Train wreck trial may return to Midland

Appeals court reverses order to move civil lawsuit case to Dallas

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

The civil lawsuit that stemmed from the fatal Nov. 15, 2012, Show of Support parade train wreck may be moved back to Midland County.

After an appeal by defendant Union Pacific Railroad Co., the Court of Appeals of the Fifth District of Texas at Dallas ruled that the trial's venue should be changed once again to Midland County after it had been changed to Dallas County in August.

"As the site of the accident, Midland is the most appropriate venue for this trial," said Raquel Espinoza, spokeswoman for UP. "In addition, most of the witnesses and responsible third parties are located in Midland. We believe the jury will ultimately make its decision based on all the relevant facts surrounding the accident, whether [the trial is] in Midland or Dallas."

UP attempted to change the venue back to Midland three times in the Dallas County 116th Judicial District Court before it sought an appeal.

But Kevin Glasheen, a Lubbock attorney representing the plaintiffs in the lawsuit, said the issue is more complicated because the appeals court's decision is not final. He said there has to be several more decisions, including one from the Texas Supreme Court, before the appeal ruling is final.

Kerry P. Fitzgerald, judge on the Texas Fifth District Court of Appeals, said in his Dec. 19 opinion that the plaintiffs — the victims in the train wreck — did not prove that UP maintains a principal office in Dallas County. The plaintiffs, represented by numerous attorneys including Glasheen and Charla Aldous, of Dallas, had to prove to the appeals court that UP's Dallas office contained decision-makers and "substantially equal responsibility and authority" relative to other company officials within the state.

Because the plaintiffs were unable to provide the burden of proof, the burden shifted to the defendants to prove that its chosen venue, Midland County, was proper.

"Here, the relevant venue facts supporting venue in Midland County are undisputed," said Fitzgerald in his court opinion. "It is undisputed that Smith (Industries, the other defendant) maintains its principal office in Midland County, and the accident that made the basis of this lawsuit occurred in Midland County. Issue with broken utility pole at Riley's appears to be resolved

By Cale Ottens
cottens@mrt.com

A potentially complicated conflict between Riley's Bar and Grill and Oncor Electric was resolved Wednesday.

A utility pole on Riley's property is currently supported solely by power and telephone lines and a couple of 2-inch by 4-inch boards in the ground.

Some of the electric lines are now falling on parts of Riley's roof. For safety reasons, the pole and lines need to be moved as soon as possible, but problems arose when it was time to decide who would pay the bill.

Brandon Sandefer, the bar's general manager, said he notified Oncor last year but was told that he would have to pay to fix the situation.

Oncor, which still owns the power pole, said it was no longer their responsibility to move the pole because Riley's had built around it.

"You're not supposed to do that for safety reasons," said Oncor Area Manager Sue Mercer.

Electric company crews would not be able to efficiently use their equipment to properly remove the pole, she said.

Riley's added a walk-in refrigerator to the side of its building about 15 years ago, Sandefer said. Because it blocks direct access to the pole, Oncor told him he would either have to move the refrigerator or pay them to reroute the power and telephone lines.

Sandefer said he still didn't think it was his responsibility, citing the fact that the pole still belonged to Oncor.

"I'm paying for their service. I want them to keep up with their stuff," he said.

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

Mayor Jerry Morales did more than sweep the mayoral election last year. He also raised and spent the most money in Midland City Council elections history.

Morales raised $179,572 and spent $171,104 during his campaign, according to the final set of campaign finance reports released Wednesday. During the most recent financial reporting period, which lasted from Oct. 27 to Dec. 31, Morales raised $50,172 and spent $46,597.

The candidate who eventually became mayor continued to receive large donations during the final reporting period, which began nine days before Election Day. Morales received donations that ranged from less than $100 to $5,000.

"We continued to work the campaign up until the last minute because there were five tough candidates in the race," Morales said.

Campaign expenditures included media advertisements, social media advertisements, truck wraps and billboards. Social media, which included consultant fees, cost Morales' campaign the most money — $20,477.

The $179,572 Morales raised more than doubled the estimated $70,000 former Mayor Wes Perry received during his 2007 campaign, which was a record for its time.

"That's politics as usual," said mayoral candidate Dan Anderson, referring to the record amounts Morales raised during the

Carrie Ruth (Buckden) Gallick

Carrie Ruth (Bucklen) Gallick, 83, died October 31, 2013.

Born in 1923 to O. Berte and Maymie (Bales) Bucklen in Rayven, Virginia, she and her twin brother were fifth and sixth of a family of 13, 10 of whom lived to adulthood. In 1937, her father bought property five miles east in Doran, Virginia, immediately west of Richards, Virginia, so that he could raise a small farm in addition to his job as a coal miner.

In 1938, Carrie-Ruth, as most people back in Virginia knew her, developed tuberculosis and stayed out of school for two years. After six months, she was so bored that she asked her mother to go outside, so she was put to work performing light chores, as well as feeding the pigs and milking the cow. In addition, she helped her mother raise her younger siblings.

Because she was two years behind her classmates, she wanted to quit school but was told that the family goal was for all the children to graduate from high school, in a town where most boys started mining after fifth grade and many girls married after the eighth grade. Not only did she and her siblings graduate from Richland High School, but four of her brothers graduated from VPI (now Virginia Tech) with engineering degrees. Most of their grandchildren and great grandchildren, boys and girls, graduated with a bachelors degree, and some with advanced degrees.

She hated the name Carrie because she and her twin bother had rhyming names and she was unwilling to be a part of a cutesy name gag.

Because of her quarantine, Carrie-Ruth, or Ruth as she was known here, developed excellent parenting skills which she would put to use in later life. She and her siblings were raised in a strict Pentecostal home. All but two later choose different faiths. This was made doubly difficult for her, since her husband was not a religious man.

Immediately after graduating from Richland High School, she left Westermost, Virginia and moved to Newport News to live with her older sister, where she acquired numerous job skills. In 1952, she was a telephone operator.

Also in 1952, she met her future husband on a blind date. He was so smitten with her that he pursued her relentlessly until she agreed to marry him before he left for Korea. This resulted in 61 years of turbulent and passionate matrimony.

After Korea, they lived on an airbase in South Texas and then moved to Southern California so her husband could attend UCLA. It was there that parenting skills learned from her mother paid off. She started working for a baby-sitting cooperative and was so good at it, that she was able to support her husband through school.

While in Midland, she worked for MISD, principally as a teacher's aide. While she was in a few women's organizations and activities, her main interests were her grandchildren and being a friend to her numerous acquaintances.

She believed she was one-eighth Cherokee and throughout her life, she would visit any Indian ruin, even if it involved climbing a cliff.

She had numerous health problems; TB at eight, appendicitis in 1952, hysterectomy in 1969, depression in 1985, colon cancer in 2003, an experimental heart bypass which was unique in West Texas and rare in the United States, and she also suffered COPD since 1995 and pernicious anemia since 2000. She refused to die gracefully, fighting every instant of her heart failure until the end.

After her cardiologist, lung specialist, and a nephrologist pronounced her case hopeless, her husband had the disagreeable task of ordering her off life support. She died four hours later with her husband and children holding her hands. She was the light of our lives.

She is survived by her husband of 61 years, Cyril M. Gallick; daughter, Pamela K. Gallick; son, Michael P. Gallick; daughter, Margeret M. Castleman; and by four grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

A memorial service is scheduled for 4:00 p.m. on Saturday, January 18, 2014 at First United Methodist Church in Midland.

MPD: Man arrested for theft in connection with home sale

Zachery

A Midland man was arrested Wednesday on a theft charge following a month-long investigation by Midland police, according to court documents.

Galberson Zachery Jr., 63, is charged with a state jail felony of theft between $1,500 and $20,000. Bond information was not available.

A woman contacted Zachery on Sept. 11 about purchasing a home in the 1200 block of East Cuthbert Avenue. Zachery told her he wanted $24,000 for the home, and that he would sell it to her for that price if she paid half of the amount in cash before the end of November. He said she would then pay $500 a month for two years at 2.5 percent interest, according to the arrest affidavit.

The woman paid Zachery $6,000 on Sept. 23, and completed payment for the $12,000 by Nov. 21. But Zachery told her on Dec. 1 that he could not sell her the house because he owed the IRS $60,000 and a lien was placed on the residence. He said he would refund her money, but when the woman asked for the cash on Dec. 11, he told her he had spent it all on the roof of his club, legal business and to fix his son's house.

The woman told Zachery that she had suffered after giving him the down payment. She said she was unable to buy her children winter clothing and they had to wear flip-flops. She also owed money to people who helped her make the payments, according to the affidavit.

The woman contacted police in December regarding the situation. A detective contacted Zachery and told him that he needed to return the $12,000 to MPD by Jan. 6. Zachery brought in $10,000 and $500 on two separate occasions, and said he would have the remaining $1,500 by Monday. He did not have the remaining money by then and a warrant was issued for his arrest, according to the detective.

If convicted, Zachery faces up to two years in prison.

CRIMEBRIEFS

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Man arrested for marijuana possession, claimed it was dog food

Pallanes

A Midland County deputy found 22.6 pounds of marijuana Tuesday during a traffic stop and the driver initially claimed it was dog food.

Angel Rodriguez Pallanes, 20, was arrested and is being held on a third-degree felony charge of possession of marijuana between 5 and 50 pounds. Bond information was not available.

The deputy pulled over Pallanes for speeding at about 9:45 p.m. Tuesday on South County Road 1180 about 2 miles south of Interstate 20. The deputy conducted the traffic stop on the south service road of I-20.

He noticed that Pallanes was very nervous and he smelled marijuana coming from inside the vehicle. The deputy searched the vehicle and found a large amount of money in the center console and several square packages wrapped in foil and plastic in the back seat that had fallen out of a red duffel bag, according to the arrest affidavit.

Pallanes said the packages were dog food, but later said they were filled with marijuana.

If convicted, Pallanes faces up to 10 years in prison.

New Walgreens store set to open

From staff reports

A new Walgreens store at Midkiff Road and Wadley Avenue will open its doors Friday.

The company moved merchandise from a nearby location at Midland Drive and Wadley Avenue — which officially closes today — to prepare for the opening, according to spokeswoman Emily Hartwig. Nearly all of the shelves in the old location were empty by Wednesday night.

The new Walgreens store takes the place of an empty 7-Eleven and former Spa Tech location, which were demolished in December 2012, according to a previous Reporter-Telegram article.

The number of Walgreens stores remains at four. No other details about the new location were immediately available.

POLE

From 1A

The bar's owner, Bruce Riley, said he agrees with the general manager.

"We don't own the power pole, that's for sure," Riley said. "It's nowhere in my deed to own that power pole that I know of."

The establishment's Facebook page posted a picture Tuesday of the damaged pole and wrote, "According to Oncor electric their electric pole that's being held up by the wires is our problem not theirs. What ever happened to that great customer service ????"

Someone from Oncor replied and asked for a private message with their contact information.

It now seems the conflict is resolved.

Riley's was already planning to replace the walk-in refrigerator with a new one about twice the size.

Sandefer said he will remove the current refrigerator so Oncor can move the pole. The wires are now to be placed underground, he said.

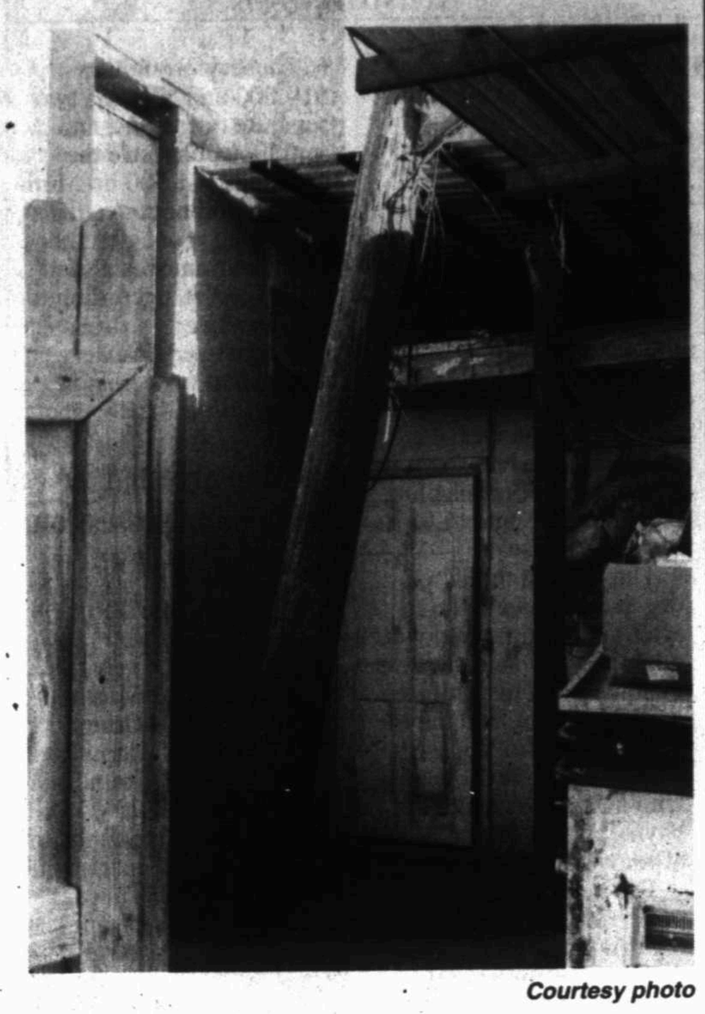

Mercer could not confirm Wednesday afternoon that the wires will definitely be placed underground. She said Oncor is working to come to a resolution with Riley's.

But after the pole is removed, Sandefer said he's going to install the new refrigerator.

The time without a walk-in unit shouldn't affect business because there's a smaller refrigerator to store beer, he said.

Sandefer said he expects to have everything done, including the installation of the new walk-in refrigerator, within the next two weeks.

"I'm just glad to have it taken care of," he said.

Courtesy photo

A broken utility pole that is still conducting curent is shown at Riley's Bar and Grill in this undated photo. Some of the electric lines are now falling on parts of Riley's roof. For safety reasons, the pole and lines need to be moved as soon as possible, but problems arose when it was time to decide who would pay the bill.

election cycle. "It's only gonna get worse."

Morales continued to raise funds as other mayoral candidates wound down their campaigns. During the final reporting period, Kathy White, Keith McLelland and Anderson raised either nothing or less than $500. Anderson, when asked about raising or spending the least of all the candidates, said he was not out to get people's money and he is proud for achieving "the least amount of money spent per vote."

In the district races, District 3 Councilwoman Sharla Hotchkiss retained her position as the top district candidate with the most contributions and expenditures. She received $44,104 in donations and spent $36,091 during her entire campaign. Her opponent, Spencer Robnett, received and spent thousands less but had a closely contested race. He lost by 24 votes.

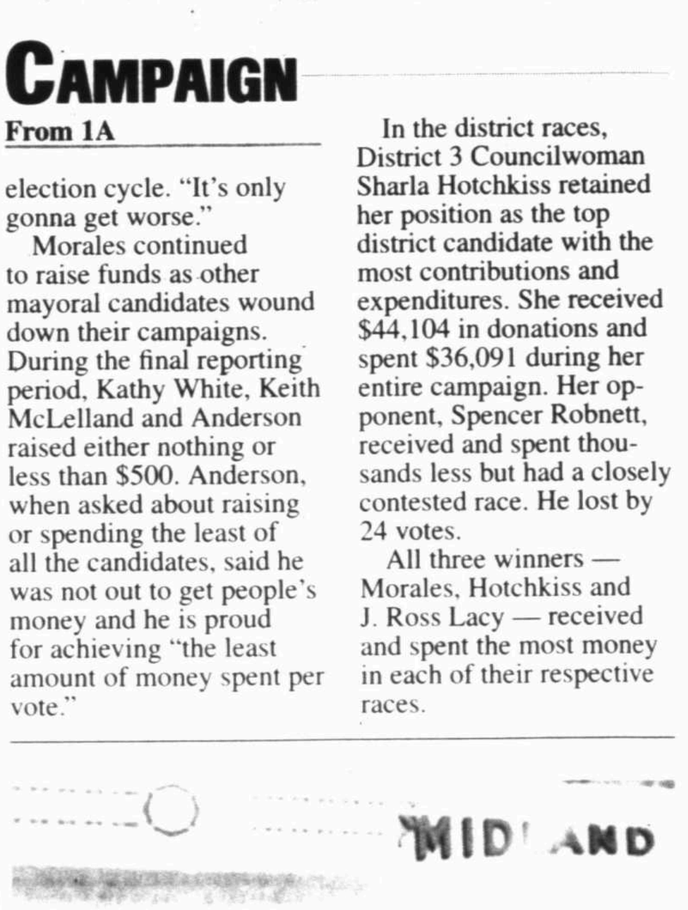

All three winners — Morales, Hotchkiss and J. Ross Lacy — received and spent the most money in each of their respective races.

44th annual Mid-Winter AA Conference set for this weekend

By Ed Todd
MRT Correspondent

Tales of wanton lives awakened into gratitude and renewal from the throes of despair and hopelessness of insidious alcoholism will be retold at the 44th annual Mid-Winter Conference of Alcoholics Anonymous, planned for Friday through Sunday at Midland Center.

AA's 12-step spiritual program affords an "amazing adventure into recovery from alcoholism and is a 'program of attraction,'" said Jim Mc., chairman of the Midland conference who is celebrating 32 years of sobriety.

Of bringing the AA message to the suffering alcoholic, AA Midland member Eddie H. reflected on this AA principle: "I am responsible. When anyone, anywhere reaches out for help, I want the hand of AA always to be there. And for that: I am responsible."

The conference offers meetings that are open to members of AA and Al-Anon, a companion organization for family and friends.

Registration fee is $35 and includes access to the hospitality room for fellowship and refreshments.

The event kicks off 8 p.m. today with a pre-conference meeting hosted by AA-Al-Anon Serenity Group, 3100 N. "A" St., Building C.

The conference sessions at Midland Center are set for 6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Friday, 9:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday.

About AA

"Alcoholics Anonymous is a fellowship of men and women who share their experience, strength and hope with each other that they may solve their common problem and help others to recover from alcoholism. Our primary purpose is to stay sober and help other alcoholics to achieve sobriety."

Source: AA's "Big Book"

The 12-step program was founded in 1935 by Dr. Bob, of Akron, Ohio, and Bill W., a New York stockbroker.

Worldwide membership: 2.13 million recovering alcoholics in more than 114,000 groups; U.S. and Canada membership exceeds 1.4 million.

The AA Serenity Prayer was penned by the late American theologian Reinhold Niebuhr: "God, grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can, and wisdom to know the difference."

CHIEF

From 1A

Forbes will trade his badge for steel-toed boots as he transitions into a new position at a private industry's safety division. Firefighters from other Midland fire stations wished him luck in his future endeavors via radio.

He received a warm reception at Central Fire Station's engine bay, where Fire Chief Robert Isbell and other firefighters shared stories of their time with the training chief.

Forbes was the firefighter who was seen holding baby Jessica McClure Morales when she was pulled from an abandoned water well in 1987.

Make sure to grab a copy of this weekend's edition, when the Reporter-Telegram looks back at Forbes' service with MFD.

need go no further."

On Nov. 15, 2012, a Union Pacific train struck a Show of Support Hunt for Heroes parade float, which was carrying 12 military veterans and 12 spouses, as it crossed the Garfield and Front streets crossing. Four veterans died that day and 14 other people were injured.

Those injured in the wreck and the widows, sued UP and Smith Industries a few weeks after the crash, citing negligence on the part of the companies, such as the short amount of time for the crash site's train crossing signals.

Glasheen said a hearing is set for Friday because it is unknown if the Dallas County 116th Judicial District Court will continue to hear the case.

Google invests $75M more in Texas wind farms

Associated Press

AMARILLO — Google Inc. will invest another $75 million in Texas wind farms as the tech giant expands its renewable energy efforts, company officials said.

California-based Google on Tuesday said an agreement has been finalized for the Panhandle 2 wind turbine site in Carson County, near Amarillo.

A Google statement said the facility, developed by Pattern Energy Group LP, should have the capacity to generate enough renewable energy to power 56,000 U.S. homes. Company officials expect the facility to be operating by late 2014.

Panhandle 2 is Google's 15th renewable energy investment overall and the company's second in Texas. Google a year ago announced a $200 million investment in another Texas Panhandle wind farm — the Spinning Spur Wind Project in Oldham County, about 35 miles from Amarillo.

The company also said this week that it's buying energy from the Happy Hereford wind farm, also in the Panhandle.

Google has been pouring money into alternative energy since 2010 because it believes the investments will prove profitable as the demand for cleaner sources of power rises amid increasing concerns about the pollution caused by oil and coal.

Suspect's family 'heartbroken' over Roswell, NM, shooting

Associated Press

ROSWELL, N.M. — The 12-year-old boy who opened fire on a crowd of students in a New Mexico middle school gym had planned the attack and warned some classmates to stay away moments before the gunfire rang out, investigators said Wednesday.

State Police Chief Pete Kassetas said it appeared the victims in Tuesday's shooting at Berrendo Middle School in Roswell — an 11-year-old boy and 13-year-old girl — were chosen randomly.

The shotgun used by the boy came from his family's home, and he had three rounds of ammunition, Kassetas said at a news conference.

"All three rounds were expended during the incident," the police chief said. "There was no indication that he had any ammunition other than what was loaded in the gun."

He declined to speculate on a motive.

The 11-year-old boy who was shot in the face and neck remained in critical condition Wednesday at University Medical Center in Lubbock.

The 13-year-old girl, identified as Kendal Sanders, was in satisfactory condition with injuries to the right shoulder. The family of the injured boy has asked that his name be withheld while he recovers.

Meanwhile, the suspected shooter's family issued a statement Wednesday saying they were heartbroken and that their remorse could not be put into words. They said the two children who were injured have been in their thoughts and prayers.

"We are horribly sad over this tragedy on so many levels," the family stated. "We are praying that God will be with everyone who has been affected."

The family added it will cooperate with law enforcement to "piece together how this awful tragedy occurred."

Police have not released the boy's name, and The Associated Press typically doesn't identify juveniles who are accused of crimes.

Police didn't say when charges would be filed, only that they were working with the district attorney's office. Kassetas described the case as complex.

He said investigators worked through the night executing search warrants at the school, and determined through those searches that the attack was planned. They examined the boy's locker and the duffel bag the seventh-grader used to transport the .20 gauge shotgun to school.

Kassetas said the handle of the gun was sawed off so it had "more of a pistol grip."

He added authorities had some indication that the boy verbally warned "select students" about the attack as he arrived at the school. Kassetas didn't elaborate.

The shooting spurred a flood of 911 calls from students Tuesday morning. In some, screaming could be heard in the background.

The shooting was over in 10 seconds, officials said, after the boy fired at the ceiling, the floor and then the students. An eighth-grade social studies teacher, John Masterson, then stepped in and talked the boy into dropping his weapon.

Masterson and other teachers were lauded for taking quick action that authorities said would've saved lives had the boy had more ammunition, or had there been another gunman.

Chaves County Sheriff Rob Coon said all the schools in the county, public and private, undergo regular training for dealing with "active shooters."

"The teachers and the staff at Berrendo knew exactly what to do," Coon said. "They went into their lockdown. They followed the way they were taught. If there would have been more than one young man roaming the halls, there would have been minimal damage because they locked that down so quick."

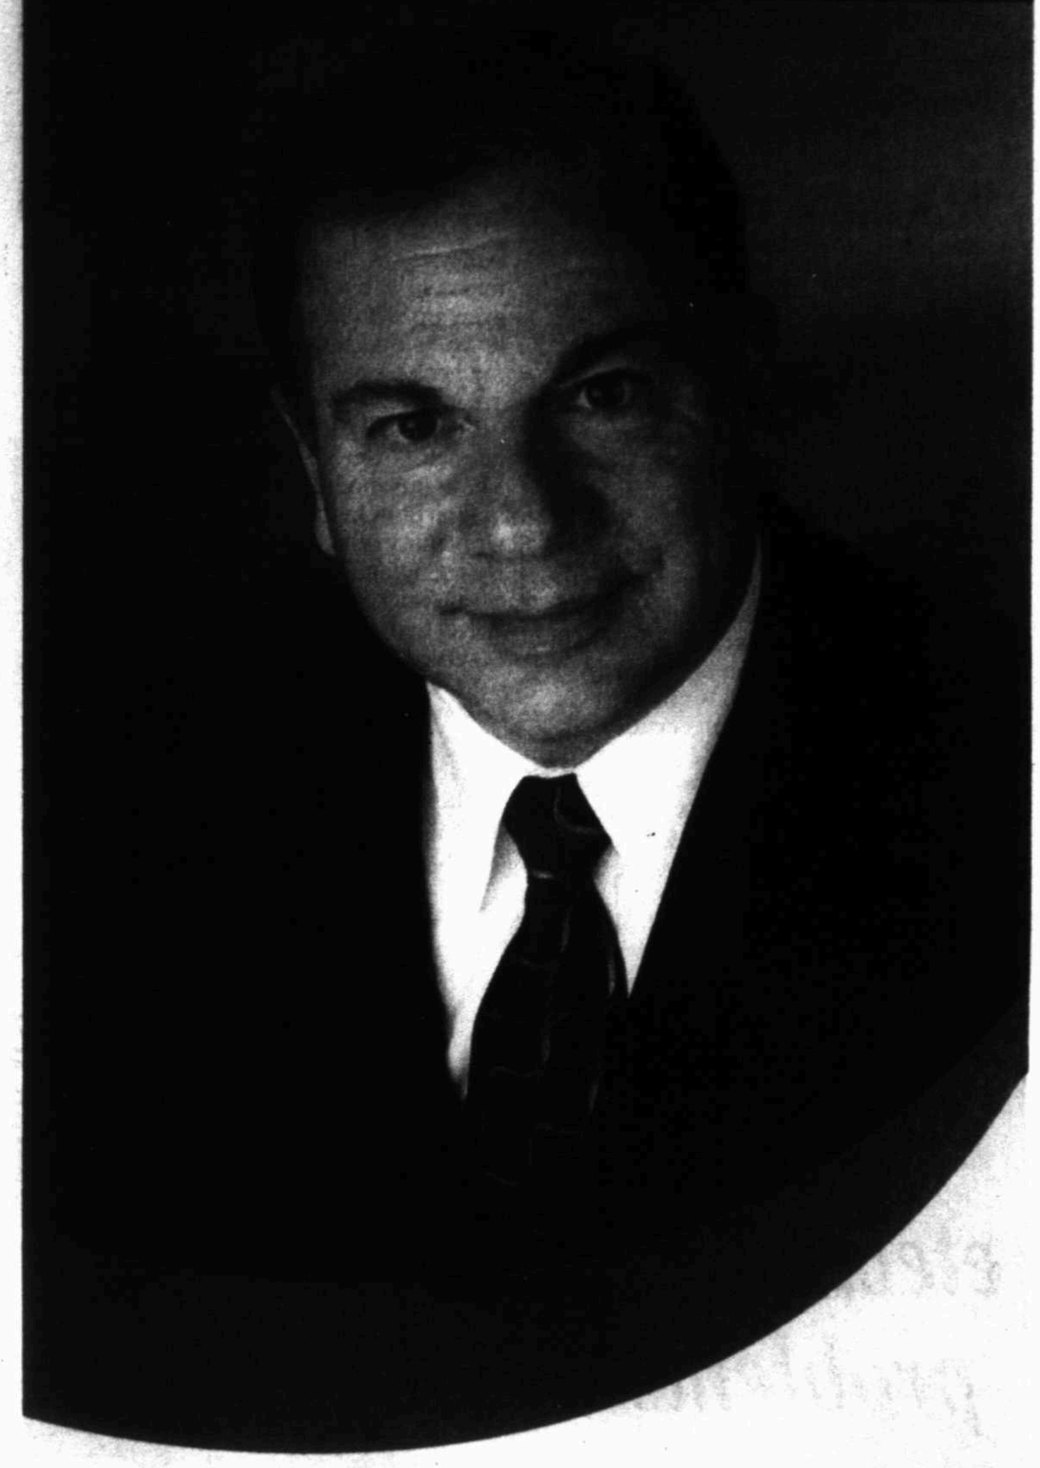

Andrea Leon, a 13-year-old eighth grader at Berrendo, said students have completed so many drills that some started laughing when the shots first rang out "because they thought it was fake."

Police and schools nationwide adopted "active shooter" policies after Columbine High School students Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold killed 12 classmates and a teacher, and wounded 26 others before killing themselves in the Littleton, Colo., school's library in 1999. Police waited 45 minutes for a SWAT team to arrive before entering the school. Officers now are trained to confront a shooter immediately.

The boy accused in the Roswell shooting was transferred to an Albuquerque psychiatric hospital following a hearing Tuesday.

His family said they were thankful the judge ordered that he receive an evaluation and mental health treatment.

Conservative Hispanic becomes target in NH

■ There's nothing wrong with a Latino Republican, but don't ask Democrats

RUBEN NAVARRETTE

Washington Post Writers Group

It's with a chuckle that Marilinda Garcia recalls the day that her critics demanded to see her papers.

Did this happen in Arizona, the state with harsh immigration laws? No, it occurred in New Hampshire. And the demand didn't come from conservatives who are uneasy with illegal immigrants but from liberals who are at odds with a group that they find more troubling: Hispanic Republicans.

The 30-year-old Garcia, a New Hampshire state representative, is a member of that tribe. Besides being young enough to ensure that she'll be around for a while, she's smart, likable and a strong communicator. In other words, she is a liberal's basic nightmare. Now she's running for Congress in New Hampshire's 2nd District. So, as far as those on the left are concerned, she has to be taken down a peg.

The "papers" that Garcia's critics wanted to see weren't a birth certificate or green card. You don't get a green card when you were born in Boston.

As Garcia told me during an interview a few years ago, her mother was born in Italy and her father — who is Mexican-American — was born in Nebraska but raised in Albuquerque, N.M. While Garcia grew up with her Italian relatives, she also loves being Latina. "I accept it," she told me back then. "I'm proud of it. And it's great."

What really interested Garcia's liberal detractors were her academic transcripts. These busybodies wanted to see if the magna cum laude graduate of Tufts University who went on to study at the New England Conservatory of Music and earn a master's degree at Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government really deserved to attend those schools.

"They saw me as an affirmative action student," Garcia told me recently. "They said, 'How do we know you were qualified?'"

This wasn't just about the usual push-back that someone named "Garcia" or "Rodriguez" or "Hernandez" experiences when they attend elite schools. This is about how Hispanic Republicans wind up with targets on their backs.

Just ask Sens. Ted Cruz, of Texas, and Marco Rubio, of Florida, Govs. Susana Martinez, of New Mexico, and Brian Sandoval, of Nevada, former Attorney General Alberto Gonzales, former federal appellate court nominee Miguel Estrada, or any prominent Hispanic Republican who has been attacked by what can be a menacing trifecta — the liberal media, left-wing advocacy groups and the Democratic Party.

Garcia had better get used to it if she intends to go to Washington. If she gets there, you can expect her to advocate that more federal issues be handled by the states.

"In the state Legislature," she said, "I found that my best energy is spent trying to respond to what the federal government sends down the pipeline at us such as unfunded mandates. As much as possible, I want to keep the federal government out of the way of New Hampshire."

The issue that the media uses to trip up Hispanic Republicans is immigration. They want people such as Garcia to be forced to choose between a more compassionate approach favored by her fellow Hispanics and the hard line advocated by many of her fellow Republicans.

"We make it too hard to stay here legally and too easy to stay here illegally," she said.

Garcia supports making mandatory the e-verify system that allows employers to check the legal status of potential hires. She also thinks the current dialogue is "toxic" and that while she doesn't have the answer to our immigration problems, "we have to keep people who are here for the right reasons."

Those on the left are always going to be afraid that the more Hispanic Republicans there are, the more likely Democrats are to lose their stranglehold on Hispanics once those voters see that they really do have a choice between the parties. So, as a way of discrediting Hispanics in the GOP, they're going to accuse them of being one of three things: dumb, extreme, or out of touch.

They must be terrified of Garcia, who has been hit with all three. No sooner had she declared her intention to run for Congress than Democratic state Rep. Peter Sullivan tweeted that Garcia was a "lightweight" in "stiletto heels." He even compared her to reality star Kim Kardashian.

I don't see the resemblance. But I do smell fear.

High cost of city elections could pose problems in future

Here's a checklist for anyone interested in running for the open at-large seat on the Midland City Council: Step one, write a good speech; step two, shake a lot of hands; step three, raise a ton of money; and step four, repeat step three as much as possible.

Wednesday we were reminded that running for city office is not a poor man's sport. Cinderella political stories are buried under the weight of the tens of thousands of dollars needed to just compete. It has become a revolting part of the political process.

Not just anyone can run for some offices.

Mayor? Be prepared to have to spend six figures.

A district seat? Lacy spent $25,965, Hotchkiss $36,091. Want to compete against oilman Jeff Sparks in District 1 in two years? Better bring an even bigger checkbook.

And in May, the seemingly never-ending political season continues. There will be an election to fill Morales' at-large seat. Spencer Robnett is in. He knows something about spending money. He doled out $26,965, just to lose to Hotchkiss by less than 1 percent in November. We expect he's got the financial backing to make a citywide run. Who's with him?

Elections cost money. That is the nature of the beast these days. We can't do anything about it, and we have no problem that people can use their checkbook to support their favorite candidate or issue. But then again, let's not pretend that just anyone can win elections or that just anyone can serve their community. Three of the six people on the Midland City Council own oil companies or made their fortune in the business. That's just the way it is.

And let's not pretend that grassroots had anything to do with the mayor's race in which spending easily topped a quarter of a million dollars. It was the richest of all local elections in our city's history. And Jerry Morales blew out all city campaign finance records, raising $179,572 and spending $171,104.

In our view, competitive elections are needed to make government more responsive to the needs of the people, and that is our biggest worry. If a qualified candidate can't envision being able to compete with the biggest spenders, electoral aspirations end before they even get started. That's not a good thing.

We have run stories from our parent company, The Hearst Corp., that have reminded us no community in Texas gives more per capita to state and federal candidates than Midland. We are proud of that. Our willingness to dedicate our resources provides influence other communities our size don't have. Candidates who want to win have to make an appearance in Midland.

However, we believe there is a downside. In local races, the best people may be shut out because they know they can't afford to run.

It's how things are in Midland, where a race for a district office requires a $25,000 buy-in.

Celebrate people for their work

■ Let's stop forcing people to answer 'How Hispanic or Latino are you?'

ESTHER CEPEDA

Washington Post Writers Group

There is an overlooked gem of a movie called "Extract" featuring a subplot that can best be described as "Hispanic in Name Only."

Written and directed by Mike Judge — a master of illustrating our hilariously absurd American culture — the 2009 film features a character called Brad Chavez. Brad's name becomes a recurring joke throughout the film.

Joel, the lead character, is urgently trying to call Brad. But neither he nor his friend Dean can find Brad's number.

Joel: "What's the boy's last name? I'll call information."

Dean: "Ummmm, I don't remember, it's a Mexican name."

Joel: "Mexican?! For Christ's sake, Dean, the guy's got blond hair and blue eyes. C'mon!"

Dean: "I thought it was strange, too, a guy who looks like that had a Mexican last name. But I don't judge people, y'know? I mean, it might not have been Mexican, could have been a Filipino name ... I think it's Lopez. Uhh, or Sanchez. Uhh, or Gutierrez."

Brad Chavez is sprinkled throughout a movie that lightheartedly touches upon the tensions between Latin American immigrant factory workers and their native-born co-workers.

Judge uses the "all-American" looking Brad who doesn't speak a lick of Spanish and acts like any other coddled, slightly ditzy "gringo" to make the point that the differences in culture between Mexicans and Americans will fade away after a few generations of assimilation and intermarriage.

Hispanics are already fighting among themselves over these very issues of who is Hispanic or Latino or worse, Hispanic or Latino "enough" to represent their interests in a society that doesn't understand there's no such thing as a cohesive, demographically similar "Hispanic community."

All one has to do to rile a group of Hispanics is mention the names of blond, blue-eyed Cameron Diaz or Canadian-born Ted Cruz (both descendants of Cubans) — or even the topic of whether you have to speak Spanish fluently to "really" be Hispanic (San Antonio Mayor Julian Castro has become the perfect example of this particular gem) — and there will be an overly tense discussion of what constitutes a "true Hispanic."

The "Hispanic in Name Only" has a few corollary archetypes. There's the "Professional Hispanic" — think of any actor, actress or so-called Latino leader you might know who unapologetically represents what some might consider a stereotypical or traditional Latino. Then there are what I call "Non-Ethnic Hispanics." They really are Hispanic but their work and success isn't about, dependent on, or defined by their ethnicity.

In the entertainment world there's songstress Christina Aguilera (Ecuadorian father, like me) and TV teen idol Selena Gomez (dad is Mexican). Neither is a "Latina musician" or "Latina actress," or has a strictly (or even mostly) Hispanic fan base. Ask their fans about them and the last thing they'll bring up, if it comes up at all, is their heritage. It's not an issue.

Which brings us to what made me think of Brad Chavez in the first place.

I just learned that the musical group Red Hot Chili Peppers will be playing in the aging rock star jubilee known as the Super Bowl halftime show, alongside the uber-popular singer Bruno Mars.

To me, Mars represents a new Hispanic archetype. The "Let's-Not-Go-There Hispanic."

You see, Mars didn't just luck into his catchy stage name; it's his own concoction.

Causing a bit of "Hispanic community" angst, Mars told GQ magazine last year that although he was born Peter Hernandez in Hawaii to a Puerto Rican-Jewish percussionist from Brooklyn and a singer/dancer from the Philippines, he did not want to embark on an artistic career battling the stereotype of being Hispanic at a very Hispanic moment in this country's history.

He told GQ he simply got tired of hearing: "Your last name's Hernandez, maybe you should do this Latin music, this Spanish music. ... Enrique's [Iglesias] so hot right now." Instead, he avoided typecasting by taking an out-of-this-world name.

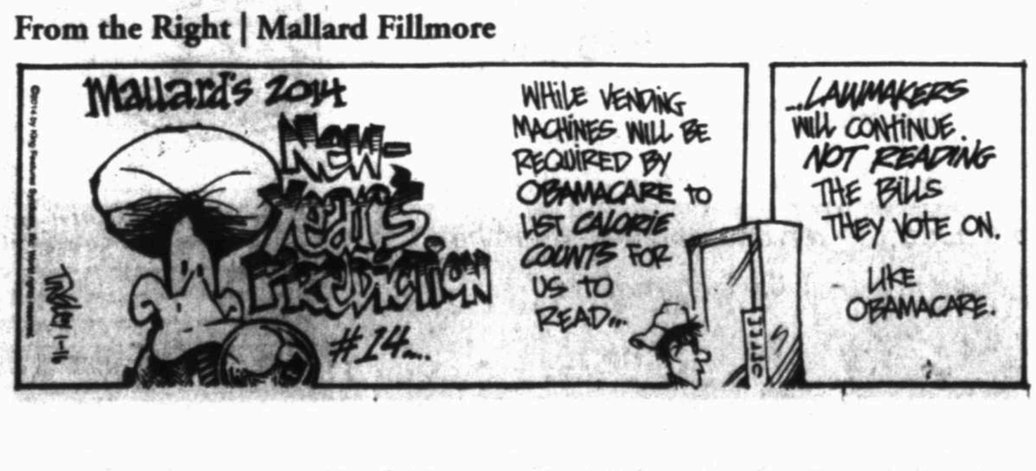

Some might take offense at such a "denial" but they'd better get used to it. There is a coming wave of young people from mixed or different backgrounds who simply want to be celebrated for their talent or skill and not for how they categorized themselves on the Census questionnaire.

Let us welcome them with open arms instead of trying to shove them into a neat racial or ethnic box.

Texas-sized campaign cash flows in governor's race

By Paul J. Weber
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas is the Wild West of big-money, no-limit political giving. But the early cash hauls lassoed in the race to replace Gov. Rick Perry hint at a new kind of gold mine.

Republican Greg Abbott and Democrat Wendy Davis filed reports Wednesday, revealing a mix of donors small and large — including one giving $1 million to Davis. As a result, both candidates have collected more than $11 million in the first six months of campaigning, a potential record-setting pace for fundraising in a Texas gubernatorial election.

Davis, who became an overnight Democratic star with her filibuster of abortion limits last summer in the Texas Capitol, faces the challenge of keeping up the fundraising pace after the momentum of that nationally followed event wears off. She's widely expected to need more than $40 million to stand a chance in Texas, which hasn't elected a Democrat to a statewide office in 20 years.

"They said it couldn't be done," Davis tweeted about her $12.2 million in donations since she became a candidate, including a joint fund with the Democratic group Battleground Texas.

For Davis, a Fort Worth state senator, the largesse helps legitimize her longshot bid in fiercely conservative Texas. Abbott keeping pace with $11.5 million further swells the bankroll of the state's longtime attorney general, who's now sitting on $27 million.

California set the record for a governor's race in 2010 when eBay CEO Meg Whitman poured more than $140 million of her own money into her failed Republican run. Texas won't threaten those numbers considering both prospective nominees have only moderate personal wealth, but the fundraising levels have raised eyebrows nationwide — not just for what they mean for 2014 but 2016, as well.

"It's impressive. It's an indication that this may get to record levels for Texas," said Edwin Bender, executive director of the National Institute on Money in State Politics. "With the presidential campaign two years down the road, there's going to be people looking at the Texas, Californias, New Yorks of the world as bellwethers and how they can get people in line for the next round of elections."

The new fundraising filings in Texas cover the past six months. Davis didn't officially launch her campaign until October but has been raising swarms of cash since June, when her nearly 13-hour filibuster on the floor of the Texas Senate in June over new abortion restrictions propelled her to national political stardom.

Davis' campaign sought to emphasize the impact of small donors, boasting that 85 percent of all donations were contributions of $50 or less. But wealthy heavy-hitters are also financing Davis' attempt to become the first Democratic governor in Texas since Ann Richards was elected in 1990.

Austin doctor Carolyn Oliver gave $1 million — a rare seven-figure lump sum from an individual donor. Fort Worth businessman Robert Patton, who co-owns baseball's Los Angeles Dodgers, donated $250,000. She also had some famous donors, receiving $1,500 from Barbra Streisand and $1,000 from former tennis star Martina Navratilova.

Abortion-rights supporters have also opened their checkbooks to Davis. The Washington-based group EMILY's List, a group that supports women candidates who back abortion rights, gave nearly $150,000 in donations and in-kind contributions. Planned Parenthood Votes and NARL Pro-Choice America were also among her top donors.

Among the contributions to Davis' three political fundraising accounts was an expected $3.5 million to Texas Victory Committee, which organizers list as a "joint project" between Davis' gubernatorial run and Battleground Texas, which was launched by former campaign architects of President Barack Obama's re-election bid.

Filings by Abbott, whose campaign criticized Davis for "fuzzy math" by pooling donation totals from multiple accounts, revealed at least $900,00 in donations during the last half of 2013 from the late billionaire Harold Simmons. The GOP megadonor died Dec. 29 and gave his last contribution to Abbott — $250,000 — about three weeks earlier.

CLASSIC CANTATA

MOSC, area chorales to perform 'Carmina Burana'

By Rich Lopez
jrlopez@mrt.com

For dramatic tension, films, video games and even football teams have deferred to the "Carmina Burana" cantata — or more specifically, its opening and closing movement "O Fortuna." Its intense dynamic heightens the senses to edge-of-the-seat proportions. But could its familiarity work against it? Gary Lewis doesn't believe so. The Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale director isn't going to fight the piece's reputation, but instead just the opposite.

WANT TO GO?

"Carmina Burana," 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Wagner Noel Performing Arts Center, 1310 N. Farm-to-Market Road 1788. Pre-concert lectur by Greg Lewis at 6:45 p.m. $20-$30. wagnernoel.com

"You only transcend its popularity by digging your hooks into it, and that's what we are going to do," he said.

As the show's maestro, Lewis will lead not only the MOSC, but also singers Gerald Dolter, baritone; Bjorn Arvidsson, tenor; and Jennifer Bird-Arvidsson, soprano, for the solo pieces. Each performed in last season's "Ode to Joy" concert.

But the collaboration of the three area colleges strikes Lewis close to his heart. For this show, the Midland College Chap Singers, Odessa College Choir and the UTPB University Singers will join in to sing with the MOSC. The combined groups will thus feature more than 200 singers against the sizable orchestra lending to the grandness of "Burana."

"I'm a music educator, and so to work with these students will be incredible. And the combined forces add to the spectacle that is 'Carmina Burana,'" Lewis said.

Cory Alexander agreed. As the director of choral activities and assistant professor of 'American Idiot' continues rock musical tradition

By Rich Lopez
jrlopez@mrt.com

The last thing one would expect from punk rock is a successful Broadway musical complete with Tony Awards under its belt. Green Day defied those odds by expanding the narrative on anti-hero Jesus of Suburbia from their 2004 concept album "American Idiot" to the stage in 2010. "American Idiot" comes to the Wagner Noel Performing Arts Center on Monday.

Green Day frontman Billie Joe Armstrong helmed the book and lyrics for the show, but he rests on the shoulders of previous rock 'n' roll forays onto the stage. Looking forward to wrapping up the holiday weekend with a show, we take a look at some of the musicals that cleared the way for "American Idiot" to permeate its way through popular culture beyond radio play and song downloads.

Bart Crow has a healthier plan for 2014

By Rich Lopez
jrlopez@mrt.com

For a budding country music star, Bart Crow uses social media for far different things. At least he has in these first few days of 2014. As many people do, Crow has resolved for healthier choices in the new year. Only the sniffles got to the 38-year-old singer first.

Crow called the Reporter-Telegram while in transit to Houston. Battling off a head cold, he talked up his optimism in his music, his health kick and his wallowing in the loss of his beard.

MRT: You recently posted a pic of veggies and a juicer on Instagram with the caption "Day 3 of the Not Ready to Die Tour." How exactly is that going?
Crow: I'm a few days strong in. It's going well, thanks.
MRT: Is this your 2014 resolution? To get healthy?
Crow: It's just from being fat and drinking all the time. Sometimes you think your body wants to feel better. So I've been doing some juicing, although I didn't over the holidays and I gave up drinking for a while.
MRT: How do you feel now? Despite the head cold thing right now?
Crow: You know, I feel much better, man, but who knows. This may be short-laid the groundwork for Armstrong with this classic. Transforming The Who's 1969 album "Tommy," this tale of a catatonic adolescent who becomes a pinball wizard is undoubtedly the first true rock opera, even though it debuted on stage in 1993. Townshend went on to create a second Who musical with 1998's "Quadrophenia."

MUSICAL

"Hair"

Music from this '60s musical became the language for the prolific counterculture movements of the time. Controversial in its 1968 debut, the show defined rock musical and introduced and allowed edginess for theater. "Hair" follows "American Idiot" at the Wagner Noel in February.

"Chess"

Before "Mamma Mia!" there was "Chess" by ABBA gents Benny Andersson and Björn Ulvaeus. The two provided music with Tim Rice on lyrics for this Cold War musical about two chess masters — one an American, the other a Russian — vying for one woman's affections. First a successful concept album, "Chess" launched the hits "One Night in Bangkok" and "I Know Him So Well," before becoming a stage production in the mid-'80s.

"Spring Awakening"

Remember Duncan Sheik? Amid album releases, the singer-songwriter provided the music for this controversial show that opened in 2006. Based on the already envelope-pushing German play from 1891, "Spring Awakening" tells the story of teens in Germany finding and embracing their sexual identities.

"Aida"

How have there not been more musicals by Elton John based on his own music? The pianist collaborated again with Tim Rice and Disney for this musical take on Guiseppe Verdi's opera. The two penned "The Lion King" movie and musical. "Aida" features an eclectic sound by John as he dabbled into reggae and gospel sensibilities. The show debuted on Broadway in 2000.

lived with me. I may stop tonight, or I may go the long haul. But really, this is the first time I realized that I felt this good.

MRT: Your 2012 album "Dandelion" was a pretty upbeat release, but do you think this revitalizion will translate into your music?

Crow: That I don't know, but I imagine it could. I feel very high-spirited, and that should translate. And, yeah, "Dandelion" was a lot more light-hearted and optimistic with a lot of self-reflection — and definitely more about love. I'd say it was probably even more country than my previous albums.

MRT: You have a single that's on a far different note though that you dropped in December. Could you talk about "Shadow on the Wall?"

Crow: One of my friend's daughter, Shadoh Campbell, was diagnosed with Hodgkin's lymphoma. She is also a new mother so I wrote this this song for her as a way to help because I was always on the road or something. And the feedback has been really great and people have gotten behind it, so every dime made from the song goes to her. It's only $.99 on iTunes but can make a difference.

MRT: OK, you tweeted this recently: "R.I.P. My sweet-a beard ... I only meant to trim U, I did not know the clippers were spearheading a coup ... I'm sorry ... & sad."

Crow: Oh man, I was trimming it up and tending to some beard maintenance, and then boom, I took a big chunk out of it. It's kinda growing back, but man. That was a bad day.

music at UTPB, performing this piece is a major opportunity for his students.

"This is great for my students and good on so many levels, but also just a lot of fun," he said.

At least for now. Students had to return from holiday break and jump right into rehearsals days before the show. Alexander is both sympathetic and optimistic about the experience. He's done it himself.

"I know exactly what they are in for because I had these same experiences when I was in school. Leading up to the show, it seems like a lot of work, but it'll be worth it, and I think the students will think 'Wow! That was amazing!' It'll be a great time for them," he said.

"Burana" isn't all heavy drama, though. Despite its famous aspect, within its 25 movements, there are delicate but haunting elements, as well as joyous and even rambunctious moments that contrast the muscular "O Fortuna." Based on a series of 11th and 12th century poems, "Carmina Burana" is a vast cycle of emotions, which MOSC chorale director Gregory Pysh explained.

"The work itself sums up the human experience from conflict to love to relationships. It really is this entire gamut of the human experience. We're very privileged we get to share that with our folks in the Permian Basin."

In additional contrast, the orchestra will open with the more subtle "Unfinished" Symphony by Franz Schubert. Lewis felt this created a dichotomy of tone for the night.

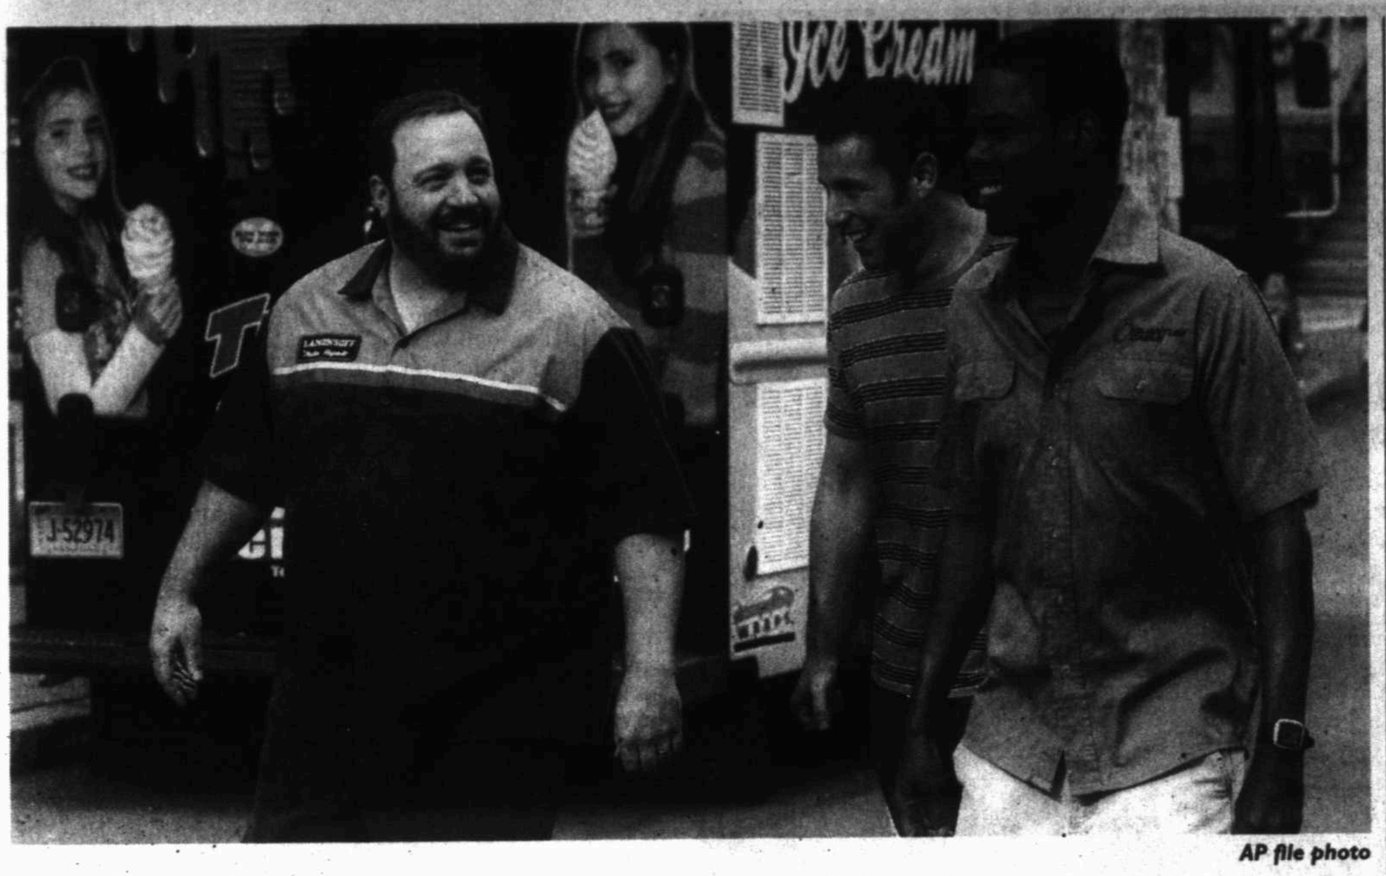

"Well, we should probably ease them into 'Carmina.' We don't want to abruptly shock audiences right away," he said laughingly.

'Grown Ups 2' leads Razzies worst-of list

By Derrik J. Lang
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — "Grown Ups 2" is making the most noise at this year's Golden Raspberry Awards.

The silly comedy sequel about four childhood friends starring Adam Sandler, Kevin James, Chris Rock and David Spade led the Razzie lineup Tuesday with eight nominations, including worst picture, sequel, ensemble, screenplay, lead actor for Sandler, supporting actor for Taylor Lautner, supporting actress for Salma Hayek and director for Dennis Dugan.

Sandler is no a stranger to the Razzies, which launched in 1980 as a spoof of Hollywood's awards season. He won the worst actor trophy last year for the man-child comedy "That's My Boy," and his 2011 cross-dressing comedy "Jack and Jill" made Razzie history the year before with a record 10 awards, with Sandler winning both the worst actor and actress prizes.

This year's other worst-picture nominees are the Wild West romp "The Lone Ranger" starring Johnny Depp and Armie Hammer, Tyler Perry's holiday comedy "A Madea Christmas," sci-fi coming-of-age story "After Earth" starring Will and Jaden Smith, and comedy anthology "Movie 43" featuring the likes of Kate Winslet, Richard Gere, Hugh Jackman and Halle Berry.

"After Earth," "A Madea Christmas" and "Movie 43" are tied with six nods each. In addition to worst picture, screenplay and ensemble nominations, they're also in worst actor, actress and supporting actor slots for Will and Jaden Smith of "After Earth," Perry and Larry the Cable Guy of "A Madea Christmas," and Berry and Naomi Watts of "Movie 43."

The Razzies announcement comes ahead of today's Oscar nominations. Winners for the 34th annual Razzies will be announced March 1, the night before the 86th annual Academy Awards. While far less star-studded than other award shows, past winners like Berry and Sandra Bullock have sometimes shown up in person to claim their gold spray-painted prizes.

MORE REVIEWS

"Angels of the Skies" (not rated) Imagine all the clichés of World War II movies in one badly acted film with decent special effects and a wholly predictable story. This is it. D

"Big Ass Spider!" (PG-13) Fans of "Eight-Legged Freaks" and "Mars Attacks!" will appreciate this tongue-in-cheek thriller that dazzled audiences at this year's SXSW. It scores lower in the effects and laughs categories than those it emulates, but there's still plenty of fun to go around. B

"Drinking Buddies" (R) Despite its horrible — and somewhat misleading — title, this wonderfully acted, and largely improvised, drama transcends the pretense others in this genre stoop to. B+

"I'm So Excited" (R) The latest from Spanish filmmaker Pedro Almodovar isn't among his best ("Talk to Her," "Volver"), but it's packed with fun and a couple of cameos by two of the actors he helped make stars: Antonio Bandereas and Penelope Cruz. Besides, where else are you going to see three gay men aboard an airliner in distress doing a musical tribute to a certain Pointer Sisters song? B

"Runner Runner" (R) Thoroughly predictable and boring, this must be the film that sent Justin Timberlake back into the studio to resurrect his singing career. C

"We Are What We Are" (R) The "secret" of the story was not kept very well, but knowing it isn't necessary to enjoying the best movie about freaky rural life since "Winter's Bone." B

"You're Next" (R) Inferior knockoff of "The Strangers" has holes in the plot big enough to drive a tractor-trailer through, yet you will still find yourself pulling for it. Sadly, it never delivers, but the disappointment wanes. B-

ENJOY SOME LOCAL LIBATIONS

Over the years, I have assembled a well-rounded and somewhat esoteric home bar. When the mood strikes for any classic cocktail, I can usually mix it and enjoy it from the comfort of my couch in less than five minutes. While there is a definite convenience to crafting libations at home, there are a few locally run places that routinely lure me into civilization with their specialties.

Many of our date nights begin downtown at Cancun Bar and Grill for a heaping plate of guacamole and a round of Mexican Martinis. Made with premium silver tequila, triple sec and freshly squeezed lime juice, they are shaken until icy cold and served straight up in a salted cocktail glass. The tequila flavor comes through without being overpowering, and it is expertly balanced between sweet and tart, making it my favorite margarita-inspired cocktail in town.

Created in 2012, The Blind Pig quickly became one of our most requested cocktails at The Blue Door. Designed to be a Texas spin on the classic Manhattan, it is a precisely measured blend of TX whiskey, sweet vermouth and orange bitters. The Blind Pig is served in a chilled flask that guests are encouraged to take home once empty. In another nod to Midland roots, it should be noted that TX whiskey is produced in Fort Worth, and co-owned by native Midlander Troy Robertson. We like to keep it local y'all.

Finally, there is a cocktail dessert hybrid that I have been enjoying for more than a decade. The sorbet martinis at The Garlic Press make any evening feel special. It begins with a generous scoop of housemade sorbet, served in a frozen cocktail glass with a sugared rim. At your table, they top this mound of goodness with bubbly champagne. The sorbet flavors change often, though be on the lookout for either the strawberry red wine or the ruby grapefruit, two of my personal favorites. This creation can be enjoyed as a light alternative to dessert after a long meal, or on its own as a edible cocktail.

Cheers to drinking local and drinking responsibly!

WHERE ELSE TO GRAB A DRINK

Another Tech QB leaving as Brewer transfers

From staff reports

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech has announced that sophomore quarterback Michael Brewer will transfer at the end of the spring semester.

Brewer becomes the third quarterback to transfer from the Red Raider football program in head coach Kliff Kingbury's first season. He joins former Abilene Cooper standout and redshirt freshman Clayton Nicholas, who has since transferred to Bowling Green, and freshman Baker Mayfield, who has announced his plans to walk on at Oklahoma, to announce a transfer since the end of the fall.

Brewer, who is from Lake Travis, plans to remain at Tech until he graduates in May with a degree in university studies.

"I am honored to receive my degree from Texas Tech and will always call this university home," said Brewer in a statement. "I will never forget the friendships and memories I have made here at Texas Tech. Lubbock has been nothing but great to me and my family and we will always appreciate that. Wherever I may go, I hope our fans will respect the person and player that I am.

"The decision to transfer was well thought out by my family and myself and was one of the toughest of my life. I feel it's the right decision for me moving forward. As always, guns up!"

In his two-year career with the Red Raiders, Brewer played in 13 games while throwing for 440 yards and five touchdowns.

Brewer was the presumed starter going into the 2013 season but a back injury late in the summer forced him to miss the first month of the season. That injury allowed both Mayfield and fellow true freshman Davis Webb playing time and starts in his place.

In part because of injury and him being behind Mayfield and Webb on his progress, Brewer was limited to just four games and completed just 7 of 10 passes for 65 yards and a touchdown.

Brewer split time with Webb in the first quarter of Texas Tech's 37-23 upset victory over Arizona State in last month's Holiday Bowl before Webb got the hot hand and finished with 403 yards passing and four touchdowns to earn MVP honors.

With Brewer leaving, that means Webb will be the only scholarship quarterback for the Red Raiders available for the spring semester.

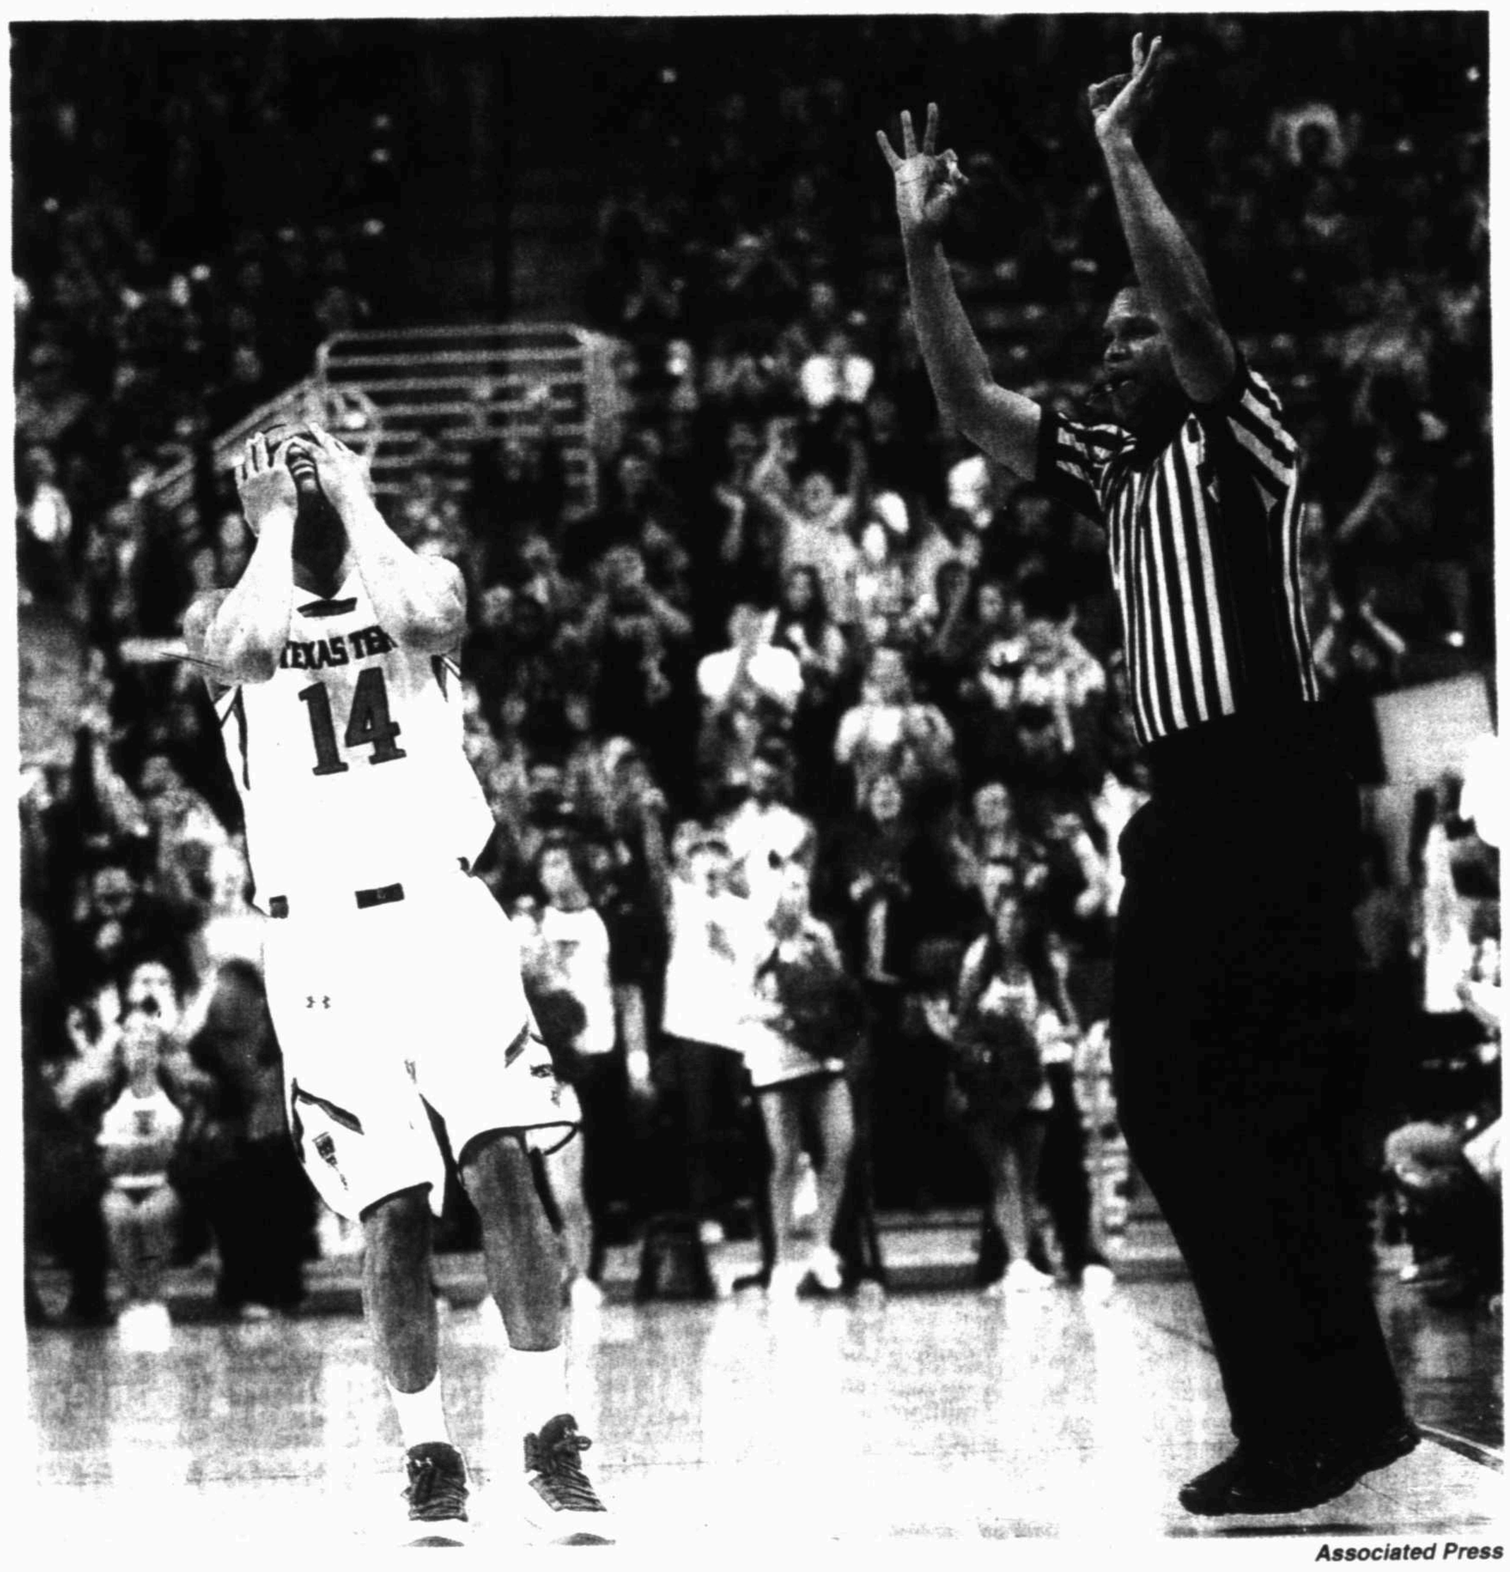

The Red Raiders are expected to have two quarterbacks walk on to the program in the spring. Tanner Tausch will be joining Tech from Kilgore College and Marble Falls grad Mike Richardson.

Texas Tech's Robert Turner (14) celebrates hitting a 3-point basket against Baylor during a game in Lubbock on Wednesday.

Texas Tech upends No. 12 Baylor in thriller

By Betsy Blaney

LUBBOCK — Jaye Crockett had 19 points, Toddrick Gotcher added 17 and Texas Tech beat No. 12 Baylor 82-72 on Wednesday night for its first Big 12 win of the season.

Dejan Kravic and Robert Turner scored 14 apiece for the Red Raiders (9-8, 1-3), who ended a four-game slide against Baylor in Lubbock with their first victory over a ranked opponent in 35 games.

Texas Tech led all the way and was able to hold off a late comeback attempt by the Bears (13-3, 1-2) after they pulled to 76-66 on a 3-pointer by Taurean Prince with 2:02 left. That was the closest Baylor had been since late in the first half, but it got no closer down the stretch.

Red Raiders	82
Bears	72

Kenny Chery scored 22 points and Prince had 13 for the Bears. They finished with only six assists, a season low for a team averaging 16.3.

All five Red Raiders starters scored in double figures. Crockett matched the 19 points he scored in a loss at Texas last weekend.

Texas Tech kept Baylor's top scorers in check for much of the night. Cory Jefferson, the Bears' leading scorer (13.5 points per game), had just eight and center Isaiah Austin was well below his 10.7 average with four.

The Red Raiders simply had more energy and Baylor looked lethargic until late in the game. And the Red Raiders shot well. Texas Tech made 57 percent of its 49 shots to 41 percent for Baylor, which took 63 from the field.

After hitting on all 21 of their free throws in their win at TCU on Saturday, the Bears made only 16 of 24 from the foul line this time.

Auburn's Malzahn wins Bryant Award

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Gus Malzahn knows all about Bear Bryant, so this award meant a whole lot to the Auburn coach.

Malzahn

Malzahn is the Paul "Bear" Bryant College Coach of the Year after leading a remarkable turnaround in his first season in charge of the Tigers, who went to the national title game a year after they went 3-9.

Malzahn, who like Bryant is from Arkansas, said Wednesday night he was honored to be associated with an award with the name of the fabled former Alabama coach.

"When you're growing up he's the man," Malzahn said. "The fact that I'm from the state of Arkansas and he's from Fordyce, Arkansas and one of my best friends is coaching high school there makes it even that much more special."

Auburn came up just short in the national championship, with Florida State scoring a touchdown with 13 seconds left to pick up a 34-31 win.

"We're still hurting over the fact that we were close to winning the national championship and got beat," Malzahn said. "But if you can remove yourself from that it was a lot of fun, our players came a long way, they improved each week and we were 13 seconds away from being the national champion."

Malzahn beat out Baylor's Art Briles, David Bailiff of Rice, Michigan State's Mark Dantonio and David Shaw of Stanford for the honor.

The Tigers, who were winless in Southeastern Conference play in 2012, reeled off nine straight victories after a loss to LSU on Sept. 21 to gain a spot in the title game this season. They were the talk of college football when they returned a missed field goal 109 yards for a last-second score to beat then-top-ranked Alabama on Nov. 30.

Malzahn knew his team was talented, but even he was amazed at what Auburn was able to do this season.

"There's no doubt," he said. "It's hard to get better each week. I bet we're one of the few teams that actually did that, and the fact that we were playing our best football toward the end of the year, it was a lot of fun to watch those guys grow and end up where they did."

Dantonio led the Spartans to a school-record 13 wins and a No. 3 finish in the final Associated Press poll. It was Michigan State's highest ranking since reaching No. 2 in 1966.

"To me, Bear Bryant is almost a mystical figure," Dantonio said. "When

Texas A&M rallies to beat South Carolina

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M overcame a double-digit first half deficit to defeat South Carolina 75-67 on Wednesday night.

Jamal Jones scored 22 points for the Aggies, who trailed 14-3 six minutes into the contest before getting their act together before their largest home crowd of the season.

Guard Brenton Williams scored 14 points for the Gamecocks (7-9, 0-3), who shot 42.9 percent (9 of 21) from the field in the second half — after making 14 of 28 in the first half — en route to their third consecutive setback to start Southeastern Conference play.

Aggies	75
Gamecocks	67

The Aggies (12-4, 3-0) under third-year coach Billy Kennedy are 3-0 in league play for the first time since 2010-11 under then-coach Mark Turgeon, now at Maryland, and as members of the Big 12 at the time.

The Aggies snagged their first lead of the second half at 58-57 on two free throws by Jones with 6:59 remaining. Following a missed 3-pointer by Jaylen Shaw on South Carolina's ensuing possession, A&M guard Shawn Smith responded with a 3-pointer from deep in the right corner in lifting the Aggies to a 61-57 lead.

A&M guard Jordan Green scored four points in the final 1:34 to help put away the Gamecocks. The Aggies shot 43.8 percent (7 of 16) from the 3-point line, while the Gamecocks hobbled themselves with 17 turnovers (compared to 11 for A&M).

The Aggies overcame an 11-point first half deficit, as South Carolina manhandled A&M in rebounds over the first 20 minutes to the tune of 20-10. The Aggies responded by out-rebounding South Carolina 15-13 the rest of the way, although the Gamecocks still led in the final tally (33-25). A&M improved to 2-0 all-time against the Gamecocks, as the programs didn't meet until the Aggies joined the SEC in 2012.

Records: Midland College 12-6, 2-1 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference; New Mexico Junior College 11-5, 3-1
Last WJCAC game: Midland College 74, Western Texas College 42; Odessa College 55, New Mexico JC 54
Notes & quotes: Midland College looks to keep the momentum going from its last two victories, including a blowout win at Western Texas College on Monday. Against the Lady Westerners, MC coach Ron Jones liked his team's energy, which was better than in last week's loss against Frank Phillips College. "I think when we come out and sustain the energy for the full 40 minutes, get the tempo going in our favor, we have success," Jones said. Catherine Kruschke led the Lady Chaparrals against WTC with 20 points, Mattie Turner came off the bench and scored 17 with a 5-of-7 showing from 3-point range, and Mary Savoy added 12. ... NMJC is coming off a heartbreaking loss at Odessa College. The Lady Thunderbirds led OC for a big chunk of the second half but the Lady Wranglers made key plays down the stretch to pull out the victory. Blair Richmond, a 5-7 freshman guard, led NMJC with 13 points against OC. ... Jones said the Lady T-birds are very similar to his team as they have several players who are capable of scoring plus players of similar size. Jones said one of the things his team must focus on keeping its defensive energy up, getting stops and making the little plays that might make a difference. "A game like the one against New Mexico may come down to 10 to 12 possessions, so we've got to go compete for 40 minutes and win some extra possessions," Jones said. "This is an important game for us. Since we already dropped a game in conference, we're already kind of behind of where we should be."

Notes & quotes: Midland College looks to bounce back from a loss at Western Texas College on Monday. The Chaparrals got off a slow start against the Westerners but also made its share of mistakes in the second half to prevent a comeback. MC was just 12 of 27 at the free-throw line and 2 of 11 from 3-point range. "Collectively, when we made up our mind to become more aggressive and make opportunities for ourselves — not that we took advantage of those opportunities by missing free throws — we had a better showing and made it more of a game," MC coach Jordan Dreiling said. Daniel Hernandez had another big night with a game-high 23 points and Dreiling said the freshman guard was aggressive, especially in the second half. ...NMJC is coming off a win at No. 4-ranked Odessa College on Monday. The Thunderbirds bounced back from a disappointing loss the previous Thursday as they allowed No. 2 South Plains College to make a late-game run and steal one from the T-birds. Jeff Newberry, a 6-2 sophomore G and an Oklahoma State signee, led NMJC with 15 points, 6-7 freshman F Kenrich Williams had 14 and 6-4 freshman F Nick Billingsley added 10 against the Wranglers. "They're talented, their guards are big and they rebound the ball well," Dreiling said. "They beat Odessa the other night by nine and they all played a part. They understand their roles and they are a dangerous team. We have to do our best to follow our game plan, be patient on offense and we need to get our field goal percentages up to win some games." ...The Chaps will be without sophomore G/F Demetric Austin as he has been dismissed from the team for violation of team rules, Dreiling announced on Wednesday. Austin did not make the trip to WTC on Monday and had just come back from a suspension right before the semester break. Austin played in games against Frank Phillips College and New Mexico Military Institute last week and led MC on the season with 18.6 ppg and 9.7 rpg. Dreiling said while other players have to step up to fill Austin' void, he added that the dismissal comes at a time when he believes his team is beginning to improve. ...Sophomore G Domonique Bull is questionable for tonight with a knee injury.

Kershaw, Dodgers agree to $215M deal

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Clayton Kershaw agreed Wednesday to a $215 million, seven-year contract with the Los Angeles Dodgers, a person familiar with the negotiations told The Associated Press, a deal that makes the two-time Cy Young Award winner baseball's first player with a $30 million average salary.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the agreement had not yet been announced.

Kershaw receives the most lucrative deal for a pitcher, breaking the mark of $180 million set by Justin Verlander last March for his seven-year contract with Detroit.

Kershaw would have been eligible for free agency after the upcoming season if the new deal hadn't been reached. He was eligible for salary arbitration, and those figures were set to be exchanged on Friday. He was coming off a two-year, $20 million deal that included $200,000 in bonuses in 2012, a $500,000 escalator to his 2013 base salary, and $300,000 in bonuses last year.

General manager Ned Colletti said last week that both sides had been negotiating.

"It's our desire to sign him here for a very long time," Colletti said.

The average salary of $30.7 million tops the previous high of $27.5 million, set by the New York Yankees' Alex Rodriguez as part of a 10-year agreement from December 2007. While Roger Clemens had a contract with a listed salary of $28 million with the Yankees in 2007, he joined the team in June and actually made $17.4 million.

AWARD

you grow up in a football setting as I did in Ohio in that time period in the '60s and 70s when you were playing high school football, Bear Bryant is legend. To be associated with an award like this is very humbling."

Briles helped the Bears to their first Big 12 title and first BCS bowl game this season. He said Baylor's recent success has helped him get a much warmer reception than he once received when he visits the homes of recruits.

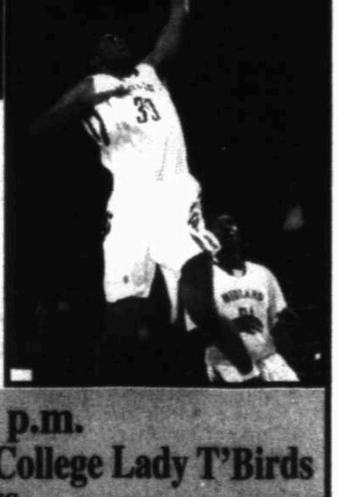

"It is completely different," he said. "We're in living rooms and kitchens that we never were in before and that's the reality of the situation. Baylor has always had a great location. Now we've got a great location, with a great stadium on a great river that's doing a great job on the football field and a great education."

Former Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum was the ceremony's other honoree, receiving the Bryant Lifetime Achievement Award.

NO. 9 OKLAHOMA ST 82, TCU 50

STILLWATER, Okla. — TCU coach Trent Johnson was matter-of-fact about his team's blowout loss to Oklahoma State.

"It didn't exactly get away from us," Johnson said. "They were just better."

Marcus Smart scored 20 points to help No. 9 Oklahoma State defeat TCU 82-50 on Wednesday night. The reigning Big 12 player of the week also had eight rebounds and five assists for the Cowboys (15-2, 3-1).

Markel Brown scored 14 and Le'Bryan Nash added 13 points and eight rebounds for Oklahoma State, which shot 47 percent from the field to win for the eighth time in nine games and improve to 9-0 at home.

Karviar Shepherd scored 13 points, and Amric Fields and Michael Williams each added 11 for TCU (9-7, 0-4) in its most lopsided loss of the season. The Horned Frogs were blown out for the second straight game — they lost 88-62 at Baylor on Saturday — but Johnson said he wouldn't worry too much about the margin. Fields is still getting back into shape after recovering from a torn ACL and a broken hand, and TCU just played two of the most talented teams on its schedule.

"The kids' spirits are as good as they can be because they understand," Johnson said.

Oklahoma State held TCU to 29 percent shooting. Kyan Anderson, who entered leading the Horned Frogs with 15.6 points per game, finished with eight on 2-for-8 shooting.

The Cowboys have been concerned about the boards since post player Michael Cobbins went down for the season with a ruptured left Achilles tendon late last month, but OSU outrebounded the Horned Frogs 46-33.

Oklahoma State led by 14 at halftime before stretching its lead in the early minutes of the second half. A pair of free throws by Kamari Murphy extended OSU's advantage to 48-29, and a tip-in by Smart pushed the Cowboys' lead past 20 points for the first time.

A lob from Smart led to a two-handed jam by Brown that gave the Cowboys a 71-47 edge, and OSU cruised from there.

Smart hit three 3-pointers in the first 4 minutes of the game to give Oklahoma State a 9-4 lead. A fast-break jam by Murphy gave the Cowboys a 28-15 lead with 6:55 left in the first half.

The Cowboys shot 55 percent from the field in the first half and made 7 of 11 3-pointers. Smart scored nine points before the break and Brown added eight. Shepherd and Williams each had seven points in the first half for TCU.

The Cowboys were tougher inside and cranked up their defense in the second half, and TCU had no answer. Johnson said he thought his team put forth a solid effort but simply didn't have the talent to make the game closer.

SMU 71
SOUTH FLORIDA 54

DALLAS — Markus Kennedy scored a game-high 18 points and Shawn Williams added 16 to lead SMU to a 71-54 victory over South Florida on Wednesday night.

SMU (12-4, 2-2 American Athletic Conference) never trailed, scoring the first 13 points and owned a double-digit lead from four minutes after tipoff for the rest of the game. Their largest lead was 26 late with 4:16 remaining.

NO. 4 MICHIGAN STATE 54
NORTHWESTERN 40

EVANSTON, Ill. — Gary Harris scored 14 points and No. 4 Michigan State beat Northwestern 54-40 on Wednesday night for its ninth straight win.

The preseason favorite to win the Big Ten, the Spartans (16-1, 5-0) continue to roll along, although it was hardly an easy night for them. They overcame a sluggish start and pulled away down the stretch even though they shot 2 of 16 on 3-pointers.

Keith Appling scored 11 points and Branden Dawson, fighting an illness, had 11 rebounds and three blocks for MSU, which was missing one of its top players in Adreian Payne. The 6-foot-10 forward sat out his second straight game because of a sprained right foot.

Tre Demps did his best to keep Northwestern (8-10, 1-4) in the game, scoring 10 of his 12 points in the second half, but leading scorer Drew Crawford managed just six.

NO. 16 MASS. 88 GEORGE MASON 87

FAIRFAX, Va. — Chaz Williams had 26 points and eight assists, Derrick Gordon made a go-ahead layup with 8 seconds remaining and Massachusetts edged George Mason.

The Minutemen (15-1, 3-0 Atlantic 10) rallied from eight points down in the second half to win their fifth straight.

Sherrod Wright scored 26 points and Allen had 21 to lead the Patriots (7-10, 0-3), who lost for the eighth time in 10 games. George Mason was seeking its first win over a ranked opponent in more than six years.

Williams, who entered second in the country in assists at 7.5 per game, shot 11 for 17 from the field — including a layup to draw the Minutemen to 87-86 with 18 seconds remaining. Williams' basket came after the first of two costly late turnovers by Wright.

No. 24 SAINT LOUIS 66 ST. BONAVENTURE 60

ST. LOUIS — Dwayne Evans scored 18 points and Saint Louis won its first game since breaking into the Top 25 for the first time this season, holding off St. Bonaventure.

Jordair Jett scored 10 of his 15 points in the second half for Saint Louis (16-2, 3-0 Atlantic 10), which has won 10 in a row. The start is the school's best since the 1993-94 team was 19-1.

Matthew Wright had 17 points for St. Bonaventure (11-6, 1-2), which was in foul trouble early and ended with four players drawing four fouls apiece.

The Billikens are 3-0 in conference play for the first time since winning the first three in the Mid-Continent Conference in 1989-90.

NO. 5 LOUISVILLE 75
UCF 56

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Shoni Schimmel scored 27 points and Sara Hammond added 22 as No. 5 Louisville beat Central Florida 75-56 on Wednesday night for its 10th straight victory.

Bria Smith added 10 points as the Cardinals (17-1, 5-0 American Athletic Conference) matched their best 18-game start since the 2009 season. This victory took work throughout as Louisville overcame a slow start to build a 23-point lead early in the second half, a cushion that came in handy after the determined Knights (8-8, 1-4) rallied to within 66-55 with 2 1/2 minutes remaining.

Schimmel was just 8 of 22 from the field and 5 of 14 from 3-point range, but made several baskets including one from long range with 40 seconds left to seal the game. The senior guard overtook Jazz Covington for third place on the Cardinals' career scoring list.

Sara Djassi scored 28 points for the Knights, who shot 35 percent.

WEST VIRGINIA 73
No. 13 IOWA STATE 59

AMES, Iowa — Linda Stepney scored 16 points and West Virginia upset Iowa State in Ames for the second straight season.

West Virginia (15-2, 4-1 Big 12) hit seven 3-pointers in the first half and was 12 of 30 overall.

Iowa State (14-2, 3-2) cut the lead to six, 59-53 on a 3-pointer by Jadda Buckley with 6:57 left to play, but Stepney scored a layup and 3-pointer back-to-back to push the lead back to 11 points and was 4 of 4 from the free throw line in the final 1:28 to put the game away.

Bria Holmes and Christal Caldwell finished with 12 and 11 points, respectively, for the Mountaineers.

Hallie Christofferson had 21 points to lead the Cyclones, which lost its second straight game. Buckley added another 15.

MICHIGAN 65
NO. 22 PURDUE 49

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Madison Ristovski scored 17 points and Michigan never trailed, knocking off Purdue on the road.

Ristovski was 5 of 9 from the field for the Wolverines (12-5, 3-1 Big Ten), connecting on 3 of 5 from long-range.

Michigan jumped to an 8-0 lead in the opening minutes of the game. Purdue battled back to twice cut the lead to a point, but the Wolverines took control with an 18-8 run capped by a Ristovski jumper.

The Wolverines pushed the lead to 42-29 on a Ristovski layup just over four minutes into the second half.

Siera Thompson and Shannon Smith each contributed 12 points for the Wolverines and Cyesha Goree added eight points and 14 rebounds.

The Boilermakes (11-5, 1-3) shot just 30 percent from the field and were led by the 12-point effort of April Wilson. Liza Clemons added 10 points.

TEXAS TECH

From 1C

Texas Tech dominated the boards, outrebounding Baylor 35-19, and the Bears couldn't even capitalize on Texas Tech's errors. On nine Red Raiders turnovers, Baylor managed only two points.

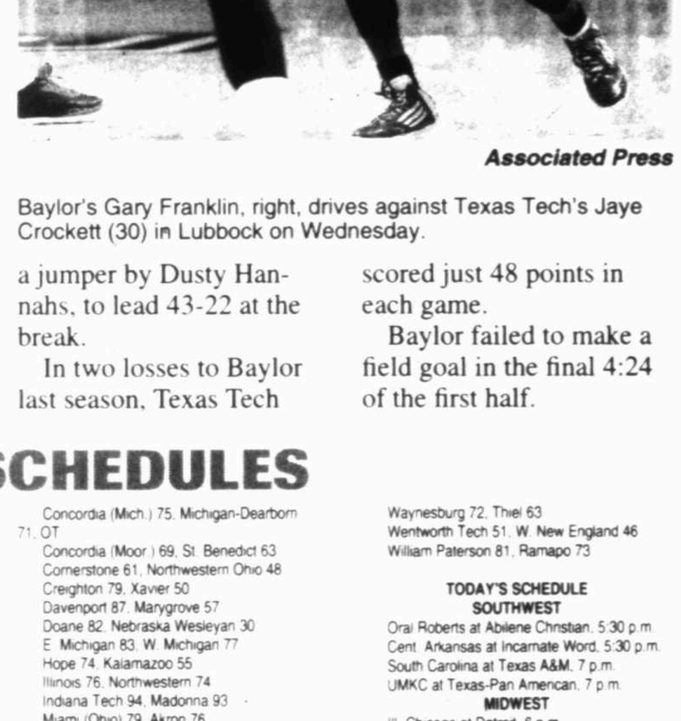

The Red Raiders hit 62 percent of their shots from the field in the first half. Meanwhile, Baylor had no assists and just 12 rebounds while making only 25.9 percent of its field goals, including several chippies down low.

Texas Tech had 22 rebounds and owned the paint on offense. The Red Raiders got 24 points inside, compared to 14 for their much-taller opponents.

Texas Tech used an 11-0 run, including a dunk by Crockett, layups by Randy Onwuasor and Kravic and a jumper by Dusty Hannahs, to lead 43-22 at the break.

In two losses to Baylor last season, Texas Tech scored just 48 points in each game.

Baylor failed to make a field goal in the final 4:24 of the first half.

Vikings pick Mike Zimmer as new coach

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Mike Zimmer is finally a head coach in the NFL. The Minnesota Vikings think now is the time for the veteran defensive coordinator.

The Vikings have hired Zimmer for their top coaching job, according to a person with knowledge of the process who spoke Wednesday to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because Zimmer's contract had not been completed and the team had not announced the hiring.

News of the decision emerged early in the day, but the Vikings held off on publicizing it at all.

Their silence was strange, considering a report by ESPN that they had already requested and received permission from Cleveland to interview offensive coordinator Norv Turner for the same position in Minnesota. The top headline on the team website touted an area winner in the annual NFL Punt, Pass & Kick contest.

That doesn't mean the Vikings weren't delighted about the ninth head coach in their 54-year history. Tight end Kyle Rudolph, center John Sullivan and defensive end Brian Robison were among the players who expressed excitement about the former Bengals assistant via their Twitter accounts.

"Fired up about Coach Zimmer! As a Cincy kid he's been fun to watch there and can't wait to work with him!" Rudolph tweeted.

For the Bengals, the news was bittersweet. Zimmer, who has been an NFL defensive coordinator for the last 14 seasons, spent six of those with Cincinnati.

"Today is one of the happiest and yet saddest days for me. Happy Coach Zimm finally gets to be a head coach and spread all of his knowledge," cornerback Terence Newman tweeted.

The Bengals were third in the league in yards allowed and fifth in points against this season, though they lost in the first round of the playoffs for the third straight year.

"Gonna miss you coach Zimmer! Wish you nothing but the best in Minnesota. You brought out the best in each of your players! So honored to have been coached by you!" tweeted linebacker Rey Maualuga.

Zimmer replaces Leslie Frazier, another former Bengals defensive coordinator who was fired Dec. 30 after the team finished 5-10-1 this season.

General manager Rick Spielman interviewed at least seven candidates. He and Vikings owners Zygi Wilf and Mark Wilf settled on the one who was widely considered around the league to be the most overdue for a head coaching job. Zimmer has interviewed for several vacancies in recent years, including this month with Tennessee.

Williams, Djokovic advance in Aussie Open

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Serena Williams wore a fitted pink blazer into her second-round match at the Australian Open, giving the impression she wasn't feeling the heat.

And after her 6-1, 6-2 win over Vesna Dolonc on Wednesday, the second consecutive scorching day at the season's first major, Williams said she could remember hotter matches.

By improving her career mark to 60-8 at Melbourne Park, she equaled Margaret Court's record 60 match wins at the Australian Open in the Open era.

The heat topped 40 Celsius (104F) during the 63-minute match, and peaked at just under 42 C (108 F) later during Novak Djokovic's 6-0, 6-4, 6-4 win over Leonardo Mayer. Second-seeded Djokovic, aiming to be the first man in the Open era to win four consecutive Australian Open titles, didn't face a break point.

Williams fended off the only break point she faced with an ace, one of her 10 in the match. She hit 24 winners, sticking to the ideal strategy of keeping the points short on a hot day and extended her winning streak to 24 matches.

She said didn't even go outside Tuesday because conditions "were a little bit extreme," adding that the prospect of the scorching temperatures had even interrupted her sleep.

"I kept waking up in the middle of the night last night just paranoid. I just wanted to stay hydrated," she said. "The last thing I want to do is to cramp in this weather. It can happen so easy."

Williams next meets No. 31-seeded Daniela Hantuchova, who was on court for 3 hours, 13 minutes in her 6-3, 3-6, 12-10 win over Karolina Pliskova.

Temperatures topped 42 Celsius (108F) on Tuesday, and there were a total of nine retirements in the first round, equaling a Grand Slam record. It wasn't quite as stifling Wednesday, but the forecast is for the heat wave to continue until Friday.

Li Na, the 2011 French Open champion and a two-time finalist at Melbourne Park, had a 6-0, 7-6 (5) win over 16-year-old Belinda Bencic and will next play No. 26 Lucie Safarova in the third round.

No. 9 Angelique Kerber advanced and will next meet American Alison Riske, who trounced Yanina Wickmayer 6-1, 6-1. Australian wild-card entry Casey Dellacqua upset No. 18 Kirsten Flipkens 6-3, 6-0.

Serena Williams, right, of the United States is congratulated by Vesna Dolonc of Serbia following their second round match at the Australian Open tennis championship in Melbourne, Australia, Wednesday.

Record number of underclassmen entering NFL draft

Associated Press

South Carolina defensive end Jadeveon Clowney and Texas A&M quarterback Johnny Manziel headline a record number of underclassmen entering the NFL draft heading into Wednesday night's deadline.

At least 90 players who had college eligibility remaining are expected to enter the draft, shattering last year's record number of 74.

"It's a humongous number, so the first reaction is it makes you step back a little bit," said NFL Network draft analyst Daniel Jeremiah, a former scout with the Baltimore Ravens, Cleveland Browns and Philadelphia Eagles. "What I'm hearing is that the agents always have to make the sales pitch to get these to come out. This year, what I've been told is the sales pitch is that all your money right now is coming from the second contract, so you need to come out early so you can get to that second contract a year earlier ... and apparently it's been pretty effective."

ESPN analyst Mel Kiper Jr. released a mock draft Wednesday in which 23 of the 32 first-round picks were early entries. Kiper had Manziel going first overall and included Clowney, UCF quarterback Blake Bortles and Clemson wide receiver Sammy Watkins as top-five picks. Jeremiah's list of the top 50 draft prospects includes early entries in the top three spots: Clowney at No. 1, Watkins at No. 2 and Auburn offensive tackle Greg Robinson at No. 3.

"It's going to be a huge number of underclassmen that go high and have long careers," Jeremiah said. "And there are going to be some other guys who don't get drafted and will be in a tough spot and would have been better served to go back to school. It works both ways."

New Orleans Pelicans shooting guard Eric Gordon (10) tries to pass around Houston Rockets power forward Donatas Motiejunas (20) and point guard Jeremy Lin (7) in the first half in New Orleans on Wednesday.

Harden lifts Rockets over Pelicans

Associated Press

Rockets	103
Pelicans	100

NEW ORLEANS — James Harden capped a 26-point performance with a tiebreaking jumper with 28 seconds left, and the Houston Rockets held on for their third straight victory, 103-100 over the reeling New Orleans Pelicans on Wednesday night.

Eric Gordon scored a season-high 35 points, but the Pelicans lost their seventh straight.

Terrence Jones scored 23 and Dwight Howard added 12 points, 11 rebounds and three blocks for the Rockets, who trailed by as many as 17 in the second quarter and by eight with about four minutes to go. Harden had a hand in 12 of Houston's final 17 points, scoring 10 and assisting on Howard's alley-oop dunk.

Anthony Davis added 24 points for New Orleans, his sixth straight game with 20 or more, but Darius Miller missed a potential tying 3 in the final seconds.

Jason Smith and Brian Roberts each added 10 points for New Orleans, but Smith missed a potential tying jumper from the top of the key with 12 seconds left. Chandler Parsons who had 17 points, then made one of two free throws for the final margin.

The Rockets made things difficult for themselves by missing 16 of 41 free throws, and won despite leading for only 1:14 the entire game.

The Pelicans led by 12 early in the third quarter after Davis' jump shot, but Davis then committed three fouls in the span of 1:34, giving him four for the game and prompting coach Monty Williams to bring his star forward to the bench.

Less than four minutes after Davis left the game, his former Kentucky teammate, Jones, tied the game at 68. But New Orleans managed to regain momentum, thanks to a pair of 3s by Gordon, and led 81-74 heading into the final period.

With New Orleans missing three top players in Ryan Anderson, Jrue Holiday and Tyreke Evans, the stage appeared set for an easy Houston victory.

It appeared it could be another long night for the Pelicans when Howard took an alley-oop lob from Harden and slammed it home with two hands on the opening play of the game.

Yet New Orleans wound up dominating the first quarter on both ends of the court, from Smith's crowd-pleasing block of Parsons' driving dunk attempt to Davis' windmill jam and his 14-foot jumper as he was fouled.

Gordon had 14 points, including a pair of 3s, in the first quarter, and New Orleans led 30-19 when the period ended.

Gordon scored 22 points before halftime, and New Orleans took its largest lead when Al-Farouq Aminu scored five straight points on a 3-pointer and two free throws to make it 44-27.

The Pelicans were back within 51-43 when Harden's no-look, behind-the-head pass set up Donatas Motiejunas' easy layup. But Davis responded with a jump hook, Gordon added a free throw and New Orleans led 56-45 at halftime.

Ryan Perales Among Top Performers at Anthony Spencer Football Camp

Quarterback, Ryan Perales earned high honors this summer as he placed among the top performers at the football camp, hosted by Sports International. It was here that Ryan was able to out play well over 100 campers to be selected as part of the program's prestigious Gridiron Elite. The football camp, held at the University of North Texas, offered both overnight and day camp options, and featured current Dallas Cowboy, Anthony Spencer as the headliner. The camp is designed for players ages 7 to 18 and features daily instruction, lectures, and demonstrations by Spencer and members of the Cowboys. The college and high school coaches on staff make sure each practice is filled with in-depth instruction, lectures, and demonstrations. Campers were grouped by age, position, ability and experience to allow coaches to progressively teach basic and advanced techniques to best benefit each group. At the end of the week, the top performers were selected to the Sports International Gridiron Elite (ages 15-18 only). The Gridiron Elite is an exclusive club made up of the top high school football players that attend camp. Each recipient was hand-selected by the coaching staff at the camp. Players selected for the prestigious Gridiron Elite will have outperformed many of their peers to earn their coach's recognition and praise. As a member of the Gridiron Elite, Sports International will be sending each camper's information to over 2,000 college coaches throughout the nation to aid in their recruiting efforts.

Chamber makes pitch to export US oil and gas

By Jennifer A. Dlouhy
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Companies should be allowed to widely export American oil and natural gas, the nation's top business lobbying group said Wednesday.

The Chamber of Commerce made the case for virtually unchecked exports of the fossil fuels to countries that are members of the World Trade Organization and offered a host of other recommendations designed to harness the economic potential of U.S. energy in a broad new policy paper.

"We should have a free energy market out there which would benefit our industry, provide more markets for our industry and make sure we are able to reap the value of all our resources," said Karen Harbert, head of the Chamber's Institute for 21st Century Energy. "We need to look at ways to be able to export crude over time."

The prospect of upending the 39-year-old ban on oil exports divides some Chamber members, even as it gets high-profile support from Republican lawmakers and newspaper editorial boards. It also has caused a rift in the oil industry, as crude producers seek export freedoms even as some independent refiners push against them.

Among the opponents is San Antonio refiner Valero Energy Corp., which benefits from the current, 1970s-era restrictions on exporting unprocessed crude even though refined products can easily be sold overseas.

"Valero's position has not changed at all despite the fact that a lot more groups have lined up on the pro-export side than the side we're on, which says that this is not that great an idea," said Valero spokesman Bill Day. "The supporters of unlimited exports may talk about things like free trade that sound great in theory, but Valero and other businesses don't operate in theory — we operate in reality."

With OPEC controlling much of the world's production, "the reality is there is no free market in crude oil," Day added.

Harbert stressed that the Chamber of Commerce would not betray its longstanding support for free trade when it came to oil.

But big export policy changes should happen "in a thoughtful manner," she urged, adding that they should come as part of a suite of moves to encourage new U.S. oil and gas development.

"If we decide we're going to lift the ban on oil exports but we can't get access to more places to explore and produce, we're sort of putting out with one hand and taking away with the other," she said. "If we decide we're going to regulate (hydraulic fracturing) at the federal level, which reduces appetite for development here, we're giving with one hand and taking away with the other."

The president of the American Fuel and Petrochemical Manufacturers, Charles Drevna, has made similar assertions, arguing that changes to the U.S. oil export ban should be part of a broader set of moves on energy policy, not done in a vacuum.

San Antonio-based refiner Tesoro Corp. has a similar view. The company's vice president of government affairs, Stephen Brown, said energy markets already operate under distorting policies — such as Jones Act prohibitions on using foreign-flagged tankers to transport crude.

"Tesoro supports lifting the ban on crude exports, revisiting the wisdom of the Jones Act and addressing the regulatory thicket of infrastructure permitting roadblocks — federal and state — which impede the efficient flow of energy products domestically," Brown said.

Some critics of easing the export ban have raised the specter of higher domestic crude prices or warned overseas sales could hasten the decline of now-surging U.S. oilfields. Oil Change International on Wednesday argued that exporting crude was bad climate change policy, since it would spur more development of the fossil fuels that emit heat-trapping gases when burned.

"Overturning the export ban would send a clear message to world leaders that the United States puts Big Oil's profits before combating climate change," the group said.

Beyond exports, the Chamber of Commerce called on the Interior Department to foster new oil and natural gas development on public lands and waters — including territory off the East and West coasts that is not currently slated to be auctioned off.

And it made a plea for the government to hold off or cancel a suite of environmental regulations, from proposed limits on gasoline sulfur emissions to the Bureau of Land Management's plan to boost standards for hydraulic fracturing on public lands.

The group said new rules should have timeframes for compliance that allow companies to adopt new technology and make other required changes in an efficient, cost-effective manner.

And when regulations are proposed, they should "not arbitrarily mandate technology that is not commercially available," the Chamber said.

Harbert highlighted proposed regulations that could essentially bar utilities from using coal to generate electricity unless they invest in still-developing technology to trap greenhouse gas emissions from burning the fossil fuel. But the group also has been critical of federal mandates for cellulosic renewable fuels, despite slow commercialization of the next-generation biofuels.

Chamber of Commerce President Tom Donohue stressed that abundant, low-cost energy "is absolutely essential" for the nation's economy and U.S. businesses. Low-cost natural gas has lured some foreign manufacturers and chemical makers to the U.S. and led domestic ones to expand to take advantage of the fossil fuel as a feedstock and a power source.

Oil rises nearly 2 percent

The price of oil closed above $94 a barrel for the first time in two weeks on a big drop in supplies.

Benchmark U.S. crude oil for February delivery rose $1.58, or 1.7 percent, to $94.17 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Brent crude rose 67 cents at $106.27.

The U.S. Energy Department reported that oil supplies fell by a larger-than-expected 7.7 million barrels last week. Analysts surveyed by Platts expected a decline of 1.6 million barrels.

Oil has risen 2.6 percent in the past two days. It started the year with steep declines because supplies of crude oil and fuel appeared ample enough to offset rising demand.

At the pump, the average price for a gallon of gasoline remained at $3.31. That's up 8 cents from a month ago and penny more expensive than at this time last year.

In other energy futures trading in New York:

- Wholesale gasoline was flat at $2.63 a gallon.
- Natural gas fell 4 cents to $4.33 per 1,000 cubic feet
- Heating oil gained 4 cents to $2.98 a gallon.

Metal prices are mixed

Gold for February delivery fell $7.10 to $1,238.30 an ounce. March silver fell 14.8 cents to $20.134 an ounce.

Platinum for April delivery fell $5.20 to $1,428.60 an ounce. Palladium for March delivery rose $5.10 to $744 an ounce.

Copper for March delivery rose 2.2 cents to $3.358 a pound.

Man's reticence about sex puts relationship in jeopardy

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I have been seeing a guy, "Karl," for eight months now, and we have never had sex. After two or three months, I brought up the subject. He said he was stressed because he had just lost his job. He also said there is never any privacy at his place because he has roommates/tenants. I offered to go to my place, but he said that with my son there, it's the same issue.

Karl says he's very attracted to me, but doesn't want our "time" together to be ruined by his current money problems. I told him I understood and I have waited. I also explained that it makes me feel insecure and unwanted.

He now has a job, but we still haven't had sex. He has, in the interim, told me he loves me and wants to marry me. I constantly worry that there's someone else and wonder what's wrong with me. I love Karl, too, but I don't know what to do. Please help. — LOVE, BUT NO SEX IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR LOVE, BUT: Is there any intimacy AT ALL in your relationship with Karl? Is he affectionate? Is there any physical response when he holds and kisses you? If the answer is no, your boyfriend may have a physical or emotional problem, be asexual or gay.

Before agreeing to marry him, I recommend you schedule some time alone together by spending a few romantic weekends at a hotel or motel. It may give you a better idea of what your future would be like if you two decide the tie the knot.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old gay man who works in an office with 20 women. In the five years I have worked here, many of my co-workers have either gotten married or had children.

Our office has a tradition of throwing showers for the lucky ladies, and I am always asked to contribute money toward food for the party or an extravagant gift.

While I'm happy to donate to a charity or help a friend in need, I wonder if a wedding or a baby shower would be given for ME? Am I selfish for feeling hesitant to donate money or gifts when it's likely the favor will never be returned? — MINORITY MALE IN TEXAS

DEAR MINORITY: I don't think you are selfish for feeling the way you do. In fact, it's understandable. However, in the case of a wedding or baby shower, people give gifts as a way of offering congratulations and good wishes. And I would hope that, even if same-sex marriage isn't recognized by the state of Texas, that your co-workers would do something to honor you if you had a spiritual ceremony, which some religious denominations offer.

DEAR ABBY: I am turning 60 and naturally looking a little "worn." My man friend keeps telling me I need a facelift and to lose 10 pounds, so I'm starting to save my money. Something tells me he wants a "hot chick" and thinks he'll have one once I get these procedures done. It's expensive. What do you think? — LOOSE-FACED LOUISIANAN

DEAR LOUISIANAN: It's not only expensive; as with any other major surgery, there is some risk involved. If you had said you wanted cosmetic surgery because YOU thought you needed it, I would say to go ahead. However, if it's only because your man friend is pushing you, then he should save HIS money and offer to foot the bill.

P.S. He must be an optimist because there is no guarantee that with 10 pounds off and a new face you wouldn't start looking for a younger man. Some women do.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

"Strip-and-throw-in" and "end-play" are fancy names for a simple declarer play technique — elimination. Most eliminations are quite simple — they just require a little forethought by declarer. South was delighted with the dummy and saw that the slam depended on no more than East holding one of the two missing club honors — a 75 percent chance. He won the opening lead in hand with the ace, drew trumps ending in dummy and played a club to his 10. West won and continued hearts. South won dummy's king and played a club to his queen. Down one!

Declarer looked to his partner for sympathy at his poor luck, but sympathy was not forthcoming. "Why would you take a 75 percent play," said North, "when you had a 100 percent play available? Just eliminate the spades and hearts from both hands before you play a club to the 10. West will win his jack, but must present you with a twelfth trick by giving you either a ruff-sluff or playing a club into your ace-queen."

South was crestfallen. He realized that his partner was right. He immediately amended his New Year's resolution list, adding that he would never make this error again.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, Jan. 16, 2014:

This year you reveal your true inner light. Others come toward you, which allows for many more choices. You also will feel more secure. A newfound confidence affects nearly all facets of your existence. If you are single, do not be surprised if someone strolls into your life in the next 12 months. You won't be able to resist this person. If you are attached, as a couple you become much closer. You value your time together more and more. Your domestic life will liven up, as excitement seems to head your way. LEO has a way of encouraging you to open up.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ Nearly everyone you meet today will be in a great mood. The one exception might be an important partner who seems to get easily aggravated. You'll want to consider helping this person change his or her mood. If that doesn't work, just let it go. Tonight: Add a little romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★ You might be inordinately tense right now. It would be wise to go out and get some exercise or choose some other type of stressbuster. You know what works best for you. A misunderstanding could emerge. Don't let this happen. Tonight: Close to home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You speak your mind, and others seem to get the authenticity of your words. You could feel a bit awkward dealing with someone of importance. Don't worry — your wit will carry you through any problem you might encounter. Tonight: Hang out with friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Your possessive side emerges, which could leave you feeling extremely vulnerable. If possible, detach as quickly as you can. The sooner you do, the better you will feel. A challenge comes from an unexpected interaction. Tonight: Your treat.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ An effort to communicate on a more cordial basis with a loved one will be well received. An unexpected call could result in a lot of talk and excitement. The other party is extremely dynamic, and he or she enjoys that same quality in you. Tonight: Go, do and be.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ Stop pushing so hard. Be aware of your limits, and consider taking a few days off. Take another look at what might be weighing you down. Plan to visit someone at a distance. When you return, you will be at your best. Tonight: Not to be found.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ You can't help but go for what you want. Someone's path could be confusing, so you will opt to become more independent. Others are bound to react. You might anticipate this, yet you still could be shocked by one person's response. Tonight: Ask a friend for advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Use your intuition to see how far you can push someone. The person you are dealing with could be unusually difficult or complex. Be careful to not let anger become a component in this struggle. Encourage conversation and brainstorming. Tonight: A must appearance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You'll have an opportunity to learn a lot more about a situation. Explore your options. Tap into information that seems to have considerable validity. In the process, you will see that a new perspective could point to different paths. Tonight: Put on a favorite piece of music.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ A partner's responses will remind you to spend more one-on-one time with this person. A financial matter could demand quick thinking. Understand that you have a choice as to how to handle the issue. Reach out for feedback. Tonight: Quality time with a favorite person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ Others will come forward with surprising requests. A blast from the past might call you out of the blue. Maintain a sense of humor, and be willing to do your part to make a situation work. Tonight: Out and about ... once you decide who, where and when.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Dedicate your time and attention to completing a project and getting past a problem. Your sense of humor will emerge with a partner who might be on the warpath. You have the ability to help this person gain a new perspective. Tonight: Clear your desk, run errands, and then relax.

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.
The Power of Words

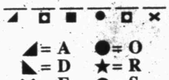

The words of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. helped to change the world. His words still inspire people today. He was born on January 15, 1929 in Atlanta, Georgia. His father was the minister of the Ebenezer Baptist Church, as was his father before him. Because Martin and his father had the same name, the family called him M.L.

Caring

When M.L. was young, he played with all the children who lived in his Atlanta neighborhood.

Use the code to find out what M.L.'s mother told him.

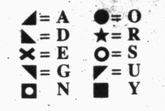

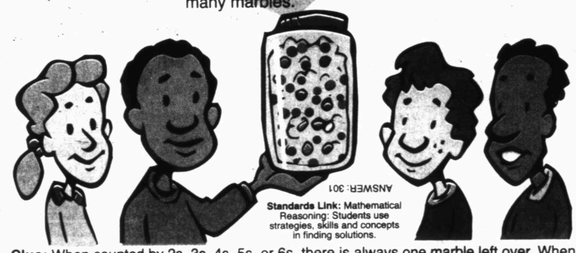

But when they reached school age, the white children went to a school for white children only, and M.L. was sent to a school for black children. After the first day of school, M.L. and his white friends were never allowed to play together again.

Use Your Marbles

Martin and his friends have been collecting marbles. They counted to see how many marbles in all. Use the clue to see if you can figure out how many marbles.

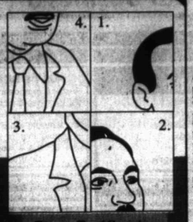

ANSWER: 301

Standards Link: Mathematical Reasoning: Students use strategies, skills and concepts in finding solutions.

Clue: When counted by 2s, 3s, 4s, 5s, or 6s, there is always one marble left over. When counted by 7s, there are no marbles left over. The answer is between 299 and 310.

Integrity

As M.L. grew up, he saw more and more examples of segregation. He also saw his father and others speak out against hatred and segregation. These people taught M.L. about the power of words. He learned that words could heal or hurt.

"When the history books are written, someone will say there lived black people who had the courage to stand up for their rights."

– Dr. Martin Luther King
