Area teachers score better than average

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland-area teachers all out-performed the statewide average in passing the March 10 TECAT test, the Texas Education Agency announced Wednesday.

At Midland Independent School District, 98.2 percent of the educators passed the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers. At Greenwood, 98.9 percent passed, and 98 percent passed at Ector County. At the Monahans-Wickett-Pyote district, where teachers organized a Capitol protest against the exam, 99.1 percent passed.

Statewide figures, announced last month, show that 96.7 percent of the 202,084 earned passing grades on the reading-and-writing test they must pass by June 30 to keep their certificates.

Educators who were graduated from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin also out-performed the statewide average, as 99.3 percent of the 684 UTPB graduates passed the TECAT. Passing rates for other colleges include: University of Texas at Austin, 99.6; Texas Tech, 99.2; and Texas A&M, 98.9.

Education Agency officials warned that the passing rates for the districts and for the colleges "might not be exact." District errors could have come about, they said, if teachers used the incorrect codes when filling out their computer-graded answer forms. The agency could not determine which college or university 32,000 of the teachers were graduated from.

"This information should be seen as an estimate of district performance and not the true impact," the report said. "The percentages were calculated using the number tested and not the total district staff."

Additional statistics the agency released Wednesday show:

- The passing rate decreased with the age of the teacher taking the exam. Passing rates ranged from 97.8 percent for teachers under age 29 to 90.5 percent for those age 60 to 65.
- Female teachers out-performed their male counterparts 97.8 percent to 93.8 percent.
- Administrators and support staff passed at a greater rate than superintendents or principals who out-performed elementary teachers. With a 96.4 percent passing rate, junior high and high school teachers passed at the lowest rate.

Baressi: Test scores help morale

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

While area school superintendents weren't surprised their educators out-performed the statewide average in passing the March 10 TECAT test, they did express relief and a desire to get on with the job of teaching.

The Texas Education Agency reported Wednesday that Midland-area teachers out-performed the statewide average of 96.7 percent in passing the reading-and-writing test to keep their certificates.

At Midland Independent School District, where 98.2 percent of the educators passed the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, school officials were ecstactic.

"I'm aware of about 10 individuals districtwide that didn't make it on the first try," said MISD Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr. "Of course, I don't know who they are, but we're trying to support them and get them to the education service centers so they'll be able to pass the second time around."

Generally, teachers performed as expected, Baressi said. "We did what we thought we would do and that was to perform above the state average."

Basin bankruptcies double '85 rate

ODESSA (AP) — Permian Basin bankruptcies are being filed at almost double last year's rate and only about a third as many businesses are being created this year due to the oil price slide.

U.S. District Court records show 314 bankruptcies had been filed through May 29 this year, compared with 128 for the same period in 1985.

And the increase seems to be gathering momentum, U.S. District Court Clerk Larry Bick said.

"Since March, there's been a significant, steady increase," he said.

April's 44 cases were the most ever filed in one month — until May 22 when records show 45 bankruptcy cases filed that month.

Through the first three months of this year, 66 people had filed new applications with the state Comptroller of Public Accounts for tax numbers to start new businesses in Odessa, Chamber of Commerce records show.

Through the first quarter of 1985, 180 applications for tax numbers were received, according to chamber records.

Lily Tercero, the chamber's business information specialist, said new businesses include a television repair shop, pastry shop, carpet care center, auto parts store and cleaners.

"Most of them are service oriented," she said.

Jill Berg, the chamber's assistant vice president for economic development, said there is no way of knowing how many businesses are closing their doors. Not all businesses close under bankruptcy, she explained.

According to state statistics, many of the jobs being lost in Odessa are the higher-paying ones.

Through April, Texas Employment Commission records show Odessa had lost a net of 3,400 jobs, said George Williams, TEC labor market analyst.

The more severe employment losses were in those jobs directly related to oil and gas exploration and production, with 1,500 fewer jobs in April than in January, Williams said.

Taxes, leadership issues in commissioner's primary run-off

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The leadership in Midland County government and how effectively it is coping with county problems, the budget and taxes are issues in Saturday's Republican Party run-off election for the party's nominee for county commissioner in the Nov. 4 general elections.

Guy McCrary, a 32-year-old marketing consultant, is challenging Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, 62, for the $24,000-a-year post which Craig, a real-estate broker, has held since 1983. Winner of that race will be cast against Democrat Don Aydstun, a 39-year-old design technician, in the November general elections.

McCrary contends that leadership is lacking and is evidenced in the continuing jail problems, rising taxes over the past three years and alleged lax maintenance of some county buildings.

"We have neither the organized structure or leaders in place to manage the county operation that has grown to a $14-million budget," McCrary charged.

Craig disagrees.

"A leader is not just a guy getting a flag in his hand and charging out ahead of the group," said Craig. "A leader finds solutions to problems, and I have done that all along."

Nevertheless, McCrary said the county needs "leaders who can identify problems and take action to solve them quickly and economically."

"Midland County needs leaders who will listen when the voters speak and make tough decisions necessary to solve tough problems...That's what I'll provide if I'm elected," McCrary said.

THE TWO CANDIDATES were pitted into a run-off election when neither garnered a majority of votes in the first primary election on May 3. Craig received 48 percent of the vote, McCrary got 40 percent, and the third candidate, computer consultant Milton Rister, 35, pulled in 14 percent of the vote.

Craig took exception to McCrary's charges that county taxes effectively have increased 16 percent since 1983.

"That in no way depicts the circumstances," Craig responded. "The implication is that we (commissioners) have suddenly started spending all sorts of money we did not have. You have to know the circumstances of any additional expenditure to know whether it was appropriate or not."

Craig said the commissioners have been "frugal in our expenditures."

Radio traffic reporter killed in small plane crash

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — In two weeks, radio station KFI-AM's airborne traffic scout, Bruce Wayne, would have celebrated his 25th year of steering ground-bound commuters through the daily trials of driving to and from work.

But the planned celebration turned to mourning Wednesday, when his plane crashed in flames shortly after takeoff, killing Wayne at age 52.

"There's going to be an empty spot in my car now," a listener identified only as Gary said Wednesday, as KFI broadcast a spontaneous tribute to Wayne.

His final "KFI in the Sky" traffic bulletin, broadcast just three minutes before the 6:18 a.m. crash, ended with the hearty laugh a fellow radio reporter said "was almost his trademark."

Wayne took off from Fullerton Municipal Airport, 25 miles southeast of Los Angeles, at 6:15 a.m. Wednesday.

The single-engine Cessna Cardinal appeared to have engine trouble, a witness said, and made a sharp turn back after gaining 300 to 500 feet.

" (Radio traffic reporter Bruce Wayne) was only two weeks from achieving his dream of surviving 25 years as an airborne traffic reporter.... It meant everything to him, and he worked very hard to be able to keep doing it."

— Lois Wayne

But the plane, losing altitude rapidly, crashed into a parked truck a half-mile from the airport.

Wayne was alone in the plane.

His wife of 21 years, Lois Wayne, was rushed to the crash site and spent nearly two hours describing the scene in a telephone interview on KFI.

"I am at the crash site of a Cessna Cardinal," Mrs. Wayne said in the live interview. "There is no paint or a number on the aircraft. The aircraft did have an explosion on impact."

Although officials were not immediately certain that the wreckage was her husband's plane, Mrs. Wayne, a former Eastern Airlines flight attendant, said she knew right away that it was.

She later told reporters that her husband "was only two weeks from achieving his dream of surviving 25 years as an airborne traffic reporter...."

"It meant everything to him, and he worked very hard to be able to keep doing it," she said.

She said her husband planned to celebrate by reporting from the air in New York during the July 4 unveiling of the refurbished Statue of Liberty.

"We often talked about the dangers," she said. "It's just something everybody lives with."

After the broadcast Mrs. Wayne cried in the arms of those at the scene.

She knelt beside the body of her husband, encased in a body bag, touched it and recited the Lord's Prayer as police officers bowed their heads beside her.

"You are a trooper," one KFI reporter told her. "Bruce would be proud."

Late Wednesday, the body was positively identified as Wayne's through dental records.

The National Transportation Safety Board will investigate the crash.

Born Bruce Talford in Manchester, N.H., Wayne changed his name shortly after arriving in Los Angeles in 1966, adopting the name of the Batman character's "secret identity" for fun.

RUN-OFF

"My intention is to set a budget which requires no additional tax dollars," Craig said, "and, if it is possible to do so without too drastically reducing needed services, to set a budget requiring fewer dollars."

McCrary said that the 16 percent tax increases which Craig voted for over a three-year period refutes that.

"His votes clearly display a record quite the contrary," McCrary said.

"Mr. Craig is touting tax dollars. It's not surprising. Tax dollars are always an issue (in politics)."

IN DEPRESSED "economic times like this," people become increasingly concerned about how their tax dollars are spent," McCrary said.

"Voters need to be informed," he said, "because there are numerous problems and obvious oversights that I can contribute to no other factor except poor leadership." In that regard, McCrary cited the "erosion of county property assets," including the County Jail and Courthouse Annex which, he said, have been neglected. He also cited the passing of a year in the renovation of the jail and in the commissioning of a study to determine Midland County's long-range needs.

McCrary said he would demonstrate fiscal responsibility were he a commissioner.

"I am going to bring some financial sense to Midland County," he said. "There's no financial sense there."

McCrary noted that the Midland County Jail renovation, which the voters approved under a $3-million bond election in May 1985, "has not begun." Likewise, he said that a study of Midland County courthouse and jail needs has not gotten underway. The study was approved by the voters more than a year ago.

And he was critical of the county's spending $200,000 a year in farming out prisoners to other county jails.

"At the rate of $500 a day, the Midland economy has lost over $200,000 in the last year alone. In economic circulation, that's almost $1.5-million lost to the Midland economy."

McCrary said that the "daily drain" on the Midland economy "because of the continued inaction" by the Commissioners' Court must be stopped.

"AND WHAT HAS the incumbent commissioner done to solve the jail problem, to stop this waste of Midland tax dollars?" asked McCrary. "Nothing."

McCrary also said he would like "to correct assertions" made by Craig about an alternative jail plan which he proposed.

McCrary proposed:

— Reconditioning the existing jail for the short-term for the incarceration of maximum-risk prisoners.

— Locate an existing structure, close to the central business district, for securing minimum-risk prisoners for the short-haul.

— Develop a regional jail to serve several counties for housing convicted prisoners.

— Consolidate the city and county jails to handle the community pretrial prisoners. "Midland now has two jails," he said. "This is duplicative and wasteful of the tax dollars of Midland citizens."

"This is my proposal," he said. "Any deviant description of the above is a blatant attempt to mislead the voters."

Craig proposed the building of a new jail after the Midland economy recovers from its current slump. He also noted that temporary jail renovation, which voters approved more than a year ago, "will get us by for a few years."

"BUT AT THE appropriate time in our economic life, we will need a new jail," Craig said. "After much study, I am still convinced that the great saving in tax dollars will be realized by building the new jail on the county-owned seven-acre tract east of Midland." In late 1984 and early 1985, the commissioners had proposed the building of an $8.4-million jail and sheriff's offices with $9.9-million in certificates of obligation. But a citizens' group intervened and called for the measure to be submitted to a vote of the people, who resoundingly rejected the proposal.

Craig said that a downtown jail site would add several million dollars to the cost of the project.

"Another major advantage of a new jail will be the opportunity to create a joint city-county facility. I believe this is a must."

In citing his leadership role on the Commissioners' Court, Craig noted a dozen achievements since he took office in January 1983. Those included a new Centennial Branch Library, new Texas Agricultural Extension Service Building, improved relations among members of the Commissioners' Court and between the Court and the City Council, new county court-at-law, approval of use of jail inmates to perform repair and maintenance work on county buildings.

"We could have lived without a new (agricultural) extension building," he said, "but it is a tremendous asset. We don't have to have paved streets, but we've got them."

CRAIG SAID that he had "no apologies" for expenditures which the commissioners have made in improving county facilities and services, such as bolstering law enforcement, upgrading county roads, expanding the judicial system, and installing computer systems in the courthouse.

"Since I've been on the court, the county has been playing catch-up for many things that needed doing," he said.

"Part of leadership," Craig said, "is creating an attitude of cooperation between the city and the county. And it has greatly improved. I think my attitude has caused others to adopt this philosophy."

Craig referred to McCrary's campaign for new leadership.

"If he thinks I have not been a leader, then he has not observed my history in the community," said Craig, who has lived in Midland for 26 years and who has served on the Midland Independent School District board and on the Midland Central Appraisal District board.

"Is it leadership to say we need change? What kind of leadership is that?" Craig asked. "I am a leader. When appropriate, (I am) a follower, but I'm not going to get out of the way."

McCrary said he can provide the leadership that is needed in county government.

"I hope they (the voters) are looking beyond the fact that Mr. Craig is a nice guy," McCrary said, "and look to the future."

TEST

He added that the results already have gone a long way to improve teacher morale as "Things lightened up around here towards the end of the year."

At Greenwood, 98.9 percent passed, and 98 percent passed at Ector County.

University of Texas of the Permian Basin graduates also out-performed the statewide average, as 99.3 percent passed. Other college passing rates included the University of Texas at Austin, 99.6; Texas Tech, 99.2; and Texas A&M, 98.9.

GISD Superintendent Sam Martin was "satisfied" with his district's results, saying "We expected our teachers would do very well."

At Stanton Independent School District, where 100 percent of the educators passed the exam, Superintendent Wayne Mitchell said "We expected all of our teachers would pass. I didn't have to worry at all."

Despite the perfect score, Mitchell was quick to add that the reading-and-writing test "did nothing but destroy morale among our teachers. It was an outrageous cost for something that accomplished absolutely nothing."

At the Monahans-Wickett-Pyote district, where teachers organized a Capitol protest against the exam, 99.1 percent passed.

Dr. Richard Bain, assistant superintendent in charge of personnel and curriculum, said "We're very, very pleased with the results."

Of the 224 Monahans educators who took the test, Bain said "We thought we might have four or five who might fail."

Bain added, "There a tremendous amount of relief now that the test is over. We're going to sit back and relax for awhile and then start gearing up for the anxiety that will accompany the subject-matter exam or the second phase of the testing."

Ector County Indepedent School District deputy superintendent Lloyd McKee predicted Odessa teachers would out-perform the statewide average. Nevertheless, he said "I feel very good about the results."

McKee said preparation was the key to the high passing rate among Odessa teachers. "In house, a lot of our English teachers held workshops at night to help us prepare. In addition, all three (teacher) organizations held workshops and many of the teachers went to more than one workshop."

McKee hoped that the test results would help to improve moraie among Odessa educators. "In reality," he admitted "this was fairly stressful on them given the fact that one test could stand in the way of their keeping or losing their job."

Thatcher moves

DALLAS (AP) — The son of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has complied with the wishes of managers of his luxury apartment and moved to an undisclosed location, where State Department agents are protecting him, according to a published report.

The owners of Terrace House had asked Mark Thatcher to leave by May 31 because they said they could not protect him against threats on his life. Threats were made against Thatcher's family because Britain assisted the United States in its raid on Libya.

"He was a lovely young man. We are sorry to lose him," an unidentified Terrace House spokesman told the Dallas Times Herald on Tuesday. "It was something we didn't have any control over. This was just company policy."

Inter City Investments, which owns and manages Terrace House, refused to add closed-circuit television cameras and other security services to protect Thatcher even though the British consulate had agreed to pay for it, the newspaper said.

TECAT

Those teachers who failed or did not take the TECAT may take the make-up exam June 28. Over the next three weeks, Midland-area teachers who plan to take the make-up should keep their eyes on KERA-TV, cable channel 13.

In conjunction with a Dallas-area school district and KERA-TV in Dallas, the education agency has put together a five-part review course to be televised over the state's public television stations. The 4½-half hours of programming will help teachers and administrators hone their reading and writing skills.

Through the Region X Education Service Center, the agency will critique writing samples the teachers submit after watching the second televised sessions. The broadcasts are scheduled for June 9, 10, 12, 13 and 26. Teachers should check local districts for broadcast times.

Construction jobs were down 400, manufacturing 300, and retail and wholesale trade 300, he said. Other jobs were lost in smaller categories, such as self-employment, he said.

Through April, about 6,800 people filed first-time claims for unemployment benefits in Odessa, Williams said. Some of those claims could be filed by people outside Odessa, he noted.

In April alone, 2,408 filed first-time claims, said Ron Norris, TEC Odessa area manager.

Counties included in the Odessa office's administrative area are Ector, Winkler, Ward, Andrews, Crane and Upton, and people in those counties can file their claims in Odessa, Midland or any other convenient office, Williams said.

Total employment figures are based on where people live, but unemployment claims' figures are based on where people file.

As a result, Williams said, it's impossible to know exactly how many Odessans have lost jobs and how many have gone back to work.

But between January and April, the labor force declined by 600 workers in Odessa, from 60,000 to 59,400, Williams said. Some left the city, while others have just stopped looking for a job, he said.

Small West Texas town lives up to its name, residents say

By CAMILLE WHEELER

EDEN, Texas (AP) — Adam and Eve were banished from the Garden of Eden, but 62-year-old California native Don Nelson embraced the Garden with open arms.

Ten years ago, the disenchanted Californian yearned for a new home, a new start. He made up his mind before he ever left the Golden State. He looked at a Texas map, and chose Eden for his new home.

"He took out a map of Texas, and he ruled out one place and then another," Nelson's 47-year-old wife, Evelyn, said. "He finally landed on Eden. He said it was the ideal location: it has a good climate, it's a little town, it's closer to a larger town, and it has an intersection with the meeting of four highways.

"He said, 'It's too cold in the north, there's too much trouble in the south, it's too crowded out west.' Plus, the name of the place...Eden...it was just the perfect paradise sound," Mrs. Nelson said.

The Concho County town of 1,294 is about 45 miles southeast of San Angelo.

Mrs. Nelson is head librarian for the Eden Public Library. Nelson drives a school bus for the Eden school system and is director of the Eden Housing Authority.

The Nelsons met and married in Eden.

"He had come two to three months after I did; I came because of my parents, and then he came," Mrs. Nelson explained.

Describing her husband as one of many book lovers and her supporting arm in the library ("he's the backbone of it"), Mrs. Nelson, a Beaumont native, said Edenites live up to their paradise-town reputation. "We're really proud of our library," she began. "The people have responded great...there's been so much community support. The community has rallied around our efforts," she said, pointing to a new Canon copier.

"This library for this size is great; the Lutheran Church furnished the wood and the manpower for the shelves; the San Angelo (Tom Green County) Library donated large-print books, and other people have donated new books. There's just no end to the community support. We had a bake sale last week, and $400 has been donated to the library (from an anonymous source)."

The Eden Library has been a member of the Big Country Library System for seven years, Mrs. Nelson said. Required by Big Country to have 7,500 books on its shelves, the Eden Library has about 10,000, she said.

Younger residents say there are some ways Eden could be more paradise-like.

"There's not a lot of people; it's very boring so I just go to the gazebo and talk to my friends," 14-year-old Michelle Torres said.

What does Eden need? "A park...a good park with stuff to do, and a swimming pool," she continued. "We have a movie theater, but it's only open on the weekends and in the summer. They show movies that we've already seen. We haven't even seen 'E.T.'...at least not here."

Evelyn Nelson, head librarian at the Eden Public Library, talks about life in the town of Eden, about 45 miles southeast of San Angelo.

A chorus of junior high voices told of Eden's other needs. "A Pizza Hut, cuter guys, cuter girls, a place for teen-agers to hang around, an arcade, a new track..."

Doyle Carter, in his third year as Eden's boys junior high track coach, varsity basketball coach and assistant coach after moving from Clyde, said Eden's smallness is its greatest asset. "Clyde's a small town like Eden," the 27-year-old coach said.

"It kind of makes the kids behave — they know somebody's watching out for them." Carter's one change for the town would be to "move Eden about 20 miles closer to San Angelo."

Mike Ellis, a senior, has lived in Eden since his second grade year. "It's a great school," he said. "It's small and you get to do a lot of things." For fun, Eden teen-agers "go home...during football season, there's stuff to do, but other than that, we just hang out," Ellis explained. "We go to the Concho Drug Store, the square; we haven't had any parties," the Eden senior said as his friends hooted with laughter.

Ellis might move back to Eden after graduation from high school. "I plan on going to college and maybe later on coming back," he said. "My family has land around here; if I had a good job, I'd come back."

Elna Whitfield is not concerned with Pizza Huts and movies. Rather, the 90-year-old Concho Nursing Home resident relishes memories of traveling in a covered wagon. As a child, Miss Whitfield moved with her family from Giddings to Millersview in 1912, just 25 miles northeast of Eden, where they eventually settled.

"We rode on the first hard-surfaced road...it was between Taylor and Georgetown in the blackland country," she said. "We had relatives in this part of the country. We went through the salt gap, went through wire fences and followed cow trails along the Colorado River.

"The railroad was right new when we moved here in 1912; we followed from Lometa right on down here. We had shipped our goods, milk cows and chickens on here...My older brothers rode here in a boxcar with the furniture."

When the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train rolled through Eden this spring, it took a detour by the Concho Nursing Home where Miss Whitfield and two other residents were honorary judges for the train.

Eden holds magical qualities, Miss Whitfield said. "There was a family that lived here by the name of Fletcher and they had a girl and she wanted to learn music so I got her started. They didn't pay me a dime for it. Then, in 1975, she had come down here to see her uncle and went down to our house; she gave me a $20 bill, but I told her I didn't want it."

Astronauts' families briefed on findings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Relatives of the seven astronauts killed in the Challenger explosion have decided to withhold comment for now on the findings of the presidential commission investigating the space shuttle accident.

Commission Chairman William P. Rogers and Executive Director Alton G. Keel briefed family members of the Challenger crew for several hours Wednesday on the findings of the panel.

Associates of the families, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said the commission allowed two representatives from each of the families to attend the briefing.

Also before the panel releases its report, members of Congress are being given access to some of the findings.

The commission's 225-page report will be delivered to the White House on Friday. Commission members will formally present it to President Reagan on Monday afternoon.

Later Monday, the report will be released to the public and Rogers will hold a news conference.

The commission Wednesday issued a brief statement from the Challenger crew relatives:

"We are most appreciative of the thoughtfulness of the presidential commission in inviting us to Washington today to discuss the work of the commission. We have agreed that we will not respond to questions and react to members of the press who have been so supportive and understanding throughout these difficult months to respect our privacy," their statement said.

On Monday, the commission sent to the printers its report on the ill-fated Challenger, which exploded in a fireball a little more than a minute into flight Jan. 28.

Alleged Israeli ring to be probed

Pollard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors who obtained a guilty plea from former Navy intelligence analyst Jonathan Jay Pollard on charges of spying for Israel say they will press forward with their investigation of an Israeli spy ring that operated in the United States.

U.S. Attorney Joseph diGenova said Wednesday in documents filed in U.S. District Court that at least five Israeli citizens were involved in a spy network that used Pollard, a one-time civilian employee of the Navy, to supply classified defense documents on countries hostile to Israel.

Pollard and his wife, appearing together, pleaded guilty to espionage charges, and federal prosecutors said the Pollards' co-conspirators included an Israeli Air Force colonel and two diplomatic officials.

The Israeli citizens were Rafi Eitan, an Israeli intelligence official who allegedly directed the ring; Col. Aviem Sella, an officer in the Israeli Air Force; Joseph Yagur, a science attache at the Israeli consulate in New York; and Irit Erb, a secretary at the Israeli embassy in Washington.

Moreover, additional documents filed by the prosecutors say that Pollard also met with another Israeli, identified only as "Uzi," at the Maryland home of an Israeli diplomat.

Not named in the indictment is Ilan Ravid, deputy science attache in the Israeli embassy, who was recalled along with Yagur after Pollard's arrest last year.

In December, Prime Minister Shimon Peres apologized to the United States for the Pollard matter, which he later told reporters was an isolated incident of "limited and passing importance" to U.S.-Israel relations.

Following Peres' apology, Secretary of State George Schultz said he accepted Israeli assurances that Pollard was not part of a larger Israeli network for spying on the United States.

National Public Radio on Wednesday quoted unidentified Reagan administration sources as saying that Israeli officials did not tell the truth about Israeli intelligence operations within the U.S. when the U.S. questioned Israel about Pollard's activities. Pollard, the sources told NPR, was part of a "deliberate and well-thought-through" effort to get agents inside American intelligence agencies.

Pollard, 31, of Washington, admitted his guilt under a plea bargaining agreement with the U.S. attorney's office in which the federal government agreed to seek a term of imprisonment less than a life sentence. However, diGenova said he would seek a "substantial term" of imprisonment for Pollard.

Pollard pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with conspiring to deliver information related to the national defense to a foreign government. He faces a maximum $250,000 fine, in addition to imprisonment.

Pollard's wife, Anne Henderson Pollard, pleaded guilty to conspiring to receive embezzled government property and to being an accessory to possession of national defense documents. Mrs. Pollard, 26, faces up to 10 years in prison and a $500,000 fine.

The Pollards agreed to cooperate with the U.S. attorney's office in Washington in its investigation of the former members of the spy network.

Sella, according to diGenova, was the initial contact and the spy "handler" for Pollard.

During the appearance by Pollard and his wife in U.S. District Court, federal prosecutors filed documents alleging that Pollard passed to his co-conspirators dozens of classified documents that described military information about several countries hostile to Israel. The countries were not identified.

Pollard took the documents out of the Navy facility in Maryland where he worked over a period of 18 months ending with his arrest last Nov. 21 in front of the Israeli embassy in Washington, prosecutors said.

U.S. officials, speaking on condition that they not be identified, have said that Pollard had provided classified documents dealing with the military capabilities of Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Jordan and other Arab countries. Pollard was asked to get for Israel information on electronic countermeasure equipment designed to jam enemy radar, disrupt communications and confuse enemy defenders, the officials have said.

Reagan meets with Senate on tax overhaul plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan called the entire Senate to the White House today to declare his commitment to a radical tax overhaul plan and join sponsors of the legislation in trying to head off amendments aimed at preserving selected tax breaks.

The private breakfast meeting followed initial Senate debate Wednesday on the proposal that would sweep away an array of tax breaks — such as the deductibility of contributions to individual retirement accounts — to make way for cutting the 50 percent top individual tax rate to 27 percent and the 46 percent maximum corporate rate to 33 percent.

The Senate, moving on to other matters, has interrupted action on the tax bill until next week.

White House aides said more than 70 of the Senate's 100 members accepted Reagan's invitation to the lobbying session that was to include a pitch on the president's "sweater strategy" — the need to pass the bill without amendments.

The sweater strategy is that if the Senate pulls a single thread out of the tax bill, the entire measure may unravel.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Wednesday after the Senate spent about seven hours discussing the bill, "There's a lot of momentum out there for this bill."

Dole and other backers of the bill believe the adoption of any major amendment could upset the delicate political balance that is holding the complicated measure together.

During the meandering Senate discussion Wednesday there were repeated expressions of praise and support for the plan produced by the Senate Finance Committee.

But legislators seeking to retain the deduction for IRA contributions and make other changes in the bill served notice that they planned to fight for their positions.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the Finance Committee chairman, said he still has no idea how many amendments will be offered.

"It will depend what happens to the first two or three major amendments that are offered," Packwood said. "If they get defeated I think you'll see a lot of amendments disappear."

Any amendments which are adopted might require raising the rates to pay for the change.

Dole said it was critical to preserve the rate cuts. "That's the glue that holds this together," he said.

"Once we start adopting amendments that cost $25 billion — the IRA amendment — how are we going to pay for it?" Dole said.

Paraplegic crawls to pool to revive baby

WEST CHICAGO, Ill. (AP) — A man who lost both legs in Vietnam crawled across a yard and up a pool deck to revive a near-drowned baby.

"He did an amazing job," said Captain William Enders of Winfield Fire Department, who arrived as James Patridge was reviving the child.

Patridge refused to take the credit.

"It was God's hand that saved the baby," Patridge said. "God saved that child, not me."

The year-old child, Jennifer Kroll, was listed in critical condition early today at Loyola Medical Center in Maywood, said spokeswoman Carol Prevatt.

Police said the baby fell into the family's swimming pool Wednesday and was pulled from the water moments later by her mother, Tammy.

Mrs. Kroll put the baby on the pool deck and ran to the house to dial a telephone operator to summon authorities. But she got a recording, telling her that assistance was not available because of a strike against American Telephone & Telegraph Co., said Du Page County sheriff's deputy John Pillabaum.

Frustrated, the mother began screaming. Patridge said he and his wife, Sue, heard the screams. He headed for the Kroll's house as his wife called for help.

Patridge, who lost his legs to a land mine in 1968, said he rolled his wheelchair for 80 yards before thick brush forced him to abandoned his chair. He crawled 60 feet into the Krolls' backyard and up the five steps of the pool deck.

"The baby wasn't breathing, and her face was blue," he said "I started the CPR.

"All I was thinking, really, was: 'Come on, little baby — you can live, you can make it,'" he said.

The child soon regained consciousness and started crying.

Nine-pound boy nation's first frozen embryo birth

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A "long nine months" that began with the implantation of a frozen embryo in a woman's womb has ended with the nation's first birth using the procedure — a robust 9-pound, 10-ounce boy, doctors say.

The boy was born Wednesday to a couple identified only as Monique and Gary, who spent 15 years fruitlessly trying to have children.

"It's been a long nine months," said Dr. Richard Marrs, head of the in-vitro fertilization and embryo replacement program at Good Samaritan Hospital. The hospital where the baby was born was not disclosed.

Monique, 36, and her husband, Gary, said they really didn't expect Marrs' procedure to work.

"We just actually were humoring him by having this done," Monique said.

The frozen embryo implant procedure involves freezing a fertilized egg that has developed only eight to 16 cells in liquid nitrogen at 384 degrees below zero. The embryo, fertilized in a laboratory outside the womb, is thawed for implantation in the womb three to four days after the mother ovulates and the uterus is most receptive.

Nine-year-old boy admits he pushed friend in pool

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — A 9-year-old boy who confessed to pushing his 3-year-old playmate into a motel swimming pool and leaving when the child failed to surface was arrested in the toddler's death, police said Wednesday.

The boy was taken to the Juvenile Detention Center in Orlando after an emergency hearing late Tuesday. His name was not released.

He was arrested on an open charge of murder in connection with the drowning death of Ricardo Brown, whose body was found Saturday in a motel pool two miles from his mother's apartment.

Osceola Assistant State Attorney Jeff Miller said he wanted to see the final police report before deciding whether to officially file the charge and whether the boy should be tried as an adult.

Police questioned the victim's 9-year-old neighbor because he was the last one seen with Ricardo. He confessed to pushing the child into the pool, watching as he sank to the bottom and then going home, police said.

Refugee wins essay contest

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A 15-year-old Cambodian refugee says it's hard to explain what freedom means, but he's done it well enough to win a nationwide essay contest.

"I think the reason I won is it is from my heart," said Rath Chum, a seventh-grader at a Memphis public school.

He won first prize in the contest on freedom sponsored by Junior Scholastic magazine. The prize was a trip to New York for the Statue of Liberty's 100th anniversary celebration for Rath and his parents.

"I feel a lot of things about this freedom," he wrote. "I cannot explain them all because I do not know how to put them in words. Someday I hope to know enough English to say the whole meaning of freedom."

The teen-ager escaped from communist controlled Cambodia in 1981 with his parents and two sisters.

Stamps to honor statue

WASHINGTON (AP) — French and U.S. stamps honoring the centennial of the Statue of Liberty will be sold in New York City post offices, the U.S. Postal Service said today.

The French stamp will carry the same drawing of the left profile of the head of the Statue of Liberty as its companion 22-cent U.S. stamp.

Both stamps will go on sale July 4, during the Liberty Weekend program of special events honoring the statue's 100th anniversary.

The U.S. stamp, printed in red and blue on a white background, will be available at post offices nationwide on the next business day after the Independence Day holiday.

Graduation prayer banned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Van Nuys High School seniors will be allowed an invocation or statement of thanksgiving at graduation, but cannot refer to God under terms of an agreement between school officials and an atheist who sued the district.

James Brodhead, who filed the suit on behalf of his son Dan, expressed pleasure at the decision Tuesday by Los Angeles Unified School District directors, and said he would drop the lawsuit.

Commencement invocations will not be allowed to refer to God, according to Bill Rivera, assistant to the superintendent. Officials initially believed that guidelines banning references to religion at holiday events should not apply to graduations, because they are planned by the students, Rivera said.

"I think the district has been fairly reasonable," said American Civil Liberties Union attorney Carol Sobel, who represented Brodhead.

Nineteenth victim dies

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The death toll in the nation's worst bus accident in nearly six years has climbed to 19 with the death of a woman who had appeared to be recovering from her injuries.

Grace Thrasher, 74, of Santa Monica, Calif., died late Tuesday in Carson Tahoe Hospital in Carson City just hours after telling a reporter she was looking forward to returning home and seeing her family again. An autopsy was ordered to determine the cause of her death.

Meanwhile, another of the 21 survivors was released from a hospital in Santa Monica on Wednesday, leaving 14 hospitalized, one in critical condition and five listed as serious.

They were injured when the bus, carrying at least 40 passengers back to a Santa Monica retirement home from a gambling trip to Reno, flipped off the road and landed upright in the swollen Walker River on Friday.

Illinois lawmaker sued

CHICAGO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, who faces a drunken-driving charge in Wisconsin, is being sued for $250,000 by a woman who claims his breath reeked of alcohol after their cars collided in 1984.

Helen Wing, 66, of Chicago, who said she has spent $80,000 on treatment for her legs, filed the lawsuit in Cook County Circuit Court.

Rostenkowski, 58, chairman of the powerful tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, was arrested Sunday on drunken-driving charges in Racine County, Wis. The Chicago Democrat on Monday announced he plans to plead guilty at his June 16 court appearance saying his arrest had taught him "a painful lesson." He denied he had a drinking problem.

On July 23, 1984, Rostenkowski suffered a broken nose when his rental car turned in front of Mrs. Wing's automobile and the two vehicles collided at an intersection, police reported at the time. Police said neither driver appeared to be under the influence of alcohol, and no charges were filed.

Town's without postmaster

PLEASANTVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When postmaster Marvin Parker retired last week to make mandolins and fiddles, he left this tiny central Tennessee town without a post office.

Residents now have to buy stamps and money orders from the rural route letter carrier because the U.S. Postal Service shut down the post office that according to Parker served about 10 families, down from 45 at one time.

"When I retired, the business was not here to replace the postmaster," said Parker, who had been postmaster since 1974 and used his own building as the post office.

Debtors may not get tax refunds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long arm of the federal government finally caught up with 248,000 people who had defaulted on government debts, when the Internal Revenue Service swiped their tax refund checks this year.

The first year of a pilot program to crack down on defaulters netted $135 million toward delinquent government debts, mostly student loans.

The debtors were predictably angry about losing their refunds. More than 50,000 people wrote or telephoned about the so-called offsets.

"Some people called in and said, 'How dare you do this. This is un-American, unconstitutional,' " White House Budget Director James C. Miller said Wednesday. But overall, he said, "There has been general acquiescence...that they owed it and it was time to pay."

The average offset was $544, but some of the 248,000 paid dearly:

• The largest offset was $9,600 from a Washington, D.C., doctor. He made one $150 payment on his student loan and never made another. His loan balance was $9,800; his tax refund was to be $9,600. "We took his entire refund," said Richard Hastings, the Education Department's director of debt collections.

• One outraged defaulter was expecting a tax refund of $2,613. He got $406; the government took the rest to settle an unpaid student loan. He called the Department of Education in Atlanta and snarled, "This is the only way you're going to get it back!" and hung up.

• Another 50,000 people decided it was better to pay than tangle with the IRS. They coughed up $30 million after getting an initial notice that the IRS was preparing to offset their tax refunds.

One of those was a Pennsylvania man who opened a letter addressed to his wife. He claimed she didn't have a student loan and furthermore the government had her name wrong. He later found out that indeed his wife had a delinquent loan worth several thousand dollars and she had an earlier marriage as well, accounting for the different name.

"He didn't know about the loan or about the husband," said Bob Jamroz of the Education Department.

By far the biggest chunk of the offsets — $116 million — went to the Education Department, which has a high rate of default on student loans.

"This collection is something of a vindication for those nine out of 10 student loan recipients who do repay their loans on time, in full," Education Secretary William J. Bennett said.

The Veterans Administration collected nearly $8 million for education benefit overpayments; Small Business Administration got almost $6 million to satisfy delinquent disaster home loans; Housing and Urban Development got $5 million for mobile home improvement loans; and the Department of Agriculture $1 million for non-farm rural housing loans.

The five agencies had referred 605,000 delinquent accounts to the IRS involving $1.3 billion in debts.

"The problem has not disappeared this year. We will chip away at it," Miller said, by going after the delinquents again next year if they file for a tax refund. "This program shows we're deadly serious about collecting debts owed to Uncle Sam."

Next year, Miller said, the program will be expanded to 2 million accounts totaling $8.1 billion owed to nine government agencies.

"With $24 billion in non-tax debts currently delinquent and deficits of over $200 billion, the federal government can no longer afford to be taken for a ride," he said.

Meeting a need

Coping with the trauma and uncertainty the loss of a job can generate is no easy task for anyone. Yet that's the reality now in Midland for many people who for one reason or another are facing the necessity of reassessing their careers and their futures. It can be a seemingly insurmountable obstacle — starting over.

It's for that reason that a timely, informative and helpful community effort called Career Reassessment is being presented by Midland College under the cosponsorship of Midland Chamber of Commerce, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, Inc. Further information on this important subject will be provided in the Friday and Sunday editions of the Reporter-Telegram.

The program will be particularly helpful in light of Midland's current employee layoffs and transfers due to the oil price drop. Those paying the $12 fee to attend will be given vitally needed instruction on writing effective job resumes, coping with the rejection shock of job loss and keeping one's self-esteem, learning how personnel agencies work, how to tighten the family budget to cope with lowered income, dealing with the family stress of job hunting, starting one's own business, interviewing techniques, how to get a job other than through the want ads and temporary job opportunities.

Those aren't commonplace subjects, but neither is the situation now being experienced by many Midlanders. The subjects are timely and will be crucial in helping any number of those who have lost their jobs deal with the influences now being experienced in their lives.

The three co-sponsoring agencies and Midland College are to be commended for their responsiveness in offering this much-needed program on career reassessment. As the ancient proverb attests: "Give me a fish, and I will eat for today; teach me to fish, and I will eat for the rest of my life."

LETTERS

Capable of serving

The purpose of my letter is to tell the voters of Midland County why I believe Guy McCrary is capable of serving as an outstanding county commissioner. I have known Guy since 1979 and I have observed the following strengths:

1. Energy level and drive. During my lifetime I have known fewer than a half dozen individuals with an energy level which is so great that it clearly separates them from the multitude. Guy McCrary is one of these individuals;

2. Initiative and courage. In 1983, Guy gave up a rather comfortable position to start his own business (on the proverbial shoestring). Moreover, this venture has proven successful despite hard times in the economy;

3. Creativity and analytical skills. First of all, as the proprietor of a marketing and advertising agency, creativity is Guy's stock and trade. And as for his analytical skills, I have had the privilege of working both with and for Guy, and quickly came to respect his ability to get to the bottom of issues. Furthermore, Guy holds a Master of Science degree in Management; and

4. As one might expect given his academic training, Guy is uncommonly adept at dealing with people. I have had numerous opportunities to observe him in committee meetings, small group settings and one-on-one situations, and I have been particularly impressed by the fact that Guy is alert to the contributions of others and never seems to lose sight of the goal at hand.

When selecting an individual to serve as a member of the county commissioners' court, it is important to realize that his duties have little or nothing to do with court and everything to do with managing a multi-million dollar business. Voters need to consider carefully the management credentials of each candidate.

Guy McCrary has the management skills and personal strengths to serve Midland County with distinction.

McCrary 'impressive'

During 1980 through 1982 while serving on the Midland Crime Commission, I had the privilege to work under the leadership of a young man named Guy McCrary. I was impressed with the maturity he displayed while serving as president of the commission. He eagerly investigated issues brought before the board and sought new ways to work with the community to help prevent crime.

Guy indicated his sincere interest in this community at that time and hoped to one day serve in a public office. Now Midlanders can afford him that opportunity and benefit from his new leadership by voting for Guy McCrary for county commissioner of Precinct 2 on Saturday, June 7th.

Clearing misconceptions

I would like to clear up some misconceptions about Van Archer, the conservative candidate for the 21st Congressional District. Although Lamar Smith claims to be a "family and church man," he has begun a smear campaign of Archer. He would like the people of Midland to believe that Archer has a callous attitude towards the economic problems of the oil industry while he, Smith, has all the answers.

In actuality, Van Archer is a strong supporter of the oil industry and has proposed that the Natural Gas Policy Act and the Windfall Profits Tax be repealed, and the depletion allowance restored.

Secondly, Smith would like the people of Midland to believe Van Archer is for gun control, which is a total lie. Archer is the only one being endorsed by the Gun Owners of America and The Right to Bear Arms Political Victory Fund.

Thirdly, Smith would like us to believe he is a conservative. In actuality, Van Archer is the conservative and Smith is a moderate-to-liberal Republican.

I do find it surprising that while Smith touts himself to be man of strong family values and convictions, and to be a leader in the Christian Science Church, he is busily trying to deceive the voters of Midland.

I do hope that the voters in the 21st Congressional District will realize just what sort of man Lamar Smith really is and vote for Van Archer on June 7.

Foggy Bottom boss's temper criticized

WASHINGTON — If you think the government's super-secret intelligence analysis is conducted in an atmosphere of cool, calm efficiency, let us take you behind the scenes at the State Department during one recent international crisis. Eyewitness accounts make the hush-hush Intelligence and Research Office sound like the officers' mess on the good ship Caine at strawberry time.

Jack Anderson

On the bridge was Gerald Sutton, chief of State's terrorist intelligence branch. At the helm, so to speak, was intelligence analyst Julia Rottier. Here's how she began her subsequent report on the situation:

"On Feb. 4, 1986, at approximately 10 a.m., the current intelligence watch was handling the Israeli interception of a Libyan plane. Mr. Sutton's analysts were apprised of the incoming traffic, which was mainly press items." (There's a jolt: State Department spooks, with all their resources, knew only what they got from the press.)

The Israelis had forced down the Libyan jet expecting to find terrorists aboard. But they found only indignant Arab diplomats.

Twenty minutes after the first incoming "traffic," Rottier reported, the first intelligence cable arrived — with bad information. "The information really did not add anything new to the press reports except for the erroneous note that the aircraft was a 727," she reported.

In the midst of this fairly tense situation, Rottier wrote, Sutton "stormed into the watch area" and demanded "vociferously" to know why he had not been informed of recent developments.

The reason was that there had been none, but when Rottier tried to explain this to Sutton, he shouted at her, "Shut, up, damn it!" according to her report. A few moments later he yelled at her: "Sit down!"

Half a dozen intelligence analysts sat bewildered by the boss's outburst. Analyst James Maxstadt wrote in a memo that while he and Rottier were working on "flashboard" (computer) messages, Sutton stood "berating (Rottier) for not calling as many people as he would have wished."

Rottier's report to her boss, Paul Molineaux, chief of current intelligence, said that Sutton's verbal flogging had her "almost in tears. ... I was publicly and severely abused and humiliated. My colleagues and I find Mr. Sutton's behavior appalling, unacceptable, abnormal, abrasive, abusive and, most of all, unprofessional."

In his own report on the incident, Molineaux noted that Rottier "is a competent, hardworking employee," and added: "(Her) description of Mr. Sutton's language and demeanor is consistent with my own observations of his approach to problems and interpersonal relationships."

Molineaux reported that Sutton subsequently admitted that the information he had accused the analysts of hiding from him did not in fact exist. Molineaux said he had "kept some records" on Sutton, and stated: "Mr. Sutton sometimes takes a denigrating approach toward subordinates, ranging from nit-picking to mocking their abilities. ..."

Molineaux concluded: "Thus, the episode of which Ms. Rottier writes is not merely an abberation. Rather, it is a more bald manifestation of a general pattern of behavior."

Sutton declined to discuss the Feb. 4 incident. As for Molineaux's report, Sutton told our associate Corky Johnson: "Mr. Molineaux apparently has certain problems with me, but (he) has his own ... problems." He added: "I have been around in the Foreign Service for 30 years and found some people have liked me very much, others have liked me less and these are the things you have to deal with."

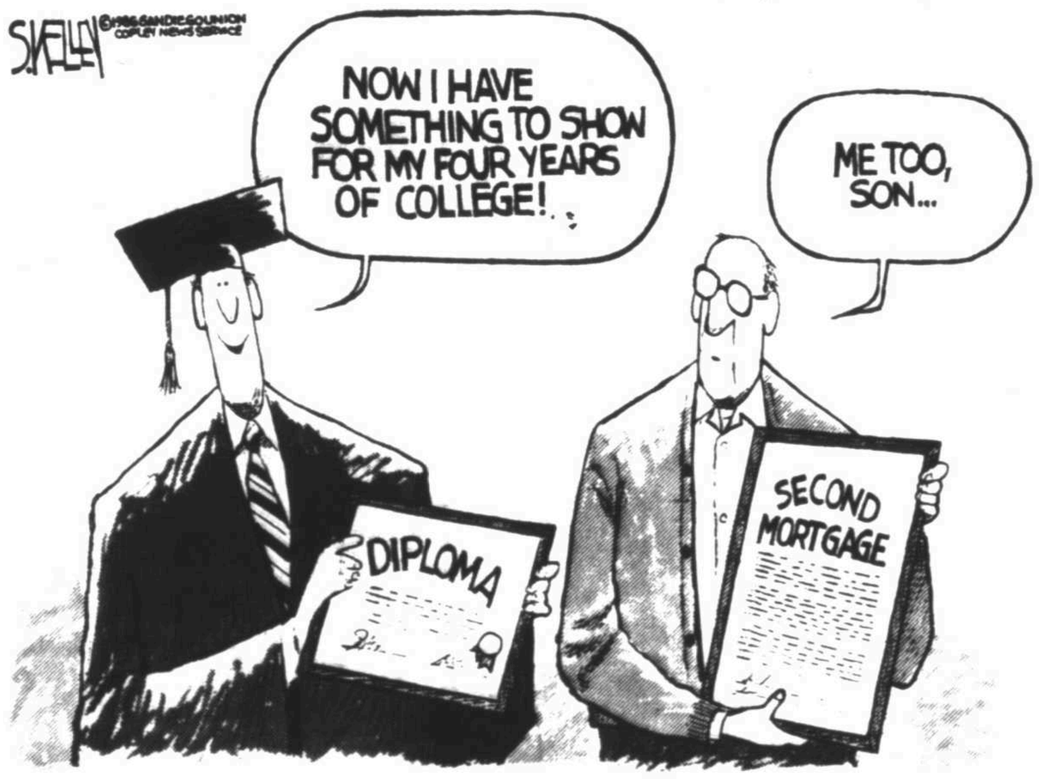

Footnote: Sutton does appear to have friends as well as critics in Foggy Bottom. He was not selected for promotion to the senior executive service and will be leaving the Foreign Service. But sources told us that plans are afoot to rehire him as a civil service employee. One source familiar with the situation said this is legal, but is "a travesty of the whole system."

An internal cable discloses that Sutton will be leaving for Europe soon to do consulting work for the State Department under the ambassador-at-large for counterterrorism. Funded by the "intelligence community," the trip will last three weeks. Sutton said he had no plans beyond that.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Two observations about the Reagan administration's purported crackdown on leaks of state secrets: First, President Reagan himself broke the law that CIA director William Casey wants to use on the press, when he revealed the evidence of Libyan complicity in the West Berlin discotheque bombing. Second, the White House memo on the crackdown against leakers was promptly leaked to selected reporters. Bottom line: Plugging leaks is an inside job, and should start at the top.

GEORGE F. WILL

Sen. Bradley offering interesting thoughts

WASHINGTON — The cloister-like stillness of American life will soon be shattered by a presidential election campaign and, as usual, the list of those who are running, but should not be, is longer than the list of those who are not running but should be. The latter includes Republican Rep. Richard Cheney of Wyoming.

George F. Will

It includes Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, whose star, already well-risen, rose farther in the firmament when the Finance Committee, of which he is a member, threw up its hands, threw in the towel and did tax reform his way.

The committee abandoned the traditional use of the tax code as an instrument for micro-managing distributive justice. It decided to simplify the code, killing many benefits to pay for lower rates for individuals. The hope is this will mean more economic decisions made for reasons other than tax advantage, and that that will enhance economic growth. Improved growth presumably will mean not perfect justice but more justice than is produced by a political auction in which society's big battalions bid for advantages from tax-code nuances written for them.

A paradox of post-New Deal politics is that "big government," meaning government regulating economic activity in order to promote equity and efficiency, has been defended by liberals as a protector of the weak, but has been used by the strong. The well-heeled (which means big labor as well as big business, and big business includes agribusiness) are well represented in Washington by people skilled at bending public power to private advantage.

Because statism in the nation's economic life has been rationalized by liberals and exploited by non-liberal interests, it is fascinating that Bradley, a Democrat from a Northeastern industrial state, has shaped a tax bill that is a large step back from statism.

In a symposium, "Left, Right and Baby Boom" published by the Cato Institute, William Schneider says one Democratic problem is "the identification of the Democrats with the government and the identification of government with the establishment and the status quo." Another participant in the symposium, Michael Barone, notes that, "Liberals have a fairly basic problem right now: No substantial bloc of voters wants a substantially larger role for government in the economy."

Terry Nichols Clark notes that this trend began locally in 1974, when half of America's cities reversed or slowed the growth of expenditures. To an increasing number of Americans, fiscal issues are more important than government-services issues. Paul Weaver says this trend amounts to (he will suffer for this in the next life) "proto-neoliberalism." That means decreasing belief in paternalism, increasing belief in individual discretion.

The Bradleyesque tax bill, which decreases government supervision of economic choices and increases individuals' discretionary income, fits the political analysis above.

Bradley's success suggests that the Democratic Party is regaining its intellectual equilibrium. Ten years ago, important Democratic circles gave respectful hearing to nonsense like the Club of Rome report, with its suggestion that "zero growth" would be beneficial. Ten years ago, the Democratic presidential nominee promised to slash U.S. defenses.

Bradley says there is "a group of Democrats who are waiting for the next recession. If it comes, they've got the answer." The answer would be the usual pump-priming spending, jobs programs, etc. What Democrats must think about, Bradley says, is "governance of a prosperous society with problems." Democrats must learn to "credibly talk about growth to people making investments."

Bradley is not a one-note siren, calling out to entrepreneurs. Sitting in the sumptuous squalor (the description fits) of the new Hart Senate Office Building, on a hard wooden chair that creaks ominously beneath the weight of his substantial frame, Bradley speaks with passion about "the land." He says our "relationship to the land is linked to our self-conception as a nation as well as our prosperity."

RUSSELL BAKER

Americans do love their 'clearance sales'

NEW YORK — It is an immense clearance sale. Everything must go. Newspapers, television networks, magazines. All for sale, and money the sole object.

Russell Baker

Do I hear an old lady from Dubuque sighing, "Oh my, I'm afraid The New Yorker is not for me"? Well sigh no more, madame. If that lovely little petit point change purse contains money in nine-figure quantities, you can take The New Yorker back to Dubuque with you.

A Chicago Sun-Times, you say, Mr. Murdoch? Just one? Why not buy the entire company?

There go the fine old Louisville papers, knocked down for $310 million and, yes, you can tell it's getting late in history, ladies and gentlemen, because there go the venerable Baltimore Sunpapers, off to L.A. from the Chesapeake Bay for a charming $600 million.

A network? ABC and NBC are already sold. True, NBC went to General Electric, which is a gigantic Pentagon contractor, and whether Pentagon contractors should be controlling the news is a nice question, but not one anybody in the Reagan administration is likely to ask since the Reagan administration's heart and soul are totally devoted to the big clearance sale. Who do you think invented the word "privatize"?

How about a major-league sports team? Tired of hearing your hometown called "bush league" while towns that aren't half as much fun have teams like the Nuggets, Flames, Blast, Mariners and Oilers?

Just hijack your local city hall or state legislature for the multimillion in bucks, buck, bucks necessary to amuse a sports industrialist, and big-league athletic industry can at last afflict your hometown, too.

I am speaking here of the new age which as yet has no name. The old age, which was called the modern age, is gone, and this new age is upon us, and though nobody knows yet what to call it, there is an instinctive sense in the country that we ought to clean house.

So we are selling off the furniture that saw us through the modern age. Now is the time to unload at a good price, or any price we can get before the stuff all goes out of style and becomes worthless.

The modern age was characterized by a communal assumption that there were high purposes guiding human activity, that while these purposes might not always be fathomable they were, nevertheless, good or positive purposes that gave point to human existence. Pursuing them was thought to create worthy social progress and as much happiness as humanity was entitled to, which was not much.

In short, people of the modern age tended to believe in something, even if only that the modern age was entirely unsatisfactory. In the new, or postmodern age the old sense of purpose is replaced by a sense of pointlessness, which we see expressed in the bleakness of postmodern art, popular amusements like movies and television, literature, ethics and politics. ("What's the use?" ask the increasing millions who don't bother to vote.)

In the closing days of the modern age, people clung desperately to principles that were becoming archaic because to abandon those principles, to concede that principles were historically passe would have taken an unbearable toll of the spirit.

One such principle held that there were some things that simply were not for sale; or, put another way, some things more important than money. An article by Ken Kesey and Robert Stone in the current Esquire suggests that the death of this belief began in 1958 with Walter O'Malley's moving the Brooklyn Dodgers to Los Angeles:

"It was saying to American men, 'There is nothing you do that is more important than money.' "

In the great clearance sale now in progress Americans are getting rid of antiquated modern principles which conflict with the sense that the pointlessness of the new age offers people nothing more vital to do than sell and buy and sell and buy and sell and...

Only making money remains to distract attention from the spreading pointlessness. Money, in William Hamilton's phrase, becomes "life's report card."

Some things that are simply not for sale? The suggestion nowadays is not just absurd; it could land you in court. One of The Baltimore Sun's officers explained after his paper's $600 million sale that rejecting such a big payday might have justified stockholders' suits charging betrayal of fiduciary trust.

Finally, spies: the old modern spy betrayed his country because he believed in its enemies. The postmodern spy does it because he believes in nothing but the importance of money.

Mario Cantu's Tex-Mex style takes Paris diners by storm

By SUZY PATTERSON

PARIS (AP) — Mario Cantu's Tex-Mex restaurant Papa Maya on the rue Rambuteau has been so successful that he opened up a new one on a nearby street last month.

The fearless San Antonio restaurateur anticipated converting even more French people to the spicy delights of guacamole and enchiladas at the new branch, Mario's Casa Mexico.

If Texas gourmets have long known about Burgundy and coq au vin, now the French are discovering margueritas and tortillas, thanks in large part to Cantu, known in San Antonio as owner of Mario's on South Pecos Street..

Among a proliferation of Tex-Mex restaurants here, Cantu's Papa Maya in the old Halles area near the Pompidou Center is considered outstanding. Since its opening in April 1985, it has attracted crowds of enthusiastic diners, even though fiery food still seems exotic, even outlandish, to many French palates.

Papa Maya also won a prestigious award in December, 1985, the Prix Vermeil, or golden prize, for the best foreign restaurant in Paris. Dubbed "golden tortilla" for this occasion, the prize was awarded by the International Committee for Gastronomy and Tourism, which usually gives the foreign-division prize to an oriental restaurant.

"Our opening date for the new restaurant on Monday, May 5, is the Mexican Independence day," said Cantu before the opening. He was jubilant about his plan to spread his version of Tex-Mex cooking to several cities — including Brussels and London — following his initial Paris success.

"The new restaurant will be more modern, but with Mexican touches," said the 49-year-old curly-haired restaurateur, who is an American citizen. He was sipping Mexican Pedro Domecq red wine and relaxing briefly in the Papa Maya to soft south-of-the-border music played by a costumed trio.

Restaurateur Mario Cantu, of San Antonio, poses outside one of his Tex-Mex restaurants in Paris, France recently. Cantu says about 40 percent of his customres are French and another 40 percent are Americans.

AP Laserphoto

He pointed out that the antique-beamed upper dining room and barrel-vaulted cellar with bright Mexican tapestries and glazed pottery have helped make the small restaurant a success. "The elderly French couple who used to own this building came in somewhat timidly the other day," he said. "They said they grew mushrooms in the cellar, but they bowed out before I could even offer them dinner."

Transforming the ancient building into a cheery restaurant seating about 60 per meal cost Cantu and his San Antonio partners an estimated $300,000.

Besides quaint decor, food is naturally a big drawing card, although Cantu aims higher than dispensing fast food-style tacos. "There are only three major cuisines," he contends. "These are Mexican, Chinese and Italian, based on beans, corn and rice.

"After all, even French cuisine didn't really flourish until the Italians and Marie de Medicis brought in new ideas." He conveniently seems to forget that Mexican cooking, although basically Aztec, was also influenced by the Spanish.

He concedes that today's French eating styles influence everybody, including himself. "Our presentation is quite French," he said, waving a hand at a guacamole salad, artfully arranged in a bowl with sprays of fresh cilantro or coriander, bits of juicy tomato and hot salsa sauce.

Sunny skies in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Sunny skies and a high in the low 90s are in the weather picture for Friday, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Winds will be out of the south at 10-20 mph.

The NWS is calling for fair skies and a low in the middle 60s for tonight. Winds will be southerly at five to 10 mph.

Wednesday's high of 87 was 16 degrees below the record high set in 1933. This morning's low was 10 degrees above the record low of 54 set for this date in 1970.

STATE

Heavy thunderstorms early today forced evacuations of campers and some residents in low-lying areas of North Central and West Texas as the rain-drenched Hill Country braced for more showers.

Flash flood warnings were posted today by the National Weather Service for portions of North Central Texas and the Hill Country. Flood watches were in effect for all of North Texas except extreme southeast portions.

An Erath County sheriff's deputy said campers at a city park in Stephenville were evacuated at 1 a.m. today and a couple living near a creek were told to leave their home.

A highly volatile atmosphere coupled with warm moist gulf air over texas combined to produce scattered thunderstorms over many sections of the state. Strongest storms were detected over North Central Texas and the middle Gulf coast.

NATION

Flood-plagued Texas received still more rain today as flooding closed roads in that state and Ohio, while showers and thunderstorms dampened much of the nation.

Flash flood watches were in effect in sections of Texas and Ohio, as well as Oklahoma, Iowa and Pennsylvania.

Rain also fell in New York, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Arkansas, Nebraska, Colorado and the northern Rockies.

Many streets in Howland, Ohio, were flooded. Along state Route 46, there was up to 6 inches of mud and rocks, along with 12 inches of floodwater.

Today's forecast held more rain for Texas and much of the rest of the nation. The prediction called for showers and thundershowers from Florida to South Carolina, from Virginia to southern New England and in New York, lower Michigan, the Ohio Valley, the Tennessee Valley, Mississippi, most of the Mississippi Valley, Oklahoma and the northern two-thirds of the Rockies.

Rockets call on Yogi-ism for inspiration

By CHRIS JENKINS
Copley News Service

HOUSTON — The words were English, the accent Nigerian, the expression profoundly American.

"It is not over," said Akeem Olajuwon Wednesday, "until it is over."

Tongue in cheek, it was pointed out to the Houston Rockets forward that for someone who's only been in this country five years, he has a fairly strong grasp of the star-spangled cliche. Olajuwon looked puzzled.

"Who said this before?" he asked.

"Yogi," he was told. "Yogi Berra's the one who said 'It ain't over 'til it's over.' "

"Who?"

Smiles all around.

"But it's true," Olajuwon said with mild protest in his soft voice. "That (saying) is the truth."

The young man grew self-conscious, uncertain why everybody around him was getting such a kick out of what he'd said. He needn't have.

TO THE contrary, Olajuwon is a 23-year-old marvel of assimilation. Raised in Lagos, Nigeria, he plays a game as American as the peach basket like something he's done all his life; in fact, he was 16 years when he first saw a basketball. Likewise, he's shown a tremendous adaptability to other things American, although the suits and shoes are from Italy.

And he was right, you know. The NBA Finals aren't over until they're over.

But almost.

The end to Akeem's own Dream could come as soon as tonight when the Rockets host Game 5 at the Summit (8 p.m., CDT, CBS), the Boston Celtics holding the virtually insurmountable advantage, three games to one. The last two games, if necessary, would be in Boston Garden.

"It is not just for now that we want to win," he said. "If we lose this, losing the championship will be on our minds the whole summer."

These things, Olajuwon understands all too well. Remember the airball that Lorenzo Charles of North Carolina State put back up at the buzzer for the NCAA championship in 1983? That was Olajuwon, then with the University of Houston, standing right by Charles. The following year, Olajuwon and the Cougars again finished second in the NCAAs.

IF ANYTHING, though, thoughts back to Charles' basket reinforced Olajuwon's belief in another Yankee saying: anything can happen.

"I know this," he said with conviction. "We will take it back to Boston."

If so, it's probably up to Olajuwon to get them there. Ralph Sampson has done almost everything a man, even one 7-foot-4, can do. Except for one memorable evening at Boston Garden, the Rockets have at least kept Bird's game within the same solar system. They've even managed to make the ultra-efficient Celtics look bumblesome.

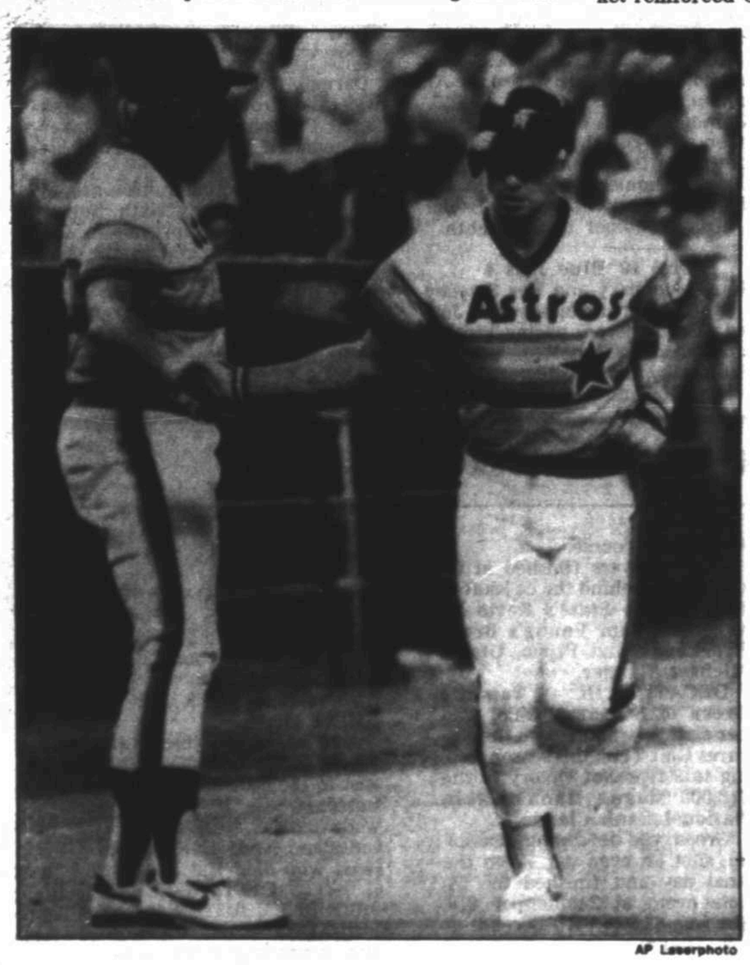

None of it has been enough.

The Rockets need from Olajuwon, then, what he provided in their startling upset of the Los Angeles Lakers. More than anyone or anything, except perhaps the L.A. malaise, Olajuwon eliminated the defending NBA champions in five games of their Western Conference title series.

But those were the Lakers, said Olajuwon, and these are the Celtics. Different teams. Different personnel. If anybody expected Olajuwon to be as overpowering against the Celtics as he was against L.A. — Akeem averaged 31 points in five games, including a 40-point night, and pulverized the Lakers on the boards — they weren't taking everything into consideration.

Violence erupts at World Cup as Mexico beats Belgium, 2-1

By DANA FIELDS

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Teams from all over the globe had been playing their hearts out for days in the world's premier sporting event but normally raging soccer passions here were subdued until Mexico met Belgium.

Then, after the national team's 2-1 World Cup victory, fans unleashed the wave of mixed rejoicing and hysteria known here as the "locura," which sent more than 100,000 boisterous people cascading through the streets in joy.

It was the first celebration in Mexico City since Sept. 19, when the Cocos plate cracked and shifted underground, setting off an earthquake that wrecked buildings across the city and killed at least 7,000 people.

From the opening kickoff at Aztec Stadium until police violently ended the celebration early Wednesday, 14 hours later, the locura reigned in the Zona Rosa tourist district, near an independence memorial known as the Angel.

At least 200 people were injured and 81 arrested for offenses including fighting, public nudity and drunkenness, a police spokesman who asked not to be identified said Wednesday.

BY BRAND new parks where buildings used to stand, by the sad debris of earthquake-wrecked buildings awaiting demolition, the mostly youthful crowd moved toward the heart of the celebration. Chanting "Mexico! Mexico! Mexico!" they jumped from vehicles to dance in exuberant conga lines, pulling passing foreigners into their ranks.

Although there have been a number of smaller parties each night since the 24 World Cup contenders began playing each other here, many Mexicans had believed the earthquake and the country's oppressive economic troubles meant the locura would never erupt.

Official souvenirs, featuring "Pique," mascot of the 1986 World Cup, collected dust on store counters.

ALTHOUGH THOUSANDS of fans are here from all over the world to cheer for their home teams in soccer's quadrennial international championship, the mood is quiet, a far cry from 1970, the last time Mexico was host to the tournament.

"I love soccer, but there's just too much to worry about this year," taxi driver Florencio Mendoza said recently. "I believe in the team but, well, I don't know if Mexico is in a condition to succeed."

For almost four years, Mexicans have faced potential economic disaster.

A long period of steady advance was cut short in 1982 with the onset of the "crisis," the local shorthand for Mexico's inability to pay off a crushing and still growing foreign debt.

Inflation since has been running at about 60 percent a year and above. Two increases in the minimum wage earlier this year were offset by overnight hikes in basic food prices. The peso has slid from 240 to the dollar a year ago to 585 this week.

Foreign visitors here to cheer on their teams were amazed by the locura as it erupted around them Tuesday.

"I DON'T think a northern European country will ever experience this kind of warm-blooded emotional thing," said Morten Faester of Denmark. "It's wonderful."

"It's amazing if you imagine how it will be if they win the final," said Michael Knudsen, another Dane.

Mexico is scheduled to play Paraguay on Saturday, and officials are already gearing for what might happen after that match.

"They are going to reinforce," the police spokesman said. "If Mexico wins on Saturday, the fiesta is going to be bigger and in addition, it's a day off (from work)."

Waiting is OSU's game in Omaha

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Oklahoma State has played only 2½ games in eight days at the College World Series, and Coach Gary Ward doesn't like it.

"I've never been on death row, but I think playing baseball in Omaha may be the closest thing to it," Ward said. "It's painful to sit around and not play."

The Cowboys did more sitting Wednesday night. Their game against Loyola Marymount was halted because of rain with Oklahoma State leading 7-4 in the fourth inning.

The Cowboys had scored seven runs in the fourth and were still batting when the game was suspended until today. The loser will be eliminated from the tournament.

"The waiting is very difficult," Ward said. "The anxiety rises. It's a high-stress situation."

The game will resume at 4:10 p.m. CDT. Wednesday's second game, between Miami and Louisiana State, was postponed until today at 7:10 p.m.

The rest of the College World Series schedule will be pushed back one day, an NCAA official said.

The Cowboys, who had a .337 batting average entering the Series, hit only .234 in their first two tournament games. They managed just two hits in the first three innings against Loyola Marymount ace Tim Layana.

The Cowboys scored their first run on a walk, a double by Jimmy Barragan and a fielder's choice. Bryn Kosco and Anthony Blackmon smacked RBI singles, and Sergio Espinal had a two-run double to give the Cowboys a 5-4 lead.

Espinal scored on a double by Monty Fariss. Eric Reinholtz replaced Layana and gave up an RBI single to Robin Ventura before play was suspended.

"Once you get momentum, it seems like you can handle anything you need to," Ward said.

Grosso ready to defend 'Ironman' crown

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Doug Grosso will climb out of bed early Saturday morning and do what he does every weekend: Leap into the pool for about 15 minutes, jump on to his bicycle for an hour or so, then hit the ground with both feet running.

But this weekend, Grosso will be one of 140 contestants vying for the individual "Iron Man of Midland" title this Saturday in the Annual Tall City Triathlon, a title he earned last year in record time.

Saturday's race, which begins at 7:30 a.m. at the Doug Russell Pool, is being held in memory of George Hoffman who was killed on his bicycle last year while in training for the triathlon.

For the uninitiated, a triathlon is a combination of three events — swimming, bicycling and running — completed back-to-back, mostly by men and women the general public considers "iron men," or women, as the case may be.

The Hoffman Memorial Tall City Triathlon is considered a short course, or sprint event, despite its overall length of more than 25 miles.

KICKING OFF the day is 1,000 meters (0.63 miles) in the water, 10 laps of the 50 meter Doug Russell Pool. As soon as they are out of the water, the athletes will don skintight bicycling shorts for a 30K (18.6 miles) ride out Highway 191 to Mission Country Club. But bone weary and muscle sore, the contestants have yet to complete the 10K (6.2 miles) run around Mission Dorado.

But as always in the TC Triathlon, participants can choose to be a part of a team rather than attempting all three events by themselves. More than 60 teams have entered for Saturday's team competition.

But don't expect defending champion Grosso to be a "team" player, he is one that goes the whole route alone.

The 30-year old from Marquette, Mich., began his triathlon training as an overweight beer drinker at Northern Michigan, but those days are behind him now.

After taking last year's TC event, Grosso competed in the U.S. Triathlon Series championships in Hilton Head, S.C., taking 122nd overall, 17th in his age group.

"I'm 30 now, so I've moved up in age group," Grosso said. "The top professionals are all in the 26-to-early 30s range, so this is it for me. I'm as good as I'm going to get."

LAST SUNDAY, Grosso endured a long-course triathlon in Dallas to finish 28th overall, including professionals, but he is ready to defend his crown this weekend.

"My training this week hasn't been too bad, come Saturday I'll rested and ready to give it my best shot. But there are some ones coming in and there are some good ones from right here in Midland," Grosso warned. "But whatever happens, it is going to be close. I don't think anybody is going to come in here and blow away the people from Midland. But I don't think anyone from Midland is going to run away with it."

"This year, there are no sure fire winners," agreed race director Scott Hammond. "But Doug does have a good chance to repeat. This will also be the first time we've been officially sanctioned by Tri Fed/USA, Inc. So the first 10 overall finishers will qualify for the nationals in South Carolina.

"I'll make one prediction, we'll have more runners go under 1:50 than we've ever had before. And the women's time could come down by 15 or 20 minutes."

Lana Booth is the defending women's champion but she will not compete this year.

UIL to urge sitting rule be dropped

AUSTIN (AP) — The athletics committee of the University Interscholastic League has recommended that high school basketball coaches be allowed to stand in front of their chairs or benches during games to instruct their players on the court.

Under rules in effect last season, coaches could rise from the bench during play only for spontaneous reaction to an outstanding play or to signal for a time out.

UIL Athletic Director Bill Farney said some coaches had expressed dissatisfaction with the rule because officials were inconsistent in enforcing it and because players could not hear seated coaches' instructions.

Farney said the committee recommendation would be presented to the Legislative Council in October.

In other action Tuesday, the athletics committee rejected proposals to drop soccer as a UIL sport and to return to mandatory best-of-three baseball playoffs in Class 4A and 5A. The committee also rejected a proposal to restrict UIL athletic contests to one per week.

It took no action on a proposal to establish an overtime plan to settle high school football ties.

Angels blow lead in 9th, fall 4-3

From Staff and Wire Reports

BEAUMONT — All Midland's Don Timberlake could do was sit in the dugout and watch.

And the Angels' big righthander couldn't have been happy with what he saw as Beaumont's Sandy Alomar coaxed a bases-loaded walk off reliever Vinicio Cedeno in the bottom of the ninth to lead the Golden Gators to a 4-3 win over the Angels in a Texas League game.

The walk was the culmination of a three-run ninth inning and took a sure victory away from the Angels' Timberlake. Beaumont also took a 3-2 edge in the six-game set that concludes tonight.

Gators' reliever Todd Simmons earned the victory with two innings of scoreless relief and is now 7-0 for the year.

Trailing 3-1, Beaumont's Eric Hardgrave opened the ninth with a double off Cedeno. One out later, Tom Brassil singled off the first base bag. And Eric Varoz legged out an infield hit that bounced off the glove of first baseman James Randall.

Terry Clark came on for Cedeno and pinch hitter Steve Lubratich was hit by a Clark pitch. Joey Cora tapped a single to right that tied the score at 3-3.

Alomar then stepped to the plate and drew four straight balls from Clark in forcing in the winning run.

THE ANGELS built a 3-1 lead off righthander Mike McClain through five innings. Midland scored two runs in the third inning on Raul Tovar's RBI single and Bryan Brady's sacrifice fly to left field.

Midland added another run in the fifth as Bill Merrifield led off with a double and, one out later, scored on another Tovar base hit.

In other league play Wednesday, the Tulsa Drillers whipped the Jackson Mets 8-4 and the Arkansas Travelers edged the Shreveport Captains 5-4 in eight innings. El Paso's contest at San Antonio was postponed due to rain, as was Shreveport's second game at Arkansas.

Tulsa jumped to an early lead when first baseman Mike Stanley tripled in the second and scored on a grounder by third baseman Bob Gergen.

The Drillers scored four runs in the bottom of the fifth, including a two-run double by leftfielder Javier Ortiz.

Jackson scored three runs in the top of the sixth, when Tulsa pitcher Steve Wilson walked the first two batters. Left fielder Jason Felice singled in one run and third baseman Rick Lockwood got an RBI double. The third run scored on a wild pitch. Jackson scored a final run in the seventh.

Shreveport scored four runs on three errors in the sixth inning to tie Arkansas but an RBI pinch-hit single by Arkansas' Sal Agostinelli in the first extra inning was the game winner.

The game, the first of a planned doubleheader, went eight innings because of rain.

Rangers stoke the fire, 5-2

Associated Press

AL Roundup

CHICAGO — Texas Manager Bobby Valentine likes to joke that the Rangers are keeping one of their rookie players "hot" by putting logs on the fire.

And Chicago's nearly silent bats could well be substituted for the firewood, according to White Sox Manager Tony LaRussa whose squad lost a 5-2 decision to the Rangers Wednesday night.

Rookies Pete Incaviglia and Ruben Sierra hit home runs while rookie Bobby Witt combined with Mickey Mahler on a five-hitter against the punchless Sox.

"Incaviglia is burning up the league, and we keep putting logs on the fire," said Valentine, whose Rangers led the American League West by one-half game over the California Angels.

"The good thing about our club is that nobody expected us to be in first place which is good, but nobody told our kids that they were bad and they believe in themselves," Valentine said.

In his last 31 games, Incaviglia is batting .339 and has raised his average from .127 to .266.

Incaviglia's two-run homer in the third, his 10th of the season, helped pin the loss on Tom Seaver, who had come off the disabled list earlier in the day. Seaver, 2-3, who had sidelined since May 17 with a stiff right shoulder, gave up three runs on seven hits in 4 1-3 innings.

It was the sixth straight loss to the Rangers in a week for the White Sox, who have won only two of their last 13 games overall. In those 13 outings, they are hitting just .187 and have been outscored, 55-31.

Witt, 3-4, gave up four hits and walked six in five innings. Mahler allowed one hit in earning his third save of the season.

Yankees 11, Angels 0

Joe Niekro made the decision early. If he was going to lose his no-hitter, he would lose it throwing his best pitch.

"We said in the sixth inning if they were going to get a base hit, it was going to be a knuckleball," Niekro said after Gary Pettis doubled with two outs in the eighth inning for California's only hit.

Niekro, at age 41 trying to become the oldest pitcher in major-league history to throw a no-hitter, said Pettis pulled a 2-2 knuckleball into the right-field corner.

Pettis, a switch-hitter, was batting just .202 from the left side when he doubled at Anaheim Stadium.

"It was fun," said Niekro, who pitched a one-hitter in 1970 for Detroit, losing his no-hitter when New York's Horace Clarke singled with one out in the ninth inning.

Dave Winfield hit two homers, sparking an 18-hit attack for the Yankees.

Red Sox 6, Indians 4

Don Baylor, Bill Buckner and rookie Rey Quinones hit home runs and Boston won its fifth straight game by beating visiting Cleveland to complete a three-game sweep.

The Red Sox, in winning for the ninth time in 10 games, raised their record to 36-15 — their best start since going 41-9 on the way to the AL pennant in 1946.

Quinones hit his first major-league homer, a two-run shot that broke a 2-2 tie in the fourth inning. Buckner hit a solo homer, his fifth, in the seventh off Phil Niekro, 3-5. Baylor hit his 13th homer in the eighth.

Twins 10, Blue Jays 4

Tom Brunansky and Roy Smalley hit two home runs apiece and Jeff Reed also homered, pacing visiting Minnesota past Toronto.

Brunansky and Smalley each hit a two-run shot and a solo homer. All four homers came against Dave Stieb, 1-7, who tied a Blue Jays' record for most homers allowed in a game.

Brunansky's 13th homer, Smalley's 10th and Reed's first career blow came during a five-run fifth inning in Toronto.

Mariners 5, Orioles 1

Spike Owen went 4-for-4 and drove in two runs while Alvin Davis and John Moses continued the home-run barrage against Baltimore starter Ken Dixon as Seattle beat the host Orioles.

Davis hit a solo homer, his 10th, and Moses added a solo shot, his first, in the seventh inning off Dixon. Davis' homer was the 16th home run allowed by Dixon in 57 ⅓ innings, including 11 in his last 17 ⅓ innings at home.

Royals 8, Brewers 6

Steve Balboni kept up his extra-base streak with a home run and a double and Hal McRae added a two-run homer that led Kansas City over Milwaukee.

McRae and Balboni hit consecutive doubles in the second, putting the Royals ahead for good 2-1. McRae homered in the third and Balboni hit his 10th homer in the ninth. Balboni's last eight hits have been for extra bases.

Tigers 8, A's 5

Darnell Coles homered, doubled twice and drove in three runs and Lance Parrish and Lou Whitaker also homered, powering Detroit past Oakland.

Coles hit a solo homer, his ninth, in the fifth. Whitaker's sixth homer started a four-run uprising in the sixth. Parrish homered in the seventh, his third in three days and 13th of the season.

Oakland rookie Jose Canseco had a two-run homer in the first, his 17th, and upped his major-league-leading RBI total to 50 with a bases-loaded walk in the seventh.

Houston bats not yet popping; but pitching, defense not flopping

NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Bill Doran says hitting performance on the Houston Astros is beginning to approach the success the team's pitching staff has enjoyed.

"We're showing signs of coming out of it. We stunk with the best all season long," Doran said after the Astros defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 Wednesday night.

"Our pitching has been outstanding, and our defense has been outstanding, but we're just playing well enough to win. When our bats come around we're going to be tough," Doran said.

The Houston pitching staff boasts a 3.13 ERA, tied with the New York Mets for the best in baseball, while the Astros' team batting average is 10th in the National League at .240.

Mike Scott, 5-4, the National League strikeout leader with 106, was the winner, going eight innings and giving up two runs on six hits.

Dave Smith came on to pitch one inning of scoreless relief and recorded his National League-leading 13th save.

Ray Burris, 2-2, was the loser, going 4 1-3 innings and giving 4 runs on six hits while walking four and striking out two.

"If we just put the ball in play, a ground ball or a fly ball, we would have had a chance," Houston manager Whitey Herzog said.

Houston took a 2-0 lead in the first. Doran started things off with a leadoff homer, his second of the season. Craig Reynolds then singled, but was forced out when Glenn Davis reached on a in field ground ball. Davis scored off Jose Cruz' double to center.

The Astros added two runs in the fifth after Denny Walling singled with two out and Davis walked. Cruz singled in Walling, and Kevin Bass' single drove in Davis.

Reds 2, Cubs 0

For some reason, Tom Browning had forgotten how he became the first rookie 20-game winner in 31 years.

In his sophomore season, he lost his first four decisions. He was off to a junk start, throwing junk.

"I don't know what it was," the Cincinnati Reds left-hander said. "I can't pinpoint why I wasn't aggressive. I started thinking I was a pitcher who could work the outside part of the plate instead of going right at 'em."

Wednesday night, Browning went back to the fastball, his primary weapon when he went 20-9 last year. He struck out nine, a career high, and pitched the first one-hitter of his career.

The only hit allowed by Browning was a clean, second-inning single by Jody Davis. Browning walked two and permitted only one runner to reach second base: Leon Durham, who walked ahead of Davis' single.

Browning also drove in one of the Reds' two runs with a single.

Mets 4, Padres 2

Kevin Mitchell broke a 2-2 tie with an eighth-inning double, and Tim Teufel drove in an insurance run with a fielder's choice grounder as the Mets extended their lead in the NL East to 7½ games over Montreal by beating San Diego.

Bruce Berenyi and Roger McDowell combined on a two-hitter for the Mets. McDowell pitched three hitless innings in relief to up his record to 4-0.

Giants 4, Expos 2

The Giants had to rally for three runs in the eighth inning to beat Montreal and win their fourth straight. Chili Davis' two-run triple gave San Francisco a 3-2 lead, and Luis Quinones drove in the insurance run with a suicide squeeze bunt.

Jeff Robinson, 3-1, pitched three innings of one-hit relief for the victory.

Candy Maldonado doubled and Jeffrey Leonard singled before Davis, hitless in his 13 previous at-bats, tripled off a Jeff Reardon changeup.

Phillies 8, Dodgers 7

Glenn Wilson and Von Hayes had two RBI apiece to pace the Phillies over the fumble-fingered Dodgers. Los Angeles committed five errors, leading to four unearned Philadelphia runs, and lost despite outhitting the Phillies 15-7. The Dodgers increased their major league-leading error total to 67.

Kevin Gross got the victory despite allowing 10 hits and five runs over six innings.

The Dodgers battled back from an 8-2 deficit with four runs in the seventh — three on Mariano Duncan's homer — and another in the eighth on a Franklin Stubbs' homer.

Pirates 12, Braves 3

Barry Bonds, playing in only his sixth major league game after coming up from the minors last Friday, hit his first homer and drove in four runs for the Pirates. Right-hander Mike Bielecki, another rookie, got the victory by working the first 5 2-3 innings, and Jim Winn pitched 3 1-3 hitless innings for the save.

R.J. Reynolds also homered for the Pirates, and Ken Oberkfell homered for Atlanta.

Swindell rejects Indians' offer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Left-handed pitcher Greg Swindell says he has rejected the Cleveland Indians' first contract offer, but that negotiations are continuing.

Swindell was Cleveland's top pick, and the second pick overall, in Monday's amateur draft. He was 10-4 with a 2.00 earned run average this spring for the University of Texas. He has said he plans to play professionally now, although he just completed his junior year in college.

"Joe Klein (Indians' vice president) came down to Houston and made us an offer," Swindell said. "We rejected it and made a counterproposal. He's back in Cleveland studying it now."

"Mr. Klein said they want me to start at Waterbury (Class AA) and see what happens," Swindell said.

10,000 record falls as NCAA track opens

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Wisconsin Coach Peter Tegen told Stephanie Herbst to make her move earlier than scheduled, and the sophomore smartly responded to the unexpected signal to set collegiate and meet records in the women's 10,000-meter race in the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

"Coach gave the go-ahead (to move into the lead), but it was one lap earlier than it should have been," Herbst explained Wednesday night after being clocked in 32 minutes, 32.75 seconds.

"They (the race officials) were off on the laps," said the 20-year-old sophomore from Chaska, Minn. "When I found out, I was scared to death.

"I just said to myself that I had to keep on going. It didn't make a difference physically, but it did psychologically."

Herbst, the Big Ten Conference champion at 3,000 and 10,000 meters, seized the lead with about 1,500 meters remaining and pulled away to win by about 95 meters.

The previous collegiate record of 32:36.2 was set by Kathy Ormsby of North Carolina State in April and the old meet record of 32:43.81 was established by Kathy Hayes of Oregon in 1984.

The 10,000 was the only final in Wednesday's long program that included mostly qualifying and trials, and was delayed at the start for more than two and a-half hours by severe thundershowers and lightning. The foul weather forced postponement of the hammer throw qualifying until today, when there are no finals except for the women's heptathlon.

After the first four events of the heptathlon, Jolanda Jones of Houston was the leader with 3,435 points, followed by Eva Karblom of Brigham Young with 3,385 and Conny Eckl of Washington State with 3,375.

Jones had the best performances in two events Wednesday, clearing 6 feet in thehigh jump and running 24.62 in the 200-meter dash.

Karol Davidson of Texas and Cynthia Henry of Texas-El Paso turned in the best performances by collegians this year.

Davidson, a sophomore, and the NCAA indoor 1,000-yard champion, was timed in 2:02.04 in winning her heat in the women's 800 meters.

There were several other notable performances Wednesday.

Texas Christian's 400-meter relay team of Roscoe Tatum, Andrew Smith, Byron Morrow and Greg Scholars posted the fastest time in the world this year, 38.56, in winning its heat and advancing to Friday's final.

Regina Cavanaugh of Rice, the three-time NCAA indoor women's shot put champion and the defending outdoor champion, smashed the meet record twice during qualifying. Cavanaugh's best throws among her three tosses were 57-2¾ and 57-6⅛, breaking the NCAA mark of 56-8 set by Ramona Pagel of San Diego State in 1984.

ROCKETS

BOSTON HAS the power up front that L.A. didn't, and consequently, the Celtics have been able to manage Olajuwon better. He scored 33 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in Game 1, but since then he's been relatively quiet. In Game 4, for latest example, Olajuwon played 43 minutes but scored 23 points and had just eight rebounds.

Part of the reason Sampson has been so prominent is Boston's decision to concentrate more defensively on Olajuwon. He's been getting the old 1-2 from Kevin McHale and Larry Bird, sometimes old 1-2-3 when sixth man Bill Walton gets into the act.

"They've taken my offense away with their double-team," Olajuwon said. "McHale plays me very tough. He has those very long arms and he occupies a lot of space. I have time to spin for my turnaround jumper, but then I see Larry Bird coming over (as weakside help) and I have to get the shot off. I can't do my full moves because Larry Bird is there."

Serving to further inhibit his game, Olajuwon said, is the officiating. He's had to be more whistle-conscious since playing only 38 minutes in Game 1 due to foul trouble.

"My moves are affected because I don't want them to call offensive fouls on me," he said. "Not anymore. Tomorrow I'm going to do it all. I'm not going to hold anything back. It is time to just attack."

No matter how easy your contract seems, take time out to consider the best line. At rubber bridge or in team competition, your first duty is to make your contract; overtricks can wait.

Let's suppose you reach four spades on the auction shown. Your jump rebid in your own suit was invitational, and partner's ace, king and three trumps were more than he needed to raise to game.

At first glance it might seem that you need either a 2-2 trump break, or the ace of clubs onside; or the player with three diamonds to have the long trump to make your contract. If you looked no further into the matter you would probably be defeated. You would win the opening lead and bang out your high trumps. When East turned up with a trump trick, you would have to decide whether to play on diamonds or cross to dummy to lead a club toward your king. Whichever line you chose, you would be doomed to defeat because the gods were not smiling that day.

However, if you want to rely on your skill rather than the deities, you could insure your contract. Win the ace of hearts and lead a trump. If East follows with the eight or nine, simply cover with the ten. West might get that trick, but you can win any return, draw trumps and then discard a club on the table's long diamond. You would lose at most one trump and, two clubs.

If East produces an honor on your trump lead, win and cross to dummy with a diamond to lead another trump. Again, you intend covering whatever card East produces. And your technique is rewarded. As the cards lie, you pick up the trump suit without losing a trick, so that after you discard a club on the fourth diamond and lead toward the king, you lose two club tricks because West has the ace, but no more.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Selleck gets star on Walk of Fame

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fans cheered wildly as "Magnum P.I." star Tom Selleck stepped out of Mann's Chinese Theater for a City Council proclamation and the planting of his star in the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

"I used to walk down this street and see all these stars, and I never dreamed I'd be here someday," said Selleck, 41, who grew up in Southern California after moving from his native Detroit.

The actor on Wednesday also introduced his parents, brothers and girlfriend, actress Jilly Mack, to an estimated 4,000 people who attended the ceremony implanting the 1,827th star in the walk.

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov and Alessandra Ferri of the American Ballet Theater will perform Sunday at the final concert gala of the Spoleto Festival USA, officials say.

Baryshnikov, artistic director of the ABT, and Miss Ferri will perform the Act II pas de deux from "Giselle" as a birthday tribute to festival organizer Gian Carlo Menotti, officials said Wednesday.

"Mr. Baryshnikov doesn't often do this sort of thing," said Nigel Redden, general manager. "He has a tie with the festival. In 1982, he performed in the Festival of Two Worlds (in Spoleto, Italy). Also, he wanted to pay tribute to Gian Carlo."

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — Film producer John Derek is doing well, but the heart attack he suffered Sunday was more severe than first reported and he's expected to remain hospitalized for several more days, a hospital spokeswoman says.

Derek

Derek, 59, is sitting up and resting comfortably, Santa Barbara Cottage Hospital spokeswoman Janet O'Neill said Wednesday.

Ms. O'Neill said she had earlier characterized Derek's heart attack as mild, but his doctor told her moderate would be more correct.

Derek, a character actor in the 1940s and 1950s and the husband of actress Bo Derek, lives on a 32-acre ranch near Santa Barbara.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Country singer and former Gov. Jimmie Davis took over the House floor to perform and poke some fun at two successors.

Davis, who served as governor from 1944-48 and 1960-64, and his wife Anna on Tuesday performed "You Are My Sunshine," which pushed him to country music stardom in the 1930s, then he took a couple swipes at Gov. Edwin Edwards and Edwards' predecessor, John McKeithen.

"Big John used to walk the water," said Davis. "Well, about two, three months after Edwin was elected, Anna and I were in our back yard killing wasps, dirt daubers, roaches and such with spray.

"Edwin was going toward the lake with his briefcase. Anna said she believe he was going to try to walk on the water. I told her I didn't think so. But, he did. He got halfway out and he sank. I got out there and walked him across.

"Now, don't tell him I said that. He still says he went all the way."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth told Harvard University seniors to take advantage of all the opportunity that awaits them and that "profit" is not a dirty word.

"There's more opportunity for young people today than there has ever been in the history of our country in a long shot. You can be anything you want and do anything you want," Ueberroth told the students and their families at a Class Day ceremony Wednesday on Harvard Yard.

About 1,600 Harvard seniors are scheduled to graduate today in a ceremony featuring Lord Carrington, the secretary-general of NATO.

"Profit is a very nice word," Ueberroth said, adding that without profit, there is no growth and jobs and opportunity drys up.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Bob Hope was uninjured when his private jet made an emergency landing with smoke pouring from an engine, and the 83-year-old comedian brushed off the incident with a wisecrack.

"They couldn't jumpstart the engine," he said Wednesday.

Fire engines stood by as the six-seat Hawker jet safely returned to Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport where it had taken off for San Diego about noon with Hope and his wife, Dolores, aboard, said publicist Ward Grant.

Grant said he did not know what was wrong with the engine. The smoke was caused by burning oil after pilot Panagiotis Hinofotif idled the engine and returned to the airport under remaining power, he said.

West Germany's Steffi Graff and doubles partner Gabriela Sabatani go for the ball at the net in doubles play Wednesday at Roland Garros Stadium in Paris

Power play at Roland Garros

French Open

PARIS (AP) — The patient image of clay-court tennis is taking a beating at the French Open.

Usually a place where patience is the virtue most rewarded, the slow red clay of Roland Garros will get a taste of power tennis in the men's semifinals.

The four men remaining in the tournament have been known to go to the net, and that change of pace was underscored in Wednesday's last two quarterfinal matches.

Henri Leconte, the No. 8 seed from France, and unseeded Mikael Pernfors, a Swede who won two NCAA championships on hardcourts while at the University of Georgia, each scored serve-and-volley victories.

Leconte beat unseeded Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3, and Pernfors upset No. 3 Boris Becker of West Germany, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-0.

"I came very often to the net," Leconte said. "I didn't stay back. If you stay back, you lose."

Pernfors, whose collge coach, Dan Magill, was on hand, said he was helped by Becker's mistakes — including eight double faults.

Pernfors will face Leconte and top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia takes on American Johan Kriek, No. 13, in the semifinals on Friday.

The women were to play their semifinals today and the lineup was a bit more conventional.

Top-seeded Martina Navratilova, overpowering no matter what the surface, was to face No. 6 Helena Sukova, from the clay courts of Czechoslovakia, and second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd was to meet another Czechoslovak, fifth-seeded Hana Mandlikova.

The women's championshp will be decided Saturday, the men's on Sunday.

The results Wednesday kept alive both the French hopes of winning the national championship and a streak of Swedish success in Paris.

Before this year no Frenchman had made the semifinals since 1983 and only five had been there over the past 22 years. But France started the tournament with high hopes and three men among the top 10 seeds — No. 4 Yannick Noah, Leconte and No. 10 Thierry Tulasne.

Tulasne was eliminated in the second round, and Noah withdrew with an ankle injury before his fourth-round match with Kriek last Sunday.

But Leconte, idle for several months earlier this year with mononucleosis and the flu, kept the hopes of the home nation alive by preventing Chesnokov from settling into his favored baseline game.

Leconte came in behind his serves and volleyed for quick points. On a center court used to meetings of four hours or more, Leconte's victory took just 1 hour, 48 minutes.

"I wanted to impose my game on him, have him stay on the baseline," Chesnokov said. "But I wasn't able to do that.

"Today it was like everything was swirling around me and I couldn't do anything."

Leconte said he had tried to come back too quickly from his illness but now feels fully recovered.

"I feel better mentally and physically," he said. "I felt very fresh and ready for this tournament."

Pernfors took just 2:15 to continue a run of Swedes in the semifinals. Not since 1977 has his country failed to have a player among the final four men.

When the tournament started, Sweden had four players in the men's top seven seeds — defending champion Mats Wilander No. 2, Stefan Edberg No. 5, Joakim Nystrom No. 6 and Anders Jarryd No. 7. All are long gone, with Edberg eliminated by Pernfors in the second round.

"It is a great way for me to get known in my country," Pernfors said. "I am the only one left in the tournament so they have no one else to write about."

Young Bonds makes quick impression

ATLANTA (AP) — One year from the day he was the Pittsburgh Pirates' No. 1 draft choice, Barry Bonds had his first dream game in the major leagues: four straight hits, including his first big league home run; four RBI — also his first; three runs scored; and a spectacular, rally-killing, running-into-the-wall catch in center field.

Not bad for a 21-year-old son-of-a-superstar who expected to be playing baseball in Hawaii this year.

Bonds' heroics came Wednesday against Atlanta in a 12-3 rout of the Braves, but they didn't surprise Pirates Manager Jim Leyland or Braves skipper Chuck Tanner, who was the Bucs' manager when Bonds was drafted.

"They said he could make the major leagues in a hurry," Tanner said.

Bonds, whose father Bobby was a three-time All-Star in the American and National leagues, was the sixth player taken in the draft last June 4, signing with the Pirates the next day.

He spent the summer playing for Prince William in the Class A Carolina League, averaging .299 with 13 home runs in 254 at-bats.

THIS SPRING, Bonds arrived at the Pirates camp as a non-roster player, but was sent down to AAA Hawaii Islanders to start the season.

Leyland said Wednesday that two coaches favored keeping Bonds with the big club from the beginning, but he wasn't one of them.

"I think we did the right thing for he needed to go play a little bit," Leyland said. But Pirate General Manager Sid Thift went to Hawaii to watch Bonds play and "made the judgment that he was ready. ... When you play the way he has, you get accepted real quick."

Bonds admitted he did not expect to be in Pittsburgh so soon.

"I expected to play the season in Hawaii," Bonds said. "I had fun playing for (manager) Tommy Sandt." He was batting .311 with seven home runs and 37 RBI when he was called up.

Wednesday's game was Bonds' sixth since joining the Pirates Friday. He has been on base 13 of his 30 times at bat. He has also struck out nine times, including his first plate appearance Wednesday.

The strikeouts don't bother Bonds. "I think because I'm a rookie, it causes my strike zone to be a little bigger than some other people's.

"They'll be plenty more strikeouts in my life."

THAT'S ESPECIALLY true if he follows in his father's footsteps. In 14 years with the Giants, Yankees, Angels, White Sox, Rangers, Cubs and Indians, Bobby Bonds struck out 1,758 times in 1,849 games.

Bobby is now the Cleveland Indians hitting instructor, and Barry said "My father has been a big part of my life. It's the little things he says, not always about baseball, he turns my life around."

After leading off Wednesday's game with a strikeout, Bonds had a two-run single in the second, an RBI single in the fourth and a home run to lead off the fifth.

Bonds said that while he was rounding the bases, "I was thinking why couldn't I hit a ball that good when I first started."

His catch came in the sixth as he ran down Ken Oberkfell's liner and crashed into the center field fence, ending the inning and leaving two Atlanta runners on base.

"That's not just my dream, but everybody's, to make the spectacular play," he said of the catch.

Royals negotiate with Bo's agent

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals have begun contract talks with a representative of their fourth-round choice in the free-agent baseball draft, Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson.

John Schuerholz, general manager of the American League club, met Wednesday with Richard Woods, an attorney from Mobile, Ala., whose law firm represents Jackson.

"It was a good first meeting," Schuerholz said.

CPSC seeking baby toy recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission issued a civil complaint against Johnson & Johnson Baby Products Co. on Monday, seeking a recall of three soft toys which the agency says could prove dangerous to small children.

Two youngsters have strangled on one version of the toys, the commission charged. It wants Johnson & Johnson to recall all three types — Soft Triplets, Piglet Crib Gym and Triplets Marching Band.

James Murray of Johnson & Johnson responded that the firm considers the toys safe when used properly, and said both fatalities occurred when parents tied the toys across the top of a playpen or crib, which the directions included with the product say not to do.

Hundreds of thousands of the toys have been used safely, Murray said. He said his company has sent letters to about 700,000 people who bought the toy by mail, and is sending posters to toy stores and pediatricians offices, but does not consider a recall necessary.

Johnson & Johnson no longer sells the toys, but about 1.6 million have been distributed since 1979, costing $6-$7 apiece, according to company and CPSC officials.

The toys are three-part soft dolls attached to one another. Some parents use string to attach them to crib tops for use as crib gyms, the commission said. When this is done, a toddler may get tangled in the toy and strangle itself, according to David Schmeltzer, the safety agency's compliance director.

BETTER BUSINESS

Fraudulent schemes increasing

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

While the current glut of oil and gas on the market has lowered prices — and demand — the Better Business Bureau notes that, surprisingly, there has been an increase in the number of fraudulent oil and gas ventures brought to its attention.

Possibly investors are hoping to secure long-term investments at today's bargain prices.

Whatever the case, the BBB warns that you can minimize your risk of being swindled by resisting "pitches" to make hurried, uniformed investment decisions.

There are many forms of oil and gas investments. Currently the most popular appear to include limited partnership interests, ownership of fractional undivided interests in leases and general partnerships.

Fraudulent deals are frequently structured with the limited partnership (or other legal entity) in one state, the operation and physical presence of the field in a second and the offerings made to prospective investors in states other than the initial two; thus, it is perceived that there is less chance of an investor dropping by a wellsite or non-existent company headquarters.

Such a structure also makes it difficult for law enforcement officials and victims to identify and expose the fraud.

Before investing, secure satisfactory answers to the following questions:

■ Is the offering filed with the state security commission? If so, verify it with the commission and ask for any additional information it may provide.

■ Ascertain if the salesperson is legitimate. Check references and contact the local BBB and state securities agency for information about the agent.

■ Verify the company's existence, background, financial "track record" and holdings.

■ Obtain in writing how your money will be used and the risks involved.

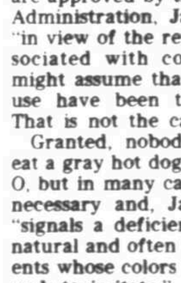

■ Find out about ownership or lease arrangement for the company's land.

Store credit cards build customer loyalty

DENVER (AP) — Retailers like to have credit cards with their own name on them to build repeat business.

Statistics from a recent survey for Citicorp Retail Services, a service firm for private label credit cards, show that during 1984 shoppers with department store cards purchased more than 15 times with the card.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Artificial colors common

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. Although there's a tiny vivid green kernel inside the pistachio nut, this is not why the ice cream is green. It's artificially colored. Is this really necessary?

A. In a statement prepared by the Certified Color Manufacturers Association, the use of artificial food colors is defended:

"When Americans sit down to Sunday dinner, they expect the peas to be green, strawberry-flavored gelatin to be red, butter to be yellow and pistachio ice cream to be green.

"While most people are not aware of it," the statement explains, "many foods would not exist as we know them without added colors. There are hundreds of products eaten by Americans every day that contain color additives, including many bakery goods, beverages, frozen foods, cereals, packaged dinners, candies, jellies and syrups.

"Butter and lemon-flavored cake must be yellow, mint-flavored jelly green, imitation or natural orange drink orange. In some foods such as fruits and vegetables, deep colors are associated with maturity."

Michael Jacobson of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, writing in "Eater's Digest," reminds us that some of these colors, coal tar dyes, are made from coal. Although the colors currently in use in food are approved by the Food and Drug Administration, Jacobson says that "in view of the repeated hazards associated with coal tar dyes, one might assume that the dyes now in use have been thoroughly tested. That is not the case."

Granted, nobody would want to eat a gray hot dog or tan lemon Jell-O, but in many cases coloring is unnecessary and, Jacobson contends, "signals a deficiency or absence of natural and often nutritious ingredients whose colors the synthetic dyes seek to imitate."

Q. I have had a turkey in my freezer for over a year and it looks as good as when I put it in. Can I use it? A reader in Scranton, Pa.

A. The National Turkey Federation advises that you use your turkey within six months, but if the turkey has been frozen at temperatures below zero degrees Fahrenheit, it can be stored without detectable deterioration for much longer. There should be no change in quality for up to 12 months if it has been stored in its original wrapping. Beyond a year the bird will not spoil, but the quality may gradually deteriorate.

Studies have been done on turkeys kept frozen for up to four years under the best conditions and they were still excellent. Under ideal conditions it's almost impossible to detect any difference between a frozen turkey and a fresh one.

Q. I have severe food allergies. When I eat some frozen green vegetables such as green beans or mixed Italian vegetables, my mouth swells. The symptoms don't occur when I eat broccoli or spinach. No ingredients are listed on the package of beans other than beans and salt. Could there be preservatives in certain green vegetables and not in others? Agnes Alisio, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. If an additive, such as a preservative, is an ingredient in a product, it must be listed on the label. There would be no point in adding preservatives to plain frozen vegetables because the vegetable is adequately preserved by the freezing process. Although the vegetables are washed before they are frozen, there could be the smallest trace of a pesticide lingering on the beans and you could be particularly sensitive to it.

If I were you, I would buy fresh beans, preferably grown organically, wash them well and prepare them in your usual manner. If the same symptoms appear, you could have your answer. To be more scientific, have someone else prepare a batch of frozen beans and a batch of fresh beans, and eat them at different times without knowing which is which.

Take your findings to a medical doctor specializing in allergies to obtain conclusive proof. Many people are convinced they are allergic to certain foods when indeed they are not.

Readers' feedback:

In response to a reader's request for suggestions to make a more interesting tuna salad for sandwiches, here are some of the many ideas sent in by readers:

■ M.L. Chase, Colorado Springs, Colo: "My favorite mixture is tuna, chopped hard-boiled egg, sweet pickle relish, chopped green onions, a few chopped green olives, shredded Cheddar cheese and mayonnaise or salad dressing."

Mrs. Chase would also like to know if any readers know how to make the "starter" for something called a 30-Day Cake, or if anyone in Colorado Springs has some starter to give away.

■ Jeanette O'Donnell, Andalusia, Ill: "I add hard-boiled eggs, sweet pickles, onions, raisins and diced carrots, plus mayonnaise."

■ Erika Newton, Bakersfield, Calif: "To the large can of tuna, add sweet pickles, a stalk of celery, diced; ½ bell pepper, diced; ½ medium red onion, diced; 2 large hard-boiled eggs, grated; 2 teaspoons prepared mustard; 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce; a teaspoon pepper and mayonnaise. We like this sandwich grilled."

New cereals flood market

By LINDA ANDERSON

As most mothers of small children know, when it comes to introducing new products, no one can beat cereal manufacturers.

It seems new cereals burst out on supermarket shelves before you can say "Snap, Crackle, Pop." There are cereals designed for women who need more calcium, cereals for the health-conscious, cereals for small children and cereals for candy lovers who simply have to start the day with a chocolate fix.

There are so many new cereals that I could write about a new one each week and never run out — by the time we checked out all the new products, they'd be old and there would be more new ones.

So, in the interest of keeping things simple, here are mini-reviews of some of the cereals we tried (All prices listed are from local supermarkets. Prices from other locations may vary):

■ Circus Fun from General Mills is another in a long line of sweetened-cereal-with-marshmallows that my small children are so fond of. Label advertising claims the product is "all natural flavors," which is in itself slightly suspicious — I mean, what is a marshmallow's natural flavor?

The cereal — which seems to be basically made from corn — consists of "red, crunchy hoops," according to the back of the box, and "crunchy, speckled balls that almost bounce on milk." The marshmallows are in circus animal shapes — yellow lions, purple horses, blue bears and green elephants.

The teen-agers would occasionally munch on a handful, but wouldn't be caught dead actually eating a bowl of something called Circus Fun. The small children loved the product, but toward the bottom of the box they stopped eating the "red, crunchy hoops" and bouncing speckled balls and concentrated on eating just the marshmallows. Price for a 12-ounce box is $2.19.

■ Rocky Road (from General Mills) has got to be a nutrition-conscious parent's nightmare. Not only is it named after the ice cream flavor, it actually tries to taste like it. Chocolate and vanilla puffs are combined with chocolate-covered marshmallows to produce something more like dessert than breakfast — in fact, one teen-age taster said, "It's pretty good, but it's dessert, not breakfast."

Label advertising has the nerve to claim the product is "an important part of this nutritious breakfast with milk, juice and toast." Nutrition label information says the cereal, when served with ½-cup milk, has 25 percent of the vitamin C, niacin, iron, vitamin D and folic acid; 30 percent of the vitamin A, thiamin and vitamin B6; and 35 percent of the riboflavin suggested in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance.

Well, I have my doubts about the nutritional value of a chocolate-flavored breakfast cereal, but that's just my personal opinion. Price of a 12.5-ounce box of Rocky Road is $2.19.

■ Bran Muffin Crisp, another from General Mills, is supposed to taste like bran muffins, according to its slightly obnoxious television commercials. A wheat-bran flaked cereal with raisins and almond slivers, the cereal probably appeals more to adults than to children. It is, however, sweeter than regular flaked cereals such as Wheaties or corn flakes, which may mean it contains more sugar than some people may be comfortable with.

A 14-ounce box costs $1.79. Each serving (with ½-cup milk) is said to contain 30 percent of the vitamin A, thiamin and vitamin B6; 35 percent of the riboflavin and vitamin B12 and 25 percent of the niacin, iron and vitamin D recommended in the U.S. RDA.

This turned out to be a very tasty cereal, if you like wheat flakes and raisins, but does not taste at all like bran muffins. The box does, however, have a recipe for making bran muffins using the cereal.

■ One adult confesses his favorite is not any of the adult-oriented cereals which are supposed to be so healthy — he much prefers to mix Coco-Puffs and Captain Crunch Peanut Butter together in one bowl, "and have Reese's cereal."

EXTENSION EXTRA

Texas-grown produce available

By MARIAN FARR

"Getting fresh" with Texas vegetables appears to be outdoing last year's "fresh approach" scheme to inform Texans of good produce buys. Make yours "Tex-fresh" produce.

Consumer choice of good buys include onions and cabbages. The new 1015Y Super Sweet onion developed at Texas A&M University is producing jumbo-sized onions this year. These colossal-sized, sliced sweet onions hanging over the edges of a hamburger bun go really well with some coleslaw.

Ask for vegetables and fruits grown in Texas. You'll be supporting Texans who earn their livelihood from growing your groceries.

Currently Texas ranks behind California and Florida in total U.S. vegetables production.

Cantaloupes, honeydew melons, cucumbers, bell peppers and watermelons are all being sold by Texas producers.

Nutritionally, you'll reduce calorie intake by substituting vegetables for traditional snacks. For instance, one raw onion, 2¼-inches in diameter, has only 38 calories. Cucumbers contain calcium, phosphorus, vitamin A, thiamin, riboflavin, niacin and ascorbic acid.

Squash and tomatoes will soon be available along with watermelon, okra and blackeyed peas, all traditional Texas vegetables. These also are all low-calorie.

Tomatoes are the most popular vegetable bought at roadside markets, followed by watermelons, squash, cantaloupes, southern peas, cucumber and okra.

If you're in the cost-cutting mood, consider buying fresh produce by the bushel for canning or freezing at home. Either way, you can "get fresh" with "TexFresh" produce.

Revealing credit card numbers risky

Hearst News Service

You pick up your telephone to hear you have just won a fabulous trip. All you need to do is confirm your identity by giving the caller your name and address — and your credit card number.

Sounds too good to be true?

It is.

Clever con artists use such schemes to get you to reveal personal, confidential numbers so they can run charges on your credit cards — one of several credit scams that are costing consumers millions of dollars.

Besides never giving out your credit card number over the phone if you did not initiate the call, here are some other steps you can take to protect yourself from today's sophisticated pickpockets, courtesy of Citicorp's Consumer Views newsletter:

■ Notify issuers immediately if you don't receive a new card or renewal on time. Provide issuers with your current address so that new cards don't end up in someone else's mailbox. Once you receive the cards, sign them immediately.

■ Cut up cards that have expired or that you no longer need. Be sure to cut up the number — you don't know who will go through your trash.

■ Keep the cards in view while you use them. Retrieve them promptly, and check to be sure you get back your card.

■ Watch that clerks don't put more than one slip through the recording machine. Destroy or void any slip filled out in error. You don't want to pay twice.

■ When signing receipts, don't leave empty lines or spaces. Spell out the figures, making sure they appear on each copy of the receipt. Request and destroy all carbons, since they are a wonderful source of account information and numbers for crooks.

■ Don't lend your cards. If you break this rule, be sure to give them only to someone you trust. Monitor their use, and get them back quickly.

■ If you order items by mail or phone, make certain the company is reliable before giving out your account number.

■ Keep receipts in a safe place and use them to reconcile bills and statements. Report any differences immediately. This limits how much you'd have to pay for charges you never made. When you are finished with the receipts, tear them up before discarding them.

At Automatic Teller Machines (ATMs) or point-of-sale terminals, your transactions are protected by the combination of your ID number on the card and your personal identification number (PIN). Your PIN is for your eyes only. No other persons, not even bank employees, are ever authorized to ask you for it. You should also keep mind the following advice:

■ Choose a PIN that won't appear on any papers in your possession and memorize it. Use the name of a childhood sweetheart or your pet canary. Choosing your birthdate or phone number is not a good idea.

■ When using the machine, try to keep others from seeing your number. If someone is too close, press the "start over" button to clear the screen and ask them to move back.

■ Don't start your transaction until the ATM screen is at start position. Wait for a new "start" before you leave, so the next person can't access your money.

DEAR ABBY

Career moves shake up family

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My situation is not uncommon. My husband works for a large national company that moves employees regularly.

The last move was exceptionally difficult, and I don't want to move again for seven years, when our youngest child will graduate from high school.

I'm so tired of my children feeling like they don't belong. So often, as soon as they make some really good friends, we have to move.

My husband says if we have to move, we will. If I try to discuss it, we get into an argument, which always ends with, "I'm only doing it for you and the kids."

Ambitious men are rarely home on moving day, or when the kids get sick, or the cat gets lost.

Abby, must men accept every transfer they are offered? — TIRED

DEAR TIRED: No. Some have been known to pass up promotions rather than move their families.

And in two-paycheck households, some men move because their wives' jobs require it.

Not all children react badly to moving. Some have grown with the challenge of making new friends — witness "Army brats."

Every family must decide what is best for all the members and then make the decision accordingly.

DEAR ABBY: I was on birth control pills from 1970 to 1977, then we moved to another state and a different doctor prescribed them for me from 1978 until 1986. Neither one mentioned any interaction with antibiotics.

Medicine is in pretty bad shape if vital information such as what you pointed out is transmitted to the public by an advice columnist in the newspaper instead of by the medical community.

Perhaps your column should be moved to the front page. — SALLY W. IN LEXINGTON, KY.

DEAR SALLY: I was absolutely flabbergasted at the number of letters I received from women thanking me for that information.

And if an editor wants to put this letter on the front page, it's all right with me.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you concerning a dispute between my mother and me.

First of all, I am 17 years old and have a good-paying job. I have a Camaro, which I'm paying for myself. I also pay my own insurance, which is $600 a year.

Here's the problem: I have wanted a four-wheel drive truck for a long time, but my mom says trucks are for guys, and I am a girl.

I don't agree with my mom at all. I think as long as I am paying for my own car, I should be able to drive whatever I want.

Do you agree with me or my mom? I hope you print this, Abby. It may not get me a truck, but it will settle the argument. — WANTS A FOUR-WHEEL DRIVE

DEAR WANTS: If you are sufficiently mature to buy a car and support it, you should be able to drive a car of your choice. Four-wheel drives are not for guys only.

DEAR ABBY: You're not going to believe this, but here goes: My dentist has halitosis. He's a fine dentist and a nice guy, but how can I tell him? — CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: In plain English. But tell him with kindness, compassion and concern — and quickly.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

MONEY

Dollar lower

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell against all major currencies in early European trading today, pushed down by U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker's refusal to comment on exchange rates. Gold prices were higher in dull trading.

Dealers in Frankfurt said Baker's remark on Wednesday that he would not comment on exchange rates "unless there was a specific reason to do so" was seen as bearish by the market.

But dealers said they were waiting for Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker's scheduled testimony later today before the U.S. House of Representatives Banking Committee for a fresh indication on the direction of the dollar.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Wednesday:

—2.2532 West German marks, down from 2.271

—1.8647 Swiss francs, down from 1.8788

—7.186 French francs, down from 7.2225

—2.536 Dutch guilders, down from 2.562

—1,542.50 Italian lire, down from 1,559.50

—1.391 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3914

Bullion dealers said markets appeared to be receiving minor support from the dollar's losses in early trading.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $341.35 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $341.30. At midmorning the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $341.50.

In Zurich, gold was selling at a bid $341.50 at noon, up from $341 late Wednesday.

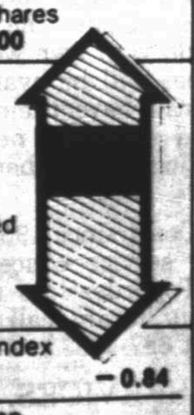

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose 9 cents to close at a bid $341.78.

Silver also rose in London today where it was selling at a bid price of $5.15 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $5.12.

Peso plunges to record lows

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The value of the Mexican peso currency plunged again Wednesday, tumbling to record lows approaching 600 pesos to the U.S. dollar on the free market.

Several private exchange houses here offered 585 pesos to customers wanting to sell a dollar on the free market and demanded as many as 595 pesos to buy one.

The buy rate briefly topped the 600 mark at one private exchange house in the morning before strengthening a bit at midday. By early afternoon, the exchange house had stopped selling dollars altogether.

Other exchange companies posted rates of 573-583.

It was not immediately clear what was causing the slide. There have been widespread rumors of imminent changes in government economic policy.

The peso slipped 14 points on Tuesday at private exchange houses in what the financial daily El Financiero called "a new attack by speculators."

In El Paso, Texas, along the U.S.-Mexico border, the rate at commercial banks shot up to 575-615 by midday Wednesday after posting 550-563 on Tuesday.

The free-market rate is used in tourism and for most border and private transactions.

A second rate, which is regulated by the government, was about 542 pesos to the dollar. That rate is set daily by representatives of commercial banks and the Bank of Mexico, the nation's central bank. It is used in about 80 percent of commercial transactions.

The latest jolt to the peso comes amid reports that the government is poised to unveil a series of tough measures to revive the stalling economy.

Government officials have repeatedly denied that any such program, which has been dubbed the "Aztec Plan," is in the works to freeze wages and prices, lower interest rates and create a new currency pegged to the dollar. But the rumors persist.

Some local newspapers also have reported that the administration of President Miguel de la Madrid is considering a temporary suspension of payments on the nation's foreign debt of $97.6 billion.

Sales tax collections illustrate money woes

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' money problems have spread from the oil and gas industry to all sectors of the state's economy, according to Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock said Wednesday that a 4.4 percent decrease in sales tax collections in May was the first time this year that the monthly income has fallen below the same month of 1985.

"The downturn in oil has finally set in motion a wave that's soaking the rest of the Texas economy," Bullock said in a statement.

Last Friday, Bullock warned a special meeting of House members that his predicted shortfall of $1.3 billion by Aug. 31, 1987, may increase to $2 billion unless economic conditions improve.

Gov. Mark White, who was in Washington on Wednesday, has repeatedly said he does not think a special session is required before the January meeting of the 1987 Legislature.

"The governor's office has been aware of the potential downturn in sale tax collections," said Bill Hamilton, the governor's budget officer, after Bullock's report Wednesday. "Several cities have told us they are fearful a downturn in their local sales taxes (which are collected with state sales taxes) so it is not quite so surprising to us."

Targeting position part of successful interview

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

The prospect of going on a first job interview in 20 years — or a lifetime — is a challenge for the inexperienced job seeker. Knowing how to present yourself in the best light gives the prospective employee a competitive and psychological edge.

According to Pat Swindle, certified personnel consultant at PS Associates, recruiting specialists, many of the people hardest hit by Midland's economic downturn are three to five year employees who obtained their degrees just as the boom hit. "They were in demand before they even began looking for a job, and they have never been through a formal interview process," said Swindle. "Now they are being laid off and it is a critical time in their careers."

Also hard hit are the 20-year employees, forced into early retirement by many of the major oil companies. "These people have not been out interviewing for a job for more than 20 years. Now, all of a sudden, they are out there competing with every one else for positions that are few and far between," she added.

Suzon Condor/Reporter-Telegram

Two important elements when beginning a job search are to target a job source and then determine the goals you wish to achieve.

Swindle believes the biggest asset a job seeker can have is the ability to critique an interview and realize why you did not get a job. "Knowing what things caused you to lose out to another on an interview allows you to reorganize your resume or find a better way to present your abilities in a way that might keep the next job from slipping away from you," she stated.

The first step in interviewing is to figure out what kind of job you want and what kind of job you can reasonably expect to find.

After you have targeted the type of position you will be seeking, resume preparation is the next step. "Knowing what types of things employers like to see on a resume is vital," according to the recruiting expert. Some of the areas that should be included are: major course of study in college; grade point average; previous work history; and awards received.

Swindle noted that a recent Fortune 500 survey showed a great discrepancy between what employers want to see on a resume and what prospective employees think the employer wants to see.

"For example, people seeking a sales management position felt that prior work experience and enthusiasm were essential qualifications for getting a position. Employers, however, felt that leadership skills were more important qualities to look for, over and above work experience."

Another crucial area is image consciousness — personal grooming, selection of clothing, communication skills and body language. "Many people might have the job going into an interview, based on their resume, but something in their mannerisms or the way they communicate costs them the position," she said.

Perhaps the most critical area of the interview process, according to experts, is the follow up. A letter or phone call saying thanks for taking the time to interview me is a common courtesy. But job hunters can turn that simple act into a great asset. Said Swindle: "After an interview, any areas that you felt the interviewer might not have been clear on, or a question that you feel you did not answer well, but have thought about since the interview can be brought up in the follow-up and might be the difference in getting the job."

Domestic new car sales fall 2.6 percent in May

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — Despite widespread sales campaigns and financing incentives, domestic new car sales dipped 2.6 percent in May below sales a year ago last month. The sale of imports, however, increased by 19.9 percent.

As a result, overall auto sales were relatively flat. According to figures released Wednesday by the auto companies, Americans bought 1,071,268 new cars last month, down a slight 0.3 percent from May last year when 1,075,085 automobiles were sold.

Domestic sales had been fairly strong for the first 20 days of May, but slipped 10.9 percent during the final 10-day reporting period.

Of the major U.S. auto makers, Chrysler was the only one to report a gain for the May 20-31 period, up 9.3 percent. General Motors said its sales fell 12.7 percent and Ford's sales were off 14.4 percent in the period.

Auto analysts noted that, while domestic sales were weaker than they anticipated, the year-to-year comparison made the decline seem more severe since May was a strong month for the auto makers in 1985.

Exxon says 6,200 have left

From Staff and Wire Reports

Exxon Corp. said Wednesday 6,200 employees have voluntarily agreed to leave the nation's largest oil company, allowing it to meet its initial target for staff reductions in face of falling oil prices.

However, Exxon has not yet broken down the numbers by geographic areas, and it is not known how many Exxon employees from Midland voluntarily chose to leave the company. "It may be months before we know for sure whether there has been a net gain or loss from Midland," said Exxon spokesman Sharron Curran-Westcott, "because there will transfers and consolidation now to balance out the workforce. So, this voluntary exit may not be relative to Midland at all."

On April 22 Exxon offered 40,500 U.S. employees — or more than 25 percent of its worldwide work force — the option to retire early or resign with compensation by May 30.

Autoworkers reelect Bieber

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Owen Bieber, who has led the United Auto Workers through three turbulent years, was elected by acclamation Wednesday to a second term.

Bieber and six other top officers on his slate, all unopposed, were the candidates of the ruling 23-member International Executive Board.

The convention traditionally backs the candidates picked by board caucus and the elections were considered a formality. The UAW doesn't allow its 1 million members to vote directly for top officers.

However, one cliffhanger developed between two Missourians. Region 5 director Kenneth Worley unofficially was re-elected over challenger Jerry Tucker by a fraction of one vote, union officials said.

The 16 regional directors hold the remaining seats on the powerful executive board.

Worley and Tucker each received more than 324 votes in a closed caucus tally conducted by Bieber, the union said.

Tucker told reporters later that he believed he lost by about four-tenths of a vote and that he declined Bieber's invitation to concede, pending an appeal on the convention floor Thursday.

Pipeline receives final approval from government

LONG BEACH — Pacific Texas Pipeline Co., Long Beach, has received right-of-way approval from the U.S. Bureau of Land Management to construct, operate and maintain its crude oil pipeline across federal land in California, Arizona and New Mexico.

The federal permit, granted in Sacramento on May 23, was the last major government approval needed by the company before construction can begin on the 1,030 mile, 42-inch underground pipeline which will connect the Port of Los Angeles to Midland.

Cecil Owens, president of Pacific Texas, said the federal approval, which together with other public lands, represents over 70 percent of the pipeline's rights-of-way.

Owens added that construction of the project is scheduled to begin in this fall. The pipeline should begin receiving crude oil by late 1987.

Earlier, Pacific Texas received an operating permit from the Texas Railroad Commission, the South Coast Air Quality Management District, the California Regional Water Quality Board, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Sharing Old West dreams in the Hill Country

One of the keys to the success of the 106-year-old YO Ranch's longevity has been the willingness of its family managers to make the business changes necessary to keep the 50,000-acre domain viable.

In the late '50s the ranch was home to the drive to establish the Texas Longhorn Breeders Association of America to save the breed from gradual extinction. In the 1960s, the YO branched out into exotic hunting.

Now, a real estate sales venture has made owning a piece of the legendary ranch — the world's largest private exotic game reserve and fourth generation Texan ranching domain — in Kerr County an attainable dream for West Texan lovers of Old West mystique.

"It's hard to sell part of your heritage, but it's a necessary part of diversity in a modern economy," admits Charles Schreiner III, grandson of the ranch's founder, Capt. Charles Schreiner, who established the spread in 1880.

"But I won't sell to just anybody. If someone appreciates the western lifestyle and the ranch's role in Texas heritage, I'll be glad to call them 'neighbor'," says Three, as he is known by friends and neighbors.

The kick-off sales party last weekend was forced indoors by inclement Hill Country weather which didn't dampen the spirits of either buyers or sellers at the YO Ranch Hilton. Optimism is running high that the ranch will find the needed 70 buyers for the 100-acre slices of history.

One of the nation's premier toy retailers is launching a new line of dolls, but they won't be found on local store shelves.

Mattel, the second-largest toy maker in the country, says it will market a new line of the soft-sculptured dolls through direct mail, with a primary target market of physical therapists and others in contact with physically challenged children.

The company has undertaken an inventive philanthropic project to demonstrate it corporate compassion, by giving concerned parents an opportunity to help disabled children develop a positive self-image or to impress upon able-bodied kids the challenges which accompany such handicaps.

Mattel says profits from the sale of its new line of Hal's Pals will go to organizations that help disabled children.

The chief doll Hal, a ski instructor whose left leg has been amputated, is joined by a ballerina wearing hearing aids; a boy in a grey warm-up suit in a wheelchair; and, a girl with leg braces and canes. The fifth disabled pal is visually impaired and comes with a red-tipped cane and guide dog.

The two other dolls, a preppy boy and a Madonna look-alike, are not apparently disabled, but are available with various accessories, such as the wheelchair.

Price for the non-handicapped dolls is $39.95, with disabled dolls priced at $44.95.

Drunk driving is a concern for civic and business leaders locally and around the country. Local members of the Dallas-based national Beverage Retailers Against Driving Drunk (BRADD) are challenging proposed changes in DWI legislation — which could impact consumption of distilled spirits, and even non-alcoholic mixers.

Proposed changes would lower the legal criterion of intoxication from the current 0.10 percent blood alcohol concentration (BAC) to 0.08 or 0.05 percent. Opponents contend that lowering the BAC limit would have little or no effect on the vast majority of DWI accidents, caused by those who drink far in excess of the current 0.10 legal limit. BRADD says that the target of changes would be drivers who abide by current limits, but account for about 10 percent of all fatal alcohol-related traffic accidents.

To reach the proposed new legal limit of 0.05 percent, an average person would only have to consume approximately two drinks in a two-hour period. In contrast, at a level of 0.15 percent, the average person would have to consume approximately seven drinks within two hours, according to the BRADD report.

The retailers characterize drunk driving as part of the larger problem of chronic alcoholism:

■ Research over the past 20 years shows that 70 to 75 percent of those convicted of driving while drunk have blood alcohol concentrations of at least 0.15 percent and many have levels of 0.20 percent or higher.

■ Multiple studies of the statistics of alcohol-related traffic fatalities show that more than half of those killed are the drunk drivers themselves. Twenty percent are passengers in the car with the drunk driver and 11 percent are drunk pedestrians who walk into the paths of oncoming sober drivers.

BRADD advocates drunk driving solutions that focus on prevention and enforcement and on the treatment and rehabilitation of problem drinkers. A model STOP-DWI program is underway in New York state that mandates minimum fines of $250 to $350 for each DWI conviction. In 1984, $13 million was returned to the counties where arrests are made and allocated directly into drunk driving deterrence programs.

Tenneco affiliate applies for open transportation

From Staff Reports

HOUSTON — Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co., a division of Tenneco Inc., has applied to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) for authority to operate its interstate natural gas system as an "open access" transporter. At the same time and as a condition to the opening of the system, the company filed a proposal for sharing with its existing sales customers take-or-pay costs and settlement costs associated with gas purchase contracts.

Robert C. Thomas, president of Tenneco's interstate natural gas pipeline division, said, "With FERC approval of both filings, Tennessee Gas will be one of the first major interstate natural gas pipeline systems to agree to operate under FERC Order No. 436 without substantial modification.

"A major portion of this filing is a tariff upon which the FERC must act within 30 days. They may accept it, reject it, or suspend it for up to five months. If it is suspended, at the end of the suspension period the new tariff (which includes partial take-or-pay recovery) will begin to be collected — subject to refund. On the date the tariff becomes effective, Tennessee Gas will open its system while any issues relating to the tariff are being resolved," Thomas said.

When the company receives and accepts its certificate, additional transportation capacity in the system will be available to others. "Producers with surplus gas will gain access to markets denied them under current regulations. Tennessee Gas will work with its producer-suppliers to release gas from contracts for transportation and sale in return for relief from take-or-pay exposure," Thomas said.

According to Thomas, "Tennessee Gas contracted with producers for gas supplies specifically on behalf of its sales service customers. FERC Order No. 380 eliminated any obligation on the part of these customers to take-or-pay for that supply but the order has not altered the FERC-sanctioned obligation of Tennessee Gas to provide gas, upon demand, to its customers.

"As a result, Tennessee Gas must maintain substantial inventories of natural gas to meet possible customer requirements which frequently do not materialize. This has resulted in Tennessee Gas becoming exposed to significant producer take-or-pay claims."

Recent regulatory initiatives by the FERC, including Order 436, have fundamentally changed the natural gas transmission business.

Traditionally pipelines have acted as wholesale gas merchants, balancing the requirements of many customers with supplies from many producers. The FERC has increased the risk involved in the wholesale function for which pipelines are not adequately compensated, according to Thomas. "Therefore, it is necessary either that the merchant role of pipelines be substantially reduced or eliminated. Or, the increased risk and cost involved should be appropriately allocated between the pipelines and the customers who benefit from these dedicated supplies," Thomas stated.

"This risk-sharing proposal permits Tennessee Gas' customers to determine the extent to which the company will continue as a wholesaler while providing customers, producer-suppliers, and others improved access to gas supplies and markets," Thomas said.

In recent decisions, the FERC has said it would not deal with take-or-pay issues on a generic basis but would do so on a pipeline-specific basis.

The tariff provides for customer challenges to take-or-pay payments and contract settlements made by Tennessee gas. "We believe this is an appropriate forum and means for the FERC to review Tennessee Gas' take-or-pay problem, in light of our willingness to comply with all aspects of Order 436," Thomas said.

He added that the filing was made only after Tennessee Gas had attempted to reach acceptable terms with all 104 of its customers for opening its system and dealing with its take-or-pay exposure.

"If the FERC acts promptly, our system can be open by July 4," Thomas concluded.

'Least cost' scheduling to impact El Paso gas suppliers, producers

EL PASO (SWN) — El Paso Natural Gas Co. announced that it has modified the 'least cost' procedures it uses to purchase gas supplies for resale in California and the southwestern United States from its interstate pipeline system.

El Paso notified more than 5,600 suppliers by mail late last week of the changes. The company said that a meeting this week with officials from producing states and with producer/suppliers in Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico will be held to further explain the new procedures.

In last week's letter, El Paso said that Federal law, as recently interpreted in several court decisions and orders of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in Washington, D.C., require El Paso to rank all of its available supplies of natural gas according to price and to meet the demands of the markets served by El Paso's system with gas purchased from the least expensive sources first.

El Paso further stated in its letter to producers that in June, 1986, El Paso customers' daily purchases will be less than one billion cubic feet of the more than three billion cubic feet of gas available each day for purchase from El Paso. In contrast, El Paso stated that it sold an average of nearly two and one-half billion cubic feet per day during the same period in 1985.

El Paso advised its suppliers that least cost scheduling of the more than 1,000 supply sources attached to its system combined with the reduced June market demand will, for the first time, prohibit the company's purchase of substantial quantities of higher-priced natural gas supplies produced from oil wells and other high priority sources.

However, El Paso told the producers that it is willing to purchase these supplies without interruption — to avoid the shutting in of these sources of gas during June and thereafter until further notice — at a price which satisfies the least cost scheduling requirement, assuming there is sufficient market demand for gas from El Paso's pipeline. El Paso said that during June, it will not pay in excess of $1.50 per MMBtu for these gas supplies except where a higher price is required by rules of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

"By offering to take these gas supplies at a price allowed by least cost scheduling," El Paso's spokesman stated, "we are seeking to avoid hardships to our producer/suppliers while accommodating both our federal duties and the policy goals of state conservation laws."

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Enserch rejects low-priced natural gas markets

DALLAS (SWN) Enserch Exploration Partners, Ltd. is rejecting natural gas markets of about 100 million cubic feet of gas a day, preferring to hold the gas off the market until prices improve.

"We feel it is imprudent to sell these volumes at the depressed prices available today," said Robert G. Fowler, President and Chief Operating Officer of Enserch Exploration, Inc., managing general partner of EP.

Phillips to modify Norwegian offshore field

BARTLESVILLE — Phillips Petroleum Co. Norway will elevate six offshore production platforms in Norway's Ekofisk Field, in one of the biggest modification projects ever proposed for an offshore field.

The massive operation is necessary to compensate for an increase in water depth caused by subsidence of the ocean floor above the Ekofisk reservoirs.

Preliminary work on the $286 million project is expected to begin this summer. The actual elevatong operation will occur next summer in conjunction with a scheduled 12-day maintenance shutdown.

Houston power company declares dividends

HOUSTON (SWN) At a recent meeting, the board of directors of Houston Lighting & Power Co. (HL&P) declared regular quarterly cash dividend as follows:

One dollar per share on the $4 preferred stock, payable Aug. 1, to holders of record at close of business July 16.

HL&P, a subsidiary of Houston Industries, Inc., reported a 17 percent increase in net income after preferred dividends to $446 million for the 12 months ended April 30. The increase was principally a result of an increase in allowance for funds used during construction and new electric rates which became effective in January 1985. HL&P's contribution to consolidated earnings per share was $4.14, an increase of $.23 per share.

HL&P reported net income after preferred dividends of $56 million for the three months ended April 30, 1986 compared to $74 million for the same period of last year. HL&P's operating results are being adversely affected as a result of the beginning of commercial operation in December 1985 of Unit 1 of its Limestone Electric Generating Station, as well as a five percent decline in KWH sales. HL&P is seeking approval for the annual costs of Unit 1 to be reflected in electric rates as part of a general rate application filed with the Public Utility Commission on March 18, 1986. Until rate relief is provided or other regulatory action is taken with respect to Limestone Unit 1, HL&P's operating results will continue to be adversely affected.

Stewart & Stevenson posts first quarter loss

HOUSTON (SWN) Stewart & Stevenson Services, Inc. announced its results of operations for the three months ended April 30, 1986. Citing economic uncertainty in the oil-producing states that make up most of the company's market for spare parts and service, C. Jim Stewart II, chairman of the board, reported a 14.3 percent decline in sales in a net loss for the quarter of $1,318,000 ($.29 per share).

"The first quarter has historically been a small contributor to the overall performance of the company," Stewart said. "Deliveries of large power systems and cogeneration equipment that make up the majority of our sales are generally scheduled for delivery near year end."

Houston Industries restates 1985 earnings

HOUSTON (SWN) Houston Industries Inc. (HII), reported consolidated earnings for the 12 months ended April 30, 1986 of $435.5 million or $4.04 per share compared to $374.5 million or $3.84 per share for the 12 months ended April 30, 1985. Such earnings have been restated to reflect the previously reported change to the successful efforts method of accounting for oil and gas operations from the full cost method by HII's oil and gas subsidiary, Primary Fuels, Inc. Under the successful efforts accounting method expenditures for unsuccessful exploration activities are expensed currently, while under the full cost method such expenditures are capitalized and amortized over the life of the proved reserves.

Consolidated earnings for the three months ended April 30, 1986 were $57 million or $.52 per share compared with $70.6 million or $.70 per share for the same period in 1985, in each case after restatement for the accounting change.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Set up apartments as self-employed firm, draw up Keogh plan

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am 50 years old and retired, as I sold the bar and grill I owned and operated. I used the money from that sale to buy a couple of apartment buildings. I took back a mortgage on the bar and grill and receive payments monthly. And I collect rents from the apartments.

But I have no "earned income" from salary and such. I'm told that, because I am not "gainfully employed," I can't put money into an individual retirement account or any other retirement plan.

I'll need income after 1998, when the bar and grill mortgage payments stop. Isn't there anyway I can put tax-sheltered money away for my old age?

Doyle

A. Sure, there is. You can set up your ownership of the apartment buildings as a self-employed business. You could incorporate, but that gets more complicated.

As the operator of a self-employed business, you can put 20 percent of your net profits into a Keogh retirement plan each year. You won't have to pay income tax on that money or the money it earns until you make withdrawals from the Keogh plan, which you won't be required to do until after you pass age 70 1/2.

As a self-employed person, you'll also be able to tuck away $2,000 this year into an IRA. That's in addition to your Keogh plan contribution.

If the Senate Finance Committee's version of the tax "reform" bill becomes law, you won't be able to put money into an IRA for 1987 and later years. One part of that bill would prevent people who are in other retirement plans — including Keoghs — from contributing to IRAs.

Any good accountant can show you how to arrange your apartment building ownership as a self-employed business.

Q. As a member of the board of directors of a small bank in another state, I receive $2,500 a year director's fees. In order to attend board meetings, I either fly or drive to the bank.

I thought I could take my travel expenses as a deduction on my income tax return and contribute $2,250 to a spousal IRA for me and my wife.

The accountant who does my tax return says I am self-employed and am entitled to take the travel expense deduction but I am not allowed to make the $2,250 IRA contribution. Is he right?

A. Your accountant is correct about director's fees being self-employed income and that you can take a tax deduction for the travel expenses incurred to earn that self-employed income.

However, self-employed income permits you to make IRA contributions — at least through 1986.

We'll have to assume your annual travel expenses are at least $250. If the $2,500 director's fees are your only earned income, you're allowed to put your net self-employed income — $2,500, minus expenses — into the spousal IRA. If you have other earned income, you can contribute $2,250 to the spousal IRA.

Also, you can put 20 percent of your annual after-expense self-employed income into a Keogh retirement plan.

Q. I've been told I am foolish to keep all my money in a savings account. It is just about $50,000. Although that's not much to some people, it's a lot to me. I have been advised that, by putting at least half in a certificate of deposit and the rest in a "liquid investment account," I would get more interest.

My primary concern is safety. It would be nice, though, to get more interest. What is a liquid investment account? Is it safe?

A. It's rock-solid safe, if it is a deposit at a federally insured bank or savings and loan association. Although it's impossible to say, for sure, my guess is that "liquid investment account" is the name your bank or S&L has put on its money market deposit account — MMDA, for short.

Different institutions come up with various names for those accounts, which can best be described as high-interest savings accounts. Each bank and S&L sets the interest it pays on its MMDA.

MMDAs became available on Dec. 14, 1982. If you have had that $50,000, or any other large amount, in an old-fashioned 5.5 percent savings account for any length of time, you have been worse than foolish. In effect, you have thrown away higher interest you could have received.

As of this past April 1, the federally mandated 5.5 percent interest rate cap was removed from savings accounts. Some banks and S&Ls now are paying higher interest on savings accounts. Others have merged savings accounts with MMDAs. However, many are staying with that old rate.

If your money is still earning only 5.5 percent, you most certainly should follow the advice you received. Move some to a higher interest account from which you can make withdrawals any time you like. Assuming you have no immediate need for the rest, put it in a CD at even higher interest.

Sit down with your banker and have all available accounts explained. Visit other banks and S&Ls and find out what accounts they offer.

FOCUS on BUSINESS

Pulling the porn

Many national video stores are pulling X-rated videocassettes from their stores in response to civic pressure and more mainstream fare from Hollywood.

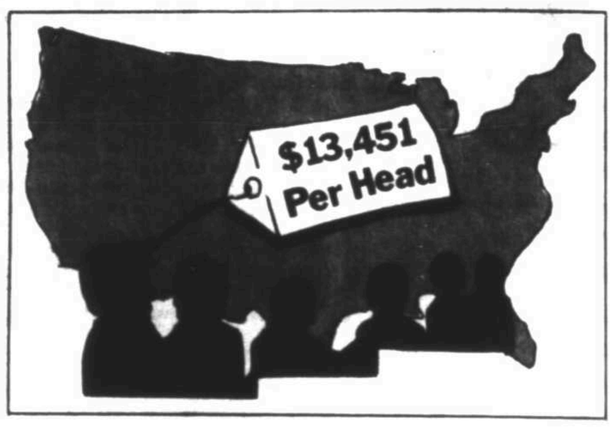

National Video and Bergen Brunswick Corp.'s Commtron Unit — the nation's largest franchise chain and largest video wholesale distributor, respectively — recently have dropped X-rated fare. Numerous convenience stores have similarly declined to carry pornographic cassettes.

Sales and rentals of videocassettes are estimated to bring in more than $2.3 billion annually. The X-rated share of that market is thought to be more than $250 million, and about three-fourths of the nation's video stores supplement their normal fare with X-rated tapes.

Typical Texas homebuyer

In a recent survey of 1984 Texas homebuyers, conducted by Dr. Don Albrecht, research scientist with the Texas Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University, the patterns and trends of the typical Texas homeower were charted. Some of the survey observations show the average homebuyer in Texas:

- Is married, between 25 and 34 years old, and has children under 18 living at home.
- Has a median family income exceeding $43,500 — more than double the median family income for Texans in general.
- Chooses a three-bedroom, two-bath, single-family home averaging 1,638 square feet.
- Considers the most important factors determining purchase to be initial purchase price, layout and design, financial terms of the purchase and the neighborhood.
- Pays a median price of $74,762 and a downpayment averaging 10 percent, usually paid out of personal savings or equity from the sale of a previous house.
- Makes mortgage payments of about $780 per month, including principal, interest, taxes and insurance.
- Has either fixed-rate or adjustable rate financing obtained from a mortgage company or a savings and loan.

Per capita income in the U.S. has risen, averaging $13,451 per person.

Rising income

Americans had higher per capita income in 1985, according to the Commerce Department.

Per capita personal income was $13,451 in 1985; a jump of $879 over 1984 figures. The report says the 1985 per capita income level is well above the 1985 inflation rate, estimated by the Commerce Department at 3.6 percent and by the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index at 3.8 percent.

Alaska led the states in per capita income with $17,756. At the bottom end of the scale, Mississippi was at $9,035. The New England states fared best among geographic regions, at $15,387 in per capita personal income, or 14 percent above the national average.

"New England is doing well because it has what you might call a favorable industrial mix," says Commerce Department Bureau of Economic Analysis expert Rudolph E. DePass.

PIPELINE—

Last week, the California Coastal Conservancy initially approved tax-exempt financing for the project. This funding will be used by Pacific Texas to dredge a 75-ft. deep channel and to create a 106-acre landfill island from the dredge material in Los Angeles Harbor for berthing and terminal facilities. These funds also will be used to restore 592 acres of deteriorated wetlands at Batiquitos Lagoon, near San Diego, as a mitigation measure.

The proposed $1.66 billion Pacific Texas Pipeline system will have a carrying capacity of 900,000 barrels of oil per day. The system will transport primarily Alaskan crude. It will also have the capability of transporting available heavier California crude oil. On arrival at Midland, the oil will enter 14 other existing pipeline systems for distribution to the Gulf Coast, Midwest and Eastern refineries.

The Pacific Texas project is expected to provide over 3,000 jobs for construction and manufacturing workers in California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas; help revitalize California and Texas' depressed steel industries; and provide substantial tax revenues to the four states.

INTERVIEW—

"Everybody, after completing an interview, wishes they had said something differently, or added something else. The follow-up is their chance. People fail to be their own best supporter by not following up an interview."

The final step in the interview process is to evaluate job offers. Offers should arranged by priority, looking back at the original job objective. After reassessing those objectives, a job seeker can realistically appraise and react to any offers received.

People should realize that knowing what to say and do on an interview is a form of insurance — insurance that most cannot afford to be without in today's uncertain job market.

TAX—

"We will need to continue monitoring the situation but this has not changed the feeling of the governor's office that a special session is not needed," Hamilton said.

Bullock's report said May sales tax collections totaled $438.4 million, compared with $458.7 million for the same month in 1985. He said the $20.3 million drop was due to declines in retail sales, services, construction and oil and gas.

In April, taxes from retail sales were up 10.9 percent while May's collections showed a 10.7 percent decline.

Taxes from services were down 12.7 percent in May, reversing a 15.5 percent gain in April, Bullock said.

Sales taxes from oil and gas were off by about 40 percent and construction was down about 18.5 percent.

Bullock told House members last week that Texas' financial woes were created largely by the worldwide plunge in oil prices and a corresponding drop in oil tax revenues. He said he will not officially change his $1.3 billion shortfall forecast until oil prices stabilize.

Strike talks show little progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The massive strike against American Telephone & Telegraph Co. entered its fifth day, with a company spokesman saying negotiators were "chipping away" at differences with the union but making little progress.

A spokeswoman for the striking union agreed Wednesday that little progress had been made in talks so far.

"There was a little movement, but not anything significant," Francine Zucker, spokeswoman for the Communications Workers of America, said of the informal session Wednesday between the top negotiators for each side — CWA Executive Vice President John Carroll and Robert Livingston, AT&T's director of labor relations.

Citing rising profits at AT&T, the union's president, Morton Bahr, has vowed that "this is the time and place" for breaking a pattern of concessionary contracts suffered by organized labor in recent years.

CWA represents 155,000 AT&T workers, making the walkout the nation's largest in three years.

"We keep chipping away at issues, but, from the company's standpoint, no progress is being made," said Herb Linnen, an AT&T spokesman. "Maybe there will be some in time."

AT&T officials, citing their offer of a 2 percent wage increase this year followed by 3 percent raises in 1987 and 1988, deny the company is seeking concessions.

Jesus Colorado, left, and Jack Sexton, right, explain why they're striking AT&T to Southwestern Bell technicians in Brownsville, Texas.

Ms. Zucker said the two sides remained far apart on key issues that triggered the walkout at midnight Saturday.

EXXON—

The company later said its goal was to eliminate 15 percent — or 6,075 jobs — from the staff offered the special employee separation package. Exxon said it would then trim staff at its own discretion.

"Since the initial phase of the program was voluntary, the company is currently evaluating the staffing balance in all functions to determine now many involuntary separations might be required," Exxon said in a statement Wednesday.

"The 15 percent target level was not across the board," an Exxon spokeswoman said. "The company is basically looking to see if we have all explorers and no producers. It will take the entire month of June to analyze staffing needs and staffing surpluses."

The last day on the payroll for employees asked to depart involuntarily will be July 21. Those staffers will receive the same compensation package as employees who accepted the option to retire early or resign.

Exxon made the request for resignations despite reporting a jump in 1986 first-quarter earnings to $1.7 billion, or $2.35 a share, from $1.3 billion, or $1.71 a share, in the opening quarter last year.

Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram

Jewelry for Dad - and a place in history

The significant increase in both the creation and use of jewelry in the past few decades restates a truth thousands of years old: Man needs personal adornment. The wearing of gold on the body is said to be man's oldest surviving tradition.

This Father's Day, why not give dad his rightful place in history? According to Jewelers of America, Inc. (JA), the national organization devoted to consumer information and education about fine jewelry, almost every society within every century has had its "most fashionable" jewelry form for man:

• Egyptians were associated with large pendant collar necklaces and cuffs.

• Etruscans and Greeks of the 7th to 4th centuries B.C. were noted for delicacy of design in gold "granulation" on buttons and fibulas (cloak pins) and other pieces.

• In the Dark Ages of the 5th through 8th centuries, the jewelry of the Goths, Franks, Anglo-Saxons and other tribes not only symbolized wealth and power but was the primary art form of these nomads. They had no other art, no architecture or books, and it was their most important form of artistic expression.

Brooches, buckles, rings and horse fittings featured cloisonne inset with exquisitely polished precious stones and bronze castings with gold and silver depicting animal masks, bird beaks and serpent bodies suggesting religious meaning.

• During the 14th to 18th centuries in Europe, men of the aristocracy and wealthy merchant classes adorned themselves with garlands of gold chains encrusted with rubies, pearls and sapphires. Each hand wore several rings, often several on each finger!

Medallions of gold and jewels were sewn to clothing of velvets, silks and furs. (It is worth noting here that until the 15th century women never wore diamonds...they were the privilege of men and reserved for kings and nobles.)

Man gave up his claim on all fine jewelry around the time of the Industrial Revolution. From that time, aside from signets, school rings and watches, it was a dormant category until the "chain revolution" of the mid-'70s.

The change in style of dress for the next decade portended a solid change for the design and wearing of men's jewelry. What is worn today is tied in with "image"..."status"...and meant to convey a "power message."

Two categories have emerged:

1. Tailored Classics...in cufflinks, signets, neckchains, bracelets and timepieces, mostly relying on traditional elements, such as diamonds and gold, with subtly modern details;

2. Avant Garde looks...combining precious and non-precious materials. All neckwear and wristwear, plus a tremendous range of rings, happily mix traditional karat gold, sterling silver and gemstones with such unlikely materials as titanium, lucite, leather, elephant hair, steel and woods of all types. This second look is geared more toward the young customer who favors non-traditional dressing.

Now, best-selling items are rings with modified geometric silhouettes, often set with small diamonds. Bi-color white and yellow gold mixtures are gaining popularity in both rings and cufflinks. Likewise, polished and matte gold combinations look fresh, yet have that tailored look preferred by more conservative men.

The vested suit has gradually faded out of fashion, making a simple bar or tie tac more of an essential item for dad to keep his tie in place.

Jewelry designers are offering many new styles, picking up hobby and sport themes to appeal to those looking for a new "twist" that doesn't interfere with an overall classic look in business clothing.

In non-dress jewelry, the trend is toward a design that is suitable for either casual or dress wear, such as open-link bracelets of silver or gold, watches with rugged bracelets and multi-function dials, and rings set with small channels of diamonds or a single colored gemstone such as black onyx, lapis lazuli or hematite.

The amulets of old have now been replaced by less ominous yet still significant modern day versions in pendants for men that typify sport and hobby themes, ancient or modern coins, and traditional religious motifs.

Jewelers of America (JA) believes dads deserve their rightful place in history, and what better way than to recognize their achievements in this time-honored tradition of jewelry gift-giving and wearing.

In order to help consumers find out more about fine jewelry, JA offers a series of informational brochures — free of charge — covering karat gold, diamonds, colored gemstones, pearls, platinum, watches, appraisals and care & cleaning, to anyone writing them at the address listed: Jewelers of America, Inc., 1271 Avenue of the Americas, Dept. MNS, New York, NY 10020.

The executive touch for the well dressed man: A tie-tac, cufflinks and a matching ring.

Make your dad "King for a day"

When was the last time you let dad sit back for an entire day without asking him to walk the dog, drive Susie to her friend's house or come home early from his golf game in order to start the family barbecue?

This Father's Day, make dad "King for the Day" with some extra special attention.

Here's how:

• Start his day with breakfast in bed and his favorite morning newspaper.

• Give him a present he'll really appreciate — a pair of soft, comfortable slippers — like Isotoner Comfort Slippers. They're perfect for lounging around the house and are great for traveling. Remind him to take them along on his next business trip or vacation.

• Let dad sit in "his" chair and watch his favorite movie on TV or, if he has a VCR, buy him a videotape of a movie he's always wanted to see.

• If the weather's nice outside, make dad his favorite drink and let him relax in the backyard under the cool shade of a big tree.

• Dinner with the whole family can be extra special for dad — especially if he can sit back, relax and enjoy the company, without the bother of making the food preparations on the barbecue!

Remember, giving dad the "royal treatment" on Father's Day will make him realize how much you love and appreciate all the things he does for you all year long.

Electronic gifts: Ideal presents for Dad's Day or any day

Whether dad's a sports enthusiast or a lover of classical music, the "outdoorsy" type or a busy executive, electronic gifts suit any lifestyle — and any budget, according to Daniel Infanti of Sharp Electronics Corporation.

"Some of Sharp's most popular products include an 'electronic address book' that stores 200 names and phone numbers, a compact disc player with remote control, small-screen TVs in several styles and pastel colors, digital blood pressure monitors and a range of high-tech products for the home office.

"For dads who own boats or recreational vehicles, Sharp even offers a tiny 13 x 13-inch microwave oven in five colors for quick and easy cooking."

Audio gifts are music to dad's ears

Any father will appreciate the gift of music, whether it's a personal headphone stereo, portable audio system, car stereo or today's most sought-after audio product — the compact disc player.

Says Infanti, "Only a few years ago, compact disc players were selling for $800 and more. Sharp now offers a unit with the added feature of remote control, along with several other models, at prices to meet any budget. With the affordable pricing of compact discs, a CD player is the ideal Father's Day gift."

Remote controls are now available on car stereos, too. Sharp's car stereo with remote control, for example, is ideal for recreational vehicles and boats.

The newest wrinkle in personal headphone stereos makes these portable units great gifts, too. One model from Sharp features a detachable microphone so that dad can use it for dictation on a business trip, as well as to enjoy music.

Enjoy video anywhere

Whether dad avidly watches the stock market report or is glued to the set for a football game, a tiny TV for the office or den is a great gift. "Many models offer screens as small as three-and-a-half inches," says Infanti. "Since many units can run on battery packs, they can be watched just about anywhere."

With the boom in stereo broadcasting and pre-recorded stereo cassettes, VHS format VCRs with stereo or hi-fi sound are also hot. More features for better picture and sound are available in today's models, says Infanti.

"HQ," a new video technology designed to boost picture quality to unprecedented levels of clarity and brilliance, is now widely available in VCRs and camcorders, a video camera and recorder in one compact unit.

"New technology has made shooting home movies with sound easier and the quality better than ever," he explains.

For the office at home

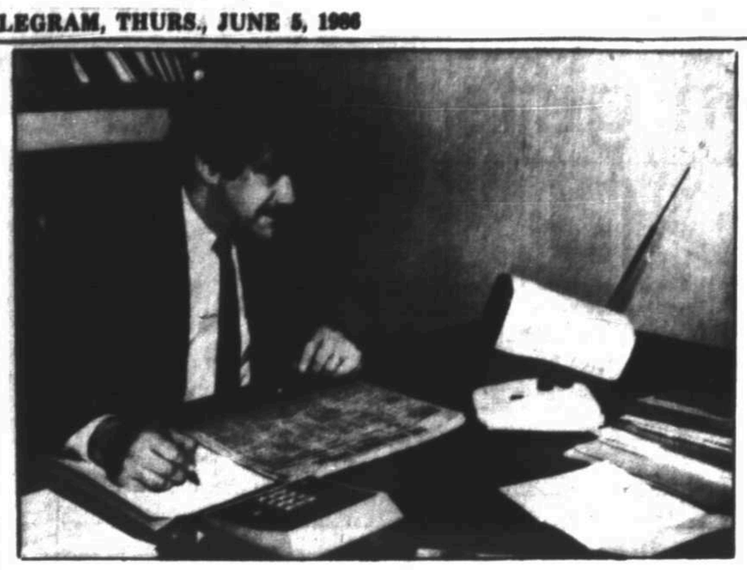

For fathers who often work at home, a host of electronic gadgets can make life easier. Some of Sharp's hottest-selling office products include printing calculators, lightweight personal computers and electronic typewriters so sophisticated they offer word processing, dictionary functions, memory — even a display window for editing copy.

According to Infanti, small-sized mini-copiers and facsimile machines are increasingly popular for small businesses and home offices.

A new twist in calculators and one of Sharp's most popular items is the Little Black Book phonebook/calculator. It not only stores up to 200 names and phone numbers, but functions as an electronic memo pad, data bank and regular calculator for storage of important notes, business expenses, shopping lists and more.

Give the gift of good health

The gift of good health is appropriate for any time of year and, with the new professionally accurate and simple to use digital blood pressure monitors on the market, dad can easily keep track of a very important indicator of good health.

Whether Dad avidly watches the stock market report or is glued to the set for a football game, a tiny television for the office or den makes an ideal Father's Day gift.

Uncommon gifts for dad

All right, so dad probably has one already. After all, what man could be without one? At the least, he probably has a ton of duplicates from Father's Days past — an unignorable alarm clock, a self-tipping hat, a hunting decoy, a personal fire escape — doesn't every dad?

Well, don't let such unimaginative redundancy cast a shadow on your Father's Day festivities! Instead, rely on a more 'modern' and up-to-the-minute source. Turn to Chilton, "the automotive authority."

A great deal has changed since 1910 when Mrs. John Bruce Dodd of Spokane, Washington, first introduced us to Father's Day.

Today, both dad and mom work in order to keep the household and the economy oiled and functioning smoothly. In the past decade, the U.S. has created 13.5 million jobs, and by the 1990s an estimated 80 percent of women under 45 will be employed outside of the home.

There will be a need to share more of the household responsibilities, and leisure time will be at a premium with even more schedule demands. So make it easier on dad (and his bank account) by providing him with the most complete and accurate source of automotive information.

Chilton's Auto Repair Manual (CARM) for 1986 and 1987 is designed specifically for the "do-it-yourselfer" with two convenient, easy-to-use sections and is available in a durable 8½" x 11" hardcover format.

The car sections cover specific makes and models grouped according to manufacturer and body style with specifications, removal, and installation and service procedures unique to each automobile.

The unit repair sections cover component repair and overhaul. The two major sections in each of the manuals can be cross-referenced with ease by using the application charts.

CARM 1986 and 1987 both come replete with nearly 3,000 drawings and photographs plus thousands of tables and specifications that supplement the complete coverage of virtually every major operating system of the car.

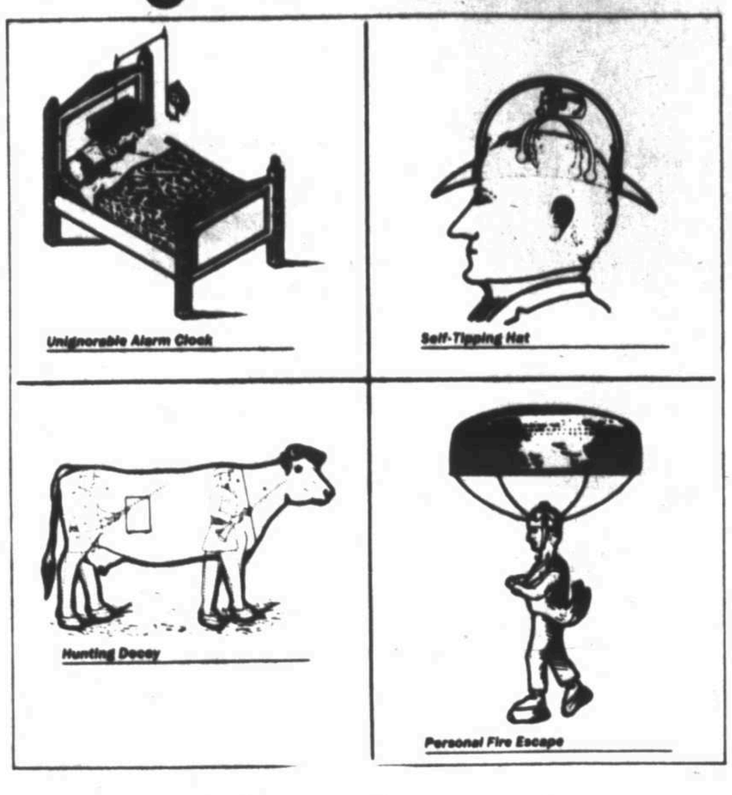

Chilton's Import Car Repair Manual, also for 1986 and 1987, is easily accessible in the same-sized hardcover format, and features 17 unit repair sections that cover the maintenance, repair and operation of automotive systems, from air conditioning to turbocharging, for every car imported into the U.S. and Canada in significant numbers.

In 1986, Ford Motor Company sees a chance that their truck and van sales may exceed their passenger car sales.

Whether dad has recently purchased a domestic or import pick-up truck, a van, an RV or a chassis cab unit (with a quarter ton to one ton rating), Chilton is there to assist dad with his newest acquisition.

Recently released is Chilton's Truck & Van Repair Manual 1979-86 that covers Chevrolet, Datsun, Dodge, Ford, GMC, Jeep, International Harvester, Isuzu, Mazda, Mitsubishi, Plymouth, Toyota and Volkswagen. When it comes to saving time and money, this manual covers it all in complete detail with charts and exploded views on any of these 1979-86 vehicles.

Also popular are today's motorcycles and all-terrain (ATV) vehicles. Designed with maximum ease of use by all "D-I-Yers" (remember, that's do-it-yourselfers), is Chilton's Motorcycle & ATV Repair Manual 1945-85 that comes replete with detailed information on basic concepts, schematics and hands-on photos.

MIDLAND PARK
M·A·L·L

Love You, Dad
If you don't tell him often enough, let him know on June 15. A Father's Day gift from Midland Park Mall can help express just how much you care. Wrap up a gift of love for Dad, from Midland Park.

How about a fountain pen for Father's Day?

Research has demonstrated that Father's Day gifts tend to be practical, gifts of things that dad needs or could use.

Perhaps this is a reflection of the fact that dad so often puts off buying things for himself, so that the rest of the family can have a bit more . . . or simply that he hates to shop, even if he likes nice things.

Useful gifts needn't be boring. What men could use most, after all, is something to make each day a bit more colorful and interesting. How about a fountain pen?

Fountain pens are enjoying renewed popularity today. Many younger men are discovering, for the first time, the special, pleasurable feel this writing instrument offers.

No other writing instrument responds to the writer like a fountain pen. It enhances the written word by adding style to the stroke. It makes a subtle, yet very meaningful statement about the user's mood and personality.

Decidedly upscale in image, fountain pens are also benefiting from a trend in nostalgia. Recently, syndicated columnist George Will devoted an entire column to praise the fountain pen.

He went so far as to link the ballpoint with a decline in civilization, as reflected in waning literacy and the introduction of bureaucratic forms in triplicate. That may be a bit extreme, but the fountain pen is a personal and involving instrument.

The Connaisseur, designed with the look and feel that appeals to men, is a re-creation of one of the original pens inspired by Walter A. Sheaffer, a jeweler, in the early 20th century.

It features a solid 18K gold classic nib, the most flexible, most responsive nib ever designed. Its lustrous black finish, accented with 23K gold electroplate, makes an elegant finishing touch to the well dressed man's image in business.

And since we live in a modern world, a matching ballpoint pen, similarly styled, with the oversized heft so comfortable to a man's larger hand, is also available.

Nostalgia is back in fashion and so is the fountain pen. Give Dad a gift that combines the best of the old and the new.

Cosmetic pointers for Dad

Everyone knows the saying "beauty's more than skin deep." The Men's Fashion Association notes that the way a man dresses is imperative to the image he wants to portray. But, today's man knows a well-groomed male is much more than just the clothes he is wearing.

So why not purchase a new skin moisturizer, aftershave cologne or even take dad for a new haircut for Father's Day. This can change his appearance, which will make him feel good about himself. Hairstyles and the proper skin care products are important parts of achieving a totally confident, put-together look.

Men should treat their skin just as well as they do their shoes and their most expensive suit. Below are some skin care tips from specialists in the field, which will help to make a man's skin look its best and will give you some ideas of the kinds of gifts dad might need.

• When a man shaves, it is very important not to use harsh soaps, or shaving foams with chemicals or detergents in them.

• Do not use aftershaves which contain fragrances; they irritate and dry out the skin.

• Purchase a shaving cream with moisturizer in it. It sets the beard up, making it easier to shave and is less harsh on the skin.

• A light moisturizer with collagen is excellent to put on after shaving.

• Do not use a heavy moisturizer throughout the day because it clogs the pores.

• When applying shaving cream do not use stiff washcloths or synthetic abrasive pads.

• Avoid scented cologne right after you shave, as it can cause rashes.

If a man wants to look up-to-date and in fashion, the proper haircut and grooming tips should not be overlooked. As fashions evolve and become new and exciting, so do the hairstyles which reflect the mood of the season.

Below are some hair care tips and the newest styles for the man of the eighties.

• Wash and condition hair at least five times a week.

• For dry hair, keep conditioner in longer and try not to blow dry it every day.

Fashionable gift options

As Father's Day approaches once again, you are concerned with selecting an appropriate gift for dad that he will appreciate and enjoy — one that will get you the most for your money and remain within your budget.

According to the Men's Fashion Association, designers and manufacturers for spring/summer '86 are focusing on the need of today's busy man and his demand for quality. Offered this season are a multitude of clothing options for all occasions at affordable prices, which will make Father's Day purchases a breeze this year.

Reaching new heights this season, sweater dressing has gained recognizable popularity. The trend is loose and relaxed. So why not purchase an oversized sweater, which will give him an updated look that is comfortable! It can have a letterman's stripe or two around the sleeve in colors that range from the inspirations of the sea in red, white and blue to the hues of the desert floor. Cardigans, vests and pullovers are the perfect gifts to update dad's casual and business wardrobe.

room meetings choose from a wide selection of windowpane plaids and interesting stripings in assorted contrasting colors. Choose two or three variations and you have a terrific gift dad can wear over and over agin.

Leisure and active sportswear is knock-out bright and bold, with awning stripes and tropical florals in a variety of hot colors. For the father who is daring, purchase a button-down beach print camp shirt with a color-coordinating vest. But, the shirt must have longer tails that will hang below the cut of the vest.

Pleated front shorts, jams and boxers make a great gift which dad will enjoy wearing all summer long. Drawstrings, cuffs and back pocket treatments make summer shorts fun and fashionable. Madras shorts with matching shirts are very popular for those active summer weekends.

Denim is always a welcome addition to any man's wardrobe. Durable, versatile and moderately priced denim jeans are worn for casual comfort. It's no surprise that western wear is in style across the country, with the traditional five pocket jean and the new wider-legged trouser worn with a blazer and cowboy boots — now that's Texas! Gray, black, sunny pastels, florals and tie-dyed looks are the newest craze in denim.

For a multi-itemed Father's Day gift package, bring new accessories into dad's everyday lifestyle. Introduce him to suspenders in solid colors and stripes, belts in bold colors of leather and wovens, ties with paisley prints and bold, bright stripes. And top it off with a new hat or, better yet, a cap in natty tweeds.

What about some tee-shirts, not white but lavender, pink and turquoise! For the dad who really likes those "Vice" guys, purchase a pair of espadrilles and don't bother buying socks. Trousers are neutral to coordinate with bright shirts. The styles are double or triple pleated with a fit that is loose and comfortable.

For Father's Day there are many options to choose from that are kind to your budget and will make dad look and feel good. In the world of fashion, the one thing which remains the same from season to season is people's awareness of quality and price.

Contemporary classic

For its classically correct sport coat for summer '86, Austin Reed of Regent Street chooses a princely blend of Du Pont "Dacron" - the original polyester - and linen. The subtle windowpane motif is an added fashion touch.

Casual comfort

The power of the plaid is abstracted to the limits of scale, rendered fresh against a sparkling canvas of white in the crew neck jacquard sweater from Colours by Alexander Julian. The big bird's-eye weave pattern, in shades of sea foam, burgundy, gray, royal and sienna, is set off-center for added impact. Extending the design theme, sleeves echo the bird's-eye motif, and collar and cuffs are color-banded. Blue knit shirt and silver herringbone cotton worsted pants also Colours by Alexander Julian.

You've come a long way Dad

...Welcome back

When men began to leave their farms and smithies for factories at the start of the Industrial Revolution, they also left behind the bucolic countryside for the hurly-burly of the city, the warm friendliness of the family hearth for the harsh impersonality of the office or mill floor.

Changes in family structure

That was the beginning of a change, a change in the lives of women and children, and their relationships with their husbands and fathers. This change persisted for the next 200 years, with little variation. Father had become the teacher of morals and ethics. Mother, at home with the children, took over as family disciplinarian and teacher, a role that heretofore had been the province of the man in the family.

Dad, you've come a long way back, in the past couple of decades. Now that well over 60 percent of all mothers hold down a job in the work place, as well as manage the household, there's no way she can "do it all" and still survive.

Fathers have been domesticated again! They are washing dishes. They are doing laundry. They are running vacuum cleaners, cooking up a storm at the range, and taking a firm hold helping their children with school lessons. And they're liking it.

The established image of father as the breadwinner is being dissipated as more and more families find that it takes more than one income to succeed ... no matter how they try!

And, mothers, accustomed to the workplace, want to get back, once their children are old enough for day care or nursery school, or to shift for themselves.

Today, nearly 50 percent of all mothers of children under three are working at outside jobs! But 70 percent of mothers with children under 18 are now back in the work place.

Looking ahead to the next decade it is estimated that fully 80 percent of all women will be holding down not only the job of manager of the home, but also serving in an expanded work force that offers more opportunities than ever before, especially in the service trades where women excel!

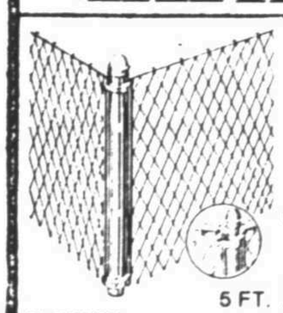

What's good for father and mother is good for the family. Working mothers and fathers might have less "quantity" of time to spend with the children, but studies indicate that the "quality" of time they give is heightened.

Positive aspects for children

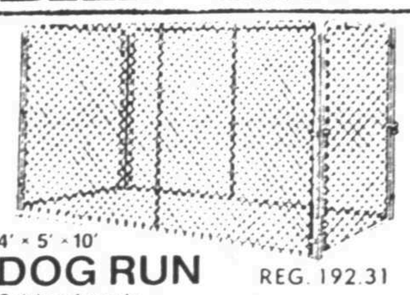

And the children benefit from a wider range of disciplined and directed activities in which they are privileged to participate.

So, after centuries of isolation from the family, all during the work week (which just a few decades ago ranged up to 60 hours), dad has returned to shared responsibility for his home and family. And sharing is the essence of familiness, and familiness is the foundation upon which our democratic society rests.

Dad and his thriving single parent household

...A social phenomenon

More and more men are demanding and getting custody of their children.

The increase in the number of single-parent homes is a social phenomenon that's immediate and distressing. In the millions today, unchecked, the total could rise to tens of millions in the decade ahead.

Granted, most of the single parent homes are headed by women. However, the number of father-headed households is on the upward curve.

And when father decides to be the single parent, responsible for the future of his children, it's always because the feeling is deep, the conviction sincere, the means to support a family well in hand.

Perhaps divorce or separation creates the opportunity. Or, the death of a mate forces it. Well over 200,000 households today are held together by dad, and the trend will continue to move along.

Over the decades, the courts more often have seen fit to award custody of the children of a broken home to the mother, on the grounds that she is better psychologically equipped to guide their development.

But, with the return of dad to a more balanced lifestyle, between home and the work place, more and more men are demanding and getting custody of their children.

Single dads often make the best dads. They tend to over-compensate by doing more for their children in the time they have, guiding them with abiding love and care, helping smooth over the rough spots in the transition to a balanced life.

But not all single dads have full time custody. More of them, in fact, most of them, don't. But when it's their turn to "share" the children, they tend to make the most of it, with a crammed schedule of athletic events, movies, sightseeing jaunts, and maybe even a "dad-cooked" meal or two.

Once a dad, always a dad. As our perception of social responsibility reaches a new balance, we're likely to witness more of the single dad evolvement into the commonplace.

And then there was Father's Day

Sonora Smart was one of six children. She and her five brothers, born toward the close of the 19th century, were children of the emerging West.

When she was still very young, her mother passed away. The onus of rearing the young Smart tribe fell heavily on the shoulders of their father, William Smart, a veteran of the Civil War.

That he rose to the challenge is a matter of Father's Day lore and history. Because, after the only daughter Sonora grew up, married, and became a mother herself, the inspirational sacrifices of her devoted father overwhelmed her with a sense of gratitude.

The year was 1909. Her young son was at her side, and she was aglow with happiness when the idea of a Father's Day, to honor her revered father — and all of America's fathers — came upon her.

The idea took on a life of its own. For the next year, Sonora Smart, now Mrs. John Bruce Dodd, crusaded in her adopted home town of Spokane.

She enlisted the support of the Spokane Ministerial Association. She got the backing of the YMCA. Encouragement came from the Mayor of Spokane.

Success crowned her campaign when the first Father's Day was observed in Spokane on June 19, 1910! That was the third Sunday of June, and Father's Day has been woven into the fabric of our society on that date ever since!

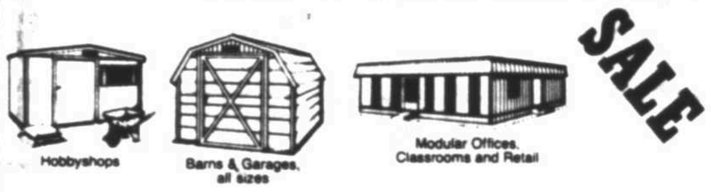

As it happened, Mrs. Dodd had wanted Father's Day to be celebrated the first Sunday in June which, in 1910, was her father's birthday.

But the local ministers, who were to preach special Father's Day sermons from their pulpits that Sunday, were not able to prepare and coordinate them in time. The compromise of the third Sunday was agreed upon, and has not changed in 76 years.

Eight groups, three agencies vie for CD funds

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Applications to the city for use of $659,850 in community development funds have doubled over last year, while the funding has decreased by almost 27 percent.

At 7 p.m. tonight in the City Council chambers, the Planning and Zoning Commission will hear requests for almost $1 million from eight private organizations and three city departments vying for $659,850 in Community Development Block Grant funds. This year's grant was reduced from last year's $899,000 to $659,850. The commission will make recommendations to the council, which will review applications on July 8.

When Midland began to accept money from the Department of Housing and Urban Development in 1981, the grant was close to $1 million. Since then, the development funds designed to improve the quality of city life have decreased almost consistently due to federal budget cuts, said Bob Miklo, city planning administrator.

To win a portion of the funds, groups are going to have to have "a good proposal that will help a lot of people," Miklo said. The funds must be used in the east and south areas of Midland targeted for improvement.

Last year two of the three private groups requesting money received funds. The council denied a request for a $20,000 study on housing on the city's east and south sides by the League of Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council. However the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce received $35,000 for an Eastside Economic Development Task Force study. The Freewill Foster Home also received $20,000 to build a storage building.

The tentative requests this year include:

— $276,000 from the Black Advisory Council for a tutorial-referral communication center.

— $200,000 from the Eastside Economic Development Task Force for a revolving loan fund for small businesses.

— $166,064 from city Code Enforcement to continue the demolition of vacant buildings and clearing of vacant lots.

— $50,000 from the city administration for salaries and materials used to ensure that Community Development funds are used within federal guidelines.

— $101,000 from Parks and Recreation for resurfacing tennis courts at Ulmer Park, lighting the ball field at Hidalgo Park and adding lights to Washington Park.

— $100,000 from the Housing Authority and the Human Relations Council for rehabilitating low income homes.

— $75,000 from the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children for an additional shelter with a capacity for 64 women and children and two transitional apartments.

— $50,000 from the Police Department for a lock and security program for low income and elderly households.

— $24,394 from Langtry Village to refurbish buildings and install a sprinkler system.

— $22,000 from the Eastside Development Task force for the organization of a small business incubator sharing secretary and copying services.

— $12,000 from the Freewill Foster Home for landscaping and a van.

— $12,000 from Clean Midland for city beautification efforts.

— $10,000 for a contingency fund to complete any projects left unfinished.

— $5,000 from Taylor Park Day Care for educational equipment.

— $3,000 from Citywide Community Services for the Aged to fund a staff of housecleaners for the elderly.

The Public Works Department may also request funding to improve streets, based on public requests at tonight's hearing, said Fred Baker, director of public works. Last year, public works used $328,000 for street improvements and paving.

"At the public hearing people say we want street paving and we put the project together. We never know if people are going to request paving," Baker said.

Smith says victory depends on turnout

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Lamar Smith says a high turnout Saturday will help him win the GOP nomination to the 21st Congressional District, also sought by Republican Van Archer.

"The momentum is there. We just need to take it all the way. The key is turnout," Smith said.

The San Antonio native says he expects about half of the 58,000 Republicans who voted in the May 3 primary to turn out. In the primary Smith garnered 31 percent of vote, while Archer achieved 25 percent.

Smith was in Midland Wednesday to receive the endorsement of Perry Bolger, past president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. The association has about 1,500 members.

"What has impressed me most about Lamar, is that he listens to the people in the oil and gas business. The most important aspect is he will listen," Bolger said.

Bolger says he wants the 21st Congressional District representative to be "totally single minded" when it comes to representing the energy.

"I would like to see representation for the 21st Congressional District be single minded in what's best for the oil and gas industry, short term and long term," he said.

"I would like to see an energy policy established that doesn't say cheaper foreign oil is best for the country."

One of Smith's dominant campaign themes is that he will work for a national energy policy and a temporary oil import fee to stabilize the price of oil at $22 a barrel.

"We don't have a free market system so it's time to take some action. Low oil prices might sound good today, but the long-term consequences are devastating. We need more people to think about the long-term consequences of prices staying low. Sooner or later, all Americans will wake up to the fact that cheap foreign oil is detrimental," Smith said.

Smith says he hopes to develop a sensitivity among representatives from the 40 non-oil producing states to the energy industry, if he is elected.

"I have a record of being able to work on the other side of the aisle. I will not insult them or indulge in namecalling," Smith said.

College selects new fine arts chairman

Jacobs wants to expand 'cultural opportunities' for city

From Staff Reports

Dr. Stanley G. Jacobs, longtime art instructor, has been selected as chairman of the Midland College Fine Arts Division. He will replace Dr. Charles A. Stewart, who is retiring later this summer.

Joining the Midland College faculty in September, 1971, Jacobs was the first full-time art instructor employed by the college.

In his new post, Jacobs has administrative supervision over programs in music, commercial music, art, drama, dance, architecture, journalism, and photography. He will continue to teach two art courses each semester.

"During his six years at Midland College, Dr. Stewart has developed excellent rapport with the community in all the fine arts and performing arts areas," Jacobs said. "My goal is to continue developing the college's role in these areas, to offer instruction serving the needs of both the traditional college student and those seeking self-improvement, and to provide cultural opportunities for the entire community."

College President Dr. Jess Parrish said "The selection committee interviewed a large number of excellent applicants, both from within and outside. They determined that Dr. Jacobs had both the experience and the qualities needed to fill this post.

"I'm pleased with their nomination and concur with their belief that Dr. Jacobs can continue the positive relationship between the college and the community."

Dr. Stanley G. Jacobs

"I recall when I joined the Midland College faculty, we borrowed space from the Museum of the Southwest to teach art courses. It was exciting when the campus was completed and we had two large rooms in a wing of the Administration Building."

— Dr. Stanley G. Jacobs

Jacobs received his bachelor of fine arts degree from Washburn University in Topeka, Kan. and his master of fine arts degree in sculpture from the University of Kansas. He earned his Doctor of Philosophy degree in arts administration from Texas Tech University.

"I recall when I joined the Midland College faculty, we borrowed space from the Museum of the Southwest to teach art courses," Jacobs said. "It was exciting when the campus was completed and we had two large rooms in a wing of the Administration Building. But we realized how much the community was behind the fine arts program when the Fine Arts Building was designed to include the large auditorium, excellent music, journalism, photography, and arts facilities, plus the spacious McCormick Gallery for major exhibitions."

Jacobs recently was elected as president of the Midland Arts Association for 1986-87. He previously served the MAA as president in 1975-76. He also has served twice as president of the Midland College Faculty Council, and has been a member of the exhibitions committee of the Museum of the Southwest. He also has been active in church youth activities.

As an artist and teacher, Jacobs is extremely versatile. He has taught drawing, watercolor, oil painting, sculpture, and jewelry. His works in various media have been exhibited widely, winning numerous awards locally and throughout the Southwest.

Slick big-city reporter gets taste of Panhandle

By JANE A. GRANDOLFO

PERRYTON (AP) — A 13-year-old boy whose life is centered in this small Texas town surrounded by golden wheat fields was able to teach a slick New York City reporter a few things about the good life recently.

The reporter, from People magazine, will then tell nearly three million readers about Ochiltree County's feedlots, oil rigs, abundant farm land and his first horseback ride.

And this is all in the name of international diplomacy.

Roy Montgomery, a Perryton Junior High student, responded to an article in People magazine a few months ago that invited readers to suggest an all-American town that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev could visit if a summit meeting was held between the two nations.

Roy's essay caught the eye of a senior editor of People magazine; it was one of 20 selected out of nearly 7,000 submitted.

"The single thing that really caught me was the enthusiasm of the writers, who really seemed to want the head of Russia to see things that are truly American," said Dick Lemon, a senior editor at People.

Although the possibility of a summit meeting may be remote, a glimpse of these All-American 20 towns will grace the pages of an upcoming People magazine, Lemon said.

So Alan Richman, a reporter for the magazine, sharpened his pencils, loaded his camera and headed for towns all the way from California to New England.

One of his stops was in Perryton, a town of 7,991 about 120 miles northeast of Amarillo, to capture what Roy described in his essay as "a real working community."

Triathlon to kick off Saturday

From Staff Reports

The Tall City Triathlon will kick off at 7:30 a.m. Saturday with at least 300 participants expected to enter.

The triathlon is a joint effort of the Midland County Chapter of the March of Dimes and the Midland Metropolitan YMCA to raise money to fight birth defects. The official name of the competition was changed this year to Hoffman Memorial Tall City Triathlon in honor of George Hoffman, the race director last year, who was killed six days before the race while inspecting the course.

The triathlon will consist of a one km (.62 mile) swim at Doug Russell/-Alamo pool, a 30 km (18.6 mile) bike ride between Midland and Odessa and will conclude with a 10 km (6.2 mile) run at Mission Dorado Country Club.

Spectators are welcome at both Doug Russell pool and Mission Dorado Country Club. However, in order to lighten traffic on Highway 191 for the race participants, the race committee is requesting spectators take U.S. Highway 80 to Mission Dorado. From Midland, go west on U.S. 80, take the access road at Farm-to-Market 1788, go two miles and turn right on Bankhead Highway.

Laundry rooms wring out bright spirits

Without doubt, I have stumbled upon the perfect solution for curing optimism and bright spirits — the commercial laundry room.

Short of death row and a concentration camp, I cannot imagine any more disquieting place on Earth than a people's laundry room. I had rather walk barefoot through the Big Thicket, drink Monahans Draw water, never see Big Bend again, and listen (with ear-plugs, of course) to acid-rock music than wash clothes in a Laundromat or washateria. It is depressing and gloomy.

I can hardly imagine anything more distasteful than washing your dirty clothes amid a bunch of strangers who are staring at graffiti on walls, thumbing through torn tabloids, frowning at crying kids, gossiping about soap-opera characters and their neighbors and spouses, and wishing they were somewhere else doing something else.

I abhor commercial laundry rooms but apparently not as much as I dislike wearing, smelling or looking at dirty laundry.

Dread.

You see, I will — given virtually no choice — use but with due reluctance and silent protests a laundry room. Afterward, I feel like sanitizing myself. I'll wash in public with the dread of walking into the boss's office with a guilty conscience I hope he's not aware of. Fortunately, I don't have to.

I'm sorry if I have offended those who rather enjoy the gloom of a dismal washroom and who think the churning noise of washers is low-frequency music and is therapeutic. Sick.

'Tis a pity if there are such souls.

Of course, I regret if I have offended those who make their money or increase their debts taking quarters from the gurgling monsters whose only task in life is to make money while washing dirty laundry.

As I have suggested, washaterias do have a redeeming quality. They do get clothes clean if everything, including the soap, agitator, and hot-water heater, are working properly.

But what I suggest to help rid America of public washrooms is for house and apartment builders to pitch in washing machines and driers along with hot-water heaters when they offer houses and apartments for sale or rent. You see, once in the house, the washer and drier cease being monsters (unless they malfunction) and become mechanical helpmates and much-appreciated tools. They only become rabid and malcontent when they are cast into a ward of other gurgling monsters where cleanliness is not synonymous with godliness.

Private space firm ready to blast off

By PAUL RECER

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Accidents may have grounded the space fleets of NASA, the Air Force and the European Space Agency, but a private rocket company headed by former astronaut Donald K. Slayton is ready to put satellites into orbit.

"All that we need are customers who have money," said Slayton, one of America's original seven astronauts. He retired from NASA in 1982 to become president of Space Services Inc., the nation's first privately financed satellite launching company.

With all the major space systems in the West grounded, Space Services is the only enterprise ready to sell commercial satellite launch services.

NASA's space shuttle program was halted after Challenger blew up Jan. 28. Subsequent failures of the Titan and Delta expendable rockets shut down the entire U.S. government launch systems. And Friday, a failure of the French Ariane rocket forced postponement of European commercial launches.

Space Services, based in Houston, successfully sent a suborbital test rocket aloft in 1982, and has since engineered a family of rockets designed to launch small, unmanned satellites. It has negotiated for use of six potential launch sites, including the government's space centers, and has manufacturers ready to build the rocket engines and other needed hardware.

But, said Slayton, there are no customers with firm launch dates.

David Hannah, president of Space Services, shows a picture of the Conestoga II rocket that the private company will use to launch satellites into orbit.

"The problem in the whole space world today is that there has not yet been a big breakthrough in anything that is purely commercial, other than telecommunications," he said.

But David Hannah, chairman and founder of Space Services, said he is even more optimistic about launching small satellites now than when he started the firm in 1981.

"The larger satellites are harder to finance now because the insurance rates have gone up so high," said Hannah. "There's lots that can be done with smaller, less risky satellites."

Slayton once expected Space Services to tap into the oil business with satellites that could sweep the Earth with powerful sensors and detect formations that might hold oil and gas. Space pictures have been used successfully by some geologists.

"There was a time when it looked like that would be a heck of a good business," said Slayton. "With the right combination of sensors, you could sell individual oil companies their own system."

However, "With the price of oil being what it is today, there's nobody out there spending exploration money," said Slayton.

Space Services has a tentative agreement with Celestis Group Inc. a Melbourne, Fla., funeral home chain, to put cremated human remains into space. Company President Jim Kuhl said some services have been sold but declined to say how many. He said Celestis would not be ready for a launch before 1988.

Kuhl said Celestis will use a process that reduces the remains of a 200-pound man to about one ounce of ash, small enough to be placed into a tube about the size of a lipstick. He said an orbiting mausoleum would contain up to 10,330 of the tubes.

Space Services plans to put the space tomb into a 2,200-mile orbit at a cost of about $15 million, with each client paying $3,900.

"It would stay up there for about 63 million years," said Kuhl. "I don't know anything on Earth that would last that long."

Will SBC churches turn into houses of debate?

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — If strife continues to plague the Southern Baptist Convention, the church might turn into a house for debate instead of worship and members could become enemies rather than brothers and sisters in Christ, a top Baptist official says.

A decade-long conflict between conservative and moderate factions, rooted in differing interpretations of the Bible, has led to a fight for control of the church's boards and agencies.

"The only happy aspect of what we're experiencing right now is that the controversy has stayed on the national level and has not permeated the state conventions and individual churches," said Harold Bennett, the convention's chief administrative officer.

"I have an uneasy feeling that this conflict could move to our 38 state conventions and eventually into the individual church, which would be tragic," Bennett said in an interview Tuesday before leaving for Atlanta to attend the annual convention, which begins next week.

About 50,000 delegates are expected at the three-day gathering, which represents the 14.5 million members constituting America's largest Protestant denomination.

Critics charge that, in a church whose goal is to share the gospel with every person in the world by the year 2000, Southern Baptists have not only managed to hurt the evangelism movement but have given new meaning to the phrase, "doing your dirty laundry in public."

Even a decision by a convention exhibitor not to sell a book examining the controversy has sparked disagreement between the book's author and the denomination's publishing house.

Bennett acknowledges that publicity over the tension has not helped the reputation of the Southern Baptist denomination. However, despite the barrage of negative headlines, its church rolls have continued to grow, he said, although the percentages of increases have begun to slacken.

Since organizing an aggressive expansion program in 1979, the Southern Baptist denomination has added 1.4 million members, attracted 642,000 people to its Sunday school program, started 1,575 new churches, baptized 1.1 million people and increased its annual mission budget from $90 million to $136 million, Bennett said.

The primary issue before this year's convention is whether the conservative faction will continue its seven-year monopoly of the denomination's top elected position — a trend that continued last year in Dallas with the election of The Rev. Charles Stanley, an fundamentalist pastor from Atlanta.

Nominated for president this year are the Rev. Adrian Rogers, a conservative from Memphis, Tenn., and the Rev. Winfred Moore, of Amarillo, Texas, backed by the moderate sector.

"I'm not sure if there's an edge to one side or another. However, precedent for the last seven years is that the conservative candidate is elected. If that says anything, that may give an edge to Adrian Rogers," Bennett said.

Dissension began in the mid-1970s and reached the convention level in 1979 when the body began electing a string of conservative presidents, beginning with Rogers.

Midlander in critical condition after shooting

From Staff Reports

A 57-year-old Midland man remains in critical condition today at Midland Memorial Hospital after being shot Thursday night, according to police.

T.P. Hyson, 1102 East Pecan, was shot around 12 a.m. today while at a home on East Wall. Hyson was struck once in the abdomen after a shot was fired through the front door of the house, police said.

No arrests have been made, but police say Hyson may have been arguing earlier with the person who shot him.

In other law enforcement reports, almost $9,000 worth of items were taken from a Midland home between 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. Wednesday. Pat Barron Frith, 4301 Mercedes, told police officers a $523 videocassette recorder, a $400 pistol, a rifle of unknown value and an $8,000 one carat marquise cut diamond necklace were taken from his home.

Dunigan Tool & Supply Company Inc., 3009 Garden City Highway, reported the theft of $1,793 in oil field equipment. Raymond Bohannon, 4725 Country Club, told sheriff's officers that 11 two-inch WKM ball valves worth $163 each were taken sometime between 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesday.

About $1,600 in damage occurred to Centrilift-Hughes, 2065 Market St, after five windows and one door window were shot out around 12:45 a.m. today, the sheriff office reports. Sheriff's officers are seeking a small light colored car in connection with the incident.

Larry Mitchell, 3306 Neely, told police over $850 in items were taken from his business at 603 North Baird between May 1 and Wednesday. Among the items taken were a $250 microphone, a $150 microphone, a $100 bicycle and a $200 bicycle, according to police reports.

Police Roundup

Charges filed against two involved in fatal accident

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Charges have been filed against two drivers involved in a Saturday night accident that claimed the life of a 3-year-old girl.

According to police spokesman John McAhon, 27-year-old Francisco Moreno Rosas, 214 S. Tom Green Ave., has been cited for failing to yield the right-of-way and violating the child safety seat restraint law.

Jose T. Banuelos, 19, 602 MacArthur Ave., has been cited for leaving the scene of an accident with an occupied vehicle. Explaining the charge against Banuelos, McAhon said, that while he did remain at the scene and render aid, as required by law, he left the scene before identifying himself and providing information to investigating police officers, which is also required by law. Valerie Duran was riding in the Rosas' car with her mother, Martha Duran, 33, 1601 N. Tom Green, and 1-year-old sister Joann, late Saturday night when the car driver by Rosas collided at the intersection of Pool Road and South Crane Avenue with vehicle driven by Banuelos. The child was ejected from the Rosas vehicle and suffered multiple injuries. She was pronounced dead about two hours later at Medical Center Hospital. The mother and sister were treated and released from MCH.

According to reports, McAhon said, the Durans were not wearing seat belts at the time of the accident.

Banuelos stayed at the scene until the injured were placed in a private vehicle and taken to the hospital, police said.

Austin may close historic school

AUSTIN (AP) — The last day of school this spring at Pease Elementary School had an extra-special meaning in the school's 110-year history.

The students who said goodbye to the school Tuesday might be the last ever to bid farewell to the oldest school in Texas built entirely with public funds.

A suggestion to close Pease, near downtown Austin, is being considered by school officials looking for ways to ease a budget crunch facing the Austin Independent School District.

Though parents at the school strongly oppose the idea because many work downtown and want their children in a school nearby, the students have their reasons for wanting Pease to stay open.

"I want to be with my friends. It's just a lot of fun here. My parents work downtown, and they can pick me up and we ride home together," said fifth-grader Brian Lopez.

"We have a good education here, and I think it would be a terrible shame to the state and to Austin to close it down because it is the oldest running school in the state," said Jon Mendl, a fifth grader. "We need to conserve old buildings."

Angelo backing Archer in runoff

From Staff Reports

Ernest Angelo, Texas Republican national committeeman, has announced his support for Van Archer in the 21st Congressional District runoff.

Angelo, a former Midland mayor, was Reagan for President co-chairman in 1976, Reagan for President chairman in 1980 and served as chairman of the National Advisory Committee for the Reagan-Bush campaign in 1984.

Angelo announced his support of Archer by saying, "A district as conservative as this one deserves a true conservative congressman like Van Archer."

"Texas has been hit hard economically and we are going to need a congressman who has the leadership ability to fight hard for us.

"Van is a fighter with a long record of leadership. He is the kind of man I want representing me in Washington."

ESSAY

"He really loved it down here," Roy said. "He wanted to stay longer but he had to go print his story."

Richman, accompanied by local newspaper and radio reporters and chamber of commerce officials, got a taste of what a West Texas farming community is really like.

He toured a feedlot, a working cattle ranch near Wolf Creek Park, Courson Oil & Gas building, an archeological dig site, Wolf Creek Lake, a grain exchange elevator where Roy's father works, and rode his first horse.

Roy then took Richman to his school to meet his English teacher, Terry Pennington, who had encouraged her students to send in the essays. Richman even sampled Texas barbecue at the restaurant where Roy's mother works, S&G Barbecue.

And just in case Richman still didn't realize what kind of town Perryton was, Roy was more than happy to tell him.

"I told him that we were a real working community. We weren't like New York and all that hustle and bustle. We were just real working Americans," he said.

The 13-year-old said his day with the reporter was exciting because he was able to sample a little bit of New York City just by talking with Richman.

"He was a real neat guy. Everybody thinks you just step outside your door and get killed and mugged, and I asked if that's ever happened to him," Roy said. "He said the worst thing that's ever happened was that he got pick-pocketed one time, and he's lived there 13 years."

Roy said despite the flurry of publicity his letter generated, he's handling it well.

"It's exciting but I'm not getting a real big head about it."

But he says his eyes have been opened up to new possibilities. Flying to Amarillo to meet Richman was the first time he ever flew in an airplane. Now, he said, he's setting his goals on being a pilot and a writer.

If he chooses writing as a profession, his knack for understatement may be just the hook to lure readers.

In his essay, addressed to the General Secretary of the Soviet Union, he boasted about Perryton being the "wheat heart of the nation...where you can see how some of the grain is processed that is shipped to your country."

His closing? "If you want to know more about it, you'll have to come and visit Perryton."

Walsh campaign committee set up

From Staff Reports

A local coordinating committee for Ed Walsh's attorney general campaign has been established by a group of Midland supporters, headed by Keith Somerville, an independent oilman.

Walsh meets Roy Barrera in Saturday's runoff for the GOP nomination. The winner meets Democratic incumbent Jim Mattox in the November general election.

The local committee — Somerville, Guy Mabee, Harry M. Bettis Jr., Carlton Beal, Clem Barnes, and J. Evetts and Evetts Haley Jr. — hosted a luncheon for Walsh last week at which time a telephone bank and advertising campaign were established.

Mrs. Louis Chase is heading up the telephone effort. Assisting her are Mary Tom Roper, Mrs. Harry Beckman, Dawn Burwick, Hazel Somerville, Beth Schneider and Rosalind Haley.

Local committee members say they are stressing "Walsh's widely recognized qualifications and his support of law and order."

They added that Walsh "has the support of many outstanding law enforcement officers, from local sheriffs to former Texas Rangers and the head of the Texas Department of Public Safety."

"As district attorney, Walsh had a 95 percent record of convictions of criminals and death sentences for Henry Lee Lucas and the two other capital crimes in his own county."

Houston's economy won't affect site of GOP convention

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's sagging economy will not be a factor in determining where 1988's Republican National Convention will be held, the GOP National Committee chairman said.

Frank J. Fahrenkopf Jr. said the 1988 convention needs to convey that the GOP is the party of prosperity.

"The 1988 conventions for both parties are particularly important because it will be the first time in 20 years neither party will be nominating an incumbent," he said.

Although Houston is linked to the world oil market collapse, Fahrenkopf said he does not see the situation as a problem.

"We are talking a couple of years down the road, and I am confident there will be improvement in the oil- and gas-related economy as well as the agricultural segment," Fahrenkopf said.

Fahrenkopf and his nine-member committee arrived in Houston on Tuesday to inspect the city's facilities.

In a technical presentation Wednesday, guest speakers outlined many of the city's capabilities including security, ground and air transportation, hotels, city obligations, and EMS and telephone services, said Maryanita Paddock, Houston Convention and Visitors Council spokeswoman.

The committee will make its decision in January, Fahrenkopf said.

Professor claims sexual harassment in lawsuit

AUSTIN (AP) — An assistant classics professor at the University of Texas claims in a $1 million lawsuit that she was denied tenure because she rejected sexual advances of the department chairman and other tenured professors.

Dr. Barbara Gold filed the suit Wednesday in U.S. District Court here against Dr. Gotthard Karl Galinsky and UT-Austin. She also alleged that she was denied tenure because Galinsky, the department chairman, wanted "a vehicle to drive from the university" her fiance, Carl Rubino, another member of the Classics Department.

Ms. Gold said she joined the UT-Austin faculty in 1978 and was denied tenure in March 1985, which would terminate her job this August.

She claimed she had "endured substantial mental suffering, humiliation, embarrassment, and her reputation as a classics scholar has been harmed greatly." She sought $1 million in actual and exemplary damages from Galinsky, as well as tenure as an associate professor.

Galinsky said, "As far as I am concerned the charges are vindictive, frivolous and without merit."

Katherine Chrysson Boyle of Midland, shown here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Joseph Boyle of 4467 Hackberry Court, was among graduating seniors recognized for academic achievement during Texas Christian University's spring commencement ceremonies. STRESS?

Everyone encounters minor tension in their daily lives. It's natural. But prolonged stress does lead to sleeplessness, irritability and more serious physical complaints. At Boyd Chiropractic Clinics, we understand the body's delicate structural balance. We know that poor physical health can reduce the body's ability to cope with tension. Mattox convinced dead cat part of church's harassment campaign

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox is convinced the dead cat on his doorstep was part of a harassment campaign mounted by supporters of an unlicensed church home.

"This situation is of growing concern to me because these people are a radical group of individuals who are following a bizarre, hypocritical view of Christianity that unfortunately includes the idea of violence," Mattox said Wednesday.

Callers identifying themselves as supporters of The Rev. W.N. Otwell have been telephoning Mattox at home throughout the night for about a week. Mattox said the callers complain about his efforts to close the unlicensed boys home at Otwell's Community Baptist Church in Forest Hill, near Fort Worth.

The home is under a judge's order to get a state license or close. Otwell has been notified that the state will auction the facilities to cover the $100-a-day fines, which now total more than $100,000.

At a recent Austin rally, Otwell told his backers that Mattox should be harassed for his efforts to get the church home in compliance with the state licensing law.

Mattox said he found the dead cat and three live kittens on the porch of his home Tuesday evening. About 25 Otwell supporters were picketing the house.

Earlier this week, a late night caller hinted that Mattox would soon find something on his doorstep, the attorney general said.

"They said I would come home and find some kids left off on my doorstep to try to deal with," Mattox said.

Attorney General Jim Mattox holds a pair of kittens, part of a litter along with the dead mother cat, that were found on the doorstep of his Austin home Monday night.

Otwell has confirmed that some of his supporters have been calling Mattox at home. But he said Wednesday he did not know anything about the cats.

"I have no earthly idea. I have tried from the very beginning to conduct myself in a Christian manner. I do not encourage people to do things in an unchristian manner," he said.

Mattox said he has arranged special security for himself because Otwell has "asked God to rain down fire and terror on us."

"It makes me concerned that the instrument of God they are talking about may be a human with a match in his hand," said Mattox, whose offices here and in Fort Worth were damaged by fire March 5.

Mattox said the cat incident was the latest in a recent "assortment of unusual circumstances."

The fourth floor of Mattox's offices in the Supreme Court Building near the Capitol was gutted in a March fire. On the same day, there was a fire in his Fort Worth office. The fire was ignited in a room where Otwell had given a deposition.

The Austin fire has been ruled arson.

"I'm not going to say they are responsible for the fires. It's not something I can prove in a court of law. The fires are still under investigation. We have a very strong suspect in the one here in Austin," Mattox said.

Also recently, a strong glue was put in the locks of the Fort Worth office.

"This all may very well be coincidental, but they are happening in a rare set of circumstances," he said.

Court rules TEA not liable for desegregation costs

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court has upheld a lower court's refusal to make the Texas Education Agency pay any portion of the $9 million the Lubbock Independent School District said it cost to desegregate that city's schools to the federal government's satisfaction.

The ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Wednesday came in a lawsuit that the Lubbock school district said cost it nearly $9 million since 1970. This latest move was viewed by the appeals court as "an attempted end run around the Texas Legislature's allocation of state funds."

The school district, arguing that Texas state laws were largely to blame for its once-segregated schools, went to the 5th Circuit after a federal district judge refused to make the Texas Education Agency share the expense of court-ordered desegregation.

The 5th Circuit, in a 3-0 decision by Judge Carolyn Randall of Houston, disagreed with the LISD's premise.

"The district court did state, and it can hardly be denied, that vestiges of state-mandated segregation still remained extant in Lubbock in 1970," Judge Randall wrote.

"However, the court did not indicate whether the actual segregation then evident resulted primarily from earlier state laws or from subsequent LISD gerrymandering of attendance zones.

"Significantly, though, the relief ordered by the district court was directed solely at the LISD, not the State."

Judge Randall, too, wondered why the school district waited until August 1984 to file its motion asking that the Texas Education Agency be made to pay up.

"The LISD certainly could have moved in 1977 — or as early as 1970 — for the district court to amend its judgment so as to explicitly adjudicate the State of Texas' fault," she wrote.

"Further, the LISD could have moved in 1977, once it became clear what the effort to desegregate would cost, that the court divide these costs among the parties deemed responsible for the then-existing segregation."

Instead, said Judge Randall, the school district waited until seven years later.

"We are left instead with the LISD's belated effort to recover costs which smacks of an attempted end-run around the Texas Legislature's allocation of state funds," she wrote.

Drifter begged to die, recording reveals

KERRVILLE (AP) — A drifter who was being shocked with a cattle prod begged to die and complied with orders that he say he enjoyed being tortured, according to a tape recording of a torture session at a Hill Country ranch.

The tape was played Wednesday in an organized crime trial in connection with the death of drifter Anthony Bates.

The state claims Bates was tortured to death in March 1984, then his body burned at a ranch owned by Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr., 55.

Ellebracht, his son Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr., 33, and hitchhiker Carlton Robert Caldwell, 21, are charged under the state's organized crime statute with conspiracy to commit aggravated kidnapping and murder in Bates' death.

The state claims Bates, like other hitchhikers, was lured to the Ellebracht ranch with the promise of work, then was forced to stay.

Prosecutors Wednesday played a 45-minute tape of a torture session involving Bates, Ellebracht Jr., ranch worker Mark Hamilton and an unidentified person.

"Please kill me," said a voice identified as Bates.

"No, I wouldn't kill you 'cause then I'd never get any work done," said a voice identified as Hamilton.

Prosecutors said the tape recording was found at the Ellebracht ranch after the property was raided by law enforcement officers in April 1984.

Prosecutors said the 45-minute tape recording of a torture session was the last made before Bates died.

"Say I'm a woodyard slave," a voice identified as the junior Ellebracht said.

"I'm a woodyard slave," Bates mimicked.

"And I enjoy being tortured," said an unidentified speaker.

Bates repeated the statement.

All during the taunts, Bates was screaming, the tormenters were laughing and the sound of a cattle prod buzzing was audible.

Junior: "If I've got to cut you up it's going to take all day..."

Bates: "All day long..."

Junior: "All day long."

Bates: "Oh."

Junior: "And then we won't get no work done. We want to kill you for good reason."

During the tape, the tormenters said they shocked Bates' tongue and eye socket.

As the tape was played, three of the jurors wept, many spectators left or covered their ears and others were crying.

The elder Ellebracht stared at the ceiling and his son sank low in his chair and scribbled on a notepad.

In another development, an attorney for prosecution witness Marty Miller said she has received a court order for psychological testing for her client.

Miller attempted suicide by taking an overdose of sleeping pills sometime Sunday night, Kerr County jail officials said. He was returned to the jail early Tuesday.

Miller, also charged in the organized crime indictment, has been in the jail two years.

His court-appointed attorney Linda Rickhoff said Miller has told her he wants to testify.

"From talking to him, I think he can testify to things that happened at the ranch that nobody else can. He was the last person to talk to Bates," she said.

Edinburg insurance agent testifies in perjury trial

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — An Edinburg insurance agent testified that he could not remember a conversation with a banker accused of lying to a grand jury by saying he had told the agent not to write a policy on the life of John Bixenstine.

James Elliott testified for more than an hour Wednesday in the trial of former Edinburg First National Bank president Michael Neff, 39, who is charged with aggravated perjury in connection with a grand jury investigation.

Prosecutors contend Neff was involved in a conspiracy with Bixenstine, a Rio Grande Valley contractor, to claim the proceeds of a $1 million life insurance policy.

Assistant District Attorney Bill May told jurors this week that the body found June 11, 1984, in the back of a car at Corpus Christi International Airport was not that of the 26-year-old Bixenstine despite identification through dental records.

Bixenstine had more than $700,000 in loans at the Edinburg bank at the time of his disappearance in November 1983

The perjury charge stems from statements, made in May 1985 by Neff to the Nueces County Grand Jury, that he had told Elliott during a telephone conversation two years earlier not to write a $1 million life insurance policy on Bixenstine.

Elliott, an Edinburg insurance agent, was questioned by May about whether Neff discussed the insurance policy with him.

He said he did not recall Neff ever telling him not to write a policy on Bixenstine.

However, under cross-examination by defense attorney Cass Weiland, Elliott said the conversation lasted three or four minutes during a busy business day.

Opposition protests South African ban on public meetings

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Opposition leaders said the government's ban on public gatherings marking the 10th anniversary of the Soweto riots is likely to be ignored by many blacks, and may lead to trouble in black townships.

Anti-apartheid groups have planned rallies throughout South Africa to commemorate the June 16 anniversary of the riots they consider the start of a better-organized struggle against apartheid, under which the nation's 5 million whites dominate 24 million voteless blacks.

Millions of blacks planned to stay away from work or school on June 16.

The government already has banned outdoor meetings, except when authorized on an individual basis.

But the decree issued Wednesday extends that ban to indoor meetings connected with the anniversary, and says exceptions may be authorized only by Law and Order Minister Louis Le Grange or a local magistrate.

The 1976 Soweto uprising, in which youths went on a rampage after several students were killed in confrontation with police, set off riots nationwide. According to official figures, 575 people were killed in a nine-month period but unofficial estimates put the toll at more than 1,000.

Nthato Motlana, an anti-apartheid leader in Soweto, the main black township near Johannesburg, said Wednesday that many blacks would refuse to obey the ban.

"One can't find words strong enough to condemn this stupid knee-jerk reaction," he said. Le Grange's policy, he said, is, "If you can't handle a problem, put the lid on it."

"He should be careful or one day the thing will blow up in his face," Motlana said.

West Bank marks 19th year of Israeli occupation

By ARTHUR MAX

JERUSALEM (AP) — The West Bank of the Jordan River, which for 19 years was ruled by the Kingdom of Jordan after the first Arab-Israeli war, today marks its 19th year under Israeli occupation and the anniversary of the start of the Six-Day War.

Israelis rejoiced at the end of that conflict over their seemingly miraculous deliverance from imminent destruction.

Now, the anniversary is celebrated with marches and flag-waving rallies as "Jerusalem Day," to mark the reuniting of the holy city under Jewish rule.

Palestinians, however, have frequently conducted protest demonstrations on June 5.

But many Palestinians who complain of repression under Israeli occupation also remember the years under Jordanian King Hussein's rule with equal distaste. Demonstrations, curfews, and mass arrests were common to rule by both countries.

"There was always a mistrust between Hussein and the people that still exists," said Ibrahim Karaeen, 39-year-old owner of the weekly Al Awda (the Return) magazine. "If Jordan came back today it would also be viewed as an occupier."

"The dangers we face from Israel today are different. The Israelis take our land and our rights," he said.

The war created a Palestinian identity. Before 1967 "no one would speak of the narrow issue of nationalism. A Palestinian state was not the issue. We were part of the greater Arab nation," Karaeen said. But the war "made us realize that we must forget the Arab states. No one is going to help us."

The war prompted the first real effort to find a negotiated settlement based on U.N. Security Council Resolution 242 of 1967, which contains the land-for-peace formula that has been the cornerstone of all subsequent peace efforts.

But it also fostered extremism among both Arabs and Jews, giving rise to the attacks by Palestinian guerrillas and the radical Jewish nationalism of the Gush Emunim (Bloc of Faithful) settler movement.

The occupation has troubled Israelis who, according to opinion polls and elections since 1977 are almost evenly divided on whether Israel should bargain away any of the West Bank for peace.

The division is reflected in Israel's coalition government, which grew out of the stalemated 1984 elections.

Nationalists of Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Likud bloc contend the West Bank is part of Israel's biblical birthright and that their claim is reinforced by the dictates of security.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres' left-of-center Labor Party argues that some land must be traded away to prevent the shrinking Jewish majority from being overwhelmed by the burgeoning Arab population.

The West Bank's 2,270 square miles of mountains, desert and the rocky Jordan River Valley is home to 800,000 Palestinians and 50,000 Jews. Israelis live in more than 100 settlements, most built in the past decade by right-wing governments wanting to stake out the land as Israel's own.

Until 1948, the West Bank was part of the Palestinian mandate given to Britain by the League of Nations. The first Arab-Israeli war ended with Jordan in control of the territory, which it annexed in 1950. Only Britain and Pakistan recognized Jordan's claim.

Israel annexed Arab east Jerusalem in 1967 and affirmed the reunified city as its eternal capital in 1980.

Austrian voters soon will pass judgment on Waldheim

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Postwar Austria's bitterest presidential campaign ends Sunday when voters are called upon to pass judgment on Kurt Waldheim, whose disputed wartime past has turned the race into an international cause celebre.

Polls taken the week before the balloting gave the former U.N. secretary-general a lead of about 5 percent over Socialist Kurt Steyrer, but Austrian opinion polls are often based on small samplings and sometimes reflect the bias of those commissioning them.

Waldheim, who is supported by the conservative People's Party, has been accused of belonging to youth groups affiliated with the Nazi Party, of hiding his service record with the German army and of being involved in wartime massacres of civilians and prisoners.

He acknowledges serving in the German army in the Balkans, but has continually denied any wrongdoing.

Leaders of the New York-based World Jewish Congress say Waldheim must have known that thousands of Jews were being deported from the area to concentration camps. Waldheim has said he did not learn of that until later.

"Waldheim has provided a new term for the medical lexicon — Waldheim's disease," WJC President Edgar M. Bronfman charged last week. "If you have it, you can't remember you were a Nazi."

On Wednesday, more than 200 writers, artists and scientists urged Austrians not to vote for Waldheim, saying that he personified an "unclear attitude" toward Austria's wartime past, when the country was absorbed into the Third Reich.

Originally, Waldheim said virtually nothing about his Balkan duties in his official biographies.

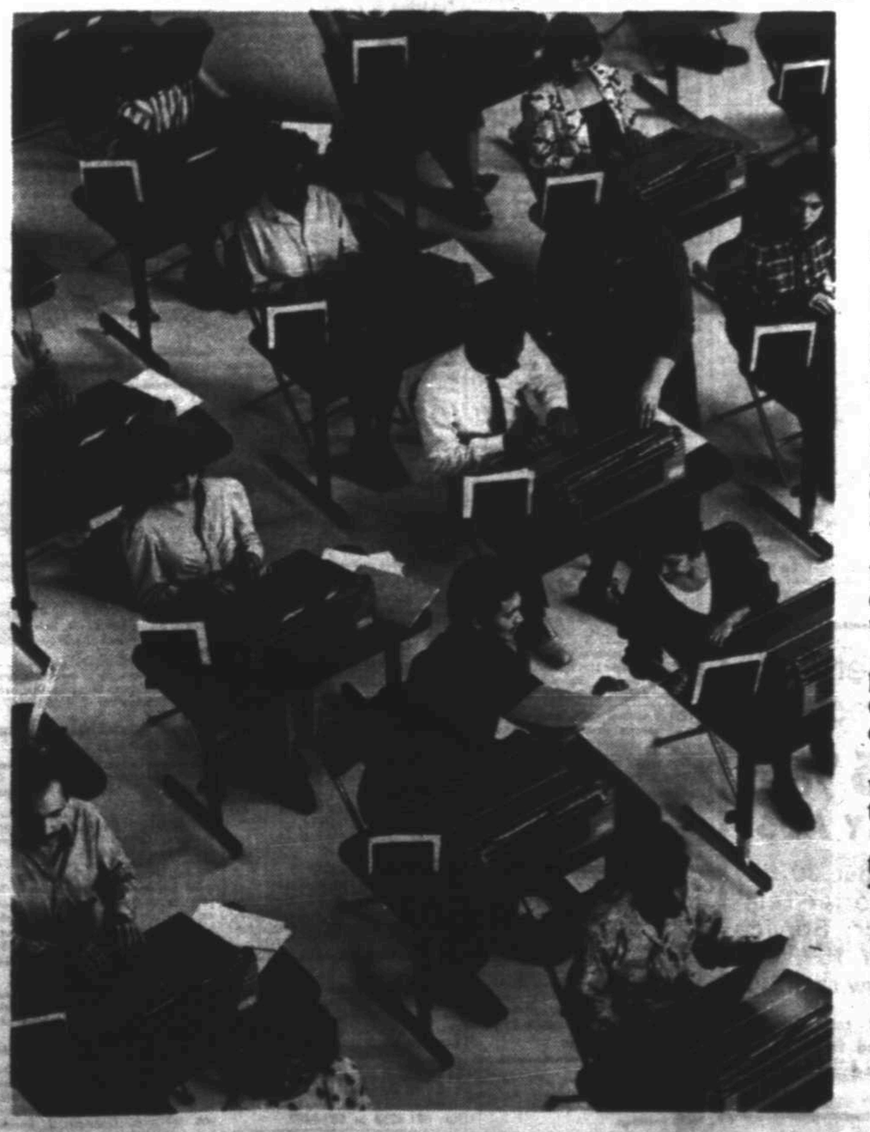

When the allegations began to surface in March, he first described himself as a translator, then acknowledged he had handled field reports on troop movements and partisan activity.

He said his job was merely to verify the reports' authenticity, and not to act upon them.

In the first round of voting on May 4, Waldheim won 49.64 percent of the 4.9 million votes in a four-way contest, falling just short of an outright victory. Steyrer, who ran second, is his only opponent Sunday.

Waldheim drew sympathetic crowds at campaign rallies across the country.

If brains and determination were enough to get a job, this classroom would be empty.

Throughout Texas, there are hundreds of people who want, more than anything else, to get a good job.

They have the intelligence it takes.

They have the drive.

But they don't have the skills they need to break into the competitive job market.

That's why, in 1984, Southwestern Bell Telephone and LULAC, The League of United Latin American Citizens, joined together to create BEST. A special tuition-free program that stands for Basic Employment Skills Training.

BEST, which is now in Houston, Dallas, El Paso, Harlingen, Lubbock and San Antonio, gives people the chance to learn all kinds of clerical skills, as well as how to handle job applications and interviews.

So far, 200 BEST graduates have gone on to find jobs in fields ranging from banking to construction. Jobs, that only a short while ago, were out of their reach.

At Southwestern Bell Telephone, we're proud to support the BEST program, as part of our overall effort to contribute to the community.

We're also proud of our many employees who not only plan the classes for BEST, but teach them as well.

It's people like these who help bring out the best in all of us.

We're here to help.

Cuban government releases more than 30 political prisoners

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Cuban government has quietly released more than 30 political prisoners in recent weeks, including many long-term detainees who were freed before completion of their sentences, State Department officials say.

The officials said Wednesday they have received unconfirmed reports that as many as 1000 prisoners have been set free this spring but the information does not specify whether they had been convicted of political crimes.

Many of the political prisoners were released following the intercession of French undersea explorer Jacques Cousteau, who led a two-month expedition in Cuban waters late last year, said the officials, who spoke only on condition they not be identified.

There are no reliable estimates of the number of political prisoners in Cuba. In an interview last year, President Fidel Castro put the number at less than 200, but Jorge Valls, who served 20 years in prison before his release in 1984, recently gave an estimate of 15,000.

A report released a month ago by Americas Watch, a New York-based human rights organization, said there are "more long-term political prisoners in Cuba than anywhere else in the world, and there are still frequent reports of their mistreatment and abuse."

Pravda: Evacuees need help

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviets must overcome indifference and bureaucracy to help people evacuated from the Chernobyl accident site, as well as fears that the evacuees themselves may be spreading radiation, the newspaper Pravda said today.

The organ of the Communist Party said that while most children evacuated from the officially designated danger zone after the accident at the Ukrainian power plant are now in summer camp, "still the areas where evacuees live must remain in the center of special attention."

"It is impossible that even one family or one person should suffer because of indifference, bureaucratism or because of absurd rumors (that) evacuees are spreading radioactivity," the newspaper said.

Almost 100,000 people were evacuated from an 18-mile radius around the No. 4 reactor, which was torn by an explosion and fire on April 26 that released a cloud of radioactivity that spread over much of Europe.

Pravda earlier said about 280 families from three small hamlets would be able to return to their homes this fall. That is only a small portion of the forced exodus that left the area of the plant 80 miles north of Kiev.

Assassin's widow charged

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Police today charged the widow of Indira Gandhi's assassin with murder for allegedly leading Sikh militants on a rampage through the Golden Temple in which a guard was stabbed to death.

Police said Bimal Kaur Khalsa, the 35-year-old widow of Beant Singh, and 90 others were charged today with murder, attempted murder and rioting. They said 169 other people were arrested for questioning, but official sources put the number detained at 307.

Mrs. Khalsa was not among those detained, and Punjab security forces today combed 60 villages in Amritsar and Gurdaspur districts, both strongholds of Sikh rebels, looking for her.

About 200 Sikh militants armed with iron bars, swords and bamboo staves, went on a rampage Wednesday after a "Martyrs' Day" rally marking the second anniversary of the Indian army assault on the white-marble complex, the holiest Sikh shrine.

Waldheim's name given to Soviets

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A former Yugoslav intelligence officer said Kurt Waldheim's name was given to the Soviets in 1947 for consideration as a possible agent after Waldheim was identified as a suspect in Nazi war crimes.

Waldheim, the former U.N. secretary-general, is the conservative People's Party candidate in Austria's presidential runoff election on Sunday.

Notice: A "right good" new menu for Texas Tumbleweed

By DEPUTY DODGE
Tumbleweed Writer

"Howdy, Folks! How're ya doin'?"

We always seem to be greeted this way at the Texas Tumbleweed by Sheriff Black Jack. It makes ya feel right at home - almost before you even step in the door.

Next, yure sat at a table that reminds you of the ole days, with them ole big, checkered tablecloths. They tell me these are fashioned fer big parties, ya know those "whoop 'em up" kind. But don't you fret. Me and the missus felt right at home.

I was as pleased as punch to find out those folks got themselves a brand spankin' new menu – and a dang good one too! After lookin' over all the new thangs they got, we found Bluebell standin' right in front of us. (Some people think that's a purty funny name, but all those folks have one!) She took control, tellin' us which was the most popular steak in this old West Texas town to two delicious kinds of chicken to award-winnin' catfish and sandwiches and the biggest chicken fried steak I ever did see! Plus now they have lots of them fancy salads like taco, pasta, chicken and black-eyed pea (the missus loved that!).

But before we got the real meal she said we otta try some "Golden Nuggets." She said they's just mild jalapenos stuffed plum full of cheddar cheese. Bluebell also said it was a favorite amongst cowhands 'round these parts.

Back behind us was the biggest grill I've ever seen. Bluebell said they were two seven-foot grills, for cooking those Texas-sized steaks over real mesquite wood - the only way to cook a good steak.

While we waited on our meals, we heard the band that plays at the Tumbleweed ever' weekend a strikin' up. All of a sudden they cranked up with "Cotton-Eyed Joe" and here me and the missus went. We kicked our heels up and boy, did I work up a thirst for one of their famous margaritas (Friends, on Wednesdays, they're jest a dollar a piece or six fer a pitcher.).

Oh, and then came that big dinner with all that food! Right before my eyes was a 16-ounce T-Bone and a Chicken Salad fer the missus; juicy chicken cut into little bite-size pieces with celery and onion, mandarin oranges, black olives and a real tasty mayonnaise dressing. Don't tell nobody but it looked so good I thought about ordering me one! My steak was followed up by Blazin' Saddle beans, a salad, a baked spud and fresh hot bread with butter.

After this big feast, I wanted to know if these folks could help me give a party sometime. Well, of course they could, Bluebell told me. From 500 to 4,000 folks, they handle all the cookin'.
