Gramm labels senate race 'clear choice'

Republican candidate Phil Gramm (U.S. Rep from College Station) called the upcoming U.S. Senate race between he and Lloyd Doggett a "clear choice" here Friday — adding that the possible race between he and Democrat Kent Hance would not have been so.

Gramm will face the Democratic nominee Doggett next Nov. 4 for the senate seat to the vacated by John Tower (Rep-Wichita Falls).

Gramm spoke to some 70 county residents Friday morning from 9:30 until 10 a.m. as part of a 45-city airplane tour of West Texas.

"Lloyd Doggett's thinking is closer to Ted Kennedy's than it is to most West Texans," Gramm said, one of many comments labeling his opponent as the "liberal" of the two candidates.

Referring to his own party changeover from the Democrats to the Republicans, Gramm said, "I looked at (House Speaker) Tip O'Neill and an average West Texan, and the choice wasn't very hard to make" — a comment that prompted applause from his audience.

Regarding the upcoming race, Gramm said he was closer in political philosphy to Kent Hance, who was narrowly defeated by Doggett in a June runoff for the Democratic nomination.

"With Lloyd Doggett, it becomes a campaign of issues, not parties," Gramm said.

To illustrate this, he listed the following "stark..difference between my opponent and me."

—Government spending: "I worked six years to control spending. Lloyd Doggett is committed to raising taxes so the government can go on spending as usual."

—Defense: Gramm said the two budgets he co-authored in the House provided for a strong defense. He said his opponent opposes such elements in this national defense plan as the MX missile, the B-1 bomber and the location of the Pershing II Missile in Europe.

Other "differences" between he and Doggett mentioned included:

—Right to work. "I'm for it, he's against it."

—Voluntary prayer in school. "Again, I'm for it, he's against it."

—Gays Rights Bill (the legislation which would mandate affirmitive action in the hiring of homosexuals). "I'm against it, but Lloyd Dog-

Perot's package...

House okays education plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has sent the Senate an education reform package that bears the brand of H. Ross Perot, freeing the lower chamber to turn its attention to a tax bill to fund the program.

"You have the baton now," Dallas Rep. Al Granoff told Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter late Thursday after the House completed the first leg of the special session relay.

"I think the committee will be ready to go to work to try to raise the revenue," said Schlueter, D-Killeen.

The House package, sent to the Senate on a 119-29 vote, includes a temporary appointed State Board of Education, teacher pay raises, competency testing for teachers and high school seniors and a funding plan aimed at helping poor districts

Speaker Gib Lewis, the driving force behind the major political victory for Gov. Mark White in the special legislative session, said the House is "ready to pay for it. That's our next chore."

The bill was approved after a non-stop Thursday session that ended at 11:30 p.m. after more than 13 hours.

White wants a $4.8 billion tax hike to pay for school and highway improvements.

"The speaker did a superb job," the governor said Thursday when it was clear the bill would be approved.

Any doubts about Lewis' power to push the bill through the House evaporated after a 97-47 vote crushed an effort to preserve the elected Board of Education. Senators have voted to maintain that board. Differences in House and Senate bills will be worked out in conference committee, possibly Saturday if the Senate finishes its bill today.

House Public Education Committee Chairman Bill Haley sponsored the bill although it was not exactly what he wanted. Haley, D-Center, prefers the elected board.

"I'm not down here to run up against a brick wall. I'm here to stop just before I hit it. So are you," he told the House.

Rep. Frank Collazo, D-Port Arthur, acknowledged in the debate that Lewis had run over Haley's committee, which gutted portions of the bill last Sunday in what some called the "Fathers' Day Massacre."

"I feel that train right behind me," Collazo said as he offered a sure-to-lose amendment. "But I'll be damned if I'll get out of the way."

Hours later, a House member playfully blew a train whistle as the bill chugged forward, if a bit late.

The elected board, blasted by Perot as the cause of many school problems, drew support from Rep. Bill Blanton, R-Farmers Branch, who said "the right to vote is a sacred privilege to the American people."

Needlework here may be included in five-city tour

Scurry County women have been showing off their needlework and giving interviews this past week as an Austin-based group lays groundwork for a museum show due here and in four other Texas cities next fall.

Members of the group Women and Their Work will offer museum exhibits of the needlework items in Austin, Dallas, Snyder, Houston and Victoria.

Items to be exhibited are now being selected from each of these cities. The local works will supplement the main collection when the traveling show visits.

The Women and Their Work exhibit will be at the Scurry County Museum in November.

Claire Maxwell, a field worker for the Austin group, interviewed and viewed the work of numerous Scurry County women this week. She said Thursday that a large number of locally produced items would likely be included in the showing.

She said the core of the exhibit will concentrate on fine needlework like crochet and embroidery.

Relatives sought of early officials

The Scurry County Historical Commission is now hoping to contact area residents who are descendants of the men who served Scurry County in 1884 as the first county officials.

A plaque listing the first officials is being prepared by the commission. It will be presented to County Judge Preston Wilson at the county birthday celebration June 28.

Officials named on the plaque are R.J. Nisbett, county judge; W.W. Nelson, sheriff-tax collector; H.B. Patterson, county and district clerk; W.A. Smallwood, county attorney; S.G. Singletary, county treasurer; H.A. Goodwin, county surveyor; H.C. Miller, constable; G.W. Reed, justice of the peace and commissioner, Pct. 1; and G.G. Williamson, commissioner, Pct. 4.

Research for the plaque was done by Lois Bartels, commission secretary, and members Jean Everett and June McGlaun.

Descendants of the first officials are asked to contact these individuals so that they may be recognized at the birthday observance.

It is planned at 1:30 p.m. next Thursday, June 28, at the courthouse.

by Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek is attending a Texas Press Association convention this week. Dr. Don Newbury, president of WTC, is the guest writer.

It was another time and in another community.

A little old lady, living in the outer extremities of the twilight of her life, summoned a local minister to her home when she felt the end was near.

She said she had a confession to make. While her home was in close proximity to the minister's church, she said she had never been a member, nor had she ever attended.

"It's not as though I haven't kept up with your church, though," she said. "I keep a close watch on it all the time. Cars are stacked up over there on Sunday mornings, and on most nights of the week."

She maintained that the "church house lights burn about every night."

She continued that in addition to Sunday and Wednesday services, they had meetings for men, meetings for women, meetings for young people.

"You have revivals every time I turn around, and besides that, there are preacher hiring meetings and preacher firing meetings."

She revved up to the fare-the-well as she talked about all the goings-on at the church.

Her confession?

"What I want to confess to you, parson, is that for many years I've wanted to be a member of your church."

"Pray tell, why didn't you then?" the preacher asked.

"Well, with all you have had going on, I just didn't think my health would stand it!"

To a great degree, the woman was observing in the nearby church what newcomers to Snyder observe about the community. With so many things going on, it's almost a challenge to one's health just to keep pace.

Ask Us

Q. — Would you reprint the warning signs for cancer?

A. — According to the American Cancer Society, these are: a lump or thickening in the breast or elsewhere; a change in size or color of a wart or mole; indigestion or difficulty in swallowing; change in bowel or bladder habits; unusual bleeding or discharge; a sore that does not heal; and hoarseness or cough.

In Brief

Conferees approve taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators have approved more than $11 billion in federal spending savings, including hike in premiums paid by Medicare beneficiaries, and are pushing toward agreement on nearly $50 billion in tax increases.

The actions, ending weeks of stalemate, increase the prospects that Congress will make good on a promised election-year "down payment" on trimming federal budget deficits.

Congressional tax writers were meeting today to negotiate the final version of a tax bill which will be incorporated in a larger deficit-reduction package.

In 10 days of deliberations, the negotiators have agreed on provisions that would raise more than $45 billion in taxes through 1987. The final goal is about $50 billion.

Issues being decided today included taxation of cigarettes, liquor and interest from certain bonds that currently are tax exempt.

Consumer prices increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, restrained by the steepest drop in food prices since last June, inched up just 0.2 percent in May, the government said today.

Also aiding the moderation in the overall price increase, which rose at a rate less than half that of April, was a tiny 0.2 percent gain in gasoline prices.

So far this year, inflation is running at an annual rate of 4.6 percent as measured by the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index.

Conferees to talk defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conference committee today was working out differences between House and Senate versions of a defense spending bill for next year, with most of the conflict focused on the number of MX intercontinental missiles President Reagan wants to build.

The Senate passed its $291 billion package before dawn Thursday on an 82-6 vote. Just before that action, it recommended that European allies increase defense spending but decided not to threaten to withdraw U.S. troops from the continent if they refuse to do so.

The House passed its $284 billion version of the defense authorization bill three weeks ago. Work on the two measures is expected to continue through next week.

Cauble to start prison term

BIG SPRING, Texas (AP) — Texas millionaire rancher Rex Cauble began serving a five-year prison sentence today after a federal appeals court turned down his last-ditch bid to extend his freedom.

Cauble, 70, entered the minimum-security federal prison camp in this West Texas city at 9:25 a.m. CDT, shortly after the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans refused his request that he be allowed to remain free pending his latest request for a new trial.

Felony probation revoked

Ray A. Reyes of Snyder now faces a two-year term in the Texas Department of Corrections after having a previously granted felony probation revoked by the 132nd District Court this week.

Reyes had been placed on probation for two years in June 1982 after pleading guilty to a charge of burglary of a vehicle in Snyder.

Local probation officials went back to the court this week to have this probation revoked in light of his alleged involvement in a burglary in Nolan County in March of this year.

LULAC planning to fight new bill

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — One last attempt to kill a controversial immigration bill will be made this weekend by the nation's largest Hispanic organization, which contends the measure is "racist" and discriminatory to Mexican-Americans.

At a symposium on immigration Thursday, the League of United Latin American Citizens' executive director, Arnold Torres, said the organization's members "have one last chance" to fight the Simpson-Mazzoli bill that was approved by the House Wednesday.

In its current form, the bill would provide amnesty for illegal aliens who have resided in this country since before 1982, but it would make it a crime for U.S. employers to hire undocumented aliens.

LULAC, which is holding its annual convention in this predominantly Hispanic border city, has condemned the bill. Thursday's symposium was another opportunity for Mexican-Americans to voice their distaste for the measure.

"It is anti-Mexican," said Houston immigration attorney Jose Medina. "It is a very racist piece of legislation."

But to the applause of a packed auditorium, Medina said, "We still have a chance to kill it in the conference committee."

Torres said LULAC members would be given records of their congressmens' stand on the bill Saturday and Sunday and "told what to do about it."

He explained after the symposium that the group's members were going to be urged to "call, write, telegram" their congressional representatives "and persuade them to change their votes."

Opponents of the bill contend it will lead to discrimination against all Hispanics, while supporters claim it will discourage foreigners from breaching the U.S. borders.

Mario Gomez, a professor of the University of California at Santa Barbara, said Thursday, "This piece of legislation will not halt (the) flow (of illegal aliens into this country) because it is a long, historical flow."

He charged that Congress has forgotten how Mexicans with their "blood, sweat and tears" have contributed to the wealth of the United States.

"They (undocumented workers) should not be considered aliens," he said. "We should be considered aliens and treated that way."

Gomez said the heavy flow of illegal aliens into the country will not be reduced until other countries have strong economic bases that give their citizens reason to stay.

LULAC members also attacked the amnesty portion of the bill, calling it a "sham."

Medina said the provision is a "fraud, a means of duping people into turning themselves in."

And Torres charged that because the United States is a land of immigrants, "yesterday's immigrants are today's bigots."

The immigration symposium also led to Medina attacking Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale for his "cowardness in the last minutes."

He said the former vice president "was too busy" to fight against Simpson-Mazzoli before the House vote.

"And if that's the attitude he's going to take, let him be aware that Hispanics may be too busy when it comes time to vote in November," Medina shouted to the cheers and applause of the symposium attendees.

All the presidential candidates were lambasted Wednesday by LULAC national President Mario Obledo for declining to attend the convention.

But Torres said Thursday afternoon that the Rev. Jesse Jackson would speak at today's session.

Dear Abby

People With the Midas Touch Probably Have Filthy Hands

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Please Wash in Winona" was right on! I, too, have noticed that people don't wash their hands nearly enough. As the people at the Mayo Clinic so wisely pointed out, the 10 most common spreaders of infection are one's own 10 fingers.

Abby, you touched upon it, but you should have emphasized strongly that another notorious germ carrier is money! Especially paper bills. Each time paper money passes from one pair of hands to another, it becomes filthier.

Today there are many establishments, large and small, that sell food to eat on the premises or carry out. This includes hot dogs, hamburgers, pizza, ice-cream cones, etc. Notice how many employees prepare the food, serve it, then take the customers' money and give them the change. In a few minutes they are back to handling food again without having washed their hands.

I personally will not eat where the same employee who handles the food handles the money.

A FRIEND IN MILLBURY, MASS.

DEAR FRIEND: Thanks. That's food for thought, but not for eating.

DEAR ABBY: I am interested in learning your opinion of the increasingly prevalent practice of brushing one's teeth in public restrooms, particularly in the office buildings such as the one I work in.

Although brushing after every meal is no doubt laudable, I find it exceedingly objectionable to be made an unwilling party to the personal hygiene of a total stranger, with the attendant spitting, etc.

Not only do I think it is plain bad manners, I find it downright disgusting. What do you think?

GROSSED OUT IN GEORGIA

DEAR GROSSED OUT: True, witnessing a public teeth cleaning can be somewhat unpleasant, but hear this: The sooner one brushes and flosses after eating, the healthier his teeth will be. Of course, it is absolutely imperative that the bowl be left sparkling clean.

I fully expect that this advice will be met with groans from squeamish readers who would like to flog me with a rope of dental floss, but I'll take my lumps. A clean and healthy mouth is essential to general good health.

DEAR ABBY: This happens all the time, and I guess I'll just have to sit there and take it unless I find a way to stop it. This is a woman's fault; I have yet to see a man who is guilty of this rudeness: When two couples go out together and one of the men is talking, the other woman (I am a woman) will turn to me and start a two-way conversation on an entirely different subject!

I try to turn away from the woman in order to listen to the conversation that is already going on, but she insists on talking directly into my ear. I try to show no interest in what she's saying, avoiding eye contact, and continue to listen to the men's conversation, but she keeps yammering away about some petty, gossipy trivia until I can no longer hear the other conversation.

So what do I do?

READY TO SCREAM

DEAR READY: Communicate verbally. Try to keep the resentment, impatience and irritation out of your voice when you tell her that you would like to listen to the conversation that is currently taking place.

House bill would cost millions

HOUSTON (AP) — A House bill which would grant amnesty to illegal aliens who have been in the United States since 1982 would cost the nation about $42.5 billion a year, a Rice University professor says.

Donald L. Huddle, an economics professor who specializes in the effect of undocumented workers, told The Houston Post that figure also includes "unemployment insurance, welfare and uncompensated wage loss."

Huddle said the estimate also includes "the social payments made to illegal aliens, plus the cost of crime protection and health benefits."

The estimate also factors in the estimated tax payments that would be made by illegal aliens working in this country, said Huddle.

Huddle said a U.S. Senate proposal, which would place the amnesty date at 1977, would be much cheaper. He said the price tag on the Senate version would be $24.5 billion a year, $18 billion less than the House bill.

If 1984 was used as the amnesty date, said the professor, the costs would soar to $54 billion.

The U.S. House of Representatives this week passed an immigration bill that would give permanent resident alien status to illegal aliens who have been in the U.S. continuously since 1982.

Huddle said he was estimating that there are 10 million illegal aliens in the United States now and that there were about 9 million in 1982. He said about 67 percent of those here in 1982 would be eligible for amnesty under the House bill.

In 1977, he said, there were about 6 million illegals in the country and about 48 percent of those would be eligible under the Senate bill.

The professor called the House immigration bill "a mixed bag."

"It's better than nothing," he said. "If we get our borders under control, it's worth it. It would be more economical to have an earlier amnesty date."

Employer sanctions, included in the House bill, are absolutely necessary, he said.

Acts 2:42
And they continued stedfastly in the apostles doctrine and fellowship and in breaking of bread and in prayers

Paul Harvey

Let's get a familiar objection out of the way first so that we can talk about women.

First, some resent being categorized insisting that women, even as men, have different attitudes, different abilities, proclivities and interests.

Not because they are women — but because they are individuals.

Having acknowledged that — they are individuals — it is nonetheless generally accepted as fact that women are not as good at mathematics and that women are less adept in dealing with technology.

Don't you believe it. Women have been found out!

Claremont Graduate School, California, has been two years studying men and women and their computer skills.

Hundreds of men and women in 22 states were evaluated; their spatial, quantitative, sequential and logical attitudes.

One of the subtests involves the ability to estimate the number of darkened and undarkened squares set in a pattern. On this one women performed better than men.

Anther subtest involved choosing a series of figures that form a graphic pattern. Men scored slightly higher.

Other subtests required the participants to complete a logical sequence or analogy made of letter and numeral sequences.

Men and women scored similarly; no difference.

If this sound tedious, stay with me; I promise women have been found out!

Now we get to the measurement of an individual's "interest" in computers and computer literacy. Women scored much lower.

Women know less about computers and care less about them.

Professors Mary Poplin, David Drew and Robert Gable note that all previous research has indicated most women can't handle mathematics as well as men.

This survey — measuring attitude as well as aptitude — reveals they can if they want to.

But most just don't want to.

In order for a person to have computer abilities he or she must have both the aptitude and an attitude of interest.

Women approach life's problems more qualitatively than quantitatively. They are thus disinclined to pursue mathematics and computer-related professions.

They have altogether as much aptitude and ability to deal with technical subjects.

So — when she says, "You men repair the video game," you might as well. She has never been interested in learning how.

But we know now — she could if she wanted to!

Sheriff holding no grudge

HOUSTON (AP) — Walker County's sheriff, acquitted of three perjury charges which had accused him of lying about the torturing of a prisoner, says he isn't mad at those who testified against him.

Darrell White was found innocent Thursday on the federal charges, which alleged he lied twice to a grand jury and once to a trial jury by saying he was not present while a jail inmate was tortured.

L. Guinn gives weaving demo

Lila Guinn of Camp Springs was featured speaker for the June 19 meeting of the Plainview Extension Homemakers held in the Northeast Community Center.

Using a small, four harness table loom, Mrs. Guinn demonstrated weaving, a craft, she says, that has "gone from being done out of necessity to being done as a real art." In addition to the demonstration, she exhibited several items she had made at home, in school and at various workshops.

"This table loom makes the Bronson lace and plain patterns. At home I can create more patterns on my 60 inch, four harness loom that has six treadles," she told the women.

Mrs. Guinn has won first place and best of show ribbons in fairs here and in Gainsville. A graduate of Western Texas College with an associate degree in weaving, she is qualified to teach the art as a community service. When enough people are interested, she will teach through WTC.

She is a member of the Intermountain Weavers Conference and of the Handweavers Guild of America. She has studied weaving under Melvin Branch at WTC and Vera Speece at Cooke County College in Gainsville. At Ft. Lewis County in Colorado, she studied "The Shaft Switch Technique of Weft-faced Rugs" using the Peter Collingwood method under Jane Busse of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mrs. Guinn is also a member of the Snyder Palette Club and will be serving as that organization's president for 1984-1985.

After the demonstration, the Plainview Extension Homemakers made plans for their September meeting during which they will entertain members of the Stargazers club. Ada Staton presided in the place of Pearl Waller, president.

Tale reads like spy novel

THE CHINESE BLACK CHAMBER. Herbert O. Yardley. Houghton Mifflin. 225 Pages. $13.95.

Although listed as nonfiction, Herbert Yardley's "The Chinese Black Chamber" reads like a well-told spy novel.

In any case, it's a hilarious though serious account of what it was like to live in bomb-ravaged Chungking while attempting to crack the Japanese codes during China's desperate retreat from the invaders in the '30s and '40s.

Yardley tells of meeting with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, as well as other high-ranking officials, including the "hatchet man," the "chief of sabotage," Chinese traitors, concubines, informants, journalists, a singsong girl and a Japanese spy.

Earlier in his career, in the United States, Yardley headed a cipher bureau funded jointly by both war and state departments. But this came to an end when discovered in 1929 by the newly named secretary of state, Henry L. Stimson, who proclaimed stuffily, "gentlemen do not read each other's mail," and closed the bureau.

Two years later, broke and with a family to feed, Yardley decided to write "The American Black Chamber," detailing his exploits in breaking foreign codes, particularly Japanese diplomatic messages during the Washington Disarmament Conference.

An outraged state department persuaded Congress to pass a law forbidding the publication of any material prepared in official diplomatic code — and the book about his Chinese adventures was suppressed for more than 40 years.

The controversial Yardley was perhaps the most colorful American codebreaker in the often tedious, repetitious field of cryptology.

But as James Bamford, author of "The Puzzle Palace," about the nation's supersecret National Security Agency, says in the introduction to the Chinese tale:

"In the black and gray world of espionage and codebreaking, Herbert O. Yardley was a Calder mobile of bright bold colors."

Weeks of speculation ended for Britons and the world Dec. 11, 1936, when King Edward VIII abdicated his throne. He had reigned for 11 months, the shortest reign since Edward V in the 15th century. Edward gave up his crown to marry the twice-divorced American, Wallis Warfield Simpson.

Opening lead: ♣6

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

On this hand, Sweden played in a rather unsound three no-trump contract. The opening lead was a club. East took his ace and returned a second club. South won with his king, took the spade finesse and, with spades breaking 3-3, made his contract with five spades, three hearts and a club. Neat, but not gaudy.

The bidding in the box also ends up in a less than ideal strain, since either four hearts or four spades can make easily. However, North had a problem at his third bid. In the system this pair used, a three-diamond rebid by South would have shown a bad hand with seven or possibly only six diamonds. In that case North would have let the bidding die there, since he did not hold diamond support. However, South's jump to four diamonds showed a very good diamond suit and outside strength.

Again the opening lead was a club and after East had taken his ace, a club was returned to South's king. South led a diamond to dummy's jack and West ducked. South played a heart back to his king and continued with his diamond king to West's ace. West led a heart. South's jack won the trick and now declarer drew trumps and claimed. He never needed that spade finesse. He had his necessary 11 tricks.

FIRE SNUFFER

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A system to help snuff out explosive fires is being exported to Australia.

The process, used primarily for armored personnel carriers and Army battle tanks, was developed by Hughes Santa Barbara Research Center and has been licensed for production in Australia.

At the start of an explosion caused by a projectile penetrating the vehicle, system sensors quickly respond and trigger the release of a fire suppression agent. The agent suffocates the explosion before it can do damage.

Sharp dinner exchanges in Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP) — In a sharp exchange of toasts at the Kremlin, President Francois Mitterrand of France told Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko that the case of dissident Andrei Sakharov "put into doubt" the Helsinki accords on human rights.

Chernenko, in his toast, told Mitterrand that the Soviet Union will not tolerate what it considers to be interference in its internal affairs and said lectures on human rights "only provoke an ironic smile."

Mitterrand's statement Thursday night was believed to be the first mention of Sakharov by name in one of the formal toasts at dinners hosted by the ruling Politburo for visiting dignitaries.

The French president also used his toast to mention the Soviet Union's medium-range nuclear arsenal targeted on Europe. He told Chernenko that France considers Soviet SS-20 rockets in Eastern Europe a threat to its security.

In his Kremlin speech, Mitterrand said Sakharov had become an issue in the West because his case represented a threat to liberties guaranteed in the human rights section of the Helsinki accords of 1975.

He told Chernenko that France considers the Helsinki agreements contractually binding.

"The liberties that were guaranteed seem to have been put in doubt as well as the principles freely accepted (in Helsinki)," Mitterrand said.

"That's why we have sometimes the cases of symbolic persons," he said. "And it is in that sense that one must understand the movement that exists in Europe and elsewhere that affects citizens of your country. It's the case for professor Sakharov and others who are unknown."

Chernenko, who spoke before Mitterrand, did not mention Sakharov by name. But he seemed to refer to the dissident leader, whose whereabouts have not been known since he reportedly began a hunger strike in early May.

"Those who are trying to give us advice in respect of human rights can only cause an ironic smile here," Chernenko said.

Jury deliberates fate of teenager

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A South Texas teenager could spend the rest of his life behind bars if he is convicted of the baseball bat bludgeoning death of his "hardworking" mother.

An eight-man, four-woman jury Thursday began considering the case against Antonio Flores, 16, of Port Isabel, charged with crushing the skull of his mother with an aluminum bat in August.

State District Judge Harry D. Lewis told jurors they may choose between verdicts of innocent, guilty of first-degree murder or guilty of voluntary manslaughter. After selecting a foreman late Thursday, jurors were scheduled to resume deliberations at 9 a.m. today.

In closing remarks Thursday, Assistant District Attorney Rick Lara placed a blood-stained baseball bat and a series of gruesome photos before jurors and recapped the circumstances of the crime.

"Murder is not reserved for adults," he said.

Flores was ruled last spring eligible to stand trial as an adult.

The crime took place on a Sunday afternoon after Balbina Flores Pena, 46, returned from church and was working in the kitchen while her son, then 15, watched television.

Lara described Mrs. Pena as "a very hard-working, religious woman who held down three jobs" to support her son and husband.

Lara reminded jurors of a statement Flores made to authorities, which Lewis allowed the state to enter into evidence. In the statement, Flores admitted killing his mother because she had "been on my case" about staying out late, running with a bad crowd and smoking marijuana, Lara said.

Testimony during the trial also indicated that Mrs. Pena had discovered a marijuana cigarette hidden in one of her son's socks a short time before the slaying.

Lara said the boy took the bat off the back porch, snuck up behind his mother, who was on her knees putting away some kitchen pots, and "hit her golf-club style," crushing her head in four places.

"There was never any evidence of a struggle. She was never given a chance," Lara said.

Defense attorney Fred Galindo maintained through the trial that his client was telling the truth when he first told authorities that someone had broken into the home, killed Mrs. Pena and stabbed the boy in the shoulder.

A nurse testified for the state during the trial that she had treated the teenager for a superficial wound to his right shoulder.

"Consider the age of the defendant," Galindo said. "Is he mentally and physically able and capable of committing such a brutal offense toward his mother he loved dearly? I find this impossible to believe," Galindo said.

The state maintained that Flores stabbed himself to cover up the crime.

Aliens say immigration plan won't stop them

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An immigration control measure designed to discourage foreigners from breaching U.S. borders won't do the job, say Mexicans who daily wade across the Rio Grande to El Paso in search of employment.

"It may make it more of a hassle, but I will still come," said Juan Contreras of nearby Ciudad Juarez, Mexico. "And, I bet you I still get work."

Contreras, 23, is one of the hundreds of Mexicans who each day illegally enter the United States via the Rio Grande.

The muddy river flows only slightly between Juarez and El Paso, and each morning it is filled with Mexicans coming to this country for jobs that often pay as much as five times more than what is available in their homeland.

"It (the immigration bill) won't bother me," said Francisco Vargas. "I will still come and look for work. And, I've heard that I won't be fired. Americans, they need us."

Ricardo Galarza, 28, agreed, saying, "We do what Americans won't. You won't see Anglos and blacks picking chili. They don't do that kind of work. So, we'll still get jobs despite the new rule."

But supporters of the controversial bill, which was passed Wednesday by the U.S. House of Representatives, contend it would discourage foreigners from coming into the country illegally and taking jobs from Americans.

The measure would make it a crime for U.S. employers to hire illegal immigrants.

It also contains an amnesty provision that would enable undocumented aliens who arrived before 1982 to remain. After five years, the aliens could apply for citizenship.

Vargas, 35, said Thursday that the amnesty provision of the bill is a "pretty good deal" for the people to whom it applies.

But for him, it comes too late.

A welder, Vargas lived illegally in Kansas for nine years. He was deported in late 1981.

"It's so bad for me, no?" he said Thursday.

Most of the Mexicans who crossed the border Thursday were familiar with the immigration measure, though many were confused by some of its provisions.

One young woman was under the impression that because she had been crossing into the United States since 1981 she was eligible for amnesty.

And one Mexican man said he thought employer sanctions already were in place in the United States.

"See, how can it hurt me? I already thought it was happening," he said.

Hernando Gutierrez, 24, has been working at an El Paso electrical shop for more than a year and said that on Wednesday, his employer explained the bill to him.

"These people who hire us, they want Mexican workers," he said. "They know we'll do the work."

Military doctor denies faulty work in lab

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Air Force officials have not muzzled workers or tried to hide information that might prove allegations of faulty lab work at Brooks Air Force Base, where drug detection tests are run on thousands of military personnel, a lab doctor says.

Col. George Lathrop, a manager at the base's Drug Abuse Detection Laboratory, also denied the lab is issuing faulty reports jeopardizing the careers of military personnel.

"That is absolutely an erroneous conclusion," Lathrop said Thursday during a hearing on a motion to dismiss marijuana-use charges against two men.

Staff Sgts. Henry Warden, 29, of San Antonio, and Leonard Baltimore, 32, of Cheyenne, Wyo., are trying to prove military commanders through alleged interference in the lab had prevented them from getting a fair trial.

Both are stationed at Castle AFB in Merced, Calif. Their urine samples were processed at Brooks along with about 260,000 other samples from Army and Air Force personnel nationwide last year.

Ten percent of the samples tested showed drug usage and nearly 3,000 military personnel were discharged on drug-related charges from October 1982 to September 1983, Capt. John Whitaker, a Pentagon official, said Thursday.

"No one in management has done any misdeed whatsoever," Lathrop said during lenthy testimony.

An earlier witness, chemist Joseph David Whitson Jr., testified he kept an "out of control" file on faulty urine test results. Whitson said he started the file because of "glitches in lab procedures."

But Lathrop said the "out of control" file was a misnomer.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

It could be muscle

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I belong to a well-known national weight-reducing club. As weight recorder, I hear many excuses. Right now I need to know about heavy exercise: riding bikes, running, swimming and such. Can exercise cause a person to weigh more when weighing in? Is this just an excuse or is it possible one will be heavier?

DEAR READER — You are being conned. The only way heavy exercise could increase a person's immediate weight would be if he drank a lot more fluid than he lost from sweating or stopped to eat a lot of food after his exercise.

The truth is that heavy exercise is more likely to make a person sweat. One can lose several pounds of water with lots of exertion and sweating. But that is water, not loss of body fat, and will be regained as soon as the body regains its normal healthy hydration.

What you should expect is that immediately after heavy exercise the person may weigh in "light" despite not having lost any body fat at all and having not stayed with his diet.

Exercise can cause a person to gain weight, but that's from developing muscles. That takes longer. But that is the reason why a person on a good fitness program may be disappointed in what the scales read. As the person loses body fat he gains muscles. This represents a net loss of calories from the body and it's healthy.

You need some basic information that is in the Health Letter 20-10, Doing Something About Body Fat, which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — This letter relates to drugs. My mother is in a rest home. After they used all her money they put her on welfare. Then somebody got greedy. The place puts the patients on some kind of drug that either puts them to sleep or makes them so disoriented they can't eat. I work four days a week so I can't show up to feed her a noon meal. Last Sunday someone forgot I would be there at noon, and she was so mixed-up that when I gave her a bite she would roll it around and then spit it out.

By evening when I fed her the drug had practically worn off. She was so hungry that she would try and bite the towel in between bites. When I ask the nurse on duty about them not eating, they say, "Oh, they are just not hungry just sitting around all day." My mother eats well when she is not doped. I believe someone gets a "kickback" by starving these people. This also happened to my father in a nursing home. Do you know someone who can stop this practice?

DEAR READER — I hope just publishing this will help. I doubt someone is getting a kickback, but I don't doubt that a lot of people in similar circumstances are overdrugged. They are quiet then and require less care. You might complain to your county health officer about the facility.

While there are many outstanding care facilities, there are some that are not so good. A good rule for the family is to show up unexpectedly and frequently to monitor the care of a loved one. Maintaining personal care and not abandoning a family member in such a facility can make a lot of difference in the care provided. And it is emotionally important to the patient as well.

Snyder students win "J" awards

Five Snyder High School journalism students and their advisor attended the Interscholastic League Press Conference summer workshop in Austin last weekend.

Melissa Garcia and Sabrina Sullivan were awarded the certificate of achievement for ex- [illegible] staff in their classification.

Other students representing SHS at the session were the Tiger's Lair yearbook co-editors, Suzette Harris and Sylvia Valdez, along with yearbook assistant editor Denise Yandrich.

The Tiger's Tale (student newspaper) staffers were able to design a new nameplate for their front page and developed new designs for the other seven pages of the paper during th workshop.

They also attended classes on feature writing, leads and story ideas.

The yearbook staffers planned the pages of next year's edition and came up with a proposed theme for the book. They studied story writing, cutlines, headlines and page design in their classes.

The awards for the paper staff were the first ever for the SHS Journalism students in the three years they have attended the workshop.

Man draws big sentence for kidnapping

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who tried to avoid returning to prison by stealing bullets from a detective and kidnapping his parole officer has been sentenced to 50 years in prison.

William Harvey Sullivan stole 18 loose bullets and two ammunition clips from James Rankin when the sheriff's detective arrived at the Texas Pardons and Paroles office Dec. 2, prosecutor Clay Rawlings said.

Rankin had been called by parole officer Gregory Lindley, who wanted Sullivan arrested for a parole violation. Sullivan has been to prison at least four times on robbery convictions, officials said.

Evidence showed that when the detective appeared, Sullivan pulled a gun, said "I ain't going back" and demanded that the officer hand over his bullets.

Sullivan took 18 loose bullets and two ammunition clips — the basis for the robbery charge. He then put a gun to the parole officer's head and forced Lindley to leave the building with him.

Sullivan then escaped on his motorcycle, but was caught about 37 hours later at a bar near his house.

A jury convicted Sullivan Wednesday of aggravated robbery and aggravated kidnap. He was sentenced to two concurrent 50-year terms by visiting State District Judge Herbert Line.

Preliminary hearing slated

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — A prosecutor said he had not seen a psychiatric report from a state hospital and he was unsure what action he would take in a preliminary hearing for a hitchhiker charged with murder in the torture death of a drifter.

The hearing was set today for Robert Carlton Caldwell, who is charged with two other hitchhikers and three family members in the March 13 death of Anthony Warren Bates.

Bates died after repeated jabs with a cattle prod, then was doused with 10 gallons of gasoline and set on fire, prosecutors say.

Prosecutors claim Bates and other drifters were lured to a Hill Country ranch by promises of work and hot meals, but then were compelled to stay with chains, guns and cattle prods.

District Attorney Ron Sutton said Thursday he was not sure what action he would take in today's hearing because he had not seen a report by officials at Rusk State Hospital.

Caldwell was sent to the hospital after he tried to hang himself in his Kerry County Jail cell in early May. He since has been returned to the Kerrville jail.

Congress approved American participation in the United Nations in 1945.

Big Bend's isolation discourages tourists

BIG BEND NATIONAL PARK, Texas (AP) — Donn Cook of Santa Ana, Calif., recently climbed the Chisos Mountains, adding his first Texas peak to the list of 300 he has scaled in the last four years.

But Big Bend National Park's isolation probably discourages many tourists, the park's chief naturalist said recently.

Visitors to the 740,118-acre park, which celebrated its 40th anniversary last week, find a wealth of natural contrasts: The river and mountains share the terrain with a broiling desert.

"I'm a member of the Sierra Club in California," Cook, a 44-year-old high school science teacher, said recently, "and enjoy a good hike as often as I can find one."

He came to the park looking for rare birds when he decided to climb the 7,835-foot Mount Emory, the park's highest peak. "Climbing Emory was really a spur-of-the-moment decision."

Cook said he was most impressed with Emory's view of the Chihuahuan Desert. "It's stunning. You can see the whole park from up there," he said.

Bob Huggins, 38, the park's chief naturalist and public information officer, said he wished more people would follow Cook's lead into the mountains.

"Other large parks, Yosemite and Yellowstone, for instance, are over-visited," Huggins said. "During the summer months, they'll run two to three times the number of people per acre that Big Bend draws."

Huggins said two factors limit the number of visitors — isolation and the heat. "You have to want to come to Big Bend. It's not on the way to anywhere," he said.

National Park Service records show about 200,000 people annually visit the park, located about 200 miles southwest of Odessa.

"Most of our traffic is in the cooler fall and spring months," Huggins said. "Traditionally, people get vacation time in the summer so they can be with their children."

Although some visitors may be attracted to the park because of its 40th anniversary, Huggins said the real celebration is set for next year.

"Big Bend National Park was enabled by Congressional legislation in 1944," he said. "But it was a park 10 years earlier. We're gearing up for the 50th anniversary June 20 next year."

Huggins said most visitors camp in the Chisos Mountains. There is a lodge at the Chisos Basin, where tourists have booked rooms as much as 18 months in advance.

Dale Sorrels, 28, of Pomfret, Md., said recently that he planned to photograph a sunset from Emory's peak, then camp at Laguna Meadows, the most popular mountain camping area, according to Huggins.

Huggins recommended Government Spring to those who want a quiet place to camp close to the road. It sits back from the road less than a quarter mile above the Basin Junction turnoff.

Big Bend has five kinds of camping, including recreational vehicle hookups, Class A, B, primitive and outback, Huggins said.

RV hookups, which include water and electrical connections, cost $6 a day. Class A campsites, which run $4 a day, have flush toilets, tables and cover. Class B campsites, $2, have tables and outhouses.

Primitive campsites are little more than flat places beside dirt roads. Free permits for primitive and outback camping are available at ranger stations, Huggins said.

One recent night, about a dozen javelina foraged near the west rim of the Basin's Class A campsite.

Charles Watson, a branch manager for Dictaphone in Corpus Christi, jumped up on his car when he heard the wild pigs running toward his campsite. "Do they bite?" he asked a friend.

"Nothing would bite you," the friend replied, climbing off the car.

Most of the park is desert, according to a park service pamphlet. Few backpackers hike the sparsely covered desert floor, where ground temperatures sometimes reach 180 degrees and natural water is spotty.

Huggins said the main park service station at Panther Junction issued only one desert backpacking permit for the last week in May.

Instead, park visitors increasingly are turning to the river, Huggins said.

Two of the three developed campsites — Cottonwood and Rio Grande Village — sit within casting distance of the muddy international boundary.

New Jersey residents Kent Zavacky, 20, of Maple Shade and Richard Benz, 22, of Cinnaminson said they planned to spend a night at Cottonwood, readying themselves for a week at a primitive campsite on the Rio Grande.

Denmark voted in 1916 to sell the Danish West Indies to the United States.

Governor White says 'do not discriminate'

AUSTIN (AP) — As it finalizes immigration control legislation, Congress must be careful to avoid action that might discriminate against Hispanics, Gov. Mark White says.

White said Thursday he is worried because some provisions in the immigration bill passed by the U.S. House have angered Hispanic leaders, and he said he will contact congressmen to register his feelings.

"I'm very, very concerned about the reaction that has occurred in the Hispanic community about the impact that bill will have on Hispanics," White said after the Simpson-Mazzoli bill passed 216-211 on Wednesday.

The bill would allow illegal aliens living in the United States since before 1982 to seek legal status and would fine employers who hire illegal aliens.

Those fines are viewed by many Hispanics as inviting job discrimination because it would be easier for an employer to simply refuse to hire any Hispanics than make certain they are U.S. citizens.

Another provision in the bill would establish a "guest worker" program permitting foreign workers to cross U.S. borders and pick perishable agricultural crops. Growers would only be able to obtain such workers if they could establish that they are unable to recruit American workers.

White said he doesn't like that plan and voiced the belief that the guest worker program was approved "at the behest of certain large landowners in California." He said Texas farmers don't need guest workers.

"I don't think Texas landowners have the same situation. We have an abundance of workers here in Texas that are able to handle the crops being harvested. I don't think we need guest workers in Texas," White said.

The governor said he expects a House-Senate conference committee in Washington to work out a final immigration control bill, and promised to contact members of that committee to make his concerns known.

"I'm very concerned that any bill not discriminate against Hispanics. I'm going to be urging those conferees to be cognizant of the impact this bill will have on Hispanics — not only in Texas but throughout the country," White said.

On another issue, White said he will continue to talk with House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby about opening his special session of the Legislature to consider providing workers compensation for farmworkers.

However, he said, until the Legislature moves on school reform he still doesn't want to do "anything that would divert attention away from the educational issue that we've called this session for."

Governor, Perot push for expensive reforms

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Computer magnate H. Ross Perot, who signed up as Gov. Mark White's gunslinger to fight for school reform, has challenged the Texas Legislature to enact its first tax increase in 13 years and overhaul the state's public schools.

Perot told the Legislature that the state's schools ranked among the nation's worst and challenged the legislators to turn the system around.

"Where does our great, rich, proud state of Texas rank (in education)? Down in the forties among the 50 states. We are at the bottom of the bottom in terms of educational achievement," Perot said at a special session of the Legislature this month.

The final report of the blue-ribbon commission headed by Perot called for more homework for students, less emphasis on sports — particularly football — and large pay increases and basic skills testing for teachers. The commission estimated that the first phase of its reforms would cost nearly $1 billion a year.

White, whose 1982 campaign platform contained a "no new taxes" pledge, has called lawmakers to the state capital for a 30-day special session to devise and fund plans for education and highway improvements. The Democratic governor said he wanted a $4.8 billion tax hike approved by the July 3 session deadline.

Although Texans' tax burden is among the lowest of the industrial states, a decline in gas and oil production combined with the growth in population has reduced the annual surplus legislators have grown accustomed to.

School bill passed by House

But Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, who wrote the 1949 amendment that set up a board with one member from each congressional district, spoke against the current system.

"The board is too big. They don't have a board meeting. They have a convention," he said.

The finance plan satisfied most members. Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston, said the current system cheats property-poor districts, some of whom have sued.

"Until we do it," Colbert said of changing the plan, "we're in trouble in the courts, if not in our hearts and minds."

Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont, voted for the bill, but said, "We may have made it a little bit less unequal, but we ha less unequal, but we tried to get the kind of equality our constitution requires."

Price also complained about competency tests for teachers.

"Let's don't just single out teachers for this type of ridicule. I'll be here in January with a bill requiring competency tests for everybody who receives a license from Texas," he said.

The agreement that sealed the bill's approval apparently came from the four teachers' groups that frequently disagree. The Texas State Teachers Association, Texas Classroom Teachers Association, Association of Texas Professional Educators and Texas Federation of Teachers signed a letter backing the pay raise plan and the bill.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, won approval for the plan that sets up a minimum salary schedule plus a "career ladder" that rewards higher degrees and proficiency.

Peveto said the teacher groups agreed to the plan to avoid a "pure merit-type pay arrangement" proposed in other plans.

The student testing provision says high school seniors do not get a diploma if they fail a skills test.

The bill would give the State Board of Education power to review University Interscholastic League rules concerning extracurricular activities.

Of the 29 votes against the bill, 21 came from House Republicans. There are 36 GOP representatives.

gett is for it." Gramm said.

He predicted "a change in stereotype" in the fall with "a Republicam carrying the rural vote of Texas."

Screen cut, bike missing

A bike theft and a criminal mischief incident involving cut screens were reported to Snyder police Thursday.

The missing bike — described as a Wilson Sky Queen girl's bicycle — was reported by Billy Ed Vernon, 4300 Ave. U. Its value was placed at $80.

Aurora Thompson, 1307 25th St., noted a cut back screen door at her residence. She said the incident occurred between 10 p.m. Wednesday and 9 a.m. Thursday.

In other police business, officers reported six arrests Thursday.

Four Hispanic males were arrested in the 100 Block of 30th St. Thursday night. Charges for two were public intoxication and a third was charged with public intoxication and misdemeanor possession of marijuana.

A fourth individual in the group was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Other arrests involved a female arrested for public intoxication and a male charged with DWI.

Fire hydrant damaged here

A city fire hydrant in the 3000 Block of 30th St. was struck as a result of a two-vehicle collision here Thursday around 7:26 p.m.

Minor damage was said caused to both a 1972 Chevrolet driven by San-Juanita Garcia Soliz, 610 33rd St., and a 1976 Oldsmobile driven by Frances Jean Williams of 1106 33rd St.

The accident was preceded Thursday by two other minor collisions.

The first of these occurred around 1:07 p.m. in the 2500 Block of College Ave.. Involved vehicles were a 1977 Chevrolet driven by Rudy Garza of 2411 26th St., and a 1981 Pontiac driven by Donna Marie Koonce of Rt. 3, Snyder.

At 5:28 p.m., a third minor accident was reported in the 2200 Block of 20th St.

Drivers involved in it were Terry Lynn Green of 207 Birch, driving a 1971 Oldsmobile, and Eleanor Mandenhal Obanion, 2712 32nd St.

No injuries were reported following any of the day's accidents.

WTC on shaky ground

BOZEMAN, Mont. – For Coach Bob Doty and several members of the Western Texas College rodeo teams, it's nail-bitting time at the College National Finals Rodeo.

The Westerners had three individuals placing in four events in the average here as of Thursday night. Whether the scores and times can stay in the top 10 through tonight's performance is the question.

"It all depends on them (the competition) right now," said Coach Doty. "We look like we've got a real good chance in two of the four. The other two are real shaky though."

One of the shaky ones is in the barrel race, where Judy Cox is sitting 10th heading into tonight's performance. Cox, who ran a 14.83 in the first go-round, turned a 14.65 Thursday night. Her total on two head is 29.48. The competition is so keen here that fifth place is 29.33, only 15-hundredths of a second faster.

"One girl (Lisa Brown from McNeese State) has a real good chance to knock Judy out," said Doty. "She (Brown) had a 14.67 to win the first go-round. Also riding tonight is Kellie Kay of the University of Arizona, who had a 14.90 in the first go."

Brown needs a 14.80 tonight to push Cox out of the average. Kay would have to have a 14.58.

The barrel race nas also been WTC's strongest showing, where Kellie Kyle is currently second in the average. Kyle was winning the second go-round with a 14.37 until Thursday evening when New Mexico State's Tammy King flashed a 14.11. King did not have a good run in the first go however, and will not make the average.

Shane Smith is WTC's other hope - and the only chance the school has from the men's team. Smith is currently seventh in both the saddle bronc and bull riding. He competes in the bareback tonight.

"There are three bronc riders that could move him out tonight, but I'd say he's got a good chance of making the average," noted Doty. "I'm afraid he's not going to make it in the bull riding though."

Smith is also doubtful to advance in the bareback after scoring 57 on a poor horse in the first go.

"It's going to be real hard for Shane to come back in the bareback. He'll have to have an exceptional ride and I don't know if his horse is good enough," Doty said.

In the only other WTC action besides Cox's barrel run Thursday, Dale Gideon bucked off his bull.

Besides Smith in the bareback tonight, Canita Cass is in the goat tying (no-time, first-go) and Randy Bomar is in calf roping (no-time, first-go).

In other rodeo results, Sul Ross's Ty Springer, from Snyder, missed his steer in the steer wrestling. Derick Clark of Texas Tech University is winning the average in the saddle bronc; Kenny Smith of ENMU is winning the average in the bareback; Tami Noble of Sul Ross is fifth in the barrels and Tuff Hedeman of Sul Ross is sixth in the saddle brone.

Lewis qualifies a fourth time

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Carl Lewis competed a sensational triple in the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials, while Mike Tully helped stamp the American pole vaulters as a force to be reckoned with at the upcoming Games.

Lewis finished off his five-day reign in the sprints and long jump with a sizzling 19.86-second victory in Thursday's final of the men's 200 meters to clinch his fourth Olympic berth.

Earlier in the week, the 22-year-old Lewis handily won the 100, in 10.06, and the long jump, at 28 feet, seven inches. And he had warmed up for the 200 final with a 19.85 clocking, third fastest ever, in qualifying.

Tully soared to an American record 19 feet, three-quarters of an inch and came close twice while attempting a world record height of 19-3¾.

In Thursday's other finals on the fifth day of the eight-day trials, Judi Brown rewrote her own American record in the women's 400-meter hurdles with a 54.93 clocking, and Georgia Tech freshman Antonio McKay turned in the fastest men's 400 meters in the world this year, 44.71.

Lewis' outstanding week put him in both Olympic sprints, the 400-meter relay and the long jump, thus giving him a chance to duplicate Jesse Owens' four gold medal haul of 1936.

Kirk Baptiste, Lewis' teammate at the University of Houston, finished second in the 200 final at 20.05, while Thomas Jefferson of Kent State, was third at 20.37 to earn the final Olympic berth. Roy Martin Jr., a 17-year-old high school student from Dallas, just missed a berth as he finished fourth in 20.43.

Tully, a 27-year-old former world record holder who's made a successful comeback, became the third American to clear 19 feet as the U.S. vaulters, who had lost their traditional international prominence, continue to rally.

Doug Lytle cleared 18-8¾ for the second berth on the U.S. team, and Earl Bell, who had gone a national record 19-0¼ earlier this month, got the third and final spot with a 18-4¾ effort. Billy Olson, who has cleared 19-0¼ indoors, finished seventh to miss a berth on the team.

Tully's vault put him in a tie for fourth place on the all-time performers' list. Only world record holder Sergey Bubka (19-3½) of the Soviet Union, and Pierre Quinon of France (19-1¼) have gone higher. The Soviets' Vladimir Polyakov also has cleared 19-0¾.

Angela Wright finished second in 55.33 and Sharrieffa Barksdale, the former American record-holder from the University of Tennessee, took third in 55.58 to get the other two intermediate hurdles berths.

In the men's 400, McKay said he was thrilled to earn a spot on the U.S. team. Alonzo Babers was second in 44.86, and Sunder Nix third in 45.15 to earn the other two berths in the 400.

Mary Decker, the world champion in the women's 1,500 and 3,000 meters, breezed to victories in both of her events, a 4:13.70 in the 1,500, then an 8:56.12 clocking in the 3,000.

White acquitted of misdemeanor

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) - After the final whistle was blown on Danny White's misdemeanor assault trial, the Dallas Cowboys quarterback smiled and declared justice the winner.

White was acquitted Thursday night by a jury of four men and two women who sat through a four-day, star-studded trial pitting the Cowboys veteran signal-caller against a 17-year-old high school football player, whom White admitted striking.

"My faith in the system was a little bit shaky in the beginning," White said. "It's been, to some extent, restored after the verdict and the fact that some good people made a good decision. Justice was served in the long run."

White, 32, said he slapped Jon Michael Clark to protect himself and three of his children after the youth's dangerous driving nearly forced White's van into a head-on collision at 80 mph.

Clark said White punched him in the nose after forcing his Camaro off a rural road north of Dallas.

Jurors, who deliberated an hour, indicated they never reached consideration of White's self-defense plea because they all had reasonable doubt that White actually hit Clark with a closed fist as alleged in the charge.

Clark and his family called the trial "a circus" and said White's character witnesses - including Cowboys coach Tom Landry, retired quarterback Roger Staubach and middle linebacker Bob Breunig - swayed the jury.

"I just feel that Danny White is above the law," said Clark, a Plano High School student and tight end on the football team.

Volleyball coach...

Bane hired pending school board okay

Penny Bane, former high school volleyball standout, has been hired as volleyball coach at Snyder High School, pending approval of the school board.

"I feel like she has the maturity to keep the program as successful as it has been in the last few years," said SHS Athletic Director David Noble.

Bane would replace Leslie O'Pry, who resigned following the 1983-84 season.

Staub finding second career as pinch-hitter

by The Associated Press

Rusty Staub is one of those baseball players who was fortunate enough to find a second career as a pinch-hitter. He hasn't been enjoying it, however, until this season.

"It makes you feel real good to contribute to a winning cause," Staub said Thursday after helping the New York Mets pull out a 10-7 decision over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The 40-year-old Staub came off the bench and stroked a tie-breaking single as the Mets came up with three runs in the seventh inning to win the battle of National League East leaders. The Mets hopped back over the Phillies into first place by a half-game.

In other National League action, Pittsburgh beat Chicago 8-6, Los Angeles stopped Cincinnati 9-7, San Francisco trimmed Atlanta 5-3 and Houston crushed San Diego 11-5.

Pirates 8, Cubs 6

Marvell Wynne's two-run double in the sixth inning snapped a 4-4 tie and carried Pittsburgh over Chicago.

With the Cubs leading 4-3, Tony Pena singled to start the Pirates' sixth and Doug Frobel drew a walk off loser Dennis Eckersley, 1-4. Jim Morrison bunted the runners up before Dale Berra was intentionally walked to load the bases. Pinch-hitter Johnny Ray's sacrifice fly scored Pena before Wynne's double capped the three-run inning, giving the Pirates a 6-4 lead.

Rick Rhoden, 5-5, earned the victory despite allowing 10 hits and a walk in six innings.

Dodgers 9, Reds 7

Steve Yeager's pinch-hit grand slam home run in the seventh inning powered Los Angeles over Cincinnati and ended the Dodgers' losing streak at seven games.

Los Angeles scored five times with one out in the seventh. Pedro Guerrero's double delivered the first run before Yeager came off the bench to smash his grand slam off reliever Bob Owchinko.

Burt Hooton, the third Dodger pitcher, earned his first victory in four decisions with two innings of relief. He gave up a run in the seventh on Nick Esasky's RBI groundout, and Orel Hershiser came on in the eighth for his first save.

Astros 11, Padres 5

Denny Walling's pinch-hit triple triggered a six-run Houston rally in the fifth inning that carried the Astros over San Diego, their first victory over the Padres in six games.

Walling's hit followed a single by Terry Puhl against losing pitcher Ed Whitson, 7-4.

Whitson's reliever, Craig Lefferts, was later greeted by run-scoring singles by Enos Cabell, Jose Cruz and Jerry Mumphrey, and Ray Knight followed with a sacrifice fly.
