On high-fiber diets

BOSTON — Eating large amounts of soluble fiber, such as beans and oat bran, is slightly more effective than consuming insoluble fiber for lowering cholesterol levels, a study finds. Eating lots of high-fiber foods takes the place of saturated fat and cholesterol in the diet, and this helps keep down cholesterol levels. 7A

Judge derails trade pact

Ruling cites border environmental concerns

■ Action is almost certain to jeopardize agreement's already uncertain prospects in Congress.

By Maria Recio
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In a decision that sent shock waves from Mexico City to Montreal, a U.S. District Court ruled Wednesday that the Clinton administration cannot proceed with the North American Free Trade Agreement until it assesses the accord's impact on the environment.

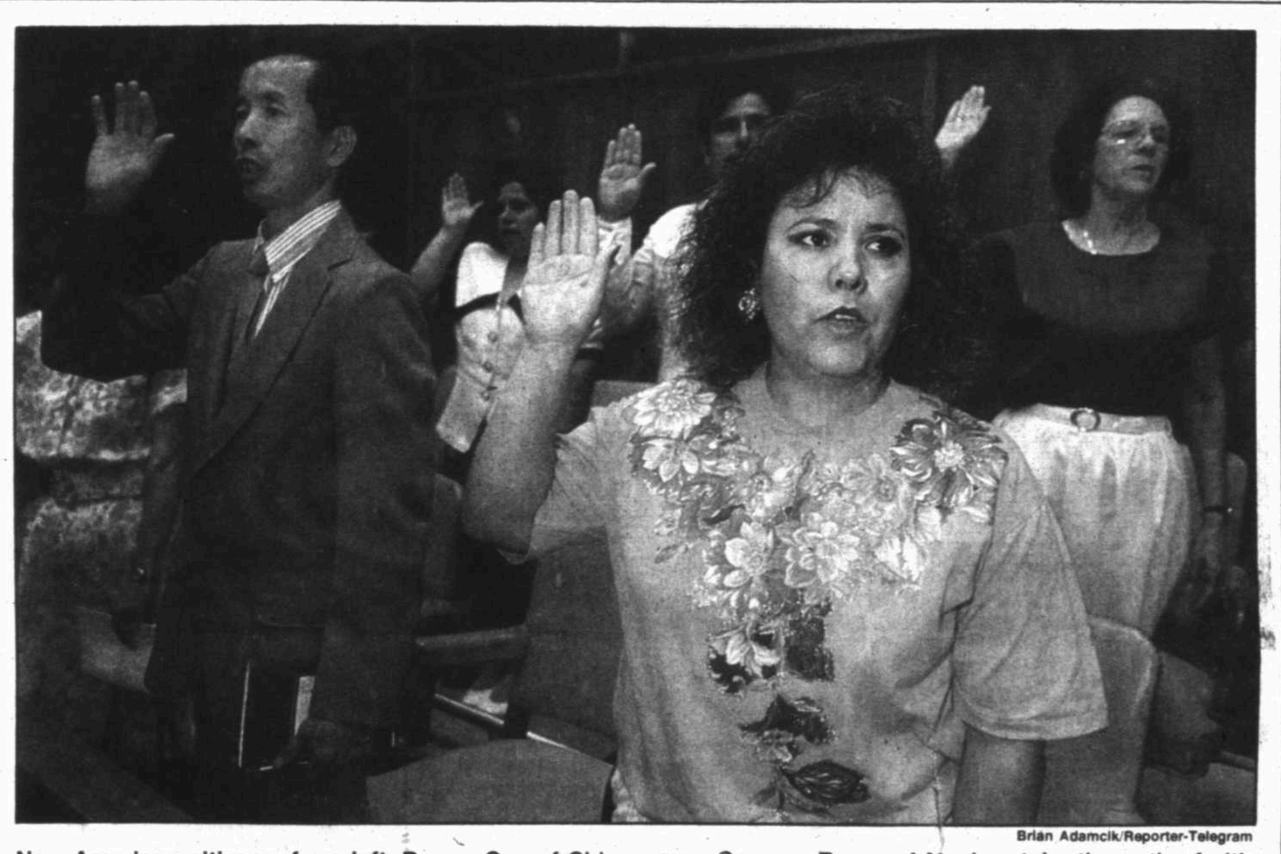

The administration said it would appeal the ruling. But the court's action is almost certain to jeopardize the agreement's already uncertain prospects in Congress.

Environmental impact statements can take months or years to complete. The White House had been hoping to have Congress approve the trade agreement by January.

Three environmental groups, the Sierra Club, Public Citizen and Friends of the Earth, successfully argued that the accord should not be sent to Congress for ratification until the administration calculates the environmental effects.

"The court finds that there is a reasonable risk that NAFTA may cause environmental injury," wrote Judge Charles Richey, who went on to rule that the U.S. trade

60 new citizens get jump on flag-waving

Sixty area residents will join in the celebration of Independence Day Sunday with a never-before-felt glow of patriotism as they spend their first holiday as American citizens.

Family and friends of the new citizens waved American flags enthusiastically at the conclusion of the naturalization ceremony conducted Wednesday in the courtroom of the federal courthouse in Midland.

Visiting U.S. District Judge Walter Smith officiated the ceremony for federal Judge Lucius Bunton, who was attending a funeral.

The applicants for citizenship stood as they raised their right hands and declared on oath swearing their allegiance to the United States of America.

Some of the new citizens cried tears of joy while others beamed smiles from ear to ear. One woman, who was wearing a red, white and blue corsage was handed a bouquet of flowers after she took the vows.

Members of the Daughters of the American Revolution handed out the American flags for the new citizens as well as their family and friends who came to watch.

"We are proud to have new citizens and we strive for education in patriotic endeavors in respect to our ancestors who provided us with this 200 years ago," said Mrs. James Ormond, a member of the Col. Theunis Dey Chapter of the DAR.

One of the new citizens, Angelica San Miguel of Mexico, said she felt "satisfied" about being an American and "finally being able to experience" what it is all about.

During the ceremony, U.S. Magistrate Louis Guirola spoke to the new citizens from the point of view of a son of Cuban immigrants who became naturalized citizens while he was a child.

American pulls DC-9s, begins turboprop runs

■ Switch to affect cargo service used by oil firms, racing engine shop.

By Darren J. Waggoner

American Airlines — concerned with the lagging demand for four daily flights to Dallas — pulled its jetliners out of Midland today and reassigned 19 employees to various hubs across the nation, airline officials said Wednesday.

One person, who had not earned enough seniority, was laid off and 11 others quit their jobs in favor of staying in the Midland/Odessa area, officials said.

American officials said they were losing money on the 12-year-old jet service from Midland because the average flight had about 100 empty seats out of 142 available seats — or a two-thirds vacancy rate.

As a result of the removal of the four DC-9 Super 80s, the airline's parent company — AMR Corp. — has scheduled eight daily flights for American Eagle's turboprops, operated by AMR

Networks agree to slap warning adviseries on violent TV shows

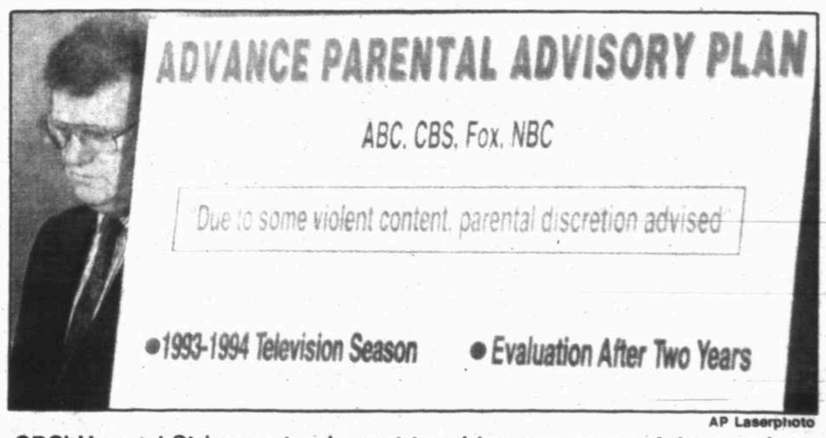

By Diane Duston
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Starting this fall, shows on the four major television networks will carry parental warnings about violent content, but don't look for programs like "L.A. Law," "Cops" or "America's Most Wanted" to be among them.

Some people may consider them violent, but executives for ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox said Wednesday none of the currently aired series is brutal enough to regularly qualify for the voluntary advisories, though some episodes might.

ABC's new police drama, "N.Y.P.D. Blue" will carry a warning each week, said Tom Murphy, chairman of Capital Cities-ABC. It's the only regular series on any network that will routinely be labeled for violence, the executives said at a news conference.

Condom rape: Jurors testify as defendant seeks new trial

AUSTIN (AP) — A man sentenced to 40 years in prison for raping a woman who asked him to wear a condom sought a new trial Wednesday as jurors in the case testified about allegations of misconduct during their deliberations.

Joel Valdez, 28, was convicted in May of raping an Austin woman at knifepoint during an early-morning attack in her apartment in 1992.

The case drew national attention after a grand jury declined to indict Valdez, drawing outrage from the community and women's groups. A second grand jury indicted Valdez.

The victim said her request for her attacker to wear a condom was a desperate attempt to fight off AIDS and other diseases. Valdez testified the condom meant consent.

DERAILS: Judge freezes free-trade pact representative's office is subject to the National Environmental Policy Act.

(From 1A)

Both the Clinton administration and Bush administration, which negotiated the accord, had contended that the act — requiring environmental impact statements on significant government actions affecting the environment — did not apply to the free-trade accord.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor challenged the court's conclusions and said the administration will immediately appeal the decision.

"It will not alter our schedule," he said, adding that negotiations on side deals on the environment and labor standards would continue.

Kantor argued that the requirement to file an environmental impact statement "interferes with the president's ability to negotiate international trade agreements." He said it also harms Clinton's prospects of negotiating a strong side agreement expressly designed to protect the environment.

Public Citizen analyst Chris McGinn said, "We see this as compliance with the law." He estimated that an impact statement evaluating the health and safety implications of the deal would take from six to nine months to complete.

The free-trade pact, which would create open borders for trade in this hemisphere, is a cornerstone of U.S. trade policy and supporters expressed frustration over the setback.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said, "The ruling of a single district judge in Washington, D.C., is hardly a reflection of judicial opinion. I feel confident that this judge will be overturned."

As to Mexico's environmental record, Gramm noted, "No poor nation in the world does a good job of protecting its environment, but free trade would mean more growth on both sides of the border."

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, said the ruling was "the worst form of judicial activism," and Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., charged that "the judge has simply determined the result he wished."

WARNINGS: Violent TV shows to carry tags

(From 1A)

Cartoons won't carry such warnings, nor will any athletic events.

CBS has a new show, "Walker, Texas Ranger," starring Chuck Norris, noted Howard Stringer, president of CBS Broadcast Group. "The Europeans are terrified we might take the karate out of it. I don't think we'll go that far. But we will look at it and we will make our individual judgments on that program."

The Big Four can take the lead with these warnings, but can't control syndicators who sell shows to cable or independent stations, said the network executives, including Warren Littlefield, president of NBC Entertainment and George Vradenburg, executive vice president of Fox Television.

Cable executives will be considering some kind of action. Ted Turner already has said he'd put advisories on his cable networks, noted Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who appeared the executives's session with reporters.

President Clinton wrote letters to CBS, NBC, ABC, TBS and Fox applauding the action and saying: "For the health of our society and the American family, we must continue to find ways to limit the excessive portrayal of violence in our television programming."

Viewers likely will see the advisories most often on televised movies, which in recent seasons have been the leading purveyors of violent fare.

But no one expects the networks always to hit it right with the shows they choose to precede with: "Due to some violent content, parental discretion advised."

Should a scene in which parents scream at one another in front of a child be considered violent? How about shoving between children or a child and an adult? Or a docudrama on racial injustice involving mistreatment of a minority?

Some people consider hockey and football more violent than police dramas. Will Americans ever unite over what they don't want their children to see?

The networks are prepared for more criticism.

Besides starting a show with the advisory, they'll re-broadcast it during station breaks and give newspapers and magazines advance notice of which programs have violent content.

VOTE: House retains abortion-funds ban

(From 1A)

foes cast that position as on the "radical fringes."

The vote was not close. House members approved, 255-178, an amendment by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., to bar all federal funds for abortion except to save the life of a mother or in cases of rape or incest.

The size of the margin was a blow to the hopes of abortion-rights advocates for future battles. Still to come: congressional debate on the Freedom of Choice Act, which would limit restrictions states can impose, and a decision on whether abortion should be covered in the administration's health care package of benefits.

With 114 newcomers in the House this year, both sides eyed the federal-funding vote as a barometer. About one-fourth of the first-term Democrats voted with Hyde; nearly all of the Republicans did.

Since President Clinton favors abortion rights and had backed a repeal of the Hyde amendment, abortion rights supporters had hoped for a different outcome on the ban, which was added to a Medicaid spending bill later sent to the Senate.

"Everybody thought this was a much more pro-choice Congress, and this was a kinder, gentler Congress, and this was the year of the woman," said Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo. "We found out we were wrong."

FLIGHTS: Decision to affect cargo service

(From 1A)

subsidiary Simmons Airlines.

Tim Smith, a spokesperson for American at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, said the company doesn't anticipate any major problems with passenger service.

"We're trying to more closely match demand to the area, while enhancing service at the same time," he said. "We think it's going to do quite well. There will be fewer jets but more departures per day — and that's particularly important to businessmen."

Locally, American's decision is expected to affect cargo service used by local oil companies and a local racing engine shop.

VDS Racing Inc. Engine Shop, for example, regularly transports engines weighing as much as 400 pounds on American's jets. Southwest Airlines has a freight limit of 100 pounds per item, although Continental Airlines does not have a set limit.

Franz Weis, general manager of VDS Racing Inc. — the exclusive maker of Chevrolet Indy-style racing cars — said American's decision is a definite concern for his company.

"It's a real mess. We were relying heavily on American for our shipments," he said. "I hope they consider bringing at least one jet back before long."

Weis said his company will utilize an AMR-operated daily trucking service to and from Dallas.

"American has been good to us, we don't want to change to Continental. We'll see if we can get along without the jets. It's going to be a tough haul," Weis said.

Many members of American's Midland ground crew are speculating that the jets will return to Midland within six months to a year, but perhaps with only two or three daily flights instead of four.

But Smith said American has no plans for a possible return of the DC-9s.

American officials, meanwhile, are bracing for what could be the most turbulent day in the history of the company. Besides the changeover in Midland, officials are replacing the jet service out of Baton Rouge, La., with American Eagle flights and beginning a massive downsizing effort at hubs in San Jose, Calif., Reno, Nev., and Louisville, Ky.

The eight daily American Eagle flights from Midland — five of which will have 64-seat capacities and three with 34-seat capacities — will have flight attendant service, full stand-up cabins, overhead bins and the same amount of legroom in coach class. The flights do not offer first-class service.

The two other airlines with significant jet service from Midland — Southwest and Continental — do not anticipate a drastic change in daily flights or fares as a result of American's decision.

"There will be fewer seats in the market but that will be closer in tune with the needs of the area," said Sherri Hull, Midland/Odessa marketing manager for Southwest Airlines. "But it's still hard to tell how the market will react — we should be able to tell after a month or two."

She said that Southwest Airlines will continue its service of eight daily flights to Dallas Love Field and 11 daily departures to Houston's Hobby Airport.

Continental Airline officials in Denver said they also believe there will be no change in service or fares.

Local Continental officials did not return calls Wednesday.

RAPE: Two jurors testify

(From 1A)

Sharyle Solis were the key witnesses Wednesday in attempts by defense attorneys to get a new trial for Valdez on grounds of jury misconduct.

The two women claimed the jury foreman, Terry Glenn Morris, convinced them to change their vote from a 20-year sentence to 40 years because he assured them Valdez would have to serve only seven years before getting paroled.

The judge's instructions to the jury had said Valdez must serve one-fourth of his sentence — in Valdez's case, 10 years — before becoming eligible for parole.

Prosecutors attempted to refute much of Ms. Solis's testimony and called other jurors who testified there was no confusion that Valdez would have to serve 10 years of a 40-year sentence.

District Judge Bob Perkins said he would rule on the matter today.

"I believed Mr. Morris because he was the head of the jury and I thought he knew what he was doing," Ms. Padilla said. "When he said he (Valdez) will come out in that time (seven years), I switched my vote to 40 years. I would have voted for 20."

Ms. Solis also testified that Morris unduly influenced her decision.

"Mr. Morris asserted as a fact that seven years is all Mr. Valdez would receive," she said.

But under cross examination by prosecutor Dayna Blazey, Ms. Solis acknowledged saying in a taped interview that Morris never influenced her decision during deliberations.

Other jurors in the case testified that Morris's comments were never seriously considered.

"Based on his understanding of the penal system, he (Morris) said Valdez might get seven years," said juror John Lowry, a prosecution witness. "I told him to shut up, that we weren't supposed to talk about parole. It was clear he (Morris) was not extremely knowledgeable of parole laws."

JUMP: 60 new citizens to join celebration

them to become citizens. Therefore, I can only assume, that it is equally important to each of you who has petitioned to become citizens of the greatest nation in the world," Guirola said to the group.

"Sometimes it is difficult for people who are natural-born citizens of the United States to truly appreciate the privilege of being born in this country," Guirola said. "It is difficult for them to appreciate these individuals, such as yourselves, who desire to be citizens of the United States."

The magistrate recalled his father's words when he explained to him the importance of becoming a U.S. citizen.

"He said, 'Son, you have the God-given good fortune to have been born in the United States. Your mother and I today are going to become citizens of this country because we choose to and because we want to be citizens of a country where opportunity is available and stands ready to be grasped by any individual ready to take it'," Guirola recalled.

He said that as he grew up, the words began to mean more to him. He said the idea of a country welcoming and embracing his immigrant parents and allowing them to become American citizens has left him with one overwhelming thought.

"The United States of America, in my opinion, and I'm sure that you all hold the same opinion, is the greatest nation on earth," Guirola said as he gave a brief history of the framing of the U.S. Constitution.

Irene Prado, an immigration examiner from the Immigration and Naturalization Services in El Paso, said knowing the history that Guirola cited was part of the requirement for the applicants to become citizens. They had to pass an exam that covered the history and the government of the United States.

Ms. Prado added that for these people to become citizens they had to complete a timely process.

She said legal resident aliens must have lived in the U.S. for at least five years before taking the exam, in English, to become a citizen.

She said the 20-50 rule can apply for others. To qualify for that process a resident must have legal status and have lived in this country for 20 years and those over 55 who have lived in the U.S. for at least 15 years can qualify. These applicants can take the test in their native language.

The 60 new citizens come from 11 countries, including one from Cambodia, three from China; two from Colombia; one from Great Britain; one from Honduras; two from India; one from Korea; one from Sierra Leone; one from Spain; one from Vietnam and 46 from Mexico.

She said the oldest applicant is 76 and the youngest was a set of 19-year-old twins.

Ms. Prado said having the naturalization ceremony in Midland benefits the residents by allowing them to have their family and friends attend the ceremony without having to travel to El Paso where they are conducted about once a month.

UNLUCKY: Lottery winner says money isn't everything had no pressure. I didn't have the worries. I had friends. I could go places and do things even though I didn't have money."

Now, the 53-year-old Post sits in his rundown mansion about 90 miles north of Pittsburgh. His regular companions are a pack of cigarettes and the blotted out tattoo on his arm.

A malfunctioning security system beeps in the background, reminding Post that smoke detectors, like light fixtures and drapes, have been ripped from the walls and ceilings. Post said he sold some of those things for cash. He believes others were stolen.

Most of the furniture is gone. The lawnmower is missing, and the weeds and grass in the front yard tickle visitors' kneecaps. The backyard swimming pool is filled with sand and brush.

It's a dump, but Post said he can't do anything about it because he has no cash. If something doesn't change soon, the bank will own the dump. His mortgage is past due.

"I'm totally at a standstill," Post said. "There is nowhere to go. There is nothing I can do."

His 50-year-old brother, Jeffrey, was arrested Friday in Sarasota, Fla., and charged with plotting to kill Post and his sixth wife, Constance. A police informant told investigators he was hired by the brother to make the job look like a murder-suicide.

Weeks before, Post eliminated Jeff, another brother, Edward, and a sister, Patricia, as beneficiaries of his future lottery payments, which run for 20 more years. He listed Constance, with whom he has separated and reconciled numerous times, alone on a document filed with the Pennsylvania Lottery Commission.

If he and Constance died, the annual checks of $497,000 after taxes would revert to his estate, but Post said he hadn't changed his will, so the money would have gone to his siblings and his two daughters.

Post said he plans to change his will to cut out his siblings.

Some of his relatives said Post's problems were his own doing. They said he spent unwisely and auctioned off personal property when he ran short of cash.

Until then, Post can't touch the money.

But he's accustomed to having money out of his reach.

Post's mother died when he was 8 and his father couldn't care for the four siblings.

At 15, Post ran away from an orphanage where he said a nun cracked him across the knuckles with a wooden club if he misbehaved. He said he used a fake birth certificate to enlist in the National Guard and Army before working as a laborer, painter and a variety of other jobs.

About six years ago, he headed to Florida with an offer to run a ride in a traveling carnival. He said it turned out to be slave labor, so he took another job cooking and driving a tractor-trailer for a circus.

When that grew old, he headed back to his hometown, Erie, and soon noticed a growing jackpot in the Super 7, one of Pennsylvania's lottery games.

He played it for the first time that week and didn't win. The next week, on Feb. 24, 1988, to be exact, he bought about $40 worth of tickets and was one of two winners who split a $32.4 million jackpot.

Inspector: Iraqi atomic weapons are gone

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq no longer has a nuclear weapons program, and reports that it retained a secret underground plutonium reactor are false, a U.N. inspector said Wednesday.

"The program is stopped," inspector Bob Kelley, a nuclear scientist from Los Alamos, New Mexico, told reporters on his return with a 10-member team from Baghdad. Kelley called reports of a secret reactor "nonsense."

"There just isn't any evidence it exists," he said.

He said Iraq may still be hiding some nuclear capability, but said: "Is there anything significant that's hidden? I think not and that's on the record."

"They can build fast, but they'd have to start from scratch. Before mushrooms can sprout, they'd have to spend billions.

— Bob Kelley, U.N. inspector

Inspectors from the International Atomic Energy Agency have spent the past two years observing the dismantling of about $2 billion worth of nuclear facilities in Iraq under terms of the Gulf War cease-fire.

Kelley said further observation was needed to prevent Iraq from reviving its nuclear weapons program, but said it would be difficult and costly for Iraq to try to do so.

"They can build fast, but they'd have to start from scratch. Before mushrooms can sprout, they would have to spend billions," he said.

Iraq's clandestine nuclear weapons program came to light after a U.S.-led alliance drove occupying Iraqi troops out of Kuwait in the 1991 Gulf War. Iraq denied it was trying to build a nuclear bomb. But U.N. inspectors said they seized documents showing Iraq had an extensive nuclear weapons program.

At 32, Princess Diana starts new life alone

By Leslie Shepherd
Associated Press writer

LONDON — As she reaches the ripe old age of 32 today, Princess Diana is building a new life as a single woman and working mother.

It's a life that almost certainly excludes being crowned queen.

Royal watchers predict her separation from Prince Charles, heir to the throne, will end in divorce, possibly as early as December 1994, after the two years of separation required by British law.

"The Princess of Wales, speaking privately . . . does not believe she'll ever become queen," said Andrew Morton, the journalist whose 1992 biography exposed her fairytale marriage was in shambles.

"I think it's most likely in a year's time, (Prime Minister) John Major will get up in the House of Commons and will announce the divorce of the Prince and Princess of Wales," said Morton, author of "Diana, Her True Story."

Nigel Dempster, the doyen of Britain's gossip columnists, says she's in the market for a new home near or on the 8,000-acre estate of her brother, Earl Spencer.

A divorce, while further tarnishing the battered image of the British crown, would leave Diana free to remarry while she is still young enough to have more children.

Although she is not romantically linked with anyone, the willowy blonde princess would be one of the most eligible women in the world.

Morton predicts she would "become a kind of Jackie O figure, forever going around the world . . . and always taking the limelight away from the Prince of Wales."

Until then, Diana's life centers on her children, Princes William, 11, and Harry, 8, her charity work and salad-and-designer-water lunches with trusted friends.

Diana has one of the busiest schedules of any member of the royal family, and is patron of some 100 organizations including British Red Cross Youth.

Israeli doctors vote not to assist government torture

JERUSALEM — The Israeli Medical Association says secret police are trying to make doctors accomplices to torture by asking whether detainees are fit to be hooded, chained or forced to stand for long periods.

The group ordered its members not to respond to such questions because that would constitute "complicity with torture," the head of the association, Dr. Miriam Zangen, wrote in a letter to Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, made public Wednesday.

International and Israeli human rights groups maintain that Shin Bet secret police interrogators systematically torture Palestinian detainees to extract confessions. Israel denies the charges, though it permits "moderate physical pressure" against detainees.

The latest controversy involves a completed questionnaire that surfaced in May at an army detention center in the occupied West Bank town of Tulkarem. The form asked the attending physician whether there were any limitations to putting a prisoner in solitary confinement, chaining, hooding or blindfolding him or making him stand for long periods.

A blank copy of the form has been obtained by The Associated Press.

A Somali boy, with his hands up, passes through a U.S. Army checkpoint in Mogadishu Wednesday. After several incidents with Somali gunmen in the last few days, security measures were increased and the search for weapons was intensified.

U.S. forces in Somalia launch strikes against rogue warlord

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — U.S. helicopters blasted a suspected militia base with missiles and cannon fire, and ground troops swept through refugee camps in a crackdown Wednesday on gunmen linked to warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

The troops seized rifles, grenades, mortars and other weapons and used TOW missiles to destroy a compound alleged to be a staging ground for attacks on U.N. troops, said Maj. David Stockwell, the U.N. military spokesman.

The air and ground assaults, staged back-to-back by the U.S. Army's elite Quick Reaction Force, indicate a growing sense of frustration with the gunmen, who have become increasingly bold as they seek to undermine the U.N. military operation in Somalia.

Two Pakistani soldiers have been killed, and two Americans and three Pakistanis have been wounded in midday sniping attacks in the past week. Last week, an American ship was damaged by a rocket-propelled grenade fired into Mogadishu's port.

Barricades, once only a nuisance, now sometimes conceal enemy snipers.

Stockwell said roadblocks and barricades that were once just a nuisance to military patrols have lately become ambush sites where gunmen lie in wait for troops.

The military compound targeted Wednesday was the site where the Pakistanis were killed in a gunbattle two days earlier, Stockwell said. It was also believed to house gunmen who wounded the Americans on Sunday. It belonged to Aidid's principal financial backer, Osman Atto, whose other compounds have been targeted in earlier U.N. raids.

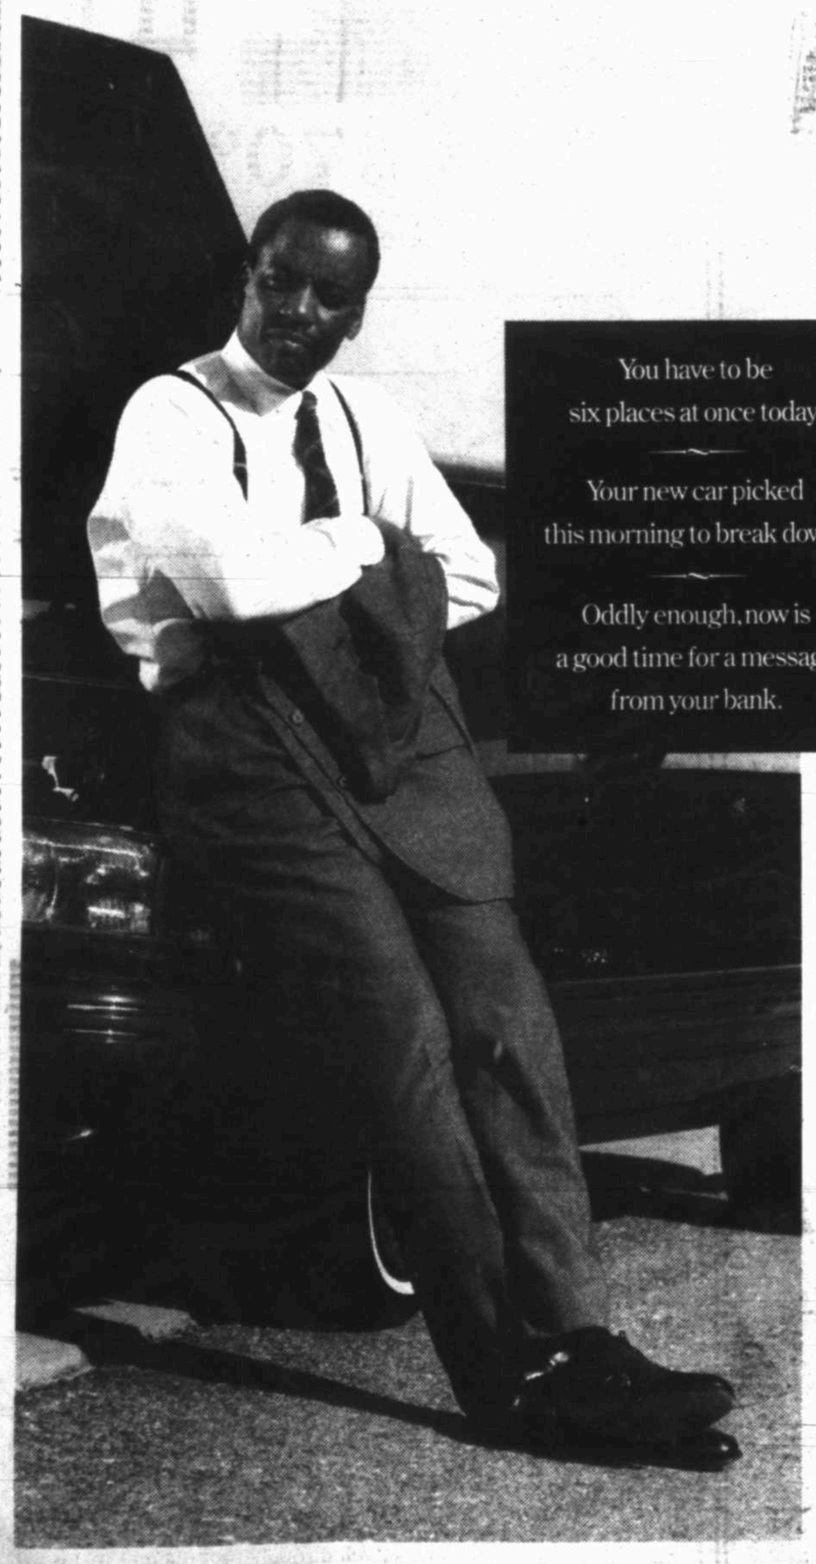

Atto claims the compounds are auto wrecking yards and garages, but the military says they are used to manufacture and store weapons and ammunition.

Six Cobra attack helicopters, guided by five Delta scout helicopters and backed by two heavily armed Blackhawk choppers, struck the compound with two TOW missiles and 20mm cannons. Stockwell said loudspeakers warned residents before the attack began and there was no return fire.

Later, angry Somalis refused to let journalists near the burning compound.

Before dawn, scores of troops cordoned off an area near the airport and began a seven-hour search of buildings and refugee camps for weapons. They found rifles, grenades and a 40 mm mortar, and detained two men for questioning, Stockwell said.

Acid-filled tanker flounders off Mexican Pacific resort

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A tanker full of highly corrosive sulfuric acid was aground in heavy seas Wednesday near a Pacific Coast resort and leaking slightly, the Mexican navy reported.

"There are heavy seas and quite a big storm, making salvage work difficult. But the leaks are slight," Mexican navy spokesman Carlos Ferreira said in a telephone interview.

The Norwegian tanker Betula got stuck in the sand near the resort of Playa Azul, some 250 miles southwest of Mexico City late Tuesday or early Wednesday after drifting for a day.

The tanker had been unloading the acid in the port of Lazaro Cardenas when the pumping mechanism started leaking acid into the water. The crew was evacuated and the Betula towed out to sea, but the tow cable snapped and the tanker started drifting.

German troops close borders to refugees

BONN, Germany (AP) — As troop reinforcements head east to seal Germany's borders to refugees, its neighbors are preparing their own deportation laws to avoid being swamped by the castoffs.

Germany's restrictive new asylum law takes effect Thursday. It marks a turning point in Europe's policy toward a mass migration from the poor and war-torn nations of the south and east.

Whether they are Sri Lankans fleeing civil war or Romanian Gypsies facing discrimination, refugees trying to enter Germany by land won't be allowed in. They won't even have the chance to prove they are running for their lives.

In a domino effect, transit countries are preparing their own restrictions.

"After the Cold War we were going to build a common European house. But instead we're building a European fortress, surrounded by walls," said Herbert Leuninger, spokesman for Pro-Asyl, a German lobby for refugees.

Germany's 44-year-old asylum policy, written into the constitution to atone for the Nazis' persecution of foreigners, essentially let all refugees stay here for an unlimited time.

The policy made Germany the primary European refuge for asylum-seekers. More than 2 million arrived since 1989, including 438,000 last year.

Politicians scrapped the policy because they said it was fueling neo-Nazi violence and draining social welfare coffers. "Economically, Germany cannot afford this stream forever," said Roland Bachmeier, spokesman for Interior Minister Rudolf Seiters.

On May 29, the day after Parliament passed the new law, five Turks died in a firebombing in Solingen.

Under the new policy, asylum-seekers who arrive from a European Community country or one bordering Germany will be immediately sent back to those nations.

Asylum-seekers arriving in Germany by airplane or ship will have a chance to prove they are fleeing a country at war or run by a dictator.

Housing trust fund offers good plan

Adequate affordable housing for all of Midland's residents has been a goal of Midland city and county officials for years. The problem has been attacked through the years in various ways — housing finance programs, housing repair and rehabilitation efforts, and so forth — with a degree of success. Affordable housing has continued to be one of this community's top priorities nonetheless.

Recently, however, the goal of affordable housing got a significant boost through creation of a housing trust fund involving both the city and the county.

Spawned by a report from the Enterprise Foundation in Maryland which cited numerous barriers in Midland to a comfortable standard of living the housing trust fund will be used to establish an advisory committee to oversee fund-raising efforts for national, state and local housing-related grants. Initially, the fund will be comprised of $1 million from the City of Midland Housing Finance Corp. and $250,000 from the county's Housing Finance Corp.

The program, administered by the Permian Basin Area Foundation, will take an umbrella approach to addressing the problem of inadequate housing for this area's residents. Since it will be administered locally, the program should be able to pinpoint particular areas of housing need and meet those through the available options.

Jack Swallow, executive director of the Permian Basin Area Foundation, noted the advantage to the housing fund when he said, "The simple fact is that with the creation of this fund, we will have the ability to attract more money, which will be put into various housing programs."

The advisory committee will determine the best programs in which to invest funds, such as Habitat for Humanity, technical assistance for Midland Neighborhood Housing Services, or a loan program for interim financing for first-time homebuyers.

The housing trust fund sounds like a perfect way to attack the problem of inadequate housing in Midland. If more affordable housing can be made available to Midland residents through it, then it will be worthwhile.

OTHER VIEWS

High court's decision will put confidence in justice

The U.S. Supreme Court Monday finally agreed with what our county officials have been telling anyone who will listen for years: It isn't right to make counties take the physical and financial responsibility for state prisoners.

The court's decision let stand lower court rulings ordering the state to take it's prisoners, those sentenced to state penitentiaries, out of Harris County jails. Harris and Angelina counties were the only two in the state deemed unconstitutional for exceeding their jail caps.

The decision ended a 21-year lawsuit within two weeks of the brief being submitted to the court. How's that for swift justice? It upholds about $13 million in payments by the state to Harris County as reimbursement for holding state-ready inmates in its facilities. It also pays another $35 million for alternate sentencing in that county.

The state's previous practice was about as unfair as you can get. Now that the highest court in the land has ended this arm wrestling match between the counties and the state, maybe our local officials and taxpayers can regain some confidence in our justice system.

Cutting defense budget puts pain on numerous civilians

Base closings are necessary at this time when the Cold War is over and money is hard to come by. Almost everyone agrees with that. What's more, the Department of Defense was not created — and is not financed — to be a jobs program. But it is one thing to cavalierly say, "Cut the defense budget" and quite another to devastate an entire community.

For we must remember that most of these cuts do not affect military personnel so much as their civilian counterparts. The Naval Shipyard at Mare Island, Vallejo, Calif., which will be closed, employes 6,369 civilians and only 181 military personnel. The doomed Naval Shipyard at Charleston, S.C. has 5,771 civilians and 58 military personnel.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 1, the 182nd day of 1993. There are 183 days left in the year. This is Canada Day.

Today's highlight in history:

One-hundred years ago, on July 1, 1893, President Cleveland underwent a secret operation to remove a cancerous growth from the roof of his mouth. The procedure, which took place aboard a friend's yacht as it sailed up New York's East River, was successful.

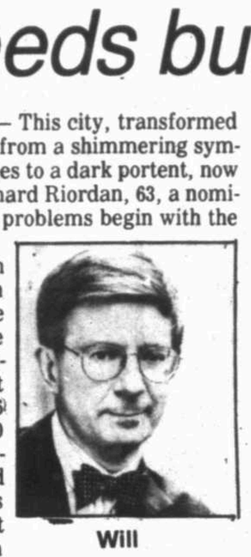

On this date:

In 1535, Sir Thomas More went on trial in England, charged with treason for rejecting the Oath of Supremacy.

GEORGE WILL

LA needs business, not bureaucrats

LOS ANGELES — This city, transformed in a generation from a shimmering symbol of possibilities to a dark portent, now has a new mayor, Richard Riordan, 63, a nominal Republican whose problems begin with the civic culture itself.

Will

When Mayor Tom Bradley was elected in 1973, 674,555 people voted. Since then the city has grown by almost that many, but this year only 598,436 voted. A city where 40 percent of all households have unlisted telephone numbers is experiencing a great withdrawal — from public life, including public schools, into gated neighborhoods, or just indoors, or to suburbs. Why? Begin with fear.

In 1970 vehicular accidents killed more than twice as many people as gunshot homicides. In 1991 gunshots killed more than vehicular accidents did. Says Riordan, old businesses are leaving, new businesses will not locate in combat zones, tourists are going elsewhere and children do not learn in an insecure environment.

Riordan won a majority of voters earning $20,000 to $40,000, including many entrepreneurial immigrants — Latinos and Asians —whose work ethic causes them to revolt against what they see as a welfare ethic.

The contraction of defense industries need not be a calamity. In the 18 months after V-J Day in 1945 Los Angeles lost 232,000 of 300,000 defense jobs. But in the immediate postwar years one in eight of the nation's new jobs were created in the Los Angeles area, which still is the nation's largest manufacturing area.

The greatest service Riordan, a venture capitalist, could render, would be to make the city government less harmful. Scores of permits and many months are required to get a business started; it is increasingly difficult to get a business to thrive in this high-tax and regulation-saturated environment.

The education system is not furnishing a competent work force.

Riordan, a Catholic philanthropist with an admirable record of involvement with inner city education, says Catholic schools are getting much better results than public schools at less than one-third the cost.

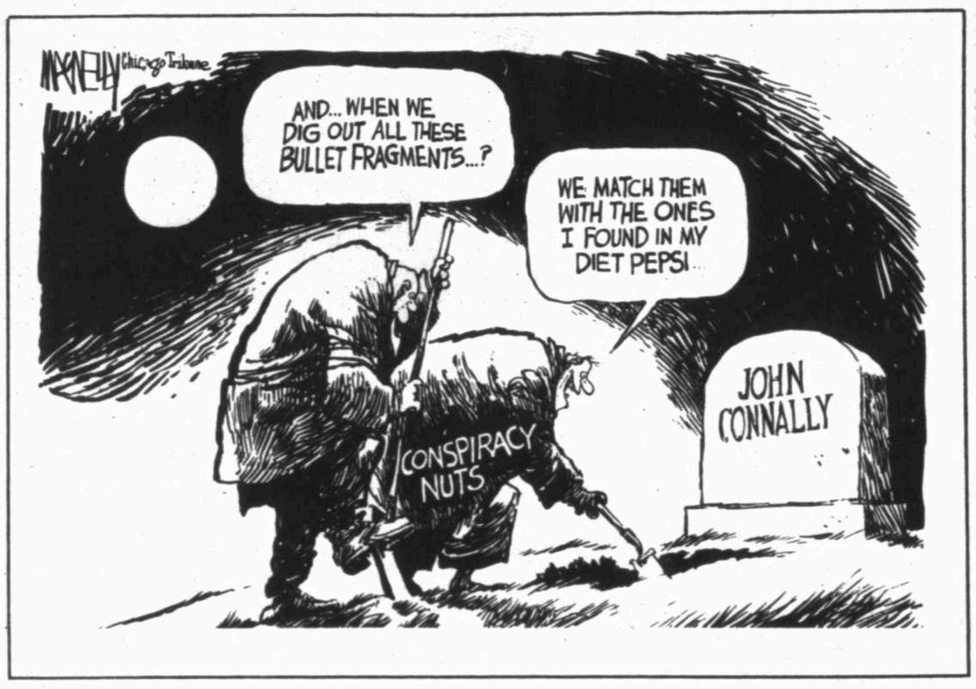

Yet he opposes the November referendum to create a voucher program to empower parents to chose any school, public or private. He says that would devastate the public school system. What more can be said against that system, or for the referendum?

With whimsical precision, Riordan says that in government "vision and ideas" count for 2.7 percent and "implementation" counts for "97.3 percent, more or less." His is a familiar tone of voice, heard from Henry Ford to Ross Perot. It is the brisk can-do impatience of the capitalist determined to make government more "businesslike."

When Riordan speaks ingenuously of restoring the city's "lost will," skeptics may wonder: What have we here, Nietzsche going to city hall? But as Kevin Starr, the leading historian of Southern California, writes, "Los Angeles envisioned itself, then materialized that vision through sheer force of will."

This implausible city was planted in a semi-arid basin by the historic hubris of willful people — first railroad tycoons, then agriculture and energy and real estate and entertainment go-getters. It has always been many factions but one large act of defiance — first of nature, then of all precedents of urban development. Riordan's government cannot solve many problems, other than those it creates, but he can get the city government out of the way of the energies that still teem in this basin.

Preposterous 'preposition freaks' prevail

Do you get angry at people who get angry with you? Do you get off on zapping people for getting off of the subject?

If so, you are a preposition freak. Judy Stoffman of Toronto sends a photocopy of a page from Calvin Trillin's new book, "Remembering Denny," containing a passage about "the extracurricular part of Yale that Griswold had warned us off of from the start." Cries Ms. Stoffman: "Calvin, how could you? Off of with your head!" And Ruth Fretts of Brooklyn notes the Hallmark ad: "Just ask for your certificate, worth $5 off of birthday cards purchased in June."

Safire

Even a single off can stir consternation among preposition freaks. Ann Harty of Pittsburgh sends this ad from AT&T and wonders if she has to retrain her ear for language: "Now there's a way to save off AT&T's basic rates," goes the ad, repeating the curious usage with "Save off direct-dialed, AT&T Long Distance." Not off of, just the single preposition off — but back when Alexander Graham Bell was operating, the expression was save on, as in "Mr. Watson, come here, I want you. We can save on long-distance rates!"

I say save on (just as I achieve a saving at the Blue Ridge Factory Outlet Center in Martinsburg, W.Va., which allows me to add to my savings in the bank; I'm cheap but consistent). Save off may be in use, but not common use; for a copywriter, it's a wrong number.

And off of, though much more common and usually pronounced off-uh — as in "get your feet off-uh the couch" — is a case for the Squad Squad, the redundundancy watchers. Yes, it can be found in Shakespeare, in "Henry VI, Part II," when Simpcox is asked by the cardinal, "What, art thou lame?" The Duke of Suffolk asks, "How cam'st thou so?" and Simpcox replies, "A fall off of a tree." But use it only if you like to affect dialect; if you prefer Standard English, get off it, not off of it. To sign off on is neither dialect nor slang, but bureaucratic gibberish.

Finally, to angry at vs. angry with. "A commentator noted that president Clinton was 'angry at his aide,'" writes Sam Berliner of Sea Cliff, N.Y. "Isn't proper usage angry with? One may be angry over a deed or angry with the doer, but not angry at, or is this mere pedantry?"

Pedantry is a good word for it. "The present meaning of with," says William A. Kretzschmar Jr. of the University of Georgia Linguistic Atlas Project, "is one of inclusion (you go with somebody, coffee with cream), but there are many words in English that testify that it used to mean just the reverse: withstand means 'stand against,' withhold means 'hold back,' and withdraw means 'draw away from.' Modern variation in usage, such as angry with . . .angry at, occurs because speakers are looking for a particular shade of meaning."

That would explain the current academic vogue use of speak to a question, which is more direct than speak about, even though speak to seems to turn an abstract question into a sentient human being. Undermining angry with, Kretzschmar asks, "Doesn't anger set people at odds, rather than with each other in feeling?"

Either is correct. Better not to get angry with or at anybody, least of all preposition freaks. 'DR. LIVINGSTONE, I PRESUME? ASSUME? SUPPOSE?'

"The assumption here," John Vinocur writes from Paris, "is that Helmut Kohl is an excellent politician." Toward the end of an original analysis of anti-foreigner terrorism in Germany — and the insight that the German chancellor is driven by a need for national normalcy — the executive editor of The International Herald Tribune concludes with "The presumption here is that Helmut Kohl is an excellent politician."

A pundit perusing this piece thinks to himself, "Uh-oh — the writer knows something I don't," and gives it a second, closer reading.

Climb the ladder of inference: To suppose is "to guess"; I suppose you're interested in this stuff, but it could be that your eye is just slopping over from the ad on the facing page.

William Safire's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

Leader of Free World discovers half brother

Recently I became concerned when The Washington Post dug up an older half-brother of President Clinton — a half-brother the President didn't know he had. His name is Henry Leon Ritzenthaler. When the President was questioned about it, he said that he was checking it out. He told reporters that he had called his alleged brother, but Henry wasn't home and the President had left a message on his answering service.

Buchwald

The White House staff let on that the half-brother was traveling across the United States and that's why he could not be located.

What worried me when I saw all this unfold on TV was that the President of the United States, with all the resources at his disposal, could not locate a blood relative and had to leave a message on the person's answering machine.

This is how I imagine the search was conducted.

"Any news on my half-brother Henry?"

"No, sir, Mr. President. We have all our satellites focused on the major highways and, as we speak, we have AWAC planes cruising the air. We also have roadblocks in every state that voted for you in the election. So far there have been no sightings, although we have picked up two of your second cousins and an uncle you didn't know existed."

"I don't understand it. We have all the state-of-the-art detection equipment known to man. Surely he can't disappear into thin air! He has to pick up his calls on the answering machine sooner or later."

"The CIA is as perplexed as you are, sir. They had a tip from the FBI that your half-brother had been spotted on the 'Today' show, 'Good Morning America' and CBS' 'This Morning.' "

"And?"

"We're checking it out now. Willard Scott, our mole at the 'Today' show, is afraid to talk about it."

"Why would my brother avoid me?"

"It's hard to fathom, Mr. President. Maybe he has all the family he wants. Also, there are some people who don't want to be connected with the White House. They figure that they have enough trouble as it is."

"What else are you doing to discover his whereabouts?"

"We obtained a court order to open his mail, and the Secret Service is building a composite sketch of him to be placed in post offices across America. The Atlantic fleet is watching for him off the coast of Haiti. Sooner or later somebody is bound to see him in a 7-Eleven or a McDonald's. Just out of curiosity, Mr. President, why are you so anxious to find him?"

"I need a standby brother — in case the one I have now screws up. Wouldn't you think that a guy would be interested in contacting a long-lost relative who is leader of the Free World?"

"I would think so, especially after all the political victories you have had this week. I think you should send out word that if your brother turns himself in, you'll make him David Gergen's deputy."

"I'd love to catch him before he appears on 'Geraldo' "

It took more than a week before the President located Henry. Luck played a part. Ritzenthaler's whereabouts were discovered in the late Justice Thurgood Marshall's papers which had been turned over to the Library of Congress.

The President was elated, and he offered Henry a job in the Administration. Henry turned it down because he hadn't paid Social Security taxes for the family help.

Clinton receives mixed reaction on new Northwest logging policy

Loggers say policy kills industry. Environmentalists say wildlife suffers.

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Acting to resolve a contentious battle over the fate of the ancient forests in the Pacific Northwest, President Clinton has approved a plan to reduce logging on federal lands and provide more than $1 billion to retrain loggers and help distressed timber communities.

The policy was drawn from recommendations developed by a group of scientists and was presented to the timber industry, environmentalists and members of Congress from Washington and Oregon. It represents the Clinton administration's first important attempt to walk the shaky line between economic growth and environmental protection.

The plan was immediately attacked from all sides. The industry said the new rules would destroy already hobbled businesses, while environmentalists complained that exceptions would allow cutting to go on unabated in vast tracts of forest.

The plan calls for restricting logging in national forests to 1.2 billion board feet a year, down from about 3 billion a year now and far below the peak of 5 billion reached in the mid-1980s. It also provide perhaps $1.3 billion to $1.6 billion for economic relief and puts the portions of the forests where the northern spotted owl lives off-limits to logging.

Administration officials said Clinton's compromise plan, which could require congressional support to protect it from legal challenge, was the best way to address a problem that lends itself to no easy solutions.

"If the bar we set is to make everybody happy, we're not going to do it," one official said.

Others put a different interpretation on the reaction. "This has been put forward as take it or leave it," said Rep. Peter A. DeFazio, D-Ore. "And both the environmental groups, and the labor and industry groups have said they'd rather leave it. Sometimes the conventional wisdom is that you upset the extremes and strike a middle you've done a good job. I don't think this is one of those instances."

Loggers saidthe decision would devastate rural communities that have already been depressed by reductions in logging deemed necessary by environmentalists to protect about three million acres of ancient growth that remains. It is unclear what effect the plan would have on the retail price of lumber.

The environmentalists are equally unhappy, saying that provisions in Clinton's plan that are intended to set aside portions of the forest from cutting would actually allow it to continue because of loopholes built into the plan.

Study: High-fiber diets lower cholesterol levels

BOSTON (AP) — Eating large amounts of soluble fiber, such as beans and oat bran, is slightly more effective than consuming insoluble fiber for lowering cholesterol levels, a study finds.

Eating lots of high-fiber foods takes the place of saturated fat and cholesterol in the diet, and this helps keep down cholesterol levels. However, doctors differ on whether fiber is important if people are already following low-fat and cholesterol regimens.

The latest study suggests that high-fiber foods can reduce cholesterol a bit more, and soluble fiber is the more effective variety.

The study was conducted on 43 volunteers with high blood cholesterol levels. They followed two high-fiber diets, each for two months. It was directed By Dr. David J.A. Jenkins of St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto and published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Before the study began, the men and women lowered their cholesterol as much as they could by following a stringent cholesterol-reduction diet. Then they were randomly assigned to either a diet high in soluble fiber or insoluble fiber.

On the soluble fiber diet, their average cholesterol levels fell from 267 to 230. On insoluble fiber, they fell to 242.

However, the volunteers' levels of HDL — high-density lipoprotein, the so-called good cholesterol — also fell on both fiber diets. As a result, their ratio of total to HDL cholesterol, an important predictor of heart attack risk, was not significantly different on the two diets.

"The lipid changes we observed, although small, provide additional support for dietary advice to increase the intake of foods high in soluble fiber," the researchers wrote.

However, the diets provided in this experiment are more extreme than those usually recommended by health agencies.

People received more than 24 grams of fiber for every 1,000 calories in their diets, which is considered very high. Twenty percent of calories came from fat — much less than most Americans eat — while 20 percent came from protein and 60 percent from carbohydrates.

Sources of soluble fiber in the diets included barley, peas, lentils, beans, oat bran and breakfast cereal enriched with psyllium. Insoluble fiber came from wheat bran cereal and bread and high-fiber crackers.

Clinton tells Japanese to open markets to U.S. goods

WASHINGTON (AP) — Less than a week before the economic summit, President Clinton on Wednesday bluntly called on Japan to open its markets, on Germany to lower interest rates and on all of Europe to end a stalemate over farm subsidies.

"It's very hard for the United States alone to grow jobs without help from other nations," Clinton declared as he met with congressional leaders to discuss the July 7-9 meeting in Tokyo of the world's seven major industrialized democracies.

But behind the assertive words, White House and congressional officials sought to lower expectations for the summit, mainly suggesting political turmoil in Japan was complicating the agenda.

Leaders of both parties emerged from the White House meeting agreeing that the lame-duck status of Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, and the relative weakness of other leaders, will make it hard to agree on a strong statement on economic growth.

Japan is the world's second biggest economy, after the United States.

"Obviously, the situation is complicated by the internal problems in Japan, the situation with respect to the government there," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

But, he added, "that should not preclude a positive outcome," particularly on agreeing on Russian aid. Russian President Boris Yeltsin will meet with the Western leaders at the conclusion of the summit.

'It's very hard for United States alone to grow jobs without help from other nations.'

— President Clinton

U.S. officials had hoped the summit partners could agree jointly at the annual meeting to set targets for annual growth, presumably at or around 3 percent. But this goal now seems doubtful.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said it would be hard for Clinton to claim any major successes. "It's not his fault, just circumstances," Dole said.

White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers conceded that some goals for the summit might have to be modified. "I certainly think that the domestic political situation in Japan has changed the dynamics somewhat," she said.

One casualty, Myers suggested: a market-opening "framework" agreement U.S. officials hoped would be ready by the summit. That is no longer likely, she said.

"We'll pick up where we left off" after the Japanese elections on July 18 and after a successor to Miyazawa is chosen, she said.

Myers said the United States still hopes to make major progress on Russian aid and in moving toward finally wrapping up a long-delayed set of new liberalized trading rules under the auspices of the 114-nation General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Oregon voters pass several anti-gay bills

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Voter approval of anti-gay rights measures in several spots in Oregon have encouraged backers who hope to spread their crusade to other states. Opponents are preparing for a fight.

Initiatives prohibiting local governments from passing laws that protect homosexuals from discrimination were approved Tuesday in Canby and Junction City and in the largely rural Josephine, Douglas, Linn and Klamath counties.

The measures, endorsed by better than 2-to-1 in some places, also bar local governments from spending money to "promote" homosexuality.

The victories for the Oregon Citizens Alliance come after a major defeat last fall, when voters statewide rejected a ballot measure that would have declared homosexuality "unnatural" and "perverse."

Now, said OCA chairman Lon Mabon, "things are finally moving our way."

The alliance and chapter groups hope to get anti-gay rights measures approved in neighboring Idaho and Washington next year.

Gay rights advocates said the Oregon measures will open the floodgates for discrimination against homosexuals in housing, employment and other areas.

Japan becomes top American creditor nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese investors surpassed the British last year as the largest owners of American assets, helping to sink the United States deeper into its status as the world's biggest debtor, the government said Wednesday.

Direct Japanese holdings in the United States rose 4.1 percent to $96.7 billion while British investment fell 5.6 percent to $94.7 billion. Japanese holdings exceeded British holdings for the first time.

Meanwhile, investment by the Dutch rose 3.3 percent to $61.3 billion, solidifying the Netherlands' place as the third largest holder of direct assets in the United States, defined as at least 10 percent ownership in a business.

Canada was fourth, with $39 billion in U.S. holdings, up 4.5 percent, followed by Germany, $29.2 billion, up 2.1 percent.

The increases contributed to a sharp deterioration in the United States' net debtor position — the difference between what Americans own overseas and what foreigners own in this country.

Waste sites focus of lawsuit

■ Morales seeks cleanup costs for abandoned radioactive waste sites in Midland, Odessa.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Attorney General Dan Morales announced a lawsuit Wednesday seeking cleanup costs from companies and individuals for abandoned radioactive waste at three West Texas sites.

"The disposal of hazardous waste is an increasing concern across this nation," Morales said. "Cleanup after contamination is costly, if not impossible. The answer is prevention — ongoing monitoring of disposal sites, strict regulations and serious penalties for violators."

The attorney general's office in a statement said the corporations and individuals are responsible for the abandoned waste from a site in Odessa and two in Midland.

Several defendants reached by The Associated Press denied wrongdoing. Some were unavailable for comment.

One defendant, who said he was involved for a short period of time with the sites, contended that the state was at fault for not taking action years earlier.

"The bottom line is that the state was grossly negligent as far as protecting the public interest and the public good long before I ever got involved in those projects" last year, said Raymond W. Randolph of Lafayette, La.

Randolph said he was an innocent victim in the dispute because the company he represented took, as payment of a debt, stock in a waste-site operator without knowing of problems involved.

Franklin Fisher Jr. of Houston — a defendant who claims he became involved in the wrangle as a lawyer for those who helped turn over sites to Randolph — said they were in compliance with state regulations at that time.

Fisher said the corporate operators he was involved with had upgraded predecessors' procedures and equipment.

Local 6th-grader's artwork to be part of national poster

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

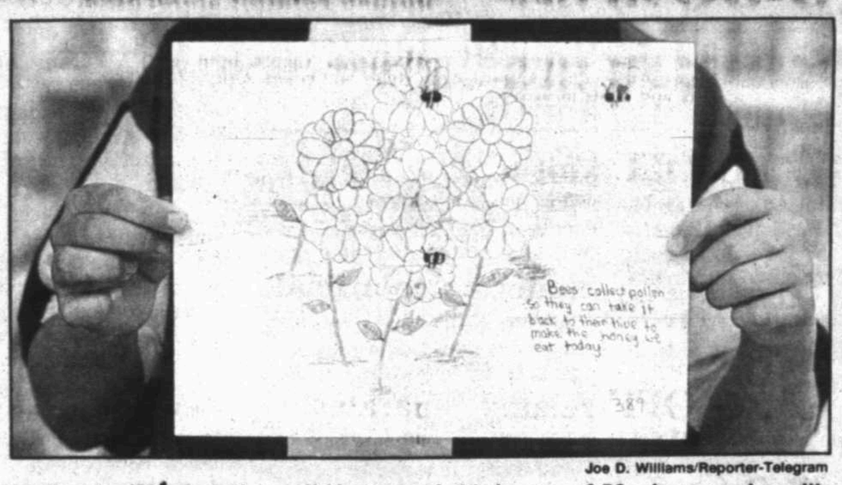

Insects are not just for squashing.

Believe it or not, that is the message that a national pest control company wanted to get out to youngsters.

"Oh, you don't necessarily want them (insects) to eat up your house, but they do have a role," said Orkin Pest Control spokesperson Amanda Estes.

So, the pest control company sponsored a poster contest to see if children understand the necessity of insects in the ecosystem.

Tech interns to see patients at local clinics

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Memorial Community Clinics, which are designed to bring health care to adults in east and south Midland, are "doing very well," Syndii McCreary, vice president of patient-care services for Memorial Hospital & Medical Center, told directors of the Midland County Hospital District on Wednesday.

"I think it will be a very cost-effective way to provide health care for that area," Ms. McCreary said.

The clinics, which are operated at Casa de Amigos and at the Southeast Midland Community Senior Center, were conceived to bring health care and preventive medicine to uninsured and under-insured adults in a similar cost-saving fashion in which medical treatment is provided for indigent pre-natal and pediatric patients at the hospital's Community Healthcare Clinic.

Already, 45 adults from their mid-20s and well into their 90s have been treated at the clinics, and 50 people there have undergone diabetic screening since early June, Ms. McCreary said.

Beginning next week, five physicians-in-residency from the Texas Tech Uni-

State sets July as Immunization Awareness Month

Staff report

July means hot summer weather, swimming and fireworks. It also means shots, as in immunizations.

Sorry kids, but July has been proclaimed Immunization Awareness Month in Texas. But consider this, being properly immunized to attend school is the law, and getting shots is certainly better than getting sick.

"As a pediatrician, I have seen too much of the senseless tragedy associated with failure to vaccinate children against thoroughly preventable diseases," said Dr. David R. Smith, Texas Commissioner of Health.

"It is long past time for us to have all but wiped out such devastating diseases

7-Eleven officials graciously accepted a share of Mary Gay's $1 million dollar jackpot Wednesday but declined to reveal how much of the 1 percent, or $10,000 bonus, will remain in Midland.

Ms. Gay captured the $1 million lottery scratch-off drawing held in San Angelo on June 10, after purchasing the ticket at the 7-Eleven store at 4401 W. Illinois St.

Gary Michniewicz, marketing manager for 7-Eleven's parent Southwest Convenience store, said the bulk of the money will go to the store's corporate office in El Paso with a "portion" being distributed to store employees.

Reporter-Telegram receives 7 awards at TPA convention

The Midland Reporter-Telegram received seven awards during the annual Texas Press Association convention recently in San Antonio.

Competing in the 15,000-150,000 circulation category, the newpaper captured first place in feature writing, second place in photography and second in overall general excellence.

General excellence awards are based on a compilation of points received in all categories of the contest.

Other awards included third place in sports coverage, third place in news writing, fourth in best use of photographs and fourth in community service.

The community service award was for a series on race relations in Midland entitled "Shades of Difference."

Water is gift from heaven that you can't do without

Todd

Water.

You can't go home without it. You can't run away without it. You can't do without it. You can't be without it.

It's abused, misused, overused, under-used, and wasted. And despite our sometimes-disrespectful treatment of water, this wondrous flowing substance returns to serve all of life.

You can't get rid of it. If you throw it away, it will come back.

If vaporized to an invisible form, it will return to Earth as rain, hail, sleet, snow.

Water, so the scientific books say, makes up about two-thirds of the human body and covers more than 70 percent of the Earth's surface. It is everywhere: in the air, in lakes, streams, rivers, creeks, draws, oceans, deep into this planet.

Water is good. We play in it, wash in it, sail on it, dive into it, bathe in it, flush it, draw it from the bowels of the Earth, use it, discard it, pump it down holes, pump it out, wash off with it, wash away the most toxic and repulsive of materials with precious water, cook in it, water crops and gardens with it, bless people and all things with water deemed holy, get baptized in it, and drink it.

At least as much as air and soil, water is all things to all people, to all creatures, to all plant life, to all living things.

We, the people, don't drink enough of "pure" water to flush out our systems, to revitalize ourselves, to cleanse ourselves, to do ourselves right, to honor ourselves.

Though theoretically free to all living things, we

LOCAL: Memorial clinics serve poor Midlanders

(From 1B)

versity Health Sciences Center at Lubbock will be doing much of their internship, under the supervision of Texas Tech medical professors, at Casa de Amigos.

"That is a major step in getting the medical school involved in Memorial Hospital," said Jean Pittman, MCHD president.

The main goal of the clinics' health care program is "to get people in the community to come in for medical needs on a regular basis," Ms. Pittman said. "Basically, they meet their health care needs before they become critically ill or go to the emergency room."

Since the clinics are in east and south Midland where a high percentage of people are relatively poor; uninsured and unable to buy medical care, the people there are more likely to feel comfortable in visiting the neighborhood clinics, Ms. Pittman said. For many people, going into the hospital can be "very intimidating."

The hospital is licensed for 335 beds.

If the southeast Midlanders are attentive to early health care on a "regular basis," Ms. Pittman said, "they might never need to come to the hospital."

Objectives of the clinics are to attend to the health care needs of adults in southeast Midland and to "keep the indigent-care costs down for the hospital, hopefully."

The hospital district imposes taxes on Midlanders to pay for indigent healthcare costs. In the current fiscal year, those taxes are to bring in $6.6 million.

"You are always concerned about their health first," Ms. Pittman said of indigents who, through the encouragement provided by the clinics, "will be taking better care of themselves."

Dr. Harold Rubin, Memorial Hospital president, noted that the community clinics will help to "keep people out of the emergency room," wherein treatment costs are at least five times higher than those of the clinics.

The per-patient cost at the clinics is about $30 vs. "$150 and up" for comparable care at the hospital emergency room, Rubin said.

The clinics are "certainly a more cost-effective" means to provide health care to the uninsured and under-insured people, Rubin said.

Casa de Amigos, Community and Senior Services, and the United Way of Midland joined in a partnership to help improve the quality of life for those Midlanders who cannot afford health care and who, in the main, are without medical insurance. The United Way donated $43,000 to help launch the program.

In the clinics' medical program, Memorial Hospital will provide the nursing staff, educators, case managers, and diabetic educators on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons at Casa de Amigos. Physicians-in-residency from the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center will examine the clients. Clients who have specialized problems may be referred to the Midland physicians who do volunteer work at Casa de Amigos on Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Casa de Amigos' per-patient charge is a nominal $5 fee a visit if the patient can afford the charge. Otherwise, there is no charge.

A similar program — but without resident physicians — will be conducted at the Southeast Midland Community Senior Center on Monday and Thursday afternoons. Scheduling will be flexible.

"We are not only going to decrease the (health-care) costs," Ms. McCreary said, "but we are going to increase the quality of life for those people" who will be receiving ongoing, continuous care.

Care will include health maintenance, physical examinations, routine screenings such as mammograms and Pap smears, physical assessments, screening of blood pressure, cancer screenings, and blood testing.

The nursing staff will "provide some episodic care for colds, flu, lumps and bumps" that "can become an acute illness for someone with a chronic illness," Ms. McCreary said.

In other business, hospital Chief Financial Officer Larry Sanz told the board that the hospital received $200,000 in tax money in May and that currently $500,000 is outstanding of the projected $6.6 million in projected tax revenue for indigent care.

The new fiscal year starts in October.

The board approved $635,559 in five contracts for equipment and supplies for the hospital and its expansion and renovation project. That project is costing $18.5 million, including $12.9 million in construction costs and $5.6 million in equipment, furniture and architectural-engineering fees.

POSTER: Contest art shows good role of insects

(From 1B)

One Midland youngster Charles "Lewis" Hammond, 11, got the buzz loud and clear. He drew and colored a picture of bees getting pollen from flowers. His artwork was one of 50 selected — out of thousands of entries — to be reproduced on a poster that will be sold at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C.

Lewis, the son of Charley and Cindy Hammond, drew the picture as part of a class assignment in his sixth-grade art class taught by Greg Nelson at South Elementary School.

"It was either that or take a six-weeks test," Lewis said. "I didn't want to take the test."

The student said some of his peers drew grasshoppers and caterpillars.

"I looked through some books and found pictures of bees and flowers. I liked them best," he said, noting that "bees get a bad rap."

"People only think about bees stinging. But they also collect pollen to take to hives and make honey," he said.

Lewis' artwork, which incorporates three bees and a clump of yellow flowers, was one of 47 second-place winners selected nationwide. The only other winner from Texas was a second-grader from Waco. There were three first-place winners.

Ms. Estes said a panel of judges — including representatives of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, the National Association of Elementary School Principals, and the Smithsonian's Museum of Natural History — selected the winners based on their depiction of insects in their natural environments.

"The judges didn't want drawings that just showed insects," Ms. Estes said. "They wanted them illustrated within their ecosystems, showing their role in ecology."

Ms. Hammond said her son has always shown an interest in doodling and tending the family's garden. "We have the garden and lots of animals around — ferrets, fish and turtles," she said.

Lewis' artwork will be included in a poster displayed and sold in the Smithsonian giftshop to commemorate the renovation of the O. Orkin Insect Zoo, a permanent exhibit in the Smithsonian Museum of Natural History. Lewis will receive a copy of the poster and a certificate. He wistfully noted that the three first-place winners won expense-paid trips to the nationally known museum.

"But, we are thrilled," Ms. Hammond said. "Lewis has always been a good student, getting A's since kindergarten."

Lewis said he will probably hang the poster in his room.

Ms. Estes said, "By the time children enter the seventh grade, more than half of them say they have no interest in science (according to information from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services). However, the results of the national insect Poster Challenge clearly indicate a shift in the next generation's level of knowledge. It showed they know a great deal about the ecosystem."

The contest was open to students age 5-11.

First-place winners were:

■ Kindergartener Ryan Victor, Great Falls, Mont. He illustrated insects fulfilling their role in an ecosystem that includes both plants and animals.

■ Second-grader Ann Homolik, Greenwood, Miss. Her artwork demonstrated the interdependent relationship between insects and the living world.

■ Sixth-grader Jeremy Galante, Chagrin Falls, Ohio. His drawing showed "Insects Are Our Friends," and illustrated how insects benefit humans.

TODD: Water is all things to all people, creatures pay, and often pay dearly, for water. Nowadays, about the only free water is what rainwater you can capture or, if you have a water well, the water that you might draw from the Earth's aquifers.

One way or another, through taxes or fees, people pay for dams to impound water, to store water, to pipe in water to town and country, to pipe it up from wells, to treat it, and to distribute it here and yonder.

And if the tap water is not palatable and is not fit for much more than washing clothes and vehicles, taking baths, watering the lawn and garden and for flushing down the drain, then many folks spend more money to buy bottled water from 50 cents to a dollar a gallon or put in water treatment systems.

'Tis sad that God-given water bears such a cost.

But if you had your own pristine springs, rain barrels and cisterns full of fresh water, and windmills pumping up pure water, you wouldn't have to pay for the services of bringing water to your every faucet.

Water.

It so often is taken for granted and hardly appreciated until it starts getting fouled up and polluted and doesn't taste right — doesn't taste like that rainwater which we, as children, used to drink in gulps in a heavy rain.

Nowadays, instead of rigging up a rain barrel and drinking virtually pure water or doctored water called lemonade or iced tea, so many people spend much money on "natural" bottled water — water bottled at "the source."

They are seeking out nature's ways and flavoring. It is as if they are reaching for purity and wholesomeness in life. For that, they seek store-bought pure water, sometimes flavored with natural fruits. Water: it's a natural and a gift of life from the heavens.

as measles, yet within the past five years, more than 4,400 Texas children under the age of 5 have had the disease — including 14 who died from complications of measles," Smith said.

"Let's hope that the added momentum of Immunization Awareness Month will renew this state's determination to finally defeat the disease against which we have had vaccines for decades," the commissioner said.

Immunizations are available from emergency clinics, local doctors and local health agencies.

The Midland Health Department is offering immunizations at various times during the week. For the month of July immunizations will be offered 8-11 a.m. and 1-4 p.m. on Mondays and Fridays; and from 1-4 p.m. Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

There is a fee of $10 per child for one or more immunizations. However, no child will be denied immunizations due to inability to pay the fee.

According to the local health department, Gov. Ann Richards signed into law a childhood immunization bill that requires all Texas children (except those with a religious conflict or medical contraindication) to be immunized against contagious diseases such as measles, mumps and diptheria.

State law already requires youngsters to be immunized against diseases including measles, mumps, diptheria, whooping cough and polio as soon as they enter school.

For more information, call the health department at 685-7370.

that amount of money then we have a customer for life."

Ms. Gay did not attend Wednesday's news conference.

Texas Lottery Key Accounts representative Melissa Villasenor-Dye said awarding the $10,000 bonus is an excellent way to reward the retailer involved in the sale.

"It makes sense for us to reward good work in the same way any other company would," she said. "It's a joy to give our retailers a small share of the winnings their customers have claimed."

She also declined to say how much of the $10,000 bonus will go to employees of the store.

The Texas Lottery pays a $10,000 bonus to any retailer that sells a scratch-off ticket that wins the million-dollar top prize in the monthly drawings.

Lottery officials also pay a bonus to any Lotto Texas retailer that sells a 6-of-6 jackpot winner. That share is equal to 1 percent of the jackpot won by the retailers' customer, not to exceed $500,000.

Lotto Texas is a computerized game in which players pick six numbers from one through 50 and pay $1 for a ticket on which those numbers are printed. The Lottery holds televised drawings at 9:59 p.m., every Wednesday and Saturday to pick the six winning numbers. Players' winnings are determined by how many of the numbers they match and by the size of the jackpot.

State alleges insurance firm was fraudulent

AUSTIN (AP) — The state filed a lawsuit Wednesday alleging that Hartford Life and Accident Insurance Co. participated in a fraudulent scheme that left thousands of workers without health insurance and owing millions of dollars in medical bills and other obligations.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said other insurance companies have settled with the state over alleged illegal employee leasing health care plans, but that Hartford Life and Accident has refused.

"They remain indifferent to the pain they helped create, and unwilling to take any steps to undo the damage they have caused to thousands of Texas citizens," Morales said.

Hartford issued a news release, saying it has been negotiating with the state in good faith, and was disturbed by the timing and "inaccuracies" of Morales' statements.

The federal lawsuit filed in Dallas alleges Hartford pretended to provide insurance coverage for American Workforce, a company that leased employees to other companies. Under the system, companies and their employees who were provided by American Workforce believed they had health insurance from Hartford, Morales said.

The state alleged Hartford sent a letter to American Workforce, which has gone bankrupt, stating that the company could tell its employees that their health insurance was covered by Hartford, when in fact it was not. In return, Hartford received $1 million a year in administration fees, the lawsuit alleges.

"Hartford is a classic example of an insurance company that wanted a bird nest on the ground," said State Board of Insurance Chairwoman Claire Korioth.

Morales said 5,000 workers and 300 companies were defrauded resulting in $7 million in unpaid medical claims, $5 million in unpaid employee retirement pensions, and $4.5 million in unpaid federal and state taxes.

Hartford said the letter that allegedly promised health coverage was a "sales proposal" and that the company never provided health insurance coverage to American Workforce or its employees.

Former child actor 'Spanky' McFarland dies at age 64

GRAPEVINE (AP) — George "Spanky" McFarland, the chubby child star of "Our Gang" and "Little Rascals" fame, died Wednesday at Baylor Grapevine Hospital, a spokesman said. He was 64.

Steve Tatum, a spokesman for the hospital said McFarland died at 2:03 p.m. less than one hour after arriving at the hospital in full cardiac-pulmonary arrest.

Funeral arrangements were pending.

McFarland became an actor in 1931 at the age of 3 when he modeled baby clothes in Dallas and later made a bread commercial that was noticed by director Hal Roach.

In addition to "Our Gang," McFarland made 14 feature-length movies including "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" with Henry Fonda and Fred MacMurray and "Woman in the Window" with Edward G. Robinson.

He ended his movie career while still a teen-ager.

"When I reached 16, and they stopped making the comedies, I made the decision then — I told my parents — I wasn't going to make any more films," he told the Reporter Telegram in October 1988.

After retiring from the movie industry, McFarland worked for Italian Swiss Colony Wine and Philco-Ford and owned an Oklahoma City barbecue restaurant. He was a spokesman for the Justin Boot Co. and was active in charity work in North Texas.

■ Hostage incident leaves two dead

HOUSTON — A woman and her estranged boyfriend were killed Wednesday in the climax of a hostage taking incident at a Houston oil company office, authorities said.

Police said the woman was held at gunpoint for more than two hours and then was shot by the gunman. Police then stormed the offices and shot and killed the gunman.

The woman, whose name has not been released by police, was taken hostage at about 2 p.m. CDT when the unidentified 27-year-old gunman apprehended her and took her into a conference room.

Phone negotiations were abandoned about 4:15 p.m. after police heard gunshots, prompting officers to storm the building housing the offices of Meridian Oil Inc.

"As we walked into the room, we found two people shot," Dr. Paul Pepe, director of Houston's Emergency Medical Services, said. "One was clearly dead."

Pepe said the man was dead and the woman still was breathing despite two gunshot wounds to the chest. She died before reaching a hospital.

"We did our best to resuscitate her," he said. "When we opened her up, her heart was basically obliterated."

■ TEA to investigate Lubbock district

LUBBOCK — State education officials will investigate whether the Lubbock Independent School District has violated its own policies and state law as a trustee has claimed.

The Texas Education Agency will visit the district in mid-July, the LISD announced Wednesday.

Linda DeLeon, a school trustee since 1986, alleged in her complaints that LISD officials sometimes fail to post meeting times of the school board and its committees. Also, Ms. DeLeon told the TEA, minutes kept during executive session aren't accurate.

Ms. DeLeon sued five of her fellow trustees in 1987, alleging they had conspired to limit her say in desegregation talks with the U.S. Department of Justice. Later that year she joined a group of intervenors seeking to force the LISD to reopen a central Lubbock junior high.

School officials said they would not respond to the latest allegations until the TEA completes its findings.

■ Businessman pleads guilty to fraud

HOUSTON — A businessman has pleaded guilty to defrauding Moody National Bank, a Galveston-based bank.

Edward Lloyd Street answered a one-count May federal indictment with a guilty plea on Wednesday, U.S. Attorney Lawrence D. Finder announced in a prepared statement.

The 66-year-old Houston resident was accused of submitting requests with a group to the bank for construction proceeds by using inflated figures in 1987.

Street and others in the scheme then paid the construction company the correct amount and pocketed the excess.

Street faces up to five years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

A sentencing hearing had not been scheduled as of Wednesday.

■ Judge plans to run for attorney general

DALLAS — State District Judge John Marshall says he will seek the Republican nomination for Texas attorney general in the March 1994 primary.

Marshall, a civil court judge in Dallas, will try to unseat incumbent Dan Morales, a Democrat, who is expected to seek a second term.

"The thing is that I have been asked by such a wide group of people who want me to do this thing," Marshall, 49, said Tuesday. "They must believe I have qualities and attributes that they think ought to be in the AG's office ... I've been asked to serve."

Marshall said that if elected he would revamp the administrative structure of the office "to bring it to the 21st century."

Marshall has presided over the 14th District Court in Dallas since Jan. 1, 1981.

Court rejects appeal by condemned killer

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court rejected Wednesday an appeal from condemned killer Curtis Paul Harris, clearing the way for his execution after midnight.

Harris, 31, and his brother, Danny, both were sentenced to die for fatally beating Timothy Merka, 27, in what became known as the "Good Samaritan" killing. Merka was fatally bludgeoned with a tire jack Dec. 11, 1978 while trying to give the Harris brothers and two friends a battery jump on a rural Brazos County road where their stolen car had become disabled.

The high court Wednesday rejected an emergency request and a formal appeal filed on behalf of Curtis Harris. Attorneys had contended jurors improperly were selected in his trial and that jurors were not allowed to consider his mental retardation when they deliberated his punishment.

Harris had severe brain damage inflicted when his alcoholic father struck him repeatedly with a 2-by-4 board, leaving a permanent dent in his head, Kevin McDonald, Harris' attorney, said.

Defense attorneys also asked the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles and Gov. Ann Richards to consider a reprieve, but the board Wednesday turned down the request and Richards would take no action, Chuck McDonald, a Richards spokesman, said.

Harris' execution would be the second this week in Texas. Markham Duff-Smith was executed early Tuesday for arranging the killing of his mother so he could collect inheritance.

Curtis Harris was 17 at the time of the Merka killing. His brother was 18.

Testimony showed Danny Harris held down Merka, who was pleading for his life, while Curtis beat the man with the tire tool. Then they emptied his pockets, took his wallet and drove off to Bryan with his pickup truck.

Their disabled car had been stolen earlier by companion James Manuel and they flagged down Merka, who worked at nearby Texas A&M University, to give them a battery boost.

Manuel received a 25-year prison term for his part in the killing. He was released in 1989. The other person at the murder scene, Valerie Rencher, testified against the brothers and received no prison time.

Harris' execution would be the seventh this year in Texas and 61st, tops in the nation, since the state resumed capital punishment in 1982.

Danny Harris has come within a few hours of execution before winning reprieves. The U.S. Supreme Court this week also rejected an appeal in his case and a July 30 execution date was set for him.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New lines of communication have been opened. You gain access to information that must be handled in a sensitive way. Bright ideas are plentiful. It is "follow-through" that counts!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You could strike it rich if you stick to your current course. Loyalty works in your favor. New eating habits help you feel better. Check the resources of those making lavish promises.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Recent worries will vanish if you cooperate. Think positive! A small business venture is less risky than playing the market. Legal matters and public relations questions demand prompt attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An emotional involvement deepens. Listen to parental advice but make your own decisions. Do not let stubborn pride stand in the way of career progress. Be willing to admit past mistakes.

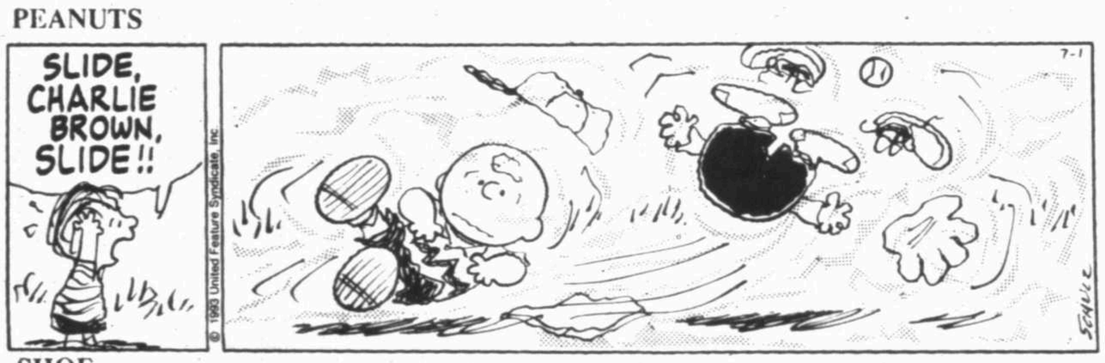

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day to buy or sell real estate. Purchase things that will increase in value with time. An older person could make romantic overtures. If uninterested, try to be diplomatic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Household purchases are favored if you spend cash, not credit. Travel is the best road to summer pleasure. Safeguard your valuables in resort areas; also at home. Romance grows brighter and brighter!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Bypass people who are critical without cause. Your track record speaks for itself! A close relationship improves when you devote more time to nurturing it. Resist the pressure to conform.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are lively, generous and hard to get a handle on. They give more than they take but can be very ambitious. These Cancerians are determined to be the very best at whatever they do. Although talkative, they also make good listeners. They have terrific instincts and strike a wonderful balance between work and play. Music, books and the great outdoors are among their favorite things. Count on them to pass these interests on to their offspring.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣

We've often published hands where counting can be the secret to landing the contract. It works equally well for the defense and will often guide defenders to how to defeat the contract.

North's jump to three hearts as a passed hand showed four-card support and a hand just short of an opening bid. It invited South to go to game with anything but a dead minimum and South had enough to oblige.

West led the king of clubs. East encouraged with the eight. West continued the suit, but after taking two clubs and a diamond the defense ran out of steam.

Had East spent a moment counting the hand the winning defense would have been obvious. West's lead was surely from the king-queen and taking those five points and adding eight for the two aces in hand would mean that East could not count for more than an extra jack or two from partner. The only real hope of defeating the contract, therefore, lay in scoring a diamond ruff.

That could be accomplished easily enough. East should have overtaken partner's king of clubs with the ace, cashed the ace of diamonds and then returned a club to West's marked queen. It would take a rather dense defender not to realize that East had a singleton diamond and a return of that suit would have allowed East to score the setting trick with a ruff.

Film tough guy Steven Seagal has soft spot for Mother Earth

LEAVENWORTH, Wash. — Movie tough guy Steven Seagal said he has a soft spot for Mother Earth.

"This is about something everyone cares about — the environment," Seagal said of his latest movie, "On Deadly Ground."

"This is something that comes from my mind, my heart, my personality. I care. I want to do something — even if it's on the smallest level," he said Friday. "Anybody who has any sense should be concerned about the environment."

Seagal portrays an oil rig worker who tries to stop his former employers from spoiling the environment and ripping off Indians as they build the world's largest oil well in Alaska.

About two weeks of filming is under way on the east slopes of the Cascade Mountains. Most of the movie was shot in Valdez, Alaska.

ESCONDIDO, Calif. — Carol Burnett donned a hard hat and let out one of her Tarzan yells at the construction site of an arts center.

Burnett

"Perfect acoustics," she said after surprising construction workers with the noise.

Burnett and actor Cliff Robertson toured the dusty, 12-acre site Tuesday to announce that $600,707 was raised this year to support the California Center for the Arts.

Burnett said performing rescued her from a poverty-stricken childhood and she hoped the arts center might inspire young people.

"What's really important to me about this is that not enough is done for the arts and that side of the brain for young people," she said.

NEW YORK — Louis Begley, the Harvard lawyer who became an award-winning novelist, is the new president of the American Center of PEN.

The world faces a "hideous upsurge of violence and hatred — nationalist, religious and racial," Begley said after he was named Tuesday.

"In this gloomy context, PEN's work and PEN's goals — defense of freedom of expression in the United States and around the world . . . have a special relevance and urgency," he said.

Begley's books include "Wartime Lies" in 1991 and "The Man Who Was Late," published this year.

Begley, a senior law partner at Debevoise & Plimpton, replaces Edmund Keeley is president of the worldwide organization of poets, essayists and novelists.

LAS VEGAS — Barry Manilow is in the middle of a tour that would make weaker men weep.

"I've stayed in more hotel rooms than Leona Helmsley," he told a sellout crowd at the Desert Inn Hotel and Casino.

Manilow's five-night gig there concluded over the weekend. It was part of the seven-week, 30-city "Greatest Hits and Then Some" tour from Anaheim, Calif., to New York City.

The tour kicked off June 17 and was to conclude Aug. 8 in Houston. Additional bookings were being lined up to extend the tour through New Year's Eve.

At a show Friday, Manilow talked of recording "I Write the Songs" three years ago, then admitted it was more like 20.

"Please, let me have my fantasies," he said, responding to laughter from the audience.

NEW ORLEANS — Danny Glover is on a kick to get youngsters to quit cigarettes.

"The choice is still yours; it ultimately comes to you to say 'I'm not going to smoke,'" he told about 100 students Tuesday at Beauregard Middle School.

Glover

The actor is working with an R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. campaign to discourage underage smoking.

Glover, who starred in the "Lethal Weapon" movies, said he decided not to smoke while he was in junior high school.

"I never smoked when I was your age. I tried when I was in the seventh grade, but I didn't want to do that even though there was pressure around me. I made the choice," he said.

Remember nature hikes and swims in frigid lakes, compulsory letters home, baseball games and cabin pranks, first kisses and, finally, not wanting to say goodbye at the end of camp?

Sixteen songwriters do. They include Jamie Bernstein Thomas, a daughter of Leonard Bernstein, David Lawrence, a son of Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme, and Robby Merkin, musical director for "Sesame Street," and they have written songs for a show called "Everything About Camp (Almost)." The musical revue will be put on by Tada, a nonprofit children's theater company in New York, from July 16 to Aug. 16.

RADIOACTIVE: Morales seeks site cleanup costs

(From 1B)

"The Bureau of Radiation Control was aware of these sites, had them under license and effectively was allowing them to operate. I think that speaks for itself," said Fisher, who disagreed with Randolph's contention that he didn't get full information when he became involved.

Michael Dunn of the state Bureau of Radiation Control's radioactive material branch, which is part of the Texas Department of Health, said he couldn't comment beyond the state's court petition.

The lawsuit concerning the sites — which Morales said contain drums of radioactive waste and contaminated equipment used in processing radioactive materials — was filed late Tuesday in state district court in Travis County.

It seeks payment of cleanup costs, civil penalties, attorney fees and court costs. Those costs have not yet been determined, said Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Morales.

The radioactive materials have been impounded by the Bureau of Radiation Control and stored in secured buildings, according to Morales' office. Richard Ratliff of the bureau said in a statement there is no threat to public health.

Morales contended that there was inadequate accountability for, and improper transport of, radioactive material; failure to perform required radiation surveys; and failure to maintain required records.

Besides Randolph and Fisher, other individuals named as defendants include Delbert W. Hicks II of Odessa, who did not immediately return a telephone message on his home answering machine from The Associated Press; Daniel K. Borgen of Houston, who did not immediately return a message left with a housesitter at his home; Lynn Williams of Midland, who could not immediately be reached; and Christopher Williams of Houston, who said he was an independent consultant who never operated a site.

Corporate operators named in the lawsuit include Nuclear Technologies International Inc., a company Fisher was involved with; Oxford Interests Inc. of Houston, which had no telephone listing, but whose corporate agent also is listed as Fisher, according to the attorney general's office; and The GNI Group Inc., whose president, Carl Rush, would not comment, saying he hadn't seen a copy of the complaint.

Corporate site owners named as defendants include A-BCD Inc., doing business as Associated Builders of Midland, which didn't immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press; Gulf Nuclear Inc., which had no telephone listing in Houston or Delaware; and R.A. Services Inc. of Odessa, which had no telephone listing.

Others named as defendants produced radioactive waste stored at a site, according to Morales' office. Dusek said those companies' liability may be limited to removing their waste.

NationsBank Texas Corp. also is named in the lawsuit because the state alleges that it allowed a defendant, Borgen, to cash in a $33,000 certificate of deposit, plus interest, that was pledged to the state as a security deposit. Such a deposit is required of waste-site license holders to cover costs of decontamination, reclamation and maintenance of a closed site.

The lawsuit asks that the bank be ordered to refund the money, plus interest. Bank spokeswoman Gillian Moseley said its policy is not to comment on matters in litigation.

State Farm to raise auto, property premiums

AUSTIN (AP) — The largest automobile and property insurer in Texas announced Wednesday it is increasing rates.

State Farm Insurance Companies said it will raise property insurance premiums an average of 12.4 percent, and auto rates, an average of 8.3 percent.

Meanwhile, Farmers Insurance Group of Cos. raised statewide auto insurance rates an average of 5.7 percent effective Wednesday, with homeowners' insurance rates rising an average of 11.7 percent, effective Aug. 1.

State Farm cited weather-related losses and increasing claim costs as the reason for its rate hikes.

Rates will vary by coverage and location for individual policyholders. The new rates are effective immediately for new customers and will apply to existing customers as their policies are renewed.

The Texas Department of Insurance offers a free booklet called "Shopping Smart," which offers tips on saving money on insurance. To order a copy, booklet call 1-800-252-3439, or write Texas Department of Insurance; Publications MC 108-5A; PO Box 149104; Austin, 78714-9104).

Author of book blasts publisher for disclaimer

BOSTON (AP) — Joe McGinniss denounced his own publisher for suggesting that some parts of his forthcoming biography of U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy were "created by the author."

A disclaimer in early versions of the book "The Last Brother" was "a really foolish thing to do," McGinniss said.

He acknowledged that some references to Kennedy's thoughts were "inferred," or that he wrote what he "sensed Teddy must have been feeling."

But McGinniss said: "That falls well within the realm of legitimate biographical licence. You can certainly infer a thought process from behavior. None of these reactions are either aberrational or even startling or even uncomplimentary to Teddy."

Simon & Schuster has included a disclaimer on the copyright page of early versions of the book that reads:

"Some thoughts and dialogue attributed to figures in this narrative were created by the author, based on such research and his knowledge of relevant people, places and events."

Carolyn K. Reidy, president of Simon & Schuster, told The New York Times last week, "There are certain scenes where he has used his imagination, based on his research, to infer a thought process or even a conversation in order to give the scene and what's going on its full expression."

But McGinniss, in an interview with the Boston Sunday Globe, said he would insist that the disclaimer be removed.

"I let the lawyers put the disclaimer in the front of the book because I've learned over the years that it's better not to argue with lawyers," he said.

The dispute has provided ammunition for critics of the book, including Kennedy's aides. The senator himself, who's up for re-election next year, responded with a terse "no comment" when asked about it.

But Pamela Hughes, a Kennedy spokeswoman, called the biography "another example of exploitation of the Kennedy family for profit."

"Much of the book is fiction," Hughes said. "The book's own publisher admits it is 'free-form journalism' and says thoughts and dialogue are made up. That admission speaks volumes about the author's credibility."

McGinniss said he can cite a source for every quotation attributed to Kennedy in the biography. He said his references included other books or interviews with parties to the conversation.

Among other things, the book says Kennedy thought of himself as inadequate in the eyes of his father, brothers and sisters, and was plagued by self-doubt.

HIV more complex than imagined, scientists say

N.Y. Times News Service

After more than 10 years of research on AIDS, after more than 289,000 reported cases and 180,000 deaths in America, scientists continue to discover that the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, is a much more complex killer than imagined.

Scientists know how the disease is passed: contaminated blood and body fluids. They know how to reduce your chances of getting it: safe sex and avoiding intravenous drug use. What they don't know is how to attack the disease and whether science will find an effective treatment any time soon.

There's the drug AZT. But for people with AIDS, it staves off death only about a year. In healthy people it seems to delay the onset of the disease, but no one knows for how long.

Moreover, scientists say, the prospect of finding a cure for HIV infection anytime soon is probably too remote to even consider.

To learn what problems still confront researchers, Science magazine recently surveyed the 150 leading AIDS researchers in the United States. Seventy-four responded, listing the following as the top questions yet to be answered:

—What causes the immune system collapse seen in AIDS?

Scientists cannot say. The hallmark of the disease is a drastic reduction in the immune system's number of T lymphocytes (white blood cells) known as CD4s. But no one can say what prompts the loss of the vital cells.

One theory is that HIV kills immune cells directly. Another says the virus stirs other intermediaries in the body to do the dirty work. Still others say it could be both or something unknown.

—How can HIV replication be controlled?

Scientists say that curing HIV infection is an unrealistic goal. When HIV infection occurs, the virus pumps its own genetic material in the genetic material of unsuspecting white blood cells. Once there, the HIV genome can sit for a long time, until it chooses to produce more virus.

To cure HIV infection, scientists would have to find a way to get into every infected white blood cell and selectively obliterate the HIV genetic material. It's a task far beyond current scientific ability.

Instead, scientists try to keep HIV from replicating, reproducing itself, inside the cell. Drugs such as AZT, ddI and ddC do this by interrupting the HIV life cycle. But they work only so well. Scientists are investigating other places along the virus's life cycle to halt viral replication.

Physicians use one donor heart in 2 transplants

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A heart was transplanted a second time after the first recipient died, a rare case of organ recycling that highlights the critical shortage of donors, doctors said.

John Ferrandino, a longshoreman suffering from a weakening of his heart known as dilated cardiomyopathy, received the organ on June 20 after the first recipient died of a brain hemorrhage.

"One heart, it's fantastic," Ferrandino's wife, Pearl, said while visiting her husband Friday.

Medical experts said they know of only one other case of a heart transplanted twice.

Ferrandino received the heart at the University of California, Los Angeles Medical Center, said Dr. Jon Kobashigawa, a cardiologist who treated both Ferrandino and the previous recipient, who died 11 days after getting the heart from a woman who had died in an automobile accident.

Ferrandino, 42, a father of two, was expected to remain in intensive care for several days.

"I feel a lot better," he said. "I'm really lucky."

In 1991, doctors in Switzerland removed the heart of a 47-year-old transplant recipient after he died of a stroke and stitched it into a 58-year-old man.

While doctors do not expect organ recycling to become widespread, they said it underscores the scarcity of transplant organs.

"We're looking at every option available, and this is one of them," said Dr. Davis Drinkwater, who performed Ferrandino's transplant.

Organ recycling will probably never be common because it requires a rare chain of circumstances, including a strong donor heart and an initial recipient who dies of causes other than cardiac problems or organ rejection, said Dr. Michael R. Bristow at the University of Colorado in Denver.

The right factors were in place at UCLA this month, Kobashigawa said.

The original recipient received the new heart on June 8 and recovered rapidly, he said. Doctors wouldn't identify either the donor or the first recipient.

"He (the first recipient) was able to walk up and down the halls, speaking freely. His energy level was increasing day by day. We were ready to send him home," said Kobashigawa.

As he prepared to leave the medical center, he had a brain hemorrhage, and died two days later on June 19.

San Antonio hopes to lure political convention with Alamodome

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The new, state-of-the-art Alamodome will help convince the Democratic or Republican parties to hold their 1996 or 2000 conventions in their city, some officials say.

Proponents say playing host to such an event would be an immediate boon to San Antonio's economy, while also giving the city a chance to promote itself as a tourist and convention site.

The key to their bid is the Alamodome, a massive indoor arena made with such large-scale conventions in mind. The facility opened this summer and will be the home for the San Antonio Spurs of the NBA and several college football games, including a new annual bowl.

In 1991, tourism and conventions brought $1.6 billion in visitor spending to San Antonio, the nation's 10th largest city. That is the most recent year for which the Travel Data Center in Washington, D.C., has statistics.

A national convention in 1996 could draw 40,000 people, putting the city's hotel industry on the front lines for any quest.

The Alamo City's quest is being spearheaded by a volunteer group of top business leaders, Mayor Nelson Wolff, Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce President Joe Krier and Steve Moore, executive director of the San Antonio Convention & Visitors Bureau.

"The concern I have here, at the convention bureau, is that there is only one winner, and when you don't get it, that doesn't mean your city is a loser," Moore said.

A national convention in 1996 could draw 40,000 people, putting the city's hotel industry on the front lines for any quest.

Last year, Democrats filled about 18,000 rooms in New York and the Republicans used about 16,000 rooms in Houston.

San Antonio has 20,600 hotel rooms in the metropolitan area.

The biggest benefit for the city is that both the top hotels and the Alamodome are downtown.

Official: State regulatory laws make Houston a fraud haven

HOUSTON (AP) — Cheap office space and Texas' regulatory laws have created a Houston haven for fraudulent telephone solicitors.

The phenomenal growth of ripoffs in the Houston area is caused in part by population increases and by the Sun Belt location, said Richard Tomlinson, assistant attorney general in charge of the Texas Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division in Houston.

The scam artists pitch telephone sales offering valuable prizes or loans — for a few hundred dollars in shipping or costs.

Once the check is in the mail, consumers never hear from the company again. And their inquiries go unanswered.

The hucksters move to Houston because the city is so overbuilt that space is inexpensive, cheap labor is available to mount a phone bank and because of loopholes in registration laws, Tomlinson said.

The last enticement is the target of bills passed by the Legislature and awaiting the governor's signature. The measures would require telemarketers to register and post bonds.

"This would stop them at the outset before they rip off a lot of people," said Rep. Billy Clemons, D-Pollok, who sponsored the legislation.

Many legitimate companies do telemarketing, so the system itself is blameless, cautioned Dan Parsons, vice president for operations of Houston's Better Business Bureau.

But complaints to the attorney general's office prompted by the illegitimate groups have doubled over the past 10 years, according to Tomlinson.

Telemarketing abuse locally has become so prevalent that it accounted last year for as much as 40 percent of the 10,610 complaints received by Tomlinson's office.

Victims of consumer fraud run the gamut. The elderly are typically targets in sweepstakes schemes, with debtors victims of loan rackets and the greedy as prey in hard-to-prosecute pyramid schemes, Tomlinson said.

"Even sophisticated consumers and professionals get taken," he said:

The best rule of thumb for avoiding a fleecing is the oldest one, he said: "If it's too good to be true, it probably isn't."

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Houston Rockets took Florida State guard Sam Cassell, an excellent defensive player who also handled the point guard chores when starter Charlie Ward was injured.

The 6-3 Cassell set an NCAA tournament record with seven 3-pointers in as many attempts against Tulane in the second round. He led the ACC in steals with 2.8 per game. He averaged 18.3 points, 4.3 rebounds and 4.9 assists as a senior. He shot 42 percent for his career from 3-point range.

Cassell played junior college ball at San Jacinto, just outside of Houston. He also played at Midland's Chaparral Center where he was named Most Valuable Player as Texas defeated the USA, 126-103 in the 1991 Texas-USA All-Star game.

Hartford wants NFL

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Gov. Lowell Weicker Jr. and a former minority owner of the New England Patriots today proposed building a 65,000-seat stadium in the Hartford area in a bid to lure the NFL.

Francis W. Murray, a former minority owner of the Patriots, said he offered owner James Orthwein $133 million offer for the team on Tuesday.

"We want to keep the Patriots in New England. That's what this is all about," Murray said at a news conference with the governor.

Weicker said state bonding could be used to finance construction of the stadium, but he and Murray had few other details about the plan, including how much the facility would cost.

Rocket no Raider

TORONTO (AP) — The agent for Rocket Ismail today contradicted a report that said the former Notre Dame star had signed with the Los Angeles Raiders.

"There is absolutely no agreement," attorney Bob Woolf said today from his Boston office. "Negotiations are ongoing, so I don't know where rumors like this start."

The Toronto Sun, quoting an unidentified source, reported in Wednesday's editions that Ismail signed a deal with the Raiders worth $3 million, with two years guaranteed and the team holding the option on the next two years. Ismail spent the past two seasons with the CFL's Toronto Argonauts.

Woolf said he spoke with Raiders director of football operations Steve Ortmayer on Tuesday and no agreement was reached.

The 23-year-old Ismail, who returns kicks and plays wide receiver, made $8 million in two seasons of a $18.2 million, four-year deal with the Argonauts before owner Bruce McNall presented him with the option of going to the NFL.

Pete prevents repeat

Sampras overcomes injury to oust defending champion

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — With his shoulder aching and the Centre Court crowd wildly cheering for his opponent, Pete Sampras kept his cool and held on for a five-set victory over defending champion Andre Agassi today to reach the Wimbledon semifinals.

AP Laserphoto

Barbara Streisand cheered on Agassi Wednesday at Centre Court.

The top-seeded Sampras, who was treated several times by the trainer for the inflamed tendon in his right shoulder, staved off a furious comeback by Agassi to win 6-2, 6-2, 3-6, 3-6, 6-4 in two hours, 48 minutes.

No. 4 seed Boris Becker won an all-German duel against 1991 champion Michael Stich, coming from behind to win 7-5, 6-7 (7-5), 6-7 (7-5), 6-2, 6-4. Becker never lost serve during the match, which lasted four hours and 14 minutes.

Earlier, on Court One, Jim Courier reached the Wimbledon semifinals for the first time by beating fellow American Todd Martin 6-2, 7-6 (7-5), 6-3.

Two-time champion Stefan Edberg, the oddsmakers' favorite, swept past unseeded Cedric Pioline of France 7-5, 7-5, 6-3.

It's the first time since 1927 that the top four men's seeds have made it to the semifinals. On Friday, Sampras will face Becker and Edberg will play Courier.

Sampras overcame considerable adversity in order to beat Agassi. Besides his shoulder problems, he had the overwhelmingly pro-Agassi crowd to contend with. Even Sampras' errors drew wild cheers.

Agassi's fans included Hollywood entertainer Barbra Streisand, who sat in the players' box and frequently jumped to her feet to lead the applause. After winning a key point, Agassi would often pump his fists and look over at his entourage.

Agassi appeared to have the momentum after winning the third and fourth sets, but Sampras regained the advantage when he broke for a 3-2 lead in the final set.

Sampras had two match points at 5-3, but Agassi saved both. In the next game, however, Sampras served out the match at love. He hit three aces in a row — his 20th, 21st and 22nd of the match — to go up 40-0 and finished with a good serve that Agassi returned wide.

"He raised his game a level and I couldn't answer," Agassi said. "That's the bottom line."

Agassi — and the crowd — looked dazed during the first two sets as Sampras dominated thoroughly, serving and volleying with authority and playing steady if unspectacular shots from the baseline. Sampras took the pace off the ball, and Agassi couldn't find his rhythm or timing.

Fritz, Forbes selected as All-Stars

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

It may not be an all-star season for the Midland Angels as a team, but for three, it has become a season for the record books.

Angels P.J. Forbes and John Fritz and former Angel John Jackson, who on Tuesday was promoted to Class AAA Vancouver, were selected to the Double-A All-Star game July 12 in Memphis.

The game matches the minor league affiliates of the major league clubs. Each team in the minors is represented by one player and no team may have more than three representatives on the team.

Forbes, in his first season at Midland after spending last year at Quad City, is hitting .321 through games of June 28, with six home runs and 33 RBI's. Forbes has three hitting streaks of 11 games or more this season. Defensively, Forbes has 10 errors as second base.

Forbes

Fritz

"I think (Forbes) has played real well for us defensively," said Angels coach Don Long. "Also, he's become a lot more consistent with his hitting in the five spot. He's getting on base and he has the ability, with his power, to move people around who are on base."

Fritz has been the Angels' most consistent starter through the first half of the season, posting a 7-3 record with a 3.82 ERA. He has twice been named the Texas League Pitcher of the Week.

"John's been our most consistent starter," said pitching coach Kernan Ronan. "With the exception of his start in El Paso (where he allowed eight runs on nine hits in 3⅓ innings in a 12-3 loss), when he starts he keeps us in the game even when he doesn't have his good stuff going that night."

Jackson is in his first full season of professional ball after opting last season to forego a shot at professional football and concentrate on baseball. Previously, he had played for the NFL's Phoenix Cardinals.

He hit .325 with three home runs, 34 RBIs and was second on the team with 12 stolen bases.

"I think that with him concentrating on baseball, he's become a better player," said Long. "His all-around game is better having the opportunity of playing everyday. Him leaving for three weeks and then returning for a couple of days and then being gone for a couple made it difficult for him. I think it was easier for him to focus on one thing at a time."

The Texas League All-Star game will follow the Double-A game on July 19 in Wichita.

Campenella remembered

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Mourners on Wednesday remembered Roy Campanella's grace and power on the field, as well as his kindness and gentle mastery of adversity.

"He was an inspiration to me and to millions of other people," Los Angeles manager Tom Lasorda said at a memorial service for the Hall of Fame catcher who died Saturday at the age of 71.

"When that auto accident ended his career, he didn't give up, he didn't get bitter. He was filled with happiness and love and he spread that to the nation."

About 250 people, including many of Campanella's teammates in the Negro Leagues, teammates with the Brooklyn Dodgers and club officials attended the private services at Forest Lawn, a few miles from Dodger Stadium.

"I believe the greatest tribute ever paid to anybody might have been the night 93,000 people filled the Coliseum to pay tribute to him," said Tom Bradley, whose eulogy at the service was part of his final day as mayor of Los Angeles.

WIMBLEDON: Courier, Becker, Edberg winners

(From 1C)

"I felt just an inch away from hitting offensive shots," Agassi said. "I don't know if it was my feet or nerves."

Agassi made his move at the start of the third set when he broke serve for the first time for a 2-0 lead. At that stage, Streisand and many other fans gave Agassi a standing ovation.

"I was just determined to fight until I could pull things together," he said. "Once I got the break on him, it allowed me to believe I could do it."

Pumped up, Agassi swept through the third and fourth sets, punctuated by a crushing inside-out backhand passing shot to break Sampras and force a fifth set.

"After he broke me in the third set, I started thinking about my shoulder," Sampras said. "I started sloping and hanging my head a little bit. But it was something I could play through and I just told myself to suck it up for the last set. It was more mental than anything."

Once Sampras got the service break, he was in charge — even though he took a painkiller and winced as the trainer treated his shoulder during the changeovers.

"Pete is the kind of player who steamrolls players," Agassi said. "When he got up that break, it didn't seem like he slowed up at all. He raised his game a level and I couldn't answer. That's the bottom line."

As for Streisand, Agassi, said, "It's always nice to have a close friend be here to share in a victory or a defeat."

Sampras said he would receive more treatment on his shoulder but expects to be ready for Friday.

Courier has won the French Open and Australian Open twice. But he has never had much success on grass, reaching the Wimbledon quarterfinals once. He said he's enjoying himself this year as never before.

The 6-foot-6 Martin got to the quarterfinals on the strength of a big serve-and-volley attack, but Courier managed to keep him at the baseline with his strong groundstrokes.

When Martin did come in, Courier was often ready with passing shots. Courier also capitalized on Martin's double faults on several key points.

Martin's one chance to make the match interesting came when he earned a set point with Courier serving at 4-5 in the second set. But Martin squandered the opportunity, when on the fourth shot of the rally, he sailed a forehand way be ond the baseline.

Courier held serve, and in the subsequent tiebreaker, hit a forehand return winner down the line to win it 7-5. Courier dominated the third set.

The women's semifinals are set for Thursday, although virtually everyone assumes it will be Steffi Graf and Martina Navratilova vying for the title on Saturday.

Graf, the top seed and defending champion, and Navratilova, the No. 2 seed and nine-time champion, have reached the semifinals with such ease that virtually everyone assumes they will face each other in the championship.

Neither player has lost a set. In five matches, Navratilova has dropped just 16 games and Graf only 15.

Navratilova had a slightly easier time in Tuesday's quarterfinals, cruising to a 6-3, 6-1 victory over Natalia Zvereva. Graf saved a set point before punishing Jennifer Capriati 7-6 (7-3), 6-1.

The other women's semifinalists are Conchita Martinez, who beat Helena Sukova 6-1, 6-4, and Jana Novotna, a 6-4, 6-3 winner over Gabriela Sabatini.

Quote of the Day — "I'm trying to find my name in the paper and it's not easy. I have to go to Fulham and buy some Swedish papers. Now at least I'll have a short notice in the paper, I think." — Edberg on the lack of media coverage he's received.

DRAFT: Bradley 2nd pick

swapped the players.

In between those choices, Philadelphia filled its tall order with 7-6 Shawn Bradley.

Golden State, desperate to add rebounding and defensive help to a small, potent lineup, sweetened the trade considerably by throwing in three first-round draft choices, with the first to be exercised no earlier than 1996.

It was the first draft-day deal ever involving the league's No. 1 pick and the first time the top choice had been dealt at all since Cleveland acquired the pick from Philadelphia in 1986.

"These are both great players. We would be happy with either one," said Dick DeVos, Orlando's director of player personnel. "But when you put one together with three other players, that's a fantastic value. We just insured our future."

Orlando, which improved from 21 victories in 1991-92 to 41 in O'Neal's rookie season and then lucked out in the draft lottery for the second straight year, has 11 first-round choices over the next seven years.

Webber and Hardaway both wanted to be part of that future.

"Nothing against Golden State, but I'm looking forward to playing with Shaq," said Hardaway, a fine passer and outside shooter who can play point guard, shooting guard and small forward. "I think we're going to be a dominating team. Me and Shaq will play well together. We really complement each other."

Webber turned philosophical after learning of the trade.

"Maybe I wasn't the right thing for them," he said. "This is still a great thrill, to be the number one player in the draft."

Asked if he was upset, Webber said: "Don't take away my dream come true."

As costly as the deal was for Golden State, coach Don Nelson was thrilled.

"The beauty of the trade was that we didn't have to lose any players," he said. "We did have to give a lot. Three first-round picks is a lot to give for anybody, but we think it was well worth it.

"This has been in the works off and on for well over a month. We continued to communicate on a daily basis and it was culminated a few minutes before the draft began."

The move also had financial repercussions, especially for Orlando. The Magic are going to struggle signing their draft picks as it is. Adding the No. 1 choice for the second successive season might have been impossible.

O'Neal signed a seven-year, $40 million contract after Orlando drafted him first last year. Christian Laettner, picked third by Minnesota a year ago, signed a six-year, $21.6 million deal.

Said DeVos: "We'll make this happen."

Nelson also had been interested in Bradley before deciding he'd rather have the more polished Webber. Bradley hasn't played basketball competitively since he was a Brigham Young freshman in 1990-91, having spent the last two years as a Mormon missionary in Australia.

Had Philadelphia ruined the proposed trade by taking Hardaway, Orlando would have kept the three picks — as well as Webber — and the Warriors would have selected Bradley.

The 76ers are counting on Bradley to block tons of shots and, eventually, to develop into a fine all-around center. Bradley has good coordination for his size. He was a .400 hitter as a high school baseball player and enjoys water skiing and horseback riding.

"Big horse," he said.

The first senior chosen was J.R. Rider, a burly, 6-5 guard from UNLV, who went to the Minnesota Timberwolves at No. 5. Rider, the nation's second leading scorer at 29.1 points per game, felt he was the best player available.

"If I touch the ball enough," he said, "good things will happen."

The Timberwolves, who earlier in the day sent center Felton Spencer to Utah for center-forward Mike Brown, already have a good off-guard in Doug West.

MAVS: Team needs help everywhere

(From 1C)

Denied the chance to team guard Anfernee Hardaway of Memphis State with Jimmy Jackson in the Dallas backcourt, the Mavericks took what was left — not that Mashburn is anybody's leftovers.

Mashburn, the fourth straight underclassman taken in the draft, did everything for Rick Pitino's Wildcats, averaging 21 points, 8.4 rebounds and 3.6 assists as Kentucky reached the Final Four. He has good range on his jump shot, making 37 percent from 3-point range.

The Mavericks did select a physical guard with unlimited shooting range with the first pick of the second round: Lucious Harris, 6-foot-7 and 190 pounds. The leading scorer in Long Beach State and Big West Conference history, Harris averaged 23.1 points and shot 41 percent from 3-point range last season.

Dallas selected Michigan center Eric Riley with the 33rd pick, then sent his rights to Houston for the rights to power forward Ron "Popeye" Jones, the 41st selection in last year's draft.

Jones is under contract for another year with Milano Teorematour in Europe, where he averaged 21 points and 13.3 rebounds last season. He has dropped his weight from 270 pouns to 248 pounds.

Mashburn, however, was Dallas' money pick. He should command more than $20 million and serve a vital role as the Mavericks pick up the pieces of a shattered franchise.

Pitino said the 6-8, 240-pound Mashburn was talented enough to be the top pick, and Buckner concurred.

"Jamal is that good. He is as talented as anybody else taken ahead of him," said Buckner, who promised to test Mashburn at small forward, power forward and even some at shooting guard.

Mashburn said he didn't have a preferred position. "Anywhere. I fit in anywhere. It doesn't matter where I'm at, just as long as I'm on the court," he said.

Mashburn refused to compare himself to any NBA star.

"I never try to pattern myself after anybody," said Mashburn. "I want to make my own footsteps. So, I'm just going to try to be a Jamal Mashburn, not anybody else. Not Magic Johnson. Not Michael Jordan. Not anybody else."

Mashburn said he was excited because "there's a lot of playing time down there" with the rebuilding Mavericks, who entered the draft with an uncertain future save for the knowledge that they would have a better team next season no matter who they selected.

Although Dallas owned the fourth pick in the draft, the Mavericks' choice was dictated by Golden State, who chose Hardaway with the third pick.

The Warriors then sent the rights to the 6-foot-7 Memphis State guard along with three first-round draft picks to Orlando for the rights to top pick Chris Webber.

The Mavericks considered Hardaway the better all-around talent but Mashburn the better fit.

Mashburn was voted the 1993 college Player of the Year by Basketball Times and was runner up for the John Wooden Award as the nation's top player.

"Jamal is the complete player," Pitino said. "He does all the things great players do — shoots it, catches it, passes it and defends. He can post up as well as any player I've coached. And that includes Bernard King, which is as good as it gets.

"But I think the one thing people kind of overlook is that Jamal has a tremendous feel for the game. He makes good decisions," Pitino added. "He is a summa cum laude of basketball."

The Mavericks could use such a player.

Mets win two in a row first time since April

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

MIAMI — New York won two in a row for the first time since mid April, a span of 65 games, and Bret Saberhagen pitched an eight-hitter as the Mets beat Florida 7-1 Wednesday night.

The 65-game stretch tied Seattle for fourth place on the all-time list. The major league record is 80 straight games by the Philadelphia Athletics in 1915.

Saberhagen inproved to 4-7, with all of his victories this season coming against Florida and Colorado. He struck out eight and walked none en route to his first victory since May 10, 1-0 against the Marlins.

Eddie Murray's ninth home run, a solo shot, put New York up 2-0 in the fourth inning against starter Jack Armstrong (5-9). A seventh-inning single by Murray scored Vince Coleman to make it 3-0.

A single by Coleman drove in two runs in the eighth. The final two runs scored for New York on a ninth-inning error by Orestes Destrade.

Cincinnati 5, Houston

CINCINNATI — Brian Williams walked Gary Varsho with the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth inning to give Cincinnati a 5-4 victory over Houston on Wednesday night.

After tying the game in the eighth, the Reds loaded the bases with none out in the bottom of the ninth against Al Osuna (1-1). After Barry Larkin singled, first baseman Jeff Bagwell made a wild throw to second on Jeff Branson's attempted sacrifice for an error that left both runners safe. Reggie Sanders followed with an infield single off Williams.

Williams walked Varsho on a 3-1 pitch to give the Reds its fifth win in six games.

Jeff Reardon (2-1) pitched the ninth inning for the victory.

Randy Milligan hit a pair of solo homers and singled as part of the Reds' tying rally in the eighth.

Doug Jones failed to protect a 4-3 lead in the eighth, when Cincinnati scored an unearned run to tie it.

Kevin Mitchell extended his hitting streak to 20 games with a leadoff single, and Milligan followed with a single. Shortstop Andujar Cedeno then let catcher Scott Servais' attempted pickoff throw to second get away for an error that advanced the runners, and Bobby Kelly followed with a sacrifice fly.

Cubs 4, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — Sammy Sosa had his fourth two-homer game this season, and Rick Wilkins and Mark Grace also connected as Chicago beat San Diego for a three-game sweep.

Wally Whitehurst (2-5), who had given up only two homers in 53 previous innings, allowed Wilkins' leadoff drive in the second and Sosa's shot deep into the left-field seats leading off the fourth that put the Cubs up 2-1. With Pedro Martinez pitching in the eighth, Grace homered with one out and Sosa connected with two outs.

Sosa has a career-high 16 homers, besting his previous high of 15 with the Chicago White Sox in 1990. Wilkins, who hit his 14th, capped a torrid June with his eighth homer and 20th RBI. He went 36 for 87 (.414) in 26 games, with 16 extra-base hits and 19 runs scored. The homer was Grace's eighth and his sixth hit in six at-bats over two games.

Jose Guzman (7-6) allowed one run and six hits in 6 2-3 innings, walked two and struck out four to win for only the second time on the road this season. Randy Myers pitched the ninth for his 24th save, tying Bruce Sutter for the Cubs best prior to the All-Star break.

Expos 9, Pirates 1

MONTREAL — Larry Walker homered and drove in three runs as Montreal routed Pittsburgh.

Montreal outscored Pittsbugh 18-3 in the last two games of the series as Walker was 7 for 11 with two home runs, three doubles and four RBIs.

Mike Gardiner (1-2), making his first start of the season for the Expos, allowed one run and three hits in five innings. Jeff Fassero pitched four hitless innings for his first save of the season.

Walker broke a 1-1 tie in the third inning when he hit a two-run homer off Denny Neagle (2-3). Frank Bolick followed Walker's shot with his fourth homer of the season.

Braves 3, Rockies 2

ATLANTA — Greg Olson's sacrifice fly in the ninth inning lifted Atlanta over Colorado.

The Braves are 6-0 against the expansion Rockies this season.

Ron Gant opened the ninth with a double off reliever Keith Shepherd (1-2) and Sid Bream sacrificed the runner to third. Olson then hit a fly ball to medium center field and Gant, who had three hits including a home run, easily beat the throw home from Chris Jones.

Mark Wohlers (2-0) pitched two scoreless innings for the victory.

Colorado tied the score at 2-2 in the seventh when Dante Bichette hit a solo home run off starter Steve Avery.

Cardinals 9, Phillies 3

ST. LOUIS — Mark Whiten made up for some early fielding mistakes with a home run and four RBIs as St. Louis beat Philadelphia.

The Phillies' lead over the Cardinals in the NL East was trimmed to 6½ games as Philadelphia has lost four of its last five, scoring a total of nine runs in the losses and 13 in the victory.

Majkowski close to terms with Raiders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don Majkowski is close to signing with the Los Angeles Raiders and a deal could be completed by the end of the week.

"We're still negotiating with them and are hopeful we'll get it done shortly," Majkowski's agent, Bob Woolf, said Wednesday.

While Woolf said several other teams are interested in the free agent who spent his first six seasons with the Green Bay Packers, the Raiders are at the top of the quarterback's list.

Woolf would not discuss details, but it is believed Majkowski is looking for a one-year deal as he tries to come back from shoulder surgery on his throwing arm that limited him to three starts in 1992. Majkowksi, who had his best season in 1989 with 4,318 yards and 27 TDs, made $1.7 million with the Packers last season.

The Raiders have had quarterback woes for years and already have taken steps to solve the problem this season. In March, they signed free agent Jeff Hostetler, who led the New York Giants to a 1991 Super Bowl victory. Hostetler signed a three-year, $8 million deal.

Woolf, who represents Rocket Ismail, contradicted a report that the receiver-kick returner had signed with the Raiders for $3 million over two years.

"There is absolutely no agreement," Woolf said when asked about the report in The Toronto Sun. "Negotiations are ongoing, so I don't know where rumors like this start."

SI shelves ad showing naked soccer players

Associated Press

TORONTO — Sports Illustrated doesn't want a bunch of naked Canadian men splashed across its pages, so it has canned an ad by the athletic equipment manufacturer Adidas.

The offending advertisement involves a photograph showing members of the York Region Kick of the Canadian Soccer League wearing nothing but cleated shoes. Team members modestly cover their private parts with their hands, or a ball, or a trophy.

"Your team won't be taken seriously if it's not wearing Adidas," the ad copy says. "Don't be seen in anything less."

The magazine found it inappropriate.

This, the politically correct are quick to point out, comes from the same folks who bring you the annual "Swimsuit Issue," which has little to do with sports and everything to do with attractive women.

As a consequence, Adidas (Canada) Ltd. will no longer advertise in the Canadian editions of the magazine.

"This is not a war between Adidas and Sports Illustrated," said Doug Hayes, vice president of sales and marketing for the Toronto-based Adidas (Canada) Ltd. "We are going to lose that war. SI is a huge, powerful machine. We're just a little Canadian company. We aren't out to battle SI, we are out to get our ads seen by as many people as possible."

The ad was prepared by the Toronto office of Young and Rubicam as part of a campaign specifically designed for Canada and the Canadian edition of Sports Illustrated. Its purpose was to promote a new line of apparel for soccer teams.

"It was shown to people at the agency," Hayes said. "We showed it around here, and everybody loved it. Everybody had the same reaction: It's cute. It was never intended to be controversial."

Roger Jackson, a spokesman for Sports Illustrated in New York, said the company had the right to accept or reject any ad for any reason. The magazine did not give a reason.

"It's a policy that cuts across all Time Inc. publications," said Jackson. "We weren't singling out Adidas. We just didn't feel it was appropriate."

Sports Illustrated did provide Adidas Canada a free make-good ad.

"We said we expected more," Hayes said. "They weren't willing to give more."

The company may not have got its ad in Sports Illustrated, but it has reaped no shortage of publicity.

Gonzalez, Palmeiro power Rangers to win

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Rafael Palmeiro and Juan Gonzalez hit consecutive home runs in the sixth inning Wednesday night as Texas beat Kansas City 5-4.

Brian Bohanon (3-1), activated from the 15-day disabled list prior to the game, allowed one run and five hits in five innings, struck out three and walked one. Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 15th save in 18 chances.

Texas, which won for the fourth time in five games, took a 3-1 lead by scoring twice in the second when Dan Peltier singled, Dean Palmer hit an RBI double and then scored on a single by Mario Diaz.

Palmeiro hit his 15th home run of the season in the sixth and Gonzalez followed with his 20th to make it 5-1. Palmeiro reached 20 faster than any other Texas player. Larry Parrish held the previous club mark, hitting his 20th on July 5, 1987.

Indians 4, White Sox 2

CLEVELAND — Wayne Kirby singled in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning as Cleveland beat Chicago and extended their winning streak to six, their longest in three seasons.

Dennis Cook (5-4) pitched two-thirds an inning for the victory, and Jeremy Hernandez got six outs for his fourth save.

Wilson Alvarez (7-4) gave up three runs and eight hits in 6 2-3 innings, struck out seven and walked three.

Red Sox 12, Brewers 2

Scott Cooper and John Valentin drove in two runs each for Boston, which won seven straight before losing Tuesday night. The Red Sox finished its homestand with an 8-1 record, while the last-place Brewers lost for the ninth time in 12 games.

Danny Darwin (7-7) won for the seventh time in 10 decisions, allowing two runs and six hits in eight innings, striking out three and walking none.

Angel Miranda (0-1), making his first major-leage start, gave up three runs and four hits in 4 1-3 innings. He was making his fifth appearance since spending April and May on the disabled list with a strained left shoulder.

Mariners 5, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Randy Johnson fanned 10 for his fifth straight double-figure strikeout game, leading Seattle over Minnesota.

Johnson (10-4) increased his major league-leading strikeout total to 157, and struck out 10 or more for the 31st time in his career. He took a two-hit shutout into the seventh and wound up allowing two runs and six hits in eight innings.

Norm Charlton pitched the ninth for his 16th save in 18 chances. Omar Vizquel had four hits for Seattle, and Tino Martinez drove in two runs.

Orioles 6, Blue Jays 0

BALTIMORE — Fernando Valenzuela pitched a six-hitter for his second shutout of the season, leading Baltimore over Toronto.

Harold Baines drove in three runs and had three hits as Baltimore ended Toronto's four-game winning streak. The Blue Jays hadn't been shut out since a 1-0 loss to Boston and Frank Viola last Sept. 30, a span of 82 games.

IMF OKs $1.5 billion loan for Russia

■ Approval comes less than a week before Clinton, other leaders will meet with Yeltsin in Tokyo.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The International Monetary Fund approved a $1.5 billion loan for Russia on Wednesday, providing assistance viewed as crucial to Russian President Boris Yeltsin's reform efforts.

The action was announced following a closed-door meeting of the IMF's 24-member executive board. It was immediately hailed by the Clinton administration, which has made support for Yeltsin a major element of its foreign policy.

In a statement, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen called the IMF vote a "strong endorsement of the Russian government's reform program and a vote of confidence for President Yeltsin's success in securing a market-based democracy for the Russian people."

Bentsen said that the IMF loan was particularly important because it showed that the West was making good on its commitment to speed assistance to Russia to support Yeltsin's economic reforms.

The IMF approval came less than a week before Clinton and other leaders of the seven richest industrial countries will meet with Yeltsin in Tokyo to discuss current economic conditions in Russia.

Earlier in the month, Bentsen had been critical of the IMF for dragging its feet on the Russian loan application.

IMF officials, however, countered that they wanted to make sure that Russia was committed to making necessary economic reforms in such areas as slowing inflation and getting control of its budget deficit.

In its announcement, the IMF said that Russia would be able to qualify for an additional $1.5 billion in assistance in six months "provided that progress continues to be made in the implementation of the policy program."

The IMF said it wanted to see Russia reduce its monthly inflation rate to low single-digit increases by the end of the year. Inflation in Russia which had been increasing by almost 30 percent a month, slowed to an increased of 19 percent in May, still far above the IMF's target.

The IMF said the Russian government also would have to limit the amount of credit it supplies to inefficient state-run enterprises and also seek to cut its budget deficit in half, as a percentage of the country's economy, by the end of this year.

On Friday, IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus had told the IMF board that he was satisfied that Russia had made sufficient progress to qualify for the loan under a new IMF borrowing program with less stringent performance requirements than conventional IMF loans.

The IMF decision will ensure that President Clinton and other Western leaders will have something to present to Yeltsin next week when he arrives for discussions at the end of the seven-nation economic summit in Tokyo.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Falling prices for refined products pulled down crude oil prices on Wednesday on selling by traders who wanted to unload expiring contracts for July delivery of heating oil and gasoline.

Crude oil prices finished near their lows of the day, with August delivery of West Texas Intermediate settling at $18.85 per barrel, down 16 cents.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $17.25 per barrel.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in August settling at $2.181 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 1 cent. More distant delivery months fell.

Clorox unit sold

A swirl of announcements by Clorox Co. about its continuing plan to streamline operations was warmly received by investors Wednesday.

The company, best known for its bleach and household products, said it was selling its frozen-food business to Ore-Ida Foods Inc., a division of H.J. Heinz Co., and was resuming a program to buy back about $100 million of its stock, approximately 4 percent of the outstanding shares.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar moved higher against major foreign currencies in active trading Wednesday following President Clinton's suggestion that Germany should lower its interest rates.

In New York, the dollar traded late at 106.95 yen, up from 106.50 Tuesday.

In New York, the British pound was trading at $1.4915, down from $1.5118 Tuesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's rates: 1.7060 German marks, up from 1.6893; 1.5135 Swiss francs, up from 1.4990; 5.7470 French francs, up from 5.6910; 1,550.00 Italian lira, up from 1,536.00, and 1.2822 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2821.

Stocks slip

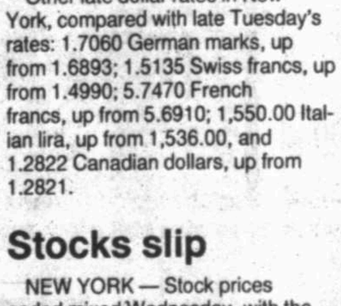

NEW YORK — Stock prices ended mixed Wednesday, with the Dow Jones industrial average dropping and the broader market ending higher, as nervous investors awaited more indications of the economy's strength.

Share prices were buffeted mostly by company news, or as institutional investors adjusted their portfolios on the last day of the second quarter.

The Dow fell 2.77 points to 3,516.08, but advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 4 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 280.91 million shares, up from 272.99 million in the previous session.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 2.88 to 703.95.

Orders to U.S. factories fall 3 months in row

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to American factories fell in May for the third month in a row, leading analysts to predict little growth this summer in the number of manufacturing jobs that has fallen to a 28-year low.

"A third decline does mean some weakness in upcoming months and industrial production will slow down," contended Evelina Tainer of Prime Economic Consulting in Chicago. "It doesn't bode well for employment in the manufacturing sector."

Economist Thomas Runiewicz of the WEFA Group in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., concurred.

"We're in a pretty sluggish economy," he said. "I don't think there'll be any immediate job growth in manufacturing. ... People are still uncertain and don't want to make commitments about orders or jobs."

Factories shed 39,000 jobs in May on top of a loss of 65,000 a month earlier, leaving manufacturing employment at the lowest level in 28 years.

The decline in factory orders was the latest in a batch of mostly lackluster economic reports, including falling new home sales, declining consumer confidence and weak retail sales.

"Most of them are pretty discouraging and some are encouraging," President Clinton said Wednesday during a photo session with congressional leaders.

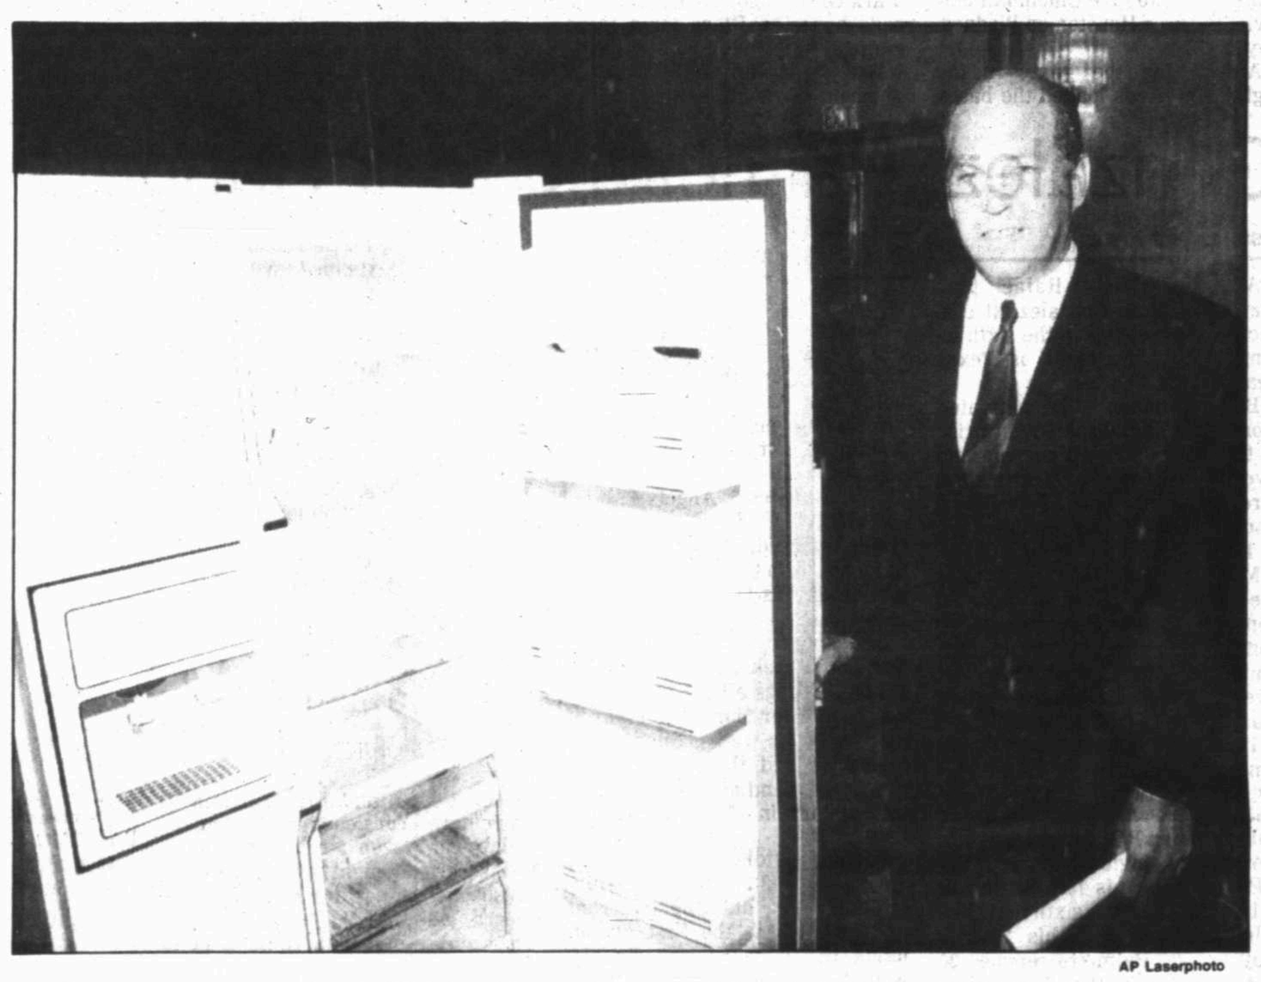

One of the more optimistic reports came Wednesday from a panel of top economists advising the American Bankers Association, which predicted the overall economy would grow moderately through 1994.

But Stuart G. Hoffman, chief economist of PNC Bank Corp. in Pittsburgh and panel chairman, warned that "three serious vulnerabilities are standing in the way of more robust economic growth."

They are "higher taxes brought on by the budget bill, uncertainties associated with the cost to business of health care reform, and the risk that the poor economic performance of our trading partners will have a dampening effect on U.S. exports."

However, there are encouraging signs, he added.

"Capital spending is rising ... and there are pent-up consumer demands still to be satisfied."

Whirlpool wins $30 million for 'super frig'

By Daniel Beegan
Associated Press writer

BOSTON — Whirlpool Corp. won a cool $30 million Tuesday in a competition with Frigidaire Co. to produce a super-efficient refrigerator that is designed to save energy and is friendlier to the environment.

The victory was announced by the Super Efficient Refrigerator Program, a non-profit California corporation consisting of 24 electric utilities.

The utilities, located in the Northeast, Mid-Atlantic, Midwest and West, contributed between $150,000 and $7 million each for the prize, based on the number of residential customers they serve.

The winning refrigerator will exceed 1993 federal energy standards by 25 percent to 50 percent and will contain no ozone-depleting chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs.

The competition was narrowed to two finalists in December. Both companies produced prototype refrigerators. Whirlpool's winning model was displayed at a news conference at which the winner was announced.

Ray Farhang, chairman of the refrigerator program and an executive of Southern California Edison Co., said the $30 million award will help keep the price of super-efficient refrigerators about the same as less efficient models.

Jeff Fettig, vice president for group marketing and sales of Whirlpool's North American appliance group, said the company would deliver its first super-efficient model — a 22-cubic-foot, side-by-side refrigerator-freezer — during the first quarter of 1994.

He said the refrigerator would be sold under the KitchenAid and Whirlpool brands, and at Sears stores under the Kenmore brand.

Whirlpool said it expects to sell about 250,000 of the high-efficiency models.

About 20 years ago, refrigerators used more than 1,500 kilowatt hours of electricity a year. Similar models now use about 900 hours. The super-efficient refrigerator would use about 700 kilowatt hours.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Stock ownership transfer rules vary by state

By Bill Doyle

Q: My wife and I own a modest portfolio of corporate stocks registered in both our names "JTWRS," or as joint tenants with right of survivorship.

Doyle

We are at the point in life where it behooves us to seriously contemplate what happens when one of us dies and the other must depend on dividends for a large part of his or her income.

How does the survivor have the stocks' registration restated to her or his individual name, upon the death of the other?

A: That can be accomplished through each stock's transfer agent, whose correct name, address and telephone number is in the most recent annual report to stockholders.

The paperwork necessary for the transfer varies a bit, depending on the state in which you live and the state in which each company is incorporated. So, the survivor should telephone the transfer agents to learn the required procedure.

Along with the stock certificates, the survivor will have to send a copy of the death certificate, an affidavit of domicile attesting where the deceased joint owner lived, an inheritance tax waiver and, perhaps, some other documents. Some states allow a statement of "no tax due" in lieu of an inheritance tax waiver.

It would be wise to touch base with the transfer agents while you are both alive, so that the grief-stricken survivor will know what to do when one of you leaves this vale of tears.

When everything is in proper order, it should hand-delivered or sent to the transfer agents by registered mail, return receipt requested.

Q: Registered mail has to be insured, which can get expensive. Should stock certificates sent by registered mail be insured for the stocks' full value?

A: No. Insuring each piece of registered mail for 4 percent of the market value of the stock will be sufficient. That insurance will more than cover the cost of the surety bond you would have to obtain in the most unlikely event the piece of registered mail is lost by the U.S. Postal System.

Q: Over the years, I have received many stock certificates from brokerage firms and banks, always by regular first class mail — never by registered mail.

Isn't that type of delivery fraught with danger?

A: Not really. Brokerages, banks and other senders of stock certificates carry blanket surety bonds to reimburse them for losses in the mail.

Those blanket bonds are much less expensive than individual surety bonds on all certificate mailings.

A word of caution. If a certificate or other valuable document you expect to receive does not arrive within a reasonable time, contact the sender so that it can trace that piece of mail. If it is lost, the sender can use its blanket surety bond.

Q: Here's a mystery for which I have not found a realistic answer.

What causes a common stock to go up one "point," meaning one dollar per share or more?

A: More buying demand than selling pressure. As the old expressing goes, "More buyers than sellers."

The price of any stock in the marketplace moves up or down in response to the number of shares of that stock investors and/or speculators are bidding to buy and the number of shares other people are offering to sell — at any given moment.

Buying demand and selling pressure can and often does change rapidly. The price of a particular stock might rise or fall in the morning, then go in the opposite direction later in the day.

Q: On a recent day, the newspaper listed a stock I own as having a "high" of $30, a "low" of $28, a close of $30 and a "net change" of $1. Shouldn't that last number have been $2?

A: Nope. The net change is the difference between that day's closing price and the previous trading day's closing price. Based on your numbers, the previous day's close was $29.

GM winds down Willow Run production year; future rests with courts

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — General Motors Corp. is winding down production at its Willow Run Assembly Plant, much as it does at the end of every model year.

This time, if GM has its way, the idling to begin July 9 will be for good.

GM wants to consolidate the Willow Run production at a plant in Arlington, Texas, that also builds large, rear-wheel drive passenger cars. GM classifies the down time at both plants as temporary layoffs.

Arlington's 3,200 hourly workers could be affected if the court keeps Willow Run operating.

The 2,400 Willow Run workers on the only shift building Chevrolet Caprices are worried, much as they have been since the February 1991 announcement that their plant would be among the automaker's sacrifices to become smaller and more competitive.

But the mood is not doom and gloom.

"We've got some people that are down, but the majority of people's spirits are still up," said Bob Harlow, president of United Auto Workers Local 1776.

Workers think their chances are good they'll return in late August to begin building 1994 models of the Caprice sedan, police car, taxis and Caprice and Buick Roadmaster station wagons.

The future of the Willow Run plant rests with the Michigan Court of Appeals. It is expected to rule soon on GM's appeal of a lower court ruling that blocked the closing.

The Washtenaw County Circuit Court said GM broke its promise to keep the plant open until 2003 in exchange for $13.5 million in tax breaks. GM claims it made no such promise when it accepted the abatements.

Ypsilanti Township's lawsuit was viewed favorably by Judge Donald Shelton. If the appeals court agrees, GM has said it would appeal to the Michigan Supreme Court.

If, however, the appeals court sides with GM, the township plans to ask the Supreme Court to extend the injunction blocking GM from closing the plant.

"The way we look at it, if that injunction is not kept in place, GM would gut this plant and the work force. Then, if we won at the Supreme Court, there would be nothing left to reopen," Harlow said.

Willow Run had two shifts until about a year ago. Of the workers who have left, GM spokesman Pete Ternes said 390 have transferred to Arlington to take the place of retired workers, 220 workers have gotten jobs at Saturn Corp., the GM small car subsidiary in Tennessee .

Survey: Executive women make strides at work, home

NEW YORK (AP) — Executive women have made significant strides in their professional and personal lives over the past decade, a new study of 400 top female executives shows.

But researchers in the field of women's equality issues said the number of women in high positions is still relatively small and their wages are still low compared to what men have achieved.

The survey, "Decade of the Executive Woman," was conducted by the UCLA Graduate School of Management and the executive search firm Korn-Ferry International.

It paints a picture of the average senior woman executive as 44 years old and married with children, in a reversal from a 1982 study by the same duo that showed most top women executives had sacrificed family for career.

"It's the most dramatic survey I've seen in five years," said Judsen Culbreth, editor-in-chief of Working Mother magazine. "It shows women have come a lot further than we thought."

Conducted earlier this year, the study looked at more than 400 women executives holding the title of vice president or higher at the nation's largest industrial and service companies.

"Senior women executives have made monumental gains in both their professional and personal lives over the past decade," said Richard Ferry, chairman and chief executive of Korn-Ferry. "They are beginning to exercise choices that appeared unthinkable just 10 years ago."

About 60 percent of senior woman executives are married and 57 percent have children. Ten years ago, only 40 percent of women executives were married and 60 percent had no children, the survey showed.

In a 1989 survey, nine out of 10 men were married and 91 percent had children, according to the survey.

But juggling family and work obligations has taken its toll. The survey showed that 77 percent of the women wanted to retire before the age of 65, compared with only 30 percent of their male counterparts.

Although most women surveyed were satisfied with their careers, they acknowledged that the pace of progress for women was too slow.

A factor holding women back, the study found, was that men currently holding positions of power within corporations still do not feel comfortable with women as peers. And "comfort level," as the survey calls it, is an important part of selecting executives for the most senior positions.

Clorox to sell off foods division

(NYT) — A swirl of announcements by Clorox Co. about its continuing plan to streamline operations was warmly received by investors Wednesday. The company's stock rose $2, to $52.125, its highest closing price in more than a year.

The company, best known for its bleach and household products, said it was selling its frozen-food business to Ore-Ida Foods Inc., a division of H.J. Heinz Co., and was resuming a program to buy back about $100 million of its stock, approximately 4 percent of the outstanding shares.

In a meeting with securities analysts in Manhattan, Craig C. Sullivan, chief executive of the company, based in Oakland, Calif., said he had also increased Clorox's stake in Progar SA, a bleach company in Buenos Aires that produces about 65 percent of the bleach sold in Argentina, to 90 percent from 51 percent.

As a result, Sullivan said he expects Clorox's earnings for the fourth quarter and year, which ended Wednesday, to be 25 percent and 15 percent higher, respectively, than the predictions of many analysts.

Fashion for few funds found

By Anne-Marie Schiro
N.Y. Times News Service

When Joseph Cicio became chief executive officer of I. Magnin last September, he decided the store was overlooking a potential customer: the career woman with advanced fashion taste but a limited budget.

"The store had a brilliant designer business and designer image," he said in a recent interview in the San Francisco store, "but the young career customer was not a shopper in this store."

Now she is, he said. What brought her in was a whole new floor devoted to her needs that opened in January. Called the New Edge, it carries Donna Karan's DKNY line along with designers like Byron Lars, Norma Kamali, Todd Oldham, Anna Sui and Gemma Kahng.

When Burton Tansky went from Saks Fifth Avenue to Bergdorf Goodman as vice chairman two and a half years ago, he realized that the store was not attracting enough young women who worked in the neighborhood. Bergdorf's was known for its high-priced high fashion, and the only area devoted to less-expensive career and casual clothing was an ill-lighted labyrinth on the fifth floor.

"I saw redoing the fifth floor as a priority," he said recently. "With my background at Saks, I knew that business had enormous potential."

BY LAST September, he was chairman of the store and had a new floor, called On 5, with wide open spaces, bright lighting and a mix of labels like DKNY, CK Calvin Klein, Adrienne Vittadini, Rifat Ozbek, Norma Kamali and Anne Klein II.

Now the floor is attracting two kinds of women, said Ellin Saltzman, the fashion director of the store. "We're getting the establishment customer who has discovered that kind of merchandise for weekend wear and the 'I work in the area and never shopped at Bergdorf Goodman' customer," she said.

These two specialty stores on opposite coasts are examples of how retailers are responding to the changing winds of fashion. The head-to-toe designer look favored by fashionable women in the '80s has given way to a more eclectic style of dressing.

Many women either cannot or do not want to spend a fortune on clothes and are looking for less expensive outfits or for items to mix with what they have in their closets.

And the emergence in recent years of exciting young designers like Byron Lars and Todd Oldham has created a new niche in retailing. Their clothes are not expensive enough to hang alongside, say, the Calvin Klein collection and are too adventurous to blend comfortably with so-called career lines, which are generally classic styles that are less expensive than designer clothes.

Barneys New York was probably the first store to try to fill that void when it opened the Coop in 1986 as an adjunct to its women's store on 17th Street. The Coop, with a separate entrance, serves the fashion-forward customer on a limited budget.

DEPARTMENT STORES, being larger and more structured, have gone after that customer in different ways. Most have career clothes in one area and young designer clothes in another.

Bloomingdale's has designers' lower-priced "bridge" collections like CK Calvin Klein and DKNY, along with career lines, on the third floor of its Manhattan store, trendy lines like Anna Sui and Junior Gaultier on two, and designer collections ranging from Armani to Mizrahi on four.

The block-square third floor of Macy's Herald Square store is divided into designer, bridge, sportswear and young designer areas. Macy's San Francisco has a street-floor shop for on-the-edge designers like Moschino, Ozbek, Ann de Meulemeester and Todd Oldham, with career collections like Ellen Tracy on two.

But Bergdorf's and I. Magnin are banking on the assumption that a young customer has emerged who wants to do all her shopping in one place. Bergdorf's On 5 has career clothes by Anne Klein II, party clothes by Norma Kamali, casual wear by Henry Lehr and cosmetics by Bobbi Brown, plus handbags, hats, jewelry, shoes and swimwear and even a cafe.

"My idea is that the entire floor is a boutique," Tansky said. "The mix of merchandise is not based on price but on attitude, designs that work together and serve a young, forward-thinking customer. It's a destination floor, not a designer floor."

So there are no signs with designer or brand names. The store's theory is that the customer for that floor is not interested in names but in clothing that attracts her eye and fills a need. But it can be confusing to shop there. ("We may put the names up yet," Tansky admitted.)

"I'M SURE there was some difficulty for the customer to find us at first," said Carol Anweiler, the vice president of sales for Anne Klein II, "but Bergdorf Goodman has a loyal following, so our department became a destination. Our business is up 30 percent over last year."

Denise Seegal, the president of DKNY, said her customers found the configuration of the floor confusing at first. "But once they find us, it's fine," she said. "We have a bigger and better space that can house the merchandise much better."

Because there are no defined areas for specific designers and all the fixtures are movable, the store has great flexibility in moving vendors and expanding or shrinking their space. For a small company like Byron Lars, this can present difficulty.

"There's a tremendous movement of vendors around the floor," said Mary Ann Wheaton, the designer's managing partner. "When there's no sign with your name and you're not in a specific area, it's hard to serve your customer. You need to build some return business, but the customer is never sure where you are."

BUT THE flexibility can work well for a big company that commands sizable space.

"The old fifth floor was very inefficient," said Richard Catalano, the president of Adrienne Vittadini. "Our clothes look much better on the new floor and our business at Bergdorf's has doubled over the last year. They can expand our area when there's a lot of merchandise and shrink it when the goods sell out."

Joseph M. Boitano, a senior vice president of Bergdorf's, said sales on the floor so far have exceeded the store's expectations, but it has been a learning experience. "We're learning about the customer, the way she likes to shop, when she likes to shop and what she likes," he said.

The New Edge at I. Magnin is also built around the boutique-within-a-store concept. The sixth floor of the San Francisco store is a world unto itself, with clothing for work, play and evening, handbags, belts, hats, jewelry, shoes, gifts and a coffee bar.

"Before I came here, the sixth floor had Ellen Tracy and other moderate-price lines, which I moved to four," Cicio said.

"If we're going to be successful, we have to be different, aggressive and courageous. Each floor should be like a boutique with everything for that customer. The New Edge isn't just trendy. It's dressing that customer for work and weekends and evenings. I want to keep improving the content, but we're already doing about five times the business the floor was doing before."

The realignment has not worked so well for DKNY. "Magnin's used to have our to-work clothes on four and casual on six," Ms. Seegal said. "Now it's all on six but in limited real estate, and it's been difficult for us."

Employee, not clothes, important

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Lafavore, executive editor of Men's Health magazine, spoke to the recent press preview of Men's Fashion Association about sensible dressing for sensible guys.

"Today's more competitive companies understand that it's the person inside the clothing that gets the job done, not the clothes he or she wears to the office."

Witness the booming computer industry, which says "just wear some clothes, please," compared with IBM, where the dress code is still in place — but for 45,000 fewer employees because of IBM layoffs and cutbacks.

Follow rules for summer survival

By Erma Bombeck

Bombeck

Children who spend the summer in homes where parents are working are well-versed in the number to call when there is a major crisis. They simply lift up the phone and dial 911.

But when are things bad enough to ring up Mom or Dad at work? This is a tough call. Following are some guidelines that might serve a child well this summer:

■ The death of a pet turtle does not qualify Mom for the family leave bill. Just say something nice over it and flush it.

■ Mom does not have to share in your screw-ups the very moment you experience them. If you put a pound of hamburger in the dishwasher and set the timer on "heat" to thaw it and accidentally push "rinse," trust me when I tell you that she will not be amused.

■ It is always easier to ask forgiveness than permission, so if the gang wants to play at your house — live by your own decision and die from it later.

■ When Mom returns home and the dog is wearing her bra on his front legs and pantyhose on his back legs, she will always believe the dog and take his side. That's the way mothers are.

■ Never play the paternal courts for a better decision. For example, if your mom says you cannot leave the house to play because you have to wait for the washer repairman, don't shop for a decision from your dad at his office. It's a dangerous game.

■ When you are having a fight with your siblings, before you pick up the phone to complain, ask yourself three questions: Do I want to spend my entire puberty in my room? Will she really ship us off to a work camp or is she bluffing? Do we really want her to deal with this when she gets home?

■ You can keep your addiction to dialing 900 numbers for your horoscope and dial-a-joke a secret for 30 days or the arrival of the phone bill, whichever comes first.

■ The phrase "There's nothing to do," accompanied by a sigh and a whine, wears thin after a week or so. If you persist in using it, be prepared for your parents to give you a list of chores you're not crazy about: moving the garden hose every 15 minutes, washing out the garbage cans, cleaning your room, setting the table for dinner and cutting the grass. Quit while you're ahead.

And one last piece of advice: When you dial your mom to tell her your brother is making faces again and you are put on hold while they summon her from the boss's office — hang up quickly while you still have a chance.

DEAR ABBY

Divorce, death don't stop man's loyalty

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Twenty years ago, I dated a married man I'll call "Jim." I was newly divorced and he was my landlord. We lost track of each other for many years, but last September he phoned, asking to see me. He had been divorced for 14 years and was not on speaking terms with any of his seven children. He said they didn't pay enough attention to their mother, who was in a nursing home, and besides, they contributed to her breakdown with their bad behavior.

Abby, she divorced him, and it was a very bitter divorce, but because of problems with their children and her ill health, he became more and more concerned with her, visiting her at the nursing home twice a day, seven days a week. Have you ever heard of a bitterly divorced man going to a nursing home to see his ex-wife 14 times a week? He said he was trying to keep her "focused" and distract her from her illness.

Well, last week she died in his arms, and he's taking it very hard — much worse than he thought he would. He continues to call me once in a while.

She is buried only a hop, skip and jump away from his home. My guess is he will probably visit her each day at the mausoleum where she now resides. You have my permission to publish this letter — and please comment. — S.W. IN ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR S.W.: Whatever fueled his emotions, whether it was guilt over the failure of the marriage, compassion or residual love, Jim has suffered a loss, and will need some time to work it through.

If you are patient and able to control any feelings of jealousy, you might find a future with this man — provided you want one with someone who has alienated all seven of his children.

DEAR ABBY: Please warn your readers that the man wearing a sign around his neck that says, "I am hungry, will work for food" could be a scam. It was proved to be in our city. There is no law against wearing these signs, so con artists go from city to city working this scam. Most people either have no work to offer or they are afraid to take a stranger home to do odd jobs, so they impulsively give them a dollar or two.

I personally gave money to such a man who was loitering outside the post office as I entered. When I came out, I saw this man take a wad of dollar bills out of his pocket and hand it to a woman who drove by in a nice-looking new car. I felt like a fool. After the local paper mentioned these people, this particular man moved in front of a neighborhood church, and a week or so later, I saw him near a shopping mall.

My suggestion would be to refer these beggars to a mission, or offer them some real work — and see what happens. — MRS. F.E. ALTARAS, FORT WORTH, TEXAS

DEAR MRS. ALTARAS: Yours is an excellent suggestion. A word to the (street) wise should be sufficient.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing you in the hope that I can do something to make myself feel better, as well as to help others who might experience the same situation.

I went to a local beauty salon (one of the city's largest and best known, supposedly with a good reputation) for a haircut. My request was "a simple haircut — one that will need as little upkeep as possible," but I was told that I had to style my hair daily with a blow dryer and I would be shown how. The message I got was that I was just not an adequate woman without puffy, styled hair.

As the hairdo session went on, I felt like I was on the firing line with an array of questions, from where did I work, what did I do, where did I live, to the most inappropriate ones like, "Are you married?" "Well, have you ever been married?" "Do you have kids?" and, "How old are you?"

I was too busy holding back tears to explain that some people — 10 percent, in fact — are gay, and that it's rude to ask such questions. The final insult came when I asked if a perm might help to make my hair more manageable, and was told I really ought to cover my gray hair!

If etiquette, while working on someone's hair, is not taught in beauty school, it ought to be. Abby, please tell them. — THE 10-PERCENT WOMAN FROM LOUISIANA

DEAR 10-PERCENT WOMAN: You just told 'em. I could not have done better.

Sneakers are fashionable

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

Sandals are fine. So are espadrilles and platforms. No question about it, though: the sneaker is top dog this summer.

It's almost awesome the number of sneaker-clad feet one sees on the streets. The running-shoe hordes are still out in full force. For years women have been wearing these sturdy appendages, their proper shoes stowed in their totes to put on at work.

Now there has been a shift. The more refined sneakers, sleeker and slimmer like the original tennis shoes, are taking over.

Then there is the evening sneaker. Maybe it's just a manifestation of the deliberately deconstructed fashion look, but after twilight plenty of sneakers have been spotted sticking out below sheer pants and dresses.

A word of warning, though: While there is no denying that wearing tennis-type sneakers is a comfortable as well as a snappy style right now, some doctors advise against it.

"Constant wear of tennis shoes is bad," said Dr. Richard M. Kushner, a Manhattan podiatrist. "They give no support. If it's comfort you want, a running shoe is better." But of course that's not fashion.

Clinton expected to extend nuclear weapons test ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's expected decision against resuming nuclear weapons testing would take the world a step closer to a total ban and, in the eyes of testing foes, earn him an honored place in the history of arms control.

Clinton said Wednesday he had made a decision and would announce it within a few days. He declined to elaborate, but aides said he has received a strong recommendation from advisers to extend the current U.S. moratorium on testing which was imposed by Congress last October and expires July 1.

Many details of Clinton's plan remained unclear, such as whether he would extend the moratorium indefinitely, for a year or only as long as the world's other four nuclear powers — France, Russia, Britain and China — didn't test first.

Government and congressional officials said Clinton wanted to notify U.S. lawmakers and foreign leaders of the details before making them public.

But the anticipated decision is already drawing favorable reviews and is likely to get a warm reception at next week's summit of the world's seven major industrial democracies.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin, who plans to join the seven leaders in Tokyo, has been concerned that a U.S. lifting of the moratorium would force him to yield to pressure from the military in his country to resume testing.

France and Russia have had moratoria since last year, as has Britain because it can only test in the United States and is thus bound by U.S. decisions. China has not tested since last September and is trying to formulate a future policy on testing.

Unidentified women, wrapped in veils, leave house identified as the residence of Earl Gant in Philadelphia Wednesday. Gant, 27, was arrested in connection with the plot to bomb the United Nations and cripple New York City, bringing number of arrests to nine.

FBI arrests ninth suspect connected to bomb plots

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A ninth man was arrested Wednesday in the plot to bomb the United Nations and other sites in New York City. A federal complaint said the man met with the plot's ringleader to discuss obtaining explosives.

Earl Gant, 27, of Philadelphia, was charged with conspiracy to transport explosives in interstate commerce, according to the complaint released by the FBI. He faces a hearing Thursday afternoon in Philadelphia.

Officials were searching Gant's home Wednesday evening.

Eight others, five of them Sudanese Muslims, were arrested June 24 and charged with conspiracy to bomb U.N. headquarters, the building that houses New York's FBI office and the Holland and Lincoln tunnels linking Manhattan and New Jersey. They were being held without bail.

Tom Kimmel of the FBI in Philadelphia said authorities weren't certain of Gant's citizenship.

The federal complaint said Gant met with the plot's alleged ringleader, Siddig Ibrahim Siddig Ali, on May 19 in Philadelphia to discuss obtaining explosives material to build a bomb.

Philadelphia man was charged with conspiracy to transport explosives in interstate commerce.

A federal complaint against the first eight suspects relies heavily on information provided by a confidential informant who helped rent a garage in New York City where five of the men were arrested while allegedly stirring ingredients for a bomb.

Emad Salem, a former Egyptian army officer and bodyguard for Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, has been identified in news reports as the informant. The sheik's followers include some suspects in the bombing plot and others charged in the February bombing of the World Trade Center that killed six people

Police link self-professed serial killer to at least eight murders

EAST FARMINGDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Joel Rifkin's bedroom housed a stash of women's underwear, shoes and jewelry. His garage yielded a bloody wheelbarrow.

On Wednesday, police said he was a suspect in at least nine murders. Rifkin told them the number will rise to 17.

The 34-year-old was arrested Monday when police found a woman's decomposed body in his pickup after he ran a stop sign.

He admitted strangling or suffocating 17 prostitutes over two years, authorities said. He claims he dismembered two or three for easy disposal, according to a law enforcement source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

On Tuesday, when investigators swarmed the home in suburban East Meadow where Rifkin lived with his sister and widowed mother, the garage stank, perhaps from the bloody wheelbarrow or from a vehicle that could have once carried human remains.

They removed a chain saw from the garage.

In Rifkin's cluttered bedroom, they found women's clothing: bras, underpants, shoes and a sweater. There was an earring, a brooch, a woman's driver's license and women's welfare, credit and library cards.

"We have names of 10 females that appeared on various materials taken out of Rifkin's room," said State Police Capt. Walter Heesch. He said it wasn't certain they were victims.

"This is consistent with the behavior of a serial killer — they take what they call trophies from their victims," he said.
