In Bid To Convert Christians...

Reagan Plans Appearance At Religious Conference

DALLAS (AP)—Ronald Reagan, seeking votes, and religious fundamentalists, seeking more influence in politics, will share the stage this week at a gathering intended to mobilize a ballot-box army against liberalism.

Issues like the Equal Rights Amendment, homosexuality, abortion and separation of church and state will be reviewed when ministers and laymen from several denominations gather Thursday and Friday for a "national affairs briefing."

The sessions, highlighted by a Reagan appearance Friday, are aimed at awakening a "sleeping giant" by rallying Christians to endorse conservative tenets with votes.

"This one meeting could easily turn out an extra 5 million or perhaps 10 million voters. That should quiet those who ridicule us," says the Rev. James Robison, television evangelist and an organizer of the two-day conference.

The issue, conference organizers say, is the survival of America.

"Christians have been led to believe the lie that they are not supposed to affect policy making," said Robison, who has a ministry near Fort Worth and helped organize this week's gathering.

"Which means that if the poor people, family people, religious people stay out of politics, that leaves policy making to the radicals, to the wicked, the anti-God and the anti-moral."

Robison and other ministers have vowed to unite behind candidates opposing liberal causes such as homosexual rights, the Equal Rights Amendment, abortion and government interference in church matters.

Among those who have agreed to address the gathering, expected to attract 10,000 people, are anti-ERA activist Phyllis Schlafly, former Texas Gov. and Treasury Secretary John Connally, Brig. Gen. Albion Knight, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., U.S. Rep. Phillip Crane, R-Ill., and television evangelist the Rev. Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson.

Ask Us

Q—When the house on either side of our residence receives free samples in the mail, why don't we?

A—This may occur, local postal officials say, because samples are accompanied by cards with specific addresses. If a house is omitted, it means that it was not on the list of the company distributing the samples. Companies that send samples through the mail usually update their lists regularly, but they still will miss some residents who have been living at an address for a relatively short period of time.

Pay Hikes Included...

County Considers Budget For 1981

Scurry County Commissioners this morning were preparing to take action on a 1981 county budget proposal with an over-all total of $9,324,266.73. This is up from an over-all total of $8,942,049 for 1980.

This budget includes the hospital operating fund pegged at $4,742,212. In the past the hospital fund is largely self-sustaining and no tax allocation is made for it.

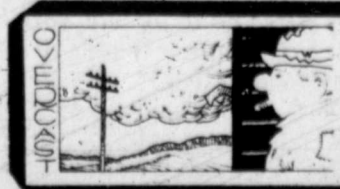

However, the county expects to require an increase of some 29 percent in tax funds next year, which it expects to obtain on a tax rate of 14.7 cents per $100 on total valuations of $2.2 billion. Exact figures will not be known until total values are determined.

The proposed budget provides a 14 percent increase in salaries for county personnel.

Also included is $671,786 for hospital construction bonds. This will be applied to the $4 million issue for constructing the new wing now nearing completion at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

The salary increase will require around $225,000, to $250,000, while the remainder of the over-all increase over the 1980 budget is attributed to inflation, equipment requirements and increases in utility costs.

Hurricane Losing Strength

MIAMI (AP)—With its highest sustained winds reaching 75 mph, Hurricane Bonnie moved northward at about 15 mph today and was expected to turn toward north-northeast, forecasters said.

They predicted no major changes in Bonnie's strength for the next 24 hours as the hurricane churns through the open Atlantic. Forecasters said it appeared the storm would pass to the west of the Azores and no other land masses lay in its predicted course.

At 6 a.m. EDT, Bonnie's center was estimated near latitude 33.3 north, longitude 40.0 west, about 645 miles southwest of the westernmost Azores.

"I think it's about peaked out," forecaster John Hope of the National Hurricane Center here said, adding that it might start "dying off" during the day.

Monday update

Phone Workers Settle

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—About 66,400 telephone repairmen and installers in California and Nevada settled a 30-hour strike this morning, ending the last local walkout against American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The strike began at midnight Saturday, coinciding with a walkout by phone workers in New York. The New York dispute, which affected 33,000 repairmen and installers, was settled Sunday.

Afghans Report Casualties

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP)—Afghan rebels claim Soviet air attacks on 22 villages killed more than 1,200 men, women and children celebrating the end of Moslem holy month of Ramadan. Other sources report a new post-Ramadan rebel offensive, and say a team of Soviet generals is in Kabul planning a counter-strike.

The Afghan rebel group Hizbe Islami, the Islamic Front, said in a statement issued in Islamabad that nearly 30 Soviet bombers and helicopters destroyed 22 villages in Wardak Province, south of the Afghan capital of Kabul.

Fisherman Strike Spreads

PARIS (AP)—A strike by French fishermen that brought chaos to English Channel ports spread today to the Mediterranean with the blockade of three harbors on the island of Corsica.

The fishermen closed the ports of Bastia, Ile Russe and Calvi in solidarity with other fishermen blocking ports from Cherbourg to Dunkirk on the northern French coast.

Coming at the height of the holiday season, the action by the Corsican fishermen inconvenienced thousands of travelers aboard car ferries bound for mainland ports such as Nice or headed to Corsica.

George Bush In Tokyo

TOKYO (AP)—Republican vice presidential nominee George Bush arrived in Tokyo today to begin a five-day visit to Japan and China in which U.S. relations with those countries - and the growing Soviet presence in the region - are expected to dominate talks.

Bush, who was welcomed at Tokyo's Narita Airport by U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield, told reporters, "As leading industrial democracies, Japan and the United States have as their primary responsibility to work for world peace."

American Legion Convenes

BOSTON (AP)—With a parade that attracted 200,000 to the streets of Boston, the American Legion has convened its 62nd annual meeting, nearly as strong as ever thanks to an influx of Vietnam veterans.

About 20,000 Legionnaires and their families are in Boston this week for the convention, where they will hear from independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson on Tuesday, Republican contender Ronald Reagan on Wednesday and President Carter on Thursday.

Says Feds Don't Have Jurisdiction

HOUSTON (AP)—The lawyer for House Speaker Billy Clayton, indicted in the Brilab scandal, argued before a federal judge today that the federal courts do not have jurisdiction in the case.

Attorney Roy Minton told the judge the jurisdiction had been created artificially. He pointed out that the California office used by FBI informant Joseph Hauser could have been in Houston or Austin as easily as Beverly Hills.

dent action on the part of the defendant to take this matter out of state," Minton said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Woods countered by saying that Hauser, under his arrangement with the FBI, had established his base of operations in California and that "Mr. Hauser operated through Hauser operated through the United States, including Texas."

"That is grounds for jurisdiction in this case," Clayton and three co-defendants were present at today's hearing.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A staple of U.S. politics is what might be called "election-year economics." It is usually considered mandatory for a president seeking re-election to pursue an economic policy that attempts to maximize Americans' personal income and minimize unemployment on the oft-proved theory that a prosperous electorate is a happy electorate that will return the incumbent to office.

But for the last year and a half, President Carter and his economic advisers have made much of pursuing an economic policy based not on what is best for an incumbent seeking re-election but on what is best for the nation as a whole. Faced with raging inflation, the White House chose to trigger a deepening recession with accompanying unemployment.

Alfred Kahn, chief White House inflation fighter, is fond of saying things like: "We are doing what is right for the country. We can only hope that the people will see that while it will hurt some in the short term, it is what's best for all of us over the long term. It is not good politics, but it is good economics."

But now has appeared the first indication that election-year politics may have begun to influence Carter's economic policy.

The White House and the Carter-Mondale Presidential Committee had for some weeks been quietly telling their farm-state operatives and leaders of farm organizations that the president was preparing to do something major for the hard-pressed farmer.

That something has now been announced. It is a major boost in federal price supports for grain that will add perhaps $1 billion next year to farm income. At the same time, of course, higher price supports — essentially, higher floors on grain prices — will substantially increase the costs to consumers not only of grain products but of products such as beef, which is grain fed.

Increasing price supports thus appears clearly at odds with the administration's previous strategy of fighting inflation at all costs.

In a press conference following the price-support announcement, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland explained that the huge jump in price supports is necessary because "farmers are in a serious cost-price squeeze that has depressed farm income over the last 18 months and this increase is designed to give farmers needed relief."

Meanwhile, administration officials are trying to play down the inflationary impact of the price-support rise. While it may add $1 billion or so to farm income, they argue, the impact on the consumer will likely be "only about $100 million in the first year."

Bergland and other White House advisers insist the decision was made "on the economic merits," not on political ones. "We have no way of knowing what the political impact will be," says Bergland.

But Carter-Mondale planners can pretty well guess what would have happened had the billion dollars not been put into farmers' pockets. It does not take a long memory to recall the "tractorades" of irate farmers circling the White House to voice their outrage at sinking farm profits.

While Carter did well with farm voters in 1976, his campaign workers in farm states and Democratic congressmen with large farm constituencies had begun bombarding the White House with warnings that unless the president did something major for farmers — and did it quickly — the Republican could sweep the farm vote in November.

So, how "non-political" was the increase in price supports? Well, the decision was personally announced by Carter to the leaders of 16 farmer organizations who had been invited to the White House for the occasion. The meeting was attended not only by administration officials but by major Carter-Mondale campaign workers who deal with farm states.

To most observers here, the decision on price supports seems almost purely political. Many believe that it signals a return to election-year economics as the president starts to sink out of sight in the polls.

uncertainty in space

They've pulled the plug on Viking. The spacecraft that has been orbiting Mars for four years, returning a stream of photos and quantitative data on the planet, finally and literally ran out of gas — the steering gas that kept cameras and scanners pointed at the Martian surface and antennas trained at distant Earth. And so, in response to a final radio signal from NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., it turned itself off.

Down on the Martian surface, in the area earthbound astronomers have named Chryse Planitia, the Viking lander will continue to operate for another 10 years or more, but on an infrequent schedule. Deprived of its orbiting relay station, it will be limited to radioing back a weekly weather report and an occasional picture.

More than the end of a highly successful mission, it is the end of an era. For the first time in more than a decade, scientists on Earth are not receiving a regular flow of radioed information from the planets.

It is also the beginning of a new era, one of considerable uncertainty in the American space program that has advanced from success to greater success during almost two decades since the first Mariner flyby of Venus in 1962.

There is one more planetary probe to be heard from in the immediate future — Voyager II's rendezvous with Saturn in August 1981. After that, it will be several years — at best — before we are back on the line with our solar neighbors.

That will come, barring further postponements, with the International Solar Polar mission in 1985, a joint European-American venture to make the most intensive study yet of the life-giving heart of our system. The following year may see launching of the Galileo orbital mission to Jupiter.

Both orbital projects are already two years behind schedule, thanks to the delay-plagued space shuttle upon which they are dependent and which currently preoccupies NASA's attention and consumes the bulk of its curtailed funds.

Only one other project is now on the drawing boards — the Venus Orbiting Imaging Radar mission (VOIR) to map the bright planet, Earth's nearest neighbor other than the moon, through its perpetual thick cloud cover. If Congress can be persuaded to approve funding, possibly next year, a launch date as early as 1986 is possible.

Beyond that, there are only hopes for a return to Mars sometime in the 1990s, this time with robot laboratories roving the surface to collect soil samples for return to Earth, and fears that the probing of space will lose out to pressures for economy and other priorities on Capitol Hill.

Funding for the new fiscal year has already been cut back from the previous $80 million and NASA spokesmen admit to concern that recurrent spasms of budget cutting may mean further cuts.

Money is already a problem in wrapping up the unexpectedly productive Viking program — the mission was initially programmed as a 90-day operation. Data received from orbit and surface is still being processed and, according to NASA, all of it will eventually be converted from radio signals to figures stored in the computer banks.

But analyzing this wealth of information is another matter, one for which the funds are not now in sight. Some private help is forthcoming to meet the public problem through the organization of the Viking Fund to receive contributions. The goal is an eventual $1 million (one-tenth of one percent of what was spent getting Viking to Mars) to underwrite completion of the analysis of information returned.

Concerned citizens are also seeking to assist in the longer term. The Planetary Society has been formed by astronomer-author Carl Sagan and several other space-oriented notables for the purpose of keeping the public aware of the importance of the space program and to encourage Congress to maintain the funding.

As finances go, it is not all that much of a big deal. Writer-editor Ben Bova notes that Americans spend more on pizza annually — $7.5 billion — than they have on the entire space program.

GRAND

at wits end

by erma bombeck

Somewhere today, traveling along the open roads of this country, is a family headed for a vacation that is cursed with a child bearing the code name, "The Hysteria Connection." (H.C.)

This child has courted depression, wallowed in pessimism and despair and is intent on pointing out to everyone the pitfalls that are sure to await them.

There was something unusual about H.C. from the moment she was born. From the way she preferred sackcloth diapers to her first words: "It says unbreakable... but it just did."

You are only five minutes into the trip when H.C. asks, "Mom, did you turn the iron off? I distinctly remember it being plugged in, just before you walked out the door." Mom is to spend the entire two weeks' vacation listening for sirens and trying to remember where she put the insurance policies.

Minutes later, H.C. will lean over the seat where Daddy is humming and tapping on the steering wheel in a rare moment of relaxation and inquire,

"Did you mean to leave the hose running, Daddy?" Daddy will not hum again on this trip.

H.C. never plays "Count the Cows" like the other children. She hears a strange knock in the engine that was the same knock her friend, Robin, heard just before the transmission went out in their car. She hears on a newscast that where they are headed is where there are tornado warnings issued for the next 36 hours. She notes that the farther they go, the higher the price of gasoline gets and her asthma seems to be getting worse and she probably will not be able to breathe in the cabin you have rented.

She turns to her brother and asks, "Did you tell Mom about the cat you've been hiding under your bed?" and to her sister, "Everyone who's been accepted to State next fall has been notified by now."

She hears sirens before anyone else in the car and smells rubber burning. She reassures her mother that the Ryans' dog had a hysterectomy and he got fat too!

Just when you think the Hysteria Connection has dispensed all the anxiety the family can stand, she says, "I didn't want to mention it, but when Daddy was hiding the key under the flower pot by the door, I saw a man watching him from a parked car across the street." Then adds cheerfully, "I wouldn't worry. I've been exposed to measles and if I'm on schedule, the rash should appear tonight and we should all be coming home tomorrow."

saving bond fantasies

NEW YORK (AP) — "We don't feel we've been misleading in the past," said a Treasury Department official in announcing that U.S. Savings Bonds no longer will be promoted as a good investment.

Is that so? So it wasn't misleading to tell people that "Savings Bonds make a comfortable retirement almost a certainty." And it wasn't misleading to assure parents that bonds would buy a college education?

Or to recruit some of the most successful businessmen in the country to encourage workers to buy Savings Bonds when, if they had any financial sense at all, those businessmen scorned bonds for themselves?

Apparently it wasn't misleading either to advertise that bonds paid interest of 6.5 percent or 7 percent when, in order to obtain that measly rate, the buyer had to hold the bonds for 11 long years.

During which time the same federal government ran up enormous debts that helped spread an inflation that, at current rates, would halve the buying power of those bonds, even after payment of dividends.

In August 1978, when Savings Bonds were paying 6 percent, a Treasury official was asked to defend the program. If $75 were put into Savings Bonds, he responded, the owner would have $100.80 after five years.

In reality, of course, the buyer won't have $100.80 or anything close to it in comparable dollars, a consequence of raging inflation. He'll be lucky if he has half that much in purchasing power. But Uncle Sam didn't let that dampen his enthusiasm — only his sense of fair play.

The same sort of reasoning was used in projections that claimed to show how you could save for retirement or the education of a child. Nothing whatever was said about the erosion of inflation.

An oversight? It requires great naivete to believe that a department that handles the world's biggest financing job simply forgot about inflation when making projections of school and retirement expenses.

No, it wasn't an oversight. Not when the subject so consistently was left unmentioned at a time when inflation was on everyone's mind. Not when in the "Build for the Future" brochure the word wasn't mentioned once, although any projection of buying power must deal with it.

The Gray Panthers, an organization of older Americans, complained to the Federal Trade Commission last year that the government's promotion were misleading investors by claiming bonds were a good investment.

The FTC disagreed, saying that private institutions, such as banks, do not warn of the hazards of inflation. Maybe so, but that only confirms a deceit rather than raises it to an ethical standard. Besides, doesn't one expect more from Uncle Sam, the nation's father figure?

The Treasury Department got the point, however, and announced last week it will emphasize Savings Bonds as a good method of forced savings rather than "one sure way to make your dreams come true."

Said a spokesman: "We don't want to mislead anybody." That's good to hear, but it doesn't help those who believed Uncle Sam would never mar their sacred dreams about such things as education and retirement.

Three Houston Orphans Helped

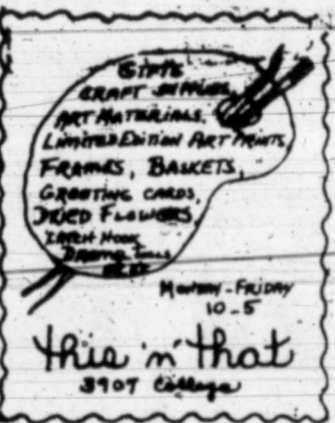

HOUSTON (AP)—Three young girls face elementary school without either parent this year. But a Houston organization has taken steps to insure the orphans will eventually be able to have a college education.

Dena, 10, Nicole, 7, and Miranda, 4, were orphaned in April when their mother, Billie Anne, died of cancer. Their father, a former Houston police officer, was killed shortly before Miranda's birth when he was struck by a hit-and-run driver at the scene of a freeway accident.

On Tuesday, the 100 Club of Houston will give each of the girls $10,000 for their college educations. The organization of businessmen was formed to assist families of policemen killed in the line of duty. The money will earn interest until each girl is 18.

Although tractors are being introduced in Thailand to skid logs from forest to mill, about 2,700 elephant loggers are still at work. Many of the elephants spend up to 50 years on the job, according to National Geographic.

Oswald: "In looking over my bridge library I came upon a book by Pierre Albarren and Pierre Jais published in 1960. Entitled 'How to Win at Rubber Bridge,' it gives remarkably good advice to players."

Alan: "Didn't you play against both of them in World Championships?"

Oswald: "Yes. My team beat Albarren's French team in the first one in 1935. Then in 1960, shortly before Albarren's death, Jais's French team beat mine in that year's championship."

Alan: "Albarren recommends that the winning player should learn to be patient with his partner. This hand shows an example of extreme need for this trait. Albarren sat North."

Oswald: "Albarren's bidding may not meet with everyone's approval, but it certainly should have led to six hearts, which is a cinch contract. As he points out, South should have raised hearts immediately and having failed to do that, should have bid six hearts rather than the horrible 'six notrump.'"

Alan: "Albarren admits that maybe he should not have bid four clubs with that particular partner and for once he did lose his cool for a while. I would have been tempted to suggest the use of the guillotine for that South player."

Try to build chest muscles

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I have a very small chest. I don't want plastic surgery and bust expanders don't work. I've tried them. I read somewhere that if you rotated your arms around in circles, it will help your chest grow. This exercise didn't help much. Is there any advice you can give me?

DEAR READER—You might as well forget about all those claims of enlarging the breast itself. Almost all of them are totally false. In my opinion, almost without exception—such advertised claims border on being fraudulent and are really not to help the public but to exploit the public for money.

Now, of course, you should see a physician to make sure that you don't have an underlying endocrine problem. If you happen to be low in certain hormones, a normal amount will help you develop a normal bosom. If you're in good hormone balance to begin with, additional hormones aren't going to help either and could be harmful.

Now about rotating your arms. You probably read that in relationship to exercises that enlarge the muscles over the front of the chest. It is true that the two major muscles (the pectoralis major and pectoralis minor) that lie behind the breast can be enlarged with exercise. The kinds of exercises that are required, however, are strength exercises, those that develop strong muscles.

This is why if you put the palms of both hands together in front of your face and push one against the other with strength that you can sometimes improve your bustline. That straining exercise strengthens the chest muscles behind the breast.

Weight lifting-type exercises or even the use of weight training machines that put a load on these muscles will work. The trouble with swinging your arms in a circle is that there's not enough resistance against the muscles and unless there is a resistance, the size of the muscles will not grow. The other thing you could do is gain body fat. Much of the breast tissue itself is fat but that's not necessarily physically appealing either. In addition, it's not very good from a health point of view.

What does that leave you with? It means that if you have a serious problem and really want to do something about it, that plastic surgery is probably the most effective method as far as increasing the actual measurement of the breast itself is concerned. Don't forget that you can improve the appearance of your figure quite a bit by improving your posture. That means standing upright with your shoulders back and your chest out. A slumped posture will hide an attractive bustline.

JUST AS there is much misleading advertising about the effectiveness of bust developers, there is a lot of misleading information about treating hemorrhoids. Readers who want information about this common problem can send 75

Snyder firefighters were dispatched to Herbert Feather's 3798 Dalton St. residence to douse a chair that had caught on fire, reports from the weekend show.

Missing Plane Found In Mountains

TAOS, N.M. (AP)—Rescue crews were making a four-hour journey on foot into sacred land of the Taos Pueblo today to recover the bodies of a Texas family who went down in a single-engine aircraft in February, rescue officials said.

Col. Lloyd Sallee, wing commander of the New Mexico Civil Air Patrol, confirmed that the BE-36 Beechcraft Bonanza was spotted by airmen during a regular CAP training exercise late Saturday. About 25-30 searchers from northern New Mexico rescue groups were making the trek today into the mountains to recover the airplane that went down Feb. 21 with a Mesquite, Texas, couple and three of their children aboard, Ray Piper, of the Taos County Search and Rescue Unit, said.

The Indians have to lead us in because they won't let us off the trails."

Piper said the wreckage could not be reached by helicopter.

State police confirmed Sunday that the plane was the single-engine aircraft piloted by Dr. Richard Russell. Also aboard were his wife, Bertha, and children Brian, 13, Chris, 7, and Gina, a student at Southern Methodist University.

did not make the trip from Dallas to Durango, Colo., for a planned ski vacation.

Russell was president of the Mesquite school board. Sallee said the aircraft was found two miles from its last radar contact before it disappeared. The plane was spotted about five miles east-southeast of Pueblo Peak, at an elevation of 10,000 feet, Sallee said.

Capt. Dwight Jennings, of the Albuquerque CAP squadron, sighted the wrecked aircraft during the 13-plane CAP exercise.

The air patrol called off its search efforts after 11 days of combing the mountain area

Trip Padres In Doubleheader...

Astros Regain NL West Lead

By The Associated Press

While the Los Angeles Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds were fighting it out for first place in the National League West this past weekend, the Houston Astros heard opportunity knocking.

And they knocked back - hammering out four straight victories over the San Diego Padres, including a 5-0, 9-2 doubleheader sweep Sunday.

The result of all that offensive noise by the opportunistic Astros was a first-place foothold today in the wild, wild West.

"We had to win four ballgames," said Houston's Ken Forsch, who hurled a four-hitter in the opener. "We're not a good food club and we had just lost three straight coming into San Diego."

The Reds, meanwhile, knocked off the Dodgers 6-2 to take two out of the three games in their big series in Los Angeles and held second place, a half-game behind the Astros. The Dodgers dropped two games off the pace, in third.

Jose Cruz homered and doubled and drove in a pair of runs in support of Forsch's fine pitching in the first game. Forsch, 10-10, had a no-hitter going until rookie Luis Salazar lined a single to left with two outs in the fifth inning for his first major league hit. Forsch allowed only four other baserunners in the game.

In the nightcap, Joe Morgan and Art Howe keyed a seven-run second inning with two-run singles as the Astros completed their sweep. Joe Niekro, 12-11, coasted to victory, allowing the Padres eight hits while walking one and striking out five.

The Astros quickly wrapped up the second game by sending 12 men to the plate in the second inning with Morgan and Howe providing the key hits. Morgan's single drove Steve Mura, 4-5, from the game.

Reds 6, Dodgers 2

George Foster's walk with the bases loaded brought home the tie-breaking run in a three-run rally in the seventh inning that sent Cincinnati past Los Angeles. Dan Driessen knocked home the second run of the frame with a sacrifice fly and Joe Nolan singled home another to give the Reds a 5-2 cushion.

Tigers Shaping Up As Expected

Tiger head coach Mike Jenkins was satisfied with the effort his gridders put forth in Saturday's intrasquad scrimmage, but he's not ready to turn on the stadium lights as yet.

"I think we got what we wanted (out of the scrimmage). We needed a lot of contact and we scrimmaged hard for about three hours," he said. "Our enthusiasm is good. Our effort is good. I'd say we are as far along as we thought we would be at this point."

Snyder enters its first full week of pads today and will scrimmage Vernon in Stamford at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Inexperience will continue to be the greatest area of concern for the Tigers, but Jenkins added, "As we get into contact more and work more each day, our younger kids will get more aggressive. We've got a lot of youth out there, but they are working hard."

Jenkins said he was especially pleased with the defensive ends and monster slots after Saturday's scrimmage.

"Our passing game and outside option game showed signs of being very good, too," he added. "We're not consistent as yet, of course. We've got a long way to go."

Brett Nips .400; Oliver Excells

By The Associated Press

Well, it seems the folks who said baseball would never have another 400 hitter were right.

Would you believe .401? Say it slowly and reverently - four-oh-one - because that's what George Brett of the Kansas City Royals is batting today. The season, though, will have seven weeks to go - the last 400 hitter was Boston's Ted Williams, who hit .406 in 1941 - but the way Brett is sizzling these days he might keep going up instead of dropping.

After all, Rod Carew was hitting .384 on Aug. 17, 1977, and finished at .388. "I think the longer I'm up there, the longer the pressure is going to mount," said Brett, who is on a 29-game hitting tear that included a 4-for-4 performance - two singles, two

Reagan Calls For Rebuilding Of Military Forces

CHICAGO (AP)—Defending America's role in the Vietnam War as "a noble cause," Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan today called for a massive rebuilding of U.S. military forces and denounced President Carter for "betrayal" of the nation's veterans.

In remarks prepared for delivery to the Veterans of Foreign Wars annual convention, where he was to accept the VFW's formal endorsement for president, Reagan attacked Carter's foreign policy as "one of weakness, inconsistency, vacillation and bluff."

It was one of Reagan's strongest pro-military speeches, and it marked the first time in the 1980 campaign that Reagan gave his unqualified endorsement to the United States' involvement in the Vietnam War.

American's mistake in Vietnam was not entering the war, but failing to win it, Reagan said. "For too long, we have lived with the Vietnam syndrome," Reagan said. "As the years dragged on, we were told that peace would come if we would simply stop interfering and go home."

"It is time we recognized that ours was, in truth, a noble cause. A small country, newly free from colonial rule, sought our help in establishing self-rule and the means of self-defense against a totalitarian neighbor bent on conquest," he said.

"There is a lesson for all of us in Vietnam. If we are forced to fight, we must have the means and determination to prevail," Reagan said, adding that "We dishonor the memory of 50,000 young Americans who died in that cause if we give way to feelings of guilt as if we were doing something shameful."

Reagan also recited a string of alleged Carter injustices to veterans, describing the president's treatment of veterans as "unconscionable," "regrettable and insensitive," "hypocrisy" and a "betrayal."

"This present anti-veteran administration has stacked the deck against you through the vast power of the White House," Reagan told the VFW convention. "It has not escaped me that the Carter administration has cut the Veterans Administration budget each and every year of its incumbency with respect to the federal budget. Where has the money denied our deserving veterans gone? Surely not to our national defense, which is in shambles," Reagan said.

Cotton Exports Up 12 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP)—Cotton exports in June totaled 686,000 bales, a 12 percent increase from a year earlier, and continued to reflect the stepped-up demand for U.S. fiber, says the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Thursday that cotton exports during the 11-month period that began last Aug. 1 totaled 8.2 million bales, the most since 1931-32.

"Export movement in June continued strong to South Korea, Japan, Taiwan, China and Hong Kong," the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said in a report. South Korea was the leading foreign market in June. But China, which had held the top spot from February through April, remained as the leading market over the entire 11-month span with imports of 2.1 million bales.

Earlier this week, the department issued its first estimate of 1980 cotton production: 12.8 million bales, down 12 percent from 14.6 million harvested in 1979.

Drought in many parts of the Cotton Belt has reduced prospects this summer, raising the possibility that yields may be reduced even further as the season progresses.

Bell Replica Is Made Of Tobacco

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—A replica here of the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia is made of more than 300 pounds of tobacco.

This state is the center of America's tobacco industry, accounting for 43 percent of total U.S. production. Some 270,000 people grow the cash crop and 26,800 more are employed in manufacturing cigarettes and other tobacco products, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco reports.

Stolen Car Found At Grand Canyon

An errant car that went sightseeing at Grand Canyon in Arizona has been recovered and two men taken into custody, police reported.

The car, a 1979 Thunderbird, was reportedly stolen from Hometown Motor Co. here in Snyder Saturday. It was found in Grand Canyon and two men remain in custody in Williams, Ariz.

Another vehicle was reportedly stolen during the weekend, and it, too, has been recovered.

The vehicle, a 1977 Ford LTD owned by Michael Terrell Gray, was taken from I&R Meter Service Saturday night and found

Sunday afternoon at Trailertopia. No arrests in that case have been made yet, however.

Four traffic accidents have also been investigated.

The first occurred about 2:10 p.m. Saturday at 2400 College Ave. when a 1977 Skytop pulling unit driven by Mark Cullifer struck a parked 1976 Pontiac owned by Tommy Fletcher. The accident was investigated by Kerry Fritz.

Sunday, a hit and run was worked in the 100 block of Ave. R. Involved in it were a parked 1967 Chevrolet owned by Ruben Munoz that was struck by a vehicle which left the scene. That accident was worked by Fritz.

Fritz also worked a two-motorcycle accident that sent one driver to Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Injured, according to police reports, was Jay Cox. He was taken first to Cogdell, then later transferred to a Lubbock hospital for further treatment of a knee injury.

The accident occurred in the 4100 block of Denison at 12:45 p.m. Cox was the driver of one of the motorcycles, and the other one was driven by Randy Beasley.

Sgt. Ed Covington worked a hit and run Sunday night at the intersection of 13th and College. There, a 1976 Ford pickup owned by Billy G. Wilkinson was struck by a vehicle which left the scene. The accident was reported at 10:15 p.m.

Man Hurt While Hang-Gliding

While hang-gliding at Fluvanna Sunday afternoon, Tom Wadleigh of Snyder received an injury in a fall and was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Hospital personnel reported that the 28-year-old Wadleigh received a back injury in the accident.
