at all good on women."

Reagan likely to win in 1984

By KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor, Hearst Newspapers

An Analysis

WASHINGTON — Current prospects look bright for the re-election of President Reagan in the wake of his well stage-managed triumphal Asian trip, his popularly supported liberation of Grenada from Marxist thugs, and the swift pace of economic recovery.

Barring some new foreign policy crisis that would undermine his popularity, the president is now seen in political and diplomatic circles in Washington as highly likely to win another four-year term in the White House if he decides to run for re-election, which is considered probable.

Even some liberal commentators who have been among the president's harshest critics are speculating about the possibility of a landslide victory for him in 1984. The latest polls on his popularity could, it is said, lead one to believe the presidential race is already over.

Caution against assuming this is so is advised because of the uncertainty of what may happen between now and next November. But the uncertainty is based on the assumption of changing events. If there is no dramatic change, especially involving the danger of war, or the involvement of American troops in Middle East fighting with heavy casualties, the present consensus is that neither former Vice President Walter Mondale nor Senator John Glenn would stand much chance of defeating Reagan.

One of the liberal political columnists in the nation's capital, David S. Broder, wrote in the Washington Post this week:

"A combination of events in the past two weeks has positioned President Reagan to achieve the kind of political breakout that often presages a landslide reelection victory.

"The clouds of war overhanging American forces in the Middle East and the staggering deficit that threatens the economic recovery are enough to make anyone cautious about such a prediction. But for the first time the elements are in place that could produce a win for Reagan like that Richard Nixon gained in 1972, and Margaret Thatcher achieved in Great Britain last spring."

Haynes Johnson, another liberal commentator, wrote that the latest polls could lead one to assume the presidential race is already over.

"President Reagan has ridden the tide of success in the Caribbean — he's finally got us to win one abroad, just as he is said to have won the economic one at home — and he is wearing the victor's laurels. He soars while his opponents plummet. Thus, anyway, say the readings from the most recent batch of shifts in the political weather as recorded in the polls."

Betting on these readings would, Johnson cautions, be premature because the election is a year away and "the standings are certain to fluctuate again with changing events." Unless events change in a way that would cause a serious setback for the president, it seems doubtful his poll ratings will decline enough to endanger his re-election.

If the presidential election had been held last week instead of next November, most political observers agree, Reagan would have been an overwhelming victor.

The decisiveness with which he ordered, on short notice, military intervention in Grenada to protect American students and put an end to the Soviet-Cuban bloc's dominant presence there, coupled with his firm stand against the Soviet Union, and dispatch of American naval power to Lebanon to try to help the peace process there has enabled him to achieve a public image of strong leadership.

NRC chairman has high profile

EDITOR'S NOTE — One of the hottest seats in the federal government is that of the overseer of the nuclear energy industry. In the two years that he's occupied it, Nunzio Palladino has found it impossible to keep a low profile. Here's a closeup of the former college dean whose role is far from academic to the future of atomic power.

By JILL LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nunzio Palladino came to Washington determined to stay out of the newspapers. He quickly discovered that Nuclear Regulatory Commission chairmen are not destined for low profiles.

"The NRC is in a kind of no-man's land between the pro-nuclear and anti-nuclear factions in the Congress and in the nation as well," Palladino, 66, told old friends in July at the State College, Pa., Rotary Club. "Often we get caught in the crossfire."

The soft-spoken chairman, one of the nation's nuclear pioneers, quickly figured out how to minimize his well-publicized appearances on Capitol Hill.

"I've learned that it is all right to suffer a little in front of the committees," he told the Rotary Club, tongue-in-cheek. "In fact, it's desirable. If they think you didn't suffer enough, they call you back the next week."

The five-member NRC is charged with licensing and ensuring the safety of some 150 nuclear power plants currently in operation or under construction.

Since Palladino's arrival on July 1, 1981, nuclear utilities have been rocked by disclosures of reversed blueprints and faulty welding, cracked pipes and shoddy construction in numerous plants.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS reflect the tough times:

— The Washington Public Power Supply System is embroiled in 66 lawsuits after a massive multibillion-dollar default on two planned nuclear plants.

— Reactor construction in South Carolina, New Hampshire, New York and other states has been canceled or delayed.

— Nearly five years after the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident, investigators have found routine safety violations in the slow, costly Three Mile Island cleanup.

Palladino, plucked from academia to help pull atomic energy out of its post-TMI slump, found his task aggravated by shortcomings both in his commission and the industry. He seems undeterred.

"The best way to deal with Congress, and with anyone, is to be honest and forthright," he says. "When you have troubles, there's no sense hiding them because they'll only come back to bite you."

Palladino has been vocal about the NRC's difficulties. Before an Office of Investigations was set up last year, he repeatedly told Congress there were serious flaws in the agency's investigative process.

He concedes his staff is not perfect, and recently made public a report by the new office that partially blamed the NRC staff for safety breakdowns in the TMI cleanup.

As for the industry, Palladino jumped on nuclear utility officials almost immediately in a series of speeches calling for safer reactor construction and operation.

SOME CRITICS contend his votes often don't bear out his rhetoric.

"The question is whether Palladino is genuinely concerned with safety or is a brilliant public relations specialist," says Richard Udell, an aide to Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass. "Overall, his voting record has not been one to substantiate the view of many people that this person is super pro-safety."

Adds an attorney who doesn't want his name used because he often appears before the NRC: "He viscerally identifies with the nuclear industry. When a ruling might cause serious problems for the industry, he's incapable of doing it."

The industry has some complaints of its own. One official says Palladino still looks at things from an academic rather than a practical perspective. Another, Carl Walski, president of the Atomic Industrial Forum, says the chairman has tried to stabilize licensing and backfitting procedures but that his hands have been tied by other commissioners.

But Walski adds: "He's an honest, constructive regulator by no means in the industry's pocket. He understands our problems pretty well."

As an engineer for Westinghouse Electric Corp., Palladino spent 10 years directing reactor core design for the nation's first nuclear submarine, the Nautilus, and its first commercial nuclear power plant at Shippingport, Pa.

He headed Pennsylvania State University's brand new nuclear engineering department for six years and spent another 15 as dean of its College of Engineering.

The appointment of Nunzio Joseph Palladino to the NRC capped a traditional American success story.

His father came from the Appenine village of Campobasso at age 11, apprenticed himself to a New York barber and ended up with his own shop in Allentown, Pa. His mother, who had an eighth-grade education, helped her four children with their homework.

Madaline Palladino, who is running for a Pennsylvania judgeship, says her older brother was inspirational in his determination to get an education.

Reagan's border proposal draws fire

From Wire Reports

A Reagan administration proposal that the Immigration and Naturalization Service assume major duties at land ports of entry is drawing criticism.

But federal officials said details of the plan are far from being worked out and the effect it will have on border staffing is unknown.

"There are so many details that we are working on right now that we just don't have all the answers," said an administration official in Washington, D.C. "Any change that will be made will be made with the express intention of making anything that exists better."

THE Cabinet Council on Management and Administration has decided to consolidate inspection operations at federal facilities, said Jerome Hollander, U.S. Customs public affairs officer in Los Angeles.

It has been determined that primary inspection at land ports will be the responsibility of the INS, and primary inspection at air and sea ports will be the responsibility of Customs, Hollander said.

A working group composed of representatives from the Treasury, Justice and Agriculture departments and the Office of Management and Budget has been assigned to come up with a specific plan. They are due to present it to the Cabinet Council within a couple of weeks.

NONE OF the administration, Customs or INS officials contacted locally or in Washington had any further details.

The proposal has drawn fire from elected representatives and individuals.

Sens. Quentin N. Burdick, D-N.D., and Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., members of the Senate Appropriations Committee, raised objections when the plan was disclosed in an administration bill funding several federal agencies until the end of the year.

"The Senate Appropriations Committee has made it clear in the past that drastic actions like this should not take place without our approval, and we reiterated that position," Burdick said.

THE committee warned the administration that no money would be provided for such a proposal unless the plans are approved by Congress, and that no plan should be implemented until after Congress reconvenes Jan. 23.

"We also made it clear we don't want to see any reduction in INS or Customs personnel," Burdick said. "We think our borders are undermanned as it is. Certainly we should not take any steps that will decrease oversight at the borders or ports of entry for international passengers or cargo."

THE administration official said, "The concerns that are expressed by the Hill and the agencies and the general public are all being taken into consideration. Both INS and Customs are working together to determine if the proposal in its detailed form is a reasonable approach."

Picking up book nets $1,000 prize

DALLAS (AP) — Michael Sandowski says he never dreamed that picking up a book on John F. Kennedy would spark an interest on the late president that would eventually land him $1,000.

The 16-year-old honor student at Torah High School of Texas won a contest sponsored by the Democratic Party. The contest asked students from the 8th to the 12th grade to write on Kennedy's three most significant legacies.

Sandowski's essay cited Kennedy's "intangible appeal to the hopes and dreams of the American people" and "fresh optimism" as the president's greatest legacies. It also noted Kennedy's efforts to fight Communism in Latin America and to bolser civil rights in this country, and his emphasis on the U.S. space program.

Salvadoran market bustles despite war

EDITOR'S NOTE — El Salvador's leftist guerrillas have sought to bring the country down by disrupting the nation's economy. But daily life goes on. At San Salvador's sprawling Central Market, shoppers stroll along the narrow aisles and haggle with merchants.

By ISAAC A. LEVI

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Shoppers vie for culinary treats like shark, live iguanas and armadillos in San Salvador's bustling, block-long Central Market, but food is plentiful despite the civil war.

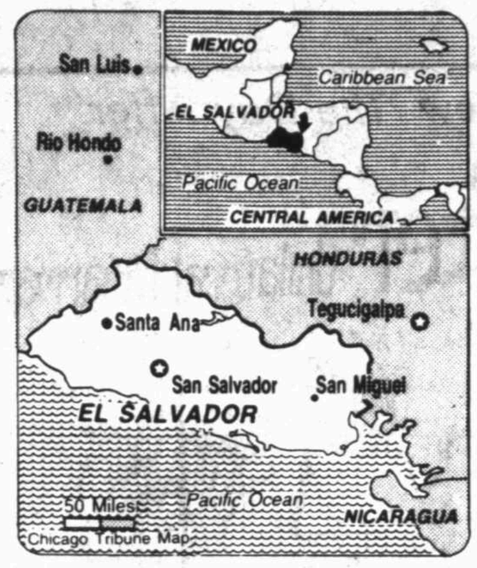

"It's been prices up and up and up since 'el problema' started," said Maria Elba Perez, 32, who sells rice and beans at one of the market stalls. "I don't know where it's all going to end."

"El problema" — the problem — is a euphemism Salvadorans use for the civil war.

Prices may be up — inflation is unofficially estimated at 20 percent — but there is no food shortage. The government used some of its $227 million in U.S. economic aid this year to make sure store shelves are stocked.

Rice is imported from the United States, potatoes from Guatemala. The fruit and vegetables that arrive here daily from rural farms are hauled in trucks that have been a prime target of a leftist guerrilla sabotage campaign.

Economic targets have been central to the leftists' four-year-old fight for power. Guerrillas hope a disruption in daily life will increase political and social problems, but they appear to have eased off in the past few months, apparently swayed by public resentment.

The war has taken at least 47,000 lives, most of them civilian, is this country of 4.8 million people. El Salvador has a land area of 8,260 square miles, slightly larger than New Jersey.

"I don't know why prices are going up," said Gregoria Vasquez, who runs a fish stall in the market.

"I KNOW," said a fair-haired young man who was rearranging bags of rice marked "made in USA."

"It's because the international price of bullets, guns and armored cars went up and we have to import them."

Everyone fell silent as another young man rolled by on a makeshift wooden cart. He was paralyzed from the waist down and his right leg carried an ugly scar eight inches long.

The usual diet of the Salvadoran has not varied much since the war began. Tortillas, eggs, cheese, beans, rice and fried bananas are standard. For dinner, the average family has chicken, beef or fish a few times a week. Armadillo and iguana, both delicacies, are reserved for special occasions.

The prices are not low.

The nation's currency — the colon — is officially pegged at 2.75 to the dollar, but more commonly traded at the black market rate of about 4 to the dollar.

The minimum wage is 11 colones — $2.75 a day at the black market rate. Some businesses are known to pay their workers less, flouting the law by making them sign receipts for 11 colones. "I make five colones a day and if it weren't for tips, I'd starve," says a waitress at La Gran Bonanza, a good restaurant.

Jericho site of ancient deeds, ethnic conflicts

By ROBERT DI VEROLI
Copley News Service

JERICHO, Israel — Rich in Old and New Testament lore, this city may be the oldest and lowest city in the world.

Excavations set the age of this city, a virtual oasis in the Judean desert, at about 10,000 years.

At 1,200 feet below sea level it is also the lowest city in the world.

Jericho was the first town conquered by the Israelites under Joshua when they entered the Promised Land in about 1200 B.C.

It lies near the southern end of the Jordan River valley about five miles west of the Jordan and seven miles north of the Dead Sea.

It is a fertile oasis, fed by the ancient spring of Elisha which gushes forth in the center of town and which is mentioned in II Kings 2:19.

Elisha was a disciple of the prophet, Elijah, who made the spring's then bitter waters drinkable by throwing a handful of salt into it.

Jericho's climate is unmistakably tropical.

Largely because of the spring, its streets are lined with red-flowered poinciana trees and the town itself is surrounded by banana plantations.

Jericho was destroyed by Joshua, who led the Israelites into the Promised Land. It was later given to Benjamin, leader of one of the 12 tribes of Israel, and was rebuilt by Hiel of Bethel.

Excavations led by Kathleen Kenyon from 1952 to 1958 uncovered the ruins of a walled town and tower dating back to the seventh millennium B.C.

The city was colonized after the Israelites' return from exile and was fortified by Bacchides, general of the Seleucid army.

Airport moves

Midland City Council's decision to go ahead with a "land swap" for a small portion of the acreage on which Air Park now sits looks like a good first step in the ultimate goal of moving the airport.

By way of the deal, the city will give up 48 acres of the 600-plus it owns in north Midland and 44 acres in the vicinity of Midland Regional Airport in trade for 2,665 acres east of Midland Country Club. That land may or may not be the site of a new Air Park in future years, but the city still stands to benefit in a number of ways through the deal and that's good.

It should be noted right now that the land swap will in no way affect current operations at Air Park. When a new airport is built, federal regulations require it be in operation prior to the "old" airport being closed.

The land for which the city swapped may not even be suitable for an airport, but the deal does give the city the opportunity to look to the future and to decide what to do with the other 540 acres of valuable land at the site of the present Air Park. Feasibly, the city could decide to put that acreage to use in some other manner or sell it to developers. Proceeds of the sale of that land will benefit all the city's taxpayers.

Moving Air Park has been a goal of the city for several years. While the current location is convenient to downtown for business people flying in, more than a few Midlanders have believed Air Park would be best located outside the city, with safety only a peripheral issue.

Airport officials have noted that airports tend to stimulate business development, which means a new airport likely will bring more growth to Midland. If the site is large enough, as the one the city council has traded for appears to be, the problems now being encountered at the site of the current Air Park, such as residential and business development, can be avoided.

This deal gives the city the opportunity to fully evaluate long-term needs in the high growth area of north Midland and to take steps to meet those needs in the interests of all Midlanders. That's good.

Gutless burglars?

One can only conclude from a study conducted by a Utah psychologist that the burglars in her state must be a timid lot, whose insecure childhood was spent in the shadow of authoritarian parents and teachers.

Dr. Barbara B. Brown has come up with some figures from a survey she made around Salt Lake City which tend to prove, she said, that burglars casting about for a house to rob will shy away from the one that is surrounded by a neatly trimmed hedge.

The hedge, Dr. Brown contends, constitutes a symbolic, psychological barrier to the evildoer and can be as discouraging to an attempted break-in as a high fence or securely locked doors.

It is hard to challenge a psychologist's findings, especially when they are as novel as Dr. Brown's. It is a safe bet, though, that the police and ordinary citizens in places like New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles would tell Dr. Brown that no hedge ever stopped any burglar they ever had the misfortune to encounter.

In fact, the general feeling — outside of Utah, of course — seems to be that a hedge is more threatening to an innocent passer-by than to a burglar. On a dark residential street, a hedge could provide a mugger cover from which he might pounce on a law-abiding stroller.

Even if, as Dr. Brown has sought to prove, the hedge syndrome prevails in Utah, the householders of the beehive state would be well advised not to start immediately on any peripheral plantings. It's too late. Boxwood and privet hedges take a long time to grow to any discernable height. And while they are growing, a house could be busted into a half dozen times.

Another View:

Sensible provision

The $11.5 billion foreign aid package approved by Congress is wrapped in some long-needed strings — a threat to cut off money to any nation consistently opposing U.S. foreign policy at the United Nations or elsewhere.

The new provision was suggested by U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick when she testified before Congress earlier this year. The measure forbids giving foreign aid to any country that the president finds "is engaged in a consistent pattern of opposition to the foreign policy of the United States."

The measure requires President Reagan to submit an annual report to Congress on each country receiving foreign aid. The report would include each country's U.N. voting record.

The U.N. provision was inserted because of Zimbabwe, which is scheduled to receive $75 million in foreign aid during the current fiscal year running through next September. Zimbabwe abstained from the U.S.-backed resolution in the United Nations condemning the Soviet Union for shooting down a South Korean jetliner on Sept. 1. Then Zimbabwe further angered Congress by sponsoring a U.N. resolution condemning the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada.

In the foreign aid package, Israel received the lion's share — $1.76 billion. Israel also will be entitled to an additional $850 million in arms loans.

Egypt is the second largest recipient, with $750 million in economic aid and $465 million in arms grants.

Because of U.S. anger toward Syria for its role in Lebanon, the foreign aid package put an outright prohibition on spending any money already committed to that country. A State Department spokesman said the provision would stop about $125 million from going to Syria.

Overall, the foreign aid package was an increase of about $1.5 billion over the previous fiscal year. In view of the criticism leveled against the United States in many parts of the world, the foreign aid package probably should be considerably smaller than it is.

Congress should make it a point to scrutinize reports on the various countries carefully and act accordingly. The fiscal policy of the United States should be to reward its friends and punish its enemies.

The Day After Unilateral Disarmament...

"I haven't been frightened like this since Orson Welles did 'War of the Worlds' on radio."

CHARLEY REESE

Facts make nuclear war likely

The ABC film, "The Day After," uses a familiar technique to tell a lie. It tells a lie by telling you only part of the truth.

Since the nuclear issue is receiving so much attention, which is really a good thing, let's begin to cut away propaganda and myth and look at the facts. As Dr. Edward Teller has noted, the facts themselves are bad enough so there is no need to exaggerate them.

Charley Reese

Wat the ABC film did was to show you what it will be like within the blast radius of a nuclear or thermonuclear explosion. What they did nt tell you is that even under worst case scenarios that kind of physical damage will be confined to 2 percent of the land area of the United States.

In other words, even if the Soviets shoot the works which they are most unlikely to do, 98 percent of the United States would be undamaged by fie, heat and blast effects.

This is neither theory nor opinion but a simple fact which yu can easily verify for yourself with grade school arithmetic. The blast radii of various size bombs are known quantities (7 miles for a one megaton bomb; 13 miles, for 5 megatons; and 22 miles, for a 25 megaton explosive). All you have to do is compute the area of a circle for each detonation, add them up, and subtract the total from the total land area of the United States. You will see that even under the worst case scenarios the total area within the blast radii amount to about 2 percent of the U.S.

This is important to understand because the nuclear hysterics have deliberately tried to create the impression that a nuclear war will physically destroy the entire United States. It won't.

The second thing the ABC film did was focus your attention on an area immediately adjacent to the blast where fakllout would be heavy and radioactivity most intense. The film clearly implies that this will be the condition everywhere. Again, that is not true.

When a nuclear device explodes on teh surface, it digs a crater and the pulverized debris is mixed with the fissionable material in the device. Since what goes up must come down, th debris falls back to earth, te heavier parts first, the lightest parts last. Where it will fall and how much depends on weather conditions.

There will be areas, however, which will receive no fallout whatsoever. What the film neglected to tell you was that upwind of the blast there was no fallout and no radioactivity.

The film also implied that radioactivity is some kind of mysterious poison that kills the earth forever. Not so. Our normal environment and even our bodies are radioactive.

The radiation in fallout consists of alpha and beta particles and gamma rays. A sheet of paper will stop an alpha particle. Heavy clothing will stop a beta particle. It's the gamma rays which are the most dangerous, but two and a half feet of just dirt will reduce the strength of a gamma ray by a factor of 1,000.

Furthermore, the radioactive material is decaying. While the rate of decay varies according to the materials used in the bomb, on an average if teh radioactivity is 1,000 roentgens an hour, 14 days later it will be 1 roentgen a hour.

My point is simply this: for people living in 98 percent of the country, ther problem from a nuclear war will be only fallout and fallout is a manageable problem taht can be solved with relatively inexpensive shelters.

Both the government and the news media have done a disservice to the American people by failing to educate them about the realities of nuclear war. Frankly I wish the nuclear hysterics were right because if nuclear war really meant the end of the northern hemisphere, we could relax in the knowledge taht we will never have one since neither we nor the Soviets are suicidal. Unfortunately, they are wrong — civilization will survive and that makes nuclear war more likely to occur.

Elderly exposed to vet X-rays

WASHINGTON — X-ray machines intended for treating livestock and pets have been used on elderly nursing home patients under the Medicare program.

Jack Anderson

What makes this doubly outrageous is that the use of veterinary X-ray equipment on elderly invalids is allowed through a loophole in the 1974 law that set stringent federal safety standards. The loophole permits X-ray machines made before 1974 to be used on Medicare patients without federal approval, as long as they meet state standards.

Of the 262 portable X-ray machines certified for Medicare use, 65 are in California, which has safety standards less stringent than the federal guidelines. A recent Food and Drug Administration memorandum warns that other states may also have lower standards.

In a memo intended for official eyes only, Richard P. Kusserow, inspector general of the Health and Human Services Department, calls attention to "a potentially explosive situation now occurring in California nursing homes (concerning the use of) veterinary equipment on nursing home residents."

The memo adds: "This equipment has not been certified for use on humans and presents a definite health hazard to nursing home patients."

Federal inspectors have also gathered evidence that some Medicare providers are using animal X-ray machines that were made after 1974 and thus are not exempted under the "grandfather" clause. This puts them in direct violation of federal safety standards.

The problem with the veterinary machines and the older models is that they may emit excessive amounts of radiation and may give X-ray doses to greater areas of the body than necessary. They may even leave radiation burns. Yet some X-ray service providers use the unsafe machines because they are cheaper to buy and operate.

FDA experts told my reporters Stephanie Holmes and Tony Capaccio that the animal X-ray machines have been used mainly for low-dose, routine procedures. They pointed out that because the nursing home patients are elderly, the possibility of genetic damage is not significant.

The inspector general noted in his memo that so far only two Medicare providers have been caught illegally using veterinary equipment on nursing home patients. But he added: "Indications are that at least eight other California suppliers are involved in this callous disregard of the consequences of unnecessary radiation exposure."

One supplier, Medical Support Systems of Woodland Hills, Calif., was named in the IG's memo, which said the company's animal X-ray machines "lacked controls for protection of patients and did, in fact, violate federal safety standards."

Though the Health Care Financing Administration, which monitors Medicare, had been told of the problem with Medical Support Systems, the agency apparently took no action. "It appears that Medical Support Systems did, in fact, violate a condition of Medicare reimbursement and at the very least should have been required to make a refund," wrote Kusserow.

I sent the company copies of the complaining documents and requested comment, but the company has made no response. I've learned, however, that company executives told federal investigators there were about 50 machines in use on the West Coast that are similar to theirs.

"We do not know exactly how extensive is the use of veterinary machines on humans," Kusserow wrote, "but indications are it is a growing problem."

Footnote: I have notified Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., chairman of the Special Committee on Aging, of the X-ray problem. He said he will introduce legislation to close the loophole which permits the use of pre-1974 machines on Medicare patients.

Medicare may be near bankruptcy

WASHINGTON — Medicare — a $60 billion hospital care and physician services insurance program for 29 million elderly and disabled Americans — is rapidly edging toward bankruptcy which will occur around 1990 if there is no action to save it.

Unless Congress prescribes a quick cure, Medicare funds will be depleted by 1987 and running increasing deficits in the years afterward, with the program projected to be more than $1 trillion in the red by the year 2005.

"The crisis will be the single most important issue in the budget for the next few years," says a House Ways and Means Committee staffer.

The financing problem is so frightening that the Ways and Means has summoned top experts for a Nov. 29-30 summit conference here to seek some sort of a bail-out plan for the ailing program. The conference will be co-sponsored by the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) and the Congressional Research Service (CRS).

"The magnitude of this financing problem appears to be much larger than the cost-saving potential of policy options under active discussion today," said Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

The rise in medical costs and the increase in the number of aged people have caused the total cost of the program to rise much faster than the payroll tax receipts and subscriber premiums used to pay it.

MEDICARE IS ORGANIZED in two parts — Hospital Insurance (HI) and Supplementary Medical Insurance (SMI). HI covers mainly short-stay hospitalization and is available to eligible enrollees. SMI coverage is voluntary for persons 65 and over and for eligible disabled persons, all of whom must pay a monthly premium to participate. SMI pays doctors' fees, outpatient hospital service and other medical expenses.

Congressional experts insist the crisis is the direct result of doctor and hospital fees which are rising far faster than revenues in the system's HI, now funded by a 1.3 percent payroll tax levied on covered wages and paid by both workers and employers. SMI is funded chiefly by the government's general revenues and fees. Last year, Medicare paid $34.9 billion in benefits, up 19.2 percent from 1981.

The health-care costs, which have risen three times faster than inflation, are further exacerbated by the growing numbers of the elderly, longer life spans and the proliferation of medical services.

On Friday, the Census Bureau announced that the number of Americans aged 65 and over will double between 1980 and 2020, with the elderly who currently make up 12 percent of the population comprising 17 percent by 2020.

Income to the trust funds will total $64.3 billion in calendar year 1983, according to the Tax Foundation.

But the foundation's economists warn that the "luxury of income in excess of outgo will be short-lived" unless Congress is able to work out a compromise.

THE ECONOMISTS CONTEND that if income is to match outgo in the HI between 1983 and 2005, payroll taxes will have to be increased by over 40 percent or benefit growth restrained by about 30 percent.

Foundation economists see even larger problems looming 75 years down the road. According to their projections, the HI program will grow to 3.5 times its 1983 size in relation to taxable wages.

This year HI spending will amount to 2.77 percent of wages and salaries subject to payroll taxes. By 2055, such outlays will grow to 9.37 percent of covered payroll.

Everyone agrees, however, that possible remedies for the shortfall will be even more complex and politically dangerous than the fixes to Social Security's retirement fund.

Experts warn that a possible solution may be a mix of higher taxes, cut benefits, and lower reimbursements to health-care providers.

Congress already made some effort to avert the impending crisis last year when it limited the amount hospitals can be reimbursed for each Medicare patient.

UNDER ANOTHER REFORM enacted earlier this year, Medicare will soon begin paying hospitals a fixed fee for each patient based on the average cost of treating his illness – a plan aimed at curbing the use of test and services.

If hospitals can provide care for less than the average cost, they will be allowed to keep the difference; when the costs are greater, they will have to make up the shortfall.

According to the trustees, this change will help, but not enough.

The latest estimates from the Congressional Budget Office project depletion of HI by the end of the decade, and rapidly growing deficits after that.

While the SMI does not face the prospect of depletion because of automatic transfers from general revenues, these transfers are large and growing rapidly.

President Reagan, who once argued that the medical industry could best control its costs through voluntary efforts, has proposed a number of cost-containment steps, none of them very popular with either doctors or hospitals.

Home care cheaper for sick children

BOSTON (AP) — Children who need respirators to stay alive can be cared for at home far more cheaply than in hospitals, but their daily treatment puts heavy strain on their parents, a study finds.

Increasing numbers of parents have decided to care for these children at home after new federal rules made it easier for them to get health benefits.

The latest study surveyed six Massachusetts families who had been caring for their respirator-dependent youngsters at home for up to seven years.

"Without exception, the parents have expressed their belief that bringing their children home from the hospital has had a beneficial effect on family relations," the researchers wrote.

The children suffered a variety of lung and muscular defects that prevent them from breathing on their own. Most could breathe independently during the day but needed respirators at night.

The federal program makes Medicaid and Supplemental Security Income available to people who otherwise would not qualify for this money to pay the expenses of home care.

The rules were changed after the case of Katie Beckett of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, caught President Reagan's interest two years ago. The Department of Health and Human Services agreed to pay for the child's home treatment so she could be discharged from the hospital.

The latest study, based on 1980 figures, said families often were penalized financially for bringing their children home. However, Dr. Bernard Guyer, one of the authors, said that statement applied to conditions before the federal changes were made.

"I think that as long as the SSI-Medicaid program is effectively implemented, that will no longer be true," he said in an interview.

Home-care costs for the six Massachusetts children ranged from $1,000 to $75,000 a year per child. However, that was 50 to 95 percent lower than hospital costs, which ranged from $150,000 to $400,000 a year.

Heart drugs could cause cardiac arrest

BOSTON (AP) — Cardiac arrest, which kills 400,000 Americans each year, is sometimes caused by the very drugs that are intended to prevent it, a study shows.

Doctors are not sure how many people die from the widely prescribed medicines, but they say they may be harmful for as many as one of five people taking them.

The medicines, known generally as antiarrhythmic drugs, are effective when used properly. But the researchers warned that physicians should not prescribe them unless they are absolutely essential.

In their research, the doctors surveyed 98 people who had survived cardiac arrests, and found the drugs may have caused the seizures in five of them.

"It is, however, impossible to determine whether these five patients are representative of the 400,000 victims of sudden cardiac death in the United States," they concluded.

The study, conducted at Massachusetts General Hospital, was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Dr. Brian McGovern, one of the researchers, said antiarrhythmic drugs are given to hundreds of thousands of people in the United States who suffer irregular heartbeats.

The drugs are intended to prevent their abnormalities from leading to cardiac arrest, in which the heart beats so fast and chaotically that it fails to pump blood and circulation stops.

"In general, the weight of evidence suggests that if they are properly chosen, these drugs can be of a lot of benefit in preventing future recurrences," McGovern said in an interview. "This paper suggests that there is a small subgroup of patients in whom these agents may actually make the problem worse rather than better."

Other research has shown that about 30 percent of the people who die from cardiac arrest are taking antiarrhythmic drugs.

Lee-Permian matchup possible with victories

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Since the Midland Lee Rebels have already packed up and headed east for Fort Worth and won't see this until they return, the possibility of next week can be brought up.

"The Dream Game" will come next week if Odessa Permian can defeat Wichita Falls Rider and Lee can handle the Fort Worth Trimble Tech Bulldogs tonight. Both District 4-5A powers are favored to win tonight, so the possibliility of a rematch between the two teams is a realistic theory at this time.

Of course, business must be taken care of by both Lee and Permian tonight for this to happen. But West Texas has never had a sporting event that would match what a Permian-Lee playoff match would mean.

"I really hope it happens," said Lee coach Spike Dykes of the possibility of Lee again facing Permian. "We may not beat Trimble Tech, but I really hope we do, and I hope Permian wins. I don't think there would be anything greater for West Texas football than for us two to meet again."

There has been some speculation that a Lee-Permian matchup could attract between 30,000 and 40,000 fans. That may be a highly optimistic figure, but it is known that no stadium in the Petro-Plex area could handle anything that approaches those numbers. Lubbock's Jones Stadium as a neutral site may have to be the answer.

Gil Bartosh, Midland's athletic director, said Wednesday that plans have already been made to meet with Permian officials Saturday at 10 a.m.

This planned meeting isn't taking the cart before the horse because all possible plans have to be worked out quickly in playoff situations. For instance, both Lee and Permian have made plans to decide playoff sites and dates with both Wichita Falls Rider and Trimble Tech.

Bartosh said that Lee would talk with Rider by phone in Fort Worth tonight following the game if Lee wins and Permian loses. They would flip by phone for the home site. Permian has a similiar setup with Trimble Tech. Trimble Tech and Rider will also decide tonight if they are the winners.

"Maybe we should let the Odessa and Midland superintendents arm wrestle instead of flipping a coin to decide all we need to decide. We could probably draw a sellout for that too. It might be a way to make a little extra money," joked Bartosh. "Maybe we should meet on the runway out at Air Terminal."

If Permian and Lee were to meet next week, it would mark the first time in District 4-5A history that two league teams have ever met in a playoff situation. Of course, it wasn't possible until last year when the Univeristy Interscholastic League allowed two teams from each district to enter the playoffs.

Even last year, San Angelo and Permian were one beat away from facing each other again. That would have had major interest, but nothing like a Midland-Odessa shootout would generate.

San Angelo lost a regional battle to state runner-up L.D. Bell last year while Permian was eliminated on the same week by John Reddell's Euless Trinity Trojans. Bell and Trinity were from the same district, so they had the rematch with Bell coming out on top in that one.

This priceless matchup can only come about by a 4-5A sweep tonight. Lee has several things to prove tonight. Of course, they want to stay alive in the playoffs, but they also seek the identity of being Lee's best football team ever. No Lee team has ever won 11 games in one season and that will be a reality with a victory over Trimble Tech.

You can hear the Lee-Trimble Tech regional playoff action tonight on both KCRS and KBAT radio stations. They are taking the feed from the Shamrock radio network, which has picked up Class 5A action for the rest of the year. Brad Denton of Dallas will do the Lee-Trimble Tech play-by-play from Amon Carter Stadium for the Shamrock network.

KCRS reports, however, that they will stage a pre-game show prior to the 7:30 p.m. kickoff at Amon Carter Stadium and will also have a live lockerroom report following the game.

Cowboys pass on turkey, eat Cardinals

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Thanksgiving Day has become the Dallas Cowboys' favorite holiday, serving once again as a springboard into the National Football League playoffs.

The Cowboys rolled over the St. Louis Cardinals 35-17 Thursday and counted the following blessings:

—An 11-2 record, their fastest start since 1977.

—A 12-3-1 record on Thanksgiving Day.

—The return of the NFL's worst pass defense from the grave, including a season-high seven sacks of St. Louis quarterback Neil Lomax.

—Tony Dorsett's inspired running which placed him eighth on the all-time list. Dorsett had touchdown runs of 5 and 55 yards, and tallied 102 yards on 17 carries.

—It was Dorsett's 38th 100-yard game. Dallas has won 36 of them.

The Cowboys, who have already clinched a playoff berth, moved a half game ahead of Washington in the torrid National Conference Eastern Division race.

They don't play again for 10 days, traveling to Seattle Dec. 4. Dallas has won 14 of 15 games in its history the game AFTER Thanksgiving.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who has developed a hardline attitude toward his players this year, was most pleased.

"The players went about this game in a very businesslike manner, and because they did, I'm going to give them three days off," Landry said. "They've played well the last two games and the break will do them good."

Dallas gave up a 71-yard Lomax to Roy Green touchdown pass in the first period then built a 35-10 lead and coasted.

"We had a good game on defense and that's what we needed," said Landry.

Lomax had a six-yard touchdown pass to Ottis Anderson in the final seconds against a prevent defense as St. Louis dropped to 5-7-1.

Dorsett passed Larry Csonka on the all-time list with 8,153 yards.

Quarterback Danny White had an exceptional outing. He passed 15-yards to Butch Johnson for a touchdown, ran four yards for a score, and connected on 24 of 31 passes for 237 yards.

"We're in control of our own destiny now," said Dorsett. "The last two games we've come out and taken control and that's what we want going into the playoffs.

"It's just executing, simple blocking and tackling. When we do it right, we're as good or better than the rest. When we do it, we're awesome."

St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan said, "Dorsett does a helluva job. He just pops out of there and goes 55 yards and that's the game."

Asked who he thought would win when Washington and Dallas tangle here Dec. 11, Hanifan said, "It's going to be a whale of a game. Right now I think the Redskins are the best team but I think Dallas has the necessary pesonnel to cause the Redskins a helluva lot of problems."

Lomax added, "Dallas is always good. They did a lot of things to keep me off balance. I think they have a pretty darn tough defensive team."

White said the short work week favored Dallas over St. Louis.

"We had a simple game plan," he said. "We didn't have time to outthink ourselves."

White's 24 completions gave him 270 for the season, breaking Roger Staubach's club record of 268 in 1979.

Marvis Frazier challenges champ in Vegas

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Marvis Frazier, with only 10 pro fights to his credit, challenges Larry Holmes, who nearly 10 years ago was a sparring partner for Frazier's father, tonight in a 12-round bout.

Holmes says he bothered Smokin' Joe Frazier with his movement and left jab when he helped the former heavyweight champion prepare for his second fight with Muhammad Ali, which he lost Jan. 28, 1974, and he feels will be too much for Frazier's son.

"There are a lot of things I can do to you that you've never had done before," Holmes told Marvis Frazier at a pre-fight news conference. "You're going to see a lot of things coming at you that you never saw coming at you before."

"If he gets destroyed at this stage of his career it could be the end of his career, the end of his development," said Eddie Futch, Holmes' trainer who trained Joe Frazier for most of his 37 fights and who has known the 23-year-old Marvis since he was 6.

But Joe, who is his son's manager and trainer, and Marvis Frazier think Marvis' time is at hand despite his paucity of pro fights, all of which he won.

"If I do what I'm told, there's no way I can lose," said Marvis.

"If I didn't think he would do it, we wouldn't make the fight," said Smokin' Joe. "Marvis can do anything he sets his mind to and he's set his mind to this. So have I."

"I think he'll win it for his father," said Joey Giardello, the former middleweight champion, who is a member of the Frazier camp. "He'd crawl into the ring for his father."

The 34-year-old Holmes is a 4½-1 favorite to win the fight, which he and most people who are involved in or follow boxing consider a title match even though the WBC refused to give it championship sanction.

Frazier cannot win the title, according to the WBC, but Holmes can lose it.

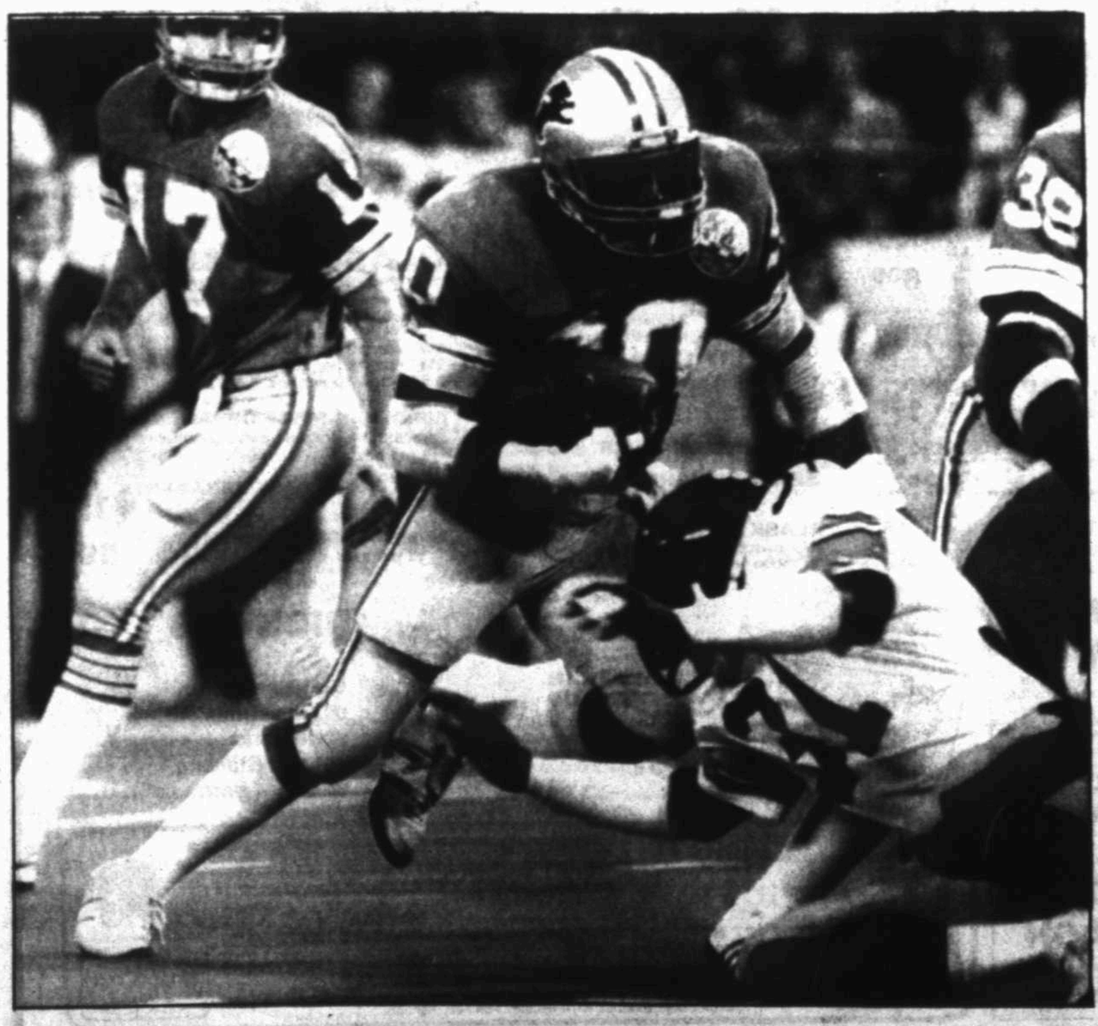

"I'm the world champion," said the unbeaten Holmes, who counts 16 WBC title defenses among his 44 victories. "I will, if Marvis Frazier beats me, consider Marvis Frazier as champion."

Jose Sulaiman, the WBC president, has said the fight isn't sanctioned because Frazier hasn't fought at least 15 fights or beaten two ranked opponents in order to be ranked among the top-10 contenders.

So, if Frazier wins, there will be no WBC champion. Sulaiman said there also is a rule that when a champion loses a fight within his class weight limit the title is declared vacant. There is no weight limit for the heavyweight division.

The fight, approved as a nontitle match by the Nevada State Athletic Commission, and billed as a "12-Round Heavyweight Superfight," will be held indoors at the 4,500-seat Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion.

It is scheduled to start at 7:03 p.m., PDT, and be televised by NBC during a telecast running from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Sims leads Detroit

Lions feast on Pittsburgh, 45-3

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — As long as tailback Billy Sims continues to run like a man looking for a five-year contract, Coach Monte Clark feels his Detroit Lions have a reasonable shot at the National Football League playoffs.

"Billy is just playing like Billy Sims played for us a couple years ago," Clark said following the Lions 45-3 drubbing of the Pittsburgh Steelers on Thanksgiving. "It's super. I'm glad to see it, because he's the guy we need down the stretch."

Sims, going over 100 yards for the third successive game, gained 106 on 26 caries and scored two touchdowns as the Lions improved their record to 7-6, one-half game behind the first-place Minnesota Vikings in the NFC's Central Division.

It was the sixth victory in the past eight games for the Lions, playing catchup since stumbling to a 1-4 start this season.

"I don't know where this team has been," Sims said. "I've kind of been looking for it, myself."

The defeat left Pittsburgh 9-4 and narrowed the Steelers' lead to 1½ games over the Cleveland Browns in the AFC Central.

"Detroit played magnificent football today," Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll said. "They beat us in every phase of the game — kicking, blocking, tackling ... everything. Billy Sims is one of the outstanding players in the NFL today."

Noll, who watched as the Lions' defense picked off five Steelers' passes and sacked quarterback Cliff Stoudt twice, called Pittsburgh "a beat-up football team" that needed rest. "The injuries have been piling up on us," he said. "I think I'm going to lobby to outlaw Thursday games on the grounds of player safety."

Stoudt, who had taken every snap this season in the absence of Terry Bradshaw, completed only nine of 25 passes for 83 yards before being lifted for Mark Malone in the fourth quarter.

The Steelers' defense sacked Detroit quarterback Eric Hipple four times, but Hipple still managed to complete 10 of 18 passes for 153 yards and two touchdowns without an interception.

"I think our ability to go down and be able to put on a sustained drive was a key," Hipple said. "This is a good time to be peaking — coming into the stretch — that's for sure."

The Lions asserted themselves right away, taking the opening kickoff and driving 83 yards in 11 plays, with Sims diving over right guard for a 2-yard TD. There was only 5:17 gone in the first quarter, but the game was essentially over.

Eddie Murray kicked a 27-yard field goal and Hipple found Ulysses Norris alone in the end zone for a 13-yard TD strike. Gary Anderson had a 38-yard field goal early in the second quarter for Pittsburgh, but Norris and Hipple teamed up on a 4-yard TD pass midway in the period and the Lions led 24-3 at the half.

Sims picked up another 2-yard TD in the third quarter and the Lions continued the rout in the fourth period on an 81-yard punt return for a score by Robbie Martin and a 5-yard touchdown pass from backup quarterback Gary Danielson to rookie wide receiver Jeff Chadwick.

"For e brief moment," said Pittsburgh running back Franco Harris, "there was a feeling of being powerless. But that's all part of this game. You have to shake it off and get ready for the next one."

Harris, pursuing Jim Brown's NFL career rushing record of 12,312 yards, carried the ball only five times, gaining 16 yards. He is 539 shy of the record.

In all, Detroit had 25 first downs to Pittsburgh's 10, gained 328 yards to Pittsburgh's 218 and controlled the ball for 38 minutes, 21 seconds to Pittsburgh's 21:19.

East Germans hot on visas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — East German Olympic officials are angry about the wording of visa applications that lump Communist Party membership with heinous crimes and contagious diseases.

East German representatives sent a sharply worded protest over the questionnaire to Peter V. Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, the Los Angeles Times reported Thursday.

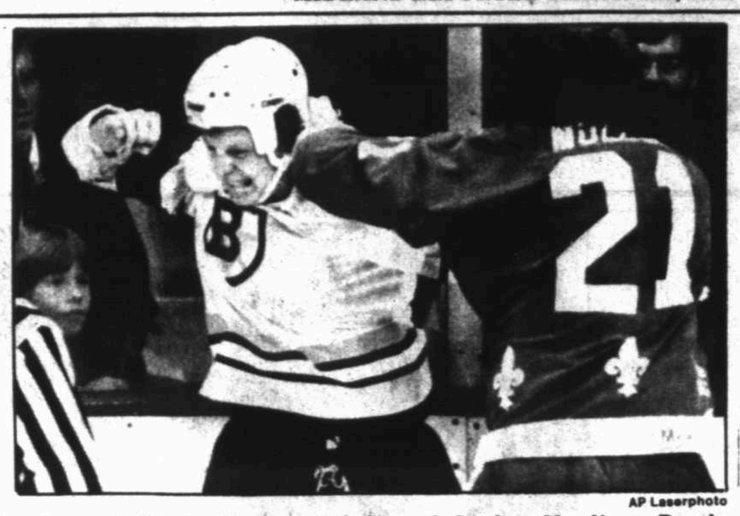

Ueberroth promised to inquire in Washington, D.C., about the document and suggested that at least its structure might be rearranged, the newspaper reported.

The State Department questionnaire lists membership in the Communist Party in the same category as the commission of a heinous crime, drug addiction or the carrying of a contagious disease. All are reasons why a person can be denied a visa.

The questionnaire asks applicants to mark "yes" or "no" as to whether any of the items apply to them.

It also asks them to explain in writing, or in a personal visit to U.S. consular offices in East Berlin, the circumstances regarding any item marked "yes."

Under international Olympic rules, athletes from around the world can participate in the Games without having to undergo normal visa formalities. But the forms must be filled out by others who travel with the teams, such as trainers and doctors.

Saints under scrutiny from FBI

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Some members of the New Orleans Saints football team are under investigation by the FBI and the federal Drug Enforcement Administration, a television station says.

WWL-TV said it did not know how many players allegedly are involved, but quoted unidentified sources Wednesday as saying that various players' names cropped up during undercover investigation of several suspected major drug dealers.

Federal agents have questioned some players, both at the National Football League team's camp in suburban Metairie and at federal offices downtown, the station said.

WWL quoted unidentified federal sources as saying that some players may be using illegal drugs or bankrolling purchases for resale, but that the team as a whole is not under suspicion.

According to WWL, one name that surfaced also had been mentioned in connection with the case of former running back Mike Strachan, who was convicted Aug. 25, 1982, of conspiracy and of selling cocaine to friends in the NFL.

He was sentenced Sept. 25, 1982, to three years in prison.

Mizzou opens against Heels

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Missouri Coach Norm Stewart sent his assistant, Bob Sundvold, to watch North Carolina's exhibition game with the Yugoslavian national basketball team. Sundvold wasn't happy with what he saw.

"This is definitely not the team we want to open the season with," Sundvold said after the Tar Heels downed the Yugoslavs 75-65. But the Tigers will do exactly that Saturday against the top-ranked team in the Associated Press poll.

Missouri lost three starters, including National Basketball Association first-round draftees Steve Stipanovich and Bob's brother Jon Sundvold, to graduation. The Tar Heels are without Jimmy Braddock, the graduated point guard.

The major question mark for Dean Smith's Tar Heels centered around Braddock's replacement. Smith gave the job to Steve Hale.

"Steve has certainly earned it over the six-week period (of practice) mainly from a defensive standpoint," Smith said. "Steve didn't shoot as well (against Yugoslavia) as he's been shooting but I'm not worried about that."

With returning stars Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins and starters Matt Doherty and Brad Daugherty, Carolina seems to be loaded.

"I think we have depth," said Smith.

Meanwhile, defending national champion North Carolina State, fresh off an impressive 76-64 upset of 1983 NCAA runnerup Houston in the Tipoff Classic last Saturday, is part of a strong field in the Great Alaska Shootout.

The Shootout opens today in the glittering new $30 million, 8,000-seat George Sullivan Sports Arena in Anchorage. The previous five Shootouts were held in the dingy Buckner Fieldhouse at Fort Richardson, with about 3,000 seats. N.C. State, with two starters back — championship game hero Lorenzo Charles and Cozell McQueen — faces the host team, Division II Alaska-Anchorage.

Charles grabbed 13 rebounds and scored a career-high 23 points against third-ranked Houston.

No. 14 Arkansas, with three starters returning from last year's 26-4 team, plays Fordham; 20th-ranked Oklahoma, led by All-American center Wayman Tisdale, goes against Southern California, and Santa Clara takes on New Mexico, which is coming off a three-year probation.

In other action tonight, ninth-ranked UCLA is at home to Idaho State; No. 13 Fresno State hosts the Sun Met Classic, facing North Dakota State. In the other opening round game, it's Northeastern against Purdue; Georgia, rated 16th, opposes Georgia State and Middle Tennessee plays host Western Kentucky at the Wendy's Classic, and No. 12 Michigan State entertains Central Michigan in the Spartan Cutlass Classic, with Western Michigan taking on Fairfield in the other first-round game.

In addition to the continuation of those tournaments on Saturday, No. 6 Louisville is at No. 2 Kentucky in the first regular season meeting between the schools since the 1921-22 season; Houston hosts No. 17 Kansas, with Larry Brown debuting as Jayhawks coach; No. 18 DePaul, with Ray Meyer beginning his last season as Blue Demons' coach, at Northern Illinois; No. 7 Iowa at home to Illinois Wesleyan; Johns Hopkins at eighth-ranked Maryland; Long Beach State at UCLA; Miami, Ohio at No. 19 Indiana, and North Texas State at fifth-ranked Memphis State.

"We're in a perfect position," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum. "You like to open against a good team that you can learn something from, a team you're not supposed to beat anyway."

Sam Bowie, Kentucky's 7-foot-1 center who missed the last two seasons recuperating from a broken leg, returns for the Wildcats.

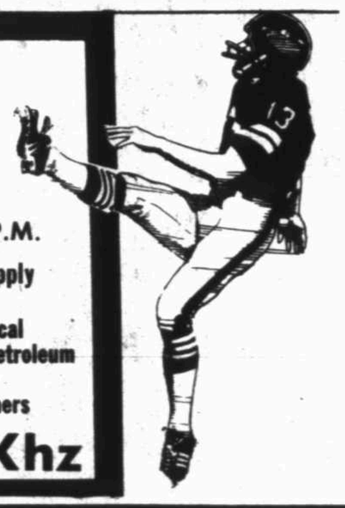

"If we don't rebound better, we're in for a long, long season," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis after his team lost the battle of the boards 41-36 to N.C. State. Because of that Lewis has been considering a shuffling of his lineup.

Navy Midshipmen gave the famous "Hollywood" sign in Los Angeles a slight renovation before today's Army-Navy clash at the Rose Bowl.

Army-Navy gets a day in the sun

By STEVE HARVEY
(c) 1983, Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Midshipman Thomas Henwood's excitement at taking part in the airlift of 9,000 West Point and Annapolis students here for the Army-Navy game Friday afternoon was somewhat muted when he learned where he'd be bunking: the rectory of American Martyrs Catholic Church in Manhattan Beach.

Henwood and two classmates had been assigned Father John Higgins as a host during their four-day stay this week.

"The other guys (middies) were really ribbing us before we left," Henwood said with a laugh Thursday. "They said, 'You're staying with a priest? You won't have any fun.' But it's turned out to be a real good time. Last night we partied with (Los Angeles Raiders quarterback) Jim Plunkett."

"They felt a lot better when I told them over the phone that Manhattan Beach has the most beautiful women in the world," said Father Higgins.

"Yeah, I think we'll take a couple home," said Henwood, 18, of Cherry Hill, N.J.

The airlift of cadets and middies in 40 chartered planes was billed as the largest ever in peacetime. Certainly it was the largest ever for a game involving two football teams with 2-8 records. By the way, Navy will be led into the Rose Bowl by a military man named Napoleon (running star Napoleon McCallum).

The operation was the culmination of three years of work by Pasadena, Calif., Chamber of Commerce members.

Not only did the chamber have to persuade West Point and Naval Academy officials to move the annual game here from Philadelphia (where crowds had been sparse), they then had to find families willing to supply the students with room, board (including Thanksgiving meal) and airfare so there'd be no government expense.

Everything was set by April, when ABC suddenly asked that the game be moved back a week — from Dec. 3 to today — for ratings reasons. "They (ABC) aparently thought they might be able to televise a key game to decide a bowl invitation that day (Dec.3)," said Rolfe Arnhym of the Pasadena Chamber. "We really had a mad scramble then."

Eventually, it was mission accomplished, except for one one item that couldn't be procured: sunshine.

On the day of his arrival midshipman Brendan Fahy was informed that the high temperature here had been in the mid-60s. "Doggone, it was 70 in Annapolis," said Fahy, 20, of East Rutherford, N.J.

Of course, no operation like this is without human miscalculations, and the most serious one this week was a shortage of dance partners for Friday night's Cadet Hop.

"We had anticipated a thousand cadets would sign up for the hop," said organizer Edna Krueger, "and we had lined up enough ladies for them. But then we found out 3,605 cadets had signed up."

As part of an emergency recruiting drive, Krueger posted 200 notices at area universities and contacted student body presidents, sororities and modeling agencies. "We wanted attractive young women," she explained. "After all, these men are the cream of the crop."

Krueger completed the desired buildup of dance partners by early Wednesday.

One volunteer was Judy Baxter, 21, a University of Southern California senior.

"Three thousand clean-cut, bright, ambitious guys — how can you lose?" Baxter said patriotically.

Also filled was a request by 96 female cadets for civilian men.

Cadet Sharri Davis, 19, of Kansas City, Mo., was asked why civilian men were needed.

"The guys (male cadets) don't want to dance with West Point girls," Davis said.

So this was a bit of retaliation?

"I guess you could put it that way," responded cadet Kimberly Cochrane, 18, of Johnsonville, N.Y.

Aside from such unofficial maneuvers as the placement of a GO NAVY banner over the HOLLYWOOD sign and attempts to find each other's mascots, the cadets and middies also made the obligatory visit to Disneyland and were scheduled to march together for the first time ever in Pasadena Friday morning.

Chaps win, 82-75

AMARILLO— Midland College coach Jerry Stone used a new strategy Thursday in the opening round of the Amarillo Tournament and the move paid off as the Chaparrals beat Murray State 82-75.

The Chaps' coach began the game with his two big men, Teviin Binns and Jackie Phinnessee, on the bench. Stone's measure was designed to keep the two out of foul trouble.

Binns and Phinnessee finished the game with only two fouls apiece. Binns, however, did much more, scoring a career-high 27 points and pulling down 13 rebounds.

Phinnessee added nine points for MC. The Chaps lead 34-32 at the half, but opened up the game in the second half. Guard Zeak Williams contributed five steals and 10 points to pace the Chap second half, which MC lead by as much as 11. Murray State's Carl Davis had 24 points in the losing effort, and Karl McCauley added 19.

Midland College moves to a second round game against Ranger Junior College today at 6 p.m. Ranger knocked off Hutchinson 66-65 to advance.

MC is now 7-2 on the year.

Flames tie Winnipeg

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Barry Long's first stroke of genius as the Winnipeg Jets' new head coach paid off with a point in the National Hockey League standings.

Long substituted Scott Arniel onto the team's top line for the third period Thursday night, and the left wing responded with two goals as Winnipeg skated to a 4-4 tie with the Calgary Flames.

The night's other game saw Peter and Marian Stastny score two goals each to propel the Quebec Nordiques to a 6-3 victory over the Bruins in Boston.

Arniel replaced Morris Lukowich on a line with center Laurie Boschman and Lucien DeBlois. The chemistry worked as Winnipeg turned a 3-1 deficit into a 4-3 lead.

"I hadn't seen any ice in the first two periods," Arniel said. "So at least I was fresh."

Long, who took over as head coach earlier this week from General Manager John Ferguson, said one of his first assignments in turning the basement-dwelling Jets around will be to "get everyone involved ... build their confidence."

"Our biggest job, next to the confidence and involvement factors, is to work on our game inside the defensive zone," he said.

It was poor defensive play which almost cost Winnipeg the game.

Lanny McDonald batted a waist-high rebound past Jets goaltender Doug Soetaert with 12 seconds left in the third period to send the game into overtime.

The goal was McDonald's second of the night and came with Calgary goaltender Reggie Lemelin on the bench for an extra skater. The right wing credited Doug Risebrough and Jamie Hislop with help on the tying marker.

Calgary dominated the overtime, outshooting the Jets 7-0, but was unable to beat Soetaert.

New James Dean not conversationalist

By CORINNE F. HAMMETT

ENTERTAINMENT

NEW YORK — The heir to the late James Dean's smouldering, hyper-intense, movie-screen rebel legend has a shy grin, a slow, husky-soft whisper of a voice and a manner of answering questions that, if you didn't know better, would brand him as somebody kind of slow to respond.

At 19, Matt Dillon — his real name — has been hit with a cyclone of movie success. Discovered at 14 when he was hooking school, he's appeared in seven films and one television feature.

Dillon, who looks like any ordinary New York-bred youth in tight, faded jeans, T-shirt and black leather boots, has been on screen as a rebel, a bully and a naive adolescent. Now he's got to talk about himself, off-screen.

He finds it difficult, not because he doesn't know how he feels about all this, or how he tackles each of his roles in a way that makes each one unique and blazingly real, but because he doesn't seem to have the proper actor-interview-patter in his repertoire.

Asked about being called a new movie sex symbol, he says, "Hey! I didn't do it! Not me!" The answer leaps from him several decibels louder than his normal speaking voice. After a long pause, he says, quietly, "I'm an actor. I didn't set out to be a sex symbol."

Talking about his newest film, "Rumble Fish" in which his Rusty James character most closely resembles James Dean, he lets slip a remark that the movie's surrealistic images are like "when you read a poem and you think you know what it means and then later you find out it means something else."

He has read, he says, all of the S.E. Hinton novels, and "Rumble Fish" was his favorite: "It had a little something more. What? I don't know, just the whole idea. The father, a lawyer turned derelict, an interesting thing, it gave a flavor to it. When I read 'Tex' and 'The Outsiders,' they came up bright colors in my mind — reds, oranges. When I read 'Rumble Fish,' it was gray and black. Like a dream."

Francis Ford Coppola, who cast Dillon in "The Outsiders" and "Rumble Fish," filmed the latter in blacks, whites and grays, using infrequent bursts of bright color. But Dillon isn't comfortable with the idea of "Rumble Fish" as an artistic vision. "It's just a movie," he says quietly.

Dillon's comments — and they're rarely more than a couple of sentences at a time — keep going back to "being honest" and "being real." In a film, those are the qualities that best define a Dillon role. Even when he's hampered by a movie that has deep flaws in direction, as 'Rumble Fish" does, Dillon digs in and comes out unscathed.

Dillon admits that movies have changed him. "Oh, yeah, you're just different. You find out what you want to do, not that I know what I'm gonna do next, but I feel I'm doing the right thing, making my moves. I'm real happy right now. Maybe I'm more outgoing, but we can't all be that way all the time, we have to shut up every once in awhile."

He tugs at his dark hair, now grown longer since he finished work on "Rumble Fish" a year ago. He says with a grin: "Actually, the picture was finished yesterday. Francis never stops." Coppola, says Dillon, was like "a big daddy" to the cast and crew, pitching himself into the project with furious energy. "While Francis is working on a picture, he seems happy because that's what he does best." Once the camera stops rolling and Coppola has to deal with the production end, his enthusiasm drops.

While Dillon says working with "big daddy" Coppola is "comforting," he says he is drawn to the character he plays, not the director.

Ballet Folklorico de Mexico dazzling

NEW YORK (AP) — One may think he or she has seen it all before, but the Ballet Folklorico de Mexico soon dazzles that idea away. The 55-member dance company, which opened a week's engagement at the City Center on Tuesday, is more vibrant, with more colorfully costumed spectacles, than ever before.

The company, founded in 1952, started visiting New York in 1962. For a time, it came every two years; the present appearance is the first in five years.

Folk dancing sounds repetitious and simple. But for this company, Amalia Hernandez has researched the Spanish and Indian cultures of early Mexico. And she has made the dances and rituals theatrical. Nothing looks either repetitious or simple.

The opening dance of nine presented on Tuesday, "The Concheros," looks like something one would be eager to travel far, to an uncomfortable place, to see if one were in Mexico. Male dancers in green, with collars over muscular torsos, and red and blue feathered headdresses, dance in patterns. This is obviously important ceremony, but it is all danced, no mere walking around.

One dance, "Tenochtitlan," the Aztec name for Mexico City, is new to New York, and in abstract form instead of a depiction of an ancient dance.

There are vivacious solos, come-hither dances for couples, a virtuoso rope twirler, a battle with men "wearing" horses and an officer executed to a recorded overkill of shots, dancing almost like flamenco but freer.

'Memorial Day' confronts special Vietnam experience

NEW YORK (AP) — Gibby is tormented by something that happened in Vietnam a dozen years ago, and Walker either won't, or can't, help him deal with it.

"Whose fault was it, Walks?" Gibby pleads. "That's all I think about...Whose fault was it?...Don't you think about it?"

"Not if I can help it," Walker replies.

And when Gibby shoots himself, the cops want to know why. Walker either won't, or can't, tell them.

It's an intriguing start for "Memorial Day," Sunday night on CBS. The two-hour, made-for-TV movie stars Mike Farrell as Matt Walker, Shelley Fabares as his wife, Ellie, and Edward Herrmann as Walker's friend and colleague, Ned Larwin.

Robert Walden, Rossi in "Lou Grant," appears in the one scene as Tom Gibbs.

"Memorial Day" treats a difficult subject with sensitivity and not a lot of mawkish sentimentality.

The film, however, has its flaws: a subplot involving Walker's ethics as an attorney is included to make a point, but comes across as just so much stuffing. And Ellie, clearly concerned about her husband's increasing moodiness, persists to the point of irritation in seeking the cause.

Farrell, who spent seven seasons as Capt. B.J. Hunnicut in CBS' recently discontinued "M*A*S*H," performs his most difficult scene, toward the end of the film, with passion.

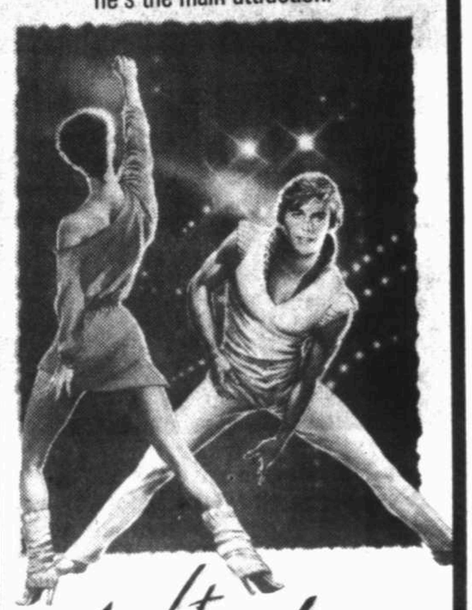

Walker might have kept what happened in Vietnam to himself, for the rest of his life, had he not been surprised by three of his buddies from the Marine Corps. Two seem to be doing well, but Gibbs is in trouble: "Looks like I'm the only misfit in the bunch," he says. "My last job was pumping gas..."

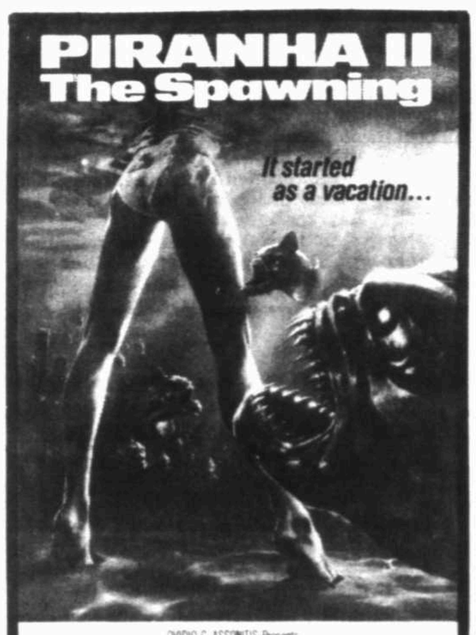

That alone is not so bad. The problem is, Gibby lost the job several months ago, along with his wife and young son. What's more, he's been AWOL from the service since 1971.

Gibby calls Walker in desperation, but when the lawyer arrives at his hillside home, the wretched fellow is dead, a bullet in his head.

Several days later, Walker gets a letter from Gibby, asking that he explain to his son, who now lives with Gibbs' parents in Texas, what happened in Vietnam.

Shelley Duvall can't break 'ratty' appointment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With a firm but gentle smile, Shelley Duvall warns that an interview must end within the hour. The reason? "I have an appointment with some rats."

The rats, she explains, will arrive in the company of a trainer to audition for "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," a forthcoming installment of her "Faerie Tale Theater" — a pay-cable TV series which, if not in itself a fairy tale, has to be one of the most charming Hollywood success stories around.

Where else — on any series, cable or broadcast — can you regularly tune in such hot stars as Christopher Reeve, Robin Williams and Mick Jagger?

And what a treat to see the likes of Beverly D'Angelo and Joan Collins rendered all but unrecognizable in makeup and costumes inspired by the greats of storybook illustration — Maxfield Parrish, Jean Cocteau, Arthur Rackham.

The fairy tales have undergone a bit of tinkering too. Without changing the storylines that have made tales like "Sleeping Beauty," "The Frog Prince" classics, a stable of top-flight directors and writers have injected enough whimsical humor to make them appealing to adults and children alike.

Small wonder, then, that "Faerie Tale Theater" has proven a commercial success on the Showtime network, or that it recently earned seven nominations for the ACE cable awards — "more than any other program in history," Miss Duvall, 34, says proudly.

Not bad for a first-time producer, especially one that was reluctant to make her producing debut in television.

In fact, Miss Duvall — a lean and leggy actress best known for her work in such Robert Altman films as "Brewster McCloud," "Three Women," "Nashville" and, most recently, "Popeye" — got the idea for "Faerie Tale Theater" at a time when she was planning to produce "Even Cowgirls Get the Blues" for film.

"I just got the idea (for 'Faerie Tale Theater') during 'Popeye,'" she recalls. "I just thought, wouldn't it be great if we could do the classic fairy tales — I mean, it's an untapped natural resource."

An avid collector since her teens of antique, illustrated fairy tales, Miss Duvall says she thought the concept was such a natural that someone else would do it. No one did, so she took things into her own hands.

"I thought, 'Well, I'll start talking to my friends, who are also actors and also stars, and see if they'd be interested," she says. "Because nobody's done for video, or for film, a sort of group effort — like summer stock, almost, only on video."

The friends proved responsive, to the point where the cast credits for "Faerie Tale Theater" read like a Who's Who of contemporary Hollywood. The money isn't the draw — Miss Duvall says the show operates under a "favored nations" contract system, meaning all stars are paid the same.

"I think it helped, me having been an actress before, and it certainly helped, me knowing all the other stars," she admits. But she insists that the real attraction is a chance to have "fun — fun for a change while you work."

"I was so tired of hearing everyone gripe about 'the deal in Hollywood has become more important than the art,'" she says.

Her own deals were not hard to come by: the shows; which cost about $500,000 apiece, are jointly financed by Showtime and Gaylord Television Entertainment, a production company that has done "Hee Haw" for 14 years.

Once 26 episodes are completed, the companies will get a chance to recoup money through syndication. Meanwhile, some of the shows are being released on videocassette and disc. They are also appearing in 15 European nations.

Originally, Miss Duvall says she envisioned filming the 50-minute fairy tales, but the cost was prohibitive. So she turned to video, but she was determined that her video would be superior to the flat fare she had always disliked on broadcast television.

As a result, "Faerie Tale Theater" has pioneered the use of new filters and other technological advances that have made Miss Duvall a video convert — as well as some of the actors and directors she works with.

"There has been a feeling about television for a long time amongst people who do films," she admits. "They always condescended to it, thinking, 'Well, it's not really an art, like filmmaking is.'

Air Florida, Boeing Co. pay $50 million in crash damage claim settlements

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Air Florida and Boeing Co. have paid more than $50 million in damage settlements to survivors of last year's Air Florida jet crash into a Washington bridge and to relatives of the 78 people killed in the tragedy, according to attorneys familiar with the lawsuits.

In what has turned out to be one of the speediest resolutions ever of damage claims in an air crash, 83 of the 86 suits for the injuries and deaths of people on the plane or on the bridge already have been settled, almost all of them out of court without trials.

U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green oversaw settlement of a majority of the cases and is largely credited by the attorneys with managing the suits in such an efficient manner that the Air Florida case is winding up with unusual speed compared to similar air crash cases, which often have dragged on for years.

Green has sealed the exact size of all of the settlements won here by the relatives and survivors, but the attorneys estimated the total and said the final value of the payments will almost certainly be considerably more — perhaps as much as $100 million to $150 million — because many who sued for damages will be paid over a period of 20 years or more, allowing them to earn substantial income by investing the basic payments.

Despite the official secrecy surrounding the settlements, the size of some of them is known. Desmond T. Barry of New York, one of Air Florida's attorneys, said fewer than a dozen of the settlements totaled more than $1 million apiece. Many of the other settlements were for substantially less than $1 million.

ATTORNEY DONALD W. Madole of Washington, one of the nation's premier air crash lawyers, represented 50 of the Air Florida families in their suits. While he declined to discuss specific settlement amounts, he said larger amounts generally went to families who lost a sole wage earner, such as a businessman with young children and a nonworking wife.

By contrast, he said smaller amounts were paid in the deaths of elderly people who did not provide financial support for anyone but themselves or young, single people who also were not supporting anyone else.

"There has to be different dollars and cents figures on these cases," Green said in an interview. "Each one had to be looked at differently."

In one of the larger settlements, survivor Priscilla Tirado, who was rescued with four others from the dangerously cold Potomac waters, received $3.25 million to compensate for her injuries and the deaths of her husband and her 2-month-old son. However, the amount Tirado, 23, eventually will receive will be substantially more, through use of a trust fund in which payments from the airline will earn annual interest.

In another large settlement, relatives of Chicago-area executive Chalmers McIlwaine received $2.4 million under an agreement approved by a Chicago judge.

IN ONE OF THE FEW cases that has gone to trial, a Texas jury awarded relatives of William Zondler, a Dallas man killed in the crash, a total of $2.54 million. Barry said the airline has paid $1.54 million of that amount but has appealed the remaining $1 million in damages because it was awarded for mental anguish Zondler's family said they suffered as a result of his death.

"Our position is that Texas law does not permit (awards for mental anguish) and we've appealed," Barry said.

In two other cases, Barry said the airline's settlement offers have thus far been rejected.

The other outstanding case involves the District of Columbia government, which still has a suit pending against Air Florida for the damage, since repaired, that was done to the bridge when the Air Florida Boeing 737 jetliner slammed into it on Jan. 13, 1982, during a blinding snowstorm and then plunged into the icy Potomac River.

Madole said the overall damages paid by Air Florida and Boeing, the plane's manufacturer, would total more than $50 million, without taking into account the long-term financial plans that would considerably boost that figure.

BOTH HE AND Barry, as well as a Boeing spokesman, declined to divulge what portions the airline and Boeing respectively are paying of the total. However, a trade publication, Business Journal, earlier this year reported that Boeing's share totaled $10 million. Such a share would be generally consistent with the conclusions drawn by the National Transportation Safety Board after its investigation into the crash.

The board in August 1982, ruled pilot error was the probable cause of the accident because the crew of the twin-engine jetliner took off in a heavy snowstorm despite the presence of snow and ice on the wings and made other errors as well.

But the safety board also said that a lesser contributing factor in the accident was the "known inherent ... characteristics" of the Boeing 737s to "pitch up" or rise suddenly at the nose when "even small amounts of snow or ice" are on the wings' leading edges.

Safety board findings are not admissible in court, but the attorneys were aware of the federal agency's findings. Still, lawyers for the survivors and victims' relatives faced the task of collecting their own testimony and assembling a vast collection of documents to try to pinpoint legal blame for the accident and, thus, liability for damages.

Damage suits in the Air Florida crash were filed in numerous courts throughout the country, often in the home states of the passengers. But most of them eventually were consolidated here and assigned, by routine drawing, to Green.

GREEN APPOINTED Madole as head of a three-member panel of attorneys representing the crash victims. Panel members were responsible for all of the complex discovery of information about the accident. Another attorney was named to act as a liaison between Green and all of the parties in the case. She also set a strict deadline — last Jan. 31 — for completion of the discovery and blocked out six weeks of her time, starting March 31, for a trial to determine who was liable for damages in the crash.

"I had an absolute determination that this case was going to move along as rapidly as possible," Green recalled. "When I set certain dates I meant it. I was very serious about meeting these dates."

Madole said he and other attorneys took testimony from 87 witnesses during their discovery, including some in Great Britain, and accumulated 100,000 pages of records from Air Florida, Boeing and other companies. The attorneys videotaped the testimony of, among others, Air Florida pilots, as well as that of officials of the airline, Boeing, other companies and the Federal Aviation Administration.

"We were ready to try the case," Madole said.

But shortly before the trial was scheduled to start, Green said she "had a freewheeling discussion" at the conference table in her chambers with the attorneys in the case and representatives of Lloyd's of London, the insurance carrier for both Air Florida and Boeing. In the end, the two companies agreed to accept their liability for the accident.

THUS, THERE WAS no need for a trial to determine liability, but the amount of damages to be awarded each family still had to be decided. Green was determined that the time she had set aside for the trial would not be wasted. She ordered the attorneys to appear in her chambers for mandatory damage settlement conferences in each case. The conferences were held four days a week during April and the first half of May.

Green said the typical conference lasted a half day, a period in which she met first with the victim's attorneys, told the lawyers "to make him or her human to me" and inquired how much in damages was being sought. The judge ordered that relatives of the victims be in the federal courthouse here so they could consult regularly with their attorneys.

The judge said she often suggested a figure that was lower than that being sought. After meeting with the victims' lawyers, she met with attorneys for the companies to see how much they were willing to offer.

Green said she was careful not to mention to the opposing attorneys the amounts each side was willing to accept, but rather made general comments that the victims' relatives had dropped their request "a little" or "substantially" or that the airline had increased its offer by such similarly vague amounts.

"In most cases," the judge said, "we settled right here within that half a day. The few who did not, settled within a few days, or in one case three weeks later."

Green said the battery of attorneys in the case was "able to parry with each other, negotiate with each other, argue with each other, but almost invariably on a gentlemanly basis."

THE RESULT WAS the heretofore unheard of speed with which the suits were settled.

"She saved everybody years of trial time," Madole concluded. "I know of no other (air crash) case where it was settled this quickly. The defendants made fair offers and negotiated in a proper manner. They saved their clients a lot of money" by settling the cases rather than going to trial.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average		39	8.54	8.56
(Averages for all 247 taxable funds)

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date. g - one time sales charge. r - restricted availability.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 247 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 decreased $512.7 million to $163.1 billion for the week ended November 22, 1983. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 8.54% from 8.56%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 8.56% from 8.57%. The taxable funds average maturity increased one day to 39 days after holding three weeks at 38 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Taxable money fund assets experienced across-the-board declines this week, for a total outflow of $513 million. Seasonal factors, such as stepped-up spending and the recent upswing in the stock market, are probably responsible for this week's asset decline."

French business fires first shot

PARIS (AP) — French business, facing a new get-tough attitude by unions, fired the first shot Wednesday in the war over 1984 salaries by announcing an end to wage-price indexing, a move that could lead to a major wave of labor unrest.

All the elements appeared in place for a showdown between labor, seeking to protect purchasing power, and management, trying to hold the line on wages and prices. Caught in the middle is President Francois Mitterrand's anti-inflation program.

As labor and management prepared for end-of-the-year wage negotiations, the French employers' association, known as the CNPF, made public its recommendation to industry leaders on salary policy.

"...We must break the wage-price spiral," said CNPF President Yvon Gattaz.

He added that while it may be painful in the short term for French workers to lose their automatic link between wage rises and the cost-of-living index, it was indispensable to compensate for the government's delay in instituting an economic austerity program. That program was launched in March.

The unions, on the other hand, feel they have contributed more than enough to the anti-inflation struggle, and for once are speaking in unison.

"No more gifts," said Edmond Maire, head of the Socialist-led French Democratic Confederation of Labor, the country's second-largest union.

"The CNPF has launched a crusade against salaries, for a lowering of purchasing power," added Henri Krasucki, secretary-general of the Communist-run General Confederation of Labor, France's largest union grouping.

"The responsibility for the strong rise in prices cannot be attributed to salaries," added Jean Bornard of the French Confederation of Christian Workers.

In 1983, the unions agreed, under government pressure, to relent on formal wage-price indexing. They settled for overall pay increases of 8 percent, based on projections of 8 percent inflation.

But figures now indicate inflation of 9 percent to 9.5 percent, almost the 1982 figure of 9.7 percent, and the unions have lost faith.

As part of its austerity program the government set goals of 8 percent inflation for 1983 and 5 percent for 1984.

In its recommendations, the CNPF also advised against any catch-up agreements that would cover purchasing power losses for 1983, and any clauses of that nature in 1984 agreements.

The CNPF, saying that it backed total liberty in prices and wages, set no maximum figure for negotiations. The level of wage increases, it said, should be fixed according to the economic situation of each industry, but in any case must be "inferior to those of 1983."

The metallurgy and mining industry, which did not bother to wait for CNPF recommendations, may have set the tone. In its own guidelines, the industry's federation said no pay increases should be higher than 5 percent for 1984 and should not be more than 2.25 percent for the first half of the year.

Thus, Mitterrand's Socialist-Communist coalition finds itself hard up against the economic realities just at the moment it most needs grassroots support.

As the leftist daily Le Matin put it: "The anti-inflation policy could well run onto the rocks in the upcoming wage negotiations. All the elements are there for the first serious social storm of (Mitterrand's) presidency in the coming weeks."

Braniff plane plans under wraps

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International Corp. is keeping the details of its new aircraft design under wraps — literally.

The first airplane to be repainted in preparation for the grounded airline's resumption of service is in a Dallas Love Field hanger wrapped in white paper and masking tape, Braniff spokeswoman Barbara Potter said.

But the airline has said it will scrap its multi-color fleet concept and repaint its aircraft red, white and blue when it begins operating heavily traveled routes March 1.

The airline will be back in the air with 70 to 80 flights daily from Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport and a tentative schedule that covers 20 cities.

Braniff ceased operations in May 1982 shortly before filing for protection from its creditors in federal bankruptcy court. The airline was revived by a $70 million injection from Hyatt Corp. of Chicago in a deal scheduled to be signed in mid-December.

The airline plans to hire up to 2,000 former employees. About 350 pilots and 440 flight attendants already have been hired.

Ms. Potter said the new design will be unveiled Tuesday.

"We're doing the best we can to make the unveiling next week a surprise," she said.

The airline's 30 Boeing 727 jetliners will be painted with white bellies, blue tops and red "Braniff" logos, the Dallas Morning News and the Dallas Times Herald reported Thursday.

In Texas, the Times Herald said, Braniff will fly from Dallas-Fort Worth to Houston, Austin, San Antonio and Midland-Odessa.

Public Notice

In order to implement the Modified Final Judgement entered in United States v. American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and the Plan of Reorganization which was approved by the United States District Court on August 5, 1983, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company and AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., have jointly filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas an Application for and Notification of the Transfer of Facilities and Voting Stock.

This application affects the provision of interLATA service throughout the State of Texas. Effective with the implementation of this transfer of facilities, which is expected to be on January 1, 1984, Southwestern Bell will offer telephone service only within certain geographical areas defined as LATAs (intraLATA) in Texas. Concurrently, interLATA communication service presently provided by Southwestern Bell will be provided by AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc.

For purposes of this application, AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., has filed a Tariff with the PUC containing rates applicable to all of its services in Texas at the same level as Southwestern Bell's current Tariffs. Certain adjustments necessary to implement divestiture have been made to the structure of the Tariffs.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Aviso al Publico

A fin de cumplir la Decisión Final Modificada registrada en el caso de los United States v. American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (Compañía Americana de Teléfonos y Telégrafos) así como el Plan de Reorganización que fue aprobado por la Corte de Distrito de los Estados Unidos el día 5 de Agosto de 1983, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. y AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., han presentado en forma conjunta ante la Public Utility Commission of Texas (Comisión de Servicios Públicos: PUC) una Solicitud y Notificación de la Transferencia de Instalaciones y Acciones Votantes.

Esta solicitud afecta la suministración de los servicios interLATA en todo el estado de Texas. Con vigencia desde el cumplimiento de esta transferencia de instalaciones, presuntamente el 1° de Enero de 1984, Southwestern Bell solamente proveerá servicios telefónicos dentro de ciertas áreas geográficas, denominadas LATAs (es decir, servicio intraLATA) en Texas. Concurrentemente, los servicios de comunicación interLATA que actualmente provee Southwestern Bell serán provistos por AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc.

Para el propósito de esta solicitud, AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., ha registrado un Arancel ante la PUC (Comisión de Servicios Públicos) que incluye las tarifas aplicables a todos sus servicios en Texas, al mismo nivel que el Arancel actual de Southwestern Bell. Se han realizado algunos ajustes en la estructura arancelaria, por ser necesarios para llevar a cabo el desposeimiento.

Toda persona que desee intervenir en el proceso o comentar la demanda debe dirigirse a Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, o llamar a Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division, (512) 458-0223 o (512) 458-0227, o al (512) 458-0221 si requiere teletipo para sordos.

Results, guesswork determine raises

By JUDY SHEPARD
Hearst Feature Service

The raise — that magical, elusive plum sought by all — how does it come about?

"Even with all the scientific data and surveys, management usually ends up grabbing a figure out of a hat and hoping it comes close," according to Barry Taylor, director of student programs for the School of Management at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y. "It's an educated guess," says Taylor, a former personnel director who teaches personnel administration and collective bargaining at RPI.

Yet some general patterns indicate who gets raises and why.

"There are a number of factors," Taylor says. "One of them is what the unions are paying." He explains that if a company is non-union, it may establish a policy of keeping salaries slightly above or equal to union scale. IBM and Kodak are two examples of this, he says. The rationale is that if management provides everything a union could provide, a union will find it difficult to gain a foothold.

Merit is another factor, and periodic reviews of performance and salaries are common among large companies today, Taylor says. And merit will increasingly be determined by a formalized review system, says Robert L. Istnick, a partner at Hewitt Associates, a Chicago-area consulting company specializing in compensation and employee benefits.

"I would characterize the balance of the decade as being one of performance measurement," Istnick says. "This means companies will give a great deal of attention to judging performance. It's become more formal. There has been a trend of more and more companies going to a more sophisticated system of performance appraisal."

Because management does not like to deal one-to-one, Taylor says it usually will allocate a certain percentage of its budget to raises according to performance. For instance, a company might decide average work will earn an 8 percent raise, above average 10 percent and below average 6 percent.

"The amount of the increase will vary, based on the degree that the employee exceeds the minimum level," Istnick says. The amount also may be an indication of the company's financial condition.

One reason for granting a raise could be when a worker comes in with another job offer.

"People do come in when they have something in hand," Taylor says. "If you want to keep that employee, you have to do what Steinbrenner does and buy them off, or promise them something. But the worker had better be in a good bargaining position, or they are going to say goodbye to you and tell you to take the other job."

From the management standpoint, Taylor says, the most important factor in salary administration is "not what your competition pays, but what you pay internally. A company that is really on the ball is a company that will pay a person what they are worth, even if they could be paid less," he says.

He explains that this makes financial sense in the long run because it cuts down on low morale, high turnover and low performance. "If there is internal inequity, job performance suffers. You do just enough to keep the job, but you don't do the extras," he says.

According to Istnick, employees who get merit raises usually are workers who do more than a good job at their assigned tasks. " 'Outstanding' should be the rating for the employee who not only does all that, but is very inventive, aggressive, a self-starter and comes up with all kinds of ideas," he says.

"All too frequently, says Taylor, "the fact that you are good at your job is not enough to get a raise. Good people are bypassed because they didn't do a good job of telling their boss what a good job they were doing." So marketing yourself at work has some merit, he says.

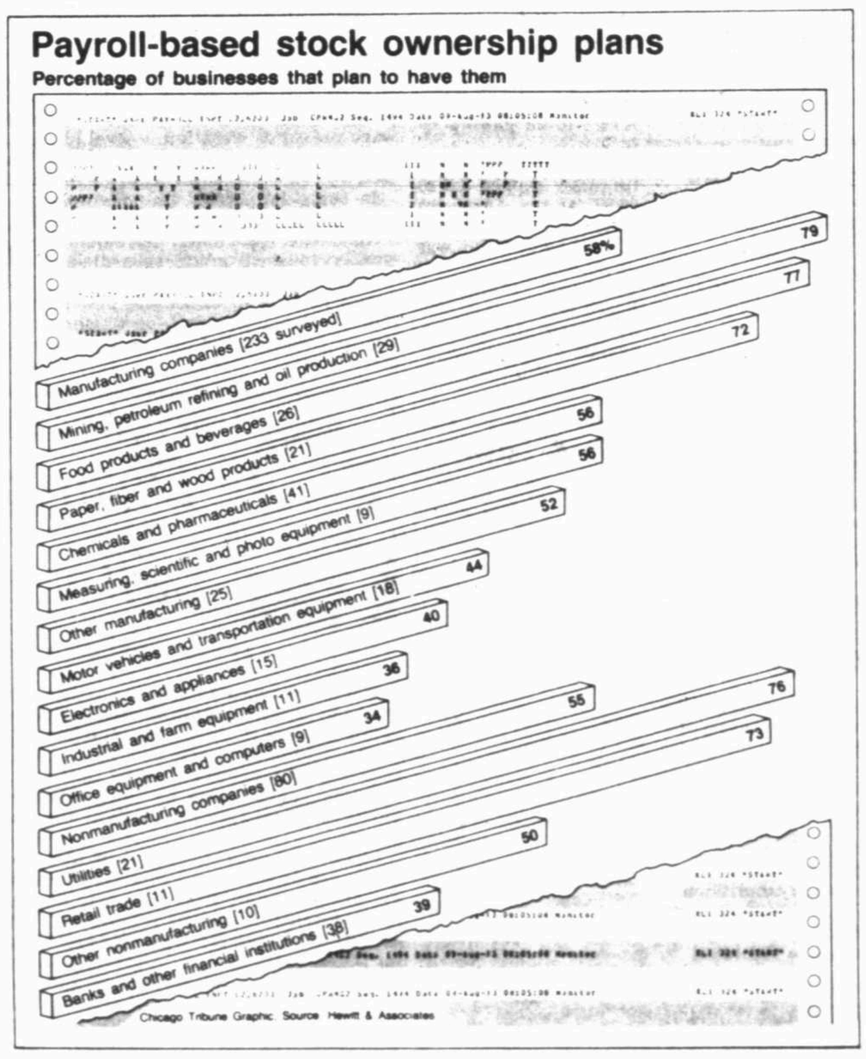

What is the outlook for raises this year? This spring, Hewitt surveyed 710 companies not regulated by labor contracts. The companies were asked to characterize their salary budgets for 1983. The survey indicated 1983 raises would be less than they had been for the last few years. The study looked at the work force and divided it into three groups. It found increases would average 6.2 percent for executives, 6.1 percent for other salaried workers and 5.9 percent for clerical employees.

Someone who does not get any increase, Istnick says, may be subject to one of three conditions:

—He is too new to be judged.

— The company is experiencing economic difficulties.

— He is being given a message by management that his work is not considered acceptable.

Loeffler aide to discuss FDIC, bank problems

U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler has decided his legislative assistant, Mac Thornberry, who handles Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. matters for the Congressman, will spend time in Midland visiting with any individuals who might want to discuss specific problems related to the failure of First National Bank and the FDIC. Thornberry, upon his return to Washington, will try to get specific answers from the FDIC for each individual he talks with.

Thornberry will be in Loeffler's Midland office Monday from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m., and Tuesday from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Appointments for individual visits may be made by calling Marsha Nickel at 687-0188 Monday morning. Loeffler's office is in room 208, the Federal Building, 200 East Wall.

Apple drops prices

From wire reports

Apple Computer Inc. has dropped the price of its Apple IIe computer, despite repeated past denials of such plans.

In a letter sent Nov. 16 to Apple dealers in Denver and other parts of the country, the Cupertino, Calif., company said that dealer costs for the IIe computer will be cut $45, to $895. The suggested list price of the IIe now is $1,295.

More importantly, because most IIe computers are sold in a "bundle" with other equipment, the prices of those systems also have been reduced. Apple cut the cost to dealers of its starter system — including a computer, video monitor, one disk drive and 80-column expansion card — from $1,295 to $1,145. Dealer costs of other systems, including one for businesses, also were reduced.

In Denver, the cost of an Apple IIe starter system has fallen by as much as $200 in the last two months. One dealer is selling the system for $1,395.

That price drop is one reason why Apple also eliminated its suggested retail price of the starter system and other bundled systems. "The suggested retail prices came to mean nothing," Apple spokeswoman Rene Olson said.

Apple has been under pressure to drop the price of the IIe because of the announcement of the IBM PCjr computer three weeks ago. An expanded version of the PCjr, with one disk drive and twice the user memory of the Apple IIe, will sell for $1,269 when shipments begin next year.

Other recent home computer introductions, such as the $200 Commodore 64, also have led to speculation that Apple would have to cut its prices.

MGF cuts new deal

MGF Oil Corp. has announced the restructuring of a seven year lease agreement for four drilling rigs.

W. Phillip Marcum, MGF's president, said the company was forced to resturcture the lease when it couldn't make quarterly payments because of cash flow problems.

MGF missed three qaurterly payments, due in March, June and September, totaling about $2.25 million. In restructuring the lease MGF paid the past due amount and arranged for future payments.

"We told (the lessors) we wanted to cut a two-year window until March 31, 1985, where we wouldn't have to come up with any cash to make these payments," said Marcum.

During this two-year period MGF would have owed $7.1 million. Marcum said instead of having to pay this amount in cash, MGF paid the two institutions from which the rigs are leased, who wish to remain annoymous, $300,000 cash, issued 600,000 shares of restricted common stock, issued a note for $1,275,428 to be converted to MGF stock at $2 per share and sold one drilling rig for $850,000 with the proceeds going to the two institutions.

The original lease called for MGF to make quarterly payments of $781,000 over seven years, totaling about $22 million.

This action, he said, brought MGF up-to-date. For the remaining six quarterly payments, based on the assumption the four rigs will not generate any income, MGF has arranged to give the lessors, in lieu of the normal $781,000 cash payment, a convertible note for $2 per share. Should any of the four rigs generate income, MGF will pay the lessors that income, in cash, with the remaining balance paid by a convertible note. Marcum predicted after two years MGF would resume making the quarterly cash payments.

MGF also announced it will begin an exchange offering for holders of its 8 1/4 percent convertible debentures or bonds. Because MGF is currently unable to pay the interest due on these bonds, the company is offering a new convertible bond, bearing zero interest, commonly called a "zero coupon." To make this more attractive, Marcum said, he plans to reduce the conversion price from $15.88 a share to a lower amount. As a result, a person owning $1,000 worth of these bonds, with a conversion rate of $15.88, would, upon conversion, receive approximately 62-63 shares of MGF stock. With this new bond, at a lower conversion rate, bond holders would have more shares of stock but would not receive any interest.

Marcum said the new bonds will rank senior to the old bonds. In the event of a liquidation, the new bond holders will be paid before the old bonds. If the new bonds are not converted, Marcum said, "something bad could happen to the company" and if it did, he said, these bond holders would receive no return on their investment."

Odessa council plumbing depths of pool drainage

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Unlucky homeowners, who had their swimming pools installed in accordance with city regulations, may be faced with an expensive plumbing bill should the city follow through with plans to change its plumbing code.

Pressure from the Environmental Protection Agency and Texas Department of Water Resources has the Odessa City Council considering a variety of measures to guard against the collection of toxic wastes at sewage treatment plants, among them a change that could force present pool owners to bring in plumbers to reroute the drainage from the filter systems into the city's sanitary sewers.

While some of the pools were originally installed according to these specifications, many of the pools were designed with the backwash from the filters and pool drainage running into the rear alleys or along the right of way.

Until recent discussions of the Municipal Water Pollution Control and Abatement Program, the city had allowed this practice. But amendments to the plumbing code to stop this would apparently affect homeowners that have already built their pools.

MAYOR BOB Bryant explained that EPA regulations do not include a "grandfather clause" which would make any changes in the plumbing code pertain only to new pools, leaving pool owners that had been in compliance with the cost of changing their system.

Although the cost of this will depend on the layout of the system, Bryant estimated that the work would cost the homeowner a minimum of several hundred dollars.

Jim Patterson, owner of a pool service company in Odessa, suggested that rerouting the plumbing would call for workers to knock out the patio slabs in some cases, move fences and dig up the yards.

"They (affected pool owners) will be upset and I don't blame them a bit," said Patterson, who will not be affected since he lives outside city limits and operates on a septic system.

"If it was presenting a big health hazard, I would understand. But I don't see it being that big a problem.

"If it was legal then, I don't think we should have to change now."

—Ruth Lanning,
Odessa pool owner

Midland residents are already in compliance with the EPA dictates which prohibit the installation of built-in pools that are not routing their backwash and drainage into the sanitary sewage system.

DIRECTOR OF Public Works Fred Baker recalled receiving complaints from neighbors about backwash running down alleys and city streets. First offenders receive warnings, with subsequent violations leading to formal complaints being filed with the municipal court. Fines can ultimately result.

Patterson insisted that contractors should be responsible for checking the homes' specifications when obtaining building permits to avoid this type of problem. One Odessan said she and her husband had questioned their contractor when the house and pool were built, but were convinced there would be no problem.

Ruth Lanning said that her contractor insisted that the drainage system was common in the area. "If it was presenting a big health hazard, I would understand," she said, "but I don't see it being that big a problem."

"If it was legal then, I don't think we should have to change now," said Mrs. Lanning.

WHILE ESTIMATING that the adjustment would be quite costly, Mrs. Lanning did not expect to speak with the city about their plans. "It probably won't do any good. I think when they get something in their head, they're going to go ahead and do it."

"It will cost a fortune," predicted Mrs. John Cliff. "It makes good sense to do it. But to do it after the fact?" she questioned.

"If there is any way to get around it legally, we will," said Mrs. Cliff, the wife of an Odessa lawyer.

"I know they're going to have some problems doing it," she said. The Cliff's pool was installed by a large pool building company that has offices in Midland, but were not advised to route their backwash into the sanitary sewers.

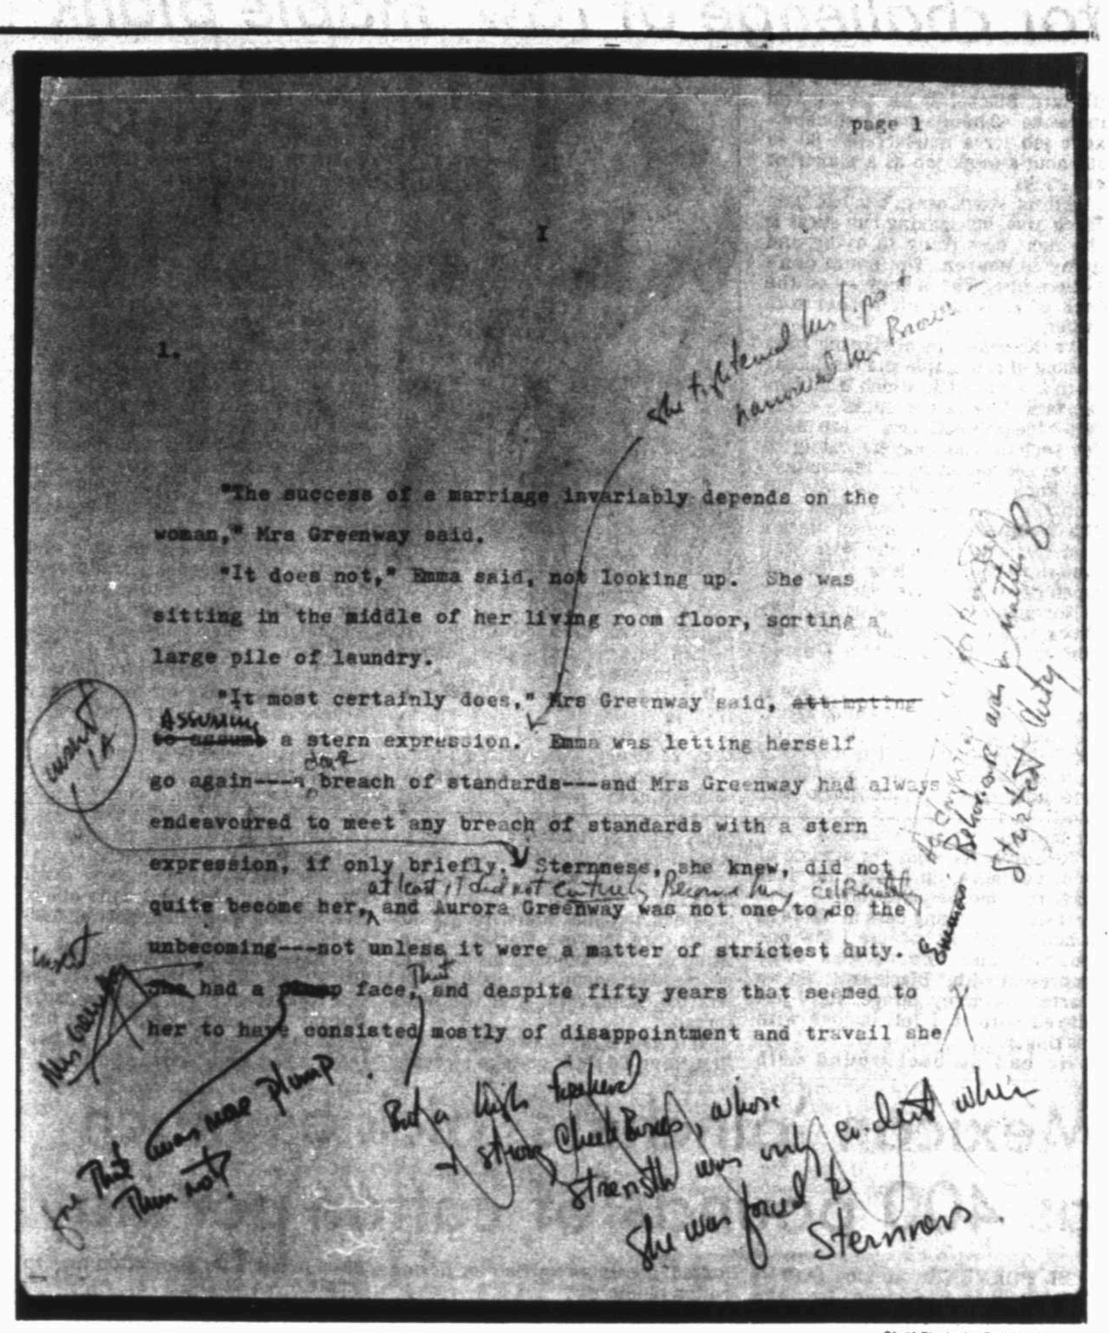

Another homeowner said that her house was built with this system at the family's direction, because of past experiences with the backwash running down alleys.

"WE'VE HAD people who drain them into the alley, but it's too much," said Mrs. Louann DeClaire. "Then you can't go into the alley."

Mayor Bryant explained that the new plans to amend the plumbing code and take other measures to protect from toxic waste build-ups have been spurred by recent pressure from the state agency.

"It's because the state has finally started pushing us pretty hard," he said.

The city has also taken action to stop Odessa businesses from dumping oil and metal into the system in violation of EPA regulations. The sanitation department has reportedly sent notices to 50 businesses, some service stations and transmission repair shops, ordering them to discontinue dumping of illegal chemicals into the system, especially the runoff from washing chemical trucks.

'Terms of Endearment'

Original manuscripts reveal author's crucial scribblings

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Thumb through a best-seller. Note the neat print that lends an aura of professionalism to the work.

But of what stuff are published novels made?

Study the original manuscript, and more often than not, you'll discover draft after draft containing hastily penciled revisions, lined-out deletions, almost unintelligible scribblings inserted at crucial points in typed copy.

Congratulations. You've just trod upon the real world of fiction writing, where careful re-writing often is the name of the game.

A researcher or just an interested reader has just such a rare opportunity right at his fingertips in the Modern Texas Fiction Collection at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin. For here, he can examine original manuscripts of several published novels and short stories and see for himself the gut-wrenching process by which an author gives birth to a fiction work.

Purchased from dealers or presented as donations in 1974, the collection includes several major works by nationally known novelist Larry McMurtry and other Texas writers such as Michael Mewshaw, Chester Sullivan and Walter McDonald.

McMurtry, as one of the better-known Texas novelists, occupies the center position in the collection, as drafts of his novels "Moving On," "All My Friends Are Going To Be Strangers" and "Terms of Endearment" are included, as well as screenplays written by McMurtry and screenplays based on his works and written by others.

A study of the drafts reveal a wealth of information about McMurtry's writing habits.

He generally types his material and makes a carbon, on which he later will make hand-revisions. He writes each novel several times before reaching the final product: the collection contains three drafts of "Moving On" alone, each of which have extensive hand-written revisions. While many pages of each draft are "clean", scribblings on other pages indicate he sometimes struggles greatly to ensure a passage says exactly what he wants it to. And while occasional revisions are made in dialogue, generally only the prose is revised extensively.

Also, other little-known facts about McMurtry's writing surface. How many of his readers, for example, are aware that he originally entitled "Moving On" "Country of the Horn?"

A wealth of information about the relationship between an author and his agent can be gleaned by studying numerous letters from Dorothea Oppenheimer. The correspondence reveals a gradual friendship that transcends mere business developing between the two.

McMurtry, born in Wichita Falls in 1936 and raised near Archer City, also is represented in the collection by drafts of essays from "In a Narrow Grave" and others.

The collection includes an early draft of Stephenville resident Chester Sullivan's novel "The Water of the River," which was to be published as "Alligator Gar" and win the 1973 Texas Institute of Letters Fiction Award.

Walter R. McDonald of Lubbock, meanwhile, is represented by drafts of a projected novel, "The Walls Came Tumbling," and short stories, "The Prodigal," "The Send Off" and "Three Sisters".

Michael Mewshaw, author of the novel "The Toll," is represented by numerous drafts of three fiction projects.

Anyone interested in studying these original manuscripts can make arrangements by contacting Bobbie Klepper at UTPB, 367-2011.

Dellwood Mall prepares to go nuts over festival

Dellwood Mall at Midkiff and Illinois will go "nuts" with pecans Monday and Tuesday as the annual Midland County Pecan Harvest Festival comes to town.

The event, sponsored by Midland Pecan Growers Association, will feature a pecan show and pecan food show with judging in each.

Judging for the pecan event will be at 11 a.m. Monday, while food judging will take place at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Pecan entries are due by 5 p.m. Sunday. Food entries are due at Dellwood Mall between 7:30 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. Tuesday. Entries will be accepted from any resident of Midland County or member of Midland Pecan Growers Association.

In the pecan show, a participant may submit only one entry of each named variety which he has grown, including as many seedlings, known hybrids or natives as he wishes. A minimum of 40 pecans must be submitted for each variety. Mixed samples are disqualified.

The grower may wish to weigh individual nuts to select the heaviest pecan.

Pecans should be without insect or disease damage, be free of dust, dirt and shuck remnants, and not be buffed to the extent that shape or color is affected. They must be from the 1983 crop.

Pecans will be judged on the basis of number per pound, appearance, shell color and kernel quality, which takes into consideration the percent kernel relative to shell, color, general appearance, texture, hollowness and taste.

The grand champion pecan will receive a rosette ribbon and plaque furnished by the county and state pecan growers associations. The reserve champion will receive a rosette ribbon, while places one through three will receive ribbons.

The top two pecan entries will be forwarded to the regional show in Odessa.

The pecan food show will include divisions for adults and for youths in grades 1-12. Entries must be accompanied by the recipe typed on a white 3 inch by 5 inch card and must include exact measurements, as well as the cook's name in the upper left corner and the recipe title in the center. The food and class category must be in the upper right corner.

Pecans must be part of the recipe ingredients and not merely used for decorative purposes.

Food entries also must include, on a similar card to be attached to the bottom of the container, the contestant's name and address, entry class, food category and recipe title.

While a food entry must be prepared by the exhibitor, the pecans used in the entry do not have to be grown by that person.

Additional information on the Pecan Festival and on collection points for entries can be obtained by contacting Art or Marge Shaw, 682-0315.

Couple building on 'retirement'

LUFKIN (AP) — Bernon A. Thornton had a thriving masonry contracting business in Lufkin when he was forced to retire in 1963 because of health problems.

Today, 20 years later, he and his wife Berniece are putting the final touches on the ninth house they have built during his retirement, largely by their own labor.

"On most of the houses, we did everything," Thornton said. He explained that many of the houses they had built were out in the country, and didn't require licensed electricians and plumbers to meet a building code.

"Inside the city limits, they're pretty tight on inspections," he said.

Thornton, 75, laughed, recalling one recent inspection where Lufkin building inspector Hubert Stubblefield came out and found him helping an equally aged, but licenesd electrician put up a utility pole at a construction site.

"He told both of us we were too old to be out working like this," he said, chuckling.

But according to Thornton's wife, the work, done in moderation, is what has kept him healthy during the 20 years since retirement.

"We only work in the mornings, and take it easy the rest of the day," she said. Thornton disputes this, however, saying that his wife, who is the chief painter, is always looking for something to do. "You're the one that's always working," she retorts.

Although Thornton is clearly able to do just about everything connected with building a house, he most enjoys the brickwork, calling on his 40 years of experience as a masonry contractor.

"I couldn't drive around Lufkin and show you all the houses I've bricked up. It's that many," he said.

Thornton was born in a sawmill camp near what was called Warsaw, "where Sam Rayburn Lake is now," he said. "I tell everybody I was born in the lake."

Mrs. Thornton is from Alto in Cherokee County, and they were married in Livingston in 1931, during the deepest part of the Depression.

Thornton said he borrowed $5 to get married, and they moved to their first house.

"We lived in all those houses but one. We'd finish one, get moved in, and she'd find something about the house or the neighbors that she didn't like, and she'd keep after me until we started a new one."

— Bernon Thornton, retired builder

"We worked four days in the field just to pay the rent," Mrs. Thornton said.

Thornton finally was able to get a job with the State Highway Department, where he worked for eight years before suffering a back injury. But, by this time, he was doing some building on the side, and decided to start his own masonry contracting business, which he pursued for 40 years.

They couple had built their first house, "a lumber house," down the road from the first house they had lived in on moving to the East Texas city. It was a two-bedroom house, and Thornton said his brother-in-law helped them build it.

It seemed that once they began building houses, they couldn't stop, and their house-building took a real spurt after Thornton's retirement 20 years ago.

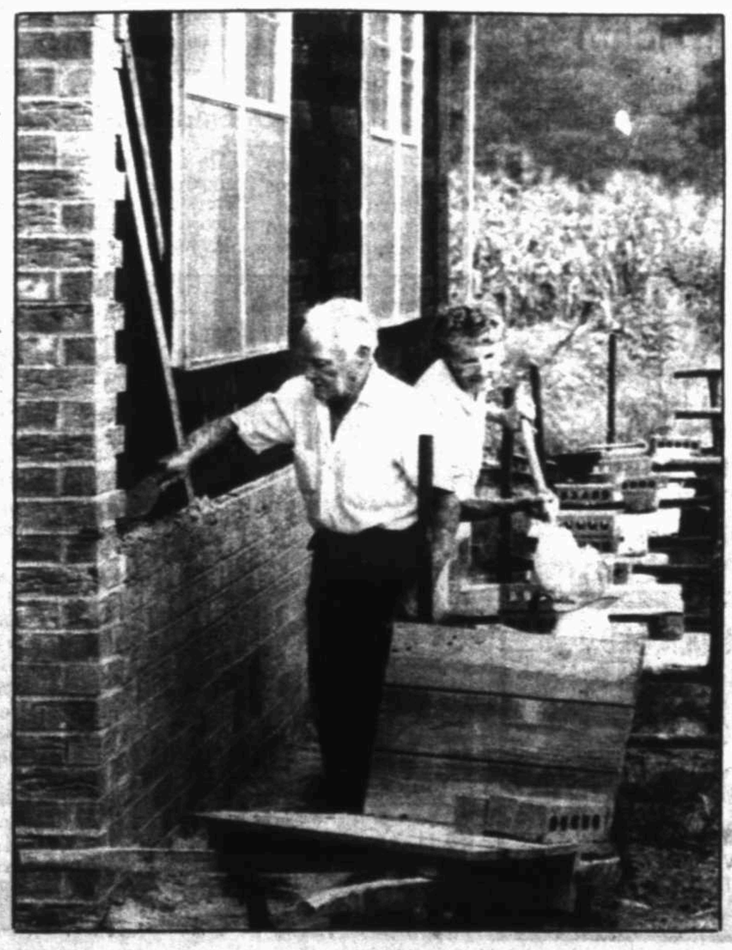

He blames that mostly on his wife.

"We lived in all those houses but one," he said. "We'd finish one, get moved in, and she'd find something about the house or the neighbors that she didn't like, and she'd keep after me until we started a new one."

He tried to break out of the home-building rut a couple of times, but always came back.

"I bought two farms and like to have went broke. I couldn't handle the wild Brahman cattle a feller sold me," said Thornton, not much over 5 feet tall. "Half of 'em got killed on the railroad, and they wouldn't pay me what they were worth."

The Thorntons wouldn't speculate whether they would begin another house when the one they're working on now is finished.

Bernon Thornton and his wife, Berniece, put the finishing touches on a house they are building in the East Texas community of Lufkin. Thornton says it is the ninth house they have built together since his retirement 20 years ago.

Stockbroker leaves secure job for challenge of raw maple plank

HOUSTON (AP) — Ten years ago, Richard Black left his secure and lucrative 40-hour-a-week, stockbroker's job for a non-lucrative 80- to 100-hour-a-week job as a maker of cue sticks.

Selling stock wasn't a bad job, Black says, but making cue sticks is the next best thing to dying and going to heaven. The hours don't bother him. The money — or the lack of it — doesn't bother him either.

It's the challenge of starting from a plank of raw maple and fashioning from it a cue stick, which is no simple task. Black's cue sticks — "hitters," the pros call them — are made for serious pool players, many of whom are nationally or internationally known. Steve Mizerak, who has won the U.S. Open four times and the World Open, is one of Black's customers. So is Dorothy Wise, who won the women's division of the U.S. Open five consecutive years.

November's Esquire Magazine lists Black as one of the three best custom cue makers in the United States.

A hallway wall in Black's office is covered with pictures autographed by many other professional and celebrity pool players. The reception area of the office has a regulation size pool table, which Black uses mostly to roll a cue stick on to make certain the stick is not warped.

He barely has time for a game of pool anymore, and when he does have the time, he plays golf.

"I started making cues in '73-'74 as a hobby, strictly because I saw one custom cue that I was very impressed with," Black says. "So we started out in my garage...and I just stayed with it. I fell in love with making cues."

Richard Black

He had no background with machine tools or woodworking. All he had, actually, was a great interest in playing pool.

But when he left Paine Webber in 1976 to strike out on his own, he pretty much had to give up playing because he didn't have enough time.

"When I got into cue making I got so involved and put in so many hours I even gave up cutting the grass. My wife decided to do that so it would get done," Black says.

When Black was a stockbroker making cues for a hobby, he attended national tournaments out of his own interest. Marketing consisted of Black showing his sticks to people who eventually ordered hitters for themselves. And the word spread.

"If I had to do it over again, the first thing I'd do is go take a course at a vocational school," he says.

Black started, he recalls, with all the wrong tools. And he experimented with "thousands of dollars worth of glue" before finding the five glues he uses in each stick.

He had to learn about moisture contents, grains and weights of various woods, finally settling on maple, one of the key ingredients in both the shaft and the butt of a cue stick.

"In the shaft I have to have very clear, straight-grained Canadian hardrock maple," he says. "In the butt I like to use birdseye maple, which has a lot of grain activity."

The prongs — the pointed designs near the middle of the stick — generally are inlaid with thin sheets of wooden veneer that are dyed and made in France. Woods such as ebony or rosewood also are used in prongs.

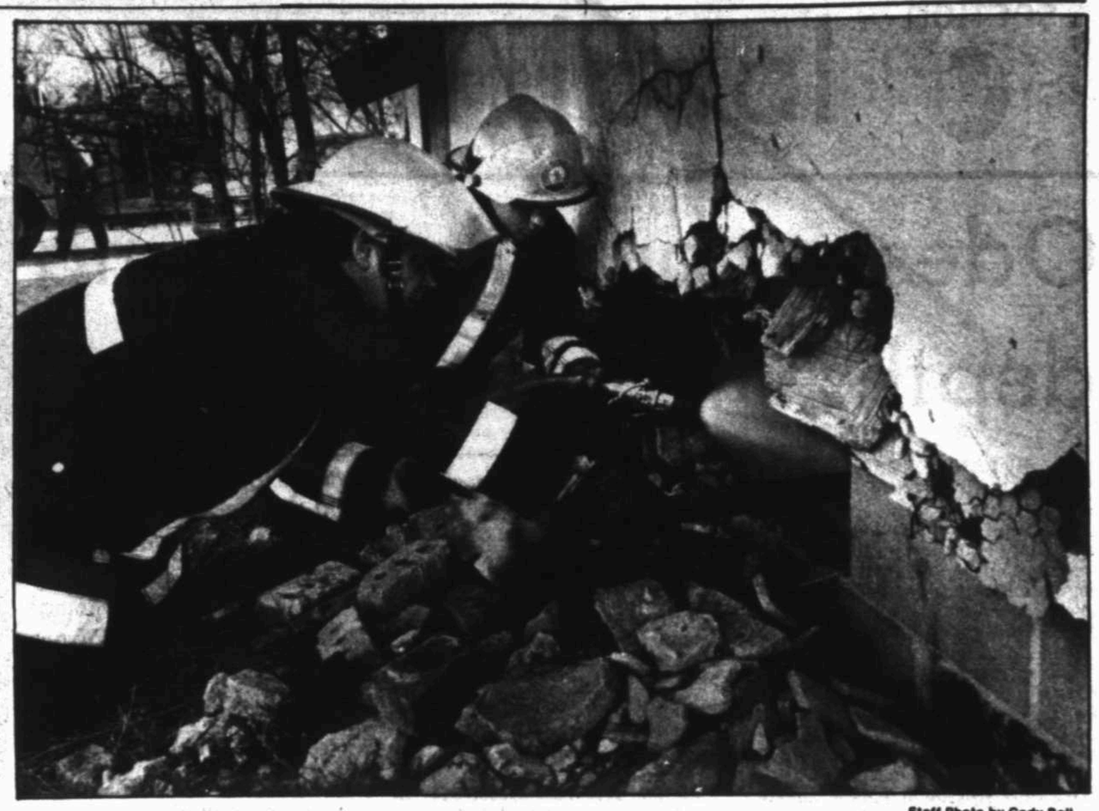

The prongs serve both style and function. "It's becme a traditional design, but also, when you are laminating woods together, you are minimizing your chances of warpage."

In the small but tidy office and shop Black works on any of four lathes. The shop, clean and organized with no clutter, is evidence of a perfectionist. And perfection is what it takes to make a cue stick, he says.

Black's wife, Ardis, spends from 20 to 30 hours a week doing the books, handling shipping and putting the leather "wraps" on cue sticks.

He is not making money, even though he makes and sells about five sticks a week that start at $200 each.

"I have a good time and enjoy it," Black says. "Sure, I would like to get it to a point where it supports itself. But my wife and I keep saying bigger is not better. We want to be better at it and keep striving for that."

Mexican 'pinchers' pick as much as 400 pounds of cotton per day

EL PORVENIR, Mexico (AP) — The sun has just risen over the Juarez Valley and Lidia Banuelos Rosales, 74, is preparing coffee for her husband.

Mrs. Rosales supports herself first on the kitchen table and then on the stove to reach the corner and dip water from a large tin cistern. She moves with difficulty after breaking a leg a few years back.

Her husband, Aniseto Rosales Villa, also 74, ambles into the kitchen, shaking off the cold. Rosales, known in these parts as Don Cheto, is a short but craggy man given to spicy language and knee slapping.

Soon some 25 sandal-clad pizcadores — a word for cotton pickers that literally means "pinchers" — gather outside their three-room adobe house, which wears a worn coat of blue-green paint.

A full day of harvesting cotton has begun at the Rosales' farm, some 50 miles east of Juarez on Mexican Highway 2 and across the Rio Grande from Fort Hancock.

Below the purple San Ignacio Mountains, elongated shadows of pizcadores spread across the white-dotted, green-brown field of drying cotton plants.

Pickers range from gray-haired grandfathers to 10-year-old Elias Gonzalez. Many come from Torreon, 500 miles south of Juarez.

On other farms, women and even younger children bend over the knee-high cotton.

A good worker can pick 400 pounds of cotton a day, earning three times the Juarez minimum wage of about $3.50 a day.

The pickers straddle long, yellow canvas sacks called costales. They pull the bags' openings up to thigh level and tie the strings attached around their waist.

A crunching sound fills the air as they pinch locks of fluffy white cotton from dried burrs.

"Don't bother to clean (the cotton)," instructs Alberto Rosales, Don Cheto's 44-year-old nephew. "They'll do that at the gin."

He shows his two-fisted picking technique, snatching handfuls of fiber along with the dried leaves clinging to it.

Don Cheto drives off in his aging white Chevy pickup to get the best price possible for the cotton they're picking.

The Juarez Valley will produce some 20,000 bales — about 10 million pounds — of long-fiber cotton this year. It will bring some $8 million.

The valley's cotton is some of the best in Mexico, but rains this year have knocked some of the bolls into the mud and stained much of the rest. The country's economic slump also has cut demand, said Cirilo Rodriguez Silveyra, a buyer for the Algodonera Comercial Mexicana cotton company.

Some of the valley's farmers are selling their crop to a Japanese company for export this year.

The one-two punch of rains and sluggish demand hurts all, including wealthier farmers who can afford the green John Deere harvesters that move across the land like giant locusts.

But it is especially hard on the "ejido communal" farmers like Don Cheto, who work 24-acre parcels rented them in perpetuity by the government.

Back on Rosales' farm, more pizcadores arrive.

Man jailed following standoff

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A man sought in Texas since Oct. 29 for allegedly spiriting his two daughters away from their mother has been jailed following an eight-hour standoff with police who feared he might kill his 2½-year-old child.

The girl and her 11-year-old sister were reunited Thursday with their mother in Anaheim and returned to Texas Thursday morning, Sgt. Richard Zschoche said.

James Gordon Clark, 29, of the Dallas suburb of Garland, was booked in Anaheim in Orange County for assault with a deadly weapon, his pickup truck, on a police officer. He was also booked for resisting arrest and failing to yield to a police officer, Sgt. Jack Parra said.

"No one has inquired about him yet" to help post his $50,000 bail, Parra said late Thursday.

Clark was also held on a Texas warrant for investigation of child stealing, Parra said, adding that he believed the California charges would be handled before extradition proceedings would begin.

"He has threatened to kill the daughter and himself," Detective Dwain Briggs said during the incident, which began at 7 p.m. Wednesday in Anaheim near Disneyland. It ended at 3:40 a.m. Thursday about 60 miles to the east on Interstate 15 north of San Bernardino.

A .22-caliber pistol was found in the trailer behind the truck, but no weapon was found inside the truck, police said.

Natalie Clark, 2½, was unharmed and her sister Stephanie, 11, either escaped or was released by Clark when the truck stopped in traffic. She ran to waiting officers, Zschoche said.

Garland police Lt. Pat Martinkus said the Clarks have been divorced for about a month and Mrs. Clark has custody of the children. He said Clark failed to return the children to Mrs. Clark after a visit Oct. 29.

Clark called his former wife Wednesday and told her to meet him in front of Disneyland at noon Thursday, allegedly threatening to harm the children if she failed to show up, Martinkus said.

In the last five hours of the standoff, which backed up Thanksgiving traffic for miles as officers blocked the freeway, police sharpshooters ringed the area near Devore in the mountainous Cajon Pass. But officers did not rush the truck for fear Natalie would be harmed, Briggs said.

Two arrested Wednesday in major marijuana bust

Two men were arrested Wednesday night in Midland's second major marijuana bust this month.

Released Thursday on $7,500 bond set by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry was Clifford Kent McCrackin, 28, of Rt. 7, Midland.

McCrackin's alleged accomplice, a 27-year-old Glenrose man, remained in the city jail this morning awaiting the filing of formal charges.

According to city police, officer Phil Mathews was patrolling a mini-storage warehouse at 2900 W. Kentucky Ave. about 8:45 p.m. Wednesday when he spotted a 1976 Oldsmobile Cutlass parked with its trunk open, its headlights on and no one near it.

The suspects were found inside unit 303, along with a large quantity of marijuana estimated to be worth in excess of $20,000.

In an unrelated case, two California men were arrested after landing a light plane loaded with 1,000 pounds of pot at Midland Airpark the night of November 8.

U.S. Customs agents had trailed the plane to Midland after it crossed the Mexican border. The suspects in that case were jailed in lieu of $1 million each.

Underwater cave in Central Texas claims eighth victim in 20 years

WIMBERLEY (AP) — An off-limits underwater cave has claimed another victim.

The body of Richard Patton, 22, was pulled from Jacob's Well Thursday morning. The 90-foot-deep cave has been the scene of at least eight drownings in the past two decades.

The cave has been off-limits to divers since two divers drowned in 1979. Their bodies were never recovered.

Patton, of New Braunfels, and Clark McConnell, 24, of San Marcos entered the cave about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday wearing wetsuits and diving gear and carrying lights.

Traffic accident puts Midlanders in hospital

Two Midland residents remain hospitalized in the wake of a Thanksgiving Day traffic accident just east of FM 1788 on Texas Highway 158.

In critical condition with multiple fractures at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, according to the Department of Public Safety, was 25-year-old William Koehlinger of 3601 Andrews Highway.

In stable condition with head and back injuries at Midland Memorial Hospital was Yen Feng, 24, of 305 W. Jax.

Ms. Feng was a passenger in a 1976 Plymouth van that was westbound on 158 shortly before 2 a.m. Thursday when an eastbound 1978 Datsun driven by Koehlinger crossed the center line and hit the van head-on, the DPS said.

The driver of the van, Yen Hai of Midland, no age or street address available, was not injured, according to the DPS.

Employee reports theft of cash

In a theft complaint filed with city police, an employee of the Kent Service Station at 810 E. Florida Ave. said $1,482 in cash was stolen from a floor safe in the establishment sometime Wednesday night or early Thursday morning.

Coloradan mails garbage to Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — B.W. Mangrum of Durango, Colo., found some belongings of a Houston woman outside his Rocky Mountain area home, so he mailed it back.

At a cost to him of $1.83, Mangrum mailed a bag of garbage back to Texas, and included the woman's discarded library card.

The package was sent Wednesday to the city room of The Houston Chronicle and was addressed to the newspaper and "all Texans in general."

The package contained an empty soda pop bottle, a cherry pie wrapper and the woman's library card.

It also contained a note.

"Enclosed herewith the garbage you dumped at the intersection of my driveway and U.S. Highway 160, four miles west of Durango, Colo.

"It is inconceivable that one would spend so much time and money and travel so far to see the Rocky Mountains, and dump garbage beside the roads. I live here and I resent it. Your garbage is being sent to the Houston Chronicle in the hopes that they will see that you get it back."

Museum of Southwest cancels films

Not showing are "Davy Crockett — King of the Wild Frontier," planned for Saturday, and "A Christmas Carol," planned for Dec. 24.

Five other classics planned for the series, "Adaptations from Literature: A Children's Film Festival" are planned. "Treasure Island" will show Jan. 28; "Black Beauty" on Feb. 25; "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" on March 24; "Prince and the Pauper" on April 28 and "Pollyanna" on May 26.

All movies are shown in the Marian Blakemore Planetarium at Haley Park at 2 p.m. Admission is free for museum members and $2 for the general public.

San Franciscans take pet adoption to the streets

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Step right up, folks, and get your stray cat.

That kind of hawking is not precisely how it happens these days on the streets of San Francisco, but the effect is the same.

For three years now the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals here has been running a highly successful program, Adoption Outreach, in which dogs or cats possibly destined for the Pearly Gates find themselves instead the center of more attention than the Golden Gate.

"This is my first cat," said Debbie Runkey, an administrative assistant at a nearby bank, as she strode off with a midnight-colored 8-week-old male inside a provided cardboard carrier. "I've been cage shopping for a couple of months, and today I saw the black one I've always wanted.

"It will be a total surprise to my husband, but I've been hinting, and he has already agreed." If nothing else, by the time he saw her unloading the paper sack of cat food she had bought during the afternoon, he probably got the drift.

The coming together of owner and pet took place on the pavement of McKesson Plaza at the foot of the financial district, where six metal cages containing cats and one pen surrounding a dog had been set up in the morning by a Mobile Adoption Unit.

PEDESTRIANS STROLLED past, only to pause suddenly, to reach a finger inside a cage and in turn be touched by a paw. Now and then a private conversation. Love from both sides.

George Sedlacko, an effervescent used-car-salesman-type who is instead an SPCA adoptions specialist, could have told the passers-by that this number was owned by a little old lady who only loved it on weekends. But he answered truthfully, telling one inquirer that the kitty in question was a perfect subject while being groomed at the shelter just hours earlier and in fact calmly fell asleep in the drying cage.

"It helps to have a story," he admitted. "A potential owner likes to have a little background."

To help him and his volunteer assistant, each animal du jour comes accompanied by a shelter report, a green sheet containing such information as age, whether it is altered, if it is good with children, whether it is an indoor or outdoor type, its name, if any, whether it is housebroken.

Plus, if the animal had been brought in (rather than rescued from the streets), comments about when it was surrendered.

"Too active during the evening."

"Needs a few good meals. Real sweet."

"Baby was allergic to it."

"Bought for mother. Mom didn't like."

"Friendly and playful."

ON THIS PARTICULAR day, 10 cats and one dog had begun life in compartments, along with the scores of other unwanted. Little did they know that by nightfall all but two of the 11 would be basking in the security of a home — and those other two unselected felines would be in a living room the next night.

The day began at 9 a.m., adoptions coordinator Mark Weiss and Sedlacko choosing animals to display at three downtown satellite stations. Owners of private and public property at 15 locations — outside a supermarket, a theater, a savings and loan, etc. — have set aside space for the venture, which takes place live seven days a week.

"With the cats, we try to get a mix, not just kittens. We get all kinds of people looking for companions," Sedlacko explained. "Because of the exposure to the public and the space confinements, we are pretty much limited to smaller dogs, which is unfortunate, but we don't want unhappy consequences. Also, probably 40 percent of the animals will be transported to their new homes aboard a BART train.

"I go a lot by instinct in deciding which ones to show to the public," said the adoptions specialist. "I first try petting. If the animal backs off or hisses or tries to bite, I may have second thoughts. I also have to consider which ones can take the ride from our headquarters (in a refurbished animal ambulance).

"We have a different variety every day, not only because so many new ones keep coming in to the shelter and need exposure to the public, but because potential adopters keep stopping by and want to see different animals."

IN MANY CASES, the selections are made, a screening form filled out (by the adopter, not the pet) and the payment made during the person's lunch hour. In such instances, a sign proclaiming "adopted" is hung on that cage and the animal held until the new owner gets off work. If he or she can't show up by the time camp is broken at 5 p.m., the creature is either held at the shelter or by the McKesson people in their security office.

If the assembled fur is gone early in the day, replacements are rushed in by truck.

One late comer was Jennifer Spiegel, who said she had been checking out the availabilities during her lunch hour every working day for three weeks. She headed for a BART station with her carton, containing a 6-week-old kitten whose whiskers had been singed elsewhere by a candle.

"I have a ball of yarn all ready at home," she said over her shoulder.

The SPCA in Los Angeles, however, is not impressed. "We don't subscribe to impulse adopting," said Jane Evans, humane education director. "It should be a commitment of perhaps 15 years or more, and it shouldn't be done on a whim.

"Sure, we want to find homes for our animals, but not places where they won't be cared for."

Dorothy Bohannon, who has been with the society here for 27 years, supported that argument, adding:

"If you come to the shelter, you are sincerely looking. All baby animals are attractive, and there is the danger that if you suddenly saw one available while you were passing by on a street, you might take action you would have afterthoughts about later."

'Babytalk' studies reveal lack of communication

Hearst Feature Service

BALTIMORE — A baby's burbling, sing-song babble of "dada's" and "baba's," uttered over and over again, is a vocal milestone parents have long considered their little darling's first attempt to talk to them. Recently, however, speech pathologists who have recorded and studied the babble produced by dozens of infants say the babies aren't interested in communicating with anyone but themselves.

"The nicely timed sounds we call babbling in babies six to eight months old are not used to communicate with others," says Dr. Rachel Stark. Babies, she claims, are not so much interested in producing exact "ba's" and "da's" in imitation of the adult as they are in making interesting rhythmic patterns of sounds by alternately opening and closing the mouth.

That regular opening and closing with the voice turned on, Stark believes, is a "newly acquired self-stimulatory skill" comparable in many ways to the alternate movements of arms and legs in waving and shaking patterns acquired at the same age.

In this sense, Stark explains, babbling represents a major jump in vocal development related to a naturally rapid advance in the brain's motor physical guidance system.

Stark, who conducted her latest study of babbling babies with Jennifer Bond at the Kennedy Institute for handicapped children at Johns Hopkins University, tapes infants every two weeks from five to eight months of age.

In the most recent analysis, she worked with one boy and two girls whose sounds were transcribed by means of a special sound-pattern notation system. With the help of computer graphics, a chart was made of the sound patterns before and after the onset of babbling. Videotapes also were made to record the motions of the mouth, arms and legs.

"It's really difficult and time consuming," Stark said. "For one thing, you can't get an infant to keep his head still so you can observe its openings and closings. It's tedious work."

But measurements made of the duration of each "dada" and "baba," along with the voice tones and body movements produced new insights into speech development.

When the researchers compared the sounds made before the babies were able to babble, and after, they discovered no steady, gradual or continuous move from one phase to the other, but a sudden jump.

"Steady progress might suggest that speech motor skills are refined gradually as a result of practice by the infant," Stark says.

On the other hand, progress by "leaps" might suggest that new vocal skills emerge rapidly as a result of new neural developments in the brain that link up to the hearing and motor circuits.

"Because the babbling sounds are not made up of combinations of previous cooing or random sounds, we believe that babbling is something entirely new that emerges when new connections are formed. And that something new is the infant's ability to turn on his voice at the same time he opens and closes his mouth to modulate sound," says Stark.

While the babble studies, financed by the National Institutes of Health, continue, Stark says there are already some implications of their work in the care of toddlers and young children with speech development problems.

"We see that in normal infants we have studied, babbling is done in a special context, when the infant is playing with objects and waves his arms and legs. If we want to help a disabled child who is developing speech but at a much slower rate, we can learn from this observation."

One lesson, Stark says, is that therapists may not be able to help such children by placing them or sitting them face to face with the therapist and trying to get them to imitate sounds.

Try plants for Christmas gifts

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

Each year at this time, whenever the often exhausted household budget allows, I like to spend an enjoyable moment or two searching for a special Christmas plant with which to add a final touch to the holiday decorations.

Plants also make perfect last-minute gifts. For someone in a nursing home or boarding house, for example, a tree poinsettia or a Norfolk Island pine would make fine Christmas tree substitutes that would continue to give year-round pleasure.

One year at about this time I chanced upon some beautiful caladium plants in a supermarket. These lovely tuberous-rooted American tropicals display arrow-shaped, delicately thin leaves in many gorgeous colors. One color combination that is especially suitable for Christmas decoration is deep red with dark veining and green edging on each leaf. I chose two of these with a green and cream variety for contrast.

When caladiums die back, they are stored and stared up again in early spring in such the same manner as tuberous begonias. And like the begonias, they are fine for bedding or container plants in conditions of warm shade and high humidity.

This year, as we venture more and more into growing our own flowering plants for winter, we have a pretty display of Christmas peppers with their bright red upright fruits combined with calceolarias with their sunny yellow pouches specked with red.

Both of these were grown from seed in the spring, used as potted bedding plants during the summer and brought indoors in the fall. I found the calceolaria Anytime from Park Seed (Box 31, Greenwood SC 29646) could be kept blooming by cutting back and feeding one or two plants at a time so that some were always covered with their pretty pouches.

We have several amaryllis in bloom, and paperwhites. Red Lion amaryllis and the golden Soleil d' Or paperwhites make a striking combination.

The cyclamen is a fine Christmas plant, but notorious for its difficulty because it too often flops over and dies during the Christmas holidays in our sometimes overheated homes. But if you have a cool, bright window in which to place it, a cyclamen has a good chance of blooming for a long period of time.

I bought a lavender cyclamen last winter, repotted it in the spring, plunged it in a woodland bed for the summer, and brought it indoors late in the fall when it had a good number of buds nodding under the foliage surfaces.

For its winter in the house, I placed its pot in another larger one and packed dampened peat in between them. It has bloomed now for two months in my office alongside one of the Anytime yellow and red pocket pouch plants.

If you are looking for a cyclamen, choose a sturdy, rigid-stemmed one. Look for any sign of floppiness, which means it will surely go into a swift decline in your home. Look also for numerous buds coming along from the crown of the plant. This assures a long time of bloom.

Mistakes made in sewing can often be repaired

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

My goodness! Holy moly! Gracious! Gee whiz! Oh, no!

Do any of these phrases sound familiar to you? I'm betting they do. Would you like to add a few of your own?

These are some of the terms we use when we goof up on our sewing. Not strong enough, you say? Maybe not, but if we know how to deal with our goofs, we won't need any of those words.

What is a sewing goof? It can be anything from cutting out two left sleeves to sewing the collar into the waistline. Most sewing goofs are correctible. Keep that in mind before you start walking on the walls.

If you are faced with what seems an insurmountable goof, do not toss everything into the wastebasket until you have considered all the possibilities for redeeming your garment.

You have several choices. The one you choose depends on what it is you did wrong.

— You can take it out and do it over again.

— You can put it aside and tackle it later when you are calmer.

— You can recut the piece (assuming you have a little extra fabric).

— You can change your mind about what you are going to make. (A goofed dress can become a lovely blouse.)

— You can purchase another ¾ yards or so and recut.

— You can assume there is nothing in the world you can do to save it, so why lose sleep over it?

If sewing were a no-goof, no-hassle, no-headache craft, it wouldn't be any fun, right?

DEAR ABBY

Daughter wants own religion

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In response to a letter in your column you said, "You don't need a person's permission to pray for him." Well, that's my problem. My mother is praying for me, and I wish she wouldn't. Ever since she got herself "born again," she says she is praying that God will bring me to my knees so I will be born again, too.

Abby, I have my own religion, which doesn't happen to be the same as hers, but she keeps trying to talk me into being "saved." When I ask her to please leave me alone and quit praying for me, she says it's her duty as a parent to lead me down the "right" path.

Don't get me wrong. I also believe in prayer, but I don't want to get into a contest with my mother to see which one of us prays better. — GETTING GOOFY IN L.A.

DEAR GETTING: You didn't state your age, but if you're an adult you have the right to choose your own religion. And as well-meaning as your mother may be, she needs to be reminded that one of our most cherished rights is the right to be left alone.

DEAR ABBY: From time to time I meet people who are anti-black, anti-Jew, anti-Catholic, anti-gay and anti-foreigner, while loudly proclaiming that they are passionately pro-American!

Since the logic behind this kind of thinking escapes me, I am at a loss as to how to deal with them. Please advise. And you may use my real name. — CHARLOTTE CAMPBELL

DEAR CHARLOTTE: Tell them that it's not possible to be anti-black, anti-Jew, anti-Catholic, anti-gay and anti-foreigner AND passionately pro-American at the same time because a substantial part of America is composed of blacks, Jews, Catholics, gays and foreigners.

DEAR ABBY: A close relative, age 77, recently went to Poland to visit his relatives. His wife was unable to accompany him because of poor health.

Two weeks after he arrived in Poland his wife received a telegram from the American Consulate in Poland informing her that her husband had suffered a fatal heart attack and it would cost her $7,500 to have his body flown back to the United States for burial. The alternative was to have him buried in Poland for $300. His wife chose to have him buried in Poland because she couldn't afford to have his body shipped back here at those prices.

We were shocked at how much was asked to have his body shipped to the United States from Poland. It seems so grossly overpriced. Am I being ridiculous to question the whole thing? Why in the world is so much charged for such a humane service?

Now the poor widow will be deprived of being buried alongside her lifelong companion in the family plot with other family members.

I would like to hear your comment on this upsetting crisis in our family. — UPSET IN N.Y.

DEAR UPSET: I am informed that the cost of shipping a body by air is determined by the weight and mileage. The average weight (including the shipping crate) is approximately 350 to 400 pounds, which costs between $120 and $140 per each 100 pounds. Add to that the mortician's fee for embalming, plus the casket, and it should not total anywhere near the figure you were quoted. I think you have good reason to be upset.

Program seeks gifted toddlers

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Rutgers Medical School is setting up a program to screen babies and toddlers for advanced learning traits.

"We feel strongly about identifying children early so they can get the kind of nurturing at home and in school early and not be wasted," said James Alvino, editor of Gifted Child Newsletter in Sewell, N.J.

Alvino said he was not aware of any program in the country where researchers are trying to identify gifted children so early.

The program, which the college hopes will draw children from New York to the north and Philadelphia to the south, will screen children up to age 3.

Scientists at the Rutgers Institute for Child Development have been gathering data by 150 central New Jersey 9-year-olds since birth and recording characteristics that seem to separate gifted children from those of average intelligence and talent.

"We find, for example, that children who are exceptional at 9, also gave indications of that at 1 year and 2 years," said Dr. Michael Lewis, director of the child institute.

Drug may help prevent, delay heart disease

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A drug that alters cholesterol levels in the blood can prevent hardening of the arteries from getting worse, according to a 10-year-study by the National Institutes of Health.

The study is the first to show that changing blood cholesterol levels impedes the progression of heart disease, a researcher said recently.

The drug, called cholestyramine, was used to increase the so-called "good cholesterol" carried through the bloodstream by substances called high density lipoproteins, or HDLs. The amount of "bad cholesterol," or low density lipoproteins, LDLs, was lowered, said study director Robert Levy at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association.

In heart disease patients given the drug, 32 percent developed more serious atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries.

In contrast, 49 percent of those not given the drug progressed to more serious disease.

The study examined the effect of cholestyramine only on people who already had atherosclerosis, in which the arteries that nourish the heart become smaller as the result of fatty buildup inside them.

A total of 116 subjects participated, divided into two approximately equal groups.

A second study, examining the effect of the drug on people without heart disease, will be released in January, Levy said.

Cholestyramine was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug 10 years ago, Levy said, but doctors were never sure whether it did any good.

Presents made easily

Copley News Service

Here are some quick and easy ideas for Christmas presents you can make yourself:

COSMETIC BAG: Two unlikely sources for cosmetic bags are place mats and pot holders — honest.

Place mat: Select a reversible, ruffled place mat. Fold in half crosswise, add a zipper across top, stitch sides closed. What could be easier?

Pot holders: Select two "designer" pot holders. Stitch wrong sides together along both sides and bottom. Top can be left open, or closed with a large snap or hook-and-loop fastener dot.

JEANS QUILT: Onto a flat twin-size sheet, arrange scraps cut from old jeans (leave zippers, buttons, pockets, etc., in place!), overlapping edges.

Baste in place. Use an applique stitch to work around all edges of each scrap.

Bind edges of quilt with wide bias tape. This makes a most durable, warm and memorable quilt.

TOTE BAGS: Totes never go out of style, nor do they ever lose their usefulness. You can invest in a pattern or two if you want, or you can create your own.

Be sure to use durable fabrics such as denim, canvas, ticking or vinyl.

BELTS: Why not make a wardrobe of belts for a deserving female on your Christmas list.

There are leatherlike finished beltings available by the yard. Just cut to size, attach a buckle to one end and finish off the other.

Or attach a two-piece buckle to the ends of a stretchable belting.

Any well-dressed woman or young girl will appreciate several of these belts.

PERSONALIZED TOWELS: Towels are towels until you add your own touches of beauty. Lace, crocheted edging, monograms or appliques can spruce up any run-of-the-mill towel.

Detective takes pride in solving crimes

By the Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

AP Laserphoto

Los Angeles County Sheriff's Sgt. Joe Sabas, a deputy for 18 years, interviews a crime suspect. Sabas works in the burglary detail, where he takes a small fraction of the four million burglary reports each year.

LOS ANGELES — For two days, Sheriff's Sgt. Joe Sabas and eight other burglary detectives under his command stalked the man in the blue and tan truck, waiting for him to break into a house.

Burglars rarely get such attention, but a snitch claimed the suspect had fenced an M-16 rifle recently. That made the man worthy of nine undercover cops from area burglary teams and a sheriff's helicopter to help follow him.

But in heavy noon traffic in downtown suburban Santa Monica, one detective momentarily lost sight of the truck with its distinctive blue nose and tan tail.

"How the hell did we lose him?" Sabas asked, tapping his fingers on the steering wheel.

"That's two days in a row we lost him. Damn!"

Sabas began driving, looking for the suspect's truck. As he did, Sabas, a deputy for 18 of his 51 years, mused about what it takes to make a good burglary detective.

"Patience," he said. "Patience and memory."

Joe Sabas (pronounced SAY-bus) is one of several thousand detectives across the nation who work on burglaries, larcenies and similar property crimes. Sabas' job lacks the glamour and status of murder investigations as well as the danger and excitement of narcotics work. But he relishes his job, he says, and never regrets giving up his career as an insurance broker.

Sabas handles a tiny fraction of the nearly 4 million burglary reports Americans make each year. Burglary is the second most frequently reported crime, exceeded only by larceny, the simple taking of property or money. Nearly one of every three reported major crimes is a burglary, the illegal entry of a building to commit a crime.

In the United States police were told burglars took $8.6 billion worth of valuables in 1980, according to the FBI.

But that figure includes people who inflate their losses to recover more on their insurance or take greater loss on their tax returns.

One burglary victim in the affluent Marina Del Rey called Sabas to add some expensive jewelry to her initial list of stolen items. Sabas grew suspicious. When the woman acknowledged she had actually lost the items, Sabas refused to list them as stolen. "Had she just claimed it was taken in the first report who'd have ever known otherwise?" Sabas noted later.

Most mornings Sabas has suspects in custody, caught by patrol deputies with suspected stolen goods on them. The FBI estimates 25 percent of stolen loot is recovered. But little of it gets returned to its owners because the owners cannot be identified or they cannot prove ownership.

Most mornings Sabas' cases include suspects in custody. His initial paperwork done, Sabas retrieves a set of handcuffs from his desk and jauntily steps across the way to the lockup. While waiting for the jailer to get his suspect, Sabas listens to the pleas of the prisoners wanting to know when they'll get out. He tells them what he can about procedure.

When the jailer retrieves a 19-year-old burglary suspect, Sabas slips only one cuff on the youth's bony wrist, instead of locking his hands behind his back the way uniformed deputies do in the field. Sabas takes the other wrist in his right hand and guides the youth outdoors, across the driveway and into the detective bureau.

Future grim for 'baby boomers'

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A little advice to the "baby boom" generation from Ronald J. Vogel, economist and public policy specialist at the University of Arizona: "Start saving money ... now, to take care of ourselves, because it looks as if Uncle Sugar isn't going to do it for us, like he did before."

"Us" are the fruits of this country's "baby boom" — the flock of babies born during the country's postwar economic boom, roughly from 1945 to 1965. These people — in sheer numbers, the largest population segment in the country — now have grown up and can see their old age ahead of them, he said.

What they see out there, by the year 2010 or 2030, is far from comforting, according to Vogel's research and predictions.

His statistics show the number of people age 65 and over will increase by 120 percent between the years 1980 and 2030, while the general population will grow by only 35 percent during that time.

More disturbing, he said, is that the over-75 population — those most in need of long-term and expensive health care — will grow at an even more rapid rate.

Tranquilizers not popular now

BOSTON (AP) — Just a few years ago, Valium sales were going up so fast that some people thought the entire nation would be tranquilized by the end of the century.

Now there is a new worry: The sale of Valium is dropping so fast that by the year 2000, the United States could be a very anxious place indeed.

Since the drug hit its peak of popularity in 1975, there has been a strong — some say irrational — backlash against this ubiquitous tranquilizer. The number of prescriptions written has fallen in half and is still dropping. What was once America's best-selling medicine is now the punchline of its favorite doctor jokes.

"The decrease that has occurred in the past four or five years probably has a lot do with the exaggerated attack on this drug," says Dr. Karl Rickles of the University of Pennsylvania. "The implication is that the male chauvinist doctor is addicting the poor unsuspecting housewife for life."

Valium has been accused of making people weak and passive or angry and hostile, of creating a nation of emotional weaklings helpless to face the strain of work-a-day life without popping the little pills. "Jelly beans for the middle class," they've been called, or "mother's little helper."

But the picture that emerges from hundreds of medical studies is far different. Valium and other look-alike tranquilizers are extremely safe; withdrawal symptoms are reasonably rare and easily avoided; and for people wracked by anxiety, they can make life bearable.

"A lot of what has appeared in the media is probably not valid," says Dr. David J. Greenblatt of New England Medical Center Hospital. "And I think it has made many people shy away from taking medication that might benefit them and cause little harm."

Valium is still the largest selling of a dozen minor tranquilizers known as benzodiazepines. Others include Librium, Tranxene and Daimane. They differ largely in how quickly they take effect and stay active in the body.

National surveys show that far more people suffer from severe anxiety than take benzodiazepines. Both Rickles and Greenblatt, who have studied the drugs extensively, say they are probably underprescribed.

As the tranquilizers grew in popularity during the 1970s, so did concerns that they were used too freely. Valium became a symbol of an over-medicated America.

How to get telephones and how to get them repaired after the Bell System breaks up.

As the divestiture or breakup of the Bell System takes place, a lot of changes will also take place. Two major ones will affect telephones and repairs.

HOW TO GET TELEPHONES.

You can continue leasing your current phones and pay a monthly charge as you now do. Except your lease will be through AT&T Information Systems instead of Southwestern Bell Telephone. That means you'll see a separate leasing charge from AT&T Information Systems on your monthly bill from Southwestern Bell Telephone. We won't be leasing home telephones after divestiture. If you continue to lease, we'll handle the transfer, so you don't have to do anything.

WHERE TO GET TELEPHONES REPAIRED.

Beginning on the first of the year, Southwestern Bell Telephone will no longer repair leased telephones, AT&T will. We will continue to repair telephone lines at no charge, though. So when you have a problem, it's important to determine if the problem is in your phone or on our line. And there's an easy way to do it. Just check a different phone at your home. If neither works, the trouble is probably in the line, and you should call us for the repair.

If one phone works and the other doesn't, the problem is probably in the phone. And you should not call us. If you lease the phone or bought it from either AT&T Information Systems or Southwestern Bell Telephone, you should call AT&T Information Systems for repairs.

If you purchased your phone from another source other than Bell, the repair should be referred to the original manufacturer or retailer.

MORE INFORMATION.

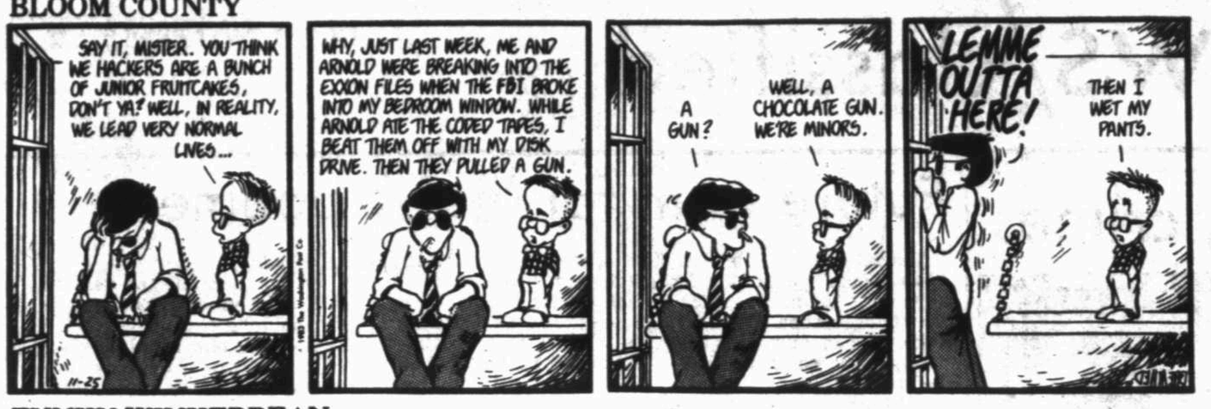

If you have any questions about the breakup of the Bell System and how it will affect your service, call us toll-free at 1 800 555-5000. We'll be glad to answer them and send you a special information booklet, too.

Or, if you have specific questions about your service, please call your Southwestern Bell Telephone Business Office.

"What a day! My computer's on strike and wants 25 percent of my salary!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, November 26, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: English clergyman-scholar John Harvard and the U.S. Army's first female surgeon Mary Edwards Walter were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: TV journalist-host Eric Sevareid, singer Tina Turner and New York Yankees hurler Jay Howell. Your efforts in a relatively unknown field win you widespread acclaim. A business associate will do anything he or she can to get your attention. Enormous profits are involved. Public recognition could put you in the running for a special job. If questioned about your strengths and weaknesses, emphasize the former. Romantic partner is eager to help you. Make specific requests.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your finances improve. Take the family out for a night on the town. Artistic talent plays a role in your weekend run. Avoid showing impatience with a teen-ager who is feeling his oats.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Guide a child gently and he will make you proud. You are in the mood for travel and adventure. A revelation helps solve an old mystery. Romance nudges you toward a commitment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your loved ones are most affectionate today. Someone at a distance is feeling lonely. Get in touch. Spend some time planning for the future. You will feel more secure.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Two great deals near completion. Consider what their success will mean to you and mate. A spontaneous friendship arises when you meet someone new. Be honest about your goals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your message comes across loud and clear, but it may take some family members a while to accept it. Be patient. Let romance pursue you for a change.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An older person could play a key role in today's activities. Dig beneath the surface to get the truth. It is important to know where you stand before things go any further.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get organized so that you can complete any chores in time to join family members on a special outing. You may be judging someone unfairly. Wait until more information is available.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Adopt a low-key approach to a family gathering. You are lucky where money is concerned. Try not to become so preoccupied with romance that you forget your other responsibilities.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A letter or phone call brings good news regarding a family member. Romance flourishes. Even small mistakes can be costly now. Fasten your seat belt and obey the speed limit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be careful not to promise something you may not be able to deliver. A college student livens things up this weekend. Focus on recreational activities the whole family can enjoy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Family members will be supportive if you outline your weekend plans in advance. Any surprises could arouse opposition. A friend shares good news that could eventually work to your benefit.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You receive welcome financial news. Travel will be difficult but worth the trouble. Romance is on your mind. This is not the time to challenge a relative's biased opinion.

Actress has see-through TV role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ann Jillian was alone, carrying on an animated conversation all by herself.

She was on a stage completely barren except for a blue backdrop. Across the sound stage at NBC, John P. Navin Jr., her co-star in the new comedy series, "Jennifer Slept Here," carried on the other half of the conversation in the middle of a kitchen set.

On the television monitor, Miss Jillian — wearing a baseball shirt, red tights, leg warmers and a baseball cap perched sideways on her platinum hair — appeared to be in the kitchen with Navin. She had the ability to "walk" through the walls or right through Navin.

It's all done by a video device called chromokey.

Miss Jillian plays a ghost in this new comedy series. She's the ghost of a glamorous movie queen who has returned to haunt her former mansion. Navin's family has just moved into her former home and he's the only one who can see her.

Besides her new series, Miss Jillian also stars in the movie, "Girls of the White Orchid," which NBC will telecast Monday. She plays a young woman who is brought to Japan with the promise she will be an entertainer. Instead, she is forced into prostitution.

She also plays the "lusting neighbor" in the movie, "Mr. Mom."

In her last movie, she played screen vamp Mae West, for which she put on 22 pounds. "I knew if I was going to play Jennifer I couldn't keep that. It starts to stack up down below. I went to a gym every morning. It was fun taking it off, but it was more fun putting it on."

Miss Jillian said she did not have Mae West in mind for her concept of Jennifer in the TV series. "It's a whole composite, not just a lady known for being a sex symbol. I wanted a glamor queen like Lana Turner, Kim Novak or Rita Hayworth. There's some Marilyn Monroe in it. She also fluctuates between Lucille Ball and Auntie Mame."

"I saw this show as a wonderful vehicle, one that would be fun," she said. "The story of having a ghost is not new, it's been done a number of times, but each generation can claim their own original program. I like the idea that a moral can be taught through a light fantasy. Plus, I get to wear all those gowns."

She said it was originally suggested that she wear briefer costumes in the show. "Sex sells," she said. "But at the same time I didn't think that's what we should be selling. I could see the newspaper reviews — 'Here we go again! Miss Jillian has found herself in another jiggle show!' I think we walk a line between a more sophisticated approach to comedy and yet still have broad humor."

A strong candidate for "Hand of the Year" is this beautiful swindle from the Switzerland-Great Britain match at the recent European Championship. Sitting South was Switzerland's Stanley Walter.

East's one heart opening bid is somewhat strange to Americans. It was made to provide for an easy rebid should partner respond one spade. With his distributional monster, South refused to sell out to an opposing heart game.

The defenders started with three rounds of hearts, declarer ruffing the third round with the ten. Since entries to the table were as rare as hen's teeth, declarer realized that if he drew two rounds of trumps and then crossed to dummy with a third trump, he would not be able to ruff out and enjoy his long diamond suit. So at trick four he led a low trump!

West saw no reason to waste his queen of trumps under his partner's "marked" honor, so he played low. (Indeed, if the hands were somewhat different and East did have a spade honor, it could have been fatal to go up with the queen since that might permit a second-round trump entry to the board.) Dummy's nine won, and declarer was in command.

He led a diamond to the king, drew the last trump and conceded a diamond. Declarer still had two trumps in his hand. One he would use to ruff any return, then after ruffing a diamond to set up the suit, the other would serve as the entry back to his hand to run the high diamonds for his doubled contract.

In the other room, Britain also reached four spades, but with North as declarer. Now there wasn't even a chance for a brilliancy. The British went down one for a substantial loss.

Thatcher sets Soviet talks

By DAVID MASON
Chief European Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has set a new policy course for increased dialogue with the Soviet Union, including the possibility of a summit in the coming months.

"The time is right now to make strenuous efforts to have a sensible dialogue between East and West to make sure there are no misunderstandings," she told the House of Commons last week.

Mrs. Thatcher, who says she is the "senior Western statesman" in terms of length of service at the head of an important nation, believes the dialogue should go on even without the immediate prospect of dramatic breakthroughs or specific agreements to ease East-West tensions.

Mrs. Thatcher has kept to a firm anti-Soviet line since she became prime minister in 1979, earning the sobriquet "Iron Lady" in Moscow, but she is taking a different tack than President Reagan has.

He has argued against any summit with the Russians unless the existing tense atmosphere eases and unless he could come home with some worthwhile agreement. Otherwise, the world would be deceived and disappointed, American officials say.

Mrs. Thatcher is said to feel she would be in a strong position to speak with the Soviet leadership on such crucial matters as arms control.

Britain accepted the first American cruise missiles last week as part of a NATO plan to meet the perceived threat of Soviet SS-20 missiles.

If the NATO deployment plan had collapsed, Mrs. Thatcher would have had second thoughts about summit-level talks because the West's hand in arms negotiations would have been weakened, her aides say.

Mrs. Thatcher's aides emphasize that no formal proposals for a meeting with Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov have yet been made.

Salvadoran troops chase rebels

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Government troops are trying to dislodge leftist rebels from strongholds in eastern El Salvador after one U.S.-trained unit killed 25 guerrillas in a surprise attack.

Military sources in the city of San Vicente, 36 miles east of San Salvador, said Thursday the U.S.-backed government has begun a campaign to oust leftist guerrillas from areas they occupy in the northern part of San Vicente province.

The sources, requesting anonymity for security reasons, said the campaign would last three days.

On Thursday, the military said it staged a surprise attack on guerrillas with troops trained in counterinsurgency by the United States. The heaviest fighting was in the towns of Barilla Negra and Cerro Bahilonia, on the outskirts of Corinto.

It said the attack occurred Wednesday and "high commanders of the People's Revolutionary Army" were among the 50 wounded in fighting 127 miles northeast of the capital.

In another Central American developments Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge Martinez said Thursday his country would be willing to get rid of its Cuban military advisers if Honduras and El Salvador get rid of their U.S. military advisers.

The Sandinista government says it already has sent home 1,200 Cuban advisers, mostly civilians. The United States has 55 military advisers in El Salvador and about 200 in Honduras.

Withdrawal of all foreign troops in Central America is a cornerstone of a proposed regional peace treaty drafted by the Contadora group — Venezuela, Mexico, Panama and Colombia.

Virgin's spokesman 'suspect'

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer

VILLA ALEMANA, Chile — Although the Roman Catholic Church has voiced suspicions and ordered its faithful to stay away, thousands of Chileans are flocking to a makeshift shrine near here to listen to a teen-age boy who claims to talk to the Virgin Mary.

According to local press accounts, Miguel Angel Poblete, about 16, has drawn since last July more than 100,000 people to the hilltop shrine which consists of a cross, a Chilean flag, and statues and pictures of Mary.

The crowd at one recent session was estimated at more than 5,000.

Archbishop Francisco de Borja Valenzuela of Valparaiso, who has religious jurisdiction over this area, said the purported sightings of Mary "have no base of credibility." He charged that the outdoor prayer gatherings receive "support from outside the church that is not only inappropriate but suspect."

The archbishop did not elaborate on what he meant by outside support.

Sprinkled among the messages the boy attributes to Mary are admonitions to "men, to stop dressing like women," to "the people of Russia, to become closer to God," and to "couples, not to have sex without being married by the church."

The sandy-haired, ruddy-faced youth, wearing jeans, running shoes and a faded sweater, prays, falls to the ground in what appear to be trances, wanders through the crowds in a glazed state and talks to an invisible being he says is the Virgin.

Adult assistants, who refuse to identify themselves other than as "lay Catholics for humanity," follow the boy around with a microphone and loudspeaker and lead prayers and hymns.

Vendors hawk religious mementos, but no admission is charged and solicitations of donations were not evident during the November ceremony witnessed by a reporter.

Archbishop Juan Francisco Fresno of Santiago, the capital, 65 miles southeast of Villa Alemana, also has advised Catholics against attending the sessions, calling them "highly harmful to the true image of the church."

Yet Chileans, ranging from humble farm types to sophisticated middle-class matrons in designer outfits, keep coming.

"The Virgin sees that she must help Chile," said Luzmira Soto de Munier, a 50-ish housewife from Villa Alemana. "There is so much poverty, suffering and unemployment," she explained, referring to the country's 25 percent jobless rate. "We need a miracle."

"Chile is becoming a point of contact, to spread the message of peace and hope," said Carmen Aldunate, about 40, a language teacher from Santiago.

At one point in the ceremony, Miguel Angel (Spanish for Michelangelo) looked skyward and said, pointing, "Yes, ma'am, I see you. Yes, I hear you."

Falling to his knees during an alleged conversation with the Virgin Mary is Miguel Angel Poblete of Villa Alemana, Chile.

Then, as a hush fell over the crowd, the boy told everyone to welcome Mary by waving handkerchiefs toward Heaven and taking snapshots of the sun.

Amid a fluttering of white and the clicking of shutters, people in the crowd gasped and claimed to see Mary in a long gown, in the shifting cloud formations.

"The Virgin is here," the prayer leader exclaimed into the microphone. Miguel Angel broke into the hymn, "Ave, Maria."

One woman wearing an orange neck scarf said she saw even more: The Virgin was sitting between the flags of Chile and Argentina. This, she concluded, was a call for peace between the two countries, which are in dispute over ownership of three islands in the Beagle Channel at the tip of South America. Pope John Paul II took on mediation of the dispute after armed conflict became a possibility.

Near the end of the session, Miguel Angel, still claiming to be in conversation with Mary, said in a soft plaintive tone, "What's that? You want Russia to become closer to you and Christ? You say God is willing to help Russia?"

The boy instructed people to hold their rosaries skyward, to help spread the message.

Miguel Angel said in a brief interview that he was not sure of his age and that he was raised in orphanages.

13 hurt in Belfast bombing

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A remote control bomb hidden behind a stone wall exploded in Roman Catholic west Belfast and injured 13 people, including an 18-month old girl, police said today.

Police said the blast Thursday night injured four soldiers, two policemen and seven civilians and the force of the explosion blew a hole in the five-foot wall where the bomb was hidden, knocking passers-by to the ground.

A press officer at Belfast police headquarters said the bomb was triggered by guerrillas using a wire running across grass behind the wall and up a slope, and was meant for a passing combined police-army patrol.

Irish executive kidnapped

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Gunmen disguised as police kidnapped a top executive in Canadian tycoon Garry Weston's supermarket empire, and police say they believe ransom-seeking guerrillas from the IRA were responsible.

"This has all the hallmarks of an operation by a paramilitary, subversive group," said Superintendent Noel Anderson for Irish Republic's national police.

The abduction of Don Tidey, the chief executive of Weston's main Irish subsidiary, on Thursday came three months after an attempt to kidnap Weston's brother, Galen, from an Irish estate ended in a shootout with police.

Police at Dublin headquarters today said no ransom demand or other message yet had been received.

Vatican takes family stand

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican says parents should not be forced to have small families and suggests they be paid to stay home and raise their children.

In a charter of family rights issued Thursday, the Vatican also urged rich nations not make birth-control programs a condition for aid to poor countries and said parents have the right to supervise their children's sex education.

Archbishop Edouard Gagnon, acting president of the Pontifical Council for the Family, said a special study group worked three years to prepare the document.

Chad's leader agrees to talks

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — President Hissene Habre's government announced today it has agreed to a reconciliation meeting with its Libyan-backed rivals and other factions to re-establish peace in war-town Chad.

The meeting will take place in the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa, headquarters of the Organization of African Unity, on a date yet to be determined.

McIntyre won't take post

NEW DELHI India (AP) — Alister McIntyre, appointed to head Grenada's interim government following the U.S.-led invasion, will not be able to take the post because of a serious illness, Commonwealth officials said today.

Patsy B. Robertsen, a spokeswoman for the Commonwealth Secretariat, said McIntyre would have to undergo four months of "intensive medical care" in Geneva, Switzerland.

Ms. Robertsen would not specify his ailment, but McIntyre, a Grenadian, is known to suffer from diabetes.

Air Canada passengers hurt

Mother Teresa receives high British honor

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Nobel laureate Mother Teresa, the 73-year-old Roman Catholic nun who founded the Missionaries of Charity in 1950, has been honored with one of Britain's highest awards, the Order of Merit.

Queen Elizabeth II, on a nine-day state visit to India, made the presentation Thursday during a ceremony at the presidential palace. Later she and Mother Teresa, whose diminutive figure was wrapped in a white sari, walked together into the palace.

Mother Teresa, winner of the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize, was cited by Britain for her humanitarian work in the slums of the world.

The Missionaries of Charity operates nearly 100 schools, more than 300 hospitals and clinics and about 65 relief centers and missions in more than 50 Indian cities. It also has missions in North America and South America, Africa, Asia, the Pacific basin and the Middle East.

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly a year after the fact, young viewers of "Sesame Street" have been told about the death of "Mr. Hooper," the kindly candy store proprietor on the educational television program.

Will Lee, who played the character since the show's inception in 1969, died last December, halfway through its 14th season. He was 74.

Viewers got the news on the Thanksgiving program because "it's a family day," said Donna Williams of the Public Broadcasting System, distributor of the program. "Parents would be there with their kids to answer questions."

• • •

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Space shuttle astronaut Guion Bluford Jr. made a down-to earth appearance as the grand marshal for Philadelphia's 84th annual Thanksgiving Day parade.

Bluford, 41, a mission specialist who was on September's flight of the Challenger, escorted Santa Claus, 22 high school bands, and an assortment of marchers dressed up as ice cones, animals and clowns. The colorful extravaganza Thursday was called "A Child's Christmas Fantasy."

Many of the cast of characters in the march were employees of Gimbel's department store, the parade sponsor.

Bluford, born in the city, rode in a 1928 Packard convertible with Mayor William Green. About 50,000 people lined the streets.

"I never thought when I lived here that I'd be part of something like this, and I like it," the astronaut said.

With heads bowed, Mother Teresa, left, and Queen Elizabeth II examine the insignia of the Honorary Order of Merit presented to the nun Thursday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Benny Goodman, "the king of swing," spent Thanksgiving in a hospital where he underwent intestinal surgery.

Benny Goodman

The renowned clarinetist and band leader was operated on Wednesday at New York University Medical Center. The hospital declined to disclose the reason for the surgery.

However, the 74-year-old Goodman felt well enough Thursday to receive telephone calls in his room, a spokesman said. His condition was listed as satisfactory.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — At age 96, Broadway producer George Abbott has married again — the third marriage for him and the first for his bride, 52-year-old Philadelphia businesswoman Joy Moana Valderrama. The couple tied the knot Monday in a ceremony in Abbott's Miami Beach home.

Miss Valderrama, president of a Philadelphia retail fur company, met Abbott 25 years ago while she was attending school and working as a Hawaiian dancer in a New Jersey nightclub. She was a championship tennis player and is a member of the Sports Hall of Fame at Temple University.

Abbott has been associated with about 130 Broadway productions, including "Pal Joey," "Call Me Madame" and "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." These days he's preparing the musical "On Your Toes," which he first directed on Broadway in 1936, for a revival in London in May.

Abbott's first wife, the former Ednah Levis, died in 1930. He was divorced from actress Mary Sinclair in 1951.

LONDON (AP) — Hungarian Zoltan Ribli defeated Soviet veteran Vassily Smyslov after 42 moves in the second game of their world chess candidates semifinal match to even the score at 1-1.

In a game spread over two days, Smyslov resigned Thursday night after he sat at the board for several minutes, staring at a seemingly hopeless position. Each player must make a minimum of 40 moves in 2½ hours.

Thursday was a rest day for the other semifinal contestants, Victor Korchnoi, the 52-year-old Soviet defector playing under the Swiss flag, and Gary Kasparov, 20, of the Soviet Union.

Korchnoi leads that match 1½ points to ½ point. He won the first game and the second game was a draw.

Twelve games are scheduled in each semifinal. One point is awarded for a win and one-half point for a draw, with 6½ points needed to win the match.

The semifinal winners will met in February to determine a challenger for world champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union.

SANTA MONICA — Leonard Wibberley, author of the celebrated political satire "The Mouse That Roared," died Wednesday. He was 68.

Wibberley was pronounced dead shortly after 2 p.m. at Santa Monica Hospital. He was on his way to an art lesson in Santa Monica when he suffered a heart attack.

According to a hospital spokeswoman, Wibberley had a massive heart attack and was rushed into the emergency room at 12:25 pm. The exact cause of death was listed as coronary pulmonary arrest.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Vitamin treatment still controversial

Dear Dr. Solomon: Have you heard that large doses of vitamins may be good for hyperactive children? My niece is treating one of her children in this fashion and she says that her doctor recommended it. — Mrs. K.S., Vineland, N.J.

Dear Mrs. S.: Megavitamin therapy for children with attention deficit disorders is a controversial subject. Some researchers have suggested that these children are vitamin deficient and therefore might be helped by such treatment; others, however, disagree.

For the time being it appears that it is not possible to give a definitive answer to your question.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I seem to get a heartburn whenever I eat hard cheeses. Is this common? and what can I do to avoid it? — Lester, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Lester: The obvious response to your question is to avoid foods that cause heartburn. These generally include fatty foods, chocolate, and alcohol. Cigarette smoking may have the same effect. If hard cheeses affect you this way, stay away from them for awhile and see if the condition is alleviated.

Dr. Stephen Lipkin, of Temple University Hospital, has some advice for patients with reflux, which is usually associated with heartburn. He advises these patients to eat three meals a day, avoid lying down after meals, eat their evening meal several hours before retiring, lose weight if necessary, and elevate the head of their bed at least six inches.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a very close friend that I am concerned about and would like to help. He has become a really compulsive runner and is aiming at running in a marathon. He has lost a great deal of weight while training during the past few months. I have read about anorexia and I think that's what he has. He says he has lost weight just to get in shape for the marathon. How can you tell if such a person needs help or is really just getting in shape? — Tommy, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Tommy: It is sometimes difficult to distinguish between weight loss that indicates anorexia and wight loss that results from vigorous training. According to Dr. John J. Chipman, of the University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas, the distinction may be made on the basis of other symptoms. For example, a person who is depressed, has a disturbed body image, and expresses feelings of inadequacy would be assumed to have anorexia.

Regardless of the diagnosis, a person who has lost a great deal of weight in only a few months should see a physician, and your friend should be encouraged to do so.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am scheduled for a hip replacement operation and everyone tells me that the chances for success are very high. Just what are theses chances, and what can I expect? A hip replacement operation is major surgery, isn't it? — Gabe, Miami Beach, Fla.

Dear Gabe: Hip replacement operations are indeed major surgery, but about 75,000 such operations are performed in the United States each year and about 90 percent are successful. Most patients are hospitalized for two to three weeks and then must use walking aids for several more weeks. They regain their independence in about three months.

Following recovery, patients can walk, drive a car, dance, and do most of the things they did before the operation; however, repetitive activities that overload the hip, such as jogging, should be avoided.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Will you please explain the purpose of splints when they are used by patients who have arthritis? — Joanna, Washington, D.C.

Dear Joanna: Splints made of fiberglass or lightweight plastic may reduce inflammation and deformities and improve function in patients with arthritis. Splints are also effective in reducing pain.

The splints are usually one of two types. Resting splints immobilize a painful joint during sleep and rest; working splints support the joint while permitting some movement.

Splints should be used as part of a program that includes medication, physical therapy, rest, and exercise.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was recently told that I have diabetes and the doctor put me on insulin. Does that mean that I'll have to take it for the rest of my life? I would like to look forward to a time when I would be able to be free of medication. — Howard, Santa Clara, Calif.

Dear Howard: Insulin-dependent diabetics will always have to take their insulin; however, there are some patients whose diabetes is associated with obesity who may be able to discontinue their insulin if they lose ther excess weight. These patients may then be able to manage their diabetes either through diet alone or by diet plus oral hypoglycemic drugs.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Like many in your profession, I'm afraid you discount the value of natural, or folk, medicine far too quickly and freely.

It is a well known and proven fact that drinking milk from a goat that has eaten poison ivy, or poison oak, will give the drinker a seasonal immunity from these poisonous plants. It is not necessary to continue to drink the milk through the toxic season of the plant, a pint or so early in the season will give immunity for the entire summer.

I continue to read and appreciate your fine column. — Mr. L.S.B., Cave Junction, Oregon.

Dear Mr. L.S.B.: Although your remedy is interesting, I'm afraid I cannot recommend it to my patients.

For Lonnie, Galveston, Texas: Relief from pain rather than the possibility of addiction should be the concern for dying patients. A mixture of narcotic and non-narcotic drugs can be used to keep these patients alert but free from pain.

For Karen, Lexington, Ky.: There are a number of simple methods of reducing the amount of fat you use when preparing meals, without making the meals bland. For example, instead of serving fried potatoes, how about lightly brushing the potatoes with margarine and then broiling them? When preparing creamed soups, use evaporated skim milk; and to thicken soups, use cornstarch or grated potato. All you will be sacrificing, if you make these changes, are calories, not taste.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as amny questions as possible in his column.)

POSITIVE THINKING

You can bring light to the eyes of others

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Some time ago I met a physician, an extraordinarily stimulating personality. We had an interesting conversation about how we happened to select our respective jobs in life. His story was so moving that I want to tell you about it.

He told me that when he was a small boy in Kansas, the countryside in wintertime often lay under deep, drifted snow and there would be difficulty getting in and out from his family farmhouse and to and from town. One such winter, when he was about seven years old, his little sister took sick. she ran a high fever and became delirious. By the time his father got a message to the doctor over the well-nigh impassable roads and the physician finally arrived in his horse and buggy through the snow, the little girl was near death's door.

The family doctor stayed with them for twenty-four hours. The whole household was filled with deep anguish and sorrow and no one had a moment's sleep. Finally, the little boy saw the doctor walk from his sister's bedside and put his hands on the shoulders of his father and mother. And the boy heard the doctor say: "Thank God, I can tell you that little Mary will get well."

The crisis had passed. The frightened boy, from where he stood behind a chair, could see his parents' faces at that moment. He had never seen them so beautiful, so lighted up, so wondrously happy. They had been made so by the few meaningful words the doctor had spoken to them.

"Right there, in that moment," my friend concluded, "I decided to be a doctor so I could say things like that to people, that would bring that light to their eyes, that joy to their faces."

Well, of course, you don't have to be a doctor specifically to say or do that which puts light in a human eye and joy in a human face. Simply by leading a life of kindness and compassion you can bring happiness to human beings and in so doing find happiness for yourself. The satisfactions of serving others well, of bringing them joy and happiness, is open to each of us. Indeed, all you have to do is treat everyone in a kindly manner.

For myself, I have a little scheme that proves most exciting. Every morning I ask the Lord to lead me to someone during the day whom I may help. This has brought many wonderful adventures in human relationships and I have gotten huge pleasure from it.

There are, of course, the special careers of service such as the work of medical doctors and others. For the many thousands of young people in high schools, colleges and universities, it is important to underscore the joy and satisfaction that lie in human service — in bringing real happiness to others.

We do not have enough doctors. We are short on pastors, priests and rabbis. We do not have enough teachers, or nurses, or missionaries, or scientists. And there are many other areas crying out for dedicated men and women who want to find that happiness beyond measure that lies in being able to help others and bring "that light to their eyes...that joy to their faces."

"The quality of the apartment is much better than any others I've seen in Midland."

Mary and Perry Nelson talk about The Clusters:

"The extras included seem like a real bonus. We're former homeowners, so it takes a really nice apartment complex to satisfy us."

"I have a lot more kitchen appliances than I ever did in my own home. Dishwasher, trash compactor, garbage disposal, side-by-side refrigerator, built-in microwave, washer and dryer."

But that's not all. You also get French doors to patios/balconies, mini-blinds, ceiling fans and your choice of wall coverings.

Plus unmatched amenities such as luxurious clubhouse, two pools with Jacuzzis, lighted tennis courts, 4-station jogging trail, aerobics classes and exercise room.

Come and visit and you'll see why the Nelsons' say, "There have been many days we've come home and said, 'They've really done it again, they've gone first class.'"

The Clusters. Midland's finest adult community. Special pricing now available.
