Panel's vote favors UTPB

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Supporters of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin cleared a major hurdle Friday when the Select Committee on Higher Educaton unanimously recommended to maintain state funding for the institution.

The committee, which will formally make its recommendations to the 70th Legislature when it convenes in January, also voted Friday to keep open Texas A&M University at Galveston and East Texas University in Commerce.

The Legislature will be responsible for making any final decisions.

The panel Thursday unanimously voted to keep open Sul Ross University in Alpine.

The panel had considered closing all four universities to help eliminate a $2.3 billion budget deficit.

Closing UTPB would save the state about $3.6 million annually, assuming all of the university's current students transferred to another state-supported school.

Vote of confidence 'good news'

By JULIE HILLRICHS

University of Texas of the Permian Basin supporters said they weren't surprised when the 23-member Select Committee on Higher Education voted unanimously today to recommend that the Odessa-based school remain open.

The vote of confidence is "not that surprising to us, but it's certainly good news," said Steve Hardin, manager of economic development with the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The Committee voted unanimously Thursday to recommend that Sul Ross State University be saved.

Votes were taken today on the two other schools being considered for closure — East Texas State University at Commerce and Texas A&M at Galveston.

"We're very pleased," UTPB President Dr. Duane Leach said.

"It simply confirms our belief all along that we serve a real need in the Permian Basin. We look forward to putting this behind us and getting on with our work to serve the needs of the students in our region and assisting in diversifying and developing the economy of the Permian Basin," he said.

Midland Chamber of Commerce President Joan Baskin said UTPB supporters are gratified by the Select Committee's recognition of higher education and its importance to the region.

"It (UTPB) will continue to be a growing and valuable insititution that we can all look to with pride," she said.

The committee will report to the Legislature, which established the special panel in 1985 to review public higher education.

Odessa Chamber of Commerce President John F. Landgraf said he is delighted, but not surprised by the Select Committee's recommendation.

"This is a great day for the Permian Basin and should make all of the students, faculty and staff at the University secure and they can continue their effort in the education of West Texas," Landgraf said.

Although the staff recommended keeping the schools open, Vic Arnold, director of the committee staff, told the Associated Press that further analysis of these institutions, along with all other universities in the state may be useful.

Escapee sought in Big Sandy area

BIG SANDY (AP) — Law officers swarmed around this East Texas town early today after a female sheriff's deputy taken hostage by a murder suspect and convicted rapist known as "Animal" was freed unharmed, authorities said.

"She's all right. He's on the ground," Upshur County Chief Deputy James Beasley said after Rosalie Williams, 24, was freed late Thursday night.

Police armed with riot guns searched for jail escapee Jerry Walter McFadden, charged in the murder of one of three Hawkins youths slain in May. Authorities stopped a freight train today and searched boxcars but did not find the fugitive.

"Getting her back safe is the main thing," Sheriff Dale Jewkes said. "Next we have to get McFadden so he can pay for what he did."

Lawmen cordoned off a search area estimated by Jewkes at between 10 and 15 square miles as other officers and K-9 teams fanned out.

"We've got men on horseback in heavily wooded areas and we've still got the dogs here," said Jewkes.

Big Sandy Police Chief Richard Lingle said he received a telephone call about 9:45 p.m. Thursday from a resident who told him "there was a girl in the back room who fit the description of Rosalie Williams."

Lingle said he immediately contacted Eddie Williams, a state trooper and husband of the hostage, then went to the house.

Lingle said Mrs. Williams told him her Datsun 280ZX, which McFadden took when he abducted her as he fled the Upshur County Jail Wednesday night, overheated about four miles north of Big Sandy off a farm-to-market road about 6 a.m. Thursday and they abandoned the vehicle.

Mrs. Williams told Lingle they hid in a railroad boxcar for almost 16 hours. During that time, she told Lingle, McFadden did not harm her.

Lingle said Mrs. Williams told him McFadden, 38, took her to a street corner and said, "Go," and she fled to the nearest house, where an occupant called police.

The hulking, full-bearded McFadden, who bears the inscription "Death before dishonor for the Lonesome Loser" among numerous tattoos on his chest, was awaiting trial on charges of murder, robbery and assult when he escaped from the jail in Gilmer, about 15 miles to the northeast.

During the moonless early morning hours today, Big Sandy was surrounded by a double perimeter of roadblocks. Police had their cars parked along Texas Highway 155 and U.S. 80 facing into the densely wooded undergrouwth, shining their spotlights and headlights into ditches and culverts.

Tracking dogs were being used and residents were asked to remain indoors.

Lingle said Mrs. Williams, the mother of a 4-year-old son, was taken to Baylor Hospital in Gilmer by her husband and she told him she was fine, but Lingle said she did appear to be "shaken and in mild shock."

About 200 state, local and federal officials joined the search Thursday.

Cuts may affect 150 elderly Midlanders

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

State budget problems may force the elimination of three programs that help feed, monitor and supervise almost 150 elderly, low-income Midlanders, an official said Thursday.

Bob Stokes, a Texas Department of Human Services Aged and Disabled Program social service worker, said state revenue shortfalls may force the closing of Meals on Wheels, the Emergency Response Service and a Big Spring program providing supervision for senior citizens.

About 64 home-bound Midlanders receiving food through the Meals On Wheels program, 85 others monitored by an Emergency Response Service and 24 senior citizens at a Big Spring nursing home could be affected.

If the three Permian Basin programs are cut, the state could save about $176,621.

The Texas Department of Human Services is searching for ways to cut its budget to meet expected state revenue shortfalls due to the drop in oil prices.

"The kicker is, it's hard for people in the Permian Basin and the region to accept the fact that the state is out of money," Stokes said.

"We're really beginning to realize what the oil economy has done. It's not only affecting the aged, it's affecting every person."

In the Permian Basin, Meals On Wheels operates with $75,955 from the state which is matched with $241,321 in federal funds, said Landre Doan, contract manager with the human service department.

The supervised living program operates on a $80,912 budget and the Emergency Response program has a budget of $19,754.

If the programs are eliminated, individuals will have to turn to friends and family for help, Stokes said.

"The only thing the individual people can do is just rely on family and friends," he said.

Lola Pearson, 64, who has emphysema and bronchitis, would have to cook an extra meal each day if the program is eliminated, says her daughter Marolyn Johnson.

Appropriations committee taking look at state's budget

Panel's chairman, governor discuss possible solutions to state's crisis

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, whose panel convenes today for a preliminary look at the beleaguered state budget, traded possible solutions to the problem Thursday with Gov. Mark White.

"He didn't play politics at all on it," Rudd said of his hour-long meeting with White, who is weathering almost daily budget criticism from former Gov. Bill Clements, his Republican opponent in November's gubernatorial election.

Rudd said his 29-member committee will make no decisions today, just "put down what our job is and get on with it."

He said he expects the committee to meet again late next week and devise "some proposals" to help the state deal with a $2.3-billion-and-growing budget shortfall.

White, a Democrat, has said he will call lawmakers into special session when legislative budget writers have put together a workable plan.

He has placed state expenditures on public education, highways, prisons, mental health and retardation institutions and human services and welfare off-limits for cutting.

As Comptroller Bob Bullock continues to issue ever-worsening reports on the amount of the shortfall, Rudd said, White's "no-touch" list looks less and less possible.

Those programs account for more than 80 percent of the state's $37 billion, two-year budget.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Senate leaders support an increase in the sales tax to make up the shortfall, but all tax bills must originate in the House. House Speaker Gib Lewis says he sees no support for a tax increase at this time.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones has not yet called a meeting of his committee.

Rudd advocates cutting enough spending to allow Treasurer Ann Richards to pay the state's bills through the fall and winter.

When the Legislature returns in regular session in January, he said, lawmakers will have time to come up with a comprehensive solution to the state's budget woes.

Treasury spokesman Bill Cryer said Richards can borrow no more than $1.3 billion from special funds on any one day to pay bills from general revenue — the state's main checking account.

Cryer said he did know exactly how much lawmakers would have to cut to keep the general revenue deficit below $1.3 billion.

Clements Thursday blasted White for taking political polls to determine whether to call a special session.

He urged the governor to bring the Legislature back to Austin immediately, asking them to give him authority to "cut out low priority spending items."

"The time for politics is over," Clements said. "The time for action is now."

Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, said White is acting correctly by waiting for legislative leaders to prepare a budget plan before he calls the special session.

Although only one-fourth of the Legislature faces election opposition in November, Martin said politics will still play a role in solving the budget problems.

Pointing to what he called a growing "block-voting mentality" among Republicans in the House, Martin said he feared GOP representatives might "try to use a special session to blame the governor regardless of their own political situation."

Cyanide tampering threat involves sugar-free Jell-O

From Staff and Wire Reports

Two supermarket chains have pulled sugar-free Jell-O from stores in four states after someone claimed he poisoned three boxes with cyanide and placed the tainted products in Chicago- and Detroit-area stores, officials said.

Three Midland grocery store officials said today they had not pulled the product from their shelves. Two of the officials said they had not yet heard of the incident.

An anonymous caller made the claim Thursday afternoon on a toll-free consumer hotline of General Foods Corp., the company said.

"We don't know whether we are dealing here with an insane act of consumer terrorism or facing a genuine threat," said Bernard Turnock, Illinois public health director. "But we can't afford to take any chances."

The caller said in the tape-recorded message he put sodium cyanide in three boxes of sugar-free Jell-O and placed them on shelves in a Kroger store in the Detroit area and a Jewel Foods Store in the Chicago area, General Foods said.

The message did not identify the specific stores, but said the boxes were of the 0.6-ounce size and came from lot No. 4318D3. It didn't specify a flavor. "Better take this serious. This is no joke," the caller concluded.

The manufacturer asked Kroger stores in the Detroit area and Jewel stores in the Chicago area to remove all 0.6-ounce sugar-free Jell-O, regardless of lot number, from shelves.

"We are retrieving as much product as quickly as we can to test for tampering," said spokesman Kenneth Defren from General Foods' headquarters in White Plains, N.Y.

Kroger said it was taking that action at its 57 stores in Michigan, said Paul Bernish, a Kroger spokesman in Cincinnati.

Jewel pulled all sugar-free Jell-O, regardless of size or lot number, from the company's 218 stores in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Iowa, said company spokesman Mike DePaola.

Treasure Island Food Mart Inc. stores and at least some Dominick's Finer Foods Inc. stores also ordered sugar free Jell-O removed from their shelves in the Chicago area.

In addition, anyone who bought the specified lot number from Kroger stores in Detroit and Jewel stores in the Chicago area should return it where it was bought, Defren said.

Charlie Stephens, manager of Albertsons on Andrews Highway, said at mid-morning he had not heard of the incident.

"If we have that lot number we are going to pull it," he said.

Larry Brown, grocery manager of Skaggs Alpha Beta on North Midkiff Road, said he had not yet heard of the incident and has not pulled the sugar-free Jell-O. Sedden, manager of the Scharbauer Drive M-System, also said he had seen it on the news last night.

"But we have no orders to pull it," Sedden said.

The FBI, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and consumer protection agencies in Michigan and Illinois were notified of the phone call, said Kathleen MacDonough, a General Foods spokeswoman.

Man's body found in Midland pasture

The body of a man was discovered in northeast Midland this morning in what is being investigated as a possible homicide.

Midland police said they received a report about 10 a.m. about a body being found in a pasture near 3500 Fairgrounds Rd.

The body was apparently found in the middle of the pasture, police said.

Officers did not say how the body was discovered, and other information was sketchy as police were still investigating at presstime.

Rescuers search for Marines

TOKYO (AP) — Rescuers today searched for three U.S. Marines listed as missing after their helicopter crashed at sea while taking part in night flight operations off Japan, a military spokesman said.

The crash occurred about 300 miles east of Hokkaido early today.

Marine Master Gunnery Sgt. Dale Hunter in Tokyo said the pilot and crew of the Marine UH-1N helicopter were operating from the amphibious assault ship Tarawa and were attached to a unit stationed at Marine Air Station El Toro near Tustin, Calif.

Attack characterized as terrorism

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin today said a foiled seaborne attack on Israel's northern border claimed by two Syrian-backed guerrilla groups was proof the Damascus government continues to encourage terrorism.

Four guerrillas and two Israeli soldiers were killed in Thursday's predawn clash on the Mediterranean coast, just north of Israel's border with Lebanon.

Israeli helicopter gunships and missile boats retaliated 17 hours later by rocketing guerrilla targets at the Ein el-Helweh refugee camp on the southern outskirts of Sidon, 30 miles north of the Israeli border.

Police said one civilian was killed and nine people injured in the attack on Lebanon's largest refugee camp, which has a U.N.-registered population of more than 27,000.

Reports from Sidon said a guerrilla ammunition dump at the camp burst into a huge ball of flame as rapid chain explosions shook the port city.

Two Syrian-backed Lebanese guerrilla factions — George Habash's Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Syrian Social Nationalist Party headed by Inam Raad — claimed responsibility for what they described as a suicide operation directed against the Israeli border town of Nahariya.

"The Syrians have been encouraging local Lebanese forces to act against us, and this continues," Rabin said on Israel Radio.

Rabin has previously blamed Syria for having a role in recent attempts to bomb Israeli airliners in London and Madrid, and relations between Israel and Syria have been tense since November, when Israel downed two Syrian jets.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres said the Israeli air raid was directed against Ein el-Helweh because "we think that's where they (the inflitrators) came from." Israeli newspapers said the Popular Front had naval bases in Sidon and Beirut.

Both Syrian-backed factions maintain offices and bases at the camp.

Israel military sources said buildings hit at Ein el-Helweh were used as command centers by the Palestine Liberation Organization's mainstream Al Fatah guerrilla faction, the pro-Syrian Abu Mousa group, the Popular Struggle Front and the Damascus-based Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Israeli military leaders have said they make no distinctions between Palestinian factions in launching retaliatory attacks, saying they believe the raids dissuade all groups from contemplating future attacks.

Speaking to reporters Thursday night, Peres said the Israeli interception prevented a great tragedy.

Israeli newspapers reported the small rubber dinghy carrying the guerrillas would have landed on the Israeli coast within 15 minutes if it had not been stopped by a patrol boat and forced onto the limestone cliffs just inside Lebanon.

Peres warned that Israel would continue to raid guerrilla targets.

"We will take all measures needed to prevent or punish," Peres said, adding Israel's self-declared security zone in south Lebanon had once again shown its effectiveness.

"It has proved itself and it will continue to serve its aims," the Israeli prime minister said.

The English-language Jerusalem Post reported that over the past year there have been 10 attempts to infiltrate the Israeli border from Lebanon.

Beirut television broadcast a 40-second videotape of the four Arab commandos filmed shortly before the raid. They were shown eating sandwiches in a field in an unidentified training camp and then talking to an interviewer in a Syrian Social Nationalist Party office.

Their voices were not heard and the broadcaster did not report what was said.

Israel television showed the bodies of the four dead guerrillas on the blood-stained rocks only a few hundred yards from the cable car and grottos of Rosh Haniqra.

The dead men were dressed in jeans and carried AK-47 Kalashnikov rifles, a light machine gun and grenades.

Excluding Thursday's casualties, six Israeli soldiers have been killed and 30 wounded since Israel withdrew from Lebanon in June 1985, ending a three-year invasion.

About 1,000 Israeli troops remain in the narrow border security zone, patrolling against guerrilla infiltration along with a small Christian-dominated militia known as the South Lebanon Army.

Angry West Bank Palestinians 'tied' to Jordan's King Hussein

BETHLEHEM, Occupied West Bank (AP) — West Bank Palestinians watching the crackdown on the Palestine Liberation Organization across the Jordan River say they are angry at Jordan's King Hussein but can't protest because they need his government.

Palestinian nationalists say their allegiance to PLO chief Yasser Arafat is firm. But few demonstrated this week when Hussein closed 25 offices of Arafat's dominant Al Fatah PLO guerrilla group in Jordan and expelled Arafat aide Khalil Wazir.

"Everybody is angry. But the problem is, we all have Jordanian passports, so what can we do?" said Mohammed Durgham, a sociology student at Bethlehem University who lives in the Dheishe refugee camp outside Bethlehem.

Hussein broke with Arafat in February, ending their joint effort to develop a formula for Middle East peace, and the king's relations with the Palestinians have steadily worsened.

He cracked down on Palestinian students at Jordan's Yarmouk University last month, drawing sharp criticism from Arab newspapers in Jerusalem. Hussein in turn reportedly warned the editors of those newspapers that they would be arrested if they entered Jordan.

The squeeze also came from the other side last week when the Syrian-based Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine threatened to assassinate four West Bank Palestinians if they accepted mayoral appointments offered by Israel with Jordan's approval. The candidates promptly said no.

Israel has ruled the West Bank since seizing it from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War, but most of its 850,000 residents are Jordanian citizens with family and business ties in Amman.

The Jordanian currency, the dinar, is as widely used as the Israeli shekel. Jordan continues to pay salaries to some government workers and still channels millions of dollars to West Bank towns and universities.

But while Jordan's influence is considerable, identifying too closely with Hussein on sensitive issues can be dangerous.

For example, Syrian-backed extremists were blamed for the March 2 assassination of Nablus Mayor Zafer al-Masri, a Jordanian-backed Israeli appointee, and the 1984 killing in Amman of former West Bank Mayor Fuad Kawasmeh.

Bethlehem's moderate mayor, Elias Freij, refused in an interview to comment on the closing of the PLO group's offices and the expulsion of Wazir. Sources close to Freij said he feared for his life if he spoke out on such controversial matters.

Woman worried about farm burns to death

CHATTANOOGA, Okla. (AP) — A farm wife despondent over her family's mounting financial woes committed suicide by climbing on a pile of burning garbage the day after their wheat crop was harvested.

Katherine Copeland, whose family had plowed the fertile fields of southwestern Oklahoma since 1910, hated the idea of losing the farm, said her eldest son, Robert.

"She felt that she had failed her parents, and failed her children," he said.

Mrs. Copeland, who would have been 55 years old Thursday, took her own life Wednesday by climbing atop a barrel of burning trash and was overcome by smoke, said Undersheriff Steve Overstreet. Her body was found by her husband, Eugene.

Copeland said he had found a note on the dinner table indicating his wife's concern over finances and her intention to take her life.

The 1,280-acre wheat and cotton farm had not been formally presented with a foreclosure notice from the Farmers Home Administration, but Copeland said the FmHA had told him that foreclosure action might be taken.

"She just gave up. I knew she was in deep depression, but she had never mentioned suicide," he said. "Until three weeks ago, she was ready to fight it."

Copeland said costs of production have gone up, but they were selling crops at the same prices of a generation ago. He also said they owed some bills a year old, and his wife talked recently about having the electricity cut off and the phone removed.

The Rev. Max Glenn with the Oklahoma Conference of Churches, who helps operate a hotline for struggling farmers, said the Copelands could not get an operating loan from the FmHA.

"They were turned down because they could not come up with a five-year cash flow projection," Glenn said. "They were working on a way to turn half the land over to the Farmers Home and then lease it back."

Shirley Bohl, another longtime friend of the family, said the Copelands had attended a farm stress meeting earlier this year by the Oklahoma Farm Women Association.

"I didn't know that they were there because of their stressful situation," she said. "They are hard-working people. I don't know what all transpired, but that's hard when you fear you are going to lose your place. I guess it all got to be too much to handle. But she was the type you'd always remember as having a smile on her face."

"She was the living example of farm women — independent, staunch and upright," said Mona Lee Brock, who grew up with Mrs. Copeland in Chattanooga. "She was a lovely, strong lady. But in the end the trauma of their financial problems was too much and her strength failed her."

Funeral services will be today in the auditorium of Chattanooga High School.

MEALS

Ms. Pearson cooks two meals a day for her 95-year-old husband, who is a double amputee from the hips down and for her 89-year-old mother.

"Without it, it means she would have to be constantly cooking for them all. That's one meal she doesn't have to be cooking," Ms. Johnson says.

"By the time she gets up to cook, she's out of breath," Ms. Johnson says.

Bette Duhon, whose 95-year-old blind mother uses Meals On Wheels, says the proposed cuts are disturbing.

If the program is eliminated, Ms. Duhon says, "I don't really know what we're going to do. I hadn't heard it was going to be stopped."

This week, Midland's Meals on Wheels Director Juanita Arreguin took a package to the Austin budget hearings containing more than 100 letters pleading with the state to save the program.

All state agencies must present the governor with their proposed cuts by August 1, Stokes said.

Meals on Wheels serves about 62 meals per day in Midland to clients whose average age is about 79.

Those using the program need their meals delivered because handicaps, medical problems or old age prevents them from cooking, Stokes said.

Individual's income cannot exceed $670 per month and their assets cannot exceed $5,000.

A similar program, Need-A-Meal, funded through the city and county, serves about 84 meals a day.

Some Need-A-Meal clients pay $2.30 for each meal delivered, said Lona Carlton, with Midland Senior Citizen Inc.

If Meals on Wheels is eliminated Need-A-Meal would probably not be able to take up the slack, Stokes said. With the city and county considering their own budget cuts, it's unlikely more money would be allocated to Need-A-Meal to help those cut from Meals on Wheels, Stokes said.

Emergency Response Services monitors clients from the Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room if case they fall or have accidents.

Family Care, a program that helps the elderly and handicapped with personal care and housekeeping has already cut 12 Midlanders from the 39 served to meet the Gov. White's mandated 13 percent budget cuts earlier this year, Stokes said.

The program assists 340 people in the Permian Basin's 17-county area.

In April, the program's eligibility requirements were tightened and at the first of the month 12 Midlanders and six others in the Permian Basin were told they will be dropped from the program by Sunday, he said.

VOTE

Dr. Vic Arnold, executive director of the committee, said Permian Basin residents would suffer if legislators closed UTPB, since there are no other four-year universites in the region.

"The existence of the university in this oil-based economic region is important," Arnold said, "particularly at a time when that oil-based is experiencing financial difficulties."

Arnold also noted that the UTPB Center for Energy and Economic Diversification is "intimately involved in the research associated with diversification of the Permian Basin economy," and should remain open.

Sen. Carl Parker, a member of the select committee and chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said legislators will have to raise taxes to maintain quality universities in Texas, whether in a special session this summer or when the Legislature convenes next year.

The most likely increase will come in the form of a broadened sales tax, Parker said.

His comments come at a time when there is not much support for a tax increase in the House of Representatives, the chamber from which a tax bill must originate.

"You can't have a Sul Ross running at a first-rate clip without new taxes," Parker said after Thursday's vote. "You just can't do it."

Addressing hundreds of Sul Ross officials and supporters who crowded the Senate chamber, Parker took a broader view of the committee's action.

"There is more at stake here than Sul Ross," he said. "The future of the entire higher education system of this state is at stake."

The Port Arthur Democrat, known for his colorful and often outspoken oratory, criticized both Democratic Gov. Mark White and former Republican Gov. Bill Clements for not confronting the issue head on.

"What we're hearing on this issue, particularly from one candidate for governor, is a bunch of BS," Parker said.

Clements, in a written statement, attacked White for what he called "a track record of indifference, inattention and inconsistency" on higher education issues.

Specifically, Clements criticized White for recommending a 23.4-percent cut in higher education in 1985.

"Luckily, the Legislature in its wisdom rejected such a radical and detrimental proposal," Clements wrote.

Lawmakers last year ultimately cut higher education appropriations by 9-percent for the 1986-87 budget period. That action accompanied a tripling of in-state tuition rates.

REACT

The four institutions received statewide publicity when the contents of an intra-committee memo were released to the Houston Chronicle.

The June 2 memo, from committee chairman Larry Temple to Arnold, requested Arnold and his staff research all of the public discussion about closing some public institutions of higher learning.

Temple noted the committee had not drawn up any list of proposed closings or mergers, but was merely taking a "thorough, factual look" at the institutions mentioned by the Legislature, media and public.

In a July 3 letter to Temple, Gov. Mark White said closing any of the four universities would be a "tragic mistake."

"These institutions offer unique access and programs that are unavilable anywhere else in the state, and to eliminate them would deny opportunities to a large number of citizens," White told his appointee.

More than 100 Midlanders and Odessans appeared before the committee June 13 in Austin to show their support for UTPB.

Leach told committee members that the university is fulfilling its goal and mission well.

He said the proposed UTPB Center for Energy and Economic Diversification could serve as a catalyst to transform the state's oil and gas industry.

Although, UTPB did not meet the criteria on enrollment, Arnold said the student body had increased 21 percent over the past five years.

Sul Ross did not meet the standards for per student cost and enrollment, but Arnold said those factors were outweighed by the fact that there is no other state university within 200 miles.

ETSU satisfied all five criteria. A&M's Galveston campus did not meet standards for per student costs and enrollment, but Arnold pointed out that it serves a specialized purpose — marine studies.

Judge to rule on sentences facing convicted rapist

DALLAS (AP) — State District Judge Jack Hampton will decide whether a man convicted of kidnapping and raping his ex-girlfriend will serve his two 10-year prison sentences consecutively or concurrently.

A state district court jury convicted David Lloyd Cupples, 31, on Tuesday of attacking the woman and forcing her boyfriend to watch.

Four co-defendants were given probated sentences by the jury on Thursday.

Duncanville police arrested six men on Feb. 16 after receiving a phone call from a 20-year-old man who said he and his girlfriend had been abducted at knifepoint.

Investigators said the woman, who was bound to a wooden chopping table with a coat hanger during her ordeal, freed herself moments before police arrived at the home in the suburb south of Dallas.

During two days of testimony, the woman testified the attack took place after she went to the home of Cupples, her former boyfriend, to pick up her clothing.

The woman said her current boyfriend, to whom she is now married, was tied up and forced to watch the attack.

Johnny Ray Austin Jr., Joel A. Cruz and James Allen Schultz, all 19, each received 10-year probated sentences for their second-degree sexual assault and third-degree kidnapping convictions.

Richard Edwin DeLoach, 18, was sentenced to a six-year probated term. He was acquitted of a kidnapping charge but was convicted of second-degree sexual assault.

Nelson W. Lancione, 18, who testified he was at the house less than an hour and did not participate in the assault, was acquitted of a charge of aggravated sexual assault.

Cupples was allowed to address the jury during closing arguments in the punishment phase of the trial and apologized to the panel and the other defendants for his "lack of good judgment."

"I am not a successful person," Cupples told the jury. "I'm no pillar of the community. But ladies and gentlemen, I'm not a monster."

During his final argument, prosecutor Jeff Hines tied a mannequin to the butcher-block table, which was introduced as evidence, and described the sex acts performed on the victim.

"When you're in that position, the law can't help you," he told the jury as the victim sobbed in the back of the courtroom.

Teen rescued after trucker saw her waving from trunk

DALLAS (AP) — A 38-year-old man was being held in connection with the rape of a teen-ager who motorists said they saw waving from the trunk of a car.

Walter Douglas Clark Sr. was charged with aggravated sexual assault and was in the Denton County Jail Thursday in lieu of $100,000 bond, authorities said.

Police Sgt. Joe Murdock said Clark also was charged with kidnapping in Dallas.

A truck driver said he saw the victim smash out a taillight from inside the trunk and poke her arm through the hole, police said.

Police began chasing the car during rush hour Wednesday on Interstate 35 after the trucker radioed his dispatcher to notify police of the location of the car.

Authorities said the man forced a 14-year-old girl into the trunk of his car, drove her to Lewisville and raped her.

The man was arrested by a Carrollton police officer who saw him trying to drag the girl toward the Trinity River, police said.

"At first I started laughing and thinking, 'Why does this guy have a kid in his trunk?" said truck driver Bill Stacey. "And then it dawned on me, and I started chasing him, but there was no way I could keep up with him."

The girl used tire tools in the trunk to break through the left taillight. Stacey, who was driving an 18-wheel dump truck loaded with dirt, said he chased the car until it reached speeds of up to 70 mph.

Oil slick not threat to beaches, officials say

GALVESTON (AP) — An oil slick poses no threat to the tourist beaches of Galveston Island after it grew as much as 30 miles long in the Gulf of Mexico before starting to dissipate, Coast Guard officials said.

"Nothing is going to hit the shore," Coast Guard Lt. Mike Tagg predicted late Thursday.

Officials have not planned any clean-up efforts, so confident were they that the thousands of gallons of light Arabian crude oil would evaporate or sink into waters after a Danish supertanker suffered a leak in one of its tanks, Tagg said.

No animals or plants have been harmed, although shrimp are now spawning, he said.

"We've been lucky on this one, very lucky," Tagg said.

Two years ago, a British-registered tanker, the Alvenus, ruptured in the Gulf, spilling 2.8 million gallons of oil, most of which blackened Galveston Island beaches.

The Danish supertanker, identified by the Coast Guard as the Kate Maersk, remained anchored Thursday about 25 miles from Freeport, two days after reporting a leak in one of its tanks, Tagg said.

By Wednesday, thousands of gallons of light Arabian crude oil, about the consistency of gasoline, had spilled into the Gulf, he said.

The ship can hold 1 million barrels of oil and half of the cargo was still aboard, Tagg said. Officers aboard the ship were uncooperative in releasing more information, he said.

It was unknown how much oil leaked from the vessel.

"They're in international waters so there's no way we can make them comply," he said.

The leak was detected when the oil, owned by Champlin Oil Co. of Fort Worth, was being transferred from the large tanker to smaller vessels. The Kate Maersk was too large to berth in any Texas port, the Coast Guard said.

At one point, the slick was about 30 miles long by 2 miles wide. Rainy weather, however, helped break up the slick and much of the oil evaporated or sank to the floor of the Gulf, he said.

By late Thursday, the slick had been reduced to a large spot just off Galveston's west end, he said.

Tagg said divers were continuing to search for the leak in the tanker and the Coast Guard was monitoring the operations of the ship.

Officers had ordered a floating net be installed around the ship to prevent any leaked oil spreading into the Gulf, he added.

"What they're doing now is anchoring until the leak is contained," he said, adding that the leak appeared to be small and posed no danger.

Puddles of tar-like oil littered the beach for miles after the July 30, 1984, incident involving the Alvenus, with the cleanup cost estimated at as much as $13 million. The tanker ran aground July 30, 1984, off Louisiana, cracking one of its hulls and releasing some 45,000 barrels of heavy Venezuelan crude into the Gulf.

At its height, the slick from the Alvenus was more than 85 miles long.

Food banks struggle to meet demand

By LAURA TOLLEY

HOUSTON (AP) — During the boom years, Lana Lee Moore only gave food from her church pantry to a couple of families a week.

"I thought I was wasting my time," Mrs. Moore said.

But today, Houston is more bust than boom and Mrs. Moore says she has trouble providing food to all those needing it. The Fulbright Memorial United Methodist Church in north Houston now gives away food to some 240 people a week.

"We went into the red in order to have the food we had last week," she said. "We didn't have it to give out last week. Let me tell you, you don't know what it's like."

As the oil-related slump continues to drag down the state's economy, other food banks are seeing an increase in the number of people needing food.

At the North Texas Food Bank in Dallas, there has been a 30 percent increase this year in the need for food, executive director Lori Palmer said.

"My sense is that's going to increase beyond the 30 percent level because I think there's a little bit of lag time in Dallas," Ms. Palmer said. "Even with the lag time, however, we are seeing an increase."

The North Texas Food Bank is a distributing center for more than 200 community organizations in 16 North Texas counties.

"What we're hearing from our people out in the fields on the front lines is that, yes, people are now having to turn for food who have not previously ever had to do that," Ms. Palmer said.

"They are people who have never been on welfare, were never on food stamps," she said. "They're working people who never had to view themselves as leaning on a program for help."

The Lubbock-based South Plains Food Bank, which supplies food to 169 agencies in more than 30 counties in West Texas, also has experienced an increase in those seeking help.

"We have been tremendously blessed with food (donations), but we just barely get the food in and then we get it unloaded" to the agencies, executive director Carolyn Lanier said.

Ms. Lanier said there has been a constant increase in the number of people needing food since the downturn in the oil and natural gas economy.

Farmers who have lost their farms, migrant workers who cannot work because of recent heavy rains and older people living on fixed incomes also have found themselves in need of assistance, she said.

Over the past six months, the Lubbock-based bank has given away almost as much food as it did throughout 1985, Ms. Lanier said.

"There are a lot of really generous people who are giving like crazy," she said. "But it's not stockpiling, its coming in pretty evenly."

In Houston, Mrs. Moore's church is in a low-income area where many families are out of work, she said. Other families are having problems making their food stamps last until the end of the month.

Dave Williams, director of the Houston Food Bank, which distributes mostly canned goods to 270 outlets like Mrs. Moore's church pantry, estimates the majority of the city's local pantries are having the same problem.

"They're just serving more people than ever before," he said.

One bright spot is the recent Hands Across Houston, which raised about $150,000 for the food bank, and donations continue to come in, Williams said.

But that money will be used for Williams' agency to pick up donated foods from grocery chains and other stores and for distributing the goods to local food banks and soup kitchens, he said.

Although contributions continue, Ms. Palmer believes the need will continue to outgrow the supply.

"It's going to become an extremely serious situation we're not prepared for," she said.

Reaction to SALT II talks split but tests meeting planned

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is split over a Soviet proposal to discuss the controversial SALT II treaty but the two sides have agreed in principle to meet later this summer on nuclear weapons tests, U.S. officials said.

The projected agenda is broad, with the Soviets expected to push for a ban on all weapons tests and the United States seeking tighter monitoring of the underground blasts permitted under a 1974 treaty, a well-placed official said Thursday.

The official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said President Reagan proposed the meeting in a farewell talk in April with departing Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin and that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev gave his approval in a letter to the president last month.

The official said the United States had followed up with a suggestion that the meeting be held later this month and w awaiting a response from Moscow. He said the location had not been set.

Donald T. Regan, the White House chief of staff, told reporters that administration officials would hold further discussions on whether to meet with the Soviets. "We are trying to come to an agreement among ourselves on what we should do," Regan said.

But the official said the two governments had decided "unambiguously" to meet and that Regan apparently was referring to the fact that time and place had not been decided.

Three other U.S. officials, who also demanded anonymity, also told The Associated Press there was an agreement in principle between Washington and Moscow to hold the meeting.

The United States has been trying for several years to engage the Soviets in a discussion of verification procedures. Gorbachev, meanwhile, has proposed a ban on all nuclear weapons tests. "We found a way to combine the two agendas," an official said.

Verification is one of the thorniest issues in the arms control field.

Reagan has accused the Soviets of conducting tests above the 150-kiloton limit that was set in the unratified 1974 treaty.

Gorbachev last summer imposed a moratorium on further Soviet tests. It is due to expire next month. The United States, meanwhile, has continued testing weapons in the Nevada desert.

The agreement to hold the U.S.-Soviet meeting is in sharp contrast to the disagreement over a Soviet proposal for a special session in Geneva on July 22 on Reagan's tentative decision to abandon the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

Two officials said the Pentagon is opposed to the session. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger is concerned the Soviets might turn it into "a public relations circus," an official said.

The State Department and other U.S. agencies involved in U.S.-Soviet relations have recommended to Reagan that he accept the proposal for a special session of the Standing Consultative Commission, which was set up in 1972 to consider disputes over adherence to strategic arms agreements.

However, Kenneth L. Adelman, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, and Edward Rowny, a senior presidential adviser, want to make sure that besides Reagan's decision to abandon the SALT treaty, the agenda also includes U.S. allegations the Soviets violated the accord with an illegal long-range nuclear missile and by withholding data on missile tests. The Soviets have denied the charges.

Klinghoffer's daughters bitter, seek recourse

NEW YORK (AP) — The daughters of Leon Klinghoffer, bitter over the sentences given terrorists who killed their father on the Achille Lauro, say they will seek to have the men extradited to the United States for trial.

"They are all guilty of a horrible, heinous crime and they should all receive the maximum penalty," said Ilsa Klinghoffer, who appeared at a news conference Thursday with her sister, Lisa.

A court in Genoa, Italy, convicted six Palestinians of hijacking the Mediterranean cruise ship last October and killing Klinghoffer, a 69-year-old New Yorker who was confined to a wheelchair.

Only three defendants received the maximum life imprisonment, and all three are fugitives, including alleged mastermind Mohammed Abbas. The three who are in custody were sentenced to 30 years, 24 years and 15 years. Five others were convicted of lesser charges.

When she heard of the sentences, Ilsa Klinghoffer said, "I was sick to my stomach."

She and her sister said they have asked their Italian lawyers and the U.S. government to explore the possibility of extraditing the captured hijackers and trying them in the United States. They vowed to pursue the case with the same tenacity as their mother, Marilyn, who died of cancer earlier this year.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said, "The United States is pleased that persons responsible for the death of an American citizen and injury and damages to others have been convicted."

But he added, "We regret that the murder of Leon Klinghoffer was not treated more severely."

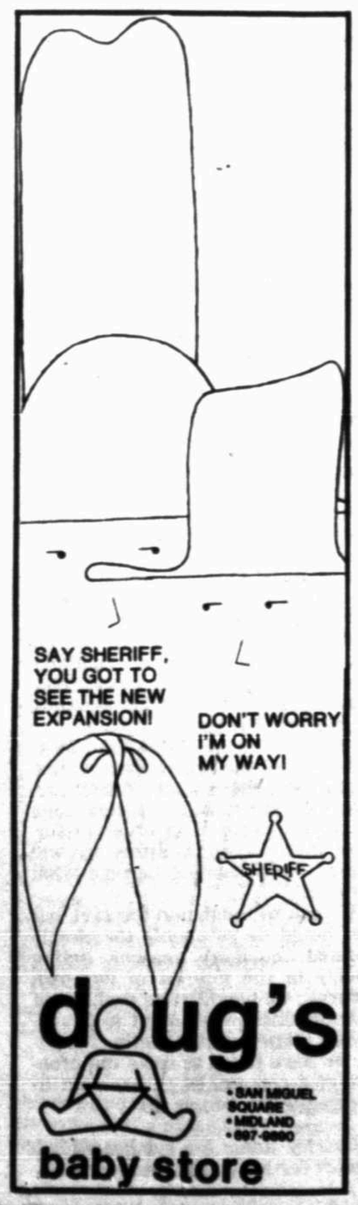

Kalb also said the U.S. government "reserved its legal right to seek extradition of the hijackers once all Italian legal proceedings, including appeals, are ended."

Lisa Klinghoffer called it "a mockery" that Abbas was sentenced in absentia after being freed by Italian authorities shortly after the hijacking.

"I don't understand the Italian judicial system. I don't understand the Italian government. They let him go and now they give him a life sentence," she said. "If they want to send a message, let them find him and have him serve his life sentence."

Burton S. Levinson, chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, appeared with the Klinghoffers at the news conference but struck a much more conciliatory tone toward the sentencing.

"I think it is significant to note that in a country beset by terrorism, the Italian judicial system has functioned," he said.

Winning a park

The problem was simple to define, less so to solve. Midland needed more parks, more "green space."

Unfortunately, falling oil prices and a grinding slowdown in the pace of the Permian Basin oil industry affirmed the need for local governmental entities to think more in terms of necessities than luxuries, like parks.

Along came Texas' Sesquicentennial celebration and Clean Midland, the local organization that sponsors cleanup activities throughout the city and encourages awareness of littering and other environmental concerns, submitted to the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation its proposal for Volunteer Park.

Clean Midland won the prestigious Governor's Community Achievement Award due not only to the diligent efforts of Chairman Robert C. "Bob" Leibrock and executive director Sherre Parker but also because of the thoughtfulness and concern of all the Midlanders who have worked so tirelessly to convince their neighbors that the community's environmental surroundings are important. The city's $100,000 award from the highway department will be used by Clean Midland for the development and construction of Volunteer Park.

The award is particularly significant in that Midland is located in the windy, dusty Permian Basin where keeping the surroundings clean requires extraordinary effort, both mentally and physically. It takes commitment to the ideals expressed by the Keep America Beautiful organization.

Further, it takes continual effort. Clean today does not guarantee clean tomorrow in this country without diligence.

Even after all the work, all the caring, all the doggedness to keep Midland clean, the work won't transform the city into a lush and verdant forestland. But winning the Governor's Community Achievement Award and $100,000 for landscaping Volunteer Park comes as close as possible.

Congratulations, Clean Midland!

Give Reagan veto

Some members of Congress may be highly offended by the Supreme Court ruling that found a key provision of the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law unconstitutional. It means that they, perish the thought, will have to face the tough decisions to cut spending in order to keep federal deficits under targets set by the law.

The justices voted 7-2 to affirm a federal court ruling that found the provision which would turn over Congress' budget-cutting powers to the comptroller general unconstitutional for the very good reason that the latter is subject to removal from office by Congress. By so doing, the court majority ruled, Congress had retained control over the execution of the act and intruded into the executive function.

This is one of those cases where the ruling is crystal clear. Congress goofed — even more than usual. It patently cannot delegate an executive function to someone under its control, much as it might like to do so. But there should be no great lamentation that its members must now face up to the job they were elected to do, namely prepare a responsible budget. Furthermore, the mechanism they chose — automatic, across-the-board cuts when Congress failed to meet prescribed budget deficit targets — was a mindless approach that would have slashed the good programs along with the bad.

When Congress returns it has a number of options. One we would highly recommend is that it give President Reagan the line-item veto that he has sought. This is a tool that has been used with great success by more than 40 governors, but it has been steadfastly denied to the president by Congress. From all reports, governors have used this power wisely. They almost universally say it is essential to maintaining a balanced budget in their state.

Congress also should consider restoring the president's authority to impound certain funds to hold down spending. This power was removed by Congress when Richard Nixon was in the White House.

With these two important budget-cutting tools, the president could make many of the hard decisions that a divided, special-interest-happy Congress refuses to make.

That the president doesn't have these two crucially important powers is one of the principal reasons the nation has a public debt of more than $2 trillion. Congress recently submitted a budget for fiscal 1987 that supposedly will hold the deficit for the year to $142.6 billion, slightly below the Gramm-Rudman budget deficit target of $144 billion for that year. But it is based on projections that are more political than economic.

It is time to face the reality that the nation's chief executive must have a stronger role in fashioning the final budget. The proof of this is in the pathetic inability of Congress to keep its spending under control year after year.

Magazine doesn't bow to bullying line

WASHINGTON — Proceso is a Mexico City weekly magazine, a courageous and respected exception to the longstanding rule that the Mexican government controls the media through intimidation and bribery. It was born 10 years ago this week, virtually at the point of a gun.

Jack Anderson

As Mexico's ruling party for 57 years, the Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as PRI, has always regarded stability as its primary objective — which has discouraged the kind of irreverent, inquisitive press that we're accustomed to north of the border.

The party has some unsubtle but highly effective methods of controlling the press. The government has a monopoly on newsprint; it can and does deny paper to publications that get too critical of the regime. In addition, advertising by government agencies provides 60 percent to 80 percent of all ad revenue for newspapers and magazines; the ads are simply withheld from troublesome publications.

On top of these persuasive mechanisms, the government also pays to have favorable articles printed and gives monthly payoffs, or "embute," to compliant editors and reporters.

If threats and bribes don't do the trick, the government has the full force of the police and the army to enforce its wishes — and journalists know it. In the past, erring journalists have been beaten up for writing stories critical of the government. Some have even been murdered.

This background is what makes the story of Proceso so remarkable. It has survived — even thrived — while fearlessly exposing PRI corruption and blunders.

Proceso's publisher, Julio Scherer Garcia, was for years the influential editor-in-chief of Excelsior, Mexico City's largest daily paper. The personal courage of Scherer and his team brought the wrath of then-President Luis Echeverria down on them.

First he tried leaning on Scherer, urging him to fire several reporters and columnists. Scherer refused.

Echeverria's men then quietly bought the support of enough employees of the newspaper — a cooperative — to stage a coup. On the evening of July 8, 1976, about 200 liberal Excelsior journalists were unceremoniously thrown out on the street by police in plainclothes. They weren't even allowed back in to retrieve their files.

Some of the fired employees were eventually taken back, properly chastened, but the hardheads started a news agency in the fall of 1976, using a building generously loaned by Pages Llergo, editor of the news weekly Siempre.

Echeverria came to regret his rash ouster of Scherer, and, in a series of personal meetings with the editor, he agreed to turn Excelsior back to the Scherer team. But the deal fell through when The New York Times broke the story prematurely.

On Nov. 6, 1976, Scherer and his loyalists began publishing Proceso as an independent weekly magazine. The new government of President Jose Lopez Portillo tolerated Proceso — but barely. By 1982, the last year of his term, the president had had enough of the magazine's critical articles and cartoons. He stopped all government advertising and sent a clear message to other advertisers that they should do likewise.

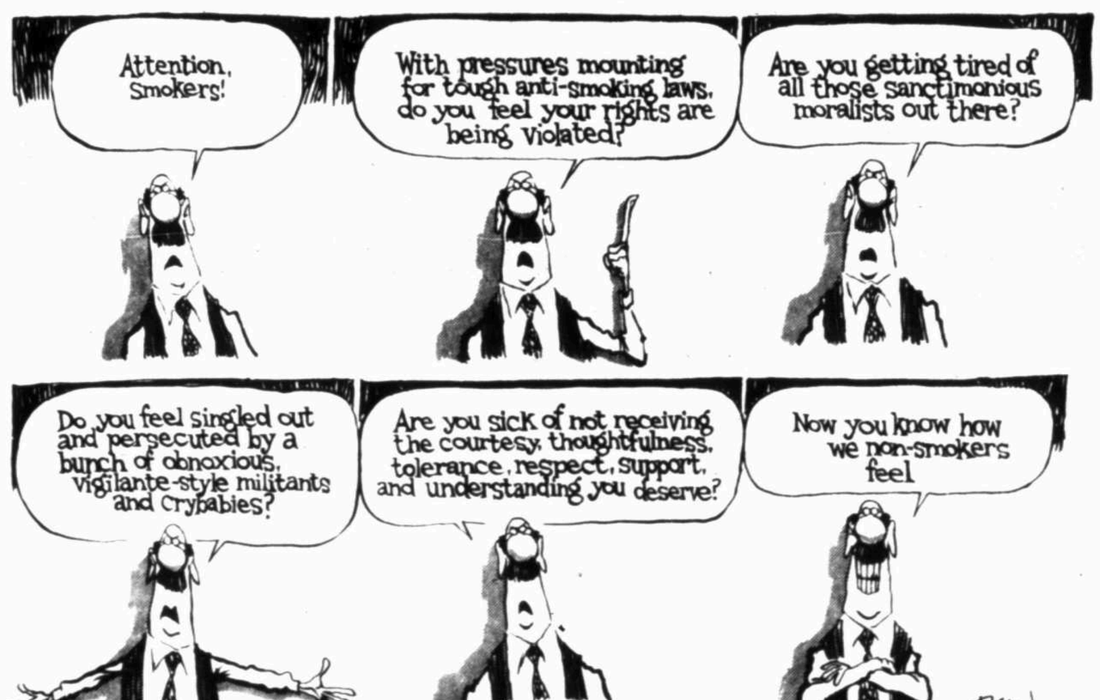

Despite this body blow, Proceso has continued to lead the Mexican press in tough but fair investigative reporting, exposing corruption in government and labor unions. Its circulation is about 90,000, making it the largest political weekly in Mexico. It's tough subsisting almost exclusively on circulation revenue, but Proceso has hung in there. Congratulations are in order.

Footnote: The 1976 coup at Excelsior also led to the birth of other publications. Uno Mas Uno, an influential left-leaning daily, was started the following year by a group that split off from Proceso. And in 1984, a splinter group from Uno Mas Uno founded a magazine, La Jornada.

MINI-EDITORIAL: In case any lingering doubts remain about Mikhail Gorbachev among woolly-headed wishful thinkers, his recent speech to the communist faithful in Warsaw should make it perfectly clear that, when push comes to shove, he's a hardnose on the Stalin model. He congratulated Poland's military dictator Wojciech Jaruzelski, for crushing Solidarity without having to call for Soviet troops. But he assured his puppet that the Kremlin is ready to send in the tanks whenever they're needed, as it did in Czechoslovakia, Hungary and East Berlin.

EVANS & NOVAK

Democratic hopefuls nix dealing with Jesse

WASHINGTON — Gov. Mario Cuomo and Sen. Joseph Biden, potential rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination, have used different techniques to send the same message to the Rev. Jesse Jackson: no negotiations this time.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Cuomo handled a gratuitous provocation from Jackson by ignoring it. Biden was more daring, knocking Jackson as he would any politician. Each was saying he would not go down the path traveled by Walter F. Mondale as presidential nominee in 1984 when in vain he sought detente with the black leader.

Indeed, advice from Mondale to prospective presidential nominees has been not to repeat his mistake. The newly-perceived wisdom inside the Democratic Party is that you cannot do business with Jesse. Yet, the caution by both Biden and Cuomo in non-negotiating with Jackson shows how difficult a departure this is.

While recognizing that appeasement of Jackson alienates whites, Democratic politicians still flinch at confrontation with him that may offend blacks. They dread raids such as Jackson's into New York City July 20 when, without warning, he opened fire on Cuomo. The governor, he said, was not doing enough for the homeless and "made matters worse" by selecting Rep. Stan Lundine for lieutenant governor; Lundine's vote for the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit-reduction act made him unclean.

A Cuomo spokesman responded with a typical milquetoast white Democratic response, endorsing Jackson's critique and blaming Republicans for what's wrong. But that did not represent the mood in the governor's inner circle. His advisers were furious, claiming Jackson recognized that Cuomo alone threatened his hold on black voters.

The flamboyant governor did not respond with the withering rhetoric he usually unleashes on critics. But neither did he head for the negotiating table. Jackson, miffed at not being invited to the governor's June 23 forum on homelessness, demanded a "state summit conference" on poverty followed by a special legislative session. Cuomo publicly ignored what he privately considered efforts to "crash" his party. Nor will Jackson be invited to any of the governor's future forums.

Unknown to Cuomo, Biden for weeks had been planning a preemptive strike against Jackson. He had been so advised by Pat Caddell, who counseled Sen. Gary Hart in 1984, and Tom Donilon, who negotiated with Jackson for Mondale that year. He conferred with Mondale, who reaffirmed his belief that Jackson should be treated the same as any other candidate. All this reinforced Biden's determination not to pander.

But the senator was cautioned to pick his audience carefully. A Jewish group would look like another kind of pandering. To beard Jackson at the national NAACP convention in Baltimore would be a mark of courage (particularly when his speech defended his anti-busing stance).

Courageous it was. But Biden and his entourage in Baltimore were understandably nervous and the criticism veiled, without mention of Jackson's name. The point of contention was Jackson's unsuccessful effort in the June 3 New Jersey primary to replace Rep. Peter Rodino, the civil rights-advocating chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, with a black. "You must reject the voices ... who tell you ... that only blacks should represent blacks," he declared.

Word was circulated by Jackson aides that Biden had watered down a stiffer attack. Jackson told us that even Biden's mild criticism was "taken out of his statement" and delivered only to reporters, not NAACP delegates. Biden's staff denies any tougher speech draft, and there is no evidence to dispute them. Without doubt, he delivered the speech as released to the press.

Cuomo operatives privately criticize Biden for attacking Jackson without provocation to please Jewish campaign contributors. Cuomo is criticized by Biden agents for not speaking up. Two senior advisers in the Mondale campaign disagree over whether the governor or the senator is correct, but each is sure he gave his old boss bum advice to sit down with Jackson.

One black leader with no love for Jackson told us all this is premature. "At some time," he added, "we must negotiate with him." That is precisely what Biden and Cuomo don't want.

If all Jackson's activities really constitute desire for a seat at the table for endless, seemingly pointless negotiations, the Mondale experience suggests granting him that wish is a prescription for Democratic disaster. Two possible successors have said no in the last month, and more may follow.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. strength lies in taking actions openly

The Congress should ban completely covert operations, except for the collection of information, by the Central Intelligence Agency.

Charley Reese

The Congress should do this for several reasons, one of which is purely pragmatic. Experience shows that covert operations never remain covert. They are exposed and result in embarrassment. Furthermore, there is nothing the CIA does covertly that the United States cannot do overtly if it so wishes. The Soviet Union does not covertly supply the government of Angola. It does so openly. Why should the U.S. decide to support Angolan rebels on a covert basis? It makes no sense.

Aside from pragmatic reasons, however, there are important moral and political reasons why covert operations, except to collect information, should be banned.

We are a free and open society. That is not only our virtue but our strength. The basic principle of our society is that we are governed by our consent and we cannot, of course, give our consent to actions of our government we are prevented from knowing about.

We are a sovereign nation committed in principle to respecting the sovereignty of other nations. We have no moral or legal justification for interfering with the internal affairs of any other nation except in cases of self-defense. Covert operations are a cynical repudiation of the principles of both government by consent and respect for sovereignty.

We can justify covert collection of information because that boils down to nothing more than observation, not interference.

Too often we shape strategy to fit the bureaucracy, rather than shaping the bureaucracy to fit the strategy. The CIA was built around the World War II OSS, which not only engaged in spying, but sabotage, disinformation, propaganda, assassinations, and support of resistance movements in enemy-occupied territories. It was natural enough for these men to carry over into the Cold War the mentality and habits of the just-ended hot war.

A proper strategy for winning a cold war — a state of no-war, no-peace — however, is not the same as one required for winning a hot war. The evidence that this is true is the plain fact that we have not been winning the cold war. We have been losing. Communism has expanded. Democracy has shrunk.

The great advantage of a democracy in a contest between freedom and totalitarianism ought to be the example of the good society made possible by adherence to moral principles. What made America great was not our gross national product. For most of our history, we were rather poor. Nor was it our military power. For most of our history, we have not been a major military power. It was and is our Constitution and the commitment to the ideals it embodies that earned the world's admiration.

We can best win the cold war by contrasting our free society with the Soviet Union's totalitarian society, by contrasting our behavior in the international arena to theirs. It is freedom the Soviets fear, not tanks or bombs or the CIA. They are more than happy to talk about missiles. What they dread talking about is human rights. We ought never to meet a Soviet official without asking: When are you going to open your borders? When are you going to allow a free press? When are you going to allow non-communist ideas to compete with communist ideas? When are you going to free your political prisoners? When are you going to live up to your international agreements, beginning with Yalta, which means allowing free elections in Eastern Europe?

The Soviets are better than us at subversion, spying, killing, lying, suppressing dissent, and building armaments. If we have to match them in those categories in order to survive, then we won't. Either we will fail or in succeeding become what they are.

We can be tough and forceful, but we should do so openly for clearly defined and moral reasons. Acting openly in the interest of our own security, we handled the problem of a communist government in Granada in a matter of days. Acting covertly, we have failed to solve the problem of a communist government in Nicaragua for nearly six years.

NATION in brief

Services for Rickover scheduled for Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Memorial services for Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, known as the father of the nuclear Navy, are scheduled Monday at the National Cathedral.

Rickover was buried Thursday in private services at Arlington National Cemetery, the Navy said. The brief service, closed to the public, was attended by family members and close friends.

Rickover died Tuesday at his home in suburban Arlington, Va. He was 86.

Rickover is credited with recognizing the potential of nuclear power to propel Navy vessels and then almost single-handedly turning that dream into reality. He tangled repeatedly with his superiors in his drive to achieve his goal.

He stepped down as head of the Navy's nuclear propulsion program four years ago. Prior to his retirement, he was on active duty for more than 63 years, serving 13 presidents.

Reagan steps up drug fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's personal campaign against drug abuse may include encouraging private-sector involvement in the battle against drugs, says a White House spokesman.

White House officials are discussing the program, but no decisions have been made on scheduling a presidential speech or appearances, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Thursday.

Speakes said aides are preparing ideas for the president, and looking at some 300 pieces of drug-related legislation pending on Capitol Hill before they submit recommendations about the campaign to chief of staff Donald T. Regan.

An element behind the president's effort were the recent cocaine-related deaths of University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias and Cleveland Browns defensive back Don Rogers, officials said.

Unrest sparked prison fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry Jr. says there were signs of growing unrest before inmates set fire to an overcrowded prison complex but that officials did not anticipate an organized attempt to "try and burn it down."

The city sent inmates to Maryland, Virginia and Delaware and appealed to the federal government to take some prisoners, as officials scrambled to find space for 1,127 inmates displaced by the fires set early Thursday in 13 buildings at the sprawling Lorton Reformatory complex in suburban Virginia.

Seventy-six inmates were being transferred Thursday night to two facilities in Maryland where they will be housed on a temporary basis for 30 days, said Beverly Marable, a spokeswoman for the Maryland Department of Corrections.

Officials said 29 inmates and nine guards were injured when fighting erupted after inmates had been let out of burning dormitories and corralled into a ballfield. Guards fired tear gas and birdshot to quell the fracas.

Evacuees return home

MIAMISBURG, Ohio (AP) — Toxic white phosphorus burned in a derailed tanker today for a fourth day, a day after most of the tens of thousands of evacuees were allowed to return home in what one official called the nation's largest evacuation stemming from a train accident.

Officials said the fire probably would not be out until later this morning.

The blaze began Tuesday evening when 15 cars of a 44-car train derailed and six of them, including the phosphorus tanker, piled up on a bridge over Bear Creek, just west of the Great Miami River, and burst into flames.

An estimated 17,500 people were evacuated from Dayton's southern suburbs ahead of the smoke Tuesday night. When the tanker burst back into flame Wednesday night, an estimated 25,000 to 40,000 people, many of whom had returned home just hours earlier, were forced to flee again, according to the Red Cross.

Airplane prototype flies

STRATFORD, Conn. (AP) — With actor Cliff Robertson in the cockpit, a plane whose prototype may have beaten the Wright brothers into the air by two years, made a successful public test flight early today.

Today's test was not an attempt at full-scale flight because the plane's builders do not have the engines to power it. The plane, known as No. 21, was towed through the air by a truck on a runway at Sikorsky Memorial Airport.

Robertson "saw the plane and he flipped out. He really wanted to fly it," said Kaye Williams, financial backer of the Connecticut effort to put early aviation pioneer Gustave Whitehead into the history books.

William O'Dwyer, a retired Air Force pilot, has extensivly researched Whitehead and is convinced the German immigrant took a plane into the air Aug. 14, 1901, over Connecticut. Wilbur and Orville Wrights' first flight was Dec. 17, 1903, in North Carolina.

O'Dwyer and a group of aviation buffs decided to build a replica of the Whitehead plane to prove that he flew.

No. 21, built from canvas, spruce, bamboo and silk, is 16 feet long and has moth-like wings. It has a fuselage and four wheels.

Cocaine users are numb to drug's lethal nature

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cocaine use can be a sudden killer, but drug abuse experts say addicts crave the drug's intense high so much that they approach their habit with "a sense of immortality" that often blinds them to the risk.

Federal and private drug abuse experts, in a news briefing following the cocaine-related deaths of two nationally known athletes, said medical authorities have long known that cocaine can kill by overstimulating the circulatory and nervous systems.

But they also told Thursday's briefing that the information, at least until now, has had little effect in persuading cocaine addicts to kick the habit.

"Most of the people that we see use it with a great sense of no consequence," said Dr. Mitchell Rosenthal, director of New York's Phoenix House, one of the nation's largest drug rehabilitation programs. "They have a sense of immortality and a kind of grandiosity.

"Even people who have suffered consequences, people who have had arrythmias and gone to an emergency room, people who have had convulsions, are so compelled to use this drug that they will not stop in spite of this information," he said.

Dr. Donald Ian Macdonald, head of the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration, said the same experience is reflected in calls to a hospital-sponsored cocaine hotline, 1-800-COCAINE.

"It's not infrequently that they'll get calls from people who have had seizures, which to me would be a terribly frightening sign that you have a problem," Macdonald said.

"And what they're asking for is not treatment, but trying to decide, can they get by with a lesser dose? he said.

"The message has to be: Don't do it once," Macdonald said. "Don't do it until you think you're out of control, because that's too late."

Macdonald said medical research long ago confirmed the risk of sudden death from cocaine use, but the research until recently was eclipsed by the debate over cocaine's addictiveness and its mind-altering characteristics.

That changed dramatically after University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias and Cleveland Browns defensive back Don Rogers died suddenly last month, both after using cocaine.

"Cocaine can be, and not infrequently is, a killer," Macdonald said, with death possible at least four different ways:

— The sudden stimulation of the central nervous system can send a person into convulsions, followed by collapse of the respiratory system.

— The drug can affect the nerves that regulate the heart beat, leading to an irregular beat called arrythmia. The most serious arrythmia, ventricular fibrillation, can result in cardiac arrest and death.

— Cocaine stimulates the heart to beat faster, requiring more oxygen, while at the same time narrowing the blood vessels that carry oxygen-rich blood to the heart. A section of the heart muscle can be starved of oxygen, a condition known clinically as myocardial infraction and more commonly as a heart attack.

— The same stimulated heartbeat can rapidly increase blood pressure, and the rapid increase can burst a weak blood vessel in the brain that can handle the ordinary pressure. The result is intracranial hemorrhage, or stroke.

Ironically, Macdonald said, the dangers are appearing as tentative figures indicate that cocaine use may have leveled off. While anecdotes abound of soaring cocaine use, he said, "the data that we crank out don't show that."

Among people aged 18 to 25, the percentage using cocaine in the previous year rose from 8.1 percent in 1974 to 19.6 percent in 1979, but then dropped to 18.8 percent in 1982, according to the National Institute of Drug Abuse.

Among high school seniors, past-year use of cocaine has varied only a little over the past six years, from 12.0 percent in 1979 to 13.1 percent in 1985, the government figures show.

But the serious medical consequences of cocaine use are appearing in sharply rising numbers.

Dr. Charles R. Schuster, the drug abuse institute's director, said a sample of autopsy reports indicating cocaine-related heart attacks show a possible tripling in cases from 1981 to 1985.

In South Texas, partly cloudy hot and humid days..fair and mild nights through Saturday. Widely scattered thundershowers along the upper coast tonight and Saturday. Highs each day in the 90s except upper 80s at the upper coast and near 102 southwest. Lows mostly in the 70s.

Low tonight about 70

From Staff and Wire Reports

Today will be partly cloudy for most of the day with a low tonight nearing 70. Winds will blow from the south at 5-15 mph.

Saturday will also be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 90s. Winds will be from the south at 10-15 mph.

The record high for this day was in 1964 when it soared to 105. In 1947, the record low was 62.

STATE

A weak low-pressure trough extending across West Texas triggered scattered showers and thunderstorms over much of the high and low plains today, and forecasters expected the precipitation to spread later.

The National Weather Service said strongest storms were located over the Panhandle northwest of Amarillo and over the low rolling plains east of Childress.

Other showers and thunderstorms occurred offshore along the upper Texas coast in the northwest Gulf of Mexico. Skies were mostly clear over North Central and East Texas as well as along the lower Rio Grande.

High, thin clouds veiled the coastal plains while partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies covered the rest of the state.

Winds were south to southwest across most of the state at speeds generally in the 10 to 20 mph range. But gusty south winds between 25 and 30 mph were clocked over parts of North Texas.

Early-morning temperatures dropped into the 60s over the Panhandle and the mountainous southwest while readings in 70s and 80s were common across the rest of Texas. Extremes ranged from a mild 66 degrees at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to a warm 85 degrees at Galveston on the upper coast.

Scattered thunderstorms were expected in the Panhandle and eastern sections of the South Plains with the possibility of some locally heavy rain. Skies should be fair to partly cloudy through Saturday with a chance of isolated to widely scattered mainly afternoon and evening thunderstorms.

Highs were expected to range from the mid 80s in the mountains to near 102 over the desert southwest.

NATION

A frontal system spread rain across the nation's midsection today while showers and thunderstorms ranged through the South and West.

The frontal system was from the lower Great Lakes and Ohio Valley across the middle Mississippi Valley to the lower Missouri Valley.

Shreveport's Angel Escobar, 4, gets caught in No Man's land when he was picked off of first base Thursday night at Angel Stadium. Angel first baseman James Randall starts the run down. However, Midland lost again, 7-3, losing for the seventh time in the last eight games. The Angels will take on the East Division leaders of the Texas League again tonight.

Shreveport knocks halo off of slumping Angels, 7-3

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

After what Shreveport's John Burkett did to the Angels Thursday night, home didn't look a whole lot different from San Antonio, where Midland dropped five out of six before the Texas League All-Star break.

Shreveport defeated Midland, 7-3, in the opener of a five-game Texas League series, using the four-hit pitching of Burkett and a two-inning flurry of three home runs good for six runs to knock the Halo out of the Angels for the seventh time in the last eight games.

Manager Joe Maddon feared the Angels might be flat before the game started, "That happens when you have changes, and today we released Mike Madril. That was one that really hurt."

Of course, Burkett kept them that way, flat, that is. His only mistake was a slider to Al Romero, good for a three-run homer in the fourth, to make it 6-3. There was still plenty of time to catch up, but not the way Burkett, a third year pro from Beaver, Pa., was pitching.

He walked just one and fanned six. "It was my first complete game...ever...as a pro," he declared later.

"I really didn't really have top grade stuff, but everything was consistent and I kept the ball down. That's important in this park. You saw what happened when I got a slider up, but you've got to give the hitter credit, too."

BURKETT, who was sent a down to Class A Fresno for three weeks earlier in the season, figures he was 'lucky" in squaring his record at 4-4. "They hit some balls hard, but right at the defense."

He also walked only one batter. Amazingly, Midland, whose troubles in San Antonio could be traced to men left on base, didn't strand a single runner.

Sherman Corbett, 5-6, gave up a single to Mackey Sasser to open the second and then Mike Rubel powered his 12th homer to left. Charlie Hayes followed with his fifth homer to right to make it 3-0.

However, Alan Cockrell, a one-time University of Tennessee quarterback, hit the homer that won it in the third, following Everett Graham's first of three hits and a walk to Deron McCue, with a shot over the doubledecker in center, his seventh homer.

"After the parks in Shreveport, Jackson and Little Rock, the first thing you realize in BP is how the ball flies off the bat here. And that's what happened to that slider I hit."

THE GAME-decider helped salve some of the disappointment of a second year in the Texas League.

"I was a little disappointed to be sent back and it showed in a bad start," Cockrell explained. "I let it bother me, coming back, and I was overly aggressive, like I was the last three times up tonight. But I think in the last month I've turned it around."

Cockrell, the starting quarterback at Tennessee in 1984, tried to keep his options open between football and baseball. "When I was drafted number one by San Francisco, it was a lot higher than I'd ever have been picked in football. That decided it for me."

Cockrell had one more year left, but passed it up for baseball. Tony Robinson took over "and broke all of my records." Then, last year, Robinson was busted for drugs and now faces a jail sentence.

Cockrell grew up in Joplin, Mo., "and considered Arkansas and Oklahoma State, as well as Tennessee. The key was a football scholarship that would permit me to play both sports, and those were the three schools that offered that opportunity."

Romero's homer came after a single by Pete Coachman and a walk to James Randall and averted the shutout.

HALO HOOPS— Brian Brady was activated and played in Thursday's game. Phil Venturino, with Midland at the season's start, has rejoined the club. "It was 120 degrees during the day in Palm Springs and 85 at night. Those days were rough," he reveals relievedly now that he's back. It didn't seem to effect his pitching. He was 7-0 in the A California League. Former Midland Cubs GM, John Cox, now Chicago Cubs' vice president and assistant to the general manager was on hand to watch the game explaining, "A possible trade in the works." Shortstop Jeff Schaefer's full length belly whopper behind second to rob Hayes and the shovel throw to second from a prone position for the inning ending force out in the third was the defensive play of the night.

Benz nightmare aids Beth Daniel

Women's Open

KETTERING, Ohio (AP) — A recurring nightmare for Amy Benz helped provide Beth Daniel with the lead in the storm-delayed and uncompleted first round of the 41st Women's U.S. Open Golf Championship.

"I wasn't planning to do it again. And I'm not going to do it the rest of my life. Someday I'm going to make par on the last hole," Benz said Thursday of what she hasn't been able to do for the last three rounds.

Benz, who blew a five-shot lead last week in Houston where she couldn't get past the finishing holes, held the top spot in the American national championship before finishing bogey-par-bogey and dropping one stroke behind Daniel.

"It's a nightmare," said Benz, who, despite her problems was one of only four players able to break par 72.

Daniel led the pack with a 70, which was preserved with a scrambling par on the final hole at the 6,243-yard NCR Country Club course.

Silvia Bertolaccini and amateur Michele Redman were tied with Benz for second at 71. Bertolaccini birdied all four par-3 holes Thursday, the first time in her career she managed that feat.

Redman, a 21-year-old Indiana University student, holed a 105-yard 9-iron shot for an eagle-3 and matched her career-best score.

Playing with Pat Bradley, Daniel finished just moments before a severe thunderstorm lashed the course and caused a one-hour, 23-minute delay. Nine players — none of whom appeared to have a shot at the leaders — were stranded on the course by darkness. They were to return this morning to complete first-round play.

While Bradley was able to beat the storm into the clubhouse, it was about the only positive thing that happened to her.

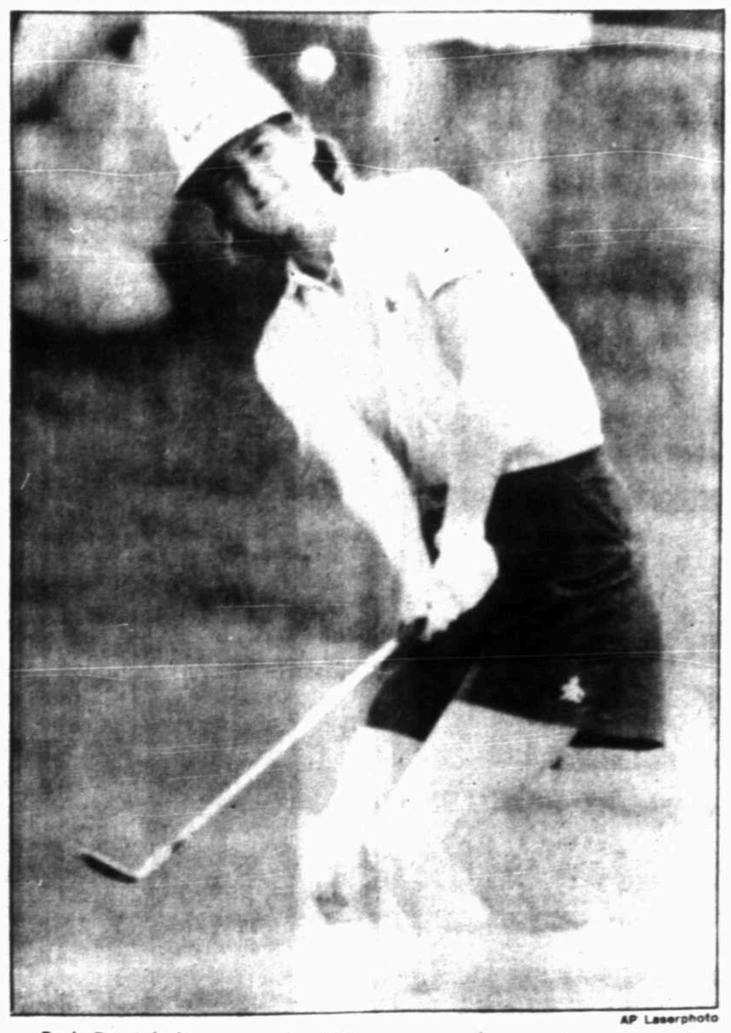

Bradley, the winner of the Dinah Shore and LPGA earlier this season and needing a victory here to keep alive her hopes of a one-year sweep of the ladies' Big Four tournaments, did not make a birdie in a round of 76 that left her six shots off the lead.

"Nothing clicked," Bradley, the first woman to surpass the $2 million mark in career earnings, said. "I just came up empty. It wasn't anything drastic. The birdies didn't come.

"I wish it could have been better, but it's one of those things. I don't want to dwell on it. I don't want to get too disappointed. I don't think my chances are over," she said.

Former Open winner Jan Stephenson was in a group aT 7 t½h½P;ng, Budy Dickinson, Martha Nause, Sherri Turner, Jody Rosenthal, Jerilyn Britz and Tammie Green.

Hollis Stacy, a three-time winner of this title, was at 73.

State tourney begins today

From Staff Reports

The Texas state ASA girls fast pitch tournament will hold its opening ceremonies at Ulmer Park at 7:30 p.m. today and sometime Sunday one team will earn a berth in the national ASA event in Sioux City, S.D.

Over 25 teams are expected to converge on Midland today from across the state in search of that national berth. Teams will have girls ages 15 and under on the squads.

Lake Jackson, Woodlands and Alvin are teams regarded as favorites for the three day tournament, which will conclude with the championship finals at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Midland has three entries in the tournament with the Mavrix, Misfits and Bombers while Odessa will have two entries with the Blue Angels and Purple.

In first round action the Midland Bombers will be taking on Galveston while the Midland Mavrix take on Lewisville. The Midland Misfits drew a first round bye and will meet the winner of the New Caney Alvin Silver Streaks contest in the second round of the double elimination tournament.

The Odessa Blue Angels will square off against Woodland in the first round while Odessa Purple will meet Alvin's Bayou Babes.

Games will begin after the 7:30 p.m. opening today and action continues at 9 a.m. Saturday and will go throughout the day.

This is the first time the ASA tournament has been held out of the Gulf Coast area.

NFL union tries to block drug plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association was to be in court today, hoping to at least temporarily block Commissioner Pete Rozelle's recently-proposed drug testing program.

The union has asked the court for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction to block implementation of the drug program until an arbitrator hears the case.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker was to hold a hearing on the NFLPA lawsuit filed on Wednesday to prohibit the NFL from implementing the program announced Monday by Rozelle.

The union had filed a grievance through its collective bargaining procedure with the NFL Management Council, the league's labor relations arm. In filing the grievance, union President Gene Upshaw, a former All-Pro lineman with the Oakland and Los Angeles Raiders, said Rozelle was "making a grandstand play" by mandating random drug tests for players.

In papers filed with the court, the union said it had asked the management council to go to arbitration on the Rozelle plan immediately after the commissioner announced it at a news conference and wanted an answer within 24 hours. When it did not receive one, the union said, it decided to file the suit to force the arbitration.

SLC faces new lineup

RUSTON, La. (AP) — Louisiana Tech's decision to leave the Southland Conference after 16 years may be the first step in a restructuring of regional athletic groupings.

"We're at a point where we think Tech's athletic progress, which has never stood still, depends on exploring new and wider avenues in all sports," President F. Jay Taylor said in a new release issued Thrusday. "We're actively investigating new affiliations, upgrading our schedule and expanding our fund-raising activities."

In a related development, a Nacogdoches, Texas, radio station has reported that Stephen F. Austin, Sam Houston State and Southwest Texas State will join the SLC. All three schools are currently members of the Gulf Star Conference. Louisiana Tech is the second Louisiana university to leave the SLC in recent years.

U.S. women beat Soviets

Goodwill Games

MOSCOW (AP) — "U-S-A, U-S-A."

The chant echoed through the arena that was filled with American flags.

"U-S-A, U-S-A."

A big international victory, a gold medal, and a chance to wave the red, white and blue.

It wasn't Los Angeles or Lake Placid in 1984. It was Moscow in 1986. It wasn't the Olympics, but the inaugural Goodwill Games.

In an arena on the banks of the Moscow River, the United States won the gold medal in women's basketball with an 83-60 victory over the Soviet Union — the first loss for the Soviets in a major tournament in 28 years.

And on a day when the 70-nation festival of peace and cooperation through sports turned into an Eastern-bloc affair on the medal stands, Thursday's lone triumph for the United States stood out even more.

"I can't believe we beat the Russians," Cheryl Miller, the top scorer for the United States with 18 points, said.

The game pitted two unbeaten teams for the title in what was the biggest East-West matchup thus far in the Goodwill Games, which are being promoted by American media magnate Ted Turner and the Soviet sports ministry as a way of filling the gap left by superpower boycotts of the last two Summer Olympics.

Crowds have been far from capacity at most events in Moscow, but for the United States vs. the Soviet Union, the Druzhba Hall was packed.

A large group of Americans was there, including some Seabees from the U.S. Embassy.

They cheered Miller and her teammates. They carried flags. They did a "wave" at halftime that would have made college football crowds proud.

And they kept repeating the chant.

"U-S-A, U-S-A."

"The support of the American crowd was encouraging," said Anne Donovan, the 6-foot-8 American center who held 7-1¾ Liliana Semenova to four points without a rebound.

"Everywhere we go, we're the underdog," Donovan said. "They hate us. So we needed he support."

Kamie Ethridge, who scored four points for the United States and helped get the offense moving late in the first half, said the key to the victory was defense.

"The defense had to be strong," Ethridge, who played on the University of Texas' undefeated national championship team this year, said. "The Soviets have never seen defensive pressure like we had. It was a great game plan."

Managers complete All-Star nines

NEW YORK (AP) — Third basemen Wade Boggs, the American League's leading hitter, and Chris Brown, No. 2 in the National League batting race, were named to their respective All-Star teams today.

Boggs, who is batting .370, tops in the major leagues, was one of four Boston Red Sox on the American League squad for next Tuesday's game at Houston. He will back up starter George Brett of the Kansas City Royals.

Brown, hitting .336 for the San Francisco Giants through Thursday's games, will play behind starter Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia and make his All-Star debut.

Other reserves picked by Kansas City Manager Dick Howser for the AL team were Boston outfielder Jim Rice and catcher Rich Gedman; Baltimore Orioles first baseman Eddie Murray; Chicago White Sox outfielder Harold Baines; second baseman Frank White of the Royals; first baseman Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees; Oakland A's rookie outfielder Jose Canseco; Seattle Mariners third baseman Jim Presley; and three Toronto Blue Jays — outfielders Lloyd Moseby and Jesse Barfield and shortstop Tony Fernandez.

St. Louis Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog picked catchers Tony Pena of Pittsburgh and Jody Davis of the Chicago Cubs; first baseman Glenn Davis of the Houston Astros; Los Angeles Dodgers second baseman Steve Sax; Hubie Brooks, the Montreal Expos' shortstop; and outfielders Kevin Bass of Houston, Chili Davis of San Francisco, Dave Parker of Cincinnati and Tim Raines of Montreal.

On Thursday, Howser selected eight pitchers, including 14-game winner Roger Clemens of Boston, who is expected to start on Tuesday. Howser also picked Charlie Hough of the Texas Rangers; Mike Witt of the California Angels; Ken Schrom of the Cleveland Indians; Ted Higuera of the Milwaukee Brewers; and three relievers — Baltimore's Don Aase, New York's Dave Righetti and Detroit's Willie Hernandez.

Herzog selected 10 pitchers, including Dwight Gooden and Sid Fernandez of the New York Mets. Gooden is expected to be the NL starter.

The other NL pitchers are Fernando Valenzuela of the Dodgers; Rick Rhoden of the Pirates; Philadelphia's Shane Rawley; Mike Scott and Dave Smith of Houston; John Franco of Cincinnati; San Francisco's Mike Krukow, a former Midland Cub, and Jeff Reardon of Montreal.

Krukow has been the star of a revived pitching staff under Manager Roger Craig in San Francisco.

"I'm especially proud to be representing this San Francisco Giants team," he said, "because without all the other guys playing the way they have been, I wouldn't be where I am. I'm looking forward to going, and I hope I get a couple of innings in."

Half of the AL's 28-man roster will be first-time All-Stars, while Brett, making his 11th appearance, and the Yankees' Dave Winfield, with his 10th, are the senior members of the squad. Boston and New York each have four players on the team.

The new AL All-Stars include two rookies, Canseco and first baseman Wally Joyner of California, who won the starting berth in balloting by fans. Also making their All-Star debuts are every pitcher except Hernandez; Minnesota outfielder Kirby Puckett; Barfield; Fernandez; Moseby and Presley.

Joyner, Brett, Puckett, second baseman Lou Whitaker of Detroit, Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken, Tigers catcher Lance Parrish, and Yankees outfielders Winfield and Rickey Henderson are the AL starters.

Assisting Howser as coaches will be Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales and Red Sox skipper John McNamara.

For the National League, the Mets have five representatives, including three starters — outfielder Darryl Strawberry, who led the overall voting, catcher Gary Carter and first baseman Keith Hernandez. Also starting are Schmidt, St. Louis shortstop Ozzie Smith, Cubs second baseman Ryne Sandberg, and outfielders Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres and Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves.

Schmidt will be in his 10th All-Star contest, while Carter makes his ninth appearance.

One player who won't be in Houston and is steaming about it is Boston's Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd. Boyd became enraged and stormed from the clubhouse Thursday night after learning he had not been picked by Howser.

Told by a sports writer that Howser had bypassed him, Boyd began shouting and throwing clothes around as he took off his uniform before a game with the Angels. The clubhouse was ordered cleared for what the Red Sox called "a team meeting."

Boyd, 11-6 with a 3.71 ERA, then left the ball park.

He also expressed bitter disappointment at being passed over for the All-Star Game last year by Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson despite an 11-7 record.

Unknown Stills ties Mudd with hot 65

Busch Classic

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Adrian Stills has been playing golf for 17 years, and now that he has a share of the lead in the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic, he has only one regret.

"I just wish my dad was here to see it," Stills said Thursday after his 6-under-par 65 tied him with Jodie Mudd for the lead after the first round in the $500,000 tournament.

Stills' father introduced him to golf when he was an 11-year-old in Pensacola, Fla. After Stills decided to turn professional, it took him five attempts to make it through qualifying school, which he did in November. It was around that time that his father died.

"It kind of inspired me to keep going and to do well out here," Stills said. "I'm sure he's looking down on me."

Going into today's second round on the 6,776-yard Kingsmill Golf Club course, Stills and Mudd held a one-shot lead over Jeff Sluman and Tony DeLuca.

Stills, who missed the cut in eight of his 12 previous starts and has 1986 winnings of $4,818, finished the par-36 front nine in 33, then recorded three more birdies on the back side and just missed a fourth when his 60-foot putt on the par-4 8th rimmed the cup.

Stills' best finish on the main tour was a tie for 59th in the Canadian Open, although he finished 35th in the Deposit Guaranty, a satellite event held in Hattiesburg, Miss., during the week of the Masters.

Mudd, a five-year tour veteran who is looking for his first win, put together a bogey-free round that included birdies on four of his first seven holes.

"Things went well for me today," said Mudd, who finished in a second-place tie at this year's Honda Classic and is 43rd on the season earnings list. "I started to putt the ball well last week at Hartford and it just seemed to carry over here."

London football 'wonky'

By WAYNE LOCKWOOD
Copley News Service

LONDON — The mind boggles.

William Perry doing the Super Bowl Shuffle down Picadilly? Jim McMahon dazzling Mayfair with his headband ("Fergie"?) and shades?

Tom Landry explaining the flex defense to Margaret Thatcher ("No, Ma'am, it's not the same as Star Wars")?

Is London ready for this, the Monsters of the Midway against America's Team?

Apparently it is, although "ready" may not be the operative word. Daft. There's a better word.

For some reason, this proper city by the Thames has gone all wonky over the prospect of an Aug. 3 exhibition game between the Chicago Bears and the Dallas Cowboys at Wembley Stadium.

In a country where "football" is soccer and the game played in the United States is identified as "American football," to differentiate it from Australian rules football and other such exotic offshoots of rugby, people suddenly have decided they have to see Walter Payton.

Londoners may not know Richard Dent from the Duke of Kent, but their presence is required at Wembley nonetheless. It's the thing to do, don't you know?

Within two weeks of going on sale, every ticket for this game has been snatched up — and there were 80,000 tickets.

The Wembley box office continues to be flooded with applications for more, and those who work there are regretful that the full 100,000 soccer capacity of the stadium is not being utilized.

"We could have sold the game three times over," said box-office manager Ralph Miller. "The Americans have been very surprised that there has been so much demand, particularly for standing accomodation, which takes up nearly half the capacity."

Imagine that. Nearly 40,000 people willing to pay good money to stand and watch an exhibition football game. Wait until Al Davis hears that. "London Raiders" has a nice ring to it, don't you think?

These tickets are not cheap, either. Standing room goes for 15 pounds (approximately $23), and those who wish to sit are required to pay twice that amount or more.

No matter. Scalpers are reported to be asking, and getting, 200 pounds ($315) for seats and 75 pounds ($115) for standing room.

"It doesn't surprise me the touts (scalpers) are asking so much," Miller said. "The demand has been incredible."

The question would seem to be why.

Three years ago, a similar exhibition between the Minnesota Vikings and the St. Louis Cardinals attracted only 36,000 to Wembley — barely enough to cover expenses for an event to which the competing teams must be flown from halfway around the world. A subsequent USFL exhibition between the Tampa Bay Bandits and the Philadelphia Stars did much worse.

The difference — you already knew this, didn't you? — is television.

Channel 4, one of Britain's two independent networks, now carries a one-hour report on NFL football each week during the season. This year's Super Bowl was telecast to the British Isles in its entirety and was watched by a surprising 6.5 million in England.

"The Dallas Cowboys (yes, the cheerleaders are coming, too) always have been a popular team here," said Louise Croker, a spokeswoman for promoter Doug Billman.

"After last season, especially the Super Bowl, the Bears are very popular. A lot of people now know Perry, Payton and McMahon. All the school children know 'The Refrigerator.' "

Ojeda lifts Mets to another win

Associated Press

Despite an excellent season so far, Bob Ojeda has generally been overshadowed on a gifted New York Mets' pitching staff dominated by Dwight Gooden and Sid Fernandez.

But Thursday night, Ojeda was the stopper when he pitched the Mets to a 5-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

"We have two fine pitchers going to the All-Star Game (Gooden and Fernandez). We'll be well-represented. I'm not that disappointed that I'm not going," Ojeda said after scattering seven hits to help the National League East leaders break a three-game losing streak which matched their longest of the season.

Ojeda improved his record to 10-2 and lowered his earned run average to 2.24, third best in the National League.

"We felt we really needed a win tonight," Ojeda said. "I'm very happy with the way things have gone for us."

Ojeda won his fourth straight decision, allowing only an unearned run in his fifth complete game of the season. He got offensive support from George Foster's three-run double and Gary Carter's solo homer off Zane Smith, 7-10.

The only hits Ojeda allowed were by Terry Harper, who went 4-for-4, and Dale Murphy, who was 3-for-3 with a walk.

"Everybody was off-balance, except for two hitters," Atlanta Manager Chuck Tanner said.

NATIONAL LEAGUE
Astros 11, Phillies 4

Rookie right-hander Mark Knudson won his first major league game. Glenn Davis drove in four runs and Denny Walling was 4-for-4, including a pair of doubles, leading Houston over Philadelphia.

Knudson, 1-3, had a rocky start, giving up two runs in the first inning but then settled down to retire 16 batters in a row before he gave up four consecutive singles in the seventh and was relieved. Loser Charles Hudson, 4-9, allowed six runs and five hits before he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the fifth.

Padres 4, Cardinals 3

Tony Gwynn and Kevin McReynolds hit consecutive home runs off St. Louis starter John Tudor in the eighth inning to lead San Diego over the Cardinals.

Tudor, 6-5, who has not won since June 7, allowed nine hits, struck out five and walked one before he was relieved after McReynolds' homer.

Gwynn tied the game 3-3 with his ninth homer to lead off the eighth. McReynolds followed with his first home run since June 14, his 13th of the year.

Craig Lefferts, 6-3, the third Padres' pitcher, pitched two innings to gain the victory in relief of starter Dave Dravecky, who allowed all three Cardinal runs and six hits before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the fifth.

Giants 6, Pirates 3

Bob Brenly's three-run homer and rookie Randy Kutcher's solo shot highlighted a five-run fifth inning for San Francisco as the Giants defeated Pittsburgh.

Kutcher also doubled and scored in the third as he extended his hitting streak to eight games. His homer was his fifth in 87 at-bats for the Giants.

Vida Blue, 6-4, pitched five innings and worked out of several jams to gain the victory. He allowed one run on six hits and four walks, and stranded six runners.

Expos 8, Reds 6

Vance Law's two-run triple highlighted a six-run fourth inning — all with two out — that carried Montreal over Cincinnati.

Winner Bryn Smith, 7-5, gave up seven hits in seven innings and Jeff Reardon put down a Cincinnati rally in the ninth for his 20th save as the Expos snapped Cincinnati's three-game winning streak. Montreal tagged loser Chris Welsh, 3-3, for eight hits and seven earned runs in 3⅔ innings.

Dodgers 11, Cubs 4

Ken Landreaux's two-run double keyed a five-run first inning and Reggie Williams collected three hits to help Los Angeles beat Chicago.

Orel Hershiser, 8-6, pitched 6⅔ innings for the victory. He allowed all four runs and eight of the Cubs' nine hits.

The Dodgers knocked out rookie Jamie Moyer, 1-2, while equaling their most productive inning of the season. Landreaux extended his hitting streak to six games with a two-run double and scored on Williams' single.

Baseball

AMERICAN LEAGUE
Indians 9, Rangers 6

Cory Snyder and Andy Allanson hit consecutive two-run singles in the fifth inning and Ken Schrom won his seventh straight game as Cleveland beat Texas.

Schrom, who was named to the AL All-Star team earlier in the day, survived an early four-run deficit to improve to 10-2, despite allowing six runs on seven hits in 5⅔ innings. Three relievers finished, with Ernie Camacho retiring four batters for his 12th save.

The victory was the Indians' ninth in the last 11 games, while Texas lost its fourth in five.

Red Sox 8, Angels 7

Dwight Evans scored from third base on a balk by Todd Fischer to cap a four-run 12th-inning comeback, rallying Boston over California in a marathon duel between the American League's division leaders.

Tim Lollar, who retired the only batter he faced in the California 12th was credited for the victory, his second without defeat. Lollar was Boston's sixth pitcher.

Blue Jays 8, A's 4

Jesse Barfield's double broke a 3-3 tie in the seventh and Damaso Garcia's fourth single of the game keyed a five-run inning as Toronto downed Oakland.

Jim Clancy, 9-5, scattered six hits over eight innings, while striking out six and walking just one for his third straight win. Oakland starter Eric Plunk, 2-5, was the loser.

Dave Kingman had tied the game 3-3 for Oakland by slugging Clancy's first pitch of the seventh for his 20th homer of the season. It was his 427th career homer, moving him past Billy Williams into 19th place on the all-time list.

Yankees 11, Twins 1

Butch Wynegar and Mike Easler homered and drove in two runs apiece and New York broke open a close game with a nine-run sixth inning to defeat Minnesota. The Yankees sent 13 batters to the plate in the sixth. The first 10 batters in the inning reached base and the first nine scored. The Yankees had eight singles and two walks in the sixth and benefited from two errors.

Dennis Rasmussen, 10-2, gave up four hits in eight innings as he won his fifth straight decision. Tim Stoddard pitched the last 1⅔ innings.

Orioles 5, White Sox 3

John Shelby broke a ninth-inning tie with a bases-loaded triple, leading Baltimore over Chicago.

Winner Mike Flanagan, 3-6, gave up one run on six hits over eight innings, including a triple in the eighth to John Cangelosi, who scored the tying run as Ozzie Guillen grounded out.

Mariners 4, Brewers 1

Spike Owen and John Moses each drove in a run and scored one to lead Seattle over Milwaukee in a game delayed by rain three times, for a total of 3 hours and 44 minutes. The loss was the fifth straight for the Brewers, matching their longest of the year.

SLC

The Bulldogs will leave the SLC effective June 30, 1987, according to a news release from the university's sports information office.

With the departure nearly a year away, the SLC will have time to make whatever expansion is necessary to keep its automatic playoff berths in football (Division I-AA), basketball and baseball (Division I).

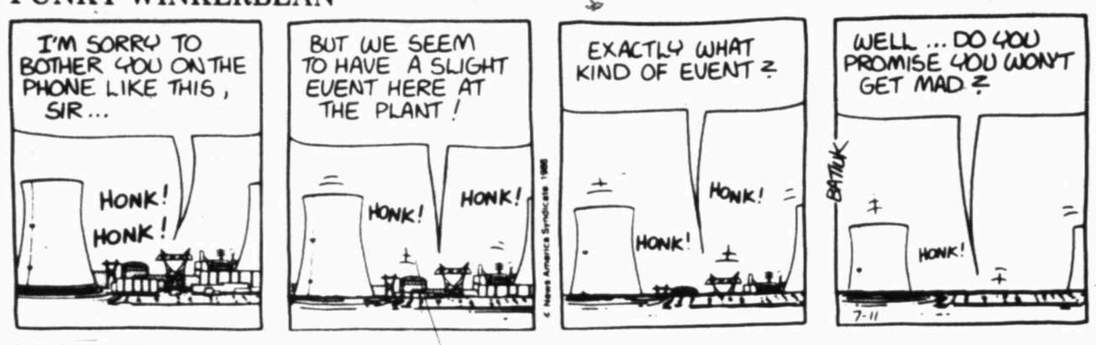

Tech Athletic Director Paul Miller said, "We eagerly look forward to the new challenge this move presents. We realize this will be no easy road to travel and that it will take much hard work and support from all Louisiana Tech followers. But we also feel the goal is reachable and will be rewarding for our athletes, our university and our fans."

Louisiana Tech won the SLC All-Sports Trophy for the fourth time during the 1985-86 school year. Tech has won eight SLC football titles.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East

Opening lead: Four of ♠

Just because you do one thing right does not mean you should pat yourself on the back and relax. Until you have your tricks in the bag, you need to concentrate on the job at hand.

North was a point or so short for his raise to three no trump. However, he upgraded his hand because of the quality of his intermediates, something with which we would not quarrel.

West led his fourth-best spade, and declarer made the key play of rising with the ace at trick one. Had West held all three missing honors, he would have led one of them, so declarer realized that, if the spades split 5-2, the suit would be blocked since East could not jettison his honor under the ace without setting up a second trick for his opponents.

Proud of his accomplishment, declarer started on setting up his red-suit tricks. Unfortunately, he chose to lead a diamond from dummy. East rose with the ace, cashed the queen of spades and exited with a heart. Since declarer needed more than one heart trick, he tried the finesse—down two.

Declarer chose the wrong suit to play at trick two. If West had both the king of hearts and ace of diamonds, the contract was doomed. If he had the ace of diamonds only, that could be forced out at declarer's leisure for then the heart finesse was going to succeed.

The critical case is where East has the ace of diamonds and West and king of hearts. We have seen what happens if declarer tackles diamonds first. If, instead, he takes the heart finesse, West can win and lead a spade to his partner's queen. But declarer can knock out the ace of diamonds and claim his contract as the cards lie.

Dynasty's Tony Driscoll suffers AIDS virus, is not ashamed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — AIDS, which has killed "Dynasty's" Rock Hudson, has afflicted a former member of the TV series' cast, actor Paul Francis Keenan.

Like Hudson, Keenan, 30, who appeared in five episodes in 1982 and eight in 1984, is speaking out strongly about the disease and the need to help victims. But going beyond Hudson's revelations, Keenan said he contracted the disease through sexual contact with another man.

"I don't believe that AIDS is something to be ashamed of, something that I should have to keep a secret," said Keenan, who found out he had AIDS about seven weeks ago.

"I am very proud of who I am, very proud of the things I'm trying to do."

He did keep his homosexuality a secret when he was working in image-obsessed Hollywood, the actor said during a telephone interview Thursday from New York City, where he was recently hospitalized at St. Clare's Hospital and Health Center.

"When I was 18, I came out of the closet...my family knew. Everyone who was a peer knew. When I was acting and my career started to take off, it was suggested to me that I go into a closet I had never known. When I left Los Angeles about 1½ years ago, I decided I wouldn't do that anymore."

Keenan, who played Todd Chandler on the daytime TV soap opera "Days of Our Lives," portrayed stable hand Tony Driscoll on the ABC-TV nighttime soap "Dynasty."

His last acting job was the male romantic lead in the 1984 CBS-TV movie "Summer Fantasy," opposite Julianne Phillips, who later married rock superstar Bruce Springsteen.

Keenan said he is not worried about whether he'll ever get another job in Hollywood.

"When you have AIDS, you really have to face the fact that this could be a fatal disease," he said. "You're dealing with things that are more important than the narcissistic Hollywood type of life.

"I believe that my focus is to be healed from this disease and to live. Whatever else happens after that, happens."

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which cripples the body's immune system and leaves its victims vulnerable to life-threatening infections and cancer, is caused by a virus believed to be passed through blood and semen, but not through casual contact.

Keenan said Hudson, who was 59 when he died Oct. 2 of complications from AIDS, was only a friend. They never worked together, despite their appearances on the series, and it's "absolutely not a possibility" that he contracted AIDS from Hudson, he said.

Keenan, who is undergoing therapy at St. Clare's, wants to use his illness to call attention to those who suffer from AIDS. "I'm trying to educate, to advocate for my own needs and those of my brothers and sisters who are in hospitals and can't speak for themselves."

Keenan said he was numbed when his doctor informed him that he had AIDS.

"It wasn't until he left the room that I could begin dealing with what was happening," he said. Even now, he said, "all my emotional responses tend to vacillate. I might wake up tomorrow morning and not want to deal with it."

He decided to go public when St. Clare's asked him to help advertise for volunteers who work in its 30-bed acute-care unit dedicated to AIDS victims.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Goldie Hawn was feeling terrific after giving birth to an 8-pound, 4-ounce baby boy by Caesarean section, her publicist said.

Wyatt Russell, whose father is actor Kurt Russell, was delivered at 8:28 a.m. Thursday at a Los Angeles-area hospital, said publicist Heidi Schaeffer.

The family planned to return to their Aspen, Colo., home after Miss Hawn leaves the hospital, said Ms. Schaeffer.

Miss Hawn, who starred in the movie "Private Benjamin," has two other children — Oliver, 9, and Kate, 7. Their father is actor Bill Hudson. Russell has a son, Boston, 6, whose mother is actress Season Hubley.

Russell stars in the recently released "Big Trouble in Little China."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "The Nashville Sound" goes global Saturday when the Voice of America broadcasts one hour of the Charlie Daniels Band's 12th annual Volunteer Jam concert.

The VOA, the radio network of the United States Information Agency, will broadcast the country-rock concert starting to a potential audience of 120 million. Additional segments will be taped for later broadcast over several of VOA's 42 language service stations.

It'll be the third consecutive year that VOA will broadcast part of the concert.

Daniels, best known for his hit "The Devil Went Down to Georgia," says he's gratified but not intimidated by the potential size of the audience.

"I don't get nervous about performing," he said.

The 10-hour concert at the 17,000-seat Starwood Amphitheater will feature Daniels and his band, plus two dozen other performers whose names are not announced in advance. Word has slipped out, however, that the Allman Brothers Band plans to reunite at the concert, marking the first time they have played together in nearly 10 years.

NEW YORK (AP) — Julie Andrews and Kitty Carlisle Hart helped Broadway take time out to remember composer-lyricist Alan Jay Lerner, who created such classics as "Camelot," "My Fair Lady" and "Brigadoon."

"He was a consummate craftsman," Miss Andrews told 1,500 people Thursday at the Shubert Theater.

Lerner, an Oscar- and Tony-winning lyricist, playwright and composer who received the Kennedy Center's Lifetime Achievement Award earlier this year, died of lung cancer June 14. He was 67.

Miss Hart, who said she had known Lerner "longer than almost anybody in this theater — before most of you were born," read a letter from composer Frederick Loewe, Lerner's collaborator from 1946 to 1962.

"Ironically, it was Alan who was always wanting to know what I wanted him to say about me at my memorial. ... But fate changed all that," wrote Loewe, 85, who lives in Europe. "It won't be long, however, before we'll be writing together again. I just hope they have a decent piano up there."

Princess Diana

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana and the Duke of Edinburgh became godparents to Prince Philippos of Greece at a christening that drew royalty from all over Europe.

Philippos, born April 26, was christened Thursday at the Greek Orthodox Cathedral of St. Sophia in London.

Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, husband of Diana and son of the Duke of Edinburgh, was among the guests who lined up for a group portrait on the steps of the cathedral after the ceremony.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was higher in early European trading today in what dealers said was a surprisingly positive reaction to a cut in U.S. interest rates. Gold prices were slightly higher in slow trading.

Dealers said the market had long anticipated that the U.S. Federal Reserve Board would cut its discount rate — the interest rate charged on loans to commercial banks — from 6.5 percent to 6 percent.

But the dollar's rise against all currencies except the Canadian dollar took the market by surprise.

"Although a half-point cut was pretty well factored into the current rates, we still thought it would push the dollar toward the lower end of its current trading range," one Frankfurt dealer said.

"It looks like the Bank of Japan may have been quietly supporting the dollar, although there is no evidence that they did," the dealer said.

Dealers in Tokyo also said there was no sign that the Japanese central bank had helped push the dollar up.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 160.90 Japanese yen from Thursday's 159.65. Later, in London, it was quoted at 161.00 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Thursday:

—2.1788 West German marks, up from 2.1730

—1.7812 Swiss francs, up from 1.7745

—7.0000 French francs, up from 6.9775

—2.4535 Dutch guilders, up from 2.4450

—1,497.00 Italian lire, up from 1,491.50

—1.37730 Canadian dollars, down from 1.37825

In London, the dollar was stronger against the British pound. It cost $1.5143 to buy one pound sterling, cheaper than $1.5160 late Thursday.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold was selling at a bid price of $347.75 a troy ounce at noon, up from $347 late Thursday.

In London, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended gold price of $347.65, up from late Thursday's $347.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 11 cents to close at a bid $346.96.

Silver prices were unchanged on the London market where the metal was selling at a bid $5.06 a troy ounce, the same price as late Thursday's closing bid.

T-BILLS

Yields fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on 52-week Treasury bills fell to 5.98 percent in Tuesday's auction, the lowest level since April.

The yield was down from 6.59 percent at the last auction on June 5 and was the lowest since April 10 when it was 5.94 percent.

The sale attracted bids totaling $24.1 billion with $9.5 billion sold.

Federal Reserve drops discount rate to 6 percent

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve Board, in an attempt to stimulate the sluggish economy, on Thursday cut the discount rate from 6.5 percent to 6 percent, its lowest level in more than eight years.

But private economists predicted that the action would do little to ignite the economy, which has been growing at an annual rate of only about 2 percent since mid-1984.

Market forces have already been driving most interest rates down for more than a month. Jerry Jordan, chief economist at First Interstate Bank in Los Angeles, said the reduction in the discount, which is the interest rate charged by the Fed on direct loans to banks, would probably not translate into substantially lower rates on consumer loans and other borrowing.

If the Fed had failed to act, said Lee Hoskins, chief economist at Pittsburgh National Bank, nervous financial markets "would have caused interest rates to increase sharply, with very negative implications."

Without a hefty reduction in rates, Jordan said, the nation's most troubled industries will feel little benefit. "There's no way the energy sector or agriculture is going to be helped by a half-point cut in the discount rate," he said.

Hoskins said the sectors of the economy that stand to benefit the most from low interest rates—housing and autos—"are already going full bore" and will not be helped much by the latest step.

The Fed announced that its six governors voted unanimously to cut the discount rate, which is the only interest rate that is under the direct control of the nation's central bank.

It said it acted "in a context of a pattern of relatively slow growth" both in the United States and abroad. It added that there was little danger that the reduction in the discount rate would ignite inflation because of today's "relatively low prices of a number of important commodities."

Top Reagan administration officials, including White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, had urged the Fed to act. White House spokesman Peter Roussel said, "We welcome the Federal Reserve Board's reduction in the discount rate."

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., who had also sought a reduction in the discount rate, said, "It's the first step in stabilizing and hopefully stimulating today's sluggish economy."

But most economists viewed the action as primarily a defensive measure to prevent dooming the economy to another few quarters of low growth or even a recession.

"This should have positive effect," said Lee Ohanian of Security Pacific Bank in Los Angeles. But adding that any impact on economic growth might not be felt until next year, he termed the move "a defense against a recurrence of very low growth or even a recession next year."

Bank economists were cautious about predicting what effect the Fed's rate cut would have on the prime rate, the rate at which commercial banks lend to their best customers. Now 8.5 percent, the prime may not drop right away and may not fall more than 0.25 percent unless the Fed also lets the federal funds rate, the market rate for overnight interbank loans, fall well below its current range of between 6.75 percent and 7 percent, warned Pittsburgh National's Hoskins. "The Fed has been very niggardly on the funds rate," he said.

The Fed last cut the discount rate from 7 percent to 6.5 percent on April 21. Before that, Chairman Paul A. Volcker had dropped widespread hints that rate cuts would come only in concert with similar moves by the central banks of West Germany and Japan.

Please see FED, Page 4C

Analysts see modest impact from rate cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Analysts say the Federal Reserve Board's reduction of the discount rate to 6 percent should help the nation's sluggish economy, but only mildly.

The Fed announced shortly after stock markets closed Thursday that it was dropping the rate from 6.5 percent effective today, producing the lowest level for the discount rate in more than eight years.

The discount rate is the fee that the nation's central bank charges for loans to other banks and financial institutions. It is the most direct way that the Fed can affect interest rates in general, and a change in the discount rate usually heralds changes in other key rates.

Economists generally said the discount rate cut — assuming it triggered reductions in commercial bank lending rates throughout the rest of the economy — would only have modest impact on the nation's slowing economic growth.

Oil prices close higher on Exchange

NEW YORK (UPI) — Petroleum prices closed sharply higher in moderate trading Thursday, ending a slide that sent oil to its lowest levels since the futures began trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange in the late 1970s.

"A flurry of short-covering and new buying ... at the opening bell prompted a sharp rally in the oils, but those large gains were met with renewed selling by the close," a trader said.

Earlier, oil prices had closed lower in Europe.

The U.S. rise came despite a report issued by Oil Price Information Service that showed in a special 25-city survey, wholesale gasoline prices have reached their lowest level of the 1980s.

The survey showed the average price for gasoline has plunged 42 cents since January with some cities reporting a 50 cent a gallon drop.

"If there is no major reversal of the wholesale trend," the service said, "retail prices should be noticably lower by August."

In some Midwest locations, the report showed street prices are already in the mid-60's cent a gallon range.

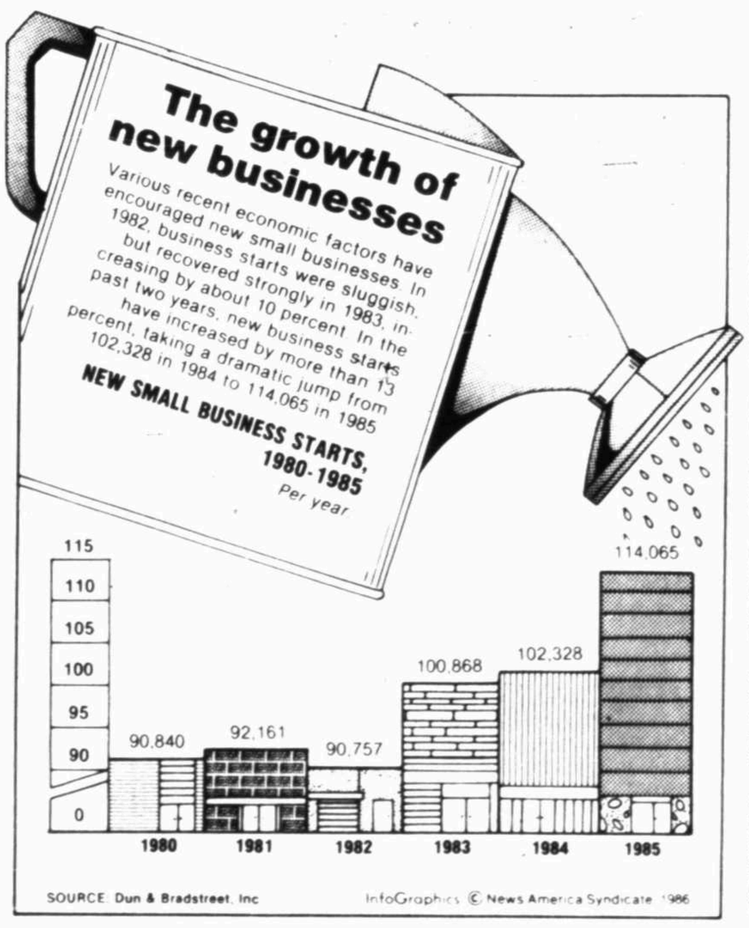

Based on current wholesale levels, the survey said: "It is not unreasonable to expect the nation's retail prices to test going below 60 cents a gallon."

But, analysts attributed the price rise on the Merc to the American Petroleum Institute's weekly figures on domestic oil supplies released late Thursday, which indicated slightly lower gasoline stocks and refinery operating rates.

Analysts cautioned, however, that the data should not be interpreted as showing a decisive change in the world's oil supply situation.

At the same time, businessmen in the oil industry, meeting in Abilene, said the close proximity of West Texas Intermediate crude prices to single-digit dollars threatens to drive more companies out of business.

Please see PRICES, Page 4C

Wholesale prices hold steady during June

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, steady in June after a May gain that ended five months of falling costs, dipped this year at an annual rate of 6.5 percent, the largest half-year decline since the government first kept such records in 1947, the Labor Department said today.

That compares to an overall 1.8 percent increase in the wholesale price inflation index for all of 1985.

Gasoline prices rose by 2.9 percent last month after an 8.6 percent jump the month before. Food prices were flat after a 1.1 percent rise.

Analysts said that, while the big drops in the index of early 1986 brought about by the world collapse in oil prices are clearly over, they do no anticipate a rekindling of inflation anytime soon.

In fact, in an effort to prod the stagnant economy, the Federal Reserve Board on Thursday lowered its discount rate from 6.5 percent to 6 percent — its lowest level in more than eight years.

In announcing the cut in its interest charge on money lent to financial institutions, the Fed cited "relatively low prices of a number of important commodities and greater stability in prices of goods generally" as one of the justifications for its action.

General weakneses in the economy and continued high trade deficits are keeping inflation low, analysts say.

"There is so much slack in the U.S. and world economies that basic commodity prices remain under tremendous downward pressure," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Bros. of New York City.

In fact, most energy prices excluding gasoline continued to fall. Natural gas prices dipped 5.8 percent, heating oil prices fell 6.8 percent.

Among foods, vegetable prices were down 9.8 percent, egg prices were off 6.4 percent, beef and veal costs dipped 2.4 percent. Alcoholic beverage, soft drink and coffee prices all fell.

These gains were offset, however, by an 18.2 percent jump in fish prices, a 3 percent increase in poultry prices and a 5.2 percent gain in pork prices.

Automobile prices, which have been rising steadily, fell 0.2 percent.

The overall, seasonally-adjusted index bettered the 5.8 percent wholesale price drop for the six months that ended in February 1949, until now the record.

People Express agrees to sell Frontier Airlines

NEW YORK (AP) — People Express Inc.'s decision to sell part of itself has aroused an industry debate over the future of bargain air-fares, which the pioneering discount carrier helped spawn five years ago when it began service from what was then a rat-ridden terminal in Newark, N.J.

The airline company agreed Thursday to sell its money-losing Frontier Airlines subsidiary to United Airlines for $146 million.

A range of Wall Street financial analysts, travel agents and airline consultants agreed that fares likely would rise with People Express' diminished role as a competitor.

But some contended intense fare competition would persist in several areas of the country because of the rapid expansion of many airlines that brought a glut of seats needing to be filled.

Others said discount carriers such as Continental and Southwest airlines would move quickly to capture the market of budget-conscious passengers that People Express helped create, thereby keeping pressure on fares.

"There's probably a good argument for either side of the story," said John Walters, executive vice president of Avmark Inc., an aviation and consulting firm in Arlington, Va.

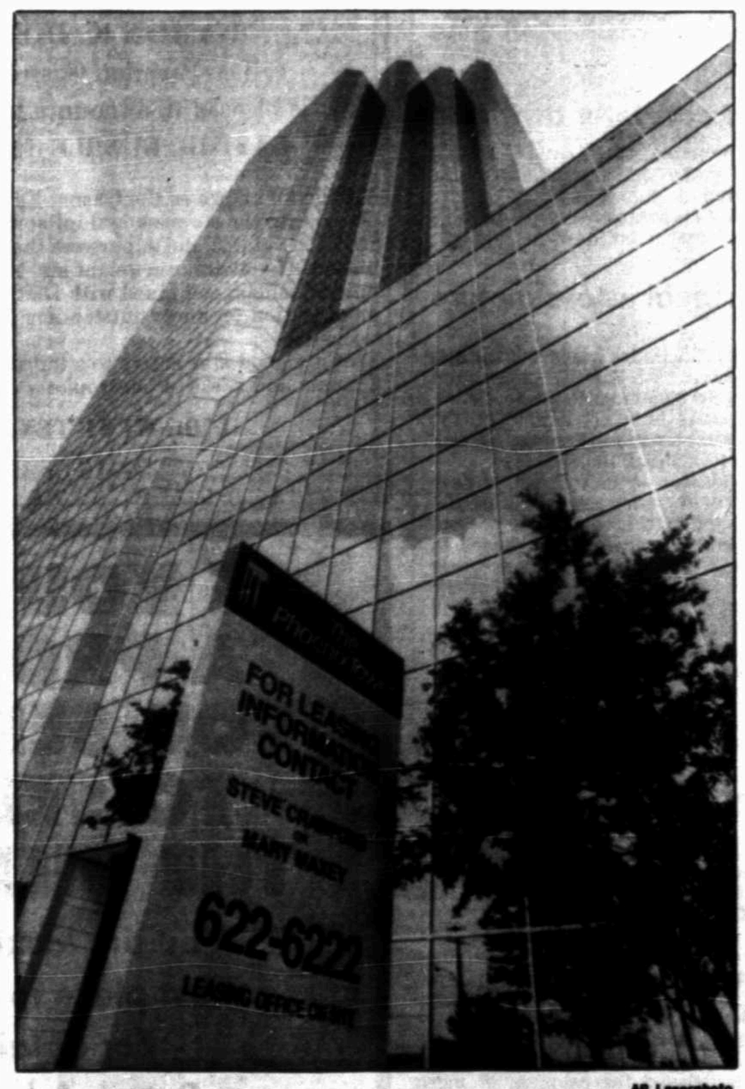

"People Express ceasing operations may tend to alleviate low-fare competitiveness, but I believe there's enough new thinking in the industry to warrant a continuation," he said.

Besides, he added, "it's a heck of a competitive situation out there between major carriers, and any place there's an opportunity for new service, somebody's going to jump into the vacuum."

Many analysts believe People Express became a victim of its own success by promoting uniformly low fares, which attracted a mass market of erstwhile bus riders and backpackers.

This encouraged the airline's management to borrow heavily, expand from three airplanes to 129, buy Frontier Airlines for $305 million and venture into cities where well established airlines competed vigorously.

As a result, People Express lost $27.5 million last year and $58 million in the first quarter of 1986. It is expected to suffer an even greater loss for the summer, historically the airline's most profitable season.

Phoenix Towers, built in the controlled boom days of the early 1980s, has never had a tenant and is the largest of Houston's 72 totally vacant office buildings.

Oil crisis affects Houston real estate

HOUSTON (AP) — Groundskeepers clip the hardy San Augustine grass and tend to potted marigolds. Maintenance men replace lobby floor tiles. A security guard keeps one eye on the front entrance, one eye on a paperback and an ear to a radio.

The only thing missing from the 34-story, aqua-tinted glass-and-chrome office building on Houston's busy Southwest Freeway is tenants.

There are none.

Phoenix Tower, built in the boom days of the early 1980s, when land prices here were skyrocketing and crude oil cost $30 or more a barrel, has never rented a square foot of office space.

It is the largest of 72 "see-through," or totally vacant, office buildings. And at 22 months old, it is a continuing reminder of the real estate crisis bedeviling the nation's fourth largest city.

Since the oil depression began, residential home values have plummeted, scores of homes have been foreclosed on, and the amount of vacant office space has soared. Desperate for tenants, buildings offer everything from free rent to club memberships.

Since the oil price crash of the last six months, the problem has only become worse.

"I'd say our outlook is certainly a lot less optimistic than it was prior to the decline," said William D. Berry, a Houston real estate market analyst.

In April, Berry said, Houston had about 45 million square feet of available office space — more than all the office space in Phoenix, Ariz. It's as if a developer lined up five of New York's twin-tower World Trade Centers in a row and couldn't rent a one.

By Berry's count, 72 Houston buildings now are vacant.

"Things were built that probably never should have been built and probably never will be leased," said Jeff Deweese, sales manager at the Galleria office of Coldwell Banker.

Towards the end of 1985, Deweese said, leasing activity picked up because customers sensed an improvement. But when the price of oil began its 1986 plunge, customers backed off.

"I think we went from a fairly bad situation to worse," he said.

On the residential side, market watchers estimate that values have dropped 20 percent to 40 percent in most neighborhoods. The median sales price of a house fell from $80,260 in 1983 to $69,900 in May, a month when a record 43,000 homes, lots or condos were on the market, according to Houston Board of Realtors figures.

"It has been severe," said Fred Baca, a real estate market analyst. "In 1982 (the real estate market) was booming and it looked like there was no end in sight to the Houston economy. ... Now there has been a panic. Now you can buy a property for less than you can build it."

On the west side of town, a home that sold for $94,990 in July 1982 sold in January for $68,500, one that sold for $73,780 in December 1984 sold in February for $56,000 and one that sold for $66,100 in August 1984 sold in March for $48,900, according to real estate appraiser John Chapman.

"It's tough to put a figure of $60,000 on a house when you know the people paid $80,000 and probably owe $75,000," Chapman said.

The Veterans Administration regional office in Houston now owns 6,000 homes that have been foreclosed on, another record level, and loan guaranty officer Mike McReaken said with a chuckle that "that probably makes me the No. 1 real estate mogul in town."

Yet real estate executives say they see a silver lining in the dark clouds — a chance to gain some major corporate relocations because of the cheap rates, plentiful space and hungry labor force.

"There is no other major city in the country that even approaches Houston in the availability of office space, housing and people," said Lou Cushman, president of Cushman Realty Corp. "It is awesome. But to say that, you have to admit you have a problem."

In the meantime, leasing companies are competing for the existing tenants, trying to entice them to move across town or across the street to nicer quarters at better rates.

Jed Burchfield admits he's undercutting his competition all he can, sometimes leasing space at below cost, with the result of 90 percent occupancy in his buildings.

"It used to be you could fill up an office building in a couple of hours if you knew the right people. Today you can't do that," Burchfield said. "The tenants are out there for those going after them. You have to pay the price of rates we haven't seen in 10 to 15 years."

The original developers of Phoenix Tower decided to mothball the building until a major tenant was found, and then sold it when none surfaced. Homart Development Co., in turn, opened the building with no tenants and has yet to sign a single lease.

Workers are replacing the interior's original gray brick with pink Texas granite "because everyone here seems to go nuts over pink Texas granite," leasing agent Mary Maxey said.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Simmons: Not interested in LL&E takeover

DALLAS — Dallas investor Harold C. Simmons said that his goal "right now" was to acquire up to 15 percent of the Louisiana Land & Exploration Co., but that additional investments would depend on various market conditions.

In a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, Simmons disclosed that he had purchased 5.1 percent of Louisiana Land's common stock. LL&E is a large, independent oil and gas producer with operations primarily in southern Louisiana.

Simmons said in an interview that he told senior executives of Louisiana Land during a meeting that he had no interest in taking over the company.

Between May 8 and May 12, Simmons bought 512,200 Louisiana Land shares for prices ranging from $27.25 to $30 a share. As previously reported, Simmons has an option to acquire an additional 800,000 Louisiana Land shares from Jefferies & Co. for $29.63 a share.

Armco Inc. takes $150 million write-down

NEW YORK — Armco Inc., Morristown, N.J.-based steelmaker and oilfield supplier, has said that it would take a write-down of $150 million in the second quarter because of the consolidation and divestment of several businesses. Included in the special charges is $98 million for the reduction of Armco's oilfield equipment business, including the previously announced closing of its production equipment plant in Los Nietos, Calif.

Also included is $42 million resulting from the sale of Armco's construction products unit and the proposed sale of Wilbur Smith & Associates, an engineering firm. The company said that the remaining $10 million in special fees were from its idled steel unit. Armco earned $55 million in 1985, on sales of $3.7 billion.

Bogert completes second 1986 partnership

OKLAHOMA CITY (SWN) — Bogert Oil Co. announced the formation of the second in a series of four limited partnerships in its Bogert 1986 Drilling Program, a $30 million offering of units in oil and gas drilling partnerships. The Bogert 1986-II Limited Partnership was formed on July 1. Subscriptions from limited partners totaled $7,030,000, bringing the aggregate amount raised in the first two partnerships to $9,050,000.

The partnership is expected to participate in development wells drilled in north-central Oklahoma.

Coastal declares regular quarterly dividend

HOUSTON (SWN) — The board of directors of the Coastal Corp. has declared the regular quarterly dividend on the company's $2.1125 cumulative convertible exchangeable preferred stock, Series G.

The dividend, at a quarterly rate of 52.8125 cents per share, is payable August 15, to holders of record at the close of business on July 31.

Dallas oil producer enters real estate venture

DALLAS (SWN) — HAS Oil & Gas, Inc., a Dallas based oil and gas corporation, has entered into a letter of intent with 7200 Stemmons Joint Venture to acquire real estate located at 7200 Stemmons Freeway, Dallas.

The property is an existing 16-story office building, located on the southeast corner of Mockingbird Lane and Stemmons Freeway, in Dallas. After the acquisiton, HAS intends to manage the property.

Although the definitive terms and conditions of the transaction have not yet been finally negotiated, as part of the transaction, the parties contemplate accomplishing a reverse split of the company's present shares from 30 million shares to approximately five million shares. In addition, as part of the transaction, HAS will issue 95 million shares (approximately 95 percent of the issued and outstanding shares) of the company's common stock to the joint venture. The result of which will be the assumption of control of the company by the Joint Venture.

Chairman of the board Mike Massey stated that the acquisition of the property allows the company to take advantage of certain real estate opportunities and at the same time create flexibility in the direction in which the company will be operating in the future.

Cooper Industries sells Clarke group

DALLAS (SWN) — Hicks & Haas, a Dallas-based investment firm announced that HHM Group, Inc., an industrial holding company formed by Hicks & Haas and James N. Mills, has reached an agreement to acquire Clarke Floor Equipment from Cooper Industries, Inc., for an undisclosed price.

Clarke, with revenues in excess of $80 million, is a major manufacturer of powered surface cleaning and maintenance equipment sold to commercial and industrial markets on a worldwide basis. The company has been part of Cooper Industries since May 1985 when Cooper acquired the McGraw-Edison Company which previously owned the Clarke operation.

Utah oil output climbing

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Tumbling crude oil prices have had little impact on Utah's producers and state officials believe this year will see increased oil output.

"In 1986, production is not expected to decline significantly from last year's total of 41 million barrels," Jeff Burks, a research analyst for the State Natural Resources Department's Utah Energy Office, said Wednesday.

"Indeed, preliminary figures indicate that 1986 first-quarter crude oil production in Utah is running 10.14 percent ahead of the same period last year," Burks said.

He said the low cost of producing oil from Utah's already developed major fields is apparently the reason 1986 output has been on the rise.

"The major reason for sustained output is rooted in the economic decisions confronting operators. As long as the price of a barrel of oil is greater than or equal to its marginal cost of production, the operator can economically continue production from existing wells," Burks said.

Utah crude is selling at between $11.50 and $13 per barrel. The marginal cost of producing it ranges from $4.30 to $8.50 per barrel.

"The marginal cost does not include exploration or overhead. It's basically the cost of lifting one more barrel of oil out of the ground. It appears that production from most Utah fields is economically viable, even at a price of $10 per barrel."

The impact of low prices on Utah production will appear "several years" in the future, Burks said, "when output from existing wells falls off as reserves are depleted."

Some operators may cap their wells in hopes of higher future prices, he said.

"But, due to cash flow needs, terms of leases and costs of shutting-in production, many operators may not have the luxury of this option," he said.

Low world prices already have forced cutbacks in Utah drilling and exploration activities, he said.

Both exploration and drilling declined slightly between 1982 and 1984. But, in 1985, more than 500 Utah oil field workers were laid off, a 25 percent reduction in the workforce, he said.

"Because of the generally high exploration costs in the Rocky Mountain region, it appears a significant rebounding of oil prices to early 1980s levels will be necessary if Utah's current level of output is to continue through the 1990s," he said.

Phillips layoffs over 2,000 in '86

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. has laid off 2,300 workers in the second half of 1986, nearly half of those layoffs coming at its Bartlesville headquarters.

Phillips spokesman Steve Milburn said Tuesday that the oil company's worldwide staff reduction totaled 16 percent in the three-month period ending June 30. Of the jobs cut, Milburn said 1,100 were in Bartlesville.

Milburn said 80 percent of those who left the company accepted Phillips early retirement and special incentives package. He said the remaining 20 percent, about 460 employees, were fired.

Phillips announced in April that it would reduce its work force by up to 2,500 positions worldwide with 1,000 of those in Bartlesville.

Milburn said many of the 2,300 were in domestic jobs while some had overseas posts.

About 14 months ago, Phillips employed 7,300 persons in Bartlesville. The total is now 5,200, Milburn said.

Besides the cuts, Milburn said Phillips delayed the payment of merit raises to unaffected employees.

He said the cuts and merit raise delays would save Phillips about $200 million a year in annual operating expenses.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Mutual funds assets are stocks, bonds, securities

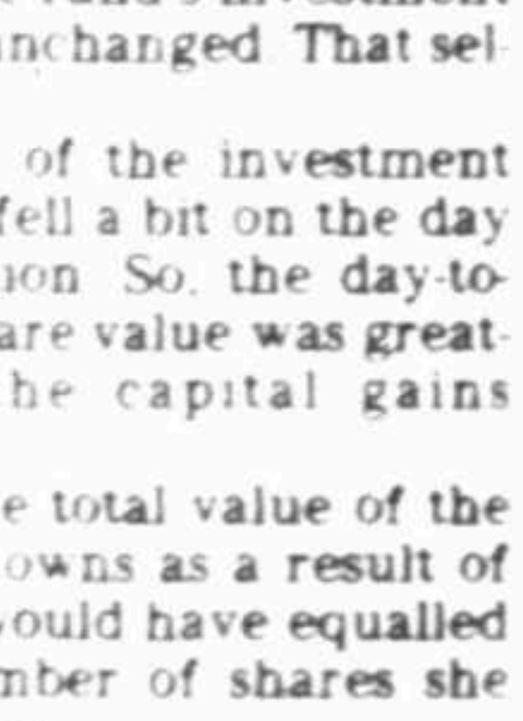

By BILL DOYLE

Q. How do mutual funds establish the price of their shares at the end of their fiscal years? And how do they calculate capital gains distributions?

I do not understand the statements on my wife's mutual fund account. She reinvests her dividends and capital gains distributions to buy more shares. On the day a capital gains distribution was credited to her account she owned more shares than she did the previous day.

But the value of each share dropped. And the total value of her account was lower than the day before.

A. All mutual funds "price" their shares every business day. That's done by adding up a fund's assets, subtracting any liabilities and dividing by the number of fund shares "outstanding" — owned by investors. The resulting number is the fund's net asset value per share.

Doyle

The fund's assets are the stocks, bonds and/or other securities it holds in its investment portfolio.

Capital gains distributions result from the net profit a mutual fund realizes by selling securities from its investment portfolio.

Let's say XYZ Mutual Fund has exactly 10 million shares outstanding and that, over a year's time, it realized exactly $10 million in capital gains. XYZ Fund will make a capital gains distribution of $1 per share.

Now, let's say XYZ Fund had a net asset value per share of $10 on the day before the capital gains distribution. As a result of the capital gains distribution, the per share net asset value will go "ex-distribution" and the $1 distribution automatically will be deducted from the per share net asset value.

The per share value will drop to exactly $9 — only if the market value of the fund's investment portfolio remains absolutely unchanged. That seldom happens.

It's obvious that the value of the investment portfolio of your wife's fund fell a bit on the day of the capital gains distribution. So, the day-to-day drop in that fund's per share value was greater than the amount of the capital gains distribution.

If that hadn't happened, the total value of the larger number of shares she owns as a result of reinvesting her distribution would have equalled the value of the smaller number of shares she owned before the distribution.

Q. Four and a half months ago, I put $5,000 into a no-load mutual fund that invests in Ginnie Mae securities. I set it up to reinvest all dividends. I added another $1,000 to this fund investment about a month ago.

My latest statement shows a gain of a little more than $10 in the value of my investment. Had I taken the dividends by check, I would have received $175.

Is reinvesting for the birds, or did I do something wrong with my arithmetic?

A. Assuming your latest statement lists the value of the total number of shares you own at $6,010, your arithmetic is correct on that point. And, if the statements show you have reinvested $175 of dividends, you're also right there.

If you had taken your dividends by check, the total value of your investment would be about $5,835.

Your reinvestments have purchased more shares. But the per share value, no doubt, has dropped. That's been the unhappy story with many Ginnie Mae mutual funds in recent months. Those funds are not risk-free investments.

Q. I sold a zero-coupon bond and put the money in a mutual fund. My broker says, by the year 2003, the mutual fund investment will be worth $33,000, rather than the $25,000 value the zero-coupon bond will have at that time. My I have your comments on this?

A. If the broker told you that, he broke every rule in the book. No one can predict the value of a mutual fund investment at any future date, much less into the next century.

Woman's answer to lost dogs is tattooing their underside

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — For Chloe Ghormley, 69, life began 13 years and more than 1,000 dogs ago.

"I started living the day I started tattooing dogs," says Miss Ghormley, who operates Tattoos For Dogs, the only business of its kind in the San Francisco Bay Area.

For $10, she tattoos the underside of a dog with its owner's Social Security number, a help if the animal gets lost or is stolen.

She began her business after she lost, then recovered, her dog and wanted to have him tattooed to prevent a repeat.

"The fact that I wanted to get him tattooed became an obsession. I couldn't think of anything else," she said. "I couldn't find anyone, so I did it myself."

FOCUS on BUSINESS

Then and now

The Sears general catalog has emerged from its first century and today's catalog is a bit different than its 1888 ancestor.

Two years after railway station agent Richard Warren Sears sold his first watch in 1886, he published a single, slender 80-page booklet — of watches. Ten years later it had expanded into a hefty volume offering virtually every product the American farmer could need or want. The company called the catalog the "Cheapest Supply House on Earth." It was known familiarly as the "Farmer's Bible."

In the 1930s, most Sears customers lived on farms or in towns of less than 2,500 people. Television was non-existent and telephones were a rarity. A catalog was a window on the world's possibilities.

In 1986, Sears catalog is actually a coordinated group of more than 50 catalogs, centered around two yearly general books. There's also the annual Christmas Wish Book, five seasonal catalogs, 12 supplementary sale catalogs and more than 20 specialty books ranging from "Mother-to-Be and Baby" to "Carpeting." Customers have more than 8,000 pages to shop.

Sears is the biggest distributor of catalogs, mailing over 400 million copies annually.

Beyond room service

Some 45 Sheraton Hotels across the country will soon have a new video checkout unit installed where guests can monitor their hotel bills and check out using their in-room TV screen, according to company officials.

The hotel chain signed an agreement recently with Spectradyne Inc., to install the units in more than 24,000 rooms in 45 Sheraton Hotels across the country, said Sheraton spokeswoman Dianne Duffin.

The video checkout unit, manufactured by Spectradyne of Richardson, Texas, allows guests to monitor their bills and check out of the hotel using their in-room television screen and the specially constructed unit, Duffin said.

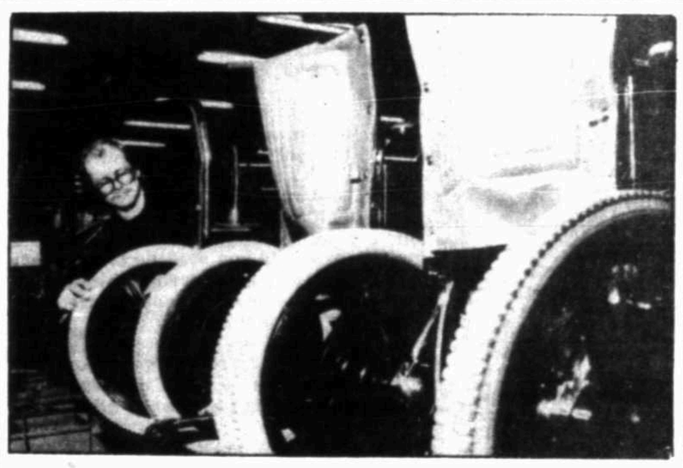

The checkout unit is just one of the new video amenities Sheraton will be offering to its guests, said Michael Bloomer, a Sheraton vice president.

"Sheraton intends to be the leader in using technology to better serve the North American and international in-bound traveler," said Bloomer, indicating the two companies were working to "test a whole new group of interactive video services in real hotel environments."

Other video amenities could include a video record of all telephone calls and messages, in-room travel reservations and electronic funds transfer systems, Bloomer said.

Spectradyne manufactures hotel video entertainment and communications systems which are in operation in more than 350,000 hotel rooms across the country.

The Boston-based Sheraton chain operates 490 hotels in 60 countries.

FED

But the only obviously coordinated tripartite rate cut occurred March 7, when the Fed dropped the discount rate half a point to 7 percent and the Bank of Japan and the Bundesbank cut their rates by a like amount.

Since then, Volcker has had to accept unilateral moves by the United States, in part because the U.S. economy is clearly not growing at the 4+ rate earlier forecast, in part because of growing pressure to do so from the administration and Congress — and in part because of the recent addition of two Reagan appointees to the Fed board.

Tim Howard, chief economist at the Federal National Mortgage Associaiton (Fannie Mae), said the Fed probably felt it had to act before Volcker's scheduled July 23 congressional testimony on Fed policies for the second half of the year.

"There have been persistent reports in the press that congressmen want the rate down, and the market had factored it in," Howard said.

CRISIS

On one floor, steel bars remain in place where a bank vault was planned, and light fixtures, sheetrock and air conditioning ducts remain exposed. Plants in the lobby droop a bit.

"We've had a lot of tire-kicking so far," Ms. Maxey of her leasing efforts. Four firm offers are out to companies right now, she said.

"We are going to be aggressive on our first deal and we will really stretch to make that deal," she said. "We'll make 'em a heck of a deal."

PRICES

"We're helpless," says Morris Burns, executive vice president of the West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association. "There's nothing here to do when they (OPEC) have complete control. They can flat drive everyone else out of business."

Burns and John Chalmers of Chalmers Exploration said that until the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries reaches a production quota agreement, oil prices will continue to be volatile.

Burns said there have been discussions about establishing a quota system in the United States to produce at less than 100 percent of capacity.

"I've seen figures that there are only 1 to 1.5 million barrels a day of excess production. Restricting production would cut down the total amount of oil on the market," he said.

Numerous estimates conclude that Saudi Arabia has a proven reserve of petroleum large enough to supply oil for the entire world for 100 years, said Burns.

Traders on the Exchange were said to be keeping a close watch on the high rate of crude oil production that has flooded the market and has driven prices below the $11-a-barrel level — its lowest level in more than 15 weeks.

OPEC is estimated to be pumping at least 19 million barrels of crude oil a day, significantly higher than the 17.6 million it agreed to in late June at a meeting in Yugoslavia.

Saudi Arabia, the largest producer in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, reportly is pumping about 5.2 million barrels a day, well over its 4.35 million quota under the oil cartel's previous 16 million-barrels-a-day limit.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait have flooded the market and caused the oil price collapse that has reduced the price of West Texas intermediate from around $28 a barrel at the beginning of the year. They are seeking to regain their dominance of the oil market by making it unprofitable for other producers to sell their crude.

At the close on the Merc, light sweet crude for August delivery closed at $11.25 up 48 cents from Wednesday's close of $10.77.

Unleaded gasoline for delivery in August closed at 34.50 cents a gallon up from 33.70 cents a gallon; leaded gasoline closed 34.91 cents up from 33.95 cents; and No. 2 home heating oil spot contract for August delivery closed at 32.70 cents a gallon.

Scientists can grow morels

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Scientists who learned to think like wild mushrooms revealed some of the secrets of a newly patented process they say will allow commercial production of pricey, highly prized morels.

"This is a completely new technology," said James Malachowski, one of three mycologists, or fungi experts, responsible for the breakthrough.

"We're able to produce the morel almost at will," said James Herbert Jr., president of Lansing-based Neogen Corp., which was issued a patent for the morel-growing method in June.

When research started, the prospect of farming morels was "like making gold from lead — almost that farfetched in the minds of some people," Herbert said Thursday.

Malachowski compared the discovery to the invention of the light bulb: "No one has been able to do this before."

The breakthrough involves a secret method for growing morel spawn, or seeds, and for forcing the spawn to send up shoots that become the distinctive mushrooms. The morels grow in pasteurized potting soil.

The cone-capped morel is prized by gourmets for its firm texture, hollow cap and nutty, caraway-like flavor.

Morels are more expensive than the button mushrooms that pop up between the peppers and pepperoni on pizza — about $20 a pound wholesale instead of $1 a pound. Morels grow only in the spring, and large numbers of the fresh fungi can be found only during rainy springs in Midwest and Pacific Northwest states.

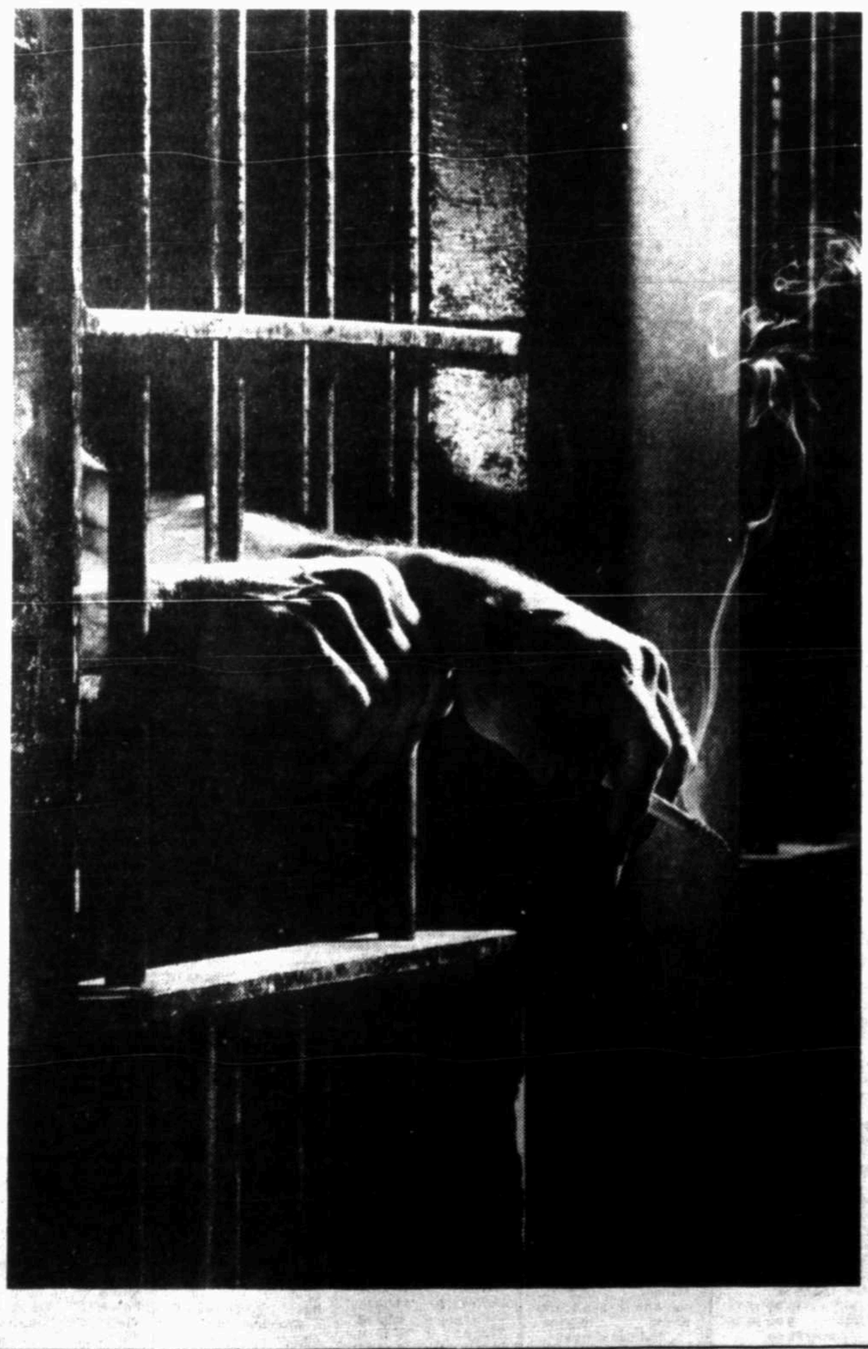

Up to 500,000 morel hunters flock to Michigan each May to search the woodland for morels, tourism officials estimate.

A year-round supply of fresh morels would be a dream come true for restaurateur and mycologist Jack Czarnecki, author of "Joe's Book of Mushroom Cookery."

"From a culinary standpoint, it's one of the most significant developments in the last 20 years and possibly in the century," Czarnecki said.

Market studies indicate worldwide morel sales could reach $25 million a year, Herbert said. About a third of that would be in the United States.

9 out of 10 folks who drop in here dropped out of school.

It's startling. But true.

And at Southwestern Bell Telephone, we believe it's a statistic we can't afford to ignore.

That's why, since 1979, we've been supporting a special program created to keep kids in school and off the streets.

It's called Communities in Schools, and it was started by Texas' first lady, Linda Gale White.

Communities in Schools arranges for free one-on-one counseling to help potential dropouts work out their personal problems, raise their grades, and above all, raise their self-confidence.

So far the program has been so successful, it's expanded from Houston to Dallas, San Antonio, El Paso and Austin.

At Southwestern Bell Telephone, we're proud to support this special program, as part of our overall effort to contribute to Texas communities.

Because we believe the place to get an education is in school.

Not in prison.

We're here to help.

'Everyone wins' with Midland's Teen Court

By HOLLY LONGABERGER
Staff Writer

"Everyone Wins With Teen Court," says the sticker tacked on Ann Scott's office door.

She says the sticker conveys her feelings.

Ms. Scott, the coordinator of Midland's Teen Court, says it allows everyone — the attorneys, the bailiff, the clerks and even the defendants — to feel good about themselves because they end up helping someone.

The object of teen court is to try juveniles who have committed minor first-time offenses before their peers.

"This is a real good aspect of teen court because the defendant will hear from his peers rather than his parents," Ms. Scott says.

The court, which consists of attorneys, clerks, a bailiff and a jury, is made up of teen-age volunteers.

But the judge is real.

Teen court will begin in September and meet every other Monday. The judges, who will probably come from the municipal court, will take turns presiding over the court.

The court is sponsored by the City of Midland, Midland County, Midland Junior League and Midland Independent School District.

Midland decided to form a teen court in order to catch the children who are "falling through the cracks," Ms. Scott says.

"If a kid gets caught shoplifting, little is done other than turning the kid over to the parents who pay the fines. This way we can catch those kids and teach them."

Ms. Scott says Odessa has one of the most successful teen courts in West Texas. The 2½ year-old court had tried 2,000 cases as of May 27.

Before a juvenile can appear in teen court he must plead guilty to the offense before the municipal court.

In teen court, after the attorneys present their case, the jury sentences the defendant to a number of volunteer and jury hours.

Before the sentence is presented, the judge will look over the jury's decision.

If for some reason the defendant feels that a member of the jury will not give him a fair trial, the defendant can asked for another jury, Ms. Scott says.

When the defendant completes the hours assigned by the jury, his record is wiped clean.

The proceedings are confidential, and everyone involved in the case must sign a confidentiality statement, she says.

"At any time a defendant feels unhappy with teen court, he can be asked to go back to municipal court."

The minor offenses teen court will process are first-time runaways, possessing or consuming alcohol, drunkenness, truancy, simple assult, fighting, theft under $20, disorderly conduct and offensive language or gesturing in public.

Other offenses are reckless damage or destruction under $20, window peeping, hot checks under $20, gambling, flag desecration, failure to identify as a witness, minor traffic violations and possessing clean drug paraphernalia (devices used to hold marijuana cigarettes such as roach clips, and syringes).

Ms. Scott said those possessing drug paraphernalia will be advised to go to drug counseling.

She said there are 100 teen-agers interested in teen court.

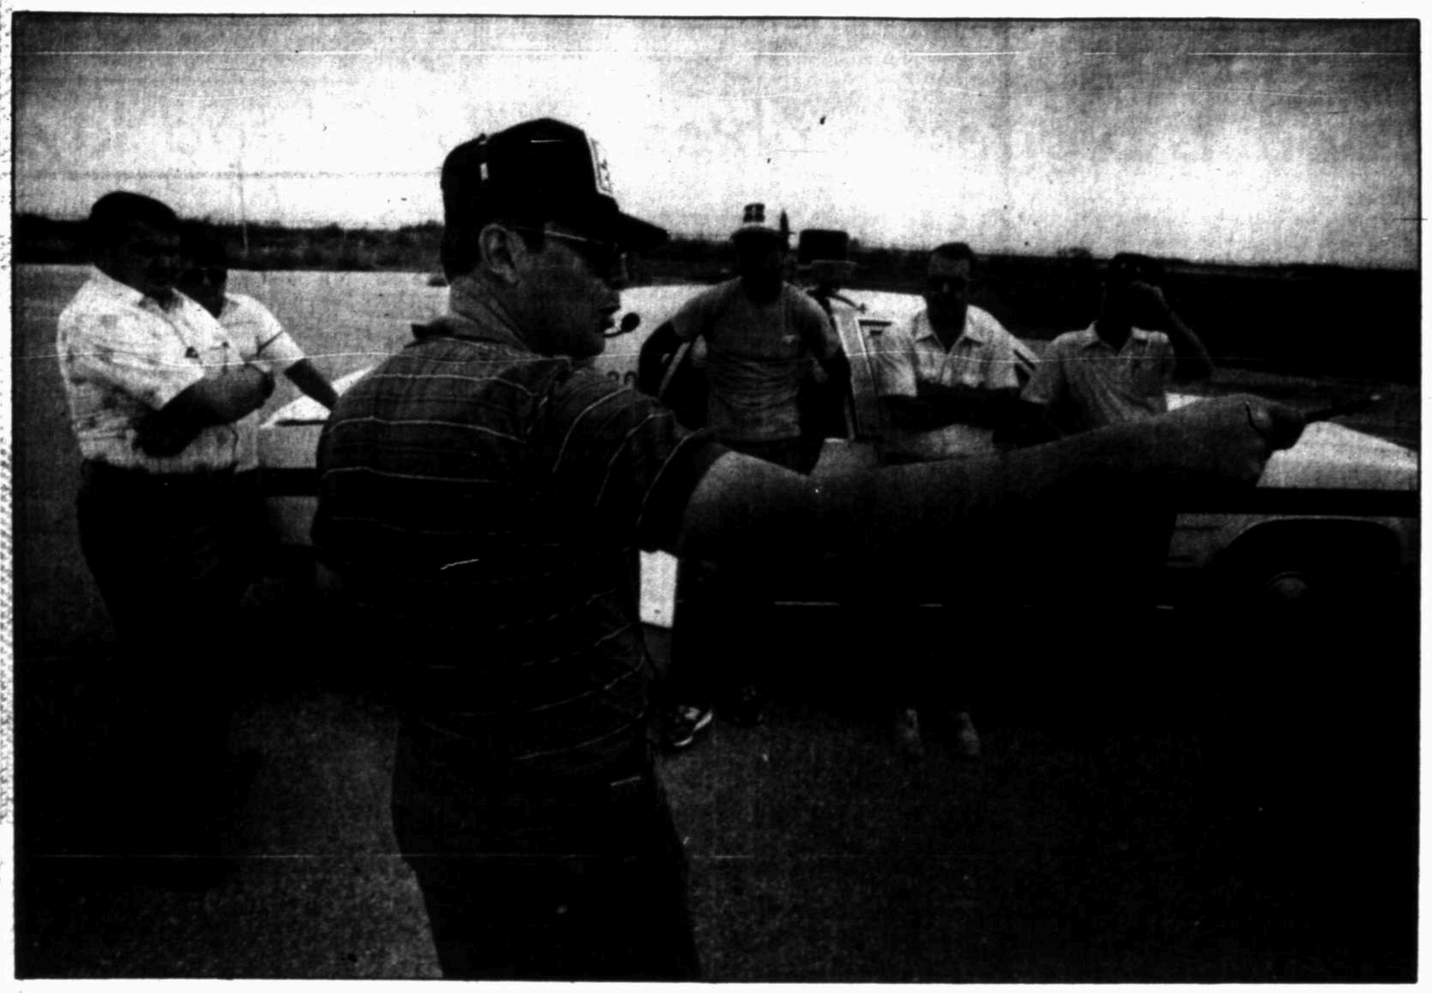

"Forty-four want to be attorneys — typical Midlanders," Ms. Scott says.

Training for the teen-agers will begin in August. They will be taught basic information about the court and its procedures, she says.

Several of the volunteers have traveled to Odessa to observe its court.

The students "being typical Midlanders, whispered, 'We can do it better,' " she says.

For any teen-ager interested in becoming involved in teen court contact Ms. Scott at 688-1252 or 684-6983.

Midland police Sgt. J.R. Smith explains to other officers how they can hone their driving skills. Smith's lecture Thursday at the Midland Regional Airport was a part of a driving course for the Midland Police Department.

Police course drives for excellence

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland police officers concluded the latest in a series of refresher courses on driving skills and safety Thursday at Midland Regional Airport.

The eight officers who attended the eight-hour pursuit course were given two-and-a-half hours of classroom instruction before getting behind the wheel for a series of road exercises.

Sgt. David McNair and Sgt. J.R. Smith of the department's instruction and training division said the reason for the course is simple.

"Liability," Smith said, "is the reason for this course. There is no doubt about it."

He said a recent case where the California Highway Patrol agreed to pay $13 million in damages in an out-of-court settlement points to the potential legal problems a law enforcement agency faces.

In that case, Smith said an officer monitoring vehicles with radar pulled into traffic to chase a speeding driver.

A drunk driver — who swerved to miss the officer's car — struck and killed a man on a motorcycle.

The State of California was considered liable in that case, Smith said.

Although the state of Texas only requires 16 hours of classroom driving instruction and no on-the-road testing or instruction for police officers, McNair said Midland decided last year to initiate the basic 24-hour course developed by the National Academy of Professional Driving.

Each Midland patrol officer is required to attend the basic course, and an annual course like the one Thursday to refresh the skills and techniques learned.

McNair, who has been with the department nearly six years, said cities that adopted the NAPD program almost immediately began reporting a drop in the number of accidents involving on-duty officers or employees.

He said the MPD, which has had several officers injured in police chases, has benefited tremendously from the program.

"There is a presumption that once an officer straps on a badge and gun, he is also an expert driver," McNair said.

He also dismissed the image of the police car screeching around sharp corners and bulleting wildly through city streets after a suspect.

"That is not the case. Slow down and you will actually go faster — that's what we teach.

McNair and Smith time and grade the officers as each takes a patrol car through a course laid out with orange cones that contains several 90 and 180 degree and slaloms of "S" turns.

"For us the technique is more important than the time," Smith said.

Four-year veteran Midland police officer Ray Conklin said, "I've been driving patrol cars for more than 20 years. It's taught an old dog new tricks. It really helps you out on the street. It makes you more observant."

Officer Jim White, who once raced motorcycles, agreed.

"I got into a chase right after the first course we had and it really helped," he said. "And it was a night chase."

McNair said each officer also is required to perform successfully on two other driving layouts during the course.

One, called the "lollipop," tests the officer's response to a signal given by another student.

Independent to run as write-in candidate in commissioner race

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Scott Smith has been forced to make a radical change in his strategy as an independent candidate for Midland County Precinct 4 commissioner after his petition to get his name on the Nov. 4 general-election ballot was disqualified Thursday.

Smith, 32, said he would run as a write-in candidate in his bid to oust Republican Commissioner Win Brown, 59. Brown has been commissioner since 1971.

"We are going to go ahead and do that (the write-in route)," Smith said today.

"We have invested too much time and effort in this. It's definitely a setback, but we are going to go ahead and push forward. I'm bulldoggish. We are going to regroup and attack."

Smith, a marketing-research assistant manager, had filed his petition of more than 305 signatures of voters who had not cast votes in either the Republican Party or Democratic Party primary elections. Filing deadline was July 7.

The Texas Election Code requires valid signatures of 5 percent of voters who cast ballots in the most recent (1982) gubernatorial election on the petition for that person to be an independent candidate in the general election.

Smith completed that requirement, said Midland County Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert.

But Smith's petition had other flaws.

The Election Code says that, among other criteria, the signatures must be accompanied by the voter registration numbers of the signers before the petition is given to the county judge, who in turn, hands the petition to Ms. Calvert for validation.

Ms. Calvert today said that Smith's petition was invalid.

"That's the way I read the law," Ms. Calvert said. "The petition does not meet the requirements. He got extra signatures as a safety net."

But "what really killed him" was the lack of voter-registration numbers. Only 99 signatures were accompanied by the voter-registration numbers.

"I don't think I have any other alternative (other than to run as a write-in candidate)," Smith said.

John Steiner, an attorney in the Texas Secretary of State's Elections Division, today said that Smith's petition was invalid if it did not meet the Election Code's standards.

However, he said Smith has until 5 p.m. on Sept. 10 — 55 days prior to the general election — to file a Declaration of Write-in Candidacy with Midland County Judge Bill Ahders.

"I should have gone ahead and got legal counsel (prior to circulating the petition)," Smith said.

Midland County Precinct 4 takes in much of the strongly Republican and affluent northwest Midland.

Smith said he plans to spend less than $500 on his campaign and that he and his campaign committee workers would be making many door-to-door calls in acquainting voters with Smith.

"We might be able to write a book after this, 'How To Do It under $500 and Still Win.' I hate to see somebody buy an election."

"It can be done," said Smith. "It's going to be hard. It's nice that we are not afraid of hard work. It's going to be a learning experience."

Politically, Smith bills himself as a "middle-of-the-roader" who grew up on the South Plains — in the Tahoka and Lubbock areas.

His father was a "dirt-farming Democrat," he said, and his mother was a "voting Republican who owned the mineral rights on the land he farmed."

In his door-to-door solicitation of signatures for his thwarted petition to file as an independent candidate, Smith he visited with people in the city and in rural areas.

Though both rural and city people were concerned about keeping taxes from increasing, the rural people otherwise were interested in county road maintenance, and city residents were "more interested in seeing a change" in Commissioners' Court.

"I think taxes would be the next thing," he said.

"The biggest complaints were out in the country," Smith said. " 'Can you do anything about the roads?' " the rural people would ask, he said. "They are more concerned about the roads and the tax base, valuation," and money which they will spend in taxes.

Interest in the county jail issues, which was a major campaign issue in the race for commissioner of County Precinct 2, was minimal, Smith said. Marketing consulting Guy McCrary defeated Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig in the June Republican Party run-off election. McCrary will be challenged by Democrat Don Boydstun for the $24,000-a-year post in the November general election.

"There was very little concern about the jail," Smith said. "There were very few people who asked about it. People are tired of it. They want something done."

"You can banter it about for so long," he said, "and sooner or later that dragon is going to have to be faced."

Drug possession charges pending against Midlander

From Staff Reports

Charges of cocaine and heroin possession were still pending early today against a 30-year-old Midland man, said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter.

The man was arrested Thursday at his residence by deputies.

Painter said sheriff's officers, assisted by the K-9 unit of the Midland

Police Roundup

Police Department, executed a search warrant about 12:30 p.m. Thursday, and then arrested the man in the 3300 block of Mariana Ave.

Painter said a little more than an ounce of a substance believed to be cocaine and about one-half gram of a substance believed to be heroin were taken in the arrest.

The estimated value of the cocaine was $3,500, and the heroin's street value was some $200, Painter said.

A scale, $400 cash, water pipes and other drug paraphernalia also were confiscated by deputies, Painter said.

"The subject had been under surveillance for some time," Painter said. "The information in the case was developed by CID (Criminal Investigation Division).

"It is part of a continuing investigation that has been going for some while."

In other reports, about $1,300 in items was burglarized from a residence sometime between late Wednesday and early Thursday morning.

Tom Osborne, Rt. 1, Box 2132, told officers a mans' watch valued at $499, a 35 mm camera worth $325, a .38 caliber handgun valued at $149, an AM-FM cassette player valued at $199 and a pair of binoculars valued at $75 were taken from his residence.

Reports said entry was apparently gained by kicking in the front door of the residence.

The Midland Police Department today also reported the theft of an automobile valued at $10,000.

The complainant, James C. Naughton, told police a 1983 Cadillac was stolen sometime between 10 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. Thursday.

'Live Ed' concert galloping success

By DOUG CRICHTON

DALLAS (AP) — What with Wilbur, a mess of Edheads, groupies and Nurse Goodbody's First Ed station all on hand to pay tribute to television's only talking horse, James Burnett happily declared his first "Live Ed" a success.

Of course, he was comparing Thursday night's shamelessly shallow benefit concert with "Edstock," the concert disaster that saddled his Mister Ed Fan Club with a $15,000 debt in the first place.

Live Ed had LiveAid and FarmAid to thank for its name, but its purpose was far from being that noble: It was simply and tongue-in-cheekedly designed to help get Burnett back in the black.

"We're all tired of giving money to people who need it," KZEW radio personality Steven Clean told the crowd. "We're here because Jim 'Big Bucks' Burnett screwed up last year. If you paid $10 to get in, I'm amazed."

But more than 500 people hoofed it over to the Loews Anatole hotel to gawk at the man who played alongside Mister Ed for six television seasons from 1961-66 and bee-bop with an array of musicians.

Actor Alan Young, who portrayed Wilbur Post in the black-and-white television show that survives in reruns, was astonished at all the hubbub over his appearance.

"The show was fading out, we thought, but then here comes this," said the dapper Young, who now spends most of his time doing voices for Disney movies and the cartoon series "Smurfs."

"We've even been asked to do a two-hour television special, and now I think I'm going to do it."

He said he wasn't sure where he'd get a replacement for the original Mister Ed, who died in 1972, although Burnett made a play for the spot with whinnies, neighs and other Ed-like noises.

"I smell better, but the horse is smarter," quipped the 27-year-old Burnett, who founded his fan club 10 years ago simply so he could have an unusual return address.

The crowd's reactions to Burnett's Live Ed mirrored those the "Mister Ed" show prompted during its original run.

"I couldn't care less about that stupid horse," said 28-year-old Deborah Scharpff of Dallas. "I'm here to hear Shallow Reign (one of the bands) and nothing else."

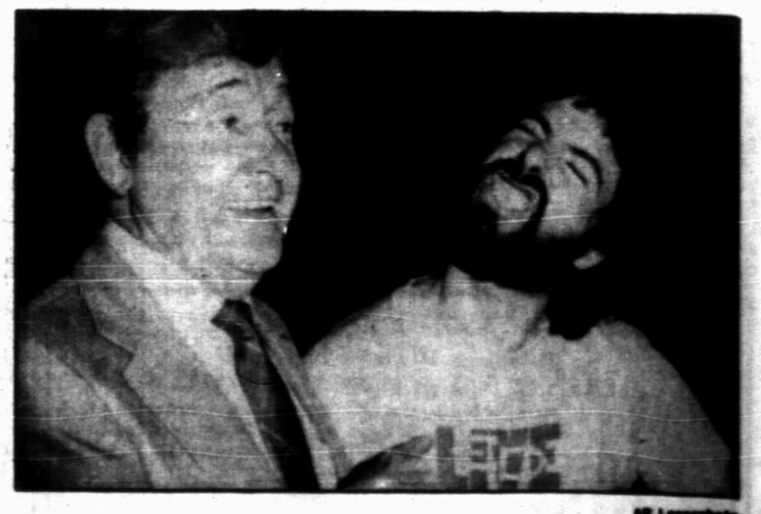

"Well, yes, you could say it's a little silly," conceded Bonnie Bratby of Dallas, a Mister Ed Fan Club member of long standing. "But we're here to keep the memory of Mister Ed alive."

Lisa Moore, 19, looked perplexed when told Young was about to arrive. "Wilbur? Oh, you mean the guy who played with the horse. Nah, he's too old for me."

Young, not being a hoofer himself, said he had no act to put on for the crowd and contented himself with shaking hands, signing autographs and posing for photos with an old "Mister Ed" poster.

But before the show got under way, a videotaped ditty — vaguely attuned to "We Are the World" — greeted people as they trooped into the nightclub:

"There's a voice we're hearing; it's coming from a horse; And he's got a lot of common horse sense; of course of course."

Numbers of migrant workers dwindling

By TOM PFEIL

LAREDO (AP) — Twenty years ago, they went north by the thousands — to the fields of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Wyoming, Idaho and Colorado.

They went to harvest tomatoes, sugar beets and cherries.

To sociologists they were an oppressed minority, the victims of a racist society and unscrupulous farm conglomerates.

As late as 1976, one survey showed there were 22,000 migrant workers in Webb County, Jose Valdez, deputy director of the Texas Migrant Council in Laredo, said.

Since then, their numbers have been dwindling, Valdez said, and no one knows for sure how many still make the annual journey.

Valdez, who is also a city councilman, was a migrant worker from 1951 to 1961. In 1951, he was 10 years old.

The situation of the migrant farm worker was not quite what the politicians and intellectuals believed it to be, he said.

To be sure, there was poverty and suffering, but there was also opportunity.

Valdez has forgotten nothing of his experiences. He remembers the names of the towns, the highways, the employment offices and the company bosses.

He remembers the excitement of traveling across the United States, and the hardship of living in boxcars and old barns.

"The sugar beet companies used to have recruiting offices here," he said. "They would loan money to families who wanted to migrate, and paid $27.50 for each person making the trip, which they deducted from the amount you owed them.

"These days no one is recruiting anymore, but growers will still call someone directly when he's been working for them for 20 or 30 years."

The minimum wage in the early '50s was $1.25 per hour, Valdez said.

"We made way over that," he said. "We were very satisfied with our wages, and most of the migrants made it a point to buy a home."

There were three classes of migrants, he said.

The lowest was the "Enganchados" (hooked).

"They went with a trucker, 'hooked on' with somebody," he said. They were at the mercy of the crew leaders, and made less than the minimum wage. If you wanted to go to town, you walked. When you have no money, every second hurts."

The second class of migrants was the independent, Valdez said.

"You go wherever you please and if you don't like it, you go somewhere else. We loved it."

Finally, there was the businessman migrant. He owned his own trucks and equipment. He bought land at a time it could be had for $10 an acre.

"I never thought I was poor," Valdez said. "We were traveling all over the country. What the hell, I was young. When you're older you notice all sorts of things you don't when you're young."

Valdez' father died in 1963, on the road from the beet fields of Lingle, Wyo., to a hospital in the town of Torrington.

"I don't think he got fair treatment from the doctors in Torrington," Valdez said. "They usually kept heart patients under observation for a week or two, but they released my father after four days.

"I didn't think it was because we were Mexican. Whoever is poor gets it."

After a stint in the army, Valdez tried farming in Wyoming, and then became executive director of the Minnesota Migrant Council, a position he held for five years.

His interests range from ancient history and linguistics, to football and city politics.

He has completed 50 pages of a book on his experiences as a migrant worker.

Dropouts biggest problem, LULAC head says

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A high school dropout rate that exceeds 70 percent in some areas is the biggest problem now facing Hispanics in this country, the president of the League of United Latin American Citizens says.

"These are time bombs we're sitting on," Oscar Moran said Thursday. "The dropout rate manifests itself into many, many things and is really impacting the economy of this country."

Moran, whose organization is holding its annual convention here this week, called for a national effort to combat the problem of high school dropouts, both in the Hispanic communities and elsewhere.

"We have to have programs on a national level to lick this problem," he said. "We have to get the Department of Education and corporations involved in this fight."

Moran said the dropout rate among Hispanics at the high school level stands at 47 percent nationwide, with large cities such as Los Angeles and Miami reporting levels of 60 to 70 percent and higher.

He said the rate is even more alarming when statistics show that 60 percent of the estimated 20 million Hispanics in the United States are under 18.

"If the ethnic group that is the youngest on the country now doubles in 10 years, who is going to support the whole infrastructure?" he asked.

Education is the theme of this year's LULAC convention, which has attracted 3,000 delegates, making it the organization's largest convention ever.

Seminars during the Las Vegas conclave are focusing on secondary education for Hispanics, bilingual education and the drive to make English the official language of the United States.

Moran said his group, based in San Antonio, Texas, plans to fight to expand bilingual education as one of the best ways to keep young Hispanic children in school.

"Bilingual education still remains the most viable vehicle we have toward reducing the dropout rate," he contended. "It helps keep children in who drop out. The figures reflect that it has worked."

Moran claimed opponents of bilingual education try to portray it as something that will keep children from learning English. Instead, he said, it is simply a way to introduce children to the education system in America.

"The opposition believes we want it to last through college," he said. "It's not beyond the third grade anywhere now, and we're not trying to push it past there."

Cows' horns come home to Abilene doorstep

ABILENE (AP) — Horns copped from the "Herd of Cows" sculpture have turned up on the doorstep of a 5-year-old boy who donated all his pennies to help pay for the exhibit.

Wayne Amerine, the Dallas artist behind the "Herd of Cows," was overjoyed Thursday to learn the two sets of missing horns had been returned.

"This is just great. I can't believe it," he said when told that Trip Gollihar, who helped pay for the permanent display, had found the wooden horns on his front doorstep Thursday morning.

The horns were discovered missing last week, although two sets of horns and a tail, both from a stolen cow recovered last weekend, have not been recovered.

Trip, son of Paige and Katherine Gollihar of Abilene, said he walked out the front door of his house about 7:15 a.m., saw the horns leaning against the door and ran back to his parents with the news.

He said, "There are horns on our front porch."

"All I could think of were musical instruments," his mother said, laughing. "But he knew what they were right away."

The Gollihars called Lynn Barnett, who is director of the Abilene Cultural Affairs Council, to tell him of the recovery.

"I guess he (the perpetrator) felt he didn't have any place else to take them," Mrs. Gollihar said. "He didn't know who was responsible."

Trip said he donated the money because "it was one of my favorite exhibits."

Volunteers' drunkenness 'all in the line of duty'

By SANDY BAKER

FORT WORTH (AP) — Karen Sanderson, 19, lifted the large Styrofoam cup to her mouth and took a long sip of a carefully calibrated rum and Coke. She was getting ready to have some fun.

"Maybe I'll learn something," the Haltom City cocktail waitress said.

Sitting directly across the table, Pauline Bloyd, a state highway department worker, her cup filled with bourbon and 7-Up, said as she started to drink, "It's all in the line of duty."

It was a remark she repeated throughout the afternoon.

Bill Jones, 54, a retired General Motors employee from North Richland Hills, sat next to Bloyd and for three hours quietly drank nine bourbon and Cokes. He later would register a .127 on the Intoxilyzer.

"My wife volunteered me for this. I thought it would be educational if nothing else," he said.

Ms. Sanderson registered a .132 after her nine drinks and Ms. Bloyd a .122.

Vickie Eaton, 30, of Boonesville, a Tarrant County employee, got the most drunk of the group — at least legally. She clocked in at .141.

Funny thing about the mark, she quipped, "I'm like this when I'm sober."

Marcy Newman, 27, drank bourbon until she reached .102, just over the legal limit. "I'd be afraid to drive right now. I probably couldn't find my car keys at this point," she said.

For three hours the volunteers drank. They started out exchanging pleasantries, learning details about one another's jobs. The conversation slowly changed to talking about whether they would drive while drunk, to not-so-clean jokes, to who would be the first to dance on the table.

Then they were tested by police officers to see if they could determine just how drunk they were.

The recent training sessions for police officers from Tarrant County were sponsored in part by the Tarrant County Driving While Intoxicated Task Force.

The exercises are part of a new series of roadside sobriety tests designed to detect the borderline drunken driver — the .10. A person is legally drunk in Texas when he or she registers a .10 on a breath test.

Three tests make up the new series, and to the driver suspected of being drunk they appear simple. But beware, officials warn.

"The tests are fairly foolproof," said Vernon With, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration program director, who conducted the program along with the Texas A&M University Law Enforcement Security Training Division.

"There really is no other way for these officers to develop skills," With said, except by using human guinea pigs. "What we now have is a battery of tests, good tests for laboratory use and good tests for roadside use."

For the first test, the officer tells the subject to stand with head straight, hands down at his sides and follow the tip of a pen with his eyes.

Sounds easy.

But, With said, when a person is drunk or on drugs and their eyes are moved to the corners, they twitch. Only a sober person has smooth eye movement, he said.

The second test requires the driver to stand on a line, hands at his side, walk heel to toe counting out loud to nine, turn around and walk the line back.

For the third test, the driver selects a foot, raises it at least 6 inches from the ground and counts to 30. He's supposed to be able to keep his balance.

Police officers who participated in the school said the tests will make it easier to detect those drivers who have been drinking and are at or barely over the legal limit. With older tests, it's estimated that about 80 percent of suspected drunken drivers are undetected.

Jurors to begin deliberating in kidnapping-slavery trial

KERRVILLE (AP) — Jurors will begin deliberating a verdict for three men accused of fatally torturing a drifter with an electric cattle prod and burning his body atop a makeshift pyre at a Hill Country ranch.

Rancher Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr., 55, his son Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr., 33, and ranch worker Carlton Robert Caldwell, 21, are charged with conspiracy in the death of drifter Anthony Bates.

Final arguments in the case are scheduled Monday.

"You might be prepared to spend the night Monday," Judge Thomas Blackwell told jurors as they left the courtroom Thursday.

The trial, already in its 11th week, is the longest on record in Kerr County.

Before defense and state attorneys rested their cases, Caldwell took the witness stand for the 11th straight day Thursday.

Defense attorney Ray Bass, who is representing the younger Ellebracht, asked Caldwell to identify voices on one of three tape-recorded torture sessions.

"Now, do you think Jesus Christ went through this much torture?" asked a voice Caldwell identified as his own.

Caldwell maintains that while ranch workers and owners shocked Bates with the cattle prod, they were acting during much of the tapings.

"If only three of the 20 sessions were taped, the other 17 weren't acts then?" asked prosecutor Gerald Carruth.

"I can't testify to that," answered Caldwell. "I was only at four torture sessions."

Elsewhere on the tape, a voice Caldwell said was either his own or that of ranch worker Mark Hamilton said, "It's time to do his upper body. He's not screaming like he should."

Proposals recall 'Nazi Germany'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The city's proposal to require mandatory drug testing, lie detector screening and psychological examinations for firefighters is reminiscent of Nazi Germany, a union negotiator says.

"Nobody expects a lot of realism out of the first proposal, but nobody expects this," said Louis Hebert.

City negotiator Ben Foster Jr. proposed the testing Wednesday during the second session of contract talks with the firefighters' union.

Foster warned a similar demand will be made when talks begin with police officers.

Hebert said the requirement for polygraph tests "would be like living in Nazi Germany."

Hebert said he hopes the proposals are a bargaining ploy in the early contract talks.

"I think it's ridiculous," Hebert said of the city's offer. "The guys (firefighters) are very mad or almost in a state of shock."

Hebert, a Beaumont-based representative of the International Association of Firefighters, said he will take a "wait-and-see" position.

Hebert, who has been retained by the local to negotiate the new contract, said he realizes the testing proposals are a "wish list."

Foster unveiled the testing demand in a 63-page contract proposal presented to the local firefighers' association during the second bargaining session Wednesday.

"We don't want somebody...driving an ambulance and snorting cocaine," Foster said.

Mall brings 'Old West' back to life

From Staff Reports

Blazing guns and bad guys bring the "Old West" back to life Saturday for mall shoppers as Midland Park Mall continues its month-long Texas-style celebration.

The "just for fun" bank robbery will take place at the Western-style street front created in Sakowitz Court. Can-can dancers will perform in front of the saloon while the old stagecoach will provide some captive cowboys. A country-Western dance exhibition will conclude the afternoon.

Shows will be at 1 and 3 p.m. and are free to the public.

The event is co-sponsored by First City National Bank.

Mall shoppers will be rewarded with a "Bandana Bonus" cart where they can stake a claim to their choice of a red or blue bandana or tote bag with $30 in receipts from mall merchants.

Officials one hop ahead of grasshoppers

Associated Press

One year after the nation's worst recorded plague of grasshoppers laid waste to Western crop and range lands, federal officials say an $18 million pesticide spraying program is helping subdue the hungry insects.

In a few areas the grasshoppers still have the upper hand, including parts of eastern Montana and a section of Utah that is crawling with Mormon crickets.

Compared with 1985, however, the states of Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Wyoming and Utah report the pests are in retreat, and some of the $18 million may go unspent, state and federal officials say.

"We think the program's been very effective," said Andy Adams, Western assistant regional director for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. "If you kill a lot one year, there are going to be fewer the next year."

Agriculture officials in most of the seven states said they did not make dollar estimates of farmers' 1985 losses, noting much of the damage was to federal grazing land used by cattlemen.

Private landowners complained that the government, which spent about $20 million on a spraying blitz last year, did too little, too late to stop grasshopper migration onto their fields.

Helene Wright, acting APHIS area director in Seattle, says two new elements of this year's battle plan are advance funding and better equipment.

Instead of having to apply for emergency aid, APHIS officials — stung by criticism they had failed to plan for last summer's ravages — got Congress to establish a grasshopper-fighting fund in this year's farm bill, Ms. Wright said.

Scrapping reliance on World War II-vintage aircraft, the agency contracted for newer, smaller planes that can land almost anywhere to reload and refuel.That has been a boon in wide-open, sparsely populated Utah, one of the hardest-hit states last year with an estimated $54 million damage.

Nature also has lent a hand. In March, when a few unseasonably warm days made hopper eggs hatch, cold and rain followed, killing many of the young insects, said Tom Crowe, Utah's APHIS officer-in-charge.

"Grasshoppers go in cycles. The main part of the cycle was last year; now, because of the weather and the spraying, the cycle is broken," Crowe said. "I don't anticipate seeing levels of grasshoppers like we had in '85 for several more years."

Casting a shadow over Utah's improving pest outlook is the Mormon cricket, a horned, flightless grasshopper infesting the state's west-central Millard County and the Uinta Basin to the east.

Millard County's rugged canyons have hampered the aerial attack, while a legal dispute over the safety of three pairs of nesting peregrine falcons stalled spraying so long that most of the pests already have laid their eggs.

"The farmers out there are literally being eaten out of house and home by these crickets," said Vic Saunders of the Utah Farm Bureau Federation.

Mormon crickets, a nuisance in Arizona in past years, haven't appeared in troublesome numbers. Spraying in Arizona's main hopper haven — 154,960 acres of rangeland in Cochise County — was completed May 13, said Bob Gronowski of the Arizona Commission on Agriculture and Horticulture.

Last year in Idaho, the federal government spent more than $12 million for a two-month spraying program that covered more than 6 million acres of southern farm and rangeland. But losses from the state's worst grasshopper infestation in three decades were estimated at more than $11 million.

This year, only about 124,000 Idaho acres had been sprayed as of Monday, but the biggest spraying effort of the season was under way Tuesday with 230,000 acres to be covered by the end of the week.

Montana is battling grasshopper infestations for the fourth straight year. While a cool, wet spring helped reduce them in some areas, record numbers were reported in parts of eastern Montana, and Gov. Ted Schwinden made $350,000 available to counties fighting the pests.

"They're thicker than hair on a dog" near Medicine Lake in northeastern Montana, said farmer Leona Parent.

By contrast, Wyoming Department of Agriculture officials have nearly finished spraying 2.5 million acres, 500,000 fewer acres than they had planned, and Colorado officials received one request for aid, from Logan County in the state's northeast corner.

Nevada's officer in charge of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Dan Kail, said grasshopper populations this summer, like last year, were relatively small, and only 6,100 acres have been treated.

Singapore to keep raising hogs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A couple of years ago it seemed Singapore might be a likely place to market more U.S. pork. Some other countries, including Denmark and China, also had that idea.

The potential seemed to arise after the government of Singapore announced it planned to eliminate all hog production by 1988. The program began last year.

But now, according to an Agriculture Department report, Singapore's plan is on hold.

"By mid-1985, most small hog farm operations had closed, but large operations, which do not cause pollution problems, expanded their production, resulting in little decline in overall output," the report said.

"The government is now reluctant to complete the planned hog farm phaseout because the larger farms have modern waste treatment facilities, and further reductions would create more unemployment and political pressure."

Singapore's government favors establishing joint venture for hogs in neighboring countries such as Malaysia and Indonesia, the report said. One already has been set up on Indonesia's Bulon Island and is expected to produce about 100,000 pigs this year and 200,000 in 1987.

Effective mosquito control complex task

AGRICULTURE

Mosquitoes are a problem in all parts of Texas. Varied conditions in th state provide an environment for many different kinds of mosquitoes.

In one way or another, mosquitoes affect everyone. Mosquitoes in the home, yard or public parks interfere with people's work or leisure time.

Their persistent attack can cause farm animals to lose weight through continual biting and annoyance. Some species of mosquitoes transmit disease such as malaria and yellow fever to man, encephalitis to man and horses and heartworms to dogs.

All mosquitoes pass through four stages of development: egg, larva, pupa and adult. Although habits of different kinds of moaquitoes vary, they all require water to produce their young. Females lay their eggs on water or in places that later become flooded and usually lay them on lusters of about 50-200; several lusters may be laid by one female.

The eggs hatch in two or three days in larvae. The larvae (wigglers) feed mainly on bits of organic matter in the water. Most species must come to the water's surface for air and may have an elongated tube for breathing through the surface film.

Larvae usually change to pupae within a week. Pupae usually become adults in about two days. In another day or two the female adults are ready to feed (male mosquitoes so not bite).

Effective mosquito control is often a complex and expensive task, frequently requiring the cooperative efforts of individual homeowners as well as industry, agriculture and state and local governments.

Homeowners should take every precaution to prevent mosquito breeding on their premises by eliminating standing water. Some of the more common problem areas include dripping faucets and leaky pipes; puddles from evaporative cooler drainage; and tin cans or other items which might trap water. The proper use of insecticides around the home also helps control mosquitoes.

For effective control, an organized effort, including control operations over large areas is often necessary. Complex and variable conditions make it essential to have available technical assistance and trained mosquito-control workers on a permanent basis (trained personnel with authority to work over large areas often are able to affect mosquito control not possible by other means).

If you desire additional information about mosquit control, please contact the following: Texas Agricultural Extension Service, State Health Department or Texas Mosquito Control Association.

Tomatoes depend on proper watering

One of the real secrets to successfully growing tomatoes is proper watering. Two of the most common problems you'll encounter when growing tomatoes in Texas — blossom-end rot and fruit cracking — are related to soil moisture.

Blossom-end rot causes the bottom of the fruit to turn black and shrivel. Although its cause can be related to calcium deficiency in the soil, it is most commonly associated with too little or too much soil moisture. If the soil is too wet or too dry, the plant is not able to absorb enough through its roots to compensate for that which is lost into the atmosphere through its leaves (transpiration). Thus, mositure is drawn from the fruit, causing the tissue at the bottom of the fruit to dessicate and turn dark, resulting is blossom-end rot.

Fruit cracking occurs in two forms — concentric and radial. Concentric cracks circle the stem end of the fruit, while radial cracks extend down the fruit, originating at the stem end. The tendency to crack is varietal, with some varieties more prone to crack than others. In general, varieties that produce large, flat fruit are more likely to crack than those that produce smaller, rounder fruit. Regardless of variety, fluctuations in soil moisture will increase the frequency of fruit cracking. A sudden surge of water applied when soil moisture is deficient can cause the fruit to swell, rupturing the skin and resulting in cracked fruit.

Losses from bottom-end rot and fruit cracking can be lessened by maintaining the soil in a uniformly moist condition, allowing it to neither get too dry or too wet. Mulching around the plants to conserve soil moisture, planting on raised beds to improve internal drainage and watering only when needed will go a lony way toward helping reduce both of these common occurrences.

By far the best method to water tomatoes is the drip or trickle system, which uses a plastic tube or hose to apply a controlled amount of water, drip by drip, to the soil on a frequent and regular basis. Frequency of watering and length of watering will vary with your soil type, plant size, and the system used. In general, watering two or three hours twice a week is sufficient.

What would apple trees be without branches?

EDITOR'S NOTE: A story from East Malling, England, about scientists developing a new type of branchless apple trees that grow in columns, with the fruit growing straight from the stems, prompted this response from the farm writer for The Associated Press.

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imagine a forest of columns, all bearing juicy red apples. Not a branch in sight. Sad for us all.

And it happened in Britain, where Sir Isaac Newton paused to read and nap under an apple tree, and in so doing, goes the legend, opined that apples fall to earth because of something called gravity.

Presumably, Sir Isaac would still be pondering the question if he had foresaken a regular apple tree and paused near a branchless kind. Try getting to the moon without gravity, wise guys.

The new trees were developed at the government's research station, East Malling, and put on display at the Royal Show, one of Britain's top agricultural displays. According to the Agricultural Ministry:

"The column trees do not need staking and will cost farmers about a quarter of the present cost. They can be planted at densities up to eight times greater than now used. The trees are heavy yielding, need virtually no pruning and bear fruit the year after planting."

Let's get to the core of the problem: An apple tree without branches would destroy much of the fun and nostalgia enjoyed by young and old. Didn't the Andrews sisters in World War II advise against fooling around under the apple tree until Johnny came marching home?

What about the jillions of old tires hanging from backyard apple trees? They are tied to branches, y'know. What happens with no branches? Do all the tires wind up on the overflowing scrap heap as another eyesore?

Ah, let's pick apples. The autumnal romance of the outing surely must suffer when the family gets to the orchard and sees a battalion of columns standing like centurions.

Johnny Carson: Private, conservative, 'a master of energy'

By PAUL ROSENFIELD
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

In the last two months Carson has refused to do covers of Vanity Fair, Esquire and People. Primarily because he did not want to discuss The Mouth, a.k.a. Joan Rivers, the comedienne he installed as the first permanent guest host of "The Tonight Show."

HOLLYWOOD — On the face of it — and the closer you get to him — Johnny Carson seems not very different from other people. He has one best friend he trusts implicitly. He has a beautiful girlfriend he met on the beach. He drives himself to work, to the same job he's had for 24 years. He has three sons and three divorces. He works out regularly, yet smokes excessively. He's dallied with alcohol, but not on the job. He can be mischievous. When his next-door neighbors threw a wedding last year, he reportedly took a broomstick and wrote an epithet on the sand to shock the helicopter pilots and the press. (Not printable here, thank you very much.)

The bride and groom happened to be Madonna and Sean Penn — and Johnny Carson is obviously different from other people.

He opened the front door himself. The glass-walled Malibu house sits on a 200-foot cliff overlooking the world, and it's a little overwhelming, even for Johnny Carson. He related that director Billy Wilder had asked: "Where's the desk?" There is no question that Johnny Carson could do "The Tonight Show" here, and that may be the unconscious intent: to create a living area that's an idealized, glamorized version of the work area. Mirrored tables on white area rugs, swivel chairs and simple glass ashtrays. This has to be the ultimate $9 million show-business house.

Carson, wearing a Battaglia sweater, white slacks and Reeboks, poured black coffee into simple white mugs — and began a tour of the greenery and grounds and grotto. He likens the setting to Carmel, Calif., or Acapulco, and he likes to remind a visitor that his tennis building now in construction across the road won't be anywhere near as splashy. Which is apt. Because Carson — at a distance and right up close — is the opposite of splash. He's a master of energy, of using and saving it — and there's a conservatism about him that has nothing to do with politics. As he settled into a leather swivel chair for what was to be a two-hour interview, his posture was midshipman-perfect. When two hours stretched to nearly five, another session was suggested — and the posture didn't change. Johnny Carson apparently cannot slouch.

Carson hasn't been interviewed in seven years, since he discussed comedy in a Q&A piece for Rolling Stone. (His last intensive print interview was with the late Kenneth Tynan for the New Yorker in 1977.)

In the last two months Carson has refused to do covers of Vanity Fair, Esquire and People. Primarily because he did not want to discuss The Mouth, a.k.a. Joan Rivers, the comedienne he installed as the first permanent guest host of "The Tonight Show." In mid-May, just after the first of Carson's two interviews with the Los Angeles Times, Rivers announced that she'd begin her own syndicated show in October. While The Mouth never closed, Carson, while obviously not amused, said only, "I felt if I answered one question, then one question would lead to another."

Sitting in his living room with a pack of unfiltered Pall Malls, Carson might just as well have been in a dressing room in Burbank. At home, as at NBC, he fiddles with pencils or cigarettes (smoking a full pack during the first interview. His only stipulation: That he not be photographed smoking). It's not surprising to discover that Carson in college wanted to be either a psychiatrist or a journalist. On and off camera he probes and questions and listens and then answers. An extrovert when working, Carson is, however, an introvert when he isn't. Barbra Streisand's definition of fame — "not being left alone" — doesn't apply here. There is no bodyguard, no entourage, no driver.

"Oh God no!" said Carson, outraged at the notion. "That's like having license plates that say BIG STAR. I drive myself to work. If somebody is going to get you, they are going to get you. I remember once in Vegas, sitting at Caesars Palace, hearing a hushed voice whisper, 'Frank's here!' Well, of course you knew he was there. Sinatra likes that. He likes being surrounded by people. I don't."

If four people were asked to pin an adjective on Carson, at least three of them would pick "private."

"Isn't it really a Catch-22 situation?," he asked rhetorically. "If you're out with a group of people, it's called 'an entourage,' and they say you're making a big play. If you keep to yourself, they say, 'He doesn't like people.' The truth is that I never was a social animal."

Moonlighting plots 'never predictable, always amusing'

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Willis

Shepherd

Once in a blue moon comes along a black humor television show where the guy is the last of the fast talkers, the woman is the ultimate cover girl — and the script is what makes it all orbit.

Glenn Caron, producer of "Moonlighting," deserves his weight in MacGuffins for coming up with the first television mystery show since the reruns of Ben Hecht's "The Front Page" where the plots are occasionally believable, never predictable and always amusing. The plots have more twists and turns than "Magnum P.I.'s" Hawaiian highways, more hilarious suspects than "Murder, She Wrote," and more heart than a video store full of "Hart to Hart" episodes.

Caron, who is said to be a good writer himself, is remarkable among television producers because he actually knows the play's the thing. "Moonlighting" is surely one of the few shows where a big part of the budget goes to the scriptwriter.

Because he has chosen writers who can read, the show is full of wonderful devices (seemingly a new one every week) stolen from the best sources — literature instead of reruns.

They are adroit practitioners of the clown-as-Hamlet rule: The laughable should be lovable and the best laughs are on the flip side of crying.

Take, for instance, the episode titled "Gunfight at the So-So Corral." It concerns the No. 1 hit man in the business, played by Pat Corley, who's supposed to be wasted (I may not have the terminology just right, because I read the English mysteries where the butler, not the hit man, did it). The story opens with Corley rising from his hospital bed, pushing along his intravenous-feeding rack and chasing his would-be assassin down the hospital corridor, ultimately disposing of him down a laundry chute. And yet the end of the show, where Corley tries to reform an upstart hit man (Gary Graham), has a depth you would not expect of farce. Michael Petryni, the episode's writer, knows something about being horrible, ridiculous and poignant, all at the same time.

"Moonlighting" often guest-stars Diane Arbus-like people — for instance in "Next Stop Murder," the man on the murder train who looks like Frankenstein.

The show's own Ms. Dipesto's undoubtedly stunning looks are hidden under a bushel — and many other strange devices — to give her the chance to do what she does best: look plaintive. Ms. Dipesto's admirers include the sandwich man, the Frankenstein murderer and a nameless secret agent, but she still believes in romance. (I am comforted to hear that in real life, Ms. Dipesto, nee Allyce Beasley, does not pine alone. She is married to the neo-Frankenstein, aka Vincent Schiavelli.) That episode is by Kerry Ehrin and Ali Marie Matheson, two scriptwriters with a delicate understanding of unrequited love as well as a fine eduction in the conventions of the classic mystery story.

Cybill Shepherd is far too beautiful for any woman to like or any man to dare love. Bruce Willis should have his mouth scrubbed out with soap and his perpetual sneerleer fixed by plastic surgery. But they are great inheritors of the Cary Grant-Rosalind Russell, Spencer Tracy-Katharine Hepburn school of wisecrackers who manage to redeem their pawn tickets after hocking their hearts of gold.

"Moonlighting" is one of the very few shows — the late lamented "WKRP in Cincinnati" springs to mind as another — aimed at grownups who like farce better than force and ingenuity better than injury.

Too many television shows today seem to take up where wrestling leaves off, pandering to people who get their kicks watching people getting kicked, and beaten up and bashed and brained. "Moonlighting" has its pratfalls, but at least you can watch it without ending the hour feeling as though you should head for the emergency ward.

"Moonlighting" shines brightly in using fantasy to reveal truth. And when the show uses fantasy to reveal the fantastic, as in "The Dream Sequence Always Rings Twice," who would not rather dance with Willis and Shepherd in the starlight ballroom than hunt vice in Miami? This episode has probably attracted more attention than any other in the series, with its black and white sequences. Shepherd dreams she's a torch-singer and Willis dreams he's a horn-player in the Flamingo Cove Club. They each dream different versions of an old murder, their divergent views of the killing shaped by their sex differences (a continuing preoccupation of the show). Debra Frank and Carl Sautter are the writers who can be proud of this one.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Economic slump affects employers, employees

By JIM MAY and MARTI VERMILLION

May

Vermillion

DEAR COPING: I have enjoyed reading your column, but as an employer I find it to be somewhat one-sided. It seems as if you have done what a lot of people have, and that is to assume it is easy to let people go.

Well, it's NOT! As the head of a small independent oil company, I have already had to endure two waves of reducing staff and if the price of oil or gas doesn't go up soon, I may have to reduce even further.

I don't really expect any advice, but I just wanted you to know that it's tough on this side, too. — W.M.S.

DEAR W.M.S.: We are sorry if we have given the impression that we are not sensitive to the employers' plight. You are just the first employer to write us.

Looking at the "other side" of the employee's predictament, we have the concerned employer's predicament. The employer experiences first the shock and then the grief associated with having to let employees go. As long as those being terminated are those that management feels would do better elsewhere, at least from the employer's point of view, the grief is somewhat mitigated.

There is still some "shame" in having to reduce the size of your firm, but even this is somewhat mitigated by the knowledge that others are doing the same thing.

As time progresses and the situation worsens, as it has in the oil and gas business, next comes the shock of the realization that you must terminate loyal employees who have made valuable contributions to the firm.

This shock and subsequent grief become more profound because you often know the employees and their families on a personal basis. The oil and gas community is a relatively small one and in many cases the families are intertwined in business, social, recreational and religious settings.

Not only must you as a former employer face your former employees, but your spouse and children must face former employees' spouses and children at professional meetings, community service events, school functions, sports events and at church functions, to name just a few. The sense of "shared" grief is felt by most, if not all, family members of both employer and employee.

The employer typically experiences significant stress months before staff reductions are actually made. There is often a feeling of helplessness because the situation is out of your control, yet you either feel responsible or at least feel that you should be able to do something about the situation.

Depending on the financial support the employer can provide to terminated employees, the stress becomes somewhat less after the reduction is made.

During this process many employers make the mistake of not sharing their grief and concerns with the employees being terminated; they let "professionals" do it instead. While this may be efficient, it often further strengthens a sense of desertion and betrayal in the former employee and his family.

We feel it is very important that the spouse be brought in at some point in the process for the employer to share the sense of loss and concern felt for the employee and his family. It also provides an opportunity to further reiterate it is not the employee's fault he was terminated.

If the reduction process stops at this first stage, then the employer and the firm tend to return to "normal" in two or three months. However, if another wave of layoffs must follow, then the sense of anxiety over the future begins to build significantly, along with depression over what has already occurred.

Often at this stage a smaller firm has the added complication of being in serious financial straits itself. In the oil and gas community, the sudden drop in the price of oil has left everyone involved — be they banker, lawyer or Indian chief — with a common concern for the future.

The small employer now shares the financial anxieties of the employees as well as an additional sense of failure because he may have to terminate employees he actively recruited from other firms. This stage is often characterized by a definite feeling of tension in the office, a sense of everyone waiting for the "other shoe to fall."

Some employers have found, and we concur, that it is very beneficial (although often painful for the employer) to meet with the employees, review the situation honestly and openly and to ask the employees for their ideas and support. The employees typically respond very well to the challenge and offer ideas the employer may not have considered.

Then again, there may not be any viable alternatives, but the act of sharing the situation with the employees is an act of faith and confidence in the employees on the employer's behalf. It just might clear the air and at least help everyone sleep a little better.

We hope we have conveyed a sense of our belief in the employer and employee both being part of the same whole. We believe that in the sharing of concerns and fears, a sense of community is built that is stronger than either can be separately.

Most important women listed

NEW YORK (AP) — A magazine's list of the 25 most important American women starts with the first first lady, Martha Washington, and ends with Geraldine Ferraro, who wanted to be a different kind of presidential partner.

The list, selected by editors of Ladies' Home Journal in consulation with the Institute for Research in History and the Schlesinger Library at Radcliffe College, is published in the magazine's July issue.

"All displayed extraordinary vigor and drive, and the vast majority lived productive lives until they were well past 70 and often into their 80s," the magazine said. "Many opted to remain single and childless to dedicate themselves to their goals."

Others on the list include:

- Sacajawea, Indian guide for the Lewis and Clark expedition.
- Lydia Pinkham, who built a thriving business selling patent medicines.
- Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."
- Susan B. Anthony, feminist.
- Harriet Tubman, a former slave who helped others escape slavery.
- Mary Baker Eddy, founder of Christian Science.
- Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross.
- Louisa May Alcott, author of "Little Women."
- Frances Willard, Women's Christian Temperance Union leader.
- Jane Addams, founder of Hull House and a Nobel Prize winner.
- Isadora Duncan, dancer.
- Mary Pickford, actress.
- Margaret Sanger, founder of Planned Parenthood.
- Frances Perkins, Labor secretary and first woman in the Cabinet.
- Eleanor Roosevelt, first lady.
- Pearl S. Buck, author of "The Good Earth" and a Nobel Prize winner.
- Amelia Earhart, first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic.
- Clare Boothe Luce, writer, congresswoman and ambassador.
- Rachel Carson, author of "Silent Spring."

New device may end remote control clutter

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — More than 10 million households have two or more remote control units and 2.5 million have at least three, according to General Electric.

But, says the firm, remote control units for audio and video components may soon be a thing of the past. It says it has a new system which will command up to four audio and video products from a single unit, eliminating remote control clutter.

DEAR ABBY

Many heads better than one in helping hair-loss victims

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I was deeply touched by the letter from the woman who had lost all her hair and asked you for something clever to say to her gentleman friend when she removed her wig in his presence for the first time.

Nearly 2 million people are affected by alopecia areata — a condition characterized by a permanent loss of hair.

The National Alopecia Areata Foundation is a resource for people like the woman who wrote to you. We have a bimonthly newsletter dealing with how to cope with that condition from a medical, emotional and cosmetic perspective. We also have support groups throughout the United States and Canada.

Please publish our address. It could benefit thousands of men and women who are hiding from society due to embarrassment. They need to know that they are not alone — that there is counseling and support as well as a safe place to share their feelings with others in the same boat. — JUDITH L. ROSS, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, NATIONAL ALOPECIA AREATA FOUNDATION

DEAR JUDITH: I've read your newsletter and am pleased to publicize it. (I see you now have a chapter in Australia — congratulations!) Interested readers should write to: National Alopecia Areata Foundation, P.O. Box 5027, Mill Valley, Calif. 94941. And please send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, as this is a non-profit organization.

DEAR ABBY: Last year, after 35 years of marriage, my parents were divorced. Father had someone else. They're not married, but they're living together. Mother is very bitter and I am angry.

What I want to know is, should I allow my father and his lady friend to pick up my young children and entertain them for a couple of hours? Dad even asked if he could take his grandchildren out of town for a weekend.

I prefer that my children see their grandfather alone. I still have a lot of bitterness and resentment toward his lady friend. She's everything he taught me I should not be while I was growing up. — STILL BITTER

DEAR BITTER: If you refuse to allow your children to spend time with your father unless he excludes his lady friend, you'll build walls between them and their grandfather when bridges would be to their benefit. If you want your children to grow up knowing their grandfather, you may have to do it on his terms. While your resentment toward his lady friend is understandable, for the sake of your children, give her a chance.

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for the father who tried to convince his family to settle for a less elaborate wedding for his eldest daughter. Happy wedding day memories are not dependent upon ruffled shirts and wear-once-only dresses. Those who can least afford it go into debt to put on showy weddings.

As a young girl, I recall how impressed I was to read about the simplicity of the Lindbergh-Morrow wedding. Despite the affluence of the Morrow family, Charles Lindbergh picked a bridal bouquet of larkspur and columbine for his Anne. How romantic!

My motto: Dare to be different on the side of simplicity. — IDA WOZNY, SEQUIM, WASH.

DEAR IDA: Read on for another wedding where simplicity prevailed:

DEAR ABBY: When my sister became engaged, she wanted our dad to spring for a big, expensive wedding, but Dad said, "Have a simple wedding in the rabbi's study, and if you're still married 36 months from now, I'll foot the bill for a big, fancy wedding and you can renew your vows."

Dad was smart. Twenty-two months later, my sister filed for divorce. (Dad paid for that, too. And gladly.) — SISSIE IN CLEVELAND

Tips offered to land 'right job'

CHICAGO (UPI) — Job hunting has no easy shortcuts, but the right kind of preparation and the right approaches can produce results faster, says an employment counselor.

James Challenger, president of Challenger, Gray and Christmas, Inc., offers these 11 tips to finding the right job:

■ Consider job-seeking a full-time job.

■ See at least 10 potential employers a week, and go on as many interviews as possible.

■ Ask your friends to help because "friends are the single best source of new jobs," says Challenger.

■ Don't rely on your resume because "resumes lose more jobs than they gain."

■ Don't knock yourself. "False humility has no place in an interview," says Challenger.

■ Don't knock your former employers because "no one likes a complainer."

■ Avoid asking about vacations, holidays or benefits. This tells the employer you are more interested in yourself than in the job.

■ Finally, smile. "Happy people get jobs," Challenger concludes.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Ambassador's dismissal causes dismay in Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The abrupt dismissal of U.S. Ambassador John Ferch remains vexing to Hondurans worried about what kind of replacement Washington will send to manage a widening guerrilla war against Nicaragua.

Ferch, a career diplomat who described himself as the victim of a "long bureaucratic war" within the State Department, left the country this week after less than a year in the ambassador's post.

The 50-year-old U.S. envoy was credited by many in Honduras with patching up a bilateral relationship marred by months of conflict.

Ferch succeeded John Negroponte, a hard-liner who served in Tegucigalpa and often was accused by politicians and commentators in Honduras of trying to run the country from the U.S. Embassy.

President Jose Azcona Hoyo, who was sworn in last January, described his relations with Ferch as excellent and said he was surprised by his dismissal.

"As ambassador," Azcona said, "he always respected Honduras and kept in mind that the dignity of this country came before anything else."

Contras cited in kidnapping

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A Nicaraguan Indian group fighting to oust its nation's leftist Sandinista government on Thursday accused U.S.-backed Contra rebels of kidnapping 288 Indians from a refugee camp in two separate raids.

The Indian group, called Kisan, said the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, the largest of the Contra rebel groups, took 259 mostly elderly men April 9, and 20 young men and nine children on June 5.

Samuel Kitppler, a member of Kisan's political commission, said the kidnapped Indians had been living in the Papaloas refugee camp, in Gracias a Dios province near the Atlantic coast.

Nicaraguan Democratic Force spokesman could not be located for comment Thursday. The Contra group, with an estimated 17,000 fighters, operates from about eight base camps and training centers in southern Honduras.

Both the Nicaraguan Democratic Force and the Kisan rebels are based in Honduras along its border with Nicaragua. Guerrillas from the two organizations have sometimes fought together against Nicaragua's Sandinista army.

Mexicans continue protests

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — In the biggest protest yet against alleged vote fraud in state elections, nearly 10,000 people jammed Chihuahua's main plaza to hear an opposition candidate urge them to block roads and boycott certain news media.

The Thursday night rally in this northern Mexico city lasted more than two hours and followed a day of protest by store owners, dozens of whom closed their shops in a 12-hour show of displeasure against the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

The opposition National Action Party, or PAN, alleges that poll workers committed massive fraud during last Saturday's elections in Chihuahua state.

Official results are to be announced Sunday by the state elections commission, which is controlled by the PRI.

The PRI declared immediately after the voting that its candidates won the Chihuahua governorship, all but one of 67 mayoralities and all of 14 state legislature seats. It also claimed sweeps in five other states where elections were held.

Four killed in firefight

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said they killed four men in a firefight in Cape province today, a day after they shot and killed six guerrillas in a gunbattle near the Botswana border.

In the black township of Soweto, hundreds of black migrant workers and black residents clashed in running street battles today, witnesses said, and seven people were believed killed.

A police statement issued in Pretoria said officers stopped a car outside King William's Town in Cape province at about 8:15 a.m. Four men came out firing guns and threw a hand grenade, which did not detonate, the statement said.

Police shot dead all four in the firefight, which took place inland from the Indian Ocean port city of East London. No police officers were injured.

NOTICE OF OPPORTUNITY FOR PUBLIC HEARING ON PERMIT APPLICATION FOR SOLID WASTE SITE

The CITY OF MIDLAND has filed Application No. 1605-A with the Texas Department of Health for an amendment of Permit No. 1605 requesting the deletion of a special provision of the permit which requires the permittee to install a soil liner eighteen inches in thickness. The proposed amendment will allow the permittee to not line sides and bottoms of the landfill based upon favorable water-balance conditions. The existing permitted Type I municipal solid waste disposal site is located approximately 6.0 miles east of Midland, 7.0 miles southeast of the intersection of IH-20 and State Highway 158, and approximately 0.75 mile north of State Highway 158 at the end of an unnamed road, in Midland County.

The site consists of approximately 412.42 acres of land, and is to daily receive approximately 225 tons of solid waste under the regulatory jurisdiction of the Texas Department of Health.

The Bureau of Solid Waste Management, Texas Department of Health, has evaluated the application for permit amendment in coordination with other state and local agencies. The application adequately addresses groundwater protection and other regulatory requirements. The Bureau of Solid Waste Management is of the opinion that, based on the information provided in the application and comments received from other review agencies, the solid waste site should not pose a reasonable probability of adverse effects on the health, welfare, environment or physical property of nearby residents or property owners.

No public hearing will be held on this application unless a person affected has requested a public hearing. Any such request for a public hearing shall be in writing and contain the name, mailing address, and phone number of the person making the request; and a brief description of how the requester, or persons represented by the requester, has suffered or will suffer actual injury or economic damage by the granting of the application. If a hearing is requested by a person affected, notice of such hearing will be provided to the requester and will also be published in a newspaper of general circulation in the area where the site is located at least 30 days prior to the date of such hearing. If no request for a hearing is recieved within 30 days of the date of publication of this notice, the Department will make a decision. If a hearing is requested, it will be conducted, and the final decision will be rendered, in accordance with the applicable rules contained in the Department's "Municipal Solid Waste Management Regulations," (MSWMR) including all changes in effect as of August 20, 1985.

Requests for a public hearing and/or requests for a copy of the technical summary of the application prepared by the Bureau of Solid Waste Management shall be submitted in writing to the Chief, Bureau of Solid Waste Management, Texas Department of Health, 1100 W. 49th Street, Austin, Texas 78756. A copy of the complete application may be reviewed at the Bureau of Solid Waste Management or at the Department's Public Health Region 3 headquarters located at 2300 E. Yandell, El Paso, Texas 79997; telephone (915) 533-4972.
