Grand jury seeks audit

Inquiry turns to Painter's drug confiscations

■ Action does not reflect suspicion of wrongdoing, foreman says.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland County grand jury is requesting an outside audit of the Sheriff's Department's records of forfeited drug money and the status of seized narcotics and other drugs, including those confiscated in reverse stings, Frank K. Cahoon, grand jury foreman, said Monday.

The impending audit does not reflect suspicion of any wrongdoing on the part of Sheriff Gary Painter or any of his deputies, Cahoon said.

"The grand jurors didn't feel like they had the expertise to do any kind of audit," Cahoon said. "That's the reason it voted to ask for an outside audit."

The 12-member grand jury is not a special grand jury but a regular grand jury impaneled by 142nd Texas State District Court Judge Pat Baskin.

This session of the grand jury expires at the end of February.

The audit reflects a continuing inquiry, and not an investigation, into Painter's reverse-sting operations, Cahoon said.

"From the perspective of the grand jury, an accounting for the drugs and the money in the reverse stings is just so important," Cahoon said. "We decided we wanted to know more about them and to seek an outside audit."

Cahoon said it was the grand jury itself, and not District Attorney Al Schorre, that called for the inquiry.

Last Friday, Painter and Jerry Cowin, a sheriff's Technical Assistance Unit deputy in charge of evidence and drug inventory, were called before the grand jury.

Tokyo leader: U.S. workers are 'too lazy'

■ Harsh assessment seems bound to ignite trans-Pacific arguments.

By David E. Sanger
N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — One of Japan's most senior politicians said over the weekend that America's economic troubles were rooted in a work force "too lazy" to compete with Japan, and argued that one of the biggest problems of the United States was that nearly a third of its workers "cannot even read."

Sakurauchi

The harshly worded assessment by Yoshio Sakurauchi, 79, the speaker of Japan's powerful lower house of Parliament, seemed bound to fuel the trans-Pacific arguments over the causes of America's trade and competitiveness difficulties with Japan.

Though Japanese politicians rarely speak publicly in such direct and confrontational terms about the United States, Sakurauchi's comments seemed to amplify themes that have appeared in the Japanese press and on television since President Bush and his entourage of business executives left Japan 10 days ago.

Nation pays tribute to memory of King

■ In New York City, a rash of racial incidents provides a somber backdrop to services, gatherings.

ATLANTA — In pride, anger and sorrow, the nation, and blacks in particular, paid homage to the memory of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Monday on the seventh observance of the national holiday established in his honor.

At the Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King preached, speakers recalled his work in often harsh tones that reflected the ravages of the ailing economy and the tide of violence and despair in the nation's inner cities.

Midlander dies of stab wounds

Staff Report

A 19-year-old Midland man died after sustaining stab wounds to the torso late Sunday night, about an hour after he summoned an ambulance from his home, police said.

Police have no suspects in the case.

According to police reports, Manuel Galindo of 1609 E. Butternut called police at 10:30 p.m. and told them he had been assaulted. Galindo had notified police before waking up his family members, according to reports.

Upon arrival, officers found Galindo with stab wounds in the left side of the chest. He was taken to the emergency room of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center and was pronounced dead at 11:45 p.m. by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, according to reports.

Galindo's family told officers he had

French airliner crashes; at least 9 survive

MONT SAINTE-ODILE, France (AP) — A French Airbus A-320 carrying 96 people crashed in snow and fog on a wooded ridge in eastern France Monday night. At least nine survivors, including a toddler, were found after a four-hour search.

The 20-month-old girl was the only person to emerge unscathed from the wreckage of the state-run Air Inter flight, police said. The smoking debris was strewn about a snowy pine forest.

Two of the survivors were critically injured. Most or all of the survivors, including a boy of about 8 years, were seated in the rear of the plane, rescuers said.

Crews worked in 20-degree cold to remove the injured and the dead from the crash site near Mont Sainte-Odile, a 2,500-feet peak in the Vosges mountains, 30 miles southwest of Strasbourg near the German border. Casualties were brought to a makeshift medical center a 20-minute walk away, then taken to hospitals in Strasbourg and Obernai.

City officials seek economic development alternatives

'Time, place, circumstance' defeat tax

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

The failure of Midland's sales tax election can be attributed to three factors — time, place and circumstance, said Jerry Jones, director of Midland College's business studies program.

Such an analysis, the kind often used in MC business classes, helps explain the issue's overwhelming unpopularity with local voters, Jones said. The election for a ¼-cent sales tax increase to fund economic development was rejected by almost 75 percent of those voting.

"With regard to time, there's such a 'depressed mentality' right now, not only locally but nationally," he said. "People are fed up with leadership."

From the point of view of "place," Midland, which traditionally follows the ups and downs of the petroleum industry, has never had a comprehensive, consensus-derived development plan, Jones pointed out.

Circumstances, then, created a climate right

With the emphatic "no more taxes" message of Saturday's failed election still ringing in their ears, Midlanders turned their thoughts Monday to alternatives for economic development.

City voters rejected by 3-to-1 a ¼-cent sales tax for economic development, sending leaders a no-tax message that was loud and clear. Despite its controversial tone, some said the election served a purpose.

"We needed to establish what the taxpayers will do and won't do," said Wayne Merritt, president of Texas National Bank and a proponent of the issue.

"In a sense it was worth the election to establish that tax money won't be used for economic development," Merritt said. But now, he added, the development of Midland's economy has become a greater challenge.

He said the message from city taxpayers was clear: the added burden of a sales tax would have been more detrimental than the tax would have been worth as an eco-

Court voids system

BROWNSVILLE — Texas' higher education system was declared unconstitutional Monday, and a judge gave lawmakers 16 months to correct the inequities or quit funding colleges and universities. State District Judge Ben Euresti Jr. said the higher education system violates the Texas Constitution because it denies Mexican-Americans equal education opportunity. "The court hereby declares and enters judgment that the Texas higher education system (the laws, policies, practices, organizations, entities and programs that have created, developed, or maintained Texas public universities and professional schools) is unconstitutional and unenforceable in law," Euresti said Monday.

On Bush's slide

WASHINGTON— The struggle over how to stop President Bush's political slide has fanned staff rivalries in the White House and intensified a broader debate over campaign tactics and economic policy, administration officials and Republican strategists said Monday. Inside the White House, they said, there is a lingering sense of confusion as Samuel K. Skinner, the new chief of staff, struggles to gain control of the policy apparatus and dominate Richard G. Darman.

GED 'fails on jobs'

CHICAGO — Recipients of the high school equivalency certificate fare no better than dropouts and much worse than graduates in the job market, researchers said Monday. But the American Council on Education, which produces the 7½-hour General Educational Development exam, strongly disputed the findings, saying the researchers were "mixing apples and oranges." Lead researcher James Heckman, a professor of economics and public policy at the University of Chicago, said more and more students are taking the exam.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Clouds might bring showers

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of showers and a high in the lower 50s with south wind at five to 15 mph. Tonight there is a 20 percent chance of showers with a low near 30, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly sunny with a high near 60.

After an overnight low of 19, Monday's high reached 51 compared with the record high for that date of 76 in 1986. The record low for that date is 5 in 1966.

STATE

High, thin clouds covered most of Texas on Monday and threatened to bring rain and drizzle to parts of the state.

North Texas clouds increased Monday from the west preceding another upper level storm system moving into New Mexico. The system was expected to bring rain to northern parts of the state by Tuesday.

Temperatures in North Texas were in the upper 50s, but Wichita Falls fell below the half-century mark because there was snow still on the ground. Southwest winds reached 10 mph.

West Texas temperatures reached the mid-50s. South and southwest winds whipped the region at up to 15 mph east of the mountains. Variable winds over the far west stayed at 10 mph.

Temperatures were highest in South Texas, where the thin clouds allowed sunshine to push temperatures into the 50s and 60s. High pressure centered over the region and winds were light and variable.

Showers mixed with snow in West Texas were predicted for tonight with lows in the 20s and 30s. Cloudy skies and showers were forecast for South Texas. The North Texas forecast calls for thunderstorms tonight with decreasing clouds Wednesday.

NATION

Snow was scattered across the Northeast on Monday, with up to 8 inches in upstate New York, and snow and rain were scattered over parts of the Southwest.

During the middle of the day, snow fell over northern Indiana, southern Lower Michigan, northern Ohio, the upper Ohio Valley, the northern half of the Appalachians, and much of New England.

Light snow fell during the morning over sections of western New York state, following heavy snowfall during the night. Accumulations between 10 p.m. Sunday and 6 a.m. Monday included 8 inches at Tonawanda, 7 at Niagara Falls, 6 at Amherst, 5 at the Buffalo airport, and 4 at Warsaw.

Snowfall during the morning over northwestern Pennsylvania ranged from 1 to 5 inches.

Two western Pennsylvania traffic deaths were blamed on the snow.

Up to 5 inches of snow fell at higher elevations of northern West Virginia, cutting visibility and making roads slippery. Many secondary roads and some interstates were snow-covered and considered hazardous, said Tony Chieffalo, spokesman for the state Division of Highways office in Wheeling.

In the Southwest, showers with a few thundershowers were scattered over parts of Arizona and western New Mexico.

Locally heavy snow fell at higher elevations of northern Arizona. About 3 inches of snow fell in north-central Arizona near Payson and along the southeast slopes of the Mogollon Rim.

AUDIT: Grand jury calls for inquiry, foreman says

(From 1A)

"We asked him (Painter) over to explain the reverse-sting procedures and to describe how his department accounts for the money and drugs related to those kind of operations," Cahoon said.

Cahoon, a Midland resident for 30 years, is an independent oil operator, a former Texas legislator and former City Council member.

The reverse stings, which the sheriff launched in 1987 to seize illicit drugs and other contraband, have been embroiled in controversy since their inception and particularly so since last Aug. 20.

In August, the sheriff sued the county to contest a Commissioners' Court order suppressing his out-of-county and out-of-state investigations.

Since then, the Commissioners' Court has countersued the sheriff and alleged a series of improper dealings related to his reverse stings.

In recent weeks, drama has been building concerning reverse stings launched in West Texas.

Suspended Presidio County Sheriff Rick Thompson, 45, has been indicted for smuggling and possessing 2,421 pounds of cocaine, which he said he had planned to used in reverse stings.

Painter, 44, was Thompson's chief deputy sheriff at Marfa in the late 1970s.

And Hal Upchurch, a 46-year-old Monahans lawyer who was Painter's attorney in his lawsuit against the Commissioners' Court, was indicted last week by a state grand jury for allegedly misapplying seized drug funds, for official misconduct and for tampering with governmental papers.

Since 1987, Painter and his investigators have worked on reverse stings with Upchurch, who was the Ward County District Attorney from 1987 until late 1990.

One incident, which the grand jurors apparently are scrutinizing, involves about 14,000 pounds of marijuana, which Upchurch and Midland County investigators uncovered in the Laredo area in 1987. The grand jurors are looking into the status of that and other contraband.

The grand jury inquiry, Painter said Monday, is "just fine" with him.

Painter said he has done nothing wrong or improper in his handling of seized forfeited drugs or forfeited money.

"We are audited not only by the county auditor, but an outside auditor audits our (drug-forfeiture) account every year," Painter said recently. "And on top of that, the county commissioners go through it all of the time in checking on where we are spending money.

"I haven't done anything in my life that I am afraid of or ashamed," Painter said. "There are some things I could have done better."

KING: Observances are held around the nation

told the congregation at Ebenezer. He delivered an impassioned sermon that took note of the string of racial incidents that have shocked and divided New York City in recent weeks. "When the power of destruction is stronger than the power of creating, you're dying. It doesn't matter if you're the Soviet Union or the United States," he said.

The annual service here was the focal point of a range of activities, some of them reflecting the rancorous national debate on race. In Denver, a crowd attacked a bus carrying Ku Klux Klan supporters. In New York City, the rash of racial incidents provided a somber backdrop to services and gatherings throughout the city.

Those who spoke here on Monday, including Dr. King's widow, Coretta Scott King, and the South African anti-apartheid leader Winnie Mandela, alternated between looking at the social ills within the black community and the economic and political ills they reflect. King, who was assassinated in Memphis on April 4, 1968, would have turned 63 last week.

On Sunday, two days after President Bush visited Atlanta to pay homage to King, Mrs. King challenged the nation to reorder its priorities to reflect the problems of the poor, particularly the inner-city poor.

"Hope is becoming the most endangered commodity," she said. "Resources such as drug and family counseling programs are scarce; job-training opportunities are nearly non-existent."

She offered statistics that nearly one of four American children under the age of 6 lives in poverty and that babies born in 21 other countries have a better chance of surviving their first year of life than do American babies.

"There are only two words that can adequately describe such conditions for so many children in the wealthiest country on earth, and those two words are "national disgrace,'" she said.

But there was also a strong sense, partly reflecting the conservative strands that have become more a part of the civil rights debate over the past year, that many of the answers to the ills of black America must come from within.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan, former president of the Morehouse School of Medicine here, said that blacks did not march for civil rights only to be enslaved by drugs or riddled with black-on-black crime.

"Many of the ills plaguing our society stem from our own decisions," he said.

Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson said that in his first term in office in the early 1980s, about 65 percent of homicides were the result of domestic disputes. Now, he said, almost the same percentage were the result of street violence, with 95 percent of homicides the result of black-on-black violence.

"We've got to stop the guns, we've got to stop the dope, and time has run out," he said. "The boys in the 'hood are killing each other. We've got to stop the guns and stop the violence to remain true to the dream of Martin Luther King."

For speakers like Wilma Mankiller, chief of the Cherokee Nation of Oklahoma, the day was a time to remember the struggles of King's life and the power of people to change their world.

"If there was any message that King gave us it was that each of us are responsible for doing what we can in our lives," said Mrs. Mankiller. "When thinking of a tribute to Dr. King, I think all of us recognize that we've lost ground in the last decade or so. All of us collectively have lost ground."

TOYKO: Comments catch government off guard

(From 1A)

In Washington on Monday, a Department of Education official denied the assertion that a third of American workers could not read, saying that less than 5 percent of the American population is illiterate.

According to accounts that appeared widely in the Japanese-language press Monday, Sakurauchi told a meeting of supporters in Masuda City, a manufacturing and agricultural area in western Japan, that America risked becoming "Japan's subcontractor," and had no one to blame but itself.

"The source of the problem is the inferior quality of U.S. labor," he reportedly said. "U.S. workers are too lazy. They want high pay without working."

About 30 percent of American workers "cannot even read," he was quoted as having said. "So managers cannot convey their orders in written form. Therefore, they get a high ratio of bad parts."

Sakurauchi's comments clearly caught the government off guard. Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa is trying to play down differences with the United States and put the best face possible on Bush's much-criticized visit. Asked about Sakurauchi's assessment of the talents of American workers, the government's chief spokesman, Koichi Kato, said that while individual politicians had their own views, "the government should make no comments about the level, the quality or the education of workers in other nations."

Sakurauchi is a powerful member of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party and no stranger to dealings with the United States. In a long career, he has served as foreign minister, agriculture minister, the minister of international trade and industry and the construction minister.

He has also been the secretary general of the Liberal Democratic Party and the head of its chief policy-making body.

Reached Monday at the speaker's office, one of Sakurauchi's political secretaries, Kyoshi Tsuchida, confirmed the gist of the press reports. But he said that another political secretary who attended the meeting on Sunday said that while Sakurauchi described illiteracy as a widespread problem among American workers, he did not mention a figure of 30 percent. He is quoted as using that number in two of Japan's leading newspapers, Yomiuri Shimbun and Mainichi Shimbun. Apparently Japanese reporters attended the session.

"The same sorts of thing have been said repeatedly in industry magazines and other publications," Tsuchida said. "What he wanted to stress is that in the U.S. there is no good communications between managers and workers."

Despite Sakurauchi's comments, statistics indicate that American factory workers are, on average, still more productive than their Japanese counterparts. A recent survey by the United States Labor Department indicates that the American work force still leads the world in output per worker, and leads Japan by a margin of about 19 percent. But worker productivity in Japan is growing at roughly twice the rate of productivity growth in the United States. If current trends continue, Japan would surpass the United States in productivity around 1995.

CRASH: Survivors include a 20-month-old girl

(From 1A)

"They were very shocked," said Jean-Pierre Stucki, correspondent for French television channel TF1. "They had been waiting in the cold for help for several hours."

The plane was en route from Lyon to Strasbourg when radio contact was lost shortly before the scheduled landing at 7:25 p.m. (12:25 p.m. CST), officials said. The wreckage was located shortly before midnight.

One of the survivors, whose name was not given, told France Info radio that the plane was in its descent when without warning it crashed through the trees.

He said a fire broke out, and that he and some others, including a stewardess and the boy, made their way through a hole in the fuselage.

Air Inter, which works closely with Air France, said in a communique it had no indication what caused the crash. The plane, put into service in December 1988, had no record of mechanical trouble in 6,312 hours of flying time. It was checked earlier Monday, the airline said.

The Syndicate of Navigation Personal, a national union, issued a communique questioning the efficiency of the guidance system aboard the A-320s. Questions have been raised after two previous crashes of the plane.

Rain and snow slowed the search by about 1,000 people. Logging roads provided the only access to much of the rugged, fog-shrouded area.

The smell of fuel oil wafted through the mountain air. Police set up barricades.

Two army helicopters and a Mirage F-1 jet fighter equipped with infrared surveillance equipment assisted in the search.

Flight IT-5148, which left Lyon at 6:30 p.m. (11:30 a.m. CST), was carrying 90 passengers and a crew of six, Air Inter said.

The airline set up a center at Lyon's Satolas airport for relatives of those aboard the plane. Few details about the passengers were available, although most reportedly were business travelers.

Jean-Cyril Spinetta, president of Air Inter, said no signs of trouble were detected in the plane early Monday. He said the pilot, Christian Hecquet, 42, had flown for more than 9,000 hours. It was not known if Hecquet was among the survivors.

Transport Minister Paul Quiles said the government would begin an inquiry.

SEARCH: City voters send clear no-tax message

nomic stimulator. However, the strength of the no-tax message may have overshadowed the benefits of the tax plan, Merritt said.

Midland Chamber President Janna King said her staff and chamber board officers will begin sorting out the election aftermath this week. The organization publicly had supported the issue.

"There's still a strong consensus in the community that economic development and diversification are still important to this area," she said. "We need to spend some time analyzing what was the reason (the issue) failed and get a better understanding of that."

And Mark Kimball, a former vice president of the chamber who had opposed the plan, said he would urge fellow chamber members — no matter what their viewpoint in the election — to join the organization in its search for alternatives.

"We need an effort that appeals to the small businessman," Kimball said. "We need a broad base of involvement." He encouraged other chamber members who may have opposed the issue to "demand representation."

"We need to be involved, be on the board of directors and on committees. The chamber is the only representation businesses have to government," Kimball said.

City Manager Fred Poe said Midland's election results followed a statewide trend.

"If you look at what happened across the state (with similar elections) — I don't think there's any community over 25,000 population (that) passed it (the sales tax issue)," Poe said. "The recession is here; people are saying they don't want any more taxes.

"They're telling us to go back to the drawing board and find some other way to accomplish this."

Poe said he was surprised by the wide margin of defeat, with almost 75 percent of those who voted in opposition to the plan.

Lubbock shared in that trend, as voters there on Saturday rejected a ½-cent sales tax increase despite the promise of accompanying property tax relief. Their issue, however, was a much closer race, as 57 percent voted against and 42 percent voted for the increase.

Voters there also chose — with an 80 percent majority — to repeal the board of city development, Lubbock's major economic development agency.

Meanwhile, in Midland, the chamber will continue its economic development role, King said. "We'll see how we can accomplish the goal of diversification and development of Midland's economy with the limited amount of funds available."

Although the highly controversial election period has ended, the community's need for development and growth has not, leaders said.

"But now we have to sort out whose job it is and who's going to pay for it," Merritt said. "The sales tax was just a way to spread that (cost) over all the beneficiaries."

"I believe (supporters) now realize we've got to do this the hard way," Kimball said.

left with friends earlier in the night, but they were uncertain where he had gone. Family members were asleep when he returned, according to reports.

Twenty-two-year-old Hector Gonzalez, a neighbor of Galindo's, who asked not to give his exact address, said he saw Galindo earlier in the night riding in a car in the 900 block of Illinois Avenue.

"I guess it was around 9 o'clock last night (Sunday). He looked fine then," Gonzalez said. "This really freaks me out, but I guess things like it come to be expected."

Gonzalez said he talked to Galindo a few times but said he didn't know much about his personal life or his acquaintances.

"I guess he was with his friends in that car because he looked cool and everything, but maybe one of them turned on him. I wish I knew," Gonzalez said.

TAX: Three factors led to defeat

for failure: pessimism, suspicion and lack of confidence, he said.

There was pressure on a national level for issues such as term limitations and greater accountability for government.

"People are suspicious, they're saying, 'We want limits,' not unlike the opposition's push for a sunset clause," Jones said.

He said he heard complaints that advertising campaigns were too negative, actually swaying voters' attitudes in the opposite direction.

"It's easier to sell positively than negatively," Jones said. "Anything benefits from being looked at from a positive standpoint."

In short, "It was the wrong time, wrong place and circumstances," Jones said.

U.N. to deliver Libya an ultimatum

Security Council draft seeks Pan Am Flight 103 bombing suspects

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The Security Council on Monday strengthened a draft resolution asking Libya to surrender suspects in the bombings of Pan Am Flight 103 and a French airliner.

The proposal was amended to add a role for Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali in trying to end the political and legal stalemate. The resolution is expected to be passed today.

The draft resolution does not use the words "extradition" or "surrender," but Western diplomats said the measure represents a clear demand the suspects be turned over.

Libya denounced the resolution as unprecedented interference in a nation's sovereignty and legal affairs. Diplomats said it appeared to be the first time the council had taken sides in a legal dispute among member states.

"This will be sending a very strong message to the Libyan government," said David Hannay of Britain, president of the 15-nation Security Council.

Council resolutions are legally binding, but the resolution does not include sanctions or enforcement measures. The United States, Britain and France — sponsors of the resolution — said if Libya defied the council sanctions could be requested, possibly within a month.

"All options are open," said U.S. Ambassador Thomas R. Pickering.

"This is a very important resolution, a first step in what could be a series of resolutions," he said.

The sanctions, if introduced, probably would deny landing rights to the Libyan airline and prohibit sales of aircraft and parts to the airline, diplomats said.

The United States and Britain have indicted two Libyan agents in the Dec. 21, 1988, bombing of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, in which 270 people were killed. France has issued warrants for four Libyans in the 1989 bombing of French UTA flight 772 over North Africa, in which 170 people died.

Libya has denied any involvement but said that it would allow foreign lawyers and a foreign magistrate to oversee a trial in Libya. The outcome would be submitted to a Libyan court.

Several families of the victims of the 1988 Pan Am bombing, meanwhile, told a U.N. news conference the resolution was "pathetically weak, for it contains no deadlines, no provisions for sanctions and the word 'extradiction' is not even mentioned."

But they said in a statement, "It is better than nothing and should be approved."

The families also said that they do not believe Libya alone was involved and that Iran and Syria bore responsibility.

Court convicts 2 guards for Berlin Wall killings

BERLIN (NYT) — In a case that raised far-reaching political and moral questions, two former East German border guards were convicted on Monday of having shot and killed a fleeing refugee in February 1989.

The verdict set a legal precedent, establishing that officials from what was once the communist state of East Germany could be punished for actions that were legal under East German law.

"Not everything that is legal is right," the judge, Theodor Seidel, said as he pronounced the sentences.

One of the guards, Ingo Heinrich, was sentenced to three and a half years in prison. He was ruled to have fired the shot that killed 20-year-old Chris Gueffroy as Gueffroy dashed across the "death strip" that separated East and West Berlin.

Gueffroy was the last of an estimated 200 East Germans who were killed as they sought to flee westward in the 28 years that the Berlin Wall divided this city.

Nine months after his death, the wall was opened, and East Germans were allowed to begin traveling freely. The opening of the wall was the most dramatic event in the upheaval that brought about the ouster of the communist government in East Germany and the unification of East and West Germany.

The second guard convicted on Monday, Andreas Kuehnpast, was given a two-year suspended sentence. Two other defendants, who the judge ruled "did not kill and did not intend to kill," were acquitted.

Karin Gueffroy, mother of the victim, refused to comment as she left the courtroom. In her testimony this month, Mrs. Gueffroy had described her son's death as "not premeditated murder, but still murder."

In the five-month trial, defense lawyers argued that their clients had shot at Gueffroy in compliance with a shoot-to-kill order approved by senior East German officials. They said that those officials, not the young sharpshooters assigned to guard the border, should be held responsible for Gueffroy's death.

Seidel acknowledged that the defendants were "at the end of a long chain of responsibility," but said they had violated "a basic human right" by shooting at someone whose only crime was trying to emigrate.

The principle that citizens must not violate basic moral principles, even if the violations are endorsed by law, was established by German courts in trials of former Nazis in the late 1940s and the 1950s.

Israel will rule occupied lands forever, Shamir says

BETAR ILLIT, Occupied West Bank (AP) — A defiant Yitzhak Shamir kicked off his re-election campaign Monday with a promise to build more Jewish settlements in the occupied territories despite U.S. opposition.

To the cheers of 300 people at this settlement near Jerusalem, the prime minister said the West Bank and Gaza Strip were promised to Jews by God and would remain Israel's "forever and ever."

But Shamir toned down his rhetoric at a news conference afterward, saying expected early parliamentary elections would not slow the Middle East peace talks in Washington.

"It is our feeling that we are making progress," he said of the talks.

The double message was designed to win the support of ultra-nationalists who oppose Shamir's offer of autonomy to Palestinians, while not alienating the majority of Israelis who want the peace talks to continue.

But the strategy also set Shamir on a collision course with the Bush administration, which has asked Israel to halt construction of Jewish settlements during the peace negotiations.

The Americans contend the settlements are an obstacle to peace with the 1.7 million Palestinians who live on the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The Palestinians want to establish an independent state in the occupied lands and fear the pace of Israeli settlement building will leave nothing to negotiate.

Settlers oppose autonomy as the first step to a separate Palestinian state, and two small, ultra-right parties pulled out of Shamir's ruling coalition Sunday over that issue. That left him without a majority in parliament and likely will result in parliamentary elections before the scheduled Nov. 3 date.

Housing Minister Ariel Sharon, the right-wing architect of the settlement drive, has demanded that Israel annex all parts of the occupied lands inhabited by Jews before it continues with the autonomy talks.

The World

■ Iran, Algeria join campaign for oil cuts

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Iran and Algeria on Monday became the latest OPEC nations to pledge quick — although small — reductions in their oil output to try to drive crude prices higher.

But there was still indication Saudi Arabia, the most important member of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, would join the campaign to restrain surging production.

"I don't think you're going to get a squeak out of Saudi Arabia," said Peter Gignoux, director of the international energy department at Lehman Brothers in London.

Analysts predicted Saudi Arabia, the world's largest crude exporter, would wait to announce its decision on any reductions until a meeting scheduled to begin on Feb. 12 in Geneva to discuss strategy for the spring months.

So far, five of the OPEC members — Venezuela, Libya, Nigeria, Iran and Algeria — have made or pledged immediate supply cuts amounting to, at the most, 200,000 barrels of oil a day.

■ Israel court refuses to free Demjanjuk

JERUSALEM — Israel's Supreme Court on Monday rejected a plea to free Nazi war criminal John Demjanjuk, but agreed to consider defense evidence suggesting the retired Ohio autoworker was not "Ivan the Terrible."

The five-judge panel also ruled that prosecuters could submit further evidence at a hearing within three weeks, a Justice Ministry official said. A hearing date has not been set.

Demjanjuk, 72, is appealing his death sentence and conviction for crimes against humanity and the Jewish people. He is accused of being the guard "Ivan the Terrible," who operated the gas chamber at the Treblinka death camp in occupied Poland. About 850,000 Jews died at the camp in 1942-43.

■ Germany, others link nukes to Soviet aid

BERLIN — International efforts to feed and clothe the staggering former Soviet states are increasingly being tied to their commitment to strict controls over nuclear arsenals.

Germany, the most lavish benefactor of the former Soviet states, has joined the chorus of nations demanding the fragmented union demonstrate a firm grip on its awesome military might.

German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher met in Bonn on Monday with his French counterpart, Roland Dumas, and discussed ways to coordinate Western aid for the former nation, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said. Nuclear controls also were discussed, said the spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity.

■ Algeria moves toward ban of Islamic party

PARIS — The Algerian government appears to be moving toward an official ban of the Islamic fundamentalist party as well as significant changes in the multiparty system that it has permitted since 1989, senior Algerian officials said on Monday.

The officials made these comments in telephone interviews as the Algerian police announced that it had arrested an unspecified number of officials from the Islamic Salvation Front.

The government has also rejected a request to release the two top leaders of the Islamic Salvation Front, Abassi Madani and Ali Benhadj, who have been jailed since June. The acting president of the Islamic Front, Abdelkader Hachani, said on Friday that as many as 500 of its members had been arrested in the last week.

■ Gunman on rampage kills 9, wounds 19

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A man with an assault rifle fatally shot his father, then rampaged through a quiet rural town, leaving a total of nine people dead and 19 wounded, police and witnesses said.

A domestic dispute apparently set off the white gunman, who also torched his father's farmhouse before launching his random shooting spree at a shopping mall in the southeastern town of Ladysmith.

"It was chaos. I think he went bonkers. He just shot at anyone he saw," Bonny York, a local shopowner, said of the gunman, who was apprehended.

Ethnic Serb leader vows to battle on

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — A leader of Croatia's ethnic Serb minority claimed Monday that his people had been betrayed by Serbia's president and would rather "die honorably" than join an independent Croatia.

The remarks by Mile Paspalj, speaker of self-declared parliament in the enclave of Krajina, reflected the determination of some ethnic Serbs in Croatia to resist U.N.-supervised peace efforts. That stance has put them in growing conflict with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, their former ally.

Milosevic, fearing that Serb-led forces could not defeat a Croatia backed by Western Europe, agreed to the U.N. accords in December. By then thousands of people had died in battles between Croatian guards and Serb-led forces.

The peace plan calls for U.N. peacekeeping patrols throughout Croatia. It also demands ethnic Serb paramilitary units disarm and the Serb-led federal army withdraw from Croatia.

But many ethnic Serbs are nervous that the 12-nation European Community, which granted Croatia and Slovenia diplomatic recognition last week, wants to force them to accept Croatian rule.

"An overwhelming majority of people in Krajina would rather die honorably than be a national minority in a fascist state of Croatia," Paspalj was quoted by the Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency. "Milosevic is now not working in a way desired by an overwhelming majority of the Krajina people."

Britain's Prime Minister John Major meets with soldiers of the Prince of Wales' Own Regiment in Belfast Monday. Major made a surprise visit to Northern Ireland.

Major vows to hunt IRA terrorists

LONDON (NYT) — Prime Minister John Major and rival political leaders vowed on Monday to press Britain's fight against the Irish Republican Army in Northern Ireland, but the government sidestepped demands for hardline security measures in the province, including detention of suspected terrorists without trial.

Three days after an IRA bomb killed seven workmen, the bloodiest civilian toll in the province in nearly five years, Major made a surprise visit to Belfast early on Monday, where he declared that the IRA "is not winning and will never win" in Northern Ireland.

He pledged that those responsible for the Friday bombing would be "hunted and hunted and hunted for the rest of their days." Over the weekend, Britain dispatched 600 troops to Northern Ireland, bringing its contigent there to 17,500.

Major also turned down an offer by Peter Brooke, his secretary of state for Northern Ireland, to resign his post, in the wake of a controversy over his appearance on a Dublin television talk show only hours after the bombing.

In the emotional aftermath of the bombing in rural County Tyrone, Brooke inflamed public opinion in the mostly Protestant Unionist province, when he agreed, however reluctantly, to a request from the host of the late-night television talk show to sing a song.

During a wide-ranging discussion the host had joked with Brooke about his poor singing voice and then cajoled him to approach the piano.

Outraged that Brooke appeared to be acting frivolously in Dublin at such a time, Unionist political leaders demanded he step down. In surprise remarks on Monday before the House of Commons, Brooke contritely announced he had offered his resignation to Major, which the prime minister rejected.

Polls: Yeltsin's approval rate slips as prices jump

At least two republics have decided to roll back on planned increases to avoid unrest, reports say.

MOSCOW (AP) — Opinion polls indicated Monday that Boris Yeltsin's approval rating in Russia's two biggest cities has fallen since he introduced price reforms, and his policies are engendering more uncertainty about the future.

The dismal results, though somewhat expected, will do little to help the Russian president rally more support for the painful economic reforms that have caused unrest in Uzbekistan and drawn strike threats across Russia.

In the eastern Russian city of Vladivostok, about 200 demonstrators marched Monday to protest three weeks of soaring costs and empty shelves.

"We support the market, but not killer prices," read one sign at the rally held outside the Vladivostok city council meeting, according to the news agency Tass. "We want bread, not queues," read another.

Belarus, however, pushed ahead Monday with a second round of price increases on dairy products and bread. It already had followed Russia's lead and raised prices on most other foodstuffs on Jan. 3.

Belarus raised the price of milk to nearly 1 ruble — still below the price in neighboring republics — and set new bread prices between 1.5 rubles and 7 rubles. The increases reflected a doubling or tripling of the price.

In Uzbekistan, meanwhile, students said they would launch their own investigation what they said were the deaths last week of 21 people who were protesting the high prices, the Interfax news agency said.

Uzbek officials have reported "several" deaths without giving a figure, although officials have confirmed only two fatalities.

It was the worst violence yet in connection with the price increase.

At least two republics — Azerbaijan and Turkmenistan — have decided to roll back on planned increases on some items to avoid unrest, news reports said.

The economic reforms were costing Yeltsin support in Moscow and St. Petersburg, according to separate opinion polls conducted in the last week and released on Monday.

Only 22 percent of respondents in St. Petersburg continue to support Yeltsin's government, according to Leonid Kesselman, director of the city's respected Center for Sociological Research during a news conference there. He did not say how far Yeltsin's support had slipped, but said it had fallen.

Kesselman said 14 percent of respondents doubted Yeltsin's reforms would succeed, and 21 percent were sure they would fail. Forty-three percent said they had no opinion, which Kesselman said indicated deep uncertainty about the future.

A poll of 1,000 Muscovites found similar trends among the city's 9 million residents, although Yeltsin still enjoyed the support of the majority, according to the Moscow-based Independent Institute of Sociology, whose survey was reported by the daily newspaper Izvestia.

Cuba executes accused terrorist

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A Cuban exile accused of leading a squad that infiltrated the island on a terrorist mission was executed by firing squad Monday in Havana, the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina reported.

Eduardo Diaz Betancourt, 38, had been captured with two other Miami residents on Dec. 29. The government charged they were carrying guns and explosives and planned a sabotage campaign aimed at theaters, stores and other civilian targets.

Diaz Betancourt returned to Cuba at the head of the exile group only nine months after he left his native land.

In sparing his two companions, the Cuban government said that since they had spent most of their lives in Miami's exile community, they were victims of its virulent anti-Castro environment.

Diaz Betancourt, by contrast, was treated with rough justice because he had enjoyed all the fruits of Cuba's revolution and then betrayed it, after leaving illegally.

The sentence was carried out a day after Cuba's highest governing body, the Council of State, refused to commute Diaz Betancourt's sentence, which was given by a lower court.

■ Report: S&L debacle could cost $500 billion

WASHINGTON — The savings and loan debacle could cost the economy $500 billion by the end of this decade, depressing the nation's overall wealth for another 25 years, says a new study by the Congressional Budget Office.

Congress could soften this economic impact by borrowing enough money now to complete the S&L bailout, rather than allowing insolvent thrifts to remain in operation as a drag on the economy, the CBO says.

Since the government is already obligated for the cleanup cost, through the federal deposit insurance system, the massive borrowing required would have little or no effect on the deficit, the economy or interest rates, the study says.

■ Police charge football player with assault

LINCOLN, Neb. — A University of Nebraska football player frustrated by missing much of the season because of injuries was charged Monday in the beating of a woman and an attack on police and was sent to a state hospital.

Running back Scott Baldwin, 22, reported hallucinating and suffering mood swings, was expected to be arraigned Tuesday because courts were closed Monday in observance of Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

He was ordered sent to the Lincoln Regional Center for a psychiatric examination to determine his competency to stand trial after a psychiatrist who examined him Sunday said he was "actively psychotic," meaning he had lost touch with reality, said Lancaster County Attorney Gary Lacey. He said he filed charges of first-degree assault and assault of a police officer.

George Sullivan, the team's trainer and physical therapist, said Baldwin had been routinely tested at least a dozen times since coming to Nebraska three years and never failed a drug test.

■ Propane truck fire claims two lives

ARTESIA, Miss. — A propane tanker truck and several other vehicles collided and caught fire Monday in northeastern Mississippi, killing two people and injuring two others, authorities said.

The wreckage continued burning at mid-afternoon, fueled by propane gas from the tanker truck and fuel leaking from one of two other two 18-wheelers involved in the wreck, said Dusty Perkins, a spokesman at the Mississippi Emergency Management Agency.

Perkins said officials at the scene also reported a car was involved in the accident but that it apparently was not severely damaged.

He said the propane truck carried a 20,000-gallon tank but officials were uncertain how much fuel it was carrying at the time of the accident.

"There is a puncture at the head of the propane tank and they are allowing it to burn out," he said.

Tina McMinn, a Mississippi Highway Patrol dispatcher in Starkville, said the late-morning accident occurred on U.S. 45 between Artesia and Crawford.

Democrats use debate to reveal angles

By R.W. Apple Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

MANCHESTER, N.H.— Everybody had an angle in Sunday night's debate among the Democratic presidential candidates. Stirring political theater it certainly was not, but it gave some clues about what each of the five will be trying to do in the weeks ahead.

Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas portrayed himself as the tribune of the middle class. Former Sen. Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts said his economic program was more highly regarded by experts than those of his rivals. Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska talked a lot about health insurance. Former Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California rolled out a whole new tax plan. And Sen. Tom Harkin worked hard to justify his claim to be "the only real Democrat" in the lot.

No one fell on his face. Each managed to score a point or two at the expense of his rivals. And a few ideas, usually about as common at such shindigs as unfilled jobs in New Hampshire, actually found breathing room.

But all of the five hopefuls have a lot to accomplish before the Democrats' third debate on Jan. 31, which will constitute the next checkpoint on the road to the New Hampshire primary, the nation's first, on Feb. 18.

Clinton, who attracted the most support in a poll published by The Boston Globe the morning before the debate, got a taste of what it is like to be a front-runner. He attracted the jibes of both Harkin and Kerrey, with Harkin particularly hard on his record as governor.

There will be a lot more detailed examination of that record in the days ahead, including discussions of the success of Arkansas's education overhaul, a sales-tax increase supported by Clinton and the harsh comments of the Little Rock newspaper on many of his ideas.

More than anything else, Clinton will have to prove that he can take such punches and hit back, because the Democrats are determined, after the passivity of Michael S. Dukakis four years ago, to nominate a counterpuncher this time.

So far, his main rebuttal has been to call attention to the two senators' votes in favor of $23,000-a-year raises for themselves.

The governor may also have to contend with accusations of extramarital affairs published last week in some newspapers and the potential damage the allegations could cause among women voters in particular. The accusations had relatively little circulation, but they came up during the debate, and despite Clinton's contention that the American people are tired of negative politics, that is unlikely to be the end of the subject.

His lead is not yet overwhelming, so it is probabaly too early for an ABC alliance (Anyone But Clinton) by his opponents, but Clinton has not been thoroughly tested, and they cannot afford to let that last.

For Kerrey, the challenge is to make himself seem the logical alternative to Clinton for those who find the Arkansan unsatisfactory for one reason or another. There has not seemed to be a tremendous amount of ideological space between them, but Kerrey is trying to open some and said Monday that he was "ready for some body contact" with his Democratic rivals.

Study says U.S. policy in El Salvador failed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An independent, Pentagon-financed study concludes that, despite last week's peace agreement, U.S. policy toward El Salvador for most of the past decade was a failure because it was based on false assumptions.

For all but the final 20 months of the Salvadoran conflict, the U.S. goal was "a clear victory through a combination of military and reform measures," says Rand, a California-based non-profit research organization.

"In these terms, American policy failed," the study says.

That conclusion contrasts sharply with the official view of the conflict. The State Department said the peace agreement signed between the government and the rebels last Thursday is a "major step forward" toward the achievement of a Central America "wholly democratic and at peace."

The study, authored by Benjamin C. Schwarz, assesses the results in terms of U.S. goals during the previous decade. Research for the study was completed last September, about three months before the peace breakthrough.

"Since 1981, policymakers believed that victory in El Salvador could be won by influencing the regime to do what was necessary to win its people's hearts and minds; and the United States believed that the $6 billion in support it provided bought considerable leverage in that effort.

"But the Salvadorans had America trapped. They realized that the United States was involved in their war for its own national security interests."

The study says U.S. threats to withdraw aid from El Salvador if the country did not undertake fundamental reforms lacked credibility because Salvadorans realized the United States could not accept victory by the leftist FMLN guerrillas.

As a result, the Salvadoran military and the far right "remained remarkably immune to American blandishments" for reform in many areas, especially human rights, the study says. It asserts that the army, rightist death squads, rightist legislators and the court system have been systematically able to block efforts to punish rights abusers. Some of the same forces also have been able to emasculate land reform efforts, the report adds.

Space shuttle readies for launch

N.Y. Times News Service

The space shuttle Discovery is poised to carry an international crew into orbit on a mission that will simulate many of the planned activities aboard Space Station Freedom.

The Discovery is to be launched Wednesday with a crew of seven and a pressurized laboratory in its cargo bay. During the seven-day flight, the crew will conduct medical and scientific experiments that depend upon escaping the influences of gravity.

The flight of the First International Microgravity Laboratory will require the astronauts, including a German physicist and a Canadian neurologist, to work around the clock in two teams to complete as many experiments as possible.

Oren Albright started Petroplex Equipment seven years ago -- not the best of times for a new oilfield equipment and service business. But hard work has paid off -- along with good decisions. Like the choice of his banker, Texas National Bank of Midland. At Texas National, we believe it's important to know our customers and their businesses in order to provide the best service possible. Come by and find out why we're Oren Albright's banker. And why we're Midland's Banker.

Cutting waste will benefit U.S.

Former Soviet technicians are offering to sell their science to the West; it's the latest evidence of the Red Menace crumbling before our eyes. But that raises a new question. If the Soviet threat is no longer a yardstick for measuring America's strength, how is that strength to be measured?

It's idle to speculate about potential enemies. Military planners take a more practical, quantitative approach. They examine how much of a threat future situations might pose. And wherever they look, the threats they see are far smaller and more diffuse than those so long posed by the Soviet Union.

The Persian Gulf War provides a timely benchmark. Iraq had one of the largest armies ever fielded by a Third World country. To oppose it, America stretched to the limit its ability to project power halfway around the globe. Even so, the U.S.-led coalition won handily.

How many other Iraqs are out there? Foreseeably, none. China and India each have larger forces, but there is no reason to expect aggression from either, and in any case, both would be constrained by fear of internal breakup. Perhaps Iran could eventually become another Iraq. North Korea seems less a potential threat every day.

None of these states can challenge America's technological edge without a faster pace of modernization than even the Soviets could sustain. The U.S. can afford to keep up research and development without introducing new weapons as quickly as it has been doing.

What about lesser contingencies? Washington might be asked to contribute forces to international peacekeeping in civil wars. But it's hard to imagine ever needing more than a couple of brigades, whose cost would be measured in millions, not billions.

Police actions to interdict narcotics traffickers or terrorists, as in Panama, require sophisticated but also relatively small forces.

How many of these contingencies should the U.S. be prepared to meet at once? A prudent planner might hedge by sizing conventional forces to counter, say, one and a quarter Iraqs. That would permit the Pentagon to slash its budget for conventional forces, now just under $250 billion a year, by at least $90 billion come 1996.

What's true about conventional contingencies is true for nuclear threats. The U.S. needs to be prepared to keep renegade states from acquiring nuclear, biological and chemical weapons. But the means for doing so are primarily diplomatic and economic, not military.

The U.S. could safely halve the roughly $40 billion a year it spends on nuclear forces — forces mainly aimed at countering a Soviet conventional attack in Europe. U.S. nuclear forces need have no other purpose than to deter the use of nuclear arms by others.

In short, there's neither conventional nor nuclear reason to waste billions on what Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs, acknowledges "is no longer really a threat-based force."

The Pentagon has so far failed to present a realistic reappraisal; Congress will have to do the job. Sensible citizens understand the need for America to remain strong; they also understand that to waste billions will make America weak.

Bush's Tokyo trip needed tough action

The embarrassing and disappointing stop in Japan by President Bush disproves the old adage that the third time is the charm. Twice before Mr. Bush had postponed his Asian trip. The first time early in 1990 was because of the Persian Gulf. The second time, in November, was because criticism was heating up that the president was paying more attention to foreign affairs than domestic problems.

But in trying to recast the trip to emphasize jobs creation, in response to the domestic criticism, Mr. Bush set himself up for a fall. His critical mistake was to change the mission of his trip from forging a new "global partnership" with Japan, which is the kind of thing he likes and is best at. Instead, he tried to cajole and pressure the economic giant into opening its markets to more U.S. products, especially cars, so more jobs will be created for Americans. In doing so, he reduced himself from world diplomat to chief car salesman.

For the president to place much of our recession woes at Japan's doorstep is to deny our own structural problems. We do need Japan to open its markets, but we also need to carefully revamp the way we do business in this country. We need to make the necessary tough economic decisions to get our economy going again, so we won't have to beg people to buy cars that have the steering wheel on the wrong side.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 21, the 21st day of 1992. There are 345 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 21, 1793, King Louis XVI of France was executed by the guillotine.

On this date:

In 1861, Jefferson Davis of Mississippi and four other Southerners resigned from the U.S. Senate.

In 1915, the first Kiwanis Club was founded, in Detroit.

In 1924, Russian revolutionary Vladimir Ilyich Lenin died at age 54.

Moral law shows hatred is wrong

And so another U.S. city bellies up to the gay rights issue. Dallas' city council asks: Should we or shouldn't we hire gay cops? The answer up to now has been an automatic no, the same as the U.S. military's answer to gay volunteers. But in both cases, as in numerous others, advocates of homosexual rights are voluble and persistent. They want action. Americans are having to think carefully about a moral issue long regarded as settled. How should they think? Here is one view.

Murchison

The homosexual-cop, the gay-sailor, issue, it seems to me, is only superficially about civil rights and hiring policy. Deeper down, it is about the legitimation of homosexuality as just another modern "lifestyle."

It is all part of a great design: claim accredited victim status, repeal the anti-sodomy laws, depict practicing homosexuals as appropriate role models, intimidate doubters by smearing them as "homophobic," drop the very word "homosexual" in favor of the positive, upbeat-sounding "gay."

As heterosexuals acquiesce in this design, out of fear or the desire to be politically correct, they move homosexuality farther down the road to legitimation.

The campaign has succeeded in marked degree. Various cities prohibit various kinds of "discrimination" against homosexuals. The ordination of practicing (as distinguished from celibate) homosexuals is a hot issue among Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians and others. Traditional prohibitions, such as the military's ban on homosexual personnel, are under legal and political attack.

Non-homophobic foes of homosexual "rights" sometimes don't know what to do. They don't want to injure the feelings of homosexual friends, and they don't want to countenance a radical redrafting of the moral laws. And so they worry.

Why? Can't the moral law be changed by a good old democratic vote? To say so evidences a dramatic misreading of the moral law.

The moral law is no set of icky-picky prescriptions made up by kill-joys — intellectual rubbish to be cleared away, the sooner the better.

The moral law is an owner's manual for the human body — and soul. You follow it for the reason you change (or should change) your automobile's oil every 3,000 miles: Because if you don't, bad things start to happen.

The human "owner's manual" says — always has, actually — that heterosexual monogamy works. It does not work perfectly by the standards of an imperfect world; yet, on the historical record, the alternatives work less satisfactorily and sometimes injuriously. This is as true of, for instance, heterosexual adultery as of other misadventures.

Ten years ago, a well-known homosexual activist paid a call on me to press the case for "gay rights." He grew livid during our visit, all but pounded on the table. Whose business was it, he demanded to know, what sexual preference he evinced? He would do as he wanted. I had never anticipated otherwise. A few years later, he was dead. Of AIDS.

That is not a smug, quod erat demonstrandum kind of remark. It is a painful observation about the necessary sequence of cause and effect: If you do "A," expect "B."

The great irony of AIDS, the vast majority whose incidences result from anal copulation, is that it occurs in the midst of the ongoing national celebration of the "gay lifestyle." It is like Poe's "Masque of the Red Death": While inside the nobles whoop it up, the great destroyer enters, unnoticed.

What a waste! My caller of 10 years ago was a talented and probably, when he wasn't yelling at me, genial man. The world was better off with than without him, as could be said of numberless AIDS victims.

Anyone who hates or physically torments practicing homosexuals is, in theological or secular terms, a swine. The moral law — remember it? — calls hatred wrong.

El Nino current is just a wave in the cycle

WASHINGTON — The El Nino current is now getting a big media buildup. This long-ignored flow of warm seawater across the Pacific and down the coast of South America is being fingered as the cause of floods in Texas and one of the warmest winters on record in the East.

Safire

Don't believe it. Every 10 years I rise to write an essay about El Nino (pronounced El NEEN-yo, short for the Spanish El Niño de Navidad, or Christ Child) straightening out the climatologists and their credulous cohorts who see the great, mysterious swoosh of warm water as a troublesome "southern oscillation."

The oscillationists (along with their voguish allies, the neo-oscillationists) are mistaken. El Nino is not a source of destruction, to be dreaded and ultimately tamed or refrigerated or re-directed; it is like a primal pulse, to be welcomed as a sign of life.

In 1973, when I first introduced El Nino to readers in this space, a horrified hue and cry was being raised by the world's fishermen: The nice and icy Humboldt current, in which the anchovies play and supply much of the world's fishmeal protein, was being pushed aside by El Nino.

Still new to the columnist dodge, I rushed out to the CIA's headquarters to see the agent monitoring the world's soybean and anchovy production; he confirmed the fear that the catch would be bad, commodity prices would rise and bad times would follow.

Sure enough, because of El Nino and the shah of Iran, prices rose and a recession took hold.

Nine years later, in 1982, concurrent with a steep recession in the U.S., El Nino returned at Christmastime, as befitting its name.

By that time, as a seasoned columniator, I was able to observe the correlation of climatic and economic forces, and to assure readers that neither El Nino nor the worst postwar recession would last.

Nine years later, toward the end of 1991, El Nino returned again. As always, the jet-stream set of meteorologists blamed it for storms in the Southeast, unusual cold in Moscow and a temporary reversal of global warming. Pizza-eaters are doing without their anchovy toppings.

Again, with El Nino, we have a recession. Who can now argue that precipitation is unconnected to the world economy, trade winds to trade flows, ocean currents to financial currents? The Bard knew: "There is a tide in the affairs of men. . . ."

But now I am a veteran pundit, seeking — in this third go-round with El Nino — more than the satisfaction of cyclical certainty.

What is this warm current, so reverently named and so inexorable in its reappearance, telling us about our world? Clamber up Olympus and catch the view:

First: With all our satellites up and our sonars down, we really know little about the huge forces that determine which way the wind blows. A great deal of our confident prediction, based on such expensive intelligence, is so much guesswork.

Second, the big current event instructs us that there is no flow without an ebb, no trend without a counter-trend, though it may not be equal or opposite. The business cycle within each decade; the Schlesinger political cycles in each generation; the Kondratieff wave of history every half-century — all this suggests that what goes around comes around.

Finally, El Nino's most puissant lesson: What seems terrible may just be necessary. Maybe Humboldt needs a breather, the winds need a shift, the tectonic plates need to ease their tension, and Earth needs a break from behavior expected by its inhabitants.

Therefore, fellow fixers, stop being so sure about the wisdom of flattening out the cycles, despite the occasional pain. Belay that redistributive urge; pause before fiddling with the planetary rhythms. A pulse is the feelable end of a heartbeat, and what seems to us to be the predations of El Nino may be the cadence of the cosmos.

Desert Storm makes Iraq rethink crusade

Two Iraqi soldiers, Hassan and Abdul (Iraqi for Frank and Arnold) were hunkered down in their bunker in Kuwait.

"We are certainly showing the infidels a thing or two, are we not, Abdul?" asks Hassan.

Grizzard

"The Great Satan soon will be brought to his knees, and we will pluck out his eyes and leave him to rot in the sun," replied Abdul.

An artillery shell from advancing coalition forces explodes a few yards from the bunker. Abdul recoils.

"Do not fear, my brave and devoted comrade," Hassan tells him. "Allah will not let harm come to us, for we are the Messengers of God, sent forth to bring death and disgrace to the criminal transgressors."

"You're absolutely sure about that, fellow crusader?" asks Abdul.

"On a scale of one to ten, about seven."

Another shell explodes.

"Better make that six, dear brother in the fight to send the evil intruders back home in sad coffins," Hassan corrects himself.

"Tell me the part about plucking out the eyes of the Great Satan," says Abdul. The nervousness in his voice gives him away.

"Do not tell me you are wavering on our mission to disembowel this hateful Enemy of God and all who love and praise him?" asks Hassan.

"My morale would be higher, perhaps," answers Abdul, "if I had just something to eat, my comrade standing shoulder to shoulder with me to liberate the sands of vermin that now moves swiftly across it."

Hassan is shocked.

"How can you think of the emptiness of your stomach," he asks, "as we prepare for the mother of all battles?"

"I am sorry, my heroic friend," Abdul apologizes, "but perhaps if I just had a goat sandwich or a handful of Frito . . ."

A third artillery shell explodes, even closer to the bunker of the two Iraqi soldiers. In the distance they can hear the rumble of approaching allied tanks, growing closer and closer.

"To be perfectly honest about it, my companion in faith," Abdul begins, "I've never had much interest in plucking out eyes."

"Are you certain we shouldn't think this thing over? The Great Satan might even have chicken noodle soup."

"Are you suggesting, my gallant and fearless warrior, that we surrender to the atheistic forces?" asks Hassan.

"Just a thought," is Abdul's answer. "I could eat the tonsils of a camel, and my shorts are filled with sand."

"But what would our Leader and Right Hand of God, Saddam Hussein, think of such cowardice?"

"That power-hungry idiot is the one who got us here in the first place," says Abdul. "I'm out of this jihad," he adds, tossing his rifle out of the bunker.

"Wait for me, Wise and Thoughtful One," says Hassan, "I will ask for a cheeseburger."

Lifetime Siding pays $50 if they can't beat other estimates

Anyone who, in the last two years, has received a written estimate from a company that specializes in siding (whose primary business is installing siding) is invited to call Lifetime Siding & Window and also request an estimate from them. If Lifetime Siding & Window's estimate to install new siding on your home is not at least 5 percent lower — they'll pay you $50 for your time.

And, those who schedule installation before the end of January will receive additional, significant savings. Call 689-0307 for more information.

Eugene and Rose Hunter of 300 Willowood in Midland nearly made a costly $1000 mistake — until they contacted Neil Letkeman of Lifetime Siding & Window for a money-saving estimate.

"We had thought about adding siding to our home for years," Mr. Hunter said. "Two other contractors had given much higher estimates for siding on our home. Neil's bid was almost $1000 lower than the lowest estimate."

"We were amazed by Neil's bid and thought there must be something wrong with his work, so we really checked him out. His installation methods are excellent and we have not regretted our decision. I'd be pleased to have anyone come look at what Neil did for us," he said.

Neil Letkeman uses only top quality materials and workmanship on every Lifetime Siding & Window job. "Our superior installation methods contribute largely to the success of Lifetime Siding & Window Co.," he said. "Today's homeowners are looking for the highest quality products at the lowest price."

"We start by replacing any rotten or warped boards," Letkeman said. "And we refasten loose boards. We make sure that all the wood on the house is in good shape before we start installing our siding."

When installing siding, Lifetime specialists use screws and rivets in all critical areas of installation. It does not take an engineers to figure out that screws and rivets secure siding better than staples and nails.

These installation methods, together with the highest quality lifetime warrantied steel or vinyl siding will give a home a permanent solution to painting problems.

For energy efficiency, protection for home and family, noise and dust reduction as well as overall savings, Letkeman recommends storm and replacement windows for your home. Storm windows, which are great for insulation, can come with tinted glass. And replacement dual glass thermal break windows are solid investments in the long run.

Lifetime Siding & Window also sells and installs other home improvements such as storm and replacement windows, storm doors, rain gutters and metal carports.

For a free estimate, call Lifetime Siding & Window Co. at 689-0307.

Neil Letkeman would like to thank his community for making 1991 a very successful year. He's looking forward to serving new customers in 1992 with the same dedication to high-quality craftsmanship.

Winter weather requires Chaparral Wash & Lube auto check

Chaparral has a great number of repeat customers because of their friendly, dependable service. From left are customer Chad Hyatt, owner Leon Jeffcoat and service technician C.C. Banks.

Whether snow comes or not, freezing weather will have an effect on everyone's vehicles. That's the reason many Midlanders will stop by Chaparral Wash & Lube for basic maintenance, where trained technicians will check, and, if necessary install antifreeze. They will also see to hoses, tighten belts and give automobiles a general check-up.

Chad Hyatt of Radio Electronics has been bringing his company and personal vehicles to Chaparral for a number of years.

"They do a great job every time I come here," he said. "I'm very satisfied."

That's why since opening in 1984, Chaparral Wash & Lube Center has enjoyed a well-earned reputation for the best car wash and oil change service in Midland. A strong commitment to meticulous attention to detail from long-time employees are Chaparral trademarks.

The Chaparral Lube Center carries major brands of oil, including Pennzoil, Quaker State and Havoline. Prices for the oil change and lube range from $18.50 to $23.50. For those who prefer using Mobil One, the price is $36.50

A free car wash is included with each oil change. Those who are in a rush or notice threatening clouds overhead receive a car wash rain check for use at a later date.

Also included with the oil change is a thorough examination under the hood. Technicians check battery, power steering, transmission and windshield washer fluids.

As part of this service, these fluids are replenished, if needed. For an additional charge, technicians install transmission oil, freon, light bulbs and windshield wiper refills.

A regular maintenance schedule at Chaparral Wash & Lube is good insurance against expensive car trouble in the future. Owner Leon Jeffcoat recommends a minimum maintenance schedule of every 3,000 miles or every three months. A reminder sticker is placed on the inside of the windshield.

Visits to Chaparral also mean personal service from dedicated employees. Among them are lube center technician C.C. Banks, car wash detail supervisor Guillermo Portillo and detail specialist Gilbert Guiterrez. These men, who take pride in their work, have a combination of more than 20 years of experience with Chaparral.

A full-service car wash, which includes a wash by gentle cleansers, chamois brushes and soft water is just $7.95. Add wax for $2. Washes for standard vans and Suburbans are $2 more. Vacuuming, hand-drying and window cleaning are included in the low price.

A great timesaver: customers having their car washed can have the tank filled with Texaco gasoline and receive a discount toward the wash. More than 18 gallons means a free wash.

Chaparral also offers the advantage of a professionally administered detail job. It includes spraying the engine to remove oil and grime, a thorough cleaning under the hood, hand waxing, carpet and upholstery shampooing, interior dash and door treatment and tire treatment. Prices for this service start at $59.00.

Chaparral Wash & Lube Center is located at the corner of Big Spring and Scharbauer. Texaco, Visa, MasterCard, American Express and Discover cards are welcome. Hours are 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. On Saturdays Chaparral is open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Call 682-8013 for more information.

White House aides call for moratorium on new federal rules

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush's senior advisers have recommended that he stop all government agencies from issuing new rules for three months as part of a broad campaign to revive the economy by reducing the burden of federal regulation, White House officials said Monday.

The recommendation, most likely to be included in Bush's State of the Union Message next Tuesday, comes from Vice President Dan Quayle and other officials, including C. Boyden Gray, the White House counsel; Richard G. Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, and Michael J. Boskin, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

Rules required by statute and those considered most likely to have a beneficial effect on the economy would be exempt from the ban, administration officials said.

"What we envision is a moratorium on proposing new regulations, across the board in every agency, except those rules required by statute or those that stimulate economic growth," a White House official said, confirming a report in Monday's issue of The Wall Street Journal. "This will send a clear signal to agencies that the president wants them to re-examine all regulations and their impact on the economy."

White House officials said Bush was troubled by studies documenting a resurgence of federal regulations since he became president in January 1989. The number of pages in the Federal Register, a crude but useful indicator of regulatory activity, increased last year by 26 percent, to 67,715 pages, the highest number since 1980, the final year of the Carter administration.

As vice president, Bush was in charge of President Ronald Reagan's Task Force on Regulatory Relief, which blocked hundreds of rules deemed burdensome to business, consumers, universities or local governments. But as president, Bush has allowed such rules to proliferate.

White House officials listed seven broad areas in which they now hope to reduce federal regulation on entrepreneurs and businesses: environmental protection (including fuel economy standards for automobiles); energy (natural gas, electricity); transportation (trucking, ocean shipping, airlines); exports; communications (cellular telephones, cable television); biotechnology, and "access to capital."

Gary D. Bass, director of OMB Watch, a consumer group that monitors the Office of Management and Budget, said the moratorium was "an outrageous attempt by the administration to appeal to business interests in an election year."

Bass also said the effects of the moratorium would run beyond three months because "agencies will be afraid to initiate regulations to protect workers, consumers and the public in general."

Rep. John Conyers Jr., the Michigan Democrat who is chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, which supervises federal regulatory policy, said, "Particularly in light of what appears to be the total lack of any economic analysis to support this proposal, it is likely only to increase the perception that President Bush is desperate, rudderless and lacking in any original program to get the economy back on track."

Conyers and Sen. John Glenn, the Ohio Democrat who is chairman of the Committee on Governmental Affairs, have charged that the White House improperly interfered in the rule-making of federal agencies.

White House officials said the 90-day ban on new regulations could be imposed by the president alone without action by Congress.

"For tax policy we have to go to Congress, and for monetary policy we have to depend on the Federal Reserve, but regulatory policy is one area where the president can act unilaterally," said a White House official.

FDA tells Dow Corning Corp. to release breast implant data

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Food and Drug Administration has told the Dow Corning Corp. to make public some 90 documents on silicone gel breast implants, but company officials said Monday the company may not comply.

Dr. James S. Benson, the chief FDA official in charge of medical devices, told the company that the agency would disclose the documents if the company did not do so by Wednesday.

In a letter to Lawrence A. Reed, president of Dow Corning Corporation, the largest maker of breast implants, Benson said the company should immediately release the data so that women and doctors can consider company documents on safety.

"These memoranda reflect a lack of appropriate safety and performance data for the Silastic I device and reinforce concerns about the safety and performance of all currently marketed devices," Benson wrote. "We believe that disclosure of this information is warranted in light of Dow Corning's previous statements about the safety of its devices" and the company's previous "representation that it has put all relevant evidence on the record."

Dow Corning officials said they would release scientific information but were "inclined to withhold" documents in which company officials debated the adequacy of safety studies.

Robert T. Rylee, chief of Dow's Health Care Businesses, said release of all the documents would paint an inaccurate, one-sided picture of what went inside the company.

He said the FDA demand "highlights what we are complaining about," adding, "This is a true travesty, a media circus instead of a true and impartial scientific review."

In a tense regulatory battle that continues daily, Dow Corning Corp., jointly owned by the Dow Chemical Co. and Corning Inc., has been fighting to keep its products on the market and to keep from public view numerous internal company memos, mostly from the period 1975 to 1985.

These memos, some of which have been disclosed by The New York Times and other newspapers, show top company officials rushing to push a new, soft gel implant on the market before basic safety studies were carried out.

These officials expressed concern in memos over the years that safety studies had not been done and worry that the FDA or plastic surgeons would find out that the company had not done some rudimentary work.

The documents were first found by lawyers who had sued Dow Corning on behalf of women who have implants and who believe the implants caused health problems.

Later the FDA and others obtained copies of the memos, some scientific studies not previously given to the agency, and some new information from doctors about cases in which it appears that the implants have been associated with autoimmune diseases.

Based on the documents and new information, Dr. David A. Kessler, the Commissioner of Food and Drugs, called on Jan. 6 for a moratorium on the sale and use of silicone gel implants, at least until an FDA advisory panel can reconsider the issue.

At a meeting in November, an agency panel found that safety data on the implants were inadequate but it decided the devices should stay on the market because of a "public health need."

Language class shows sign of the times

PLANTATION, Fla. (AP) — More Florida high school students are choosing American Sign Language to fulfill their second language requirement, although that could lead to unpleasant surprises in college.

A 2-year-old state law allows signing, used by deaf people, as an alternative to foreign language requirements, and 300 Broward County students have chosen that option.

"It's easier and I'd rather learn this than some other language," said Craig Zeleznic, a senior at South Plantation High School. He acknowledges he has no plans to use signing in his career.

If Zeleznic attends one of Florida's nine public universities, he will receive credit for the signing course, but that may not be true at other schools, educators warn.

"Students need to look into the colleges ahead of time, especially if they are going out of state," said Jan Bonggren, president of the Florida Foreign Language Association.

And then there's the question of whether signing should count as a second language.

Ms. Bonggren argues that American Sign Language fails to provide insight into another world culture — the art, music, literature and history — that students would get by learning Spanish or French.

GED fails in job market, study shows

CHICAGO (AP) — Recipients of the high school equivalency certificate fare no better than dropouts and much worse than graduates in the job market, researchers said Monday.

But the American Council on Education, which produces the 7½-hour General Educational Development exam, strongly disputed the findings, saying the researchers were "mixing apples and oranges."

Lead researcher James Heckman, a professor of economics and public policy at the University of Chicago, said more and more students are taking the exam — many at the urging of government programs that tout it as a means of escaping poverty without graduating from high school.

He said the number of people earning certificates through the exams nearly tripled from 1968 through 1987.

The study, to be published this summer in the university's Journal of Labor Economics, found that dropouts and GED recipients "have comparably poor wages, earnings, hours of work, unemployment experiences and job tenure."

"There is no cheap substitute for classroom instruction," the study said. "Educational programs that focus on the GED as an end in itself are misguided."

The study examined data on 5,000 men in their mid- to late twenties who took the exam nationwide in the mid-1980s. Their employment status was compared with that of high school dropouts and graduates.

At age 25, GED recipients earned an average annual salary of $3,800, compared to $3,300 for 25-year-old dropouts and $4,930 for high school graduates, Heckman said.

Band's Storie scores praise

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

"Destiny is not a matter of chance, it's a matter of choice" reads the sign on Randy Storie's office door.

And when he begins to speak, it's evident that the Lee High School band director is driven by an ambition which he professes "takes up my every waking moment."

"I have dedicated my life to this band," he said.

Storie's ambition is to assist students in carrying out the Rebel band's "winning tradition."

He did that in a big way with his 200-plus member band in 1991.

Aside from having nine of his students named to the All-State band, his students were selected to march in the 1993 Tournament of Roses Parade, one of the highest national honors a band can achieve.

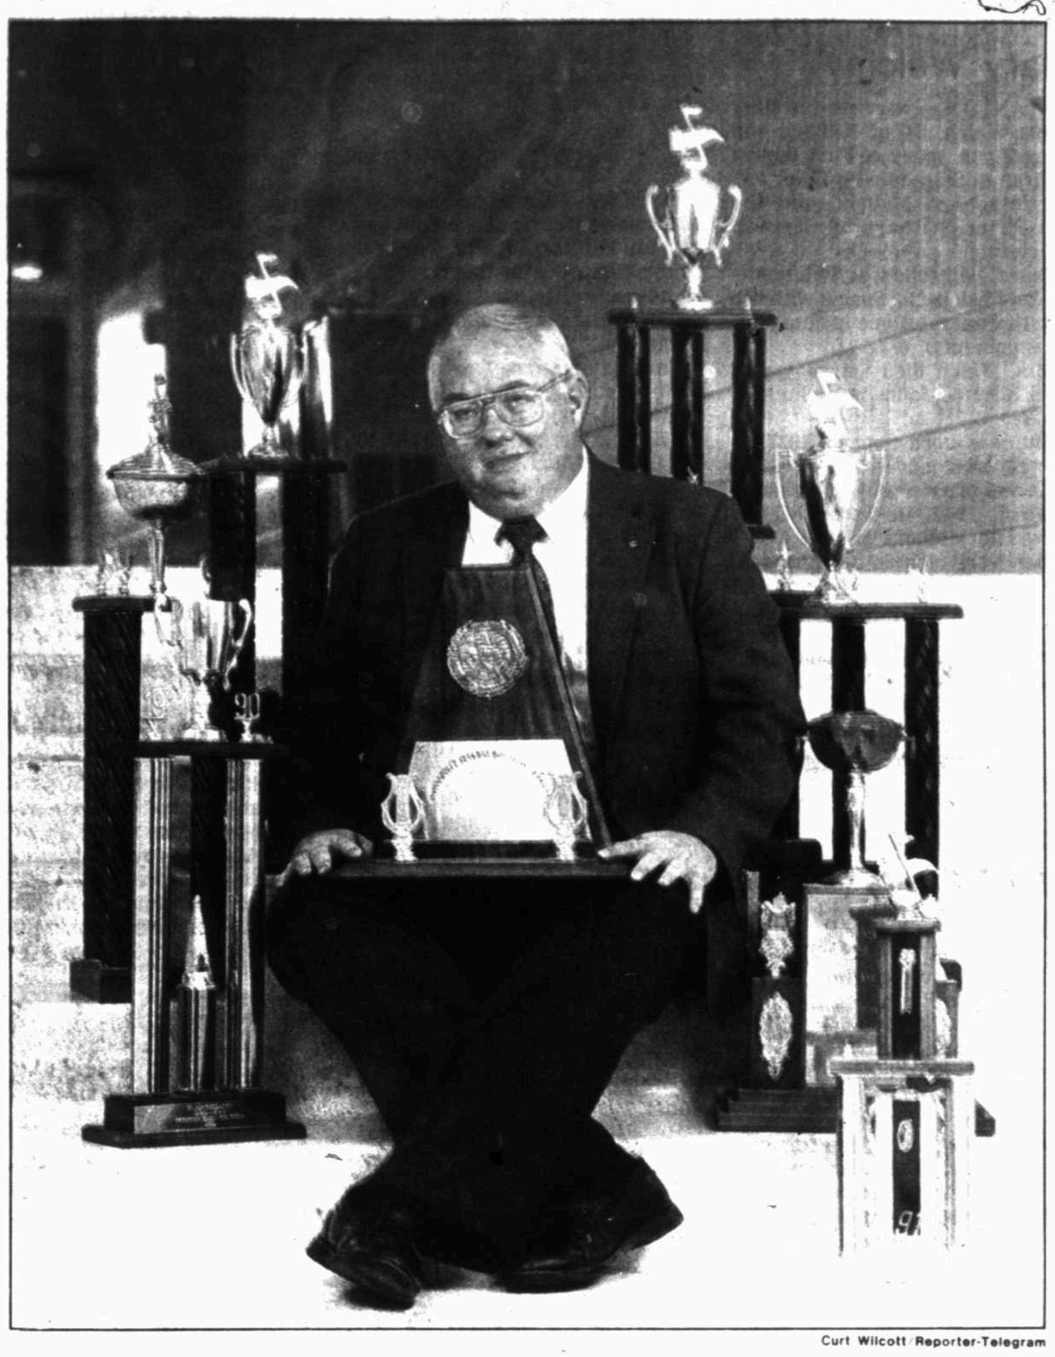

On the international front, the band received the John Philip Sousa Foundation Sudler Flag of Honor, which is awarded to a select few bands from the U.S., Japan and Canada annually.

A Midlander for 21 years, Storie is in his 12th year as band director at LHS. He also taught band at San Jacinto Junior High School for four years prior to taking the musical helm at the high school. A native West Texan, he grew up in Odessa and graduated from Odessa High School. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from West Texas State University and has done post graduate work at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Marcella Varela, who handles publicity for the LHS Band Boosters, noted that the Sudler Award and marching in the Rose Parade are honors awarded to bands which have excelled "over a period of years."

"It isn't just for this year's band," Ms. Varela said. "These honors have come because of

Band wins honors under Storie's lead

Staff Report

Under the direction of Randy Storie, the Lee High School Band has set the pace for other West Texas bands.

The LHS Band has been awarded First Division Ratings in every contest they have participated in under Storie's leadership over the past 12 years.

The Lee band has been selected to represent Region VI at the State UIL (United Interscholastic League) Marching Contest nine times since 1980. It has been a Top Ten Finalist in the Texas 5-A Honor Band Competitions six times since 1980.

In 1991, the band was awarded its 21st consecutive UIL Sweepstakes Award for First Division Ratings in marching, sight reading and concert. The band was named "Most Outstanding Band" in the Mountain States Music Festival in Phoenix, Ariz., in 1981 and 1984. In 1986 it was named "Most Outstanding Band" at the Contraband Days Music Festival in Lake Charles, La. In 1987, the band received the Grand Sweepstakes award in the Heritage Music Festival in Phoenix.

The band also marched in two Presidential Inaugural Parades (1985 and 1989). It was the only Texas band to march in both parades.

In 1991, the band received the John Philip Sousa Foundation Sudler Flag of Honor and the band was invited to march in the 1993 Tournament of Roses parade.

During his tenure at LHS, Storie has seen 78 of his students named to the Texas All State Band and Orchestra.

Garner gains spot on water commission

■ Gov. Richards appoints five-term Upton County judge to succeed resigning member of board.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — West Texas now has a representative on the Texas Water Commission after Peggy Garner, a five-term Upton County judge, took the oath of office Monday afternoon.

Gov. Ann Richards appointed Garner to the board Dec. 20 to succeed Buck J. Wynne III, who resigned after the federal government named him administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Region VI office in Dallas.

Garner will serve the remainder of Wynne's term, which ends Aug. 31, 1993. The appointment is subject to Senate confirmation at the next regular session of the Legislature, which is to begin January 1993.

Garner, 61, was elected Upton County judge in 1975 and served for 17 years. Before that she was executive director of the McCamey Chamber of Commerce and then worked for the Tom Green

Murder trial begins today

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The trial of a 39-year-old Midland man, charged with the murder of his common-law wife just over a year ago, will begin today in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court.

Earl Henry Shelton was arrested at the couple's home, 1716 E. Oak Ave., following the shooting death of 23-year-old Lisa Ann Joseph about 11:10 p.m. Dec. 12, 1990, police reported at the time.

According to police reports, the victim and suspect were involved in an argument that escalated.

Ms. Joseph was shot in the right side of her chest with a .38-caliber revolver, the report stated. She was pronounced dead at the scene at 12:25 a.m. by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

Shelton, who was released the day after the incident on a $20,000 bond, has remained free since that time, jail officials said.

The trial is expected to last two to three days, according to defense attorney Chris McCormack. The defendant is expected to plead not guilty, but commments on specifics of Shelton's defense would be premature, McCormack said.

District Attorney Al Schorre, who will be prosecuting, said the case will be fairly straighforward — a domestic dispute turned violent.

McCormack may seek the lesser charge of voluntary manslaughter, Schorre said.

If convicted of murder, Shelton faces a sentence of up to life in prison or 99 years.

If convicted of voluntary manslaughter, Shelton could receive two to 20 years imprisonment.

Odessa woman dies after shooting

Staff Report

ODESSA — A 22-year-old Odessa woman died after being shot once in the upper neck, lower head area Monday night, Odessa police officials said.

Angelica Maria Pacheco was discovered in a bedroom at a house at 904 Munoz St. shortly after 6 p.m. She was pronounced dead at 9:30 p.m. by Justice of the Peace Dennis Bright, police said.

Eighteen-year-old Odessa resident Ralphael David Garza was charged with capital murder in the case and is being held at the Odessa County jail with a $150,000 bond, set by Municipal Court Judge J.E. Weatherly, according to reports.

Police located the victim's 1977 burned Mercury Cougar in a southeast Odessa field, officials said. Police are still searching for the weapon.

An autopsy for Ms. Pacheco has been tentatively scheduled for early this week, officials said.

Texas border city investigates excessive rate of birth defects

By BARRY SHLACHTER
N.Y. Times News Service

BROWNSVILLE — Something very disturbing has happened here and people don't know why.

Seventeen babies conceived during a 13-month period that ended January 1991 were born without brains at Brownsville hospitals.

Still another baby was born with a hole through the brain, and a 19th baby was born with spina bifida.

"Some of us believe it was something that we ate or drank. I do," said Janet Ramirez, 21. "One couple blamed the defect on last year's solar eclipse."

The tragedies have resulted in other victims.

"My husband took it real bad," Ramirez said. "He had a nervous breakdown."

The three conditions, known collectively in medical jargon as neural tube defects, occurred in Brownsville, in the lower Rio Grande Valley, at six times the normal U.S. incidence for that period of time.

Local doctors researching the Brownsville cluster of cases since last summer say they believe that the incidence is likely the biggest of its kind in the United States, if not the world.

The cases came to the attention of the Texas Department of Health and the Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control after obstetrical nurses at Valley Regional Medical Center noted three brainless, or anencephalic, births during a 36-hour period in April.

A month later, Indian-born radiologist Anant Utturkar remarked to a Brownsville colleague that he had discovered five anencephalic fetuses during routine prenatal sonogram tests.

"God, what's going on here?" he asked Dr. Margaret Wells Diaz, who had no answers but reported the high incidence to public health officials. Some obstetricians believe that the sudden surge may have been nothing more than a statistical blip. Other doctors, however, say they wouldn't be surprised if the unusual occurrences were somehow related to industrial pollution along the border.

Eight months later, authorities are still searching for clues.

When state and federal agencies first dispatched epidemiologists to the area in July they discovered a situation worse than expected.

Throughout Cameron County, of which Brownsville is the county seat, they found 31 babies with neural tube defects conceived during a 25-month period. If the county were to match the national average, there should have been six such babies or fewer; compared to Texas, 10 or fewer.

Medical experts are far from certain about what triggers such defects, although some believe that deficiency of folic acid in the mother's system caused by poor nutrition is a contributing factor.

Because of other reported health complaints, some in the community immediately blamed the smokestacks and emission drains of plants just across the Rio Grande in Matamoros, Mexico. Most of the plants are U.S.-owned.

Known as "maquiladoras," the factories have thrived on tax breaks, cheap labor and, some contend, pollution codes that are less than stringently enforced.

Matamoros itself has reported a number of neural tube disorders.

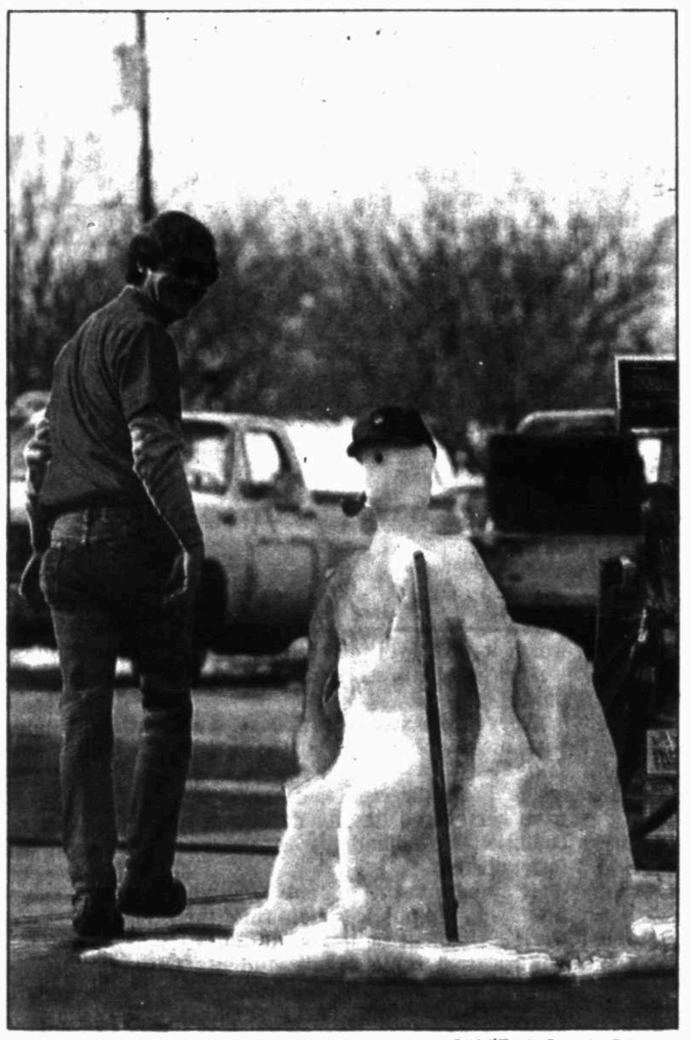

At Matamoros' Social Security Hospital, where most "maquila" female workers receive care, 42 of 8,708 babies born in 1989 and 1990 had central nervous system disorders. Of these, 28 were neural stem defects, which U.S. doctors said was an unusually high rate.

But Texas and federal officials stress that no direct evidence now exists linking the birth defects on both sides of the river and Matamoros' headlong rush to industrialization.

Causes remain very much a mystery, but a 1979 study published by the British medical journal Lancet said xylene and toluene — two solvents used to clean factory machinery — were responsible in some instances of neural stem defects.

The Boston-based National Toxic Campaign Fund, an organization critical of emission controls at these border plants, found evidence of the two solvents in soil and water samples taken near a U.S.-owned auto plant in Matamoros. The samples were taken about

Congressmen hold opposing views on Japan's collider support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trade tension between the United States and Japan colors talks on Japanese participation in the super collider, but should not have a direct bearing on the outcome, two congressmen who visited Tokyo said Monday.

Since President Bush's trade mission to Japan earlier this month, Japanese officials have been searching for ways to improve relations between both economic superpowers.

Japanese participation in the $8.25 billion giant atom smasher being built in Texas, Bush's adopted home state, may help alleviate some of the tension.

"They are sort of tripping over themselves trying to find ways to improve the relationship," Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., said Monday, the day after returning from Japan.

"They recognize, rightly so, that a strong U.S.-Japanese relationship is good for the world."

But Boehlert, one of the collider's leading opponents in Congress, said not one official during his five-day visit to Japan expressed "an ounce of enthusiasm" for the project.

"If they participate, it will be a political statement, not a scientific investment. I did not detect at any meeting any enthusiasm for Japanese participation in the SSC," said Boehlert, one of four House science committee members who went on the trip.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Worker escapes injury in explosion

Staff Report

A worker digging a ditch on the Pegasus plant property in south Midland County ruptured a natural gas pipeline causing an "explosion and large fire" Monday afternoon, Department of Public Safety officials said.

Leroy Kinney of Andrews was not injured when the Getco ditching machine he was operating struck an eight inch gas line owned by Mobil Pipe Line Co.

The machine, owned by Flint Construction, was destroyed, DPS officials said.

Officials decided to shut off the gas line and let the fire burn itself out.

The accident occurred at 3:40 p.m., a half mile south of the Pegasus plant.

Emergency personnel at the scene included workers from the Texas Railroad Commission, the Water Commission, the Air Control Board, the Midland Fire Department, the Midland County Sheriff's Office and the Ector County Fire Department, DPS officials said.

Police seek culprits

Police are searching for three black males in connection with the robbery of a 7-Eleven convenience store at 115 W. Wadley Ave. Sunday night, according to police reports.

The men entered the store and walked directly to the beer display. The clerk told them he couldn't sell them beer because it was too late, according to reports.

One of the men pulled a knife and threatened the clerk, police said. The men then took two 12-packs of beer and fled in a vehicle that was parked in the alley. The clerk couldn't describe the vehicle, according to reports.

Two of the men are described as 19-to-22-years-old, about 5 feet, 7 inches tall and weighing about 150 to 160 pounds. One man was wearing a black and red jacket and a black cap with the word "sox" in white letters. The other man was wearing a dark blue jacket.

A description of the third man was not given, police said.

Police seek assailant

Police are searching for a 36-year-old Hispanic male in connection with a Sunday night stabbing incident at the El Caribe bar at 2201 Garden City Highway, according to police reports.

Forty-year-old Delia Esquivel, 605A Watson St., was wounded with a hunting knife in the upper left arm, according to reports.

Esquivel and the man had been arguing earlier in the night. The man had left the bar but returned later and a fight ensued, according to reports.

The man, who has been described as 'heavy," then pulled the knife, stabbed the victim and left the scene, according to reports.

SUPPORT: Congressmen disagree on Japan's support

fered a more upbeat assessment of the talks with Japanese legislators, government officials and scientists.

"I'm convinced there is a willingness on their part to participate," he said Monday.

Barton, R-Ennis, said he remains convinced the Japanese ultimately will invest up to $1.5 billion in the collider.

"I don't see a major sticking point to their participation. I guess if there is one, they've got a tight budget just like we have. Finding the money to participate is probably as big a problem as anything," he said.

The collider's future may well hinge on whether Japan decides to help finance the project which would be the most expensive scientific instrument ever built.

The particle accelerator, which recently approached the $1 billion mark in federal spending, faces a tough funding fight on Capitol Hill this spring.

Congress has indicated its continued support for the collider is contingent upon foreign participation. The Energy Department pledged to line up $1.7 billion in foreign contributions, but so far has only a $50 million commitment from India.

Since Japan's budget will be drawn up this spring, Barton said it is unlikely the government will commit any funds this year. But, he added, "They could certainly make a pledge or something this year."

Boehlert said he would not rule out eventual Japanese participation, but added, "I'm not sure we are going to get one penny out of Japan. If they were enthusiastic, they could have made a commitment on the spot."

Japan's view that the super collider has more political than scientific merit is evidenced by the fact that only Foreign Ministry officials are talking about participation, Boehlert said.

"I don't know any champions for participation in the SSC on behalf of the Japanese scientific community. I do know in political circles it's being discussed," he said.

GARNER: West Texan appointed to board

County Community Action Agency as center director for the Upton-Reagan Community Action Center. The center provides services, training and education to low-income families.

"I'd just like to be sure that West Texas is represented and that perhaps someday we can accomplish something statewide in water and solid waste for Texas," Garner said in an interview.

A large number of West Texas county judges conducted the swearing-in ceremonies after Garner was introduced by Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo.

Garner told a large audience of friends and family members in the Senate chamber that when she decided in September to seek the appointment, she thought it probably was impossible.

"I couldn't believe that a little old county judge from tiny Upton County, population 4,447 in West Texas, would ever be selected to serve," she said.

"For Gov. Ann Richards to look at Upton County for a leader is for the governor to look at your community," she said. "For Gov. Ann Richards to gaze across the vastness of West Texas ... is for the governor to be aware of all the areas of rural Texas."

C.W. Brown, a long-time area leader known as "Mr. McCamey," who spoke at the ceremonies, said he gave Garner her first job at the McCamey Chamber of Commerce and "paid her $65 a month, and I thought she was overpaid."

Brown said he convinced Garner to run for county judge and to seek the water board position so she can continue to serve the state.

Brown said Richards "knows good people to appoint to these boards" and that "she picked one of the best ones, in my estimation, that could be found in the state of Texas when she picked Upton County Judge Peggy Garner."

The Legislature approved a bill last year that will merge the Texas Water Commission, Texas Air Control Board, Water Well Drillers Board, Board of Irrigators and environmental programs from the Department of Health into a single powerful agency. It will be known as the Natural Resources Conservation Commission as of Sept. 1, 1993.

Those serving on the water commission at that time will be in charge of the new agency. Garner could be reappointed when her term expires Aug. 31, 1993, but commissioners cannot serve more than two six-year terms.

As county judge, Garner worked on water-supply shortages, drought relief and solid-waste management problems. Her efforts in a search for alternative water supplies led to the organization of the Upton County Water District.

After her drought-relief efforts, the state's county extension agents named her "Man of the Year in Texas Agriculture."

She also helped organize the Sparsely Population Entities Coalition of 115 West Texas cities and counties to lobby the EPA to give state regulatory agenices the power to grant variances to arid areas in meeting solid-waste regulations.

The variances help such areas manage solid waste in ways appropriate to their population and needs.

the same time the affected Brownsville women conceived.

A 1990 study by Jean Brender and Lucina Suarez, both state health department researchers, analyzed vital statistics which indicated that Texas fathers who worked with solvents had a 2½ times higher risk of having offspring with anencephaly. The risk to men who were painters rose to more than three times.

Unfortunately, no autopsies were performed on the brainless babies — one had struggled a few days; the rest were stillborn. Tests on kidney tissue samples might have helped solve the mystery by determining whether there were traces of toxic chemicals.

Epidemiologists carrying out a joint CDC-Texas Department of Health study have declined to provide any details gleaned so far from 25 affected families interviewed.

A team is currently in Cameron County profiling a "control group" — parents who conceived healthy children during the same period.

By comparing this group with couples whose babies had defects, the team hopes to learn if such factors as nutrition, pollution, heredity, travels or occupation might have been responsible for the neural tube defects, said Dr. Dennis Perrotta, the health department's director of epidemiology.

"We are moving with all haste to get the information in the appropriate fashion because a lot of folks are concerned," he said in a call from Austin.

BAND: Director challenges students to greatness

(From 1B)

the success of past LHS bands."

Storie agreed.

"This certainly has been a most special year, but I couldn't say this is the best band I've ever had," he said. "Each band has its own personality, its own strengths and weaknesses. Each band is unique."

"This school's tradition of excellence was going before I got here," he said, citing the motto hanging in the band hall: "Nothing we've done in the past will ever be good enough again."

While that may seem to be a tall order, students say that Storie inspires them to rise to the occasion.

"He expects a lot more out of me than most of my other teachers," said LHS senior David Bryant, a percussionist. "He requires a lot of discipline, but he really cares about us. When he gets away from the band, he will talk to us like the best of friends."

Bryant said he met Storie when the band director filled in for his band instructor at Goddard Junior High School. "I was in seventh grade," he added. He said Storie's imposing presence in the band hall frightened him initially. "He just scared me. He let me know if I stayed in band, I was going to work hard. I wasn't sure if I was going to continue on in band until he arrived. He is what kept me in band."

Missy Pollard, an All-State band member and LHS drum major, described Storie as "dedicated."

"He works you real hard," she said. "But it's worth it when you do well in competitions."

> 'They have a strong work ethic.'
> — Randy Storie

Storie said his students work harder than most.

"They have a strong work ethic. They put up with me and buy into all the discipline," he said.

The band director said that his students have persevered despite depressed economic conditions in Midland over the years and aging instruments.

He noted that the students would be relying heavily on the public to help fund their trip to the Tournament of Roses Parade.

Storie said some of his students continue playing musical instruments in college and professionally. "And even if they don't, they have learned a love and an appreciation of music," he said.

The band students are so dedicated in fact, that they continued playing at one competition even though Storie accidently cut off his conducting early during a state tournament.

"Later we laughed about it," he said. "We still advanced to the next level."

Storie also credits a supportive administration and the school district's private music lesson program with boosting the band's success.

"The private lesson program is my secret weapon," he said. "The nucleus of the program has been with us since the mid-1970s. They really bring out the talents of our players."

Storie said Odessa students also provide strong competition for the Rebels. But, he said the Lee students' greatest competition usually comes from former students. "Part of the reason we always come out on top says a lot for tradition. Nobody wants to be the band which lets down the school," he said.

Ms. Varela said parents and school alumni volunteer countless hours to make performance costumes for band, orchestra and choir students.

"But you can have good parents and students anywhere," she said. "Randy Storie is the primary reason for the overwhelming success of the Lee band. He is the man behind the band."

Ms. Varela said, "One day, when I was feeling down, I told Mr. Storie, 'I don't much believe in miracles.' " He said, 'The LHS band is a miracle.' I said, 'You're the miracle.' "

Storie, however, credits the band's success to the students. "I like to think that I'm part of the reason the band is good. But, the kids work their hearts out, and they don't receive enough recognition."

But parents and students who work with Storie say it's how he does what he does that makes the band successful.

Bryant, a LHS senior, said, "What's amazing about Mr. Storie is that he can get 200 people on a marching field and get them to make everything as good as it can be — for that one moment in time."

Anthony "Thumper" Miller, of Earth Measurement Corp. of Houston, uses an ordnance device Monday to search for cannons allegedly dumped in the San Antonio River by Mexican forces after the fall of the Alamo.

High-tech mine detector helps in cannon search

By J. Michael Parker
Associated Press writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An ordnance-detecting device used in the Persian Gulf war is helping archaeologists determine conclusively whether a cannon used in the 1836 siege of the Alamo is buried under the San Antonio River.

But Alton Briggs, the archaeologist in charge of the search, said if and when the cannon is unearthed, it likely will have to be reburied until funds can be raised to preserve it.

"The artifacts we've been finding down there are in excellent condition and pretty much intact.

"But as soon as an artifact like a cannon is exposed to the air, it will start corroding and deteriorating very rapidly," Briggs said.

"I'm just not willing to do that to a cannon that was used at the Alamo. We'll resolve the location, rebury it and get the finances to recover and preserve it."

Briggs, owner of the Austin-based Lone Star Archaeological Services, and his associates have unearthed artifacts from beneath the river for the past four years.

Their investigation is being conducted under the auspices of the National Underwater Marine Agency, a non-profit corporation whose primary purpose is searching for ships with historical significance.

Samples of their finds are on display in the lobby of La Mansion Del Rio Hotel — including medicine bottles from two of San Antonio's early druggists, Conrad Schasser and Leonardo Orynski; European tableware from the 1840s; and American Indian tools dating to the 1750s.

Artifacts recovered in the current search included mid-19th century bottles, ceramics and tin enamel wares dating to the Spanish colonial period.

Briggs said pieces of metal from the bridge and construction of the Hyatt Regency also were recovered but that the ordnance detector still continued to register a large metallic object beneath the excavation.

Anthony "Thumper" Miller of Earth Measurement Corp. in Houston — a subcontractor on the project — said the device, called a ferrous ordnance locator, is the most sensitive of six instruments his company has provided for the search.

"Essentially, it's a mine detector. It was used during the war to find mines, unexploded shells and other types of buried ordnance," Miller said.

"It's the best instrument we have for pinpointing. Some of the others have been helpful in eliminating false targets, such as chunks of metal construction material thrown into the river," he said.

"What's so exciting is that four different instruments say there is something big down there."

He said the team is "only working off a theory. There is no real proof the Mexicans did drop a cannon here after the Alamo siege."

"But if it is here to be found and it's where we can get to it, we ought to be able to find it.

"We're talking about a piece of cast iron weighing 400 to 1,200 pounds — exactly what this device was made to find," Miller said.

Briggs said the detecting instruments have found "magnetic anomalies" at about six different sites between the Crockett Street bridge and La Mansion Del Rio Hotel.

"Some turned out to be lids of 55-gallon drums or reinforcement bars from construction of the Hyatt Regency and things like that.

"A 'rebar' looks just like a cannon on our instruments," he said.

Briggs said the river bottom has a tremendous amount of trash — about a foot deep — and a layer of gravel and gley on top of the artifacts.

"We're down to the gravel now, but we haven't seen the anomaly," he said.

Briggs and his team believe the area beneath the bridge is a good site to look for the cannon because an 1836 diary entry by Dr. J.H. Bernard says that in May 1836 — two months after the Alamo fell and its Texan defenders were killed — Mexican forces evacuated San Antonio and pushed into the river "all the artillery and ammunition that could not be carried off."

They had just learned of Gen. Santa Anna's defeat in the Battle of San Jacinto and were ordered to destroy the Alamo and retreat across the Rio Grande.

"This is right in the area where they would have dropped the cannon and just upstream from the Hyatt (Regency) is where several cannon were already found," Briggs said.

He said the big question archaeologists want to answer is whether all the cannons dropped into the river have been found.

Archaeologists and historians have disagreed over the number of cannons used by the Texans during the siege, the number varying from 18 to 21, Briggs said.

"Researchers want to pin down those pieces of equipment," he said.

Briggs said work to assure the long-term preservation of a cannon is extremely intensive, tedious and time-consuming and therefore costly, but he is confident funds to do the work will be relatively easy to raise.

"There is still a great deal of interest in the Alamo around the world. If we get the cannon, the money will be there," he said.

College funding crackdown could hurt commuter schools, officials say

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas universities that depend on unconventional commuter students would be harmed by a state funding plan tied to performance standards, University of Houston officials say.

They say that using standards like the time it takes students to graduate in school funding would unfairly penalize UH and other urban commuter schools that attract students who work full-time and often are raising families.

Many of the standards, says UH System Chancellor Alex Schilt, "presuppose an institution that's very traditional in its delivery system and population served — precisely the kind of institution that is increasingly inappropriate to meet the educational needs of the current and future population."

UH student Mytrang Baccam plans to graduate in May, six years after she transferred there as a junior. But Ms. Baccam, 27, has been juggling her French studies along with a full-time job and motherhood.

"It hasn't been easy. But I don't know what I'd have done if UH wasn't so accommodating of non-traditional students," she said.

Performance-based budgets have been the subject of a lot of talk but little action over the past decade. But analysts predict limited resources in the 1990s will finally prompt states to act.

State Rep. Ric Williamson, D-Weatherford, predicts some form of performance-based budgeting will be adopted during the 1993 legislative session.

"In this information age in which it's possible to measure output, it's no longer a good investment of the taxpayers' money to fund institutions, people and processes. We should fund good performance," he said.

Colleges now are required to report how they perform on such standards as retention rates, the time students take to earn their degrees, the licensing exam passage rates of graduates and the dollar value of research funding.

Group aims to throw out prison bonds

AUSTIN (AP) — A massive prison bond proposal approved by voters last year is being challenged in court by people who say Texans didn't realize it includes money to build drug and alcohol treatment centers for criminals.

The ballot proposal "did not apprise the electorate of this state of the true character and purpose of the constitutional amendments and at best is government by deceit," says the lawsuit by Louis Podesta of San Antonio and Charles Hardy of Balch Springs.

They are backed by a conservative issues group called Lone Star 2000.

Backers of the bond issue, including Gov. Ann Richards, called the planned construction of more than 12,000 drug and alcohol treatment prison beds a ground-breaking effort to eliminate one of the root causes of crime.

"The fact of the matter is, 85 percent of the crime that we have comes from drug abuse of some sort. Unless you do something about drug addiction, you're just tugging on Superman's cape or spitting into the wind," Sen. Ted Lyon, a sponsor of the measure, said Monday.

The lawsuit, filed in state court in Travis County, asks that the election results be declared void. The constitutional amendment, which was approved 68 percent to 32 percent in November, read as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance of up to $1.1 billion in general obligation bonds for acquiring, constructing or equipping new prisons or other punishment facilities to confine criminals, mental health and mental retardation institutions, and youth corrections institutions, for major repair or renovation of existing facilities of those institutions and for the acquisition of, major repair to, or renovation of other facilities for use as state prisons or other punishment facilities."

Of the bonds, $672 million is earmarked by separate legislation for building 25,300 new correctional facility beds, including 12,000 in substance abuse centers.

"This represents a philosophy ... that, 'Incarceration is no longer an effective deterrent to crime. We're not going to send people to jail for breaking the law. We're going to send people to drug rehabilitation. That's going to break the cycle of crime,'" said Podesta, who describes himself as a free-lance writer, social activist and philosopher.

"That's just a load of bull," he said. Podesta said drug treatment facilities would not be like "normal prison cells."

Lyon, D-Rockwall, called Podesta "a nut" and Lone Star 2000 "the elite silk-stocking set of conservative right-wing thinking" and a group of "ultra-rich snobs."

Gays seek mention in school textbooks

AUSTIN (AP) — Gay rights activists are asking the State Board of Education to require textbook publishers to reveal people's homosexuality or bisexuality, when it is pertinent to their work.

"When a man's love or passionate affection for another man, or a woman's love and commitment to another woman, are crucial to their work and actions, then those relationships should not be hidden," said Robert Birle of Project 21, a national gay rights coalition that is campaigning to include homosexual issues in public school curricula.

He and other activists testified Jan. 10 before the Education Board, which took no action because the request came too late to be considered for inclusion in books chosen for use in Texas public schools next year.

"It was like dropping a boulder in the pond, and there was no ripple," said Tom Neal, state campus coordinator for the Coalition of Lesbian-Gay Student Groups.

But Neal told the Austin American-Statesman the group will continue its effort to have gay lifestyles reflected in books, beginning with new high school health textbooks to be chosen next year by the board.

Texas' content requirements for textbooks do not include homosexuality or bisexuality, but it is possible that textbook authors have included material on the subjects.

Carolyn Crawford of Beaumont, who heads the Education Board, said the issue could be a tricky one.

Homes remain without heat after poison leak

EMORY (AP) — About 20 homes remained without heat Monday night after a poisonous gas seeped into the line of a plant located about 60 miles east of Dallas, officials said.

Emory fire officials discovered the hydrogen sulfide Sunday at 9 p.m. after responding to several calls from residents whose fire alarms had gone off, said Emory Fire Marshall Mickey Cooper.

"After the first four or five calls, we figured out we had a problem coming from the gas system," Cooper said. Fire officials also noticed a strange odor coming from each of the space heaters from the homes, he said.

By 10:30 p.m., fire officials and Lone Star Gas company workers had told residents at about 400 homes to shut off their gas appliances and air out their homes.

"We didn't tell them to leave their homes ... we told them they wouldn't have heat that night," Cooper said.

He said the burned sulfur particles in the air had set off the fire alarms. Hydrogen sulfide can be deadly if inhaled in large quantities over a period of time.

Cooper said several people had difficulty breathing, three were taken to a hospital and three others were examined by paramedics. All were treated and released.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JANUARY 21, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Thanks to a recent career move, you will soon be in the money! Try a new approach to romance in March. Travel will bring you and your partner closer together in May. Give family members' needs more of your attention next summer. Widening your social circle to include people from different walks of life brings new happiness in September. You find yourself mediating both office disputes and domestic squabbles. Parenthood proves especially rewarding next winter.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actresses Geena Davis and Jill Eikenberry, singer Mac Davis, golfer Jack Nicklaus.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An excellent day to chart a new course where purchases or investments are concerned. Make necessary phone calls and trips, and put the final touches on a big project.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Early-morning discord could cast a shadow over business or domestic affairs. Weather the storm good-naturedly and the sun will come out. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences this evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The spotlight is on gifts and positive changes within your household. Steady financial progress is seen. Deep discussions prove fulfilling tonight. Be honest.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hold back those strong words you would like to direct to those in authority. Showing your warm, reasonable side could lead to new concessions. Join the laughter parade. Romance is sublime now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Domestic talks yield promising discoveries and a strong feeling of closeness. Turn back the clock to another time by sharing your favorite memories. Look ahead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be feeling ambivalent. Experts can shed light on a recurring problem. Abandon unrewarding projects. Business and pleasure mix with surprising results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Alliances are fragile now and could splinter. Your first priority might seem secondary to others. Be patient. A phone call brings welcome financial news later today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Reaching an agreement could be a snap; you may even get a guarantee. Distant places are good hunting grounds for items or funds. Your sense of humor returns. Choose your jokes carefully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Feelings are sensitive today. Let mellow surroundings soothe your frazzled nerves so you have a happy, productive day. A give-and-take attitude helps romance along.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seek a second opinion if in doubt about a business matter. Someone's ambition will both excite and repel you. Keep your distance until you have a better picture of what is happening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid doing business with friends and keep any personal problems to yourself; your co-workers are not interested. A change of lifestyle could have both physical and mental benefits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be careful not to lock horns with a difficult individual. You want everyone to be in your corner! Friendly chats ward off harmful spats. Being a team player will prove your loyalty.

Entries are grist for the mill of dummy play. Take, for example, a contract of three no trump. Textbooks will pontificate that you need 26 points in the combined hands for game. If those points are split 23 and 3, though, odds are that nine tricks are unattainable—you will have to play from the strong hand all the time. However, a combined 23 points divided 11 and 12 will often give play for game—you have the ability to move from hand to hand and take advantage of the lie of the cards. Here's a beautiful example from rubber bridge of efficient management of entries.

One look at dummy was enough to convince South that a contract of three no trump by North would have been far superior to four spades, but those 100 honors were a powerful · ·magnet. ·Fortunately, South had the skill to land the contract thanks to the favorable lie of the cards.

In a desperate effort to reach the table, declarer jettisoned the queen of clubs on the opening lead of the king. West shifted to the ten of diamonds, covered by the queen and king and taken in the closed hand. On the lead of a club toward the jack, West rose with the ace and continued with the nine of diamonds and another. That gave declarer the opportunity for another farsighted play—declarer preserved the seven of trumps by choosing to ruff with the nine.

A low club to the jack held, and declarer was lucky to be in dummy for a heart finesse. When that won, declarer was able to run the eight of spades and underplay the seven, thereby remaining in dummy to repeat the trump finesse. Making four-odd.

'Magic,' Eddie Murphy, Iman appear in new Jackson video

LOS ANGELES — Magic Johnson, Eddie Murphy and model Iman will appear in the second music video released from Michael Jackson's new album "Dangerous."

The video for the single "Remember the Time" is being filmed around Los Angeles, a spokesman for the pop star said Monday. It will premiere Feb. 2 on the Fox Broadcasting Network, following the show "In Living Color," and on cable's MTV and Black Entertainment Television.

John Singleton, who directed the movie "Boyz N The Hood," is directing the video.

Jackson caused a stir with the video "Black or White" released in November. Parents objected to scenes showing him grabbing his crotch and smashing windows. Jackson apologized and cut four minutes from the 11-minute video.

"Dangerous" is Jackson's first album since "Bad" in 1987. Epic Records described it is the pop star's fastest-selling album ever.

NEW YORK — Kathy Bates was in misery during filming of "At Play in the Fields of the Lord."

Bates

She and co-star Daryl Hannah went to Brazil's Amazon jungle.

"I was not a good camper," Bates said in this week's People magazine. "It's hot and sweaty, and there are bugs, and you want to go home, and it's day 1 of 120. You're at the Amazon. It ain't Rio."

Bates, who starred in "Misery," said Hannah had a good time.

"Daryl Hannah was a good camper. She loves being outside, the jungle, the animals. You could turn around and see Daryl with her lip being gnawed on by this strange little monkey, and she just loved it."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Garth Brooks and his wife showed up at the close of a telethon for cerebral palsy and wrote a check for $25,000.

Brooks said he and his wife, Sandy, were watching the televised benefit on Sunday when they decided to donate 10 cents for each dollar raised locally.

"They say if you can give what you can afford it isn't really giving. It kind of made us feel good and we just jumped in the truck and got down here because we saw it on TV," Brooks said.

Brooks' quadruple-platinum album "Ropin' the Wind" won him a Grammy nomination this month for best country vocal performance. His hits include "Friends in Low Places."

The United Cerebral Palsy Association said it raised about $23.5 million nationally in pledges during a 21-hour telethon.

LONDON — A jury awarded libel damages of $63,000 to Jason Connery, actor-son of Sean Connery, over an article in a British tabloid that branded him a coward.

Connery

The Sun last January published an article that claimed the younger Connery said he was scared of being called up to fight in the Persian Gulf.

The article claimed Connery, 29, said in an interview he would "sooner bury himself alive" than fight for his country and that he was "a bit of a wimp on the quiet."

Connery told the High Court he said nothing of the sort, and the article did not reflect his views. His lawyer, George Carman, described the article as "a deliberately nasty and vicious attack."

Connery said after the jury's decision Monday: "Now I can get on with my life again.... What concerned me was that people would believe this was the way I felt. Now, hopefully, people know I did not."

Son followed father in playing Robin Hood, on British television, and had a leading role in the London production of "Journey's End."

LOS ANGELES — Cheryl Shuman has the eyes of Hollywood in her hip pocket. Jack Nicholson, Michael Douglas and Meryl Streep are in her files.

Ms. Shuman is optician to the stars and provides many of the glasses seen in movies and on television, including "Bugsy," "Thelma and Louise," "Barton Fink," "Terminator II," "Murphy Brown" and "Cheers."

The crew of "Grand Canyon" called Shuman on her cellular phone and an hour later she spread 4,000 frames across the floor of a hotel room for Steve Martin, Danny Glover and Kevin Kline.

"She's the best," said Peter Schindler, the film's co-producer. "She's able to come up with whatever frame you need."

While actor Robert Downey Jr. was making "Soapdish," he insisted Ms. Shuman be kept on hand to tailor his eyeglasses for the movie.

Sometimes the difficult part is gently persuading stars the glasses they've chosen for a film make them look silly, she said recently.

"It's not a watch or a sweater," Ms. Shuman said. "It's on your face."

Business snowballs for Utah pair

SANDY, Utah (AP) — Business is snowballing for two Utah residents who are selling handfuls of snow to people who live in the sunniest of American cities.

"We haven't had any unsatisfied customers," said Jim McPhail, who with his neighbor ships genuine Utah snowballs to customers in warmer climes like Florida, Texas and Hawaii.

"People who've never experienced snow before love it."

McPhail and Jeanne Frank started Snowballs Express in November, charging $19.95 per 3-inch diameter snowball scooped from their back yards. The snowballs are packed in dry ice and plastic and shipped overnight.

Once delivered, the snowballs survive in the refrigerator for several days, or can be frozen.

Frank estimates they have sold more than 100 snowballs so far.

Paula Goldring, who owns a beauty salon in Phoenix, said she was delighted when her mother, Glenda Parker of Salt Lake City, sent her a snowball via Snowballs Express.

"We got it at the salon and everybody went crazy over it," Goldring said.

And for anyone not satisfied with a simple snowball, there's something more: a 55-gallon drum of snow snowball fights or a snowman.

Maverick attorney represents bears, wolves

By Pam Schmid
Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS — With shorts on his legs and no shoes on his feet, Brian O'Neill sometimes looks like Grizzly Adams next to his pinstriped colleagues at one of Minnesota's largest law firms.

But those he represents — animals that live in the wilderness and people who work there — are not offended.

O'Neill, 44, has compiled an impressive string of victories on behalf of threatened species and their habitats over the last decade.

He has helped stop farmers in northern Minnesota from shooting wolves, and fought a case that led the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to permanently ban strychnine-based pesticides, which threatened bald eagles, falcons and bears.

"We represent the little guys against the big guys; wild things in wild places against big government," O'Neill said. "And it's strange to have such a practice in such a big law firm."

O'Neill's firm, Faegre & Benson, allows him and 10 associates to practice environmental law full time. The work is paid for with millions of dollars he earned on behalf of fishermen who were hurt by oil spills.

Last September, O'Neill persuaded a jury to award $15 million to more than 100 commercial fishermen whose livelihoods were hurt by a 1987 oil spill off the Alaska coast.

Brian O'Neill

He is now representing more than 2,200 fishermen who claim the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill devastated their salmon harvest.

"It's fun to represent commercial fishermen," O'Neill said. "If you represent a bank, you get to meet a lot of bankers, which can get kind of old. If you represent thousands of fishermen, it's different. . . . You fish with him and understand his business."

In December, O'Neill argued a case before the U.S. Supreme Court on behalf of an environmental group, Defenders of Wildlife, that wants to extend the Endangered Species Act to U.S.-funded projects overseas.

'The government can grind you down. They never quit. They have unlimited resources and unlimited bodies, and if you fight a fight on their terms, it's like trying to wage war against Norman Schwarzkopf. You've got to hit them hard and quick, and then you can beat them.'

— Brian O'Neill

"When we spend money outside the United States, on deforestation projects in South America or rebuilding the Aswan Dam in Egypt, are we allowed to export misery?" O'Neill asked.

O'Neill's firm is one of the largest and most conservative in Minneapolis, but O'Neill credits it with letting his practice take root long before environmental law became glamorous or profitable.

"For years we did this stuff and little did anyone notice," he said. "Until three or four years ago, environmental law was not a paying business. Then it booms for whatever reason, and now we have this huge practice. But we did it principally because it was the right thing to do."

Jack Fribley, one of O'Neill's law partners, said O'Neill seems to relish taking on the federal government, a frequent defendant in his suits.

"He's definitely comfortable if he's somewhat mismatched," Fribley said.

Environmental leaders describe O'Neill as a fearless advocate who isn't afraid to ruffle feathers for his cause.

"The government is scared to death of him," said John Fitzgerald, wildlife policy council for Defenders of Wildlife. "He's not only good, he's aggressive."

While O'Neill plays down his accomplishments, he admits he enjoys being a thorn in the government's side.

"The government can grind you down," he said. "They never quit. They have unlimited resources and unlimited bodies, and if you fight a fight on their terms, it's like trying to wage war against Norman Schwarzkopf. You've got to hit them hard and quick, and then you can beat them."

Man's beloved spittoons go on the auction block

By Mary Foster
Associated Press writer

NEW ORLEANS — Bill Traverse began collecting spittoons in 1961. His first was a $25 white enamel model.

Not given to using spittoons himself, he planned to buy only one. But when a girlfriend gave him two more, he began a collection that would eventually grow to more than 1,000.

"At first I thought I'd stop at 100, then 200, then 500. I guess I got carried away, but they're so interesting," he said.

An inveterate collector, Traverse, 54, of Berlin, Conn., is now planning to sell the collection off in a Jan. 25 auction to make way for his new hobby — collecting steam train whistles.

"I love them, every one of them, but I'll still have my album of pictures and my memories of collecting them," he said.

He also expects to have well over $100,000 when the gavel bangs over the last one.

"It's a wonderful collection," said David Goldberg, whose gallery will handle the sale. "It's a one-of-a-kind collection and worth a lot to those who treasure a piece of American folklore."

Traverse sees his collecting as a form of urban archaeology.

Many times, he said, people don't realize that what they have is a spittoon at all. They think they have an old vase or chamber pot.

"People think of spittoons as being the plain, old round ones. You know, the white or brass kind. They came in all shapes and sizes, though."

In fact, spittoons gained popularity until the Depression, and in the late 19th Century no Victorian parlor was complete without one. There were small-handled versions that women could carry. Spittoons were hidden in stools, made in delicate vase-like styles, and "table" spittoons with handles for the front parlor.

Traverse's collection even includes a turtle spittoon. Step on the turtle's head and the back lifts up.

Among the most interesting, he said, are the small, square metal spittoons that were used on trains at the turn of the century when tuberculosis was feared. When a thumb lid was pressed, it revealed a cardboard container which could be disposed of by the trainmen at the next station.

"It was the first 'disposable' container that I know of," Traverse said.

The variety of the spittoons amazed Goldberg.

"There are sterling silver, cloisonne, bronze, Wedgewood, Majolica — just an incredible variety of materials and styles," he said.

Goldberg wouldn't guess at the market value of the collection, but said Traverse carefully detailed his purchases, and the value of other items, such as Wedgwood vases, from that period is known.

Traverse is keeping the first spittoon he started with, but everything else will go.

"Now I'm into train whistles. I go all over to get them, any kind of steam whistle," he said. "I have one about two feet long on the top of my pickup. When I blow it the neighbors think a train is going through."

Japanese said to be planning faster train

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese institute plans to develop a low-noise superexpress train that can travel as fast as 219 mph, Kyodo News Service reported recently.

Kyodo, quoting anonymous officials at the Railway Technical Research Institute, said the project aims to wrest the speed record from France's Train a Grande Vitesse. TGV is the world's fastest operating train, with a maximum speed of 188 mph, it said.

The report could not be immediately confirmed.

Japan's fastest train currently in operation is called "Super Hikari" and can travel as fast as 169 mph.

The French state-run railway company SNCF, which operates the TGV, is also developing a 350-kilometer-per-hour (219 mph) train and is hoping to start operation in 1999, Kyodo said.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell Monday, as traders had a ho-hum reaction to production cuts from Iran and Algeria.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in February settled at $18.89 per barrel, down 27 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Iran said it would cut 50,000 barrels a day from its production, while Algeria said it would cut 20,000 barrels a day, as those two OPEC members followed the lead of Venezuela, Libya and Nigeria. They are worried that prices could collapse this spring, when demand for oil falls in the consuming nations, if surging production is not restrained.

"It now gives us a total of five OPEC members with 200,000 barrels a day," Thomas P. Blakeslee, an energy analyst with Pegasus Econometric Group Inc., said. "It still is a drop in the bucket, and all eyes are focused on Saudi Arabia."

Saudi Arabia, which produces more than a third of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' output of 24.2 million barrels a day, has thus far made no indication it is willing to pump less oil to strengthen the price.

Saudi Arabia's stance when OPEC meets next month will be key to whether the cartel can make effective cuts, traders say.

Natural gas prices were mostly lower Monday, with contracts for delivery in February settling at $1.227 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.9 cents.

Dollar drops

NEW YORK — The dollar fell sharply against the Japanese yen and was narrowly lower against other major currencies in light holiday trading Monday.

Analysts said the dollar remained vulnerable against the yen following Friday's intervention by the Federal Reserve and the Bank of Japan. The two central banks sold dollars to push the greenback lower against the Japanese yen.

The dollar fell to 123.25 Japanese yen in New York Monday from 124.55 late Friday.

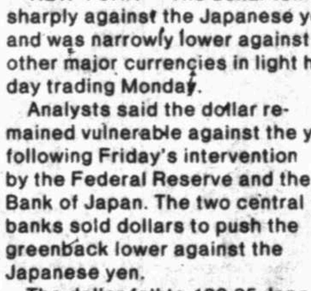

The British pound gained against the dollar Monday, rising to $1.7980 in New York from $1.7955 on Friday.

Stocks sag

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices drifted lower Monday in the quietest session of the new year, giving up a few of last week's gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 65.52 points last week to a record close on Friday, dropped 10.95 points to 3,254.03.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 4 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Official: Quick fix leads to collapse

■ While acknowledging the 'slowdown,' Fed governor says it will take time to achieve 'progress.'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A top Federal Reserve official said today that any short-term fix for the staggering economy would result in a "severe collapse" within a few years.

Edward Kelley Jr., one of seven Fed governors, acknowledged the economy "is mired in an extended slowdown," but he said it will take time to achieve what he called "true progress."

President Bush and many congressional Democrats are considering tax cuts and other proposals designed to rescue an economy that Bush said is in a free fall.

Kelley, however, said he doesn't believe "there are any quick fixes or panaceas available to us."

His remarks were prepared for the Florida Council of 100, a business organization meeting in Tampa. Copies of the speech were made available in Washington.

Without mentioning tax cuts or still lower interest rates specifically, Kelley pointed to the danger of using either.

"If we were to get our economy going again by force-feeding consumer spending or reigniting financial speculation, ... we would then be setting ourselves up for a severe collapse later in this decade which would be deep and long lasting," he said.

Citing the potential for reigniting inflation, he defended the central bank against criticism that it has not eased credit quickly enough to keep the economy from drifting downward.

"Inflation is a killer of economies," he said.

Until it slashed the discount rate a full 1 percent last month, the Fed had been nudging interest rates down slowly to lessen the chances of setting off a wave of price increase.

The Labor Department reported last week that inflation was just 3.1 percent last year, the lowest since 1986.

As has Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan and other economists, Kelley attributed much of the economy's problems to the enormous buildup of debt during the last decade.

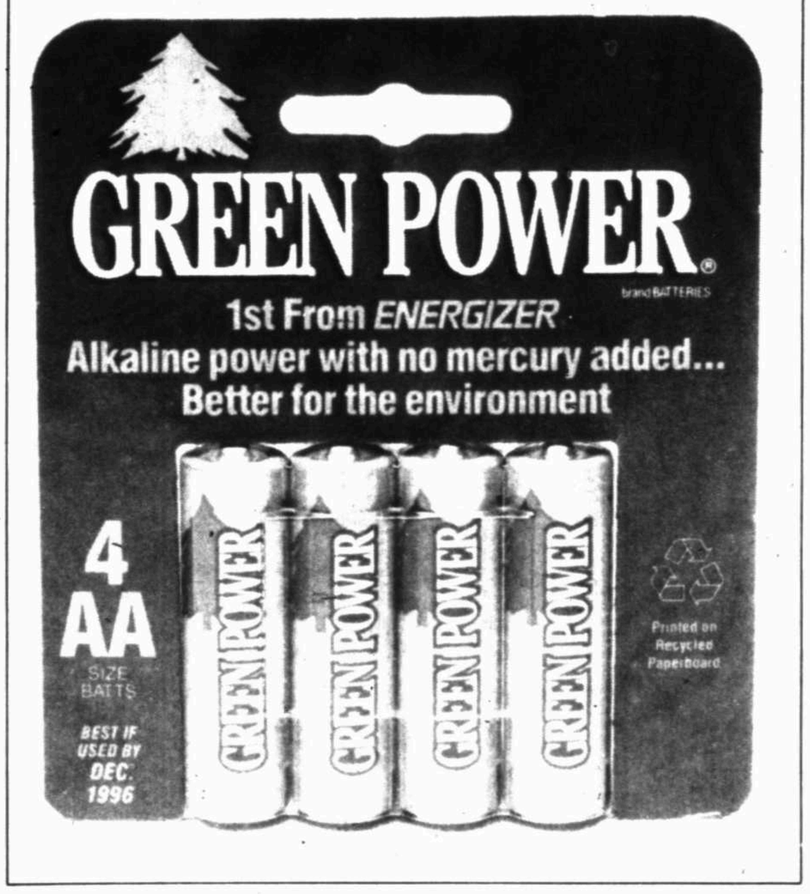

"The consequence of crossing this watershed is that the 1980s era, wherein we were creating debt that financed an extended expansion in economic activity, has now given way to a new era of servicing that debt, which has the reverse effect of slowing the economy," he said.

And the debt, he contended, was caused by the era's "inflation psychology," which encouraged consumers and businesses to spend because any savings would be eroded by rising prices.

In addition to price stability, long-term growth requires "substantially increased investment," he said.

Kelley noted that U.S. investment as a percentage of gross national product is just 4 percent, compared to 20 percent in Japan, 11 percent in Canada and 10 percent in Germany and Italy.

The United States must increase its investments in business capital, public infrastructure and education if it is to remain a leading nation, he said.

Environmental battery

Energizer has introduced "Green Power" a new alkaline battery available without added mercury, and now available in Midland. The batteries contain only naturally occurring trace elements of mercury, less than .0004 percent of total battery composition, while competitive products contain up to 63 times the amount. The new batteries are expected to deliver an average of 92 percent of the performance of leading alkaline batteries, a tradeoff Energizer thinks environmentally minded consumers will accept.

America begins transition toward cleaner motor fuel

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Facing serious air pollution, America is trying to wean its cars from gasoline. The transition toward a cleaner motor fuel won't be quick, but there are signs that gasoline's grip is loosening.

For example, President Bush marked the government's purchase of hundreds of alternative fuel vehicles by taking a spin around the White House driveway last week in a van powered by compressed natural gas.

Automakers are not only beginning to produce more such vehicles but also a limited number of cars, vans and small trucks that run on methanol. And within a few years, auto industry officials say, electric cars will come purring out of showrooms.

Alternative-fuel technology "is here today and it's ready to roll," says Claudia Baker, an executive of the energy commission in California, a state that has vigorously pushed substitute motor fuels to help ease its severe air pollution.

Some energy experts and environmentalists predict that more than 2.5 million vehicles powered by fuels other than gasoline will be on American roads by the end of the decade.

California will require as many as 40,000 electric-powered cars to be sold annually in the state by 1998 and five times that many by the year 2003. Other states, including New York, are on the verge of enacting similar requirements.

New federal clean air rules also call for 150,000 "clean fuel" vehicles to be sold annually in California — and possibly other states — by 1996 and twice than many two years after that. In addition federal law calls for phasing in alternative-fuel fleet vehicles in urban areas with the worst air pollution. At least six states already have incentives or requirements to shift operators of taxicabs, delivery trucks and other fleets away from gasoline or diesel.

In other signs of the future:

■ In Jeffrey Seisler's back yard outside Washington there's a "home fueling appliance" that uses the same natural gas that heats his home to refuel the car he uses each day to go to work.

■ In Sacramento, Calif., a Shell service station, in a joint program with Pacific Gas & Electric, offers not only gasoline but also compressed natural gas. It is among 14 natural gas outlets opened by PG&E, primarily for fleet-owned vehicles, in northern California.

■ As many as 2,000 methanol-powered Chevrolet Lumina sedans will be shipped for sale in California later this year.

Sevin testifies about his role as chip-makers' trial opens

SHERMAN (AP) — The trial between Intel Corp. and two other companies over a multimillion-dollar patent license agreement began Monday with one of the high-tech industry's best-known venture capitalists testifying about his role creating the 1977 deal.

L.J. Sevin, who has put up seed money for Compaq Computer Corp., Cypress Semiconductor, Lotus Development and others, told a federal judge the agreement between Intel and then-Mostek Inc. was designed broadly to prevent lawsuits between them.

But it is now part of a patent battle between Intel, the nation's largest maker of semiconductors, and Richardson-based Cyrix Corp., a 3-year-old designer of chips that speed up math calculations of a computer.

The chips designed by Cyrix are manufactured by SGS-Thomson Microelectronics Inc., the successor company to Mostek, at a plant in Carrollton.

Intel contends Cyrix does not have, through SGS-Thomson, the ability to use technology SGS-Thomson could under the 1977 agreement.

"We made a deal with Mostek, not everyone in the world and certainly not Cyrix," said Thomas Dunlap, general counsel for Intel.

But Sevin, who founded Mostek and was its chairman in 1977, said the agreement protected companies for which Mostek was the manufacturer or "foundry" of chips.

NationsBank files $244 million loss

CHARLOTTE (AP) — NationsBank Corp., created by the merger of NCNB Corp. and C&S-Sovran Corp., reported Monday it lost $244 million, or $1.08 per share, in the fourth quarter of 1991.

Excluding $314 million in merger-related expenses, fourth-quarter earnings would have been $28 million, or 9 cents a common share, the bank said.

For the year, NationsBank posted earnings of $202 million, or 76 cents a share, down 66 percent from the 1990 results. Without merger-related charges of $330 million, the 1991 earnings would have been $489 million, of $2.03 per share, the bank said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Treasury Direct' gives good account of self

By Bill Doyle

Q. You have suggested buying U.S. Treasury securities through a Federal Reserve Bank by opening a "Treasury Direct" account and conducting transactions by mail. That seems to be a viable investment method.

What is the minimum purchase an individual can make with a Treasury Direct account? Is this type of account acceptable for an individual retirement account? Do you have any suggestions concerning the availability of literature about Treasury Direct?

Doyle

A. Minimum denominations for Treasury securities are the same whether you purchase in a Treasury Direct account or in a commercial account at a brokerage firm or commercial bank. The smallest pieces you can buy are $10,000 in Treasury bills, $5,000 in Treasury notes maturing in less than five years, $1,000 in Treasury notes maturing in five to 10 years and $1,000 in Treasury bonds. The last named come in maturities of from more than 10 years to as long as 30 years.

A Treasury Direct account cannot be used as an IRA. As the words indicate, the holder of a Treasury Direct account has direct ownership of the securities in the account. The securities in an IRA are registered in the name of a trustee, who holds the securities for the benefit of the IRA participant.

If you want to have Treasury securities in your IRA, you must set up a self-directed IRA at a brokerage firm or commercial bank. When you go that route, you pay an annual custodial or fiduciary fee and also a fee every time you buy a Treasury security and when the security matures. There are no fees when you have your own Treasury Direct account.

All Federal Reserve Banks and their branches, 37 in total, have detailed literature about Treasury Direct. Your local bank can point you toward the Fed bank or branch serving your area of the country.

Q. Suppose I open my personal Treasury Direct account and buy Treasury bills, notes or bonds, then later have to sell them because of an emergency need for money. Is there a market for those securities?

A. Indeed there is. The U.S. Treasury securities market is the world's most active, with tens (sometimes hundreds) of billions of dollars worth traded every day.

However, you cannot sell Treasury securities directly out of your own Treasury Direct account. To accomplish the sale, the securities must first be transferred out of your personal Treasury Direct account into a commercial account at a brokerage firm or bank and then sold.

Q. Is there a penalty for cashing Treasury securities early?

A. You can't "cash" Treasury securities early. The U.S. Treasury Department redeems each bill, note or bond at face value only on the particular security's maturity date. However, as described in this column's previous answer, you can sell any Treasury security before it matures.

There will be no "penalty," similar to the early withdrawal penalty on a certificate of deposit. But you might receive less money than you paid for the bill, note or bond. For that matter, you might get more. The price you get will depend on the market value of the security on the date you sell.

As with all fixed-income securities — those paying a predetermined rate of interest — the market prices of previously issued Treasury securities rise when interest rates go down and fall when interest rates go up.

Q. Is interest paid on the face amount of Treasury bonds or on the market price of those bonds?

A. On the face amount, of course. The annual interest rate is set when the bond is issued and does not change over the life of the bond. That interest is paid semiannually. The same thing applies to Treasury notes.

Treasury bills, being discount securities, are different. They are issued at a price below face value and redeemed at face value. The difference between the two prices is interest.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pulled back slightly today, giving up some of last week's gains.

Activity was restrained by the absence of many market participants observing a holiday for the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr.

Many banks across the country were closed, and the domestic market for U.S. government securities did not operate.

Among those traders who were present, analyst cited some uneasiness over a recent upswing in interest rates.

They also noted that investors were still busy, as they had been last week, switching money out of high-priced growth stocks into cyclical issues that would stand to benefit most directly from a sustained economic recovery.

Upjohn was actively traded, off 1⅜ at 41¾. A New York Times story quoted critics of the company as saying it concealed data about the side effects of its sleep medication Halcion.

Army unit that helped crush Hitler, defeat Saddam shuts down

By George Boehmer
Associated Press writer

FRANKFURT, Germany — In its 50-year history, soldiers from the U.S. Army's 3rd Armored Division broke through stubborn Nazi defenses, guarded the German border against Communists and helped oust Saddam Hussein from Kuwait.

Now the proud fighting force is shutting down, put out of business by the end of the Cold War.

"I've never served with a better unit," Chief Warrant Officer 4 Harold Rickards, a senior division veteran, said of the "Spearhead," as the unit is nicknamed. The spearhead symbolizes the frequent use of the 3rd Armored to pierce enemy lines during World War II.

Friday, the unit's flag was lowered for the last time at its Drake Casern headquarters in Frankfurt. Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon Sullivan attended the ceremony.

The division's closing is part of a reduction of U.S. Army forces in Europe to less than 150,000, down from more than 210,000 before withdrawals began last year. Most of the soldiers are based in Germany.

For the 3rd Armored Division, the withdrawal marks the end of a 18,000-strong unit whose history spanned 50 years.

"This is my third tour with the 3rd A-D. This is my alma mater division," said Rickards of Wichita, Kan., who spent 12 of his 23 years in the army with the 3rd Armored.

Spec. 4 Shaunte Staten-Johnson, 21, of Annapolis, Md., who served in the Gulf War, called the division her family.

"When you went to the war, the others were the only family you had. Your mother's not there, your father's not there. You have to depend on them," she said.

Fathers and sons have served together in the 3rd Armored, including Maj. Gen. Paul Funk, the division's commander during the Gulf War, and his 29-year-old son, Capt. Paul Funk, Jr.

The elder Funk wrote to his soldiers of the Gulf conflict: "Combat soldiers, I am convinced, have never performed better.

"Spearhead's soldiers fought with the heart, tenacity and fearlessness of a Montana grizzly bear, the guts of an Army mule and the compassion of Bambi's mother," he wrote.

"I am sad to see this great division go away," the younger Funk told The Associated Press. "To have commanded in combat with my father produces tremendous amounts of pride. I can look at the patch on my right shoulder and have not only memories of a great unit but very personal family memories as well."

The Unit was formed in April 1941 at Camp Beauregard, La., then three months later moved to Fort Polk, La., where it was nicknamed "The Bayou Blitz."

In September 1943, the division went to England for training. Then in June 1944, 3rd Armored Division units began landing at Omaha Beach near Isigny, France, to join the war.

Division casualties during World War II were 2,214 killed, 7,451 wounded, and 706 missing in action.

No records exist on how many enemy soldiers were killed, says unit historian Dan Peterson. But he points out that 6,751 enemy vehicles were captured, and 76,720 prisoners of war were taken.

At Mons, Belgium on Sept. 3, 1944, about 30,000 German troops attempting to retreat to their homeland were cut off by the division, with nearly 10,000 taken prisoner. That depleted troops from the Siegfried Line, a line of 3-foot-high cement barriers set up by the Nazis to stop allied tanks at Germany's western border.

After Mons, the division crossed into Germany from Belgium on Sept. 13, becoming the first U.S. unit to capture a German town, Roetgen. It fought in Germany the rest of the war.

Deactivated in November 1945, the division was reactivated in July 1947 at Fort Knox, Ky., to train troops and returned to Europe in May 1956, serving more than 30 years as the front line of defense against the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces.

In December 1990, the division headed to the Persian Gulf.

Former 11-year-old mayor doesn't miss limelight

HOUSTON (AP) — Brian Zimmerman was 11 years old when he caught the country's eye for taking the helm of tiny Crabb, becoming the youngest mayor in the nation.

Now, at the ripe old age of 19, Zimmerman says he doesn't miss the attention and enjoys his job as a travel agent in Houston.

"I wouldn't trade it for anything. I love this business," he told The Houston Post.

Zimmerman was "elected" in an informal grocery store vote in which members of only nine families participated, and Crabb, pop. 125, wasn't even incorporated at the time. Zimmerman momentarily was in the limelight.

He appeared on the "Donahue," "Good Morning, America" and "Today" television shows, was featured in magazines and newspapers and even inspired a movie called "The Lone Star Kid."

Zimmerman now lives with his parents in Crabb, about 30 miles southwest of Houston. He fishes and bowls occasionally, but spends a lot of time doing research for his job, such as reading travel magazines.

His fondest memory of his mayoral days was his trip to Paris for the International Conference of Mayors.

During the trip, he was asked to speak at a town hall meeting in Draguignan, France, where about 15,000 people were expected. When Zimmerman got there, there was an overflow crowd of about 33,000 waiting to hear from the little mayor.

The first question he was asked was to describe the advantages of the American way of life and democracy.

"There's no greater sense of pride," he remembered. "I was proud to represent Crabb, and I was proud to represent the United States.'"

Bushes, Limbaugh make expert's best mannered list

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — President and Mrs. Bush made etiquette expert Marjabelle Young Stuart's list of America's best-mannered citizens released Thursday. So did conservative radio talk show host Rush Limbaugh.

Mrs. Stuart, who has written 17 etiquette books and offers classes nationwide, acknowledged that a talk radio show host was an unlikely choice.

But she said people described him as having "dignity and grace. He takes the cause of the good American."

Mrs. Stuart said she received 827 nominations in her unscientific survey this year. Nominations come from people ranging from journalists to chauffeurs — "people who are up close to high profile people and see them on camera as well as off," she said.

President Bush and the first lady topped the list.

Mrs. Stuart said the way the president handled his illness on his recent trip to Japan showed "incredibly beautiful upbringing." Mrs. Bush, she said, has "a warm and caring feeling toward everyone."

Next on the list was philanthropist David Rockefeller, followed by Oprah Winfrey, magazine editor Walter Anderson and Vice President Dan Quayle.

Mrs. Stuart said the vice president "has remained a perfect gentlemen" despite adverse publicity over the past four years.

"Today" show weatherman Willard Scott, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I, radio commentator Paul Harvey, Secretary of Labor Lynn Martin and Limbaugh rounded out the list.

It's the 14th time Mrs. Stuart has compiled the list. She released it by calling reporters in Charleston.

The reason, she said, is because Charleston regularly makes the list of the nation's 10 best-mannered cities.

"If it's a beautiful manner list, it should come from the South for sure," Mrs. Stuart said from her Illinois home. "If it comes from the South, it should come from Charleston."

Constant thermostat battle heats up house

By Erma Bombeck

My husband has finally hit upon a way to shut me up. During the winter, he keeps the thermostat so low, my body goes into a state of inertia. Sometimes I have no recollection of the months of January, February or March. The other morning I huddled two inches from the TV set watching a rerun of "The Beverly Hillbillies" — just for the heat.

Bombeck

It is bad enough being married to the Prince of Darkness and having your house lighted by fluorescent tape. Add to that a man who plays musical thermostats, and we're talking misery here.

I read a story recently about how most women employees suffer through cold temperatures in the work place. A maintenance engineer noted that more women complained about the cold and more men about the heat, which suggests different body temperatures. It's the same in our home. I say the temperature is perfect — for a wax museum. My husband's answer to white lips and frostbitten feet is, "Put on a sweater."

I grew up in a house where we bought 50 cents worth of coal at a time to heat an eight-room, two-story house. During the winter, seven of the rooms were like meat lockers. Only the kitchen was heated by an oven. I used to run from my bed to the kitchen and jump on a chair (heat rises), where I ate breakfast, dressed and stood around until spring.

I promised myself when I got married, I would die from the heat. That was before I married a man with fur on his chest and antifreeze running through his veins.

It is the one thing we argue about consistently. Just before I climb into bed, I quietly give the thermostat a boot. A voice comes from the darkness, "You know I can't sleep in a hot room."

"This room is freezing."

"It's 70 degrees in here," he mumbles, "That was warm enough for you to go swimming in Florida. Why isn't it warm enough to sleep? What's the difference?"

"We aren't paying $200 a day for this room, that's the difference."

There is quiet for a few seconds.

"My nose is cold," I said.

"That means you're healthy."

"Where did you read that? On an Alpo dog food can?"

"Go to sleep."

"I'm afraid to. I won't wake up."

I hear him sigh at the thermostat. The furnace clicks on.

I've won for today, but tomorrow I do battle again.

Gay men, women indeed are born that way

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When you announced to "Neil's Aunt" that Neil's becoming gay was a combination of nature and nurture, it took my breath away. Where was your usual sensitivity and intelligence?

Van Buren

Parents of gays and lesbians have heard this nonsense all their lives. So, when they learn that they have a homosexual child, they agonize over their role, perceiving it as a family tragedy.

My second son is gay. Never during my pregnancy did I pray for a daughter, nor did I foster gayness with "little girl activities," or inappropriate clothing or behavior during his childhood. He is gay because God made him that way.

My husband and I first felt confusion and guilt when our son came out to us, but with the help of other parents of homosexuals, we came to understand that our son's sexual orientation is normal; it is our culture's fear and hatred that are perverted.

Abby, please remind your readers about the Federation of Parents and Friends of Lesbians and Gays, a group of loving, supportive parents who can help anyone who is troubled about a family member's homosexuality. There are P-FLAG chapters all over the country, and meetings are free.

You may use my name. — RITA BUCKLEY, NEWBURY, CALIF.

DEAR RITA: I have always believed that one's sexuality is not a matter of choice — that homosexuals, like heterosexuals, are born that way. I apologize for my lapse in judgment in buying that "nature-nurture" theory. I knew better and am profoundly contrite.

DEAR ABBY: One of your recent columns discussed whether being gay is the result of nature (biology) or nurture (environment). Newly published research by J.M. Bailey, Ph.D., and R.C. Pillard, M.D., who studied gay men who had twin brothers or adopted brothers, revealed that 52 percent of the identical twin brothers were gay, 22 percent of fraternal (non-identical) twin brothers were gay, and only 11 percent of the adopted brothers were gay. These findings suggest that biology (genetics) plays a substantial role in determining sexual orientation.

But, Abby, within our society, the origin of so much prejudice and hatred directed at gay men and lesbians is a far more critical issue than is the origin of sexual orientation.

Prejudice is a tragedy for everyone. Parents of gay children needlessly agonize and families are disrupted. Gay people suffer emotional and physical trauma. The talents of so many people are consumed in either perpetuating or fighting injustice. What we need is a war on prejudice — and if it is ever won, concerns about nature or nurture will become about as pressing as concerns about the origin of left-handedness. — JAMES KRAJESKI, M.D., CORTE MADERA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Neil's Aunt" contained a disturbing comment. She said, "When his brothers were outside playing baseball, Neil was in the house drawing pictures of flowers."

Abby, please let your readers know that men who play baseball (and other sports) can also be gay. I know, I was signed to a major league's farm team. I am gay. I am one of four brothers and we all played baseball, and none of my brothers are gay. I have no artistic ability, but my brother is a fine violinist. So much for stereotypes. — ROB

DALLAS (AP) — Dave Wannstedt, a finalist for the Pittsburgh Steelers head coaching job, on Monday was promoted by Jimmy Johnson to assistant head coach of the Dallas Cowboys.

Wannstedt will retain his duties as defensive coordinator and linebackers coach, positions he has held for the last three seasons.

Wannstedt was considered a front-runner to take over the Steelers in his native Pittsburgh, Kansas City Chiefs defensive coordinator Bill Cowher is scheduled to be hired by the Steelers today.

In 1991, the Cowboys allowed just 28 touchdowns, second-fewest by a Dallas defense in a 16-game season. Dallas placed eighth in the NFL in rush defense, the team's highest finish against the run since 1987.

Fighter dies

PHOENIX (AP) — Bleeding of the brain killed a 19-year-old Chandler boxer 18 hours after his first amateur fight was stopped by a referee, authorities said Monday.

An autopsy conducted by the Maricopa County Medical Examiner's Office determined that Ramon Gomez died from subdural hematoma, the office said.

Gomez died Sunday at a Phoenix hospital where he underwent surgery.

Officials said the fight was sanctioned by the U.S. Amateur Boxing Federation and that Gomez was a registered fighter who'd trained with a registered coach.

MC stops WTC

■ Steve Green runs his winning streak to five against brother Kelly as MC remains undefeated in conference play with a 94-68 win over Western Texas College.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The spring semester has been all too unkind to the Western Texas College Westerners. Monday night at Chaparral Center, brotherly love played no factor in the outcome, as Steve Green's Midland College Chaparrals roughed up the downtrodden Westerners and Green's brother, Kelly, with a 94-68 thumping.

Ari Rodriques had 21 points and 11 rebounds to lead the Chaparrals in both categories as the Chaps improved to 16-4 overall, 6-0 in Western Junior College Athletic Conference action. WTC fell to 9-9, 2-4.

In other conference action, South Plains defeated Odessa College, 70-43; New Mexico Junior College downed New Mexico Military, 98-76, and Frank Phillips won its first conference game of the season, 89-87 over Clarendon.

After tossing the lead back and forth for the first two minutes, MC finally went ahead 13-11 on a short range jumper by Rodriques. It was the last time the Chaps would have to reclaim the scoring advantage.

Despite dominating in rebounds, and shooting 53.8 percent from the field, the Chaps were not without their problems.

"They have a lot of weapons," WTC head coach Kelly Green said of his brother's team. "but we drove by them time after time. I think if we had a better team, we would've made it a much closer ball game."

With their top two rebounders — Kino Outlaw and Ricardo Hamilton — out of the lineup, WTC was out-rebounded, 48-32. Still, the Chaps allowed 20 offensive boards, and on two trips down the floor the Westerners were able to put up five shots before converting.

"That's the story of our game for the season. Certain guys don't rebound the ball well," Green said of his Chaps. "One other thing I was disappointed with was I don't think we contained them from the point.

"But I'm never pleased. Never. That's the bad thing about coaching. I remember all the bad things, and expect all the good things."

The Chaps, who went on a 17-7 run to open the second half, saw a 24-point lead evaporate down to a 19-point lead with 2:30 remaining. Although the Chaps were in complete control of the game at the time, the diminishing lead prompted MC's Green to call a 20-second timeout while his team was up 85-66.

The timeout was called to avert a problem the Chaps experienced earlier in the season when MC would hold a commanding lead only to see it dwindle down to nothing before recapturing control. Against the upper echelon teams like Howard and South Plains, the Chaps have tended to play a better brand of ball, while stumbling somewhat against struggling squads like Frank Phillips (when MC had 35 turnovers) and WTC.

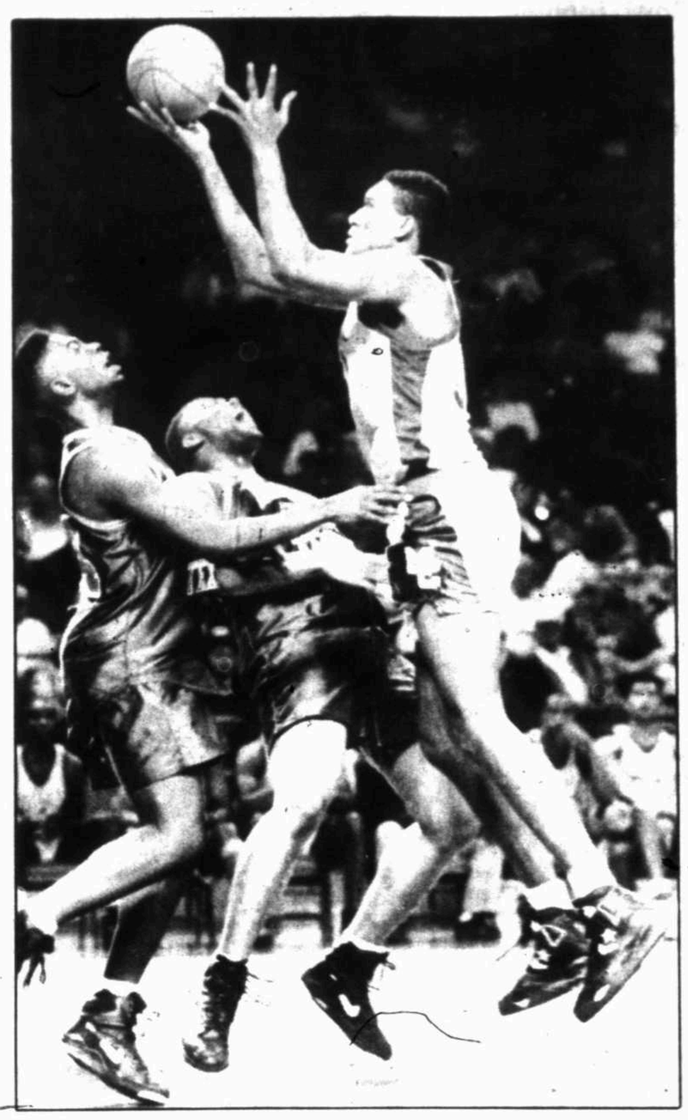

"So far this season we've controlled the tempo most all of the time," Steve Green said. "A team that focuses on defense is going to do that. But you've got to appreciate the value of possessing the ball.

"We're 20 games into the season. Maybe physically we cannot outrun people. We've somewhat changed our style. We've had to."

As for the Westerners, just when Kelly Green thought the corner had been turned, there's another corner up ahead.

"From game to game we're a different team," he said. "We've got to develop some type of

Fuzzy 4-5A comes into focus a bit

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

With the girls completing the first half of the District 4-5A basketball schedule and the boys playing their fourth round of games, the league playoff picture is still fuzzy but starting to come somewhat into focus.

The Midland High girls and Midland Lee boys will both be at home tonight against Odessa teams, while the MHS boys and Lee girls hit the road for Midland's sister city.

The Rebels will try to maintain their tie for second place in the boys race when they host Odessa High in the Chaparral Center. The Lady Bulldogs are at home in the MHS gymnasium against Odessa Permian, while the Bulldogs go to Permian and the Lee girls visit OHS. All games are at 8 p.m.

For the Lee boys, 14-10 overall and 2-1 in district, the task will be to try and pull into a first-place tie with 3-1 Abilene High, which is open tonight. The Rebs are coming off an open date of their own after falling 63-61 at Permian last Tuesday, a loss that dropped them from the ranks of the district unbeaten and into a second-place tie with Permian and Abilene Cooper, both of which are 2-1.

Though the loss last week discouraged Rebel head coach Jon House, he said Lee is ready to forget about it.

"We needed to win that one. If you're going to win this district you have got to win on the road. But we have to put that out of our minds and get ready for Odessa High," he said.

The Rebs still have three players averaging in double figures, as Wayne Wilson comes in at 18.9 ppg, Martin Latti-

Ground assaults contrast

■ The Redskins and the Bills have different ways and means of moving the ball on the ground.

AP Football Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — The Washington Redskins use three running backs for three purposes. The Buffalo Bills have three running backs on their roster, period.

One of them is Thurman Thomas, so they don't really need any help.

The Bills led the league in rushing this year and the Redskins were seventh. They got there, though, in different ways.

Buffalo, playing on artificial turf, got 1,407 yards from Thomas, who squirmed and darted his way to 4.9 yards a carry and also caught 61 passes. The only other back to get appreciable playing time was Kenneth Davis, who managed 624 yards as a short yardage specialist. He also played when Thomas needed a breather, in fourth quarters of blowouts and in a meaningless that Thomas missed.

Washington's system is multilayered.

The normal procedure is to start Earnest Byner, who was the NFC's fourth leading rusher with 1,048

Fernandez tiptoes into semifinals

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Monica Seles barely dodged fellow grunt-and-slug teen Anke Huber, and Mary Joe Fernandez got through Tuesday at the Australian Open to reach the semifinals for the third straight year.

Fernandez overcame a jammed toe that needed lengthy treatment during her match against American compatriot Amy Frazier, then fought back from deficits in the second set and tiebreaker to win 6-4, 7-6 (8-6).

Not so lucky was Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, who strained tendons around the big toe of her right foot in doubles Monday and defaulted her quarterfinal singles match Tuesday against Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, who next meets Seles.

Fernandez, a runner-up to Steffi Graf here two years ago, broke Frazier twice when she served for the second set, and won four consecutive games from 2-5 to go ahead 6-5 in the second set.

Fernandez, 20, from Miami, Fla., jammed her toe late in the first set, and asked for a time out after her service was broken to 1-2 in the second set. A trainer padded the toe, but Fernandez then went through a bout of wildness on serve. She double-faulted at 40-30 and eventually was broken again when she slapped a forehand wide.

Frazier, more aggressive and taking more chances on both her groundstrokes and at the net, blew several opportunities to push the match into a third set.

"She doesn't have much margin for error," Fernandez said of Frazier's style.

The 19-year-old from Rochester Hills, Mich., hit two unforced errors on forehands after leading 5-2 in the tiebreaker. Fernandez then tied it at 5-5 with a lovely forehand dropshot on a short ball, and went ahead 6-5 on a long backhand by Frazier. Fernandez returned the favor to make it 6-6, then took the match when Frazier netted a forehand and a backhand on the next two points.

"I love playing down here," Fernandez said. "Hopefully, the third time (in the semis) will be lucky for me. I know I'm competing well and playing well, but I still don't play the way I practice. A lot of it's mental."

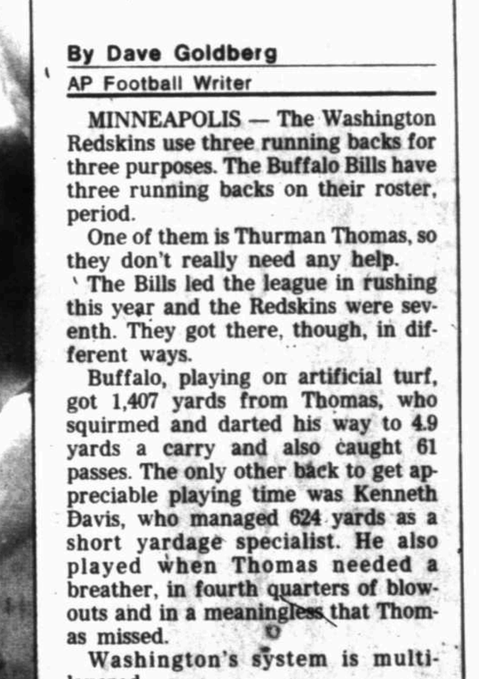

She said she has to be more aggressive and go for winners more than she's been doing.

"I'm not going to win the tournament if I don't," said Fernandez, who plays the winner of Jennifer Capriati-Gabriela Sabatini match Tuesday night.

Seles, the 18-year-old defending champion, fought off breakpoints in every game of the second set before finally prevailing 7-5, 6-3 in the quarters against a 17-year-old German who could match her strength but not quite her consistency.

Seles led 4-1 in the first set, and had six breakpoints off Huber in the sixth game. But the gritty, grunting Huber held after eight deuces, and finally pulled even at 5-5.

Cowher to replace, not imitate Noll

■ Steelers select Pittsburgh native to replace the only coach with four Super Bowl trophies.

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers didn't intend to hire another Chuck Noll, and team president Dan Rooney will advise new coach Bill Cowher to not try to imitate one of the most successful coaches in pro sports history — the only coach to win four Super Bowls.

Still, Cowher's resume is strikingly similar to Noll's when the Steelers hired the then relatively unknown Baltimore Colts' assistant in 1969.

Cowher, 34, will become the NFL's second-youngest coach and the 15th in Steelers' history when he is introduced Tuesday at a news conference. The formal announcement was delayed a day due to Monday's Martin Luther King Day holiday.

Cowher, the Kansas City Chiefs' defensive coordinator for three years, accepted the job Sunday during a meeting with Rooney and his son, Art II, and director of football operations Tom Donahoe before returning to his Kansas City home. He wasn't taking phone calls from the news media prior to Tuesday's announcement.

"I know Bill, and he's a class guy," said Dallas Cowboys defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt, the other Steelers' finalist. "I wish Bill and the Steelers well."

Cowher is a son of Pittsburgh who grew up only five minutes from Three Rivers Stadium, so there won't be any "Bill Who?" headlines like those that greeted Noll upon his Jan. 27, 1969 hiring.

Like Noll, Cowher's credentials are much better known within the NFL than they are to the casual fan, and, like Noll, he entered coaching at an early age after stretching his ability to the max as a player.

Like Noll, he quickly established himself as one of the NFL's top assistant coaches and was praised for being demanding but fair. Like Noll, Cowher played for the Cleveland Browns, the Steelers' biggest rival.

And, just like Noll, Cowher clinched the job when he impressed Dan Rooney during one of their several face-to-face interviews. But Rooney doesn't want his new coach to try to emulate a future Hall of Famer.

"You can't emulate anybody," he said. "In many cases, people who tried to follow legends tried to emulate the legends and they weren't themselves. That comes through quickly."

Cowher's father was elated when he heard the news, which prompted a flood of congratulatory phone calls to the family's home in the Crafton section of Pittsburgh.

"I almost fell over when I heard the news," said Laird "Bill" Cowher, Bill's former Pony League baseball coach. "To work your way up to be the coach of your hometown team is quite an honor. It's something out of a storybook."

The elder Cowher, 69, a former Steelers' season ticket holder, recalls taking Bill to Steelers' games at Forbes Field and Pitt Stadium before Three Rivers opened in 1970.

"When (Noll retired), I knew they might talk to Bill, but I wouldn't let myself dare to think he'd become the coach," the elder Cowher said. "To say the least, it will cut our travel bill. I won't have to travel 1,400 miles to watch my son coach anymore."

The road Cowher took to the Steelers' coaching job was considerably longer. A four-sport star at Carlynton High School, he wasn't recruited by hometown Pitt and instead signed to play for coach Lou Holtz at North Carolina State, where he was captain as a senior.

He was a Browns linebacker for three seasons, then spent two years in Philadelphia and was named the Eagles' special teams MVP in 1984. When a knee injury ended his career a year later, Browns coach Marty Schottenheimer immediately asked him to become his special teams coach.

Cowher accompanied Schottenheimer, also a Pittsburgh-area native, to Kansas City as defensive coordinator and linebackers coach in 1989. The Chiefs had the AFC's top-ranked defense in 1989 and led the NFL in sacks, fumble recoveries and takeaways in 1990. Their linebackers, including Derrick Thomas, are considered among the NFL's best.

Schottenheimer said Cowher is, too.

"He's bright, highly organized and well motivated," Schottenheimer said. "I think he can put together a good staff. He'll do a fine job."

Lindy Infante, fired last month as the Green Bay Packers' coach, already has been mentioned as the successor to offensive coordinator Joe Walton, as has former Southern Cal coach Ted Tollner.

Cowher will choose his assistant coaches, but veteran assistant Dick Hoak, a Steelers player or coach for 32 years, and special teams coach George Stewart may stay. Defensive line coach Joe Greene, under consideration to succeed Noll until last Friday, probably won't be retained because his high profile might prove distracting to Cowher.

Greene, 11 years older than Cowher but less experienced as a coach, said Rooney told him he wouldn't get the job because "he didn't think it was my time yet."

Greene turned down at least one other assistant's job, on new Tampa Bay coach Sam Wyche's staff, while awaiting word from the Steelers. However, he now plans to actively seek another assistant's job.

Cowher's hiring will mark not only the end of the Noll era, but the start of the Steelers' most significant facelift in nearly a quarter-century. It's a facelift that may be overdue for a franchise that was 113-48-1 during the 1970s but is 78-80 in the last 10 years.

Not only will there be a new, youthful coach — only Cincinnati's David Shula, 32, is younger — but Donahoe has more power than any Steelers' administrator who wasn't named Rooney. In effect, he will be the Steelers' first general manager since Art Rooney Sr. founded the team in 1933.

Also, Art Rooney II, a prominent Pittsburgh attorney and the heir apparent Steelers president, is being eased into a more significant role as his father spends more time on league affairs.

"As for the future, it's a wonderful thing," Rooney said. "The challenge of life is great. This is a new era, and it's going to be fun."

consistency.

"If you'd asked me (about how long developing consistency would take) after we beat Odessa, I'd say any day now. But now we've had all these things happen to us. You're healthy until you lose your right toe and your left toe."

And as for falling to 0-5 in games played against his brother, Kelly Green, who coached at Frank Phillips for two seasons before moving to Snyder, said it's not that big a deal to him.

"I haven't beaten Ron Mayberry (at South Plains) or Ron Black (at New Mexico) yet either. I hadn't beaten Dennis Helms (at Odessa) until this year."

The game was hampered by slow play in the first half, which took 51 minutes to complete. Twenty-two personal fouls were called inside the game's first 20 minutes.

"I hate three officials. Quote, unquote," MC's Green said. "I don't have anything against anyone in particular, and I'm not saying they're doing a bad job. They're just seeing too much and it's not necessary. I'll fight till the end to get two again."

The Chaps take their unbeaten show on the road Thursday to Hobbs, N.M., against New Mexico Junior College. The T-Birds, ranked No. 16 in the latest NJCAA poll, are 17-2 overall and 5-1 in conference, one game behind the Chaps. Tip-off will be at 8 p.m. (MST), 9 p.m. Midland time.

yards. Byner's specialty is Washington's specialty, the counter gap, which did so much for John Riggins and tends to keep opponents off balance.

Once they are off balance, enter Ricky Ervins, a darting, slashing rookie whose style, if not ability, is more like Thomas. Just as a defender gets used to Byner's style, Ervins comes in and sprints past him.

And on a third-and-1 or at the goal line, it's Gerald Riggs, a one-time 1,000-yard rusher with Atlanta who at age 31 has become primarily a short-yardage man. In 78 carries, he has 11 touchdowns. In two playoff games, he's got six carries for 12 yards and four TDs.

But the focus among the running backs in Sunday's Super Bowl is Thomas, who despite his honors this year — NFL MVP and offensive player of the year — feels he's unrecognized because he plays in a small-market city. He still thinks he should have been MVP in last year's Super Bowl, when he rushed for 135 yards in 15 carries, and caught five passes for 55 yards in a 20-19 loss to the New York Giants.

He says he uses that for motivation.

"I think it started when I was growing up. I was always small, always the smallest guy doing something. And it always kind of bothered me, people saying, 'Well, you're too small to do this, you're too small to do that,'" says Thomas, who has grown up to 5-foot-10 and 198 pounds.

"Don't even try it. You can't do it. Things like that have always motivated me toward doing something I know I can do when other people say I can't do it."

Thomas has other incentives.

In the 1988 draft, he was a second-round choice in a draft in which six running backs were taken in the first round. One reason was reconstructive knee surgery after his junior year at Oklahoma State — he only went as high as he did because the Bills used the traditional "let's look at the film" line.

"We got lucky," says general manager Bill Polian. "He flunked our first physical with us before the draft but he had played so well that we convinced our doctors to actually watch the videotape of the operation. They looked again and the knee looked better so we went ahead and took him."

The Redskins also got lucky with Byner, who gained 1,002 yards in 1985 for Cleveland but had fallen out of favor with the Browns because of some high-profile mistakes, notably a fumble in the 1987 AFC title game as he was headed for the end zone with the tying touchdown in Denver.

So during the 1989 draft, the Redskins obtained him for Mike Oliphant a kick returner and receiver who has produced for neither Washington nor Cleveland. He soon developed into the heavy-duty back the Redskins had been seeking since Riggins retired in 1985, gaining 1,219 yards in 1990.

"It's the best trade I've ever been associated with," coach Joe Gibbs says bluntly.

Cowboys nip OU in Oklahoma battle

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Darwyn Alexander equaled his career high with 24 points, including two free throws with five seconds left, lifting No. 3 Oklahoma State to a 92-89 victory over No. 17 Oklahoma Monday night and giving the Cowboys their best start ever.

Top 25

Oklahoma State (17-0) surpassed the mark of 16-0 set by the 1950-51 team and is 3-0 in the Big Eight for the first time since 1980-81. The Cowboys snapped an 11-game losing streak in Norman.

Oklahoma (11-3, 1-2), couldn't make up a 14-point second-half deficit and was held to 43-percent shooting.

The Sooners pulled within 90-89 when Terry Evans hit a 3-pointer with 32 seconds left. The Cowboys then worked 27 seconds off the clock before Alexander was fouled.

Alexander, an 80-percent foul shooter, made both shots. Brent Price then missed a 3-pointer in the final seconds. Price led Oklahoma with 26 points, 18 in the second half.

Seton Hall 75, No. 22 St. John's 60

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Terry Dehere scored 23 of his season-high 31 points in the first half when Seton Hall took control and the Pirates ended a three-game losing streak.

The Big East game was the first this season for Seton Hall (10-5, 3-4) as an unranked team, and the Pirates played like a team that was desperate for a win. They hounded St. John's (10-5, 4-3) on defense, took advantage of the Redmen's manpower problems in the front-court, and got a big game from Dehere, whose previous season-high had been 23.

Victims of carbon monoxide fumes released from hospital

DALLAS (AP) — A college basketball player, two assistant coaches and six other people were released Monday from a Dallas hospital where they were treated for carbon monoxide poisoning.

They were overcome Saturday night when a heater system malfunctioned at Baylor's Ferrell Center in Waco before a game between Texas A&M and Baylor. They were the worst of dozens stricken when fumes invaded the visitor's locker room and a hospitality room.

Aggies senior forward Anthony Ware and the others were released after psychological testing and a night of observation, said Ellen Lytle, a spokeswoman at Humana Hospital-Medical City Dallas. Doctors said their prognoses were good.

All had been placed in a hyperbaric oxygen decompression chamber to speed their recovery Sunday, but Ware was removed because of a sinus infection, Dr. David Turner said. Ware received oxygen via a face mask.

A hyperbaric chamber forces oxygen into the body at up to three times normal air pressure. That helps to flush out carbon monoxide, Turner said.

Ware said the increased pressure gave him "the worst headache of my life."

Fumes entered the locker room when gusty winds and an open door caused a backdraft, sending exhaust gases that should have gone up a chimney down into the boiler room, Baylor spokesman Mike Bishop said.

The arena was evacuated and the game was postponed.

Dozens of other people were treated and released at two Waco hospitals. The nine worst victims, including Ware, assistant coach Mitch Buonaguro, team graduate assistant John Pigatti and game official David Hall, were taken to Dallas for further treatment.

Southwest Conference commissioner Fred Jacoby saw them off at the airport Monday.

Texas A&M basketball trainer Mike Ricke and freshman guard Tony McGinnis were released from a Waco hospital Sunday afternoon.

"We feel pretty lucky because it could have been a lot worse," Texas A&M coach Tony Barone said. "I don't believe people understand how terrible a situation it was. People die from carbon monoxide."

Ware said he realized something was terribly wrong during pregame warmup drills.

"Everybody was throwing the ball, hitting each other in the face, throwing it into the stands, bumping each other," Ware said. "We couldn't catch the ball. We started just walking around. ... and that's when it got bad. Everybody started getting disoriented."

"The kids are pretty shaken," Barone said. "First of all, these young men had something happen that couldn't be explained at first. Then you compound the situation with fear. ... The next thing you know a person is trying to put an oxygen mask on your face and you're having blood withdrawn from your arm."

The schools will meet this week to determine what to do about a makeup game. There is a possibility the game will be rescheduled only if it will have a bearing on the seedings in the SWC postseason tournament, conference spokesman Bo Carter said.

Texas A&M postponed indefinitely its Wednesday night game against Texas Southern.

MCS Mustangs earn split in four games at Abilene tournament

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Midland Christian School boys basketball team won two games and lost two games over the weekend at the Abilene Christian Schools basketball tournament.

The Mustangs, who downed Ft. Worth Southwest Christian 67-56 to open the tourney, dropped their second game 80-45 to Class 3A member Dallas Christian and entered the consolation round. There, the Mustangs dropped district rival Abilene Christian 52-51 before falling to consolation winner Lubbock Christian, 44-41 when a last-ditch three-point bomb missed its mark.

Chad Bayley scored 16 points, Alan Weaver had 14 and Sammy Cox and Jody Duncan poured in 12 and 10 points respectively in the opening-round win.

Weaver, who was named to the all-tourney team, dropped in 14 against Dallas Christian.

Bayley and Cox each scored 12 against AC, and Brian Fairchild's nine points paced MCS in the finale.

MCS resumes play tonight in both girls and boys action when Rankin makes its final visit of the season to the Mustang Gym. The Red Devils hold a 2-1 edge over MCS in boys action this season.

MHS soccer team loses opener

Staff Report

LUBBOCK — The Midland High School soccer team opened the 1992 non-district season Monday with a 3-2 loss to the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen.

The Bulldogs, tied 1-1 with Monterey at the half, took the lead in the first minute of the second half when Tony Walker scored. Walker was assisted by Emmanuel Sanon.

Monterey knotted the game at 2-2 just 30 seconds later, and went ahead at the 10 minute mark of the second half for the final 3-2 margin.

"The field was very muddy," MHS soccer coach Tom Esikhati said. "Both teams played extremely well considering the muddy field.

"Monterey has a very good team and we had to play a very good game to beat them. We just didn't play a very good game."

MHS's first goal came in the first half when Greg Pinkerton scored in the 27th minute. Brian Robey was credited with an assist on the goal.

The Bulldogs had 12 shots on goal, Monterey nine. MHS goalie Jeremy Hernandez had seven saves.

The Bulldogs were carded for 14 fouls, Monterey 16.

MHS competes this weekend in the San Antonio Alamo Heights tournament, and will open District 3 play January 28 against Midland Lee.

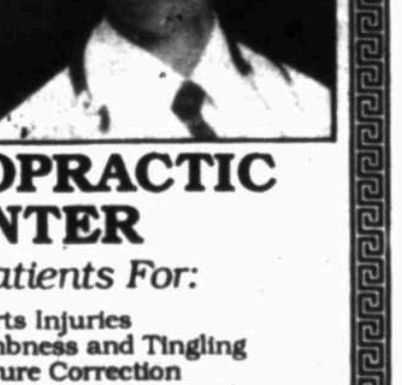

The Rebels are in action this weekend at the Abilene tournament.

Injury-riddled Celtics get third straight win

Associated Press

NBA

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Reggie Lewis scored 26 points and Robert Parish had 20 including the go-ahead hook shot with a minute left as the Boston Celtics beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 107-102 Monday.

The win was the third straight for the injury-riddled Celtics, playing without Larry Bird and Kevin McHale. Cleveland, which was missing injured starters Larry Nance and Brad Daugherty, lost for the third time in its last four games, all at home.

The Cavaliers trailed most of the second half but scored six straight points — two by Mark Price and four by John Williams — to take a 100-99 lead on Williams' driving layup with 1:27 to go.

Lakers 116, Sonics 110

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Sam Perkins scored 17 of his 25 points in the first half to lead Los Angeles over Seattle.

A.C. Green had 16 points and 16 rebounds and Sedale Threatt had 15 points for the Lakers, who have won six of their last eight games and beaten Seattle 16 consecutive times at the Forum, including playoff games.

The loss was the first for the Sonics under interim coach Bob Kloppenburg, who replaced the fired K.C. Jones last week. George Karl is expected to be named coach of the Sonics later in the week.

Knicks 105, Pacers 97

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing scored 25 points and grabbed 14 rebounds and New York held Indiana to six points in the final 7:16 as the Knicks rallied for a victory that snapped a three-game losing streak.

New York trailed 91-87 with 7:16 remaining, but used a 9-0 spurt over the next 3:38 to gain the lead 96-91. Anthony Mason capped the run with a three-point play.

Indiana got as close as two points after that, 96-94, when Chuck Person made 1 of 2 foul shots with 2:19 left. But the Pacers hit only one field goal in the final 7:16 and were 5 of 10 from the foul line in the fourth quarter.

Warriors 135, Hornets 119

OAKLAND, CAlif. — Chris Mullin scored 29 points and Golden State exploited Charlotte's sloppy play at both ends of the court to defeat the Hornets.

Golden State, which had eight players score in double-figures, riddled Charlotte's interior defense, scoring 74 points from in the key. The Warriors also grabbed 18 offensive rebounds, which led to 24 second-chance points.

On the offensive end, the Warriors forced the Hornets to commit 25 turnovers, two shy of Charlotte's season high, and converted the miscues into 34 points.

Heat 121, Timberwolves 106

MIAMI — Kevin Edwards scored all of his 16 points in the final 13½ minutes and the Miami Heat handed Minnesota its fifth straight.

Edwards scored five points as the Heat closed the third quarter with an 11-2 run for an 87-78 lead.

Minnesota responded with the first eight points of the final period, four by Thurl Bailey, to make it 87-84 with 9:54 to play.

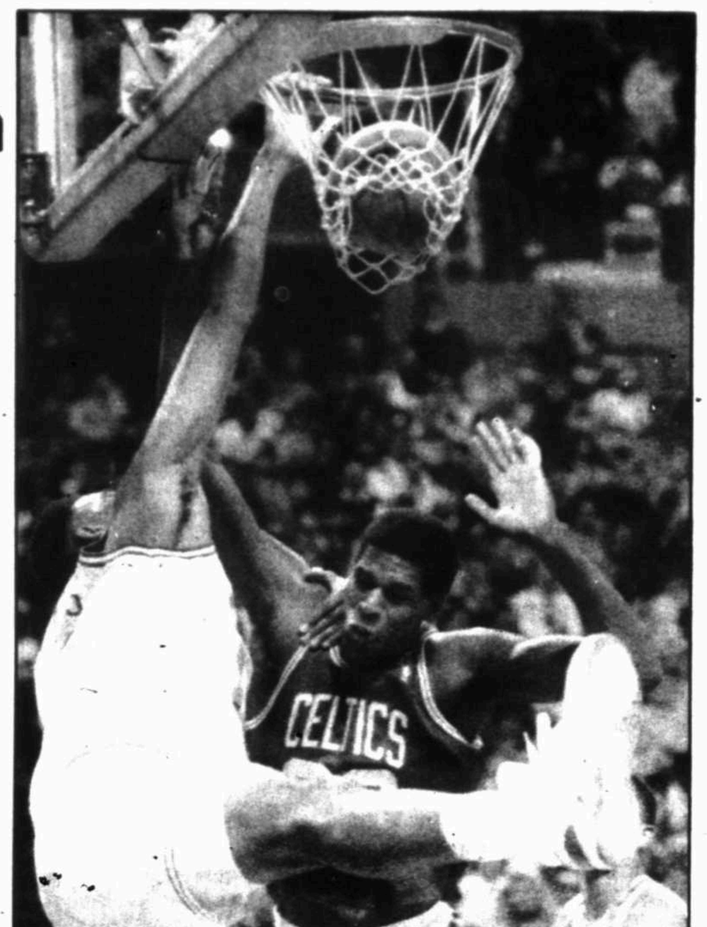

Miami then put the game out of reach with a 16-7 spurt that featured eight points and a steal by Edwards and that gave the Heat a 103-91 advantage at the 3:59 mark.

Glen Rice had 22 points for Miami and while Grant Long had 21. Rony Seikaly added 20 points and 15 rebounds.

76ers 99, Bullets 91

PHILADELPHIA — Hersey Hawkins scored 24 points and Armon Gilliam had 20 points and 12 rebounds as the injury-riddled 76ers defeated Washington.

Starting center Charles Shackleford was out with a pulled hamstring and Mitchell Wiggins did not play for Philadelphia because of a sprained ankle. With Dave Hoppen, Brian Oliver and Jayson Williams were already on the injured list, the 76ers had only nine healthy players.

OPEN: Courier looks to final with John McEnroe

(From 1C)

After Seles held, she took the set on her third breakpoint when Huber weakened for a moment and double-faulted for the second time in the game.

Seles broke Huber twice in a row to take a 4-1 lead again in the second set, but once more the German struggled back and had chances to press her with breakpoints.

Huber's last opportunity came when Seles hit a forehand that was called long. Seles questioned the call, which put Huber ahead 30-40, but then came back to smack a service winner for deuce. She got her first matchpoint on Huber's backhand return long. But after Huber saved it with a forehand winner on the line, Seles hit another service winner, and finished off the match with a clean forehand winner down the line.

"I think the match was a lot closer than 7-5, 6-3," Seles said. "I just had a little more luck. She was hitting very hard, and not missing many balls."

"I played the important points not good enough," Huber said. "I made too many unforced errors on game point. Perhaps you have to come to the net more against her, but it's difficult."

Temperatures cooled down considerably on Tuesday, a day after the Australian Open turned into a colossal steambath — courts sizzling at 127 degrees, players wobbling out of matches, fans fainting in their seats.

Medics treated about 20 fans of all ages who passed out in the heat, and several who suffered other symptoms of heatstroke.

Jim Courier delighted in the weather, dancing lightly in conditions that reminded him of home in Florida, complete with the same kind of lung-scalding breezes that buffet the courts where he honed his game.

Courier, the No. 2 seed, pounded shots as hard as ever to beat Marc Rosset 6-3, 6-1, 6-3, and reach his fourth consecutive Grand Slam quarterfinal. The goal now: a match against John McEnroe.

"Absolutely," Courier said. "That'd mean I'm in the final. I'd love to play him."

Courier beat McEnroe in a tune-up tournament in Adelaide, but was more impressed with him during practice.

While Courier escaped to the air-conditioned comfort of the player's lounge after beating Rosset, a fellow American suffered in the heat.

Aaron Krickstein, a Michigan man with a reputation as one of the game's great marathoners, felt nauseous and woozy in the fifth set against Amos Mansdorf and retired 6-2, 4-6, 1-6, 7-6 (7-4), 4-1.

Krickstein, who was fine a short while later, said he had diarrhea before the match and began feeling stomach pains during the fourth set.

Mansdorf, a former Israeli soldier used to desert heat, drank his way out of trouble.

"I felt very tired in the middle of the second set," said Mansdorf, who next meets Courier. "I felt like I was getting sunstroke."

Deal makes Nokes millionaire

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Matt Nokes tied Brian Harper for the top salary among catchers, agreeing Monday to a $7.5 million, three-year contract with the New York Yankees.

Nokes, who made $887,500 last season, gets a $750,000 signing bonus and annual salaries of $2.25 million under a deal that was essentially completed last week and announced Monday. His average annual salary of $2.5 million matches the $5 million, two-year deal that Harper and the Minnesota Twins agreed to Dec. 19.

Three other players settled Monday, leaving 130 players remaining in arbitration. Reliever Rob Dibble and Cincinnati agreed on a one-year deal for $1.4 million, while infielder Dave Magadan and the New York Mets split the difference and settled at $1,393,750.

Catcher B.J. Surhoff and Milwaukee settled for a $2.15 million, non-guranteed contract, the same deal they agreed to last Thursday and unagreed to on Friday.

Nokes, 28, would have been eligible for free agency after the 1992 season. He hit .268 in 1991 with 77 RBIs and led the Yankees with 24 home runs, the most homers for a Yankees catcher since Elston Howard hit 28 in 1963.

"Matt was outstanding for us last season both at the plate and behind it, and we expect him to continue that success," Yankees general manager Gene Michael said. "We are very pleased he has made this commitment to the organization."

Nokes had asked for $2.6 million in arbitration last Friday while the Yankees had offered $1.9 million.

Magadan made $1.25 million in an injury-plagued 1991, when he slumped to a .258 average with four homers and 51 RBIs. The Mets had offered a 5 percent cut to $1,187,500 and the infielder had asked for $1.6 million.

"Someone would ask, 'Why did we offer a cut and give him a raise?'" Mets general manager Al Harazin said. "It's all part of the process. It's a give and take. We're just glad we got it done. It's one less possible arbitration."

Dibble, eligible for arbitration for the first time, had asked for $1.8 million and Cincinnati had offered $1 million. In addition to his base salary, Dibble would get a $50,000 bonus for appearing in 60 games. Last year, he made $500,000.

Dibble was 3-5 with a 3.17 ERA in 1991, when he appeared in 67 games and had a career-high 31 saves.

Surhoff, 27, hit .289 last season with five homers.

Oregon State player succumbs to blood-clotting disorder, dies

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Earnest Killum, who returned to playing basketball despite a blood-clotting disorder, died Monday, an Oregon State official said.

Oregon State basketball sports information director Steve Fenk said Killum, a 20-year-old, 6-foot-4 sophomore, died at Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital.

Killum, a prize recruit who only gained medical clearance to join the team in late December, collapsed at a hotel Friday and lapsed into a coma on Sunday.

"When I start talking about it, I get kind of choked up because you feel for the mother and the family," Oregon State coach Jim Anderson said Monday before learning of Killlum's death.

Killum, who was named the California 5-A prep player of the year in 1989, suffered a mild stroke last July. A blood clot was removed from his left arm two days later. Other, inoperable clots were discovered, including one in the main artery leading to Killum's brain.

Killum, who had to sit out his freshman season because of academic problems, found his college career was in jeopardy without him ever playing a game.

Doctors began treating him with Coumadin, an anticoagulant drug whose side effects include "an increase in bruisability or an increase in bleeding," said Gae Ryan, assistant director of pharmacy at University Hospital in Portland.

The risk of internal injuries seemed great if Killum was allowed to play basketball. But his condition improved and after a battery of tests were conducted at Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland, he was cleared to join the team Dec. 27.

A specialist, who asked Oregon State officials that he not be identified, determined that the anticoagulant dosage could be reduced to lessen the risk of a bleeding injury.

4-5A: Girls finish up first half of cage season today

(From 1C)

beaudiere 15.3 and David Wilson 12.3. In order to stay in the game, Lee will have try to slow down Broncho Avery Thomas, who burned MHS for 30 points a week ago.

While House and the Rebs can take comfort in the fact they have only one 4-5A loss, the Lady Bulldogs are in much more dire straits.

The MHS girls are coming off a 54-45 loss to San Angelo Friday, a defeat that sent their record to 16-7 and, more importantly, 2-3 in district.

Seniors Sally Gibson and Ashley Chase are leading MHS in scoring, with Gibson scoring 14 points a game and Chase 10.

A win would bring the Lady 'Dawgs back to the .500 mark with six games remaining in the 4-5A race, but Abilene is sitting in first place with a perfect 6-0 loop mark and Lee is 4-1 heading into tonight's game.

That brings us to the Lady Rebels, undoubtedly the most surprising team in the first half.

Lee is 5-8 in non-district games and has nobody with a double-figure average in scoring. The Lady Rebs just win when it counts.

Under first-year head coach Elise Kail, Lee has only lost one league game, by three points to AHS in Abilene. Though they were open Friday, the Lady Rebels helped their drive for a playoff berth considerably when they downed Permian 48-40 last Tuesday.

Tekeira Strambler is Lee's leading scorer with 9.7 points a game, while Lachette Crisp comes in at 9.3

For the MHS boys, who gained their first district win Friday with a 75-56 victory at San Angelo, things certainly look brighter today.

After getting off to an 0-3 start in 4-5A, the Bulldogs are now 12-10 overall and 1-3 in district. With eight league games still to play, the 'Dawgs are just 2½ games out of first place and two away from second.

Antwan Goodley is MHS' leading scorer with a 15.1 average, while Mike Melzer scores 13.1 points a game.

WHAT! NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your 'day job.' Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 90% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $300-$800 monthly AFTER expenses, some even more!

The catch? You've gotta be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING, or what? If you are, and you have dependabletransportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

Collectors Needed

The Reporter-Telegram needs honest, dependable individuals to do independent contract collections from subscribers on routes without Carriers. We pay a 15% commission on the amount collected. This opportunity provides flexible hours, and an opportunity to earn an excellent hourly dollar amount. This is independent contract work and requires you to furnish your own transportation. We will provide audited collection books, and expect collections turned in daily.

The offer which best serves the Interest of VA will be processed for acceptance. We will accept cash offers up to 5 percent below the advertised term sales price. VA also will pay reasonable loan discount points and buyers' closing costs on cash offers when requested on the the Cash Sale Addendum to Offer to Purchase. However the combined loan discount points, buyers' closing costs to be paid by VA and the discount for cash may not exceed 5 percent of the term list price. Interest rate of available vendee financing is 8.0 percent (APR 8.25 percent). Purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing (Term Sales) must have VA Form 26-6705B, Credit Statement of Prospective Purchaser. The underwriting of offers requesting VA vendee financing will be completed by VA staff at no cost to the purchaser. To expedite the underwriting process, brokers are encouraged to submit a complete package to VA with the Offer to Purchase. This includes: a) recent copies of pay stubs, a completed, signed copy of last year's federal tax return and a copy of the latest IRS Form W-2, Wage and Tax Statement (or) a Verification of Employment, VA Form 26-8497, completed by the employer b) signed SR statements required by the sales listing c) verification of self-employment to include completed, signed copies of the last two year's federal income tax returns, including all schedules, and a year-to-date profit and loss statement which has been prepared and signed by an accountant d) current schedule of all real estate owned, to include all current rental/lease agreements e) past three months of bank statements, and f) any other information pertinent to the underwriting of the offer. Purchase offers not accompanied by this required information MAY BE REJECTED FOR FAILURE TO COMPLY.

FORFEITURE OF EARNEST MONEY DEPOSIT
Prior to signing the offer the broker must deposit in the broker's trust account the $500 earnest money deposit. The $500 earnest money deposit will be remitted to the closing agent upon acceptance of the offer. Once a purchase offer has been accepted for processing by VA and subsequently cancelled at the request of the purchasers, the earnest money WILL NOT be refunded and the purchaser will be required to forfeit the earnest money to VA as liquidation expences. There will be no exception to this policy. Therefore, the VA suggests that all brokers interview their buyers to assure that they want the property prior to submission of an Offer To Purchase. Prospective purchasers will have the option to select the title company or attorney of their choice to close the sale of VA-acquired properties. The address, telephone number, FAX number, tax ID number and name of person to contact should be included with all Offers To Purchase. The closing agent will be responsible for document preparation and sales closing. The purchaser or sales broker will be responsible for the payment of all costs charged by the closer. Offers are subject to the provisions of VA Form 26-6705. Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on which all offers must be submitted. VA pays 6 percent sales commission. VA Form 26-6705 must be submitted in duplicate to

How to break up a family unit.

If Fifi just had 10 puppies and the doghouse is already crowded, sell some puppy love with an ad in Classified's Pets and Supplies.
Or, if you're willing to part with your puppies for free, then your ad is free, too!
