Hostages 'Solution' Seen

Bani Sadr, Leading Iran Vote, Holds Out Hope

By The Associated Press

FINANCE MINISTER Abolhassan Bani Sadr, the overwhelming leader in early returns in Iran's presidential election, Saturday claimed victory and was quoted as saying the American hostage situation in Tehran is a "minor affair" that can be easily solved.

"I've definitely won," said Bani Sadr, the former foreign minister who was dismissed from the post three weeks after Islamic militants seized the U.S. Embassy and hostages. The dismissal appeared to the result of his efforts to find a way out of the crisis.

Holds Big Margin

Bani Sadr, 46, a close associate of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, was outdistancing his closest competitor by a margin of nearly four to one in many towns and cities, leading a field of eight candidates in early returns of Friday's vote, Interior Ministry officials said.

As night fell in Tehran, ministry officials said they had counted about 6.7 million of an estimated 22 million votes cast. Of those counted, they said, initial tabulations from around the country gave Bani Sadr 5,164,771 votes.

His closest competitor, Adm. Ahmad Madani, the former navy commander and governor of oil-rich Khuzestan province, had 1,116,186 votes and Culture and Education Minister Hassan Habibi received 397,931, the ministry officials said.

Others Far Behind

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, who replaced Bani Sadr when he was dismissed from his post Nov. 28 and has made strongly anti-American statements, shared the remaining votes with other candidates.

In other developments:

—Two specialists from Switzerland examined Khomeini in a Tehran hospital where he is receiving treatment for a heart ailment and reported his condition was good, Tehran radio reported. The two doctors also approved medical treatment given Khomeini so far, the radio said in a broadcast monitored in London.

—An Iranian military helicopter crashed in Alawiyeh, near the central Iranian city of Isfahan, and all 11 persons aboard were killed, Tehran radio said in a broadcast monitored in Kuwait. The cause of the crash was not known, it said.

—Two black ministers from Houston, Texas, planned to return to the United States today after failing in their mission to visit the Embassy hostages or meet Khomeini. The Revs. Bobby Mills and Don Lee said they had established good relations with Iranian officials and would return in February to participate in celebrations of the first anniversary of the Iranian revolution.

—The oil ministry announced that saboteurs blew up two oil pipelines Friday night in Khuzestan. The amount of damage was not reported.

An Interior Ministry representative speaking about the elections said voting took place in all regions except Kurdestan in the western part of Iran, where the autonomy-seeking Kurdish ethnic minority boycotted the election. The Kurds had also boycotted the vote last December that passed the new Islamic constitution for Iran.

Carter administration officials have said they hope a new Iranian president will be a "better negotiating partner" than Iranian officials have been so far. Iran continues to demand deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, now living in Panama, be returned to Iran before the Americans are set free.

On Saturday, the hostages' 84th day in captivity, Bani Sadr said the shah's extradition would quickly resolve the hostage situation.

In an interview published Saturday in the French newspaper Le Matin, Bani Sadr was quoted as discussing the program he would institute if he won the election: "With regard to the United States, there are many problems, but the

Youth With Reattached Arm Stays Optimistic

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MATT HOWELL is depending on physical therapy, religious faith and time to restore the use of his left arm, reattached during 12 hours of surgery following a farming accident.

"Every day it's looking better and you can't ask for more than that," the soft-spoken 19-year-old Dimmitt youth explained.

The team of doctors at Lubbock's Highland Hospital that performed the surgery has promised no miracles but is cautiously optimistic. The delicate operation involved connecting arteries, veins and nerves as well as setting fractures and reattaching muscles.

"They said as long as they can keep the arm on, it's got a chance," said the youth's father, Jack Howell. "The doctors say time is the only thing that will tell."

Circulation has returned to the limb, but Matt said he doesn't have any feeling in it nor can he move his fingers. But sometimes, he added, pointing at the heavily bandaged arm in a sling, there is an itching sensation "like ants crawling on it."

The pain he feels now is soreness in his left shoulder joint from lifting his limb into the whirlpool bath which massages the arm each day.

"Anything I do makes it sore," he said, as he rested the arm on a chair in his hospital room.

Several organizations in Dimmitt are accepting contributions to help defray the youth's medical bills. They include First State Bank, First Baptist Church, First Unit-

Shortage Of Registered Nurses Not Limited To Lubbock, Or Even Texas

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff
(First in a three-part series)

ON ANY SUNDAY, reading newspaper classified ads makes one thing pretty clear: Lubbock needs nurses.

This comes as no revelation to anyone working in the health care field here. And the problem has been publicized with Methodist Hospital's accreditation woes (due in part to a shortage of registered nurses) and the growing shortage of nurses at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

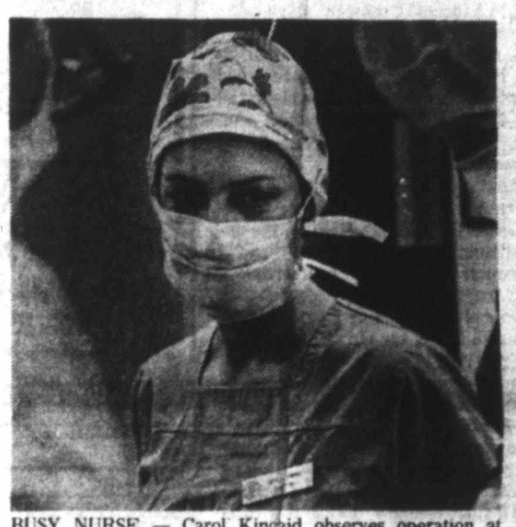

Walking through a hospital doesn't always give the casual observer a clear picture of the shortage. The whole operation doesn't shut down just because RNs are in short supply.

It's a quiet problem. Nurses are working overtime and double shifts and are generally expected to do more than under fully-staffed circumstances. At least one hospital has had to turn away patients needing intensive care treatment because of a shortage of critical care nurses.

The critical care units, such as intensive care, cardiac intensive care, burn and cancer units are the hardest to staff. The very nature of modern medicine allows critically ill people, who would have died 10 years ago, to survive today — but only under around-the-clock observation in a critical care unit.

Nurses in critical care specialties are a special breed.

Inflation Tied To Shrinking Resources

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation is less a disease that can be cured by monetary and fiscal policy than it is a sympton of deeper problems whose roots extend from the Pentagon to Madison Avenue, a private research group said Saturday.

A study by the Worldwatch Institute says the chronically high inflation rate that grips most nations reflects the shrinking of global resources, from oil to food.

"We can no longer turn the fiscal and monetary dials to correct it," said Robert Fuller, author of the study. It will take an entire generation "if we're looking to get at (inflation's) sources," he added.

Fuller said inflation is being fed by an explosion in defense spending, too much trade protection, excessive consumption that is stimulated by Madison Avenue's advertising industry, and too much reliance on high-priced experts.

The study, entitled "Inflation: The Rising Cost of Living on a Small Planet," said that societies can no longer simply increase supply to meet demand. "We are reaching that historic point where many resources are peaking," Fuller said.

Despite huge investments in oceanic fishing fleets since 1970, the world fish catch has levelled off, he said, adding that at the same time world per capita production of wood, petroleum, cereals and most meats all appear to have peaked. "The prices of these same commodities soared and inflation became a central feature of global economic life," Fuller said.

The study disdains many of the conventional proposals to solve inflation, taking views that reflect Fuller's background as a physicist and the nonprofit organization's role as viewer of global problems from energy to population control.

It advocates changes in people's behavior more than it supports tight money policies by the Federal Reserve Board.

"Controlling inflation will require a shift away from consumerism, away from the materialistic orientation," Fuller said.

He chastised the advertising industry for encouraging unnecessary consumption and supporting annual style changes in automobiles and clothing.

Fuller also said people's dependence on "professional experts, whether medical, educational, legal or mechanical . . . creates conditions for subsequent exploitation by excessive charges."

Advocating a "do-it-yourself" ethic as a way to beat inflation, the study says "lessening our dependence on experts may well be as important in countering inflation as lessening our dependence on foreign oil."

Fuller, noting a significant increase in trade protection measures since 1976 as countries try to preserve jobs, said such measures cost American consumers an additional $4.4 billion for sugar, steel, meat, televisions and footwear between 1975 and 1977.

"By far the most challenging political barrier to a noninflationary economy is the global level of military spending, which equals approximately $500 billion each year," the study says.

Moreover, about one-quarter of all research and development dollars are spent on military technology, rather than bread and butter items, the report says.

Fuller's criticism comes as President Carter proposes a 5 percent real increase in U.S. defense spending in fiscal 1981 and tensions between the United States and Soviet Union escalate in the wake of Russia's invasion of Afghanistan.

Candidates Lagging In County Contests

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE 1980 political season is off and running in most of Texas, but a number of Lubbock politicos appear to be engaged in some foot-dragging in turning in their official filings for candidacy.

As one local politician noted, a number of would-be officeholders seem to be testing the local political waters and probably will make an appearance during the last-minute rush to file.

The period for official filing to gain a place on the May 3 primary election ballot ends at 6 p.m. Feb. 4 — slightly more than a week away.

This same filing deadline also applies to candidates planning to run as independents in the Nov. 4 general election. However, the independent candidates will have to wait until after the party primaries and runoffs, if any, before they can gather voter petitions qualifying them for the ballot.

In years past, a great number of political filings have not been made until the last few days or even hours before the deadline. One advantage to that strategy is that the last-minute candidate will know who he or she will be facing and can tailor his campaign to meet the opposition.

This year, Lubbock County voters will be selecting their representative from the 19th Congressional District, three state legislators from Districts 75-A, 75-B and 76 and a number of county level officials.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance announced Friday his plans to seek re-election and to date has no opposition. Hance defeated George Bush of Midland in 1978 to gain the post long held by George Mahon.

In the races for state representatives, just the reverse has occurred. The incumbents in the three legislative districts representing Lubbock and Lubbock County have not yet filed for re-election. But in two of the races, Districts 75-A and 75-B, opponents already have emerged.

City Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan announced in December her plans to run as a Democrat for the District 75-A seat (the western half of Lubbock) held by Republican Buzz Robnett. Although a fund-raising dinner was held for Robnett in December, the Republican has not officially announced for re-election.

"I'm going to run," Robnett told the Avalanche-Journal late Friday. "I'm just curious to see who else will get in the race."

Robnett said he would make his official announcement shortly before the filing deadline.

In District 75-B (the eastern half of Lubbock), McKinley Shepard, a black Republican, has announced his candidacy for the post held by Democrat Froy Salinas since 1976. Salinas has not announced his intentions but is expected to seek re-election.

"I'll probably be making some kind of political announcement next week," Salinas said.

No candidates have announced for the District 76 legislative seat, which represents Hale and Swisher Counties and portions of Lubbock County. The incumbent

'Warm' Trend Likely Today

AN ARCTIC cold front, the southern flank of a blizzard that engulfed much of eastern Colorado Saturday, is expected to relax its frigid grip on the Panhandle and South Plains today. Southward progress of the front will find temperatures warming to near 40 today, forecasters say.

Freezing rain and drizzle developed across the Panhandle before sunrise Saturday and spread as far south as Levelland and Plainview. Temperatures in the Panhandle ranged from 11 degrees at Dalhart to 18 in Amarillo. Lubbock recorded its high of 34 shortly after midnight. At noon it was 22.

Cloudy and cold, with a slight chance of freezing rain mixed with snow, is predicted today. Temperatures, though, should climb into the middle 30s before descending to the lower teens tonight. Winds will be easterly, 10 to 15 mph.

School Segregation Hearing Set Monday

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WHETHER the Lubbock Independent School District can continue to operate predominantly one-race schools may depend on the strength of school officials' arguments in federal court beginning Monday.

In compliance with an August ruling by a three-judge appeals court panel, U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward will hear debate by school and U.S. Justice Department attorneys over whether the racial balance of Lubbock schools was caused by deliberately discriminatory school board acts.

But the final decision on whether Lubbock will be subject to systemwide integration — with implications for massive busing — rests with the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Federal and school attorneys will meet at 10 a.m. Monday in Woodward's court. A pretrial hearing on the contentions of the parties, a list of witnesses and exhibits will begin at 9 a.m.

Fifth Circuit judges have instructed Woodward to determine whether intentionally segregative acts by the school board influenced housing patterns and thus resulted in the segregated condition of some schools in the district.

However, should Woodward rule that school board acts did not result in segregation here, the Fifth Circuit conceivably still could order elimination of the one-race schools through a districtwide desegregation program.

The appeals court ruled in August that any segregative effect caused by an intentionally segregative act violates the Constitution. Therefore, testimony Monday will not center on the legality of Lubbock's integration plan but on whether schools unaffected by the plan are segregated in violation of the Constitution.

The Fifth Circuit has not yet ruled on the fairness of the partial integration remedy implemented here or on the validity of allowing the district to build schools south of Loop 289.

Appeals Judge Charles Clark held that should Woodward find that other schools in the district are illegally segregated, those schools must be included in a revised desegregation plan.

Lubbock's trial will reopen just a week after the Supreme Court declined to review a Fifth Circuit ruling in the Dallas desegregation case that instructed federal Judge William M. Taylor to eliminate the large number of essentially one-race schools in the Dallas school district or to justify their existence.

In 1976, Taylor ordered a plan that divides the district into six subdistricts to preserve some "naturally integrated" schools, but left many one-race schools that resulted from housing patterns in the city.

The Dallas and Lubbock cases appear similar, but school attorneys and Lubbock Superintendent Ed Irons pointed out that the two cases differ in the stages of litigation.

While the appeals court has ordered further findings on Dallas's plan, Lubbock's desegregation plan is not at issue yet; only the reason for segregated schools in the district.

Windmill Was Lifeline To Early Settlers On Plains

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In the midst of modern day's madly frantic pace, the old windmill and giant mulberry tree are a peaceful bit of yesterday, tribute to the pioneer who, with the aid of the windmill, tamed the waterless plains.

The metal wheel of the windmill at the busy intersection at 50th Street and Indiana Avenue resembles another tribute, an upcoming postage stamp honoring the Southwestern windmill.

On Feb. 7, first day of issue ceremonies will be held in Lubbock for a book of five postage stamps showing historic American windmills.

Although one of the stamps has a windmill that looks similar, none of them portray the favorite of West Texans — the wooden-wheeled Eclipse that made life possible, even profitable, on the Texas High Plains.

The windmill on the present 50th-Indiana site was, naturally, the traditional Eclipse.

There was the windmill for water, a metal shed with one tarp side for temporary shelter and Lubbock four miles away as the prairie chicken flew when the John K. Caraway family was settling in back in 1891, a year after Lubbock was born.

When food was getting low, Caraway climbed the windmill to locate an antelope herd usually grazing within sight. Then, he eased within gun range with a horse trained to ride without bridle or saddle.

The carcass was brought back to hang high in the windmill.

Later, there was a smokehouse for holding antelope hams after the metal shed, believed to have been an old saloon moved from the townsite, gave way to a home.

By the time a metal wheel replaced the Wooden Eclipse, there were Model T's racing across open prairie in pursuit of antelope. Hunters roped from the running board, then kicked the Eclipse weight tied to the other end out to anchor the catch.

"They couldn't stop the cars fast enough, so to keep from killing the antelope, they threw out the weight to hold it until they could come back around with the Model T," John K. Caraway, a grandson of the pioneer, recalled of tales spun by an uncle.

The late Sid Caraway often described the home place to his nephews, John and Wes, who carry on the family name in Lubbock.

An orchard, with cherry, plum, peach, apple, pear and walnut trees, covered the area where the Monterey High School football field now is.

Mulberry trees paralleled a cowtrail that was to become 50th Street. The one still standing was planted beside the house in 1892.

The windmill was the center of the Caraway existence as it was for most West Texas pioneers.

It furnished water for the house where it circulated in the milk trough, then went to a long horse trough shaded by poplar trees 50 feet tall.

Windmill water was stored in two large ponds, providing water for the orchard and the mule-raising operation in a pasture bounded by what now is 50th Street, Indiana Avenue, University and 66th Street.

Wes Caraway was born in the second house on the site where his father had been born in the first. Both grew up on the home place.

John Caraway was a town boy. Memories of visits to his grandmother's place made indelible memories.

He "stole eggs from the sparrows in the trees," but was forbidden the climbing of a particular mulberry tree where mocking birds lived.

He played in barns and corrals where a supermarket and gift shop now stand. The mulberry tree furnished raw material for bows and arrows and slingshots plus shade for the fishing and swimming spots.

Years later, Lubbock was to swallow and bypass the Caraway place, spreading homes and businesses where the antelope and the Caraway children and grandchildren had played.

The windmill, to which neighbors for miles around had brought their water barrels, fell to disuse.

Orchards, home, outbuildings and water ponds are long gone, but busy travelers along 50th and Indiana have a special feeling for "their tree and windmill."

Though Caraways still hold title to the land, the whole town claims the windmill and tree — showing it to visitors, resting in its shade, taking its image away in many hundreds of photographs each year.

With the windmill stamp looking somewhat like it, the windmill, no doubt, will gain even more popularity with today while paying tribute to the ways of yesterday.

YESTERDAY — Ducks and geese sailed the big ponds filled with water from the Eclipse windmill on the Caraway place (now 50th Street and Indiana Avenue in Lubbock) about the turn of the century and for decades after. Lubbock was four miles away when this photograph was taken. (Photo courtesy W. Caraway).

TODAY — A metal wheel now spins above the wooden tower of the old Caraway windmill at 50th Street and Indiana Avenue. John K. Caraway, a grandson of the pioneer who put up the first windmill, displays the Eclipse weight that almost caused the demise of the mill — a weight showing the "dry" moon. Traffic Pile-Ups, Sub-Zero Weather Result From Colorado Blizzard

By The Associated Press

A blizzard that caused major traffic pile-ups in Colorado — some involving up to 500 vehicles — abated Saturday, but the arctic storm left the state frozen in sub-zero weather.

The storm, which swept in Friday with winds gusting to 67 mph, whipped the 4 to 5 inches of snow into high drifts and cut visibility to nearly zero in some areas. At least one death was reported.

A low of 4 below zero was recorded Saturday in Denver, which was blanketed with 4 inches of snow. Travelers' advisories remained in effect because of the snowpacked and icy streets.

Snow showers Saturday spread from eastern Washington and northeast Oregon across the northern Rockies, the upper Missouri Valley, the Plains, the lower Missouri Valley and the southern Ohio Valley into the central Appalachians.

Snow also was falling from northern Minnesota across the Great Lakes, with snow changing to rain reported from the lower Mississippi Valley across the Tennessee Valley and the Gulf States to the southern Atlantic Coast.

Ski areas in Colorado reported up to 10 inches of new snow.

Most traffic problems in Colorado came Friday evening during the commuter rush hour, particularly on a 20-mile stretch of Interstate 25 north of Denver. The Colorado State Patrol said three pile-ups on that stretch involved between 450 and 500 cars.

Judith Hay, 34, of Littleton, Colo. was killed as 50 to 60 cars piled up on the south Loveland, Colo., entrance to the highway.

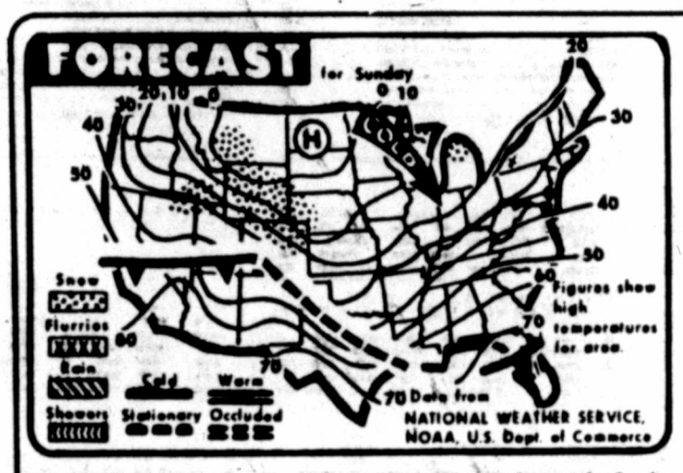

About 50 stranded travelers were bused to Loveland, where they were given overnight lodging by the Larimer County sheriff's office.

Eastern U.S.: Atlanta 50, cloudy; Boston 32, windy; Buffalo 25, cloudy; Caribou 21, windy; Charleston, S.C. 50, rain; Cincinnati 33, fair; Cleveland 22, fair; Indianapolis 30, fair; Knoxville 50, cloudy; Miami 76, partly cloudy; Nashville 46, cloudy; New York 33, windy; Philadelphia 35, fair; Pittsburgh 24, fair; Richmond 45, cloudy; Washington 42, partly cloudy.

U.S. Fears Thailand Security Threatened

WASHINGTON (AP) -The State Department, pointing to reported concentrations of Vietnamese troops on the Thai-Cambodian border, Saturday called on Vietnam and the Soviet Union to take no action that would threaten the security of Thailand.

State Department officials said 500,000 to 700,000 Cambodian refugees are in Thailand, having fled famine or rperession at home. They report about 50,000 Vietnamese troops in the region.

"Vietnamese military activity in this area," said a department statement, "poses a potential threat to the security of Thailand." It added that increased military activity would threaten "the peace, security and stability of the entire region."

"More broadly," the statement went on, "we urge them (the Vietnamese and Soviets) to seek a peaceful solution to the issues of Kampuchea (Cambodia) which would involve the end of hostilities and the wirhdrawal of all the foreign troops and the creation of a genuinely independent and representative Khmer governmet at peace with all its neighbors."

Refugees have been fleeing Cambodia in increasing numbers since the Vietnamese-backed regime of Heng Samrin ousted the Pol Pot regime in 1978 and growing famine has been reported in the country.

Troops loyal to the former government are still fighting a guerrilla war to regain power, and there were reports last month that their biggest forces are believed to be along the Thai border.

Pol Pot's government, also communist, came to power in 1975 after the United States pulled out of Vietnam. It was regarded as one of the most brutal in history of the country long torn by war.

The State Department officials mentioned the Soviet allies of the Vietnamese in their assessment of the situation Saturday. They referred to concern over reports of large Vietnamese troop deployments near the border and said other countries, including Japan, New Zealand and Australia, had also expressed concern.

The officials said the area they are worried about is near the town of Aranya Prathet, directly east of Bangkok and about 100 miles north of the Gulf of Siam.

They estimate 500,000 to 700,000 Cambodians have taken refuge in the Thai border area under the care of several hundred aid personnel from the United States and other countries. Over the past few weeks, according to these officials, the Vietnamese have been building up to a force of some 50,000 troops.

Family Hangings Trouble Refugees

FAIRFIELD, Iowa (AP) — The few Laotian refugees in this southeast Iowa farming community are "having trouble inside" trying to understand why a fellow refugee and his four children were hanged from twine nooses in the basement of their home.

Prosecutors, in the meantime, plan to take the case to a grand jury. Police say Theng Pao Yang, 29, apparently hanged his four children and then hanged himself. One of the children died.

Yi Ly, 25, told police she found her husband and their children hanging in their basement on Tuesday. She quickly cut them down, but their only son, 8-year-old So Yeng Yang, died of strangulation.

Theng Pao was hospitalized in good condition Saturday. His 6-year-old daughter, Bay, was listed in fair condition. Two younger daughters, 3-year-old Chu and 1-year-old Mai Yai, were with their mother in Fairfield.

The other five Laotian families who have come here in the past year are confused by it all.

"They feel very sad," said Barbara Hill, who teaches English to the refugees. "They call it 'having trouble inside.'

"They can understand a man wanting to take his own life; this happens in their country. But they do not understand why he would kill the boy or why he would try to hang his whole family."

Authorities are just as confused about what happened, and why. Jefferson County Attorney Edwin Kelly said Friday he would call a grand jury to investigate the death of the boy.

Kelly said his investigation had been hampered by the language barrier and having to work through interpreters.

"There have been some discrepancies," he said. "But we don't know if these creep into the translation or for some other reason."

He also said he would ask the Juvenile Court to decide whether the state should seek custody of the Yang children or offer some other form of protection for the family.

The family arrived in Fairfield on Dec. 1 after spending five years in a refugee camp in Thailand. Those who knew him agree that Theng Pao was troubled because he left his mother and step-father behind in the camp.

But did the Yangs face more difficulties than the 4,500 other Southeast Asian refugees who have come to Iowa?

The Rev. Lynn Bergfalk, pastor of the First Baptist Church, which sponsored the Yangs, said language barriers, homesickness and unemployment were common problems among the refugees.

"All of these things are pieces of the puzzle, but who knows what significance each of these has," he said. "We're trying to work the puzzle without having all the pieces."

The Yangs were members of the Hmong tribe, a relatively primitive group that roamed the hills of northern Laos.

Mrs. Hill said the language barrier made it more difficult for the Yangs than for the other refugee families, most of whom had lived in cities in the lowlands of Laos.

"This is what the other Lao families told me," Mrs. Hill said. "I'm not sure there's a Hmong word for, say, can-opener. It just isn't a part of their culture.

"One day I showed Theng Pao a map and showed him how far he had come," she said. "And he cried and cried and cried. He managed to let me know with gestures that he had never seen a map before.

"He had no idea the world was so big."

Kentucky Bluegrass Property Purchase Price At $6 Million

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — For just under $6 million you can buy a 916-acre piece of the Kentucky Bluegrass in the heart of thoroughbred horse country. The Whitneys live just down the road and can tell you about the school system.

The sale of the Herschel Weil farm — located northeast of Lexington along the Paris Pike, a national historic landmrk considered the most picturesque in the Bluegrass region — will be handled by Sotheby Parke Bernet of New York.

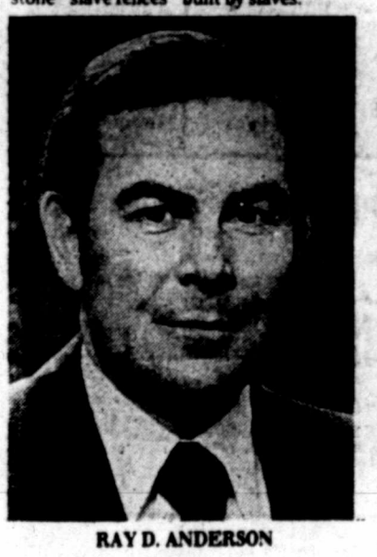

Rodney Dillard, a vice president the art auction house's real estate division, called the Weil farm "extraordinarily productive" and "perfectly suited for development as a major thoroughbred establishment."

The property includes a seven-room colonial-era brick house and four other homes, five barns for horses and tobacco and rolling pasture land which, amid the morning mist, sometimes appears blue-green, giving the Bluegrass region its name. The annual property taxes: $3,428.

The president of the Sotheby Parke Bernet Realty Corp., Charles Seilheimer Jr., said the farm — with an asking price of "a tad under $6 million" would make a fine hedge against inflation.

"The name of the game in real estate is location," Seilheimer said in the firm's promotional material for the sale. As far as the Weil farm is concerned, "You can't find anything better if you are in the thoroughbred game — horses are recognized as an investment today and so is this property."

For those unfamiliar with horse breeding the neighbors can offer plenty of tips: up the Paris Price is the farm operated by C.V. Whitney as well as the Spendthrift, Claiborne and Tom Gentry horse farms, each lined with neatly painted wood fences or pre-Civil War stone "slave fences" built by slaves.

Brownfield Attorney Seeking District Judge's Position

He is a graduate of North Texas State University and Baylor University School of Law.

City's Community Centers Learn From Incident, Install Alarms

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Christmas — a time of peace and good will toward men.

But two years ago, the holiday was anything but peaceful and filled with good will when three youths, bent only on destruction, virtually demolished Rodgers Community Center.

Community Center director Susie Howard says it's hard to imagine a tornado more destructive than the three boys, aged 13, 15 and 17, who left little more than a shell in their wake.

All of the more than 20 windows in the center were broken out, some by chairs hurled through the panes. Two large aquariums were demolished and the fish left to die on the center floor.

File cabinets in the office were overturned and records strewn about. Many of the documents were ruined by the water from the fish tanks.

Fire extinguishers were shot off, Christmas trees and decorations destroyed and beverages from the snack bar thrown against the walls.

"I don't even know if a tornado could do that much damage, Miss Howard said.

The damage was so extensive, parks director John Alford calls it the "worst vandalism we've ever had in a park."

But it is unlikely the same destruction could reoccur today. Within the past three weeks, burglar alarms have been installed in all six community centers.

Alford said his staff has been testing the effectiveness of a burlar alarm for the past 1 1/2 years, and the alarm "has worked everywhere."

"We were very pleased with the first one we bought," he said. Though the alarms cost $750 each, Alford said, "We can lose that much in one break-in."

"It costs us a minimum of $50 if we get broken into," he said, and the George Woods Community Center was being burglarized every two or three days.

"The alarms will pay for themselves in a couple of years without question," he said. Alford is so confident of that fact, the Parks Department building maintenance budget was significantly reduced this year.

Alford said he hopes the alarms work as a deterrent to future break-ins, adding, "The kids (at community centers) know when it's there."

The first day the alarm was in place at George Woods Community Center, Alford said about a half-dozen kids spotted the device, promptly did an about-face and left the center.

The primary cost to the city when a break-in occurs is labor and materials to replace windows broken to gain access to the building.

Once inside, Alford said the young burglars help themselves to $15 to $20 worth of candy bars, and sometimes soft drinks to wash the sweets down.

To reduce the cost of the burglaries, Alford said the concessions were not locked up to avoid further damage. Any money left inside a community center is tucked away inside a floor safe, he said.

But vandalism to city parks is not as easy to combat as the community center break-ins, although it's just as senseless, he said.

"I can't understand why people who use facilities want to tear them up," he said. "And nobody can figure out how to prevent it except to put up armed guards.

"About all we can do is put up lights," he said.

About anything in parks which can be vandalized, has been, Alford said, with damage running the gamut from signs to trees to playground equipment.

People have stolen recently planted trees, probably with hopes of using the trees to landscape their yards.

Some of the trees planted in the Quirt Avenue median near the airport were pulled out of the ground with a pickup truck, Alford said, and had no chance of survival.

Other trees simply are jerked out of the ground soon after planting and tossed to the earth to die.

"The main problem is, it doesn't make any sense so what can you do about it?" Alford said .

A wooden sign identifying the Buddy Holly Recreation Area in the Canyon Lakes was up less than a day when someone swiped the sign.

Until about three years ago, Lubbock had three park patrolmen, Alford said.

"But we decided we needed either 15 or none," he said, and the responsibility of patrolling the parks was handed to the Lubbock police.

Although most larger cities in Texas successfully utilize park patrols, Alford said he likes the current arrangement with the police department.

"I'm not a policeman, and I don't want to be," he said, adding police patrols of the parks are more economical.

"It just worked out better this way," he said. "We've had plenty of support from the police department."

The Landwer House, being remodeled for a party house in the Canyon Lakes area, will contain an apartment in which city officials hope to a police officer will live.

"We hope the visibility of the police car will help," Alford said.

Meanwhile, repair of the vandalism two years ago at Rodgers Community Center continues.

On Thursday, the City Council approved the use of $16,000 in Community Development contingency funds to renovate the center.

Metal plates, which replaced the broken windows, will be insulated with the funds, restrooms will be remodeled and the interior and exterior of the 14-year-old center will be painted.

The 17-year-old who participated in the vandalism "had to make restitution for the damage in a small amount," Mrs. Howard said.

However, she said, the two juveniles involved were not punished "as far as I know."

The three were permanently expelled from all city community centers, she said — something the trio doesn't comprehend.

"It's real hard for them to understand why they can't come back in," she said.

Five Children Die, One Injured In House Blaze

LYNDEN, Wash. (AP) — Fire raged through a one-story wood-frame house early Saturday, killing five children, officials said.

Firefighters said a cigarette smoldering in a sofa may have been the cause of the blaze.

Dead were five of the eight children of Valentine and Zelda Zamora. Only their 17-year-old daughter escaped the blaze.

The Zamoras and two other sons, Anthony and Valentine Jr., were not at home at the time of the fire, Mrs. Zamora said. Zamora is unemployed, while Mrs. Zamora is a farm worker.

The victims were identified as Lydia Diana, 12, Elena Lea, 7, Samuel Richard, 4, Thomas, 1, and Israel Daniel, 8.

Louise Mary Zamora, 17, was reported in satisfactory condition at a hospital in Bellingham, 13 miles south of here.

The fire was reported by neighbors at about 1:30 a.m. More than 20 firefighters battled the blaze for 3½ hours.

Mrs. Zamora, who prunes and ties raspberry bushes for Dwight Chilton Farm, said she left the house to drive a family friend home, returning less than 45 minutes later to find the house in flames.

Zamora, who is unemployed because of back problems, had not returned from visiting friends, she said.

The Zamoras had rented the 30-year-old house for seven years. The family was taken into the home of a Ferndale relative and was receiving aid from the Red Cross.

The family had celebrated Thomas' first birthday Friday, a tearful Mrs. Zamora said in halting English.

Counselor Aiding Kennedy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Sacramento counselor is on leave from his job so he can help David Kennedy, son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, kick a drug addiction, the Los Angeles Times reported Saturday.

DAVID KENNEDY

The newspaper reported that Donald Juhl is conducting "live-in" therapy on Kennedy, 24, in Hyannis Port, Mass.

Juhl is executive director of a drug detoxification and treatment group, the Aquarian Effort, which is funded primarily by the National Institute of Drug Abuse.

Barbara Debert, Sacramento County drug coordinator, said Juhl is on leave from the group and another official told the newspaper that Juhl was flown to Massachusetts "as a private deal between Kennedy and Juhl." The type of drug addiction was not specified.

UFO Caused By Driver

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — When a hit-and-run driver slammed into utility pole, about 40 persons called police to report they had sighted an unidentified flying object.

Chuck Marsh, a disc jockey at Kalamazoo radio station WKMI, said he was driving to work on the city's west side when he saw "a red ball of flame coming down in the east."

"I thought it was a plane crash," he said.

Sheriff's deputies said 1,890 Consumers Power Co. customers were without electricity for more than four hours after the 3:50 a.m. accident.

Deputies were searching for the driver of a car which hit the pole on Kalamazoo's east side and caused the pole's restraining wire to flip atop the electrical lines. The resulting fiery explosion shorted out a Kalamazoo substation, said utility spokesman Rhyne Groothuis.

Authorities said power was restored by 8:30 a.m.

Man Loses Big Gamble

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — For 79-year-old Michael Stawarz, it was a big gamble. And he lost.

Stawarz's bank mistakenly credited about $14,000 to the pensioner's account and in the next 11 months, Stawarz gambled the sum away at horse races.

He confessed to police and was sentenced Friday in Provincial Court to serve two months in a community correctional facility. He also was ordered to repay the sum to Toronto Dominion Bank.

The court was told that in April 1978, Stawarz went to the bank and told a clerk he had lost his savings account passbook. The clerk located an account with a similar name and transferred $14,507 to Stawarz's account.

Man Spends Night In Creek

BEARDS FORK, W.Va. (AP) — Having to spend the night in a car is one thing, but overnighting in a car upside down in an icy creek is quite another. Just ask Harry Wallace.

After losing control of his car on a narrow highway on Friday, Wallace, a 225-pound tackle for West Virginia Tech's football team, found himself trapped in the upside-down, partially submerged vehicle.

State police trooper Howard Bennett said Wallace had between 6 to 12 inches of breathing room in the car. "I don't know what kept him from freezing to death. That was cold, freezing water, and to think he was there about six hours," Bennett said.

"I really don't remember what happened," Wallace said. "The first thing I remember is waking up and hearing water ... I was just cutting away at everything trying to find a way out."

After repeated failures, Wallace said he fell asleep, probably because he was exhausted. Wallace's car was spotted by a school bus driver. He was taken to a nearby hospital, where he was being treated for exposure, shock and cuts to his hands.

Champ Still KO's Audience

NEW DEHLI, India (AP) — Muhammad Ali isn't the reigning heavyweight boxing champion anymore, but he's can still knock out an audience.

He managed to upstage the presidents of India and France on Saturday at Republic Day festivities on the sprawling laws of the Indian president's palace.

Ali and his wife, Veronica, were among 3,000 guests — including French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi — who stood for the playing of the national athem and a greeting from the host, President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy.

But once the formalities were finished, guests swarmed around the retired boxing king, seeking the usual — autographs and handshakes.

Ali, admittedly bushed from his world travels, found a chair and let his admirers keep coming. The mob which surrounded him was larger than any group attracted by the heads of state present. Indian citizens and diplomats said they simply had to get Ali's autograph for their children.

Deer Offered To Science

BLOCK ISLAND, R.I. (AP) — They can't be hunted and they can't be deported, so Block Islanders are offering their pesky deer to science.

The Town Council of New Shoreham, the only community on the 10-square-mile island, is writing a scientist at New York State University in Syracuse who has developed a deer repellant.

Herbert S. Whitman, first warden of the town, says the island would be an ideal place for tests by Dr Dietland Muller-Schwarz.

"After all, the deer can't go anywhere, unless they want to swim. And why would they want to do that, when they have all the fresh air and sunshine and plenty to eat right here," he said.

The deer, whose ancestors were brought to the island by the state, have proliferated and developed a taste for vegetable gardens.

The Town Council reaffirmed a ban on deer hunting last fall despite complaints from residents. The state says it would be too costly to round the animals up and ship them to the mainland four miles away.

Rehearing Granted Ex-Coach

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — Former Notre Dame football coach Ara Parseghian has been invited to return to Florida next month for a rehearing on a traffic violation charge.

PARSEGHIAN

The coach-turned-commentator was ticketed for speeding Jan. 14 near Marco Island by Florida Highway Patrol trooper Edward Braswell. Parseghian paid a $50 fine by mail, but wrote to the judge that he was innocent. Parseghian claimed he had to speed after passing a vehicle to avoid a head-on crash with an oncoming vehicle.

Collier County Judge Hugh Hayes, returning the check uncashed, wrote Parseghian that he respected his integrity,.

But Braswell said the ex-coach deserved the ticket and asked Hayes to reconsider. Court officials said Friday there would be a hearing on the case in about three weeks.

'Grandpa' Back On Stage

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Banjo strummer Grandpa Jones is back in the Grand Ole Opry stage, recovered from heart surgery and ready to kick his heels.

The 66-year-old "Hee Haw" country music show regular sang and joked on the Opry stage Friday for the first time since undergoing open heart surgery in December. He had a similar operation about five years ago.

"I feel like I could jump a 10-rail fence now," the bluegrass banjo player and Country Music Hall of Fame inductee told the audience.

FARM PRODUCTS SUPPLIED

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — The United States has agreed to provide South Korea with $30 million worth of surplus farm products, including 74,000 tons of wheat, 84,000 tons of corn and 22,000 bales of raw cotton. Under the long-term credit sales deal. An agreement signed here Friday calls for Korea to pay for the items over 30 years at an annual interest rate of 3 percent. The payments will begin after a 10-year grace period, for which 2 percent annual interest will be charged.

Phillips Officials Announce Plans To Resume Aviation Fuel Delivery

By KIMBERLY PALMER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In an effort to ease the fuel shortage South Plains Phillips Petroleum distributors are experiencing following an explosion seven days ago at the company's refinery near Borger, Phillips officials have announced the resumption of aviation fuel deliveries.

Brooks Garner, a Phillips spokesman, Friday said that beginning Monday, the company's fuel distributors in 38 states would receive only 35 percent of the aviation fuel that had been contracted for the first three months of 1980.

Before the Jan. 20 explosion in a cracking unit at the facility, Phillips' second largest refinery, distributors were receicving a 100 percent allocation of the high-octane fuel.

Phillips officials announced Tuesday that because of the temporary shutdown of the refinery, their customers' fuel allocations, including diesel and jet fuel, would be reduced to as little as 50 percent for a period of 30 to 45 days. The Borger plant was responsible for producing a large quantity of Phillips' aviation fuel, and company officials said they temporarily stopped all deliveries of aviation fuel until stockpiles at Phillips' four other refineries can be inventoried.

Company officials did not know when the refinery, that processed more than 97,000 barrels of crude oil a day, would be back in operation. Aviation fuel now will be supplied by Phillips' refinery in Sweeny, the Oklahoma-based oil company's largest refinery.

Phillips' decision to resume the delivery of aviation fuel at the reduced allocation offered little solace to one Lubbock aviator.

"The allocation plan will help a little, but not much," said Vernon Wright of Avtech Aviation. Wright said he was caught short when Phillips' stopped aviation fuel deliveries and had to limit the use of the fuel to those planes used for the aviation center's flight school and air charter service.

"We had to cut off supplies to private customers in order to keep our operation in business," Wright said.

The future for Wright and other Phillips' customers caught in the supply squeeze may be a little brighter next week when company officials are expected to complete arrangements with other oil companies to process the untouched crude oil at the crippled Borger refinery and to supply fuel to Phillips' customers.

Lou Rapier, marketing director for Phillips' West Texas division, said "every effort is being made to get fuel for our customers, but the problem is we can't do it overnight." Some additional supplies may be secured by Monday, Rapier said.

Several area distibutors who aren't content to wait on Phillips to find other fuel supplies have said they plan to ask the United States Department of Energy and the state of Texas for help, but that strategy has a few hitches.

A spokesman for the DOE's Fuel Allocation office in Dallas said the federal government could offer no help to distributors and that the need for additional fuel was "a problem that Phillips will have to solve for itself."

The state of Texas can offer some aid to fuel-starved distributors, but the amount will be limited.

John Gooding of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council said may apply for fuel in the state's set-aside program, but that Phillips' share in that supply is small.

Coal Official Likes President's Views

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is winning praise for his State of the Union reminder of the importance that coal will play in reducing the nation's reliance on imported oil.

"The nation's coal industry is pleased ...," said Carl Bagge, president of the National Coal Association.

"We continue to support programs to increase the use of coal through appropriate incentives," Bagge said. "The details of the president's program to reduce the use of oil and gas by utilities have not yet been made public. However, the coal industry long has supported actions to remove unnecessary government-created obstacles to new coal-fired plants and conversion of existing plants to coal."

WHITE: VOTED FOR LOWER TAXES AND LESS GOVERNMENT	RICHARD C. WHITE: VOTED FOR HIGH TAXES AND BIG GOVERNMENT
1. CONGRESSIONAL PAY RAISE/CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL 1980. H.J. Res. 404. The money in this bill for the pay raise was much less than one percent of the total appropriations. It is illegal in many states for a sitting legislature to vote itself a pay raise, but a majority who voted ignored that principle and the bill passed 208-203. (Congressional Record 9/25/79, p. H8462.) Total Cost: $82 billion.	$815	★		★			X
2. DEBT LIMIT INCREASE. H.R. 5369. For the 19th time in the last 8 years the House approved a "temporary" increase in the National Debt. The bill was written so that a separate vote on further increases in the future will no longer be required! The vote was 219-198. (Congressional Record 9/26/79, p. H8537.) Total Cost: $49 billion.	$644		X	★			X
3. TREASURY, POSTAL SERVICE, GENERAL GOVERNMENT APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL 1980. H.R. 4393. This bill appropriated funds for the two agencies mentioned, plus such others as the White House, the Internal Revenue Service, the Customs Department, etc. The vote for passage was 344-49. (Congressional Record 7/16/79, p. H5985.) Total Cost: $8.8 billion.	$115		X		X		X
4. FISCAL 1979 SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS. H.R. 4289. This bill contained over 450 individual appropriation accounts, and affects virtually every federal department and agency. The need for the bill indicates either poor planning when budgets were set, or over-spending by the bureaucrats. The vote was 284-132 to accept the Conference Report. (Congressional Record 7/17/79, p. H6046.) Total Cost: $13.8 billion.	$181	★		★			X
5. INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL 1980. H.R. 4930. This bill included $4 billion for the Department of Interior, $3.4 billion for the very inept Department of Energy, plus $5 billion for other programs. The bill breezed through the House, 344-42. (Congressional Record 7/30/79, p. H6888.) Total Cost: $10.2 billion.	$134	★			X		X
6. FOREIGN ECONOMIC AID. H.R. 3324. This bill authorizes over $1.9 billion in fiscal 1980 for bilateral economic aid programs and the Peace Corps. The House voted 223-181 to accept the Conference Report. (Congressional Record 8/2/79, p. H7081.) Total Cost: $1.9 billion.	$25	★		★		★
7. EDUCATION DEPARTMENT. S. 210. The House passed its version of this bill, H.R. 2444, by only 4 votes on July 11. It was different from the Senate version, but the differences were dropped by the conference committee. Yet the House still voted, 215-201, to accept the Conference Report. (Congressional Record 9/27/79, p. H8608.) Total Cost: $14 billion.	$184	★		★		★
8. PANAMA CANAL TREATIES IMPLEMENTATION. H.R. 111. Again, the House had a second chance, this time to vote down the treasonous give-away of our Canal in Panama. The House rejected the Conference Report on September 20, 193-203. But it did a major turnaround six days later and voted 232-188 to accept the Conference Report, thus "legalizing" this tragic chapter in the history of our country. (Congressional Record 9/26/79, p. H8523.) Total Cost: $4 billion.	$53	★		★		★

The Government IS Inflaton Culprit

■ The root cuse of inflation, as everyone shoud know, is deficit spending. Sinc there have been but two balanced federal Budgets in two decades, the National Debt mounts towards trillion dollars. By 1980 just the interest on the Debt will account fc a full twelve percent of all federal spending. Meanwhile the debased American dollar is today worth nneteen cents on the 1939 base. If oe paid twenty-five dollars a week or food in 1967, it will take more than fifty-five dollars to buy the sme food today.

This is deliberate. For money is being created t fund deficits at a faster and faster rate while our production of goods and services is being purpoely thwarted. As the venerable Henry Hazlitt has explained, soaring expenditures and deficits have been ". . . accompanied by an enormous increase in the stock of money — from $113 billion of demand deposits plus currency outside of banks in 1947, to $357 billion n August 1978. In other words, theactive money supply has been mre than tripled in the period. The effect of this increase in mone has been a dramatic increase n prices. The consumer price index in 1946 stood at 58.5. In September 1978 it was 199.3. Prices, is short, more than tripled." (Economics In One Lesson, Revised Edition, New Rochelle, Arlington House, 1978.) Your money is worth less because of deficit spending as the graph shows

■ A recent survey shows that th Federal Government received 70.! percent of the cash income of th top 48 oil companies. The govern ment gets 14 times as much out f the investment of the private ol business as a shareholder receives.

ANOTHER GOVERNMENT WINDFALL

■ The Tax Foundation has observed: "The proposed Windfall Profits Tax, a new and major tax, will not solve the energy problem. In fact, if enacted, the Windfall Profits tax can only worsen an already bad situation and further increase our dependence on foreign oil.

"However, it would appear that the main purpose of the Windfall Profits Tax, the hidden agenda as it were, is not energy independence; it is to use higher petroleum prices as a new and major source of Federal government revenues both to finance still larger Federal government budgets and to moderate the embarassingly large Federal deficits President Carter has pledged to eliminate."

The proposed Windfall Profits Tax, a new and major tax, will not solve the energy problem.

How did your Congressman vote on the Windfall Profits Tax? Were you pleased? Have you told him? ●

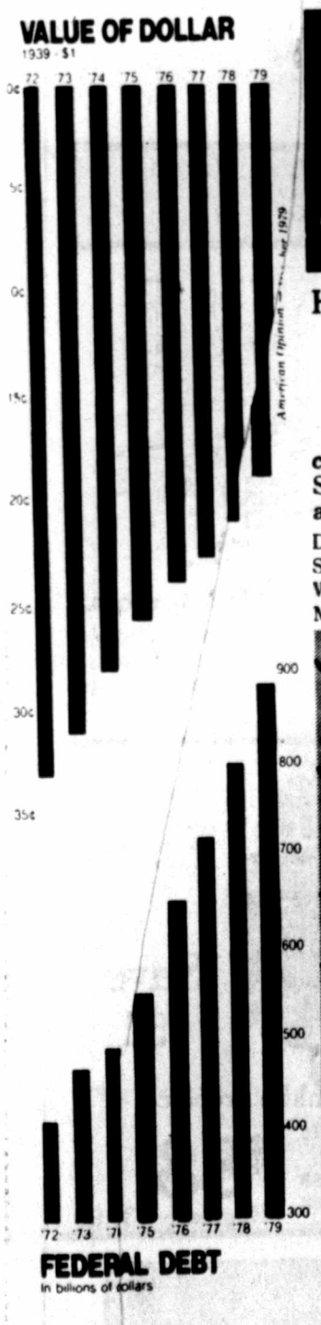

ABOUT THE VOTES ON PAGE FOUR

■ TRIM chooses final votes on bills involving a billion dollars or more of your taxes. On a few occasions we discuss bills which do not have a precise dollar figure, but which nevertheless will have a significant economic impact.

The general public is little interested in how Congress decided to spend billions of tax dollars, but that it did so. The general public is interested in results. They can and do understand that Congress passes laws. In short, they are especially interested in votes on final passage.

Please study these votes, and then let your Representative know whether or not you agree with the way he voted.

Higher Taxes — and Prices . . .

Government Regulation Strangling U.S.

"Americans are paying an additional $121 billion each year in taxes and higher consumer prices because of a dramatic increase in government regulation of business." So begins an article released by United Press International on October 27, 1979. That figure amounts to $500 for every man, woman and child in the country. Murray L. Weidenbaum, Director of the Center for the Study of American Business at Washington University in St. Louis, Mo., went on to explain that there has been a six-fold increase in the budgets of 56 federal regulatory agencies since 1970. In 1970 those regulatory agencies cost taxpayers $866 million a year. Today, their annual budgets are more than $6 billion.

Contrary to the perception that government is moving toward deregulation of business and industry, "the pace of regulation is continuing on an upward trajectory," Weidenbaum said in a report to the House Commerce Committee. "The number of agencies, regulatory programs, and authorizing statutes — and the budgets to carry them out — are all growing rapidly," he said, "because many laws passed in recent years are only in the early growth stages of implementation."

The costs of increased regulation are paid through three primary routes: the direct cost, borne by taxpayers, of running each agency; the costs, passed on to consumers, of compliance by business, and the "induced effects of regulation" that inhibit innovation, capital formation and productivity.

Goodyear Gripes

Dr. Weidenbaum is not the only person expressing alarm at the devastating effects of government regulation. According to Charles J. Pilliod, Jr., chairman of Goodyear Tire and Rubber, complying in 1977 with the regulations of just seven federal agencies cost Goodyear $46 million — which was substantially more than the entire net income of the world's largest rubber company for either the third or fourth quarter of that year. EPA regulations alone accounted for 31.8 percent of everything Goodyear spent "above and beyond" what was necessary to control emissions adequately.

Chrysler's Woes

Four consulting groups have independently reported that too much government regulation has caused the Chrysler Corporation to suffer its current woes. One of the consultants, Harbridge House, found that regulation "has magnified existing differences between U.S. automakers by applying equally difficult rules to unequal companies." Chrysler's chance to continue to exist is "extremely small" unless "regressive regulatory bias" is removed, said H.C. Wainwright & Co. Chrysler Vice President S. L. Terry commented: "Regulations force everyone to do the same research, buy the same tools, and perfect the same technology before anything goes into the first car." As a result, Chrysler must add $620 to the cost of a car, compared to only $320 for General Motors, because of excessive government regulations.

Small Business and Regulation

The effects of government regulations on small businesses are many times greater because the costs of compliance are disproportionately higher. So much so that a small businessman in Baltimore was driven to suicide not long ago because he went bankrupt trying to satisfy hordes of government bureaucrats who accosted him with a multitude of often contradictory rules and regulations.

Estimates show that approximately 130 million man-hours of work are required by business to fill out some 9,800 individual forms issued by the government. Remembering that 97 percent of American firms are classified as small businesses, is it any wonder that these companies are having problems?

What Can Be Done?

The solution to the economic quagmire caused by government over-regulation is — get involved. Pennsylvania Representative Richard T. Schulze says: "If the present mushrooming rate of over-regulation continues, the small business community faces extinction. However, it has within its power the strength that is necessary to make changes. The small business community must get involved directly in the political process of this nation, and get involved right now!"

TRIM Government

One way to get involved is to join the TRIM Committee nearest you and support it in every way you can. For, as Rep. Richard Kelly recently told a Florida audience, "TRIM is grim. This group is following the only course that can turn this coun try around!" So fill out the coupon on this page, send it to the TRIM Committee mentioned at the top of page one, and help us bring about less government regulation — and lower taxes.

It's time for lower taxes.

Because many "hidden taxes" are never seen by consumers, some people find it hard to believe that governments at all levels are now consuming over 45% of an average person's earnings. TAX REFORM IMMEDIATELY (TRIM) is a nonprofit, nonpartisan, nationwide network of educational committees founded by The John Birch Society to achieve "lower taxes through less government."

If you would like more information, clip the coupon and mail it to the local TRIM Committee listed at the top of page one.

'Big Three' Urban Centers Change Senate

AUSTIN — In the jargon of those who follow the Texas Legislature, the phrase "Cave of the Winds" refers to the Senate, which allows filibustering and long speeches by its members, unlike the typical practice of the House of Representatives.

But those winds appear to be shifting about, with strong gusts from the "big three" population centers of Texas, Harris, Dallas and Bexar counties.

For many years, the Senate has been shifting from rural dominance to urban dominance.

However, if new population figures in a study on redistricting released by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby are correct in their estimates, the three most populous counties in Texas will be even more of a force to reckon with after 1981.

Part of the reason is that normally the Senate operates under provisions requiring a two-thirds vote by its members to take up legislation.

With 31 members, that means that 11 can block action on matters in many instances, a lesson demonstrated during the 1979 session when the dozen "Killer Bee" senators disappeared to break the Senate quorum and prevent action on a presidential primary bill.

Hobby's estimates, which put the population of Texas for 1980 at 13.5 million, indicate that the State senatorial districts should have some 435,000 persons in them.

If that 435,000 is correct, and using Hobby's other figures, Harris County alone qualifies for over five senators; Dallas County would have three and almost half of another district; and Bexar County shows enough for two and a quarter.

That would mean 10 senators — without even looking at what is happening in some of the other urban areas.

That doesn't mean that rural interests will find themselves excluded, or anywhere near helpless.

For one thing, a majority of senators will still depend on voters in rural areas for support, and for another, rural and agricultural interests are well organized and have experience in lobbying legislators for the programs they want.

But there will be another adjustment in the complex power mechanism of the Senate, an adjustment which will add to the clout of the urban centers.

Effects of redistricting aside, the Texas Senate is assured of a different look in the next few years because of changes in membership.

Two members already have announced their exists, and several others appear likely to do so, either to seek other offices or because voters choose someone else.

Sen. Tom Creighton, Mineral Wells, chairman of the Economic Development Committee and long one of the most powerful members of the Senate, is retiring — and Sen. Paul Longoria, Edinburg, a "Killer Bee," has decided he'd prefer to be a district judge.

Longoria's term continues to 1983, but Creighton's, and those of 15 others, expires in 1981.

At least four of those 15 have what might be termed strong opponents with a chance of defeating the incumbents, which could result in one of the larger turnovers in recent years for the Senate.

Another four senators appear to be well assured of returning to Austin, facing little or no opposition.

Four of the five Republican members of the Senate are running including recent convert Bill Braecklein, Dallas, who is likely to be targeted by miffed Democrats seeking to make an example of him to show what happens to lawmakers who switch parties.

Sen. Bob Price, Pampa, appears to have a tough race, while Sens. Walter Mengden, Houston, and Ike Harris, Dallas, seem likely to return for additional terms.

Chinese Scientists Find Ancient Marine Fossils

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese scientists have found 221-million-year-old marine bony fish fossils in the Liu district of Lhaze County in Tibet, more than 13,000 feet above sea level, the official Xinhua news agency reported Saturday.

Initial studies date the fossils to the Upper Triassic epoch, Xinhua said in a dispatch monitored here.

Geologists of the Tibet Geological Bureau discovered the fossils last September while making a map of the Triassic geological profile south of the fault belt along the Yarlung Zugbo river, it said.

By TRAVIS BROWN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Openings of minority businesses in the United States still are hampereed by discrimination involving bankers and even government officials, says Joseph Luna, deputy associate administrator for minority small business with the Small Business Administration.

"There are people even within the SBA who don't like giving loans to minorities for personal reasons," Luna said Saturday.

He was in Lubbock to speak at the annual Mexican-American Chamber of Commerce banquet.

But growth of minority businesses also is hampered by many Hispanics, blacks and other minorities being unaware of the financial assistant available through the SBA.

"The Hispanic community, in particular, has failed to participate greatly in SBA programs," Luna said. He attributed this failure to ignorance about the3 programs and a lack of leadership within the Hispanic community.

Luna said that all minority businessmen need to form a nationwide organization to lobby for their interests in Washington, D.C.

"Right now, the money markets are controlled by big business," he said.

The biggest problem faced by minority businessmen and prospective businessmen is shortage of capital to begin a business, Luna said.

"Part of our job is to help minorities develop other means of financing small businesses," he said. Other sources of capital could include insurance companies, pensions and private sources.

Following tight money as a woe to beginning businessmen are high interest rates on loans, inflation and high energy costs, Luna said.

"There's not much we can do about those things," he said, " but we can try to show minorities how to deal with such an environment."

Another problem — excessive governmental regulation — has already been attacked by the SBA.

Luna said the SBA has endorsed a bill before Congress that would remove much of the paperwork required of small businessmen.

Another recent help for minority businessmen was a law signed by President Carter in 1978 that allows minority businesses to negotiate for governmental contracts instead of bidding for them.

The SBA primarily helps minority businessmen and others by backing up bank loans and providing its own low interest loans.

"Our job is to see that as many loans are made as is possible," Luna said. "But there are many banks in this area who don't partcipate in minority loan programs."

During the banquet, new COMA (Comerciantes Organizados Mexico Americanos) were installed and Luis R. Jimenez, owner of Jimenez Bakery, was named businessman of the year.

New COMA officers are Gonzalo Garza, president; Ruben Garcia, vice president; Jackie Perez, secretary; and Armando Gonzales, treasurer.

New directors for the organization are Ernest Barton, Robert Narvaiz, Gloria Reyes, Frank Reyna and Frank Saiz.

SOLAR SAIL ORBITS — This is an artist's conception of a proposed solar sail, a sunlight-propelled device, University of Utah researchers are proposing to be sent into orbit aboard the space shuttle. (AP Laserphoto)

'Solar Sail' Proposed As Energy Of Future

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A radically different space vehicle — shaped like a kite, bigger than a baseball diamond and propelled by sunlight — may be an official stowaway aboard one of the early space shuttles.

It is the solar sail, beloved of science fiction aficionados but shunned by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Solar-sail crafts propelled by sunlight could carry much greater loads than conventional rockets, moving among planets as far away as Jupiter in long, slow voyages, one advocate says.

Similar but much larger sheets might eventually be used to capture solar power for Earth, said Gary Flandro, professor of mechanical engineering at the University of Utah.

Flandro is among scientists at the university who are donating their time, and students who are working for class credit, to design the first solar sail.

Space has already been reserved aboard one of the first shuttle flights, although NASA has yet to grant final approval to any of the proposed experiments. The scientists must also get special permission for their project, because the first shuttles were not supposed to launch any other objects into space.

NASA charges $10,000 to send such experimental packages into orbit. The fee for the sail has been covered by private donations, $1,500 by the Utah chapter of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and $8,500 by the World Space Foundation, a non-profit group of scientists who raise funds for space exploration.

The sail will be 160 feet on a side, made of a plastic film called mylar — .0005-inch thick — coated with aluminum on one side. Light particles bouncing off the aluminum push the 11,200-square-foot sail.

Struts will connect the sail to an instrument pod. To travel aboard the space shuttle, the whole thing must fit into a canister about the size of a garbage can and weigh no more than 200 pounds.

Materials for the experimental solar sail would cost about $300,000 retail, but researchers hope they will be donated.

In addition, informal help is coming from the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., where Flandro was a consultant on solar sails.

The solar sail had been in the running for use in a current project of the jet propulsion lab — an observation flight to Halley's comet, which is due to return to the Earth's vicinity in 1986.

The sail "was seriously considered at one time," said Alan Wood, a laboratory spokesman, adding, however, that the winning candidate for the mission was the ion rocket.

"It was purely a practical decision in that the ion-propulsion system has been in existence for quite some time," Wood said. "... Engines had been built, operated and tested. The technology was in hand. The solar sail was an idea, a concept, but it has never been done. It is an entirely new concept."

Like the solar sail, the ion rocket operates only in space — it cannot be used to go into orbit from a planet. The ion rocket has been tested in space; the first solar sail hasn't been built yet.

The researchers' plan to have their design completed by May or June and to begin construction in the summer. The shuttle flights were originally set for 1981, but the shuttle project is running behind schedule.

If the sail is accepted aboard the shuttle, it will be carried 130 miles above the Earth. At that altitude, the atmosphere is still thick enough to drag on the sail if it is launched head-on, so the sail will be maneuvered nearly edge-on to the atmosphere.

The European Space Agency's Ariane rocket would carry the space sail 22,000 miles out, where there would be no atmospheric hinderance, Flandro said. If that project comes to be, the space sail might be sent on a trip around the moon, he added.

Solar sail crafts could not land on the moon or planets, but could carry cargo from an Earth orbit to Mars in 9-10 months.

Solar Energy Program Slated

Lubbock architect Glenn Hill will present various aspects of present and future potentials of solar energy in layman's terms at a program entitled "Toward a Solar America" at 7 p.m. Wednesday in room 203 of the Texas Tech University Law School.

Hill said he will present basic principles of passive and active solar systems, how the government defines solar energy and what technologies are presently available for home use. He said he will also discuss a new photovoltaic cell used to store the sun's energy which is now being developed by Texas Instruments.

The informal presentation is open to the public and is being sponsored by the South Plains Alternative Resources Coalition.

Man Wants High School Diploma After 62 Years

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (UPI) — C.J. Fietsam went back to school this year to get a high school diploma — 62 years late.

Fietsam, an 80-year-old retired farmer and grocer, said he didn't think he needed more than an eighth-grade education when he could have gone on to high school. Now he says he would "feel better" with the diploma.

"If you feel better about having something, it's got to help you," Fietsam said. "I'll have to study hard, but then I'm going to do it. I'll tell you the experience is wonderful."

Fietsam, who also works part-time in his son's accounting office, is enrolled in the general education course at Belleville Area College, which leads to a high school diploma equivalency certificate.

His class meets for three hours every Monday and Wednesday and Fietsam vows to go "as long as I can."

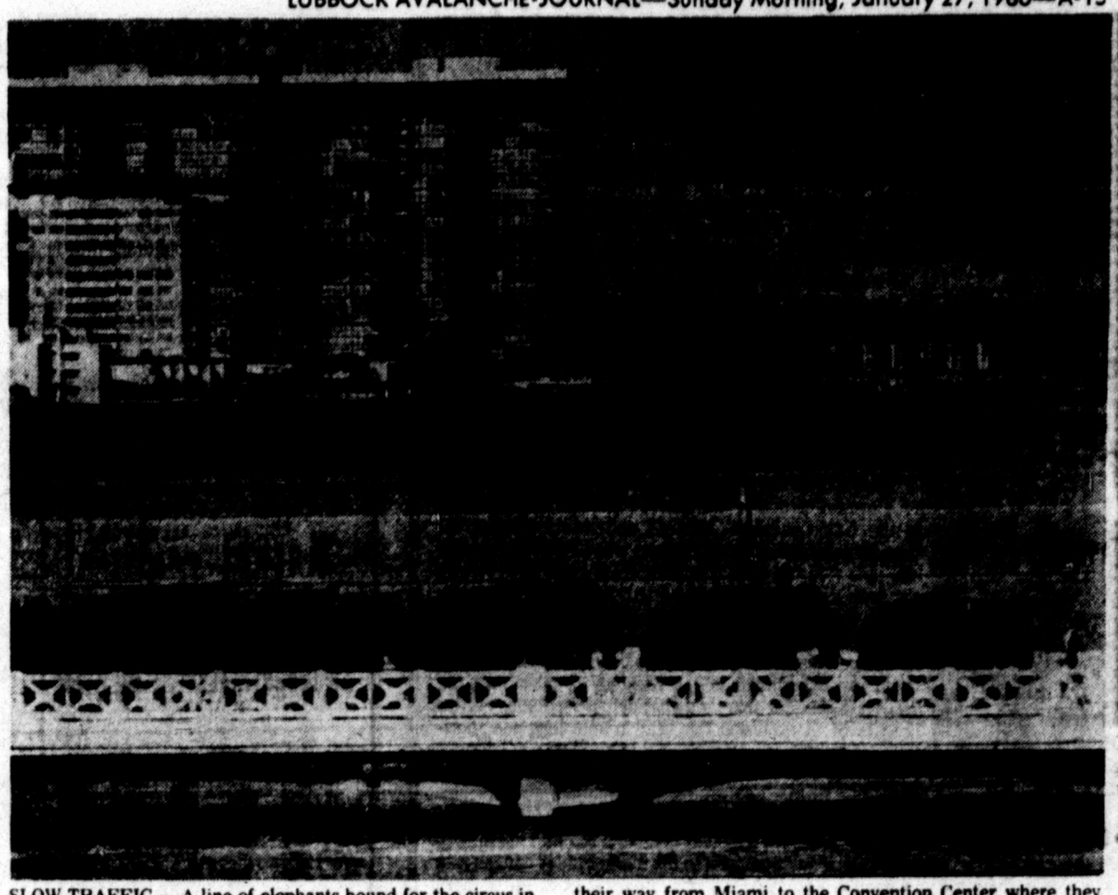

And Fietsam doesn't have to go far if he's having trouble with his classwork — three of his grandchildren are students at the college.

State Department Hit By High Crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifteen typewriters, 10 purses and wallets and a basketball all disappeared from the State Department last year.

So did a rug, an electric pencil sharpener, six plants and a box of cigars. Altogether, items valued by their owners at $47,000 were pilfered through November. The most valuable was a word processing machine worth about $8,000.

To stop the theft, equipment is now being marked with indelible ink, new locks are on office doors and plainclothes police officers are patrolling the building.

Shooting Injures Lubbockite; Auto Hits Shallowater Girl

A Lubbock man was wounded late Friday in a shooting incident at a machine shop on the Levelland Highway west of Lubbock, according to Lubbock County sheriff's deputies.

David Lawrence Lindsey, 36, of 5620 16th St., was treated and released at Health Sciences Center Hospital after being wounded in the left shoulder.

Deputies said the incident occurred about 11 p.m. He was wounded by a blast from a .357 magnum pistol. No charges had been filed late Saturday, and no arrests had been made, deputies said.

In other activity, a 10-year-old Shallowater girl was in satisfactory condition late Saturday after being struck by a car Saturday morning in the 3100-block of Erskine Street.

Rebecca Morales was undergoing treatment at St. Mary's Hospital for injuries received in the accident.

Lubbock police said she was injured when struck by a 1969 Oldsmobile. The accident occurred at 9:22 a.m. No charges were filed, police said.

A 19-year-old Texas Tech coed told police a man entered her room at 1001 University Ave. in the early morning hours Saturday and stole her wallet, after waking her and holding a knife to her throat.

The woman said she was awakened about 3:30 a.m. when the man placed his hand over her mouth and the knife against her throat. She said the man then climbed on top of her and threatened to kill her if she made any noise.

When the man removed his hand from her mouth, the woman said she screamed, waking her roommate, who also began screaming. The man then fled the room, taking the wallet, police said.

The assailant was described as a white male, 18-25 years old, medium build, with straight brown hair and a full beard and wearing a blue plaid shirt, police said.

Alberto Sendejo, 37, of 2319 8th St., told police two men robbed him of $792 cash Friday night. Sendejo repported the men stopped him in a parking lot at 13th Street and Avenue F and took his wallet, which contained the cash.

A Lubbock man was jailed early Saturday after he allegedly hit Officer T.W. Fahrlender in the mouth at a 28th Street residence, reports indicate.

Fahrlender was called to the residence about 4 a.m. in reference to an unwanted guest, police said. When he arrived the man told him to leave and began using loud, profane language, police said.

After warning the man about his behavior, the officer attempted to handcuff the man, who struck Fahrlender in the mouth with his forearm, police said.

The man was finally subdued and taken to the Lubbock County Jail, reports indicate. Fahrlender was not seriously injured.

Goods valued at $10,700 were stolen from the home of Chayin Nick Mousa, 23, of 5039 27th St. between 5:30 p.m. Friday and 1:25 a.m. Saturday, police said.

The items taken include several limited art prints, several pieces of clothing, two gold chains, a diamond ring, stereo equipment and 50 record albums.

Approximately $1,850 cash was taken from Yesterday's Restaurant, 3602 Slide Road, between 11 p.m. Friday and 8:20 a.m. Saturday, police said.

Manager Louis William Zona told police the money, contained in two bank bags, was taken from two desks in the restaurant office. The break-in was discovered by truck driver Mike Withers, who was making a delivery at the establishment, reports indicate.

Goods valued at $4,370.50 were taken from the General Tire Store, 1702 Ave. Q, between 6:20 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday, manager Donald Ray Hair told police.

Taken in the burglary were three black-and-white televisions, one color television, two video-cassette recorders, six video cassettes, seven radial tires and two wire wheels. Property damage was estimated at $300, police said.

An estimated $1,000 in damages was caused by vandals to a home at 8802 Richmond Ave., police said. Light fixtures and bulbs throughout the house had been broken sometime Thursday or Friday, reports indicate.

Clovis Man Killed In Pickup Truck Rollover

CLOVIS (Special) — A Clovis man was killed Friday afternoon when his pickup overturned near Taiban, N.M., on U.S. 60-84, according to the New Mexico State Police.

Joe J. Cordoba, 38, was killed about 1:10 p.m. just east of Taiban when his 1973 Chevrolet pickup went off the road at a curve, came back on the road and overturned, a state police spokesman said.

Services for Cordoba will be at 3 p.m. Monday at Muffley Funeral Home Chapel, with John Anders officiating.

Burial will be in Mission Garden of Memories at Clovis.

Survivors include his wife, Priscilla; his parents, Serafin and Alvina Cordoba of Clovis; two sons, Joe Jr. and Severiano, both of the home; five daughters, Victoria, Rebecca, Elena, Alvina and Jovanna, all of the home; four brothers, Robert, Paul, Marcelino and Reynaldo, all of Clovis; seven sisters, Lorenza Roberts, Laura Gutierrez, Mary Romero, Christy Causas and Patsy Ramirez, all of Clovis, Madeline Hall of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Lola Romero of Germany.

World War II Era Character Dies At 72

TORONTO (AP) — George Harsh, pardoned killer, author, war hero and one of the organizers of the "Great Escape" from a Nazi prison camp in World War II, died Friday in a Toronto hospital, friends announced. He was 72.

Harsh, a native of Milwaukee, Wis., had been hospitalized for three years, according to Wally Floody. The 62-year-old Floody was in charge of tunneling for the escape from Stalag III prison camp in March 1944. The feat was the basis of the movie, "The Great Escape."

The 5,000-man camp was supposed to be escape-proof, but 126 prisoners broke out and 76 escaped, Floody said. He said the 50 who were recaptured were executed. Harsh and Floody were not among those who made it to freedom. They were transferred from Stalag III in southern Germany only two weeks before the breakout of prisoners through tunnels that it had taken 400 men to dig.

Harsh was convicted of the "thrill" killing in 1928 of an Atlanta, Ga., shopkeeper. He was 18 at the time and his death sentence was commuted to life on a prison chain gang.

Floody said Harsh was one of five university students who drew straws to pull robberies. "He drew the short straw when he killed the store clerk," Floody said.

He said Harsh worked on a chain gang for six years, but when he became ill with malaria a prison doctor made him his aide.

In 1939, Harsh performed a successful emergency appendectomy on a prisoner when a storm prevented the doctor from reaching the clinic and the governor pardoned Harsh, Floody said.

The Market Meter

Stock Prices Higher Amid Active Trading

By J. L. HUTCHESON
Schneider, Bernet & Hickman, Inc.

Volume soared this week as stock prices pushed higher amid active buying stemming from foreign and institutional investors who view the market's recent strength in the face of negative news releases as the possible prelude to an even bigger upside move.

Oil stocks were still in the lead this week with the defense and precious-metal issues not far behind. The machinery, paper, steel, coal and railroad stocks also fared well this week. The airline, copper, and rubber stocks faltered somewhat Thursday and Friday.

J.L. HUTCHESON

Analysts felt the major news of the week was the market's overall favorable reaction to President Carter's State of the Union message. Carter's statements touched off considerable buying from investors who had wanted a definite policy on the Mideast situation for some time. Nearly all analysts interviewed reported that the President's speech was well recieved by the investing community.

Banking officials voiced concern this week that the massive credit demands that have been generated by continued overall growth in the economy coupled with the desperate need for sharply higher defense spending carries the risk of an explosion this year in both long and short-term interest rates.

Analysts said that the recent two-week buying bing has many investors optimistic that further gains in the stock market are forthcoming but they cautioned that there should be some correction soon.

Many institutional money managers were left behind in the first upswing of the new year and they are using any weakness in the market to try and get into it. Many institutional investors have encouraged by the evident easing of more restrictive monetary policies by the Federal Reserve.

Economists feel that the recent activity in the stock market is due in part to a flight from the dollar into assets, particularly those of natural resource companies. They feel that market may correct somewhat from current levels, but they don't see any dramatic decline. Most saids they would use weakness as a chance to buy more stocks.

Windfall-Profits Tax Viewed

When President Carter proposed and Congress later passed the so-called windfall profits tax on domestic oil companies all parties engaged in the passing of the bill assumed that there would be a windfall to tax. Upon further anaylsis, this may have be the case.

The tax, which has been hailed as a salvation to consumers, is actually very dangerous to all Americans. The tax will be paid out of current profits rather than from an anticipated windfall accruing from decontrol. The result of the tax will be disaster for the domestic oil industry, bankruptcy for many independent gasoline dealers and undermining U.S. refining capacity while at the same time making the U.S. further dependent on OPEC.

The critical error made by our government is the mistaken belief that consumers have benefited from oil price controls by paying prices for petroleum products which are significantly lower than they would have paid in the absence of controls.

Since there are several links in the chain between the price of oil at the wellhead and the price of gasoline at the pump, any gain oil producers receive at the wellhead will be lost at the refining and marketing end of their operations.

Energy Secretary Duncan has stated that only one-half to two-thirds of the higher costs that refiners will pay for domestic oil will be passed on the the next middleman. Thus refiners will on be able to pass on $400 billion to $520 billion of the $800 billion more it will cost them to buy domestic oil during the 1980's.

Wholesalers will not be able to pass on the $400 billion to $520 extra they will have to pay for refined petroleum products because jobbers, the wholesalers customers, will be able to go to the world market to buy their products.

Domestic gasoline prices are constrained by consumer resistance to prices. Domestic consumption is down five percent from last year. DOE regulations permit gasoline retailers to have a profit margin of up to 16.1 cent per gallon, yet dealer margins average only 13 cents per gallon. Competition, not DOE regulations, is setting prices.

For this reason even analysts at the Department of Energy have projected that total decontrol would not add anything to the price of gasoline.

Other analysts foresee an increase in gasoline prices at the pump. But unless there is a massive increase in gasoline prices on the order of 20 cents per gallon or more, the oil companies will never recoup the tax they are paying at the wellhead. Most analysts look for only a 3 cents to 7 cents per gallon increase. This means the oil industry will recoup only $35 billion to $82 billion of the $228 billion it will have the pay in increased taxes.

OPEC is already moving into the refining business. If OPEC corners worldwide refining, the industrial nations, where nearly all refining capabilities lie, will lose their only lever to hold prices. Their oil is worthless unless it can be refined. In a frenzy of vengence against the oil companies, the government is throwing away our only lever on OPEC and giving OPEC control over both oil production and refined product supply. This is not a very bright move.

Housing Construction In Slump

NEW YORK (AP) — Several experts say sales and construction of houses are in a slump and will stay that way at least for the near future, partly because of high mortgage interest rates.

Government reports showed that sales of new and existing homes declined in November, as did prices of existing homes, according to Saul Klaman, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. Klaman, addressing the annual convention of the National Association of Home Builders, said preliminary reports indicate that the sales slump continues.

Housing starts also declined in November, he said, supporting his forecast of a slowdown in the housing industry this year.

Wall Street Awaiting Cold War's Impact

NEW YORK (AP) — The deepening chill in relations between the United States and the Soviet Union has led to some major changes in Wall Streeters' economic forecasts for the early 1980s.

A few months ago, the standard view was that a recession was looming in 1980. It was expected to exert downward pressure on corporate profits, but it was also expected to put at least a small dent in inflation and bring down interest rates from their recent historic highs.

Now some of those forecasts are being adjusted for the prospect of increased spending on defense and technological research, which could be a broad stimulus to economic activity.

"An arms race lasting for at least the next half-decade is increasingly probable," said Richard B. Hoey, an analyst at Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., in a report issued earlier this month.

"The coming arms race should have minimal impact on the outlook for the economy in 1980, but a major impact on 1981-1985."

Whether such a possibility is good or bad economic news for investors depends on your perspective.

The stock market, evidently responding to expectations of stepped-up business activity, has risen for three consecutive weeks on record trading volume.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 8.96 to 876.11 in the past week, extending its gain since Jan. 3 to 55.80 points.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index climbed 1.33 to 65.27, coming very close to surpassing its record high of 65.48, set seven years ago.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index continued to reach new highs with a 2.29 advance to 266.75.

The bond market, by contrast, declined this past week to the point where yields reached new highs. That was interpreted as a signal of declining hopes for any important progress toward a slowing of inflation and lower interest rates.

Analysts at the brokerage firm of First Albany Corp. pointed out that that lack of optimism about progress against inflation seemed to be shared by financial planners at one of the country's largest corporations, International Business Machines.

IBM, never known as a free-wheeling borrower, went to the bond market for $1 billion last October, and borrowed another $300 million from Saudi Arabia more recently.

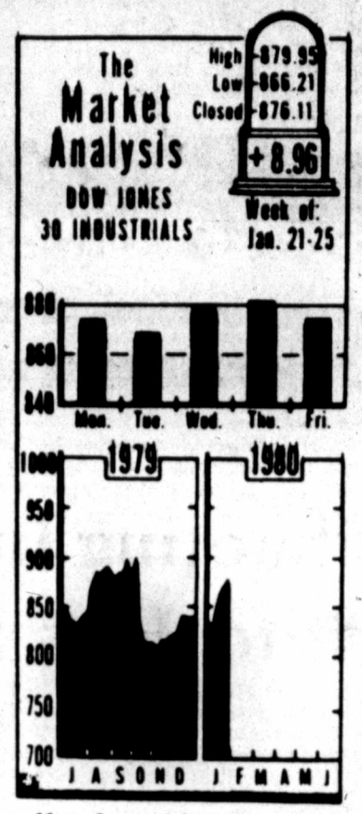

If the company expected any substantial decline in interest rates soon, it stands to reason that it would have held off on any debt financing.

Or as First Albany put it: "It's pretty clear what their assumptions must be about inflation rates and interest rates...it means they think that we're in for a long period of what we're beginning to get used to: High inflation and high interest rates."

Most analysts still regard a recession this year as a likelihood, rising defense spending or not. But many concede that it may be neither long nor deep enough to have much lasting impact in the struggle against inflation.

"Major changes in federal government spending policies are subject to massive bureaucratic lags," said Hoey. "Like a juggernaut, they are slow to start but nearly impossible to halt once they have begun to move.

"Investors should not overestimate the short-term impact of the emerging arms race. But they should not underestimate its long-term impact."

Mary, Queen of Scots, was tried for treason against Elizabeth I of England in 1586.

Commissioners To Discuss New Jail Needs

Lubbock County commissioners Monday will discuss the possible need for additional jailers when the new county jail is opened.

Sheriff C. H. "Choc" Blanchard will meet with the commissioners in the 10 a.m. Monday meeting to discuss staff needs and to ask for a full-time jail secretary.

The new jail is scheduled to be finished in about a month and to be opened for use several weeks after that.

Blanchard also is scheduled to request a large number of miscellaneous items for operating the jail.

Other business will include discussion of the new courthouse telephone system, which County Judge Rodrick Shaw said has brought a large number of complaints.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. representatives added incoming lines to alleviate the problem and are slated to report on the effects of their work.

U.S. Consumer Prices More Than Double During Past Decade

By FLOYD NORRIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The final price numbers for the 1970s are in, and the government figures the average item that cost $1 when the decade began now costs $2.04.

That increase was somewhat larger than the increase in after-tax earnings for the average family, bringing home the reality that for most Americans the decade was not one with a rising standard of living.

Consumer prices rose 13.3 percent during the year and were up 103.6 percent during the decade, according to the Consumer Price Index released Friday by the Labor Department.

Not all prices rose by the same amounts, of course. Residential rents rose just 69.8 percent during the decade, but overall housing costs climbed by 114.4 percent, reflecting skyrocketing interest rates and home prices.

Medical care was up by 116.7 percent, slightly more than the overall increase. Food prices rose 114.3 percent.

The big gainer, to no one's surprise, was energy. Those prices were not considered important enough to bother reporting in 1969, but the government later went back to compile them.

For the 1970s, overall energy prices went up 559 percent, according to the government. By that standard, gasoline was relatively cheap at the end of the decade, rising just 199.6 percent.

Consumer prices rose faster in 1979 than in any year since 1946, when World War II price controls came off and prices surged. Comparable figures are hard to obtain, but there apparently was never a decade when prices rose as fast as in the 1970s.

In the 1940s, prices rose about 72 percent, but during the next two decades the increases were well under 30 percent as inflation ceased tobe of major public concern.

Inflation may not, however, have been as bad as most people think during 1979. Some economists think the rise in housing costs was given too large a weight in the CPI, since most people don't buy a new home in any given year. They note the gross national product deflator, which attempts to measure inflation throughout the economy, was 8.8 percent, high but much lower than 13.3 percent.

Most analyses trace the resurgence of inflation to President Lyndon Johnson's decision in the late 1960s to neither raise taxes or cut back social programs to fund the Vietnam War. The two huge oil price hikes — in 1973-74 and 1979 — administered a jolt to the economy that was partially dealt with by increasing the size of the federal budget deficits.

Most economists think inflation will abate this year as the economy slows into a recession. But those predictions got a minor jolt this past week by President

Carter's State of the Union address.

Carter's plans for increased military spending and for the government to buy grain that was to have been shipped to the Soviet Union caused some economists to estimate that the federal deficit for the current fiscal year will rise by as much as $10 billion.

That spending is likely to provide additional inflationary pressures, although Carter's decision not to seek a tax cut is likely to help the inflation fight.

Other major business developments of the week included:

•Major oil companies reported large gains in profits, largely as a result of the surge in world oil prices. The gains more than kept up with inflation and left the industry's profitability somewhat higher than that of most industries in recent years.

Exxon become the first industrial company to earn more than $4 billion in a single year and seemed all but certain to pass General Motors as the largest industrial company in the world, ranked by sales. But it is still smaller, in both sales and profits, than American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which is considered a utility rather than an industrial company.

The profit figures were not greeted with the political denunciations that followed the previous two quarterly profit reports. That seemed to be partly because the major parts of a tax on "windfall" revenues have been worked out by a congressional conference committee and partly because official Washington was preoccupied with the Russian invasion of Afghanistan. The new tax is expected to produce more than $2 billion over the next decade.

The oil companies, however, came prepared to defend their figures. Some held news conferences to make the point that they are investing large sums — often more than they reported earning — in searching for new sources of oil and gas.

And Mobil Corp., whose annual profits rose 78 percent to $2.01 billion, took newspaper and television advertisements to defend the figures. The ads said that even with the increase Mobil earned less on its investment than was earned by the three television netowrks.

•The gold market brought new proof to the adage that what goes up must come down. The price of gold hit a peak of $875 on Monday and then dipped below $600 later in the week before recovering a little.

At the peak, the price of gold was up 2,400 percent from the old official price of $35 an ounce — a price that gold was trading at in late 1969. But that gain was of no comfort to those who watched the price of gold drop by more than 18 percent in one day.

The rising prices of both gold and silver brought forth a flood of old jewelry and silver sets that were sold for their metal content. It may also have brought forth some ripoffs, with reports that some companies were paying far less than the market value for precious metals.

•Chrysler Corp., fighting for survival and needing to sell cars as rapidly as possible, unveiled a bold and costly marketing plan that will go into effect nationally Jan. 31.

Chrysler will pay you $50 to take a test-drive, as long as you then buy a car, whether it is made by Chrysler or a competitor.

Debate Over Consumer Price Index Viability Takes New Turn This Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The folks who've been crying that the Consumer Price Index exaggerated the real rate of inflation last year by a percent or two should be silent this year. That's because the index may understate the real rise in the cost of living for 1980.

The index has become the center of a raging controversy because of last year's high inflation rate. As officially measured by the CPI, inflation reached a 33-year high of 13.3 percent in 1979.

Critics argued that the index inflated inflation because of the way it computes increases in home prices and mortgage rates, which jumped sharply last year.

If that is so, then the CPI likely will deflate inflation this year, because home prices are expected to level off and mortgage rates are expected to decline, economists say.

The controversy over the index is not simply a matter for debate by economists. Nearly every American is touched directly or indirectly by the index, which affects cost-of-living raises, pensions, Social Security checks and a variety of government programs.

Economists estimate that a 10 percent rise in the CPI triggers an additional $10 billion in government spending and provides an average 6 percent cost-of-living raise for some 9 million workers.

So, if the index put a little extra money in workers' pockets last year, then it could be short-changing them this year.

The leading critic has been Alfred E. Kahn, President Carter's chief inflation adviser. "The way we measure inflation can itself aggravate inflation," Kahn told a congressional committee last week.

But Kahn also has acknowledged that the index will distort the real inflation rate on the low side as the costs of home mortgages begin to decline in a few months, as he expects.

That view is shared by many economists, including Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which produces the index.

Last week, Mrs. Norwood released five alternative, but still experimental, ways to measure housing costs. All five would have lowered the inflation rate, from a 0.1 to 2.1 percentage points.

The alternative measures essentially try to determine the cost of shelter without including the investment gains from home ownership.

But Mrs. Norwood said these measures might exaggerate inflation in years when mortgage rates decline. Defending the current CPI as the most reliable index, she said the bureau has no plans to change it now.

The CPI, the official measure of U.S. inflation for six decades, is a monthly survey of retail prices for a fixed "basket" of goods and services, ranging from food to fuel, tobacco to transportation, appliances to apparel.

At the end of 1979, the index stood at almost 230. That meant that the basket of goods costing $100 in the base year of 1967, cost $230 today, thanks to inflation.

Two of the fastest rising items in the 1979 price survey were houses and mortgage rates, which increased 15.8 percent and 27.5 percent, respectively.

The CPI measures the cost of a home as if it were purchased and paid for entirely, including interest costs, in one year.

Kahn and other critics complain that the index fails to take into account that many people buy a home as an investment and tax advantage. They also note that only 6 percent of Americans buy a house each year, while most live in houses they bought years ago at far lower interest rates.

Organized labor is among the leading defenders of the CPI. AFL-CIO research director Rudy Oswald said this week that the present measure of home ownership is superior to the alternatives, which he labeled as "cures that are worse than the disease."

Oswald, suggesting that political motives may be behind criticism of the CPI, said many of the alternatives would create an "imaginary index" and open up the possibility of "manipulation in behalf of some preferred rate of inflation."

IMPORTANT TAX NOTICE

1979 tax statements for the City of Lubbock and Lubbock Independent School District were mailed to property owners in October, 1979. Because of the fact that thousands of parcels change ownership each year, many new owners may not have received their tax statements, or paid their taxes for 1979. Consequently, their taxes may become delinquent on February 1, 1980, if these people have not notified the Tax Office of the Ownership change and their correct new mailing address.

Generally speaking, if the property has improvements on it, a mortgage or loan company usually escrows taxes and pays those taxes in December. However, if your taxes are not paid by a mortgage and loan company, you have until January 31, 1980, to pay those taxes before a penalty and interest charge is levied and the taxes are carried as delinquent.

If you have a doubt as to whether your taxes have been paid for 1979, please call the City and School Tax Office and our staff will research the status of your taxes for you. Remember, all taxes must be paid on or by January 31, 1980, to avoid delinquent charges.

Violence Against Soviet Army Flares In Kabul

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — A sniper felled a Russian soldier in the Afghan capital of Kabul, the first violence against the Soviet army that Western journalists have witnessed since Moscow began pouring troops into its southern neighbor late last month.

Afghan authorities, meanwhile, initiated a new crackdown on the Western press in the rugged Asian country, expelling three members of an ABC-TV crew and warning that persons who photograph prohibited objects face "legal and revolutionary rules."

The Soviet soldier was wounded when a sniper fired two shots at a group of soldiers who had stopped their army jeep to buy fruit from a street vendor Friday.

A photographer who drove by seconds later saw the jeep's window shattered and a wounded man inside. A Kabul policeman and two other witnesses confirmed the shooting in the Parwan quarter of northwest Kabul, but it was not known how seriously the soldier was hurt.

The other soldiers from the jeep crouched in firing positions and pointed their guns at a hillside cluster of mud-brick huts from which the shots seemed to have come.

Soviet reinforcements arrived quickly by truck and armored personnel carrier and tried unsuccessfully for two hours to get the sniper.

Western diplomats said there has been a spate of shooting incidents in Kabul in the past week, but had no information on casualties.

The night before the sniper incident, machine-gun fire rattled over Kabul for a few seconds. A week earlier, the city was rocked by a series of what sounded like artillery explosions coming from outside Kabul.

As many as 100,000 troops moved into Afghanistan in late December and backed the coup that toppled Hafizullah Amin as president and installed another pro-Moscow leader, Babrak Karmal. The troops since have supported Afghan forces battling Moslem rebels in the mountainous countryside.

Islamic Meet Starts

(In Islamabad, Pakistan, an Islamic foreign ministers' conference gets under way today, discussing a common stand on the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. It also is likely to consider severing diplomatic relations with Moscow, conference sources said.)

On Saturday, Afghan officials expelled ABC-TV's remaining film crew for taking pictures in a restricted area. Authorities earlier detained producer Jacques Grenier, cameraman Barry Fox and soundman Richard Hull, telling them they were in danger because the area 25 miles west of Kabul in which they were filming was frequented by Moslem rebels. An official later told them they could not leave their hotel except to depart the country.

In Rebel Stronghold

(Grenier told a reporter upon arrival at the airport in New Delhi, India, that Afghan authorities "caught us in a place where we shouldn't have been — in a rebel stronghold.")

Grenier and Hull, who are Canadians, and Fox, who is British, had remained in Afghanistan following the expulsion of U.S. journalists earlier this month.

Also on Saturday, an Information Ministry official posted a notice at the hotel where most Western correspondents are staying which said: "If pictures or films are taken of prohibited areas like military spots, ministries, etc, without official permission, legal and revolutionary rules will be implemented." It did not explain what those rules entail.

The notice also said a special press center had been set up to help journalists meet with government officials and visit prisons.

In other developments elsewhere:

—Belgium said it will no longer "exchange official visits at the ministerial level" with the Soviet Union because of the Soviet action in Afghanistan, and will curtail travel by Soviet citizens to Belgium. It took no position on a possible boycott of the Olympic Games, which are to be held in Moscow this summer.

—U.S. soldiers and West German police cordoned off the Soviet Military Liaison Mission in Frankfurt as a precautionary measure during an anti-Soviet march. Police estimated 800 Afghans, Iranians, Turks and West Germans, many of them students at Frankfurt University, marched peacefully through the city.

—The head of Communist Party in Portugal, Alvaro Cunhal, lashed out at what he called the West's "hypocritical campaign" against the presence of Soviet troops in Afghanistan and said his party "is solidly behind the Afghan revolution."

—Pakistan's federal interior minister told reporters in Karachi his government was "fully alive to the situation on its borders touching Afghanistan and is taking necessary steps in this regard." Dr. Mahmood Haroon did not say what those steps were.

Bani Sadr Leading Iran Vote affair of the hostages can be solved almost naturally.

"From the moment when the people give me their confidence, there will be no major difficulties because this is a minor affair," he was quoted as saying.

Bani Sadr, a French-educated economist who returned from Paris to Iran last February with Ayatollah Khomeini, replaced former Foreign Minister Ibrahim Yazdi, who quit office with the fall of the government of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan days after the Islamic militants seized the Americans and the embassy Nov. 4.

During his three weeks as foreign minister, Bani Sadr let it be known he did not think the Americans should be held indefinitely and suggested they might be freed if the United States agreed to an international inquiry into the shah's alleged crimes during his 37-year regime.

But he was repeatedly rebuffed by the embassy militants and Khomeini for his efforts to find a solution to the crisis short of immediate extradition of the shah. Ghotbzadeh, in comparison, has been uncompromising on the question of the exiled monarch's extradition.

Finally, Bani Sadr was relieved of his Foreign Ministry duties Nov. 28 after the embassy militants denounced his plans to take part in a U.N. Security Council meeting on the Iran situation.

Under Iran's new Islamic constitution, the president can be dismissed by Khomeini, the country's supreme religious leader. But the president is expected to wield considerable power by nominating a prime minister. The presidential term is four years.

Other candidates in the race are Sadegh Tabatabai, a former deputy premier; Kazem Sami, former health minister; Darius Faruhar, a minister of state, and Mohammad Mokri, the ambassador to Moscow.

Grenade In Gaza Strip Mars Opening Of Israel-Egypt Ties

By The Associated Press

A hand grenade thrown at two Israeli soldiers in the occupied Gaza Strip marred the first day of normal relations between Israel and Egypt on Saturday. The grenade missed its target and exploded near a group of Arab women, wounding nine of them.

A spokesman for Israel's military command said two troopers were sitting in Gaza's busy Palestine Square when someone threw the grenade toward them. The injured women were reported in fair condition in a Gaza hospital. No arrests were reported and no group claimed responsibility for the attack.

In the West Bank of the Jordan River, a commercial strike closed all stores and offices in the occupied West Bank's major towns. Local Arabs protested the establishment of normal ties between Israel and Egypt as provided by the peace treaty signed by both countries last March.

Arab Stores Closed

Stores in the Arab sector of Jerusalem also were closed, although some shopkeepers stayed open in Jericho, Tulkarm and Jenin.

In Gaza, stores stayed open despite calls by West Bank leaders for citizens to join the strike.

A spokesman for Israel's military government in the West Bank said there were no incidents and that the area remained calm all day with municipalities and stores closed.

Egypt and Israel are in the process of working out an agreement on the extent and nature of autonomy that will be provided for Palestinian residents of the Israeli-occupied territories.

PLO Escalation

The Palestine Liberation Organization in Beirut, Lebanon, meanwhile pledged to escalate the Mideast conflict. Gathering at Beirut's Arab University after a two-hour march throught the city, PLO members burned effigies of President Carter, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minster Menachem Begin.

The PLO's second-in-command, Salah Khalaf, accused the Carter administration of trying to "pose as the champion of Islam under the pretext of condemning the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan."

He continued: "We want to tell the United States and others that we are the true Moslems. And as true Moslems we extend a hand of friendship to the Soviet Union," he said.

Lebanese Areas Closed

Schools, shops, banks and all forms of business were closed in the Lebanese capital's western half and in all other Moslem-populated areas in southern, eastern and northern Lebanon. The Christian sectors did not take part.

Syria and Iraq, hardline Arab nations opposed to the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, proclaimed in separate statements that Saturday was a "day of disgrace" and pledged support for the PLO.

Both countries observed the guerrilla group's call for a day-long protest strike. Syria's state radio reported tens of thousands of demonstrators chanting "Death to traitor Sadat!" paraded through the streets of Damascus, the Syrian capital.

Other Demonstrations

Similar demonstrations were held in several other Syrian cities and towns, the radio said.

In Doha, Qatar, hundreds of Palestinians staged a sit-in at the PLO office to protest the diplomatic exchange.

Normalization of relations between Israel and Egypt began officially, though tangible signs were not expected until the start of the week because of the Jewish sabbath.

Another move taken under the provisions of the treaty was Friday's transfer of another segment of the Sinai Desert to Egypt. The land border between Israel and Egyptian-ruled Sinai was officially to open Saturday, and mail and telephone communications were to start.

Egyptian Team Due

An Egyptian team is due in Israel this week to look for a suitable site for Egypt's embassy, and Israel will open its embassy in temporary quarters in Cairo on Monday. Both countries are to exchange ambassadors on Feb. 26.

Israel retains control over about one-third of Sinai, which it will turn over to Egypt in 1982.

In Cairo, Egypt's Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil said a ministerial level committee is working on a draft law formally ending 30 years of economic warfare with the Jewish state.

The draft, to be submitted next week to the Cabinet, and then to the Egyptian Parliament for approval, will be ready toward mid-February, the prime minister told The Associated Press in a telephone conversation.

The document will then be submitted to the United Nations, and all other international organizations of which Egypt is a member.

Khalil explained that the procedure is purely legal, and added that it was for this reason that Egypt asked Israel's first charge d'affaires to assume his post in Cairo after Feb. 16.

The end of the economic boycott would not only mean that Israeli products would be sold in Egyptian markets, and similarly Egyptian products in Israel, but also that foreign companies, so far boycotted by Cairo because of their relations with the Jewish state, will be able to operate in Egypt.

President Improves Role With Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, his hand strengthened by crises abroad and political gains at home, is likely to get more from Congress in the coming months than he has at any time before, congressional leaders say.

And, according to key Democrats, the president is combining his surge in popularity with a new political toughness they have not seen since he took office.

"He's been much more willing to appreciate he's a politician, that it's not an immoral occupation, that there's nothing wrong with inviting people to the White House," said Rep. John Brademas of Indiana, the House Democratic whip.

House and Senate leaders are in broad agreement that Carter will get most of what he wants from Congress in the foreign policy arena.

Result Of Crises

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., has already labeled the current session a "defense-minded" Congress.

Administration proposals for reinstatement of standby draft registration and for increases in defense spending have already mustered wide support in Congress.

The day after Carter outlined this new hard-line foreign policy in his State of the Union address last week, the House had passed by a wide margin a resolution supporting his proposed boycott of the summer Olympics in Moscow.

The measure comes up in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Monday and is expected to get speedy attention by the full Senate.

China Trade Rushed

In another gesture of support for Carter's new foreign policy and in a clear jab at the Soviet Union, the House also rushed through a bill to give preferential trade treatment to the People's Republic of China.

The votes on both bills showed a topsy-turvy Congress in which traditional political labels didn't seem to mean much. Right-wing conservatives voted for trade with what some of them are still calling "red" China and traditional liberals voted to boycott the Olympics.

"There is a mood out there that we've got to be prepared for conventional skirmishes, that we can't stop World War III with what we've got now," says House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill. He cited heavy support for Carter's proposal to bring back military registration.

"Will Of America"

To do so, the House leader said, would only be "following the will of America."

Meanwhile, Carter has also been developing his abilities for dealing with Congress, leaders say.

Democratic leaders claim Carter has been inviting members to the White House more often and promising important political favors — or threatening to withhold them — to achieve what he wants. This is an exercise in political hardball that Hill leaders said Carter did not engage in much before.

"I could rattle of a whole list of things — but I won't — which have happened at the White House which will be politically helpful to the renomination of President Carter," Brademas said.

"I won't say there's a new Jimmy Carter — that's journalese," said the Democratic whip. "He's the same man and he must have been a good politician to get himself elected president of the United States. But I think he's stronger here, even as he is in the country."

Carter's victory last week in the Democratic caucuses in Iowa and his handling of the crises in Iran and Afghanistan can't help but increase Carter's effectiveness in Congress.

"The perception of Carter has changed," said Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., chairman of a Government Operations subcommittee and a key legislator on energy issues. "There is not only the feeling that he has played the crisis to the hilt, which he has, but that he's a good politician as well.

Texas Union Created For Professors

AUSTIN (AP) — The American Federation of Teachers, AFl-CIO, announced creation of a statewide local for Texas college and university professors Saturday.

Local 4033, called Texas United Faculty (TUF), will operate through chapters called "guilds" on each campus where it has members.

"We will be visiting faculty senates. We will be visiting professors in their offices," said Louis Bolieu, coordinator of the organizing effort.

Robert Nielson, special assistant to the president of the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) for colleges and universities, said a strike was "inconceivable" in Texas.

This, he said, is because state college teachers do not have collective bargaining rights in Texas, and strikes normally arise from a breakdown in bargaining.

Faculty union locals have struck in New Jersey and in Chicago, Ill., but there have been more "strikes" by professors affiliated with the non-union American Association of University Professors (AAUP) and National Education Association, he added.

Nielson and Bolieu said TUF's chief focus would be political, including legislative campaign activity, since faculty salaries are largely limited by funds appropriated by lawmakers.

Nielson said traditional faculty organizations such as the AAUP lack "legislative clout and political action."

TUF "means you will have the legislative clout of the AFL-CIO in your state. You are able to tap off of that power," Nielson said at a news conference at Texas AFL-CIO headquarters.

The political concentration of the new union local was evident in recruiting brochures distributed at a conference that began immediately after the news conference.

"Our workload is certain to increase and many programs which faculty have worked long and hard to bring to students will be victims of Gov. Clements — if not this year, then next. ... Continued pressure for tax reductions will affect our livelihood, our professional opportunities, our entire careers, for years to come," the brochure says.

Ron Wilcox, president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, said, however, that discussions of a college faculty union "had been going on long before Governor Bill came on the scene."

Nielson said the union also would "process grievances" from faculty members and "prepare itself for collective bargaining in the eventuality that occurs."

Savoy Hotel Closes Cabaret

LONDON (UPI) — The Savoy Hotel, a majestic playground for the rich and the famous since 1889, is closing the cabaret where Johann Strauss once performed "the Blue Danube" and Noel Coward played an ivory piano through the Blitz.

A Spanish singer named Maria Prado was the last act Saturday night on the stage where Maurice Chevalier once sang and danced and where Enrico Caruso earned $900 a night for his singing.

"We're sort of keeping quite a low profile," said Helen Wright, press officer for what was London's grandest hotel during the first half of the century.

"We don't really want to make a splash about something that we feel is in a way negative. We prefer to talk more about the positive things."

The Savoy, with a river entrance overlooking the Thames and a main entrance onto the bustling Strand, is still a majestic hotel. But these days it competes with Claridge's, the Connaught or the Berkley for clients like the Maharajah of Patiala, who once booked 35 rooms and kept 20 limousines awaiting his pleasure.

"Public opinion tells us people want a change," Miss Wright said of the decision to close the cabaret. We still will have dancing in the ballroom, but people just aren't interested in a cabaret any more.

"The financial aspect enters into it, but mainly we are changing with the times."

The Savoy cabaret officially opened in 1930, but the hotel management is fond of pointing out that Strauss used to play there. Managers consider those days the birth of their cabaret.

In the 50 years of the cabaret's formal existence, it has featured entertainers ranging from Sarah Bernhardt to Lena Horne, from John Barrymore to Brigitte Bardot and Tallulah Bankhead.

Even Ernest the Goldfish performed there.

"One of the greatest acts, unpaid and unsung, to boot, was Ernest the Goldfish," wrote William Marshall of the London Daily Mirror. "(Ernest) used to leap over a champagne cork, but (he) kicked the bucket at an early age from a surfeit of cigar ash."

Although a tradition that began with Strauss is now at an end, few took notice.

"We don't have anything special planned for the last night and the bookings are about normal for a Saturday night," said a Savoy spokesman. "Some people think its terrible, but we prefer to just close quietly."

MAN FIRED TWICE

DALLAS (AP) — Sheriff's deputy Bob Collins, who was fired by the sheriff but won reinstatement after a hearing, has been fired again — this time for filing as a candidate for his boss' job. Collins filed as a candidate for sheriff Friday and shortly thereafter Sheriff Carl Thomas demanded his resignation.

California Area Hit By Quake

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An earthquake rumbled through Northern California on Saturday night, shaking buildings for hundreds of miles and rattling windows. There were no reports of major damage or injuries.

The tremor registered 4.75 on the Richter scale and was an aftershock of the earthquake that hit the area on Thursday, said Don Finley of the National Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo.

The quake struck at 6:36 p.m., and was felt 50 miles to the south in San Jose, 60 miles to the east in Stockton and 80 miles to the north in Santa Rosa.

Officials at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, which suffered damage to buildings and its $25 million laser complex in Thursday's 5.5 quake, said they were checking for possible damage. The temblor Thursday caused scores of injuries and extensive damage in Northern California.

There were reports of damage Saturday night to bridges, including new cracks in a freeway overpass near Livermore on Interstate 580 which was damaged Thursday.

The Bay Area Rapid Transit district shut down its electrically operated commuter trains in a search for damage, then resumed service at about 7:15 p.m.

San Francisco's telephone system was jammed with calls, overloading the circuits and causing line outages in some sections of the city.

"This is the worst one that I've felt — it was a jarring jolt," said one man at San Francisco International Airport.

A Palo Alto resident described the quake as "a rolling, swaying feeling that lasted for many seconds. It felt about the same as the one on Thursday."

To the north of the city across the Golden Gate, a Mill Valley resident said the "glass was shaking, the lights and furniture were moving — it was really strong."

A resident of Stockton — 60 miles east of the San Francisco — said the quake "lasted for about eight or 10 seconds." Stockton is located about 60 miles east of San Francisco.

Youth With Reattached Arm Stays Optimistic

ed Methodist Church, First Christian Church and Sunnyside Baptist Church.

Despite limited physical activity since being confined to the hospital, the ex-Dimmitt High School football quarterback and district pole vaulting champion said he isn't bored and enjoys talking to friends, who visit him regularly.

Still, his daily routine is far different now than it was Jan. 2 when he was up before sunrise to tend the family's quarter horses, check fences and feed cattle on the Bethel Community farm.

He had spent about six months working in Houston after his 1978 graduation from high school and he was glad to be back on his family's land. It was there that he had learned the skills that led to his earning the Lone Star Farmer degree by Future Farmers of America.

By noon on that Wednesday three weeks ago the feeding chores were finished. Harvey Arce, a high school senior who worked on the Howell farm, joined Matt in the afternoon and they drove to the pasture to take down a fence. It was slow work, feeding the metal strands into a homemade wire wagon, designed to wrap the wire around a spool.

A pocket flap on his coveralls caught in the driveshaft, pulling him into the machinery. "It spun me around so fast it threw me over," he said. As he fell, with his arms outstreached, his left arm struck the drawbar of the tractor operating the machine.

"I looked and saw the bone sticking out," he said, adding that he thought his arm was broken but not severed. One look was enough, he said. "I thought, Oh, no. I better not look."

His companion helped him into a pickup truck but left the severed arm behind. En route to the Dimmitt hospital, some 12 miles away, the pair stopped Matt's 21-year-old brother, Gaines, on the road and explained the accident.

Matt said it was only after his brother asked, "Where's his arm?" that he realized the extent of his injuries. But Matt didn't check to confirm his brother's words because, he said, "I wasn't interested in looking."

While Dr. B.H. Lee cleaned and bandaged the stub at the Dimmitt hospital, Harvey returned to the farm to get the severed limb.

Matt was still coherent but had received a pain-killing drug. His father noted that Matt has exhibited a tolerance for pain in the past. "He's kinda hard to knock out," he said, explaining that once after a football injury "The doctor said he gave him enough (drugs) to knock a horse out, but Matt was still awake."

Matt remained conscious as he and his separated arm were transported to an ambulance bound for Lubbock. When the vehicle broke down in Springlake a second ambulance dispatched from Littlefield continued the journey.

The family estimated the accident occurred about 3:30 p.m. and surgery began about 7 p.m.

Matt, who says he wants to raise, breed and show horses, concedes that "Youusually need two hands for that sort of stuff." But if he regains full use of his left arm and hand, it will be a simple path to follow.

If full use doesn't return, Matt said simply, "It will make it harder."

They are trained to react quickly and calmly under circumstances that are anything but calm, but they tend to have a very short professional life because of the pressures of the job.

The Lubbock nurse shortage can be translated into numbers. Statistics from the Texas Hospital Association indicate more than 300 nursing positions are vacant in Lubbock and surrounding South Plains counties. Nationwide, administrators are trying to fill 9,000 vacant registered nurse positions.

The shortage in this area is not due entirely to non-availability of nurses. Many licensed nurses, for a variety of reasons, simply are not working in the nursing field.

Of more that 82,000 registered nurses licensed to practice in Texas, little more than 37,000 are actually working full-time and about 5,500 are working part-time. These figures can be deceptive because many nurses registered in Texas do not actually live here; but they give some indication of the gap between licensed and practicing nurses.

About 870 RNs are licensed in Lubbock County, but only about 720 are working full-time and fewer than 100 work part-time. The gap between licensed and practicing RNs is not as great in the Lubbock area, indicating the shortage is due more to lack of available manpower.

"It's hit everybody," Marvin Hardin, Methodist Hospital's vice president for patient services, said recently. "For a while we thought the shortage was just in Texas."

Nurse recruiting is becoming a high-pressure pursuit, with hospitals vying for newly-graduated nurses like hounds after a fox. The recruiters approach the new graduates with pitches that make their communities sound like resorts.

But that's what it takes. Lubbock's only school of nursing is operated by Methodist's Irene Wilson. Her program takes about three years to complete, including 31 hours of college credit and 21 months of RN training.

Graduating only about 70 nurses a year, Mrs. Wilson says they all have jobs waiting for them as soon as they finish the program. About three-fourths of the graduates stay in the Lubbock area, but the supply just isn't keeping up with the demand.

"We have letters of request from people all over the state," Mrs. Wilson said. "She (the nurse) has a job waiting for her and can go to work the day after graduation."

The irons still are in the fire for the Texas Tech School of Nursing, which area health spokesmen say will go a long way toward filling the nursing gaps in the South Plains area. Planned as a multi-level entry school, the program will allow nurses with a small amount of training to come in at an accelerated level, pick up where they left off and finish at a higher level of training.

This kind of program prevents the nurse from having to start all over when he or she continues education in the field. The experts say this kind of school would not only attract new nurses but would keep more experienced nurses in the area.

But despite the need for nurses in this area, university officials have yet to persuade Gov. Bill Clements to fund the nursing school.

Starting salaries for RNs in the Lubbock area are about $1,000 a month — not high by comparison with other areas. But even those nurses who work the higher paying jobs in other parts of the country are often disappointed in the rate of advancement. A nurse of 14 years experience may recesive only $1 more an hour than a nurse of only two years experience.

"Most men would not work under such conditions," a hospital nurse here complained.

Many health care experts believe the high percentage of women in nursing — about 98.1 — is keeping salaries down. They hope that as more men enter the field salaries will be more competitive.

Many nurses leave the field for reasons other than salary. After graduating from nursing school and finding themselves on the floor of a busy hospital, things look shockingly different than they did in the classroom.

Integration Arguments Loom

beginning Monday. The school district is expected to call as expert witnesses Texas Tech professors Robert L. Rouse, professor of economics; James E. Jonish, chairman of the economics department; and Karl Lynn Guntermann, associate professor of finance.

They are expected to testify on population shifts and housing patterns in Lubbock.

Other probable witnesses for the district are Irons and E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration. Irons said he likely will discuss the growth of the city south of Loop 289 and the need, alleged by school officials, for additional schools in that region.

Witnesses for the government may include three city residents and two others who would act as expert witnesses.

The potential expert witnesses are Dr. George Henderson, chairman of the department of human relations at the University of Oklahoma in Norman, and Dr. Emory Davis, associate professor of sociology at Austin College in Dallas.

Henderson last year served as consultant for the school district's human relations committee that was set up to help monitor the desegregation plan implemented here in 1978.

Court documents state that both men would testify "generally as to the causes of segregated residential housing patterns and the influence of schools and school actions on those patterns."

City real estate businessmen Bobby Williams, Gonzalo Garza and R.J. Givens, if called as witnesses, will testify concerning the importance of schools in relation to home purchasing decisions.

The determination of whether intentionally discriminatory school board acts have influenced home purchasing decisions has become the task of the district court so that the appeals court "can meaningfully review the district court's ultimate conclusion," according to the Fifth Circuit opinion written by Judge Clark.

He also ruled that the district court specifically should find "whether it is significant that the minority schools unaffected by the order (of 1978) are in close proximity of schools at which intentional segregation was found and whether the location of the schools in question in areas near the orginal de jure (by law) segregated schools indicate that such segregation contributed to the current segregative condition."

Those nine de jure segregated schools were the only schools ordered desegregated by Woodward in 1978. He ruled that the other 13 minority schools in the district became racially identifiable from factors other than unconstitutional acts committed by the school board.

But the Justice Department appealed Woodward's findings and order, claiming that the racial balance of the remaining 13 schools was due to school board action and that the remedy places an unfair burden on minority students.

The government attorneys seek to block the construction of schools south of the Loop that were planned in 1977 and also seek a systemwide integration remedy.

THERMOSTATS DOWN

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Hungary hopes to save 50,000 tons of fuel oil annually by turning down the thermostats in most public buildings to 68 degrees, nine degrees below current settings, the state news agency MTI said Saturday. Health, education and social welfare buildings will be excluded from the order by the Heavy Industry Ministry, aimed at reducing fuel consumption to 95 percent of that used in 1978.

County Candidates Hold Back in that district is Pete Laney of Hale Center.

The race for county sheriff has drawn the most candidates, five. Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard and Mike DeRosa have announced as Democrats. D.L. "Sonny" Keesee has announced as a Republican and Willy V. Turner has announced his candidacy, but not his party. Wayne Kirkpatrick has not made an official announcement, but he told the Avalanche-Journal he will run as a Republican.

Two county commissioner posts are up for election this year, but only one has developed as a contested race. Edgar Chance, a Democrat, has announced his plans to seek re-election in Precinct 1, covering the southwestern sector of the county. No other candidate has announced or filed for that position.

In Precinct 3, which covers the northeastern part of the county, Commissioner Jim Lancaster of Idalou has drawn an opponent in the Democratic primary race. Franklin Dunn, a farmer from the Idalou area, announced for the post earlier this month.

Three district judge posts are up for election this year. County Democratic Party Chairman Madison Sowder has received filings from 99th District Court Judge Thomas Clinton and 140th District Court Judge William Shaver. As of late Friday, no candidates had filed for the 72nd District Court post held by Judge Denzil Bevers.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack has filed for re-election for his Precinct 1, Place 1 post, and County Tax Assessor-Collector Frank Stuart has filed for re-election. Neither has drawn an opponent.

In the county constable races, Lane Anderson has filed for Precinct 1 and Bennie Fred Setliff has filed for Precinct 6.

Candidates for statewide offices and for district offices covering more than one county must file with their respective state Democratic or Republican headquarters. Candidates for county, precinct and one-county districts must file with county party chairmen.

Dole Deciding On Campaign

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Sen. Bob Dole said Saturday night that he will decide within a few days whether to give up his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

"The people of Kansas will be the first to know what I decide," Dole told about 750 Republicans attending the annual Kansas Day dinner.

Dole finished last, with less than 3 percent of the vote, among seven Republicans candidates in the Iowa precinct caucuses last week.

He said that even if he does drop out, "I have no intention of withdrawing from the great national debates of the '80s."

"I frankly think I'm the best qualified candidate the Republicans have for president," he said. "But if you don't have the money..."

Lady Luck Exits; SMU Trips Tech

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

DALLAS— For the third time in as many games, the Texas Tech cagers took a contest right down to the wire Saturday night.

But that good old last-minute magic is a little harder to pull out of the hat on the road, and the Raiders had two shots rejected in the game's final 10 seconds, dropping a tough 76-75 decision to the hot-shooting Southern Methodist University Mustangs in Moody Coliseum.

The Raiders are now 5-2 in Southwest Conference play, 11-6 on the year. The Ponies are 3-5 and 11-7.

The Raiders struggled to keep up with the Ponies all night and only an SMU cold spell at the charity stripe in the game's final moments kept Tech close. Three times the Mustangs failed to convert on the back end of one-and-one situations.

And when Mark Hallmann missed the third free throw with only 38 ticks left on the clock, the Ponies led only 76-73. Tech's Ben Hill muscled one in from underneath the basket and the Raiders had cut the lead to within one, 76-75, with 25 seconds remaining.

It was on the ensuing inbounds play that the Mustangs flirted with disaster. The inbounds pass squirted out of a tangle of arms and legs near the midcourt stripe and rolled out of bounds as players from both sides dove after the ball.

No one seemed to know who touched it last and the officials ruled a jump ball. But in the Southwest Conference, jump balls have gone the way of the nickel candy bar and guess who's turn it was to take the ball in.

So the Raiders got the ball with 19 seconds left and only one point away from a win. It looked like the Ponies, who have blown a few close ones already this year, were about to do it again.

But the clock ticked down to four seconds before freshman Nelson Franse put one up from the corner. Franse, a seldom-used shooting guard from Clovis, was inserted into the lineup by Myers for his offensive capabilities.

Gordon Welch, who had watched the first 39 minutes and 50 seconds of the game from the bench and was inserted for his defensive capabilities by SMU coach Sonny Allen, blocked it solidly out of bounds.

Kent Williams then put up a prayer from the 30-40 foot range that fell way short as the buzzer sounded.

"We were trying to get the ball to either Kent or David (Little)," said Tech coach Gerald Myers. "But Nelson was open and he's a good shooter. . ."

"I never saw him," said Franse of Welch's block. "Kent had penetrated well and I had the good shot. If I had seen him, I would have given him a little head fake and the game might hadve had a different ending."

"That block was the biggest play I've ever made," said Welch. "I didn't know exactly where I was positioned so I just went for it."

"It was a big block for Gordon at the end," said Allen. "It gave us time to regroup and set our defense. Welch went in for defensive purposes and did his job."

According to Myers, the problem wasn't with the Tech offense, but rather its defense. Tech connected on 32 of 58 field goal attempts, with Little leading the way with a career high 27 points. But on the other end of the court the Mustangs were making good on 34 of 62 field goal tries.

"We played hard," added Myers, "but we just couldn't stop them on defense. We gambled too much on defense there at the end of the game and they played smart and took advantage of it.

"Give SMU a lot of credit," said Myers, "they played hard and did what they had to do to win. I also thought Branson played a great game for them. He was tough on the boards."

But SMU's Allen proved he could be just as lavish with his praise. "Tech is a good ball team," he said. "They played another good game tonight. The last-second shot in Austin and another one here tonight and Tech would be in first place."

Trailing by five at the half, the Raiders cut the gap at times but could never come up with a consistent defensive effort. Repeatedly the Mustangs beat the Tech defenders down the court for the easy bucket and three times in the second half guard Ollie Hoops snuck behind the Tech defense for wide open layups.

The Mustangs were paced by center Hallmann who had 13 points but the Ponies had six players in double figures, all

Aggies Top Longhorns, Remain In SWC Lead

By The Associated Press

John Danks' driving jump shot bounced off the front of the rim in the last few seconds Saturday as Texas A&M, the Southwest Conference basketball leader, salvaged a 56-53 victory over arch-rival Texas.

The regionally-televised game, before a near-packed house, was so intensely played that Vernon Smith, A&M's leading scorer, taunted the largely pro-Texas crowd after he had fouled out with 6:05 left in the game.

As another example of the intensity, Rynn Wright of A&M screamed at his own teammate, Rudy Woods, after Woods failed to contest Texas' Ron Baxter on a close-in shot.

Texas used only one sub and A&M two.

Wright claimed a crucial rebound after a missed A&M shot with 1:02 left and hit two free throws for a 54-53 lead and what proved to be the winning points.

Wright then pressured Baxter into a turnover, with the ball slipping out of Baxter's hands, and Fred Carson fouled Woods with 30 seconds left. Woods missed the first of a 1-and-1 free throw, and LaSalle Thompson grabbed the rebound for Texas.

With about six seconds left, Danks, whose shooting had kept Texas close in the second half, drove the lane and leaped for a soft, left-handed shot about six feet from the basket.

But his shot bounced off the rim and David Britton of A&M snatched the loose ball.

Britton hit two meaningless free throws with three seconds remaining, after Texas fouled him in a desperate effort to get another shot.

Juniors Smith and Wright each scored 11 for A&M, which raised its SWC record to 7-0, and Britton and freshman Claude Riley each pitched in 10.

Baxter, closing in on the Texas school scoring record, tallied 18 points. Danks, who only had two at halftime, finished with 14.

A&M extended its season record to 15-5, and Texas fell to 10-7. The Longhorns are 3-4 in the conference.

After the game, both coaches agreed either team could have won it, even though the Aggies were favored.

"The basic difference is a lucky bounce one way or the other — a key rebound or shot here or there," said Texas coach Abe Lemons. "This was a pressure game. Danks' shot at the end was a good one, he just hurried it a little bit."

Aggie coach Shelby Metcalf said, "We feel very fortunate. This game could have gone either way. I guess it's clean living ... but we'll take it, anyway."

Arkansas 73, Rice 64

Scott Hastings led a balanced Arkansas attack with 15 points as the Razorbacks emerged from a high percentage shootout against Rice with a 73-64 Southwest Conferecne victory Saturday night.

The Razorbacks, who hit a season-high 60 percent from the floor, won despite accurate shooting by the Owls. Rice, after hitting 67 percent of its field goal attempts in the opening half, finished with 62 percent overall.

Hastings, who missed the last 12 minutes of the first half after picking up his third foul, scored 12 of his points in the second half as the Razorbacks pulled away.

Kenny Austin, who hit 8 of his 10 shots from the field, led all scorers with 20 points for the Owls. Ricky Pierce added 14 points and Robert Shaw scored 12.

USOC Supports Carter Request

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The United States Olympic Committee voted unanimously Saturday to support President Carter in his request that the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow be transferred, postponed or canceled because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

After hearing from Lloyd Cutler, White House general counsel in the morning, and discussing the issue for the rest of the day, the USOC executive board approved a resolution saying "pursuant to the request of the President of the United States, the United States Olympic Committee directs its officers and staff to propose to the International Committee that the 1980 Summer Games be transferred to another site or multiple sites, or be postponed or canceled for this year."

The executive board also said the USOC should meet after any action by the IOC "to consider appropriate action to be taken ... under such circumstances that may exist at that time."

The board also said the U.S. committee should continue to select and prepare an Olympic team, whether or not the U.S participates in the Summer Games "in order to recognize the athletes who have been training as Olympians."

A USOC official told reporters that 68 members of the 86-member executive board attended the meeting and voted for the resolution. Bad weather prevented the other board members from attending.

President Carter proposed last Sunday that the Games be transferred, postponed or canceled if the Soviets did not withdraw their troops from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

In Ottawa, meanwhile, Canadian Prime Minister Joe Clark said Saturday he will ask Canadian athletes to boycott the Games if Soviet troops are not removed from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

Clark said he asked Canadian Olympic Association officials to convey the government's position to a meeting of the international Olympic governing body next month.

Dick Pound, president of the Canadian Olympic Association, told reporters after meeting with Clark that it was too early to say whether the association would recommend a boycott.

The Canadian government cannot force the association to boycott the

Coach Brings Cagers, Success To WTC

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

SNYDER — It's straight-up noon and Nolan Richardson has already put in a full day's work. And he isn't ready, willing or able, to knock off just yet. No, Richardson won't punch out for at least 10, maybe 12, more hours.

Richardson doesn't get a lot of R&R, anymore. The previous night, he had driven to Midland to watch a kid someone had said was "a player". It turned out to be a long drive for nothing. But, still, Richardson said he felt obligated to go. ("They're wild goose chases most of the time," explained Richardson. "The kid is usually 5-6. But they don't tell you that. But it's good to take a look. People like that.")

So, it was well past midnight before he crawled under the covers. Then Richardson was up at the crack of dawn to start preparation for the evening's important contest against eighth-ranked Midland College.

Richardson is living proof that there is no rest for the weary, especially if the weary one is a junior college basketball coach.

With those blood-shot eyes gleaming, Richardson laughed and said: "I just wish I got time-and-a-half. I'd be a rich man then."

Between coaching the top-ranked JUCO basketball team in the nation, Western Texas College, and coordinating a recruiting program that reaches from New York to California, Richardson is also the self-imposed promoter of goodwill in this West Texas town of 11,000. And, he performs all three tasks with a professionalism that's unmatched anywhere.

His record alone supports those facts.

Since taking over at WTC, Richardson has guided the Westerners to a three-year combined record of 84-13 (including this season's 20-0 mark through last Thursday night), two consecutive Western Junior College Conference titles, a pair of regional titles and back-to-back National Junior College Athletic Association tournament appearances. And, with the Westerners off to an unbeaten start this year, Richardson can expect to add to those accomplishments.

But trophies and conference titles aren't the only things that sets Richardson off from his JUCO colleagues. Alone, without the help of an assistant coach or a high-powered travel budget, has managed to bring in some of the outstanding basketball talent in the country. Already this year, one major college scout predicted as many as six Westerners are capable of playing big-time basketball.

Richardson, likes to talk about the wins and the "fine group of kids" at WTC. But he also enjoys expounding on the "public relations" aspect of the program, too.

Sitting in a local restaurant, Richardson explained how he had "created a monster."

"When I first came here there weren't 50 people in the stands," stated Richardson. "They were winning everything there was to win. They had a national champion (in 1975). But no one was coming out to the games. I think I've changed that. Now we get anywhere from a 1,000 to 3,000 out when we're here (at Scurry County Coliseum). I think that was an accomplishment.

"And now," he continued, "people here don't even ask me about winning the conference. They want to know when the national tournament is. They expect us to win nationals. One doctor here in town, told me he had his hotel reservations at Hutchinson, Kan., (the site of the tournament). I've created a monster."

Then Richardson leaned back and let loose a laugh that can only be described as infectious. Obviously, he is was enjoying the creation.

Richardson says "action basketball" was what started getting the people from out in front of the television and into the stands. WTC basketball, not Charlie's Angels, is number one in Snyder.

But there is also Richardson himself. People come to see this coach in action, too. During a game, Richardson is in perpetual motion, hollering, jumping, and pleading with the officials. He's a show in himself.

"That's just the way I am," laughed Richardson. "I can't stand to go to a game and see people sitting on their hands. Going to a basketball game shouldn't be like going to church. I love action. . .excitement."

So, naturally, the Westerners play like Richardson coaches; they come off their streamlined bus running. ("Why," asked Richardson, "go down court and pass the ball 15 times when chances are you could have taken the same shot after two passes? That's my philosphy.")

However, Richardson admits that he wouldn't be able to pack 'em in without those high-octane players, such as 6-5 guard Paul Pressey, an All-America candidate who handles the basketball like Michelangelo handled a paint brush. And getting the "thoroughbreds," as Richardson likes to call them, to Snyder is no easy task. But through a recruiting program that utilizes "a lot of blind trust and nothing but the truth," Richardson has managed to stock the stable.

"You know we don't have the money to go out and look at a kid in say Alabama or Mississippi," explained Richardson. "I can't go see them play, as much as I would like to. I take the word of a lot of people I've gotten to know over the years. If they say a kid's a player, I take their word for it. That's about all I can do."

Of the 15 members of the WTC team, Richardson figures he saw "five or six" of them play in high school. For instance, Bill Patterson's brother gave Richards a call from Harrisburg, Pa., and sent down a film; Nate Archibald, a star for the Boston Celtics and friend of Richardson's, put the WTC coach onto Greg Stewart after seeing him play on a Bronx, N.Y., playground; Richardson signed Franklin Bennett and Ronald Porter as a dual package from Richard, Va.,on the word of a friend; Gus Bailey, who played for the Washington Bullets, saw Dwaub Vantress on a New Orleans playground and then rang up his old buddy; and Texas Tech assistant, Rob Evans, helped Richardson land Pressey.

But even after the phone calls start pouring in, Richardson still must sell players like Pressey on the idea of coming to Snyder for the next two years.

"I just tell them two things," said Richardson. "I tell them that they are going to get an education and that they are going to play some of the best basketball in the nation. That's what I've got to sell.

"I can't sell them Snyder," continued Richardson. "It's a nice town, but there's no nightlife for these kids. Some of them are coming out of New York. What does Snyder possibly have that New York doesn't."

Richardson said that when a player chooses WTC "he'd better be ready to pay a high price and sacrifice a few things. But that sacrifice is going to play off someday for him because he'll have a firm foundation after he leaves here."

And that foundation, said Richardson, is an education. "What else is there to do here besides study, play basketball and hit the bed?"

Only five players on the WTC roster come from Texas — and they are all from El Paso. Richardson says it's a lot easier to recruit a player from out-of-state than it is to talk a kid from Houston into coming to Snyder.

"They say, 'Where's Snyder? Is that in Texas?" laughed Richardson. "But the kids from New York they just want to come to Texas. They don't care if it's Snyder or Dallas. Texas is just a place they've always heard of."

One thing that tends to upset Richardson is the bad reputations placed on junior college basketball and football programs. Richardson says two-year schools aren't havens for "dope addicts and head cases" as some contend.

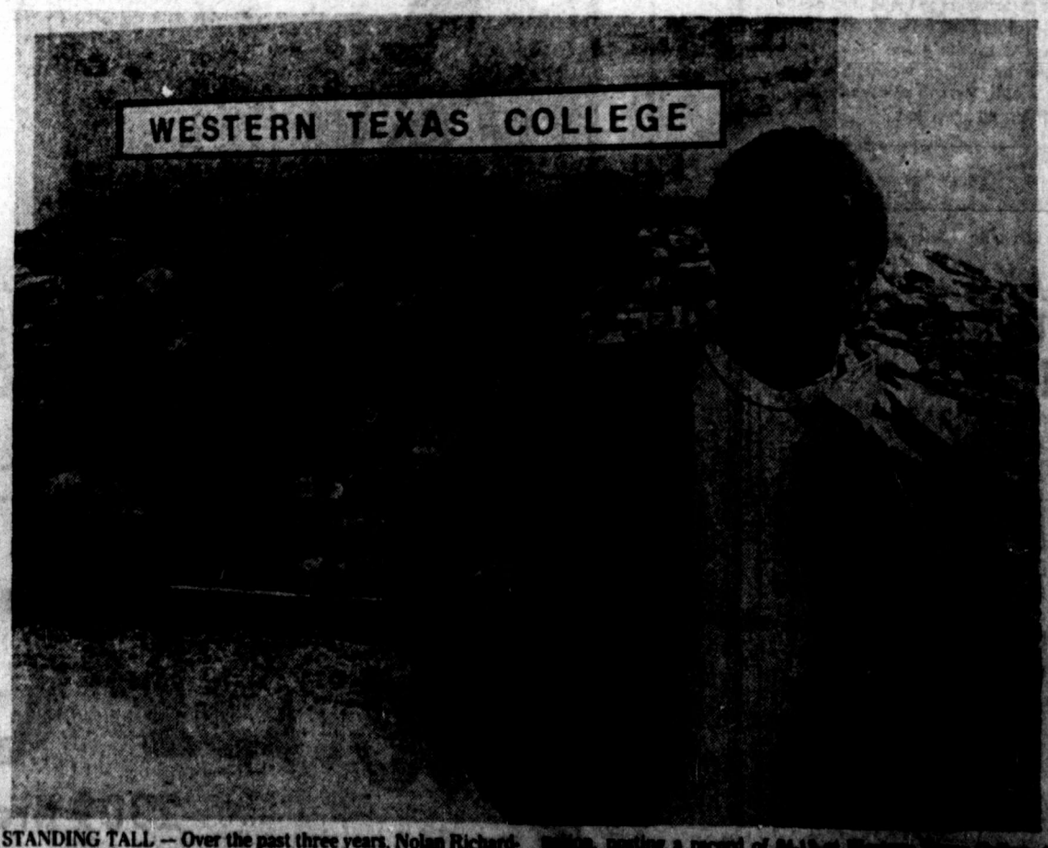

"We're not a bunch of outlaws out here," stated Richardson. "And I don't like to hear people say that either. There are some kids that need junior colleges and some that don't. Shoot, I've seen as many outcasts in a major college program as I have in junior college. You just have to look at the whole picture."

Richardson believes that the junior colleges were strapped with the outlaw tag because of the lack of discipline at some schools. But he says discipline in no problem at WTC.

"That's the key to our success," pointed out Richardson. "I played under Don Haskin (at Texas Western College, now the University of Texas at El Paso) and he always said that there is only one chief. I'm the chief here."

A man that isn't one to sit still, Richardson still has his sights set on someday taking over as the head coach at a major university.

"When I came here (to WTC), I told them my goals," said Richardson. "I had a good job at Bowie before I came here. But I reached a point where I knew it was time to move on. I wanted to go to the colleges. This is major junior college right here, but it's not where I want to spend the rest of my life. A man has to continue improve himself. That's only natural."

STANDING TALL — Over the past three years, Nolan Richardson has become one of the top college basketball coaches in the nation, posting a record of 84-13 at Western Texas College in Snyder. The Westerners are currently 20-0.

USOC Votes To Support Olympic Boycott Plea

Games, but Clark said he expected the COA would be influenced by the government's position.

Cutler and other White House aides were the first speakers at the morning meeting. Heavy snows prevented many of the board members from attending, although a spokesman said the organization had a quorum.

During a luncheon break, Robert J. Kane, USOC president, said the executive board discussed Cutler's presentation and six resolutions presented by members on what steps the organization should take prior to meeting with the International Olympic Committee on Feb. 9, four days before the opening of the Winter Games in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Kane also said some of the board members pointed out to Cutler "the kind of sacrifice our athletes will have to make if they are not permitted to participate in the Olympic Games."

Cutler said Carter felt that "no U.S. team should attend Games this summer in the capital of a nation that has sent its troops to invade a much smaller and previously independent nation that is on the road to the Persian Gulf, from which the rest of the world derives a very large part of its oil supply."

Citing public opinion polls and a 386-12 vote in the House of Representatives on Thursday supporting the president's position, Cutler said he believed the U.S. committee members also would take a positive stance.

"I believe they appreciate the gravity of the problem and will give it thoughtful consideration," Cutler said.

Several times in his news conference, Cutler intimated the Soviets had violated the Olympic spirit by sending troops into Afghanistan.

"We are trying to show the Soviets that this action and its maintenance will be costly in every political and economic relationship they have," he said.

"For us to appear in the capital of the aggressor at the time the aggression has just been completed and may still be continuing, and to pay homage under those circumstances, it seems to us as just not fitting or consistent with Olympic principles of peace."

A group of nearly 50 athletes training at the Olympic Center here held a news conference Friday to denounce the use of athletes as a "political lever." The athletes recommended a "total economic boycott of the Soviet Union." Should that fail, they said, then they would "consider the (Olympic) boycott to be useful."

"We must use actions which will achieve results, not symbolic gestures which only vent emotions," their statement said.

There were these other Olympics-related events on Saturday:

— West German Olympic Committee executives postponed a decision on whether to recommend sending a team to Moscow. Committee President Willi Daume said the committee decided against making a decision now because of what he called the "dramatic escalation of the (world) political situation."

— Ruben Berrios Martinez, president of the Puerto Rican Independence Party, on Saturday, condemned the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, but added he is in favor of sending Puerto Rican athletes to Moscow. Berrios said he opposes the mixing of politics and sports.

— Emanuel Rose, secretary general of Denmark's Olympic Committee, suggested Danish athletes make their own decision whether or not to take part in the Moscow Games. But, he recommended they stay away from the opening and closing ceremonies.

— In London, conservative lawmaker Robert Adley said visiting athletes and spectators at Moscow should wear black armbands to protest the Afghanistan invasion. He called such a move "a propagada fifth column," saying it would be picked up by Russian television and beamed to the Soviet people.

Lewis, Orr Head Blue-Chip List

DALLAS (AP) — Houston Kashmere tight end Mark Lewis and Abilene Cooper running back-linebacker Terry Orr head a list of 16 "blue-chippers" picked in an annual confidential poll of the nine Southwest Conference head football coaches by the Dallas Times Herald.

They were labeled as "absolutely can't miss" college prospects by seven of the coaches. The Times Herald said the number of athletes on each ballot varied from the 12 names mentioned by three coaches to a high of 36 sent in by one coach.

It took votes of four or more coaches to make the list.

Receiving six votes were Alfred Anderson, quarterback, Waco Richfield; Lloyd Archie, wide receiver, Huntsville; Kenneth Reeves, lineman, Pittsburgh; and Tommy Robison, lineman, Gregory-Portland.

Getting five votes were Doug Dawson, lineman, Houston Memorial; David Randle, lineman, Dallas White; and Edward Williams, linebacker, Odessa Ector.

Four coaches listed Ricky, Bolden, tight end, Dallas Hillcrest; Ron Faurot, lineman, Hurst-Bell; Keith Guthrie, lineman, Tyler John Tyler; Bubba Hill, running back, LaPorte; Mike Luck, running back, Houston Spring Branch; Lance McIlhenny, quarterback, Highland Park; and Scott Polk, lineman, Dallas White.

There is a good chance the two top vote-getters on the blue chip list will sign with out-of-state schools, the Times Herald said.

The 6-3, 215-pound Lewis has narrowed his choice to six schools — Colorado, UCLA, Notre Dame, Michigan, Texas A&M and SMU — said the Times Herald.

Orr, 6-2 and 225 pounds, also listed six schools: USC, UCLA, Oklahoma, Texas, Baylor and SMU.

The SWC signing date is Wednesday, Feb. 13. The national letter date is a week later.

Of the 16 blue-chippers, only two have made public commitments. Robison, recently picked as Texas' No. 1 high school player by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, said he will attend Texas A&M.

McIlhenny, whose brother Lott is a running back at SMU, said he will also become a Mustang.

Besides Robison and McIlhenny, four other Texas blue chippers were on the Parade Magazine All-America high school team — Archie, Randle, Guthrie and Williams.

man had 10 points each for the Razorbacks. Reed made two key steals in the second half to help the Razorbacks build a more comfortable edge.

Hastings had just hit a layup to make it 48-40 when Reed ignited a sellout crowd of 9,094 with a steal and stuff shot. Seconds later, Reed made another steal and delivered a bounce pass between his legs to Keith Hilliard, whose layup put the Razorbacks ahead by 12.

The Owls were not able to cut the margin to less than seven points after the two steals.

The Owls led 14-8 before the Razorbacks outscored them 9-2 during a three-minute stretch in the first half to take a 17-16 lead.

Houston 82, Baylor 71

Robert Williams and Larry Rogers combined for 43 points as Houston blew Baylor out of Hofheinz Pavilion in the first half, then hung on for an 82-71 Southwest Conference victory Saturday night.

With the score tied at 6-6 early in the game, the Cougars put it into overdrive, outscored Baylor 23-2 in the next 8:06 and took a commanding lead.

The Bears, behind a game-high 26 points from Terry Teagle, whittled the lead down to seven points midway through the second half, but Houston went into its delay offense to put the game away.

Williams tallied 23 points for the Cougars, 15 of them in the first half, with Rogers adding 20.

Houston raised its season mark to 8-9, and stands 3-4 in conference play.

The two teams are now tied for the TIAA lead with identical 3-1 conference marks.

Following the two Steensma free throws, McMurry missed three chances to win the game, but none of the attempts fell through.

In all the game was tied 11 times and the lead also changed hands on 11 separate occasions.

Kevin Wharton, who went 13-17 from the field, led LCC with 28 points. Steve Mackey had 27 points for McMurry.

In the boys' game, Brownfield won 57-44 as Dirk Bush and Ralph Rodriguez scored 12 each. Stanley Laing hit 15 for Lake View.

lumped between 13 and 11 points.

Besides Little's outside shooting (he was 11 of 19 from the field), the Raiders had a hard time getting things going. And when Jeff Taylor drew his fifth foul with 4:16 remaining, it hurt their defensive effort even more.

SMU led by as much as seven points in the second half and kept the Raiders at a three to five-point disadvantage until the final seconds of the game. Although the teams were nearly identical in the rebounding department, the Raiders committed 13 turnovers to the Ponies' seven.

"We should have been more patient at the end of the game," said Myers. "We got hurt when we kept trying to steal the ball. We had plenty of time and we didn't need to do that."

Watson Leads San Diego Field

THIRD-ROUND LEADER — Tom Watson watches his ball as he blasts from the sand trap on the sixth hole of the south course at Torrey Pines Country Club during Saturday's third-round action of the Andy Williams-San Diego Open. Watson fired a 4-under-par 68 to take a two-stroke lead heading into today's final round. (AP Laserphoto)

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Despite a less-than-spectacular finish for the third day in a row, Tom Watson managed a 4-under-par 68 and moved into a 2-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open Golf Tournament.

Watson, who has dominated pro golf for the past three seasons, had a 54-hole total of 205, 11 shots under par on the 7,002-yard South course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club course.

But it could have been much better.

Just as he did on the first two days, Watson slipped a little on the last two holes.

He missed a 10-foot birdie putt on the 17th and, after stopping to chat with a television cameraman, failed to birdie the par-5 18th.

But it didn't come easily in the chilly, breezy, cloudy weather.

Watson, the PGA's player of the year for the past three seasons and opening his 1980 campaign here, missed four greens and twice had to drop 12-foot putts to save par.

"My round revolved around the par-saving putts, and the par-5s. I birdied three of them. I said at the start of the tournament that the par-5s are the key. You have to play them under par.

"And I didn't make a bogey. If I can stay away from the bogeys tomorrow, I've got a good chance to win the golf tournament."

Lon Hinkle, a San Diego product, and veteran Ray Floyd, a former Masters and PGA champion, shared second at 207. Hinkle didn't make a bogey and didn't have a "5" on his card, which added up to 67. Floyd stayed within a single shot of the top spot most of the day, but dropped two behind with a bogey from a bunker on the 17th. He finished with a 70.

Tom Purtzer and Forrest Fezler were another shot back at 208. Purtzer had a 66, Fezler 69.

Tied at 209, 4 shots back, were Bobby Wadkins, Buddy Gardner and Keith Fergus. Wadkins and Gardner shot 69s, Fergus a 71.

Craig Stadler, a winner two weeks ago in the Bob Hope Desert Classic and the second round leader here, went to a fat 76 that left him well back at 212. Fuzzy Zoeller, the Masters titleholder and defending champion here, also took a 76 and was out of title contention at 221.

Watson, who set a single-season money-winning record of $462,000 last year, reached in two on the two par-5's on the front side and had two-putt birdies on both. He also dropped a 25-footer for a birdie, and made three good par-saving putts to forge into the lead.

He had to work hard for pars on the 11th and 12th, the latter with a 12-foot par-saving putt, then chipped to 10 feet and made birdie 4 on the 13th.

That gave him the lead alone and Floyd's bogey on the 17th put him two in front.

Watson, playing in the group behind Floyd, had a chance to stretch it out, but missed birdie opportunities on the last two holes.

French Driver To Pace Rally

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Jean Pierre Jabouille of France, driving a Renault, Saturday captured the pole position for today's Brazilian Grand Prix formula one auto race.

Another French driver, Didier Pironi of the Ligier team, was second. Canada's Gilles Villeneuve, in a Ferrari, was third best, followed by Argentina's Carlos Reutemann, in a Williams, and Ligier driver Jacques Laffite of France.

Jabouille's best-lap time of 2 minutes, 21.40 seconds over the bumpy, twisting 4.9-mile course here was set in opening time trials on Friday. It rained Saturday, and the wet track slowed down the 28 competitors in the final time trials.

Pironi was slightly over a second slower, with 2:22.42.

COLLEGE CAGE ROUNDUP

Last-Second Layup Lifts Irish To Victory

By The Associated Press

Tracy Jackson's driving layup with five seconds remaining lifted eighth-ranked Notre Dame to a 64-63 victory over No.15 Maryland Saturday in a nationally televised college basketball game.

It was the 200th career coaching victory for Notre Dame's Digger Phelps, who saw the Irish fall behind by five points in the first half and turn back a Maryland rally from seven points down in the second period.

The Terrapins' Albert King, held to just four points in the first half, hit two quick field goals in the second period after the Irish closed within one at halftime. Notre Dame slowly chipped away the lead again and finally went ahead on a pair of free throws by Bill Hanzlik.

The two teams traded baskets until a field goal by Rich Branning and two more by Orlando Woolridge gave the Irish a five-point lead with seven minutes to go.

King finished with 21 points for the Terps, now 14-3. Buck Williams and Ernest Graham added 12 apiece.

Woolridge and Jackson topped the 13-2 Irish, who were playing without leading scorer Kelly Tripucka, with 15 points, while Hanzlik finished with 14.

Virginia 49, North Carolina State 47

Lamp, who ended with a game-high 24 points, scored 10 of Virginia's last 12 points in the first half to give the Cavaliers a 34-28 advantage at intermission.

In a low-scoring second half, it took Virginia 14 minutes and 27 seconds to put 10 points on the scoreboard as both teams played deliberate ball and failed to shoot well.

Clyde Austin kept the Wolfpack alive in the second half by pouring in 10 of his team-high 14 points.

The victory left the Cavaliers, who had topped Duke 90-84 Wednesday, with a 16-3 overall record and a 5-2 mark in the ACC. N.C. State dropped to 11-5 overall and 3-4 in the conference.

North Carolina 73, Clemson 70

Rich Yonakor scored 12 of his 16 points on six straight shots and blocked a potential game-tying shot to lead 13th-ranked North Carolina to a 73-70 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory Saturday over 12th-ranked Clemson.

Al Wood added 17 points for North Carolina while John Virgil and Dave Colescott scored 12 apiece. With the victory the Tar Heels avenged a 93-76 defeat earlier this season at Clemson.

The Tigers, who now have lost all 30 times they've played at Carmichael Auditorium, were led by Billy Williams with 26 points while Larry Nance threw in 14.

The victory enabled North Carolina to remain in contention in the ACC race with a 6-3 record. The Tar Heels are now 12-4 overall.

With the loss Clemson, 4-3 in the ACC and 13-4 overall, fell two full games behind league leader Maryland and into a fourth-place tie with Duke.

Indiana 69, Purdue 58

Butch Carter scored a game-high 22 points and Isiah Thomas added 18 as Indiana defeated arch rival Purdue 69-58 in a Big Ten Conference basketball duel Saturday.

Indiana, 5-3 in the Big Ten, and 12-5 overall, grabbed the lead for good in the second half, 39-38, with 12:55 remaining on a 20-foot jump shot by Carter.

From that point, the 16th-ranked Hoosiers steadily built their lead to eight, 56-48, with 4:44 left in the game, behind the scoring of Carter and Thomas, who each had 14 in the second half.

The loss dropped No. 14 Purdue's record to 5-3 in conference and 12-5 overall. The Boilermakers cut the gap to four on a Keith Edmonson jump shot with 2:53 remaining, but Indiana countered with a 10-foot jump shot by guard Chuck Franz from the baseline with 2:10 remaining to push the Hoosier lead back to six.

Northwestern 85, Michigan 82

Senior guard Brian Gibson broke a 72-72 tie with a basket in the third overtime, then added four free throws Saturday to lead Northwestern to an 85-82 Big Ten basketball victory over Michigan.

The game was tied 64-64 after regulation play, 68-68 after the first overtime and 72-72 after the second overtime.

The Wildcats boosted their record to 2-6 in the Big Ten and 7-10 overall. Michigan fell to 3-5 and 10-7.

Illinois 74, Michigan State 65

Forward Eddie Johnson poured in 18 points to lead Illinois to a 74-65 victory over Michigan State in Big Ten basketball Saturday.

Although Johnson could hit on only four field goal attempts, the 6-foot-8 junior had 10 free throws, two of which pushed the Illini to a 57-52 lead with 4:09 remaining, and Illinois was able to stay ahead for the rest of the game.

The Illini took a 31-21 halftime lead with a good defense which forced 23 percent shooting by the Spartans. However, Michigan State scored eight straight at the outset of the second half, pulling to within 33-29 with 17:27 left.

Iowa 80, Minnesota 73

Iowa's Kenny Arnold scored a career high 27 points as the Hawkeyes downed stubborn Minnesota 80-73 in Big Ten basketball Saturday.

The victory pushed Iowa to 13-4 and 4-4 in the league. The Gophers dropped to 12-5 and 5-3.

Iowa led 41-34 at the half, but Minnesota pulled to within a point at 62-61 with six minutes, 33 seconds remaining. They took the lead briefly on a bucket by Kevin McHale, who paced the Gophers with 23 points.

But Iowa regained the lead on the next time it had the ball and two baskets by Vince Brookins and another by Arnold gave Iowa a minimum of a three-point lead for the remainder of the game.

Oklahoma 78, Missouri 73

Forward Terry Stotts hit 23 points to lead the Oklahoma Sooners to a 78-73 upset victory over No. 10 Missouri in Big Eight action here Saturday afternoon.

Oklahoma hit 29 of 36 free throws in the second half to ice the victory against the Tigers before 11,012 fans at the Lloyd Noble Arena.

The loss drops the Tigers to 15-3 overall and while the win puts the Sooners at 13-5. Both teams now stand 4-2 in the Big Eight Conference race.

Iowa State 69, Oklahoma State 60

Chuck Harmison scored 22 points and Dean Uthoff added 19 to lead Iowa State past Oklahoma State 69-60 in Big Eight Conference basketball Saturday.

Iowa State withstood a 35-point performance by Oklahoma State's Ed Odom in the regionally televised game to send its record to 8-10 for the season and 2-4 in the conference. Oklahoma State, winless in six Big Eight games, fell to 6-12.

Marquette 80, South Carolina 65

Oliver Lee and Artie Green combined for 38 points to carry Marquette to an 80-65 victory over South Carolina in a regionally televised nonconference college basketball game Saturday.

Lee scored 14 of his 20 points in the first half and Green took over with 16 of his 18 points in the second half, as the Warriors raced to their 10th win against six losses.

Cedrick Hordges scored 26 for South Carolina and Kenny Reynolds 10 as the Gamecocks fell to 11-6 and saw their 10-game home court winning streak snapped.

Washington State 80, UCLA 64

Senior forward Don Collins scored 31 points Saturday to pace Washington State to an 80-64 Pacific-10 Conference basketball victory over UCLA, snapping the Cougars' 27-game losing streak against the Bruins.

UCLA pulled within one point with eight minutes remaining in the first half, but the Cougars outscored the Bruins 17-3 during the next five minutes, and took a 36-24 lead at halftime.

The Cougars moved their conference record to 7-2 and their season mark to 15-3, while UCLA slipped to 5-4 and 10-7.

It was WSU's first basketball victory over the Bruins since February 1966, when the Cougars edged UCLA 84-83 at Pullman.

Syracuse 99, Connecticut 89

Roosevelt Bouie scored a career-high 29 points and pulled down 16 rebounds Saturday as sixth-ranked Syracuse University beat Connecticut 99-89 in a Big East Conference basketball game.

Syracuse had to come from seven points behind early in the game and started the second half with a rally that outscored Connecticut 20-6 in six minutes of play as the Orangemen registered their 54th consecutive home court victory.

The victory gave Syracuse a 2-0 record in the Big East Conference and a 17-1 record overall. Connecticut falls to 3-2 in the conference and 12-5 overall.

Utah 102, San Diego State 83

Forward Danny Vranes scored 22 points and pulled down seven rebounds as the Utah Utes took a 63-40 lead at halftime over San Diego State and coasted to a 102-83 Western Athletic Conference victory Saturday.

Carl Bankowski contributed 17 points for the Utes and Tom Chambers added 15. Chris Holden led the Aztecs with 22 points and six rebounds and Eddie Morris scored 20.

The victory raised Utah's record to 5-2 in the WAC and to 8-13 overall. San Diego State is 2-5 in conference play and is 5-13 overall.

Kentucky 56, Georgia 49

Sam Bowie and Fred Cowan scored 18 points apiece and combined to foil Georgia's slowdown tactics as fifth-ranked Kentucky held off the Bulldogs 56-49 in a Southeastern Conference basketball game Saturday night.

The victory pushed Kentucky to 17-3 overall and 7-2 in the SEC. Georgia fell to 12-5 and 5-5.

Eric Marbury's driving dunk shot gave the Bulldogs a 45-45 tie with 6:09 remaining, but the Bulldogs were unable to score again from a spread offense intended to kill the clock.

LSU 66, Florida 58

Durand Macklin came off the bench to pour in 18 points Saturday night as 11th-ranked Louisiana State held off a late Florida challenge for a 66-58 Southeastern Conference basketball victory.

The Gators trailed 47-36 early in the second half, then bounced back into the game with a 16-6 spurt to pull within a point less than nine minutes after halftime.

Hultberg knocked in 10 points in the first half, hitting on four of six from the field and finishing with 15 points. Macklin's 18 led the Tigers, 13-4 overall and 6-3 in the SEC.

Florida's Reggie Hannah led all scorers with 21 points.

Virginia Tech 97, Cincinnati 57

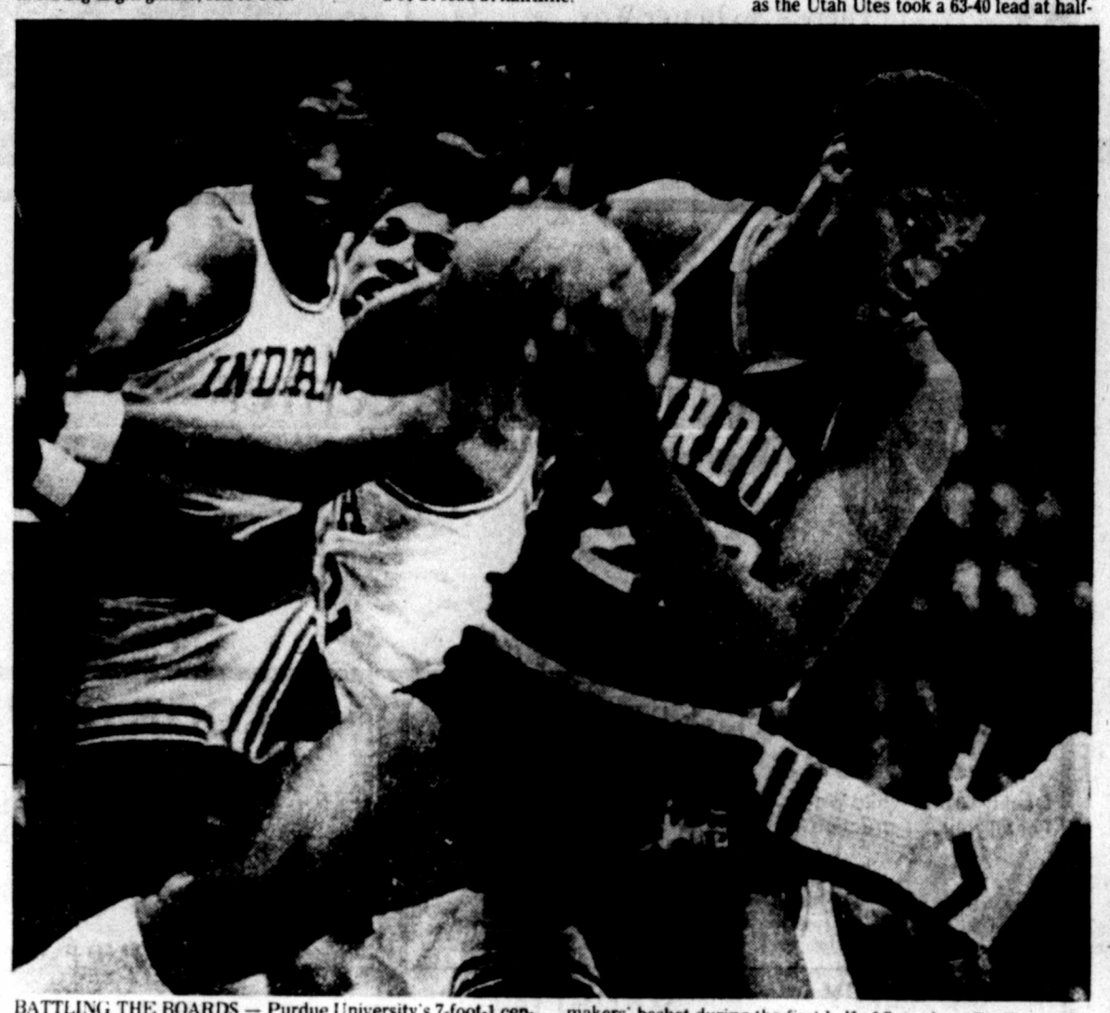

Dale Solomon and reserve Chris Scott scored six points each in a 20-2 run over an 8½-minute stretch of the first half that gave Virginia Tech a 17-point lead Saturday and the Gobblers went on to a 97-57 Metro Conference basketball rout of Cincinnati's Bearcats.

Wake Forest 67, Georgia Tech 59

Alvis Rogers scored 24 points and Mike Helm added 19 Saturday to power Wake Forest to a 67-59 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Georgia Tech.

George Washington 81, West Virginia 75

Mike Zagardo, a 6-foot-10 center, muscled his way to 26 points as George Washington University scored an 81-75 victory over host West Virginia in a regionally televised Eastern Eight game Saturday.

BATTLING THE BOARDS — Purdue University's 7-foot-1 center Joe Barry Carroll (22) battles with Indiana's Ray Tolbert (left) and Landon Turner for a rebound underneath the Boilermakers' basket during the first half of Saturday's Big Ten game in Bloomington, Ind. Holmes, Zanon To Meet

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes, still insisting there is no such thing as a warmup fight, will defend his title against a "new" Lorenzo Zanon next Sunday.

Holmes, who said a narrow win last June over Mike Weaver convinced him there are no easy heavyweight title fights, nevertheless is looking forward to a possible September title unification match against World Boxing Association titlist John Tate.

First, however, he must beat Italy's Zanon, the European heavyweight champion, and defend his title again in March against undefeated LeRoy Jones.

Zanon, undefeated in his last six fights, took a year off of boxing after knockout losses to Jerry Quarry and Ken Norton in 1977, and his American representative George Kanter claims he is now a "new" fighter.

"He feels he has a lot to prove," said Kanter. "The 'new' is not just a word or publicity gimmick. It's a well thought-out plan."

The "new" in Zanon, according to his handlers, is a "complete buildup of Zanon's body," the result of an intensive conditioning program under conditioning specialist Ruti Delvecchio.

Lilly To Join NFL's Immortals

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Defensive stars Bob Lilly, Herb Adderly and David "Deacon" Jones join Jim Otto, the Oakland Raiders' durable center, as the 1980 selections for the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The four will be enshrined into the game's shrine in ceremonies Saturday, Aug. 2, in Canton prior to the annual Hall of Fame exhibition game. The Green Bay Packers will face the San Diego Chargers in this year's contest.

Their inductions will increase the immortals in the shrine to 106.

Lilly, Otto and Jones were elected by the Hall's 29-member board of selectors in their first year of eligibility, five years after their retirements from the game. Adderley made it in his third year of eligibility.

Lilly, a Texas Christian University All-American, was the Dallas Cowboys' first ever draft choice in 1961. For the next 14 seasons he helped make the Cowboys a dominant force in the National Football League, first as a defensive end and then as a defensive tackle.

Equally effective as a pass rusher or ground defender, Lilly was the 1961 NFL rookie of the year and was an all-NFC choice every season from 1964 through 1969.

The 6-5, 260-pound product of Throckmorton even scored four touchdowns in his career, one on a 17-yard interception return and the other three on fumble recoveries. He played in 196 consecutive regular-season games.

Jones, from Eatonville, Fla., was a 14th-round draft choice of the Los Angeles Rams in 1961, but was the league's most honored defensive lineman by the late 1960s. The 6-foot-4, 272-pound end earned unanimous all-league honors for six straight years. He also performed in seven consecutive Pro Bowls.

It's difficult to imagine a player dominating his position more than the 6-2, 255-pound Otto did for the Oakland Raiders.

Voted the all-time American Football League's center, the native of Wausau, Wis., won All-AFL acclaim for 10 straight seasons and followed it by being named the NFL's All-AFC center for three more times in his 15 pro seasons.

Otto, a star linebacker-center at the University of Miami (Fla.), started in 210 straight games in regular season, but actually played in 308 games for the Raiders. He played in 73 pre-season, 13 post-season and 12 all-star contests, too.

Adderley, a 6-1, 200-pound Philadelphia native, was Green Bay's first pick in 1961 and took immediate command of the Packers' defensive backfield. Within two seasons, he won all-NFL honors and repeated four times, helping the Packers establish a dynasty under the late Vince Lombardi.

Adderley piled up 48 interceptions, returning them for 1,046 yards in his 12 seasons. His seven touchdowns on interceptions ranks second only to still-active Ken Houston of the Washington Redskins as an NFL record.

Doubling as a kickoff return specialist, Adderley played in five Pro Bowls and four of the first six Super Bowls, helping the Packers win three of them. He averaged 25.7 yards on 120 career kickoff returns, led by a 103-yard gem in 1962 and a 98-yard return in 1963.

Fouts, AFC Stars Seek Victory

HONOLULU (AP) — Record-breaking Dan Fouts of the San Diego Chargers will try to end the National Conference's two-year lock on the Pro Bowl today when he quarterbacks the American Conference in the National Football League's all-star showcase.

Fouts, who passed for 4,082 yards in 1979 to break Joe Namath's single-season mark of 4,007 yards, will be backed up in the AFC backfield by Super Bowl quarterback Terry Bradshaw of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The NFC has a 5-4 edge over the AFC in this series, having won the last two games, including the 1979 edition by a score of 13-7 in Los Angeles when Roger Staubach of Dallas completed nine of 15 passes for 125 yards, including the 19-yard game-winning scoring toss in the third period to Cowboy teammate Tony Hill.

The narrow NFC edge is in striking contrast to the AFC's overwhelming domination in regular-season and Super Bowl play. In interconference games in 1979, the AFC won 36 of 52 games, the seventh year in the past eight (the eighth being a 19-19-2 tie) that the AFC has won the season series. In 10 years the AFC edge is 214-180 with six ties.

And in the Super Bowl, the AFC has won seven of the past eight games (Pittsburgh four, Miami two and Oakland one) with the Cowboys the only NFC winner in that stretch.

The game in 49,800-seat Aloha Stadium is a sellout, only the second sellout in the series since it became an AFC-NFC rivalry (Seattle's fans packed the Kingdome two years ago). It's also the second NFL game played in this stadium, which features stands which move on cushions of air to adapt to baseball, football or other events. In 1976, the San Francisco 49ers beat the Chargers 17-16 here in an exhibition game.

Joining Fouts in the AFC backfield is second-year pro Earl Campbell, whose 1,697 yards in 1979 gave him his second straight NFL rushing title, and Franco Harris of the Steelers. Fouts' primary pass targets will be John Jefferson, his bespectacled teammate on the Chargers, John Stallworth of the Steelers and tight end Dave Casper of Oakland.

The Steelers dominate the AFC squad with seven starters — Stallworth, Harris, center Mike Webster, defensive end L.C. Greenwood, defensive tackle Joe Greene, linebacker Jack Lambert and safety Donnie Shell. An eighth starter, linebacker Jack Ham, was knocked off the squad by an injury. Bradshaw and cornerback Mel Blount of the Steelers occupy backup roles on the AFC squad.

Staubach is making his fifth appearance as an NFC Pro Bowl quarterback, with Archie Manning of the New Orleans Saints in reserve. His starting wide receivers are Minnesota's Ahmad Rashad and Harold Carmichael of Philadelphia (Tony Hill of the Cowboys is a reserve) and Henry Childs of the Saints is the starting tight end.

Staubach and Hill are two of seven Cowboys on the Pro Bowl team. The others are starting tackle Pat Donovan and reserve guard Herbert Scott on offense and, on defense, starting tackle Randy White, reserve end Harvey Martin, reserve safety Cliff Harris and reserve linebacker Bob Breunig.

The NFC's starting running backs are Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears, second to Campbell in NFL rushing with 1,610 yards in 1979, and Ottis Anderson, the sensation of the St. Louis Cardinals whose 1,605 yards shattered the rookie record of 1,450 Campbell set in 1978.

Rozelle Threatens To Leave Raiders Off 1980 Schedule

LOS ANGELES (AP) — National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle has warned the Oakland Raiders that if the team shifts to Los Angeles without the league's sanction, it could be scratched from the 1980 NFL schedule.

According to documents made public Friday, even with NFL approval, the Raiders' bid to replace the Anaheim-bound Rams could include costly conditions against the Raiders for at least five years.

In a letter dated Jan. 10 to Raiders co-managing general partner Al Davis, Rozelle outlined the NFL's possible responses to such a move.

The letter was among documents filed Friday by Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum attorneys in connection with the Coliseum's antitrust suit against the NFL pending in U.S. District Court here.

In the letter, Rozelle noted the NFL office "will shortly have to begin making up the 1980 NFL schedule. Unless the clubs approve a transfer, the constitution and by-laws of the NFL will not permit this office to prepare a schedule calling for the Oakland Raiders to play their home games in a location other than Oakland."

Commission lawyers, saying the letter bolsters their case, contend its intent was to "intimidate Mr. Davis from moving or even from applying to the owners for permission to move his franchise."

The comission has asked for a preliminary injunction to bar the NFL from blocking a Raiders move to Los Angeles. A Feb. 4 hearing has been set.

The commission argues that an NFL rule that says a move must be approved by 21 of the 28 league teams is a violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. Davis has stated that such a vote is not necessary.

In the letter to Davis, Rozelle added that even with league permission to move, the owners could impose financial sanctions requiring the Raiders to guarantee visiting teams proceeds "equivalent to those now being returned in Oakland for a future period, perhaps through the 1984 Olympics."

The teams could also require the Raiders to bear the burden of any reduction in television proceeds and be accountable for and hold the league harmless against any legal actions that may result from the move.

It was also revealed Friday that Davis has demanded from the commission that a non-refundable payment of several million dollars be made to the Raiders upon consummation of an agreement to move.

However, commission attorney Stephen Reinhardt said that the commission is "unwilling to agree" to this demand.

American, Cuban Boxers Plan Series Of Bouts

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — American and Cuban amateur boxers will meet in Charlotte Feb. 10 for a series of bouts which will feature Cuban heavywight Teofilo Stevenson and U.S. Olympic hopeful Bernard Taylor of Charlotte.

The ABC television network is scheduled to broadcast about an hour and a half of the 12-bout event live on its "Wide World of Sports" program.

"This is the biggest international boxing event this year in the United States," said Mac Passmore, southeast regional director for the U.S. Amateur Athletic Association.

The U.S. hasn't chosen an Olympic boxing team yet, and the Charlotte event could be the biggest international boxing competition of the year if American teams boycott the Moscow Olympics.

Stevenson, who some boxing experts regard as the world's greatest amateur heavyweight, will lead the Cuban Olympic team in the match against a U.S. squad which will include sevreral medalists from last year's Pan American games.

Drought Sinks Lady Chaps

ABILENE (Special) — Droughts strike the Lubbock Christian College women's basketball team and the Sahara desert with about the same regularity.

And, if you're a Chaparral fan, with similar results.

LCC, which was blown out Friday night by the score of 100-39, went almost 10 minutes without scoring Saturday night to fall short once again, this time by a 78-49 count to McMurry College.

The Lady Chaparrals led at one point in the game, going up 6-0 at the start and maintaining that advantage until 11:10 remained in the first half.

But a dry spell blew in and took care of that.

The Chaps, now 4-12 on the year and 2-3 in the TIAA, only took 16 shots at the basket in the first half and 40 in the game. They connected for 17 field goals.

Leading the LCC scoring parade was Darla Lynch with 15 points. Sherry Brown and JoAnn Phillips contributed 10 points apiece.

Four girls, including former Monterey High School standout Rebekah James, scored in double figures for McMurry. The Indians, now 12-9 overall and 4-1 in TIAA play, got 17 from Miss James, 14 from Dyana Teeter, 13 from Tammy Gober and 10 from Belinda Sladek.

Lubbock Christian College travels to Alpine Monday night to take on Sul Ross.

Thin Kid Now Spurs' 'Iceman'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A sympathetic high school janitor struck a deal 11 years ago in Detroit with a gangling, painfully skinny kid who wanted to be a basketball player.

The kid would sweep the gym floor. In return, the janitor would bend the rules and let the kid use the gym until he got off work at midnight. Then Robert Wilkerson would drive the kid home to keep him off the ghetto streets.

The kid was George Gervin — the San Antonio Spurs' "Iceman" who is working on his third consecutive National Basketball Association scoring title.

"I'd shoot between 500 and 1,000 shots every night," recalled Gervin. "That constant practice has to be the key to my success now. I was alone in the gym for hours; Mr. Wilkerson was down the halls cleaning up.

"It gave me my solitude, the chance to work on my game by myself. There was nothing but me and my imagination, nobody to bother me.

"There's no telling what kind of shots I used to try in there. I would imagine hitting a last-second shot. I'd run up and down the court, shooting layups, twisting and spinning, and then I'd shoot jump shots from all over the floor. I'd practice and practice. I still like to practice.

"Mr. Wilkerson wasn't really supposed to let me use the gym. I don't think the coach ever really knew about it," he added.

It's that endless variety of shots — feathery jumpers and whirling-dervish layups — that gave Gervin the NBA scoring championship for two consecutive seasons. No other NBA guard has ever done it.

And this year, the 6-foot-7, 185-pound Gervin is having only his best season ever. He is averaging more than 33 points per game and holds a commanding lead over Lloyd Free in the scoring race. He also led the NBA All-Star balloting this season for the second consecutive year.

Gervin has scored nearly 14,000 points in less than eight ABA and NBA seasons. His .533 shooting percentage is second on the all-time NBA list behind Wilt Chamberlain.

Gervin poured in 63 points in a game two years ago, once scored 52 last season, hit 53 points two weeks ago and scored 55 Wednesday against Indiana.

"I think he's the best scorer I've ever seen. That includes everybody, (Bob) McAdoo and Chamberlain," said San Antonio coach Doug Moe, a pro player or coach since the early 1960s.

"If he played today, Chamberlain, because he's a big guy, maybe could score with Ice. It's hard to say. But Ice has such a tremendous variety of shots," added Moe. "He can shoot from anywhere on the floor. Inside, outside, it doesn't matter. He has his limitations in other areas, such as defense. But nobody can score with him."

But the NBA star with all those heady statistics and compliments was only 5-foot-8 and even skinnier in 1968 when basketball first became an obsession. Nature was quite accommodating, and Gervin shot up to 6-6 in the summer before his junior year at Martin Luther King High School.

His mother scraped to raise George and his five brothers and sisters in the grinding poverty of Detroit's black ghetto. Gervin now has a long-term contract worth a reported $350,000 per year. Much of it has gone to his mother, but it's a subject he'd rather avoid now.

"We had it rough. But those times are over. There's no reason to dwell on them now. I don't mind you asking, but it's personal. I think you understand," said Gervin.

"Basketball was my outlet. That's where my heart was. A lot of people didn't have that, and they got into drugs and into trouble. I'm a lucky guy. I thank God every day for it."

Gervin averaged 30 points per game at King and was signed by Eastern Michigan. He had trouble there, once punching an opposing player. It was a rare crack in the calm demeanor that later earned him the "Iceman" nickname.

He was forced to leave Eastern Michigan after his sophomore season, and caught on with a semi-pro team in Pontiac, Michigan.

"That really made me have to work hard. It put the word 'struggle' in front of me," said Gervin.

A scout for the ABA's Virginia Squires saw him score 50 points one night, and the Squires quickly signed him as a forward late in the 1972-73 season.

The Spurs bought his contract the next season. The team joined the NBA in 1976.

Gervin was scoring more than 20 points per game at forward, but blossomed into the league champion when a 1976 knee injury to star James Silas forced Moe to move Gervin to guard.

Gervin scored 63 points in the 1978 finale to narrowly win his first scoring championship over Denver's David Thompson, who had hit 73 points a few hours earlier. Gervin won handily last season with a 29.6 average.

"The second one was the hardest. It was easy for people to say the first one was a fluke, a matter of luck. After the second time, people saw it wasn't. Now, I think they expect it.

"I don't know if I can win it a third time or not. Even though my stats are the best this year, the team isn't doing as well. I've had scoring titles, but I've never played on a NBA championship team. That's what I want. That's my main concern."

Haffner Joins Georgia Staff

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — George Haffner, offensive coordinator at Texas A&M, has been named to the same post at the University of Georgia, Coach Vince Dooley announced Saturday.

Haffner, 38, spent one year at Texas A&M and previously served as offensive coordinator at Florida State, Pittsburgh and Iowa State. He will replace Bill Pace, who resigned to become assistant head coach at Tennessee.

"We are pleased to have George join our staff to head up our offense," said Dooley. "He is regarded as one of the best offensive coaches in the country and an exceptional teacher of the fundamentals of quarterback play."

Haffner played quarterback and defensive back at McNeese State.

State Crane Survey Continues

By J.D. PEER
TP&WD Information Officer

Recent measurements from harvested cranes indicate that hunters are bagging the lesser sandhill crane as predicted by personnel of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

"This measurement survey is being conducted in Texas and other states hosting a sandhill crane season for hunters," said Max Traweek, P&WD waterfowl biologist. He noted, "We are taking wing, leg and beak measurements from harvested cranes and, when possible, the weight and sex of each bird."

The biologist hopes to measure at least 100 birds prior to the close of the lesser sandhill crane season to determine the exact number of each species bagged. When this data is completed, comparisons can be made with earlier data collected over the past years on the three subspecies of cranes wintering in Texas. This type of crane measurement program will most likely be conducted at regular intervals for several years to monitor the crane harvest.

Recording accurate crane populations is extremely difficult due to the continual daily movement of the cranes and the extreme weather conditions common to north Texas.

The lesser sandhill crane season in both Zone A and B will continue through Wednesday. The daily bag limit of lesser cranes is set at three birds and each hunter is required a Federal Sandhill Crane Permit available from the P&WD.

Safeties Important Gun Part

RIVERSIDE, Connecticut — Dedicated scattergunners may get in endless discussions about the relative merits of various gauges, action types or chokes and loads, but rarely does the talk center on one important feature — the shotgun's safety mechanism. And from a safety standpoint, it's a feature all shotgunners should be thoroughly familiar with.

Whether it's located on top of the tang or on the trigger guard, a safety should never be relied on as foolproof. As with any other mechanical device, it cannot guarantee safety.

For example, if a loaded shotgun is dropped, in some circumstances the safety may not be sufficient to prevent the firing pin from striking the shotshell and firing the gun. Thus, in climbing a tree or crossing a fence, you should unload your gun. The best way to view your shotgun's safety is as an added safety device, but not a device that permits you to ignore the basic rules of safe gun handling.

The only time your shotgun should be loaded is when you're in the field and hunting. When you do load, be sure your next move is to place the safety on the "safe" position, and don't take it off until just before you shoot. If a bird flares or gets out of range before you can get a shot off, remember to put your safety back on before you continue. Never have your finger near the trigger when the safety is being moved to the "fire" position.

Magazine Attacks TP&WD As Run For State 'Fat Cats'

In the February issue of Outdoor Life, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is described as suffering from a demoralized staff and a warped set of priorities.

The magazines's editor-at-large, Richard Starnes, writes: "The agency is heavily skewed toward law enforcement, to the detriment of creative game management."

Starnes' article states that TP&WD priorities take care of big-ranch interests at the expense of good management. "Big money and bad politics are behind it all," states the article.

The article also notes: "The agency has, many observers insist, been sadly remiss in protecting Texas' once lavish natural endowments."

John M. Culler, editor of the national magazine, published by Times Mirror Magazines, Inc., stated in a public letter to outdoor editors, "I think, after reading the article, you'll agree that the point of the story is not to knock Texas but to perform a service for Texas outdoorsmen and women — and for sportsmen all over the country. All too often the hard-won tax dollar of the hunter and fisherman goes to an organization that is not accountable in terms of what it does for game management."

State Record Bass Hoped For Before First of March

AUSTIN — The prediction of a new Texas state record largemouth bass this year appears closer to reality than ever, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Two big bass caught during the past month came the closest yet to the 37-year-old record of 13 pounds, eight ounces. During the past few weeks a 200-acre private lake in Northeast Texas produced bass of 12-2, 12-8, and 12-9. The 12 pound, nine ounce fish was caught by Gayland Woolridge of Richardson on January 10. Woolridge's fish apparently is the largest bass landed in the state since H.R. Magee of Kingsland hauled in his state record fish from Medina Lake in 1943.

Virtually all the 12-pound-plus largemouths caught in Texas in the past year have been confirmed by scale counts as the Florida strain of bass stocked by the department.

The unnamed East Texas lake currently grabbing the headlines for big bass is closed to the public, noted fishery biologist Alan Forshage of Tyler. Only lakeside landowners and guests are allowed to fish there. "However, our calculations show that there are some 14-pound bass in Monticello, which is a public reservoir, and I hope the new record will be set by February or March," Forshage said.

Judge Refuses To Halt Bruin Suspensions

By The Associated Press

The Boston Bruins failed in U.S. District Court Saturday night in a bid to gain a restraining order by gametime to stay the suspensions of three of their players by the National Hockey League.

Judge Robert Keeton denied the Bruins' motion after a hearing in the Boston court that lasted slightly more than an hour. The unusual Saturday session ended less than an hour before the Bruins met the Penguins in Pittsburgh.

Judge Keeton upheld the contention by the NHL that the Bruins had not exhausted all administrative remedies, specifically in appealing to the Board of Governors of the league.

James St. Clair, a prominent Boston attorney, who represented the National Hockey League, argued successfully that the Bruins should have appealed to the Board of Governors for a stay before seeking court relief.

A battery of team lawyers, led by James Dittmar, went into court for the Bruins seeking to stay the suspension of the three players until a hearing by the league next week.

"Right now I don't know what our next move will be," Paul Mooney, president of the Bruins, told The Associated Press.

Mooney decided on the court action Saturday afternoon.

Mooney's action followed by hours Friday's suspension by NHL President John Ziegler of Bruins players Terry O'Reilly, Mike Milbury and Peter McNab for their participation in a Dec. 23 altercation with spectators in the stands at Madison Square Garden.

O'Reilly was suspended without pay for eight games, and Milbury and McNab for six games each for their part on the disturbance.

The team president added the Bruins had appealed to the league for a hearing on the matter and "we have been advised by Mr. Ziegler he is attempting to provide that hearing next week — possibly Wednesday."

While Mooney expressed shock over the Ziegler's decision and said he "would not accept" the disciplinary measures, he said Saturday he would not attempt to have the suspended athletes play against Pittsburgh if the restraining order were not granted.

"I don't think that would be in anyone's interest, or in the best interests of conducting an NHL game," he said.

However, prior to taking his action Saturday, Mooney lashed out at the NHL president, saying his ruling was "unjustified and not supported by the facts.

"We do not accept his (Ziegler's) findings .. these findings are a whitewash and a discredit to the principles of fair play," he told the Boston Globe.

In an effort to bolster the Bruins' lineup against the losses of the three players, defenseman Brad Park — out with knee problems the entire season — was to be in uniform Saturday night while left wing John Wensink was to return early from a hand injury and right wing Tom Songin was promoted from the minor leagues.

Mooney told the Globe Ziegler's action "somehow makes the Bruins' players both the victims and scapegoats of an unprovoked attack."

The "attack" to which Mooney referred came when a spectator leaned over a walkway adjacent to the Garden ice surface and punched Boston left wing Stan Jonathan in the face as Bruins and New York Rangers players exchanged words after a 4-3 Boston triumph Dec. 23.

The punch sparked a charge by Bruins players — led by O'Reilly — into the Garden stands to scuffle with the antagonist, who also took a stick from one of the players and began swinging it.

"The League expects and demands of the employees of all clubs and the League that they decline from any confrontation with fans, regardless of the provocation," Ziegler's decision said in part. "The League insists ... it can recognize no exception to this rule, nor justification for its violation."

As a result, O'Reilly was suspended (effective Saturday night) and fined $500 — the maximum allowable financial penalty under NHL by-laws — with a lesser suspension but the same fines assessed McNab and Milbury.

Miss Wenzel Takes Huge Cup Lead

MEGEVE, France (AP) — Liechtenstein's Hanni Wenzel beat the world's top women skiers by more than five seconds in a giant slalom Saturday and soared into an almost unbeatable lead in the race for the second World Cup of her career.

By decisively defeating all rivals in each of the two heats, Miss Wenzel also reasserted herself as the unchallenged favorite in the slalom and giant slalom events at the Lake Placid Winter Olympics next month.

She dominated the women's section of the two events in the same way that Sweden's triple World Cup winner and current leader Ingemar Stenmark has dominated the men's section for most of the past four years.

Saturday's race was Miss Wenzel's fourth World Cup giant slalom victory in succession this season. She also has won the last two World Cup slalom races.

Miss Wenzel's time for the two heats was 2 minutes, 30.37 seconds.

Official standings in the World Cup gave her an almost insurmountable lead of 44 points over her archrival, Austria's Annemarie Moser-Proell, with only six World Cup events still to come this season. All the remaining events are in her specialty, slalom or giant slalom.

Miss Wenzel has 300 points and Miss Moser-Proell 256.

The 23-year-old Miss Wenzel previously won the World Cup in 1978. In 1975 and again last year, Miss Moser-Proell trounced her into second place, but in every year since 1973 she has placed among the top 10.

"I have never felt in better form," she said triumphantly after winning both 52-gate runs, each with a total drop of 350 meters. "I must say I was lucky, too. I hope my luck holds until I get to Lake Placid."

France's Perrine Pelen, winner of Friday's slalom race, was third and fourth, respectively, in the two heats behind Miss Wenzel. Miss Pelen took second place overall in 2:35.39, 5.02 seconds behind the winner. It was one of the largest giant slalom victory margins on record.

Marie-Therese Nadig of Switzerland took third place in 2:35.44, only one-twentieth of a second behind Miss Pelen.

Miss Moser-Proell placed 10th and ninth, respectively, in the two heats and finished ninth overall.

American women had a much better day than in Friday's slalom, when five of the six starters were upset by rain and fog and abandoned the race.

Christin Cooper of Sun Valley, Idaho, was eighth in the first heat and seventh in the second, to finish sixth place in 2:36.85, 6.48 seconds behind the winner.

"I'm delighted," she said as she learned her excellent result. "It proves that our sad performance yesterday was just an accident."

Tamara McKinney of Olympic Valley, Calif., was behind Miss Cooper in seventh place in 2:36.98, 6.77 seconds off the pace. Viki Fleckenstein of Syracuse, N.Y., the only American woman to finish Friday's slalom, was 12th in 2:37.78, 7.41 seconds behind. Cindy Nelson of Lutsen, Minn., was 14th in 2:38.59 and Heidi Preuss of Lakeport, N.H., was 30th, 11.34 seconds back.

Rockets Knock Off Champs As Malone Scores 35

By the Associated Press

Center Moses Malone poured in 35 points and rookie guard Allen Leavell added 17 to lead the Houston Rockets to a 123-111 win Saturday over the reigning National Basketball Association champion Seattle SuperSonics.

The Rockets led 62-57 at the half. Malone, the game's leading scorer, hit 16 points to boost Houston to a 97-83 lead at the end of three quarters.

With 8:07 left, the Rockets held a solid 108-87 advantage.

Seattle fought back, outscoring Houston 14-5 in the next six minutes, but got no closer than 119-11 with 54 seconds remaining.

The Sonics never regained their first quarter shooting touch, when they shot 81 percent from the field. Seattle wound up shooting 48 percent for the game.

Murphy netted 18 points for Houston. Gus Williams led Seattle with 26 and Lonnie Shelton added 17.

Pacers 115, Cavaliers 114

The Indiana Pacers' Mike Bantom was credited with the winning basket on a goal tending call with 13 seconds to play to boost the Pacers to a 115-114 triumph over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Mickey Johnson scored 37 points to pace the Pacers.

As Cleveland tried to come back, Willie Smith lost the ball out of bounds with eight seconds to play. But Cleveland's Randy Smith stole an Indiana inbounds pass. Smith raced downcourt but missed an easy layup that would have given Cleveland the lead.

The ball went out of bounds off an Indiana player with three seconds to go, giving Cleveland one last possession. The Pacers double-teamed Mike Mitchell and deflected an inbounds pass to him as time ran out.

The lead exchanged hands 11 times in the first half, as Cleveland led 68-66 at the half. In the third quarter the score was tied five times, with Cleveland clinging to a 90-88 lead as the period ended.

Neither team could take command, as the score was tied five more times in the fourth period, leading up to the the final climactic seconds.

Hawks 109, Bulls 104

Eddie Johnson scored 25 points and Dan Roundfield added 23 as the Atlanta Hawks held on to defeat the Chicago Bulls 109-104.

The victory snaps a five-game losing streak for the Hawks and ups their lead to a full game over the San Antonio Spurs in the Central Division. The Bulls loss was their first in their last four outings.

The victory also sets up Sunday's nationally-televised game between the Hawks and the Spurs in the battle for the Central Division lead.

Reggie Theus brought Chicago to within a basket, 106-104, with one minute left in the game, converting a driving layup and free throw after being fouled on the play.

The first half saw eight lead changes and the score tied on 16 other occasions. But the Hawks exploded in the third quarter to build their biggest lead of the night, 72-57, with 5:45 left in the period.

Kings 112, Jazz 107

Otis Birdsong scored 25 points as the Kansas City Kings held off a late Utah surge and defeated the Jazz, 112-107.

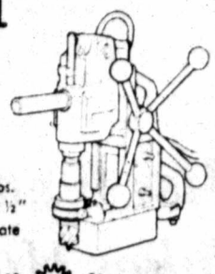

The Kings jumped to a 88-64 lead with 49 seconds remaining in the third quarter when Ernie Grunfeld hit a jumper, then the Jazz scored 12 unanswered points to close to 88-76.

The Kings quickly put together an 11-2 spurt early in the final quarter to take what seemed like a comfortable 99-78 advantage. The Jazz then began to chip away, although the final margin was as close as they ever came in the second half.

Grunfeld and Sam Lacy each had 15 points for the Kings, who increased their lead in the Midwest Division to four games over the idle Milwaukee Bucks.

Second Patrolman To Assume Duties With Abernathy Police

By RICHIE D. REECER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ABERNATHY — Though the current police force of this South Plains community soon will be doubled, it still will be smaller than the three-man force of previous years.

Since last November, when Police Chief Clyde Vandygriff was fired and patrolman Joe Zuniga resigned, Abernathy has been operating with a one-man police department in the form of patrolman Floyd Bankston.

However, City Manager Rod Ellis says that situation will change Friday, when a second patrolman is to assume his duties with the Abernathy Police Department.

But in an effort to save money, Ellis said, a third officer will not be hired, and, for the time being, a police chief will not be named.

Ellis explained that the City Council has felt for quite a while that this town of about 3,000 could get by with only two police officers, and statistics seem to lend support to that belief.

Since the city has been under the protection of its one-man force, the only major crime has been a semi-successful burglary in which a clock was taken. Ellis said a burglar or burglars broke into a gin office, and, failing to get the soft drink machine open, absconded with the clock.

"We are not without police protection," Ellis said, pointing out that a Hale County deputy sheriff and two officers of the Department of Public Safety make their homes in Abernathy.

Of the $125,000 in ad valorem taxes collected by the city last year, $90,000 was spent on the police department, Ellis said. He cited the large expenditure as a primary reason the force is being reduced to two men.

"The police budget was eating us up," Ellis said. "You've got to set your priorities."

Former Police Chief Vandygriff was dismissed by the city council in late November 1979, because the council "had no confidence in his ability to function as chief," Ellis said. He added that on occasion Vandygriff had reacted negatively to the council's "interference" in the affairs of the police department.

Patrolman Zuniga resigned about two weeks later, Ellis said. The resignation was not related to the chief's firing, he said.

In the meantime, Ellis said, several persons have applied for the job with the police department, but Ellis says he has been waiting for the right applicant.

"A lot of them would work for free just to carry the gun," Ellis said. "We don't need that kind of law enforcement here."

Mayor Pete Thompson agreed. "We wanted to hire the best man available for money we can offer," he said.

Ellis said a major problem for Abernathy and other small towns is hiring and keeping good police officers. Many of the better officers use the experience they gain in small towns to find higher-paying jobs in larger cities.

"Towns like Abernathy are training grounds (for policemen)," Ellis said. Smaller towns can't offer the same salaries and fringe benefits as larger communites do, the manager said.

Though two officers cannot be expected to patrol the streets of Abernathy 24 hours a day, seven days a week, Ellis said a schedule to provide adequate police protection is being worked out.

At least one officer will be on patrol during "high-risk times," including nights and early morning hours, Ellis said. Patrols also will be made at various times of the day, Ellis said, adding that the police department has a radio dispatcher on duty 24 hours per day.

The city manager said even the three-man force was unable to patrol the town every minute of every day. At least five officers would be required to have a "good rotating system," Ellis said.

Ellis also adamantly denied local rumors that he personally was running the police department, but, he said, the city manager is ultimately responsible for all city departments, both administratively and financially.

City administrators don't plan to name a police chief, at least for a while, Ellis said. One of the two officers, Bankston or the incoming patrolman (who was not named), will be put "in charge," the city manager said.

But a chief may be named in the future, Thompson said, adding that Bankston has not been ruled out for the job.

One city hall critic has said the council won't name Bankston chief because of an incident May 31, 1976, when Bankston shot and killed a Mexican-American man in an apparent burglary attempt at a local service station.

The critic said the council is afraid naming Bankston chief would arouse the anger of the Mexican-American community here.

Thompson, however, denied the charge, saying, "He (Bankston) communicates real well with them (minority groups)."

Thompson also said no Mexican Americans or blacks have ever complained to him about Bankston's conduct as a police officer.

HELPING HAND — W.R. Moss, president of the Lubbock County Society for Crippled Children, helps 2-year-old Juan Montalvo Jr., navigate a runner at the Lubbock Cerebral Palsy and Neuromuscular Center. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Juan Montalvo, 1207 47th St. The crippled children's society recently kicked off its annual fund raising drive.

Fund Drive For Crippled Children's Needs Under Way

Lubbock County Society for Crippled Children has opened its 48th consecutive fund-raising drive, asking public support for its volunteer program to rehabilitate handicapped children.

Half the money collected will be used to provide transportation to medical centers and purchase wheelchairs, braces and other equipment needed by handicapped. The remainder will be given to the Lubbock Cerebral Palsy and Neuromuscular Center for its operational budget, according to Society President W.R. Moss.

The center is a joint project of the crippled childrens' society and the Rotary Club of Lubbock. Moss called it "a pioneer in developing and instigating successful treatment for crippled children."

Because the society has no national or state affiliation, all money collected during the once-yearly fund raising drive will be used in Lubbock, Moss emphasized.

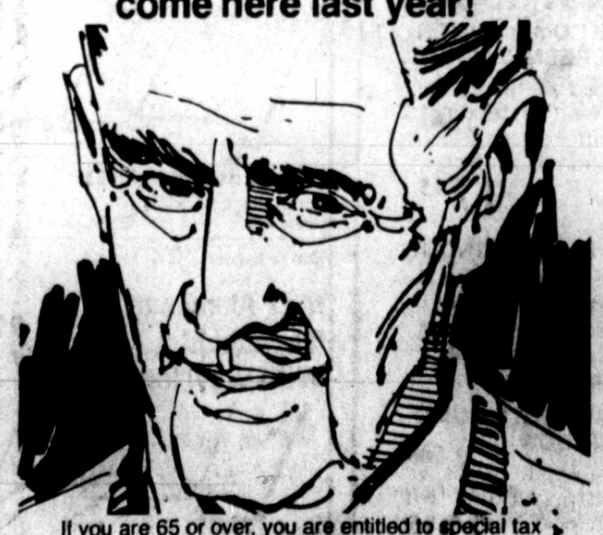

London Rated Most Expensive City

LONDON (AP) — London has become the world's most expensive city, the Financial Times newspaper reported Saturday. The British capital was in 11th place last year and 38th place four years ago.

Peking is the biggest bargain, according to the paper's annual index for 66 major cities — based on the cost of a bed, breakfast and a la carte dinner in a first-class hotel, a lunch, a snack, a whisky and a three-mile taxi ride. Peking's rates are less than 25 percent of those in London.

Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, is second on the list, followed by Paris, Frankfurt and Brussels.

Plainview Man Operates Unique 'Trading Post'

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PLAINVIEW — "McDonald Trading Post — Everything from Caterpillars to Canteens — If We Don't Have It, You Don't Need It."

And if you don't have a firetruck, a 12-foot-long hydraulic cylinder, a 1940s steamroller, a canteen or caterpillar and want one, you can find it at the unique business called McDonald Trading Post in south Plainview.

"Trading post" is really an inadequate description of the enterprise run by owner-creator Pete McDonald; it is actually a conglomeration of businesses handling supplies for oil and water well drillers, gins, chemical plants, machine shops and builders in addition to a fascinating array of odds and ends that McDonald has collected over the past 40 years.

The 6-foot-5 John Wayne-esque proprietor has a simple enough job description for himself: "I'm a junk dealer."

Relaxing back into the swivel chair in the office of the main building on the 18-acre complex, McDonald rubs a hand over his bald head and says, "I've got this office, but I don't spend 10 minutes a day in here."

The main building is 330 feet long, 60 feet wide and crammed full of nuts, bolts, wheels, hoses, ladders, electric motors, lathes, drill presses, a milling machine from the El Reno, Okla., federal penitentiary, hammers, ax handles, water pumps and gear boxes.

Yards on both sides of South Carolina Street are jammed with school buses, trucks, cranes, caterpillars, golf carts, asphalt rollers, forklifts and fire trucks.

There are a couple of warehouses and a shop in back of the main building.

Across the street, Evalene's Imports, run by Mrs. McDonald, is moving to new and bigger quarters in a large new building on the north side of the main structure.

Evalene's handles interior decoration items imported from around the world as well as from various parts of the United States.

McDonald has stored a lot of things in the back of the old Evalene's building, including some 980-pound packed parachutes, and he looks forward to having the whole building when the move is completed.

Mrs. McDonald kept books for her husband for several years but told a Plainview newspaper interviewer a few years ago, "I still don't understand what's going on."

thing they want and with people who come in for something they need but end up staying longer to look and buy more.

"I figure it's 65 percent show and 35 percent sale," he said. "If most of it was worth anything, I couldn't keep an inventory like this."

McDonald came to Plainview from Lockney with his family in 1933 and went through the eighth grade in school.

His father, John W. McDonald, was an auctioneer, and the trading post began with unsold goods from auctions.

"We started with $100 and a 6-by-12 building on a Model T chassis," he said. "We sold everything from hammer handles to brown beans."

He served in the Pacific as an Army Air Corps aircraft mechanic during World War II, went to Riesch Auctioneer College in Mason City, Iowa, after the war, and worked as an auctioneer until the postwar military surplus business began taking up all of his time.

He started traveling more than 125,000 miles per year in search of things to sell, he said, while his father and a brother sold them. Sole owner since his father retired in 1958, he still travels extensively and has been all over the world.

He and his wife take a vacation every year and have been to the Bahamas, Acapulco and other vacation spots around the world in recent years.

Mrs. McDonald has been to Europe a couple of times without him because he is not particularly interested in Europe. "Once you've seen one of them Catholic churches a million years old, you've seen 'em all," he explains.

The main thing he enjoys, it appears, is sweat-pulling, back-straining hard work.

He is at the trading post while it is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and often works on Sunday afternoons. He averages working 12 hours a day, he said, and until the past few years routinely worked until "8 — 10 — 12 o'clock at night."

He and another man built the metal and tin main building in 1955 and painted it with yellow road-striping paint he had bought for 55 cents per gallon. He later painted the first Evalene's Imports building with it.

"I've always worked hard," he said. "It's a hell of a lot easier to do something yourself than it is to get somebody else to do it.

"It ain't hurt me a hell of a lot, I don't think. That's what's wrong with most people. They want to get paid, but they don't want to work."

Asked if at some point he decided to make his business as big as possible, he said, "No, I just enjoyed adding on.

"Money don't mean anything to me. This pile of junk out here," he said, waving at the yard alongside the building, "means 10 times as much to me as the money would.

The McDonald enterprises have a total of nine employees, including son David, 27, who earned a degree in business management at Texas Tech University in Lubbock before coming home to learn the family business.

The other McDonald son, Larry, is a Plainview bank executive.

Most of a shipment of 380 barrels of soap from South Korea has been sold to laundries, and the early 1940s asphalt roller on the yard is the only one left of several he has sold over the past few years.

Much of what he stocks, McDonald admits, is bought cheaply and is more for show than profit. In other words, he figures to do a lot of business with people who come just to look and find something they want.

In other words, he figures to do a lot of business with people who come just to look and find something they want and with people who come in for something they need but end up staying longer to look and buy more.

"I figure it's 65 percent show and 35 percent sale," he said. "If most of it was worth anything, I couldn't keep an inventory like this."

McDonald came to Plainview from Lockney with his family in 1933 and went through the eighth grade in school.

His father, John W. McDonald, was an auctioneer, and the trading post began with unsold goods from auctions.

"We started with $100 and a 6-by-12 building on a Model T chassis," he said. "We sold everything from hammer handles to brown beans."

He served in the Pacific as an Army Air Corps aircraft mechanic during World War II, went to Riesch Auctioneer College in Mason City, Iowa, after the war, and worked as an auctioneer until the postwar military surplus business began taking up all of his time.

He started traveling more than 125,000 miles per year in search of things to sell, he said, while his father and a brother sold them. Sole owner since his father retired in 1958, he still travels extensively and has been all over the world.

He and his wife take a vacation every year and have been to the Bahamas, Acapulco and other vacation spots around the world in recent years.

Mrs. McDonald has been to Europe a couple of times without him because he is not particularly interested in Europe. "Once you've seen one of them Catholic churches a million years old, you've seen 'em all," he explains.

The main thing he enjoys, it appears, is sweat-pulling, back-straining hard work.

He is at the trading post while it is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday and often works on Sunday afternoons. He averages working 12 hours a day, he said, and until the past few years routinely worked until "8 — 10 — 12 o'clock at night."

He and another man built the metal and tin main building in 1955 and painted it with yellow road-striping paint he had bought for 55 cents per gallon. He later painted the first Evalene's Imports building with it.

"I've always worked hard," he said. "It's a hell of a lot easier to do something yourself than it is to get somebody else to do it.

"It ain't hurt me a hell of a lot, I don't think. That's what's wrong with most people. They want to get paid, but they don't want to work."

Asked if at some point he decided to make his business as big as possible, he said, "No, I just enjoyed adding on.

"Money don't mean anything to me. This pile of junk out here," he said, waving at the yard alongside the building, "means 10 times as much to me as the money would.

The McDonald enterprises have a total of nine employees, including son David, 27, who earned a degree in business management at Texas Tech University in Lubbock before coming home to learn the family business.

The other McDonald son, Larry, is a Plainview bank executive.

Girl Scouts Launch Cookie Sale

What has become an annual American tradition continues in our community: the annual Girl Scout cookie sale will begin Friday and extend for two weeks, according to Mrs. Nolen Swain, president of the Caprock Girl Scout Council.

This year, six varieties of cookies and a chedarette cracker will be available at $1.50 per box. Girl Scouts of all ages will be selling chocolate and vanilla creme, chocolate chip, country oats, mint, scot-tea, savannah and the chedarette throughout the council area.

Since 1936, cookie sale funds have been used to support troop activities, help local girls participate in national and international Girl Scout events, purchase equipment, provide programs, and, again this year, finance building improvements at resident Camp Rio Blanco.

Awards for cookie sellers include one-and two-week cookie camperships to attend camp or other council-related activities. T-shirts, posters, patches and certificates.

The Girl Scout cookie sale will end Feb. 17. Girls in Bailey, Briscoe, Castro, Cochran, Crosby, Dickens, Floyd, Garza, Hale, Hockley, Lamb, Lynn, Lubbock, Motley, Parmer, Swisher, Terry and Yoakum counties will participate in the sale.

The cookie sale is the annual fund-raising event of the Caprock Girl Scout Council, a United Way agency.

In My Corner

By FRANCES LOWE

BECAUSE OF THE BLIZZARD, I decided to ride the bus to work. My family reacted with outrage and dismay.

"You mean I have to walk to school?" inquired the Angel.

"I'll have to get a friend to take me," the Princess wailed.

Even Himself looked up from his morning battle to find two matching socks and looked at me with amazement. You would think I had proposed sailing the Kon-Tiki.

BUT I WAS DETERMINED. Trying to find my boots, remembering that I had left my heavy coat at the office the day before, studying the howling, snow-laden wind, did not discourage me. After 45 minutes at the corner my enthusiasm was dampened slightly, and I began to think my family might have been right.

The wind did howl, and every time I thought I saw the bus coming it turned out to be a van. A steady stream of cars slid and skidded past me. Would there be any way to estimate the amount of fuel used in Lubbock to take children to school? The yellow school bus went by cautiously, and I thought of how much my children had loved riding the bus, and wondered again why it had come to be considered a bad thing.

FINALLY THE BUS DID COME and I settled comfortably into my seat to watch the passing scene. Some other poor clown had to contend with icy streets, stupid drivers, and Monterey students playing "I dare you to hit me" across 50th street.

A couple of years ago, I rode the bus to and from work every day, and it was a garden of delights. That particular bus driver, may he live and prosper, got to know me well enough so that if I was late he would hold the bus for me — once in spite of a kampus kop yelling at him to clear the lane.

Watching people is, after all, the best spectator sport, and on a bus you have time and excuse to do so. Since we Lubbockites are friendlier than most, we tend to smile and exchange a few words, unlike the big city, where riders stare stonily ahead and never meet one another's eyes.

I AM MORE AND MORE CONVINCED that public transportation is the answer to many of our problems, even as I am less and less convinced of the chance of persuading people to take advantage of it, especially in West Texas, where separating a man from his automobile is roughly equivalent to stealing a cowboy's horse. In spite of warnings, threats, pleadings and the escalating cost of fuel, our automobiles proliferate faster than our people.

WHILE I DON'T IMAGINE THAT a few minor changes in the bus system would cause people to change their ways, I might make a few modest suggestions.

First of all, the bus has got to be where it is supposed to be at roughly the right time. A fellow has got to be reasonably sure of getting where he is going when he needs to get there. I have heard complaints (I don't know if they are true) of drivers who take shortcuts in the route to make up for lost time, of the bus coming late if at all and of irregular schedules.

Secondly, the bus has got to run to the places and at the times people need to catch it. One thing that comes to mind is that the last bus leaves South Plains Mall three hours before the Mall closes. Another route that should be popular (I am aware — because I was one of the three people who rode it — that it was tried) is the line straight up Indiana to the campus.

Personally, I have had good luck with riding the bus, and would love to see more people try it — and it does seem to me that there is a steady increase in the number of riders. Think of the savings of fuel if each of us rode the bus only one day a week!

Alpha Phis To Begin Annual Heart Drive

"Help Lick Heart Disease" and "Alpha Phi Helping Hearts" are the duel themes of the Lubbock Alpha Phi Alumnae and Texas Tech Collegiate Chapter for their eighth annual Cardiac Aid Lollipop Drive, which begins Thursday and continues through Feb. 17.

The heart-shaped red lollipops are predominently displayed in grocery stories, restaurants, businesses and on the Texas Tech campus. They sell for 25 cents each. Anyone wishing to purchase the lollipops in bulk may contact 793-0731 or 794-6027.

The Alpha Phi Alumnae and Collegiates hope to sell 30,000 pops this year. The proceeds will be used to purchase needed cardiac equipment for Methodist Hospital for use in the Cardiac Care Unit.

Past donations by the Alpha Phis to Methodist Hospital for the prevention and/or treatment of heart disease include a life-size recording Resusci, Anne, a Datascope monitor, two defibrillators, a Normothermia Unit and a Techtronics heart monitor.

Heart Projects is the international philanthrophy of Alpha Phi. Chapters in the United States and Canada sell a million pops each year and contribute over $100,000 annually to the American Heart Association, local heart projects and to the Alpha Phi Foundation which helps fund heart research.

REFRESHING DESSERT

Set out a tray of cheese and apples. Slice and core both Red and Golden Delicious apples; arrange on an attractive tray or platter along with slices of sharp Cheddar and Monterey Jack cheese and a wedge of mellow Brie. Serve as a dessert or as a snack any time of the year.

Dear Abby,

DEAR ABBY: My friend Alice has been terrified of water all her life. She wants to take some cruises, so Alice consulted a therapist to help her overcome her fear of water.

She said that her therapist hypnotized her and learned that in her previous life Alice had been a passenger on the Titanic, and was drowned when it sank, and that is why she has such a terrible fear of water!

I am beginning to think my friend is bonkers, and her therapist is either a nut or a fraud.

Abby, what do you make of all this "previous life" business?

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: I wouldn't say that Alice is bonkers, nor would I call her therapist a nut or a fraud. Some very knowledgeable and intelligent people buy the theory that we have all lived previous lives and will return from this life to live many more.

I don't buy it. And, until there is evidence that I can understand and accept, I remain,

VERY TRULY YOURS,
UNCONVINCED

DEAR ABBY: My probelm is my 14-year-daughter. She's a tall, pretty girl, but her posture is terrible! I keep reminding her to hold her shoulders back and to sit and stand straight, but every time I look at her she's all hunched over and stooped-shouldered. (She sits in a crouched position with one leg curled under her.)

She says maybe she would improve if I quit nagging her. How can I quit! I love her and want her to have a lovely posture. I'm afraid it's too late already because she's made a habit of slouching. I just hate to see a young, beautiful girl look like a hunched old lady. Can you help me? No names, please. She's hostile enough as it is.

WELL-MEANING MOM

DEAR MOM: Poor posture can be due to a growth disturbance of the spine. Untreated, it becomes a permanent hunchback, but if treated early it can be corrected. Ask your daughter to remove her clothes and bend forward. If there is a noticeable "hump" on her back, or if her ribs are more promient on one side than the other, she has an actual deformity, and should be examined by an orthopedic surgeon.

DEAR ABBY: I'm rather a large woman, 55, neat, well-groomed and far from ugly. I've been married for 35 years to a handsome man who neither drinks nor smokes, but he loves to dance. I love to dance, too, but I have arthritis in both knees, so my dancing days are over.

I have no money worries, live in a nice home, own my own car, so I can come and go as I please. I play bingo about three times a week.

My problem is that my husband goes dancing every Friday and Sunday, while I'm playing bingo. Different friends have told me that I'm a fool to let my husband go dancing without me, but it's no fun to go and sit while he dances with other women. He tells me that all the women he dances with know he's married. He always wears his wedding band and is usually home before I am. I could make things miserable by telling him I would rather he didn't go dancing since I can't dance, but why should I begrudge him the pleasure of doing something I know he enjoys so much?

Abby, I'm so afraid that one day he will come home and tell me he has found something else. I don't nag him about it, but do you think I'm a fool for letting him go dancing without me?

WORRIED WIFE

DEAR WORRIED: Yes, as long as you feel threatened. Go with him for a while. It may not be "fun," but it may clear up some of those doubts. It's usually the fear of the unknown that creates uneasiness and worry.

Rape Crisis Director Believes 'Cool Head' Vital For Defense

By JACQUE HUTCHINS
Family News Staff

Being prepared, confident, and in control before you have to face the situation of being attacked, can sometimes make the difference between the attacker succeeding or not.

A woman has to imagine herself in the situation before it occurs and take the necessary steps to get herself out of the conflict.

According to Becky Mahan of the Rape Crisis Center, "common sense" and keeping a "cool head" are essential in a time of crisis. She believes you must evaluate yourself, the attacker and the environment, before you can effectively handle the situation. Sometimes women have even been able to talk themselves out of the situation.

"In evaluating yourself," she said, "you have to decide what you are capable of doing. Are you emotionally capable of inflicting pain by gouging his eyes out or hitting him in the groin?"

In assessing the attacker she said, "You have to evaluate his actions: what will he do if he feels he will be harmed? Will your actions set him off?"

And in assessing the environment you have to decide if your actions will bring help. "You will have to act according to the setting — is it a desolate area or in a car in a crowded neighborhood?" she said.

After you evaluate the situation and decide that it is best to fight, you must be willing to go through with it and do extreme harm to the attacker. Inflicting only slight pain could cause him to become angry, at which time your life could be in danger.

Unfortunately most women do not know how to effectively overpower an attacker. Most women have always been taught to believe that they are the weaker sex. And small women, especially, feel the case is hopeless.

Damon Williams, self-defense instructor for the YWCA, knows for a fact that women can defend themselves and he teaches them how it is done. It doesn't matter how old or how large she is, it's a matter of being taught what to do.

In the classes, Williams points out the weak areas of a person and demonstrates how to deliver blows to these areas. "The places you want to hit are the solar plexes, throat and groin," he said.

He presents many situations that women might find themselves in, and in doing so he shows how to "escape, control and destroy."

For instance, a woman can actually learn to throw a knock-out punch. "It all deals with hitting the head in the right place and causing it to snap," he said. And if she finds herself in a rear choke or front choke hold, he can show how to get out of it, as well as how to disarm someone.

Williams, a black belt in karate, will begin teaching the self-defense class Monday night at the YWCA. The classes will run twice a week for six weeks, a very short amount of time to learn something that will always stay with you and may even save your life.

Mahan feels that any resource that is available to you should be used. "It certainly couldn't hurt," she said, adding, "learning how to protect yourself is good, but don't develop a false sense of security." As she pointed out, if someone is determined enough, he will succeed in his attack.

Another important resourse for learning how to protect yourself, with the means of a firearm, is available to women. Bennie Setliff, classroom instructor for K&B Guns, will teach the mechanics and legalities of guns in a one-night three-hour session. After the women are instructed how to handle the firearm they will be taught to shoot it as well.

"The class is designed for women who have never fired a gun, who may be afraid of guns," he said. Class sessions begin Feb. 6 and Feb. 27.

According to Steliff, it does no good to have a gun in your hand if you are not going to use it, because then the attacker has a weapon he can use on you.

The class is designed to teach a woman how to safely handle a gun if circumstances arise. The purpose of using a firearm for self defense is to stop the attack. Steliff does not at any time advocate killing someone. The aggressor can sometimes be stopped because the woman looks like she knows how to handle a gun. It is not even necessary to fire the weapon.

If a woman feels required to keep a gun in the home for protection, it should be pointed out that the gun be kept in a safe place away from children. It is necessary to maintain the gun in perfect working condition, cleaning it regularly. The gun is not a weapon of destruction but a means of protection. The owner should be aware of the laws concerning possession and carrying of a firearm.

But, if after every precaution is taken, an attack results in rape, call the police and/or the Rape Crisis Center as soon as possible. It's been said before, but remember not to change anything about the setting, including yourself. Don't wash blood off, change clothes or touch anything. The center will be there whenever you need them. They can give a helpful concerned hand to help ease the situation, providing counseling if you desire.

An immediate medical examination is required if you want to prosecute. Someone from the center will go with you to help through this, and will also go to the police station with you and even to court if you desire.

Value Of X-Rays Outweighs Risk

CONTEMPORARY STRIPES — Geometric designs are just one category of styles available in bedding for today's home. A whole spectrum of colors and sizes are also are manufactured. This is the month for good sales in bed linens.

A COORDINATED LOOK — Pattern used in the covered headboards and in the dust ruffle is carried out in the drapes as well.

'White Sales' Provide Variety

By CONNIE CHAPMAN
Family News Staff

Do you remember when the choices in linens for outfitting a bed were very limited — maybe even just white and solid pastels?

Do you remember the coming of the miracle of permanent press, which meant that the laborious task of pressing sheets was no longer necessary for smooth sleeping?

The craze for satin sheets came and went. Fitted sheets and mattress covers came and stayed.

The development and growth of the popularity of the new queen and king sized beds also changed what manufacturers of bed linens offered.

Youth beds, double-decker bunk beds and compact beds have gained in popularity for use in children's rooms, too.

It is hard to realize that these changes have come over the last 20 or so years. Like many other products used in the American household, the variety of products offered by manufacturers for family purchasing agents outfitting family beds has increased until it is almost mind-boggling.

Even basic items for the bed, like mattress covers and pillows, come in a variety of materials, styles and sizes.

Lillie Killman, a clerk with 20 years of service in that particular department of Dunlap's, said that people often buy two sets of pillows for their beds. One set is for decorative use during the day and is covered with attractive pillow shams. Another set comes into use for the actual hours of sleeping.

Zip-on bag-style vinyl covers are a popular item for basic mattress covers and pads with fitted corners are also a top priority.

Sheets and pillow cases are still shown in white and pastels, of course, but in more recent years bold colors — burgandy, forest green, chocolate browns and even blacks and navy blues — have gained in popularity. Geometric designs and all-over patterns also are selected frequently.

Mix-match combinations of solids and patterns add to the variety. An entire ensemble often is available in a particular pattern — everything from fitted bottom sheet to top sheet, pillow cases, comforters or spreads, and even drapes.

Children's bedding capitalizes on the latest intergalactic craze or on a sports theme.

Fluffy, light-weight but warm comforters, which double as blankets and bedspreads, can be washed and dried easily in home laundry facilities.

Electric blankets also have gained in popularity. Manufacturers are touting them as a partial answer to staying warm while turning down the thermostat on the household heater for the night hours. Thermal blankets also are popular for the same reason.

While looking at sizes of bedding, notice that some manufactureres have begun to use the metric system in designating sizes.

Persons buying for a queen-sized bed should know about another peculiarity of the industry. Some companies say their sheets and blankets can be used interchangeably with full or queen-sized beds and other say they pair bedding for queen and king-sizes. A good bit of advice is to know the measurements of your mattress before you go shopping for anything for a queen sized bed.

White sales are no longer just "white," as local ads point out, but such sales do offer good bargains with savings sometimes as much as 50 percent off regular prices for bedding items. Lubbock stores will continue to offer white sales this coming week.

LEMON ADDS TOUCH

When cooking or baking with Golden Delicious apples, add 1 or 2 tablespoons fresh or bottled lemon juice or 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind for a delicious flavor sensation. Fresh apple wedges in salads gain a special sparkle when drizzled with lemon juice or sprinkled with a dash of lemon rind. In addition, the acidity of the lemon juice helps prevent the snowy white flesh of the apples from darkening on standing.

MATH PROBLEMS — Jodi Morris, assistant to the dean of student life at Texas Tech University, once had "math anxiety" and can empathize with students who are currently trying to overcome the problem. But suffer no more, because a math anxiety workshop beginning Feb. 7 at Tech should offer some solutions to a familiar worry. (Staff Photo by Linn Scherwitz)

'Math Anxiety' Workshop Set

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

Remember being so nervous in grade-school that you couldn't work familiar math problems on the blackboard?

When you were trying to decide on a "major" in college, did you immediately rule out anything involving mathematics — all the time knowing jobs were plentiful and salaries good in fields such as computer science and data processing?

Ever have sweaty palms while trying to work math problems on an exam?

Or, what about the time you were attempting to measure the amount of carpeting your living room floor would require and couldn't do it?

Jodie Morris, assistant to the dean of student life at Tech, says that if you have any of these problems, you may have "math anxiety."

Morris admits having "math anxiety" herself in the past and so can empathize with those who talk to her about math difficulties. "Many prospective students are extremely fearful about even attempting math in college," she explains, "and many of those currently enrolled in math tell me they're fearful of passing their courses. In fact, more than half of the people who request tutors are needing help in math."

Because Morris felt the need at Tech to give added support to those struggling with math, she began to gather information on innovative programs already being offered at several other colleges and universities. After talking with many educators and studying the various programs, she came to the conclusion that students at Tech could benefit from a similar course. As a result of Morris's efforts, a course called "Math Anxiety Workshop" will soon be offered on the Tech campus.

Morris notes that there is a common myth that people do or do not have mathematical minds. "Society also associates such subjects as math and science with male pursuits," she explains, "and this is an ever harder barrier to overcome.

"Educators are trying to change these ideas in elementary school. But this is why the math anxiety workshop might be particularly helpful to the older woman returning to school, because she probably didn't have the advantage of such conditioning.

"The thing with math is that people over 25 — anybody who has been away from academia for awhile — do not understand why their math has been hidden down in their 'memory banks' for so long. And that is because math is taught in bits, tested in bits and is not integrated.

"Usually math is taught by rote, so sometimes a student simply can't apply his knowledge to other things. Also, a person will forget the math he's learned, if he doesn't need to apply it. For example, how many people need to measure the area of a circle in their lives, unless they have round rooms?"

Morris believes anxiety is much worse in relation to mathematics, than English or anything else. "Regarding English," she comments, "we speak and use English every day and feel comfortable about it. But as I've already mentioned, we don't use our mathematical abilities as often."

The educator believes women, particularly, have been conditioned in the classroom to have negative feelings about math. However, the teaching of English to all students is usually done in an atmosphere of "this is fun." On the other hand, math classes appear filled with tension. There usually are tension-activities such as: the timed test, emphasis on whether a student can solve a problem and if he gets the correct answer. Then, there is the "blackboard ritual" when students have to try and solve a problem, risking failure before peers.

"Math can be interesting and intriguing," Morris says, "and the emphasis in the math anxiety class is to help the student realize this. Students will also be taught relaxation techniques which will enable them to concentrate on problem-solving, rather than on their own anxieties.

"It is often amazing how fast students learn to pick up subtleties — the differences in their feelings, when moving from relaxed group therapy and discussion sessions to the classroom where they'll be trying to solve simple math problems."

Sponsored jointly by the department of continuing education and the office of the dean of student life, the "Math Anxiety Workshop" will begin Feb. 7 and continue until March 13. Classes will be held on Thursdays from 7-9 p.m. in Bldg. X-15. Interested persons can contact Joyce Abbott of continuing education at 742-2354. Registration is currently underway. Fee for the six-week course is $30.

EGGS ROOSEVELT

"Mash a 3-ounce package of cream cheese with a fork in a frying pan. Add 1 2 cup cream or top milk, and heat until cheese has melted and cream is bubbling. Break 6 eggs into a bowl and beat lightly with a fork. Add 1 teaspoon of salt and a few grains of pepper and mix all ingredients with the cream cheese mixture. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly and scraping bottom of pan, using long, folding strokes. Remove from heat when the consistency is creamy and serve at once. Do not overcook. Serves 4." Salesmen Offer Summer Fashion Preview

By LYNN HOHERTZ
Family News Staff

Are the winter blues giving you "cabin fever?" Well, settle down into a comfortable chair by the fireplace and let your mind's eye take a tour of the upcoming summer trends.

In a burst of color that may rival nature herself, summer wear takes on a slightly different twist.

The start of the selling season will see many fashions in pastels or "ice cream" colors, said Sellards. As the season progresses the "dark brights" will emerge.

"The 'baggies' will make their statement as the fashion pant," said Kinkade. And, he continued, they will appear in orange, purple, yellow, red, turquioise, fushia/plum, magenta, jade and mint green. These fashion pants will be made of lightweight 100 percent cotton or cotton blends.

Just what are "baggies?" A simple definition could be pants which are pleated at the waist, slim towards the ankle and baggy in between.

Now do not worry — the regular straight leg pant is still popular, and according to Sellards will remain so for several seasons.

In keeping with the supercharged summer colors and realizing the impact of the tightening dollar, Kinkade emphasizes the unlimited possibilities of mix and matching separates.

Blouses are mostly multicolored, said Sellards, featuring pastel or "dark bright" plaids to coordinate with pants. Capped sleeves will appear often. Seersucker shirts worn with white pants will be an ideal summer outfit in the latter part of the season.

Appliques on shirts will make a strong appearance and can also be worn with many colors. These appliqued scenes include palm trees (in a wrap design which begins on the front of the blouse and wraps around the back), western scenes, mina birds, elephant heads and what else — an "Electric Horseman" shirt.

Speaking of the western motif, the look will still be with us, only this time in a madras material. "This new madras has been refined," said Sellards, "and does not bleed like the type some years ago." Much of the madras will be concentrated in wrap skirts and blouses (giving the illusion of a dress.)

Khaki will also be shown in summer togs especially in skirts and safari-type shorts with roll-up hem. The madras shirts could tie in perfectly with this neutral color.

Tank tops, halters and camisoles — summer classics themselves — will remain popular items. As a little something different, Kinkade pointed out that "romper suits" and jump suits are back, this time in off-the-shoulder terrys and striped cotton fabrications.

Now for those who do not want to be in the "baggy limelight," how about a modified "baggy" skirt with front slit? Breezy skirts especially popular with the career woman will also include a variety of wraps and slim cut versions.

Dresses continue attracting attention and what better way to show off that gorgeous tan than a backless sundress? Other styles include tubes, tank dresses and dresses which feature snaps all the way up the side. As for fabrications, Kinkade shows a variety of bold prints and stripes. He also displays the polo dress as a big summer hit.

And yes, "hems are going up slightly," said Sellards, "and dress slits are going up even higher."

How was that for a restful pilgrimage and what better way to pass some time than to plan ahead for your summer wardrobe?

Note: The following suggestion from a leading fashion magazine provides guidelines for achieving the right "baggy fit."

Look for a pair of baggies that fit well at the waist and in the seat. They're too long if they wrinkle up at the hem. Baggy does not mean sloppy.

COUPLE MARKS ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. Archie L. Leonard will mark their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception from 2-4 p.m. today in St. John's United Methodist Church. Hosts will be Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Z. Leonard of Lamesa and Mr. and Mrs. Dale C. House of Tyler, children of the couple, and grandchildren. The former Pearl E. Davidson and Leonard were married Jan. 25, 1930 in Ponca City, Okla. They have lived in Lubbock since 1947. The couple has nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Appliances Feature New Energy Guides

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Within six months, consumers will find yellow and black energy guide labels on seven types of household appliances.

A new federal rule requires such labels to show energy efficiency rating of comparable appliances and estimates of annual operating costs.

Labels containing similar information must be displayed for room air-conditioners.

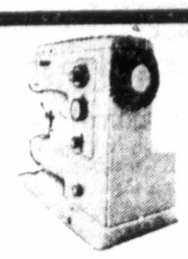

Home furnaces will have labels directing prospective consumers to an energy fact sheet manufacturers must provide.

The appliances covered in the labeling program account for more than 78 percent of all energy consumed in American homes — or the equivalent of 2.3 billion barrels of oil a year.

The best, quickest and least expensive method of cleaning scrubbable wallcoverings is dry cleaning with a gum-like cleaner.

Life Of Unborn Child Affected By Alcohol

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

During last week's Mothers' March on Birth Defects, a lot was said about birth defects. For many serious birth defects there are no preventive measures to be taken other than genetic counseling, and too often there are no cures. It is for research in these areas that the March of Dimes collects money each year.

In a workshop co-sponsored by the March of Dimes and A.S.K. for Women, Inc. just prior to the campaign, a different kind of birth defect was discussed — Fetal Alcohol Syndrome. Although there are many unanswered questions about the defect, the tragedy of children affected by the condition is even more heartbreaking because it is totally preventable.

The condition is caused by the overconsumption of alcohol by the mother during pregnancy. No woman who did not drink during pregnancy has had a child with fetal alcohol syndrome.

According to Dr. Harlan Giles from the Texas Tech University School of Medicine and speaker for the workshop, it is not certain how much alcohol a woman must consume before her child is affected by the syndrome. He notes that the woman's ability to tolerate alcohol is the key factor in how much she can safely drink. "The blood alcohol level is the critical issue," he said, "not the amount consumed." However, the severity of the defect is directly related to the frequency of overdrinking during pregnancy.

The condition has long been connected with alcoholic women, but only in the last several years has it been recognized in the children of "social drinkers."

When a person drinks alcohol, ketone bodies build up in the blood to metabolize the drug. "The appearance of ketone bodies is at a much higher level in pregnant women," noted Dr. Giles. The liver cleanses the body of the ketones and so eliminates the alcohol from the system.

"There is a significant impact of ketone bodies on the fetus," Dr. Giles explained. The ketones go directly through the placenta, unlike many substances. The immature liver of the unborn child cannot "bail itself out." That is when the damage is done to the fetus.

Characteristics of the syndrome are very subtle in many children and often go unrecognized by doctors unless they are alerted to the possibility. The single most recognizable characteristic, according to Dr. Giles, is facial abnormalities. "The child will appear as if his face were pressed against a window," he commented. There is a flattening of the face; the nose is flat, the eyes change shape, the groove of the upper lip is completely absent or flattened, the jaw is smooth or flattened.

"The spectrum of effects range from mild to excessive," said Dr. Giles. There may be mental retardation, kidney problems, higher gastrointestinal problems, impairment of coordination, hyperactivity, and a greatly shortened attention span. The effects may be seen in many combinations, but the primary defects are the facial abnormalities and mental deficiency.

Dr. Giles cited several studies that have been done on pregnant women and alcohol, remarking that the fetal alcohol syndrome is not the only problem they face. One in 300 pregnancies, or 1/3 of one percent, end in stillbirth. However, for light drinkers that is increased to one per 100 births; for heavy drinkers the rate is 2.5 per 100 births.

The statistics for growth retardation are 2-3 per 100 births for light drinkers and 4-5 per 100 births for heavy drinkers. Fifteen percent, or double the national average, of the babies born to heavy drinkers are premature.

Of all babies born, 3.5 percent have birth defects of some kind. Thirty-two percent of the babies born to heavy drinkers have birth defects; 14 percent for moderate drinkers and nine percent for light drinkers. Only diabetic women, with 10-13 percent, even come close to those percentages for birth defects.

There is no test for alcohol fetal syndrome. According to Dr. Giles, what is now considered a safe level of alcohol consumption may not be totally safe. There is not enough information in that area because accurate accounts of the drinking history of mothers delivering children with alcohol fetal syndrome are difficult to obtain.

Presently, it is assumed that the maximum a pregnant woman can drink daily is 2-2½ ounces. The more sporatic the drinking is, the less likely that the child will be affected. However, "binge" drinking is the most harmful — that is, when the woman will only drink infrequently but "get drunk" when she does drink.

The consensus on alcohol and the pregnant woman today is not to drink at all if possible. Birth defects as a whole are unpreventable. The only birth defect that is totally controlled by the mother is fetal alcohol syndrome. Indifference to the problem could be a terrible waste of life.

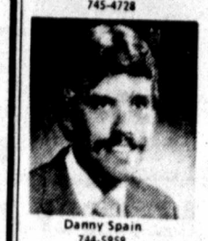

Strips of wallcovering used in a ceiling are always hung across the room, rather than lengthwise, as shorter strips are easier to handle.

Survey Reports Need For Perinatal Care

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (Special) — The results of the nation's first research study to evaluate perinatal care of Hispanic American women was announced last fall in Albuquerque. Re-examining those results indicates the value of funds spent by the March of Dimes to improve maternal and fetal health.

The pilot study was conducted among Hispanic residents of Albuquerque by BCTV, producers of "Villa Alegre," the nationally syndicated award-winning, bicultural, bilingual children's television series and the March of Dimes. It is part of an intensive campaign to reduce birth defects in the nation's Hispanic population.

The study, which investigated the quality of pre-and post-natal care available to low income Hispanic women, arrived at a number of significant conclusions such as:

Many Hispanic women do not know where to go for health care during pregnancy.

Hispanic women generally seek a more humanistic and comprehensive approach to health care and require an open line of communication with health care professionals.

A prime concern of Hispanic women is the lack of continuity in their pre-natal care which is caused by the rapid turnover of doctors at maternal and infant care centers. Thus the need for more stable medical staffs is emphasized.

Women who go for treatment to maternal and infant care centers are subjected to long and inconvenient waiting periods which can be reduced by expanding perinatal care hours or developing more efficient service methods without sacrificing the quality of care. Moreover, the physical settings at the centers could be improved by inexpensive means, thus contributing to a greater psychological well being of the patient.

There is an urgent need in the Hispanic community for more available and effective bilingual information materials on where to go for perinatal care, human sexuality and child care geared to the Hispanic culture.

There is a prime need to involve Hispanic families in the care and support of Hispanic women. Of special concern are cultural barriers of mistrust on the part of male partners who, in many cases, prevent women from seeking medical attention.

The Albuquerque project is the first of a series of comparative research studies on perinatal care among the Hispanics of the United States by the March of Dimes and Oakland, California-based BCTV. An intensive bilingual, bicultural national campaign aimed at reducing the incidence of birth defects among Hispanics will be based on research results.

The need for the study developed out of a national conference of Hispanic cultural and community leaders in New Orleans last year, who called for immediate steps to reduce high rates of communicable diseases, low birth weights, premature births, mental retardation and other birth defects among Hispanics.

The conference also was concerned about improving nutrition for low income Hispanic mothers and babies; controlling adolescent pregnancies; reducing alcohol and drug abuses; and extending and improving perinatal care for Hispanic communities throughout the United States.

Parents Can Prevent Developmental Trouble

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Parents of pre-school children need to play health detective.

It takes a few minutes but can make a lifetime's difference to the infant, tot or toddler who may be found to have a physical or mental condition or developmental problem.

There are two reasons to look for signs of trouble:

1. If found early, some troubles may be corrected.

2. Those not correctible may call for special treatment to keep from becoming more of a handicap.

The idea of every mother and father involved in health detective activity comes from the National Easter Seal Society.

"Take a minute to read these early warning signs...," the Society says in a new pamphlet for parents.

"You may find that your child has a special need."

The pamphlet spells out some of the common early warning signs that a child may have a problem in seeing, talking, playing, thinking, hearing, moving.

Under SEEING, parents playing health detective are asked to check if their child:

— Is often unable to locate and pick up small objects which have been dropped.

— Frequently rubs eyes or complains that eyes hurt.

— Has reddened, watering or encrusted eyelids.

— Holds head in a strained or awkward position (tilts head to either side — thrusts head forward or backward) when trying to look at a particular person or object.

— Sometimes crosses one or both eyes.

"Some chilren are born with physical or mental conditions — or they may acquire disorders which handicap normal growth and development," the Society pamphlet says.

"Fortunately, many of these conditions can be corrected if parents recognize the problem early and seek help. Your failure to recognize and deal with a problem early may result in an unnecessary lifelong handicap."

If parents find a preschool child has any of the early warning signs listed in the pamphlet, they are advised to seek help immediately.

"Don't wait until your child enters school before you begin to deal with the problem," the Society cautions.

Who can help?

"If you suspect that your child may have special needs, talk with your family doctor, public health nurse, th Easter Seal Society or other professionals in the field," the Society says in the pamphlet.

"Don't hesitate to ask their advice about what you feel may be unusual behavior or a possible physical problem.

"No matter where you live there are parent organizations and agencies which will assist you if your child has special needs.

"Remember, the earlier you recognize your child's special needs and seek professional help, the greater possibility that your child can be helped to overcome a problem."

Under TALKING, you are supposed to check if your child:

— Cannot repeat common rhymes or TV jingles by age 3.

— If not talking in short sentences by age 4.

— Is not understood by people outside the family by age 5.

Under PLAYING, you are supposed to check if your child:

— Does not imitate parents doing routine household chores by age 2 to 3.

— Does not enjoy playing alone with toys, pots and pans, and so forth by age 3. age 3.

— Does not play group games such as hide-and-seek, tag-ball, and so forth with other children by age 4.

— Does not share and take turns by age 5.

Under THINKING, you are supposed to check if your child:

— Does not react to his-her own name when called by age 1.

— Is unable to identify hair, eyes, ears, nose and mouth by pointing to them by age 2.

— Does not understand simple stories told or read by age 3.

— Does not give reasonable answers to such questions as "What do you do when you are sleepy?" or "What do you do when you are hungry?" by age 4.

— Does not seem to understand the meanings of the words "today," "tomorrow," "yesterday" by age 5.

Under HEARING, you are supposed to check if your child:

— Does not turn to face the source of strange sounds or voices by 6 months of age.

— Has frequent earaches or running ears.

— Talks in a very loud or very soft voice.

— Does not respond when you call from another room.

— Turns the same ear every time toward a sound he-she wishes to hear.

Under MOVING, you are supposed to check if your child:

— Is unable to sit up without support by age 1.

— Cannot walk without help by age 2.

— Does not walk up and down steps by age 3.

— Is unable to balance on one foot for a short time by age 4.

— Cannot throw a ball overhand and catch a large ball bounced to him-her by age 5.

As an example of the importance of early detection of abnormal conditions, the Society notes that most congenital foot disorders can be corrected during the first two years of life.

"Yet, 80 percent of adult foot problems are directly traceable to untreated congenital problems," the Society said.

The free pamphlet is titled "Parents — Do you know the early warning signs of children with special needs?"

Its publication was prompted by the fact that too often parents put off doing anything to help the child "until he starts to school" or waits for the child to "grow out of it."

"Fortunately, many handicapping conditions can be helped or completely corrected if parents recognize the problem early and seek help," the Society said.

The "Early Warning Signs" booklet is available in Spanish as well as English.

Single free copies are available from the National Easter Seal Society, 2023 W. Ogden Ave., Chicago, Ill., 60612.

Communication Workshop Open To Married Couples

A marital communications skills workshop, to be held soon under the auspices of the Texas Tech University Counseling Center, will be open to all interested persons in the Lubbock community.

Married couples are invited to take part in the worskshop, which will consist of four evening meetings under the direction of Ed Wilfong, a counselor at the center, and Dr. Harvey Joanning, counseling psychologist and director of the family counseling center at Tech.

The workshops are available without cost to area couples who wish to improve their communication skills. Couples who have essentially good relationships should find the workshops of value, Wilfong says, a well as those who are experiencing some difficulties in their marriage.

An already strong relationship can be improved with the acquisition of better communication skills, Wilfong says, and a couple whose marriage is in minor trouble should find ways of dealing more creatively with their problems. Couples in need of serious marital counseling would generally be referred to appropriate counseling agencies or individuals.

The classes will be scheduled on as many weeknights as are necessary to accommodate interested persons, probably from 7-10 p.m., on four successive weeks. They will consist of a combination of demonstrations (a male and a female group leader will be assigned to each group of perhaps four or five couples), lectures, discussion, and practice sessions — the latter will provide practical experience in using the skills the couples are being taught.

Communications skills, Wilfong explains, basically involve helping people learn how to express themselves and how to listen, which may involve breaking old communications patterns which stand in the way of effective communications.

The matters discussed are chosen by the couples themselves, and the sessions are non-threatening in nature.

Persons who would like to hear more about the workshop may attend an introductory session either Thursday or Friday night at 7:30 p.m. in Room 169 of the Food and Nutrition Tower of the College of Home Economics, when Wilfong will present bsic information and answer questions. Those who are unable to attend these sessions, but who wish to have more information may call Wilfong at the counseling center, 742-3674 or at home, 797-5964.

Since the service has a research aspect, participants will be asked to fill out forms and help evaluate the program; all testing is private and information is confidential. Previous sessions have enabled the counselors to improve various areas of the program.

Furniture Sales May Not Produce Bargains

By SIDNEY MARGOLIUS

NEW YORK (WNS) — The traditional February furniture sales are on the horizon. And, while consumers this year will face an average 15 percent increase over last year's prices of new furniture, there are still ways to find bargains.

However, novice furniture-buyers, such as young couples furnishing their first home, should be warned their bargain "finds" may not always be solid wood. The maple, walnut, or teak actually may be a thin veneer glued to pressed sawdust, flakeboard or particle-board cores. Often these days, natural wood grains are so skillfully duplicated in plastic finishes that even experienced buyers can be misled.

Furniture-buyers are advised to first look at current offerings in leading furniture and department stores. As furniture is one of the products where higher prices tend to identify quality merchandise, most experts advise would-be purchasers to examine top lines in quality stores first to determine a base for value comparison. These retailers are usually glad to point out such details as well-fitting drawers, hand-rubbed finishes, comfortable seating and quality upholstery details.

They also will answer such questions as: What is the base or core under the veneer? What are the care and cleaning requirements? Is there a manufacturer's back-up guarantee or warranty? What does the retailer stand behind?

A few such exploratory forays also will acquaint the would-be purchaser with the latest styles in home furnishings and interior design.

Armed with this information, the budget-minded consumer then can turn to alternative furniture sources. Many major furniture retail chains operate outlet stores offering slightly damaged pieces "as is," or excess inventory at drastically reduced prices.

One New York area couple was able to furnish their entire home with top quality pieces, including a $900 sofa obtained at half price because of a small, easily repaired cut in the back. They also filled their den with quality rattan furnishings acquired at half price from a furniture liquidator.

Many discount outlets advertise price savings on brand name merchandise. If the dealer is offering in-stock items for immediate delivery or pick-up, and if the items are first quality, then chances are you have a bargain. However, when do-it-yourself pick-up is involved and there is no servicing of scratches and other damage, nor a back-up for late appearing problems, your "bargain" may diminish considerably.

Other sources for furniture buys also should be considered. Unpainted units still offer solid wood at big values when compared with composition wood furnishings. Garage and house sales, charitable organization stores, flea markets and antique dealers are worth shopping. Auctions sometimes offer surprising values, and most allow viewing and examination in advance of sales.

Knowing your own needs is the main hurdle in planning for furniture acquisition, say most experts. Every purchaser realistically must apprise what portion of a budget can be set aside for investment. Since families often live with their selections for a lifetime, durable quality should be a primary concern. However, few people can fill all their needs at one time because of the large outlay involved.

Experts suggest buying on two levels: first, major investments for longtime use, acquired one or two at a time; the second, low-cost fill-ins for color and personality accents. Here are suggestions from some leading designers and retailers:

— Start with modular living room seating groups and all-in-one wall units that house TV, books and special displays of collectibles. Fill in empty spaces with plants.

— Bedroom modulars — which include chests, desks and bookcases — are good investments which also can be used in a study or family room later on.

— Good bedding is a best buy for everyone. Quality mattress and spring manufacturers offer longterm warranties and make replacements or adjustments depending upon years of use should a complaint arise. Water and air mattresses require special frames and bedcovers and have varying guarantees, but few, if any, match the conventional bedding guarantee terms.

— Purchase terms usually are subject to state requirements and consumer protection laws are in effect. Generally, deposits range from 20-25 percent of total purchase. Most charge purchases allow for a three-day-change-of-mind cancellation, but every buyer should read the fine print before making a signed commitment.

THOUGHTS ON WIVES

Their (the Lilliputians') maxim is, that among people of quality, a wife should always be a reasonable and agreeable companion, because she cannot always be young.

Swift, Gulliver's Travels, I, 6

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE

Libraries are preferably done in deep restful tones. Deeper colors close in a room. This is definitely a pleasing quality in a library where a sense of space is less desirable than the feeling of retreat, shelter and comfort. Avoid active large scale patterns or contrasts.

Dining rooms may be gaily or vigorously decorated as their occupancy is for short periods. A certain amount of brilliance is not out of place.

Period rooms have their distinctive sets of colors and choice should be made largely out of the characteristic woods and materials. English mahogany is a vibrant tone against cream, gray green or blue walls; their values will depend on the size of the room and the exposure. Avoid positive greens and reds if you wish to spare your guests. In any other room the wearers of clashing colors can move about and suffer quietly; in the dining room they are doomed to sit and feel like a permanent off note in a bad harmony.

Foyers and halls may utilize strong colors and contrast at will.

¾ cup margarine or butter, melted
1 tbsp. chili sauce
1 tbp. all-purpose flour
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. thyme leaves
⅛ tsp. liquid hot pepper sauce
1 egg, beaten
½ cup cracker meal
2 tbsps. chopped parsley
½ cup dry bread crumbs
2 tbsps. margarine or butter, melted

Thaw clams if frozen. Drain and chop clams. In a 10-inch skillet, cook celery, onion and garlic in ¼ cup margarine until vegetables are tender. Add in flour, salt, pepper, thyme and liquid hot pepper sauce; cook until thick, stirring constantly. Stir a little of the hot sauce into egg; add egg mixture to remaining sauce, stirring constantly. Add cracker meal and parsley; mix well. Place in 6 well-greased individual shells or ramekins. Combine bread crumbs and 2 tablespoons margarine. Sprinkle over top of clam mixture. Bake in hot oven, 400-degrees F., for 10 minutes or until heated thoroughly and lightly browned. Makes six servings.

DRIVING NOISE

As if driving in traffic isn't bad enough, the noise itself may drive you into a padded cell. According to PREVENTION, a Danish physician found that the wheel-screeching, engine-revving and horn blowing were making life miserable for women living in a generally noisy area. He surveyed 960 housewives and found they reported more psychiatric consultations, used more sleeping medications and tranquilizers and entered mental hospitals more often than women blessed with peach and quiet.

THANKS — Ron Betenbough, Ranch vice president, thanks Davey Abell, of Ralls Delinting Company, for cottonseed and Earl Bourland, of Ralls International, for farming equipment and maintenance. In the cotton trailer are ranchers Trever Shelton, Marshall Lara, Tim Valasquez, Kelvin Kelsey, Charles Lewis and Jackie Williams.

EARLY MORN — On a typical West Texas morning, rancher Jackie Williams leads the horses out to pasture. Boys take part in all aspects of the farming operations at the Ranch, learning valuable skills and increasing their self-esteem.

First Crop In At Texas Boys' Ranch

1979 was a very good year at the Texas Boys' Ranch.

One of the things that made it so successful was the result of a decision by the board of directors to make a farming operation part of the child care and development program at the Ranch.

The board felt that such a program would contribute immeasurably to the welfare of the young ranchers, which is the primary concern in all matters concerning Texas Boys' Ranch, by providing an opportunity for them to learn farming skills in a healthy, outdoor environment, increasing their own sense of self-worth and that they were contributing to the life of the Ranch, rather than just benefiting from its largesse.

And, of course, the crops produced would also contribute to the economic base and self-sufficiency of the whole ranch operation.

Without the coooperation of interested members of the area community, however, the success of the first year of the program would not have been possible.

The boys and the board are equally proud of the first harvest under the new program, which has just been completed with the vital help and assistance of the Lubbock community and local ranchers and businesses who pitched in and provided equipment and help with the crop.

This fall, 6,000 bales of alfalfa hay were grown and sold from the ranch, and 60 bales of dryland cotton are now being ginned. The crops were produced at the ranch at very little expense, because of the cooperation of local industry — the cotton seed was donated, the fertilizer acquired at cost, and the planting, plowing, etc., donated.

The board hopes that the time will come when, with the continued help of local farmers, the ranch can obtain enough equipoment to toally farm the land, using the cottage parents and the young ranchers as the work force.

To accomplish this self-supporting role, the ranch would need to obtain equipment to farm 150 acres of dry land cotton, 50 acres of irrigated alfalfa and 50 acres of irrigated improved pasture for beef production.

Some items which are needed are planter, lister and cultivator, tandem disk, cotton rower, shredder, and beef and/or dairy cattle (care and use of lifestock would be an important part of the farming program at the ranch).

The Texas Boys Ranch board welcomes the input of local people who are interested in helping the ranch in these ways or contributing to the farming program with ideas of their own.

Twins Study Ways Of Improving Mortality Rates For Multiple Births

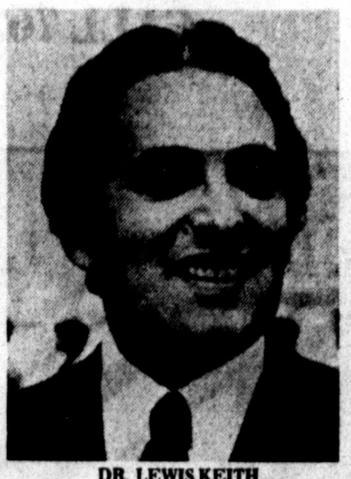

By RUTH NATHAN ANDERSON

CHICAGO (WNS) — Twins are cute, triplets are show-stoppers, quadruplets make money in media advertising and quintuplets become world famous. That is, if they live beyond their premature delivery, don't die stillborn, or arrive without fatal physiological flaws that end their lives before age two.

When Chicago's Dr. Louis Keith was a young resident gynecologist-obstetrician at the Cook County Hospital at a time when 20,000 mothers a year gave birth in that city facility, he became deeply concerned by the great number of twins and other multiples who died in the incubators, at term, or shortly after birth.

This "pregnancy wastage" preyed on his sensibilities.

He learned that the risk of death for twins, the commonest form of multiple birth, in the first month of life is five times greater than with singles and remains three times higher than average for the first two years. He noted a singular lack of medical research or even interest in the preventive deaths of multiple-birth children.

DR. LEWIS KEITH

Almost three years ago, Dr. Keith felt he could do something about it. Then 41, he was a comfortably set professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the Northwestern University Medical School and Prentice Women's Hospital in the fashinable near north side of Chicago. He and his identical twin brother, Donald Keith, logistics engineer and a retired Army lieutenant colonel, formed the only health group of its kind in the country, The Center for the Study of Multiple Gestation, soon to be called the less stuffy Center for the Study of Multiple Births. Setting up modest offices at Prentice with a $10,000 gift, they announced these aims:

— To arrest the alarming incidence of premature multiple babies and thus drastically reduce the fatality rate.

— To decrease the risk of dangerous toxemia in mothers birthing multiples and to establish Well Baby Clinics for Mothers of Multiples.

— To support scientific forums and conventions to help accelerate medical and social research about twinning, tripling, etc.

— To act as a catalyst in the dissemination of information about multiple birth phenomena, for both parents and physicians.

— To dispel myths that twins are incapable of being apart, that all have ESP (extra-sensory perception), or that they are "freaky."

"About fifty percent of the thirty thousand twins born each year arrive prematurely," Dr. Keith said, "and have a poor chance of survival. They are far too underweight and woefully lacking in pulmonary development; they're not able to overcome critical respiratory difficulties.

"With awareness and a little bit of effort, a well-trained gynecologist can detect symptoms of incipient premature labor and help to stave off active labor. We can assuredly decrease the mortality rate by this alertness alone.

"For example, a young but soundly informed senior resident in this hospital noted that his patient, with seven weeks to go until term, was much larger than average. An ultrasound scan showed she was gestating not twins, but triplets (one in 8,000 chance). She was having pain and spotting, symptoms of premature labor. She was ordered hospitalized for complete bed rest and received medication for halting uterine contraction. In her fortieth week, happy to say, she was delivered of healthy triplets weighing a good-sized four to five pounds each."

Dr. Keith noted that, despite all our sophisticated diagnostic technology, an astonishing 40 percent of multiples arrive as a complete surprise to both parents and doctors. The reason, he suggests, is that many expectant mothers, out of fear and ignorance, will not submit to ultrasonic or even routine pelvic examinations; also, many gynecologists are not well-grounded in dealing with multiple birth.

"It's the stepchild of all medical studies," Dr. Keith declared. "A med student is lucky if he or she gets one lesson — I said one lesson — during four years of study, on the subject of multiple birth and its special problems. Twins constitute only one percent of all babies born and higher multiples are certainly rare (one in 730,000 for quads; one in 60 million for quints), so it is a concern shoved aside, although saving even one more baby, one more mother, a year — and we can actually save thousands — is worth all the effort science can bring. Early diagnosis of multiple birth, at least by the twentieth week of pregnancy, can help dramatically to reduce risks to infants and mothers."

There is no simple, accurate, cheap method of determining, at birth, whether twins are dizygotic (fraternal), resulting from two eggs fertilized by two separate sperm; or monozygotic (identical), resulting from a fertilized egg that has accidentally split. Identicals will have the same blood type, similar handprints and footprints, and identical dental impressions when teeth appear; fraternals have different genes and may not look alike at all.

"Hospitals should have consulting genetic experts present at multiple deliveries to accurately assess the nature of the twins, another goal for which the center is striving," Keith said.

Amazingly, the Keith brothers were not aware they were identical — although they look strikingly alike — until two years ago, when they were 42. They had been born to Jeannette and Myron Keith in Chicago's Michael Reese Hospital where only a cursory examination of the babies had been made and they had been pronounced fraternal. Then, in 1977, while attending a medical convention in Washington, D.C., they submitted to tests which showed that they were without doubt identical twins, not fraternal.

Said Dr. Keith, "If we had known, I think we would have looked at each other differently. Either we would have been even closer, or we would have fought harder." Said Donald, the center's executive director in charge of press information, "I had a sense of elation on learning this."

Up until about age four, the twins were idioglossic, common among twins constantly thrown together: They spoke their own language — by grunt, motion and jabbering sounds — that no one else could understand. However, like most twins, they outgrew this when they came into the company of other children at the start of school and didn't need speech therapy. They were so highly competitive, they were separated into different classes by the third grade and went on to different colleges.

Contrary to wide belief, thousands of twins do not have extrasensory perception, although the Keiths do. "Don is a facile writer," Dr. Keith said, "and I am not. When I feel blank about writing a medical paper, I make believe I am Don and then the words come so fast I can hardly get them down on the typewriter. Also, he can be a thousand miles away and, if I want to phone him, he'll probably ring me first."

Donald is certain, while there are no new formal statistics around, that the rate of one pair of twins born out of every 90 births has been increasing steadily in the last few years. He attributes this to prescribed fertility pills which often induce abnormally high ovulation; the pill, because after a woman stops this form of birth control, the ovaries, which have been unnaturally inactive, now want to "do their thing" and the woman becomes unusually fertile; more older women having babies — women over 35 are three times more likely to have twins than young women.

"So you see," Donald said, "the need for our center is greater than ever."

Twins aren't necessarily double the pleasure for parents. Parents will say that, although twins often share a bond even deeper than that between mother and child and can be a delight to watch develop, having twins can also be a double headache. For starters, new nursing mothers worry about unrelieved sore nipples and not having enough milk. On the latter count, they needn't worry. The more they suckle, the more the supple is replenished. One nursing mother told Dr. Keith she had nursed her twins 36 times during a 24-hour period. Of course, like all new mothers, she needed all the rest she could get.

Mothers of twins need four eyes instead of two to keep a rein on the mischief and accidents twins are prone to. Twins are able to help each other accomplish perilous things, such as climbing out a window; even small fry can boost each other up.

For these reasons and more, the Keiths' center supports the objectives of the National Organization of Mothers of Twins Clubs in their effort to have parents share their twin-raising experience with others. Dr. Louis and Donald Keith edited its guide book, "The Care of Twin Children," written by registered nurses Rosemary Theroux and Josephine F. Tingley and available through the center ($6.95) at 333 East Superior Street, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Two famous sets of twins, although they had happy childhoods, wish their mothers had been more enlightened about how to raise them to be more independent of each other. Advice columists Ann Landers and her twin Abigail Van Buren reveal they dressed alike until they were married!

"Our mom made us feel guilty of disloyalty if we tried to associate too much with others and didn't spend most of our time together," Miss Landers said. "Back then, parents were not advised to foster more wholesome separateness and independence. It's no coincidence that Abby and I are in the same line of work."

Jane Boyd Schwartz, former Doublemint twin (of the famous Wrigley commercials), reached in Beverly Hills, said, "When Joan married before I did, my dependence on her was overwhelmingly hard to ease away from. She would start a sentence and I would finish it. We were into each other's pockets. It took me some time before I could stand on my own."

Today, Jane is Mrs. Donald Hackett and lives in Evanston, Ill. She and Joan each have three children and are fulltime homemakers.

The Keiths are adamant about not accepting government funding for their non-profit center, which is supported largely by grants from the Fields Foundation, Ltd., and helped by their own funds. "We don't want to be bogged down in masses of red tape," Dr. Keith said. "We want to run a worthwhile independent course. We want to sponsor not just basic research, but imaginative projects.

"For instance, there is the phenomenon of 'the vanishing twin.' A Doctor Lucien Schneider documented cases where pelvic examinations of women twelve weeks pregnant indicated twins. Nevertheless, in the birth, only one infant emerged. No one has studied why one fetus does not survive and how the mysteriously absorbed fetal matter might contribute to systematic problems."

Dr. Keith mused that hospitals get reflected glory in publicizing the birth of multiples. "This helps them to fulfill expectations of generous research grants," he said, "but rarely if ever is any money put where it is so badly needed — in the prevention of shockingly high multiple birth mortality. This is what we are determined to do through our center, without Uncle Sam but with the help of good private philanthropic foundations."

Federal Programs Soften Impact Of Fuel Costs

By GHITA LEVINE

WASHINGTON (WNS) — Electric bills as high as house payments down in Lakeland, Fla. An elderly couple living on oatmeal and potatoes in Twin Falls, Idaho, because all their money is going for fuel. Heating oil doubles in 18 months in Pennsylvania. And Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., says the choice is narrowing for his people. "What is more important, food or warmth?" he asks.

These statements were made at special Washington hearings on the impact of rising energy costs to older Americans. Disturbing as they are, they are even more alarming because they were made in September 1974, more than five years ago.

This year, the dilemma of "heat and eat" could be even worse. "All of us are feeling the shock of surging energy costs," says Robert Benedict, U.S. commissioner on aging, "but the shock strikes hardest at the lowest end of the economic scale and on the highest age levels."

At least 6.9 million older persons could be in potential danger of surviving the winter without fuel assistance. These are the people at or below government poverty levels, most of whom live in substandard, poorly insulated housing.

The elderly poor, Benedict says, spend three to four times as large a share of their incomes on fuel and utilities than any other group. In addition, they are particularly vulnerable to health problems to cold, hypothermia, pneumonia and influenza. Pneumonia and influenza combine as the fourth leading cause of death in elderly Americans.

Now two major federal programs are winding their way through Washington and down to the local areas.

The first is the Energy Crisis Assistance Program, a heftier version of an emergency plan that helps pay fuel bills and that has been operating each winter since 1976. Last year, the program distributed $200 million nationwide. So far, $230 million already has been distributed to the states, with another $150 million expected later. The money is given out according to the size of the population, their income levels and the severity of the winter weather in the region.

Any low income person of any age may get help with their fuel bills under this plan, up to $250 per family. However, Washington asked for special priority to older persons.

Income guidelines are $4,250 for a single person, $5,625 for a couple and up to $8,950 for a family of four. In most states, the money will be paid directly to the fuel vendors or the utility companies, not to the homeowner.

A second, larger sum of money is coming to the states under the so-called Energy Allowance Program, a three-year plan that is a version of President Carter's original energy assistance proposal that will draw its money from the proposed "windfall profits tax" to be levied on the oil producers.

So far, Congress has approved $1.2 billion for 1980. More money will be approved for the next two years. Of this year's allotment, $400 million will go directly in cash payments to low income aged, those people who now receive Supplemental Security Income, a welfare pension for elderly and disabled persons.

More than 2 million people 65 and over receive these monthly SSI checks and they will automatically get additional money this winter without showing proof of fuel bills. Another 1.6 million older persons are estimated to be eligible for these payments, but have never signed up for the SSI program.

Any low income elderly person is urged to rush to the nearest Social Security office and register for SSI. Once approved, they will get fuel money automatically.

The rest of the Energy Allowance money for the year, $792.6 million, will be sent to the states on a formula basis. Governors will have a large say in how they want to distribute these funds.

Finally, the Administration on Aging that sends money down to local area agencies on aging for community services, has sent down word that so-called Title III funds should be used to help in winter emergencies with the purchase of fuel, food or clothing, emergency evacuation, emergency delivery of supplies, emergency home repairs, snow removal and for servicing of any other weather-related crisis.

Call your local aging office or aging commission (it's in the phone book.)

THOUGHTS ON LOVE

Love and marriage are two intentions that go by separate and distinct roads. A woman may give herself to a man whom she would not at all want to have married; I do not mean because of the state of his fortune, but because of his personal qualities. Few men have married their mistresses who have not repented it.

Local Woman Seeks Mrs. America Title

By JACQUE HUTCHINS
Family News Staff

Stephanie Billman, Lubbock Avalanche—Journal employee, has been selected to represent the Lubbock area in the "Mrs. Texas 1980" contest.

The crowning of "Mrs. Texas" will be Feb. 17 in Houston at the Shamrock Hilton. Mrs. Billman will be competing for the crown against 50 other Texas women.

The winner of the Mrs. Texas contest will go on to compete in Las Vegas for the Mrs. America title. According to Gail Clark, Mrs. Texas 1979, today's Mrs. America contest, from the state to the national levels, pays tribute to the candidate who best represents the attributes of the contemporary married American woman.

The attributes the judges are looking for are intelligence, poise and beauty. No talent competition is included in the ceremony, but the traditional evening gown and bathing suit competition will be a part of the pageant.

Mrs. Billman has worked for the A-J for one year. She has learned many facets of newspaper production and is presently working as a paste-up artist. The petite 23-year-old is striving to learn even more about newspapers through her studies as a journalism major at Texas Tech University.

Mrs. Billman was married in 1978 to Jeff, who is also attending Tech as an architecture student.

After seeing an advertisement in the newspaper, Mrs. Billman decided to apply as a contestant. "It makes me feel good to know that I was chosen out of the hundreds that applied," she said.

Mrs. Billman feels the contest is a good oportunity to recognize married women. "I think the pageant is supporting something that is very worthwhile. And that is just because a woman is married doesn't mean she can't be attractive or intelligent," she said.

The lucky woman who is crowned Mrs. Texas will be awarded a cash prize, wardrobe and will be under contract to the Jim Allen Agency for one year.

Face Lifts Topic Of Book

"Cosmetic Surgery May Be For You" by Dr. George Willeford (Shoal Creek Publishers, $4.50)

In this highly readable book, Dr. George Willeford discusses the medical, psychological and practical aspects of cosmetic surgery from a three-fold perspective: as a medical doctor, as a psychiatrist and as a recipient of a face lift operation.

Willeford briefly explains how many operations are performed, the results that can be expected, possible complications and postoperative precautions that should be observed. A prospective patient can then assess whether the expected results are worth the risks, time and expense involved.

"Cosmetic Surgery May Be For You" stresses that prospective patients must have realistic expectations about what cosmetic surgery can accomplish. Willeford clearly does not view cosmetic surgery as a panacea for saving a failing marriage, helping lagging self-confidence or achieving instant social success. Rather, he views cosmetic surgery simply, and realistically, as a means for improving annoying, unsightly or uncomfortable physical imperfections that may worry or embarrass people.

Willeford and his wife both underwent face lifts, and their personal experiences from the time they first considered getting face lifts until the last scar healed permits the reader to at least partially feel what it is like to go through cosmetic surgery.

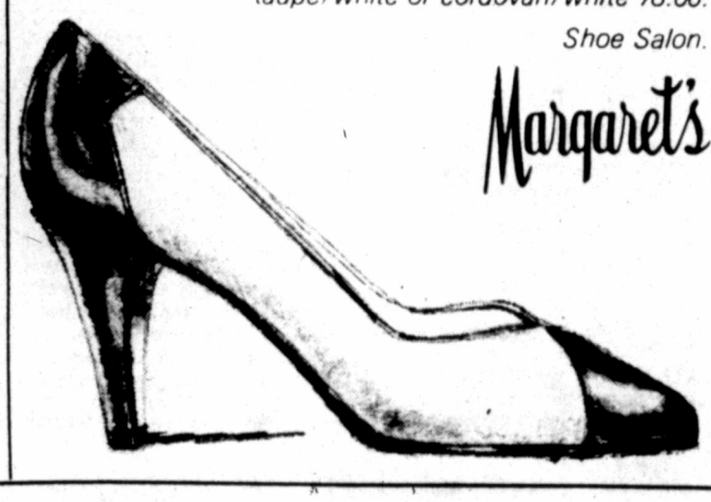

A series of drawings illustrate just how several procedures are done and the changes that occur. Included is an extensive glossary of medical terms; and a summary chart gives a convenient overview of important considerations considerations for the most common types of cosmetic surgery.

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

Last week I received in the mail a copy of George Burns' new record album, a collection of country music titled "I Wish I Was 18 Again" (Mercury). And I'm wondering what's happened to pride these days. And common sense. It's no surprise that the album is, for the most part, atrocious. The only thing in its favor is that Burns certainly is aware that it's atrocious and refuses to take himself seriously. No, the surprise arrives with so many big-name personalities — singers, actors, you name it — embarrassing themselves for the almighty buck these days.

OK, so the Burns LP is a joke, a gimmick. So was Steve Martin's best selling book "Cruel Shoes," but that didn't hide the fact it was garbage. While Martin was having his gobbledygook published, thousands of serious, struggling authors were receiving rejection notices. They may write well but, hey, who's going to pay to see them wear a fake arrow through their head, right? The same goes for George Burns. While Burns is enjoying more acting success at age 84 than he ever did at 18, and deservedly so, there's no denying a lot of talented music-makers were passed over so he could enjoy a gimmick.

GEORGE BURNS
Making an extra buck in recording studio

The idea is even more stupid when one considers that records are made from petroleum derivatives and the energy shortage has already seen record prices hiked.

But let's not put the blame on Burns. He's not the only one attracted by a flash of green. Even worse is 70-year-old Ethel Merman, who released 1979's most embarrassing record with "The Ethel Merman Disco Album" (A&M). I mean, here is a musical institution, the star of shows like "Annie Get Your Gun" and "Gypsy," and she's trying to join the younger pack and sing disco. Here is a woman whose voice used to knock us over, and now she's overpowered by the percussion allowed to dominate by the producer mixing the LP. And consider the classic songs she drags down to the gutter with her: tunes like "Everything's Coming Up Roses," "I Get A Kick Out Of You" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band." It's a sad joke, and it hurts to see Miss Merman suckered in.

The end result, of course, is a few fast bucks and instant oblivion for the LPs. Both albums will sell as a gag gift, both will then pass into the discount racks and, finally, into the trash can.

The music industry isn't the only one plagued by this lack of personal pride. Actors are taking anything they can get these days just to keep their faces on the movie screens. Look at Sean Connery, with "Meteor" and the nonsensical "Cuba." Look at all the big stars hooked by Irwin Allen's fat paychecks. Look at Laurence Olivier, stating flat out he'll do everything that comes his way and proving it with horrible performances in "The Betsy" and "Dracula." Look at Michael Caine in practically anything. And please take note of the low-budget science fiction craze which has mushroomed since the release of the big-budget "Star Wars" in 1977.

No less than three examples are now on Lubbock screens, notable only in the quality actors who die with them.

The biggest is the re-issue of 1978's "The Visitor" (at the South Plains Cinema), a horrendous bore which unfortunately boasts a very appealing — and misleading — television and newspaper advertising campaign. Trying to rip off "Close Encounters Of The Third Kind," "The Exorcist," "The Fury" and "The Omen" in one simultaneous stroke, the picture ridicules its cast of John Huston, Shelley Winters, Glenn Ford and Sam Peckinpah. Huston, of course, is already contributing to the Worst Movies list with his performance in "Winter Kills," but is even worse here as a heavenly agent with an army of skinheads trying to stop a demonic child. Oh brother. Miss Winters is the nanny who once gave birth to her own demonic child, and she treats the role as though asked to remake "Whoever Slew Auntie Roo?" while singing about how mammy's little baby loves shortning bread. And poor Glenn Ford, though in a blessedly small part, manages to get pecked to death by the girl's bird while driving on a freeway.

I'd probably be embarrassed for Peckinpah, too, but for the fact I never recognized him on screen.

Then you sure don't want to miss "Star Crash" and "Laser Blast," both held over at the Village. The latter finds Roddy McDowell and Keenan Wynn sacrificing their careers for the sake of some weirdo who finds an alien's laser gun and starts blasting everyone in sight. Of course, the gun also manages to decay his brain, hamper his coordination and turn his face green. McDowell is the friendly small town doctor who finds it "strange" that a piece of metal should be growing out of the boy's chest. Wynn's role doesn't make a lick of sense. But even this is better than Marjoe Gortner, Christopher Plummer and Caroline Munroe in "Star Crash."

Set against a Technicolor outer space which resembles nothing more than a bowl of Lucky Charms cereal, "Star Crash" shows off Miss Munroe's chest and little else. Plummer, the man who made "Royal Hunt Of The Sun" and gave new meaning to the word villain in "The Silent Partner," is now the dumb emperor trying to take over the galaxy. Gortner, who has always expressed potential, is the idiotic half-robot Han Solo type who saves the day at the nick of time. Mind you, I have no gripes with Miss Munroe. She never claimed she could act, just smile.

But the list could go on. Sure, actors and singers have to eat. But I'm not yet convinced that any of the above talents are starving to the point where they must become involved in projects they know — or should know — to be trash. They might cite inflation and rising taxes. One would hope they'd also think of their fans who are also fighting inflation and taxes and, it should be noted, the price of record albums and movie tickets.

Those of you who missed out on getting tickets to the Feb. 7 concert by The Eagles at Fort Worth's Tarrant County Convention Center, don't give up hope. The early sellout has inspired a second concert by the same band at the same hall on Feb. 8. Tickets (top price $13) are still available. Other concerts in that neck of the woods include Styx and Point Blank Wednesday at the Tarrant County Convention Center; The Marshall Tucker Band and Firefall on Friday and Saturday at The Wintergarden; Rush and Max Webster on Saturday at the Tarrant County Convention Center; Toto on Feb. 3 at The Wintergarden; Peter, Paul & Mary on Feb. 9 at the Dallas County Convention Center; and Crystal Gayle at 8 and 11 p.m. March 1 at the Hyatt Regency Ballroom.

Most movie buffs already know that Robert Altman has been signed to direct the feature length movie "Popeye," with comic Robin Williams in the title role and Shelley Duvall cast as Olive Oil. But we've learned of additional castings recently. Paul Dooley, so wonderful as the father in "Breaking Away," has been signed to play Wimpy. And Bluto will be portrayed by the swarthy Paul Smith, who learned Turkish and was horribly believable as the sadistic prison guard in "Midnight Express."

Friends who discover one of my cats is named Sergio usually immediately assume I am fond of Sergio Mendez. Nope. Film director Sergio Leone, the man who made Clint Eastwood a star and went on to give us classics like "Once Upon A Time In The West," is the feline's namesake. But for years I've wondered what Leone is doing. He helped produce a film called "My Name Is Nobody," and Variety magazine printed a double-page spread advertising an epic Leone planned to film on the subject of American crime called "Once Upon A Time In America." But then the publicity stopped.

Well, we still don't have a Leone movie coming out. But it looks like we can kiss off "Once Upon A Time In America." According to an Associated Press story, author Norman Mailer was hired to write the film's script. It was never used, he was never paid and he wound up suing Leone for $62,500 — and winning. The AP article further stated that Leone scrapped plans for "Once Upon A Time In America" after receiving Mailer's script and deeming it "junk."

'Texas' Auditions Set

Auditions for the musical drama "TEXAS," to be staged June 18 through August 23 at Palo Duro Canyon, will take place from 1 to 4 p.m. on Feb. 24 in room one of the Texas Tech University music building. The directors will be hiring actors, dancers, singers, technicians, and instrumentalists.

Actors should prepare a memorized scene not to exceed three minutes. Actors will double as members of the chorus and must audition for singing, as well as acting. The "TEXAS" production is outdoors and does not use microphones.

Dancers should arrive for auditions at 3 p.m. Men and women with ballet, modern dance and/or body movement training are desired. However, experience and training are not required for some sequences in the show. Applicants should bring appropriate clothing.

Singers should bring one prepared number which will show off the singing voice to best advantage. An accompanist will be furnished, though singers may bring their own. Many singers will double in minor speaking roles and/or as technical assistants, so each singer must present a short memorized selection to display the quality of the speaking voice.

Men and women applying as technicians should bring a profile of past accomplishments in the theater; they will be interviewed personally.

Instrumentalists should note the show makes use of violin, banjo, string bass, accordian and standard guitar.

Company members selected are placed under a written contract and must be available for the entire season.

Auditions will also be held in Dallas on Jan. 26, Austin on Jan. 27, Albuquerque on Feb. 3 and Canyon on Feb. 17.

By Doug Pullen

The scene is Ft. Collins, Colo. It's a balmy day in the middle of July, 1975. A crowd of 50,000 to 70,000 people has assembled in a football stadium to witness a concert event headlined by The Rolling Stones. The day's activities are diverse and numerous, many of them coming spontaneously while a procession of warm-up groups, including The Charlie Daniels Band, tries to whip up some of the enthusiasm the crowd is reserving for the headliners.

Typical of the warm-up groups' feeble attempts at gaining some crowd recognition was a remark made by Rufus singer Chaka Khan while performing in scattered rain showers. "Don't worry," she said as a celebrity-filled helicopter flew overhead during her show, "Mick and the boys will be out later."

CHAKA KHAN

The comment drew more cheers than any single Rufus song performed that day. And it's a shame. Because the class with which Rufus played was exemplary of the musical superiority the band would command in later days. Later days, that is, like today.

Rufus has weathered the accumlated successes of gold and platinum selling albums and singles without fading. The band continues to hone in on its direction, blending strains of soul, funk, disco, jazz, rhythm and blues and rock into a highly flexible, listenable sound. The group's musicianship is unbending.

But one of the vital keys to the band's sound is singer Chaka Khan. Miss Khan has emerged over the past couple of years as one of the finest weavers of song within the business. Her voice has a visceral sensuality similar to that of a saxophone, one of the more sultry musical instruments in popular music today. With that voice, Miss Khan is able to take simple or complex words and refine and mold them into complementary word sculptures.

This quality led to a solo career which began last year with her first solo LP, "Chaka." The fluid blending of soul, gospel and jazz stylings brought forth a new versatility in her voice. The aid of producer Arif Mardin's arrangements and helpful contributions from the likes of George Benson, Cissy Houston, Richard Tee and members of The Average White Band among others didn't hurt.

"Masterjam" (MCA) may seem a pretentious title for Rufus and Chaka's first album together in a couple of years. But it isn't, really, when one considers the ingredients that went into the album's production and the mastery with which it was produced.

First of all, ace master producer Quincy Jones was ushered in to supervise the recording sessions. Jones is known generally as one of the top producers in the soul and jazz fields, not to mention an established recording artist in his own right. (Some may remember him solely, though, for the theme song he wrote for TV's "Sanford and Son" series.)

Jones' superlative talents, especially in arrangement, lend to a type of balance heretofore unknown on previous Rufus albums. This makes for an outstanding recording, given the high level of quality the musicians have attained during their course together. What has resulted is perhaps one of the best soul albums on the charts today, a fact being rewarded by the success of the album (number 2 in the soul charts) and the single, "Do You Love What You Feel?" (also number 2 in the sould charts).

"Masterjam" is the kind of album anybody with even a remote sense of open-mindedness can hear without prejudice. The quality of the arrangements, the superiority of the musicianship is undeniable. And the diversity reflected in the album's nine songs is of a nature that is fast becoming desirable to both recording stars and their public.

Not a single weak link exists on this album. Something is offered to the most general of audiences. The songs are highly listenable and, of course, danceable (an important ingredient of every Rufus album). Original tunes like keyboardist David Wolinski's "Do You Love What You Feel" and "Any Love" are replete with indefatigable hooks.

Such songs are complemented by John Robinson's consistently crisp, rhythmic drumming and the highly stylized funk charts played by guitarist Tony Maiden, whose "Walk The Rockway" is one of the better dance tunes on the album.

Among the best material on "Masterjam" are songs like "Body Heat," which was co-written by Quincy Jones and three other composers. The song is typical of the new sophistication overtaking soul music. "Body Heat" contains the right hooks to attract a mass audience, while proving an experiment in altered tempos and layered, textured sound. The song is soaked with the sexuality Miss Khan portrays visually and musically, while containing a solid musical base.

David Wolinski's "Any Love" is like this as well. Like "Body Heat," the song is the adequate testing ground for Jones' succinct, rich brass arrangements, which are wrapped around a solid backbeat. Miss Khan proves her mastery time and time again with songs like "Any Love," displaying a cool sensuality while artistically molding words in a fashion distinctive only of Chaka Khan.

But "Masterjam" isn't all technical excellence. It is an album which capitalizes upon the very warmth of its visceral nature. Miss Khan's earthy vocal style embodies this sound, while the instrumentation is less noticeably so. The material deals lyrically with common topics: life as a single, self-revelations and, of course, love. But "Masterjam" isn't an uneven mix of these elements.

Instead, "Masterjam" impresses as a calculated mix of technical mastery and visceral spontaneity. Such a combination is rare in the music world, especially in the highly exploited area of soul music. But chances are "Masterjam" will set a precedent long remembered and followed by quality soul acts (i.e. Earth, Wind and Fire, The Commodores, Brass Construction).

"Masterjam" is an album destined to change the face of soul music; expanding its horizons while (hopefully) taking its audience along with it.

Good bookings continue to highlight the local club scene. Fat Dawg's has been diversifying its incoming talent, bringing Texas bands like The Explosives (imitation punk) and The Cobras (one of Texas' better jazz bands). Bluesman Albert Collins will bring his Ice Pickers to the club Tuesday. That's the night Rick Derringer debuts at Rox.

Attendance continues to range from good to outstanding. I just thought you people should be recognized for your continued and growing support of a continually growing club atmosphere in Lubbock.

John Sargent Subject Of Tech Art Seminar Tuesday

John Singer Sargent (1856-1925), one of America's foremost 19th century painters, was born in Florence, acclaimed first in Paris, offered knighthood by the British and became Boston's leading portraitist. He will be the subject of an art seminar at 10 a.m. Tuesday at The Texas Tech University Museum.

Rabbi Alexander Kline is the lecturer. There is an admission charge.

Sargent, the son of a New England doctor and a mother who had a passion for European travel, did not set foot in the United States until he was 20. He was, however, seriously interested in art at the age of 12 and at 16 he began studying in the Paris studio of Carolus-Duran. Sargent adopted the manner of his teacher as a foundation on which to build his own works.

Although he visited Spain and the painter, Velasquez, Sargent made his reputation in Paris in 1882 when he exhibited a portrait of a female and a wild scene of a Spanish dance, "El Jaleo." At 26, he was acclaimed Paris' painter of the year.

After six successful years, he met his first serious reverse when he undertook the portrait of the celebrated beauty Mme. Pierre Gautreau. Sargent painted the flamboyant woman as he saw her, including her shocking decolletage and the lavender skin — which he said looked like "blotting paper" — which she affected.

The painting caused the subject to have hysterics when it was shown. Her rivals laughed. Her relatives demanded the picture be withdrawn from public view, and Sargent was reduced to paying his rent by painting his landlord's daughter. He moved to London.

Sargent had repainted the canvas, called it "Mme. X," and wrote that it was the best portrait he had ever done. The Metropolitan Museum eventually acquired it.

Before England fully accepted him, Sargent was warmly welcomed as a portraitist in Boston, and he made continual trips to the New England city to work. He kept his base, however, in London.

Sargent was accused of superficiality, but he insisted that if surface appearances were accurately rendered, all profundities followed. He made one short, unsuccesful excursion into the Impressionism of Monet, but basically adhered all his life to his own style.

Country Style

By Russ Parsons

Tommy Hancock, in one way or another, has always been one firm step off the beat of society. He was a bar owner when Lubbock was dry, a born-again Christian before it was popular and a country musician before it was socially acceptable.

Through it all, he has been Lubbock's alternative bandleader. If you wanted something different, hang around Tommy and it was bound to come up.

He and his family, which doubles as his band, split the Hub City a long time ago, first for Denver and now for Florida. But I guess the real question is how did someone so resolutely fighting the current of the mainstream stay in Lubbock for so long? Maybe it was the challenge.

"I never really felt like a part of anything here," Hancock said during a brief hiatus in Lubbock on his way to the beach. "I guess I was an outcast. Lubbock was really unkind to me in some ways, but without exception I've met the nicest people here. It was the mentality of Lubbock that always got to me. Lubbock was always a tooth and nail fight for me. The only thing I ever liked about the place was the good people. Other than that..."

But in many ways Lubbock was good to Hancock. Raised by poor grandparents, he built a successful financial base here. At one time he owned two of the only bars in town and was the most popular bandleader for miles around. "As soon as I got old enough to hustle for myself, I never had a poor day," he said.

For the first bar owner to let Buddy Holly play in his club and for a guy who was a heavy influence on Waylon Jennings (not to mention Lubbock's current crop of new wave country artists), Hancock's fame has been mainly regional.

"I never had time to seek the big time. Sure, it would be nice to be a big star, but man, I've got a family to feed. Seeking the big time and making a living with music are basically two different things. And besides, I guess I'd rather be doing what I want to do on the bottom than doing what I don't want to do on top.

"Seeking the truth is what should come first to each person. If you go after the big time without seeking the truth, you're in for some crummy karma."

How can a man who has made his living routinely breaking the law (serving alcohol in a dry town) and consorting with the roughest elements, say that seeking the truth and treading the spiritual path are the most important things to him?

"For one thing, my search for the truth has very little to do with morality," he said. "I've seen a lot of alchoholics who were a lot better people than some of the ministers I've known. I never judge people by their consumption of booze. As far as running clubs is concerned, that was an amoral act to me. I didn't like to do it, but I needed to do it to have a place to play.

"Shoot, I was raised poor white trash. Violence and bad stuff was so much a part of my life that I didn't know any different. People who are in hell all the time don't know it."

That part of his life has been history for the last several years. That broke when he took his wife and family to live in a log cabin in the mountains of New Mexico. He still retained his interest in the Cotton Club, but left it to his step-father to run. After several months of the mountain life though, cabin fever set in. To ease it, he went down to Red River and talked a bar owner there into letting him play on weekends.

At first his family of musicians was pretty awful, but over the years the Supernatural Family Band has grown into a fairly talented group. And they still retain that distinctive sound.

"We got our distinctive sound because we weren't good enough to imitate anybody else," Hancock said, only half joking. "Really, the kids never had much of a country music background, they just listened to me and (his wife) Charlene. I never taught them anything. I mean, if they wanted to know how to finger a chord, I showed them. But I didn't tell them how to play the songs or anything like that. I let them do it themselves to see if we couldn't get a new sound."

And, according to Hancock, that's what country music in general needs — a new sound. "Country music has turned into city music," he said. "If your definition of country music be that music which country people listen to, country music isn't that anymore."

Which brings us to the current explosion of country music in Lubbock. Hancock is enthusiastic about it, and as father-figure to most of the musicians, I guess he should be.

"Contrary to popular belief, it ain't been popular in Lubbock to play country music until lately," he said. "I think what's going on now in Lubbock is a natural cultural development. If you consider folk art and folk music culture, and I guess you have to. There's a freedom here that wasn't here before. I guess the sandstorms don't seem so bad now."

Book Reviews

TUNNEL. By Hal Friedman. (William Morrow and Co.) $9.95

One is immediately reminded of Lenny and George in "Of Mice and Men." The big oaf and his small, shrewder buddy, scheming for the better life. But the schizophrenic Ralph Cotter and the ruthless Frank Kingman aren't out to get a place of their own, with rabbits. They, and their killer companions, have "hijacked" the Brooklyn-Battery Tunnel on a holiday weekend, trapping two miles of cars with about 6,000 occupants.

Their demands include $5 million in diamonds, a helicopter to Kennedy, a long-range jet out of JFK — and "the mayor's lady" as hostage. The authorities are given 4 1/2 hours or the gang threatens to sink the tunnel and everyone in it. Blow it up and sink it.

There are cold-blooded killings in taking the tunnel, but it looks like the rest of the action is going to go down fairly smoothly. But as in the 1937 Steinbeck novella, and the classic Burgess Meredith-Lon Chaney, Jr. movie of the same name, the adage of best-laid plans going astray holds true.

A group of boozed-up teenagers from the Red Hook section of Brooklyn decides "to shake" things up a bit. In injecting themselves into the already hyped-up atmosphere, they not only blow up the delicate negotiations but set off a chain reaction that culminates in the bomb going off in the tunnel with disastrous results.

The author's first novel is a well-paced thriller. And what a surprise ending. Wow!

— LILLIAN O'CONNELL, UPI

THE LIFE AND WORK OF THOMAS CHIPPENDALE. By Christopher Gilbert. (Macmillan) $100

This two-volume, richly illustrated set, published in association with Christie's auction house, is the definitive work on England's foremost 18th century cabinet maker and should be just the gift for that artloving friend who has everything. Or for yourself, if you're feeling self-indulgent. It certainly will be the standard library reference book on Chippendale, who has not been the subject of serious study since the 1920s.

The first volume is devoted to Chippendale's life, design, development of the neo-classic style with which he is principally identified, and sketches of the personalities of many of his eminent patrons. Volume II is the stunner, a magnificent assemblage of 525 black-andwhite photographs of Chippendale's furniture, most of them taken especially for this book. All are captioned with a crossreference to relevant pages in Volume I.

The set marks the 200th anniversary of the death of Chippendale, who more than any other designer and for a longer period was the inspiration of some of the best furniture ever made in America — notably in Philadelphia and to a lesser degree in Charleston, where cabinet makers had access to engravings from Chippendale's pattern books. Gilbert's research is particularly important in that he has discovered and authenticated a number of previously undocumented major house collections and individual pieces of furniture as coming from the Chippendale firm rather than one of its many imitators.

THERE'S NO SUCH PLACE AS FAR AWAY. By Richard Bach. Delacorte. Unpaginated. $6.95

If the reader doesn't pause to study the pictures — which would be a mistake since they are the best things about this book — he can zip through the scanty text in 10 minutes. 15 minutes tops.

Which is a good thing, since a little syrupy pop philosophy can go a long long way.

Those who liked Richard Bach's best-selling "Jonathan Livingston Seagull" and "Illusions" conceivably might enjoy "There's No Such Place as Far Away." Those who didn't should stay away.

The plot, as well as can be determined, concerns an unnamed narrator who is going to the birthday party of "little Rae." The journey is being made in the heart of a hummingbird.

Enroute, the traveler encounters a variety of birds who deliver what apparently is meant to be pearls of wisdom.

Says the hummingbird: "Can miles truly separate us from friends? If you want to be with Rae, aren't you already there?"

The attractive illustrations, by the way, are by Ron Wegen.

Dudley Moore Set To Star In 'Arthur'

NEW YORK (Special) — "Arthur," an outrageous contemporary comedy, will go before the cameras in the spring of 1980 for Orion Pictures Company.

The feature, to be produced by Charles H. Joffe for Rollins & Joffe Productions, will star Dudley Moore in the title role. Moore comes to "Arthur" from Orion's "10," which is off to a sensational start at the boxoffice and is rapidly emerging as one of the top grossing films of the year. Joffe produced "Annie Hall," 1977's Oscar-winning Best Picture.

"Arthur" marks the motion picture directorial debut of Steve Gordon, who also provided the original screenplay. Gordon has numerous TV directing credits, and has written for Broadway, video and the screen, including the Henry Winkler-Kim Darby movie, "The One and Only."

Further major casting of a top female and male name will be announced shortly for "Arthur."

ART TALK: By La Wanda Murfee

Some rugged and dedicated individuals enjoy outdoor painting. The natural elements are sometimes bothersome and can discourage the painters who are accustomed to working in a studio.

In going outside to paint, the first challenge is selecting, then limiting the subject. We see with 180-degree vision and it is not possible to put your visual range into a painting. We must pick and choose from unlimited subjects before us then arrange them in an interesting pattern. Design is always the foundation, the key to all good painting.

In a comparison of photographs of French locations where the great Cezanne painted, with the finished works, the subject is recognizable, but certainly not exactly the same scene. It is the artist's prerogative to develop a composition from an inspiration, without this option a day painting outdoors could become frustrating and a wasted effort.

Weather can become a deterrant with wind, dust, freezing temperatures, heat and humidity accompanying swarms of insects. Companions may differ in the choice of location and subject, yet solitude often develops into loneliness.

The foremost problem is the realization and portrayal of colors as seen in nature. To paint the exact colors of a dull grey day, without the artist's close observation and rendition, paintings would be dull and uninteresting, monotonous in tone. People have a tremendous reaction to color and the painter as well as the viewer can be affected by it. After a vigorous weekend, painters on Mondays ususally begin at a slow pace. They can be revitalized by the use of brighter colors, to get them moving and excited. Later in the week duller tones subdue the exhilarated spirits.

Upon arriving at a location, the composition should first be determined. After this initial step is worked out, the color scheme is ascertained, then mounds of paint must be mixed to facilitate a fast and easy sketch. As light changes quickly outdoors, it is necessary to capture the color immediately and a prepared palette will greatly accelerate the process. A painter can accumulate several sketch-paintings in one session and finish them in the studio.

MORRIS IN CONCERT

Ozwald Morris will be featured in concert at 8 p.m. Friday at the Texas Tech University Center's Storm Cellar. Tickets are now on sale, with Tech students able to purchase them at half price. The concert is being designated a "kick off for Black Awareness Month."

Akins-Miner Show Set At Art Gallery

FUTURE AKINS

Prints and drawings by Future Akins and hand-blown glass by Charles Miner will be exhibited Saturday in an art exhibit called "Fragile" at the Lubbock Lights Art Gallery. The show will open with a 6 to 9 p.m. reception for the artists Saturday, and will remain on display through March 8.

No admission is charged to view the works.

Miss Akins received a degree in art history and ceramics from Texas Tech University in 1972 and, in 1977, an M.F.A. in printmaking. For several years she maintained a studio in the mountains of northern New Mexico. She recently returning to Lubbock. Having participated in more than 40 regional and national exhibits in the last three years, her most outstanding credit came from the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art "World Print Competition" in 1976.

From that show, the Smithsonian Institute chose 100 works, including one by Miss Akins, to travel nationally for two years. State-wide competitions to her credit include the "All Media Art Competition" in Houston in 1978; and the "Amarillo Art Competition" and "University of Dallas Invitational" in 1979. In 1976 and 1978, her prints traveled with the locally sponsored national "Colorprint U.S.A." show.

She is currently investigating the possibility of presenting her prints in three-dimensional forms.

Charles Miner studied art at colleges in California before moving to Tesuque, N.M. to help establish the Shidoni Foundry where bronze casting is done. From that he developed an interest in the traditional methods of blowing glass. In 1974 and 1975, he studied under and became partners with Peter Vanderlaan, who owns Glory Hole Glass Works in La-Cienega, N.M.

Miner currently has his own studio in Tesuque, creating contemporary American art glass which is featured in fine galleries throughout the Southwest. He works primarily in rich cobalt blues, blacks, and burgundy colors, which he lavishly laces with silver.

SUMMER OPERA

Pat Benatar: Cake Is Better Without Frosting

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

It was to be expected that female rock singers, if only for their recent emergence and limited numbers, would be pre-sold to the record-buying public on a basis of sex appeal. And vocalist Pat Benatar is no exception. Her glossy-lipped publicity pictures are the type guaranteed to immediately strike the male rock reporter's eyes, providing his glasses don't fog over first. The photographs on the jacket of her popular debut LP, "In The Heat Of The Night," are as hot as the record itself, depicting the artist as a sultry, perspiring woman who seems to be promising much more than music. Let's hear it for sex appeal. And yet, had I not been expecting her, I probably would not have even recognized Miss Benatar as she strolled into the Hilton Inn lobby the night before her recent concert at Rox.

She is, after all, much smaller than one would presume — some might even call her petite, at least until they caught her rocking out on stage — and much prettier than those heavy-breathing photographs had indicated. So it was only natural to seek her thoughts regarding her image.

Transferring a large Elvis doll from a chair to the nearby bed in her hotel room, she took a seat and appeared to ponder the question a moment. Then, in a voice made soft by fatigue, she answered, "It's something you can't avoid, but I really don't think either Chrysalis (her record label) or myself are exploiting the sexual image that much. I mean, sure, Debbie Harry (of Blondie) is sexually exploited, but she allows herself to be. The way I see it, I know I'm not ugly, but I really don't think I sizzle (sexually) either. I guess the best way to look at it is to assume the artist is a chocolate cake, and the image is the frosting.

"The cake is good, but the frosting only makes you want to eat it so much more."

She concluded, "Rock has always been sexual, but I certainly don't try to be overbearing sexually on stage. I really want the music and my singing to sell itself." But that's nothing new. She's wanted to be a rock singer for a long time. Even when studying opera and later playing those easy listening lounges as a teenager, she went home every night and "listened to American pop and English rock singers like Graham Parker," dreaming all the while of fronting her own rock band.

A 27-year-old New Yorker, she must be pressed for details concerning her background. As though composing a thumbnail sketch for a resume, she offers a 30-second explanation, saying only that (1) she first sang in school at age 12; (2) she studied opera for three years, then grew bored with it despite the fact her mother sings opera; (3) she got married at age 18 and attended college "for a while," majoring in health education and striving at the time to become a school teacher; and (4) she finally decided to chuck it all and started singing in lounges. In 1975, she moved to the Big Apple and started trying to make the transition from the cabarets to the rock halls.

Inspiration was scarce at the time, as there weren't many women making good money in rock at the time. And Miss Benatar admits it wasn't easy, recalling, "Yes, those were really scary times. Everyone was telling me that a singer with a trained voice couldn't make it in rock and roll. And it took a long time to make people notice. They said no woman could make it in rock and still retain her femininity and her sanity. And they had a point. But I was too angry with what they were saying, with being shut out, to even try to see their logic.

"It wasn't until later that I found out the real reason why there are so few women in rock. It's because of the grind, the physical wear and tear. It sounds like a cliche, but the road really is very tough. It takes its toll. I'm already exhausted."

But she hung in there and managed to impress Chrysalis into offering a contract. Then she lucked into landing Mike Chapman as a co-producer after his amazing studio successes with Blondie and The Knack. Reminded that Chapman's reputation is that of a talented tyrant, the singer chuckled and replied, "Yes, well, that fits pretty well. But we began with another producer, and the record just wasn't going anywhere. Nothing was happening. It was too slick, not raw enough. We kept trying to get Chapman from the first, but he was never in.

"Then Ted Ellis, the president of Chrysalis, took one of our tapes to a party and played it for Chapman. He listened and then agreed to take over production. And yes, it quickly became obvious that he's real obnoxious. But it doesn't set you back, because his talent is so obvious. He's obnoxious, but he knows what he's doing. He's a real Little Hitler in the studio, but he knows music and he's able to bring so much more out of you..."

With the record industry fighting a financial setback of sorts, she was indeed surprised to discover her album beginning to sell well a couple months after its release. She's also pleased that people have noticed the two sides of Pat Benatar: the fact she can display a polished voice with "Don't Let It Show" and then offer what she labels dinosaur rock with the next cut, "No You Don't." But she's equally aware she has a long road to travel before she can enjoy individual stardom. Time Magazine may have written about her this month — but it was in an article lumping her with three other women rockers.

"That's to be expected," she said. "It (women rock singers) is something new. It's kind of like the new wave bands; they lumped all them together when they first came out, too."

OFF AND ON STAGE — Rock singer Pat Benatar made a recent concert appearance in Lubbock, on the heels of her hit single "Heartbreaker," attracting a standing room only crowd at Rox. A-J entertainment editor William Kerns met with Miss Benatar the night before her show and asked her about her career, her past and her feelings on being packaged sexually. In today's feature, it's revealed the image really doesn't fit the artist. (Staff Photos by Milton Adams)

She's also not blind to the two-legged leeches attracted by the smell of success. "Sure, there has been pressure by some people to do more. We're just headlining small halls — the largest was 3,900 seats — and clubs right now; but there are always people who find a little success and try to pump you for all your worth. Luckily, I've got a real good manager and he shields me from a lot of that. We both agree that going slowly is most important. The singers who shoot to the top real fast often fall back into obscurity just as quickly."

Still, though following a seemingly methodical pattern, Pat Benatar is already suffering the psychological aches and pains of rock and roll. Obviously bushed, she again mentioned the day-to-day grind and constant travel, adding, "Occasionally we do get a day off. But it's like this. This is our day off." (She had spent the day traveling from Houston to Lubbock, then making an appearance at Bee & Bee Music to sign records before arriving at the hotel for this interview.) "This is our day off — but it's night already. We did get to see Disneyworld one day, and we got a couple hours off to walk around New Orleans. But it's mostly just hotels..."

The end is not in sight. Her current extended tour ends Monday, but she then leaves to begin a European tour. Even so, the singer's moaning was short-lived as she pulled an about face and said, "I shouldn't gripe, though. I do get real tired, and there are days when all you want to do is go home. But I know I can't, so I put it out of my thoughts. Because I still love all this. I worked for it, and I am enjoying it. It's been a learning experience. I know it would make a great quote for you if I said, 'I hate all this (expletive).' But the truth is, I love it. I really do."

So Pat Benatar — the small woman with the powerful voice, the woman who gave up on opera and college to sing rock and roll — has entered what was once a male domain and, if her strength holds up, may even conquer it someday. She's already made her mark. But rest assured: If she does become a household name, it will be because of her dedication and talent and stage presence, and not because of her over-hyped sexual image. This cake, after all, is satisfying enough without the frosting.

The Quigley Publications poll is held every year to determine who are the most popular film stars at the box office. Not the most respected by the critics, but the stars who draw people to the theaters. The poll was conducted by movie exhibitors across the country — and the results are sometimes surprising. In order, here are the hottest draws at the box office: (1) Burt Reynolds, (2) Clint Eastwood, (3) Jane Fonda, (4) Woody Allen, (5) Barbra Streisand, (6) Sylvester Stallone, (7) John Travolta, (8) Jill Clayburgh, (9) Roger Moore, (10) Mel Brooks, (11) Robert Redford, (12) Diane Keaton, (13) Sally Field, (14) Warren Beatty, (15) Robert De Niro, (16) Jon Voight, (17) Al Pacino, (18) Richard Dreyfuss, (19) Peter Sellers, (20) Dustin Hoffman, (21) Jack Nicholson, (22) George Hamilton, (23) Nick Nolte, (24) Paul Newman and (25) Peter Falk.

You'll notice George C. Scott and Marlon Brando can't draw like Eastwood, Travolta and Miss Streisand. Interesting. Sad — but interesting.

Letters are still coming in from the city's movie fans, offering their choices for the Best and Worst films of 1979 for the A-J's annual Readers' Poll. Surprising enough, "Kramer vs. Kramer" is not even close to a first place position; it seems the readers' favorite thus far is "Breaking Away." I say surprising only because the more recent films usually garner more votes. "Beyond The Poseidon Adventure" seems to be a leading contender for 1979's worst film, along with "Star Trek: The Motion Picture." The latter film, it must be said, has also received a couple votes as the year's best. And Barbra Streisand's "The Main Event" was listed twice on one viewer's list of bad movies.

There is still time for you to take part in the A-J poll. Simply send your lists of favorite and least favorite 1979 films, along with any laudatory or sarcastic comments you wish to make, to William D. Kerns, Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Texas 79408. The deadline is Feb. 5, and the picks will be tallied and published in the entertainment section on Feb. 10. My own picks and pans will be published the same day.

John Carpenter is back in the spotlight this month. The man who gave us "Halloween" has a new ghost story called "The Fog," starring Jamie Lee Curtis and his wife Adrien Barbeau, opening Friday at the South Plains Cinema. The lines should be long. "Halloween" will be screened on Home Box Office television on Feb. 3, 7, 9, 13, 15, 19 and 25. And Carpenter's little-seen "Assault On Precinct 13" will be on HBO on Feb. 12, 14, 17 and 22.

As if that's not enough, a lengthy interview with Carpenter and his partner, producer Debra Hill, is available in the current issue of Film Comment.

The Country Squire Dinner Theater's publicist, Mickye Adams, was a bit surprised when The Tommy Dorsey Orchestra was booked to play some time back. It seems she got a phone call at the box office from a man checking on reservations. "Is Tommy Dorsey himself going to be here?" he asked. Mickye said no but, before she could explain, the caller said "then cancel my reservations because I'm not interested" and hung up.

According to the Encyclopedia Of Popular Music, Tommy Dorsey died November 26, 1956.

Traveler Taking Its Third Shot At Stardom

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Thousands of bands would hesitate only a second before selling their souls for a recording contract, so stiff is the competition, and then start offering to sacrifice family and friends in return for favorable reviews. But Traveler, an Austin-based light rock band whose best features have always been Bill Browder's skills as a guitarist and the emphasis placed on melodic harmonies, has already recorded two albums on two major labels under two different names. The critics were not unkind and yet, thanks to a strange combination of circumstances, the band has again joined the ranks of the struggling.

Sure, the group enjoys its regional popularity, but it must now begin anew in its search for a label, a contract and the financial support both offer.

Arriving at the Rox from Midland late last week, Browder and drummer-vocalist David Moerbe stopped to explain what's happened to the band since it first began recording under the name Denim in 1977. "We released 'Denim' on Epic in 1977, and it was like a Cinderella time," Browder said while making himself at home in the club's office. "But about three months later, some computer told Epic we hadn't sold enough records — we'd sold about 25,000 — and the support just disappeared. The label didn't drop us. It just became a wait-and-see period."

Moerbe elaborated, "See, we had a five-year contract with Epic, but they had an additional option which enabled Epic to renew or cancel the contract at certain time periods. Then Epic asked for a 30-day extension before making its decision. (Browder called this an option on the option.) They said they had a new vice president, and he wanted to come down and talk to us, but he was hung up with other business. Then they asked for another 30-day extension when the first one passed. And another 30 days. Then they asked for 90 days, and we finally just said 'forget it' and left Epic."

DAVID MOERBE

But not before creating new fans. For while the band now reflects on the "Denim" LP as one expressing too much of a country sound, songs like "Tequila" and "(Fallin' In Love Is A) Long Way Away" became standards, accepted original material which set the group apart from the rest. Browder's original compositions were strong and the band wasted little time in signing to record with a California production company. During the course of the recording, ABC Records expressed interest.

"We signed with ABC and it was great for awhile," Moerbe said. "They showed interest. We were all optimistic, and had no way of predicting what would happen."

What happened was that ABC Records, waist deep in debt after dropping an estimated $80,000 the year before, sold out to MCA Records a short time after the LP "Lost In The Late, Late Show" was released. Not only that; ABC had insisted the band change its name from Denim to Traveler before the record was released. As Browder put it, "We strongly resisted the name change they wanted. We didn't want it. But we finally decided to be open-minded and go along. . .which meant that when ABC went under, we were left stuck in Texas with a new name and no megabucks to help promote it."

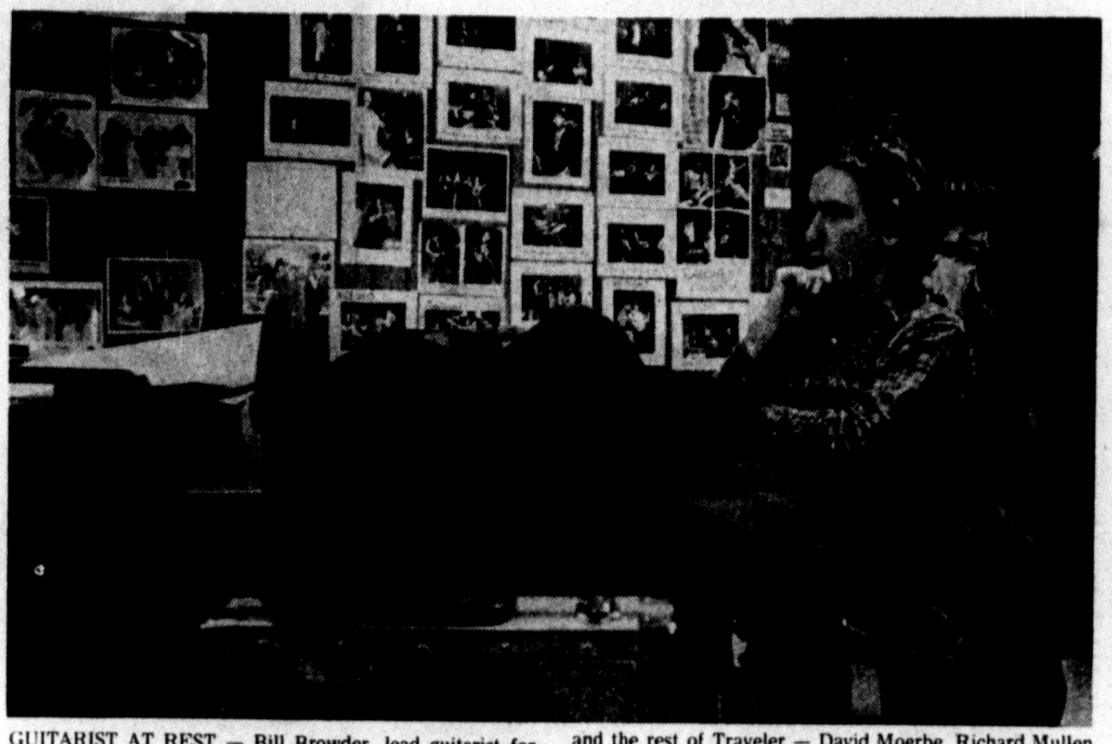

Their reaction? Moerbe smiled and said, "That's showbiz."

In actuality, though, the event created no small amount of hardship. The band now not only suffered a financial problem, but an identity problem as well. And despite the fact Browder now says "whoever mastered our second LP really butchered it, because the tape sounds a lot better," the album did have high points like "Roll On Santa Fe" and the word was not getting out. That was late 1978 and early 1979, and it was the sort of death knell which might have laid other bands to rest.

But Moerbe and Browder have played music together for more than nine years, and were determined to find the proverbial silver lining, no matter how well it had been hidden.

The drummer explained, "We'd been wanting to get away from managers and production companies anyway. If we had been totally happy, then the sale of the record company would have been a big shock and disappointment. For us, it just provided the impetus to improve everything about the band. And we decided to make changes."

That's putting it mildly, as Traveler spent 1979 undergoing personnel and image changes. Richard Mullen remained on steel and rhythm guitars, but bassist Jerry Crow was replaced with Mother Of Pearl's talented Layton De Penning. And Jimmy Rose, of San Antonio, was later brought in to play drums and percussion. The addition of their very own San Antonio Rose enables Moerbe to leave the kit and step up front as lead singer and floor director. It's a change which takes a little getting used to — at least for those who have followed the band since its Denim days — but one which was inevitable from the start.

GUITARIST AT REST — Bill Browder, lead guitarist for Texas band Traveler, takes a break in the office at Rox and discusses the changes the band has weathered since 1977. Surrounded by pictures of bands which played Rox, Browder and the rest of Traveler — David Moerbe, Richard Mullen, Layton De Penning and Jimmy Rose — had arrived for a three-night engagement at the club, their first Lubbock booking in more than a year. (Staff Photos by Gary Davis)

Moerbe has always been the extrovert in the group, the take charge guy. Mullen is pretty quiet on stage. And though Browder couldn't be matched for his guitar licks, as a stage conversationalist he looked about as comfortable as a Sunday school class gathering at a Kiss concert.

Browder explained, "It's a natural progression. David was always the talker, but he always looked like a drum set with a head on it." Moerbe concurred, "I've always been the talker on stage anyway. . .but it's real hard to explain stage dynamics. Bill didn't want the responsibility of having to talk that much on stage. It didn't feel natural to him; he wanted to concentrate on the music."

Asked flat out if he also just wanted a bigger share of the spotlight, Moerbe dodged the issue a bit and then confronted it with an honest, "Yeah, you can tell people Moerbe wanted more of the spotlight. I've really wanted to go up front. But, consequently, it's removed a lot of pressure from Bill's shoulders. We're all having more fun on stage now. Now everyone is doing what they do on stage because they want to, not because they think they have to."

It should also be noted Traveler is offering a fuller, richer sound in 1980, thanks to the additional musician. And while some may dislike Moerbe's body motion, no one will fault his vocals. The band appears to be playing more cover material, but Browder is still penning new songs and, if anything, he's improved as an instrumentalist. Moerbe insisted a third record deal is not in the immediate works, but both he and Browder appeared confident it will come sooner or later.

"We've learned more about arrangements," Browder said. "And we've become better performers in the studio. The experience of making two albums is a big help. . .but we haven't changed all that much. We still emphasize strong vocals and good harmony, and we're playing a lot better."

But neither experience nor talent is any guarantee in the record business these days. A lot of it is timing and luck. No one can deny Traveler's talent or ability to entertain, but the band still has to convince a third record label — and convincing the first took a while. A goodly amount of talent, after all, never even gets one shot at the big time. Traveler is now actively seeking its third.

Rox To Host Rick Derringer

Rock guitarist-vocalist Rick Derringer will be featured in concert Tuesday night at Rox. Call the club for information concerning cover charges and front bands.

Derringer's extensive career in rock and roll has crossed many paths since he formed his first rock group in Union City, Indiana, at 15, but his most recent collaboration with Todd Rundgren is perhaps his most productive recording adventure to date. "Guitars and Women," co-produced by Rundgren and Derringer and whittled down from over thirty songs, was the result of "some of the best chemistry I've ever felt in the studio," according to Derringer.

The assistance of excellent players — including Roger Powell and Kasim Sultan of Utopia and Kenny Aronson, Myron Grombacher and Neil Geraldo — helped round out Rick's fluent performances. And new Rick Derringer songs, with two from Cheap Trick's Rick Nielsen, add the final touch.

With nearly a dozen production credits to his career, including the first gold LP for Johnny Winter and Edgar Winter's first platinum, Derringer has established a reputation for excellent production.

By the time he was 18, Derringer had been leader of the McCoys for almost three years. After the McCoys had played the Dayton, Ohio area long enough to be established as THE band in town, they made their first important trip to New York with Bert Burns of Bang Records, who wrote "Hang on Sloopy." That song became the McCoys' first hit, within a month of its release in the summer of 1965, it was number one across the country. The McCoys returned to the midwest, recorded two albums for Mercury ("Infinite McCoys" and "Human Ball") and were spirited back to New York where they effectively made the transition from the late '60s psychedelic era to a more streamlined, '70s rock band.

Responsible for the big move was Steve Paul and the Scene, the New York rock club where the McCoys took over as house band and built a great reputation around town.

By 1970, Rick's band had joined Johnny Winter to form Johnny Winter And. Their first LP, for Columbia, was released in October, 1970, produced by Rick Derringer and contained his memorable "Rock 'n' Roll Hootchie Co." That group of outstanding players boasted two fine front men in the Texas blues master Johnny Winter and emerging rock guitarist Rick Derringer. "Live," released in 1971, captured them at their height. Produced by Derringer, it became Johnny Winter's first RIAA gold album.

Later that year Derringer joined Edgar Winter's White Trash and produced their first LP in June, 1971, "Edgar Winter's White Trash." He toured with the band throughout the year when they recorded "Roadwork" (the 1972 live LP and the earliest Winter LP to be certified gold) and closed the year producing "They Only Come Out At Night."

That album, featuring the newly-reformed Edgar Witner Group with Dan Hartman, went on to sell more than two million copies, boosted on through 1973 by the number one gold single, "Frankenstein," and the strong follow-up, "Free Ride."

For the next couple of years Derringer kept right on going. He produced "Johnny's Still Alive and Well," his own first solo LP with Bill Szymczyk, "All American Boy," Edgar Winter's "The Edgar Winter Group, with Rick Derringer" and his second solo LP in March, 1975, "Spring Fever." Never idle, Derringer also played guitar on several other recordings, continued writing songs and kept expanding his horizon.

By 1976, he had formed Derringer and cut "Derringer," then hit the road with his new group and returned to New York later in the year to record "Sweet Evil." Back on the road a few months later, Derringer produced "Live" from Toronto and Youngstown, Ohio gigs. "If I Weren't So Romantic, I'd Shoot You," whose title derived from a song co-written by Rick and Bernie Taupin and Alice Cooper, was his fourth LP, produced by Mike Chapman.

"Guitars and Women" reflects Derringer's gradual development into a superb rock leader. Assembling good players, writing and selecting excellent material took up a few months of time during his otherwise active 1979.

HOT AS A DERRINGER — Rock guitarist-vocalist Rick Derringer will be in concert Tuesday night at Rox. Tickets are now on sale at the club, with the price destined to go up at the door the night of the show.

Listening In

Andy Pratt, "Motives" (Nemperor) — Pratt has long gone unnoticed as one of the more sophisticated and personal writers in rock. His music hardly shifts from a core of slick, sophisticated easy rock. His lyrics delve deep into his emotions, often expressing universal sentiments at the same time.

"Motives" is a hard album to appreciate initially, but its deeply involved content reveals often religious themes which reflect possibly a recent "discovery" by Pratt of his Christian nature. The songs on "Motives" are especially personal in light of albums like "Shiver In The Night" and "Resolution." "Saviour," "Finally I'm Yours" and "Cross On A Hill" are exemplary of the religious thematicism surrounding "Motives."

It is an exceptional album, but one which requires a great deal of thought and contemplation on the part of the listener.

Slaton Bank Plans New Construction

Citizens Bank of Slaton plans the addition of 4,450 square feet of space to its existing facility, the Board of Directors has announced.

The construction will consist of a new main entrance, additional lobby and teller space, new offices, and a community room.

Expected cost of the expansion will be $400,000.

Remodeling work began on the building in 1977. When the new project is complete, the bank will have spent almost $1 million in the renovation program.

The bank's exterior will be finished with adobe in earth colors.

W. G. McMillan Construction Co. of Lubbock, contractor for the project, expects the work to be completed in August.

The bank recently installed a nine-lane motor bank at a cost of approximately $300,000. It has space for 60 cars.

The bank has also announced the promotion of Margie Shelby to assistant cashier, according to Jeff Wilson, president.

She has been with the bank for three years, and has recently served as credit manager. She graduated from high school in 1974 at Harvey, Ill., and is presently taking bank administration classes at Texas Tech University.

Packaging Runs Up Cost For Numerous Products

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumers who complain packaging runs up the cost of food are right about some products. The Food Market Institute, a Washington-based trade association, says the cost of making a bottle of catsup was 44.9 cents in 1975; the ingredients accounted for 7.04 cents, while the packaging cost 8.5 cents.

The figures are from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. FMI says packaging industry sources add that costs as a percentage of the food dollar are about the same now as they were 20 years ago, despite new designs and convenience factors.

New Sideband Channels Forecast

By MIKE WENDLAND

It will take about one year before the FCC votes on a final version of a plan to expand the CB service by as many as 25 single sideband channels, predicts Ron Stone, a chief policymaker of the agency's Personal Radio Bureau.

The plan, which would also do away with the much-violated prohibition against talking skip or making long-distance CB contacts over 150 miles, was ordered last month by the seven FCC commissioners.

But before intent translates into law, a lengthy bureaucratic road must first be traveled, says Stone.

Here's a brief description of where things stand: The commission order was to prepare a Notice of Proposed Rule Making. Essentially, that is just what it sounds like—a formal proposal by the FCC saying, in effect, this is what we want to do.

Stone estimates it will take as long as three months to write that formal proposal. Once issued, public comment is solicited. It takes at least three months to review those opinions. From there, Stone estimates that four to five more months will be needed to refine the proposal.

That process moves the proposal into late November or early December before the commission will get a chance to vote on the final version.

From there, depending on how many technical problems the new frequencies will cause manufacturers, it could be still another year or so before the SSB channels are open for use.

In the meantime, the plan is drawing fire from many CB critics, who say that the expansion essentially rewards the scores of CB lawbreakers who have been illegally operating high-powered stations on the band already.

Stone and his CB planners feel otherwise.

We feel that things are getting totally out of hand up there (above Channel 40), and the only possibility of getting things back into control is to try to be responsive to the users and set up something that makes sense, says Stone.

We hope that by doing that, the users will come part way, too, and become more compliant.

Stone concedes that all problems will not instantly be solved.

We're not expecting any immediate big turnaround where everybody goes out and sells their Yaesus (a high-powered ham radio transceiver commonly and illegally used on CB frequencies), he says. But perhaps, over time, things will improve.

What we want to be concerned with especially are the new people who come up there. We want to be sure their senses are in the right places and encourage them to use legal equipment. By making these frequencies legal, legal equipment would soon be available. So at least the problem wouldn't get any worse.

That, and of course, the overwhelming demand by many CB groups, is the rationale behind the drive for new sideband frequencies. The next year promises to be interesting as the public—both pro-CB and con-CB—debates the issues.

We'll keep you informed.

CRISIS BENEFITS COAL

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The energy crisis is expected to benefit the coal industry. A Recent study by Predicasts, Inc. says coal consumption is expected to more than double by 1990 because of the dramatic shift in energy prices and supplies in the 1970s. Research analyst Kevin Swift projects a jump in coal demand from 624 million tons last year to 1.3 billion in 1990, when coal will account for 28 percent of total United States energy consumption.

The Voice of Business

By RICHARD LESHER

President of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce

By RICHARD L. LESHER
President, U.S. Chamber Of Commerce

WASHINGTON—Question: What will happen in the 1980's if we heed the no-growth zealots who want Washington to enforce a lower standard of living by taxing, redistributing and rationing away the nation's resources?

Answer: The possible devastation of our economy, an end to the longest and most successful experiement in individual freedom the world has ever known.

Many people might judge that prediction extreme. They would probably add that with only 6 percent of the world's population, America should feel guilty about consuming more than 30 percent of the world's energy. But wait a minute. The United States produces a tremendous amount of the world's goods, and it was we who first made the production of much of the world's energy possible.

As columnist Michael Novak recently noted: "While the United States may represent a little less than 6 percent of the world's population, it does not use 30 percent of the world's energy. It does not use 30 percent of the world's sun, wind, moving water, oxen, donkeys and human backs. That is what the world meant by energy until the inventiveness released by democratic capitalism 200 years ago changed the meaning of the word."

When we think of energy today, we think of oil, electricity, gas and nuclear power, but we often forget that it was we Americans—the 6 percenters—who developed these modern forms. Indeed, Novak insists: "Six percent of the world's population has invented 100 percent of the world's modern energy and distributed almost 70 percent of it to the rest of the world." With a record like that, Americans should be feeling good, not guilty.

BUT IF THIS TINY fraction of the world's population turns away from progress, if we continue to promote wasteful government spending over needed research, investment and the development of new technologies, then we should and must feel overwhelming guilt. Why? Because we will be deliberately turning our backs on some 4 billion people around the world, many of whom are already poor and suffering. They desperately need our help, skills and examples of self reliance if they are to grow enough food and produce enough energy to survive. Should we walk away from this problem, we will be inviting worldwide chaos that could engulf us all.

Clearly then, America's greatest challenge in the 1980's lies in renewing powerful economic growth. It is especially important that all those who consider themselves idealists, with a mission to save the world, understand this point. Second, we must also realize that much of this awesome responsibility belongs to small business. The some 13 million small businesses in America already form the backbone of our economy. They represent 97 percent of all individual firms, employ more than half the labor force, provide the livelihood for 100 million Americans and create half our gross national product.

What small businesses provide best is precisely what we and the rest of the world need most—innovation and growth. Recent studies show it is the small innovative businesses that grow the fastest, generate the most new jobs, and often contribute the revolutionary technological break-throughs that have earned America her reputaion as the country of the future.

BUT AS WE LOOK to small business to provide the quality of leadership it has in the past, we must recognize how vulnerable it has become to our economic problems. Inflation puts small business in a bind, since it must pay higher prices. Capital is difficult to obtain because small business, by definition, is so risky. Yet inflation compels firms to borrow more, even as it increases the cost of borrowed capital while devaluing the purchasing power of funds ultimately spent. Firms that do take risks, and succeed, face excessive taxes. Finally, regulations and paperwork are especially discriminatory because small business usually cannot afford the experts needed to interpret bureaucratic demands.

The Administration, cognizant of these growing difficulties, plans to host a White House Conference on Small Business. I anticipate it will be the most intensive examination of small business in our nation's history. The U.S. Chamber has made a major effort helping to organize the Conference and it has prepared a special report to the President, "The State of Small Business."

I am profoundly hopeful the Conference will be productive and issue directives of real substance. The Chamber, so broadly-based with its 90,000 members, of which more than 80 percent are members of small businesses, offers an ideal vehicle to carry them out. But given the magnitude of the problems we face in the 1980's, an even greater commitment is needed. We challenge all Americans to become involved in this vital effort.

Social Security . . . Out West

By BILL WEST
S.S. Field Representative

ARE YOU GOING TO WORK this summer or in the near future? Do you have your social security card? It takes 6 to 8 weeks to get a social security number and it can take as long as a month to 6 weeks to get a duplicate card.

Working wives — does your card show your married name or does it show your maiden name? If it shows your maiden name, it could delay any income tax refund to which you might be entitled until Internal Revenue Service can match your name and number.

To get your social security number you have to furnish evidence of age, identity and U.S. citizenship or lawful admission status. If you are 18 or over you have to apply in person.

If you are applying for a replacement card or changing your name or other information on your record you have to establish your identity. For a change-of-name request, the evidence must identify you with both your old name and your new name.

Some examples of evidence are: marriage certificates, driver's license, school identification card, report card, medical record, vaccination record and other documents providing identifying information such as physical description, photograph, or signature. A birth or baptismal certificate can be used to establish age and citizenship, but cannot be used to establish identity.

Documents are subject to verification with the agency that issued them. Please do not submit uncertified photocopies of your documents. We must see either the original documents or a copy certified by the agency which issued it. We will return any documents you send us.

HAVE YOU SIGNED UP FOR MEDICARE? If you are age 65 or older and have never signed up for Medicare, now is the time to do so. The annual open season for enrolling in Medicare is from January 1st through March 31st each year. Your Medicare coverage will be effective July 1, 1980 if you enroll not later than March 31, 1980. The basic Part B premium is $9.20 per month effective July 1980.

Medicare Premium Hospital Insurance can be bought if you are age 65 and not covered by social security. The basic premium is $69 a month through June 1980. The premium is expected to increase a few dollars a month beginning July 1980. People who buy Medicare hospital insurance also must enroll in Part B (medical) insurance. The basic premiums are increased 10 percent for each 12 months of nonenrollment after the month you are 65.

If you are shopping for a policy to supplement Medicare, call us and we will mail you a pamphlet that will give you some hints on shopping for private health insurance. There is no charge for this pamphlet or any general information about Medicare or other social security programs.

The Social Security (FICA) tax rate for 1980 is the same as it was for 1979 — 6.13 percent for employees and employers on the employee's wages up to a maximum wage of $25,900 for 1980. The maximum wage base for 1979 was $22,900. The wage base increase to $25,900 will raise the social security tax only for those earning more than $22,900, which is less than 13 percent of the working force.

Those who received any social security retirement, survivor, child or student benefit checks in 1979 must file an annual report of earnings if they earned over $3480 in 1979. Those over 65 must file the annual report if earnings were over $4500. These reports can be filed by telephone with your nearest Social security office. Be sure to have your social security claim number and 1979 W-2 or self-employment tax return at hand when you call. The social security office telephone number is listed in your telephone directory and you can call station-to-station collect if you live out of Lubbock.

He has done extensive civic work and has achieved the following honors: Outstanding Member of Year in Toastmasters; Outstanding Member of the Year in Caprock Chapter of American Business Clubs; 1979 president of Big Hat Club; 1979 fund raising co-chairman of Caprock ABC; member of the board of directors of Big Brothers-Big Sisters; member of the board of directors of Texas Boys Ranch.

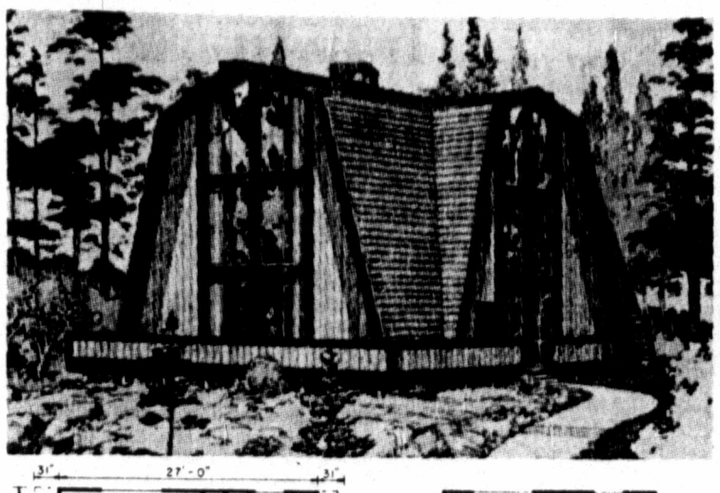

STAN WILLIAMS

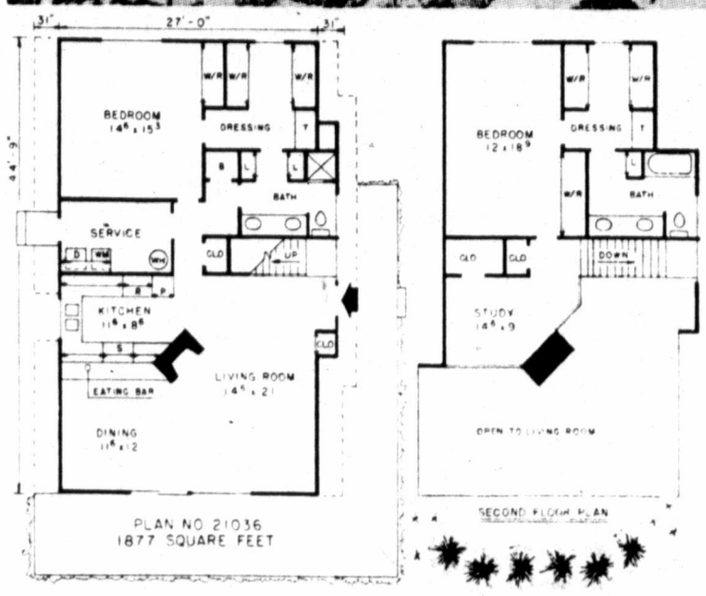

FRAN CARTER

Fran Carter was the Outstanding Sales Leader for 1979, with sales of more than $1 million in her first year in the business. She is also active in a number of civic organizations. She is first vice president of the women's division of the Chamber of Commerce; founding president and on the board of directors of ARCS; past president and active member of Lubbock Women's Club; active member of Symphony Guild; member of Steering Committee of Lubbock Arts Festival; member of the board of trustees of the Methodist Hospital.

Multi-Purpose Vacation Home Has Eye Appeal, Warmth

If you are one of the thousands whose wish for a vacation home has passed the talking stage, this plan may be your perfect answer. You can live in it part of the year and perhaps rent it for the remainder of the year. The additional income could pay for taxes and mortgage payments and would provide you with a live-in caretaker. Later, when the children are grown, it could become a carefree retirement home.

The exterior creates an atmosphere of appealing warmth and charm. Vertical siding, a large expanse of glass surrounded by heavy wooden members is enhanced by gambrel roofs. A porch surrounds nearly half the plan and is enclosed by an attractive wooden railing.

The imposing living room-dining area extends to the roof. An eating bar plus cabinets and a fireplace separate the compact, efficient kitchen from the dining.

A washer and dryer with wall cabinets above and a water heater are in the service. There is additional space for a freezer. A bedroom with bath and dressing area complete the first floor.

A study is located on the second floor and is open to the living room. If you prefer, the closets now opening to this area could be eliminated and the depth would then be 12'-6" rather than 9'.

Both bedrooms are unusually large and have direct access to a dressing room which features a dressing table. Twin wardrobes are in both rooms and an extrawardrobe opens to the first floor bedroom.

Both baths have twin pullman lavatories, semi-private water closet compartments and linen closets.

Gospel Music Withstands Challenges

By JOE EDWARDS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The rise of gospel music, called "the spread of the gospel," has withstood a challenge to the faithfulness of its following.

Gospel music fans can take inspiration in the fact that sacred music has fended off the effects of the recession, unlike pop and country music.

While pop and country music record companies have been hurt by sagging sales, industry officials say attendance at gospel concerts and sales of records have shown no decline.

Gospel music has a special savior — its fans.

"Gospel has a more stable and loyal audience," said Don Butler, executive director of the Nashville-based Gospel Music Association. "Our audience stays with us. Whatever is put out, they buy.

"In the pop field, someone may have a platinum or gold record now, but three months from now he's gone. You see it all the time; someone comes along to replace him."

Butler said the gospel audience is loyal because of the bond between fans and singers.

"There's not a star structure in gospel music," he said. "A Star is not removed from the public. You can have a Coke and a hot dog with them. You don't get this in the pop and rock 'n' roll field; the stars are too shielded.

"Also, gospel singers go into the churches and visit in peoples' homes. This builds a loyalty and the singers become part of the family."

Careers

By Joyce Lain Kennedy

Dear Joyce: What is the average increase one should expect when changing jobs for advancement.
— L.T., Sunnyvale, Calif.

A ladder-climbing change generally brings a pay increase of 10 to 20 percent — lower for administrative and sales jobs, higher for engineering and technical positions.

But the ravages of inflation and uncertainty of the economy are causing some confident people to insist on an even bigger jump. They aim to compensate not only for the loss of buying power over the past couple of years but the risk of getting hit by a last in-first out policy if their new company has alayoff.

Because taxes absorb part of any increase, an employee earning $15,000 or more annually must have a pay boost in the 16-to-19 percent neighborhood to stay abreast of 13 percent-plus inflation. In such a situation, it may not benefit you to accept an offer for less than a gain of 25 percent — tough, but possible to negotiate — unless you're relocating to a place where living costs are lower.

Most employers are alert to the wage squeeze problem: a new study of 560 companies in 39 states, employing from 250 to 50,000 workers, show that fewer than one-fifth still offer local applicants less than a 10 percent increase; only one-tenth propose that amount when relocating is involved.

The study, conducted in October by the Employment Management Association, a professional organization of personnel and employment managers, found that most companies proffer local candidates a boost of between 10 and 15 percent; 12 percent lure locals with 15 percent-plus increases.

When candidates must relocate, nearly 40 percent of firms are stretching the hikes above 15 percent, while 34 percent of companies hold out increases of between 10 and 15 percent.

Except in warm weather states, companies are finding it harder than ever to convince people to move — some recruiters say they'll pay whatever it takes within reason to convince good candidates to change scenery.

House buying is a major obstacle; unlike a year ago when the idea was novel, nearly one-fourth of firms say they're considering or have a policy to help with mortgage funds.

Despite recession talk, 88 percent of the Employment Management Association survey participants indicated their hiring requirements are as high or higher than last year's record number, causing the group's executive director, John D. Erdlen, to observe, "Job switching could be the name of the game in 1980 if present economic conditions continue."

READER SERVICE: "Beef up your job to beat inflation" is a four-page article that appeared in the November issue of Changing Times magazine. It shows how to figure out if your job is keeping pace with inflation and, if not, some ways to turn things around. To obtain a single reprint, enclose a stamped, self-addressed, long white envelope with your request to Joyce Lain Kennedy at this newspaper. Ask for "Inflation and Jobs." TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

No More Room For Error

NOW, IT'S A brand new ball game. That figure of speech can now be applied to the world about us.

If there has been any doubt that the 1980s will be a Decade of Decision, a period perhaps unlike any in recent history, such doubts went down the drain the past week.

The world in which most of us will live, or die, in the next ten to twenty years will most likely be a world which will challenge Americans and their counterparts abroad as they have never been challenged.

How we and our leaders face up to the task ahead will determine what sort of world it will be, the future course of history. America, freedom and individual liberty are at the crossroads. The alternative is a step back into the Dark Ages.

THAT, IN ESSENCE is the bottom line of events which have been unfolding in the Mideast and elsewhere the past three months, and especially the past four weeks.

Today, the world's two superpowers stand as opposites, testing wills if not physical prowess, not far from where it all started, and just as close to where many feel it will end, the Valley of Armageddon.

How we got to this point is important because it may say something about how or whether we survive the next twenty years.

President Carter this past week, verbally at least, set the nation on a drastic new course, one which if followed through will place American men and might across the shifting sands of the Persian Gulf, its vital oil supply and in the middle of one of the most volatile geopolitical, economic and religious Gordian Knots in world history.

THE ISSUES are almost simplistic in nature.

On the one hand, the Soviet Union, utilizing its surrogate Communist allies—from Cuban soldiers in Africa to puppets in Afghanistan and terrorists in Iran—has moved within a bloody hair's breadth of achieving its long-held dream, access to the warm waters of the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean.

On the other hand, the United States and Western Free World, dependent on the black gold which fuels its factories, cars, planes and machines, faces the threat of losing access to the Mideast oil supply.

Entwined in the classic confrontation is the World of Islam in turmoil, an ancient world, a religion and a way of life little changed through the centuries, but caught up in the web of money, murder and power politics of a modern era.

The scenario has all the makings of disaster or a giant step toward a nebulous peace.

WE DID NOT arrive at this point in history by accident.

In the wake of President Carter's address, much was made of the claim by some Congressmen that this administration inherited most of the problems and policies which brought today's events to a head.

To the extent that since World War II, the Russians have been able to threaten, cajole, lie and steal their way into some of the most sensitive areas of the world—from Africa to America's doorstep in Cuba—this is true.

But, to set the record straight, the policy was given a huge shove when President Carter and his administration—liberally sprinkled with those who were "trained in the sixties"—set out on a diplomatic and foreign policy course drastically different from the past.

UNDER THIS administration, Detente hit a high water mark..."Going along to get along" with Communist aims became a byword...SALT II became an obsession...Defense a second thought...

It should not be forgotten in this election year that it was Mr. Carter and his good friend, former UN Amb. Andy Young, who preached what at times seemed to be a peace-at-any-price policy. Cuban soldiers fought Russia s wars in Africa with impunity, and were viewed as a "stabilizing force."

It should not be overlooked that it was Mr. Carter who when speaking at Notre Dame a few months ago said that the American people should free themselves of the "inordinate fear of Communism" that had characterized them in the past. It was the same President who confessed recently that he had learned more in one week from the Russian invasion of Afghanistan about Soviet intentions than he had in his entire tenure in office.

NOW, WE ARE set upon a new course. For the sake of this nation, world peace, perhaps mankind's survival, we pray the decisions we as Americans and our leaders make will be the right ones.

Every honorable effort should be made to preserve the tenuous peace which does exist. An Atomic Armageddon would be unthinkable. But, it is not past happening.

Because of the stakes, the decisions we make in facing up to the Soviet challenge, in choosing calm, dedicated and educated leaders—from the White House to Congress—will determine our fate and most likely that of millions around the world.

The Cold War has become a near hot one. There is no longer room for guesswork, unrealistic theory or naive men in public office. That is the other challenge we face.

ART BUCHWALD:

Compromise For Soviets Of Olympic Proportions

WASHINGTON—The big question Americans are faced with is whether we should or should not participate in the Moscow Olympics. Unfortunately, everyone has made this an "either-or" proposition.

I believe there is room for compromise which would show the Soviets we mean business and at the same time leave the door open in case they want to change their ways.

Why couldn't we tell the Russians that we intend to go into the Olympics on piecemeal basis depending on how they behave in the next few months?

For starters, President Carter could inform the Kremlin that if Russia gets out of Afghanistan we will send our track and field team to Moscow.

The Soviets are very big in track and field and are expecting to take all the gold medals in these events.

THEN, IF they get their surrogate army of Cubans out of Angola, we would agree to send over our wrestlers and weightlifters.

We would also advise them that if they promised not to round up their dissidents and railroad them out of town during the games, we would enter our swimming and water polo teams.

The President would agree to allow Americans to compete in the gymnastic events in exchange for a written document from the Soviets that they would not go into Yugoslavia.

This means a lot to the Russians because we don't have anyone in this country who could take first place against one of their athletes on the parallel bars.

IF THEY gave up their Backfire bomber we would throw in our archery, canoeing and field-hockey teams.

And if the Russians started living up to the Helsinki Accords, we would allow our athletes to compete in volleyball, rowing and yachting.

It seems to me that this compromise would show the Soviets that the United States will not permit politics to interfere with the games.

At the same time it will let them know that we're not sending over our boys and girls en masse while they believe they can do anything they want to endanger the world peace.

The ball will then be in the Soviet court.

The countries behind the Iron Curtain will exert tremendous pressure on the Russians, because each satellite nation has spent years developing athletes whose sole job in life is to beat the Americans where it hurts.

IF WE STAY out of the Olympics altogether we could look like spoilsports.

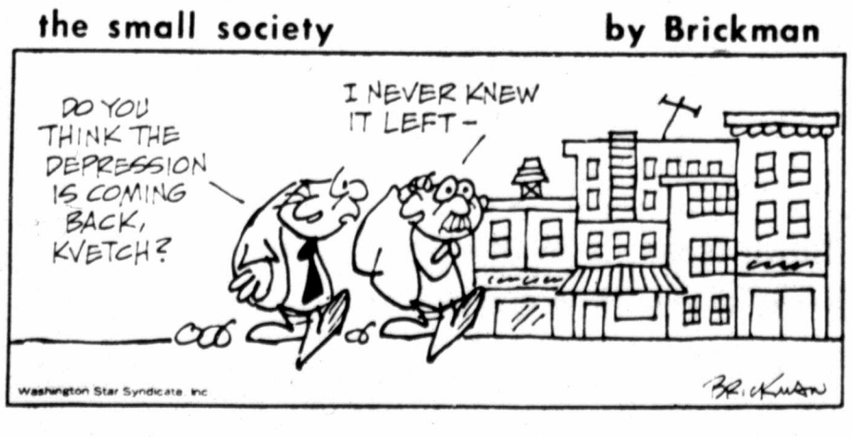

But if we agree to join the games one event at a time, demanding reciprocity, no one can criticize us for ruining the games.

You may be asking what do we do about the basketball event?

Quite simple. We don't field a basketball team until the Soviets move their navy out of the Indian Ocean.

Will they do it? I have a feeling they will. The Russians were defeated in basketball by the United States and Yugoslavia in 1976 and they'll do anything to beat the pants off us this year.

Midland Man Says Metric Plan Will Cost Shoppers

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Your food bill will continue to jump because the federal government is forcing "metrication" on American food producers. This again is being done without your consent. Such efforts by the federal government are unlawful because the 1975 Metric Conversion Act clearly states that metric conversion shall be voluntary. But the federal government interprets "voluntary" as "mandatory."

Shopping will be easier because there won't be as much food in your shopping bags. Why? Because metric packages contain as much as 8 percent less food as standard packaging. Soon, you'll be forced to pay the same price for a gallon of milk with 8 percent less milk in it (or orange juice, etc.) than you receive for your money today.

Millions of tax dollars have already been spent to force the liquor industry to adopt metric bottles. So you spend the same and get less. So unless you want less for your money than you are getting—now is the time to protest.

Remember the scheme of the metricrats to "metricize" all highway signs at a cost of $100 million was defeated two years ago. It can be done again, but not without your help.

Belief In God Also Basis Of Free Enterprise, He Says

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

A statement by sociologist Dr. Ernest van den Haag, quoted in an A.J. editorial "An Exorcise in Hostility" (Jan. 14), should not pass without comment.

"Intellectuals resent the market because it makes people pay for economic value," he writes. "Moral value is left out in the cold—and so are intellectuals, who are the producers of moral value...for public consumption." Thus their hostility, he reasons.

First, intellectuals are not the source of morals. Intellectuals gave us evolution. This wonderfully created body of man and all else, they say, came about by way of happenstance. They called it natural selection and out of this proceeded the "survival of the fittest."

In no way can morals be associated with evolution. Intellectuals do not have a monopoly on intellect. No one does.

God so created man that each individual has intelligence enough to live a life. God gives each individual volition and God will hold each individual responsible for the decisions he makes. God is the only source of morals and He gave man his infallable word, the Holy Bible, to guide him.

Individual responsibility to God is the foundation of freedom and the free enterprise system. They go hand in hand. You can not separate moral value and economic value. You must receive something for your money and that is where moral values enter economics.

Take away individual responsibility to God, separate moral values from the economy and you destroy both freedom and the free enterprise system. The so-called intellectuals resent the authority of God. Hence they have manufactured the philosophy of evolution to explain origin.

It is the opposition to morals and moral law that is their source of hostility toward freedom and the free enterprise system.

Ace Says 'The Bomb' May Be Best War Deterrent

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Since splitting the atom, which led to the creation of the bomb, war simply is no longer feasible. With the ultimate weapon at our disposal, there is no geographical advantage as in former wars.

Every acre of land in every nation the world over will become the front lines. Men who normally declare war, exempt because of age or position, will perish along with the young men who formerly bore the brunt of the battlefields.

Thus, the bomb is perhaps the best deterrent against war since the evolution of humankind, and not, as many seem to believe, the promotion of war.

Reader Hopes It Is Not Too Late To Save U.S.

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

As of now we find ourselves, a nation comparable to 1939, not facing up to the major issues of the world.

We should by now have learned our lesson that the only good defense is a good offense. We should be so militarily strong, no nation, not even the Soviets, would dare take advantage of us.

As it is, we find a small nation like Iran with a two-bit dictator holding 50 of our citizens and the entire nation as hostages. Jimmy Carter within the past month has just admitted his opinion has changed about the Communists.

I am happy he is opening his eyes, I hope it isn't too late for America.

City Fireman Says He Will Think Twice On Next Run

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

For over half my life I have worn a uniform defending and protecting lives of our countrymen.

In 1953, as part of my military service, I was cleared by President Eisenhower for military secrets. And, by choice, in 1957, I became a member of the Lubbock Fire Department.

In the past 22 years, I was the first one off the fire truck, the first one into a roaring fire and never once thought about the odds against my coming out alive.

But come tomorrow, I will have my calculator in hand to compute those odds—should they come up against me—I shall think twice before entering an inferno.

Until this past Saturday (Jan. 19), I always felt like I had the support of the citizens of Lubbock and our City Council. However, their lack of concern was clearly shown at the polls.

Now, for the very first time, I have doubts that anyone really cares. The people of Lubbock are the true losers this time.

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

We should not allow the murders in Puerto Rico of two U.S. Navy seamen by a handful of the lunatic fringe to succeed in severing the long bonds of firm friendship between the 3.3 million U.S. citizens of Puerto Rico and the rest of our nation.

Fidel Castro and his half-dozen or so fanatical followers in Puerto Rico would like nothing better than to have that occur. Frustrated by their numerous failures to gain popular support for forcing independence on Puerto Rico, they have now resorted to the most cowardly form of violence in the vain hope of frightening the American people.

This failure is illustrated in the dramatic rise in voter support in Puerto Rico for statehood candidates for public office, climbing from 12 percent in 1952 to nearly 50 percent in 1976. Recent opinion surveys show that 55 percent of Puerto Rico's public now supports statehood. Independence support, meanwhile, has fallen off from nearly 20 percent—its highest total—in 1952 to 6 percent in 1976. The rest favor the current commonwealth status, although their numbers are declining.

The U.S., of which Puerto Rico is a loyal part, is still a nation of majority rule. More than 94 percent of Puerto Rico's people treasure this principle as much as they do their American citizenship. Most look forward to the day when Puerto Rico will be accepted in the Union as the 51st state. Even most of the relatively few supporters of independence condemn the violence of the fanatical few, and agree that Puerto Rico's future should be decided democratically.

Let us not allow this small handful of Cuba-supported terrorists to succeed in creating the schism they so desire. It would lead to agony for Puerto Rico. It would be a tragedy for the U.S. And, it would dishonor the U.S. military record of nearly 250,000 Puerto Ricans who have fought to defend the Stars and Stripes, many of them giving their lives for this country.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Iran In The Red

DALLAS—It may be small comfort when the bombs start dropping, but when it comes to economic hard times, our two enemies are in the same boat we are.

Maybe even worse.

Iran's economy is in such terrible shape, according to American observers, any trade sanctions or embargoes would be just one more drop in the depression bucket.

And the Soviet Union is struggling with what Moscow-watchers describe as a "severe depression."

So where, one might ask, do they get the chutzpah to bring the rest of the world to the brink of war? And how do they plan to scrape up the kind of money it would take to finance it?

IRAN, OF COURSE, can go on selling oil, but even there it's in trouble. Production is down from the old level of six million barrels a day to about three million. And when it needs new equipment or spare parts, it can no longer order them up from the United States.

President Carter wants the world to slap economic embargoes on Iran until Khomeini frees the hostages, but he's ruled out trying to starve the people.

Khomeini's revolution was supposed to mean happy days are here again for the Iranian people, but they have yet to notice it.

Jobs are hard to find, and unemployment is up to more than 30 percent. Not only that, prices are exploding at the rate of 25 percent a year...law and order are disintegrating...and industry is close to a standstill.

NOW YOU know why Khomeini has to hide out every now and then for a "rest."

Meanwhile, back on the Russian front, things are almost as bad. The Kremlin won't admit it, but the country is going through a real production slump.

Last year, for the first time since the disastrous days of World War II, Soviet production went down as much as seven percent, bringing on what American economists call "an unprecedented failure for an industrial country that had achieved slow, steady growth for 30 years."

The sudden decline threw party leaders into a tizzy, since they've always boasted that a recession was for capitalists, that it could never happen under communism. Not with all those fancy "five-year plans."

BUT THE plan isn't going "according to plan" at the moment.

Soviet national income last year went up only two percent, less than half what it was supposed to.

There's no unemployment problem, but that in itself is a problem: Russia doesn't have enough workers in the labor market to get all the jobs done.

It doesn't have enough railroads, either, which is why freight shipments are down.

As a result, factories have had to decrease their output because their supplies don't arrive on time, and other businesses cut back on production because what they do produce just piles up at railroad stations, waiting for an empty freight car.

AND, WITH production of coal, steel, timber, cement, plastics and synthetic fibers in decline, the Russian people, who've been putting up with scarcities of almost everything for years, find they have some new shortages to get used to.

The lines are even longer now for automobiles, radios, refrigerators, washing machines, motorcycles, paper and shoes. Also food.

Spring snows, summer drought and recent floods wiped out a fourth of the grain crop, which is why Russia desperately needs those 17 million tons President Carter embargoed after the Afghanistan invasion.

His refusal to let them have it caught Soviet leaders by surprise. They figured Carter for a push-over, calculating that, in an election year, the farmers had enough political clout to keep him from canceling Russia's $3-billion order for wheat and corn.

THIS LEAVES the Soviets with a bad case of the shorts in livestock feed, which means they will have to slaughter part of their herds, and that means the Russian people will have even less meat, butter and cheese from now on.

The Soviet Union is running short on oil, too, which is why it's plowing its way with tanks and troops ever closer to the Persian Gulf and control of the sea lanes that carry most of the world's Mideast oil.

So they're going for broke, even though their economy is falling apart at home...Khomeini continues to defy a superpower from a throne that's tottering beneath him...and some of us are beginning to suspect there's something going on here that we didn't cover back in Economics 101.

L.M. BOYD:

Pass It On:

IF I DIDN'T say half of all new businesses fail in the first two years, I should have. And half of those, as reported, fail because of bad management, according to the Small Business Administration.

The more successful you are, the less likely you'll crack up emotionally. Or such were the findings in a Penn State study. People who aren't successful, these scholars learned, seem far more inclined to suffer those wrecking depressions. Exceptions abound, however.

Few know that Abraham Lincoln was also an inventor. In 1849, he received a patent for a sort of inflatable cylinder to buoy ships over shoals.

Q. It sometimes happens that just as I'm drifting off to sleep, my whole body jerks, waking me up suddenly, and it's as though I'd just saved myself from falling. Is this sort of thing common?

A. Evidently is, research reveals. It's what the medicos call a "myoclonic spasm." Akin in a way to the hiccoughs. To be so called, that jerk has to involve enough muscles to move a joint. And though few people mention it until prompted, many recall having experienced it, when asked.

Q. When is National Nothing Day?

A. January 16. A newspaperman named Harold Coffin dreamed up that one in 1972. Idea was to give us a day on which we didn't have to celebrate something.

Q. Quick, what's the only gem composed of no more than one element?

A. The diamond.

Aroused Public Emotionalism Prevented Hostages' Release

PRIVATELY, GOVERNMENT officials in Iran were not surprised when the shah left the United States last month for Panama, and never realisticly expected President Carter to extradite the shah. But they have used the hostages as a publicity maneuver to draw world attention to their accusations against the shah and the United States. Officials in Iran and in the United States say the United States helped the shah return to power in a 1953 coup d'etat against then-Prime Minister Mohammad Mossadegh.

Because of the fundamentalist tenets of Shi'ite Islam, nearly every class in Iran takes an active interest in politics, from the nation's clergy and political leaders on down to the shopkeepers and the bootblacks. And it's also why many Iranians were irate when the United States allowed the shah into the country for cancer treatment.

"I told them very frankly as foreign minister that they (U.S. officials) were playing with fire," Yazdi says. "They didn't know what they were doing. They were telling us that they understood the Iranian revolution. But they didn't understand the depth of anti-American and anti-shah sentiment in Iran."

The takeover of the U.S. embassy seems to have been a spontaneous, emotional response which all boiled over after the shah had been in New York for a week. One student told me that at first the militants who stormed the U.S. embassy intended to release all the persons inside and merely occupy the compound.

HOWEVER, THE STUDENTS say they found documents and equipment inside which proved that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency was attempting to undermine the new government, and that the embassy was being used as a base of operations. It was then that the students decided to hold those inside the embasssy hostage and demand the extradition of the shah.

The government of then-Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan, which resigned shortly after the takeover, was slow to react to the situation. Sources close to the government say statements had even been circulated to the state radio and television stations instructing the students to release the hostages.

However, according to students, public support for the takeover grew very quickly, especially among the less-educated. It soon became politically impossible for the government to condemn the takeover.

In the minds of Iran's leaders now, the ethical considerations of holding hostages are far outweighed by what they consider a more important need for justice. They want the shah tried in Iran because many of their witnesses are poor people who cannot afford to travel outside Iran.

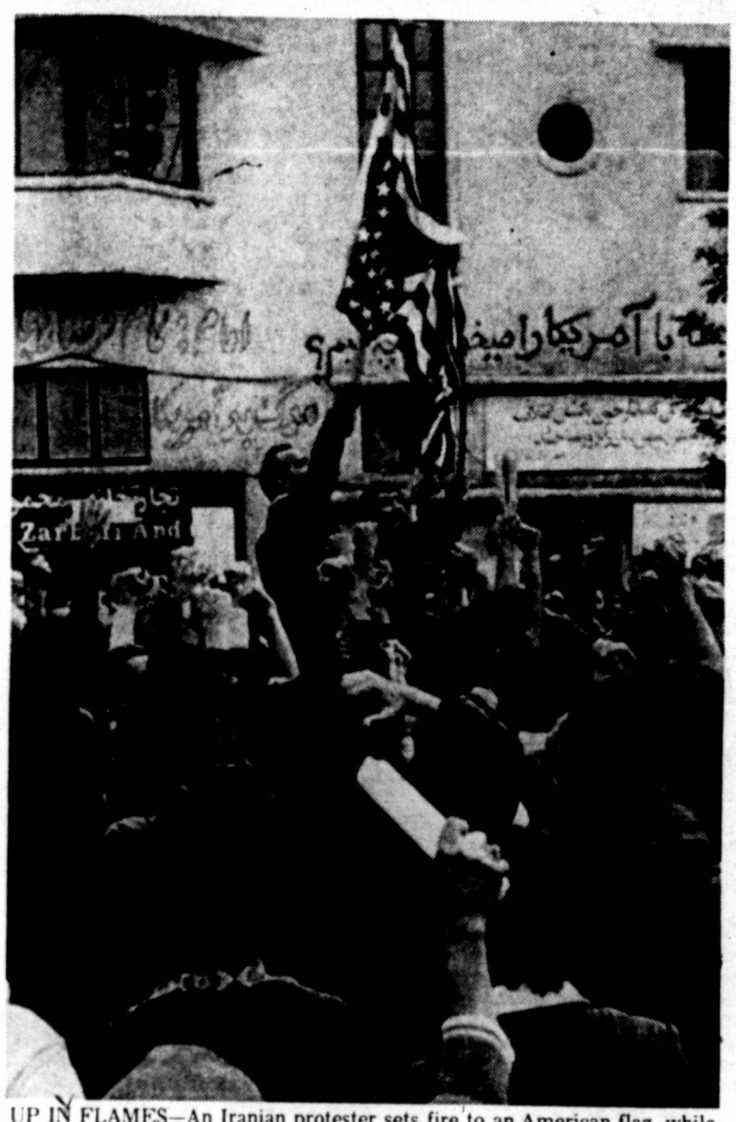

The Iranians also want the money now under the shah's control to be put back into the national treasury. The shah transferred the money to a variety of foreign banks before the royal family fled Tehran, and much of it now is in the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York. The total amount is estimated to be in the billions of dollars.

"WHY DIDN'T WE TAKE into consideration the morality of this (holding hostages)? I wish we could," Yazdi says. "But we also have to take into consideration all the hundreds of thousands of those martyrs. You have to weigh all those things (the shah and the United States) did in Iran. They (our actions) are a part of our beliefs and morality."

TEHRAN — AN OLD MAN SAT next to the wall of a broken building with his shoeshine box beside him. I asked my friend, an Iranian educated in the United States, to put some questions to the old man about the Iranian students who had taken over the U.S. embassy located in another part of the city.

"It's good, I support them," he said in Persian. But although we tried to press him further, the old man didn't care to explain his opinion.

The bootblack seemed to typify Iran's uneducated poorer classes, my friend told me later. The old man couldn't rationalize why he supported the students at the embassy, but in his conscience he felt the takeover was politically the appropriate thing to do.

Across town at the occupied embassy, a uniformed guard armed with a machine gun slowly walked outside the wall surrounding the embassy compound, yelling at spectators who crossed within the roped-off area of the sidewalk. The front of the embassy showed signs that it had become a gathering place for Iran's intellectuals and revolutionaries. Long banners were draped over the walls and across the entrance. Everywhere there were posters in all sizes of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Ayatollah Kazem Shariatmadari and the late Ayatollah Mahmoud Taleghani. There was even a platform from which special lecturers spoke nearly every night.

The street in front of the embasssy was closed, and everywhere people browsed through the books and other literature stacked in the street. Vendors sold hot beets and other refreshments, while people looked at photographs and exhibits which were displayed outside the embassy. The people seemed excited, a little tense.

The Iranians at the embassy, mostly educated people, knew why they were there and why they supported the students inside the compound. But the strength of their political position depended on the uneducated, like the bootblack, who couldn't think out their opinions. These people were and still are guided by their Muslim intuition and by their imam, Ayatollah Khomeini.

In some ways, Tehran is similar to any other major city. The vulture-like cab drivers who could spot a foreign visitor as an easy mark, the traffic-clogged streets, the pollution, they all were there.

But there were noticeable differences. In the airport, an old Muslim spread his pallet on the floor, kneeled and began his early morning prayers. His wife, clad in a full-length black chador, gathered up the blankets when he finished, and they left.

LATER, I VISITED THE family of my friend. After his mother and I spoke for a while, she excused herself to go to her room and say her afternoon prayers. Just like that — to her and everyone else, it was as natural and essential as eating or sleeping.

Politics in Iran is categorized by a strong desire for freedom and independence. Iranians resent the U.S. government because of its interference in Iran's internal affairs. They resent the Soviet Union for the same reason, believing that if the Soviets had the opportunity to control the government of Iran, they would do it. They have only to look at their neighboring country, Afghanistan.

Although the taking of hostages in the U.S. embassy in Tehran has focused attention on the anti-American feelings in Iran, the Iranians dislike the Soviets much more. They point to the fact that Muslims in the United States are allowed to practice their religion, while Muslims in Russia are arrested.

Iranians also make a careful distinction between the U.S. government and the American public. Their chants of "margh bar Carter" are directed towards U.S. foreign policy, not the entire country.

(Although "margh bar ... " can be translated literally as "death to ... ", the meaning of the phrase in Persian more accurately translates to "down with ... ")

However, my friend told me that Iranians find it "unacceptable" that the American public has allowed its government to interfere in the internal politics of other nations, such as Iran, Chile and Vietnam. Many Iranians view this as a sort of oppression of the U.S. government over its own people, because there is no real mechanism to allow the public any input into foreign policy.

As I was walking along the streets of Tehran with my friend, we decided to go into a small grocery store. The shopkeeper asked if I was an American.

We then got into an involved but friendly discussion of politics. With my friend acting as an interpreter, the shopkeeper asked me how people in the United States were reacting to the situation in Tehran.

He was rather surprised when I told him that Carter 's popularity had doubled as a result of the embassy takeover. I also told him that Americans were angry with Iran, and were concerned primarily with the safe return of the hostages.

THEN THEY SHOULD send back the shah, he said.

I told him that the American public couldn't send back the shah even if it wanted to, and that President Carter was the only one who had that power. Besides, I added, what he was asking was the same as kidnapping.

The shopkeeper said that because the shah was a criminal, his case was different. He also wanted to know why the public didn't put pressure on Carter to return the shah.

I repeated that the American public was concerned with the safety of the hostages, and basicly didn't care about the shah.

Then they should send the shah back, he repeated.

Although the hostages and the crisis in Iran has dominated the front pages of U.S. newspapers for the past few months, the crisis is not as important in Iran.

On October 4, 1979, Foreign Minister Yazdi told the United Nations in New York that "the destruction of the Pahlavi rule was the less difficult part of our task; the more complex revolutionary work is ahead of us. For example, we have to restructure the society at a time when our agriculture, due to the neglect and irresponsibility of the old regime, can feed no more than 30 percent of Iran's population."

In the 1950s, Iran was a major exporter of grain among the Middle East countries, with fertile farms and orchards in the northwestern Azerbaijan region.

When the shah returned to power, he began a drive to modernize Iran, and started a program to build up the country's heavy industry. Iran's current leaders say that this rapid industrialization came at the expense of Iran's rich agriculture.

As I looked to the northern part of Tehran, I saw some of the results of this industrialization. A freeway, one of the few in the country, weaved its way northward past rows of high-rise buildings. Many of those construction projects were not yet finished, although the equipment lay idle since the revolution a year ago. It seemed as though the buildings under construction outnumbered those which were completed and occupied. Lift cranes rose above the construction as idle monuments to the shah's industrial revolution.

But that industrial revolution was replaced by an Islamic one, and the shah is now gone. To the north, I saw the Elburz Mountains rise to their snowy summits. A dark brown haze obscured the bottom of the mountains, and tinted the smaller peaks of the range. Only the top of the highest peaks were untainted by the smog.

THE DRIVE TO RENOVATE urban Tehran will be almost as ambitious as the efforts to rebuild Iran's agriculture. The population of Tehran is now between four and five million, and people continue to migrate to the city from the villages.

Many of the city's inhabitants live in apartment buildings of poor to medium quality compared to U.S. standards. At the very lowest end of the economic spectrum, I saw a man who had carved out a small hovel from a pile of broken concrete and sand.

In practically every part of the city, I noticed poorly kept buildings and unfinished construction projects. In many places, rubble and gutted buildings dominated the scenery.

But Tehran was still very livable, and the people there seemed satisfied. Those I talked with realized that restoring the agriculture and rebuilding the cities were difficult tasks which were worsened by the threat of an economic embargo. But they said they were ready to take on the tasks even if it meant isolation from the Western world.

They in fact seem to want that separation. A slogan of the revolution, which one can occasionally hear repeated, is "Neither West nor East, but our Islamic republic."

Islam, As Religion, 'Factor' In Muslim Political Life

WESTERNERS OFTEN HAVE a difficult time adjusting to the fact that Iran is an Islamic society. Indeed, the simple notion of a religious society eludes the comprehension of most Americans, who are accustomed to a society in which relationships between people are determined by individual needs rather than by religious principles.

Muslims do not consider Islam to be a religion that opposes Christianity. In fact, many of Iran's highest Shi'ite Islam clergy have said that Islam is an extension of Christianity, just as Christians believe their religion is a strengthening of the laws of Judaism.

"One cannot be a Muslim without believing in the teachings of Jesus Christ," says Dr. Ebrahim Yazdi, one of Ayatollah Khomeini's top aides.

But Islam, as a religion, takes a strong part in a Muslim's political life, and this confuses many Western observers. One of Iran's leading Muslim philosophers, the late Dr. Ali Shari'ati, explained this difference as what he called "tauhid."

The concept of tauhid implies a unity of all things under a single God. Shari'ati wrote that tauhid is "the unity of mature with metanature, of man with nature, of man with man, of God with the world and with man. It depicts all of these as constituting a total, harmonious, living and self-aware system."

"You (in the West) consider religion as a private relationship between man and a supreme being," Yazdi says. "There is no room for political, economic and social considerations.

"THEN YOU ARE confronted with the reality of Islam as a revolutionary movement, and ask why religion is being mixed with politics."

According to Yazdi, this is where Islam differs from Christianity and Judaism. Islamic doctrines define mankind and its goals in terms of tauhid, the all-encompassing "world-view" based on Islamic values.

"Seen in this light," Yazdi says, "the religion of Islam has its own political, economic, social and cultural perspectives."

This was the philosophy which motivated Iranians to oust their monarch, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi. The power of the Islamic revolution came from the simplistic determination of lower educated masses. Yet this, too, is something which is a part of Islam.

"Islam is the first school of social thought that recognizes the masses as the basis, the fundamental and conscious factor in determining history and society," wrote Shari'ati. "Not the elect as Nietzsche thought, not the aristocracy and nobility as Plato claimed, not the great personalities as Carlyle and Emerson believed, not those of pure blood as Alexis Carrel imagined, not the priests or intellectuals, but the masses."

FALSE HOPES—Iranians cheer and dance in the streets of Tehran after hearing reports from that nation's news media that the Panamanian government was asking for documents from Iran to support extradition proceedings for the Shah. Meanwhile, a Panamanian army spokesman denied reports the Shah had been arrested for extradition to Iran. (AP Laserphoto)

Church Of '80s Faces Big Burden

EUSTIS, Fla. (Special) — "The church of the 1980's will be called upon to carry a heavier burden than ever before as it seeks to minister to its families in the midst of constant change," a seminary professor said at a recent conference here.

Three trends will emerge during the new decade to "give parents additional responsibility to educate and prepare their children with less available funds and time," Wade Rowatt of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary told 400 persons attending the 16th annual church recreation lab.

Rowatt, associate professor of psychology of religion, said the trends will be:

—a polarization of Christian and non-Christian beliefs resulting in increases both in religious programming and in violent and sex-oriented programming;

—increasing economic stress in families causing more dual-career marriages;

—continued decline in quality of education.

"Although the 1980s will hold numerous adjustments for the family, it also can be a decade when families pull together if they can learn to live together," Rowatt said.

"Learning to live together is where the church can be of valuable assistance," he added. "The church can remind its membership of God's commitment to the family and that he works through the family to touch the lives of individuals."

Rowatt noted that emphasizing the importance of the family is only step one. Step two is training parents and children to function as a family. "Churches must stop telling a man to be a Christian father and start teaching him how to become one."

Besides making families a priority, Rowatt believes that churches must expand their counseling and human resource services to help broken families, families undergoing great stress and other related problems.

"As ministers of recreation, you have the exciting and unique opportunities to minister and counsel in a casual and relaxed atmosphere," Rowatt told the conference participants.

Rowatt also reminded the group that in the midst of the activities and plans they should not sacrifice their own families.

"We do our churches a great disservice when we do not set specific hours for time with our families," he said. "Each of you needs private time with yourself, your spouse and your children in order to strengthen your relationships and become a more capable servant of Jesus Christ."

The annual Rec Lab was sponsored by the church recreation department of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board.

The ensemble sings all kinds of gospel music including some which Wayland Hazel has written for his family.

The family began singing together at home for their own enjoyment and in recent years have made concert tours to Colorado and California. They have also made three record albums in Nashville.

Rev. Gary West To Lead Study

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

THE COFFEE BREAK SEEMS to have established itself as a basic feature of American business life. New office buildings and factories set aside special rooms for this daily ritual, symbolized by great, shining urns. Coffee breaks are written into union contracts and employers who refuse to permit them are regarded as hopelessly old-fashioned.

Now, I'm not opposed to coffee breaks, but a friend of mine tells me that he has come across a better idea. He suggests adding to the coffee break what he calls an "Inspiration Break."

It's an excellent suggestion, and I presented the idea in some speeches. One man tells me that he made up his mind that instead of going out and chatting idly with his associates over a cup of coffee for fifteen minutes or so, he would spend that fifteen minutes in his office, reading the Bible. He also had his cup of coffee there, but the important thing for him was to spend that time reading the Bible. Reading fifteen minutes a day, five days a week, he managed to cover each of the Psalms and all of the New Testament in a very short time. He reports that the result has been quite remarkable.

When he started his "Inspiration Break," he'd had a lot of difficulties and there were conflicts and problems he couldn't resolve. But as he filled his mind with the great words of the Bible, his problems began to come into better focus. He finally decided that there are four great principles which he had acquired from this reading and which gave him a power to solve his problems as he had never had before.

THE FIRST WAS BELIEF. He learned to believe that through God's help he could do what he had to do. He learned really to believe in God, and as a result, also in himself, in his work, in other people.

Next, he learned to think in an atmosphere of calm and quiet. You can't think successfully without inward calm and quiet. When he achieved that, his mind worked better.

Third, he regained a belief in his power to work. Instead of scattering his energies and leaking away his power, he was able to apply himself with concentration. He learned to work effectively.

And last, but not least important, he discovered that you must give yourself to have yourself. He found the creative importance of sharing as a life principle. He began to tithe, that is, to give 10 percent of his income to his church, and to give generously to help other people. But he also tithed or shared his time and abilities. He gave himself, and in so doing found himself.

These then are the four great principles of power this man discovered in his daily reading of the Bible: believe, think, work and share. It was the application of these principles in his own life that lifted him over his difficulties. His daily "Inspiration Break" showed him the way.

So, if you really want to solve your own problems, try the "Inspiration Break" habit and get those basic power principles deeply embedded in your own mind. As you and I apply the simple, basic techniques of overcoming difficulty which are found in the Bible, life can be so much better. Try a daily "Inspiration Break" and see for yourself.

Judge's Ruling On Abortion Assistance Hailed By Group

NEW YORK (Special) — A federal judge's ruling that the federal government must help pay for abortions for poor women has brought expressions of "appreciation" from staff members of the United Methodist Women's Division who were parties to the suit.

Theressa Hoover, top staff executive of the division, hailed Judge John F. Dooling Jr.'s Jan. 15 ruling that the Hyde Amendments are unconstitutional. The controversial legislation, originally passed in 1976, has placed restrictions on federal Medicaid reimbursements for abortions. The case on which the ruling was made — McCrea v. Califano — was filed originally on behlf of a pregnant New York woman. The Women's Division joined the case in October of 1977 as plaintiff-intervenors. Miss Hoover termed the decision "a victory for poor women who exercise a conscientious decision in the choice of abortion."

The Justice Department, which argued the three-year case for the federal government, announced it would appeal the judge's decision to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Energy Shortage Blamed On Production Failure Rather Than Nonrenewable Fuel Supply Limit

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of 15 articles exploring "Energy and the Way We Live." In this article, S. David Freeman, who headed the Ford Foundation's Energy Policy Project, discusses the nature and extent of our energy problems and some possible solutions. This series, written for Courses by Newspaper, a program of University Extension, University of California, San Diego, was funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, with supplemental funding from the National Science Foundation.)

By S. DAVID FREEMAN

In 1859 Edwin Drake started producing oil from a well in Pennsylvania, and the world has been running out of oil ever since.

Oil is a "nonrenewable" energy source; there's only a certain amount of it on earth. The same goes for natural gas, coal and uranium.

In 1978, these four finite sources supplied about 96 percent of U.S. energy consumption. Almost half came from oil and a fourth from natural gas. Coal accounted for 18 percent and nuclear 4 percent. Hydro (water) power and other renewable resources supplied only about 4 percent of U.S. energy and 6 percent of the world's energy.

The current energy shortage, however, is not the result of the limited supply of nonrenewable fuels. Rather, it results from the failure of production to keep up with growing demand because of economic, environmental, and political constraints.

These constraints make it impossible for the United States to produce its way out of the energy shortage unless we curb our demand.

Energy supply is usually discussed in terms of the quantities of discovered fuel remaining in the ground, called "reserves," or the ultimate size of the energy source, called "resources."

However, it is productive capacity — the amount that can be delivered to each home or car or industry each day — that is the key figure. Oil in the ground might just as well be mud if the capacity and incentive to produce and sell it don't exist.

THE PACE AT WHICH WELLS, mines, refineries, and other links in the energy chain are developed depends partly on the price paid by consumers. As long as Middle Eastern oil was selling at low prices that reflected its low production costs and was readily available, there was little incentive to develop domestic alternatives.

Now that imported oil is priced much higher by OPEC and its availability is unreliable, it is necessary for us to use less and to produce more costly domestic energy. But since no one guarantees future prices, investments by private companies for higher-priced sources will lag.

Price alone doesn't govern the rate of oil production. Environmental laws and impacts on nearby communities rightly place constraints on the rate of energy production.

The world's proven reserves of crude oil total about 650 billion barrels, enough to last about 30 years at current rates of consumption. "Estimated reserves," those thought to exist but not yet discovered, may total roughly three times as much.

Yet, even if we created an energy company's dream world — high prices, no environmental laws, and lenient government policies — the rate of growth in energy production, especially petroleum, would still be constrained because existing fields are being depleted; new ones will be smaller, and more difficult to locate.

THE MOST SEVERE CONSTRAINT, however, is that the OPEC nations have learned that holding back on oil production enables them to keep increasing prices as consuming nations bid ever higher for limited supplies.

But domestic production can't grow fast enough to meet growing demands. The United States now imports almost half its oil; if we are to cut back on imports from an oil-short world market, we must practice conservation and develop substitutes for oil.

Most of the problems of oil production also apply to natural gas, except relatively little natural gas is imported. The "easy to find" reservoirs have been discovered and are rapidly being depleted. Even without price controls, which dampen the incentive to explore for new sources, it will be difficult to find the remaining gas as rapidly as existing reservoirs are depleted.

The world's proven reserve of natural gas is about 2,200 trillion cubic feet; its estimated resource, about 8,150 trillion cubic feet. Proven reserves of gas in the United States are about 200 trillion cubic feet, enough to last only 10 years at present consumption levels. Even if the most optimistic estimates of undiscovered gas reserves prove true, U.S. production of natural gas will be severely curtailed in 30 to 50 years.

COAL ALSO ILLUSTRATES our frustrating energy dilemma. Coal resources are large, compared to petroleum. The proven U.S. reserves could last about 700 years at present consumption rates. But obstacles to mining it and burning it in a socially acceptable manner have limited its use, and new technologies to convert coal to electricity and synthetic fuels need perfecting. If we can solve these environmental and technical efficiency problams, coal could supply a growing share of our needs well into the future.

Nuclear energy is a question mark, largely because the public fears it, especially after the Three Mile Island incident. In the next two decades the amount of uranium in the ground isn't likely to be a limiting factor. But, if more efficient nuclear plants cannot be perfected, nuclear fission is a relatively small source of energy, no larger than our oil and natiral gas resources.

The United States could get energy from nonrenewable sources yet to be developed, such as shale oil or tar sands. It is estimated that we have 2,000 billion barrels of oil in shale, more than all the crude oil in the Mideast. But the shale oil poses awesome environmental problems, and other sources are untested and likely to be very expensive.

OBVIOUSLY, OUR NONRENEWABLE energy sources are going to run out some day. The problem then is to develop renewable or superabundant sources and use our fossil fuels and uranium wisely to bridge the gap in the meantime.

These are four potentially major sources of "durable energy" that should be pursued: the nuclear breeder, fusion, geothermal power, and solar energy.

The nuclear breeder holds promise of energy abundance. A breeder reactor is fueled by plutonium-239 instead of the uranium-235 used in today's reactors. While a breeder reactor operates, it "breeds" more of this plutonium fuel from uranium 238, which is abundant. This "breeding" of fuel could allow the known reserves of uranium to fuel breeder reactors for many centuries. But development of the breeder is clouded by concerns over safety, proliferation of atomic bombs from its fuel, and escalating costs.

Fusion power is, in a sense, an energy source as powerful as the sun in a reactor here on earth. Fusion could supply an almost unlimited amount of energy. But after 30 years of intensive effort, the scientific feasibility of fusion has yet to be established. For now, it's a long shot.

Geothermal power, using geyser steam, seems more diffuse and difficult to harness than the sun. Geothermal sites in the United States are scattered, and harnessing them presents major engineering and environmental problems.

SOLAR ENERGY OFFERS THE best possibility for our high-energy civilization to continue. Using the sun to heat buildings is practical today, but harnessing the sun to generate electricity on a large scale will require all our ingenuity. Whether the nation rises to that challenge may well determine our fate in the next century.

For the moment we are short of energy and new sources are many years away. And the shortages will grow if we don't curb our wasteful appetite for energy. Any policy not rooted in programs to conserve energy by making the American economy more energy-efficient is doomed to failure.

Conservation is our quickest and cheapest source of supply.

QUESTIONS:

(1) What percentage of this country's energy currently comes from "renewable" sources?

(2) What is the primary cause of our present energy crisis?

(3) What factors control the rate of U.S. oil production?

(4) What are the four major potential sources of "durable energy?"

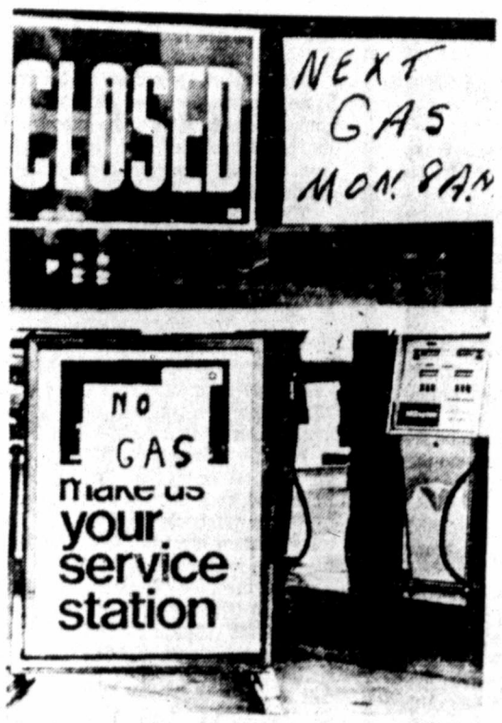

ANSWERES:

(1) Only about 4 percent.

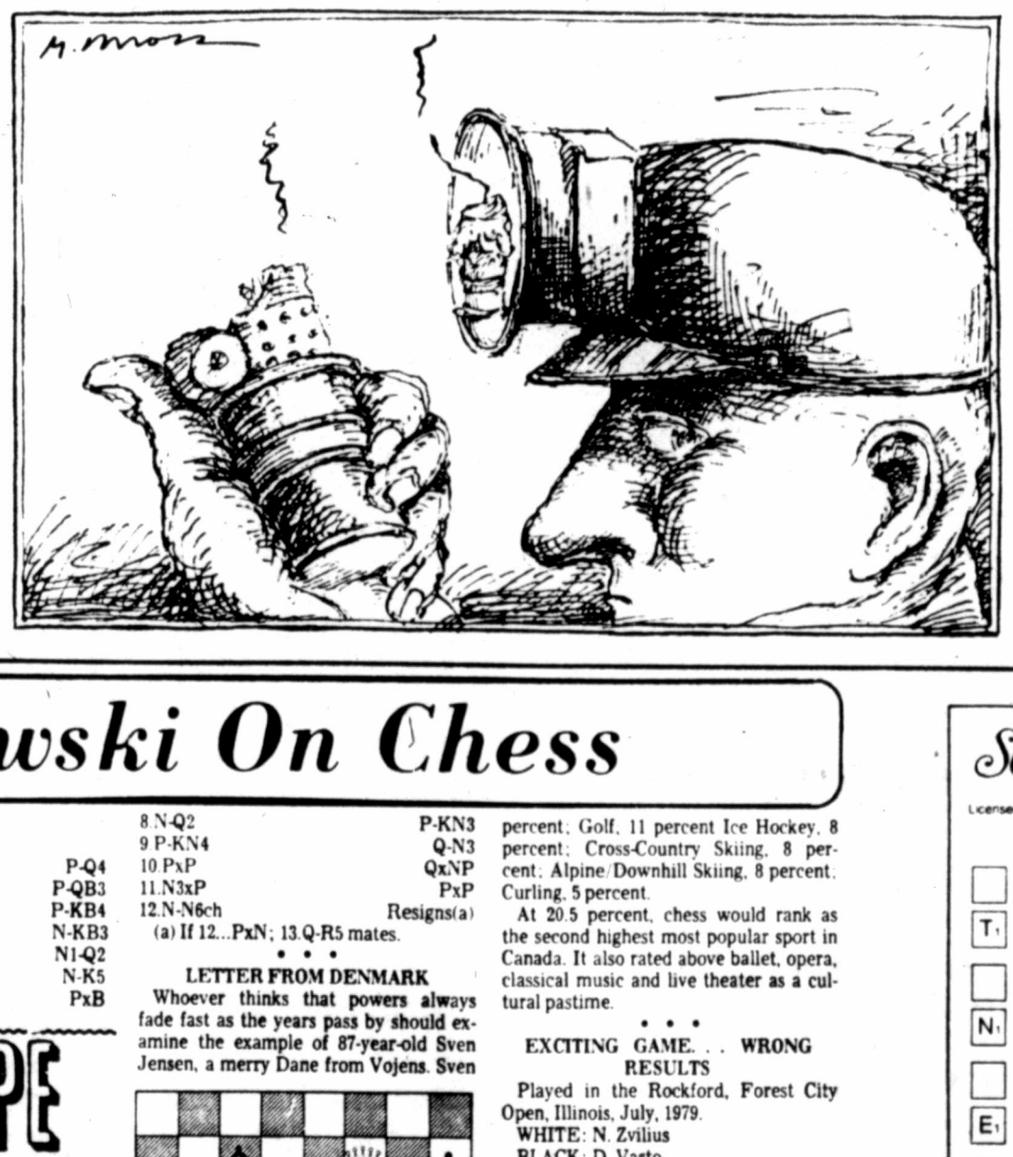

(2) The failure of production to keep up with the growing demands because of economic, environmental, and political constraints.

(3) Price, environmental laws, government policies, and international politics.

(4) Nuclear breeder, fusion, geothermal power, and solar energy.

GAS SHORTAGE—Signs such as this one in Los Angeles became familiar in several parts of the country during 1979, as domestic oil production failed to keep up with growing demands.

LETTER FROM DENMARK

Whoever thinks that powers always fade fast as the years pass by should examine the example of 87-year-old Sven Jensen, a merry Dane from Vojens. Sven and his wife, Astrid, have just celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary and he took the occasion to write me a brief note:

"I feel the pressure of age but do lots of work in the garden and keep up my interest in music and literature. I just heard the Juilliard String Quartet playing 'The Last Quartets of Beethoven'. I play chess and force my little gray cells to compose chess problems. I'm a bit slower, true, but you understand that the days are running. . ."

CANADIAN CHESS RANKS HIGH

Chess is the second most popular sport in Canada.

The Chess Federation of Canada and the Federation of Quebecoise des Echecs jointly commissioned a Gallup study of Canadians. The question was: "How often do you play the game of chess?"

Over 20 percent of those questioned — a representative sample of Canadians aged 15 and above — said that they played chess at least once a year.

How does that compare with other activities?

The 1976 Fitness and Sport Survey by the Federal Government asked a question on the same basis about other sports.

The results were: Swimming, 32 percent; Ice Skating, 17 percent; Tennis, 13 percent; Golf, 11 percent Ice Hockey, 8 percent; Cross-Country Skiing, 8 percent; Alpine/Downhill Skiing, 8 percent; Curling, 5 percent.

At 20.5 percent, chess would rank as the second highest most popular sport in Canada. It also rated above ballet, opera, classical music and live theater as a cultural pastime.

HOW HIGH IS HIGH?

That is the question everybody in the cotton futures market wants answered.

"Tops are a lot more obvious when seen from the other side of the mountain," says one analyst, "but we can at least enjoy the scenery here and compare it to the two major peaks of the 1970s.

"We confess we would rather stick to fundamentals and leave the technical talk to others. However, in markets like these, when we admit we don't know whether to write about cotton or gold, about farmers or soldiers, a diversion to the more bizarre technical gibberish of the market can be fun."

In that respect, he says, there are two main features to this market that cannot be contested: The market has recorded an all-time record volume and an all-time record open interest in each of the past three weeks.

"No one will deny that a market advance of expanded open interest and expanded volume is bullish," the analyst says.

NOTHING IN THE HISTORY OF THE MARKET has come close to the recent volume, which one day last week set a new all-time daily high of more than 18,000 contracts.

The most comparable period of that with recent weeks would be the last week of October and the first week of November, when once again an all-time record was set for both volume and open interest.

That was a period in which the market broke out of its long trading range. Looking back, the analyst says, record high volume and expanding open interest meant one thing — higher prices.

There are several features of this market which differ from conditions at the top in 1973 and 1976, the analyst says. First of all is the volume. In 1973, the substantial volume in the market took place in March, April and May. The market top in September was characterized by significantly smaller volume.

In 1976, the volume at the top was, at best, average, if not a shade bit less than average. Once again, volume expanded in April, May and June and then tailed off for the several weeks surrounding the highs.

OPEN INTEREST IN 1973 BEGAN TO DROP well before the highs. This is not inconsistent with the way many markets have made their tops, the analyst says, reflecting a final stage of short covering.

In 1976, the open interest expanded by 80 percent in the April to July period, topping out about a week after the highs. In the current market, open interest going into last week had expanded about 50 percent in 3 1/2 months, which this analyst says "does not strike us as disproportionate."

Bernard Baruch once said he sold his stocks out in 1929 after re-reading Charles Mackay's book on popular delusions. That book is the genesis of the now carefully watched contrary opinion service, which holds that if everyone is bullishs, the market is probably at the top, and vice versa.

"Although dear friends of ours disagree, we can find no relationship between their cotton figures and the tops of markets," says the analyst. "In the 1973 market, the highest figure recorded by the service was 88 in April. There then followed a 50-cent advance, with the figure at the top in the 1970s."

IN 1976, THE HIGH FOR THE SERVICE was 91 in mid-May. This was followed by an advance of more than 30 cents. A reading of 82 was recorded at the peak, followed by a sharp break in the service. When new-crop options recorded a subsequent high at the end of October, the service stood at 71.

"Of course, some people use tea leaves and others prefer a crystal ball," the analyst says. "Everything can help in market analysis, but we just don't understand this particular crutch."

In re-reading a lot of the technical literature, this analyst likes best what Bill Jiler of the Commodity Research Bureau said in an article in 1965:

"Even when significant developments occur, it is not always easy to assess their bearing on prices. This is especially true when one is following price action as it develops and not neatly drawn for study in retrospect."

Back in the real world, sources last week said they expect the daily cotton consumption rate for December to have been slightly higher or lower than November's daily rate of 24,188 bales.

However, other sources said they expect the daily cottrate to increase during the next few months after the December figures are released this week by the Census Bureau.

New Delivery Method Offered

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

Like a heavy snowfall, the annual cotton crop descends upon the Texas High Plains in massive volume from about November through March, forming huge drifts of seed and fluffy mountains of lint.

This "white stuff" isn't cold and it won't melt, but with the certainty of a big crop comes the certainty of transportation congestion for the temporal commodity.

While looking for ways to ease the delivery problem, one Lubbock-based transportation company found an alternative to loaded flatbed trucks idling in compress yards.

Jerry Cloud, president of National Transportation Services, Inc., said the company has initiated an operation with the purpose of delivering cotton bales from outlying compresses to the railhead at Lubbock.

The service was begun this year in anticipation of an estimated 2.9 million-bale 1979 High Plains crop. About 8 million bales of U.S. cotton are expected to be exported this season.

"There has almost always been a shortage of trucks and boxcars in this area to transport baled cotton to the Galveston and Houston ports," Cloud said. "The longer the cotton is delayed, the more it costs in interest and storage."

With the new service, NTS will pick up bales at compresses on the High Plains and truck them to the Burlington Northern warehouse in Lubbock. The transportation company will then load the cotton on prescheduled boxcars.

Rates are determined by a per-bale truck cost (from the compress point to the Lubbock railhead at .0125 cents per bale per mile) plus a 75-cent per bale stuffing cost and a $6.55 per-bale rail cost.

"This service, depending on the mileage, may cost $1 or $2 a bale more, initially, than sending the bales to port by truck," Cloud noted. "But with current interest and storage rates hitting about $1 per bale per week, it may be more economical to use our service to get the cotton moving fast."

The company president said NTS will have the loads on the boxcars the same day they are picked up at the compress.

Garey Wallace, vice president, said the company has loaded two orders since the operation began earlier this month.

"Hauling 110 bales per flatbed trailer," Wallace said, "we have the capacity right now to handle up to 24,000 bales a week. And that figure could be adjusted upward, if necessary."

Wallace said the company could fill 25 box cars a day with 152 bales per 40-foot car and 186 bales per 50-foot car.

"The cost advantage," Wallace added, "is the matter of having equipment available at the right time."

Formed in March 1976, NTS's main function is repositioning freight trailers and containers for manufacturers, common carriers and steam ship containers.

Survey Says Most Americans Support Agriculture Issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new survey financed by the government shows that most Americans "understand the fundamental issues" in modern agriculture and support a number of federal programs to help farmers, including a bigger push in conservation of soil and water.

For example, the $323,000 survey, which was released by the U. S. Agriculture Department, showed that 70 percent of those questioned "agree that most years farmers have a difficult time making enough money to stay in business."

Also, it said, 67 percent support "new federal controls on farmland ownership to increase the number of small farms while just 19 percent feel we should be moving toward a country which has a relatively small number of large farms."

The survey was conducted by Louis Harris and Associated Inc., and involved 7,010 adults "representing a cross-section of the nation's population." The survey, described by the Harris firm as "substantially larger" than sampling usually undertaken, was conducted between Oct. 1 and Nov. 21 of last year.

Assistant Secretary M. Rupert Cutler, who announced the survey results, said the study was made primarily "to assess the public's opinions, attitudes and understanding" related to conservation of the nation's soil and water resources.

The survey was mandated by Congress in the Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977 as part of its call for public participation in drawing up public policy.

According to the Harris report's summary — although public support for small farmers was overwhelming — 51 percent of Americans also recognize that "most food is grown on large farms."

A plurality of 48 percent favor continuation of "the production-based subsidy system" of the government, in which the largest farmers get the biggest benefits. That compared with 37 percent who "favor a needs-based" system of federal farm subsidies.

Further, some 48 percent "believe that all farmers, large and small, should get financial help for soil erosion problems."

"The public sees conservation as an area of joint public and private responsibility," the Harris report said. "Neither the owners' property rights nor the government's claim of public interest is regarded as exclusively paramount."

Rather, it said, the public "would prefer conservation strategies that involve a partnership" between farmers and the government, based upon a mutual interest.

"Most telling," it said, "the public believes (77 percent) that we have yet to reach the point where we should be more concerned about holding down the costs involved in undertaking soil and water conservation programs than we should with completing the work that remains to be done.

"Indeed, some 39 percent take the position that protecting our water and soil is so important the requirements must be made regardless of cost."

Judging Winners Named

Texas Tech University's livestock judging team has returned to campus as second place overall winner of the National Western Livestock Judging Contest in Denver.

The team lost to South Dakota State University, 4,460 to 4,448. Colorado State was third with 4,415 and Texas A&M University fourth with 4,412. The contest was part of the National Western Stock Show.

Tech took top honors in horse judging and second in sheep judging — one point behind Texas A&M. The Texas Tech team lost out in the top five in beef cattle and swine judging, but three team members were among the top five individual winners.

Dave Waggoner of Athens was top individual winner with 933 of 1,000 points. Charlie Hemphill of Coleman was fourth with 916 and Dan Waggonner, twin brother of Dave, came in fifth with 913 points.

Other members of the team were Chris Skaggs of Pampa and Joy Weinheimer of Fredericksburg. Alternates attending were Dick Holland of Alphine, Mark Miller of Joshua and Kurt Harris of Stratford.

Senate Committee Schedules Gasohol Hearing In Lubbock

State Sen. E. L. Short of Tahoka says he wants "gasohol" production for farmers and ranchers in the High Plains area.

The Special Senate Committee on Gasohol, of which Short is a member, will hear testimony on subject such as how to get permits to produce fuel alcohol and what specific plans are now being made to construct alcohol plants in Texas.

The committee will meet Tuesday, Feb. 5, at the Koko Inn.

"During the last legislative session we amended the law relating to the production of alcohol for fuel in this state," said Short.

"We did that to try and remove obstacles from the process. Now the whole country, and this area in particular, are hurting for fuel and we need to get information out to the people. We really need to get this process going," said Short.

"We are also trying, in this committee, to unravel the nest of bureaucratic regulations which are found in thia area," said Short. "We want this committee to hear testimony on how existing laws in Texas relate to the production of alcohol, but also what an individual farmer or rancher or small businessman needs to know to get into it."

A previous meeting of the committee held in South Texas, brought out testimony from several state agencies, the attorney general's office and persons now working to get fuel alcohol plants on stream in several areas of the state.

"As a company we have been working on our gasohol project at Dimmitt for almost a year," said Douglas Lapins, general manager of the Amstar Corp. who testified at the hearing.

"We estimate a construction time of 18 to 24 month and a plant cost in the range of $11 million for an annual production of million gallons...Many of the unknowns are behind us now and I believe that the gasohol program and our plant will move ahead," said Lapins.

Short said he was informed by W. S. McBeath, administrator of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission which issues permits for the production of alcohol, that more than 20 permits have been issued since the new legislation was pased and that "no one has been turned down (for fuel acohol) so far."

"But I'm still getting a lot of questions from people," said Short.

"I hope this hearing will give our people some specific answers on where to get the permits, some procedures they can follow, all those kinds of thing that are particularly frustrating to a man who is sitting out there on a tractor trying to make plans for the next crop," said Short.

Short is chairman of the special Senate Subcommittee on Diesel Fuel Shortages in Agriculture. The previous meeting of the gasohol committee in January, he said, also helped point out that many people don't know that "gasohol" is a common term given to a mixture of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent fuel alcohol at the service station pump.

"The state of the art in this industry is evolving quickly," said Short. "People who are unfamiliar with it might not understand that we will be able to use many agricultural waste products as fuel to make the alcohol, while deriving cattle feed supplements as a by-product."

Other members of the committee include Raul Longoria of Edinburg, chairman; John Traeger of Seguin, Bob Price of Pampa; and Glenn Kothmann of San Antonio.

The hearing will be open to the public.

Sand Hills Field Revitalized By Increasing Price Of Fuel

DRILLING DEEPER—A new well is drilled every nine days in the Sand Hills field of Crane County. Economics, more than technology, revived this dying oil patch, according to Exxon. Oil and gas production that had been falling sharply, is now expected to continue beyond the year 2000.

MIDLAND (Special) A few years ago, Exxon USA decided to sell its old Sand Hills field in West Texas because it seemed the dying oil patch wasn't worth keeping. But nobody else wanted it either, and a buyer couldn't be found.

Today, Sand Hills is one of the most active fields in the company's 34-state Midcontinent Production Division, thanks to an extensive drilling program spurred by higher oil and gas prices.

As pointed out in a recent issue of Exxon USA's Profile magazine, the Crane County field's oil production has increased by about 1,350 barrels daily to a level of 2,200 barrels daily, and natural gas production has grown about 10 million cubic feet daily to a level of 60 million since its revival began about five years ago.

Sand Hills is more a story of new economics than new technology, according to Russ White, an Exxon division supervisory engineer. Prices of $3 a barrel for oil and 15 cents a thousand cubic feet for natural gas prevailed at the time Exxon wanted to sell the declining field. But after the Arab oil embargo in 1973-74, the federal government let the price of new Sand Hills oil rise to $11 a barrel and upped the lid on gas to $1 a thousand cubic feet. Prices have risen since then, and that's what keeps the drilling rig in Sand Hills on the move, says White. Since oil and gas prices started rising after the embargo, the number of wells has doubled.

Each well taps anywhere from 25,000 to 30,000 barrels of oil in its lifetime, adding to Sand Hills' reserves thus far some 72 billion cubic feet of natural gas and over three million barrels of oil.

White calls the big revival at Sand Hills a "classic example of higher prices making possible higher production."

Those higher prices financed the $19 million investment in the stepped-up drilling program. Another $8 million went into the expansion of the Sand Hills gas plant to keep pace with the surge in production. And money is being spent to lay miles of gathering lines, to build new storage tanks, and for more operating people in the field as well as increased engineering and geological work.

Sand Hills geology is complex. Wells drain only small areas of the tightly webbed carbonate formation because the pores in the rock are so poorly connected. So pockets of oil are often left untapped between neighboring wells: thus, the need for drilling wells closer together. The carbonate formation is so tight that each well acts independently of the others. "What you learn from one well doesn't necessarily tell you anything about the next one you drill," says Joan Williams, senior project engineer.

Since the revival at Sand Hills, well spacing has been reduced from one every 80 acres to one every 40 acres. And because there is practically no natural pressure in the field, most wells are put on pump as soon as they are drilled.

Exxon may drill as many as 64 new wells with over 100 completions over the next 18 months. This would result in a well every 20 acres in some sections of the field and add up to three million barrels of oil and 17 billion cubic feet of natural gas to recoverable reserves.

Without the new drilling program, the field probably would have died out in the mid-80's. Now, if another well were not drilled, production would continue to the year 2000.

Apart from drilling expenses, it costs a lot of money to produce Sand Hills oil and gas. A new 100-barrel-a-day well will decline in production 50 percent 30 days after it is drilled.

Wells must be stimulated to bring them to life, and a lot of work must be done to keep them producing once the drilling is completed. About 200,000 pounds of sand was used to frac one well recently.

"Frac" is oil field jargon for fracturing or breaking the oil-bearing rocks under extreme pressure—about 3,000 pounds per square inch is required at Sand Hills. Then sand or other material is pumped into the rock formation to prop open the breaks and allow the oil and gas to flow more easily to the well. It is effective, but is one more cost of producing the oil.

The economics reach beyond the sand dunes that rise and fall across the West Texas oil field. The revival of Sand Hills means jobs for a pipelaying crew from Fort Stockton, and for drilling crews, oil well service people, and Exxon employes from other Texas towns like Monahans, Pecos, Odessa and Midland. It also means less dependence on imported oil and a reduced outflow of dollars to foreign countries.

Element Of Chance Present In Search

HOUSTON (AP) — J. Hugh Liedtke says exploring for oil is like catching the measles.

"The more often you are exposed, the better the chances of finding something," said the Pennzoil Co. chairman and chief executive officer.

"There have been years when we couldn't find oil in a filling station. And then there are years when you drill the least likely prospects and come up with good discoveries."

Liedtke and Pennzoil directors huddled this past week to finalize an oil and gas operations budget he anticipated would fall in the $300 million range, up a bit from 1979.

"The emphasis will be on wildcatting and tertiary, a form of wildcatting in my opinion," Liedtke said.

Tertiary methods of producing crude oil involve injection of such stimulants as chemicals and carbon dioxide into reservoirs.

"To Pennzoil and the entire industry, tertiary is going to be a great thing," Liedtke said.

"It is very expensive but cheaper than foreign crude if they don't tax it all away."

Figuring prominently in Pennzoil's tertiary plans is the old Bradford field in Pennsylvania, an 1871 discovery that became the world's first billion-barrel oil field.

Pennzoil now headquarters in Houston but it traces its history to the 1880s and the old South Penn Oil Co., an exploration and production firm that held a 60 percent interest in Bradford.

Pennzoil's 1978 annual report said the Bradford field, like many of the fields of the Appalachian Basin, has long since reached the stage where primary production has been exhausted and traditional secondary waterflooding has been used extensively. It said new field tests were being conducted to develop more cost-effective chemical systems to apply to less permeable oil sands.

"This process, coupled with increasing oil prices, could eventually permit a portion of this 'possible' oil to be economically recovered," the report said. "Pennzoil believes this technique may be applicable in a number of other areas."

Liedtke told newsmen Bradford's current tertiary needs can be traced in part to early day operations when operators wasted natural gas that was vital to the flow of reservoir oil to the field's wells.

He said the gas was worthless then but its loss probably curtailed oil production sharply.

"There are estimates those methods trapped 60 to 85 percent of all the oil that was down there, possibly 85 percent on our West Virginia properties," Liedtke said.

He said the Bradford estimates and similar estimates elsewhere offer great prospects for Pennzoil and the industry.

"You might be able to recover maybe 10 percent of what is still down there," he said.

THE ROUSTABOUT

By RAY WESTBROOK

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION of Petroleum Geologists (AAPG) reports that the odds of finding a really large oil or gas field in the U.S. through wildcat drilling are now 1,820 to one.

AAPG reached that conclusion through a study covering the years 1969-78, when the oil industry drilled 54,610 new field wildcats.

A new field discovery with an ultimate recovery of 50 million barrels of oil or 300 billion cubic feet of gas is assigned an "A" designation by the association for classification purposes.

Of the total wells drilled in those years, only 30 fell into that category

Only 933 of the wells were regarded as significant by the association—by uncovering reserves of one million barrels of oil or more than 6 billion cubic feet of gas.

JOHN J. AMORUSO, a Houston independent, and chairman of the AAPG committee that compiled the study, said the 16 largest oil cmpanies drilled 5,752 or 10.5 percent of the wells logged during the years 1969-78, while all other operators drilled 48,585, or 89.5 percent.

AAPG, ranking the big companies according to lease revenue, said the 16 largest firms were: Exxon, California Standard, Mobil, Gulf, Texaco, Indiana Standard, Atlantic Richfield, Shell, Conoco, Phillips, Getty, Ohio Standard, Union of California, Sun, Marathon and Cities Service.

Amoruso reported that current estimates of the reserves found in significant fields during the decade place oil at 2.8 billion barrels and gas at 41.3 trillion cubic feet.

Domestic production (excluding Alaska) during 1969-78 was 31.4 billion barrels of oil and 210 trillion cubic feet of gas.

The 16 largest companies discovered 1.5 billion barrels of oil—53.7 percent of the total—and 16.6 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, for 40.3 percent of the total.

All other operators accounted for the remaining 1.3 billion barrels of oil, 46.3 percent, and 24.7 trillion cubic feet of gas, 59.7 percent.

TEXAS RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS have become enthusiastic about prospects for high-speed rail passenger service in Texas after a recent meeting with Japanese government officials responsible for advanced high-speed transportation systems in that country.

John Poerner, chairman of the commission, suggests that Texas become the proving ground for such passenger service in order to ease U.S. travel and urban congestion problems.

"If the nation wants new options for travel and a vastly improved breakthrough in groundspeed transport, the nation can do no better than to again look to Texas," he told a Rotary Club meeting recently in San Antonio.

Poerner thinks the "Texas Triangle" formed by San Antonio, Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth is a region favorable for a rapid rail corridor system to move commuters and other travelers.

The triangular sector is the home for almost half of Texas' 12 million people, and is expected to register a 120 percent increase in travel demand within 10 years, he said.

"By 1990, there will be more than one million vehicles registered in the (San Antonio) area," Poerner said.

In addition to population growth, Poerner thinks the need to conserve energy and to use resources wisely "dictates that Americans search for transportation alternatives such as rapid rail transit.

In Texas, more than 80 percent of its residents get to work in a private vehicle, according to the Railroad Commission.

THE JAPANESE NATIONAL RAILWAYS representatives presented a program for the commissioners on that country's "bullet train system" that moves passengers at speeds of 130 miles per hour.

"After watching their presentation, I must tell you that I am excited by the possibilities and ready to push hard for a similar high-speed commuter train system to link this state's largest cities," Poerner said.

"Texas can quickly move into the vanguard of rail transport in the United States," he added.

"So far, we have not even begun to taste the full benefits of such a system, as have the people of nearly every other developed nation of the world."

Poerner said that rail service is about 2 1/2 times as fuel efficient as the automobile in intercity travel.

"The automobile operates at 32 passenger miles per gallon, while rail operates at 80 passenger miles per gallon," he said.

Oil Discovery Wells Gauged By Operators

AUSTIN (Special) -Texas operators reported eight oil and 17 gas discoveries during the Dec. 16-31 period, according to the Railroad Commission's Oil and Gas Division.

In the 12 months of 1979, operators reported 1,194 gas and 522 oil discoveries, against 1,059 gas and 464 oil discoveries in 1978. Successful exploratory and field completions in 1979, totaled 8,487 oil and 5,319 gas, against 8,132 oil and 5,383 gas completions the previous year.

Oil discoveries in the last half of December included three in deep South Texas, two in the San Antonio area and one each in the Midland, Lubbock and North Texas areas.

Gas discoveries included 14 in Southeast Texas and three in the Refugio area.

In the Dec. 16-31 period, operators reported that 173 exploratory and field tests wound up as dry holes. There were 3,703 dry holes reported in 1979, against 3,674 a year earlier.

New applications for permits to drill oil and gas tests totaled 1,359 in the last half of December, against 778 in the same period of 1978.

Applications to drill, deepen, plugback and for service wells in the Dec. 16-31 period amounted to 1,476 compared to 857 a year earlier. Operators filed 279 amended applications in the latest period.

There were 23,317 applications to drill new oil and gas tests in 1979, against 19,964 in the same period of 1978. Applications to drill, deepen, plugback and for service wells totaled 26,562 compared to 23,390 in 1978.

Texas oil and gas wells produced 598,838,876 Mcf of gas in October, 1979, up 7.54 percent from field runs a year earlier.

Marketed gas production totaled 501,968,316 Mcf and reflected an 8.11 percent increase from the October, 1978, volume. Marketed production is the total gas to transmission lines, carbon black and plant fuel and lease use.

Gas exported from Texas in October totaled 276,835,087 Mcf. Natural gas Pipeline Co. of America was the month's largest exporter, moving 79,126,032 Mcf of gas of which 39,878,258 Mcf was Texas-produced gas.

In September, 1979, Texas wells produced 581,965,929 Mcf of gas. Marketed gas production in that month totaled 493,773,084 Mcf. September exports of Texas-produced gas totaled 194,034,441 Mcf.

State leases in offshore and coastal Texas petroleum provinces produced 53,562 barrels of crude oil during October, 1979, in contrast to 54,351 barrels in the same month of 1978, and 50,217 barrels in September, 1979, according to operator reports to the Railroad Commission's Oil and Gas Division.

THE U.S. AND YOU

William Steif

THE CONVENTIONAL WISDON IS:

— The U.S. private schools, elementary and secondary, are gaining more and more pupils, mainly as a result of desegregation orders to public schools.

— U.S. public schools, elementary and secondary, are losing pupils rapidly, largely as a result of desegragation.

— Therefore, both private and public schools need more funds.

Struggles over busing in cities like Boston and Louisville are cited to support this view.

The numbers tell a different story.

The National Center for Education Statistics has just completed the first systematic nationwide comparison of school attendance in U.S. public and private grade and high schools. The survey was done with the support and cooperation of the council for American Private Education and the National Catholic Educational Association, the two chief representatives of the U.S. private school system. It covers all private schools known to exist in the 1976-79 school years. It shows:

— Public and private school enrollments are BOTH declining.

— They are both declining at about the same rate.

In 1976-77 there were 49.5 million public and private school pupils aged 5 to 17. In 1977-78 that number dropped to 48.8 million, last school year to 47.6 million. In the three-year span, the proportion of public school pupils shifted from 89.5 percent of the total to 89.3 percent. The proportion of private school pupils shifted from 10.5 percent to 10.7 percent.

IN SHORT, THERE WAS virtually no change.

The number of public school pupils declined 101,000 over the three years, refuting the widespread idea that massive numbers of public school youngsters were moving to private schools.

Those are the gross figures. They do not tell you if there are increasing numbers of black or Hispanic children in inner-city schools. They do not tell you about the impact of local situations such as those in Boston or Louisville. But the overall trends aren't in doubt.

The survey confirms the widely known fact that the total number of U.S. school-age children is decreasing and the widely unknown fact that the public schools remain the dominant mode of educating most of our children.

The U.S. Census Bureau's figures show an identical trend, a decline in BOTH public and Private school attendance from 1968 through 1978.

Cost is one reason the private schools— church-affiliated and non-denominational — have failed to make a dent in public school attendance. Last school year, the cost of sending a child to a private grade school averaged $356; the cost of sending a youngster to a private high school averaged $901.

A SECOND REASON MAY BE that, on the whole, our public schools aren't as bad as their critics say — and have been doing a better desegregation job than you're likely to read about. That, of course, excludes some cities and suburbs. But the fact is that there is NO stampede to the private schools, and there isn't likely to be.

So forget the media chit-chat about the increasing role of private schools, and ignore the private schools' fund pleas on grounds of "growth." Instead, demand that public schools do their job more efficiently since they are not suffering unduly from loss of per-child payments from their states.

Here's what to do if you want the facts: Ask for Bulletin NCES 80-B01, care of Administrator, National Center for Education Statistics, 400 Maryland Ave. SW, Washington, DC, 20202. For the Populatin Characteristics report, ask for No. 335, Series P-20, care of Director, Bureau of Census, U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, DC, 20233.

Both surveys, available free if you ask for them, will give you a lot better perspective on where the nation's schools stand today.

Taxpayers Benefit From '78 Act

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 14th and last in a series of tax tip articles provided by the Lubbock Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.)

Don't be surprised if your taxes for 1979 seem lower. Don't be surprised if the same holds true in the years to come.

Filing requirements have been increased. A single person under 65 will have to file a return only when gross income is $3,300 or more; a single person 65 or older, $4,300. Married persons, both under 65 and filing a joint return, will have to file once their combined gross income is $5,400. If either spouse is 65 or older, the requirement is $6,400; and if both spouses are 65 or older, it jumps to $7,400. A qualifying widow or widower's filing requirement is $4,400 if he or she is under 65; $5,400 for those 65 or older. Because of the increases, many people will not have to file a return at all.

The Zero Bracket Amount has been increased, too. That's the figure that replaced the Standard Deduction, and on which zero or no tax is assessed. Now for married persons filing a joint return and for qualifying widows and widowers, the ZBA is $3,400; for single persons it is $2,300, and for married persons filing separately, the ZBA is $1,700.

The ZBA figures are incorporated in the 1979 tax tables and tax rates schedules, which also reflect a change in the tax brackets and a reduction of certain tax rates.

Instead of $750, the deduction for personal exemptions is now permanently raised to $1,000.

The maximum Earned Income Credit is now $500 — up $100 from prior years. That's the credit for parents who earn less than $10,000 and who otherwise qualify. The credit is 10 percent of the first $5,000 of earned income, limited to $500, and gradually phasing out as earned income reaches $10,000. Eligible persons can figure the credit by using a table provided with the tax instructions.

The rules governing Credit for Child Care Services vary somewhat in that payments to grandparents for the care of their grandchildren may qualify now.

Political contibutions no longer qualify as an itemized deduction, but they can be claimed as a tax credit. The amount has been increased to $50 for a single person or a married person filing a separate return, and $100 for married persons filing a joint return.

For those who itemize, taxes paid for gasoline, diesel, and other motor fuels are no longer allowable as deductions.

In prior years, unemployment compensation was never subject to federal income tax. But now, unemployment is no longer totally excludable. If your adjusted gross income, some of the unemployment must be included in income for tax purposes. The base amount is $25,000 for those filing a joint return, zero for those who are married and do not live apart from their spouses at all during the year but choose to file a separate return, and $20,000 for single persons.

These and other questions concerning your 1979 tax return will be answered in the Taxpayer Education program. This public service course, jointly-sponsored by the Lubbock Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants and the Internal Revenue Service will be offered Feb. 12 and 14, 7-10 p.m.

More than 30 CPAs will volunteer their time to assist taxpayers during a two-night informal program, which provides both instruction and question-and-answer sessions. The course is available to the public at a charge of $1 per person to cover administrative costs.

THE SUPERMARKET SHOPPER

BY MARTIN SLOANE

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER — As both a consumer and an editor of a newspaper that publishes your column, I am concerned about a recent problem I encountered with a refund offer.

The offer was a $1 refund for trying Pond's Cream and Cocoa Butter Lotion and Tropical Bath Beads.

In August I sent the required proofs of purchase to the address indicated on the refund form. Late in November I received a printed check for $1, dated April 8, 1979, pay to the order of bearer, drawn on the First Hawaiian Bank in Honolulu and signed by Don Ho.

I attempted to cash the check a few days later, but my local bank refused, saying it was more than six months old.

The return address on the envelope in which the check came was Don Ho at a post-office box in Jefferson City, Mo. (Don certainly seems to get around.)

I definitely feel I am entitled to this refund, but I hate to spend aditional postage chasing after it.

What should be done in a case like this? I don't think I'm the only one encountering problems like this — Marilyn S.

DEAR MARILYN — I don't think that writing to Don Ho in Missouri will get you anything more than a song and a dance.

The clearing houses that process refunds for manufacturers are not particularly concerned with consumer relations and are seldom responsive to problems like yours. Some of them hate to admit they are wrong.

The best way for you to obtain satisfaction is to write directly to the customer-relations department at Chesebrough-Ponds, Inc. Greenwich, Conn. 06830. This is the address found on its product labels.

Carefully explain the situation. Ask for a new refund check plus a reimbursement of your postage.

The facts as you relate them sound very odd. It's possible that Chesebrough-Pond's may not be aware of this situation.

Your letter may alert the company to a serious customer-relations problem, and its Missouri clearing house may have a lot of explaining to do.

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER—You are absolutely right. There are no end of money-saving discounts if you look for them.

Last week a store near me offered Taster's Choice Coffee at 75 cents off the regular price.

In addition, the store gives an extra 5 percent off if you shop on Monday. And I used a 40-cents-off coupon when I bought the coffee.

In the Wednesday newspaper I found a refund offer of $1.50 from Taster's Choice in return for two inner seals. Since I save inner seals from all coffee jars, I had the two proofs pronto.

By shopping this way, I occasionally find that the store is actually paying me to take the product home! — C.B., Columbus, Ohio.

DEAR C.B. — If we put my Sara Lee triple-play discount together with yours from Taster's Choice, we can both enjoy coffee and cake on the house!

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER — Animal shelters often welcome cash-off coupons and refund forms for pet food and pet products to help them defray some of their expenses.

Coupon clippers should call their local shelter to ask if this help is needed. — Romey C. from West Virginia.

DEAR ROMEY — I hope readers who don't have room in their homes for these animals will find room in their hearts to offer the shelter their unwanted coupons for pet food and pet products.

Write to me in care of this newspaper. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but letters of general interest will be published in future columns.

And watch for our once-a-month special listings of refund forms to write for. Offers are subject to manufacturers' geographical limits and local laws. Allow 10 weeks to receive each refund.)

Kristy McNichol Completing Transition From Child To Young Lady

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kristy McNichol has completed her five-year role as Buddy Lawrence in TV's "Family" series and is contemplating the crystal ball of her future.

At 17, Kristy hopes to avoid the pitfalls of child stardom that often end in premature obscurity or, in some cases, tragedy.

Winner of two Emmy awards, Kristy is a practical, modest youngster who is young for her years, considering she's been a working actress since age 9.

Usually movie-TV child stars fade from public view while going through the difficult years of puberty, thereafter reappearing as adult performers or disappearing altogether.

They used to call the teen years "the awkward age," a time when youngsters matured too swiftly or too slowly, leading to uncoordinated movements, painful voice changes, skin blemishes and a variety of other adolescent traumas.

Kristy is one of the late bloomers. Although she will be 18 on her next birthday, her figure is closer to that of Paul Newman than Raquel Welch.

Emotionally and intellectually, as well as physically, Kristy is more girl than woman and well aware of the fact. She enjoys playing touch football in the street with friends as much as she does dining out at a fancy restaurant with a date. She rarely wears makeup and is happier in blue jeans than skirts.

She is in no hurry to develop curves and other accessories of womanhood.

"Right now I can play roles in the 13 to 19-year-old age span," she said. "It depends on how they make me up. It gives me a lot of options on the sort of roles I want to play.

"I believe it was a privilege for me to grow up in the public eye. I as 12 when I began 'Family.' I think I made the transition from child to young lady in those five years. "During the next five years I'll be making the transition from young lady to young woman. I'd like to do that while working in feature films and movies with an occasional TV special. Not another series.

"It must be done carefully and with a lot of thought. Look what happened to Shirley Temple. I don't want that to happen to me. I want to keep acting the rest of my life and not be known as a child star."

Kristy mentioned the kids who starred in several TV Series —among them "Leave It To Beaver" and "Lassie" — who were lost in the shuffle once their shows came to an end.

She doesn't believe she is so closely associated with her role of Buddy that audiences will not accept her in other parts.

During the course of "Family" Kristy starred with Burt Reynolds in "The End," in addition to the TV films "Summer of My German Soldier" and "Like Mom, Like Me."

Kristy has completed a costarring role with another show biz moppet, Tatum O'Neal, in "Little Darlings" due for release next March.

There is talk that Kristy will play Cristina Crawford in the movie vrsion of the bestselling Joan Crawford biography (written by Christina) "Mommy, Dearest."

"Some people believe kid actors are denied a normal childhood," Kristy said. "That's not the case with me. I've had two lives. One is among mature, sophisticated adults involved with my work. The other is just being a kid around my family and friends.

"If anyhing, it's made me more independent than most girls my age. My mother and brother and I own a lot of property around Los Angeles. And right after my 18th birthday I'm moving into a four-bedroom house which I already own.

"I study with a tutor three hours a day even though the series is over. I'll have my high school diploma in June. I'm not thinking about going to college but Id like to take some college courses if I'm not working."

Kristy doesn't have a serious romantic interest. She dates several young men and has no curfew at home. She drives her own new BMW and enjoys weekends with a gang of friends at one of the houses the family owns at Big Bear Lake or at the family's Palm Springs home.

the COIN Box

By NORMAN DAVIS

SALMON PORTLAND CHASE was born in New Hampshire in 1808. He practiced as an attorney in Cincinnati and later served as Ohio's governor. Chase was Abraham Lincoln's first Secretary of the Treasury, March 7, 1861 through June 30, 1864. During his term:

— Pattern pieces with the motto "God Our Trust" appeared.

— The Denver branch mint was established.

— Fractional currency (paper money in values under $1) was approved.

— Bronze cents and 2¢ pieces were issued.

In 1862 the First Division of the National Currency Bureau, forerunner of today's Bureau of Engraving and Printing, began operations.

Chase's portrait appears on the $10,000 notes, the highest value paper the U.S. issued for general circulation. These are Federal Reserve Notes of 1918, 1928, and 1934 and Gold Certificates of 1928 and 1934.

At left of the portrait are the Federal Reserve seal, the note's serial number and the signature of W.A. Julian, Treasurer of the U.S. Above the seal is "This note is legal tender for all debts, public or private, and is redeemabLe in lawful money at the United States Treasury or at any Federal Reserve Bank."

AT RIGHT OF THE portrait are the note's serial number again, the Treasury Department seal, "Washington D.C." series number, and the signature of Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury.

The back has a more ornate border, with "10,000" at each corner. At the center is "The United States of America, Ten Thousand Dollars" superimposed on a large "10,000."

Gold Certificates are generally similar. On Series 1928 ones the redemption clause calls the note redeemable "in gold on demand at the United States Treasury, or in gold or lawful money at any Federal Reserve Bank." This was changed after the Gold Reserve Act was passed in 1934.

In 1933 Treasury Secretary Morgenthau prohibited holding of Gold Certificates by private citizens. This was revoked, and Series 1928 Gold Certificates can be collected now.

Pickpockets Leave Victims With 'Disturbed' Past

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Who steals my purse steals trash, Shakespeare wrote. But if the purse contains your past? Jane See White describes how it made her poor indeed.)

By JANE SEE WHITE

NEW YORK (AP) — Mostly I'm angry because the pickpocket was a bungler. I've chewed on the matter obsessively for some time and I've decided that's what's made me so mad — that the idiot pickpocket blew it.

Some fumbling incompetent who thought he could pick a pocket reached into my purse in a dark bar near Lincoln Center and slipped away with a suede pouch full of make-up that probably felt like a fat wallet and with a pocket appointment calendar the size and shape of a checkbook.

Later, because the bag felt light hanging on my shoulder, I reached into see what was missing. The wallet was there. So was the checkbook. I'd lost no money, no credit cards, no checks. But the slim pocket calendar was gone.

My mother lost her wallet in the Kroger parking lot at home, in Mexico, Mo., a few years ago and cried for a week because she felt as if she'd lost her identity.

The pickpocket left me my identity. But he stole my past. Stole it, probably pawed it, chuckled over June 16 — or maybe it was July 16 — snickered at March 28, puzzled over some other date that I can't tell you — can't tell you because he took it from me. Then, I suspect, he tossed it in a Broadway gutter or a trashcan.

He left me my identity. It's tucked into the wallet I bought in Acapulco on Oct. 6 last year. I can tell you the date because on the same day Joanie and I went to dinner with Gil and Charlene, and I noted our plans in my calendar. The dark, supple leather wallet holds my drivers' license, four credit cards and my red laminated New York City Police press card. It keeps cards attesting to my membership in the American Museum of Natural History and the New York Historical Society. It holds my voter registration card and the business card of a man who sold me a damaged, discounted air conditioner last spring.

The pickpocket's ineptness left me a great deal. I can vote. I can drive. I can prove who I am. They'll still let me roam, for free, among the dinosaur bones in the Museum of Natural History. But these seem to me to be small things. I could cancel lost credit cards with four phone calls: losing the small wad of cash I carried that night wouldn't much hurt in these inflationary times. New Yorkers don't often have cause to drive.

Still, I'm thankful for that much. All he really took from me was lipstick and powder and a monthly appointment calendar — a calendar just like the calendars I've used to chart my life since late 1975, when a free imitation leather black pocket date-keeper came in the mail. I can tell you the date it came: Dec. 17.

I can tell you now, because I made a notation in that pocket calendar, that on Dec. 20, 1975,

Backgammon

by Omar Sharif

Black rolls 3-2. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

You might be tempted to say that, no mater what Black does, he will win this game. He is far ahead in the race, and White has two men trapped deep in Black's home board. For the moment, Black can bear in his men with relative safety, so it seems that the obvious way to play 3-2 is to break the 8-point and bring the men to 6-and 5-points.

That takes a rather narrow view of the position. As long as White holds the Black 1-point, he is still in the game. Eventually, Black will probably leave a blot. If White has managed to maintain his position in his home board and then succeeds in hitting Black, he might even win the game.

If Black elects to clear his 8-point, he could easily be helping White to maintain the White home board. Should White now roll a 6, he will be unable to play it, so he will have to play only half his roll. Similarly, if Black were to roll a 6 next, he would have no way to play it, so he would have to play inside his home board or, if he were unlucky enough to rol 6-5, he would have to leave a shot immediately.

If it is to White's advantage to hold the 1-point as long as possible, the corollary is that it must be good for black to force White to vacate that point with at least one of his men. Black might be able to accomplish that if he were to break his bar-point rather than his 8-point, bringing the men to his 5-and 4-points.

Now, if White rolls a 6 he must play it by running with a man from the 1-point. Now Black has three men bearing directly on White's blot on the 1-point. If he points on that man, not only will victory become a near certainty, but a gammon looms into consideration.

Qualified Security Advisor Can Help Cut Crime Losses

By SGT. SIDNEY LYLE
Odessa Police Department

A lot has been written about crime prevention and a great number of people have gained valuable information and security from reading about what they should do in order to improve home security and personal safety. However, a direct face to face contact with a qualified security advisor is even more rewarding.

All across the country law enforcement agencies have developed highly skilled officers who, as an additional duty, are willing to come to the meeting of your club, organization, or church and give you firsthand information about ways in which you can reasonably protect your home and family.

There are several distinct advantages to having an officer meet with your gathering. One, is who knows more about the local crime problem than he does? And who is better able to direct you to methods of crime prevention?

The officer will be able to describe to you what the average local thief or burglar is like, his age, his background, his modus operandi (the way he operates), how he most often will enter your home, how he selects his targets, and what he does with the contraband, etc.

Tips Available About France's Famous Wine

NEW YORK (UPI) — If you're bubbling over with questions about serving champagne, the producer's toll-free hotline service is available with answers and a booklet about France's famous sparkling wine.

Calls will be taken by the Champagne News & Information Bureau during normal, weekday business hours, 9 a.m-5:30 p.m. EST at (800) 223-6304. New York State residents outside New York City should call collect to (212) 354-2232.

In previous years, the most frequent question has been about opening champagne bottles. It was followed closely by requests for advice for matching different styles of champagne to different foods.

Bureau director Irving Smith Kogan recommends:

Never let go of the cork. If the wine is not well chilled or if the bottle has been shaken, the cork could shoot out and the wine spill over.

"Don't try to take the wire cage off," he says. Cover it with a cloth to protect your hand from cuts, and cup the cork in the palm of one hand while you loosen the wire with the other.

Bridges, Lloyd - Actor — Jan 15, 1913 — 15 18 24

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.
