ILL-FATED MACON OVER HER HOME BASE AT SUNNYVALE

Largest lighter-than-air craft in the world and the pride of the United States navy, the ill-fated U. S. S. Macon is seen here nosing down to her mooring mast at her home base at Sunnyvale, Calif. It was from this base that the Macon set out upon the maneuvers that ended in disaster.

LAW AGAINST 'PROPAGANDA' SUGGESTED

Many Amendments
Accepted by Sponsors in Senate

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Legislation to protect the United States from foreign "propaganda" and revolutionary activities, was recommended to congress today by the House Committee, which spent more than a year investigating "un-American" activities. The committee, headed by Representative McCormack, Massachusetts, charged in effect that Russia violated its pledge against the harboring of groups which advocated the overthrow of the government.

It was reported that tons of Nazi propaganda were smuggled into the United States, and that the Nazis used "all kinds of efforts" to "consolidate persons of German birth and descent" in this country "into one camp, subject to dictation from abroad."

Republicans Try To Limit Relief Bill to One Year

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Senate Republicans at a party conference today agreed to fight for an amendment to limit the administration $4,880,000,000 relief bill to one year instead of two. Senator McNary, minority leader, announced an "overpowering majority" appeared in favor of the McCarran "prevailing wage" amendment.

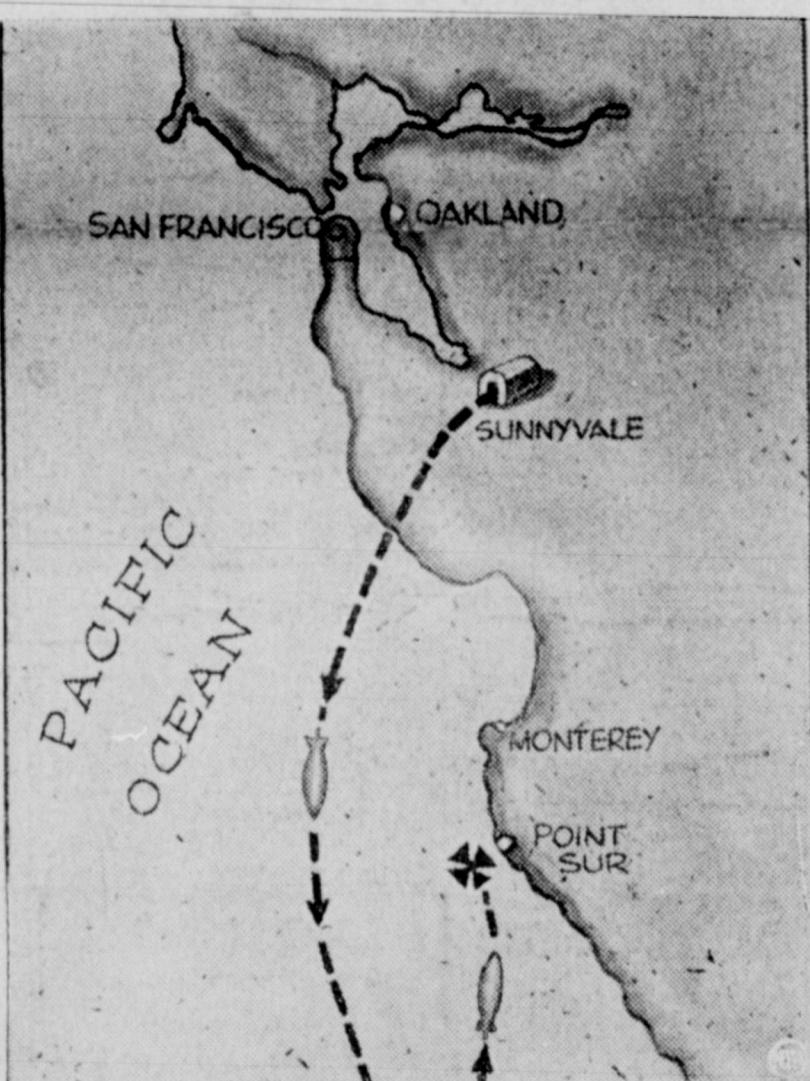

REFUSE CHURCH DRIVE

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—The Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States, through its national council in session here, has refused to join other churches in protesting the anti-religious activity of the Mexican government. Questions of policy had been presented to the national council by dioceses in West Texas and Milwaukee.

PREDICTS OWN DEATH

BEAUMONT, Feb. 15.—Mrs. Harriet Staples arose on her 81st birthday. "I will die today," she said. In less than four hours, she had succumbed at the home of a daughter, Mrs. C. B. Thornhill.

Where Giant Aircraft Plunged

This map shows where the dirigible Macon crashed into the sea, 110 miles south of San Francisco, about 13 miles off Point Sur. The sea was calm at the time and more than 30 vessels of the Pacific fleet steamed at full speed to the rescue of the 83 men aboard.

State Admits John Gorrell Was Author Of Extortion Note

PAWNEE, OKLA., Feb. 15.—Admission that John F. Gorrell Jr. wrote an extortion note to H. F. Wilcox, Tulsa oilman, threatening death of his children unless he paid $50,000, was made by the state today in the murder trial of Phil Kennamer for the slaying of Gorrell.

The action followed testimony by Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer, father of the defendant, that "in my judgment" the handwriting was not his son's. The defense contended that young Kennamer was distracted on account of a threat implied against Virginia Wilcox, 19, daughter of the oilman, for whom he bore unrequited adoration. In his opening statement, A. Flint Moss, chief defense attorney indicated the defense would endeavor to prove Phil was out of his mind the night he killed Gorrell, with his own pistol in exclusive Forest Hills Addition in Tulsa.

Court recessed an hour earlier than usual, immediately after Moss completed his statement, outlining the steps that will be taken to show Kennamer not mentally balanced to meet a crisis when it arose.

"When you have heard our proof, when you have heard experts testify and have been told of all the strange happenings of the past in the young Phil's life, there will not remain a shadow of a doubt that he was not able to distinguish right from wrong," Moss declared.

STATE PLANNING BOARD GIVEN APPROVAL

Elimination of 'Un-
American' Action
Recommended

AUSTIN, Feb. 15.—The administration forced final passage in the Senate yesterday of a House bill to effect Governor James V. Allred's request for a state planning board to chart a permanent state recovery program.

Sponsors accepted many amendments, but finally restored to the previous question to shut off debate and obtain passage, 22 to eight. The bill was passed to avoid reading, 24 to 5, and rules suspended 28 to 1, to permit a final vote.

Revision of the bill by a conference committee appeared necessary as many amendments adopted were hastily drawn up.

The House sped to the governor, 116 to 19, a Senate bill to effect permanent organization of the Brazos River conservation and reclamation district and facilitate negotiations for a $50,000,000 federal loan for a huge water conservation and hydro-electric power project. The bill made several administrative changes suggested by Texas congressmen.

Overpass Dedicated To Baylor Athletes

AUSTIN, Feb. 15.—The Texas Highway Commission yesterday dedicated an overpass at Round Rock separating Highway 2 and the Missouri Pacific Railway to the memory of 10 Baylor University athletes killed in a bus crash at the crossing January 22, 1927. Dedication exercises will be conducted later when a bronze tablet bearing names of the athletes will be placed on the structure.

The concrete overpass was constructed at a cost of $106,000, the commission said, "with a view of preventing such deplorable accidents in the future." The basketball team was en route to Austin for a game.

By Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Division of Investigation, Department of Justice, today termed as false statements that Federal officers have evidence that Bruno Richard Hauptmann had an accomplice in the Lindbergh kidnapping. Hoover made the statement in commenting on published reports that authorities, including the Department of Justice, knew of an accomplice and expected to arrest him.

Novelist Invited To Visit Shamrock

By Associated Press
NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Dr. A. J. Cronin, British novelist and physician, who said he wants to sit on a stool in a middle western drug store and watch the people, received an invitation to sit in "four typical western drug stores" in Shamrock, Texas.

The invitation came from the chamber of commerce of Shamrock, which promised the visitor "an eyeful and some western local color."

Dr. Cronin was embarrassed—he had already decided to go to Florida.

"I feel gratified," he said in the politest of British accents, "but it is impossible for me to go every place."

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lu Broobman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
GALE HENDERSON, pretty and 23, works in a silk mill. She and her 19-year-old brother, PHIL, support their invalid father. STEVE MYERS who also works in the mill asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days.
 Gale goes skating; breaks through the ice and is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian has come home after two years in Paris to enter the mill. Gale disappears before he learns her name.
VICKY THATCHER, daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian.
 Gale's father becomes ill in the night. Gale gets little sleep and is late at work next morning. FISHER, the foreman, tells her that if it happens again she'll lose her job.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVIII
 The morning wore on slowly. Gale worked mechanically, wishing her head would stop feeling the way it did, wishing the room wasn't so warm or so noisy, wishing that for one minute she could sink down in a chair and lean back and close her eyes and forget the flying spindles.
 "It wouldn't have done any good," she thought, "to tell Fisher about Father being sick."
 No, it wouldn't have done any good. And she couldn't be late again—not after that threat. It made her job seem unusually precious—the thought that she might lose it—and Gale bent and snatched off a bobbin, her hands moving swiftly in spite of the ache in her shoulders.
 She couldn't afford to lose her job.
 When lunch time came instead of going to the cafeteria she went into the wash room where there was an old couch against one of the walls. It was back in the shadows and Gale laid down on it and pressed her fingers over her eyes.
 Her head felt as though something were pushing down on it. It had felt that way all morning. She wasn't sleepy now, but there were pains like little knife-jabs in her arms and in her shoulders. She turned restlessly and wondered if Mrs. O'Connor had taken her father his lunch yet. She hoped he'd be able to rest. That was what Doctor Carr said he needed most. Rest and sleep. He had to have it.

But it was hard for a man like her father to feel himself so useless. It would have been hard, even if he hadn't known how little the money there was, how she and Phil had to work and save to pay for their food and rent and living expenses.
 The door opened and Gale turned to see who had come in. A tall girl stood facing her. She wore a blue uniform like Gale's but it was rather short for her. The girl had dark hair and eyebrows that looked as though they had been drawn on with a pencil.

and her upper teeth were slightly prominent. She wasn't a pretty girl and she wasn't homely. Her name was Leota Boller.

The newcomer moved toward the couch and looked down at Gale. "All in, kid?" she asked sympathetically.
 "Tired," Gale told her. "I had to be up most of the night. My father was sick."
 "Gee, that's tough. It's tough when anybody's sick, all right," Leota Boller took a vanity case from her pocket and went to the mirror. She inspected her face critically, opened the case and began carefully powdering her forehead. She turned then and asked, "Had your lunch?"
 "I don't want any," Gale told her. "I'd rather stay here and rest."

Leota applied the powder puff to her cheeks and chin. When the entire surface of her face had assumed a pinky-whiteness she seemed satisfied and put the vanity case back into her pocket. She sat down on the end of the couch, crossing one knee over the other, and Gale noticed that she wore sheer gray hose and high-heeled strap pumps.
 "You oughtn't to try to work today," she volunteered. "You ought've taken the day off."
 "I couldn't," Gale told her. "Even if I wasn't afraid to ask for time off I couldn't afford to. There's another doctor's bill to pay now and I'll have to buy medicine. They're enough bills as it is. I can't afford to miss a single day's work."
 The other girl sighed. "Gee, it's tough all right," she said again. "Tough for all of us."

Suddenly Leota drew nearer, to a locker, opened it and took something out. A moment later she was back, holding out a chocolate bar toward Gale.
 "Here," she said, "eat this. I brought it for lunch and then forgot all about it. It'll do you good. Chocolate's real nourishing, you know."
 Gale looked doubtful. "I don't believe," she began.
 But Leota insisted. "Oh, go ahead and eat it! You'll feel better—honest, you will. Gee, if you don't eat anything you're liable to keel over like that Connie Bauman did the other day. Did you hear about that?"
 Gale broke off a bit of the chocolate bar and ate it. She said, "Yes, I heard about Connie. Thanks, Leota."

"Forget it! We're all in the same boat here. Gee, the way they work us and the little dough we get! It's a crime, that's what it is!"

Gale sighed. "I guess there isn't much we can do about it." Suddenly Leota drew nearer. If Gale hadn't been so tired she would certainly have noticed the crafty look that had come into the other girl's eyes. She would certainly have noticed the change in Leota's tone. As it was Gale was entirely unsuspecting.
 "That's where you're wrong," Leota said. "All wrong. There's a lot we can do about it."
 "What do you mean?"
 "I mean I think it's time to do something about the way we're treated here—and the way they cut our pay for every little thing, and let people out and make the rest of us work harder. I heard how Fisher bawled you out this morning. Gee, that was fierce—the big bum! I don't see why you let him get away with it."
 "How could I help it?"
 "There's a way!" Leota said darkly. "I'm telling you—things aren't going to go on like this forever!"

Gale looked at her curiously. "I don't know what you're talking about," she said.
 The other girl's eyes narrowed. "Can you keep your mouth shut?" she asked.
 "Yes."
 "You're sure of that?"
 "Why, of course."
 "Well, then—I'll tell you something. But you mustn't say a word to anyone—not a word. Promise?"
 "Yes."
 Leota's voice had dropped to an undertone. "We're going to organize," she said. "That's what we're going to do."
 "Organize?"
 The other nodded. "We're going to get together and demand

Boulder Dam Lake Rises Slowly

Slowly lapping against the tremendous bulk of Boulder Dam, water is rising to form the mammoth lake for the great federal power and reclamation program in the southwest. On either side of the canyon are shown intake towers as high as a 35-story building, through which the water eventually will move to the turbines. Stupendous size of the project is indicated by the relative thinness of the building, lower left, at the lake edge.

our rights. And we'll get them, too. There's going to be a meeting. Not many know about it yet—we've got to be awful careful and only ask those we can trust. The men have been having meetings and they're going to let some of us girls in, too. Haven't you heard anything about it at all?"
 "No," Gale told her.
 "Well," Leota went on, "once we get organized they can't go on treating us the way they have. We won't stand for it. That's why we're going to have the meeting—to get things started. I don't know when it's going to be yet, but if I let you know, will you come?"

Gale wished Leota would go away so she could close her eyes and rest some more before it was time to go back to work. She didn't take much stock in this talk of secret meetings or organization. She didn't think it was anything but talk. But there didn't seem to be any other way of getting rid of Leota, so she said, "Why, yes, I'll come—if I can."
 The other smiled. "Good!" she said. "I thought you would. I'll let you know just as soon as I hear anything. Remember, though don't say a word about it to anyone!"
 Gale said, "I'll remember."
 There wasn't time to get any more rest, however. The bell rang and Gale got to her feet. Leota said, "Lord, the time goes fast!" and waited in the doorway.

Cutten Prohibited From Grain Trading For Next Two Years

By Associated Press
 WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Arthur W. Cutten, Chicago trader, today was prohibited by the Grain Futures Commission, composed of Secretaries Wallace and Roper and Attorney General Cummings, for trading on any grain market for two years.

The commission found Cutten guilty of violating the Grain Futures Act "by attempting to manipulate" prices by concealing his transactions on the Chicago Board of Trade.

As they stepped into the corridor she put her arm around Gale. She began talking about something that had happened the day before, something that must have been funny because she laughed. Gale wasn't listening. She could still feel the weight pressing down on her forehead and her feet were like lead. She wished Leota hadn't put her arm around her. Gale thought it looked silly and schoolgirlish.

As they stepped into the big room where they both worked Leota dropped her voice again. She said, "Maybe I'll have something to tell you tomorrow," and hurried away.

Gale walked down the broad aisle and took her place before the spindles. She didn't think of Leota again until three and a half hours later when another bell rang and the day shift crowded into the corridors, their day's work ended.

Then it was Josie Gridley who pushed her way to Gale's side. "I saw you at noon," Josie said, "with that Leota Boller. You'd better stay away from her!"
 Gale asked, "Why?"
 Josie tossed her head. "Suit yourself," she said, "only I'm warning you. You'd better keep your distance. That's dame's a spy!"

Glorifying
Yourself

BY ALICIA HART
NEA Service Staff Writer
"If you were to be forced to live on a desert island for a year and could take only one beauty item with you, what would you choose?" a well known actress was asked the other day. She thought a moment and then replied, "Several cases of toilet soap."

Her answer, it seemed to me, was most sensible. Some may argue that, under a scorching sun, cream would come in pretty handy and they're right of course. But, pray tell, what would be worse than trying to get along for months without soap?

Naturally, this mythical problem needn't cause anyone much concern. If you had to live on an island, you probably wouldn't be consulted about your personal needs. And if you went because you wanted to live there, you'd be able to take an adequate supply of everything. We are interested simply because the screen star's answer indicates clearly that one great beauty gives soap and water a good deal of credit for her lovely complexion.

There are a few girls with sensitive, thin skins that are irritated by soap. They, of course, should use only fine creams and lotions for cleansing. The majority, however, ought to use soap and water first—then follow this simple, healthy treatment with cleansing cream.

Say what you will, when it comes to thoroughly cleaning your skin, nothing quite takes the place of bland suds. Besides, as you probably know soap is a mild disinfectant. There's certainly a great deal to be said for a beauty routine that not only cleans, but purifies and heals at the same time.

ART GOEBEL AND WILEY POST BOTH
SPONSORED by PHILLIPS

History-Making Pilots are Backed by Oklahoma Oil Man

Not the first but the second world-renowned plane to receive the sponsorship of Frank Phillips is the Winnie Mae, piloted by Wiley Post, which will shortly set off from Los Angeles bound for New York and a new transcontinental record.

Back in 1927, you will remember, a daring fellow with the moniker of Arthur C. Goebel soared into the sunlight at Honolulu in a trim monoplane—winner of the epoch-making Dole Race. On the side of that plane was the name Woolaroc —christened after Mr. Phillips' seven-thousand-acre ranch in the Osage hills of Oklahoma—and in the tank still remained an hour or so's supply of a new aviation fuel which Mr. Phillips' company had just perfected. The Woolaroc now rests in a museum on the spacious ranch from which it took its name.

An avid aero-fan, with an eye to the practical advancement of air transportation, Frank Phillips has endowed his projects with the most advanced devices for promotion of safety and efficiency in air travel.

Before 1927, the radio beacon was just outside the pale of practical navigation. It had been theoretically perfected but needed a practical demonstration of its reliability.
Radio beacons guided Art Goebel over the 2437 miles on a straight and true course from Oakland to Honolulu, and proved that the radio beacon was the new guiding light of aviation.

Wiley Post will have in his Winnie Mae another radio device which will prove its worth as a practical navigation aid. This is the Westport radio compass, an instrument which unlike the radio beacon, needs no elaborate set of sending equipment to guide it, but utilizes the programs of commercial radio stations to set a correct course.

When Post leaves Los Angeles, his radio will be tuned to KOA at Denver, and the compass will register any deviation from the direct line.
Passing Denver, the dial will then be set to Omaha's WGW, and successively, WHO, Des Moines, WGN, Chicago, WTAM, Cleveland. The final guiding station will be WJZ at New York City, which will by its cowboy singer, hot orchestra or come what may, steer him into his landing position.

Like the radio beacon was in its
"salad days", the radio compass, which Mr. Phillips has furnished for the Winnie Mae, is still an instrument to be given its trial in the gruelling laboratory of long-distance flying. Wiley Post's performance in the Winnie Mae will give the new device an acid test.

May 'Blind' Jurors
To Uphold the Law

(By United Press)
DALLAS, Feb. 15.—Judors in Judge Owen George's court at law here have to wear blinders as a result of a technicality of the law.

According to the law jurors may not view the premises involved in condemnation suits, except under an attorney's agreement, after the testimony has been completed.

Judge George's courtroom, however, overlooks lots which have been condemned by the city to make way for the triple underpass under the railroad tracks in the Trinity river bottoms.

Unless the jurors are blindfolded, they can look out of the courtroom and get an unobstructed view of the property involved in the litigation.

Labor controversies can best be handled with patience, intelligence, humor, and imagination.
—Boyd Comstock, famous track coach.

There is certainly no threat to democracy in a plan which would make true democracy possible.

A. Wallace.

Rumor That Gold Decision Is Near
Cause by M'Adoo

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Another rumor that the Supreme Court is on the verge of delivering its gold case decision was created unintentionally Wednesday by Senator McAdoo.

With his coat tails flying, the California Senator rushed down a Capitol corridor, pushed through a crowd of bystanders and entered the courtroom during the luncheon recess.

The report flew swiftly that he was present in anticipation of the long-awaited announcement. A court attendant explained that the Senator merely was inquiring about a railroad case argued during the day.

Two Are Killed in Clash With Miners

(By Associated Press)
WILKESBARRE, Penn., Feb.
15.—Frank Petrosky, said by police to be a member of striking anthracite miners, was killed and Anthony Legosh was seriously wounded yesterday in a clash near Woodward Colliery of the Glen Alden Coal Company, as the miners' strike in Luzerne County entered its 11th day.

The strike was called in an effort to force recognition from mine operators.

Youthful Bandits
Get $600 in Raid

(By Associated Press)
MIAMI, Okla., Feb. 15.—Three youthful bank robbers Wednesday night apparently made good their escape with $600 in currency and silver taken from the bank of Fairland near here shortly after the institution opened Wednesday morning.

One of the robbers was identified by Cashier J. S. Milburn as a participant in a $700 robbery of the Fairland Bank last Nov.
26.

"Since it is muddy and you're a pretty good fellow, we won't take you this time," Milburn, a hostage in the last robbery, quoted the robber he recognized.

One of the three ordered Milburn to stand aside while he took the currency and silver from the cashier's cage.

Milburn, Miss Mildred Griedt, an employe, Milburn's 8-year-old son and a patron, R. E. Walker, were in the bank at the time of the robbery.

The trio fled in a coach. It bore no license tag. Officers said the bandits might have been the same men who robbed a motorist west of Bentonville, Ark., Monday night. The auto taken from the man was of the same make used in the robbery.

FORD PRESENTS
ANOTHER ADVANCE IN

money-saving features—but that these features have been added to a truck whose economy, performance, stamina have already been proved.

development—Forward Load Distribution. This makes possible more uniform tire and brake wear—better brake action—improved operation full-width semi-trailers.

No matter how efficiently you are now doing your hauling, these and the other features of the

THE NOSEY GUY

Perhaps the main reason for the churches not being crowded at each service is that the seats are usually uncomfortable. Pews that do not fit the back and are hard sitting are not very enticing. Theaters and other places of entertainment are usually equipped with comfortable chairs or upholstered seats.

Many of the older people do not attend church because of the fact that they cannot be comfortable during service, and therefore fail to receive any blessing—spiritual or restful. These same people possibly would become regular attendants if they could be made comfortable during the services.

The Nosey Guy has a few times in life attended church where the pews were equipped with nice soft cushions. Now that is an ideal Church societies might try making cushions for some of the pews and have the ushers see that only the elderly people are seated there. Later, as other cushions are supplied the attendance would doubtless increase.

Churches—in this day of non-church going—need to be made attractive and restful; otherwise, many will stay at home or go to more attractive places.

Mrs. V. B. Rogers and daughters, Clea Faye and Frances Jane, arrived in Memphis yesterday to make arrangements to move their household furnishings to Troy.

Mrs. Tom Weatherly of Parnell spent yesterday in Memphis on business.

REVIEWS OF CURRENT MOTION PICTURES

PALACE

A large crowd at the Palace last night failed to be very responsive to a short vaudeville skit by Herbie Harrison and Mamie Crouch. The young entertainers, who incidentally are only 20 and 17 years of age, respectively, have a long way to go before they can be classified as "good".

Harrison's impersonation of Joe Penner is "fair" but the rest are not so good. Miss Crouch is indeed lithe, limber and attractive but as yet very ungraceful. A waltz number by the two is clever but not graceful. Harrison's comedy lines are so old that they actually "smell". But all together—a good attempt.

On The screen Dolores Del Rio is seen in "Madame Du Barry", a Warner Bros. production depicting the intimate life and loves of the famous beauty who ruled the court of King Louis XV.

It is not a picture for prudish because it deals entirely with the lighter side of the king's favorite, a girl from the gutter with no respect for the king's court, his family, or the nation. It's light—very light—entertainment that is usually enjoyed as a change. But it is not recommended for children.

FORMER KING ALI DIES

BAGDAD, Iraq, Feb. 15.—Former King Ali of Hedjaz died yesterday of heart disease following an attack Tuesday night. In poor health for several months, the former monarch had been unconscious most of the time since yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cordrey and family have moved to this community. They will live on the place formerly occupied by G. E. Tyler and family.

Lloyd Robertson and Claud Scoggins were Clarendon visitors Tuesday.

RITZ

Bing Crosby and Kitty Carlisle score another entertaining hit in "Here Is My Heart", Paramount picture showing for the last times today at the Ritz Theatre.

It is the usual Crosby comedy, chuck full of songs and laughs and featuring the famous crooner and the attractive Miss Carlisle. Crosby sings three popular hits, "Love Is Just Around the Corner", "With Every Breath I Take" and "It's June in January". A novelty in the production is when he sings a duet with one of his own phonograph records.

The story opens aboard Crosby's yacht in the center of the Atlantic Ocean, where he catches a very small fish. It develops that he had started out to do the six things he had most wanted to do as a boy. He had accomplished four of these and catching a fish in the center of the ocean was the fifth.

The last was securing a pair of famous pistols once owned by John Paul Jones, to be presented to the naval academy. He has one of these and learns that the other is in possession of Princess Alexandra at Monte Carlo. He returns to secure the pistol—which he never does accomplish—and runs into romance—his seventh desire becoming to "marry a princess."

Roland Young, Alison Skipworth and Reginald Owen, as members of the royal family, and Warren Frawley, an American newspaperman, play important and excellent roles.

If we knew what automobiles were going to be like two years from today, we would build them now.

—Charles F. Kettering, automotive engineer.

AUTO TAGS MAY BECOME USEFUL

HANG on to your 1935 license plates. They may become useful.

The Texas House woke up yesterday—probably not without plenty of agitation on the part of many irate citizens—and passed a bill authorizing the use of 1935 license tags immediately. There was not a single objection, indicating that either they are just now realizing the fact that they had passed one of the most annoying and inane laws issued in some time or that so much agitation has resulted that none cared to go against the change.

The bill is now in the Senate, where it undoubtedly will be rushed through in the same manner in which it passed the House. If it isn't passed immediately, the senators are likely to learn how perfectly annoying we ordinary citizens can be when they act like a bunch of nincompoops.

After the bill has been passed, pity the poor fellow who ran afoul of the law and put his license plates on too early. They belonged to him, and it was 1935, but that didn't stop him becoming a criminal, subject to arrest and fine.

But we have been over that before. There is no need to repeat, anyway, because the law is about to be amended.

The important thing about this whole mess is that it offers an example of what the people can do with their lawmakers when they decide to do so. After all, the legislators at Austin are our representatives. We can order them, by concentrated action, to do what we want them to do. If they act in the wrong direction, we are the ones to blame. It indicates that we have not given the problems enough attention and have not let our desires be known. We have never yet known a legislator to survive if he refused to act upon the instance of a majority of the people he represented.

TRAINING FOR BETTER CIVIL SERVICE

ONE of the quaint American beliefs is that it takes specific and supervised training to be a barber or a plumber, but that anyone at all who can get a certain number of votes or wangle an appointment is competent to administer the affairs of a great city or run a federal or state government bureau.

While there have been occasional cries for better-trained public servants, it has been like the weather—nobody really did anything about it.

Now a beginning is being made toward doing something about it.

Harvard for some years has had a valuable school of business administration. Originally it has been intended as a school of political science and administration. Now, under Harvard's new President Conant, this school is being turned into a school of "public and private business."

It is planned to offer in the new school a thorough training not only for young men who enter private business, but also for those who aim to devote their energies to the sort of great public enterprises that are beginning to grow in importance, projects such as the Tennessee Valley Authority, and public bodies such as the Federal Trade Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, and a dozen others.

Dean Wallace Brett Donham, who has ably presided over the school while it was training promising young men for private business, is thoroughly in sympathy with the idea that important public business requires just as thorough training.

"It is impossible to improvise a first-class civil service," he points out, and cites the two examples of the World War and the present crisis, when it was necessary to build great public organizations quickly, and many a man put in an important position proved inadequately trained and incompetent.

As more and more functions become public (and quite regardless of your opinion of that tendency, it's there) the need for competent, well-trained men to fill those posts will increase. Several schools for training diplomatic and consular service men already exist.

There are several city managers in the country who have made that a life work, moving up from small cities in which they have been successful to larger ones.

Why not? If there is any more complex job, requiring better training and higher ability than running the complicated affairs of a great city, it's hard to imagine what it is.

THE VICIOUS CIRCLE

HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine
Modern science has developed an ingenious method of guiding the courts in deciding the true parentage of children, or discovering who committed a murder, by means of examining the blood of the persons involved.

Also, in the case of a blood transfusion, this method is used to see that the blood of both persons involved is compatible.

This prodigious step in medical science is based on the existence of certain dominant factors in the blood.

Before a blood transfusion, tests are made not only to see that no infection is transmitted from one person to the other, but to be sure that the blood of both will mix well.

If the bloods are not of the kinds that mix well, the blood of one person will cause the red blood cells of the other to clump together. If this occurred within the human body, death would follow promptly.

Studies have shown that persons can be divided into groups, according to the group factors in the blood, and that the bloods of certain groups can be mixed without danger.

By this blood study, it is also known that there is a tendency to inherit certain characteristics, and while we cannot say from the study of a blood group that a certain child is the descendant of a certain father, we can say in some instances that a certain child could not possibly be the descendant of a certain man.

The blood consists of a liquid part called plasma and the red cells, or corpuscles. The plasma contains a substance called agglutinin, which, when it comes in contact with corpuscles of a certain kind, clumps them together, or agglutinates them.

The corpuscles also contain a substance called agglutininogen, which enables them to be clumped when they are acted on by the right kind of plasma.

There are two kinds of agglutinins in the plasma; these have been called "a" and "b." There are also two kinds of agglutininogens in the corpuscles, which are called "A" and "B."

Now, persons may have in their blood various combinations of these agglutinins and agglutininogens for instance, agglutinin "a" can combine with agglutininogen

CHARLES JUNE, OF NEWBURGH, N.Y., FIRST SKATING CHAMPION, 1823

WILLIAM SHEPPARD OF NEW YORK INVENTED LIQUID SOAP 1865

SILK CULTURE STARTED ABOUT 1623

Answers to Previous Questions
THE first attempt to formulate skating rules was in 1884 by the American National Skating Association. The liquid soap was made by mixing at the rate of one pound of common soap to 100 pounds of ammonia. The Colonial Assembly directed the planting of mulberry trees for silk culture

"A" and cause the corpuscles to clump. It may not, however, affect corpuscles which contain agglutininogen B.

After many thousands of people were studied, it was discovered that all human beings can be divided into groups according to the agglutinins and agglutininogens which they have in their blood. It is obviously impossible for any person to have "a" and "A" in his blood, because his corpuscles would at once clump together.

It is, however, possible to have other combinations—for example, "A" and "B," "A" and "b," "a" and "B," and "a" and "b." This last-mentioned group of people have been called O individuals because their blood cells can never be clumped together.

A person can transfer only one of these factors to his child. If the blood groups to which a child and one parent belong are known, it can be definitely stated that the other parent must belong to one of certain other groups. If a person whose blood contained "a" and "b" factors married a person whose blood contained "A" and "B," the children could only be "a" and "b" or "A" and "b." If the child contained the factor "B" in its blood, it would be clear that some other person must have intervened in the conception.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

—BY RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Democrat Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Certain senators are taking a close squint at Amiral Christian Joy Peoples.

Peoples has been reported as likely to have a large finger in distribution of the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund. The administration sent him to Capitol Hill to explain, after a fashion, its bill appropriating that sum.

He has a long and honorable record as the navy's paymaster and buyer. For more than a year, as head of the treasury's procurement section, he has bought government supplies and built government buildings.

He has been described as "Roosevelt's closest friend in the navy"—the friendship dates back to wartime—and is honest, amiable, and well-liked.

But many senators, already shocked at the proposal to hand all that money to Roosevelt with no strings attached, are prone to check up carefully on anyone likely to be a key figure in doling out the cash. They know politicians, contractors, and mere grafters are in a lather of anticipation.

Linked With Lobby

It was unfortunate for Peoples that a lobbyist's confidential memorandum laid before the Senate munitions committee revealed the admiral as consultant in a plan to bombard Roosevelt with telegrams urging him to get the navy to rescind its rejection of bids by the Bath (Me.) Iron Works for two destroyers.

Certain persons—and I'd hate to say they weren't admirers of "Honest Harold Ickes"—began to whisper that Peoples might be a bit too susceptible to the wiles of politicians and lobbyists and that perhaps "the people around Peoples" didn't comprise the best imaginable staff.

They pointed out that in secret testimony before the Glass subcommittee, Peoples had described an assistant, Max Dunning, as "a very able engineer" who had "resigned" from the PWA housing division "to accept an appointment in the procurement division."

Record Isn't Dazzling

The Who's Who record describes Dunning as an architect, not as an engineer. In other records he appears as a victim of the cleanout in the PWA housing division which followed an investigation and decision by Ickes that the division, under Director Robert Kohn, had made a mess of things and had been far too generous in its valuations of property presented by promoters.

The procurement division early obtained $114,000 for federal buildings as of Jan. 1, 1935, compared with 96 percent for both 1934 and 1933. Ickes' Interior

Four Clubs Open Fight for County Cage Title Tonight

Round-Robin Affair Staged at Lakeview

SCHEDULE OF GAMES

Friday Night
7:30—Lakeview vs Estelline.
8:30—Memphis vs Turkey.

Saturday Morning
9:40—Lakeview vs Memphis.
10:40—Estelline vs Turkey.

Saturday Night
7:30—Estelline vs Memphis.
8:30—Lakeview vs Turkey.

The finest basketball the county affords will be displayed tonight and tomorrow at the Lakeview High School gymnasium as four clubs battle for the Class A championship of Hall County.

Lakeview and Turkey are the favorites in this single round-robin affair, while Memphis and Estelline are rated by the wisacres as also runs.

Climax Season
With the four teams coming from all sections of the county, the tournament has the largest drawing appeal of any basketball event in the area. It climaxes the season, which probably will end for three of the clubs, while the fourth goes on to higher Inter-scholastic League competition.

Admission to each session is 25 cents.
The tournament opens at 7:30 o'clock tonight with the Lakeview Eagles clashing with the Estelline Bear Cubs in the first game of the doubleheader. Memphis and Turkey clash in the final game, scheduled to get underway at 8:30 o'clock.

In Saturday morning's session, the order of competition is reversed, with the Cyclone opposing Eagles in the first tilt at 9:40 o'clock. An hour later, the Turks and Bear Cubs take the floor for their encounter.

If play runs according to "form", the Saturday night session will climax the tournament, with no position decided until the final round. In the first tilt at 7:30 o'clock, Memphis and Estelline meet, probably in the game that will decide the third and fourth place clubs.

Lakeview and Turkey, if they come through as hoped before-hand, will withhold the championship game until the very last. They clash at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night, closing the tournament. They should go into this game undefeated and with the county title at stake—that is the way the tourney is hoped.

Estelline for Third
In the final round, Estelline is expected to repeat its victories over the Cyclone to finish in third place.

This writer, however, ends predictions there. It seems to be purely a toss-up between Lakeview and Turkey for the county championship. Advance dope shows a choice of no more than about two goals for either club.

The teams played at Lakeview recently, with the Turks emerging with a two-point margin. However, that did not presage victory tomorrow night, for Lakeview took an early lead and held it most of the way, being overtaken only after a slight let-down.

Eagles Favored?
In the tournament, a let-down is not likely. At the same time, if the Turks defeated the Eagles once, they may be able to do it again.

That apparently leaves little choice between the clubs. However, the writer has heard expressed in local cage circles the belief that Lakeview has a slight edge in playing ability and form. Playing on the home court certainly will be no drawback to the Eagles.

Fred Perry's Failures With Anzacs Give U.S. New Hope

By JIMMY DONAHUE
(NEA Service Sports Writer)

Crawford beats Perry! McGrath beats Perry! Quist beats Perry! Those reports, coming from Australia, indicated that Fred Perry, world's No. 1 amateur tennis player, is learning the lesson that Ellsworth Vines absorbed during the winter of 1932-33. They also give hope to a patient America that the Davis Cup might pull the prodigal son this year.

It is plain, from his showing in the land down under, that Perry is over-tennis. Two solid years of competitive volleying, with hardly time out for tea, have taken a lot from the bounding, net-jumping Briton.

Vines and other American luminaries took a long trip shortly after the end of the 1932 season. The boys wound up in Australia, from where reports emanated that Vines, then hailed as one of the greatest players, had dropped tilt after tilt to Jack Crawford and lesser lights.

Echoes of that trip reverberated during the fiasco that occurred in the Davis Cup competition of 1933. Vines collapsed in his match with Perry on the red clay of State Roland Garros in France, where America engaged England for the right to meet the tri-color in the challenge round.

With the exception of the victory of George Lott and Johnny Van Ryn in the doubles, the showing of the Yankee squad was rather pathetic.

Vines Had Right Slant

It was pointed out that the players had overtrained after having been overworked. There was talk of dissension. Other excuses were advanced.

Experts were inclined to discredit most of the reasons for failure, but the flop of Perry in Australia tends to prove the statement of Vines, that the team had played too much tennis before the cup clashes, was correct.

Wilmer Allison, after America's defeat in 1933, summed up the situation with the terse declaration:

"Nineteen months of tournament tennis is too much."

Perry has had more than that. Starting with the winning of the U. S. singles title in '33, the English luminary toured Australia, took part in the French championships of 1934, won the Wimbledon singles last year, trained battles, repeated his victory in the U. S. singles, campaigned on the west coast, where he lost to Gene Mako—and then went back for more in Australia.

Cochet Picks Australia

Nearly two years of heavy competition in a game that draws every ounce of energy from a player made him a comparatively easy mark for Crawford, who gave up U. S. singles play last season in favor of returning to his native land to rest.

Perry's apparent over-tennis condition leads not a few veteran observers to predict that the Davis Cup is due to leave England this year. Most of them believe that Australia, with Crawford back in the shape that made him world No. 1 man in 1933, will annex the trophy. Australia also has Vivian McGrath and Adrian Quist.

Henri Cochet, former member of the French team, expresses the opinion that Crawford and McGrath will score a clean-cut victory for the Anzacs.

Cochet has been wrong before, however. Last year he predicted

Fred Perry is making few of those characteristic victory jumps over the net these days; rather, the world's No. 1 amateur tennis player is a fallen great, as shown in the lower picture, after losing to Jack Crawford, Adrian Quist and Vivian McGrath.

as full of life as a 1-year-old now that the young blood of Frankie Parker, Meko, and Don Budge has been injected, may possibly be able to turn the tables if that awful bogeyman, Perry, isn't himself.

It may be that the Frenchman's prediction of 1934 was intended for 1935. The American array, as full of life as a 1-year-old now that the young blood of Frankie Parker, Meko, and Don Budge has been injected, may possibly be able to turn the tables if that awful bogeyman, Perry, isn't himself.

ROOKIE ROUNDUP

Al Milnar

MILNAR MAY BE ANSWER TO INDIANS' PRAYER FOR SOUTHPAW

In 1933, during a night exhibition game the Cleveland Indians played with Zanesville, O., a mid-die Atlantic League farm of the Tribe, Al Milnar, product of the Lake City's sandlots, struck out 18 of the American League stalwarts. So this year Al is one of the rookies to be taken south by Manager Walter Johnson.

Milnar, a southpaw on the mound and at the plate, was farmed out to New Orleans last season. He won 22 and lost 13 games, fanning 130 of the Southern Association's sluggers. The 22-year-old rookie is a big fellow, standing 6 feet 2 inches, and weighing 195.

The Indians long have needed a southpaw. Last season they labored along with Lloyd Brown and Bob Weiland, both veterans acquired in trades, and in 1933 finished the season without a single portside flinger.

If Milnar shows a fair amount of effectiveness in his first year up, he is sure to stick.

CLEVELAND HAS FEW CONTRACT WORRIES

Expect All Indians To Line Up for Training Duty

By United Press
CLEVELAND, Feb. 15.—General Manager Billy Evans, of the Cleveland Indians, doesn't anticipate difficulty lining up all the Redskins for training duty. He has more than half his roster signed or having evinced satisfaction with their terms.

Only a few mild salary squawks have been received at the front office. One, involving a small demand on the part of Hal Trosky, already has been silenced and Evans believes the rest will be disposed of quickly.

In faraway California, two of the Cleveland contracts weren't received with complete grace, though both called for increases over 1934. These were the documents tendered Pitcher Monte Pearson and Shortstop Bill Knickerbocker.

Word from Fresno and Los Angeles, their respective homes, has been to the effect that there only are slight differences in the terms offered and salaries wanted. They expect no difficulty coming to an agreement before the players report to New Orleans, Feb. 25. Pearson was a hold-out last year.

The tribe has a nucleus of a pitching staff with Harder, the two Browns, Velve Bean, Hildebrand, Milnar and Perrin signed; four outfielders is Vosmik, Campbell, Averill and Galatzer; three infielders in Kamm, Trosky and Hughes; and a catcher in Pytlak. No difficulty is anticipated with youngsters like Carson, outfielder; Galehouse, Lee, Sunda and Winegarner, pitchers; nor with Berger, infielder, and Brenzel, George and Garbak, catchers.

Glenn Myatt probably is waiting to see how his recently mended leg stands up before he signs, while Willis Hudlin always is the last to sign his name. Ab Wright, new outfielder, hasn't been heard from, but is not expected to balk over his first major league contract.
