Bomb explodes at U.S. embassy in Kuwait

Surveying the damage

Kuwait City, Kuwait, police and fire officials examine the grounds of the U.S. embassy today after a car-bomb explosion ripped through the U.S. compound. Several other areas of the city were also bombed, including the French embassy.

KUWAIT (AP) — An explosives-laden dump truck roared through the U.S. Embassy gates today and blew up, causing extensive damage and fires in one of six separate bomb attacks that killed four people and injured 54 others, officials said.

In Washington, U.S. State Department spokesman Brian Carlson said said the embassy compound's three-story annex building, which took the brunt of the explosion, collapsed after the blast, confirming earlier reports of extensive damage.

The other explosions were at the French Embassy, near the Kuiwaiti International Airport control tower, a residential district where U.S. technicians and diplomats live, a power station and an oil depot.

The Kuwait News agency said 54 people were injured in all the explosions and also said several arrests had been made.

Carlson said of the four people killed, two of them were embassy employees, whom he did not identify. As for the other two victims, he said, "The bodies are quite charred and we have not been able to make an identification." He said 14 others were seriously injured and one embassy employee was unaccounted for in the U.S. Embassy blast.

"There are no Americans killed, no Americans hospitalized as far as we know in Kuiwat," Carlson said, adding a few Americans suffered "superficial injuries from flying glass, that type of thing."

There was no word on the nationalities of the victims. An American living near the U.S. Embassy said the blast "devastated" the embassy administrative section. Most of the employees of the section were Arabs, he said.

In Beirut, a caller who said they represent the Islamic Jihad, or Holy War, group telephoned the Agence France Presse news agency and claimed responsibility for the blasts.

It was the same group that claimed it carried out Oct. 23 bombings of the U.S. Marine base and French military headquarters in Beirut.

The caller claimed a seventh bomb was scheduled to explode in Kuwait, but officials said earlier a seventh bomb had been defused after it was found in a truck parked near the passport office.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz condemned the bombing attack and said it would not deter U.S. efforts to bring peace to the Middle East. He was in Rabat, Morocco, where he met with King Hassan II before flying to Lisbon, Portugal.

He said the attacks were directed against "the American peace effort but we are determined as a nation to continue these efforts for peace and stability."

In Paris, the French government also condemned the attacks. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said the blast at the French Embassy "injured several persons slightly and caused substantial damage." The spokesman said the cause of the blast had not been determined and no other details were immediately available.

The news agency said air traffic at the airport was not affected by the bomb but the offices of the radio room below the control tower was damaged by the blast, it said.

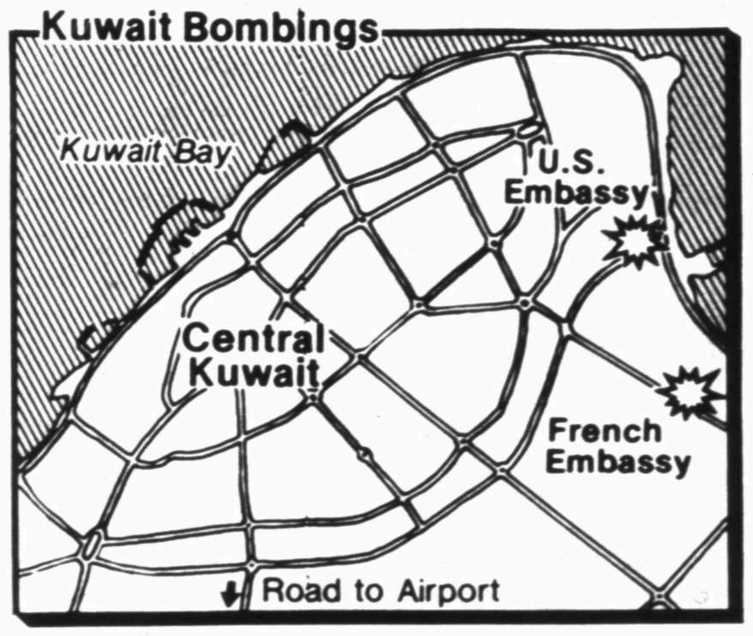
There was little information immediately available on damage at the residential complex at Al-Badah, nine miles north of the city; the Al-Shoaibab industrial complex south of Kuwait and an electric power station.

The U.S. Charge d'Affaires Phillip J. Griffin was not at the chancellery at the time of the blast. The United States has no ambassador in Kuiwait at this time.

"The vehicle crashed through the gate. A piece of the truck is still attached to the gate," Carlson said earlier today.

He said the truck went about 150 feet inside the compound, passed the chancellery building and exploded very near the three-story annex. He said the blast also caused "quite a bit of damage to the chancellery too."

The news agency said administrative and consular departments caught fire and that the consulate department had been "totally destroyed." It also said buildings near the compound had been either destroyed or set on fire and that rescue workers were evacuating the injured from the blast site.



The compound is composed of several independent buildings in a large area of gardens and courtyards and is located in a plush seaside neighborhood on this oil-rich Persian Gulf state.

Witnesses said the powerful blast shattered windows in the Hilton Hotel and other nearby buildings.

"Black smoke and burning cars, that's what we can see from our balcony at the Hilton, because the Hilton is only 50 yards from the American embassy. All you can see is the smoke and cars burning," hotel spokesman Joseph Daccache said.

"It (truck) didn't get too far. It was inside the compound but it didn't reach the main building, which is four stories high...I see only the shells of burned-out cars and the fire brigade and some of the police trying to clean up at the embassy."

Carlson said there apparently were two people in the truck and one of those killed may have been in the truck, but declined to speculate on who the second victim might be. Normally, the embassy has a strong security force, including armored cars.

The embassy normally is filled in the morning hours with people applying for U.S. visas, although it could not be immediately determined how many people were in the compound at the time of the blast.

Foreign Minister Sheik Sabah Al-Ahmed and other Kuwaiti officials were at the scene and expressed his concern and condolences, Carlson said.

Vistors to the embassy compound were quoted by the agency as saying "a large number of persons" had been injured and a number of cars burned by the blast.

State Department spokesman John Hughes said the "dump truck bomb" exploded about 9:30 a.m. (12:30 a.m. CST). Hughes was accompanying Shultz on his trip to Morocco.

On Oct. 23, a suicide terrorist in an explosives-laden truck smashed into the U.S. Marine base at Beirut in an attack that killed 240 Americans.

Mexicans believe Virgin Mary works miracles

MEXICO CITY (AP) — More than a million Mexicans — some crawling on their knees — are visiting the Basilica of Guadalupe today in a show of devotion to the Virgin Mary. They believe she appeared here miraculously 452 years ago.

In this overwhelmingly Roman Catholic country many Mexicans say the Virgin of Guadalupe continues to work miracles in answer to prayers.

Devotion to the Catholic figure known as the mother of Jesus runs deep through four centuries of Mexican tradition and is evident in the brightly colored images of her that are on constant display in many homes, cars and offices.

"It is a devotion so deeply rooted that there is hardly a family that does not keep something that reminds them of the Virgin — a medallion or a scapular," said the Rev. Francisco Ramirez Meza, spokesman for the Mexican Bishops Conference.

Catalina Martinez, 21, said the Virgin saved the life of her son, born last Oct. 29 after a very difficult pregnancy. Last Thursday Mrs. Martinez walked 40 yards on her bare knees through the front yard of the basilica, "fulfilling the promise" she made to the Virgin.

"I know it was her because I asked her for her help and she gave it to me," said Mrs. Martinez, 21.

Monsignor Guillermo Schulenburg, abbott of the basilica, said 12 million pilgrims visit the church every year, including as many as 1.5 million today.

Dec. 12 is the anniversary of the day when the Virgin made the last of four supposed appearances to an Indian named Juan Diego.

It was in fact the concept of the "Virgen Morena" (the dark-complexioned Virgin) that helped to forge the cultural union between the Spanish conquerors of the 16th century and the indigenous Aztecs of old Mexico.

The Aztec tradition of bloody religious sacrifices blended with the new Christian concept of a savior who rescued the world through suffering and death. In 1961 the priest in charge of Guadalupe pilgrimages told Mexicans they were taking their devotions too far — walking for miles on their knees, fasting for too long, and wearing crowns of thorns.

Schulenburg said such excesses are no longer common.

"Whether it's because people are better educated or because they are less religious, I can't say for certain. But there are fewer of these external acts of mortification," he said.

People come to the Basilica of Guadalupe from all over Mexico by bus, by foot and by bicycle.

Last Thursday, Guillermo Hernandez, 20, and 200 other people bicycled from Chignahuapan, about 80 miles east of Mexico City. The trip took 11 hours.

Hernandez said it was worth it because he owes his life to the Virgin.

Reagan salutes U.S. armed forces

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan, stressing the need to defend freedom, saluted the nation's armed forces today and declared "our days of weakness are over."

On the day U.S. combat troops were set to return from Grenada and while Marines remain on duty in Lebanon, the president said "our military forces are back on their feet and standing tall."

Reagan mixed praise for the nation's servicemen and women with a discussion of the need to keep the United States "morally strong." He said:

"If we turn a blind eye and a deaf ear when totalitarian regimes brutalize the hopes and dreams of people, we demean the valor of every person who struggles for human dignity and freedom — and all those who have given the last full measure of devotion.

"The price of freedom is high, but never so costly as the loss of freedom."

Reagan made his comments in a speech prepared for delivery to the 1983 convention of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society.

"Weakness, on the part of those who cherish freedom inevitably brings on a threat to that freedom. Tyrants are tempted," Reagan said.

He continued:

"With the best of intentions, we have tried turning our swords into plowshares, hoping others would follow. Well, our days of weakness are over. Our military forces are back on their feet and stganding tall."

He said U.S. forces are being given up-to-date equipment while mobility and firepower are being strengthened.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger is seeking a further build-up, with a 22 percent increase in the Pentagon's budget request for next year.

The president said the buildup was not "because we seek war.

"But when our citizens are threatened, it is government's responsibility to go to their aid. We did so in Grenada," he said, referring to the Oct. 25 U.S.-led invasion of the tiny Caribbean island where 1,000 Americans were living under a leftist regime.

"The United States will do whatever it takes to protect the safety and freedom of the American people," Reagan said.

The goal of the congressionally chartered society, composed of all living Medal of Honor recipients, is to preserve and foster "the ideals of service to America and a dedication to peace and freedom."

The president was being given the Patriots Award, which in the past has gone to George Meany, the late president of the AFL-CIO; actor Jimmy Stewart, and Philip C. Habib, the president's former special Middle East envoy, among others.

Over the weekend, Reagan and other administration officials focused on military issues. The president spoke on the need to continue the deployment of the Marines in Lebanon and officials announced that nearly all of the U.S. soldiers in Grenada would be withdrawn by the end of the week.

The troops returning from Grenada were part of the combat and support force sent following the Oct. 25 invasion. Their departure will leave approximately 300 U.S. military policemen, logistics experts and technicians on the island.

On Saturday, Reagan sought to rally support for his decision to keep the 1,600 Marines in Beirut, and said that "because we care about human values for ourselves, so must we be concerned when freedom, justice and liberty are abused elsewhere. That is the moral basis which brought our Marines to Lebanon."

Troops returning from Grenada

Custodial force will remain

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — The return of 1,000 members of the 82nd Airborne Division who "did the fighting" on Grenada seven weeks ago marks another step in the relaxation of the U.S. grip on the Caribbean island.

A welcoming ceremony for the infantrymen was planned for today, with an additional 700 troops due to return to the United States later this week, leaving a custodial force on the island, officials said.

"The infantry soldiers, those who did the fighting, are coming back," said Jerry Steelman, spokesman for Fort Bragg, the 82nd Airborne's home base.

The troops were due about noon at Pope Air Force Base, officials said.

The returning infantrymen began landing on Grenada Oct. 26, the day after Army Rangers and Marines spearheaded the invasion.

President Reagan said the invasion was intended to restore order after a coup overthrew the island's Marxist government, and to protect about 1,000 Americans there, many of them medical students. Reagan said the leaders of neighboring islands called for U.S. help.

Nine C-141 transport planes were to deliver the soldiers to the airfield.

"It should be a pretty good event," Steelman said. "We've asked the Air Force to provide good weather."

After landing, the troops were to join their families at Fort Bragg, adjacent to the airfield.

The remaining 700 servicemen will be returning home in smaller groups Tuesday through Friday, reducing the American presence on Grenada to about 300 support personnel who will remain indefinitely, Steelman said.

"Those who are left will be performing civil duties," he said. "They'll include military police, signal corps units, public affairs people and workers in different types of civilian projects."

Reagan had said he wanted to bring the U.S. troops home from Grenada by Christmas.

The invading force, with troops from neighboring islands, met resistance from Grenadians and from Cubans on the island to help construct an airfield.

A nine-member council appointed to run the island government plans to conduct voter registration in the spring and elections are expected before Christmas of 1984, said council chairman Nicholas Braithwaite.

Bush: Death squads hurt relations

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Vice President George Bush warned the nation's leaders that "you will lose the support of the American people" if activity by right wing death squads continues.

"Every murderous act they commit poisons the well of friendship between our two countries and advances the cause of those who would impose an alien dictatorship on the people of El Salvador," Bush said Sunday night.

Bush's remarks came during a toast at the end of a dinner in President Alvaro Magana's official residence. Attending were several high officials of the Salvadoran government, including Magana and Defense Minister Carlos Eugenio Vides Casanova.

After the toast, Casanova said he did not want to comment until consulting with other leaders. But he added: "In principle, I am in agreement with everything he stated."

BUSH'S VISIT under tight security was the first by a top-ranking U.S. official since President Lyndon Johnson in 1965.

He arrived here Sunday from Argentina, where he attended the inauguration Saturday of President Raul Alfonsin in Buenos Aires.He flew back to the United States today.

His seven-hour visit, which included meetings with top political and military leaders, came just hours after leftists confirmed the existence of a split within the largest and most radical of the rebel groups fighting the U.S.-backed government.

During his dinner toast, Bush warned Salvadorans, "If these death squad murders continue, you will lose the support of the American people, and that would indeed be a tragedy."

Bush said President Reagan is disturbed by the squads, which are blamed for many of the 39,000 civilian deaths during the four-year-old civil war. The vice president's statements echoed earlier denunciations by lower ranking U.S. officials.

Vice President George Bush, left, with American ambassador Thomas Pickering, talks with reporters Sunday during his visit to El Salvador to meet with government and military leaders.

THE DEATH SQUADS present a dilemma for the Reagan administration, which supports El Salvador's firm anti-communist stance in Central America. Reagan, in a move criticized by Democrats in the U.S. Congress, on Dec. 1 vetoed a bill that would have made American military aid dependent on progress in the area of human rights.

Constituent Assembly Speaker Roberto D'Aubuisson, leader of the rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance, was on the guest list for the dinner but did not attend. U.S. officials refused to grant D'Aubuisson a visa two weeks ago because of his alleged links to death squads.

At a news conference before his departure, Bush said the United States will begin to crack down on Salvadoran exiles in Miami who allegedly finance death squad activities.

"Yes, we will be going after those people," Bush said. "I think you will see action."

During a stopover in Panama en route to El Salvador earlier Sunday Bush had said he would be a candidate for re-election as vice president in 1984.

LATE SATURDAY night, the underground rebel radio station, Radio Farabundo Marti, confirmed a split in the Popular Liberation Forces, the biggest of the leftist groups trying to take power.

A statement by the group's central committee, broadcast by the radio, said some members had developed a "fanatic personality cult" in allegiance to Salvador Cayetano Carpio, the so-called godfather of the rebel movement who committed suicide last April.

The splinter group, calling itself the Salvador Cayetano Carpio Revolutionary Workers Movement, announced its formation over the weekend by spreading leaflets in the capital city.

Meanwhile, the commandant of Panama's armed forces said late Sunday a scheduled meeting of the four-nation Contadora group seeking peace in Central America has been postponed until January. The meeting had been planned for Dec. 20.

Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega said in Panama City the postponment is necessary because unspecified Central American countries have proposed additions to a peace treaty draft. He gave no specific new date for the meeting.

THE CONTADORA group, composed of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama, had expected a peace agreement would be signed after the meeting. The draft treaty calls for the removal of foreign military advisers and promises that the countries will not allow their territory to be used for attacks on neighboring countries.

The U.S. policy commission on Central America headed by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is setting out on a four-day trip to Mexico and Venezuela to discuss the peace effort.

Kissinger and an entourage of about 40 people were due to arrive tonight in Mexico. They are scheduled to go to Venezuela on Wednesday.

Soviet paper covers Vermont death

PITTSFIELD, Vt. (AP) — A violent death is a rare occurrence in this central Vermont town, which is so small that it doesn't even have a police station.

But the killing of a local shopkeeper has not only made front pages in Vermont, it is now the subject of a story planned for Izvestia, the Soviet Union's official government newspaper.

Soviet interest in the case peaked after local newspapers reported that William Harvey, the man arrested for the slaying of 31-year-old Tania Zelensky, who is of Russian descent, thought she was conducting espionage activities in her convenience store.

"He certainly believed at the time that Russian activities were being done in (the) store," said Rutland County Public Defender Peter Montagne, who will represent Harvey when the case comes to trial early next year.

VIKTOR SOLDATOV, a Soviet journalist based in New York, said he is writing an article on the incident to show that Americans have an unfounded fear of the Soviet Union.

Townspeople ridicule the notion that Ms. Zelensky, who was born in the United States, was a foreign agent. Many consider Ms. Zelensky to be the victim of a man who "snapped."

"I believe he watched too many movies on TV," Soldatov said of Harvey, who has pleaded innocent to charges of first-degree murder. Soldatov has not visited Vermont, but has talked with reporters for local newspapers who have covered the murder.

"It's just a propaganda ploy," said Jack Power, owner of the Pittsfield General Store, located across the street from the Shop and Service store run by Ms. Zelensky and her husband, Said Hassan Zadeh.

Authorities said after Harvey's arrest that he may have been reacting to the bombing of a U.S. Marine barracks in Beirut, which occurred a day before the Oct. 24 slaying. They now decline to comment on the case.

"I WORKED with him (Harvey)," said Paul Eldredge of Pittsfield, "he never said anything to me about her being a Soviet spy."

Residents of this town of 400 were confused and shocked by the slaying. The 29-year-old Harvey was well-liked. Some residents question whether he really believed that Ms. Zelensky was a Soviet agent.

"If there was 1,000 people, he would be the last I would pick to do such thing," said Eldredge, who worked with Harvey at the Central Vermont Oil Co.

Ms. Zelensky also was popular and although her father came to the United States from the Soviet Union, her neighbors are convinced she was not a foreign agent.

"I don't think anyone in town really believed that," said Kathy Gohl.

"I HAVE witnessed many acts of violence and threats of violence against the Soviet people in the United States," Soldatov said in a telephone interview from New York. "I believe maybe (this) is one of them."

Soldatov's opinions are dismissed in Pittsfield.

"They're just trying to use it to make the Soviet people think we're all bad," said Keith Mills, a cook at the Pittsfield Inn.

Pittsfield residents may be confused, but they take issue with any interpretation that suggests they harbor a grudge against people of Russian descent.

"I think that's a possibility that touched him off but I know it's not indicative of the way people feel," said Power, who found Ms. Zelensky's body minutes after she was shot with a .22 caliber handgun.

HARVEY TOLD police he drove to the Pittsfield Shop and Service store owned by Zaheh and Ms. Zelensky, ran inside, shot her and then fled. He was apprehended the same day.

"Most people feel as though something snapped in the guy," said Power after discussing the incident with residents. "It's difficult to feel outrage at someone who flipped."

Scotland Yard braces itself for yuletide offensive by IRA

LONDON (AP) — One thousand police officers guarded prominent figures in Northern Ireland today while Scotland Yard, fearing a yuletide offensive by IRA terrorists, braced for a Christmas bomb blitz in Britain.

In Belfast, police said a Roman Catholic man aged about 20 was shot and killed early today by gunmen firing from a passing car in East Belfast as he walked home from a drinking club.

A police spokeswoman, Inspector Jim Craig, said the victim, initially identified as a Protestant, was not believed to be linked with any extremist organizations. The killing "looks at this stage like a random sectarian murder." He did not identify the man, who died after being taken to a hospital.

The shooting was the latest in a surge of sectarian violence in Northern Ireland, where at least 26 have been killed in the last two months — the bloodiest spasm of violence in two years.

MOST WERE majority Protestants slain by the mainly Roman Catholic Irish Rrepublican Army and its Marxist offshoot, the Irish National Liberation Army, fighting to unite Northern Ireland with the neighboring Irish Republic, which is mostly Catholic.

Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist squad believes the IRA was responsible for the bombing of the Royal Artillery Barracks in London's Woolwich district early Saturday despite claims by the separatist Scottish National Liberation Army.

The IRA has not claimed responsibility for the Woolwich attack, but it has frequently acknowledged similar bombings in the past.

Authorities have been braced for an IRA attack since Thomas Quigley, suspected of involvement in a London bomb blitz two years ago, was arrested in Belfast and flown to the British capital 10 days ago.

Police fear they may now face a double threat from the IRA and SNLA, which seeks independence for Scotland.

"WE'RE ON FULL alert as a result of this attack," Cmdr. William Hucklesby, Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist squad chief.

Yard officials refused to say what precautions they are taking, but all military installations are on alert and security around political leaders normally is tightened in such situations.

Meanwhile, a senior police source in Northern Ireland reported the Royal Ulster Constabulary has intensified covert operations to curb the nationalist guerrillas amid growing anger by pro-British Protestants over the deteriorating security situation.

An undercover squad of the Britain's Special Air Service shot dead two wanted Provisional IRA guerrillas last week in a night-time ambush at an arms cache in the Provos' County Tyrone stronghold.

The police source, who asked not to be identified, said Chief Constable Jack Hermon has suspended all training, freeing 400 officers for security operations throughout Northern Ireland.

HE SAID 1,000 of the RUC's 12,000 regulars and reservists have been assigned to bodyguard details for scores of prominent politicians, officials, judges and lawyers.

Another 1,000 officers were deployed to beef up security at the RUC's fortified bases, the source noted.

Provo gunmen assassinated leading Protestant politician Edgar Graham, 29, outside Belfast's Queen's University last week, the second prominent member of the Official Unionist Party slain in three weeks.

Protestant leaders, including the Rev. Ian Paisley, branded the recent killings, including three church elders machine gunned in a gospel hall, as "a war of genocide" against the million-strong Protestants.

A police spokesman confirmed tightened security for Neil Kinnock, leader of Britain's opposition Labor Party, who was scheduled to arrive in Belfast today for talks with local trade union chiefs.

WELL-INFORMED sources, who asked not to be identified, said leaders of the Ulster Defense Association, biggest of the Protestant paramilitary groups, were facing growing pressure for revenge attacks on IRA activists and sympathizers from rank-and-file members.

Protestant gunmen shot dead an INLA member in North Belfast last week.

Leaders of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political front, claimed Sunday they have received death threats, apparently from Protestant extremists, following Graham's assassination.

Martin McGuinness, a member of the legal movement's central committee and a member of the provincial assembly, said in Londonderry he had received a Christmas card with the message: "Your days are numbered."

John McNulty, a member of the leftist People's Democracy who sits on Belfast's city council, accused the UDA and the outlawed Ulster Volunteer Force of sending him death threats.

POLICE IN Belfast warned Saturday the Provos plan a Christmas blitz in the province amid the yuletide shopping rush.

They said intelligence reports indicated the guerrillas will likely concentrate on fire bombs and "grille bombs," charges hung by hooks on the metal bars on windows.

Sources noted Sunday that intelligence reports said the INLA seeks to assassinate a prominent figure.

The Provos are led by Dominic McGlinchey, 29, the most wanted gunmen in Ireland. He has boasted he has killed "around 30 people" and taken part in 200 bombings and shootings in Northern Ireland.

Transportation available to game

The Lee High School Booster Club is making transportation arrangements for people wanting to attend Saturday's state high school championship football game between Midland Lee and Converse Judson. Interested persons can attend the Booster Club meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the cafeteria or call president Bob Walker at 682-3299 for more information.

The club has made arrangements to charter as many buses as needed. Cost will be $40 for adults and $35 for students. They will leave about 5 a.m. Saturday and return immediately after the game.

Arrangements for a chartered flight had not been finalized by press time.

Travel World in Midland also is making arrangements for transportation. The travel agency has 60 seats on all three commercial airlines leaving Saturday morning and returning at various times on Sunday. Round-trip fare is $60 and does not provide for transportation from the airport to Texas Stadium.

There are also some seats available for those wishing to leave Friday evening.

For $30 fans can take a 46-passenger bus to Irving. It will leave 5:30 a.m. Saturday and return about 2 a.m. Sunday.

Arrangements are pending with Southwest for two charter flights. Cost will be about $85 and will include bus transportation from the airport to the game, a spokeswoman said.

Interested persons can call 687-0885 for more information.

Reagan salutes armed forces

Defending the decision to send attack bombers, two of which were shot down during raids over Syrian positions following unsuccessful attacks on U.S. reconnaissance flights, Reagan said:

"We have acted with great restraint despite repeated provocations and murderous attacks. Our reconnaissance flights have only one purpose, and the Syrians know it: to give the greatest possible protection to our troops. We will continue to do whatever is needed to ensure the safety of our forces and our reconnaissance flights."

While administration officials express concern about the potential political damage of continued deployment of Marines in Lebanon, where more than 250 U.S. servicemen have been killed, Reagan has refused to set a date for withdrawing them.

He said in his weekly radio address to the nation Saturday that "once internal stability is established and withdrawal of all foreign forces is assured, the Marines will leave."

One administration official, responding to a report that the Marines would be brought home by next July, said "we haven't put any date on anything."

He said that the president has said privately and publicly that the duration of the deployment would not be based on political considerations.

"It's also a problem if you pull them out and there's a disaster," he said.

Administration officials also said Sunday that Donald Rumsfeld, the special Mideast negotiator, would visit Syria soon and would be welcomed by Syrian leaders. Rumsfeld was in Oman on Sunday.

Chilly weather dominates in state

By The Associated Press

Clear skies and chilly temperatures dominated the Texas weather picture today following a weekend rash of tornadoes that left extensive property damage across East Texas and killed one person.

The twisters were spawned by a line of heavy thunderstorms that moved through the area Saturday.

Some high-level clouds were spreading over the Panhandle before dawn today in the wake of another upper-level disturbance that was developing over the southwestern United States.

Mexicans devoted to Virgin Mary

"I developed a tumor in my lung and I visited doctors but they were not able to do anything about it. So I went to a lady who lives near us and she gave me herbs. I prayed to the Virgin. And in two months the problem disappeared," Hernandez said.

The Basilica of Guadalupe is a large, modernistic structure with a circular interior that accommodates about 12,000 people. It is part of a complex of five churches in northeast Mexico City, sitting just yards away from the Tepeyac Hill where the Virgin Mary is said to have appeared to Juan Diego.

Completed in 1976, it replaces the older basilica that dates back to 1695.

The centerpiece of the new basilica is a cape that bears from top to bottom in highly contrasted colors an image of the Virgin. Believers say the cape belonged to Juan Diego, and that the image miraculously appeared as Diego visited a bishop who wanted proof of the alleged apparitions.

Scientific examinations of the cloth have not disproven the claims of Guadalupe devotees.

Tornadoes leave damage, one death

By The Associated Press

East Texans were cleaning up the destruction left behind by a string of tornadoes that cut through the area, killing one woman and injuring at least five others.

Widespread property damage was reported from the twisters, which were spawned by a line of heavy thunderstorms that moved through the area Saturday.

Lavanchee Turner, 70, of Evergreen died Saturday night in Leggett Memorial Hospital in Cleveland after her home was destroyed by a tornado about 6 p.m., hospital officials said.

Three of Mrs. Turner's relatives who were in the house were hospitalized in stable condition, suffering multiple injuries. They were identified as her 80-year-old husband, Sim Turner; their 42-year-old daughter, Faye Turner; and Mary Milner, 78.

Debris from the Turners' house, about 60 miles northeast of Houston, was strewn over 5 acres after the tornado struck, investigators said.

Extensive property damage was reported Saturday at Nacogdoches and in the Hardin County community of Wildwood, authorities said. The twisters also overturned barns and damaged houses near Marshall.

Funnel clouds also were reported Saturday in Longview and in Rusk County near Henderson and a tornado caused some damage but no injuries in southwest Marion County near Jefferson.

Jimmy Clevenger, 49, was hospitalized in poor but stable condition after he suffered a severe cut on his neck when a storm struck his mobile home about 18 miles east of Lufkin, said Paula Baker, a nursing supervisor at Memorial Hospital in Lufkin.

His 36-year-old wife, Patricia, was treated for minor cuts and released, said Ms. Carswell, who added the couple was injured by flying debris as they stood outside their residence.

A spokeswoman at the Angelina County sheriff's office said there were "several overturned mobile homes" on the west shore of Sam Rayburn Reservoir, where the couple lives.

A tornado tore through Hallsville, west of Marshall in Northeast Texas, about 3:30 p.m. Saturday, causing extensive damage to three houses, the Bear Creek Smokehouse and several barns, officials said.

"It touched down for an extended period and left a half-mile wide path," said Frank Craig, chief of the Hallsville Volunteer Fire Department.

He said the high winds downed power lines, and did some damage to barns, garages and about 15 homes.

A tornado knocked over mobile homes southwest of Nacogdoches, then skipped across town to the northeast, causing extensive damage to many homes and businesses.

Eva Woods, who lives two miles west of Nacogdoches in far East Texas, said she opened her door just as a chinaberry tree fell across her car.

"You just don't know what a helpless feeling that is," she said. "The top of it's dented pretty good. It's just squatted down like an elephant sat on it."

She said three trees were blown down within 10 feet of her house.

Royal couple watches Dallas game

DALLAS (AP) — Most of the spectators at the National Football League clash between the Washington Redskins and the Dallas Cowboys were rooting for one team or the other, but the King and Queen of Nepal diplomatically remained neutral.

King Birendra and Queen Aishwarya attended a luncheon hosted by Dallas Mayor A. Starke Taylor and were made honorary citizens of Dallas before going to Texas Stadium in nearby Irving for the game Sunday.

Taylor cut short introductions of guests at the luncheon, "because, as you know, we have a football game to go to."

He praised the king for his "zone of peace" proposal that asks other nations to recognize Nepal's neutrality.

Taylor said he had heard that Vice President George Bush, a Texan, told the king that the real test of non-alignment would come at the football game.

"Even the vice president was non-aligned while in Washington," the king quipped.

The king and queen attended the game as guests of Lupe Murchison, who is Nepal's honorary consul in Texas and a member of the family that owns the Cowboys.

The king and queen spent the first five days of their visit in Washington.

Ron Bricker, who handed Ronald Reagan a resume during a presidential visit to Pittsburgh last April, stands by the "For Sale" sign for his house in Houston, Pa., last Thursday. Bricker got a job through Reagan, but he said it paid so poorly that he lost money.

Man aided by Reagan returns to steel mill

HOUSTON, Pa. (AP) — The whirlwind has calmed for Ron Bricker, who is back in the steel mill after quitting a job with Radio Shack arranged when he handed his resume to President Reagan.

"We're back where we started," said Bricker, 40, a general laborer at Joseph T. Ryerson & Son Inc. who had gone on network television to accept the job with the electronics retailer after Reagan's job search.

"Reagan benefitted from it. He got a lot of good publicity. Radio Shack got millions of dollars' worth of free publicity. They loved it," he added in a recent interview. "The only thing it did for us was get a trip to New York. I got a nice scrapbook out of it. Other than that, I got absolutely nothing."

Bricker quit his job fixing computers in June because he couldn't pay his bills on his $6.50 hourly salary, which was about half of his mill pay. His take home pay of $196.50 per week was $2 less than he got in jobless pay.

Bricker, who lives with his wife and 16-year-old son in Washington County south of Pittsburgh, had been furloughed from the mill and was enrolled in a job retraining center visited by Reagan in April. He gave his resume to Reagan, who phoned Bricker the next day to tell him about a prospective job at Radio Shack.

"I really appreciate him trying. I just wish I could have got a job I could have lived with," said Bricker. "I figured computers were the future. But the money isn't there.

"Instead of catching up, we started going behind. If I would have worked there three more months, I would have lost my house. I was going down the tubes. It was a matter of survival."

Bricker had planned to become a truck driver, but the mill recalled him.

"I know I'm going to get laid off (again). But at least we can start paying our bills again. We could get out from under it. And I won't be any worse off," Bricker said.

An autographed, color photo of Reagan sits in his living room, along with a framed picture of him handing his resume to the president. "That and 50 cents will get me a cup of coffee," he joked.

Being the beneficiary of presidential favors has its price, although Bricker refuses to talk about the resentment. He has been ostracized by some associates, who derisively call him "Ronnie's Boy."

"I got laid off under (President) Carter. That's why I voted for Reagan. I know...I wasn't the only one. He said he wouldn't fight inflation with people's jobs, but that's what he ended up doing," he added. "If everyone was back to work who wanted to work, I'd vote for him again. But there are 10 million people out of work. I don't think it'll happen."

Meanwhile, Bricker's story has no happy ending. He said he is selling his house to cut down his monthly bills.

Mondale picks up more support

WASHINGTON (AP) — After one of the most successful weekends in Walter Mondale's long pursuit of the presidency, the former vice president has major new support from women and blacks — two key parts of the Democratic Party's coalition.

He also has up to $1.5 million more in his campaign war chest.

Mondale has the official stamp of approval of the National Organization for Women, having won on Saturday the first presidential endorsement ever given by the nation's largest feminist group.

That endorsement could be particularly valuable in 1984, when women are expected to be major swing voters in the elections.

The former vice president also demonstrated his appeal to blacks — who often contribute 20 percent of the Democratic vote and more — by winning the presidential endorsement of the Alabama Democratic Conference.

The conference, claiming 200,000 black members across the state, voted a "compromise" Saturday in the face of the conflicting demands from the front-runner and from black presidential candidate Jesse Jackson. But it was a compromise that fell far short of what Jackson had hoped.

The conference's delegate assembly endorsed a presidential slate — with Mondale in the No. 1 spot and Jackson in the vice presidential position.

To top his day Saturday, Mondale raised between $1.4 million and $1.5 million with more than 10,000 fundraising parties across the country timed to coincide with his first national television campaign advertisement.

Mondale had worked hard to win the NOW endorsement and he won it easily when the board of directors of the 250,000-member group met Saturday in Washington.

"The endorsement of NOW will send a message to the majority of the women of this nation that Walter Mondale is the candidate who will be best for women and who can defeat Ronald Reagan," said NOW president Judy Goldsmith at a news conference announcing the decision. "We are determined to help Mondale mobilize the gender gap."

"Four more years of Ronald Reagan in the White House would be devastating for women," she said.

NOW will make every effort to be a significant force in Mondale's campaign, she said, joining forces with other groups like organized labor and the National Education Association that are backing him.

"We are activists and we will put our energies behind defeating Ronald Reagan and electing Walter Mondale," Ms. Goldsmith said. "We feel that adding women to the coalition will carry Mondale to victory."

On the much-discussed issue of a woman for vice president, the NOW leader said Mondale has committed himself to considering a woman for the No. 2 spot, adding that she guesses the chances are "50-50" that Mondale would actually name a woman as his running mate.

Mondale and Jackson, meanwhile, received "good" ratings Sunday by Environmental Action, a lobbying group that assessed all the candidates' records on environmental issues.

Governors get lesson in politics

Copley News Service

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The Democratic governors of nine Western states were given a lesson in presidential politics last week.

They had six of the eight Democrats who want the party nomination for president in their grasp for a series of discussions on issues critical to the region but came up as dry as the New Mexico desert air outside the meeting hall.

No promises were exchanged. The governors did not endorse any of the candidates and the candidates did not promise new positions on the questions raised.

"We haven't had a dialogue or debate on one Western issue," fumed Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado in the final minutes of the final session. He was correct. The governors talked about the situation west of the Mississippi, but the candidates did not.

Even so, the meeting was valuable in getting the candidates to at least sit still long enough to listen to concerns of the governors who will play important organizational roles in the 1984 campaign. They talked of fiscal disparity, water, education, immigration and resources and unanimously condemned President Reagan's stewardship of the region.

The candidates discussed Grenada, Lebanon, unemployment, the federal deficit and nuclear disarmament.

"Ronald Reagan and his administration are bad for the West," read Toney Anaya, New Mexico's dynamic governor.

It was mentioned that Mr. Reagan was once the governor of California.

"California may not be, in fact, a Western state," chided Hart.

Proposed budget may include standby tax hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's next budget will probably include a standby tax increase but no dramatic new reductions in federal spending, an administration official says.

A little more than six weeks before he will send his 1985 budget to Congress, Reagan has not made final decisions on a number of key items that will determine the overall size of the budget and the deficit, officials said.

While some reports place the anticipated deficit at $190 billion in the 1985 fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1, one administration official said the strength of the economic recovery and efforts to hold down increases in government spending will keep the red ink figure at $170 billion, as forecast by the administration in July.

Edwin Dale, spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget, said no deficit figure has been reached in the budget deliberations, and that the budget office has not completed enough calculations to determine a deficit.

One administration official said that a contingency tax increase was likely to be included in the president's budget request, as it was a year ago. It would only take effect under certain economic and budget conditions, but "the president hasn't come to grips with it yet."

The official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified by name, said the administration was operating under a schedule by which "the president can, if he wants to, make all the decisions by Christmas."

He said some domestic cuts were anticipated, and recalled that the president sought budget reductions last year that were not enacted.

"It would be unusual for them not to be reproposed," he said.

Although Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger is said to be seeking a 22 percent increase in the Pentagon's budget, one treasury official remarked Sunday: "There's no reason to think that will be part of the budget at this point."

Reagan is expected to complete his decisions on the budget over the next several weeks.

Hoover kept files on people's sex lives

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 7,000 pages of documents from the confidential files of J. Edgar Hoover confirm that the late FBI director collected gossip on the sex lives of some of the nation's top political figures, according to U.S. News & World Report.

The magazine's Dec. 19 issue says Hoover kept the documents in his office during the nearly half a century in which he headed the FBI. The files contain many unsubstantiated allegations about the private lives of former President Kennedy, Eleanor Roosevelt, former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and others.

The material also details how Hoover drew on the defamatory information to curry favor with presidents and other officials.

The documents were released under a Freedom of Information Act request.

Shuttle's return delayed

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Columbia's return flight to Florida was delayed today, but the space shuttle crew continued airborne experiments in a more conventional plane.

Columbia, which was delayed in landing last week, ran into another setback in getting back into the air today. The discovery of a leak in an auxiliary power unit postponed the two-day return flight to Florida until Tuesday at the earliest, said Nancy Lovato of the Ames-Dryden Flight Research Facility here.

Meanwhile, payload specialists Ulf Merbold and Byron Lichtenberg did get off the ground Sunday morning on a flight that continued life sciences experiments performed in orbit. Mission specialists Robert Parker and Owen Garriott were scheduled for an afternoon flight.

The plane was flown in a special arc that induces moments of weightlessness for motion sickness experiments.

Earlier, one European researcher revealed that computer problems which delayed Columbia's return to Earth for eight hours Thursday left the crew too tired to perform urgent post-landing tests.

Holiday blues

Holidays are supposed to be happy times filled with thoughts of family, love, brotherhood, peace. For some, though, those thoughts can become unbearable.

The "holiday blues" aren't uncommon. Memories of days — and good times — gone by can make anyone a little sad or anxious. When those memories get out of hand, a person can begin to feel as though their life is out of control. Depression can be the result.

Lt. Earl Luckey of the Midland Police Department revealed the extent of the problem locally when he said, "During the holiday season — all the holidays combined — you'll have as many suicides as you have during all the rest of the year." That's a tragic revelation, but it's a fact of modern-day life with which Midland has to cope.

During the holidays, "people are just really into 'it's never going to end,'" explained Palmer Drug Abuse Program director Bob Savage. "They know it's not (that bad) — in their head — but they feel that it's that way."

The worst times, said Savage, are the periods around Thanksgiving-Christmas-New Year's and around April 15, income tax deadline. Depression increases during holiday periods for a variety of reasons — fear of the unknown, uncertainty about the future, fear of being "out of control," fear of an inability to change events in one's life.

Those fears may push an individual to turn to alcohol or drugs as a means of relief, but in reality those substances actually exacerbate depression. Such problems are traumatic and "can be dangerous," according to Savage.

What should a person feeling depressed — like the world is caving in on them — do? What they should do, said Savage, is the opposite of what they should not do. They should first recognize and acknowledge that they have a problem. Then they should take action to get something done about the problem, said Savage.

"Unless they take some action, it will not go away," Savage noted.

What type of help is available in Midland? There are a number of organizations that deal with emotion-related problems. Each provides valuable services to the Midland public. Some of those organizations and their phone numbers are: Family Services of Midland, 683-4241; Suicide Prevention, 683-5591; Johnson Center, 683-1852; Midland County Council on Alcoholism, 682-4721; Palmer Drug Abuse Program, 685-3928 or 685-3009; Teen Challenge, 682-3244; Rape Crisis Center, 682-7273; Battered Women's Center, 683-1300 or 563-0800; or any of Midland's psychiatrists.

Don't give up on life during this holiday period if you're feeling panicky or depressed. Help is available — please call!

Good humor man

The name of Sam J. Ervin Jr. became known in millions of households across the land during the Watergate investigation. The former United States senator, now retired and living within sight of the Blue Ridge Mountains in his beloved North Carolina, shone for his wit and wisdom and his great sense of humor.

He could make a witness twist with his incisiveness, or smile at a dash of whimsy. People who never met the man affectionately called him Uncle Sam. He insisted on calling himself just "a country lawyer," a self-deprecating description that belied the sharpness of his legal mind.

Uncle Sam has written a book, "Humor of a Country Lawyer," which reminds us of what the senator's remark brought forth from Lyndon Johnson.

"When I see a country lawyer approaching, I grab my pocketbook and run."

To which the senator replied: "That's not surprising. Country lawyers often compel evil-doers to disgorge their ill-gotten gains."

Another memorable observation came during his defense of Senate Rule 22, sometimes called a license to filibuster. In his view, "If senators who speak at length reflect one's views, they are engaged in educational debate; but if they express views incompatible with one's own, they are filibustering."

Sam Ervin was a serious senator who refused to take himself seriously. America could use more good humor men like him.

'Dream home' hopes

"This is the first generation that in all probability will never live in a home as large or as nice as their parents' house," real-estate agent Lewis Goodkin told a Wall Street Journal reporter.

All over America young couples are looking for a home they can afford and in too many instances not finding it. The cost of their "dream home" simply has soared beyond their ability to buy it.

Some young couples are paying incredible prices for relatively small homes. The Journal article told of a California couple that had to go 36 miles out of Culver City to find a house for themselves and their two children that they could purchase. It turned out to be a 1,000-square-foot, two-bedroom house in a desert community that cost $93,000.

A young Manhattan engineer and his wife paid $103,000 for a 700-square-foot, high-rise condominium, and thought they had a "steal."

So it goes all over the country. These young people are paying the price of decades of inflation originating from Washington.

Ironically, a great many of them don't understand how inflation stemming from more than a generation of overspending on Capitol Hill has put them in such a bind on housing.

The next generation will find it even more difficult to buy a decent home if federal spending and deficits aren't brought under control. When the economy heats up the Federal Reserve's Open Market Committee again will have to create huge amounts of new money to finance record deficits if spending isn't brought under control.

If the Fed's "funny money" machines are accelerated again, inflation will start climbing rapidly once more and that dream house will move even further out of sight for young families.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Argentina nearing nuclear club

WASHINGTON — While bombs are exploding in the Middle East, a time bomb is ticking in Argentina. And it has nuclear ingredients.

The new Argentine president, Raul Alfonsin, will face one of the most important decisions of any world leader during his six-year term: whether Argentina will produce the first Latin American nuclear bomb.

Jack Anderson

Can the Argentines do it? They sure can.

The most recent CIA report on Argentina's nuclear capability, classified "Secret," estimates that the Argentine government could have a bomb by the end of next year if the project were given top priority, and in three years without a crash program. By 1986, Argentina will have all the necessary material and production facilities on its own soil.

U.S. intelligence agencies were caught by surprise recently when Adm. Carlos Castro Madero, longtime head of the Comision Nacional de Energia Atomica, announced that the commission had already developed the technology to make enriched uranium — a crucial ingredient in nuclear weapons.

Alfonsin vowed during his election campaign that if he discovered the military was actually constructing a nuclear bomb, he would have it dismantled immediately. Some analysts suspect Castro Madero's announcement was a last-minute effort by the outgoing military regime to undercut Alfonsin's promise by generating public support for the nuclear effort.

From sources in Buenos Aires, classified intelligence reports, and CIA, State Department and congressional sources, my associates Dale Van Atta and Lucette Lagnado pieced together the story of Argentina's ambitious — and unsettling — hope of joining the nuclear club.

There are two ways to make a bomb: with enriched uranium or plutonium. The CIA has been most concerned about Argentina's plutonium program. Plutonium can be manufactured by reprocessing the fuel rods in nuclear reactors, and Argentina already has two nuclear power plants in operation. A third will be finished by 1987, a fourth is in the design stage, and two more are planned. By the end of the century, the country will have six nuclear plants.

Argentina has refused to sign either the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty or the Treaty of Tlateloco, which bans nuclear weapons in Latin America.

But so far, the Argentine nuclear plants cannot be used to make plutonium because the fuel rods are imported under contracts forbidding reprocessing into plutonium. If the Argentines decided to go the plutonium route, they would be breaking the contracts and there would be serious international repercussions.

Even if they haven't been secretly squirreling away plutonium for weapons — as some sources suspect — the Argentines will be able to reprocess fuel rods at their Ezeiza atomic plant by 1986, giving them the ability to produce a nuclear bomb without dependence on foreign suppliers.

Meanwhile, Adm. Castro Madero's announcement of Argentina's enriched-uranium success constitutes an embarrassing failure by U.S. intelligence agencies. Only three weeks before his statement, one intelligence source stated positively that "the Argentines can't use enriched uranium for a bomb because they don't have a program for it."

Although most sources suggest that Argentina has not seriously been trying to build a bomb but is pursuing its nuclear energy program as a matter of prestige, the Reagan administration is concerned at the possibility of a Latin American nuclear power.

A secret White House directive has ordered U.S. intelligence agencies to "maintain close contact with the Argentine nuclear program and be alert to all possible ways of influencing Argentina to pursue a course which would not lead it to the point of developing a nuclear explosives capability."

CHUCKLE OF THE WEEK: The CIA evidently recognizes the image problem of its anti-Sandinista guerrillas in the Nicaraguan Democratic Force. Many are former supporters of the unpopular dictator Anastasio Somoza.

So the CIA-backed FDN has resorted to a sort of psychological warfare to improve its standing with the Nicaraguan populace. In early November, FDN planes "bombed" the town of San Juan de Limay with plastic bags stuffed with pencils, bars of soap, FDN buttons and leaflets for the grownups — and yo-yos for the kids.

A similar propaganda bombing had no noticeable effect on the Germans 40 years ago, possibly because no one thought of including yo-yos along with the surrender exhortations.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan candidacy almost sure

WASHINGTON — Although Ronald Reagan probably will not formally announce his candidacy until March, he is expected shortly after Christmas to reluctantly sign papers entering his name in New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation presidential primary on March 7.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The deadline for New Hampshire is not until Jan. 3, but the papers will be handed to the president at the White House before he leaves Dec. 27 for a year-end vacation in California. At the same time he will be asked to approve filing for the March 20 Illinois primary, whose deadline is Dec. 30.

Those acts will remove all reasonable doubt about Reagan's candidacy. Although he has not definitely said he will do so, his campaign managers are sure he will sign the papers. Otherwise, his name could not appear on the primary ballots.

SPEAKES SAVES FELDSTEIN

Senior White House aides who had hoped to dump Martin Feldstein as President Reagan's chief economic adviser by the end of the year admit they failed, partly because of the heavy-handed approach by press spokesman Larry Speakes.

Speakes never says anything of importance to reporters on his own, and his attack on Feldstein for disloyalty to the president was authorized by the press aide's bosses, senior staffers James Baker and Richard Darman. But his sneering attack on Feldstein, including periodic mispronunciations of his name, was his own work.

The result was that the Washington press corps transformed Feldstein into a martyr. Combining that with the economist's substantial business support makes it likely that Feldstein will remain chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers until he returns to Harvard next fall — just as he always planned.

FRITZ & PHIL SHOW

A reluctant Walter F. Mondale probably will agree to participate in the nationally-televised presidential debate in New Hampshire Jan. 15 despite earlier threats to boycott it because talk show host Phil Donahue will control questions from the audience. The debate is sponsored by the House Democratic Caucus.

Mondale's campaign managers hope their complaints about the format will both tone down Donahue and restrain promoters of later presidential debates from dreaming up similarly unique arrangements. Although the Mondale camp claims it also objected to so much power placed in the hands of ABC's Ted Koppel as moderator, it was most concerned about Donahue's ability to draw provocative questions from a crowd.

The debate's chairman, Rep. Charles Schumer of New York, threatened to place an empty chair in Mondale's place if the former vice president did not appear. Mondale's operatives were assured by House Democratic leaders that this would not happen, but still worry about the party reaction if he boycotted the debate.

MANATT UNDER SIEGE

Charles T. Manatt has made so many enemies in his hard-nosed three years as Democratic national chairman that insiders predict he will be the party's first chief since 1972 to be bounced by the new presidential nominee.

Manatt has antagonized both presidential candidates and state chairmen in his insistence that Iowa and New Hampshire adhere to the letter of the law in not scheduling delegate selection too early. Both frontrunner Walter F. Mondale and closest challenger John Glenn both are leaning toward picking a new national chairman if nominated for president.

A footnote: In defending Manatt's tough stand, his friends privately cite the threat to party order posed by the Rev. Jesse Jackson. If the rules are changed for Iowa and New Hampshire, they say, the door will be open for Jackson's 11th-hour rules-change demands.

BAKER & BASEBALL

The distress publicly expressed by Sen. Paul Laxalt over the prospect that James Baker might quit as White House chief of staff to become baseball commissioner faithfully followed his private comments to President Reagan.

Laxalt, general chairman of Reagan's unannounced re-election effort, first learned of baseball's interest in Baker by reading last Wednesday morning's newspapers. He immediately telephoned the president. Reagan told his old friend that it was indeed true and that Baker had informed him that morning about the job offer.

Although Laxalt has been considered a rival of Baker for control over the 1984 campaign, he immediately urged the president to plead with his chief of staff to stay on the job through the election. Reagan did not respond, leading insiders who heard the story from Laxalt to conclude the president was not all that concerned about losing Baker. More likely, Reagan did not take the baseball job offer all that seriously.

CHARLEY REESE

Information not always accurate

While some say that we live in an age of information, others would claim that misinformation would be a more appropriate name. Actually, we get a lot of both which is why it is fun to look at some things "everybody knows is true" which aren't true.

Charley Reese

For example, everybody knows that the United States has the highest homicide rate in the world. After all, we are one of the few nations left which freely allows its citizens to own handguns. Well, everybody who thinks we have the highest murder rate is wrong. We don't.

The most murderous countries, in descending order of violence, are Lesotho, the Bahamas, Guyana, Lebanon, the Netherland Antilles, Iraq, Sri Lanka, Cyprus, Trinidad, and Jamaica. The United States ranks 11th.

Everybody knows, because of its sexist attitudes, that the United States has the highest rates of rape and other sex crimes in the world. Once again, everybody who knows that it wrong. The United States is ranked 22nd in rape and other sex crimes per 100,000 population.

The top 10 in that category are, again in descending order, Australia, West Germany, Solomon Islands, Venezuela, New Zealand, the Bahamas, Libya, the Netherlands, England and Wales, and good old Lesotho.

Well, but everybody knows that the U.S. has the highest overall crime rate. Wrong again. The only categories of crime in which the United States makes the top 10 are juvenile crime, grand theft and drug offenses. It is ranked fourth in all three categories.

The source of these rankings are statistics compiled by Interpol and published in "The Book of World Rankings" by George Kurian.

Everybody also knows that nuclear power is one of the greatest dangers facing America. Everybody is wrong again. Scientific studies find that the number of deaths one can expect from nuclear power including accidents, radioactive wastes and everything else is less than 10 a year.

That makes nuclear power considerably safer than water or step ladders or aspirins or any of several things which kill thousands of Americans every year.

Yeah, but at least coal is safer than nuclear power. Wrong. Scientists estimate the number of deaths due to pollution from burning coal to range from 10,000 a year to as high as 50,000 and that doesn't even consider mining accidents.

Yeah, but everybody knows Three-Mile Island was a near disaster. Wrong again. All of the investigations of Three-Mile Island have concluded that there was never any significant danger to the public. In fact, one way to grasp the danger of nuclear power is to realize that it is the equivalent in terms of risk to smoking one cigarette — per year.

If you take all the radiation exposure from over a hundred accidents involving transporting radioactive wastes, the combined radiation exposure is less than you get from normal background radiation.

The source for these facts is Bernard L. Cohen's recent article in the Wall Street Journal. Cohen is a professor of physics at Pittsburgh University.

How then do we get so much bum dope? Several reasons. Communications technology is neutral. The printing press and the transmitter will send out both fact and fantasy. News organizations are neutral, too, in the sense that when we report what someone says, we vouch only for the accuracy of the report — not whether what he was saying is true or not.

Television is a big hokum spreader. Casual conversations with people on talk shows beams information to millions without regard for whether the person talking knows what he's talking about. Entertainers are rarely expert about anything but entertaining, if that.

Finally, many socialists attack capitalism under the guise of attacking nuclear power or environmental damage. That's why it's a good idea to remember the advice of an old city editor to a young reporter: "Even if you're mother says she loves you, check on it."

Pope John Paul II chats with Pastor Christopher Meyer upon the pope's arrival at a Lutheran church in Rome Sunday.

Pope calls for unity from Lutheran pulpit

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II called for "Christian unity" as he visited a Lutheran church and attended for the first time a service of the denomination which split away from the Roman Catholic church 462 years ago.

"We desire unity, we work for unity, without letting ourselves get discouraged by the difficulty we encounter on our way," John Paul said Sunday night in German from a raised marble pulpit before 400 worshipers.

Although John Paul has visited Protestant churches during his far-flung travels, it was the first time a Roman Catholic pontiff had visited one in his own diocese.

It was also the first time a pope had attended a Lutheran service. The church was founded on the precepts of Martin Luther, the excommunicated German monk who led the Protestant Reformation.

"Let us follow the invitation to reconciliation with God and each other," said the white-robed pontiff, who appeared tired after a full day of activities and pastoral visits.

He was greeted at the front of the tiny white church near Via Veneto as bishop of Rome by Pastor Christoph Meyer, who shook his hand and led him down the red-carpeted aisle to meet the church members, some of whom curtsied or bowed as they shook John Paul's hand.

John Paul wore a white skull cap without his miter, the sign of papal authority. He also refrained from his familiar back-handed wave of apostolic blessing.

The pontiff joined Meyer on a raised stage while a choir sang Protestant hymns.

In his 12-minute sermon, Meyer said the problems Protestants faced in Rome were all in the past but "many building blocks" must be put in place before true unity can come about.

"You, your Holiness, are with us today — another new sign" that unity is possible, said Meyer, dressed in a long black robe with a white Elizabethean collar.

John Paul also acknowledged the "arduous history" of Lutherans and added, "I have come in the spirit of the Lord that calls us in our days, through ecumenical dialogue, to the search for full Christian unity.

"And in the 500th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther we seem to discern from far away the dawning of an advent of a recomposition of our unity and community,' the pontiff said during his 15-minute sermon which was broadcast live in part on nationwide television.

Walesa vows Solidarity union won't be crushed

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The wife of Solidarity leader Lech Walesa today left for Poland with the Nobel Peace Prize awarded to her husband, who vowed his banned trade union would not be crushed.

Danuta Walesa and son Bogdan, 13, left from Oslo airport for Warsaw via Copenhagan. They were seen off by Egil Aarvik, the Norwegian Nobel Committee Chairman.

Walesa remained in Poland for fear authorities would not allow him to return if he left to accept his prize. He also said he must not leave the country so long as other activists remain in jail.

His Peace Prize lecture was read Sunday on his behalf by close associate Bogdan Cywinski.

"He who once became aware of the power of Solidarity and who breathed the air of freedom will not be crushed," Walesa said in the lecture.

Dialogue between the government and Solidarity "is possible, and we have the right to it," he said.

The lecture drew a one-minute standing ovation from the estimated 600 people who came to Oslo University's Aula Hall.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee awarded the Peace Prize, which carries a $190,000 stipend, to Walesa for his work in leading Solidarity — once the only independent labor union in the Soviet bloc, and now outlawed.

In his lecture Sunday, Walesa spoke of the struggle for a better life for the people of Poland, where economic crisis has caused food shortages and left the country deeply in financial debt to Western nations.

"Despite everything that has been going on in my country during the past two years, I am still convinced that we have no alternative but to come to an agreement," Walesa said.

"The difficult problems which Poland is now facing can be resolved only through a real dialogue between state authorities and the people," Walesa said.

"We are ready for the dialogue. We are also prepared, at any time, to put our reasons and demands to the judgment of the people. We have no doubts as to what verdict would be returned," Walesa said.

"We shall not yield to violence. We shall not be deprived of union freedoms. We shall never agree with sending people to prison for their convictions," he said.

The Nobel lecture, traditionally given by Peace Prize recipients the day after they receive their awards, was delivered two days before the second anniversary of the declaration of martial law in Poland. The union, which claimed 9.5. million members, was banned in October 1982.

Soviet officials confirm launch pad accident

MOSCOW (AP) — Cosmonauts and Soviet space officials today confirmed that a manned spacecraft had a launch pad accident in September and that a fuel leak created a problem on the orbiting space station occupied by two cosmonauts.

The launch pad accident delayed the return to Earth of Alexander Alexandrov and Vladimir Lyakhov, whose space station mission started June 27 and ended Nov. 23, the officials said at a news conference.

They insisted the orbiting cosmonauts were never in danger.

"Indeed, a launching was planned for Sept. 26 and it is indeed true that there was an accident, but the crew was catapulted and safely returned," Lyakhov told reporters. He said he and Alexandrov had been preparing to receive the new cosmonauts aboard the space station.

Lebanese government renews efforts to stabilize cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The government today renewed efforts to reactivate a security committee charged with stabilizing Lebanon's cease-fire, and PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's loyalists demanded protection from air attack for their evacuation from northern Lebanon.

Officials said President Amin Gemayel's administration was engaged in negotiations with Lebanon's principal warring factions to resolve disputes that ended the committee's activities 12 days ago.

One official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Gemayel wants to get the committee back in session before Tuesday, when he begins a two-day visit to London, the first ever by a Lebanese president.

The trip completes a series of visits by Gemayel to the four nations that provide troops to the multinational force in Beirut. The other nations are the United States, France and Italy.

The cease-fire committee has not met since Dec. 1 because of a demand by Shiite Moslem militia leaders that their Christian foes first free kidnapped Moslems and that the Gemayel government lift local press censorship.

The Lebanese army wants the committee to give priority to eliminating cease-fire violations and reopening Beirut's international airport along with schools in the Moslem and Christian sectors of the Lebanese capital.

Police said a new cease-fire agreed upon by feuding factions at a Damascus meeting Friday was generally holding in Beirut and the mountains overlooking the U.S. Marine base at the airport, although their were "scattered minor infractions" today.

Arafat's chief spokesman Ahmed Abdul-Rahman said in a statement published by Lebanese newspapers the guerrilla leader has asked Saudi Arabia and Syria to provide protection for loyalist evacuees against an Israeli attack on Tripoli's harbor.

Abdul-Rahman said local Lebanese police forces have undertaken to provide ground protection for Arafat's 4,000 loyalists when they leave their front lines on Tripoli's outskirts and assemble in the harbor to board four Greek passenger ships.

Japanese expedition sets up its second camp on Everest

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A Japanese expedition to the world's highest peak, Mount Everest, has established a second camp at 20,992 feet above sea level, according it a report from its base camp today.

Led by Kazuyuki Takahashi, 44, of Tokyo, the 10-member group is scaling the 29,028-foot-high peak from the south face.

From the Tibetan side on the north, another expedition led by Takahashi's wife Michiko is attempting to reach the summit. There has been no recent information on the progress of Mrs. Takahashi's group.

Takahashi, who set up a first camp at the 20,008-foot level, plans to set up three more camps before making an assault on the peak. The final camp is planned to be established at about 27,880 feet.

Hijaked airliner back in service

PEKING (AP) — The Trident airliner hijacked to South Korea last May 5 by six Chinese in the first successful hijacking from China has returned to service for the state airline, the China Daily reported Monday.

The six hijackers, who shot two crewmen on the domestic flight, were subsequently tried in Seoul and sentenced to prison terms of four to six years.

The Trident jetliner went back into service last week after an overhaul, the English-language daily reported.

Prep football playoffs in final phase

From wire reports

After 3½ months of strategy and head-knocking, the Texas schoolboy football races are down to the final weekend with two teams left in each of the major five divisions to fight it out for coveted state titles.

In Class 5A, Midland Lee faces Converse Judson Saturday at Texas Stadium in Irving.

Lubbock Estacado and Bay City meet Saturday at Austin's Memorial Stadium for the 4A title. Waco's Baylor Stadium will be the site Saturday night for the 3A final between Daingerfield and Sweeny after Boyd and Groveton battle for honors in 2A that afternoon.

The Class A title fight will feature Knox City and Bremond.

In the six-man state championship game, played in Winters Friday night, Highland beat Mozelle 67-50.

Converse Judson running back Chris Pryor ran for four touchdowns and a new state rushing record as Judson blasted Houston Yates 29-19 in a 5A semifinal game Saturday night.

The season performance by Pryor, including 258 yards in 39 carries against Yates, eclipsed the 2,411-yard mark set by Houston Stratford's Craig James in 1978.

Judson is the first San Antonio team to make the championship meet since Churchill won state in 1976.

Midland Lee reached the finals by beating Plano 35-14 in another playoff Saturday.

Halfback Walter Jones exploded for fourth-quarter touchdown runs of 1, 72 and 61 yards to help Lee snap a 14-14 tie.

In 4A semifinal action Saturday, fullback Rodney Jackson plowed for 201 yards and a touchdown to push Estacado into the championship contest.

Bay City reached the 4A final with a 49-6 rout of New Braunfels. Bay City quarterback Daniel Hawkins rushed for three touchdowns and passed for 155 yards.

In Class 3A, Daingerfield's Tony Evans scored two touchdowns and added a two-point conversion, as the Tigers shut out Post 42-0.

The Tigers, now 15-0, recorded their twelfth straight shutout and 13th of the season, both bettering the state marks set by Pittsburg in 1980.

Daingerfield accumulated 204 points in five straight playoff wins, bettering the state playoff mark of 202 set by Paducah in 1954 and topping the Class 3A playoff mark of 194 set by Denver City in 1960.

Sweeny nabbed the other berth in the 3A final after tying Port Arthur Austin 6-6 and winning on penetrations 3-1.

The 2A championship match was set Friday night after Boyd whipped McCamey, 22-3 and Groveton belted East Bernard, 21-6.

In Class A, Bremond's James Watley returned a pass interception 65 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown Saturday in an 8-0 win over Celeste.

The 180-pound senior intercepted a pass from Royce Hobbs, deciding a battle of defenses between the two teams.

Knox City won the other final spot with a 12-7 win over Wink Friday night.

No contest, Skins, 31-10

DALLAS— In what had been hyped as everything from the game of the century to Super Bowl 17 and a half, Sunday the Dallas Cowboys forgot to show up for the quintessential big game.

Washington, which really had given away the previous encounter between the two teams, wasn't about to fold this time. By the time it was all over, Dallas got a thorough drubbing at home, 31-10.

Here is what the Cowboys got for all their work and 12-3 season to date:

— In the game, Dallas got only 33 yards rushing.

— For the year, unless something really weird happens, like Washington losing on Saturday to the Giants, and Dallas winning on Monday night in San Francisco, the Cowboys get a 12-4 or 13-3 year and a wild card berth. Meaning, Dallas for likely the fourth straight year will be making a post season dip somewhere other than Texas Stadium.

— What Dallas got mostly was too many Redskins, too many Flags and too little Clock to work with in the end. Those key three words have initials of RFC, not too far from RFK, which is where Dallas' next big test will take place.

RFK STADIUM, of course, is the Washington, D.C. home of the Redskins, and the likely place the Dallas-Washington feud will be decided once and for all this season.

"There's not much you can say," said Dallas coach Tom Landry after the easy Redskin win. "We got whipped pretty good today."

Indeed. Dallas' 31-10 loss was so bad, it was worse than 31-10. Washington jumped on Dallas early, but the Cowboys got some of it back in the second quarter when the Skins got greedy and a little careless. After the half, though, it was all Washington. The scariest part of the afternoon is that Washington blew several golden scoring chances and still routed Dallas.

The Redskins took the opening drive of the game and stormed 75 yards to get seven quick points. John Riggins supplied the punch, a three-yard sweep left.

On Washington's next drive, Redskin quarterback Joe Theismann hit two fast passes, a 22-yarder to Art Monk, and a looping bomb over Mike Hegman to Tight End Clint Didier that went 40 yards for the TD.

Washington went to the well again on their next possession, and coach Joe Gibbs gambled on fourth and one from the 'Skin 49. Riggins was stopped, and Dallas drove for their first score, a 29-yard pass to Doug Cosbie from Danny White.

Dallas added a Rafael Spetien field goal late in the first half to make it 14-10, and that's as close as the Cowboys got.

Washington's missed fourth down try resulted in seven Dallas points. In the second quarter the Redskins ahd a first down at the Dallas 22, but a penalty and two sacks of Theismann cost Washington at least three points.

IN THE third quarter, Washington's Virgil Seay returned a White punt to the Cowboy seven, but the Skins were intercepted by Michael Downs at the goal line. Washington wasted a touchdown there, and wasted three points when Mosely was wide right on a field goal try.

So, Dallas was lucky it went 31-10. It could have been 44-3, easily. For all intents and purposes, it might as well have been.

"These things just happen occasionally," Landry said. "It was our worst game in a long time. It's hard to figure because this game meant a lot." Dallas could have clinched the NFC East title and the home field advantage throughout the playoffs. Now, Dallas is only promised a berth as the wild card team. Thus, Dallas won't get an extra week off before the playoffs, as they will have to play the wild card game. And, Dallas won't have a home game after the wild card match and the wild card game is on Christmas day.

Broncos clinch wild card

By Associated Press

The long-awaited rematch between the Washington Redskins and Dallas Cowboys turned into a real yawner. Of course the same can't be said about the NFL playoff situation.

While the Redskins won going away from the Cowboys 31-10 in the heralded battle of playoff-bound teams Sunday, the playoff picture still had plenty of suspense in it with just one week to go in the NFL's regular season.

The Denver Broncos were the only additional team to actually clinch a playoff spot, beating the Baltimore Colts 21-19 and earning a wild-card spot in the AFC. The Broncos joined three other AFC teams in the playoffs — East Division champion Miami, Central champion Pittsburgh and the West champion Los Angeles Raiders.

Pittsburgh actually clinched at least a wild-card playoff berth with a 34-7 victory over the New York Jets Saturday, then claimed the Central championship when Cleveland was upset by Houston 34-27 Sunday.

Four teams with 8-7 records are still in the hunt for the other AFC wild-card berth — Buffalo, New England, Cleveland and Seattle. Among the four, Seattle has the inside track because of a better conference record. The Seahawks, who beat the New York Giants 17-12 Sunday, can clinch a berth with just a victory next week over New England and don't need help from any other team.

Both Dallas and Washington have already qualified at least as wild cards in the NFC and one will go to the playoffs as champion of the NFC East, depending on next week's results. The Redskins have but to beat the lowly Giants Saturday at home to qualify as the East winner, while the Cowboys face San Francisco next Monday night. The other three berths will be next weekend.

The 49ers, New Orleans Saints, Detroit Lions, Los Angeles Rams and Green Bay Packers remain in contention for those berths.

Sunday, the 49ers beat Buffalo 23-10 and need only to beat Dallas next Monday night to be assured of a playoff berth; the Saints defeated Philadelphia 20-17 in overtime; the Lions lost to Cincinnati 17-9; the Rams lost to New England 21-7 and Green Bay has two games left, including Tampa Bay Monday night.

Also, the Chicago Bears knocked the Minnesota Vikings out of playoff contention with a 19-13 victory and St. Louis was eliminated from mathematical contention despite a 34-24 victory over the Los Angeles Raiders.

In a game involving two teams out of the playoff picture, San Diego took a 41-38 victory over Kansas City. The Dolphins beat Atlanta Saturday 31-24 in the weekend's only other action.

NFL

Broncos 21, Colts 19

Rookie John Elway, sparkling against the team he wouldn't play for, fired three touchdown passes in a furious fourth-quarter rally as Denver overcame a 19-0 deficit and squeaked past Baltimore.

The victory improved the Broncos' record to 9-6 and, coupled with a Buffalo loss to San Francisco, put them into the NFL playoffs for the first time since 1979.

Elway — the No. 1 draft choice of the Colts who was traded to Denver after he refused to play with Baltimore — completed one scoring toss of 21 yards, then fired a pair of 26-yard scoring strikes, the last coming with only 44 seconds left in the game, and giving the Broncos the victory.

Oilers 34, Browns 27

Wide receiver Tim Smith caught two touchdown passes, the second a 43-yarder, with 6:17 left to rally Houston over Cleveland. The Oilers, who blew an early 24-6 lead, completed their comeback with a two-play, 65-yard drive leading to Smith's game-winning catch.

"We were down 24-6 and we came back and had a chance to take control and we didn't," Browns coach Sam Rutigliano said. "This is the last way we thought we would lose this game. We've lost the ability to control our own destiny. The only thing that stopped us today was ourselves."

Seahawks 17, Giants 12

Dave Krieg fired a pair of first-half touchdown passes, each set up by turnovers, as Seattle defeated the Giants.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

No respect for tradition

Just who are these masked raiders known as the Midland Lee Rebels?

They laugh at tradition. They kick your face in and make you like it. There are no words to describe the torment they cause opponents.

They don't pass, yet they can come from behind with a wishbone offense. Defensively, they play like there is no tomorrow because there never is one.

IF THEY lose, and they have twice in 15 games, you get the feeling that they beat themselves. They aren't even district champions, yet Saturday they will be playing for a state championship.

Nobody beats an Odessa Permian by a 20-0 score. Nobody scores 35 points against Plano. Yet the Rebels have done both. They are always one step away from an explosion.

The word across the state has been, "Force Lee into passing situations and they can be had." Plano did, so Lee scores on plays like fourth and six — by running 32 yards with Tyrone Thurman. The Rebels defy explanation.

They understand duty. They understand the job at hand. They understand their coaches. They understand victory and the smell of same.

Lee is not a come-from-behind team. At least, that's the word. Plano dominated Lee for two quarters Saturday as the west side Ratliff Stadium sea of thousands of Rebel flags went limp despite the stiff breeze.

BUT IT was only a 14-6 Plano advantage. That's not enough against these Rebels. Sooner or later, they are going to blow up in your face. Later was better than never.

History will record that the Rebels demolished the once proud Plano Wildcats. But Lee was in serious trouble. There was a feeling that Lee must score twice in the third quarter to win the game when they had the wind at their backs.

Isaac Garnett, who is now very close to the 2,000 yard rushing mark, broke for 45 yards and Walter Jones ran for a two-point conversion to knot the score at 14-14. One of the scores was taken care of.

But the quarter ended with penetrations even at two and Lee behind on first downs, 10-6. Even with the score tied, Plano held the tie-breaker margin. And the wind stared Lee in the face. Lee was dead in the water. At least, it seemed that way.

Lee seemed at the point of stalling, but quarterback Jeff Motley broke for 37 yards to give Lee hope at another penetration. Motley, however, was hurt on the play and it was up to second team quarterback Dennis Matta to direct a victory if there was to be one.

Matta didn't play well in his last appearance against El Paso Irvin. He put a couple of pitchouts on the ground. Matta was up to the challenge.

"I didn't play well against Irvin," said Matta during practice prior to the Trimble Tech regional game. "I learned my lesson and I'll be ready the next time."

HE WAS. He handed off to Garnett, then to Walter Jones for a crash inside the Plano 20-yard line. Lee then led 3-2 on penetrations. You had the feeling it was over then.

But Lee was not satisfied with a penetration victory. Matta directs the touchdown and it was Matta who got to call the inside belly series to Jones for TDs of 61 and 72 yards.

Lee won it going into the wind with second team quarterback Dennis Matta at the helm. It was really nothing new. Third team quarterback John Abbott quided Lee to three victories to open the season when Motley and Matta were on the shelf with injuries. It was just another day's work in Spike Dykes' team concept approach. It takes everyone to win.

And everyone has contributed to Lee's success this year. Lee has not played another team that doesn't use some two-way starters. Lee doesn't cross that line once. Offense is offense. Defense is defense. And never the twain shall meet.

Lee is usually superior in the fourth quarter because of this setup. So see, it's easy to explain why the Rebels have had success this season.

But please, just explain why they have been able to score the first time they have had the ball in their last 10 games. The Rebs still defy explanation.

Upsets tumble UCLA, Georgetown, Iowa, Memphis

By Associated Press

It's shakedown time for the nation's college basketball powers, that period of the season designed to prepare teams for conference play. But members of the Top 20 are simply shaking.

Sixteen of the Top 20 teams were in action Saturday night and seven of them lost, including No. 3 Georgetown, No. 4 Memphis State, No. 5 Iowa and No. 7 UCLA.

So it was time for the crying towels.

"New Mexico beat us in every phase of the game," said UCLA's Larry Farmer, whose team lost 65-60 at home to unranked New Mexico, which still is rebuilding a program left in shambles only three years ago.

"We're just not executing the little nuances of the game," said Iowa's George Raveling, whose team lost 53-48 to 18th-ranked Oregon State after being trounced by unranked Louisville 79-58 earlier in the week.

"I can't remember a game in which we shot only one foul shot," moaned Memphis State's Dana Kirk, who said his team was lulled to sleep in a 50-49 loss at home to 3-2 Mississippi State.

But Georgetown's John Thompson simply looked over at the opposing bench, seat of 701-game winner Ray Meyer, whose 13th-ranked DePaul Blue Demons upset the Hoyas 63-61. Asked which DePaul player was most impressive, he replied: "That old man on the bench. He impressed me the most."

No. 1 North Carolina, an 87-64 winner over Syracuse and No. 2 Kentucky, which routed Kansas 72-50, escaped Saturday night's upset barrage. But three other Top 20 teams also lost — No. 14 Wichita State, 75-60 to Oregon; No. 15 Arkansas, 67-54 to Nebraska, and No. 20 Fresno State, 60-52 to Boise State.

In addition to North Carolina, Kentucky, DePaul and Oregon State, Top 20 winners were No. 6 Houston, which beat St. Mary's of Texas 71-55; No. 8 North Carolina State, 82-56 over Hofstra; No. 10 Georgia, 80-58 over Northern Iowa; No. 11 Maryland, 78-67 over Duquesne, and No. 19 Purdue, 106-50 over Tampa.

Top 10

North Carolina's victory over Syracuse, before 32,235 at Syracuse's Carrier Dome, marked the second consecutive year the Tar Heels had beaten the Orangemen 87-64. It also gave Kenny Smith of North Carolina, with 11 points and nine assists, the lead over Dwayne "Pearl" Washington in the head-to-head battle of two heralded freshman point guards from New York City.

But Smith pointed out that his experienced supporting cast, including Michael Jordan, Sam Perkins and Matt Doherty, made things easier for him. Jordan had 19 points and Perkins and Doherty 16 each for North Carolina, 5-0.

Mel Turpin had 25 points and Jim Master 23 for Kentucky, 3-0, in its rout over Kansas, leaving Coach Joe B. Hall glowing.

Mississippi State got two free throws from Kevin Hildreth with 12 seconds remaining to hand Memphis State its first loss in five games. Keith Lee, Memphis State's star forward, drew his third personal foul with 11:38 to go in the first half and was limited to 10 points.

"We were able to control the game against a very fine Memphis State team," said Bulldogs' Coach Bob Boyd. "Having Keith Lee in foul trouble early certainly helped."

Houston Coach Guy Lewis was unhappy about his team's victory over St. Mary's, led by Michael Young' 24 points. He said the Cougars, 5-1, were guilty of "terrible shooting," adding, "This is not a 100-point ballclub. I'll just have to be content with 60 or 70 points and a win."

New Mexico's Gary Colson, who has a career record of 384-252 in 25 years of coaching, called the victory over UCLA his biggest ever. Phil Smith and Alan Dolensky each scored four points in the final 1:58 for the Lobos.

"I never thought I'd be crying after a win," said Colson, who replaced Norm Ellenberger after a scandal involving grade fixing had the school on NCAA probation. "But here I am doing just that on the floor at Pauley Pavilion (UCLA's home court)."

Lorenzo Charles scored 23 points and Terry Gannon had 20, leading North Carolina State to its seventh victory in eight games. Charles, who left the game with 12 minutes left to play, scored from inside while Gannon did his damage with long jumpers.

James Banks and Gerald Crosby each scored 18 points and Vern Fleming had 16 in Georgia's victory, which came in the opening round of the Drake Classic. Northern Iowa took an early 12-6 lead before the 4-1 Bulldogs took command.

Pressure gets to Cowboys

Any resemblance beteween the Dallas Cowboys and Midland Lee Rebels under pressure was not apparent Sunday.

Saturday the Rebels responded to a 14-6 halftime deficit by blowing Plano out of Ratliff Stadium Saturday. Sunday the Cowboys showed no such comeback propensities against the hated Washington Redskins, their worst enemy.

Dallas seemed to lack intensity, poise and dedication. It was a team that was either underprepared or overprepared. Whatever it was, the Cowboys weren't ready.

STILL, A 31-10 loss isn't so bad when you are playing without a secondary.

The Cowboys did a wonderful job of breaking up the post-TD celebration of the Fun Bunch in the end zone. The secondary's quick reaction to the "in-your-face" antics showed what the Cowboys had prepared for during the week. An even better preventive would have been to play pass defense.

Tony Dorsett demonstrated a lack of composure when he turned a dump pass into a nice gain. It looked like the Cowboys at last might have something going, but alas, Tony took exception to the way a cumbersome Redskin lineman was drapped over him on the ground after the play was over and created an incident. Instead of a handsome gain, the play was wiped out and the Cowboys were in a hole.

It was 31-10, but the Dallas touchdown was a gift. The Redskin showed such disdain for the Doomsday Defense that it gambled on fourth and one and failed, largely because it tried to run over Ed Jones instead of Harvey Martin.

Dallas turned the gamble into a two-play TD strike.

IF IT hadn't been for the officials, it could have been even worse. Washington threatened again before halftime. A Theismann pass went for a big gain, inside the Dallas 15. The play was wiped out by an illegal block. After viewing the replay, John Madden said the officials blew one.

Madden never did explain the failure of Tony Hill and Drew Pearson to show up for the game. If it hadn't been for Doug Cosbie, the Cowboys wouldn't have had a pass threat.

And Dallas still has no answer for the heavy-duty John Riggins-Franco Harris type back who keeps a defense honest no matter how much or little yardage they gain. If you are going to stop one of these guys, you've got to expend the manpower, creating a vulnerable area somewhere else.

The game proved what Coach Tom Landry has been saying all along, the Redskins are the best team in the NFL. Only Tom has been more delicate, saying the Redskins "are playing the best football in the NFL."

But don't despair, despite the buildup for Sunday's game, the only one that really matters is the next one between these two. The only thing Dallas lost Sunday was home field advantage, although in view of their recent playoff failures on the road, it was something they really wanted.

Nixon's 35 sparks Clippers over Mavericks

By Associated Press

Before the game, Norm Nixon and Terry Cummings talked about providing some leadership for the San Diego Clippers.

Then they showed their teammates what they meant.

Nixon scored a career-high 35 points and added 17 assists while Cummings scored 28 points to lead the Clippers to a 118-116 National Basketball Association victory on Sunday night over the Dallas Mavericks, who got 40 points for the second straight game from Mark Aguirre.

Nixon said he told Cummings that "he and I have to set the example for the team."

"It's up to us to start the leadership thing," Nixon said. "I've got to try not to get down. I've got to stay positive and be a cheerleader."

Said Cummings: "One thing we agreed about is we have to become more consistent and do our job."

The host Clippers took the lead for good at 98-96 on a basket by Cummings with 6:36 left in the game. San Diego then increased the lead to 104-98.

Nixon and Ricky Pierce, who scored 13 points, each made two free throws in the final 22 seconds to seal the victory.

Aguirre, who scored 40 points against Golden State on Saturday, entered the game against San Diego averaging almost 30 points per game.

"I've done a lot of hard work and it's starting to pay off," Aguirre said. "I didn't have a desire to work hard when I first came."

Nets 141, Nuggets 130

New Jersey made its first eight shots from the floor and took a 43-34 first-quarter lead, aided by Albert King's 16 points. King finished with a season-high 30, while Otis Birdsong had 25 and Buck Williams added 24.

76ers 97, Bucks 87

Milwaukee had won seven straight games and had not lost any of its nine home games this season. Philadelphia, led again by Julius Erving and Moses Malone, changed the Bucks' luck.

Trail Blazers 105, Warriors 101

Kenny Carr, accustomed to coming off the bench as Portland's sixth man, responded to a rare start by scoring 22 points and pulling down 17 rebounds.

Carr started in place of Calvin Natt, who had an upset stomach.

Jim Paxson, who finished with 27, scored five straight points in the fourth quarter as the host Blazers extended a 97-95 lead. Golden State got within 103-101 in the final 10 seconds before Lafayette Lever made two foul shots with two seconds left to clinch the victory.

Mychal Thompson had 14 points and 14 rebounds for Portland. Larry Smith had 25 points and 10 rebounds for the Warriors.

Knicks 109, Lakers 98

Center Bill Cartwright scored 24 points and grabbed 10 rebounds as New York, the league's top defensive team, raced to a 57-40 halftime lead against usually high-scoring Los Angeles.

The Lakers, who average 119 points per game, were throttled by New York's full-court press in the first half. The Knicks led 28-14 after the first quarter.

Bob McAdoo came off the bench to score 27 points for Los Angeles.

Sugar Ray tells wife and ducks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard broke the news to the world Saturday night that he was going to fight again. Sunday, he told his wife.

"I got to sleep at one o'clock," Leonard told some reporters Sunday. "I was trying to figure out how to break it to Juanita."

Juanita Leonard, who is expecting the couple's second child in June, is in a hospital with hyperemisis, an illness involving nausea and dehydration.

Leonard spent the night at the hospital, and when he awoke Sunday, his wife asked him where he was going. He told her he had to see some reporters, and Juanita said, "For what?"

Then, the woman who has been against her husband coming out of retirement, said, "You're fighting, right?"

"Well, sort of," Leonard said.

Then he said, "She gave me that look, but she went along with it."

"It's not a comeback, it's a return," he said Sunday. "I like that better."

Call it what you will, but the 27-year-old former undisputed welterweight champion wants to fight every three months.

"Fighting is primary," he said. "Everything else is secondary.

"Two months ago, I knew for sure that I would resume fighting," Leonard said the morning after he had fought a six-round exhibition against two opponents at Andrews Air Force Base.

It was Leonard's first public apopearance in the ring since he stopped Bruce Finch in the third round of a welterweight title defense at Reno, Nev. Feb. 15, 1982. He was scheduled to defend against Roger Stafford May 14, 1982 at Baltimore, but five days before the fight, he underwent surgery for a detached retina of the left eye. Five months later, he announced his retirement.

Leonard said that Dr. Ronald Michels of Johns Hopkins Medical Center, who repaired the retina, told him "the eye is excellent and I don't see any problem with the return."

Leonard said that he has been working seriously for two or three months and "the workouts I've had have erased that psychological scar (of the eye injury)."

However, he added, "I'll only fight with thumbless gloves."

Opponents should go along with that because there is a lot of money in fighting Leonard.

Leonard said he hopes to have a 10-round fight in February or March, then one or two more non-title bouts before seeking the welterweight championship again. That title currently is held by Milton McCrory (World Boxing Council) and Donald Curry (World Boxing Association).

He also talked about the possibility of a third fight against Roberto Duran, now the WBA junior middleweight champion; a rematch with Thomas Hearns, the WBC super welterweight champion, and a challenge to Marvelous Marvin Hagler, the undisputed middleweight champion.

"I'm coming back for the challenge, not for the money, not for the adulation," said Leonard. "It's for me.

"My goal is to step down when I'm ready to step down. I don't want to step down because of injury or some other problem. My injury has been corrected and it's given me a second chance.

"In my heart, I wouldn't risk my life or my eye if the injury hadn't been corrected," he said.

"For every one person who said stay retired, there were 10 who said come back," said Leonard. "But it had nothing to do with my decision. I don't have any advisers when it comes to me."

Bill Rives dies at 72

DALLAS (AP) — Longtime Texas sportswriter and news executive William T. "Bill" Rives died at his home early Sunday, apparently of a heart attack. He was 72.

Rives, a native of Victoria, Texas, was a graduate of St. Mary's University in San Antonio and got his first job as a reporter on the San Antonio Light in 1933.

Bradshaw makes difference

By KEN RAPPOPORT

NEW YORK (AP) — Viewed as cold statistics, the figures weren't impressive — just five passes completed in eight attempts for 77 yards and two touchdowns.

But when you realize that they were made in just 16 minutes in a high-pressure situation and by a quarterback who hadn't played in almost a year, then they take on a different dimension.

Though he played only a little more than one period of football Saturday, Terry Bradshaw was clearly the difference emotionally as well as physically in the Pittsburgh Steelers' 34-7 National Football League victory over the New York Jets that clinched a playoff berth.

"He wasn't 100 per cent, but he showed a lot of courage," said Steelers running back Franco Harris, who rushed for 105 yards in the game at Shea Stadium. "He was the leader out there, and when he got us the two quick scores, that was the ballgame."

Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll had hoped that Bradshaw's presence would inspire a depressed team that had lost three straight games, and that's precisely what happened.

"Its tough to carry the load by yourself," said Noll, "but he gave us a tremendous lift. I guess I was a little apprehensive about how he would perform. He's a little rusty. But we got the kind of game we needed. I'm sure his coming back was the big thing. His ability to reach back and draw on his experience out there today was a big factor."

Until Saturday, Bradshaw had spent the 1983 season on the sidelines with an injured right elbow while Cliff Stoudt did the quarterbacking. But Noll gave his veteran a shot after the three consecutive losses.

"We needed to do something. We needed a great day from Terry and we got it," said Stoudt, who came in just a couple of minutes into the second quarter to finish off the Jets after Bradshaw had thrown TD passes to Gregg Garrity in the first period and to Calvin Sweeny in the second. "You have a guy like Terry coming back, you have to use him. And I guess his performance shows why."

Things weren't entirely painless for Bradshaw. He reinjured his elbow on the TD toss to Garrity, then hurt it further on the scoring pass to Sweeney.

"It was a real sharp pain," Bradshaw said of the first pass."I was running right and I felt like I twisted it."

On the second TD pass, Bradshaw said, "I thought I hit someone with my arm, maybe somebody's helmet. I just went to the sidelines after that and told Coach Noll that I didn't think I could play any more."

Bradshaw admitted to some nervousness before starting, but "once I got on the field, it was like a duck taking to water. For some reason, I felt I was going to play well. I don't know why — I just felt it."

Bradshaw was a little apprehensive about the Jets' pass rush, but as it turned out he needn't have worried.

"We took control of the line of scrimmage," he pointed out."They (the Steelers) wanted to play football and played it well. They controlled the line of scrimmage. That's how you win games."

Although there were admittedly some things "that I couldn't do because my arm wouldn't let me," there were plenty of things that Bradshaw could do. He read the Jets' coverage well, in short taking the plays the Jets would give him.

"I play a wild kind of game," said Bradshaw, who led the Steelers to four Super Bowl championships in the 1970s. "I try to do a lot of different things out there, mix things up. The main thing was, I didn't want the offense to be stereotyped."

When Bradshaw was finished for the day, Stoudt went in to finish off the Jets, which he did in style with two more touchdown passes, to Bennie Cunningham in the third period and Sweeney in the fourth.

"I told him the line was blocking good and that he would have plenty of time to throw the ball," said Bradshaw, when asked what instructions he gave Stoudt upon him entering the game.

Wager ends in murder

WASHINGTON (AP) — A wager over the Washington Redskins-Dallas Cowboys football game ended in murder Sunday night as the winner of the bet shot and killed the loser after an argument, District of Columbia police said.

They say the two got into a fight over the wager about an hour after the game.

Cowboys outclassed

And that means, welcome to frosty RFK on January 8, probably for the right to represent the NFC in Super Bowl 18.

"The third quarter was just a disaster," Landry said. "I don't know why in a game this big it didn't bring the best out in us. We wanted to win badly. I don't feel good about it."

THE GAME itself was vintage Washington-Dallas. As usual, there was hard hitting, good play, and hot tempers. Several times, members of each team would take opportunities to egg the others on. The results were interesting - Downs and Dennis Thurman tried to break up a Redskin receivers celebration after Monk's third quarter TD that put Washington up 21-10. The "Fun Bunch" high fives that Washington tried were busted up by Downs. Downs afterward said "I just got caught up in the heat of the moment. It was out of my character a little bit. I was upset over giving up the touchdown. They can do that up there but I didn't want to see it happen in Texas Stadium. I think the rivalry heated up a little."

Other Cowboys were guardedly critical of the Redskins, but realized Wahington looked awesome. "We were a piece of cake today," said defensive back Ron Fellows of Dallas. "You could tell by the score we weren't ready."

Butch Johnson, the outspoken Cowboy wide receiver, was one of the most vocal Redskin chastiser. "We're humiliated and disgusted. We just got our butts whipped," Johnson said. "But this was our last taste of defeat. It tastes pretty bad right now."

JOHNSON WAS interviewed with a heavily taped right knee after the game, and said the game got so heated because of Washington terror tactics. "They were cheap shotting us all day. It's a little tasteless - going at your knees, trying to spear Tony Dorsett. Really classless."

Tell us what you think, Butch.

Dorsett downplayed the incident, inwhich Washington's Darryl Grant arrived slightly late to hit Dorsett after he was brought down. Dorsett at the time jumped up and threw the football at Grant.

Dorsett and Grant got offsetting penalties, and Dallas' last faint hopes seemed to die after that.

The Redskins, meanwhile, control their destiny and can clinch the East with a win over the sorry Giants. Redskin player reactions to the most lopsided Skin win over Dallas in years was happy, but the most avid anti-Cowboy had his say. Defensive tackle Dexter Manley sounded just like Dexter Manley: "I was ready to play, no question about it. I dislike the Cowboys, and when you say things like that you've got to come out playing. It was a sweet victory. We did sort of dominate the Cowboys, but they weren't up to their potential. They will be when we play them again. Yes, we'll be playing them again."

Manley is on a roll. He predicted Washington's last two wins over Dallas, and played a major role in both, and he's probably on the mark about a third shootout. If so, 31 points will be the magic number. The last three games have produced 31-17, 31-30, and 31-10 scores.

Playoff field takes shape

New York quarterback Jeff Rutledge's 10-yard touchdown strike to Earnest Gray with 25 seconds to play was nullified by a holding call against offensive tackle John Tautolo on fourth down. On the next play, Rutledge's pass was batted down.

Patriots 21, Rams 7

Mosi Tatupu ran for three touchdowns to power New England over the error-prone Rams, 8-7, who dropped into second place in the NFC West behind the 49ers.

Saints 20, Eagles 17

Morten Andersen's 50-yard field goal 5:30 into overtime lifted New Orleans over over Philadelphia. Earlier, Andersen had kicked a 52-yarder which gave New Orleans a 17-3 lead, but Philadelphia rallied for a pair of late touchdowns to send the game into overtime.

Cardinals 34, Raiders 24

Defensive tackle Elois Grooms rumbled 40 yards with a fumble recovery for a touchdown in the waning seconds of the first half for one of four straight St. Louis TDs in a span of 16:30 that lifted the Cardinals over the Raiders. The Cardinals rallied from a 17-point deficit after the first quarter.

Chargers 41, Chiefs 38

Rolf Benirschke kicked a 28-yard field goal with two seconds left to lead San Diego over Kansas City in a game featuring outstanding passing performances by the Chargers' Dan Fouts and the Chiefs' Bill Kenney.

Kenney completed 31 of 41 passes for 411 yards and four touchdowns. Fouts hit 25 of 36 attempts for three touchdowns, all to tight end Kellen Winslow. His 285 yards gave him a career total of 30,114, making him the ninth quarterback in NFL history to surpass that milestone.

Soviets smother Americans

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Since 1972, Vladislav Tretiak has been the dominant goaltender in international hockey. Now, it appears the Soviets have come up with a successor.

He has the tounguetwisting name of Aleksandr Tyzhnykh, and if his performance Sunday night in leading the Soviets Select to a 6-1 victory over Team USA is a fair indication, he'll be spending most of February in Sarajevo with the Soviet Olympic team.

"A Tretiak is born once in a hundred years," Tyzhnykh said. "He is my teacher and friend and I have great memories of our times together."

Their times together could be spent sharing the Soviet goaltending duties at the 1984 Games. Tyznhnkh ranks just ahead of Alexander Myshkinl and behind only Tretiak among Soviet goalies, according to Selects Coach Anatoly Bogdanov.

"He is very near to Tretiak in skill, but not experienced," said Bogdanov. "He is here to get that experience."

The 25-year-old Tyzhnykh was the difference in the first period making spectacular glove saves to rob Pat LaFontaine and Scott Bjugstad on the Americans' best chances.

"Boy, did he come up big," said LaFontaine, who scored the only U.S. goal at 11:22 of the third period with the Selects ahead 4-0. "It all goes back to their goalie. There was a packed house out there and I think we got up for it. But when the goalie stoned us, it deflated us. We just couldn't pop those goals, then they got two and changed it around."

Vladimir Kovin and Sergei Kharin beat American goalie Bob Mason 46 seconds apart late in the second period to put the Selects in control. Kovin sent a backhander past Mason after Victor Shaknrdiuk had hit the post. Then Kharin got the first of his two goals with another backhander while Bjugstad was draped over him.

Socialistic proposal stirs up Swedens' business community

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Sweden, long considered a model of good labor-management relations for the rest of the industrialized world, is in turmoil these days, with the business community there angrily accusing the labor-backed Social Democrat government of trying to "socialize" most of Sweden's industry.

The idea of a Socialist government trying to socialize industry might not seem surprising to outsiders, even though it seems to shock many Swedes, but Social Democrats have been ruling Sweden for most of the past 50 years, and private entrepreneurs still run nearly 90 percent of Sweden's business.

And instead of boasting that at last Swedish socialists are trying to move toward a more socialist society, as might be expected, Prime Minister Olof Palme strongly denies that his administration has any intention of trying to socialize industry or even curb Sweden's private-enterprise system.

But Palme, prodded by Sweden's 2.1 million-member blue-collar labor federation, does have a proposal to extend that country's system of "industrial democracy" to a system of "economic democracy" that would create collectively owned workers' funds that would own part of the private enterprises.

The Socialists insist that they don't want government to take over industry, but rather to set up private funds that would increase money available for capital investments, counter concentrations of wealth and power in a few individuals and increase the influence of workers on corporate life.

But the Social Democrats' latest economic-democracy proposal recently sparked one of the largest street demonstrations in Swedish history. More than 100,000 Swedes, including several thousand business people from large and small companies, took to the streets to denounce the plan. And public opinion polls show that the average Swede opposes it by a 2-1 margin.

On Dec. 20, a series of debates will begin throughout Sweden on the economic-democracy issue. The outcome of those debates may affect not just Sweden, but the future of the idea of increasing workers' role in industry in many other countries, including the United States.

The Swedish plan is related in some ways to the "pension-power" plans some unions are encouraging in this country. The U.S. "pension-power" idea is based on the fact that there is now nearly a trillion-dollar reserve in pension funds set aside for workers' retirement. The unions want workers, through their unions, to share the tremendous power that goes with the decisions of where to invest such huge sums of money.

That U.S. plan is still in its early stages. But many American companies, including such giants as General Motors, Ford and AT&T, are deeply involved with their own industrial-democracy plans that give workers a chance to make some decisions about their own jobs and be something more than mere order-takers.

That idea is almost old hat in Sweden, where unions and management pioneered the idea of worker participation. The Swedes have had some form of industrial democracy for many years, and Swedish workers today have more of a say in running the companies that employ them than do workers in almost any other country — including Japan with its reputation as current best model of labor-management harmony.

But now Palme and his union supporters want to go on to what they see as another step in Sweden's democratization. Their proposal, which would create what are called "collective wage-earner funds," is the hottest political issue in Sweden.

Palme and Sweden's largest labor federation seem convinced that if they can get the measure past Parliament, where the Socialist bloc has a majority, it will prove so popular in practice that the Social Democrats will be overwhelmingly re-elected in 1985, despite the unfavorable reaction to it now.

The latest plan is far less radical than that first proposed in 1976 by labor economist Rudolph Meidner, who wanted the "wage-earner funds" to come from employers who would put 20 percent of their profits into the funds to be used to buy stock in companies and provide money for capital investments. Under Meidner's plan, it was estimated that workers, through their unions, would have owned most of Sweden's private industry within 20 years.

The latest plan would create five regional worker funds that would get some money from pension reserves, some from a relatively small share of "excess" employer profits and some from contributions by workers themselves.

Each fund would be administered by a board of nine members and four government-appointed deputies. The majority of the board members would be union representatives. There would be an 8 percent limit on the amount of stock the funds could own in any one company, and some of the more militant unionists say that the new plan has been so watered down that it is not worth bothering with.

But its supporters say that it not only will increase the supply of venture capital for industrial expansion, but will give workers some responsibility for and a share in the companies' profitability.

Management leaders, however, say that the workers' funds would be able to buy about 1 percent of the current stock-market value each year, and that, while there are limits on the amount of stock the funds can own in any one company, those limits are meaningless.

The biggest shareholders in some companies own no more than 6 percent of ordinary stock, but that concentration of power is enough to dominate a company's policies, and so, in a few years, management argues, the worker funds would dominate all Swedish enterprises.

But Per-Olof Edin, the union economist who drafted the proposal, countered that the way the wealthy Swedish Wallenberg family, for example, exercised control over many corporations without owning a majority of the stock was by getting the support of other stockholders. That would be the only way the worker funds could control policies of companies in which they hold a minority share of the stock, he said.

If the fund managers can generate such confidence in their policy proposals, those proposals could become company policy and, he said, "Of course, that would be a good thing."

Nevertheless, all employer groups in Sweden recently said in a joint statement that their opposition to the collective workers' funds is "unanimous and will not fade away" because they will "destroy the drive required to start, run and develop a business enterprise."

FDIC to consider RepublicBank request

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. will decide today, in Washington, whether it will grant a second 30-day extension of a loan review period requested by RepublicBank First National Midland. The bank has asked the FDIC for more time to buy loans from failed First National Bank. The first 30-day extension will expire this week.

FDIC spokesman, Alan Whitney, said a decision was expected by about 2:30 p.m. Central Standard Time.

If the request is granted, RepublicBank will have an additional 30 days, until mid-January, in which to review and purchase from the $1.1 billion portfolio now held by the FDIC.

RepublicBank was originally given 30 days to review and buy back FNB's loans when the old bank failed Oct. 14. Unable to complete the task in the allotted time, the bank asked the FDIC for and was granted a 30-day extension in November. Earlier this month RepublicBank announced it would ask the FDIC for another 30-day extension.

Tom Wageman, RepublicBank president, said earlier this month, he hopes the FDIC will grant the additional extension because of the size and importance of the job.

IBM's mimics may face tougher times in 1984

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

After enjoying a boom year in 1983, makers of computers that mimic the International Business Machines Corp. Personal Computer may face tougher times in 1984 if IBM makes good on its pledge to boost Personal Computer shipments more than threefold next year.

The reason, many analysts and retailers say, is that the so-called IBM clones owe their success in part to the ready availability of their machines at a time when Personal Computer purchasers must sometimes wait as long as three months for delivery.

"It's not going to hurt everybody who makes an IBM-like machine," said Adam F. Cuhney, analyst with New York-based Salomon Brothers Inc. "But those who have been selling their machines purely on compatibility, and on deliverability, will be hurt."

Sales of IBM-imitation personal computers skyrocketed in 1983 as manufacturers offered machines that were priced 10 percent to 20 percent lower than IBM's, could run much of IBM's growing library of software, and were available for immediate delivery.

Dataquest Inc., a market research company based in San Jose, Calif., estimates that shipments of IBM-compatible machines grew to between 150,000 and 200,000 machines in 1983, from fewer than 10,000 in 1982.

IBM's plan to boost production dramatically came as a shock to many in the industry when it was disclosed in a speech last week to New York securities analysts by Allen J. Krowe, IBM senior vice president and chief financial officer.

Krowe avoided specific figures, but analysts said that a tripling of shipments would bring the 1984 total to more than 2.5 million personal computers, from more than 800,000 in 1983.

Saudis building industrial cities in desert, taking $35 billion gamble

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

YANBU, Saudi Arabia — Mickey Lynch has a slide he likes to show his friends. In it, he is standing with another American, Ed Backus, beside a wooden sign with two arrows, one pointing left under the words "Export Refinery," the other right under "Petrochemical Plant." The sign is planted in an empty expanse of desert and the picture shows nothing in either direction.

When the slide was taken several years ago, the refinery and the plant, of which Lynch and Backus are the respective project managers, existed only in the minds of engineers and architects.

Today, Lynch stands on the 15th story of the nearly completed refinery, looks out over an industrial park that seems to stretch forever and exclaims: "Quite a sight, isn't it? It's amazing when you think that there was absolutely nothing here a few years ago."

Indeed it is.

Yanbu, on the Red Sea, and Jubail, 750 miles to the east on the Persian Gulf, are Saudi Arabia's two newest industrial cities. They are supermodern complexes being built by 70,000 workers, most of them Asians, at a cost of more than $35 billion. By the turn of the century they are expected to have a combined population of half a million and to play a key role in Saudi Arabia's drive for economic diversification.

Construction started in 1977, and no expense was spared to overcome the logistical and engineering challenges. A special ship was designed to transport over-sized industrial-equipment modules from Italy. A vehicle with 600 wheels was built to move them into place. Some 400 million cubic meters of sand was dredged from the harbor at Jubail, enough to form a band around the Equator nine yards wide and one yard high.

Lynch's $2-billion refinery — the Saudi government administers the project and Bechtel Corp. is prime contractor — will be operational next year, ahead of schedule and under budget. It will ultimately have the capacity to process 420,000 barrels of crude oil a day into salable products such as gasoline and diesel fuel.

Yanbu, an ancient port 70 miles from Mecca, and Jubail, located on the gulf near the world's richest oil fields, are linked already by an operational underground network of high-pressure gas and oil pipelines. They can carry 1.85 million barrels of oil a day west across the Arabian Peninsula to Yanbu, enabling the kingdom to reduce its dependence on the militarily vulnerable Persian Gulf as a shipping route.

Saudi officials also view the two industrial cities as an important step toward economic self-sufficiency.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 248 taxable funds)		39	8.55	8.53

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date, g - one time sales charge, r - restricted availability.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 248 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 decreased $507 million to $162.0 billion for the week ended December 7, 1983. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield increased to 8.55% from 8.49%. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield remained at 8.53% for the second week. The taxable funds' average maturity remained at 39 days for the third week.

William E. Donoghue says, "The 7-day average yield jumped to 8.55% this week due to high rates in the repo market. This increase pulls the taxable money funds' average yield well above the 8.47% average rate on bank and thrift MMDAs reported by Bank Rate Monitor. Assets of the 248 money funds fell more than $500 million for the third consecutive week."

Midland lawyer Robert R. Truitt Jr. sits behind the wheel of old Number One — a chain-driven, 1917 American LaFrance pumper. It and Number Two are currently in private storage, awaiting restoration and construction of the museum.

A part of history

In 1909, three blocks of Midland's downtown area were destroyed by fire. The total loss came to an estimated $850,000.

A year later, another fire destroyed several businesses on the east side of Main Street. The loss came to $350,000.

In 1913, a city waterworks came into existence and fire equipment was purchased.

Such was the genesis of what was to become the modern fire department Midland now enjoys.

The Downtown Lions Club is engaged in a two-year fund-raising drive to preserve the city's first two fire trucks: a 1917 American LaFrance chain-drive pumper and a 1928 LaFrance super pumper.

About 60 percent of their $100,000 goal has been raised, according to Lion Ray Gwyn, who said the club hopes to raise the remaining $40,000 through foundations and from local residents through a mail solicitation campaign.

"Once the mail campaign is finished, we'll be contacting people personally," he added. "We hope to reach our goal by the first of the year."

The money will be used to restore the trucks and construct a museum to house them, with the museum to be constructed adjacent to the Central Fire Station on West Wall Avenue.

"From 5,000 to 10,000 children visit the Central Fire Station each year," said Fire Chief James Roberts, "and the museum will be a valuable addition in teaching fire prevention."

The undertaking is the largest attempted by the Lions in their 55-year history, and about $45,000 of the money raised so far has come from club members.

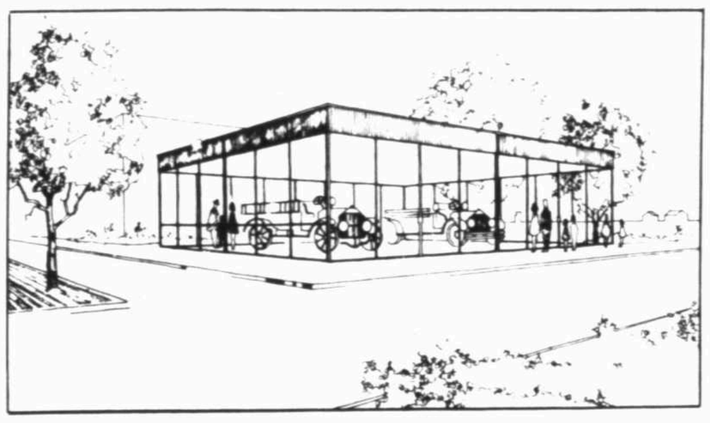
"Old Number One and Two will be the central items displayed," said Jack Darden, president of the Lions Fire Prevention and Historical Foundation.

"They served the city well and certainly deserve a place of honor and respect from the city they so faithfully served."

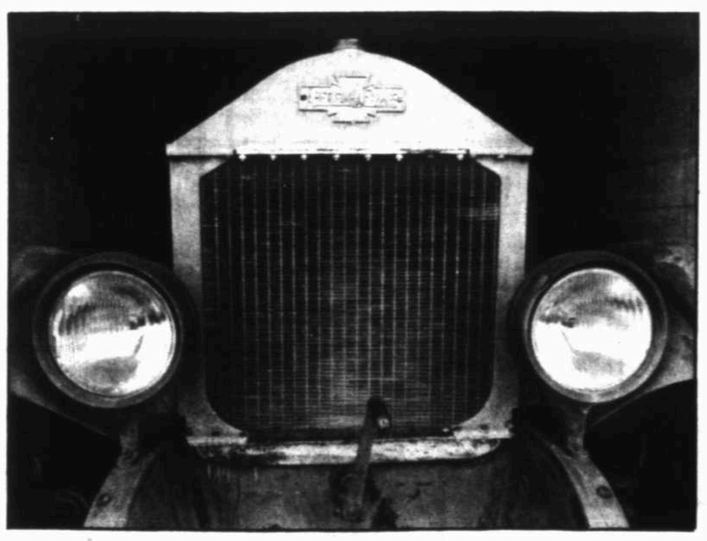
In addition to the old fire trucks, other early-day firefighting memorabilia will be preserved in the museum.

"When we got those trucks," said Gwyn, "we thought we were really uptown for a small town."

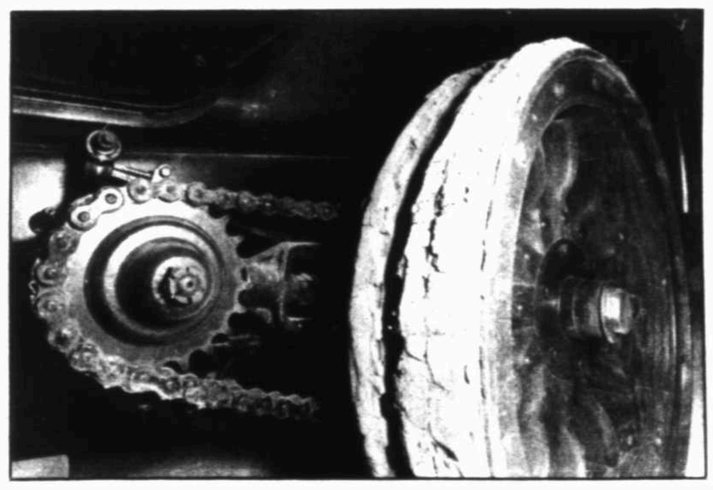
Groundbreaking is tentatively set for early January. Plans are to dedicate the museum as a gift to the city on its 100th anniversary in 1985.



An artist's sketch shows the proposed fire museum to be built next to the Central Fire Station on West Wall Avenue.



Number Two is parked now, its headlights resembling wistful eyes looking for something that will never return.



This close-up shot shows the chain-drive mechanism, the wood-spoked wheels and the hard rubber tires of Number One.

Odessa police search for murder suspect

ODESSA — Police have one suspect in custody and are searching for another in connection with two unrelated Saturday night shootings here that left one man dead and two people injured.

The name of the deceased 49-year-old Odessan is being withheld, pending notification of relatives.

Police were called to 2712 Santa Monica about 11:30 p.m. and found two gunshot victims. Katrina Denise Becker, 23, and the deceased were transported to Medical Center Hospital where she was treated for a wound to the right wrist and released.

Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee pronounced the man dead at 12:50 a.m. He apparently died of a gunshot wound to the chest, and Lumpee ordered an autopsy.

Police have in custody a 32-year-old man who lived with the two victims at the Santa Monica address. Charges are expected to be filed against him today, according to Lt. Rusty Baker.

Ms. Becker was injured when she stepped between the two arguing men, according to police reports. The suspect fired one shot with a small-caliber pistol.

Police are searching for another suspect in an unrelated shooting shortly before midnight Saturday in the parking lot of the Valencia Club at 24th Street and Andrews Highway.

Ruben Trevino of Andrews is reported in satisfactory condition at Medical Center Hospital with gunshot wounds to the right cheek and shoulder.

According to police, Trevino and the suspect were arguing over a girlfriend when the latter pulled a small-caliber pistol and fired two shots.

Bob Krueger feels 1984 will be his year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five months before next year's Texas primary, former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, who suffered a heartbreaking loss to Republican Sen. John Tower in the 1978 Senate race, is feeling fat and sassy about his prospects for 1984.

He also appears to be enjoying the advantages of a candidate who does not have to defend a recent, specific voting record — a circumstance that affords the luxury of a certain vagueness on the issues.

In 1978, after a campaign so bitterly fought that at one point Tower refused to shake Krueger's hand when they met in public, Krueger lost by a scant 12,000 votes out of more than 2.2 million cast.

He had been anticipating facing his old nemesis again in next year's Senate race. Then, last August, in a move that stunned the Texas political establishment, Tower announced he would not seek re-election in 1984.

"It's obvious with John Tower out, it ought to be somewhat easier" to win, Krueger said at a recent breakfast meeting with reporters.

KRUEGER ALSO was quick to tick off advantages he feels he has over his two primary opponents for the Democratic nomination, U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock and state Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin.

For one thing, Krueger said, his own poll showed him with "essentially the same" early lead as one taken this fall for The Dallas Morning News, with a 3-1 margin over Doggett and a 6-1 margin over Hance among Democrats who expressed a preference.

For another, the 1978 campaign gave him extensive statewide exposure and and it's a lot easier to return to a county to campaign "than it is to go in the first and second time," Krueger said.

And the high cost of television commercials will make it difficult for Doggett and Hance to raise enough money to overcome, through advertising, Krueger's advantage in name recognition, he said.

BUT THOUGH highly specific about his election prospects, Krueger was considerably less so about his stands on issues.

For example:

—Krueger said he did not favor proposals to limit campaign contributions from political action committees (PACs) representing special interests, money many congressmen feel they need to help pay the high cost of television advertising. Instead, Kreuger said broadcast media should be required to make free air time available to political candidates.

Questioned repeatedly on how this should be implemented, Krueger declined to respond. He told reporters, "I don't have a formal plan on how it should be done. I'm sorry."

—Krueger said defense spending is "very, very important to Texas" and that the absence of Tower, who wielded a lot of influence as chairman of the Senate Armed Service Committee, would not necessarily hurt the state in that regard. Another senator, if he works hard, "can look after the defense interests of the state," Krueger said.

But Krueger did not respond to a question of what size defense increase he would have supported for this fiscal year, which was a major issue during the recent session of Congress.

"The real question is not a single percentage but how that money is spent," Krueger commented, though he said: "I think that 4 percent is better than 10 percent."

—Krueger said he felt the recent U.S. military action in Grenada was justified, but that "I think we should be very careful about sending our troops" into Central America. He was asked if he supported covert U.S. assistance to rebels battling the leftist government in Nicaragua, aid that also was a major issue in Congress this year.

"I AM NOT IN principle opposed to the notion of covert support," Kreuger responded, but he said that "I don't have enough access to information" to make a judgment in the case of Nicaragua.

—Krueger said one of his concerns was the size of the federal deficit, and that he was receptive to the idea of saving money by revising cost of living increases for such programs as Social Security. But asked specifically whether he would favor changing the formulas for such programs, Krueger replied, "I don't come to you today with a plan for altering (them). I would be ready to look at it."

—Krueger also said the emphasis in government social programs should be on providing aid to the needy, rather than on so-called "entitlement" programs that provide aid to everyone regardless of need.

Asked what entitlement programs he would be willing to abandon, Krueger replied, "I don't think one wants to campaign on the abandonment of certain entitlement programs."

—Krueger said he would not have voted in 1981 for President Reagan's three-year, 25 percent cut in income taxes, a proposal that was co-sponsored by Hance. However, Krueger said he was not for restoring any of those taxes now. But he also said, "I'm not going to say at some point in the future I'm not going to support tax increases."

Ice cream containers cover the ground around the loading dock at the Borden's Ice Cream warehouse in downtown Houston after an ammonia leak was reported to firefighters early Sunday, followed by the explosion. No one was injured.

Borden's explodes during ammonia check

HOUSTON (AP) — An explosion at an ice cream warehouse that sprayed bricks and glass and sparked a two-alarm fire occurred just as firefighters donned protective gear so they could enter the building to check on leaking ammonia, authorities said.

"As we headed towards the door, the whole building blew out," said Ed Hauck, acting district fire chief, who was leading 16 firefighters into the warehouse at a Borden's Ice Cream plant on Sunday. "A minute later, it would have blown everybody that went in to bits."

The blast apparently occurred in one of 15 compressors used to convert ammonia gas used as a refrigerant to liquid, but the cause remained under investigation, fire department spokesman Al Patrick said. No one was seriously injured, he said.

A noxious cloud of ammonia rose over a section of Houston's downtown following the explosion, but it was dispersed by a stiff easterly wind. No evacuation was ordered.

Melvin Machart, a maintenance engineer, said he was the only person in the building when the leak occurred at about 8:30 a.m.

"I had just walked past where it happened. I was just doing my routine checks. ... I ran over and cut the ammonia off as best I could, then ran out and called the fire department," he said.

Hauck said firefighters had no reason to expect the explosion, which was so strong it sent a brick through the side of his pumper truck.

A faint hiss could be heard coming from inside the building, "but it wasn't like a jet engine or anything. There was nothing to give us any indication it would blow out like it did," he said.

Patrick said the fire was extinguished a little over two hours later.

Odessan killed; Midlanders injured in two-car collision

MONAHANS — An Odessa man was killed and four Midland residents were injured in a two-car collision on Interstate 20 west of Wickett shortly after 9 p.m. Sunday.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. William Davidson of Monahans was 22-year-old Jessie Uballe Jr. of Odessa.

In critical condition this morning at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital were 19-year-old Douglas Gilbert Harwood, 39-year-old Beverly Harwood, both of Route 7, Midland, and 18-year-old Dewayne Edward Stowell of 2614 Maxwell.

In stable condition at MCH was 13-year-old Heather Harwood, also of Route 7, Midland. A hospital spokeswoman said the extent of their injuries was not known.

According to the Department of Public Safety, Uballe was westbound on I-20 when his 1972 Dodge crossed the median and struck head-on a 1983 Chevrolet Suburban driven by Douglas Harwood.

Ubvalle's body was taken to Wilson-Miller Funeral Home in Monahans. The accident occurred 1.5 miles west of Wickett in Ward County.

Theft, burglary probed

In theft and burglary complaints lodged with city police over the weekend, an employee of Bob's Rental Center at 2909 N. Big Spring said three generators, a chain saw and a water heater worth a total of $3,054 were taken in a break-in Saturday. Entry was gained by breaking a window.

A refrigerator, a weed cutter, a lawn mower, two garden hoses and four sets of drapes valued at a total of $1,500 were reported taken in a theft at 4503 Crenshaw.

And $1,800 in cash, along with a $200 AM-FM cassette player, was reported taken in a Saturady burglary at the Wall Street Moving Center, 2803 W. Wall Ave.

Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity member Ted Pestorius, 20 years old, shows the pain of his burns while he is treated at the scene of the fraternity house fire this morning. Pestorius is listed in stable condition in intensive care at Brackenridge Memorial Hospital in Austin.

Fire under investigation

AUSTIN (AP) — Investigators were trying to determine what triggered a fire that roared through a fraternity house at the University of Texas, killing one coed and injuring six other people.

Arson was not suspected, officials said.

The blaze broke out about 6:15 a.m. Sunday and destroyed 22 of the 28 rooms in the two-story Lambda Chi Alpha house west of the campus, fire officials said.

Firefighters said a strong north wind hampered their efforts to extinguish the blaze. The fire finally was brought under control by 8 a.m. by 70 firefighters using 16 pieces of equipment.

The victim was identified as Margo Helen McFee, a 19-year-old business major from San Antonio. Firefighter Danny Stamper said it took two hours to find her body in the rubble.

Ms. McFee was in the room where the fire apparently started, Stamper said. He said the fraternity brother who lived in the room tried to carry her to safety but could not because of the heat and smoke.

Modification in cotton plan concerns farmers

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas congressmen and cotton growers are trying to get the federal government to reconsider a change in a program aimed at reducing the number of cotton acres planted, saying the change could mean more cotton will be planted instead.

A provision in the 1984 program would allow the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service to drop a farmer's payment yield from 90 percent of the previous year's yield to 80 percent, the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal reported Sunday.

That, critics of the change argue, could reduce incentive for participation in the program.

Payment yields, calculated in a complex method using averages of actual yields on individual farms, determine how much participating farmers receive in program benefits.

Critics of the change say that if the payment yield is reduced another 10 percent, weather-related losses suffered by High Plains farmers could mean a loss in revenue and remove the incentive for participation in the program.

Everett Rank, ASCS administrator, said the changes were made in part from pressure by an internal Agriculture Department audit that "thought the payment yields were out of reason."

But in a letter to Block, Texas Congressmen Kent Hance of Lubbock, Charles Stenholm of Stamford and Jack Hightower of Vernon and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen strongly urged a review of the change.

"Presumably the floor was lowered to save money," the letter read. "We believe it is a false economy."

S&L chairman's $16 million sale of land investigated

DALLAS (AP) — A savings and loan chairman made a personal profit of $14.5 million on a land deal with condominium developers who got a $32.8 million loan from the savings and loan a month earlier, the Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story.

The News said Sunday that state and federal lending regulators are investigating whether Spencer H. Blain Jr., chairman of Empire Savings & Loan of Mesquite, violated conflict-of-interest regulations.

Real estate closing records show Blain sold a 66-acre tract of land in Rowlett, which he had bought six months earlier for $1.47 million, to two developers for $16 million, the News reported.

The developers, Clifford R. Sinclair and Ken Cansler, bought the land from Blain in February, paying him $14.9 million in cash and $1.1 million in property, the News said.

A month before that transaction, Empire Savings approved a $32.8 million loan package in which Sinclair and his firm, Kitco Developers Inc., netted more than $25 million in cash, sources told the News.

The paper said Blain was paid out of the same escrow account into which the cash from the loan deal was deposited.

"The question of conflict of interest probably arises any time a person of status in the financial community involves himself in a business deal," said Blain's attorney, William M. Ravkind. "If he is in any way crossways with the regulations, he will do everything he can to correct the situation." Blain was unavailable for comment.

That package is one of several financial transactions under investigation by the FBI, Texas Savings and Loan Department and the Federal Home Loan Bank, sources told the newspaper.

The money that Empire lent to 39 investors in the transaction went to the same bank account from which Blain was paid for selling his land, according to a letter written by a title company manager. The letter from Jane Nix of Dallas Title Co. in Rowlett was sent to the Federal Home Loan Bank in response to federal inquiries.

Skull found

TEXAS CITY (AP) — Hurricane Alicia may have been responsible for the discovery of a human skull found in a pasture by a 14-year-old boy, according to a medical examiner.

The boy found the skull Saturday afternoon and took it home, police said. His parents notified police, who turned the remains over to Galveston County medical examiners.

Social class exceeds self-expression in decorating selections, says author

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

A silk-covered down sofa or a foam rubber lounge in plaid Herculon? Throw pillows or no pillows? Knick knacks on the table or a bare expanse of polished wood? Wall-to-wall carpet or Oriental rugs? Family portraits or art posters?

You may think your selection of these decorating alternatives is purely a matter of personal taste. But if you do, you're wrong, says Joan Kron whose book, "Home Psych," explains the psychology behind decorating decisions.

According to Ms. Kron, who says she consulted sociologists, psychologists, philosophers and environmentalists to gather material for the book, social class is far more important than self expression in determining how and with what we feather our nests. In fact, she says taste itself is determined by the class we come from and the one we want to get into.

THOUGH FEW WOULD OWN up to it, people constantly compare themselves to others. We are, however, usually able to accurately assess our social worth through a variety of cues, including decorating.

Ms. Kron, a decorator for 15 years before becoming an author and a decorating writer, said she had put in more than three years researching and writing her book to answer questions such as "what is decorating?" "how do you define a home?" and "why do we have accessories?"

As a result, "Home Psych" is a decorating book without pictures or how-to information. It is, instead, a dense, tightly-packed volume that examines the social and psychological implications of decorating.

In an interview, the author said she was surprised at how important social class turned out to be. In her research, she learned that though we could all live with a lot less, the things we choose for our homes do have a function beyond their practical utility. They give us a sense of place, mark out our boundaries, establish our territory and provide us with an identity that helps spell out our relationships.

SHE ADDS THAT IT is impossible to opt out of the class-decorating equation. "Everyone who has a home reveals something of his or her aspirations, pretensions, values and background," she said.

It is not as if we fool one another, though. Most of us can accurately interpret what we see based on our cultural knowledge. In fact, a decorating scheme is a kind of road map of values and social aspirations to those who are acute social observers, she said.

Despite appearances, this is not a time of decorating license. "Anything goes, they may tell you, but you soon find out that there are very definite, though unstated, rules about what to use and how to put things together," she said.

TODAY, ONE OF THE CLASSIER types of decorating is based on what she calls conspicuous austerity, adding "the latest status symbol is the 17-coat paint job and perfectly plastered walls which cost a fortune." They are ideal status symbols since, though very expensive, they do not add to the ease of living.

According to Ms. Kron, different rooms have different functions in decorating psychology. The living room is a public space. It represents the way we want to be seen.

The master bedroom is a private space which may, however, become a battleground as a couple disputes for possession. Often, she says, the bedroom reflects the woman's identity and the man of the house is just a visitor.

TODAY, PEOPLE ARE NO longer ashamed of wealth. "We have switched from a culture of mercy to a culture of justice. The attitude today is no more handouts. People believe that if I earned it, I deserve it and I don't have to be ashamed to show it."

Our interest in antiques and traditional decor are a reflection of desire to be part of the upper class. Antiques stand for family, the past, and a sense of tradition.

Ms. Kron says those who seek to leave the class they were born into and move up are the ones who have the toughest time making decorating decisions, since it is difficult, if not impossible, to reproduce a home that is above one's own class. "The nouveau riche hires society decorators to get the nuances right." However, she added, it usually doesn't work.

"They always get something wrong or the house is too perfect — a dead giveaway."

("Home Psych" is published by Clarkson Potter.)

This decorative Yule Log by Pepperidge Farm makes not only a beautiful centerpiece, but an engaging conversation piece and a delicious dessert as well!

HOLIDAY YULE LOG CAKE IS A DELICIOUS TWIST TO AN OLD CHRISTMAS TRADITION

Christmas comes but once a year, so can you blame the average mortal for wanting to stretch the festivities out as long as possible? After all the merry making tradition from mid December through the beginning of January goes back many centuries.

The Romans celebrated their lavish Saturnalia during this season, a time of leisure between the fall harvest and spring planting. The Persians observed the winter solstice with a great feast revering Mithra, the sun god. The Teutonic tribes built giant bonfires to honor the gods Woten and Thor. Kindling the yule log for these fires was a ceremony of special significance.

It is easy to see how many of the old pagan festival customs were adapted by the Christian church and given new meaning. The yule log for instance became symbolic of the light that came from the heavens when Christ was born and in some places the Christmas festivities lasted as long as the log kept glowing. Such was the cas on the colonial plantations in Virginia and Maryland where the largest, water soaked logs were sought so the fun would last as many days as possible.

Today we've abandoned the yule log as an excuse for festivities, but it is still part of the Christmas tradition. Your guests may see a yule log among Christmas decorations and not really know why it's used, so why not re-kindle that tradition with a lovely yule log centerpiece for your table and a lesson in Christmas lore?

During the holiday season even the most latent sweet tooth comes out of hiding, so be prepared to prove your guests that the yule log can very easily become a delicious tradition to eat rather than to burn!

Pepperidge Farm can help you make the yule log simple, yet luscious. Your guests will think it a beautiful centerpiece, then a conversation piece, and finally a delicious dessert! To make the Holiday Yule Log, simply cut one frozen Pepperidge Farm Chocolate Layer Cake in half, place the two ends together, then cover with your favorite fudge frosting. Decorate with marzipan holly leaves and berries and confectioners sugar for a unique dessert party treat.

Six states report flu

ATLANTA (AP) — Influenza virus has been confirmed in six states so far this season — Alaska, North Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Texas and West Virginia.

The national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday that the strain of Type A flu researchers call H3N2 was isolated from four people in Fairbanks, Alaska, where a flu outbreak began in November.

Most reported flu activity in Alaska has been in working-age adults, and school absence rates have not increased, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

The same virus strain has been isolated in a 20-year-old woman in North Carolina and in a young child in Nashville, Tenn.

A-H1N1 flu virus has been isolated in a 15-year-old boy in Mobile, Ala. Type B flu has been seen in two children in Nashville, three children in Houston and in a young girl in Huntington, W.Va.

The flu season traditionally runs from November to April in the United States.

Influenza

The history

As early as the 5th Century, Hippocrates described an epidemic that was later identified as influenza. Historically, the disease was deadly. About 20 million people worldwide, including 500,000 Americans, died in the 1918-19 epidemic. In the 1977-78 flu season, 80.5 million Americans fell ill with flu; 33,000 died.

The disease

Caused by a virus, influenza starts as an infection of the upper respiratory system. Symptoms—which should disappear in about a week—include chills, fever, headache, aches in the joints and weakness. Lowered immunity allows secondary—and more deadly—infections, such as pneumonia, to follow the disease. Secondary infections may be controlled with antibiotics.

The vaccine

Some protection is offered by vaccines, consisting of dead influenza viruses. Grown in egg yolks, the vaccine may be given to anyone who is older than 6 months and who is not allergic to eggs.

DEAR ABBY

Party puts wife on edge

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Christmas is near and so is the office party when the wife comes face to face with the secretary who's been messing around with her husband.

For the last couple of years I've been trying to come up with something to say to this girl when she comes up to us and boldly asks my husband to dance with her. How's this: "Sorry, he's saving all his dances for his wife tonight. He dances with you enough at the office." Do you think she'll get the message?

A while back my husband told me the boss had been having an affair with this secretary, then he dumped her. Soon my husband began spending more time at the office than usual. And when he started coming home with perfume on the shoulders of his shirt, I knew for sure what he'd been up to. I think it's time I let them both know I'm not exactly stupid.

What do you think? — TIRED OF PLAYING DUMB

DEAR TIRED: You'll never win with that technique. Tell your husband privately of your suspicions, but don't attack the woman or you will come across as a miserable old battle-ax whose husband has good and sufficient reasons to lie in the arms of another woman sobbing, "My wife doesn't understand me."

DEAR ABBY: "Climbing Back Up in Colorado Springs" ended her letter with, "Thank you for being there, Abby." And you replied, "Don't thank me. That's what I'm here for."

Wrong! You should have replied, "You're welcome. That's what I'm here for." As a therapist myself, I am very sensitive to people's reluctance to accept thanks or a compliment graciously.

Abby, as a role model, you should graciously accept the thanks you so often deserve. Thanks for being there, Abby. — MICHAEL C., VENICE, CALIF.

DEAR MICHAEL: You're welcome. That's what I'm here for. (I'm a fast learner.)

DEAR ABBY: Last February at a luncheon given in celebration of my 90th birthday, my hostess deplored the fact that she'd been unable to play with her son when he was a little boy. She said she never had the "knack." "But I read to him all the time," she said.

I told her I thought that was wonderful and very important, and that I had a poem I'd clipped from somewhere years ago entitled, "I Had a Mother Who Read to Me," and I would look it up for her.

The very next morning, my daughter, who was present at the luncheon and had overheard our conversation, pointed out your column in the Arizona Republic in which you quoted several lines from "I Had a Mother Who Read to Me," by Strickland Gillilan.

Odd? Imagine having that beautiful poem surface after so many years!

In case you don't have the entire poem, I am sending you a copy. — AN OLDER READER

DEAR READER: Thank you for your kindness. Although the entire poem will not fit into this limited space, the final stanza is worth repeating:

You may have tangible wealth untold;
Caskets of jewels and coffers of gold.
Richer than I you can never be —
I had a mother who read to me.

Bizarre eating habits studied

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — College students' bizarre eating habits are the subject of a new study, a North Dakota State University professor says.

College is the first place where many people develop the eating habits that lead to problems such as obesity or bulimia, also known as the "binge-purge" syndrome, Robert Klesges, professor of psychology and behavior at the university, said Wednesday.

The research is in its infancy and has found that the weird eating habits may stem from students have poor self-images and distorted body images, especially among those who think they are much more overweight than they really are, he said.

But Klesges said, "We don't know whether or not that is the cause of bulimia or whether that's the result of bulimia."

He said he planned to conduct research involving 300 to 400 students that would explain why students develop eating disorders and identify potential victims.

Herpes in newborns increasing; Virus found near hot tubs

CHICAGO (AP) — Herpes infections threaten death for an increasing number of newborns as the disease becomes more common among women, and herpes-causing viruses can pose a health threat to bathers at spa hot tubs, scientists reported today.

University of Washington researchers said a study among infants in King County, Wash., showed a 4½-fold increase in the incidence of genital herpes among newborns between 1966 and 1981.

While genital herpes in adults typically causes irritation or pain, in newborns the infections can be lethal. More than one-third of affected infants die and another one-fourth have neurological problems from the disease, the study found.

A venereal disease epidemiologist at the National Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Dr. Thomas M. Becker, said the center estimates 430 herpes cases in newborns would occur this year.

Federal health officials say about half of infected newborns die of the disease, and half of those surviving suffer physical or mental impairment.

Two drugs have been used to treat the disease, with limited success, and a New York research team has reported preliminary success on a vaccine to prevent it.

The increase in herpes affecting newborns parallels the rise in genital herpes simplex virus cases reported in King County and nationwide, University of Washington researchers said in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Newborns usually get the disease during transit through the birth canal. Caesarean delivery can prevent the infant from being exposed to the disease, but doctors don't always know beforehand that the mother is shedding virus when she gives birth.

"One of the greatest concerns of the medical community with this rising prevalence is the potential spread of this infection from an ever-increasing pool of infected women ... to their offspring," said an editorial by Drs. Nancy J. Binkin and E. Russell Alexander.

A new test which would reduce detection time for herpes infections from 10 days to 24 hours may reduce the problem.

AIDS patients need not be isolated, says AHA

CHICAGO (AP) — AIDS patients need not be put in special isolation in hospitals, nor should health workers be excused from treating them, the American Hospital Association says.

"There have been about five cases of health care workers contracting AIDS. In none do we really have evidence AIDS was acquired in hospitals," said Dr. Harold Jaffe of the AIDS task force at the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Jaffe was a panelist at a teleconference carried to 90 cities nationwide where the association's guidelines on caring for AIDS patients were released.

Victims of AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — should be put in private rooms only when they cannot control their bodily functions or attend to hygiene, or if they have other infections requiring isolation, the association said.

In outpatient facilities, direct contact between AIDS and other patients susceptible to infections should be reduced, but separate examining rooms for the AIDS patients are "neither necessary nor desirable," the guidelines said.

Outpatients with AIDS may use the same waiting areas and bathrooms as other patients, the guidelines said.

SourceBook underway

A consumer resource book and membership roster listing members of the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin is planned for distribution in early 1984 according to Linda Truitt, Bureau president. Known as the SourceBook, the 96-page directory will present information on the Bureau's services, consumer tips and listings by categories of member businesses.

The Better Business Bureau is a non-profit organization supported by business, which protects the rights of businessmen and consumers in the marketplace.

Distribution to more than 100,000 households is planned by March 1, 1984, in Odessa, Midland, Big Spring and Andrews.

Governor hopes he created good image for Kentucky

Gov. John Brown

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Gov. John Y. Brown, who gives up his office Tuesday to Martha Layne Collins, says one of his objectives was to "create an image of Kentucky as a place to do business."

And as the nation's only female governor and the highest elected woman in the Democratic Party, Mrs. Collins says she hopes to follow up on what Brown has accomplished.

"I am a rather private person," says Mrs. Collins in an interview in People magazine.

Brown and his wife Phyllis George Brown also are interviewed in the article, and described as a "flamboyant first couple."

In her interview, Mrs. Collins says she hopes she, too, can bring attention to Kentucky to "open doors for us."

"I have a background of not being a very public person or someone who seeks recognition," says the incoming governor. "I just want to get the job done."

Placido Domingo

LONDON (AP) — Placido Domingo and Agnes Baltsa sang a "Carmen" duet in La Scala in Milan while other tributes to the late prima donna Maria Callas were performed in three other opera houses — all linked by satellite.

At the Lyric Opera of Chicago, where Miss Callas made her American debut, Jon Vickers, Ileana Cotrubas, Alfredo Kraus and Renata Scotto sang arias from "La Traviata." At the Paris Opera, Jose Van Dam and Jessye Norman sang arias from Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust." And at the Royal Opera in London, Kiri Te Kanawa and James McCracken performed a scene from the last act of Verdi's "Otello."

The two-hour "Callas: An International Celebration," was beamed live Sunday to television audiences in Greece, West Germany and Italy.

Born Dec. 3, 1923, Miss Callas died in Paris on Sept. 16, 1977, at the age of 53.

Tickets sold for up to $60 for the production organized by Columbia Artists and the British Broadcasting Corp., and the Maria Callas Foundation, which will receive part of the proceeds for scholarships to singers.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock singer Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones says he's "doing more now onstage than when I was 20," but concedes "it can't go on forever."

As the Stones close out their 20th year together, the 40-year-old Jagger says "I don't want to sound like a spoiled child, but I'm still looking for fulfillment."

His personal wealth is reported to exceed $10 million and he says he recently signed a $3 million contract to write his autobigraphy.

But concerning his unsettled feelings, Jagger says in the Dec. 19 issue of Newsweek, "I'm poised in every direction."

The man whose voice still can be heard shrieking "I Can't Get No Satisfaction" suggests he might like to do straight acting roles in movies.

PEKING (AP) — The Rev. Robert Runcie, archbishop of Canterbury, told a congregation of Chinese Protestants that despite cultural differences, "We worship the same God."

"We had rather lost contact, and we have established contact once again," said the 62-year-old Runcie, head of the Church of England, during a service Sunday at Peking's Chong Wen Men Protestant church.

When the communists gained power in 1949 they expelled foreign missionaries and closed churches and seminaries. While still espousing atheism, the Chinese leadership has since taken a more lenient stance.

"We may look different, we may speak different languages, we may wear different clothes," Runcie told the parishioners as he praised them for rebuilding their church. "But we worship the same God and we try to follow the same word of Jesus Christ and that is the deepest unity we can have."

Cenus Bureau defines 'average' states

WASHINGTON (AP) — There probably is no "average" state in a nation as diverse as the United States. But some states are more typical than others.

For example, Tennessee comes closest to the national average for population, an analysis of 1980 census figures shows.

State populations cover a wide spectrum, ranging from 23,667,902 in California to 401,851 in Alaska, according to the census.

But if the national total of 226,545,805 were divided evenly among the 50 states, each would include about 4,530,000 people. Tennessee comes closest to that average with 4,591,000.

Also in the neighborhood are Wisconsin with 4,705,000, and Maryland at 4,216,000.

Nationally, 11.7 percent of Americans are black. According to Census Bureau figures, Texas comes closest to being typical with 12 percent of blacks in its population. Close by are New Jersey, 12.6 percent, and Missouri, 10.5 percent.

New Jersey also is typical in its share of Hispanics. Nationally, 6.4 percent of Americans are of Hispanic heritage. New Jersey and Nevada, both with 6.7 percent, are closest to that figure.

The Census Bureau also measured the share of the population born outside the country and calculated the total at 6.2 percent nationwide. With 6.0 percent each, Texas and Arizona were the most typical states in that category.

By age, Iowa is close to the center with a median age of its residents exactly the same as the national median, 30 years. Tennessee is close at 30.1 years, as is Ohio at 29.9 years.

About 11.3 percent of Americans are aged 65 and over, and Alaska and Arizona both match that total exactly.

Computer 'draws pictures' of brain' state during surgery

NEW YORK (AP) — Patient 25 lay on the operating table with 19 electrodes attached to his head. While the surgeon worked on the patient's heart, Roy John stood nearby with an array of computer hardware, monitoring tiny electrical impulses in the patient's brain.

"Doctor, you're about to stroke him out," John recalled saying, as he later watched a video playback of the operation. His television monitor, displaying a computer-generated "picture" of the brain, had indicated the patient was suffering below-normal blood flow, a condition that could cause stroke.

John's warning alerted the surgeon to increase the blood pressure and danger was avoided. The lack of blood was a problem the surgeon "would not be able to tell with conventional clinical measures," John said.

It took John 25 years and millions of dollars to develop the Brain State Analyzer, a computer that peers into a brain to tell a surgeon when things are going wrong.

"Our goal is to tell him, 'You're about to make a mistake,' " said John, director of the Brain Research Laboratories of the department of psychiatry at New York University Medical Center.

John calls his machine "a functional imaging device that draws pictures of the brain's state."

The device produces a picture of electrical activity in the brain and spinal cord. Changes in the electrical activity, which can be as low as one tenth of a millionth of a volt, can indicate when trouble occurs during surgery.

For example, two weeks before the operation, patient 25 suffered a mild stroke. On the Brain State Analyzer's screen, the area of the stroke was shown as bright red, which indicated poor blood flow. The rest of the brain was shown as green and brown, colors the computer used to indicate adequate flow.

As the operation began, the surgeon decreased the patient's blood pressure, a normal procedure in heart operations. Simultaneously, the green and brown areas in the computer picture turned red. Then the red turned white, indicating a dangerous condition. Too much time in that state could have caused another stroke. After John warned the doctor and the blood flow was increased, the white area turned red again.

John said studies showed that about 40 percent of high-risk patients such as patient 25 suffered some brain damage from surgery because of inadequate blood flow.

Another surgical application of the Brain State Analyzer involves nerve operations. For example, a surgeon removing tumors from a facial nerve risks paralyzing the patient's face.

In such an operation, John would stimulate the facial nerve and the Brain State Analyzer would read the nerve's response. A change in the response during the operation would mean the surgeon was getting close to cutting the nerve.

The Brain State Analyzer has been used in more than 150 cases. No brain damage or neurological problems occurred in any of them, John said.

The machines presently cost about $25,000 each. They have been installed in four hospitals in New York, Miami and Cincinnati. John said a decision would be made by the end of the year whether to manufacture the machines commercially.

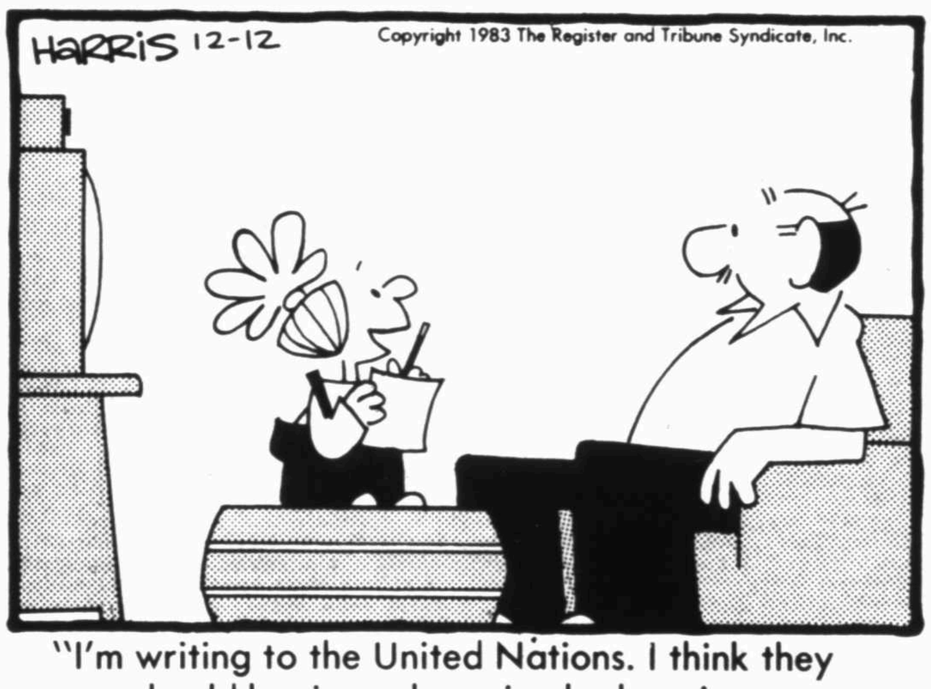
THE BETTER HALF



"I'm writing to the United Nations. I think they should begin each session by hugging each other!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, December 13, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Dick Van Dyke, producer Richard Zanuck, singer-entertainer John Davidson, actor Christopher Plummer and Chicago Cubs pitching great Ferguson Jenkins were born on this date. In the year ahead, pay greater attention to the specific roles other people play in large projects. You need to know who is really in charge and who is just sounding off. Hold your temper when delays and disruptions occur. A new friendship could turn romantic. Try not to brag to other parents about a child's accomplishments. Clever and independent, you sometimes seem unfriendly. Soften your keen wit when meeting people for the first time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you and a co-worker continue on your present collision course, it will be very difficult to avoid a confrontation. Get at the source of your antagonism and propose a compromise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You find it hard to understand a decision made by someone you expected to offer you a job. Be patient. New and better opportunities lie just ahead. Concentrate on preparing for the holidays.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Go ahead and cook up a storm! Just don't sample too much of your product! It is not too late to mail holiday goodies to loved ones living far away.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A money situation needs your personal attention. It may be time to fish or cut bait. A business opportunity will disappear if you fail to take action. Romance continues to smolder.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Education plays a role in today's events. Remain cool when under pressure and you could be promoted. A bonus may be smaller than anticipated. Property matters enjoy favorable influences.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Think before you speak. Those in charge take notice of the extra effort you are making. A raise or promotion is possible. Let your loved ones know your true feelings.

Producers may dump guests

NEW YORK (AP) — Finding the right guest for "Nightline" can be tough. But so can telling someone who's just been flattered and cajoled into coming to the studio in the middle of the night that time has run out and he's off the show.

In the television business, guest-dropping is called "dumping," and that's something Tara Sonenshine and Stephen Lewis have to do. They're associate producers, also known as guest-grabbers, for ABC News' "Nightline."

Miss Sonenshine said her job included being "a detective to track down people, a researcher to pore over files, a reporter to determine if the guest will be any good, a psychologist to convince the guest that 'Nightline' is more important than his dinner reservations, and a travel agent to make sure the guest gets there."

"And part masochist," added Lewis.

Lewis once booked a woman for a pre-Halloween broadcast who was going to warn viewers how to check for doctored goodies. "She brought in bags of candy and apples, and prepared a whole presentation," he said. "It was my first dump and it was awfully difficult telling her. She asked if she could use my office to call everybody she had told to stay up. I felt miserable."

At one time or another, science writer Isaac Asimov, Undersecretary of State Richard Holbrooke and Time magazine managing editor Ray Cave have stayed up late for nothing. "Most of them take it well," said Lewis. "Most of them come back."

In the pursuit of good guests and effective programming, feelings can get hurt and family harmony can be imperiled.

One time, "Nightline" planned a show on Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, and Lewis had room for only one author. Trouble was, the author of "Invitation to an Inquest" came in pairs: the husband-wife team of Miriam and Walter Schneir.

Lewis swallowed hard and picked Mrs. Schneir. "I had the distinct feeling that I could cause a divorce here," he said.

For another show, Lewis invited labor writer A.H. Raskin. He was game, but said his wife would be upset because they had special plans that night for their 50th wedding anniversary. "I'm bleeding," Raskin told Lewis. "But I'm coming on."

"Nightline" normally treats its guests to a moderately priced dinner. "This time, we sprung for Lutece (one of New York's ritziest restaurants)," Lewis said.

GOREN BRIDGE

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ82 ♡AQ5 ◇A874 ♣Q6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♡
2 ♠	3 ♡	3 ♠	4 ♡

What action do you take?

A. — Usually, we don't like to defend when we have four-card support for partner's suit. Here, however, our two queens are of doubtful value offensively, but at least one should be a trick on defense. Therefore, we would opt for a double of four hearts — to warn partner not to bid on. But change the queen of hearts to the queen of diamonds, and we would prefer four spades.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQJ ♡AKQ107 ◇KQJ ♣A3
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?

A. — You have a very good hand, but you have nowhere to go. Partner's jump to game over your demand bid shows a hand with good trump support, but it denies first- or second-round control of any side suit. Since you therefore have a certain diamond loser, at best your slam will depend on two finesses — not very good odds. More likely, will have no play at all. Pass.

Q.3 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ6 ♡AQJ10852 ♣KQ6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ◇	Pass	Pass

What do you bid now?

A. — Even though your partner could not act over two diamonds, you should not give up thoughts of slam. After all, partner might have both major suit kings and a key jack, and you need no more. That is why we give no marks if you chose to jump to four hearts. Also, take a demerit if you made a reopening double — your hand is tremendous offensively and not geared to defense, so you cannot run the risk that partner might convert to penalties. By a process of elimination we arrive at the winning action — a cue-bid of three diamonds.

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ6 ♡K8 ◇A865 ♣AK93
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	3 ◇
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — Something funny is going on here. You and East should have at least 33 HCP between you, so where does partner get the strength for a jump bid? Obviously, East must be taking advantage of the vulnerability for a psychic bid. You must alert your partner to the situation — cue-bid three spades.

Q.5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ93 ♡K8 ◇76 ♣9543
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Pass	1 NT	Pass
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — Partner is in the balancing seat — if he does not act, the opponents will buy the contract at one no trump. If he had a good hand, he would have acted immediately over West's opening bid by either overcalling or making a takeout double. Since he did not, the most you can expect of him is a smattering of points and long hearts. Don't penalize him for refusing to let the opponents steal the hand. Pass.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ1062 ♡3 ◇854 ♣QJ109
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	2 ♡
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?

A. — Remember the words of "The Charge of the Light Brigade": "Theirs not to reason why, Theirs but to do, or die." Partner has asked you to lead a heart so, even though you have only a singleton and a reasonable suit of your own, lead a heart. That is how you build partnership trust.

This aerial photo shows the mudslide early Sunday morning that buried an avenue in Seattle under almost six feet of mud.

Mudslide tumbles onto highway

SEATTLE (AP) — Bulldozers and dump trucks rumbled through the night to clear a Seattle highway of tons of mud and debris that thundered down a waterlogged hillside, covering the road with thick muck up to 6 feet deep.

The massive effort was mounted in hopes of reopening Aurora Avenue North, a major north-south traffic artery, before this morning's rush hour, said Ruth Mortenson of the city's Engineering Department.

No one was hurt in the Sunday morning slide down the east slope of Queen Hill, about a mile north of downtown, but the 200-foot-wide swath of muck came within a few feet of hitting two apartment buildings.

The slide destroyed a dentist's office and an abandoned gas station, overturned a car and engulfed two others, officials said. A driver who hit the mud was uninjured, police said.

"Had it happened later in the day or in a rush hour...That would've been terrible," Ms. Mortenson said. "The way the trees came down and turned the slide toward the empty property — it was amazing."

The cause of the slide was undetermined. However, the area has had nearly 3 inches of rain in the past week, more than 1½ inches Friday and Saturday.

Ling-Ling reported 'much improved'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Zoo's giant panda, Ling-Ling, was reported "much improved" Sunday in her fight against a kidney infection.

Zoo officials say they plan a new round of tests early this week to determine whether the 14-year-old panda is recovering from her illness.

"Things are certainly looking better," said assistant zoo director Devra G. Kleiman. "Behaviorally, she's much improved and she's eating very well."

Veterinarians at the zoo will anesthetize Ling-Ling Monday or Tuesday to take new blood samples, said Kleiman. He said the samples will provide a scientific measure of the panda's recovery from a bacterial kidney infection. The 227-pound panda has gradually lost weight over the past several months and her illness was diagnosed just last week.

Newlyweds reunited after snafu

NEW YORK (AP) — Flowers, hugs, kisses and tears sweetened the reunion of newlyweds whose Mexican honeymoon soured when a bureaucratic snafu kept the bride from re-entering to the United States, says an aide to a congressman.

Dr. Christopher Soprenuk greeted his wife, Marcelina, at Kennedy International Airport on Saturday, said Lynn Hurwitz, an aide to Rep. Robert Toricelli, D-N.J.

The bride, a Filipino nurse, was barred from returning because her travel documents had expired, and officials said they could take two months to replace. With Toricelli's help, Mrs. Soprenuk was granted a humanitarian parole so her papers could be processed here.

Woman mistook robbery for tribute

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — One of three people injured in a robbery attempt at a coffeehouse poetry reading in memory of a peace activist says she originally mistook the gunman for part of the tribute.

Lorenzo Davis, 25, was being held in lieu of $50,000 bond on charges of attempted murder and armed robbery, police said Sunday. Poet Nathan Butler was critically injured with a gunshot to the head and a woman was shot in the elbow when guests jumped the gunman during Friday's holdup, police said.

K.C. Caliendo, who was pistol-whipped during the robbery, said she first thought the gunman was "a crazed poet acting something out" as part of the memorial.

Woman uses UPS to ship marijuana

DEL NORTE, Colo. (AP) — A woman charged with possession of marijuana was the third town resident to be arrested for allegedly using the United Parcel Service to ship the illegal weed, police said.

Karen Lynn D'Amato was charged with possession of less than one ounce of marijuana after UPS suspicions prompted a police search of her home, Rio Grande County Sheriff John Kammerzell said. UPS reported delivering three packages a week to her home during the past year, he said.

Two other residents were convicted of the same charge last month after shipping a marijuana plant via UPS, authorities said.

Congressmen want more help in Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some members of Congress, fearing more clashes between U.S. and Syrian forces, are urging the Reagan administration to seek broader international military help in Lebanon.

The calls for more nations to assist in Lebanon were made Sunday on television interview programs by Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., acting chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, a candidate for his party's 1984 presidential nomination.

Appearing on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley," Fascell said that while "our basic purposes there are still valid," the United States should find a way to "lessen our military involvement while still maintaining our position there."

Specifically, he said, the United States should "get other countries who are closer to the action and equally as concerned or more concerned about the problems of economics and oil to put some people in there."

King Hussein of Jordan, also interviewed on "This Week," said the Palestine Liberation Organization must become involved before Jordan will engage in peace negotiations with Israel. "I have to have Palestinian support, Arab support, I have to know that we have a chance to get somewhere and so far I haven't seen any Israeli actions that would indicate that Israel is willing to changes its policies or approach," Hussein said.

Glenn said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," that the peacekeeping force in Beirut should be broadened beyond U.S., French, Italian and British troops to include other nations and all or part of the 7,000 U.N. forces now stationed in southern Lebanon.

He said he is "very much" concerned that hostilities between U.S. and Syrian forces will escalate.

"If the Syrians decide to make any move there, we are the ones who are going to be committed to oppose that," Glenn said, adding that he does not favor any "quick pullout" of U.S. forces.

He was critical of the Reagan administration's handing of the situation in Lebanon, where more than 250 U.S. servicemen have died since September 1982.

"We're working ourselves into a warlike posture there — not warlike, we're at war in effect," Glenn said. "I do not want to see that continue."

He said U.S. troops have "become a symbolic target. We're a symbolic target beyond any other nation there, and it's interfering with our mediation. It's interfering with our efforts to negotiate a peace."

Appearing on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam said the United States is "not in a hostile position against Syria...We have our forces there. We will protect them, but we're not directing anything against Syria."

Dam also said the Reagan administration remains strong in its resolve to keep the 1,600-man Marine contingent in Beirut despite growing criticism from Congress, which is in recess until Jan. 23.

Asked about a report that most of President Reagan's aides were convinced the Marines should be pulled out of Lebanon by June, no matter what happens, Dam replied:

"No, not at all. Of course, we'd like the Marines out by June. We'd like them out sooner."

But, he said, "the president...laid all such speculation to rest" by saying in a radio address Saturday that the Marines will leave Beirut "once internal stability is established and withdrawal of all foreign forces is assured."

Deputy White House press secretary Bob Sims concurred with Dam's statement, telling a reporter Sunday, "We haven't put any date on anything."

Dam said that "undoubtedly, when Congress returns in January there will be resolutions (of withdrawal) introduced" to replace the 18-month commitment it approved last fall.

He said he did not know how such attempts would fare, but some members "undoubtedly recognize that we can't just now change the ground rules and withdraw the Marines or the whole policy of the United States in the Middle East would collapse."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., also interviewed on "Face the Nation," predicted "an historic confrontation" between the president and Congress over sticking with the 18-month agreement, which he termed "a cop-out to get us beyond the presidential and congressional elections of next year."

Prosecutor makes Pentagon 'waste not'

By TIM AHERN

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may be ridiculous for the Pentagon to pay $436 for a simple hammer that can be purchased in any hardware store for $7. But is it illegal?

That's the type of question Richard Sauber has spent the past year trying to figure out.

The 33-year-old Justice Department criminal prosecutor heads the Defense Procurement Fraud Unit, a team of investigators and prosecutors set up in October 1982 by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Attorney General William French Smith.

Sauber's small unit has the job of investigating Defense Department contracts, a daunting task in an agency that spends almost $700 million a day.

His team has won a dozen convictions that saved the taxpayers almost $4 million, while another 40 investigations are in various stages of completion, Sauber said in a recent interview. In addition, local U.S. attorneys have prosecuted another 25 or 30 cases that might not have been filed had they not been pushed by Sauber's group, he noted.

The biggest case yet came Friday, when Sperry Corp. was fined a total of $847,000 by a federal court in Minneapolis after the contractor pleaded guilty to three counts of making false statments on payment requests. The case involved charges that work being done by Sperry employees on the MX missile was being charged against a contract for an airborne launch control system.

"The unit was created to try to bring investigators and prosecutors together in the beginning stages of an investigation," Sauber said. "That hadn't been done before.

"Previously, investigators had simply dumped the cases onto the prosecutors' desks. It's a lot easier when we're in it from the beginning," he said.

The Pentagon, the largest federal agency, lets thousands of contracts a year to purchase thousands of different items. Traditionally, relatively few contractors have been charged with criminal activity despite dozens of revelations about waste and cost overruns. Normally, civil and administration actions have been used against violators.

In recent months, renewed attention has been focused on Pentagon buying practices because of a spate of what Weinberger calls "horror stories" about ridiculously high prices for spare parts — such as the $436 hammer.

But Navy Secretary John Lehman says investigators have discovered "little criminal intent" in the spare parts scandals, a statement Sauber agrees with. Rather, Lehman says, the high prices are due to purchasing agents buying items by number rather than description, inattention to detail, and a system which seldom punishes people who sign bad contracts.

Among the estimated 40 cases Sauber's unit is investigating are a half-dozen cases of alleged "time mischarging," similar to the Sperry case, in which contractors may be billing the government for workers' time that was actually spent on another project.

Most large contractors have several or more defense projects going at once. For example, Sauber said, a workers' time might be billed to a fighter plane contract when the employee was actually working on a bomber. Checking such a case involves going through thousands of time-card records.

Another half-dozen investigations focus on allegations of small-product switching, such as a contractor providing a cheap bolt when a more expensive bolt has been contracted for.

There are another dozen investigations of alleged collusion between government purchasing agents and contractors, involving allegations that agents were paid cash to favor a contractor.

"We're also trying to educate the people in the U.S. attorney's offices around the country," said Sauber. "We've got about 60 prosecutors in the various offices who are working on Pentagon procurement cases."

Starlings abandon bridge before its collapse

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Thousands of starlings gradually left a major highway bridge years before a collapse of the span killed three people, and an Audubon official says the birds may have been shooed by vibrations in the structure.

The Interstate 95 bridge over the Mianus River collapsed June 28. Some experts have said the vibrations of passing traffic coupled with rust and a poor bridge design led to the collapse.

Marshall Case, regional vice president of the National Audubon Society, said "starlings have superior instincts. They pick up things far before the human ear does. They may have felt the vibrations before people were able to."

The Greenwich Audubon society for years had counted the bird population under the bridge as part of an annual statewide Christmas bird count. It recorded the population as 120,000 in 1972, but only 52,000 in 1978.

In December 1979, the number dropped to 12,000, and the next year to only six. In 1981, the birds were none.

"Any explanation would have to be conjecture," Case said. He said no one seemed "astute enough" at the time to speculate about the abandonment.
