Deadline high noon

Saddam must meet U.S. demands

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unyielding ultimatum, President Bush demanded Friday that Saddam Hussein begin an unconditional withdrawal of troops from Kuwait by noon Saturday and complete it within a week or risk a devastating ground war with allied forces.

"We must hear publicly and authoritatively his acceptance of these terms," Bush said in a dramatic announcement after reviewing — and finally rejecting — an initial Soviet-Iraqi formula to end the Gulf War.

The White House said Saddam should give his answer to the United Nations.

The Soviet Union quickly came up with a new version of its own plan for ending the war but it, too, was judged unacceptable by the White House.

"Our deadline is noon tomorrow and our plan is the marker to meet," presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

The Soviet plan, produced after a 75-minute telephone conversation between Bush and Mikhail S. Gorbachev, was overhauled to include Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait within three weeks.

Bush did not appear to be in a negotiating mood. "It would be a step forward if they (the Iraqis) could meet the terms of the Russian proposal," Fitzwater said. "Our attitude would be that's fine, go a few steps further and meet the coalition plan and get on with the withdrawal."

The White House held out little hope that Saddam would bow to the tough U.S. conditions.

At a briefing for reporters, Fitzwater said Bush had wanted to give Saddam only four days to withdraw, but was persuaded by allies to make it a full week.

Asked if the week's deadline might be extended, the spokesman replied, "If they're making a good faith withdrawal, we'll know it."

Most Midlanders back ground war

Most Midlanders in an informal survey Friday said they want America and its allies in the Persian Gulf to get Saddam Hussein's military now or pay a terrible price later.

"I think we should have dropped the neutron bomb the day after the war started," said Eddie Forrester, a local exterminator. "You don't play fair. You don't ever give the sucker an even chance. He's not going to give you one."

When asked about what they think about the Soviet Union's recent peace overture, America's response to it and whether a ground war should begin, a majority chose the latter.

President Bush gave the Iraqis until noon today to start pulling their forces out of Kuwait.

Jim Brown, 43, an attorney, said he supports Bush's decision not to give the Iraqis any more time.

"I trust his judgment," Brown said. "He's got so much more information than I do."

Susie Oden, a 37-year-old homemaker, also expressed support for the president.

"I think there's been as much flexibility as there can be," she said. "I don't like to see the war, and I wouldn't want to be in Bush's shoes."

But James Laub, 28, a local probation officer who serves in the U.S. Navy reserves, said a ground war is the only way to

WTI tumbles to lowest close since Iraqi invasion of Kuwait

■ Oil closes at $17.91 a barrel.

By Dirk Beveridge

NEW YORK (AP) — Before the war with Iraq began, everyone was wondering how high oil prices could fly. Now, the oil market is more like a limbo dance, with traders wondering how low crude can go.

The magic number many analysts are looking at seems to be $15 per barrel, though they are divided when asked whether crude will be able to tumble below that threshold.

On Friday the benchmark grade, light sweet crude for delivery in April, settled at $17.91 per barrel, down 59 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange. That was a record low close for the crisis that began with the invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2.

There seems to be an agreement that although oil set a record of $41.15 per barrel as it shot up this past fall on the New York Mercantile Exchange, it's not about to set a record on the way down. The exchange's lowest price for next-month delivery of crude oil was $9.75 per barrel, on April 1, 1986.

"Fifteen dollars is a psychological number that will be difficult to break through," said Thomas P. Blakeslee, an energy analyst with Pegasus Econometric Group Inc.

At that level, producing nations probably would scramble to get the price back up, running into the problems they always face about who should pump less oil, experts said Friday.

Pilots drop fuel-air bombs, napalm on Iraqi positions

By Mort Rosenblum

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Waves of U.S. warplanes rained napalm and deadly fuel-air bombs onto Iraqi defenses Friday, and U.S. officials accused Iraq of deliberately torching Kuwaiti oil installations.

Smoke fumed over the desert, visible 40 miles into Saudi Arabia.

Napalm, a flammable gel, was used to set fire to the oil in deep trenches dug by Iraqi defenders to slow an invasion, the U.S. command said. Heavy anti-personnel bombs were aimed at Iraqi troops.

While allied gunners hammered forward positions with artillery, allied planes flew 1,000 sorties into Kuwait alone and 100 others targeted Saddam Hussein's Republican Guard, the U.S. command said.

Greasy black plumes rose over more than 140 of Kuwait's 950 oil wells, part of what U.S. officials called an "orchestrated, systematic"

Decision to take flight is final, America West says

■ Midland and Lubbock leaders fly to Phoenix to talk to airline officials.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

A mission by leaders from three West Texas cities fell short Friday when America West said its decision to abandon the Midland and Lubbock airports was final.

A group of four city of Lubbock officials and five representatives of the Midland and Odessa communities visited America West offices in Phoenix in an attempt to save the service.

"We knew it was a long shot, but we felt obliged to visit," said Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas, one of the travelers. "They informed us they had already made a decision. They said they had already committed the aircraft to another service."

Midland officials were shocked earlier this month to learn that America West will no longer serve Midland International Airport as of April 7.

Dik Shimizu, airline spokesman, said America West routes through Midland and Lubbock International Airport will be canceled as part of an effort to reach customers in new markets.

Thomas said the group — which ironically had to fly to Phoenix on Southwest Airlines because America West flights were booked up — did not come away empty handed.

"They said they would continue to look for opportunities to return to the Midland-Odessa airport," Thomas said. "We suggested that they needed to try to market their service a little stronger next time."

Board names Rebel flag committee

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Midland school board trustees met the Friday deadline to submit their Rebel flag committee appointments, coming up with 14 adults and seven students willing to deliberate on the future of the flag.

The committee members have until March 26 to develop a recommendation to the board on the controversial issue.

"The specific charge is whether Lee is to keep the Confederate flag and if not, what, if anything, should replace it?" said Ken Morrison, the school board's president.

"But that's only a recommendation — the board can decide to accept it or not."

Morrison said he was not convinced that the committee could reach a decision by March 26 because spring break may take a week out of their meeting time.

"I think the group that's trying to get rid of the flag may get impatient and take steps on their own if this is dragged out too long," Morrison said. "They and the TEA could lose patience and act on their own."

Board Trustee James Fuller described the committee as a "stalling tactic" by the four trustees who voted to create it.

"They are re-inventing the wheel," he said. "That resolution could have been effected at the last board meeting. They're just prolonging an issue that shouldn't still be an issue."

Board trustees voted against removing the Lee Rebel flag during the Feb. 13 board meeting. The vote came after citizens opposed to the flag told the board that a compromise between Midland citizens from both sides of the issue fell through. The compromise discussions had included a flag of neutrality.

Although the board voted against a motion to replace the flag, they approved a motion to appoint two adults from each trustee's district and one LHS student each to form a committee concerning the flag.

The trustees' appointments include:

James E. Fuller, district 1: The Rev. Michael DeVaughn, Sheryl Holland and student Thomas Boyce; Adela V. Marmolejo, district 2: Jose Cuevas, Juanita Carrasco and student Julia Aohla; Kenneth E. Morrison Jr., district 3: R.J. Carrier, Troy M. Stevenson and student Trey Morrison.

Jackie Hamilton, district 4: Don Hopper, Bobby Williams and student Jason Smith; George Staley, district 5: Brian Martin, Mark Pelham and student Jeff Brunson; Larry Z. Rusk, district 6: John Scott Alcorn, Genie Rich and student Wayne Wilson; Ken Marks, district 7: David DeFrance, Barbara Grafa and student Reagan Hughes.

MISD Superintendent Joe Baressi Jr., Lee High School Principal Jack Fryar, Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary operations, and Tom Holland, executive director of human resource services, will also serve on the flag committee.

Engineer says SSC provides opportunity for the entire state

By David Morris
Staff Writer

West Texans can cash in on the superconducting super collider (SSC) project only if they call on their "pioneering spirit," the chairman of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission said Friday.

Bucy

J. Fred Bucy, who was in Midland to address the Texas Society of Professional Engineers, said the super collider — although it's being built near Dallas-Fort Worth — represents economic opportunity for the entire state.

But the collider's economic impact on the Permian Basin will depend on how effectively local businesses market their products and services to project builders.

"It really takes aggressiveness on the part of the people here to go find what's happening," Bucy said during a news conference at Midland International Airport.

He suggested that local air-conditioner firms and machinists might be able to sell their wares to the SSC.

In addition to boosting the economy, the super collider project should also contribute to science education statewide, Bucy said.

SSC researchers are developing education programs in math and science that will "impact kindergarten through 12th grade as well as higher education," Bucy said.

Tours of the SSC construction site are available to school children around the state, he added.

Construction on the first SSC building — a $10 million magnetic research center — already is under way, Bucy said. The $8.2 billion project is scheduled for completion by 1998 or 1999.

When the collider is operational, he explained, physicists will use it to explore the subatomic structure of the universe.

Some practical outgrowths of SSC research may include improved X-ray and electronics technology and advances in high-speed magnetic train technology, Bucy said.

Chris Wingert, president of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers, said engineers statewide are watching the SSC project closely.

Comparing the SSC to the space program, he said the benefits of SSC research will not be fully realized for many years.

"It will have a great impact on the world," said Wingert, a civil engineer from Big Spring. "And engineers will have involvement in taking the theory that Mr. Bucy spoke of and finding out how we're going to put it in the ground and make it work."

Bucy, whose organization is the state agency in charge of the SSC project, said the research laboratory commission will hold its monthly meeting in the Permian Basin next August.

The move is designed to strengthen the SSC's ties with West Texas, he said.

GULF: Saddam risks ground war if demands not met withdrawal of Saddam's half-million troops, Bush demanded Iraq's release of all prisoners of war within 48 hours of a cease-fire, removal of booby traps and mines from oil facilities and other areas, and the return to power of the exiled emir of Kuwait.

The scenario described by Bush would not give Saddam a face-saving exit from the war. Instead, the five-week conflict would end with the unmistakable defeat of Iraq, undermining Saddam's stature and raising questions about his survival as a leader.

"The war continues," Fitzwater said. "There's no interruption. It goes right along."

Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker III flew to the presidential retreat at Camp David in the afternoon.

House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin endorsed Bush's ultimatum and expressed thinly veiled annoyance at Gorbachev's peace efforts.

"It's time that the Soviets got out of the negotiating business," Aspin said. "Saddam Hussein has already lost the war. ... This is not the time for us to lose our nerve and compromise on the U.N. Security Council resolutions to allow Saddam to save face."

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole said, "Saddam Hussein knows the coalition remains rock solid and he knows his number's up. I wouldn't be surprised to see him start moving out by tomorrow's deadline."

The seven-day deadline for withdrawal of all troops appeared intended to force Saddam to leave his heavy artillery behind. "In the course of a week, they probably could not get all their equipment out," Fitzwater said. "In that case, they ought to leave it."

The president said Saddam, while talking of peace, had launched a "scorched-earth" attack in Kuwait, burning oil wells, tanks and terminals to destroy that nation's oil production system.

"Certainly, the scorched-earth policy that he has initiated in Kuwait only today does not lend us much reason for optimism," Fitzwater said.

Bush, grim faced and refusing to answer questions, announced his terms for stopping the war during an appearance in the White House Rose Garden. His statement was delayed more than a half hour as the president and his top aides, including Baker, hurriedly revised the remarks amid rapid-fire telephone consultations.

"I have decided that the time has come to make public with specificity just exactly what is required of Iraq if a ground war is to be avoided," Bush said. "Most important, the coalition will give Saddam Hussein until noon (EST) Saturday to do what he must do — begin his immediate and unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait."

Ruling out any concessions, Bush added, "Needless to say, any conditions would be unacceptable to the international coalition."

"The ball is in his court," spokesman Fitzwater said of Saddam. "The question is, what is his answer."

More than 700,000 allied troops are deployed against Iraq, and allied commanders said they were ready to begin a ground war.

After spelling out strict demands for Saddam's withdrawal, Fitzwater said, "Any breach of these terms will bring an instant and sharp response from coalition forces."

The demands were presented to the Iraqi Embassy in Washington around noon, and a copy was given to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar in New York.

What's in it for Saddam?, Fitzwater was asked. "A chance to save his country," he replied.

Among the U.S. demands:

- The withdrawal must begin by noon Saturday and be completed within a week.
- All Iraqi forces must be removed from Kuwait City within the first 48 hours. Within a week, all forces must be pulled back from the borders with Saudi Arabia, from Bubiyan and Warbah Islands, and from Kuwait's Rumaylah oil field.
- Prisoners of war and third-country civilians must be released within 48 hours.
- Iraq must remove booby traps and mines from oil facilities and other areas.
- Iraq must cease all combat flights over the war theater, except for flights needed to transport troops back to Iraq.
- It must cease destructive actions against Kuwaiti citizens and property, and release all its Kuwaiti prisoners.

Fitzwater said that allied forces would not attack retreating Iraqi troops.

He characterized Bush's conversation with Gorbachev as "a very good discussion of all the major points." He said Bush was "very appreciative for the efforts that he has made, and together they discussed some of the avenues that we might take to ensure that we get a good withdrawal."

Fitzwater said Gorbachev and Bush did not agree fully during their talks, but agreed to go their separate ways in trying to get Iraq out of Kuwait.

Bush kept up a rapid-fire pace of telephone diplomacy. In addition to Gorbachev, he talked with French President Francois Mitterrand, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, British Prime Minister John Major and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

PLANES: U.S. drops napalm on Iraqi targets effort to paralyze the embattled emirate's production capability.

The border town of Khafji, battered in an early ground battle, took on an especially eerie cast against a backdrop of dark haze. At mid-day, the town was dark as night.

The U.S. command spokesman, Marine Brig. Gen. Richard I. Neal, said the destruction appeared to be part of a "scorched-earth" campaign by the Iraqis.

President Bush had used the same term earlier in the day during an announcement of a U.S. ultimatum — Iraq must begin withdrawing from Kuwait by by noon EST Saturday or be forcibly ejected by the allies.

Neal alluded to an allied ground assault when he quoted Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the U.S. commander in the gulf, as saying: "U.S. forces are fully prepared for execution of any action ordered by the president of the United States."

One U.S. Marine was killed and five others were wounded Friday in a continuing artillery duel, one of three separate skirmishes across the border since Thursday afternoon, Neal said.

Allied gunners, backed by attack helicopter and tactical fighters, destroyed 18 Iraqi tanks and 15 other vehicles, taking more than 100 prisoners, according to Neal.

Photographers near the front watched U.S. Marines load canister after canister of napalm onto combat support aircraft and saw them streak off to the north.

One American magazine photographer, who requested anonmyity, said pilots told him they had been using the jellied gasoline on "bunkers and artillery positions" and other emplacements.

A senior Marine officer, who asked not to be named, said napalm's role in combat was to reach entrenched troops, "just like in Vietnam."

However, Lt. Cmdr. John Tull, a Central Command spokesman, said napalm was used only on oil trenches. "It is not being used on personnel," he said.

Altogether, coalition aircraft flew 2,700 sorties against lines of communications and battlefield targets despite mixed weather patterns which grounded some helicopters, Neal said.

Neal said the thick veil of smoke over Kuwait would obscure the battlefield, hampering some air operations, but would not impede the overall ground campaign. "We are prepared for this," he said.

He added that the U.S. command had no assessment of how fiercely Iraqis might resist a ground assault. But he described an incident which he said suggested the mood:

An unarmed F-18D forward air control plane, on a spotting maneuver, aimed its nose at one front-line emplacement and troops on the ground raised their arms in surrender.

He recalled the surprising speed with which allied aircraft took over Iraqi skies. "We might see the same surprise on the ground," he said. But, he added, casualties might also be high.

In desert foxholes and on assault ships in the Persian Gulf, troops exuded a boisterous confidence tempered by silent fears.

"I'm not worried about hitting the beach at all," said Lance Cpl. James Hartzog of Plant City, Fla., one of 17,000 Marines poised off Kuwait. "I just want to go in and get it over with and get home."

OIL: Crude closes at $17.91

(From 1A)

"Our feeling is they probably will have difficulty taking steps to cut production," Blakeslee said. "We could conceivably go down to $13, with $12.75 being an important number to the downside. But we still have a ways to go before that's the case."

Others say oil has shown a reluctance to go much below $16 over the past two years. They see no reason for it to get much lower now, noting that even though world production is now too high, it will take time for Iraqi and particularly Kuwaiti crude to be brought back into the supply stream.

Senior oil analyst Ann-Louise Hittle at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. said predictions of a big crash could turn out to be as overstated as the predictions of huge price increases at the outbreak of war. She sees a potential for oil to fall to $16 per barrel in the near future.

"The market has already discounted to a large extent the end of the crisis, and what could happen is when you actually get to it, is it doesn't sell that much," Hittle said. "I'm really in that camp. I just don't see it crashing as badly. The market has already fallen a great deal."

The same analysts who now seem unanimous in predicting lower prices had been equally unanimous in predicting higher prices once the shooting war with Iraq began. Just the oppposite happened.

After a momentary spike when the bombs began falling on Jan. 17, crude plunged a record $10.56 per barrel in one day on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

dismember the Iraqi army, keeping it from being a future threat.

"It's better to get it over with now than prolong it," Laub said.

Art Gibson, 77, a retired oil company employee, said, "I think we should continue what we're doing. If we stand still, we've lost. The sooner we get it over with the better off we'll be."

Carlene Allison, 37, an auto parts inspector, said the coalition should not allow Saddam and his forces to live to fight another day.

"We need to stick with the game plan, otherwise it's going to go on and on and on," she said.

W.C. Hardesty, 62, a retired oil company employee, said he would like to see the allied forces continue to "kick 'em," especially since the enemy is apparently in a corner.

But Walter King, 48, an independent oil operator and a Vietnam veteran, said Bush should give the peace initiatives a chance to sink in.

"I think we should cut them some slack so our troops will be protected from the ground conflict," King said. "If we save 10 lives, or one life, then we're going to be better off, as long as the Russians don't get the advantage over the rest of the world."

"Can it," was what Mel McMurry, 63, an engineering consultant, suggested the allies do to the recent Soviet peace initiative.

"I don't think they should cut them (Iraqis) any slack," McMurry said. "I think they should do what George Bush says."

Cel Wiginton, 48, a legal assistant, said the Iraqis do not deserve any more time to pull out of Kuwait.

"We have to stand by our guns," Ms. Wiginton said. "We're doing the right thing. If we give them more time, they're going to find more excuses."

Bill Hendon, 55, a geological consultant, said the pullout deadline should have been "noon yesterday."

"Why give them a chance to regroup?" Hendon asked.

Another geological consultant, Robert Winn, 55, said, "I'm in favor of working on the peace proposal we have now. It's the best plan we have going."

BEE: Penny Quick team wins contest and Margaret Farrell of Trinity School — bested six other teams in the charity luncheon event at Midland Center.

In an ironic twist, the defending champions from Midland College were the first to bow out this year, stumbling over "pirouette." The MC trio were the only team not to survive the first round of competition.

The second round claimed four victims: Texas Instruments slipped on "argillaceous," which means containing clay; First City Texas was left high and dry by "thalassic," meaning of the ocean or sea; Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. split after missing "ditokous," producing two eggs or offspring at once; and the Texaco team was eradicated after missing "emanometer," a device measure radioactivity.

"Using this event as an awareness event we have gained more students and tutors, as well as raising funds," said Midland Need to Read executive director Patti Groce.

She did not have an estimate of the funds raised for the non-profit group which fights adult illiteracy by teaching reading through the Laubach and other methods.

Master of ceremonies Bill Dingus of Exxon relaxed the contestants and spectators during a practice round, which covered words from "time," as in "the emcee is wasting time," to "glutei," which he used in the sentence "Saddam Hussein is worried about his glutei." The word pertains to the muscles of the buttocks.

Maridell Fryar, Midland Independent School District director of secondary instructional services, drew the unenviable job of following Dingus to the microphone as the official pronouncer for the competition. Municipal judge Gordon Marcum, Pat Stanley of the League of Women Voters and Sandra Wegner of the Midland County Library presided over the proceedings.

WEST: Group upbeat despite decision

(From 1A)

Airport spokeswoman Marcy Blauvelt, also part of the group, said she felt the mood of the meeting was upbeat.

"It was a good meeting," she said. "They're still going to pull out, but we kept it positive. I will continue to keep them informed as the area's population grows and new industry comes into town.

"We tried to tell them they do have a pretty good opportunity out here."

Other members of the group from here were Airport Director Ken Day, Odessa Mayor Lorraine Bonner and Ed Vogler, chairman of Midland's airport board.

Ms. Blauvelt said one point of the visit was to make sure Midland International's door to America West remained open.

"We do want them to come back," she said. "They would like to stay in the Texas market. We like their product, and they're well-liked by the travel agents here."

Shimizu said America West officials appreciated the group's visit.

"We were very pleased with the way things went," he said. "The group was very cordial, but we had to explain to them that the April schedule was something that was set in stone.

"We will constantly monitor the situation there. There is a possibility that America West could one day serve the area again."

Shimizu said the pullout will displace 11 employees here and 11 in Lubbock. The airline will work to find those employees jobs in other cities served by America West, he said.

He said the airline is trying to find other accommodations for ticket holders who booked flights after April 6. That might involve refunds or booking passengers on other airlines, he said.

America West descended into Midland International in 1987, when there were 26,756 enplanements here, airport figures show.

The airline had its best year in Midland in 1988, when 58,733 passengers boarded America West flights. But enplanements decreased the next two years, hitting 49,454 in 1989 and 46,883 in 1990.

America West, which accounts for between 8 percent and 10 percent of Midland International enplanements, announced Feb. 8 that it was cutting flights temporarily until next Saturday.

The airline cut its daily round trips to Phoenix from three to one in order to meet the demands of expanded routes in California, Ms. Blauvelt said.

The midday and evening round trip flights were axed. Similar cuts were made at the Lubbock, Palm Springs, Calif., and San Jose, Calif., airports.

Ms. Blauvelt said America West needed to pull jets from the affected cities in order to use them for new routes inside California. Delivery of new aircraft for those routes has been delayed, she said.

However, she said America West probably will not resume full service here between next Saturday and April 6, the airline's last day of flights here.

The airline announced in January that it was pulling all service out of Lincoln, Neb., Boise, Idaho, and Sioux City, Iowa, Ms. Blauvelt said.

Probably the biggest loss for Midland International due to the America West pullout will be service to West Coast cities such as Los Angeles, San Francisco and Las Vegas, she said.

The announcement of the airline's departure came at time when city officials are planning millions of dollars in renovations at Midland International.

The America West pullout will leave Southwest and American as the only commercial airlines serving the airport. American Eagle, a commuter airline, offers flights between here and Dallas.

Vogler said America West's departure probably will not mean putting planned expansion projects on ice.

Officials have said construction could start by the year's end and be completed within 2½ years.

OPERATION DESERT STORM

Pilots say they pity Republican Guards

AT AN AIRBASE IN SOUTHWESTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Some U.S. fliers say they pity the Republican Guard troops they relentlessly bomb night after night, and regret any civilian casualties they may inflict.

But they believe it is not too high a price if it saves American lives by averting or mitigating a ground war.

"War is war, and people die in war," said Col. Tom Lennon, commander of the 48th Tactical Fighter Wing (Provisional), a squadron of F-111F fighter-bombers that has flown missions over Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

Every allied bombing mission diminishes Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's war machine and may save the lives of American soldiers on the battlefield, Lennon said.

"How many American servicemen do you want to lose?" he said.

Asked about damage to civilian structures near military targets and the horrific scene of hundreds of dead civilians carried from a smashed shelter in Baghdad, Lennon replied:

"Do I like it? No, I don't like it. Do I have sympathy for them? You're damn right I do. Hopefully, these people understand Saddam is massacring them."

Capt. Brad Robert, 29, of Boise, Idaho, an F-111F pilot, bristled at the public outcry over civilian casualties.

"It seems like people are worrying too much about who might be dying on the Iraqi side and they don't even care any more about the atrocities that are still taking place in Kuwait City," Robert said.

Pilots often bring up reports that the Iraqi soldiers who invaded Kuwait bayoneted pregnant women, took babies from their incubators, and shot unarmed teenagers in front of their parents for distributing leaflets.

Robert's flying partner, weapon systems officer Lt. Troy Stone, 25, of Hemlock, Mich., noted that while allied bombers go out of their way not to hit civilians, Saddam has been lobbing Scud missiles at civilian targets in Israel and Saudi Arabia.

The Israelis "aren't even combatants in this war, and he's chucking Scuds in there," he said.

Col. John Tindall, 56, of Kissimmee, Fla., the wing's flight surgeon, said pilots always are aware that their precision-guided bombs can stray off target.

"There was a great feeling of relief that this was not one of our missions," Tindall said of the early February attack by allied bombers on the Baghdad bomb shelter that allied forces said also was a command and control bunker.

The fliers said sophisticated precision-guided bombs that have been highly perfected since their use in Vietnam have given pilots a greater degree of confidence than ever before that they can avoid civilians.

"You have a 99.9 percent warm, fuzzy (feeling) inside of you that your bombs are going to hit where you want them to," Stone said.

"I feel sorry for the military on the ground, not just the civilian casualties, because we're just pounding the hell out of them," said Capt. Bradley Seipel, 34, an F-111F weapon systems officer from Virginia Beach, Va.

"Obviously, a lot of them are bad guys for what they did in Kuwait, but a lot of them are just army soldiers, and we're hitting them night after night," he said.

"A lot of time they don't hear us until after the bombs fall. Try to imagine, those guys have been sitting in holes being bombed around the clock, day and night. It's got to be so demoralizing. They are not even fighting back."

Tindall said the fliers "handle it the same way a surgeon does going after cancer, concentrating on the disease and not the individual he's cutting."

U.S. Army private anxious about family members still in Kuwait

By Charles J. Lewis
Hearst News Service

NORTHERN SAUDI ARABIA — U.S. Army Pfc. Mustafa Alfar has a personal stake in helping persuade Saddam Hussein to withdraw his army from Kuwait: he wants to visit his native country and see his parents and his sister, who still live there.

Alfar, 29, said he has talked with his boss, Sgt. 1st Class Thomas Maldonado, 38, of Los Angeles about trying to make contact with his family since Iraq conquered Kuwait on Aug. 2.

"I'm keeping faith that they are still live," Alfar said. "I'm going to stick with my unit and do the job, but I will try to make a phone call to them when I can."

He said he has had no contact with his family since Iraq took over Kuwait on August 2, 1990.

Maldonado said separately that officers up the chain of command of the 2nd Armored Division were aware of Alfar's personal situation "and we're going to do what has to be done" to help the artilleryman re-establish contact with his family.

Alfar said he enlisted in the Army last May one week after the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service issued him a "green card," conferring legal alien status on him. He had been in the United States to study at Henderson County Junior College in Athens, Texas, just east of Dallas.

He said enlisting in the U.S. Army had been his goal since watching "all the war movies when I was a kid," especially "the John Wayne kind."

'I'm keeping faith that they are still live.'
— Pfc. Mustafa Alfar

Saudis not likely to accept U.S. presence after war ends

By Bernard D. Kaplan
Hearst News Service

■ An Analysis

PARIS — Letting Saddam Hussein leave Kuwait with flags flying and his army relatively intact would be a high risk decision because it's doubtful the United States can keep a sizeable military force in the gulf for very long after the fighting stops.

That may be the most significant objection to the Soviet peace bid, which would allow the Iraqis to pick up their military marbles and go home, quite possibly to fight again another day.

Many Western authorities question the political feasibility of American units, in sufficient strength to deter future Iraqi aggression, being based in Saudi Arabia or the gulf emirates for a lengthy period after the war.

Although U.S. defense department officials are understood to have drawn up plans to maintain substantial air and naval units along with some ground troops in the area after hostilities end, some American diplomats say the idea has acute political drawbacks that make it a non-starter.

A senior American official here, whose responsibilities include oversight of political developments in North Africa and other Arab countries, noted that Secretary of State James Baker's proposal last September to establish a NATO-type alliance, led by America, to protect the gulf states raised no enthusiasm in those countries and drew harsh condemnation elsewhere in the Middle East. The scheme was quietly jettisoned.

A longterm American military presence would be "a constant affront" to religious and nationalst elements, said the diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The political disadvantages would plainly outweigh the military benefits, increasingly, as time went by, he added.

Already, Islamic religious groups in Saudi Arabia are displeased by the presence of Western troops in the heartland of Moslem religious observance, he pointed out.

"That's in wartime with the enemy at their gates," he continued. "How can they be expected to react in time of peace when there's no imminent danger?"

Entertaining similar doubts, a leading French expert on Arab affairs, Jean-Francois Deniau, warned that if Iraq is able to escape the war with a military machine that, although depleted, remains the region's biggest and best, it would create an "impossible dilemma" for the West.

Deniau, who is vice chairman of the French National Assembly's Foreign Relations Committee, said French government officials suspect that Saddam is already laying plans to exploit the post-war situation.

They say that is why, in bargaining over Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's peace proposition, Saddam dropped his previous demand for an international conference on Palestine. Instead, he insisted on provisions, such as a ceasefire before withdrawal, that protect what's left of his military strength.

If the American forces embark for home, Saddam would "become more dangerous for his neighbors than he was before, since he and they know the Americans would be unlikely to return in whatever circumstances," Deniau said.

Despite other hardships, Iraqis not going hungry

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following dispatch was subject to Iraqi military censorship.

By John Rice

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Despite months of allied bombing and the stranglehold on their country's economy, Iraqis still are finding markets filled with meat, fresh vegetables and a wide array of household goods.

War and the U.N. embargo have imposed suffering and hardships on nearly all Iraqis at home, on top of worries about those on the battlefront. Fuel sales have been suspended and, in Baghdad, electricity is out and water service is only sporadic.

But there are few signs yet of hunger, and Iraqis are grimly learning to cope with the problems caused by the relentless bombing.

"We have become accustomed to that," said Izzedine Tobo, an actor standing with a group of friends near a bombed-out house.

Reporters who toured this capital city and outlying towns in recent days saw outdoor markets crowded with shoppers picking over mounds of ripe produce — oranges, onions, potatoes, cauliflower and peppers.

Butcher shops had meat hanging from their hooks, and street corner stands busily grilled sizzling kebabs over charcoal stoves. Even many bakeries were managing to fill the rations of people waiting at their doors, despite a severe shortage of flour.

Baghdad's massive downtown bazaar seemed almost as crowded and chaotic as before the war. Its narrow alleys were crammed with tiny stalls, and echoed with the shrill calls of vendors hawking their wares.

Spice stalls offered a dizzying display: cardamon, thyme, nutmeg, cinnamon, a fungus called bahool, and a red stone-like pod called moonring that can be crushed and applied to backaches.

But even relatively cheap goods take a big bite out of paychecks that averaged about $600 a month before the war, and the price of rare goods has skyrocketed.

Fresh milk seems almost unobtainable. A can of four pounds of powdered milk that cost about $5.50 before the war now carries a steeper price tag — $135.

Gasoline is available only at exorbitant black market prices — an average monthly salary would buy only about five gallons — so bicycles have become a more common sight in Iraqi streets and some Iraqis have turned to donkey carts to haul goods.

In the city of Karbala, about 60 miles south of Baghdad, the plaza connecting two of Shiite Islam's great shrines — the golden dome mosques where two Shiite imams, Hussein and Abbas, are buried — was bustling.

Boys sold steaming bowls of chickpeas from pushcarts. Men offered cigarettes or cans of soda pop from atop wooden boxes. Women sitting on the ground offered little blocks of sacred soil from the mosques.

In villages near Karbala, reporters saw scores of women gathered on the grassy banks of a canal to wash clothes and dishes while their children played beside them.

And in the town and in the capital itself, coffeehouses offered cups of tea from shining brass urns for customers who paused to chat, play a game of backgammon or just smoke a water pipe.

While some medical officials warn of increasing shortages of medicine, others proudly say they are making do.

"The shortage is there, but it should not affect our treatment of patients," said Dr. Ali Nasser, director of the Hussein Hospital, the main facility in Karbala.

"Where we have a shortage (of a medicine), we go to the alternative, not always the one we would prefer," he said.

But a Baghdad engineer named Mohammed, who fled to Karbala to escape the bombing, said he has had trouble finding medication at pharmacies, most of which are closed.

"I'm looking for cough medicine for a child for the past week. I can't find it," he said.

About 12,000 people attend rally for troops

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — About 12,000 people waved flags and sang patriotic songs Friday at a rally to show support for troops in the Persian Gulf.

The rally, sponsored by nearly 100 organizations, featured the Air Force Chorale, a brass band and American flags in abundance.

The rally also drew a small group of anti-war demonstrators.

Earlier in the day, police arrested four juveniles at the rally site for investigation of defacing public property. They allegedly drew bodies on the sidewalks in chalk and then poured fake blood on the figures.

Fresh graves

In preparation for the possible consequences of a ground war, rows of freshly dug graves stretch across the Saudi desert near the border with Kuwait. The photo, appearing in Life magazine's March 3 edition, depicts 96 graves dug on a diagonal to face Mecca. The graves are intended for 50,000 possible Saudi, Egyptian and Kuwaiti casualties.

Experts raise estimate of size of spill

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabian experts have raised their estimate of the size of an oil slick that is clogging the Persian Gulf south of Kuwait.

Officials with the kingdom's Meteorology and Environmental Protection Administration now say 138.6 million gallons of oil are fouling the gulf south of the "Geneva Line," which runs due east across the Persian Gulf from the Kuwaiti-Saudi border.

They did not estimate how much oil lies north of the line.

By comparison, the Exxon Valdez spilled about 11 million gallons of crude oil into Alaska's Prince William Sound.

Earlier, the Saudi experts had issued two estimates, one putting the spill at 63 million to 84 million gallons, the other ranging from 21 million to 126 million gallons.

The wide range of the estimates was due to different methods of observing the slick: overflight by helicopters, and remote-sensing information from satellites as well as other sources. It also reflected the difficulties of observation in a war zone.

The Saudi agency said Thursday that the latest information suggests the slick was thicker than the early estimate of between 1 and 3 millimeters, but it did not provide a new figure.

The allies battling Iraq say Saddam Hussein's forces deliberately flooded the gulf with oil, partly in an effort to hinder military operations to free Kuwait of Iraqi troops. Iraq claims allied bombing of oil facilities caused the slick.

Troops ready for 'High Noon'

WASHINGTON (AP) — In trenches on the desert, men and women are looking at the clock. In capitals around the world, in homes where loved ones wait, in Riyadh and Baghdad, in the shelters of Iraq, eyes are on the clock. Saturday: High noon.

By then, according to President Bush's ultimatum, Saddam Hussein must "do what he must do — begin his immediate and unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait."

High Noon in Washington; 8 p.m. in Baghdad and Kuwait.

There was little indication from Iraq whether the deadline would be obeyed. But there was no ambiguity on the American side.

"I haven't heard as clear a deadline since Gary Cooper in 'High Noon,'" said Sen. John Breaux of Louisiana.

In the movie, Cooper's lawman gunned down a gang of bad guys after sweating out their arrival on the noon train. This time it is Saddam who has the deadline, from the president of the United States.

In the movie it was going to be "my life or his'n. ... Look at that big hand move along — nearin' high noon."

Now, it's Marlin Fitzwater saying: "It's all up to Saddam Hussein. The ball is in his court. The question is, what is his answer?"

There already was a jittery readiness on the front lines.

"It's like perching on the rim of hell and waiting for orders to jump in," said a Marine lance corporal.

After hearing the president's ultimatum on a television set in an airplane hangar in Saudi Arabia, Army Lt. Col. David Smith of Dearborn, Mich., said "The president is doing the right thing. We should fish or cut bait."

They were ready, too, at command headquarters.

"U.S. forces are fully prepared for execution of any action or any order given by the president of the United States," said Brig. Gen. Richard Neal.

Unless Bush is bluffing, Saddam must either begin his large-scale withdrawal from Kuwait or face what has been promised as the most violent land battle in history. He has 48 hours to get his troops out of Kuwait City, seven days to pull them out of the country, two days to release all prisoners. A few hours to get started.

Saddam had said the day before that Iraq would fight on because the only other course was one of "humiliation and darkness, after which there will be no bright sign in the sky or brilliant light on earth."

But the American troops said Friday, if Saddam doesn't get out of Kuwait, the bright sign in the sky and brilliant light on earth might be the burst of American bombs at the start of a full-blown ground war.

LULAC director gives up post

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The director of the Texas branch of the League of United Latin American Citizens has given up his fight to keep his post.

Attorney John T. Garcia agreed Thursday to step down as head of Texas LULAC, a post he was re-elected to in May 1990.

Garcia told 34th District Judge Bill Moody he was leaving the position to put an end to a bitter internal struggle in the Texas League of United Latin American Citizens.

Some LULAC members had accused Garcia and his supporters of mismanaging funds. Also, some state LULAC councils have alleged that under Garcia's leadership, some of the organization's state elections were rigged.

"I don't want my personality to become an issue of controversy," Garcia said after Moody spelled out details of the agreement. Moody appointed attorney Albert Armendariz Sr. to act as state director until the next LULAC state elections are held in Waco in June.

The judge left the organization's state executive board in place.

Garcia sued LULAC members in January, asking the court to reverse the organization's decision to oust him. Garcia claimed the attempt to remove him was instigated by Jose Velez, national president.

"Something had to happen to save this situation so it won't get any worse," Armendariz said. "I am an admirer of Mr. Garcia. LULAC is a family we have differences of opinion."

Moody did not rule on whether fraud existed in LULAC state elections.

A committee of out-of-state LULAC members looked into the allegations of fraud and recommended that all Texas LULAC elections be declared null and void, said George Cantu, LULAC's national executive director.

Garcia was elected deputy state director in 1988 and was first elected state director in 1989.

LULAC is the largest Hispanic organization in the United States.

Jury finds former Texas man insane, not guilty of murder

NEW YORK (AP) — A former Texas man accused of killing and dismembering a woman in her apartment was acquitted of two counts of murder Friday by a jury that found him insane.

The finding means Daniel Rakowitz, 30, a native of Edna, Texas, could be eligible for release from a psychiatric center in six months.

Graphic trial testimony had painted Rakowitz as a demented butcher who served homeless people bowls of soup prepared with a human finger.

"This verdict was just and compassionate," said defense co-counsel Norman Reamer.

Rakowitz claimed he was the Messiah come to earth to save the homeless. He was found innocent of intentional murder, and acquitted by reason of mental disease on a count of murder by depraved indifference.

Outside the courtroom, several jurors said they believed Rakowitz was guilty on the second count but that one holdout juror finally won a battle of wills as the deliberations dragged on. The jury was out nine days.

"From day one, this particular person was determined that the jury was going to find Rakowitz not guilty by reason of mental disease," said jury forewoman Lois Markle, 26.

Another juror, Valerie Holmes, said the holdout was an unemployed man who wanted to tie up the jury so he could continue collecting his $15 a day juror fee. Markle said the man was "very determined, very manipulative, and he didn't mind how long he stayed here."

State Supreme Court Justice Robert Haft declared a mistrial on a third count of tampering with evidence.

Rakowitz had faced 25 years to life if convicted of murder.

Computer foul-up sends false back taxes notice

HOUSTON (AP) — A city computer mistake is being blamed for triggering erroneous Internal Revenue Service notices to at least 30 firefighter pensioners and widows that they owe thousands of dollars in back taxes.

Jean Ogletree, widow of firefighter William E. Ogletree, was told she owed $8,000 on her 1988 taxes. She said the IRS gave her 30 days to straighten it out.

"I was panic stricken, being retired and being on a limited income," Mrs. Ogletree said. "I lost my husband in 1987. He had always filled out the taxes. He did all the work. I really didn't know anything about them. I've never done anything afoul of the law. I certainly didn't want to get put in prison."

Mrs. Ogletree was among several beneficiaries of the Houston Firemen's Relief and Retirement Fund notified last month that she owed taxes on money she never received — in fact, it was about twice as much as she got under her husband's 1988 pension plan.

George E. Cones Jr., executive director of the fund, said his office received 30 or 40 frantic calls from worried pensioners about the IRS billings.

"It took us about two or three weeks to figure out what was going on," Cones said.

The city foul-up occurred when the firefighters took over the administration of their retirement funds from the city on July 1, 1988. Through a computer error, the city continued to show that the firefighter beneficiaries were being paid for a full year, rather than six months.

The computer's tape was routinely sent to the IRS at the end of 1988. The tape showed the city paying the pensioners twice as much as they had correctly reported on their 1988 tax returns.

"When you get a letter that says you owe $4,000 it scares you," said Mary Hooker, the widow of former District Fire Chief Carl G. Hooker. "It's not good for old folks' blood pressure. When you get elderly it's a little distressing."

Governor touts free trade pact at border meet

HERMOSILLO, Mexico (AP) — A North American free trade agreement will transform the border into a land of opportunity, Texas Gov. Ann Richards said Friday.

"Our border with Mexico is not the back door of the United States, as it has been treated for so long," she said, bringing participants in the U.S.-Mexico border governors conference to a standing ovation. "It is the front door to new opportunities for trade and economic progress."

Border states will bear the burden of making a trade pact among the United States, Canada and Mexico work, she said, but the payoff will be huge.

"We will literally be at the geographic center of a hemispheric trade zone that is 25 percent larger than the entire European Economic Community," Richards said.

Formal negotiations are expected to begin this summer and may end later this year.

Texas exported $9.6 billion worth of goods to Mexico in 1989, she said.

The impending marriage of northern capital and technology to Mexico's cheap labor and natural resources dominated the two-day conference in this northern capital.

"The issues discussed here are not only regional importance, they are hemispheric," Richards said.

Like the other nine governors at the meeting, Richards called the trade pact the key to competing in and against Europe and Asia.

"Market share is no longer something that be viewed as some parochial activity," she said. "It must be multinational if we are to succeed in world competition."

U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher said there are no "major obstacles" to the pact if Congress gives the Bush administration the go-ahead.

"You have the makings of a deal," he said.

Mosbacher and Mexican Commerce Secretary Jaime Serra Puche stressed that Mexico's nationalized oil — seen here as essential to Mexican sovereignty — will not be on the negotiating table.

Neither will be Mexican environmental and workplace safety regulations. But Mosbacher rejected the idea that Mexico enjoys an unfair advantage in attracting industry because of less burdensome regulations. He said Mexico is moving toward more stringent standards.

Environmental issues are some of the thorniest the border governors face. Both Richards and California Gov. Pete Wilson pointed to joint sewage treatment projects as signs that cooperation is growing.

Roads and bridges linking the two countries are another hot topic for the border governors and the prospect of a trade pact has made it even hotter.

"We know that no matter how carefully crafted a free trade agreement is, the burden of insuring its success is going to remain primarily with those of us along the border," Richards said. "We must work together to develop the infrastructure: the roads and the bridges and the ports and the railroads that tie us together."

Without the infrastructure, she said, the pact "will be worth little more than words on a piece of paper."

STATE IN BRIEF

Council wants landmark back

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — At the urging of historic preservation groups, City Council members say they will demand the Finck Cigar Co. building be rebuilt if they can determine who ordered it demolished.

The historic structure was torn down Sunday morning by an unlicensed contractor. City officials say they do not know who owns the old Finck property.

Council members said Thursday ordering the rebuilding of the structure would be the maximum penalty available to the city. The council took the action after a plea from the San Antonio Conservation Society.

"I am very angry about this," Mayor Lila Cockrell said. "Unless we take the most drastic action we can, we are going to have a repetition of this. I'd like to proceed along the lines of making them reconstruct the building."

Councilman Nelson Wolff called the demolition an "outrage."

Adolfo Vela, the contractor who demolished the building, and the person he said hired him, Larry Gibbons, have been cited for demolishing a building without a permit and for violating the city's historic preservation ordinance.

Gibbons, managing partner of the Vista Verde Plaza Joint Venture, has denied any knowledge of the demolition. He and another partner, Bernard Lifshutz, have said the joint venture sold the Finck property several months ago, but they cannot remember the name of the buyer.

Discrimination alleged

KINGSVILLE (AP) — A group of students who say a Texas A&I University associate professor has been denied promotions because of race have presented the university president with a petition supporting the teacher.

Members of the Texas A&I Black Student Union say that Bennie Green, an associate sociology professor, has suffered discrimination because the university has denied him several promotions.

"We feel like he's been unfairly treated since 1973 because he has been passed over for promotions and we believe it's for the color of his skin," said Raquel Williams, immediate past president of the Black Student Union. "He has credentials, does a lot for the community, teaches larger classes than anyone else and he works well with the students."

The group presented a petition Thursday with 500 signatures to President Manuel Ibanez, according to the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Foster care case reset

EL PASO (AP) — A state district court judge has given the state Department of Human Services extra time to comply with a court order requiring an investigation of El Paso-area foster homes.

Judge Edward Marquez of the 65th District Court had ordered the report be submitted by Feb. 15, but the new deadline is Monday.

Marquez ordered the investigation after an 11-year-old boy refused to return to a foster home after school, saying his foster mother had abused him verbally and physically.

New kids with new ideas operate old cobbler shop

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Rusty Douglas was just a 25-year-old Aggie surfer with sand in his hotdog the first time he visited Corpus Christi in 1984. Now he's back to stay, a petroleum engineer turned cobbler.

Douglas' chief helper is Howdy Smith — he long ago stopped answering to "Michael" — a former Navy parachute rigger and cowboy who wears his boots outside his jeans. Pays to advertise. Smith's a boot builder.

Then there's Cathy Goffinet, who does the legwork. She's been with Douglas since June, when he began shining shoes for a living in downtown Corpus Christi office buildings.

Finally, there's Edward Bandera, a refugee from Austin who walked into the shop one day looking for work. Knows how to fix shoes.

They're new kids on an old block. Douglas recently bought Charlie Straw's shoe repair ship next door to El Jalisco Restaurant, near the intersection of Up River and Old Robstown roads. Straw, 64, had run the place since 1952 and owned it since 1956.

The shop's got a new name, The Shoe Buff.

It wasn't his idea, but Douglas is trying a new concept in shoe care and repair by catering to busy people where they work. His work ethic, however, is old-fashioned — long hours, no excuses — learned on a North Texas family farm where he and two older brothers grew cantaloupes in the summer to pay their way through college.

Sure, Douglas, wants to make a living for himself and his employees, and maybe some day he'll have time for a wife, but most of all he wants to live in Corpus Christi. He says it was love at first sight.

He and a college pal came down from College Station for a surfing contest in 1984. It was Douglas' senior year, between spring break and graduation.

"We just had an absolute blast," Douglas said. "The beach was here, the girls were pretty. I just fell in love with the city ... We camped on the island and ate sand in our hot dogs. We loved it."

Douglas later spent four months in Corpus Christi working for Hughes Production Tools. That stint, he said, merely confirmed an earlier impression.

"I knew I would end up here," Douglas said. "I wanted to be here. I knew I'd be happy here."

Provided he'd be able to eat.

Douglas suffered a bout of wanderlust after graduation. He spent several months in Mexico rather than go to the High Plains to work for Hunt Oil Co. He returned to Houston and waited tables until going to work for Hughes.

Douglas moved to Freeport in 1988 to work for Nalco, an industrial water treatment company, but quit after six months when his chance came to move to Corpus Christi. Another college chum had bought a business school and wanted Douglas to help him run it. The venture folded in 1989.

For the next six months, Douglas rooted himself in Coastal Bend clay by buying and remodeling a house while he worked part-time, looked for a job and collected unemployment. Then a friend told him somebody was making money in Houston shining shoes, office-to-office.

"My initial reaction was, 'This is crazy,' Douglas said. But the more he thought about it, the better it sounded — a business of his own with low capital outlay. And after all, there have been cobblers for more than 3,000 years.

Douglas hit the streets in June persuading building managers to let him go high rise, door-to-door — three bucks for a shine, four for the entire boot; repairs from $2.50 for ripped leather to $35.50 for a new leather sole. He worked at home, learning a few tricks of the trade on his own and farming out major repairs to shoe shops.

Then Douglas heard that Charlie Straw wanted to sell his shop and retire. It took months to arrange the financing, finally, through Douglas' hometown bank in Celeste.

Meanwhile, he called Oklahoma State University Technical Branch in Okmulgee to find a trained cobbler. Howdy Smith says he was put on the line because "I just happened to be in the shop that day, piddlin'." He arrived in Corpus Christi in mid-November driving a Ford pick-up truck he bought years ago for $150.

Charlie Straw still drops by the shop from time to time for a cup of coffee and a dose of Smith's amiable chatter.

"I feel pretty good, except my back hurts," Straw told Smith the other day. That's not all, but you'd never know it looking into Straw's very blue eyes.

Straw's wife, Dean, died in 1989, after more than 20 years of working with her husband at the shoe shop. Now Straw is fighting cancer.

Straw says he doesn't know how many shops like his have closed over the years, but he's certain there are fewer now than when he began fixing shoes 45 years ago. Fewer people are wearing the kind of expensive shoes cobblers fix, he said, "But if they'll buy a good shoe or boot, then fixing it is still practical."

Greenwood masters Lions

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

PECOS — Greenwood guard Eric Clutter took to heart the adage "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

Clutter missed four front ends of one-and-one free throw opportunities in the fourth quarter, but the junior came through when the Rangers needed it most for a 66-62 win over the Clint Lions in Class 3A bi-district basketball action here Friday.

The Rangers, 13-14, play Comanche in area round action Tuesday. The site and time have yet to be officially determined, though both teams have expressed a desire to play in Sweetwater.

After Clutter put Greenwood ahead with a three-point shot at the first half buzzer, the Rangers tried to turn the game into a rout by scoring the first 16 points of the second half.

But Clint almost caught up at the end, even though the Lions fouled out four starters and gave the Rangers 34 free throw opportunities.

Thanks in part to several missed bonus opportunities by Greenwood, the Lions pulled to within four on two occasions before Clutter buckled down to make three free shots and Mark Burfeind added two more in the last 27 seconds.

"Regardless of what happened down the stretch, we made them when it counted," Greenwood head coach Robert Chaney said.

Clutter said he and his teammates thought their big third quarter — in which they outscored Clint 19-5 — put the game in the bag.

"We thought we had them, but they never let down," Clutter said.

Never let down, indeed.

After trailing by as many as 19 points in the third quarter, the Lions roared back to outscore Greenwood 29-16 in the final eight minutes, including eight points each by Brooks Vandivort and Peter Reyes.

It was enough to console Clint coach David Moore despite the loss.

Angels announce extensions

■ The Double A franchise will remain in the Permian Basin through 1996 thanks to a newly extended stadium lease.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

While Midland Angels general manager Monty Hoppel announced contract extensions with the City of Midland and the California Angels organization at a Friday news conference, the team's wish list for Angels Stadium improvements also grew a little shorter.

As a result of the recent Professional Baseball Agreement, Midland team owners Miles Prentice and Bob Richmond signed a new two-year deal to remain a AA affiliate of the Angels.

Additionally, the Midland Angels and the city announced a three-year extension to the lease of Angels Stadium, promising that the club will remain in the Permian Basin through the 1996 season.

In a snowball effect of that agreement, the City of Midland has not only begun improvements to the stadium for 1991, but has announced possible renovations in the years to come.

For the coming season, fans will notice improved lighting and expanded parking while additional seating and restrooms are in the works for the 1992 season.

MHS kickers take on Lee

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Midland High senior Stephen Canon hopes to make a difference today.

Canon, who missed the first soccer meeting of the season between his Bulldogs and Midland Lee because he was traveling with the MHS basketball team, said there's no way he'll miss today 2 p.m. start at the MHS field, even though his basketball team will probably leave for its playoff game during the match.

"I'm definitely going to play (against Lee)," the senior center forward said after the Bulldogs' 2-1 loss to Lubbock Monterey.

There's no doubt that both teams need the win — but for different reasons. Lee, the District 3 co-leaders at 4-0-2, need the win for the undisputed district lead — at

Girls fight for Region miracles

■ Amarillo Tascosa forged a 19-point comeback against Irving while Plainview fell one point shy of erasing a 15-point lead by Lewisville in the Region I basketball tournament.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

They threw miracles into the Chaparral Center air Friday night during the Region I girls basketball tournament and Amarillo Tascosa found one while Plainview let one slip through its very fingers.

To make a long story short, this was a spring Halloween where the girls coming to the party early with masks weren't always the ones with real fangs.

Tascosa, a Region I finalist last year, limped into the Chap and trailed by 19 points, 25-6, before running away with a 69-55 win over Irving. Plainview trailed by 15 points at the half before losing its miracle comeback bid to Lewisville, 57-56 in overtime.

It was that kind of night when a lead seemed to be a curse. Lewisville coach Susan Addy was well aware of it.

"We're in the region finals, but there wasn't a lot of celebration in our dressing room after the game," Addy said. "It was an ugly win."

Plainview started the game hitting just seven percent from the field and went through one 7:52 stretch without scoring a point as the Farmerettes were building a comfortable 15-point lead, 29-14, while outrebounding the Lady Bulldogs by a 41-15 margin in the first half.

Then the roof caved in, Plainview went on a roll and finally tied the score at 49-49 with 18 seconds left. Plainview even had a shot at winning the game in regulation with two free throws, but Nettie Reeves, who led all scorers in the game with 20 points, missed both. Lewisville won the 8-7 duel in overtime.

"Rebounds killed us in the first half and that has hurt us all year," said Plainview coach Danny Wrenn. "Lewisville has been to the region tournament three years in a row and this is our first trip. I think we were nervous to start the game, but I'm thrilled with these girls. We were picked to finish fifth in our district and then we get down by 15 points to one of the top ranked teams in the state and almost pull it out. I can't find fault with that."

Irving, owning the best record of the four coming in at 30-3, looked to be the best of the entire Region I crop by running over Tascosa early.

"It looked bad in the first quarter," said Tascosa coach Mike Miller. "I wish I knew what happened out there early, but I really don't. We had just watched Plainview fall behind early and you hope your team won't be ner-

Bulldogs shoulder District 4-5A burden

League champion San Angelo literally passed the District 4-5A basketball playoff baton to Midland High Thurs day after losing to Lubbock Monterey in a bi-district encounter in Big Spring.

Williamson

On the surface, that would appear to be bad news for the Bulldogs as it prepares for its 7 p.m. bi-district game with Plainview in Levelland today. After all, Monterey was District 3-5A's runner-up. Plainview is 3-5A's champion, going against MHS, the 4-5A runner-up.

According to UIL playoff structure, first place teams are to have the advantage in the first round by playing second place finishers. Still, most observers feel MHS has a real shot at beating Plainview.

And District 4-5A really needs a basketball boost. Since 1981 when Midland College began hosting the Region I boys tournament at Chaparral Center, 4-5A has posted a meager 7-19 playoff record, including San Angelo's loss to Monterey, according to Midland's Tim McGraw, who keeps track of this kind of thing.

Only two 4-5A teams have hit the Chap Center floor in the Region I tournament over that span. Midland High did it the first year in 1981, losing by five points to Fort Worth Dunbar in a game that the Wildcats vaulted out of the starting gates to a 14-0 lead. Abilene High also made an appearance in 1988, but the Eagles, too, failed to earn a Final Four berth.

That is in dramatic contrast to the two decades before 1991 when 4-5A landed eight teams in Austin's Final Four. Midland High made the state tournament in both 1972 and 1973 while Midland Lee made an Austin trip in 1975.

The last 4-5A team to earn a state Final Four position was Abilene High in 1978. San Angelo is the league's only state champion with that title coming in 1963. It's interesting to note that 1963 was the last time San Angelo won a district championship and there were hopes this year that history would repeat itself. Instead, San Angelo becomes another 4-5A first round loser.

With great fear of making an gross understatement, Midland High has been an "interesting" team this year. The Pack already owns a 10-point win over Plainview this season. They held a 17-point lead over Top 10 ranked Austin LBJ before losing. They held a double-digit lead against San Angelo at home before losing on a three-point buzzer bomb and then turn around and beat the Bobcats by 12 points on the road.

Then there is the series with Hobbs, N.M. The Bulldogs suffered a 130-78, 52-point loss in Hobbs and then turn around and beat the undefeated Eagles, 74-71, at home. I can't find a worse defeat in MHS history. And I sure can't find that kind of turnaround in the course of one season.

But the MHS-Hobbs series has come to a bitter end, according to MHS coach Jack Stephenson.

"We aren't going to play Hobbs anymore," Stephenson says. "(Hobbs coach Ralph) Tasker humiliated me and my kids when we went to Hobbs. They had their starters in there to the end and gave us the worst defeat in the history of the school. What good did that do?

"Beating them here did more for me than any victory I've had as a coach. There is no way Hobbs is 52 points better than us. I take total blame for losing to Abilene Cooper in our last district game because I started looking forward to the second meeting with Hobbs the day after they beat us that way."

Let's hope the high of the Hobbs victory, a big one, has now been put to rest. Now is when the victories really count and all of District 4-5A should feel the need to be counted in the playoffs.

REGION: Tascosa meets Lewisville today in finals

vous at the start, but we had the jitters just like Plainview.

"I really think the key for us is that we wore Irving down. I think you have to say that they are the better team on the court when they're fresh."

Tascosa's Holly Ridings, who was a key factor in the game, said, "We've faced adversity before and knew we could come back. We've never quit on each other. We were frustrated, but we all get along so well that no one blames another for mistakes. We work through our troubles."

Lewisville and Tascosa meet at 11 a.m. today at the Chap for the right to advance to Austin and a Final Four berth. Tascosa, now 22-8, is hungry after gaining the Region I finals last year and failing to earn its first trip ever to the state tournament. Lewisville, 26-5, won the Region I tournament here in 1989, losing to Victoria in the state semifinals in Austin. That is the Farmerettes only trip to Austin.

Aggie throws three hitter

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Texas A&M pitcher Ronnie Allen limited LSU to three hits in seven innings Friday night as the 12th-ranked Aggies captured a 3-1 victory over the top-ranked Tigers.

LSU (6-1) and Texas A&M (10-2) meet again Saturday in a doubleheader.

Allen, 3-0, allowed one run on three hits with seven strikeouts and three walks.

LSU took a 1-0 lead in the fifth on Luis Garcia's RBI single before Texas A&M tied it in the seventh when Jason Marshall scored on second baseman Mike Neal's error.

The Aggies added two more unearned runs in the eighth as Neal's second error allowed Mike Hickey and Conrad Colby to cross the plate.

RANGERS: Dublin keeps Greenwood in the hunt

(From 1B)

"We had a little dry spell in the third quarter," Moore said, "but this group has had things like that happen all year.

"They give up three inches a man, but they never quit."

Three inches a man proved to be the eventual Lion-killer, unlike a 52-39 Clint win in the finals of the Greenwood Holiday Tournament — when the Lions dominated with perimeter play.

Greenwood senior Damon Dublin showed the Lions just how much three inches can mean in a basketball game, when he posted up at will in the middle two periods for 16 of his team-high 18 points.

To Dublin, who only averages seven points a game, it was just like practice.

"We noticed that they were playing one-on-one on our post players," Dublin said. "We play one-on-one all the time in practice, so it seemed natural to do it here."

And do it he did. Dublin kept the Rangers in the hunt despite Clint leads of as much as eight points in the second quarter with seven points in that span.

The 6-4 senior then scored three quick baskets to open the second half, while Clint missed its first 10 shots from the floor. The Lions didn't scored for the first 5:48 of the second half, and it was enough to end their season at 14-16.

Burfeind added 13 points for Greenwood, while Clutter scored 12 and Jason Swopes added 10.

Vandivort led all scorers with 19 points, while Navin Navidomskis finished with 16 and Reyes came off the bench for 12.

Greenwood (66): Ted Flowers 0 0-0 0; Eric Clutter 2 7-15 12; Mark Burfeind 3 6-8 13; Roger Guess 0 0-0 0; Jason Swopes 5 0-1 10; Damon Dublin 8 2-5 18; Chuck Boecking 1 0-0 2; Ray Seales 4 0-0 8; Cody Mebane 0 3-5 3. Totals: 23 18-34 66.

REGION: Tascosa meets Lewisville today in finals

at the start, but we had the jitters just like Plainview.

"I really think the key for us is that we wore Irving down. I think you have to say that they are the better team on the court when they're fresh."

Tascosa's Holly Ridings, who was a key factor in the game, said, "We've faced adversity before and knew we could come back. We've never quit on each other. We were frustrated, but we all get along so well that no one blames another for mistakes. We work through our troubles."

Lewisville and Tascosa meet at 11 a.m. today at the Chap for the right to advance to Austin and a Final Four berth. Tascosa, now 22-8, is hungry after gaining the Region I finals last year and failing to earn its first trip ever to the state tournament. Lewisville, 26-5, won the Region I tournament here in 1989, losing to Victoria in the state semifinals in Austin. That is the Farmerettes only trip to Austin.

Aggie throws three hitter

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Texas A&M pitcher Ronnie Allen limited LSU to three hits in seven innings Friday night as the 12th-ranked Aggies captured a 3-1 victory over the top-ranked Tigers.

LSU (6-1) and Texas A&M (10-2) meet again Saturday in a doubleheader.

Allen, 3-0, allowed one run on three hits with seven strikeouts and three walks.

LSU took a 1-0 lead in the fifth on Luis Garcia's RBI single before Texas A&M tied it in the seventh when Jason Marshall scored on second baseman Mike Neal's error.

The Aggies added two more unearned runs in the eighth as Neal's second error allowed Mike Hickey and Conrad Colby to cross the plate.

RANGERS: Dublin keeps Greenwood in the hunt

(From 1B)

"We had a little dry spell in the third quarter," Moore said, "but this group has had things like that happen all year.

"They give up three inches a man, but they never quit."

Three inches a man proved to be the eventual Lion-killer, unlike a 52-39 Clint win in the finals of the Greenwood Holiday Tournament — when the Lions dominated with perimeter play.

Greenwood senior Damon Dublin showed the Lions just how much three inches can mean in a basketball game, when he posted up at will in the middle two periods for 16 of his team-high 18 points.

To Dublin, who only averages seven points a game, it was just like practice.

"We noticed that they were playing one-on-one on our post players," Dublin said. "We play one-on-one all the time in practice, so it seemed natural to do it here."

And do it he did. Dublin kept the Rangers in the hunt despite Clint leads of as much as eight points in the second quarter with seven points in that span.

The 6-4 senior then scored three quick baskets to open the second half, while Clint missed its first 10 shots from the floor. The Lions didn't scored for the first 5:48 of the second half, and it was enough to end their season at 14-16.

Burfeind added 13 points for Greenwood, while Clutter scored 12 and Jason Swopes added 10.

Vandivort led all scorers with 19 points, while Navin Navidomskis finished with 16 and Reyes came off the bench for 12.

Greenwood (66): Ted Flowers 0 0-0 0; Eric Clutter 2 7-15 12; Mark Burfeind 3 6-8 13; Roger Guess 0 0-0 0; Jason Swopes 5 0-1 10; Damon Dublin 8 2-5 18; Chuck Boecking 1 0-0 2; Ray Seales 4 0-0 8; Cody Mebane 0 3-5 3. Totals: 23 18-34 66.

Clint (62): Brooks Vandivort 7 2-2 19; Rodger Strachan 1 0-0 2; Peter Reyes 6 0-0 12; Navin Navidomskis 6 2-4 16; Tommy Tope 3 0-0 7; Isaiah Melendez 0 2-2 2; George Inostraza 2 0-0 4; Roel DeAnda 0 0-0 0. Totals 25 6-8 62.

Pacers rattle Cavs

Associated Press

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Micheal Williams scored 13 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter and Indiana did not allow a field goal in the first six minutes of the period as the Pacers beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 106-98 Friday night for their fifth straight victory.

The win was only the second for the Pacers in their last 16 trips to Richfield Coliseum.

Cleveland dominated the third quarter, overcoming a four-point halftime deficit and going up 79-71 on Craig Ehlo's steal and layup at the end of the period.

Indiana, however, started the fourth quarter in a full-court press that rattled the Cavaliers, forcing turnovers and hurried shots that repeatedly led to easy baskets for the Pacers. They outscored Cleveland 18-3 at the start of the quarter, limiting the Cavs to free throws.

Celtics 111, Nets 99

HARTFORD, Conn. — Robert Parish and Brian Shaw scored 26 points each, with Shaw scoring eight during a decisive 16-2 spurt in the second half, as Boston beat New Jersey.

Shaw's layup with 1:13 remaining in the third quarter broke a 78-78 tie and started the 16-2 run. Dee Brown's 18-foot jumper with 9:21 left capped the rally, giving the Celtics a 92-80 lead.

NBA Roundup

The Nets, who shot just 36 percent from the floor in the fourth quarter, got no closer than nine points after that.

Hornets 122, Pistons 114

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Mike Gminski scored five of his 25 points in the final minute, leading the Charlotte Hornets to their first-ever victory over Detroit.

76ers 103, Heat 96

MIAMI — Hersey Hawkins scored 26 points and led a third-quarter comeback as the Philadelphia 76ers rallied from an 18-point deficit and beat Miami.

The 76ers have never lost to Miami, winning all 10 times they've met.

Hawks 111, Lakers 102

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins scored 34 points as the Atlanta Hawks won a franchise-record 18th consecutive game at home.

The Hawks led most of the way, then withstood a 19-8 Los Angeles spurt that cut a 14-point deficit to 90-87 with 7:47 to play.

Wilkins then led a 14-4 run with six points as the Hawks built a 104-91 lead with 4:11 to play, and the Lakers never threatened again.

Red Devils score big win over O'Donnell

Staff Report

ODESSA — Rankin had three players score over 20 as the Red Devils roared to a 91-68 Class A Bi-district playoff win over O'donnell Friday night in Odessa.

Francisco Gonzales and James Watson both had 23 for the Devils; Kirk Kennedy added an additional 20. Joey Varela's 16 put four Rankin players in double digits.

Rankin never trailed and took a commanding 48-31 halftime lead.

The Red Devils, 15-3, will meet the winner of Friday's Marathon-Sierra Blanca game next Tuesday in area action.

least for now — over a San Angelo team that has the day off from district competition.

Midland High needs the win just to stay alive in the district race. At 3-1-2 and a solid third place, the Bulldogs are far from being mathematically eliminated from the playoff hunt, but Coach Tom Esikhati admits his team has to realistically win the rest of their matches to catch up with the frontrunners.

"The next six need to go down for us to get in the playoffs," he said. "Lee and San Angelo can let down a little and still make it.

"We can't."

Elsewhere in the district, it's the second time around for the district's other crosstown rivals. Odessa Permian and Odessa High go to it at Ector Junior High in a match that may be the winless Bronchos best remaining chance to win this season. Also, Abilene Cooper squares off against Abilene High.

Esikhati said the Bulldogs need to shake off the first half of a season that included ties with both co-leaders as well as last-place Odessa High.

"This is going to be the beginning of the season," Esikhati said.

Canon has never seen Lee play, but he is impressed with what he's heard.

"I've heard they have a lot of speed at forward," he said.

The senior said a loosely called game might be to the Bulldogs' advantage.

"I hope they allow us to play physical,' he said. "We play a more physical game (than Lee)."

Lee has been led recently by Swiss foreign exchange student Danny Grossman, whose five goals have all been scored in the last three matches. Grossman had both goals in Lee's 2-2 tie with San Angelo last Tuesday.

Sheehan holds lead at Hawaiian

Associated Press

LPGA

Patty Sheehan moved a step closer to finally winning a Hawaiian Ladies Open, shooting a 3-under-par 69 Friday for a two-stroke lead entering the final round.

Sheehan, a perennial contender in this tournament, birdied four straight holes on the back nine and stood at 7-under after 36 holes. She opened with a 68 and began the second day trailing Jennifer Wyatt by two strokes.

Beth Daniel, the defending champion and the 1990 player of the year, was two strokes back after shooting a 70. Stephanie Maynor shot 68 and was 4-under.

Wyatt, who posted a career best and set a course record with a 66 Thursday, faded away with a 79. She failed to make a birdie in the second round.

Sheehan has had no trouble challenging in the LPGA tournament, finishin second last year and never lower than eighth. But she has yet to win the tournament since it began in 1987.

She said her strategy for the final round is to avoid thinking too much — or, as she put it, "play from the neck down."

"When I don't try to win tournaments, I seem to do better," said Sheehan, a winner of 25 LPGA events. "I'm going to try to just play a shot at a time and not really worry about winning the tournament."

For the second straight day, Sheehan said she had trouble hitting greens on the 6,124-yard Ko Olina Resort course along Oahu Island's west shore. But she recovered five of the seven times she got into trouble.

"I was a little more erratic today," Sheehan said. "Fortunately, I'm continuing to get it up and down for the most part."

She made a 15-foot birdie putt on the first hole, then settled in for a string of pars that ended at the 11th hole, where she hit a bunker, missed a 20-foot putt and took a bogey.

Sheehan then put together a streak of four straight birdies on the 12th through 15th holes, making putts of 18, 5, 10 and 18 feet.

Knicks suspend Mark Jackson for conduct, critisism of coach

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Jackson, the discontented 1988 NBA rookie of the year, was suspended for four days by the New York Knicks on Friday for what a team spokesman called "conduct detrimental to the team."

John Cirillo, the team's director of public relations, did not specify the exact reason for the suspension, but the 6-foot-3 point guard has been publicly critical of coach John MacLeod for relegating him to backup status behind Maurice Cheeks. Jackson will miss two games during his suspension.

Jackson, a New York native who stayed home to play in college at St. John's, averaged 13.6 points and 10.6 assists a game as a rookie. The next season, he averaged 16.9 points and 8.6 assists and was named to play in the All-Star Game as the Knicks won 52 games and signed a new contract that pays him about $1.8 million this season.

But Jackson's decline has paralleled the team's since Rick Pitino left to coach Kentucky after last season.

Last season, he averaged 9.9 points and 7.3 assists and his playing time declined when the 34-year-old Cheeks was obtained for Rod Strickland. He also was booed regularly by Madison Square Garden fans who had cheered him his first two seasons.

He reportedly has been offered in several prospective deals, but the trade deadline passed Thursday night without any action.

Last week, Jackson complained that "basketball isn't fun any more," under MacLeod.

Piniella says Reds can repeat

By Red Goodall
AP Sports Writer

PLANT CITY, Fla. — Lou Piniella has a polite, yet terse, response for those who question whether the Cincinnati Reds can repeat as world champions in 1991: "Why not?"

"It's a new year and everybody's going to want to beat us, but there's no question we've got the talent to get the job done again," Piniella said Friday, the first day of workouts.

"If our ball club can stay healthy and a couple of our young players — particularly pitchers — come through the way we expect, we're going to be a very formidable ball club," he added. "I like our chances."

Recent history says the odds are against the Reds celebrating another World Series championship in October.

No team has repeated as champions of the National League West since the Los Angeles Dodgers won consecutive division titles in 1977-78. And, it's also been 13 years since the New York Yankees became the last team to win back-to-back titles.

Skeptics consider Cincinnati vulnerable because while the Dodgers and San Francisco Giants appeared to improve themselves with offseason acquisitions like Darryl Strawberry, Brett Butler, Dave Righetti and Willie McGee, the Reds virtually stood pat.

Some experts have predicted the club will slip to second, and possibly third, in the NL West after leading the division from wire-to-wire in 1990.

"I'm not surprised, but thank God that the people who do the picking don't do the playing," Piniella said. "We're very comfortable with our ball club. We didn't do much over the winter. We didn't feel that we had to.

"We've got good talent here," the manager added. "I think the experience that our players received last year from being in first place all year, and from postseason play, is going to pay big dividends for us confidence-wise and maturity-wise."

"Certainly we know what it takes to get there," veteran starting pitcher Tom Browning said. "We know it's not going to be any easier this year, but we're going to go out there and have a lot of fun trying to accomplish it again ... When you get a taste of it, you want to go out there and do it again."

Among the decisions Piniella faces this spring are who will fill an opening in the pitching rotation created by Danny Jackson's departure and whether the club will carry two or three catchers. He also wants to fill a spot for a left-hander in the bullpen, with "Nasty Boy" lefty Norm Charlton set as one of his starting rotation this year.

The Reds held their first workout for pitchers and catchers on Friday. The full squad isn't due until Tuesday, but among the early arrivals were Eric Davis, Bill Doran, Billy Hatcher, Barry Larkin and Chris Sabo.

The club has seven unsigned players, including reliever Rob Dibble, who had an 8-3 record with a 1.74 ERA in 68 games last season. Reds vice president and general manager Bob Quinn said negotiations with Dibble's agent, Eric Goldschmidt, are moving slow.

"I will only say to you that Mr. Goldschmidt is engaging in what I call his media blitz campaign, which can best be characterized as a pickup game on the block where he's invited because he has the ball," Quinn said. "Then he elects — because things are not going his way during the pickup game — to take the ball and go home.

"The game, from our standpoint, is over. We have no ball to play with ... There's no acrimony," Quinn added. "It's just that he has a different style of negotiating which borders on dictating rather than negotiating."

Steve Howe back in uniform as non-roster Yankee

Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Steve Howe was assigned uniform No. 88 when he reported Friday to the New York Yankees' spring training camp as a non-roster invitee.

The high number may or may not reflect the left-hander's chances of resuming a major league career that was once thought lost to alcohol and drug abuse.

Howe, who has been suspended six times for substance abuse and who last pitched in the major leagues in 1987, was full of optimism after he pulled on the Yankees uniform for the first time.

"Right now we all have a 0.00 ERA," he said. "We're all doing good."

Howe had suggested on Thursday, when the Yankees formally invited him to camp, that he could fill the void created by the free agent departure of closer Dave Righetti. "They lost Rags. Here I come."

The Yankees are far from drawing the same conclusion. But they don't mind the attitude.

"There's nothing wrong with that. If you can back it up, that's fine," manager Stump Merrill said. "I'd sure rather have him say that than 'I hope I can get somebody out.' "

Howe earned one save when he last pitched in the major leagues, for Texas in 1987. He was 3-3 over all with a 4.31 ERA in 24 appearances. The 1980 National League Rookie of the Year set a career high with 18 saves in 1983.

Merrill didn't rule out the chance that Howe, who turns 33 in March, could emerge as the closer.

"He's been there before," the manager noted.

ANGELS: GM pleased with agreements

(From 1B)

"The lights are going to be very bright, about twice as bright in some areas of the field. People are going to notice them when they enter that park," said city councilman Bill Williams, who added that the previous lighting was inadequate for AA standards.

"Hopefully, the restrooms and seating can be added in the coming off-season. None of these are in the lease agreement, but the council and the mayor (Carroll Thomas) are very committed to these things. But, as with everything, they depend on the budget," he said.

Also slated for the '91 season is a new picnic area on the first-base side, similar to the existing one on the third-base side, and a number of smaller miscellaneous items that include new signs indicating the stadium's location.

Among the improvements listed for the '92 or '93 seasons are expanded stadium seating (800 general admission and 200 box, pushing total capacity to 5,000), two new sets of restrooms, a new visitors clubhouse, improved stadium cosmetics, a new sound system and press box improvements.

"We are going to have to prioritize, and maybe we can do these things a little at a time over the next few years with reserve dollars from the budget. We may have to decide which people need worse, a place to sit down or a place to use the restroom," Williams said.

"But we have a good working relationship with the team and are committed to make these things happen. We want to give them the impression that we are going to do some things each winter."

As for the new lease, Williams said "the future of minor league baseball has never looked better for the Permian Basin."

Hoppel, who will guide the 20th year of pro baseball in Midland (the Angels are entering their seventh year after the club was affiliated with the Chicago Cubs for 13 seasons), was equally as pleased with the new agreements.

"Today is an exciting day for the Midland Angels. The new lease guarantees the Permian Basin of professional baseball through 1996. I think it shows the owners' commitment to baseball in the Permian Basin," he said.

WLAF favors Crimson Tide linebackers

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Two former University of Alabama teammates were the first two players selected Friday in the linebacker draft of the World League of American Football.

The Orlando Thunder selected Wayne Davis and the San Antonio Riders took Greg Gilbert.

Eighty linebackers in all were chosen in the fifth of six days of position-by-position drafting.

Davis, 26, was drafted in the ninth round by the St. Louis Cardinals in 1987. He played two seasons with the Cardinals, followed by stints with the Los Angeles Rams and the San Francisco 49ers.

Gilbert, 23, was a sophomore at Alabama when Davis was a senior. Gilbert was drafted in the fifth round by the Chicago Bears in 1989 and played for the Indianapolis Colts last season.

Davis said he wasn't sure where in the draft he would be selected, especially after Thursday's workout for the league coaching staffs and scouts.

"I feel good about my physical condition, even though yesterday morning I ate too much breakfast and it came back up during the workout," he said Friday. "I felt great after that, but I didn't know if I would be picked first or last."

But Orlando Thunder coach Don Matthews had no doubt.

"After we researched him at Alabama and saw him in the workouts here, there was no question he was going to be our number one choice," Matthews said.

In other first-round choices, the Sacramento Surge selected Pete Najarian, 27, of Minnesota; London Monarchs, Marlon Brown, 28, of Memphis State; New York-New Jersey Knights, Joe Campbell, 24, of New Mexico State; Birmingham Fire, Paul McGowan, 25, of Florida State; Montreal Machine, Derrick Little, 24, of South Carolina; Frankfurt Galaxy, Virgil Robertson, 24, of Nicholls State; Raleigh-Durham Skyhawks, Ezekial Gordon, 24, of Pittsburgh; and Barcelona Dragons selected Ron Goetz, 23, of Minnesota.

Defensive backs will be selected Sunday, and the 650 drafted players will report to training camps with their new teams Monday.

The WLAF's inaugural season begins March 23. A ten-week regular season will lead to a semifinal round of playoffs and a World Bowl championship game June 9.

Davey Allison claims pole at Pontiac 400

Associated Press

RICHMOND — Davey Allison, winner of the pole at the season-opening Daytona 500, made it two in a row Friday by edging Alan Kulwicki for the top starting spot in Sunday's Pontiac 400.

"That's just a part of being competitive. Our goal this year is the Winston Cup championship," Allison said after his Ford Thunderbird's fast lap of 120.428 mph on Richmond International Raceway's three-quarter-mile, D-shaped layout.

In winning the 11th pole of his career, Allison came up well short of his own Richmond qualifying record of 122.850, set in September 1988.

More important to Allison was that he beat Kulwicki by five-thousandths of a second.

"The competition in Winston Cup racing has never been any stronger than it is right now," Allison said. "And I don't see it getting any easier."

Brett Bodine, the only other driver to break 120, will start third in Sunday's 400-lap event, followed by Ricky Rudd and Ken Schrader.

Rounding out the top 10 were Harry Gant, Geoff Bodine, Daytona 500 winner Ernie Irvan, Kyle Petty and Dick Trickle.

Allison said he and the rest of his team "were kind of disappointed when practice first started this morning because we couldn't get it dialed in right. But in the 30-minute practice session before qualifying started, we made a bunch of changes."

For most of the afternoon time trials, it looked as though Kulwicki had locked up the 15th pole of his career. The seventh of 35 drivers to make two-lap qualifying runs, Kulwicki was the first to break 120. His fast lap was a 120.401.

Nebraska legislature moves to block NCAA financial aid rules

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — In this city where football reigns on fall Saturdays, the Legislature passed a bill Friday to block NCAA rules limiting the amount of financial aid student athletes can receive.

Despite fears that the National Collegiate Athletic Association might impose sanctions against the University of Nebraska, the Legislature voted 32-10 to submit the bill for Gov. Ben Nelson's signature.

The governor has not revealed his position on the bill.

The bill is one of several measures indirectly challenging NCAA rules raised recently in this city where the "Big Red" of Nebraska's football colors dominates the streets in the fall.

"I think they (legislators) want to show the NCAA that we're the boss and the university and other colleges in Nebraska will have to do as we say," said Sen. Elroy Hefner of Coleridge, who led opposition to the bill.

"They think that will force the NCAA to back down, but I have my doubts they will."

The bill that says neither the university nor any state college can interfere with financial aid for student athletes. The schools now withhold portions of scholarships because of edicts from athletic associations.

Under NCAA rules, for example, a cap is placed on how much aid student athletes can receive from other grants if they accept an athletic scholarship. The bill would prohibit that.

Although the bill doesn't mention the NCAA by name, "we know, and they know who's to blame," said Sen. Ernie Chambers of Omaha, the bill's sponsor.

Chambers is not a new player at tackling the NCAA.

He sponsored a bill last year that was passed and signed by then-Gov. Kay Orr to require the NCAA to follow due process in its disciplinary procedures. That measure stemmed from sanctions against the UNLV basketball team and coach Jerry Tarkanian.

Another Chambers' bill this session would require the university to pay football players. It stalled on first-round debate but could be resurrected. A similar measure was passed in 1988, but vetoed by Orr.

Chambers' ideas also may be spreading. Earlier this week, the Colorado Senate quietly spiked a bill that would have allowed the University of Colorado and Colorado State to pay stipends to players.

Hefner and university officials fear what effect the student athletic scholarship measure could have on Nebraska sports.

Hefner said he feared the NCAA would punish the university if the law was passed. He said Nebraska football has been positive for economic development for the state.

"I'm afraid we couldn't be in a bowl game or on national TV," Hefner said.

Nebraska athletic director Bob Devaney said legislators might be "saying that the Legislature runs the state of Nebraska and the University of Nebraska is a state school and we should follow the dictate of Nebraska rather than the NCAA.

MAKING WAY FOR SPRING

I can hardly wait till February is over and spring is here!

Certainly not an unusual exclamation. The snow, which was novel in November and welcomed in December, is merely tolerated in January and declared a nuisance by February.

Thanksgiving and Christmas are captured on film and New Year's Eve is but a memory. Still, we must bear the ice and freezing temperatures at least through February.

Yet, toward the end of February there may be a most unusual day when the air is not quite so cold, and the sun seems to touch the earth with teasing, tantalizing fingertips of warmth melting the winter snow and making way for spring.

Does it sometimes seem that you have more than your share of trouble and sorrow? Learn to know God. Psalm 46:1 promises us that God is "a very present help in trouble." Accept Him and let His love touch your life like the revitalizing warmth of an earlier than spring day.

First Methodist plans Handbell Festival today

BIG SPRING — A Handbell Festival is set for today at First United Methodist Church here. The event concludes with a free performance at 3 p.m.

Gil Oxidine, director of music for First UMC, will host 11 handbell choirs from the Permian basin area. The event is hosted by the West Texas/Permian Basin Chapter of Choristers.

Clinician for the day-long festival is Doug Wagner, Indianapolis, Ind.

"Mr. Wagner is a nationally recognized composer and arranged who holds graduate and undergraduate music degrees from Butler University, Indianapolis, Ind.," said a release from the Chorister's Guild.

He is listed in "International Who's Who in Music" and "Who's Who in the Midwest," in addition to being named a Fellow of Wessex College, Dorset, England.

Presently, Wagner devotes a good deal of his time to composition and its allied activities, the release said.

As an educator, he continues to serve on the performing arts faculty of North Central High School, Indianapolis. As a church musician, he has served Episcopal, Presbyterian, Methodist and Roman Catholic congregations. Wagner is an American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP) award winner and an American Guild of English Handbell Ringers certified massed ringing conductor. He also is the executive handbell editor for The Lorenz Publishing Co.

"Having published 900 choral and instrumental titles, with well over six million copies of his music in church and school libraries across the country, this energetic and personable young man maintains an active schedule as guest conductor and workshop clinician with choral and handbell ensembles from coast to coast," the release said.

The workshop and festival day will conclude with a program of Wagner's Handbell Music at 3 p.m. in Garrett Hall of the First UMC. No admission will be charged for the performance. The public is invited to attend.

Series of talks planned

Michael Marshall, Episcopal director of the Anglican Institute, will speak at First United Methodist Church at 7 p.m. Sunday through Tuesday.

The series of talks, entitled "How on Earth Do I Believe in God?," are sponsored by the Episcopal congregations of the Permian Basin and hosted by First UMC. No admission will be charged.

In November of 1990, Marshall led a university mission at the University of Sewanee, Sewanee, Tenn. The topic was the same one he will cover here.

Of his three-day mission, the Living Church publication said in an article Dec. 23, 1990, "Bishop Marshall's talks and responses to questions were filled with fascinating stories and delightful humor."

Marshall, 54, became the youngest bishop in the Church of England since the Reformation when, in 1975, he was consecrated Bishop of Woolwich. He was 37. He left that position in 1984 and came to the United States, founding the Anglican Institute in St Louis, Mo. This has enabled him to preach and teach throughout North America as well as worldwide.

Marshall also will speak at First UMC during the Sunday morning worship service. The members of First UMC will be joined by the congregations of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church and the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity during the 10:35 a.m. service.

Christian songwriter to appear in concert

Michael Card, a Christian songwriter, performs in concert at Midland Center, 105 N. Main St., at 7:30 p.m. March 5.

Card

Opening for Card will be Bob Bennett.

Card has two books, "Immanuel: Reflections on the Life of Christ," and "Sleep Sound in Jesus," plus nine albums and a video, "Front Row."

"For 10 years now, Michael Card has been studying Scripture and revealing the person of Christ through his music," said a release from Sparrow Records. "He spent nearly a year contemplating the Wisdom Writings — Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes and Song of Solomon — before embarking upon his latest project, 'The Way of Wisdom,' the second album in his Old Testament trilogy entitled 'The Ancient Faith.'"

His search for what he describes as the "big picture" of the Wisdom Writings led him to discover a recurring theme — the inadequacy of wisdom, the release said.

"The writer of Ecclesiastes speaks of the emptiness of wisdom, Job exposes the hollowness of it," Card said. "The Song of solomon points at the fact that there is something altogether better than it. The Wisdom Writings prepare us to discover what, or Who Wisdom really is."

In his latest album, "The Way of Wisdom," Card has crafted a collection of songs which he describes as an overview of the teachings presented in each book.

Tickets, priced at $7 in advance, $5 group price and $9 the day fo the show, may be purchased at area Christian bookstores.

Pledge stuns Methodists

An anonymous benefactor, now deceased, has pledged more than $90 million for United Methodist camping ministries in the United States, The United Methodist Reporter reports.

The February announcement in stunned more than 400 participants at the national meeting of United Methodist camp leaders at Lakeview Methodist Conference Center near Palestine, according to the article by Diane Huie Balay.

Maurice Wise, a longtime leader in camping ministries, presented the document outlining details of the gift.

Wise, acting as a representative of the donor's estate, said the pledged gift is in two parts:

First, a $20 million gift to establish a national camp, conference center and retreat center to be located in Texas;

Second, at least $1 million to each annual conference in the United States that had camping ministries at the time of the announcement. Like the gift for the national center, this one is designated for camping, conference and retreat ministries within annual conferences.

According to United Methodist News Service, the pledged gift is one of the largest ever offered a United Methodist church or agency.

Two donors are involved in this history-making gift, Wise said.

Paleontologist digs up prehistoric skeletons

EDITOR'S NOTE: He's a professional diver and amateur paleontologist who has spent years probing the murky depths of Florida's lakes, streams and sinkholes in search of old bones. Don Serbousek has received a lot of publicty about his finds, but not much else. Now he's trying to cash in.

By Ike Flores

ORMOND BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Don Serbousek has a 130,000-year-old skeleton of a giant ground sloth he wants to sell.

It's up in his attic, alongside the 12,000-year-old bones of what may be the largest prehistoric mastodon ever found in North America. The woolly haired mastodon, or elephant, is also on the market.

Serbousek, 63, a professional diver who owns a combination dive shop and television-repair business in this Atlantic Coast community, is one of the pioneers of underwater archaeology and paleontology in Florida.

He has been probing for fossils on the mud-and-rock bottoms of polluted rivers, lakes and sinkholes throughout the state for 30 years. Many of his finds are on display in museums and others are research subjects in the scientific community.

Serbousek now feels it is time to give permanent homes to his most-prized possessions — the two rare specimens of the Pleistocene Era — preferably in large museums or private collections that would make them available to the researchers and the public.

HE HAS talked to a number of museum people about selling the skeletons, but so far has not come up with any definite offers.

What are such scientific treasures worth?

"Whatever someone is willing to pay for history," shrugs Serbousek, adding that he is "considering six figures or higher."

How he came into possession of two such valued specimens were well-reported stories in the 1970s. His achievements were written up in glowing terms by journalists as well as in scientific journals.

The giant sloth is one of two virtually complete skeletons dug up in 1975 by Serbousek and fellow amateur explorers Roger Alexon and Steve Hartman. The recovery site was a water-logged Daytona Beach sand pit that has been ranked in archaeological importance to the La Brea Tar Pits in California.

Dr. Clayton Ray of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C., Dr. Gordon Edmund of the Royal Museum of Ontario and other experts confirmed the significance of the find: Only a few such skeletons exist, and none of them are as complete.

THE SLOTH, a herbivorous mammal that could stand on its hind feet, is considered the largest and rarest prehistoric animal that ever lived in Florida.

Serbousek donated the first complete skeleton of a giant sloth to the tiny Museum of Arts and Sciences in Daytona Beach. He kept the second skeleton.

And in exchange for its help in assembling, treating and mounting the recovered fossils, Edmund's museum in Toronto got the remaining jackpot of bones from the rich graveyard.

After a community fund-raising effort, the Daytona Beach museum built a special dome-shaped addition to house its giant sloth, which is mounted to stand 14 feet tall. It has 1,300 skeletal elements.

The furry animal had long arms and 20-inch foot claws. Scientists estimate it would have been more than 20 feet tall standing upright, able to outreach other herbivores such as elephants feeding on tall trees and shrubs.

That animal weighed about 5 tons.

Giant sloth...is mounted to stand 14 feet tall. It has 1,300 skeletal elements. The furry animal had long arms and 20-inch foot claws. Scientists estimate it would have been more than 20 feet tall standing upright...That animal weighed about 5 tons.

"This is the largest sample representing this species" — known scientifically as Eremotherium mirabile — says Edmund, head of the department of Vertebrate Palaeontology at the Royal Ontario Museum.

THE OTHER sloth skeleton is just as big as the museum specimen and lies unmounted in boxes in Serbousek's house.

"Don's skeleton is certainly one of the best preserved examples of its kind, comparable to those in the Smithsonian," says Edmund, considered the leading authority in the field.

"A few other skeletons of Eremotherium are known, including one headless specimen in the geology museum in Colombia, a composite specimen in Rio de Janeiro and some unmounted material elsewhere in South and Central America," he says.

The other animal on Serbousek's auction block, the elephant-like mastodon, was recovered from the murky, snake-filled Aucilla River in north Florida in 1968.

The well-preserved bones were "virtually in one unit," says Serbousek. They were lying in a 23-foot hole on the river bottom. He and several other amateur divers came upon the fossils using underwater lamps. The animal was identifiable because of its lower jaw, which rested atop a pile of long leg bones.

Bringing the monster to the surface was a tough, tedious task. Team members made numerous dives and overcame many frustrations before the blue clay at the river bottom yielded its prize.

The laborious recovery process proved worthwhile because the mastodon, which they named Priscilla, is missing only its two left legs and a few of the foot bones. One of its tusks is 9½ feet long. The other was broken off and is about 1½ feet shorter.

MEASUREMENTS OF the shoulder blade and long leg bones help to place the estimated height of the animal at 10½ feet at the shoulder, Serbousek says.

None of a half-dozen experts in the field who were contacted knew of a bigger mastodon skeleton recovered on this continent.

"I have no doubt that it is among the contenders for some sort of major record, although scientific measurements would have to be made," says Dr. David Webb, paleontologist at the Florida State Museum in Gainesville who is familiar with the animal.

"There's a lot of work that hasn't been done on Priscilla yet, but it is quite extraordinary. It's in the major leagues, right along with the best ones in New York and Chicago. It's really big for a mastodon."

Dr. Daniel Fisher of the University of Michigan's Museum of Paleontology, another researcher on mastodon skeletons, says there may be others that are more complete than Priscilla.

But, he adds, "My rough impression is that it might be 15 to 20 percent larger than the largest one I'm familiar with."

Meanwhile, Serbousek is "copying" the mastodon bones — duplicating them in a lightweight, fiberglass material from life-size molds made directly from the skeletal parts.

Serbousek dug up two of these 130,000-year-old skeletons in 1975 at Daytona Beach and donated one to the museum. He wants to sell the second, which he keeps in the attic of his Ormond Beach, Fla., home.

SERBOUSEK AND Jacksonville physician Clifford Jeremiah, another amateur paleontologist, developed the fiberglass-reproduction process several years ago. They have copied dozens of fossils ranging from dinosaurs to sloths and shark jaws.

Serbousek's friends say that in addition to putting some money in the bank, the sale of Priscilla and the giant sloth would help bring him some recognition in a field which he loves but in which he never acquired the academic credentials necessary for prestige.

"Sometimes I think I've been rewarded just by working hard to recover the animals and then convincing others that these sites are of great value and importance," he says.

"But sometimes I wonder whether that's enough."

Administration argues for graduation prayers

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration urged the Supreme Court on Friday to allow prayers at public school graduations, arguing that courts have gone too far in ousting religion from public ceremonies.

Justice Department lawyers, stepping into a dispute from Providence, R.I., said schools do not violate the constitutionally required separation of church and state when they allow guest speakers to deliver invocations or benedictions at graduation ceremonies.

The high court since 1962 has banned organized prayer sessions from public schools. But the Justice Department's "friend-of-the-court" brief submitted in the Providence case said prayers at graduation ceremonies are different.

"Such ceremonies typically occur but once a year. They are addressed not to children alone but to families as a whole which are ... a natural bulwark against any coercion," the government lawyers said.

"Whatever special concerns about subtle coercion may be present in the classroom setting — where inculcation is the name of the game — they do not carry over into the commencement setting, which is more properly understood as a civic ceremony than part of the educational mission," they added.

Pending before the court is an appeal by school officials in Providence from lower court decisions barring invocations and benedictions that acknowledge God.

Such prayers were challenged two years by Providence resident Daniel Weisman when his daughter, Deborah, was a student at Nathan Bishop Junior High School.

Deborah is now a student at Classical High School in Providence.

Weisman's lawsuit led to rulings that permanently barred such prayers in Providence's public schools.

In the brief filed Friday, government lawyers urged the court to scrap in some cases the three-part test it has used repeatedly since 1971 in trying to decide whether some governmental practice violates that part of the Constitution banning "an establishment of religion."

Under that test, the governmental practice is struck down if it does not have a secular purpose, advances or promotes religion or fosters excessive entanglement with religion.

Government lawyers said the court should "jettison the framework erected by (the three-part test) in circumstances where, as here, the practice under assault is a non-coercive, ceremonial acknowledgement of the heritage of a deeply religious people."

There is no indication when the court will say whether it will grant or deny the appeal by the Providence school officials.

Private colleges ease off big tuition increases

Pressed by a weak economy and competition from public colleges, the nation's private colleges and universities are announcing some of the smallest tuition increases in years for next fall.

Early indications around the country suggest that many private, four-year institutions are finally trying to put the brakes on a decade-long tuition surge that threatens to put those schools out of reach of the middle class.

Most schools checked are increasing next fall's tuitions in the 4-7 percent range, within a percentage point or so of the nation's 1990 inflation rate of 6.1 percent.

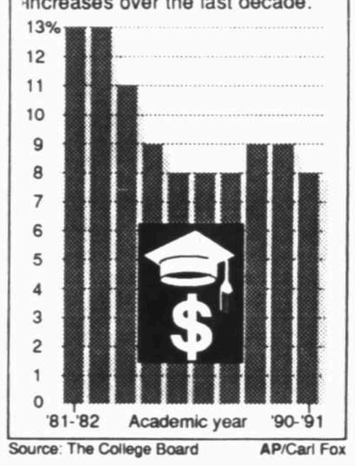
That contrasts with the 9.6 percent average annual increase by four-year private schools throughout the '80s.

Worcester Polytechnic Institute, a highly regarded engineering school in Worcester, Mass., announced a freeze on tuition and fees on Monday.

On Friday, Susquehanna University of Selinsgrove, Pa., announced a 5.95 percent tuition increase for next fall, its smallest jump in more than a dozen years.

Tuition growth

After a decade-long surge, private four-year college rates show signs of easing next fall. Percentage increases over the last decade:



Source: The College Board AP/Carl Fox

"This year, our sense was that the economic pressures on some of our families were such that we had to be very careful on tuition, without giving ground on quality," Susquehanna President Joel Cunningham said.

Elsewhere:

— Princeton University is upping its rates by 6.7 percent;

— Bucknell University in Lewisburg, Pa., is raising fees by 4.5 percent, lowest in 28 years;

— Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa., approved a 7.2 percent tuition hike, smallest in 17 years;

— Syracuse University is considering a 6.8 percent increase in undergraduate tuition, the smallest in six years;

— Oberlin College in Oberlin, Ohio, is expected to increase rates by 7 percent when trustees meet March 1;

— Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine, is considering a 6.8 percent tuition increase after three years of increases in excess of 8 percent.

Many college leaders said they are acting to provide some relief to middle-income students caught between rising tuitions, a weak economy and student aid programs they frequently don't qualify for.

Such students "are doubly squeezed," said Thomas A. Manion, president of St. Norbert College in De Pere, Wis., which is boosting tuition and fees 7 percent next fall.

"Their parents earn too much for them to qualify for many kinds of need-based financial aid, but not enough for them to pay for their children's education at a private college."

Some, including Worcester Polytechnic President Jon C. Strauss, see added meaning in next fall's moderation: a possible end to what higher education circles have called the "Chivas Regal" syndrome — the belief that, as with fine Scotch, students will flock to schools that charge the most.

During the prosperous '80s, that belief proved true at many private colleges.

Now, with top schools asking $10,000 and $20,000 a year in the midst of a recession, students and their parents are increasingly turning to less costly four-year public institutions. Even community colleges once sneered at by better students are seeing huge enrollment gains.

Private university officials now foresee a difficult era in which they will be struggling to restrain tuition to stay competitive, while somehow maintaining the "Chivas Regal" quality that they believe is their big edge.

"Efficiency is the buzzword for the '90s," said Luis Glazer, provost of the University of Miami, which announced a tuition increase of less than 8 percent next fall after seven years of hikes averaging nearly 10 percent.

"Colleges everywhere are re-evaluating their programs and asking whether they need to do all things. Everyone's going with lower tuitions. It's the atmosphere right now. Some things will take a beating," he said.

Du Pont to pay waste penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. has agreed to pay $1.85 million in penalties to settle a hazardous waste disposal dispute with the government, the third largest such fine ever obtained, officials said Friday.

The settlement with the Wilmington, Del., company was one of 29 hazardous waste land disposal enforcement actions announced by the Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Justice. Collectively, they would impose penalties totaling more than $5.35 million.

"These enforcement actions are part of a continuing nationwide campaign by EPA and the Justice Department to stop people from illegally putting hazardous wastes in the ground," EPA Administrator William K. Reilly said in a statement.

School sells holdings

BALTIMORE (AP) — Johns Hopkins University, home to one of the nation's most prestigious medical schools, decided Friday to sell its holdings in tobacco companies, saying the investments undermine its efforts to fight cancer.

"The holding of tobacco stocks is incompatible with the university's mission to disseminate information on the treatment and prevention of disease and illness," the trustees said in a statement after the unanimous vote.

Only a handful of other U.S. campuses have shunned tobacco company stocks, including Harvard and the City University of New York.

CDC considers plan

ATLANTA (AP) — Medical workers and civil rights advocates on Friday spoke out against the Centers for Disease Control's consideration of a plan to test doctors and dentists for AIDS.

"CDC has served to create the impression of a great risk," David Barr of the Gay Men's Health Crisis said. "The risk is very small."

Barr spoke during the second of two days of hearings the CDC called after the disclosure that a Florida dentist apparently infected three patients with AIDS. Dr. David Acer has since died of the disease.

The federal agency is considering recommending AIDS testing for medical workers such as dentists and surgeons, but will take no action until after receiving written comments for another month.

AIDS couple get pot OK

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP) — An AIDS-afflicted couple arrested for using marijuana to relieve their symptoms said Friday that Washington has agreed to supply them with pre-rolled, government-grown pot.

Barbra and Kenny Jenks are only the third and fourth victims of AIDS to receive permission from the federal government to smoke marijuana, although some glaucoma and cancer patients also have obtained it.

They contend marijuana is the only thing that alleviates the nausea and vomiting caused by the disease and medications, including AZT, that they take to treat it. Without marijuana, the claimed, they would starve.

Abortion bill rejected

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — A bill to ban most abortions was rejected Friday by a state Senate committee, but the sponsor said he expects the full Senate will take up the measure anyway.

The Judiciary Committee voted 6-1 against the abortion measure, which cleared the House by an overwhelming margin two weeks ago.

The measure would allow abortion only in cases involving rape, incest, a danger to the physical health of the woman or when a doctor determines that a fetus is severely mentally or physically handicapped. A rape victim who waits more than seven days to report the attack would not be allowed an abortion.

The bill provides no criminal penalties, but doctors who perform illegal abortions could face civil fines of at least $10,000 and could be sued for damages by prosecutors, women who had abortions and fathers of aborted fetuses.

Three die in plane crash

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Three men died Friday when a small airplane on a test flight crashed beside a city street shortly after takeoff from Tulsa International Airport, authorities said.

No one was on the isolated, four-lane road when the twin-turbo prop Mitsubishi MU-2 crashed nose first in a drainage ditch on the west side of the road, authorities said.

The identities of the three victims were being withheld pending notification of relatives.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators were on the scene, sifting through wreckage that was scattered across 30 yards in every direction.

Albanian names cabinet amid shooting, deaths

WORLD

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Shooting broke out between police and demonstrators outside a military academy in the Albanian capital Friday and at least four people were killed and several wounded, state television reported.

Cadets inside were reported guarding a bust of the late Stalinist dictator and founder of Communist Albania, Enver Hoxha. Demonstrators in Tirana on Wednesday tore down a giant statue of Hoxha — who ruled Albania for 41 years — and set fire to his portraits and works.

The TV report said several people were wounded in the clash outside the academy, and 50 arrests were made.

Albania's Communist president, Ramiz Alia, sought to slow the quickening pace of the anti-Communist movement sweeping the Balkan nation. He named a new government Friday headed by a young Marxist economist, Fatos Nano, and a new presidential council.

Alia announced Wednesday that he was taking direct power, apparently trying to hold the nation together prior to March 31 elections — the first free elections since Communists took over the government in 1946.

But protests continued, and radio reports monitored in London suggested the anti-Hoxha demonstrations had triggered a fierce reaction from pro-Hoxha forces and some army officers.

TV showed scenes of thousands of pro-Hoxha demonstrators in three towns in southern Albania, where Hoxha was born.

The television said one officer was killed and two injured at the academy. A Tirana resident reached by telephone from Vienna said a later telecast identified the three others killed as demonstrators.

State radio said "destructive forces" gathered outside the academy during a meeting of political parties, Defense and Interior Ministry officials and media representatives. It said demonstrators fired, killing one policeman and wounding two, and that police then started shooting.

The new council warned against further attacks on Hoxha, according to state radio, cautioning: "National freedom and sovereignty have never been under such a threat as today."

The opposition Democratic Party also broadcast an appeal for calm. It said some army officers and "certain dark forces" were trying to undermine peace and said Communists in southern Albania had urged "volunteers" to march on Tirana.

The toppling of Hoxha statues in Tirana and two other towns Wednesday appeared to provoke a backlash of pro-Communist sentiment among some Albanians.

Hoxha, who ruled harshly for 41 years, is revered by older Albanians and Communists as a World War II liberator who went on to build a fiercely independent country. Younger Albanians blame Hoxha for four decades of repression and poverty.

A statement by the new council carried in a radio broadcast said, "Those who struck against Enver Hoxha in fact wanted bloodshed, a national scale tragedy, fratricide among the Albanian people and the destruction of Albania." On Friday, a museum of Hoxha memorabilia was closed, and a museum official said a disco might be set up in the basement of the building.

Yugoslav republics move to ease crisis

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Leaders of Yugoslavia's six republics on Friday took a step toward easing the crisis that pits independence-minded republics against Communist-ruled Serbia and threatens the Balkan federation.

During the closed-door session, the leaders agreed to name a committee to examine the differing visions for Yugoslavia's future, they said in a statement.

Yugoslavia's federal presidency would then outline a "constitutional-legal procedure" for a republic to separate from the country, said the statement on the official Tanjug news agency. It said the procedure should be acceptable to all the feuding regions.

The statement was the first time that regional and federal officials have acknowledged that the westernmost republics of Slovenia and Croatia could secede.

Slovenia and Croatia, which are Yugoslavia's most prosperous and Western-oriented republics, this week passed resolutions formalizing their secession plans. The non-Communist republics also voted to give state laws precedence over federal legislation.

After Friday's meeting, Croatia's representative on the federal presidency, Stipe Mesic declared: "We have made a first step forward."

"At least all the cards are on the table," said Croatia's President Franjo Tudjman.

The Tanjug statement noted that the six republics' visions of Yugoslavia's future "continue to remain different to a considerable degree."

Friday's meeting in Sarjevo, capital of Bosnia-Hercegovina, was the fifth in a series that began in January. The earlier talks, held in the federal capital of Belgrade, foundered after Croatia and Slovenia boycotted or walked out of two meetings. Another meeting is set for March 1 in Belgrade.

Friday's meeting was held in a baroque government guest house yards from the bridge where a young Serbian assassinated Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, in 1914, setting off events that led to World War I.

Croatia and Slovenia have advocated turning Yugoslavia into a loose alliance of sovereign states.

Serbia, Yugoslavia's largest republic, and Montenegro, its smallest, want a strong, centralized federation with a single market and common foreign and defense policies.

The central state of Bosnia-Hercegovina and the southern state of Macedonia want a compromise. Both stand to lose territory if Serbia's hardline Communist President Slobodan Milosevic makes good on a threat to expand Serbia to include all ethnic Serbs if the federation unravels.

Leaders from Bosnia and Slovenia indicated after Friday's talks that an overall compromise might be found that would grant Slovenia and Croatia virtual independence, lock Serbia and Montenegro in a tight alliance, and allow Bosnia and Macedonia room for maneuver.

Such a solution would match the complexity of Yugoslavia's many historic, ethnic, economic and political rifts and probably avert the civil war many have feared. But no one knows how it would function.

Several Western diplomats and some Yugoslavs have predicted that Yugoslavia's quarrelling leaders would somehow resolve their decade-long crisis with an elastic formula that makes concessions to their opposing views.

However, this also would require immensely complex negotiations on dividing federal assets and the $17 billion foreign debt.

There'll be no military coup, Soviet defense official says

MOSCOW (AP) — A top general used the formal Army Day address at a Kremlin gala Friday to assure that the military has no plans to overthrow the government.

"The representatives of the armed forces do not strive for power," said Gen. Konstantin Kochetov, first deputy minister of defense. "They are not preparing a military coup."

A select audience of about 1,500, including President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, heard the speech at the Palace of Congresses.

Kochetov did not mention Gorbachev by name in his speech, which repeatedly pledged allegiance to the Constitution and socialism. But he denounced a statement made Tuesday by Russian republic President Boris N. Yeltsin calling for Gorbachev's resignation.

"The army and the navy reject the ambitious statement of Boris Yeltsin, his line of opposition and deepening of the split in our society," Kochetov said.

Yeltsin suggested that Gorbachev should be replaced by the Federation Council, which includes the presidents of all 15 Soviet republics, including Yeltsin himself.

Gorbachev has often been at odds with the republic leaders, who are demanding more authority and, in some cases, outright independence. He did not speak during the Army Day ceremony nor did he mingle with the crowd.

WORLD in brief

Leader to give salary to poor

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — President Jean-Bertrand Aristide said Friday he would donate his $10,000-a-month salary to the poor and said moral suasion would help reduce the corruption and brutality of Haiti's security forces.

Aristide

In his first news conference since taking office Feb. 7, the Roman Catholic priest and social reformer said he respects Cuba's government but would not follow the model of Haiti's Communist neighbor.

Aristide is worshiped by the poor masses in this Caribbean nation, once a French colony. He was expelled from his conservative ecclesiastical order in 1988 because of his calls for radical change in Haiti.

The president indicated he would restore diplomatic ties with Cuba but would not be "precipitous" about it. Haiti broke ties with Cuba in 1961 under the late dictator Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, who was virulently anti-communist.

Vote restores rights

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Parliament voted Friday to restore farmland to private owners, ending more than 40 years of Communist management that squandered much of Bulgaria's agricultural bounty.

Legislators in the 400-seat Grand National Assembly passed the law after a lengthy, often acrimonious debate over who should be given rights to the land held by the inefficient collective farms.

The former ruling Communists, who have been renamed Socialists, argued that ownership should go to the farmworkers who tilled the collectively held land during the Communist regime. Opposition leaders wanted the land returned to those who owned it before it was seized by the Communists in the 1940s.

A compromise between the two positions was reached and the law was passed Friday after a paragraph-by-paragraph vote that spanned 20 parliamentary sessions.

Men confess to slaying

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A ranch foreman accused of paying a gunman $850 to kill a union leader who fought Amazon deforestation was arrested and whisked away from the area because of fears he would be lynched.

Francisco Assis Ferreira was arrested late Thursday on a ranch near Rio Maria in the northern state of Para, said Eder Mauro, a police official.

"He confessed everything," Mauro said by telephone from Belem, the capital of Para. "He admitted he contacted the gunman, took him to the ranch and agreed on the price."

Police were led to the ranch by Jose Serafim Salles, the alleged triggerman in the Feb. 2 slaying of Souza, Mauro said, adding that he also confessed.

Both men were flown to Belem because police said they might become targets for a lynch mob if the remained in Rio Maria.

The price for killing Souza was 200,000 cruzeiros, about $850, Mauro said. Both men were charged with homicide. No immediate trial date was set.

Educators believe year-round school aids learning

CONROE, Texas (AP) — School in July? Vacation in February?

"I like it," says 11-year-old Emily Torguson, "because during the summer, you get bored and you forget everything and you spend lots of time reviewing.

Emily and some of her sixth grade classmates at Collins Intermediate School are among the second group to attend school year-round in a pilot program other Texas schools closely are monitoring.

"I think maybe next year, it'll be a little easier for us," Emily said. "Maybe in the year-round school, we won't review as much and we can learn new things."

Officials in the Conroe Independent School District have been surprised at the popularity of the year-round program they introduced in August of 1989. The program was expanded this year and more interest is expected next year.

PROPONENTS BELIEVE shorter vacation breaks during the school year result in less review time and burnout and increased enthusiasm and retention.

"I saw such a difference in the kids' motivation," says teacher Paula Nowiczewski. "I think it helps them develop the mentality that learning is something you should do year round."

Sure, but what about those three months off in the summer?

Surprisingly, many students enrolled in the program say they do not mind missing the three-month break. Of course, it's midwinter and this group hasn't been in class during the hot, humid summer.

"I was the one who told my mom about it, because in the summer I get bored," says 10-year-old David Tillman. "We get lots of breaks now."

Jo Ann Beken, the principal at Crockett Intermediate, says the new schedule seems to thwart the irritability that brews among students as the traditional school year drags on.

"It seems that as soon as the kettle is about to boil over, it's break time," Ms. Beken says.

THE NUMBERS ARE the same: 175 school days for both traditional and year-round students. But those in the new program attend classes for six weeks and then either have a two- or four-week break.

Conroe's pilot program began in August 1989 with 54 sixth-graders at Crockett Intermediate and was expanded to six schools this past fall. About 850 students now are enrolled in grades kindergarten through sixth.

District officials also have sent home questionnaires about the year-round school to help determine how much interest there will be in the program next year.

It's the only public school district in Texas offering a year-round program of classes, although several are interested in implementing programs of their own next fall, says Julian Shaddix, assistant commissioner at the Texas Education Agency.

Teachers and students volunteer to participate in the Conroe program, which is favored by the State Board of Education.

"It's not a complicated thing at all, and the benefits of it are numerous," says Charles Loyd, Collins' principal and creator of the Conroe program. "It creates some lifestyle changes, but to me it makes so much sense. It's worth making the adjustments."

THE NINE-MONTH calendar, which dates back to the 1800s, was formed to fit a time when children were needed in the summer to pick cotton and harvest other crops. Loyd calls it "the cotton-pickin' calendar," and says it is no longer relevant.

"I am convinced that they like it better," he says of the year-round calendar. "There's not the burnout effect that occurs in April and May. It appears that achievement is enhanced."

"The students are generally pleased with the program," Loyd says. "The teachers are very satisfied. They were real pleased with student motivation. The kids are more ready to go. The teachers are refreshed."

Collins Elementary school sixth grade teacher Mrs. Vickie Latiolais works with students that attend school the year-round in Conroe, Texas. Students in the pilot program at Conroe schools like the vacation breaks during the year that result in less reviewing and less boredom.

Although he would like several years of data, Loyd has compiled some information on the sixth-grade students' involved in the first year that generally support his theories.

In his study, which is part of a doctoral dissertation he is doing for Texas A&M University, he compared three groups — traditional students, year-round students and year-round students minus the gifted and talented youths.

The students attended Crockett, an economically and ethnically mixed school in Conroe, a small town north of Houston. The year-round students also came from various ethnic and economic backgrounds.

NATIONAL STUDIES show teachers spend the first four to six weeks of every nine-month school year reviewing skills that students forget during the summer.

But the two groups with the year-round students showed they needed almost no reviewing time when they returned to school from the shorter breaks.

Loyd's study also showed fewer discipline problems with the year-round students. Their grades were somewhat better and more of them made the honor roll.

"I think it helps makes a case for year-round schools," Loyd said. "The educational advantages outweigh the disadvantages."

Ms. Nowiczewski and Becky Robins, the first two year-round teachers, said the gifted and talented students benefit from the program because they don't have a chance to get bored when there is less review time.

"They can get bored so quick, but now they have something to do all year," Ms. Robins says.

But the program also helps those students considered likely dropouts, they said. During the summer, these students often forget what they have learned and never catch up when a new year begins because they generally are not self-motivated learners.

"THIS KEEPS THEM learning and building on their skills," Ms. Nowiczewski says.

The drawbacks generally involve personal issues. Some children in the same family are not on the same school schedule, creating difficulties in organizing child care.

In addition, some parents may be divorced with one having custody for nine months and the other getting the child for the summer. The other parent may even live in another city.

The most common complaint among the students is that they don't have as many children in the neighborhood to play with during their breaks.

"I didn't like it at first," says Johnna Warren, 11, another year-round student at Collins. "I knew I was going to miss my friends."

Educators face additional problems in expanding the program to high school where many students are involved in extracurricular activities that are based on the regular school year. Year-round high school students also would graduate in the summer, missing the big commencement ceremonies.

BUT THOSE THAT favor the concept believe they can overcome the difficulties.

"My hope is that this whole school will be on a year-round schedule," says Crockett principal Jo Ann Beken. "It's probably not going to happen very soon. It's still a pilot program, but its growing and interest in growing. Time is going to help us."

Teacher to stay with same class

ALDINE, Texas (AP) — Kindergarten teacher Ingrid Sherwood likens her students to bowls of Jell-O.

Gelatin must be shaped before it is chilled. And Sherwood wants to reach these disadvantaged children, many of them from low-income families, before they are molded.

To help achieve this goal, Sherwood will teach the same group of Aldine students for seven consecutive years — from pre-kindergarten through fifth grade. She wants to bring a measure of stability into their lives.

"The students will have somebody who will make sure their education will be complete," Sherwood said. "It will matter to me what they do this year because I'll have them next year."

Disappointed with the increasing number of high-school dropouts, Sherwood is resolved to help at least a few children beat the odds. By teaching the same students, she says, she can monitor their progress, develop relationships with their families and provide a nurturing environment.

Sherwood pitched this unusual plan to her Aldine Independent School District supervisors in 1988 with no supporting research or studies. Administrators promptly authorized her to adopt a class of mostly disadvantaged children at Black Elementary School on an experimental basis.

"Ingrid will know from grade zero to grade five what the youngsters need," said Ed Vines, assistant superintendent for instruction in the northeast Harris County school system.

Some educators argue that students benefit from studying under different teachers from year to year. They cite concerns that students will be stuck with a mediocre teacher for an extended time, years or become too dependent on a longtime teacher.

Sherwood shoves such doubts aside, calling her new undertaking "my professional dream come true."

In many low-income families, she said, both parents work and the family moves frequently. Sherwood believes she can be a stabilizing force and perhaps persuade families to stay in one place for an entire school year.

Any students who have personal conflicts with Sherwood may ask to be assigned to another teacher. Sherwood also expects new children to be enrolled in her class as the years progress because she must take her share of the student load.

Sherwood said she does not intend that this pilot project "change the world of education," but she wants it to work for this class. She envisions more widespread application of a modified version of the concept, wherein teachers instruct the same students for two or three consecutive years

Kindergarten teacher Ingrid Sherwood wants to reach disadvantaged children, many of them from low-income families, before they are molded. She likens her students to bowls of Jell-O, it must be shaped before it is chilled. She will teach the same group of Aldine, Texas, students for seven consecutive years.

Sherwood developed the idea while she was hospitalized before giving birth to her youngest son. She said she asked a nurse in the room for a pain pill, but minutes later a different nurse attended to something in the room, and a while later yet another nurse was summoned.

Because so many nurses attended to her, Sherwood said, not one of them became familiar with her needs. She sees the same problem in the schools.

"This program will make people responsible to each other, and people responsible to each other do a better job," Sherwood said.

Sherwood's unyielding energy suits her to this task. Her eyes widen when she talks about the children, and the button she wears on her chest reads, "I Love You."

But because many teachers fear that success of Sherwood's class might lead to sweeping reforms in the school district, she said, a lot of her colleagues keep their distance from her.

And every year Sherwood moves up a grade with her class, another teacher at Black must be reassigned — making her even more unpopular.

"If the top administration says 'yes,' it must be worth doing," Sherwood said.

Sylvia Seidel, assistant director of the National Education Association's National Center of Innovations, said this concept is catching on around the country in response to changing student needs.

Richards appoints more minorities, women to 'firsts'

AUSTIN (AP) — The day Ann Richards became governor, she offered a glimpse of the kind of government she wanted.

"Today, we have a vision of a Texas where opportunity knows no race, no gender, no color," she said.

And since taking office on Jan. 15, Richards has appointed women and minorities to a string of "firsts" for Texas government, including:

—The first Hispanic and first woman to the Railroad Commission.

—The first black to the University of Texas Board of Regents.

—The first black woman to the Texas A&M regents.

—The first disabled person to the Department of Human Services board.

—The first crime victim, a woman who was raped and severely beaten, to the Board of Criminal Justice, which oversees prisons, parole and probation.

—Women and minorities as key advisers, including her chief of staff, appointments secretary and two deputy staff chiefs.

"SHE SET THE tone during the campaign. She said she was going to open the doors of state government to people who were underrepresented," said Bill Cryer, the governor's press secretary.

"She's found a lot of people that believe as she does that there should be a change in the way some of these boards and agencies are run," Cryer said.

Appointing people to serve on the 250 state boards and commissions, where they direct state agency policies, is one of any governor's chief duties. During a four-year term, a governor will appoint about 4,000 people to state posts.

Traditionally, governors have turned to friends, political supporters and campaign contributors when it comes time to fill such jobs.

But a 1989 Senate study, referred to recently by the Texas Women's Political Caucus, said that men had made up 79 percent of appointees, while comprising only about half the state's population.

The study said Anglos are 63 percent of the population but 87 percent of appointees. Hispanics accounted for 24 percent of the population but 6 percent of appointees, and blacks made up 12 percent of the population but just 5.5 percent of appointees.

Supporters say Richards is setting a new course.

"I THINK she's opened probably as many doors in the first couple of months as her immediate predecessor did in four years," said Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party.

"Whether it was systematic or by the nature of politics heretofore, the fact is that certain groups just weren't getting appointed to government positions. And that ignored a huge talent pool that we should make available to help solve the problems of this state," Martin said.

Richards' first formal nomination went to Lena Guerrero, an Austin state representative, who became the first Hispanic and first woman to serve on the powerful three-member Railroad Commission.

In appointing Ms. Guerrero, Richards said she was signaling that "rich and poor, and old and young, and men and women, and white, black and brown alike are going to be in positions of power and responsibility in this state."

She named the Rev. Zan Holmes, a Dallas minister, as the first black regent for the University of Texas system. Allison Leland of Houston, a lawyer and widow of U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, became the first black woman on the Texas A&M Board of Regents.

Bob Geyer of El Paso, whose neck was broken in an automobile accident, is the first disabled person placed on the governing board of the Department of Human Services.

Ellen Webb Halbert of Austin, a crime victim, was appointed to the Criminal Justice Board.

"It's a perspective you've probably never found on that board before," Cryer said of Richards' philosophy.

"THESE ARE people who have not been represented on the state boards and agencies that regulate their lives," he said.

But some critics contend that Richards' promised "New Texas" isn't all that different from the "old" Texas. Key appointments have gone to big campaign contributors, including:

—Walter Umphrey, a Beaumont lawyer tabbed for the Parks and Wildlife Commission. He contributed more than $110,000 individually and through his political action committee, and, through another PAC, lent the Richards' campaign $200,000.

—Waco insurance executive Bernard Rapoport, who gave Richards' campaign $78,000. He was appointed to the UT board of regents.

—Royce Wisenbaker, appointed to a third term as a Texas A&M regent, who gave $50,000 to each of three candidates in the Democratic gubernatorial primary and another $50,000 to Richards in the general election.

—A&M appointee Mary Nan West, who contributed more than $50,000.

"There seems to be one common thread, with a few minor exceptions," said Texas Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer.

"CONTRIBUTORS HAVE received major, major appointments. And for their qualifications and performance? The jury's still out," he said.

Meyer said such appointments seem to fly in the face of Richards' high-profile push for government ethics reform. "She is clearly not applying the new ethics standard retroactively," he said.

Her aides dispute such charges, saying Richards' nominees are qualified for their posts.

"These people, obviously, helped her in the campaign. But they're also people she knew. She knows their measure. They have all been superb, highly qualified individuals," Cryer said.

Indictments tarnish image of state law inforcement

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The image of Lone Star State law enforcement is as old as Texas itself: A rugged sheriff in a 10-gallon hat polishing his badge after bringing justice to his town in a gunfight outside the local saloon.

But that romantic "Lonesome Dove" image of the Texas lawman has taken a beating lately.

Over the past month, three West Texas sheriffs, a Department of Public Safety trooper, a South Texas justice of the peace and the family of a South Texas sheriff have been linked to drug-related crimes.

And the rural areas are not the only ones with problems.

Steel

In September, Dallas police chief Mack Vines was fired after being indicted on a misdemeanor perjury charge. In November, Rockwall County sheriff John David McWhorter was convicted of participating in organized crime.

Investigators say there are a slew of possible motives for peace officers to turn renegade, but two stand out.

"I think it's a combination of greed and ego," said Eastland County District Attorney Leslie Vance, who recently helped federal authorities in an investigation of former Eastland County sheriff Dee Oselene Hogan and former Eastland DPS trooper Acey Steel.

Hogan

Hogan, 59, and Steel, 40, both pleaded guilty recently to federal charges accusing them of helping a massive West Texas drug ring.

Both men refused to comment after their court appearance.

According to court records, Hogan and Steel worked hand-in-hand with Guy Regan Kincaid and Steven Patrick Benifiel, the alleged leaders of a methamphetamine-manufacturing network that distributed drugs nationwide from Eastland County.

McWhorter

Hogan, who is described by colleagues as a man "who loves to smile," bowed his head as he admitted in court that he altered Kincaid's arrest records.

Steel, who received numerous outstanding service awards in 17 years with DPS, trembled as he told the court he had warned Benifiel of surveillance by undercover DPS narcotics investigators in Eastland County.

Hogan resigned after two years as sheriff on Jan. 22 as part of a bond agreement. Steel resigned Jan. 30, one day before he was indicted by a federal grand jury.

Two sources close to the investigation said Hogan teamed with Benifiel and Kincaid for political gain.

"Hogan allowed Benifiel and Kincaid to manufacture and distribute their drugs in exchange for information about other drug offenders in the county," according to one source.

"Hogan nailed the others and reaped the political gain of making several drug arrests. He appeared on the outside to be a real heavy toward drug dealers. But that was not the case," the source said.

Gordon Johnson, executive director of the Sheriffs' Association of Texas, Inc., said the recent rash of lawlessness should not be an instant indictment of other peace officers.

"If we read newspapers and watch the TV, you can find people in every walk of life, whether a doctor, minister, nurse or school teacher who are in places of public trust, who for some reason do not adhere to the standards that are expected of them," Johnson said.

"But does that mean all of those professions have gone bad? I don't think so."

But Mary Turner, a convenience store owner in Rankin, a rural, treeless West Texas town in the middle of nowhere, will never forgive or forget the sheriff who turned her life upside down.

In 1987, Ms. Turner was arrested by Upton County sheriff Glenn Willeford for possession of $500 worth of methamphetamine that she claimed for three years was planted in her store.

Last month, a jury in federal court believed her and ordered Willeford to pay Ms. Turner $1.5 million in exemplary damages in a civil case accusing him of framing the woman.

"Often times the sheriff is the chief law enforcing officer of the county," said Ms. Turner, whose convenience store, Turner One Stop, lost all of its business after her arrest.

"It scares you to death that someone could ruin someone's life like that and never be questioned about it," she said. "Everyone just assumes you can trust the sheriff."

Willeford, who resigned from office after the incident and now works as an oilfield worker in Sheffield, denies any wrongdoing.

Ms. Turner, who filed Willeford's tax returns while he was sheriff, said she believed Willeford framed her because she once questioned a deduction on his taxes.

"The rural counties with very little tax base have a terrible problem," said Childress County District Attorney David McCoy. "The sheriffs often can not get overtime and sometimes make less than their deputies. They may think they are not appreciated and think they deserve more."

Residents who gather in the Coffee Slurper's Club in Childress still are stunned over the arrest last month of Sheriff Claude Lane on drug charges.

Lane, an affable 300-pound man who would rather tell a joke than read someone their rights, was indicted by a federal grand jury on 12 counts accusing him of trying to sell 100 pounds of seized marijuana for $10,000.

Lane, 54, who has been sheriff for six years, pleaded innocent at an arraignment hearing Feb. 8. He was placed on a paid leave of absence after his arrest Jan. 21 and will likely go to trial in April.

"Well, if he is convicted, then I sill won't believe it," Childress resident Rusty Baker said from his stool in the Slurper's Club. "I can't imagine that for $10,000 he would throw his entire life away. Claude is not that stupid."

But investigators say money problems may have made Lane desperate.

"Pure and simply he was dead broke," McCoy said. "The facts look pretty bad. He does not fit the description of a guy who would do this. But it just became an easy way to make dollars and cents."

In Rio Grande City, Justice of the Peace Hector Perez was arrested Feb. 9, accused of trying to sell undercover agents 150 pounds of marijuana for $80,000, according to Fred Ball of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

Perez, 35, has been a Starr County justice for eight years. Prior to that, he was a Starr County deputy sheriff. He has yet to enter a plea.

And last month a federal grand jury indicted three children of Webb County Sheriff Juan Garza on charges related to the December seizure of 88 pounds of marijuana at a highway checkpoint in Laredo.

Jesse Garza, 19, Cynthia Yvonne Garza, 21, and Juan Garza Jr., 24, were each named in two-count indictments charging them with conspiracy to possess marijuana and possession with intent to distribute marijuana. All three have pleaded innocent.

W.G. "Shilo" Gorman, a 23-year veteran peace officer and Comanche County sheriff since 1977, said it's frustrating to see his colleagues as lawbreakers instead of law enforcers.

"Unfortunately it doesn't seem to be a unique situation," Vance said.

Gambling halls give Indians jobs, revenue

SYCUAN INDIAN RESERVATION, Calif. (AP) — From the heart of the San Diego County backcountry, out among the scrub-covered hills, comes a blue neon glare visible for miles.

"Sycuan," says the sign across the front of the huge, white modernistic building, the newly enlarged home of the Sycuan Gaming Center, the largest Indian gambling casino in North America.

It's the centerpiece and lifeblood of this square-mile reservation, six miles east of suburban El Cajon and 30 minutes east of downtown San Diego.

"There's nothing like it west of Las Vegas," say the radio ads promoting the casino.

The 58,000-square-foot casino, with its 35 felt-covered card tables, a restaurant, gift shop, a horseplayers' parlor equipped with television monitors and a 1,600-seat bingo hall, has become an economic bonanza for the 95 members of the Sycuan tribe.

Since its grand opening in mid-November, 2,000 people daily have been making the trip over a two-lane country road leading to the $3 million casino that operates around the clock and employs 500 people.

The center is the only one in the state to offer all five forms of legal gambling in California under one roof — off-track wagering on race horses via satellite, pull tabs, poker, lottery-type jackpot games and bingo, the game that began the Sycuan's venture seven years ago.

Gambling is legal on Indian reservations but the types of gaming must comply with state law, says Fritz Opel, the center's marketing director.

"Economically, it's been very fruitful," says tribal treasurer Hank Murphy. "We've come from one end of the spectrum to another."

The bingo and card-room operation generated about $28 million in revenues in 1989, about 10 percent of which went to the Sycuan tribe, Murphy says.

With the new expansion of the Sycuan's center and addition of off-track betting, projections for this year are much higher, Murphy adds.

An application is pending before the state for a liquor license and, Murphy says, "We're planning a hotel in the near future."

Nationwide, more than 100 Indian-operated gaming centers are in operation, most on reservations, and they generate about $500 million a year in revenues collectively, according to the Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Not all of the ventures, however, have been successful. The Barona Indian tribe in California, which won a landmark 1983 Supreme Court ruling permitting reservation bingo, recently reopened its bingo hall after a 15-month hiatus due to financial problems.

There also have been allegations of underworld influence at some reservation gaming centers.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Those in a position to go into business for themselves should do so. All signs point to particularly favorable results if you act within the next six months. New investments are favored in September. Good health should be a top priority at all times. Host a family reunion during the winter holidays. Introducing a potential spouse to your relatives gives you an entirely new perspective.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball's Fred Lynn, author William L. Shirer, actor Peter Fonda, educator W.E.B. Dubois.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Self-discipline is a tremendous asset now. A weekend job helps pay the bills but cuts into time spent with your family. Mate is unusually supportive. Reading a good book helps you relax.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Focus on household chores and shopping during morning hours. Humor an older person who seems troubled. Bringing cheer to others will boost your own spirits as well.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day to begin gathering your tax materials together. Even a small renovation project will boost the market price of your home. An older person makes helpful suggestions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not feel guilty if you sleep in today! Spend part of the afternoon outdoors getting some exercise. Puzzles, board games or home videos will keep the small fry amused.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A change of scenery may be your top priority today. Doing your own thing will restore your energy and enthusiasm. Write overdue letters and pay bills. Romance needs more time to develop.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your attitude toward romance may be changing. An infatuation could turn out to be the real thing! An afternoon phone call sheds new light on an old problem. Be true to your values.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): This could be an expensive day if friends or neighbors expect you to pick up the tab. Do not let a difference of opinion lead to a quarrel between you and a loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): A good day to tie up loose ends. Be open to trying new things. Talk over your plans with mate before coming to a final decision. Children deserve to have their say, too.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Try to fit in some light exercise today. Your afternoon plans are subject to last-minute revision. Choose your companions more carefully. Romance beckons from afar.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Other people could try to impose certain restrictions on you. A rocky relationship requires "kid glove" treatment. Postpone making a major commitment until sure of your feelings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your family may be very enthusiastic about an outing. Be a good sport. Someone who overindulges could suffer discomfort. Try not to say, "I told you so." Romance is a source of delight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Financial pressures subside, allowing you to indulge in minor luxuries. You can shop without pangs of guilt! Avoid bringing up controversial subjects at a family gathering.

TODAY'S CHILDREN possess great artistic ability and a flair for the dramatic. Although confident when performing, they tend to be shy when off stage. Voracious readers, they are particularly interested in learning how other people live. Count on them to work hard at any job they hold. Their phenomenal memories help make them excellent reporters or lawyers. These thrifty Pisces have only one extravagance — they love to travel. They can be expected to choose an exotic locale for any vacations they take.

Omaha joke writer keeps Leno prepared for 'The Tonight Show'

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — When Jay Leno begins a joke on "The Tonight Show," there's a man in Omaha who often beats him to the punchline.

Brad Dickson, 33, is a regular contributor to the show's monologue, one of a small number of joke writers Leno has on retainer.

Dickson faxes his material to Leno every Thursday. On Tuesday nights, when Leno fills in for Johnny Carson, the comedian often uses two to four of Dickson's jokes and has used as many as nine.

The Dickson gags that Leno has told include:

— "One of the characters on 'thirtysomething' was killed off last week. So that's one down and about seven to go."

— "People still don't have much faith in the savings and loans. According to a recent poll, 60 percent of Americans would feel safer having Pete Rose hold onto their money."

Dickson also has supplied jokes to Joan Rivers, Jimmie Walker and Rodney Dangerfield. He began working for Leno two years ago.

"I just read the newspaper and write down what pops into my head," he said. "It's a tough job. I don't think there are a lot of people who can do it."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anthony Hopkins says a good script and a little research made it simple to play a mad psychiatrist in the hit movie "The Silence of the Lambs."

"I must say that I found the part very easy to play," the Welsh-born actor said during a recent visit. "I'm able to get into the skins of these — oops. I'm able to move into these parts with ease. I enjoyed playing it."

"The Silence of the Lambs" is about an FBI recruit played by Jodie Foster who is assigned to interview a cannibalistic killer portrayed by Hopkins.

The FBI believes the brilliant but twisted Dr. Hannibal Lector can provide clues to the identity of another serial killer — one who skins his victims.

"The thing is to go for the opposite — if you have a really good script, as we did with Ted Tally's screenplay based on Thomas Harris' book," Hopkins said. "Lector is written in such a witty way, so funny and clever, even though he is evil, the devil."

In its first weekend, the film topped the box-office charts with $13.7 million.

Hopkins, 53, prepared for the role by reading "In Cold Blood," Truman Capote's account of the slayings of a rural Kansas family, and a book about serial killer Ted Bundy.

His previous movie credits include "The Elephant Man," "The Bounty" and "Desperate Hours." He also played Hitler in the TV movie "The Bunker."

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Rap artist Vanilla Ice was ticketed for a fire code violation Friday after inviting fans at a concert to crowd toward the stage, an official said.

Ice

A thick brass rail at the front of the Municipal Auditorium was broken by the crush of bodies at Thursday's show, said Jose Garza, assistant fire marshal. No injuries were reported.

The ticket was issued early Friday to Robert V. Van Winkle, 23, the chart-topping performer known as Vanilla Ice or Iceman.

The concert used reserved rather than general admission seating, which was employed at a concert by hard rock band AC-DC in Salt Lake City on Jan. 18 in which three teen-agers were crushed to death by a surging crowd.

"Security was good and the crowd was under control until he yelled, 'Hey, c'mon forward,'" Garza said.

"They heard 'forward' and all hell broke loose," he said. "There was a lot of pressure. Kids up front were screaming for the crowd to back off. It could have been really bad."

Garza located the performer backstage after the concert and cited him for violating an ordinance against overcrowding of aisles.

The charge carries a fine of $100 to $2,000.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson is going high-tech, licensing his name and image for a series of money-spinning holograms.

Jackson

Limited-edition 22-by-32-inch holograms reproducing the pop singer's surgically molded face in three dimensions will be displayed in galleries and museums at prices starting at $20,000, his publicist said Thursday.

Versions measuring 2½ inches by 4 inches will cost $10 to $20 in specialty stores.

Jackson has been "ever-fascinated with cutting-edge technology," said publicist Lee Solters. He didn't say when the holograms would be available.

The holograms involve an intricate process of overlaying more than 360 images to create a lifelike, three-dimensional moving figure effect, he said.

Memorial is for forgotten dead who teach the living

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The worth of God's children transcends their contribution to society. That essential point made, some people seem more useful dead than alive.

There is the man nicknamed Red because he looked like Redd Fox, the one called Kris because his obesity recalled Kris Kringle and the one known as George because there was a tag on his arm saying his last name was Washington.

They are people who died so poor or forgotten that they went unclaimed in the city morgue.

Unbeknownst to themselves, Red, Kris and George donated their remains to the noble cause of medical education.

Students, fortified by determination and gallows humor, spent many, many hours dissecting them.

On Wednesday afternoon, something special happened at the State University of New York's Health Science Center at Brooklyn.

Those who had methodically and sardonically dismembered Red and the rest organized a solemn memorial service for them.

A rare relationship was commemorated. For a semester, the students in four-member teams had spent more time with each other and their cadaver than anyone else, upward of 20 hours a week.

A handful of the school's bodies had been willed, but more than four-fifths had been destined for Potter's Field. For these, the gathering in a cavernous cheerless lecture hall — decorated with just a bouquet of orange gladiolus and yellow carnations — was their only funeral.

There was, as a student noted, a glaring absence — nobody to say, "I remember when."

Nobody to recall how these people took their coffee, how their kisses felt, how their eyes sparkled and how their tears flowed.

The occasion was a thank you to those who had contributed themselves. But it was also a coming to terms with things for society's future healers.

For medical education transcends physiology. Life and death, it was emphasized in the hour-long non-religious service, are what doctors do for a living.

In medical school, cadavers appear right away.

"Before dealing with life, we were forced to deal with death," said Abraham Bartell, a student. "Only after we stared death in the face could we deal with the living."

There is no staring on the first day of "Gross Anatomy": towels cover the faces of what are termed "human documents."

But some students peek, and are shocked to see a resemblance to, say, a grandparent.

And some are never comfortable with the process — which may soon be largely replaced with computer imaging — and beg their partners to do the cutting.

'No matter what we've done in our life, we all turn out to be the same thing: Arteries and veins and muscles and nerves.'

— Nicole Neretin, memorial organizer

As physicians and would-be physicians spoke, an insight coalesced: doctors are different from the rest of us, and not only because of that Mercedes in the garage.

"Dissection," a student read from a book, "represents an important rite of passage into an exclusive and mysterious guild."

A bioethics professor grappled with issues inherent in guild membership.

"If there is a single overriding theme in our civilization, it must be the discomfort associated with the idea of the human body separate from the human personality," Dr. Jonathan D. Moreno said.

"Because we are living things, we are driven to admire organic integration."

Moreno said soldiers report dreading the sight of a comrade's body parts being torn asunder more than actual death.

And he drove the analogy home: "We require you to be the agents of a disintegration of a human body far more systematic and bloodless than that of the field of battle."

In old movies, medical students are depicted making jokes about "human documents."

Indeed, irreverence is a tradition in med schools. Stories about pranksters hiding a toe in a girlfriend's purse are legion.

At the service, Charles Green, dean of students, had anger in his voice.

"Awhile back, not terribly long ago, I received word of an episode that I found, to say the least, unendearing."

Not describing the incident, his voice rose as he groped for stronger adjectives. "Abhorrent and revolting" seemed to fit.

But humility was the order of the afternoon, as well as a hankering for uplift after the dehumanization of dissection.

"You spend anatomy taking a body apart, and the rest of your life putting it back together," a student said.

Nicole Neretin, the event's principal organizer, thanked Red, Kris, George and colleagues for a lesson in equality.

"No matter what we've done in our life, we all turn out to be the same thing," she said. "Arteries and veins and muscles and nerves."
