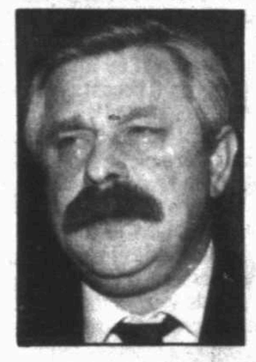
Yeltsin gains bloody win

Tanks flush hard-liners from flaming building

■ Scores die as Russian president crushes power bid by pro-Communist rebels.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Boris Yeltsin won a bloody victory in the battle for Russia's future Monday, his tanks and paratroopers flushing his hard-line opponents from a flaming Russian parliament building. Scores died as Yeltsin crushed the strongest power bid yet by remnants of the old Communist regime.



Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, above, and Parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov, below, leaders of the opposition, were taken to high-security Lefortovo Prison.

The mass surrender of lawmakers and their armed supporters seemed likely to allow Yeltsin to move ahead with plans to elect a new parliament in December and pursue long-frustrated economic reforms. But he still faced daunting challenges in his effort to transform Russia's economy and society.

Parliament leaders gave up after 1,000 soldiers raked the white marble parliament relentlessly with fire from T-72 tank cannons and heavy machine guns, but at least some holdouts remained at large.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration, relieved that Russian President Boris Yeltsin had overcome his opponents, urged him Monday to begin "healing" Russia's political wounds and move ahead with parliamentary elections.

After key battle, new obstacles emerge

■ Analysis

MOSCOW — The irony was stark. Boris Yeltsin, defender of the Russian parliament building during the August 1991 coup, ordered a tank assault on it Monday.

In both cases, Yeltsin had the support of Western leaders, domestic reformers and a large segment of the Russian people. In both cases, he took huge risks. And in both cases, he was victorious.

The question now is whether Yeltsin can get more mileage from this victory than he has from past ones. Communists vanquished in the 1991 coup resuscitated their party and fought Yeltsin using the parliament. The leaders of that coup are now out of jail.

More recently, Yeltsin's victory in an April 25 referendum on his leadership seemed to evaporate.

Horror, fascination draw Muscovites

By Elestine Bohlen
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Drawn by a mix of horror and fascination, thousands of Muscovites turned out on the southern bank of the Moscow River on Monday to watch as the White House — once a symbol of Russian democracy — turned black with smoke.

Young men climbed trees and young girls sat on their boyfriends' shoulders to get a better view. Old women out walking their dogs made a detour to peer over the shoulders of a crowd that had grown six-deep. Soldiers had the best vantage point of all, sitting atop T-80 tanks that had their guns pointed directly at the Parliament building, known as the White House.

Two years ago, when tanks, perhaps even the same ones, had their sights trained on the building, angry citizens

New lighting, zone extension ease Greathouse traffic flow

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Vehicle and pedestrian traffic is moving more smoothly at Greathouse Elementary School. And additional measures to improve traffic flow and safety around the school are expected to be implemented within the next two weeks.

Improvements since Greathouse opened about a month ago include a traffic light at Briarwood Avenue and Mathis Street, and putting in a sidewalk along the roadway leading to the school.

"There has been great improvement in the traffic flow (with the light)," said Greathouse principal Bill Maurer, "and accommodation of students walking and riding bicycles with the sidewalks."

Amoco announces field-force cutback, severance packages

By John Paul Pitts

Amoco Corp. announced Monday it would cut approximately 10 percent to 15 percent of the field force in the South Permian Basin Production Unit that includes Andrews, Midland, Hobbs and Levelland. The work force reduction is expected to affect approximately 30 employees.

Whereas most previous cuts have come in the professional and management ranks, all the planned cuts this time will come at the field level, according to Amoco.

Bill Stevens, an Amoco spokesman, said voluntary severance packages would be offered to 260 field employees beginning this week and ending Jan. 31, 1994. "Hopefully, we will be able to reduce the work force to the de-

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon ordered fresh infantry and top-of-the-line tanks to Somalia Monday to bolster U.S. forces after at least 12 Americans were killed, 75 wounded and others feared captured in the fiercest fighting since the mission began. Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, with lows mostly in the 50s and highs in the 80s.

Cloudy skies prevailed across most of North Texas Monday, except in the western region. Temperatures were in the 70s and 80s.

Winds were light and variable in the east and southerly at less than 10 mph across the remainder.

Today's forecast calls with fog and then partly cloudy skies in the east, while the west will be clear and mostly sunny. Highs will be in the 80s; lows in the mid-50s to lower 60s.

NATION

Scattered rain fell Monday on parts of Florida, California and the Northeast, but it was quiet over much of the nation.

Cooler weather was forecast for part of the country later in the week.

Advisories for frost and freezing temperatures were posted overnight for part of lower Michigan. Cooler, wet weather was expected to move into Nevada and lower temperatures were forecast for Idaho and Montana.

At 2 p.m. CDT Monday, temperatures around the nation ranged from 42 degrees at Traverse City, Mich., to 102 degrees at Palm Springs, Calif.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms were scattered over southern Florida and the northern half of California. Rain also was scattered over northern New York and northern Maine.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT included more than half an inch at Massena, N.Y. and Marysville, Calif.

GAINS: Yeltsin crushes strong power bid bullets streaked across the sky as flames shot up the sides of the parliament, known as the White House. Armored vehicles and heavy trucks rumbled through the city, and Muscovites rushed home to beat a new military curfew.

Snipers continued to fire from the White House and surrounding buildings. The search for holdouts was difficult because the 19-story parliament building is an often-confusing labyrinth of twisting corridors and hidden rooms.

The storming of the White House broke hard-line opposition in parliament, but many people harbor deep resentment against the soaring prices and other painful changes under Yeltsin's reforms. The attack also could make martyrs of his opponents.

President Clinton and other Western leaders were quick to support Yeltsin, but they can be expected to closely watch how he treats his foes in the coming days and weeks.

Parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov, Vice President Alexander Rutskoi and other leaders of the two-week occupation of the White House were taken from parliament to the high-security Lefortovo Prison.

Escalating their defiance of Yeltsin's dissolution of parliament on Sept. 21, armed hard-liners captured the Moscow mayor's offices and tried to take Russia's main television center Sunday. Parliament leaders urged supporters to topple Yeltsin, whose reforms had been continually undermined by the Communist-dominated legislature.

Yeltsin spent the day closeted with his closest aides in the Kremlin, where he had remained overnight since rushing there by helicopter during Sunday's street fighting. Late Monday, he returned to his country dacha.

He struck back just after dawn Monday with the assault on the parliament building.

"All that was and still is going on in Moscow — was an armed revolt planned in advance," he said on nationwide television, explaining the attack while it was still raging.

"It was organized by Communists seeking revenge, by fascist leaders and some of the former lawmakers. ... There can be no forgiveness, because they lifted their hand against peaceful people" in Sunday's rioting, he added.

Authorities had no firm figures on casualties from the 10-hour battle at the White House, but soldiers stacked dozens of bodies outside the building.

Russian television reported that Sunday's battle at the TV complex alone left 62 dead and 400 wounded.

In comparison, only three people died during the failed August 1991 coup attempt that led to the demise of the Soviet Union.

U.S. officials in Washington said one American was killed in the Moscow clashes and five were wounded. The injured were a Marine guard at the U.S. Embassy who was shot in the neck by a sniper, three journalists and a civilian who was not a journalist.

Yeltsin at first told Russians and the world he would not to use force to break the deadlock with the Soviet-era parliament, which for 18 months has stymied his free-market reforms. He changed course after the hard-liners rioted Sunday and tried to seize the television center.

The army struck the White House with deliberate and overwhelming force at 7 a.m. At least 10 heavy battle tanks, seven light tanks and 25 armored personnel carriers fired on the building while paratroopers and commandos stormed into the lower floors.

Papers floated out of windows shattered by explosions, and flames and thick clouds of black smoke soon gushed from several parts of the building.

The heavy boom of the tank attack could be heard throughout central Moscow. Many residents stayed home to watch live television reports on the assault. Hundreds of others rushed to the scene to for a first-hand glimpse or scoop up battle souvenirs, ignoring authorities' efforts to push them out of danger.

Soldiers and civilian medical peronnel dragged dead and wounded away from parliament while machine guns blasted from a neighboring hotel and apartment house.

LIGHTS: Traffic now moves more smoothly

(From 1A)

Pending final approval by City Council next week, the school zone on Briarwood Avenue at Mathis Street will be extended and Greathouse Avenue will temporarily become one-way.

Problems around the newly opened school stemmed from the facility being built ahead of other development to the northeast, thus restricting through-traffic, officials said.

To extend the school zone on Briarwood Avenue and make Greathouse Avenue temporarily one-way requires passage of a city ordinance, which will come up for a second and final reading today.

Once given City Council's go-ahead, those changes should be in place by the following Monday, said Gary Saunders, traffic engineering coordinator for the city of Midland.

The move to extend the school zone was prompted by citizen calls about safety.

The school zone — requiring motorists to slow down to 20 mph — will increase from 500 to 900 feet, 200 feet on each side of Briarwood Avenue.

And flashing lights to alert drivers of the lower speed limit already have been ordered, Saunders said.

Closer to the school building, Greathouse Avenue officially will be restricted to one-way traffic.

The one-way will allow traffic to travel eastward on Greathouse Avenue from Mathis Street, enter the school and exit by a private turnaround back onto Mathis Street. "This is just to restrict that traffic to one direction. It's a lot safer," he said.

The change will prevent drivers from making U-turns and hampering traffic flow, Saunders said.

Maurer said Greathouse Avenue already has been restricted to one-way traffic.

Once the area northeast of the school develops and Greathouse Avenue continues, the one-way ordinance will be rescinded, Saunders said.

"It's a pretty good solution until that road's cut through," Saunders said.

SCENE: Many Muscovites turn out to watch

(From 1A)

yelled and pleaded with the soldiers inside, begging them not to fire. On Monday, one young man accosted a soldier from the Kantemirovsky Division who was calmly eating sunflower seeds, and asked what had taken the army so long.

"You should have been here yesterday," said the young man, setting off a debate about whether tanks could have stopped the carnage outside the central television station on Sunday night.

After a night of mob-led violence that left many Russians numb with disgust and outrage, the assault on the White House on Monday got a calm, almost welcome reception from a city yearning for normalcy.

"The faster they restore order, the better," said Yuri Famin, an electrician from Shchelkovo, who had come into town especially to watch the confrontation at the Parliament building. "We need a single authority. But we need new elections for every post and new people to fill them."

Others in the crowd were also reluctant to hand Yeltsin a clear-cut victory in his last and bloody battle with opponents in the Parliament. "It would be best if Yeltsin and Khasbulatov were to leave office at once," she said, referring to Ruslan Khasbulatov, the chairman of Parliament, who was Yeltsin's vice president and later his rival. "Both sides are guilty for the blood today."

Even among those whose political sympathies lay with the anti-Yeltsin Parliament, there was a consensus that the leaders in the Parliament building had gone too far on Sunday in calling the people to arms. "They must be cracked," Famin said. "Any child knows you can't behave like that."

But after a year of political crisis, some people were grateful to Yeltsin for not flinching in the final hour. "The key to victory is endurance," said a pensioner named Vladimir who declined to give his last name. He said Mikhail Kutuzov, (the Russian general who defeated Napoleon in 1812, knew this — "that tactically, you cannot allow weakness."

While the tanks were pounding the Parliament building in the western part of the city, the rest of Moscow seemed to be holding its breath. There were outward signs of business as usual — stores were open, some people went to work — but in fact, ordinary life was suspended as the city awaited the resolution of the confrontation.

Schools were closed, and the monstrous traffic jams that have been clogging Moscow's main arteries lately disappeared, even though a large swath of the Garden Ring Road and Kutuzovsky Prospekt, two central arteries, were closed by the police.

By early Monday morning, the country's main television channel was back on, after the Yeltsin government re-established its control over the Ostankino television center that was attacked on Sunday by supporters of the anti-Yeltsin forces.

KEY: Victory could prove to be transient

(From 1A)

His failure to transform the vote into a headlong drive to radical reforms disappointed his supporters.

Monday's victory could prove just as transient. Although a triumph in the military sense, the Moscow battles Sunday and Monday changed little overall in the country. Inflation is still soaring, industrial production is still in a slump and several provinces are still militating for economic autonomy. A new parliament is to be elected in December, and many of Yeltsin's opponents may even be back.

One thing is likely to change: Yeltsin's place in history. There was an undeniable moral difference between standing up to the threat of violence, as he did in opposing the hard-line Communist coup attempt in 1991, and ordering violence, as he did Monday.

Yeltsin might still go down in history as a democrat and a reformer, but he is no longer certain of being remembered as a peaceful one. Many may say that he had no choice but to use violence. Yet the whole sequence of events in the past two weeks started from his own apparent belief that he could close down parliament with minimal resistance — a calculation that turned out to be wrong.

Yeltsin has said that the Russian historical figure he admires most is Peter the Great, the czar who turned Russia toward the West, built the imperial city of St. Petersburg, and relentlessly executed his domestic enemies. When the parliament stood fast against him, Yeltsin, too, showed a relentless side.

Last week, he had promised not to use force against his enemies. After they instigated riots Sunday, he changed his mind.

The rioters, waving Communist flags and calling for restoration of the Soviet Union, rampaged through police lines, seized the mayor's office and attacked the central television studios. Dozens of people reportedly were killed.

"There can be no forgiveness" of parliament leaders, "because they have lifted their hand against peaceful people, against Moscow, against Russia, against women, children and old people," Yeltsin said in a nationwide TV broadcast Monday.

Many Russians were likely to agree. Most people surveyed in Moscow had been saying for months that they wanted the president to take decisive steps to end the impasse with parliament that was paralyzing government, according to pollster Grigory Pashkov.

HEAL: Administration urges free elections

(From 1A)

San Francisco.

The administration believes only free elections will vindicate its unwavering support for Yeltsin in the face of several harsh steps he took, including his Sept. 21 dissolution of parliament and his massive use of firepower against hard-line opponents.

"It is clear that the opposition forces started the conflict and that President Yeltsin had no other alternative but to try and restore order," Clinton told the annual AFL-CIO convention in San Francisco.

"Clearly, he bent over backwards to avoid doing this. I think he may even wonder whether he let it go too far," said Clinton.

He told the cheering labor leaders that the United States "continues to stand firm in its support of President Yeltsin because he is Russia's democratically elected leader."

Strobe Talbott, the administration's pointman on Russia, said the next step is "to resolve the political differences that clearly exist" in Russia through democratic and free elections now scheduled for Dec. 11.

The parliament was elected before the Soviet collapse and was dominated by Communists who tried to hinder Yeltsin's reforms. Yeltsin hopes new elections will put in place more reform-minded legislators.

"We also very much hope that this election process will be a period that will contribute to healing and to national reconciliation," Talbott told reporters at the State Department.

He made clear the administration was already looking to the future and to further buttressing Yeltsin and his reform plans. That effort will include a visit by Secretary of State Warren Christopher to Russia and several other former Soviet states later this month, Talbott said.

Meanwhile, U.S. officials said one American was killed in the Moscow clashes and five were wounded. The American who was killed died outside the state-run television station building, apparently trying to save a wounded journalist, said Ambassador Thomas Pickering. He was not immediately identified.

Injured were a Marine guard at the U.S. Embassy who was shot in the neck by a sniper, a New York Times photographer, two other journalists and another civilian who is not a journalist.

"The United States is obviously very relieved that this situation has come to an end," Talbott said.

He was at pains to praise the Yeltsin government for its handling of the challenge from the hard-liners.

"We also were struck ... by the attempt on the part of the Russian government authorities to contain this situation as quickly and as efficiently as possible and to use only that degree of force that was absolutely necessary" he said.

He noted that state-run Russian television had warned civilians on Sunday to get out of the way of the impending government assault on the parliament. And he noted that Yeltsin forces had chosen a floor-by-floor mopping up operation of the parliament building to minimize casualties.

But he warned that additional violence could still occur in the coming days as the government mops up remaining pockets of opposition.

"This is a tragic moment in Russian history," Talbott said.

CUTS: Amoco reduces work force

sired level through these voluntary packages. But, if not, we will then have to consider involuntary severance packages, which will include outplacement programs."

Stevens said the reduction in the work force was primarily the result of new technology such as computer automation that had made it possible to do more with fewer employees and the fact that U.S. production continues to decrease.

He said that partnering agreements, in which contractors assume a larger share of responsibility for producution operations, played no part in the Amoco decision.

News of the Amoco cutbacks comes on the heels of a major restructuring movement at Conoco, which saw middle-mangement ranks trimmed.

The World

■ Army defiant as Aristide return nears

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The army high command challenged Haiti's transition government Monday, showing up in force at a ceremony called by Supreme Court Chief Justice Emil Jonassaint, who was fired by the civilian leaders.

The display was significant because Jonassaint would assume presidential powers if elected leader Jean-Bertrand Aristide is incapacitated.

Aristide, ousted as president in 1991 by the military, is to return this month under a U.N. peace plan. But military intrasigence and a rash of violence threaten the transition.

■ Cristiani shows off seized arms cache

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Two more rebel arms caches have been found here, prompting President Alfredo Cristiani to call for stepped-up efforts Monday to destroy the last remaining weapons from El Salvador's civil war.

Cristiani said recent weapons discoveries confirm fears that former leftist rebels have not handed over all their weapons as required under 1992 accords that ended the 12-year war in which 75,000 people died.

"We are going to ask the U.N. observer mission to continue with their efforts to uncover and destroy these weapons that remain hidden," he told a news conference.

The Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, delivered a list of weapons in August, saying it had completed a surrender of arms but would not be held responsible for weapons not under its direct control found later.

■ Palestinian blows himself up, injures 30

BEIT EL, Israeli-Occupied West Bank — A Palestinian driving a car packed with explosives blew himself up on Monday in a suicide attack on an Israeli commuter bus outside the Israeli army headquarters in the West Bank.

Thirty passengers were wounded; most wounds were slight, and none life-threatening. But the number of casualties was the greatest since Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization signed an agreement three weeks ago that is supposed to lead to a transfer of authority in the West Bank and Gaza Strip from Israeli to Palestinian hands.

While the PLO renounced anti-Israel terrorism as part of the accord, no one expected violence to disappear entirely, especially by groups like the Hamas movement of Islamic militants.

■ 'Blood flows again' in Bihac region

SARAJEVO Bosnia-Herzegovina — New fighting broke out Monday in the Bihac region of northwestern Bosnia between Muslim-led government troops and supporters of a maverick local Muslim leader.

Both sides reported casualties and accused each other of shelling their positions in Johovica, a town close to the stronghold of Bihac's rebel leader Fikret Abdic.

"Blood is flowing again," Bosnian radio reporter Mirza Sadikovic said in a report from army headquarters in Bihac.

He said forces supporting Abdic had shelled army positions in Johovica. Two soldiers were wounded, Sadikovic reported. Bosnian radio said some of Abdic's supporters had surrendered in Johovica.

A report from the local news agency ZBTA said the Bosnian army opened up with automatic weapons and mortar fire on Johovica. It said at least five civilians were killed.

U.S. deaths rise in Somalia; more troops to go

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon ordered fresh infantry, aerial gunships and top-of-the-line tanks to Somalia Monday to bolster U.S. forces after at least 12 Americans were killed, 78 wounded and others captured in the fiercest fighting since the mission began.

The casualties, inflicted by the forces of warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid, were the most for the United States in such a short period since the Persian Gulf War. The battle began late Sunday and stretched into Monday.

On Capitol Hill, some lawmakers called for U.S. withdrawal, but President Clinton insisted American forces would remain until order was restored.

Reinforcements were being sent, he said, because "I'm not satisfied that the folks that are there now have the protection that they need."

Disturbing pictures of dead and captured American soldiers filtered back from Mogadishu. Television footage showed a frightened, wounded soldier being questioned by his captors — prompting a warning from Clinton.

If any U.S. soldiers are mistreated, he said, "the United States — not the United Nations — will view this very gravely and take appropriate action."

Pentagon officials declined to specify the number it believes are being held.

The captured soldier identified himself as Army Chief Warrant Officer Mike Durant, a Blackhawk helicopter pilot. The Pentagon said his unit was based at Fort Campbell, Ky.

A U.N. armored personnel carrier burns Monday in a Mogadishu street after fierce fighting raged where several American peacekeepers reportedly were killed by militiamen loyal to warlord Aidid.

A gruesome photograph showed cheering Somalis dragging by rope the body of an unidentified American through the streets.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin announced at the Pentagon that a mechanized company of Army soldiers with an armored platoon was being dispatched to Mogadishu to reinforce the U.S. force there. The company will be composed of about 220 soldiers, officials said.

The Army company will be equipped with heavy armor, including four M1-A1 battle tanks and 14 Bradley fighting vehicles, which are armored troop carriers, Aspin said.

Aspin said the Pentagon also was sending two AC-130 gunships, replacement helicopters and 200 other troops to replace the wounded and others due to leave. There are about 4,700 U.S. troops in Somalia.

At the State Department, spokesman Mike McCurry said the administration remained "firmly committed" to its mission in Somalia, which began last December as a humanitarian venture but took on a more military style as the U.N. became determined to arrest Aidid.

Workers find toddler alive after 4 days buried in quake rubble

KILLARI, India (AP) — For four days, 18-month-old Priyanka Javalge lay trapped under stone rubble from her home that crashed down in an earthquake as she slept. Her parents got out with cuts and bruises, but they gave her up for dead.

She was rescued Monday, when her father returned to the village from the hospital and asked soldiers to help him look for his daughter's body. They brought out a wide-eyed little girl, frail and dehydrated but alive.

"By all logical thinking, she should have died," said Lt. Col. Anuj Kumar Ghosh, an army doctor who treated her. "It is nothing but a miracle."

Thursday's earthquake destroyed all but a few buildings in Manglur, the village where Priyanka's family lived, and leveled villages across southwest India.

Unofficial estimates of the death toll range as high as 30,000. Authorities say they have identified 10,000 victims so far.

"We do not have a final figure yet," Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao said Monday, after touring quake-stricken villages. "I hope to God it is not what is being reported."

On the night of the quake, Priyanka was lying on the floor and apparently rolled under the cot where her parents were sleeping. She was found under the cot, trapped by heavy stones.

"I didn't know whether to believe it or not when the soldiers said Priyanka is alive," said her 30-year-old father, Venkat Javalge, who is a farmer.

Troops rushed Priyanka to an army infirmary in Killari, five miles away, where doctors gave her oxygen.

"We felt great," said Lt. Col. Vinod Aurora, after pronouncing the toddler in stable condition. "It is a once-in-a-lifetime experience. We may never see such a miracle in our careers again."

Javalge, his eyes brimming with tears, clutched Priyanka to his chest and mumbled, "Thank you, doctor sahib," as an army jeep carried father and daughter to a hospital for further care.

Three babies were found alive amid wreckage on Saturday, two days after the earthquake.

Prime Minister Rao toured the quake region Monday and was besieged by survivors demanding new houses.

"Please make arrangements for our housing," said Nirnaly Bhosle, who lost his brother and sister-in-law in the earthquake.

Rao told a news conference, "We have to rebuild entire villages . . . and give people houses better than the ones they lived in."

Bhutto seeks return to power in Pakistan vote

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Benazir Bhutto, seeking to recapture the prime minister's post she lost in 1990, wrapped up her election campaign Monday with a huge, daylong procession that inched its way through the ancient city of Lahore.

"Long live Bhutto," chanted the crowd, which swelled into the tens of thousands as her jeep crept through the dusty, eastern city.

Ms. Bhutto, the first woman leader of a modern Muslim state, is a slight favorite in Wednesday's national election, the third ballot in five years for this impoverished Asian nation still battling to build a stable democracy.

While her liberal Pakistan People's Party should get the most votes, analysts say, it's not clear whether they can capture an outright majority in the 217-seat National Assembly.

"Down with looters. The era of the plunderers and election stealers is over," Ms. Bhutto said in one of her familiar attacks on her archrival, Nawaz Sharif, leader of the conservative Pakistan Muslim League.

Sharif, a millionaire industrialist, outpolled Ms. Bhutto in 1990 to win the prime minister's post. He resigned in July after months of political quarrels with President Ghulam Ishaq Khan, who quit at the same time.

Sharif held his final rallies, which also attracted tens of thousands, in the capital of Islamabad and the adjacent city of Rawalpindi.

No campaigning is permitted Tuesday, the day before the polls. Some 150,000 soldiers and a large police contingent have been called out to prevent violence, which has erupted during previous campaigns and elections.

Ms. Bhutto, who served from 1988 to 1990, and Sharif were both seen as disappointing prime ministers. Neither was able to ease the country's social problems, which include widespread poverty, a shaky economy and a growing drug trafficking problem.

Nonetheless, Ms. Bhutto, making a comeback bid at the still youthful age of 40, remains the most famous and glamorous figure in Pakistan.

Number of poor Americans increases to 36.9 million

SUITLAND, Md. (AP) — The number of poor Americans grew by 1.2 million in 1992, the government said Monday in a report that paints a portrait of an underclass that is disproportionately young and without health insurance.

Analysts blamed stubborn unemployment and declining social services in the aftermath of the recession.

The Census Bureau said there were 36.9 million poor Americans last year, accounting for 14.5 percent of the population. That was up three-tenths of a point from 1991 and the highest poverty rate since 15.2 percent in 1983.

The 1992 poverty line for a family of four was $14,335. For someone living alone, it was $7,143.

Overall, the number of poor people was the most since 38.6 million were counted in 1962. But because of population growth, last year's poverty rate remained well below the 21 percent figure of John F. Kennedy's days.

And in a report sure to provide ammunition for the Clinton administration's health care reform plan, the government said 37.4 million Americans, or 14.7 percent of the population, lacked health insurance in 1992, an increase of 2 million.

"Obviously the administration is saddened but not surprised by those figures," White House deputy press secretary Lorraine Voles said. "It underscores the need for health care reform in our country."

Forty percent of the poor were children under 18, even though they comprised only 26 percent of the U.S. population. Their 1992 poverty rate, 21.9 percent, was higher than for any other age group.

Those numbers rang true for Carol Wynn, foster care director for Ada S. McKinley Community Services in Chicago, a government-funded center that provides care for 400 children.

In the past year, the center has been overwhelmed by walk-ins, mostly parents who need drug treatment, food, medicine or an escape from an abusive home.

"Typically, what they come here for is not what we're here for. In the past year, it's increased phenomenally," Wynn said. "We find services for them, tell them how to get there."

The median household income last year was $30,786, a statistically insignificant decline from the $31,034 recorded in 1991, the government reported.

Daniel Weinberg, the Census Bureau official in charge of the poverty numbers, said the income figures left some room for optimism.

"We know, if the poor got poorer, they didn't get much poorer," Weinberg said at a news conference. "After this recession, I suspect you'll see a decline in the poverty rate."

Robert Greenstein, executive director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a Washington public issues group, said poverty rose because of a drop in wages, high unemployment and increased long-term joblessness.

Unemployment last year averaged 7.4 percent, higher than the 6.7 percent in 1991, the year the recession ended.

The Census Bureau said black and Hispanic Americans were about three times more likely to be poor than whites.

The poverty rate for blacks was 33.3 percent; for Hispanics, it was 29.3 percent.

Aspin rejects advice, decides to keep Kelso

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Les Aspin rejected the advice of the Navy's civilian leader and decided Monday not to fire the service's No. 1 officer, Adm. Frank B. Kelso II, for his handling of the Tailhook sex harassment scandal.

Navy Secretary John Dalton had recommended to Aspin that Kelso be dismissed for failing to provide leadership during the scandal arising from the 1991 Tailhook convention of naval aviators, at which scores of women were sexually harassed or assaulted.

Kelso is not accused of participating in the mayhem.

"An evaluation of his record under the criteria you have offered does not suggest to me that he should be asked to retire," Aspin wrote in a memorandum to Dalton Monday.

Kelso later told reporters he believed he could continue working with Dalton.

"We have a partnership to lead the Navy," Kelso said as he left the Pentagon on one of the most remarkable days of his 38-year career in the seafaring service.

"I have a real desire to continue to serve the nation as the uniformed leader of the Navy," he said when asked why he wanted to stay after Dalton tried to oust him. He said he and Dalton had met Monday and discussed the problem.

Remarking on Aspin's decision in his own written statement, Dalton said, "I understand his reasoning, respect his views and support his decision."

At the same time, Dalton reiterated his view that the Navy's senior leadership must be held accountable for failing to head off the Tailhook scandal.

"I believe that the damage done to the Navy's reputation by the incidents of Tailhook could have been prevented or minimized by aggressive leadership and foresight by senior Navy officials," Dalton wrote.

Aspin also ordered Dalton to clarify his recommendation that disciplinary action be taken against an unspecified number of other Navy admirals and Marine Corps generals who attended the Tailhook convention in a Las Vegas hotel. It has been reported that Dalton recommended action against a dozen senior officers, although Aspin in his letter to Dalton on Monday made no mention of numbers or types of punishment.

"I feel it is important that my judgment about Admiral Kelso's case be clear now because of the regrettable public reports about him over the weekend," Aspin wrote.

House GOP leader Michel announces retirement

WASHINGTON (AP) — House GOP leader Robert Michel's retirement touched off an immediate race for a successor Monday, and the combative Newt Gingrich emerged as the early front-runner. Other Republicans jockeyed for position.

Michel, the easygoing Illinois lawmaker who has led House Republicans for 13 years, made an emotional farewell in his hometown Peoria as he announced he would not seek a 20th term in Congress next year.

The first challenger to Gingrich, the heir apparent because he now holds the No. 2 spot as minority whip, stepped forward within hours. Rep. Gerald Solomon of New York declared he would run, saying he could unite the party's moderates and conservatives. Still, Solomon conceded that Gingrich is the favorite.

Michel's announced departure — to take effect after the 1994 elections — comes at a time when Republicans are still groping to mold an effective role for themselves now that the Democrats control both the White House and Congress.

The race to replace Michel is seen as both a contest of styles and a battle over who can best define and develop strategy for the minority party in Congress.

"I don't know if it will be a fight for the soul of the party as much as it's going to be an issue of perceived style — the lower-key, more conciliatory style vs. being antagonistic," said GOP Rep. Peter Hoekstra, a freshman from Michigan.

Michel, 70, spoke with frustration about the changes that had overtaken Congress since he was first elected nearly four decades ago and said his "style of leadership" is giving way to a "new generation."

Michel said there was a time when lawmakers didn't have to "step over anybody . . . rub anybody the wrong way" to get ahead, and he complained about newcomers elected by "trashing the institution." He didn't name names, but Republicans have reported that he was angry at lawmakers who have aligned themselves with Texas billionaire Ross Perot.

In San Francisco, President Clinton issued a statement saying, "He would never give my party any quarter in a partisan fight, but Bob Michel would never put his party's political interest ahead of the national interest."

Gingrich, the outspoken Georgian first elected in 1978, wouldn't comment on his intentions Monday. But he scheduled an announcement Thursday and told colleagues he would be running for Michel's position.

Other candidates surveyed the landscape, too.

Solomon, aggressive and hard-charging as the ranking Republican on the House Rules Committee, conceded Gingrich had the head start but said, "that doesn't mean Newt Gingrich is going to win."

Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois, who heads the Republican Policy Committee, has built up formidable stature with his 19 years in the House and has voiced an interest in Michel's job. Hyde issued a statement saying he had no present plans to run, but he noted the contest was 14 months away — "an eternity in political affairs," he said.

Rep. Bill Archer of Texas, the ranking Republican on the Ways and Means Committee, said through a spokesman he had been approached by several colleagues and urged to run, but had not made up his mind yet.

CIA document: Spy agencies failed to foresee Korean War

By Douglas Jehl
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A document released by the Central Intelligence Agency last week as it began to unseal its archives from the Cold War era shows that American intelligence agencies failed to recognize that the Korean War was imminent six days before it began.

Despite a buildup of North Korean troops along the 38th parallel, a formal estimate dated June 19, 1950, and approved by the then director of central intelligence, Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, said an invasion of South Korea by North Korea had been put off in favor of a campaign of propaganda and subversion.

Instead, the North Korean forces attacked across the border on June 25 to begin a war that lasted nearly three years, brought the United Nations to the defense of South Korea, and cost the lives of more than 50,000 American soldiers.

The document, known as O.R.E. 18-50, had remained classified as secret since it was drafted 43 years ago. It was released to reporters along with 276 similar estimates, the most important analytical product produced by American intelligence agencies, between 1947 and 1963.

Joining thousands of files on the assassination of John F. Kennedy that were made public in August, the early Cold War documents have been transferred to the National Archives, where they are to be made available to scholars for the first time this week.

The June 1950 assessment of "Current Capabilities of the Northern Korean Regime" is a rarity among the collection of estimates for its lack of a direct focus upon the Soviet Union. But it provides a new glimpse of a failure by the CIA, three years after it was established, to recognize warning signs of a surprise attack.

David Gries, director of the CIA's Center for the Study of Intelligence, described the document as a "great big wart" on the agency's history. But he described its release as a reflection of a pledge by the current director of central intelligence, R. James Woolsey, eventually to make the Cold War record public "warts and all."

Still, the details of the most potentially embarrassing episodes, like the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, were not included in the cache of documents. Agency officials said it would be at least two years before information bearing on 11 such covert operations dating up to 1963 would be made public.

Among the documents declassified, the majority have proven to be accurate, if cautious, assessments of contemporary developments. They include a Nov. 6, 1956, prediction that the Soviet Union would not intervene in the Suez Crisis; and a Sept. 16, 1958, judgment that it was "unlikely" that China would invade Quemoy or Matsu, the offshore islands the United States had vowed to defend.

But the intelligence estimates, whose pages had all been stamped secret or top secret, are most remarkable for the insight they offer into the tensions of the early Cold War.

An assessment written on March 12, 1953, reflected wariness about the apparent succession of Georgi Malenkov to the leadership of the Soviet Union and a nostalgia for what had been the status quo. It said the death of Stalin eight days earlier "removes an autocrat who, while ruthless and determined to spread Soviet power, did not allow his ambitions to lead him into reckless courses of action in his foreign policy."

The intelligence estimate warned that "it would be unsafe to assume that the new Soviet regime will have Stalin's skill in avoiding general war."

Fortune magazine profiles some of America's meanest bosses

By Mary Beth Sheridan
AP business writer

NEW YORK — And you thought your boss was tough.

T.J. Rodgers, head of Cypress Semiconductor, puts on what he calls a "drooling psycho face" to harangue employees, Fortune reports.

The magazine said Warnaco's chief executive officer, Linda Wachner, once kept an executive waiting for three days, then dismissed him after a two-minute meeting.

Steve Jobs, of Next Computer, was said to have addressed workers in a way that family newspapers could only describe thus: "!$&?+!%/;)!"

In an issue going on sale this week, Fortune crowns what it calls the seven "roughest, toughest, most intimidating bosses."

They include Wachner, the only woman heading a Fortune 500 company, who was reported to have told an executive: "You'd better start firing people so they'll understand you're serious."

Wachner, in a telephone interview with The Associated Press, said, "That was in a turnaround situation." She couldn't recall keeping the other executive waiting for three days.

Jack Connors, founder of the advertising agency Hill, Holliday, Connors, Cosmopulos, was described as flying into rages that cowering employees call "Jack attacks."

The article, made available last week quoted Connors as conceding he was demanding. But he added: "For everyone who takes a few shots, I can provide you with 20 people who can tell you about the good things we've done."

Rodgers confirmed that he had delayed executives' paychecks if they didn't review employees on time. "I stand by that," he said, but added that it only happened four times — once to himself. But he admitted to only one occasion when he made a "drooling psycho face" to harangue employees.

Herbert Haft, who is embroiled in a family feud over control of the Dart Group Corp., threatened to bankrupt his children and grandchildren if they didn't follow his every demand, Fortune reported, citing court papers filed by his estranged wife, Gloria.

Haft's lawyer, Michael Klein, objected to taking allegations from a divorce proceeding at face value. Anyway, he said, "It has nothing to do with Herb as a boss."

Jobs, of Next Computer, berates employees for not working faster, and made one worker go through 37 shades of green before settling on the corporate color, Fortune said. There was no immediate comment from officials.

Tough Bosses No. 6 and 7 are brothers Harvey and Bob Weinstein of Miramax films, described as hotheads who throw phones and knock over chairs.

Harvey Weinstein once fired an employee for making a mistake during a company softball game — although he was rehired, Fortune reported. It said he didn't recall the incident.

A spokeswoman for Miramax did not immediately return telephone calls.

Center offers divorced parents neutral place to exchange children

By Joan Goessl
Associated Press writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The problems are as old as divorce itself.

A mother doesn't want the children's father to come pick them up. He tends to snoop around her house and badger her about who she's dating.

A father doesn't want to drop the children off because he's tired of belittling comments from his ex-wife's boyfriend, or he's edgy from nasty appeals for more child support.

The parents fight. The children worry and blame themselves. Everyone is miserable.

Starting this week, such broken families in turmoil may get some relief and help at The Neutral Corner, a place where divorced parents in conflict can exchange their children for custody visits.

The project has no funding yet but will operate rent-free for six months in part of a house used as offices for the Father and Family Center, a group of private psychologists who teach fathers parenting skills.

The director of The Neutral Corner is Joseph M. Dorn, 31, a former mental health worker and a divorced father himself.

"There's a lot of stress or tension with a divorce situation," Dorn said. "We hope to alleviate that."

While some day-care centers offer such services, The Neutral Corner is apparently unusual in its aim to teach angry divorced mothers and fathers how to make peaceful exchanges of their children face-to-face, at their homes and unsupervised.

It was as founding president of FATHERS — Fathers Attempting To Have Equal Rights — that Dorn heard District Court Judge Anne Kass propose such a center.

Kass, who heads the family court division, saw a dire need for safe and neutral ground.

Parents in conflict make for stressed-out kids, Kass said in an interview. "It's an incredibly painful time to live through."

Any parents may use the center voluntarily, though some may be sent there by family judges, counselors, lawyers or professional mediators.

Each parent will pay up to $5 — there's a sliding scale — per exchange. Dorn's salary will come from those user fees. He expects 1,400 families a year and an average of four exchanges per family each week.

The service has three phases:

—Neutral, in which one parent drops off the child and leaves before the other parent arrives for the pick up. "That's recommended when parents are making comments about each other, or threats," Dorn said.

Childcare workers will look after the children for up to 20 minutes. If the other parent fails to arrive by then, the parent who left the child must return for them.

—Supervised, when both parents are there during the exchange but trained staff will be available to observe and to suggest solutions when problems arise.

—Independent, when the exchanges take place in the parents' homes and the parents report back to the staff.

Pilot survives crash in Alaskan outback

By Ian Mader
Associated Press writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — It had become a weekly ritual. On his days off, Mike Legler climbed aboard his floatplane and took to the skies. As usual, he didn't tell anyone where he was going.

After a couple of hours traversing Kenai Peninsula and Prince William Sound the morning of Sept. 13, Legler said, he came in for a landing at a lake within walking distance of Puget Bay. The plane's nose was pointed too far down.

"The next thing I knew, I was in the water and bleeding."

Legler was unable to grab his emergency locating beacon before the gray and maroon Taylorcraft plane sank, and he had to swim about a quarter of a mile to shore through nearly frozen water.

He crept ashore in remote surroundings — "that's kind of the end of the Earth out there." He had no survival gear or food. And his ordeal wasn't about to end any time soon.

Legler, 46, a Vietnam veteran and a mechanic for Alaska Airlines, was wearing a float vest over street clothes, with a flare gun, knife and matches tucked inside. A 45-degree wind was blowing hard in his face. "I was shaking so hard I could hardly stand up," he said.

He said he managed to build a fire by igniting the cellophane wrapper on a package of cigars. He burned some dry grass, and them some wood. He dried his clothes and spent the night curled around the fire.

The next day, a walk west in the direction of civilization along the beach ended at sheer cliffs. To the north was the Sargent Icefield.

Legler said he turned back and found a plywood cabin. An old carpet became his sleeping bag. Mussels and kelp from the beach provided his main diet, supplemented by some berries and roots from nearby forest.

Legler thought he could reach a nearby bay often used by hunters, but in the ensuing days found each path he tried was too steep or treacherous.

Constantly, he heard the drone of rescuing airplanes that did not exist.

Late September 22, nine days after Legler left his home in Eagle River just north of Anchorage, the sound was real. A Scenic Air Charters plane was coming in over Puget Bay to drop off two hunters.

Good manners aid to teens, others

We are indebted to the National Parents Association for coming up with what it calls the "Ten Commandments for Good Manners" for teens. Without further ado, here they are:

Commandment I:
Thou shalt be thyself. Good manners begin with a good sense of self. You are unique. Don't try to shape your personality to meet circumstances.

Commandment II:
Thou shalt say "thank you." Thanking others is a way of praising them and is one of the keys to good manners.

Commandment III:
Thou shalt give compliments. A fundamental rule of good manners is to give. Think about what you can give to others and remember the most precious gift costs nothing.

Commandment IV:
Thou shalt not be boastful, arrogant or loud. Always exercise restraint and good taste.

Commandment V:
Thou shalt listen before speaking. Respect for others is a prerequisite of good manners. Listening to others is a way to show respect. Never interrupt.

Commandment VI:
Thou shalt speak with kindness and caution, remembering the language of the body (your posture and your mannerisms) is as important as the language of words.

Commandment VII:
Thou shalt not criticize or complain. A person with good manners is above criticizing others or complaining about circumstances. If you disagree, do so respectfully.

Commandment VIII:
Thou shalt be punctual. Appreciate the value of time, yours and others.

Commandment IX:
Thou shalt not embarrass others. Treat others as you would like to be treated and think of how you can put them at ease. Be considerate and never ask embarrassing questions.

Commandment X:
Thou shalt act and look your best. Act with courtesy and politeness. Each day dress as if it were your only chance to shine. Observe rules of proper conduct.

So there you have them — the "Ten Commandments of Good Manners" for teens. Come to think about it, they probably would apply just as well for all of us.

While the above version is abbreviated, we understand for a complete copy of the advice, suitable for framing, you can send $2 to: National Parents Association, Main Station Box 1993, Valparaiso, Ind. 46384.

WILLIAM MURCHISON
Hutchison case brings foul odor from Austin

The bottom-line question naturally is, did she do it? — a question impossible to answer at present, because none of us was in Sen. Kay Hutchison's purse when there occurred, or didn't occur, the various misdeeds imputed by the Austin grand jury. These misdeeds, if they did occur, centered on the use of the state Treasurer's office for political gain. If they did occur, it's bad; if they didn't, somebody has gone to a lot of trouble to wreck the career of a U.S. senator elected by two-thirds of the voters, and that somebody should pay.

Murchison

There is just one suitable course of action: Get the facts out as fast as possible; make Ronnie Earle, the Travis County district attorney, lay his cards face up on the table. Right now there is a foul odor to the whole inquiry.

That the treasurer of the great state of Texas might be tempted into impropriety, for the sake of self-promotion, we know to be an abstract possibility. It's in fact a possibility for any politician. For instance a governor, like the governor who held the treasurer's office immediately before Sen. Hutchison.

This was Ann W. Richards, and, according to Texas Republican chairman Fred Meyer in early September, "Within the past two weeks, it has been revealed that a) Mrs. Richards maintained a computer system chock-full of political correspondence, including a separate section devoted exclusively to politics, and b) that all such correspondence was destroyed without legal authorization, apparently in a wholesale purging of computer files at the end of Treasurer Richards' term.

"Needless to say," Meyer goes on, "Earle hasn't started an investigation of any apparent violation by the Democratic Treasurer. But he is pursuing Sen. Hutchison over precisely the same allegations. His own wife (Twyla Earle, who worked on correspondence in Treasurer Richards' office) was certainly in the middle of the political correspondence at the Treasury; we don't know her role, if any, in the destruction of these records. We're not even alleging anybody did anything wrong. But there should be an unbiased — repeat, unbiased — inquiry across the board."

Oooooh, but you say, that's a Republican talking! Odd you should mention it, because that's a Democratic D.A. talking down in Austin about all the bad things the junior Republican senator from Texas is supposed to have done. As it happens, the D.A. wanted to be appointed to the Senate seat Mrs. Hutchison subsequently won. Don't you think he might have recused himself or something?

The curse of Adam isn't the necessity of laboring for one's daily bread. The curse of Adam is politics — the necessity of assigning governmental responsibilities to fellow mortals. With all politicians, there is something wrong; with all investigators, there is something wrong; with all voters, there is something wrong. We falsely give ourselves airs when we suppose otherwise.

Did the senator do it? The question dangles in a way nicely calculated by the Democratic establishment in Austin to wreak maximum damage on the Republicans and their new U.S. senator. If the senator runs for re-election next year without this thing's having been resolved, she bids fair to drag down the ticket. Democratic candidates, wearing their best Sunday-go-to-meeting looks of sanctity, will point at the Party of Corruption (as contrasted with the Integrity Party, their own).

The filing deadline for Senate is Jan. 3. We need an early trial so as to have an early resolution. That means pre-Christmas. An early trial is Sen. Hutchison's American right.

Last-ditch bravery of diehards goes on display

WASHINGTON — At the Battle of Albuera in 1811, the wounded Col. William Inglis, commander of the 57th Foot Regiment, cried out to his troops: "Die hard, men, die hard!" Since that victory, the Middlesex regiment has been called "the Diehards."

Safire

Diehards today are in ill repute, sometimes deservedly so. In the besieged Parliament building in Moscow, cut off from food, water and electricity, an infuriated Aleksandr Rutskoi and a haggard Ruslan Khasbulatov lead a band of Communist apparatchiks defying the Russian president's order to surrender.

They are dying hard for the cause of a return to a command economy, centralization of power, gulags, oppression, militarism, imperialism, employer mandates, the whole discredited Socialist works. If the last-ditch defenders of the Brezhnev era were to win, Russia would lose.

But Rutskoi's diehards intend to provoke the KGB and military units surrounding them into storming their citadel, giving them a chance for political martyrdom. At that moment, world opinion would recoil; President Clinton would have to dissociate himself from President Yeltsin; and across Russia's 11 time zones, a legend of "Rutskoi's last stand" would take root.

Why? Because bravery is admirable. The 200 or so legislators who have slipped out of the embattled Parliament to take advantage of job offers from the Yeltsinites are cowardly opportunists. The remaining diehards, suffering for their repugnant cause, know that they draw from the most grudging democrat at least a moment of admiration.

And they know that their stand, if they can induce Yeltsin's troops to blaze away, will be remembered in history. Oliver Cromwell shouted to a Parliament unwilling to commit regicide, "It is not fit that you should sit here any longer!" In the ensuing "Pride's purge," a Cromwellian colonel arrested 96 reluctant legislators, leaving a "rump Parliament" to hang the king.

That's the stuff of history; centuries from now, Russian students will learn about Yeltsin's own defiance of coup plotters atop a tank, and — if today's diehards get their wish — of the last stand of the brave apparatchiks in Russia's rump Parliament (slyly supported by the displaced Mikhail Gorbachev).

The cameras are in place; the cordon of troops is tightening; the last-ditch bravery of a few is ready to go on display; the only thing missing for history-making is the blunder of impatient authority.

We all saw what happened when authority grew impatient with demonstrators at Tiananmen.

Those dumb diehards, say the world's imposers. Don't they realize they've lost, they're going to get killed, and — even worse — on camera, making us uncomfortable? Don't they know how to be good losers?

CHARLEY REESE
Ray of hope for future dims for many people

Florida officials are in a nervous sweat because bandits keep bumping off foreign tourists.

Reese

It goes without saying that what they are worried about is the loss of tourist-generated revenue, not the loss of life. Lives are lost routinely without much note, especially if they were poor lives to begin with.

Floridians get snuffed a lot more often than visitors. Most Florida bandits have higher digits in the caliber of their weapons than in their IQs. But for the politicians, these bandits would be the state's worst and dimmest citizens.

Nevertheless, the problem of crime is not unique to the land sales state, nor will it be solved by legislation, cops, and jail cells in Florida or anywhere else.

I ran across a phrase recently that helps to explain what's going on in our cities. The phrase was, "Nothing in their past to be proud of; nothing in their future to look forward to."

Think about that. Think what a bleak existence someone has who has nothing in their past to be proud of and nothing in their future to look forward to.

Yet, as jobs are systematically drained out of American cities, that is increasingly the plight of more and more American youngsters who have the misfortune to be born on the low side of the economic spectrum. Many of these youngsters, by the time they reach their teens, have not much reason to live.

And, unless you are as dim-witted as a politician, you will instantly understand that a person who has no use for his own life is not going to have much use for someone else's. These frustrated people trapped in a pointless present between a dreary past and dreary future will drop a hammer on you for reasons so trivial you'd never figure it out even if you survived the bullet.

There are three basic ways people can be governed. They can be indoctrinated from birth into a caste system, so they accept their fate fatalistically.

A second way is the totalitarian way — brute force and terror. Many a state in the 20th century has chosen this way and many still do.

The third way is to provide hope and opportunity. That was the traditional American way. People can endure plenty of hardships as long as they can reasonably hope for a better life in the future. That old cliche, the American Dream, was exactly about that.

In recent years, because of bad governmental policies, because of increasing amounts of automation, because of increasing globalization of industry, our country has been drifting toward a situation in which there is sustainable hope for a better life for a smaller and smaller percentage of the population.

There is a big difference in taking a low-paying job with the idea that it is merely a step up and taking a low-paying job with the knowledge that it's all there's ever going to be.

Station is hypocritcal in program selection

KMID, Channel 2, chose not to run the ABC series "N.Y.P.D. Blue" on Tuesday nights due to the adult nature of the presentation.

KMID routinely shows the carnage in Bosnia, starvation in Somalia, and the effects of random acts of violence committed by terrorists and gangs. They relish in the opportunity to show the Rodney King beating, the bludgeoning of Reginold Denny and summary execution of the woman in Miami by her ex-husband in a cemetery, even to the extent of his standing over her emptying his pistol into the body.

KMID has a wondrous lineup of talk shows which openly discuss every social taboo known to society and a few that weren't. Subjects range from drastically alternate lifestyles to ethnically polarized organizations whose racial slurs on the air are sickening. If any one of the Permian Basin's self-righteous clergy wants an ear full they can spend a few minutes watching the Phil Donahue Show (10 a.m., KMID) while Dr. Ruth critiques fetishes.

In summary the management, staff and employees of KMID are a bunch of hypocrites. Responsible broadcasting should know that, as in the libraries of this country, the censor is the viewer and the vehicle is the on/off switch. The First Amendment is a swinging door.

Reporting is biased on health care reform

Why must the Reporter-Telegram staff offer skewed and biased reporting? In your article entitled "Clinton proposal meets opposition from city callers," (report on Cityline Community Pulse Poll), Sept. 26, you reported that 64 percent of almost 300 callers opposed the president's health care plan. Of the callers who left comments, only 18 percent favored the plan proposed by the president, yet 50 percent of the comments published were those in favor.

Why aren't Americans given unbiased reporting and allowed to form our own opinions? Why is the country's press seeking to influence us toward socialism in medical care when Europeans and Canadians testify that their systems do not work adequately? Health care reform seems to be an issue where congressional Democrats and Republicans are in agreement, but not to the extent that reforms incorporate socialistic schemes and ideas into our government.

I am proud that citizens concerned about losing yet more freedom of choice are speaking out on this issue. If the people of this country want health care reform that works (not a copy of someone else's socialistic medical plan), then we need to be writing and phoning our congressional leaders up with ideas and opinions. Maybe this time they'll listen to the majority and do what is best for the many and not the few.

Taxes shouldn't pay for bilingual education

In reference to the issue of increasing expenditures on bilingual programs in the State of Texas, the prospect of increasing immigration and decreasing revenue is alarming. I would ask all residents, voters and taxpayers if there were large scale immigration of Russians through Alaska to the United States, would you be in favor of your tax dollars going to pay for bilingual Russian educators?

For how long? Would you limit the number of immigrants if there was not enough revenue to pay for bilingual education? Do you think that Communist/Socialist countries of Asia and Europe have bilingual programs? To be prejudiced is very destructive and accomplishes nothing but lowering standards for everyone. The same goes for prejudice against your adopted country. I feel absolutely no allegiance to my German heritage; I am an American, period.

High court refuses to block document disclosure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Monday rejected an attempt by television evangelist Robert Tilton to block the investigation of Texas Attorney General Dan Morales into alleged fraud in his ministry.

Tilton's attorneys argued that a federal judge had the authority to bar the state from demanding church financial documents even though the dispute already was being heard in state court. The high court offered no comment Monday in dismissing that argument.

The Word of Faith World Outreach Center Church, founded by Tilton in Dallas in 1976, grew to an organization that grossed $65 million in 1991 and had a 500,000-person mailing list.

In late 1991, ABC's "Prime Time Live" television program reported that prayer requests mailed to Tilton were trashed and that the church falsely claimed to run an orphanage in Haiti.

Morales began investigating whether the church was engaging in fraud. Early last year, his office sought records, including the church's membership list, list of financial donors, minutes of church board meetings and lists of church expenditures and charity donations.

Morales' office later asked a state court to order the church to produce the records.

The church countered by going to federal court with its contention that the attorney general's demand violated its freedom of religion guaranteed by the Constitution's First Amendment.

A federal judge ruled that the demand for the church's membership and contributor lists was "clearly unconstitutional." The judge barred Morales from pursuing his document request, but added the state still could "appropriately" investigate the church.

But last March, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed that ruling, saying federal courts must let the state court act first. The appeals court noted that Morales had dropped some document requests that raised federal constitutional questions, including his demand for church membership and contributor lists.

In the appeal acted on Monday, the church's lawyers argued that the federal judge was not required to defer to the state court because the judge ruled that Morales acted in bad faith.

Waiting for the state court to act would cause a "particularly serious (delay) due to the fundamental nature of First Amendment rights involved," the church's lawyers said.

Morales replied that he "has never tried to suppress Word of Faith's religious teachings. Fraud was and is the target, and the perpetration of fraud is not one of the church's religious tenets."

"We are pleased that the nation's highest court agrees that the district court has no authority to interfere with the state's investigation," Morales said in a prepared statement. "We now have the green light from the U.S. Supreme Court to proceed. We will continue to monitor and evaluate developing events regarding the Word of Faith church."

Tilton's lawyer has announced that television broadcasts from the Word of Faith center will no longer be shown after Oct. 29.

Expert testifies law hurts poorer school districts

AUSTIN (AP) — Poor school districts lose money under the new education finance law, while property-rich ones maintain an advantage, a school funding expert testified as a trial on the law began Monday.

"The same general (school finance) framework is continuing to be used" as when property-poor school districts first filed their state court lawsuit in 1984 seeking financial equity, said Richard Hooker, a University of Houston professor.

It would be possible for a wealthy school district to raise $28 per student per penny of local property tax under the new law — on top of basic state funding — while the poorest one would raise about 95 cents, said Hooker, who was called to the stand by poor districts. That's based on a 1-cent tax per $100 property valuation.

Assistant Attorney General Toni Hunter, defending the law, called that an unusual case. She said the law is equitable and significantly different from previous measures.

School districts rely on state aid and local property taxes. The Texas Supreme Court in 1989 ordered lawmakers to even out funding available to school districts with differing property wealth.

Two previous laws intended to meet the court order were ruled unconstitutional.

Hooker said local property taxpayers have been increasingly burdened. "There has been a very decided pattern of the Legislature shifting the cost of public education to the local taxpayer," he said.

The state's share of about $15.3 billion in school funding for 1993-94 is projected to be about $7 billion, or 45.6 percent, according to the Texas Association of School Boards. The local share is about $8.3 billion.

The state-local share for the Foundation School Program started at 80-20 in 1949, Hooker said.

Ms. Hunter said the state-local funding split is a political issue that should be decided by the Legislature.

State District Judge F. Scott McCown of Austin, overseeing the case, said he will consider in this trial poor school districts' objections to the way funding is distributed.

He also will weigh arguments that the state relies too heavily on local property taxes, and wealthy school districts' objections to the structure of the new system.

The new law limits school districts to $280,000 per student in property wealth, giving richer ones several options for sharing. That restriction for equity is one of the law's major changes, Ms. Hunter said.

McCown put off arguments on whether more money is needed in the overall education system, saying he will decide later when to consider that issue.

Lawyers said they expect the current trial to last about two weeks.

Hooker cited a decrease in the state's basic per-student funding grant compared with last year under the new law. He also noted that the law limits state matching funds that are based on local property tax rates.

A budget-conscious Legislature decided to provide state matching funds based on the local tax rate that a school district had the previous year. That means school districts that raise local rates won't see an immediate benefit in state aid.

The result: If a wealthy school district that doesn't get state matching funds, such as Plano, raises taxes, it will get $28 per student per penny of increase right away, he said. That's figured on $280,000 in local property wealth per student.

But the poorest school district, Boles Home ISD in Hunt County, would for a year get only 95 cents per student per penny of tax increase, he said. The district's local property value is about $9,500 per student.

For local taxes that qualify for matching funds, the state guarantees $20.55 per student, from a rate of 87 cents to $1.50. That's on top of a $2,300 basic grant at an 86-cent tax rate.

Report: Texas poverty rate exceeds national average

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost 18 percent of Texas' population lived below the poverty line last year — a rate significantly higher than the national average of 14.5 percent, the Census Bureau reported Monday.

Texas ranked in the upper tier of states with high poverty rates, with eight other states, led by Mississippi and Louisiana, reporting higher averages.

Almost 3.1 million of Texas' 17.6 million residents — or 17.8 percent of the population — lived in poverty last year, the Census Bureau said in its annual snapshot of national poverty. The figures show 114,000 Texans were added to the poverty rolls in 1992.

Throughout the 1980s and early 1990s, the Texas poverty rate has remained fairly constant, reaching its lowest point in 1983-1984 when 15.7 percent of the population lived in poverty. In 1982, 16.2 percent of the state population was poor.

A poor person is defined by the government as someone whose income is below the national poverty line, which for a family of four last year was $14,335 and was $7,143 for a single individual.

The median Texas household income was $28,282 last year, compared to the national $30,786 average.

Bernard Weinstein, director of the University of North Texas Center for Economic Development and Research, said since the 1950s Texas traditionally has lagged about 10 percent behind the nation in annual income.

"It was only in the 1980 Census that Texas achieved parity with the nation in terms of per capita and household income, and that was a reflection of the oil boom and the real estate boom," Weinstein said.

"We have always been a low-income state with the exception of the boom years."

And that trend is likely to continue, said Weinstein and Baylor University economist Ray Perryman, in part because of the state's large and ever-growing minority population and the high poverty rates along the U.S.-Mexican border.

"That pretty well dominates a lot of the other economic trends going on here," said Perryman.

Hispanics, who comprise the fastest growing segment of the Texas population, and blacks were about three times more likely to be poor than non-Hispanic whites last year. The poverty rate for blacks was 33.3 percent; for Hispanics, it was 29.3 percent. Both figures were slightly higher than 1991.

Discovery's spacewalkers offer tips for Hubble repair crew

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Two astronauts on Monday predicted their experiences on a seven-hour spacewalk would help another crew fix the Hubble Space Telescope's blurry vision during a crucial flight this December.

Astronauts Carl Walz and James Newman conducted a dress rehearsal for the Hubble mission midway through Discovery's 10-day flight last month.

The five-man crew, which finally made it into space Sept. 12 after five launch delays, also released an experimental communications satellite as well as an ultraviolet telescope they retrieved before coming home to the first-ever night landing at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

During their spacewalk, Walz and Newman tested tools, including a power socket wrench and a portable foot restraint, to be used during five to seven spacewalks on the Hubble mission.

The two gave tips to Endeavour's experienced spacewalkers after returning.

"We were able to give them just a little bit of a head start for when they actually do go," Newman said. "We were able to confirm some things they already knew and make a few suggestions."

They gave high marks for the foot restraint and battery-powered wrench, which will be used primarily to install a new camera and corrective lenses on Hubble.

Walz said he had a tough time twisting bolts with his feet unrestrained, but he found that he improved with experience.

"The more I used that tool, the better I got in controlling my body," he said. "The HST people have the advantage that they'll be in foot restraints so they won't have to worry about their feet swaying as they're doing these tasks.

"I think from that standpoint, using that power ratchet tool in a foot restraint will be a great advantage and they'll be able to perform all those tasks I think quite well."

Discovery commander Frank Culbertson Jr. said there was no concern about landing in the Florida darkness for the first time.

It was only the sixth nighttime touchdown in 57 shuttle flights and the first in two years.

"Once you roll around on final and see the runway, a landing is a landing," Culbertson said. "I think we showed that the program should not be afraid of landings at night at Kennedy Space Center if that's the thing to do."

AT WIT'S END

Mousy approach to life can leave much to be desired

A couple of weeks ago, I discovered a bunch of mice nesting under the hood of my car. I guess that happens to a lot of people, but it's never happened to me before. There must have been half a bushel of nuts and twigs packed around my engine.

Bombeck

"What does that mean?" I asked my husband.

"It means you ought to get out of the house more," he said dryly.

"I get out," I said defensively.

"Your mother lives alone, goes to the store once a week and mails a couple of packages at Christmas. She doesn't have mice building a condo in her car."

"Maybe I should call Click and Clack," I said. (The Magliozzi brothers, Tom and Ray, who answer questions about your car every Saturday on radio.)

"They'd tell you to sell the car."

Last week, I heard weird sounds from my dryer. There was heat coming from it, but the drum wasn't revolving. I called the repairman. When he removed the front panel, we viewed the biggest nest I have ever seen.

I don't need a brick building to fall on me to realize that if I don't push away from this typewriter and get a life, I'm going to have a house decorated in Early Rodent.

My son said mice usually like to reside in dark places where there is little or no activity. That pretty much covers my oven, stationary bicycle, sweeper, garden supplies, and every closet and cupboard in our house.

The only way I can deal with animals is to give them a Disney quality. I visualize a pair of mice, Margaret (in a duster) and Herb (smoking a pipe) having a conversation on where they'll winter.

"I've found the perfect spot for our new nest," says Herb. "Nice quiet street, no dogs or cats, perfect place to raise our family and spend the cold months."

"Where?" she asks excitedly.

"Under the hood of Erma Bombeck's car."

"But what if she starts the motor?" she warns.

"So, we get a little ride to her mailbox. Big deal."

"I don't know," Margaret pouts.

"Look, if it doesn't work out, we can always move inside to her dryer."

"I feel better about that," Margaret smiles.

I don't know what to think. Maybe this is my wake-up call that my life has become too sedentary. Maybe I need to plan some activities that will put me back in the mainstream.

DEAR ABBY

Man fired up for painting nearly upsets house

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Over the years, I have read many of your letters that could save lives. I hope you will add my family's scary experience to the others:

My husband received several gallons of enamel paint, which he used to paint our lawn furniture, basement steps and floor. When he painted the steps (after work), the fumes were so bad that I thought we would die during the night from asphyxiation.

Van Buren

In the meantime, I read a letter in your column about a man who died from glue fumes. I told my husband about the letter and said, "When you paint the basement floor, take fans down there with you."

The next morning he got up at 5, took two small fans down, and I went back to sleep. Two hours later, I woke up to five smoke alarms going off, and my husband screaming, "Dixie! Dixie! Get out! Get out!"

The house was filling with smoke. I grabbed a robe and tried to run out the front door. Next thing I knew, I was lying on the floor. I had fallen and injured my knee. My husband was still screaming, so I got up, dazed, and stumbled through the house out the back door.

He had finished the floor and had just come up from the basement when the fumes from the paint were ignited by the water heater, causing an explosion and flash fire.

A neighbor called 911 and other neighbors came to our yard to help and give support. The firefighters were great; three trucks were there in five minutes.

God was watching over us! Our lives and our home were saved, with just minor damage.

Readers, be careful! Even with precautions, we almost had a terrible disaster. — WISER IN OTTUMWA, IOWA

DEAR WISER: Thank you for a valuable letter. Readers, take note.

DEAR ABBY: When I give my grandchildren presents, I need only to know they were received and appreciated. They can thank me in person, over the phone or in writing. And any way they choose to do it is fine with me. It's not a matter of good manners; it's simply common sense.

What does one do with all those thank-you notes? Throw them away, right? So, now you tell me that when I receive a birthday gift, after I hug, kiss and thank the giver in person, I must mail him a thank-you note? Oh, come on, Abby. How silly can you get? And how many shares do you have in Hallmark cards?

I do not give gifts in order to be thanked. I give them to make loved ones happy — not to add one more chore to their busy lives. Except for weddings and large showers, where personal contact is not made, one thank-you is quite enough for me. — LYDIA PALMER, WEST HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR LYDIA PALMER: A "thank you" in person may be adequate — but when it's followed up with a written note, the giver feels especially gratified. Besides, written notes can be enjoyed again and again, and are well worth the effort.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "TWO-TIME LOSER" IN ELKHART, IND.: Don't call yourself a "loser" because you were twice divorced. Not every divorce represents a failure; many divorces represent courageous victories.

Investigation begins into what sparked prison brawl

CHILDRESS (AP) — Prison officials spent Monday figuring out how racial catcalls escalated into a recreation-area brawl requiring tear gas to quell.

Up to 300 inmates were involved Sunday evening in the 45-minute disturbance, said Robert Treon, warden at the T.L. Roach Unit. Eleven inmates remained hospitalized with lacerations and head wounds.

Authorities said four inmates were taken to hospitals in Amarillo, about 100 miles northwest of Childress.

Seven inmates remained in satisfactory condition at Childress Regional Medical Center, administrator Frances Smith said.

No prison guards, Childress County authorities or Texas Rangers were hurt, Treon said.

The prison — a 1,000-bed, minimum-security unit — held 977 inmates Sunday. At least 250 inmates were on the basketball courts and in the gym when trouble began at 8:20 p.m.

About 25 Hispanics and 15 blacks started yelling threats and racial slurs at each other, Treon said.

"The staff attempted to segregate the groups, and almost immediately, it got physical," he said. "The rest of the inmates in the yard began to either join in or crowd the group to watch. . . . It was pretty chaotic."

Inmates kicked and slugged each other and struck out with metal chair legs and boards stripped from a wooden cart, he said. Guards used tear gas to regain control and return inmates to their cells by 10:30 p.m.

"We're not exactly sure what kicked it off," Treon said. "Because there were no homemade weapons in the yard, it indicates that it was a spontaneous disturbance."

Those who joined the brawl will be punished with possible loss of "good time" that could have speeded their release. Instigators could be sent to maximum-security facilities, he said.

In December 1991, several fights broke out at the prison between minority inmates. Officials said they confined those involved to their cells for about a week and later transferred 18 to more secure units around the state.

Border patrol mans blockade for third week

EL PASO (AP) — The U.S. Border Patrol has used up the funds allotted for its Rio Grande blockade, but officials have made adjustments so the effort to stop illegal immigration can continue.

The blockade, which began Sept. 19 along a 20-mile section of the Rio Grande, was made possible by a $300,000 allotment from the Justice Department for two weeks of overtime pay. That money ran out during the weekend.

But the head of the El Paso Sector has adjusted work shifts so the operation can continue. Chief Agent Silvestre Reyes has committed about two-thirds of his estimated 625 agents to the round-the-clock blockade.

"We'll have roughly the same number of agents on the border by shifting around agents from other duties," said Reyes.

Several agents stationed at railroad yards and highway checkpoints will be moved because the number of arrests in those areas have been cut by 80 percent because of the blockade, Reyes said.

Sector agents, who cover 125,000 square miles in West Texas and New Mexico, had been making 500 to 1,000 apprehensions per day before the blockade. The apprehension rate has since dropped to an average of 140 per day, Reyes said.

Agency estimates say that two to three people make it across for every one that is caught.

The blockade has been credited with keeping hundreds of potential illegal immigrants from crossing the border, including many who made the trip daily to work in El Paso.

Mexico has called on the United States to end the blockade, saying it has created "unnecessary tensions."

Businessmen and political leaders in Ciudad Juarez have expressed outrage at the blockade and are campaigning for a boycott of visits to El Paso — which earns about $1 billion each year from Mexican visitors, according to its Chamber of Commerce.

"The blockade affects everybody, not just the people going over," said Pedro Lopez, who has sold soft drinks and food to river crossers for 10 years. He said he hasn't worked in five days because no one is making the trip.

The Border Patrol has also adopted a strategy of taking some repeat crossers to Columbus, N.M., a border town about 60 miles west of El Paso, then sending them into the tiny village of Palomas, Mexico.

"It's reducing the turnstile impact where they're returned and come back, returned and come back," said Reyes.

Before, repeat crossers were generally walked across an international bridge to Ciudad Juarez, right across El Paso. Many immediately came back, said Reyes.

'Warbirds' rumble over city

■ CAF's World War II warplanes will be on display this weekend in AirSho'93 at Midland International Airport.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Rumblings of the Confederate Air Force's AirSho'93 this weekend resounded over Midland on Monday when three CAF "warbirds" — the B-29 Superfortrress, the B-24 Liberator, and the C-46 Commando — flew into CAF Headquarters at Midland International Airport.

The two four-engine bombers and the twin-engine transport lumbered to Midland from Longview in East Texas in concluding a summer-fall tour which took them to Canada and then to the East Coast.

"We love them (the vintage airplanes)," said CAF Col. Tom Cloyd, who piloted "FiFi," the world's only airworthy B-29, the most formidable bomber of World War II.

"We love what they (the airplanes) represent" — the fight for freedom, and "what we (CAF members) are doing" in restoring, maintaining, flying and pampering the old warbirds.

"It's always a thrill to climb on board and listen to them (the powerful radial engines) start and start moving (the aircraft)," noted Cloyd, who said that flying the old warbirds is a "chance of a lifetime."

Midland pilot Dan Secker, the B-29's flight engineer, noted that it is "fun to fly this airplane and fun particularly to keep that spirit of World War II alive.

"That's what we (in the CAF) do. There's nothing in the world" like the roar of radial engines.

Blind woman finds success with snacks

By Katherine Poteet

Like any other food vendor, Kay Stephens leaned on the counter, smiled and asked her customer what she would like today.

When the answer was a sandwich with cheese, Ms. Stephens turned to the refrigerator behind her and opened the door, searching for the correct container.

"To your left, Kay," the woman said. "No, I'm sorry, it's your right."

Ms. Stephens' hands went to left and then quickly back to her right, finally landing a cheese sandwich.

"Of course, you realize there are two lefts — my left and your left," Ms. Stephens said, laughing as she turned.

The customer paid for her sandwich, the two talked a bit and the woman left.

Like other vendors, Ms. Stephens has just made another small profit for herself.

Sorehead show benefits several Stanton projects

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

STANTON — Stanton's Old Sorehead Trade Days, a trice-yearly flea market designed to bolster the community's economy, this weekend will coincide with the Mustang Draw Woodcarving Club competitive show here to exhibit West Texans' wood sculptures.

"We're excited," said Brenda Kaye Kendall, Trade Days promoter.

The weekend Trade Days in May and July attracted thousands of West Texas browsers and hundreds of antique, arts-and-crafts, and food venders. It was "beyond all expectations," Mrs. Kendall said.

"We knew it would be successful," she said. "But we had no idea it would be this great."

Old Sorehead Trade Days, which is patterned after the First Monday Trade Days in Canton in East Texas, is to generate revenue to benefit the community and to contribute to several Stanton projects:

■ To help restore downtown Stanton's businesses to an olden-days facade;

■ To renovate the community's Old Convent, site of a former academy and monastery dating back to Stanton's founding years as Marienfeld in the 1880s;

■ To complement the town's agriculture-based economy;

■ To give Stanton youth work in helping setup the flea market and in clean-up work;

■ And to support the Martin County Chamber of Commerce.

The Old Sorehead Trade Days group rents indoor and outdoor booths and Tradin' Lot space for $20 to $50 per vender for the weekend. And one cent of the 7.25-cent sales tax generated in flea-market sales goes to the city of Stanton.

Police arrest suspect in armed robbery of church congregation

LUBBOCK (AP) — Police questioned a suspect Monday in the armed robbery of 17 churchgoers.

The masked bandit behind Sunday morning's holdup at Calvary Full Gospel Church got away with about $550, authorities said.

"It happened so fast," said the Rev. Marvin James, who was preparing for his sermon. "This guy just came in, told people to hush up and demanded money from everybody."

The robber, holding what appeared to be a sawed-off shotgun wrapped in a towel, forced the congregation to gather at the altar. He tossed the 66-year-old pastor a pillowcase and demanded that James collect purses and wallets, James said.

The suspect was arrested about 7 a.m. Monday by officers called to check out a suspicious car, said Lt. Dean Summerlin.

Witnesses described the robber as a white male, 6 feet tall and 25 to 30 years of age. He was wearing a red and blue wind breaker, blue jeans and new high-top tennis shoes.

The car seen leaving the church matched the description of the getaway car used during a grocery store robbery at Lubbock on Saturday, Officer Victor Quintana said.

At the church, a Sunday school teacher with children in another room had started to come into the main hall, but the robber warned her to close the door and stay away.

The robber also had asked for the churchgoers' watches and jewelry — but changed his mind, James said. The thief allowed some people to keep their drivers licenses and credit cards.

Today's events make history right before our eyes

Ott

Rambling thoughts:

— Terrific new country-western song title: "Prop me up against the jukebox (if I die)."

— It is fun to sit on the couch and watch history unfold before your very eyes . . . such as with the recent riots in Moscow.

— When you think about it, we have been very fortunate to witness a great deal of history in the last five or so years . . . there's the fall of the Berlin Wall, the collapse of communism, a quick victory in the Persian Gulf War and students protesting in China.

— Admit it, did you ever think you would live long enough to witness the "little people" overthrowing powerful communist regimes?

— Is Fidel Castro getting nervous?

— Barney Fife is the funniest character to ever appear on television.

— The older a person gets the more he worries about money.

— I suppose that is a sign of maturity, but it sure makes sleeping at night a whole lot more difficult.

— It is an old joke, of course, but does anyone really buy Playboy magazine for the articles? More importantly, do people who say they do realize just how dumb they really sound?

— For the record, it is possible to get a sunburn in October. If you need proof, play a round of golf without wearing a cap.

— Has even one mind been changed during the recent onslaught of "pro" and "con" arguments regarding abortion? I doubt it. People on both sides of the issue feel so strongly about their position that nothing anyone else says is going to change that opinion. Which is fine.

— As part of an alleged plan to have his followers kill residents of Waco, David Koresh reportedly told them, "You can't die for God if you can't kill for God." People who say — and believe — such things scare me to death.

CAF: Warplanes to be on display at AirSho'93

(From 1B)

The B-29, the B-24, and the C-46 will be among approximately 130 vintage World War II warplanes from the Allies forces and from the Axis powers in AirSho'93 on Saturday and Sunday at Midland International Airport.

Gates to AirSho'93 will open at 7:30 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday, and the CAF's air-power demonstration begins at 1 p.m. both days.

Tickets at the gate are $8 for adults and $4 for children. Tickets purchased in advance will be a dollar less expensive.

The CAF event is to take on the aura of a "Sentimental Journey" in conjuring up nostalgia for the unity of purpose — the fight for freedom — when the United States was united in a common effort to purge what the nation perceived as "evil" forces in Europe and in the Pacific that would conquer the world and deny freedom for its peoples.

The CAF's AirSho'93 will include restored World War II warplanes, including fighters, bombers, trainers, and transports, flying in themes suggestive of such air battles as the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese Attack of Pearl Harbor; the Battle of Midway; bombing raids over the German-held Ploesti oil fields in Romania; raids deep into Europe, and the atomic bombing of Japan in August 1945.

Aircraft will include American warplanes, such as the P-47 Thunderbolt, the P-51 Mustang, the P-38 Lightning, the Wildcat, the B-17 Flying Fortress and B-29 Superfortress, the B-24 Liberator, the B-25 Mitcheli, the C-47 Skytrain, and C-46 Commando; the British Supermarine Spitfire of Battle-of-Britain fame and the four-engine British Avro Lancaster bomber from the Canadian Warplane Heritage Museum; the Japanese Mitsubishi A6M Reisen or "Zero" naval fighter; and Germany's Messerschmitt Bf-109 fighter.

The CAF grounds will have the ambience of a World War II airfield.

The American Airpower Heritage Museum will feature a new exhibit, "Troops, Tanks, Food and Supplies: Military Air Transport."

TRADE: Sorehead flea market benefits Stanton

(From 1B)

as and New Mexico will be displaying their wares from the downtown St. Peters' Street northward to the Martin County Courthouse and then eastward on Broadway Avenue to the Martin County Historical Museum and the Martin County Community Center complex, where the woodcarvers will exhibit their woodcarvings from Friday through Sunday.

"It's going to be a competitive show and sale," said George Friday, a Midland woodcarver. Judging will be by Dick Spinney, who is president of the Texas Woodcarvers Guild.

There will be an auction of "selected pieces" of wood sculptures at 2 p.m. Saturday on the courthouse square to benefit the Mustang Draw Woodcarving Club.

In each of the previous weekend flea markets in May and July, approximately 10,000 shoppers browsed and bought from the venders' displays of antiques, arts and crafts, and items in the "junk-to-treasure" range.

About 100 venders showed up for Stanton's first Trade Days, and 150 exhibited in the subsequent show. For this weekend's fare, approximately 300 venders are scheduled to show up.

The Old Sorehead Trades Days is jointly sponsored by the Martin County Chamber of Commerce and Community Development Committee of Martin County's Texas Agriculture Extension Service (TAEX).

At this stage, "We are on a just break-even basis," said Kathryn Burch, TAEX county agent. Right now, most proceeds are going to promote the flea market, she said.

Old Sorehead Trade Days has heightened people's awareness of the existence of Stanton.

"We are hoping that people will come to Stanton between Trade Days, Mrs. Burch said. "We have gift shops, dress shops, and antiques stores open year round. We have neat places to go and eat" in this community of 2,400 people.

"We are hoping that the guys will be going to the Confederate Air Force (AirSho'93 this weekend at Midland International Airport) and the women will come over here and shop" at Old Sorehead Trade Days.

— Today's quote: "A musician must make music, an artist must paint, a poet must write, if he is to be ultimately at peace with himself. What a man can be, he must be."

— If we followed through on just half of our good intentions, we would all be wildly successful human beings.

— Didn't the Michael Jackson story disappear rather abruptly? One day it was front page news, the next day it was nowhere to be found. Sounds kind of fishy to me.

— There is always at least one co-worker who brings food to the office on a regular basis.

— That person is generally quite popular.

— Singapore is one of those cities that just SOUNDS neat.

— Don't you just hate people who use the word "neat" to describe something, or someone?

— Me too.

— Maybe it is a sign of the times, but I'm always taken aback when I hear about a young couple who already has four or five children.

— It strikes me as being in extremely poor taste when I see a TV commercial advertising a collection of "greatest hits" by a person who has just died. Conway Twitty is the latest example.

— It can be most irritating for someone to try and soothe your pain by saying, "I know exactly how you feel," when you know darn good and well that they don't know how you feel. No one knows how you feel.

"I have my regulars," Ms. Stephens said. "The people who I recognize as soon as they come up. Of course, there are those I don't know. But, some show up every day."

The stand started as the Post Office Concession stand, but Ms. Stephens changed the name to Tall City Snack Shoppe.

"I am self-employed," she said. "I make the money off of this stand, it's mine."

Ms. Stephens lost her eyesight when she was five, but she continued her education through high school.

"I graduated from Lee High School in 1970," she said. "I always went to public schools. It was very difficult because they didn't have the facilities and I had to rely on the students and my parents."

She remembers her father taking her to the football games and leaving her in the stands with her friends.

"I had a little transistor radio with me," she said. "And, the announcer on the radio tended to be quicker than the stadium announcer. So, I usually would start hollering before the rest of the crowd, which was embarassing."

After high school, she attended a commercial college and then trained with the state's Business Enterprise Program for a year in order to open her business.

"I was part of a pilot program that was training concessions operators in Austin," she said. "I was in Lubbock for a while and then did my on-the-job training in Odessa for four months. I then went back to Austin to take my state final, worked in Odessa again and then came here."

Her parents bring her to work everyday to open the stand at 8 a.m. She stocks food, cigarettes, drinks, ice cream and assorted items like Pepto-Bismol in the same place each day so she will know where it is when a customer asks for an item.

"It doesn't seem to bother people that I am blind," she said. "And, people are very helpful. If I get a roll of Lifesavers or something mixed up, they let me know."

A bell hooked up to the rug in front of her glass display case lets her know when she has a customer. And, she has an bill identifier to tell her what bill a customer has just handed her.

"The coins are easy because of the different ways they feel," she said. "But, for a long time, I had to rely on the customers to be truthful when giving me a bill. A friend gave me a device that read a bill on both sides and I wore it out. The state sent me this one."

In between customers, she stocks and straightens her stand or she reads, always stopping when she hears someone approach.

"I enjoy working with people and retail sales," she said. "It's just something I have always liked to do and will continue to do."

Sailor sees spirit of cooperation in Navy's Baltic Sea operations

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story was provided by the public affairs department of the U.S. Navy.

United States Naval Academy Midshipman 1st Class Michael Nelms of Midland was among hundreds of sailors participating this summer in Baltic Operations, or Baltops '93, a normally routine naval training exercise held annually in the Baltic Sea.

Nelms

This year, for the first time in the 22-year history of the exercise, former Warsaw Pact countries, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland and Russia participated, as did the neutral countries of Finland and Sweden.

"The entire Baltops experience has been wonderful so far," Nelms said. "I have had the opportunity to see Europe and interact with her people. More importantly, I have been a witness to the new spirit of cooperation between the countries of NATO and former East Bloc nations."

Nelms, grandson of Elijah Nelms of Midland, has been studying Russian at the Naval Academy for three years, and was participating in Baltops '93 as a translator aboard the USS DEYO for his summer training cruise.

The first phase of the exercise provided training in a variety of skills, including seamanship, damage control, basic maneuvering and communication, as well as sailor transfers at sea to the particpating Russian ship.

"We were pleased to see the Russians show up, said Captain W. Scott Slocum, Commander Destroyer Squadron 26. "The fact that the Russians were there made the exercise a thrilling experience for everyone."

Loyal troops, sound tactics boost Yeltsin

By Michael R. Gordon
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — The assault on the Russian Parliament building on Monday was a textbook example of the decisive application of military power. But for all the firepower — and the fires burning inside on Monday night showed that there was plenty — the attack was punctuated by long lulls as the Russian military waited to see if the rebels would yield.

Strobe Talbott, the American ambassador-at-large to the former Soviet republics, said President Boris Yeltsin's aides had indicated that they considered two basic tactics: an all-out attack or a gradual operation that would give the anti-Yeltsin forces an opportunity to surrender.

And as the daylong assault went on, it was clear that Yeltsin's military commanders had chosen the latter.

The first sign that an assault was imminent came shortly before 7:00 a.m., or midnight, Eastern time, when five armored personnel carriers rolled down the Garden Ring road, a major thoroughfare in Moscow, and asked directions. The Russian troops were looking for Bolshoi Devyatinsky lane, which abuts the U.S. Embassy compound and leads to the eastern corner of the Parliament building, the towering redoubt on the Moscow River where the defiant lawmakers had maintained their headquarters.

The building was soon surrounded by Russian tanks and armored personnel carriers. In addition to their position on Bolshoi Devyatinsky, the armored columns took positions to the west, north, and east. Tanks were also stationed to the south, on the other side of the Moscow River, and on the Novoarbat bridge, giving them a clear line of fire at the front of the building.

The Russian units ordered into Moscow were elite forces known for their loyalty to Yeltsin. They included soldiers from the Taman Division and the Kantemirovsky Division, as well as airborne forces from Tula, a base 120 miles south of Moscow.

"I can't figure it all out," a young Russian private from the Kantemirovsky Division said as he leaned against his tank with a cigarette tucked behind his ear.

But the confrontation between Yeltsin and Alexander Rutskoi, a leader of the rebellion who has been named acting president by the Parliament, did not weigh heavy on his mind.

"Grachev said that our orders come from him and Yeltsin," the solider said, referring to Gen. Pavel Grachev, the defense minister and a former paratroop officer who threw his support behind Yeltsin during the abortive hardline coup attempt in 1991 and has since remained loyal to him.

Virtually from the moment the Russian military launched its attack, it established a tightening stranglehold on the assortment of Communists, nationalists, independents, and Cossasks defending the Parliament building and the nearby building that houses the mayor's office.

As the tanks and armored personnel carriers began pummeling the buildings about 8:30 a.m, three helicopters were observing the positions of the anti-Yelstin rebels on the roof and upper floors of the Parliament building. Meanwhile, paratroopers rushed toward it.

With the outcome of the battle never in doubt, the clear preference of the military was to scare the anti-Yeltsin demonstrators into surrendering.

Doctors patch bodies; wounded spirits bleed

By Marcia Kunstel and Joseph Albright
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Doctors and nurses at the "Sklif" hospital have labored day and night patching bodies broken in Russia's political cataclysm. But they cannot repair the wounded spirits.

Aggravated families awaited prognoses for injured sons Monday at Sklifosovskovo Institute, Moscow's hospital specializing in emergency care. Surgeons fumed that politicians could trigger such havoc.

"I was really shocked by one of the women. She was shot right in the center of her breast. And she is 13 weeks pregnant," said Dr. Igor Kirdayev, 34, who headed for the hospital and dozens of emergency surgeries as soon as he saw attackers had blacked out Russian television Sunday night. The woman patient was a translator at the television station.

"First, I felt really sorry for these people," Kirdayev said. "Then I was mad about this band of bandits from the (parliamentary) White House. I don't know what I can call them but bandits."

Long after amputations and surgeries have begun to heal, the anger and fear generated by violently clashing political ambitions will linger.

Even at this hospital, where the purely physical impact of three days of street battle was overwhelming, the emotional legacy was just as clear.

Frantic Muscovites sought news of friends and family who had been missing since demonstrations led by communists and neo-fascists turned into violent assaults Sunday, provoking President Boris Yeltsin's government to storm the hard-liners' political base in the parliament building on Monday.

Like brake linings worn thin, peoples' emotional cushion grated at the slightest brush.

Arguments broke out in hospital corridors between people supporting opposing political sides. One woman searching for a friend's son spat and walked away from a reporter identified as an American. The American administration supported Yeltsin.

A man who would identify himself only as Vladimir — because he is a police officer who does not support his own government — sat tearful and angry outside the hospital. His 38-year-old brother, who had been among the insurgents charging the television station, had just had his leg amputated.

"Under a normal president, this wouldn't have happened," Vladimir said. "If he dies, I will put a sign on my car saying my brother died from the dictatorship of Yeltsin."

When medical assistant Lena Prosolova, 27, overheard their comments, she could not stay silent.

"For three days straight I've been working. We hate these people (anti-Yeltsin demonstrators), but we do our job," she said.

Violence seems not to have spread beyond Moscow

By Judith Ingram
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Across Russia, all eyes were on the confrontation in Moscow on Monday. A sampling of reports on Monday night from some of the 88 regions that make up the Russian federation indicated that the violence had not spread beyond the capital.

"Everyone has been watching television and listening to the radio all day just to understand what is happening in Moscow," said Stanislav Bogomolov, the editor on the news desk at Uralski Rabochi, a newspaper in Yekaterinburg, an industrial city in the Ural Mountains that is also President Boris Yeltsin's hometown. "It is absolutely calm here."

In Yekaterinburg, St. Petersburg and several other cities around Russia, supporters of Ruslan Khasbulatov and Alexander Rutskoi held small, peaceful demonstrations on Monday.

By evening, the Russian press had reported no disturbances outside Moscow. Russian television alternated pictures of people all over the federation going about their normal business with coverage of demonstrations in favor of Yeltsin. News agencies carried upbeat dispatches from the regions, in which local officials asserted that order was being maintained.

In some places, security forces were deployed in greater numbers than usual only around telecommunications centers. In St. Petersburg, an unarmed crowd of 1,000 anti-Yeltsin demonstrators was reported to have stormed the local television station, but security forces prevented them from entering. The incident ended peacefully.

The regions outside Moscow had appeared to be an important factor in the power struggle in the capital, and both sides courted them.

In several areas, like Bryansk, about 210 miles southwest of Moscow, the administration and much of the public took the side of the Parliament.

The local member of Parliament and regional governor, Yuri Lodkin, was in the Parliament building with protesting lawmakers for much of the last two weeks. In retaliation for the local administration's opposition, Yeltsin, who had outlawed Parliament, removed Lodkin from his position as governor.

Aleksei Kostrikhyn, the editor of the Bryanski Rabochi newspaper, said the city was quiet on Monday night. "People were out picking potatoes today," he said. "And the new governor sent a telegram of support to Yeltsin."

Yet in spite of the signs of reconciliation in the provinces and the government's seizure of the Parliament building, the power struggle was likely to continue in the regions.

In Novosibirsk, an important scientific center in Siberia where the leadership had opposed Yeltsin, the local council was reported to have softened its stand on Monday and called for the warring sides in Moscow to negotiate.

When 2,000 supporters of Yeltsin gathered in the center of Novosibirsk on Monday afternoon, they appealed to him to punish those responsible for the violence, end the local council's activities, dismiss the head of the local administration, and name a new governor.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	3 ◇	4 ♠	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ◇

When it comes to taking a finesse, two things distinguish experts from the average player. The masters will spurn many finesses that an everyday player takes as a matter of course; and the pros will take some finesses that the ordinary player doesn't even consider.

South would have made life easier for partner by first doubling three diamonds, then cue-bidding four diamonds over North's spade response. As it was, North judged well to raise to five spades and South had no hesitation about going on to slam.

West led a diamond and declarer gave the hand a good run. After winning the ace of diamonds, declarer drew the outstanding trumps, then ducked a heart. The heart return was taken with the ace and all the trumps were run. Had a defender held four clubs and four hearts it would have been impossible to retain length in both suits. As it was, West was able to hold four clubs while East kept a heart winner, so the result was down one.

There was a better line available thanks to the ten of clubs in dummy. After drawing the trumps, declarer should have led a club to the ten. That stood a 50 percent chance of succeeding, far better odds than the squeeze. As the cards lie, the finesse would have won and declarer would have been able to get two heart discards from the table on high clubs. A heart ruff in dummy would have produced the 12th trick, with declarer losing only one heart trick.

Sylvester Stallone sheds quest for intellectualism, poses nude

NEW YORK — He paints, he writes poetry and he's posing in the nude as Rodin's "The Thinker." Yo!

This is no pale intellectual. One look at the biceps on the cover of Vanity Fair and there's no doubt that Sylvester Stallone is intent on maintaining the muscle-man action-hero image he got portraying "Rocky" and "Rambo."

Stallone

The magazine's November issue shows Stallone seated in the buff on a large stone, his head resting on his hand and his body turned to one side, hiding what would otherwise turn the photo into an X-rated shot.

Stallone, 47, says he's given up on having people take his interest in literature and art seriously — and after acting in several comedy flops, he's also given up doing anything but action movies.

"I'm resigned now to doing things that I think befit the image and not trying to break type as blatantly as I have before," he told Vanity Fair. "I would like to do Edgar Allan Poe, but I bring so much handmade baggage that there's no way you could ever accept me as a frail, withdrawn poet who basically approached life on the intellectual level."

Stallone just completed the action movie "Demolition Man."

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — It was a marriage made in a Christian theme park.

Tammy Faye Bakker exchanged vows Sunday with an old family friend, Kansas developer Roe Messner, while her ex-husband, fallen televangelist Jim Bakker, serves time in prison for fraud.

Messner built much of the Heritage USA Christian complex in Fort Mill, S.C., run by her ex-husband, and recently divorced his wife, Ruth Ann.

About 50 people attended Sunday's brief, nondenominational ceremony.

"Tammy sang 'Jesus Loves Me' with a prerecorded orchestra, ballad-style. It was beautiful," said Ruth Gibson, a society columnist.

The couple left this desert resort in a white Rolls Royce. They will honeymoon in Hawaii, said Baroness Beverly de Z'Aimant, a guest.

The Bakkers ended their 30-year marriage last year. Tammy Faye said she remains friends with Bakker, who is serving an eight-year prison sentence in Jesup, Ga., and is scheduled for release on Oct. 20, 1994.

He was convicted in 1989 of cheating PTL followers of more than $150 million. The scandal came to light after he was accused of having sex with church secretary Jessica Hahn.

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — America is in danger of getting an F for science.

That's what astronomer Carl Sagan says.

The nation does not understand that science is essential to its future, Sagan said Sunday as he was inducted into the New Jersey Literary Hall of Fame at the Liberty Science Center.

Science is not just a body of knowledge, but a way of thinking, said Sagan, the producer, director and announcer for the PBS series "Cosmos." He called for a concentrated effort to teach science to the American populace.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Garth Brooks and his wife, Sandy, are expecting their second child.

"I just found out. I don't know the details," manager Pam Lewis said Monday. The due date was not disclosed, but Lewis said Mrs. Brooks was doing well.

The Brookses have a 15-month-old daughter, Taylor Mayne Pearl. During her pregnancy, Mrs. Brooks collapsed in Los Angeles International Airport as the couple arrived for the American Music Awards in Januray 1992.

"The condition was described as a threatened miscarriage," said Scott Stem, Brooks' publicist.

As a result, Brooks did not appear on the nationally televised show or at the Grammy Awards in March.

ROME — Federico Fellini can't wait to get going on movie No. 21.

The 73-year-old director, recovering from a stroke in August, is hoping to return home Oct. 20 and begin work on his 21st feature film, "Block Notes of a Director: The Actor," in February or March, said producer Leo Pescarolo.

Fellini is eager to be back on the set, Pescarolo said Monday at the Mediterranean Film Festival in Valencia, Spain, the Italian news agency ANSA reported. He said Fellini told a friend that "this latest dramatic experience was the most nourishing of his life."

Fellini is recovering in Ferrara, 50 miles southwest of Venice.

After returning to Rome, he will continue therapy to improve the condition of his left arm. His left leg has recovered from the stroke.

Fellini won Oscars for his films "La Strada," "The Nights of Cabiria," "8½" and "Amarcord." Many of his other films, including "La Dolce Vita," have been widely acclaimed.

Protecting your investment with Midland Muffler and Brake Inc.

Most people do not get the wheels of their vehicles re-aligned on a regular basis because it is not seen as an important part of car maintenance.

This is however a complete fallacy, because keeping the wheels of a vehicle in line is very important.

It is very common to find that the tires wear unevenly, the most usual cause for this is improper wheel alignment. Getting your vehicle aligned can save a considerable amount of money over the years just by eliminating this problem.

Every time your car is aligned, the mechanic, as part of the alignment, inspects the suspension system. This check helps to spot potential problems before they develop into something serious.

Other advantages of getting regular alignments done include: improving the handling of the vehicle, decreasing fuel consumption and improving the comfort of the ride.

Getting your vehicles wheels properly aligned does not cost a great deal, and it can help to save a tremendous amount of money in the long term.

Midland Muffler use state-of-the-art computer technology to align all four wheels parallel to a common center line to ensure that the car behaves as it was designed to do.

The technicians at Midland Muffler recommend getting your vehicle aligned every 10,000 miles or once a year depending on which comes first. This regular preventive routine can help to decrease the cost of expensive repair work and increase the safety characteristics of your car.

Midland Muffler specializes in all aspects of exhaust system rep;air and installation. They have been in the business for over 11-years, providing Midland with the very best in customer satisfaction and competitive prices.

Midland Muffler also has facilities ..

brake servicing and exhaust system repair and installation. Using computer controlled equipment they have the experience and technical know-how to keep vehicles running smoothly and safely.

Brake systems are obviously very important, but few people get them checked on a regular basis. As a rough guide, brake systems should be checked approximately every 35,000 miles for wear and damage. Front wheel trucks and cars should be inspected more often due to the extra wear on the brakes.

Midland Muffler's technicians are all professionally trained and qualified n order to provide the highest quality of service.

For more information about Midland Muffler and Brake Inc.'s range of services and competitive prices, call 699-7924, or stop by their location at 3201 West Front Street, Midland.

Antiquities is Open

There is something about original antique furniture that provokes a very special reaction.

It may be the history behind a piece, or the rich color of the wood, but whatever it is, antiques are a joy to have because they impart a sense of timeless beauty to one's home.

Specializing in 19th century, European furniture, Antiquities is a new antiques store which has been set up by Yvonne Tighe, an expert in the field, to provide Midland with beautiful furniture from around the world.

Yvonne, a Federally Qualified Appraiser and former owner of Antiques Etc, in Midland, and has been in the business for many years amassing a wealth of experience about European furniture.

The new store which officially opened on October 1st at 3101 Big Spring, Midland, and will feature many different styles of furniture rather than 'trade smalls'.

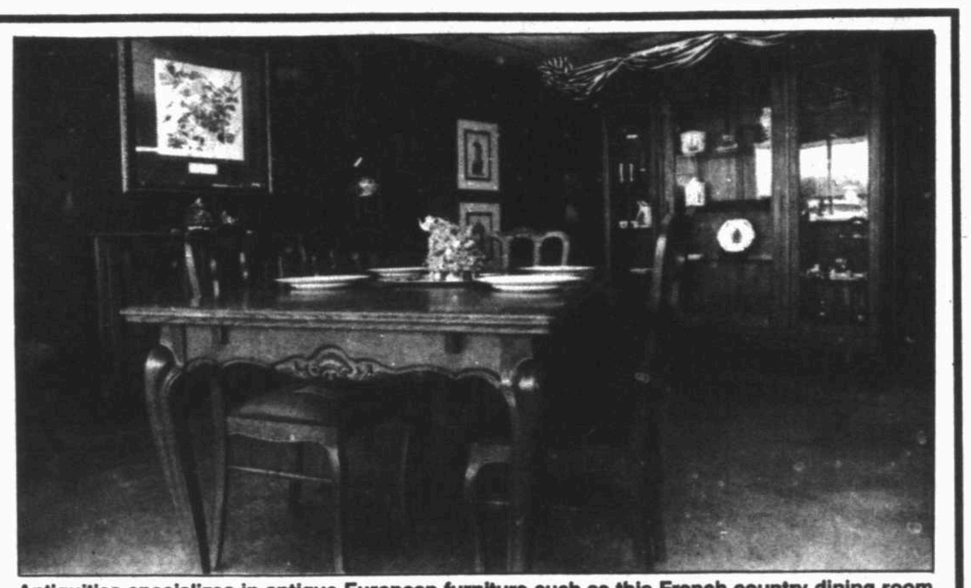
With pine furniture from the Scandinavian countries such as Finland and Sweden, oaks and walnuts from Belgium and France and English stained glass, the emphasis is on dining room sets and bedroom suites.

There is a large amount of furniture on display at Antiquities with more to come because in a months time Yvonne will be opening a consignment store on the premises to provide an outlet for others to market their own antiques.

There are many interesting pieces at Antiquities, ranging from 18th century French dining room suites to stained glass from 19th century English pub windows.

The emphasis is on European furniture because there is relatively little 18th and early 19th century American furniture for sale, and what is offered commands a very high price indeed.

For more information about Antiquities range of beautiful antique furniture and other items, or to arrange an appointment for an appraisal please call 686-7511 or stop by the store. Their opening hours are: Monday through Saturday 10a.m. until 5p.m.



Antiquities specializes in antique European furniture such as this French country dining room suite. For more information about beautiful antique furniture call 686-7511

Jays try for repeat title

■ Toronto has 1-2-3 hitters in the American League, something that hasn't been done since 1893.

By Rick Gano
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — Paul Molitor was the new guy in the clubhouse and giving advice in his first days with the Toronto Blue Jays wasn't his style, especially during a period of adjustment with the defending world champions.

But his influence was felt immediately, especially by young players like John Olerud and Roberto Alomar, who were hardly strangers to good hitting.

"One think Paul did for Olerud as early as spring training was to ask him when he was going to win a batting title," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "Then John went out and did it."

And the Blue Jays, with Molitor mixing in perfectly with his best season at age 37, went out and won their third straight American League East championship. Now they'll play the Chicago White Sox beginning tonight for a return trip to the World Series.

Olerud, who toyed with .400 into August, finished at .363. Right behind him in the American League batting race? Molitor at .332 and Alomar at .326, marking the first time since the 1893 Philadelphia Phillies the same team finished a season with the top three hitters.

"It was difficult to do," batting coach Larry Hisle said.

"I was aware of that and it wasn't that big a deal in the beginning, but now that I finished third, it was," said Alomar, who got three hits in the season's final game. "It's like it hadn't happened in a 100 years. When I retire, I will be in the books for something."

Molitor had 211 hits, 121 runs scored and 22 stolen bases, but his career highs of 22 homers and 111 RBIs supplied the Blue Jays with the power they thought was gone when Dave Winfield went to

■ Baseball playoffs cap the dramatic comeback of Chicago's Bo Jackson.

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

CHICAGO — Tim Raines has this vision, so vivid that it almost becomes real when he looks at the empty batting cage at Comiskey Park.

"It's the seventh game, we're down by three runs, in the bottom of the ninth inning, the bases are loaded," Raines says, his eyes widening in wonderment, "and Bo Jackson steps up."

"The count is no balls and two strikes. The pitcher throws a nasty forkball," he says, turning his head to follow the flight of the pitch from the mound to the plate.

"Bo digs it out of the dirt and hits it over the center-field fence," he says, shaking his head in amazement. "We win the game."

But Tim, was that in the playoffs or the World Series?

"Oh, the playoffs," he says, smiling. "Then he does it again in the World Series and we win the whole thing."

Whether Bo was imagining the same thing while the Chicago White Sox worked out Monday was uncertain. He wasn't talking as his team prepared for Game 1 of the AL playoffs today (7:12 p.m. CDT, CBS) against the Toronto Blue Jays.

Instead, he was playing ping pong in the clubhouse. Pretty good at it, too. Even when he switched the rules, allowing for shots that ricocheted off the low ceiling, which he flicked at will.

"I'm going to beat you anyway," he shouted when Dan Pasqua objected. "I'm not going to cheat."

The only time he's ever cheated, maybe, was when he cheated the forces of nature that conspired to take away his left hip and tried to finish his sports career.

In his last playoff game, for the Los Angeles Raiders, a hit near the sidelines ended his football days. He still is the only player in NFL history to score

Braves have confidence

■ Philadelphia and Atlanta split in 12 games this year, but the Braves "think" they will be back in the World Series.

By Tom Saladino
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Having won a third National League West title with a franchise-record 104 victories, the Atlanta Braves are confident heading into Wednesday's playoff opener at Philadelphia.

Steve Avery (18-6) will be matched against the East champion Phillies' Curt Schilling (16-7) in the first game of the best-of-7 series.

The teams split 12 regular-season games, but the Braves took two of three when the clubs last met at Philadelphia Sept. 24-26.

"We showed them something there," outfielder Ron Gant said. "I think it put some fear in their hearts. The Phillies know we can play with them."

Avery isn't making any predictions on the outcome.

"I just think all our guys are ready," said the left-hander, who beat the Phillies 7-2 last month and was 1-1 with a 3.46 ERA against them for the season.

"I pitched well against them the last time. I'm ready to go. I'm confident I can beat them."

Avery is no stranger to playoff pressure. He was the MVP in the 1991 playoffs when he beat Pittsburgh twice, shutting out the Pirates over 16 1-3 innings. Overall,

Mojo, Lee gain turf in AP poll

Associated Press

DALLAS — Odessa Permian is a stronger No. 1 and Midland Lee moved a step closer on Monday in The Associated Press high school football poll.

Permian continued widening its lead over the pack by receiving 20 first-place votes while Lee moved up a notch from sixth to fifth when Longview fell from fifth to No. 10.

Permian's 56-0 win over Abilene High Friday did nothing to slow the Panthers in the poll. Lee had to take a hard fought 14-7 win over San Angelo's Bobcats, but the Rebels still climbed a notch. It looks like those two will be headed for a state-wide showdown on Oct. 22 at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa.

In Class A, the Rankin Red Devils continue to lead the pack after its 43-0 win over the Midland High junior varsity Thursday.

The Southlake Carroll Dragons, slayers of a state-record 66 straight regular-season opponents, finally conquered the opinions of the voters.

Carroll (5-0) became the season's first unanimous No. 1 pick by a panel of 31 broadcasters and sports writers, solidifying its throne atop Class 3A.

The four other teams that entered the midway point of the season at No. 1 also kept their spots following a weekend in which only six of the 50 ranked teams lost.

Dragons coach Bob Ledbetter isn't among those ready to pronounce Carroll the best 3A has to offer.

The always critical coach said he thinks the overwhelming vote of confidence for his team is due mostly to the

Marino's Dolphins strike early as Washington falls to 1-3

Associated Press

MIAMI — The Miami Dolphins were at their best at the beginning and the end. That was good enough to beat the Washington Redskins.

Dan Marino hit Tony Martin with an 80-yard touchdown pass on the game's third play and directed a time-consuming fourth-quarter drive for a field goal Monday night in a 17-10 victory.

Miami limited the Redskins to 10 yards in the first quarter, and Troy Vincent intercepted a Rich Gannon pass at the Washington 44-yard line with 59 seconds left to seal the victory.

The Dolphins improved to 3-1, and coach Don Shula closed to within three victories of George Halas' NFL record of 324.

The Redskins lost their third in a row and fell to 1-3 for the first time since 1985. They've never made the playoffs after such a start.

Marino caught Washington in a blitz on the first series and flipped a pass to Martin, who made the catch at the Miami 35 and sprinted to the end zone chased by three defenders. The completion was Marino's longest in nearly five years.

Miami mounted a nine-play, 73-yard touchdown drive on its second possession. Marino hit rookie running back Terry Kirby for 34 yards, and Mark Higgs scored on a 1-yard third-down run for a 14-0 lead.

Kirby rushed for 94 yards in 16 carries. Martin caught four passes for 110 yards.

Gannon replaced Cary Conklin at quarterback in the third period and directed a 75-yard drive for the Redskins' only touchdown, a 12-yard pass to Ricky Sanders that trimmed Miami's lead to 14-10 with 11:08 left.

But Marino then led a 13-play drive that consumed 7:10. It ended with Pete Stoyanovich's 37-yard field goal.

Injuries hurt Texas in 1993 playoff bid

ARLINGTON — Look at the names: Jose Canseco, Nolan Ryan, Julio Franco, Charlie Leibrandt and Manny Lee.

A Texas Rangers' roster of All-Stars? No, their injury list.

And add Butch Davis, Billy Ripken, Mario Diaz, David Hulse, Jeff Huson, Gary Redus and Craig Lefferts.

Yet, in Kevin Kennedy's first year as a big league manager, the Rangers, often with a patchwork lineup and always with a depleted rotation and stretched bullpen, managed to come in second in the AL West, challenging the Chicago White Sox before fading in late September.

"I've never been on a team with so much hurt and so much heart," said Texas closer Tom Henke, who joined the Rangers as a free agent last winter after leading the Toronto Blue Jays to the World Series championship.

Chicago manager Gene Lamont said the White Sox were fortunate in two ways: avoiding debilitating injuries themselves and watching Texas' spate of ailments finally snuff a valiant run.

"Good teams are the ones who avoid injuries and we've been fortunate enough to do that," Lamont said.

Kennedy said Ryan offered some encouragement Sunday before the final game ever played at Arlington Stadium.

"I talked to Nolan before the game, he had some nice things to say," Kennedy recounted. "He told me, boy if you can make it through this year, he said you just got to think that this is going to be the toughest year ever.

"I really believe we have the talent here to win," Kennedy said. "I said that last fall. I think we proved that, but we do have to push it over the edge, got to find a way to minimize injuries."

The Rangers bounced back from a 31-39 start to finish 86-76, their best in seven years, thanks in significant part to the emergence of starters Kenny Rogers (16-10) and Roger Pavlik (12-6) and Henke's career- and club-best 40 saves.

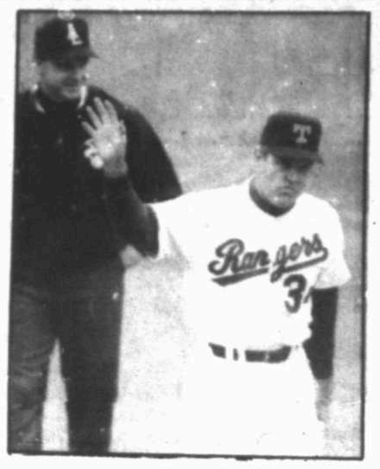
But they couldn't make up for disappointing seasons by Ryan (5-5), Leibrandt (9-10) and Lefferts (3-9).

The offense was better than ever even after Kennedy's worst decision — using Canseco in a mopup pitching role in Boston on June 24. Canseco ended up with a torn elbow ligament that required surgery and a year of rehabilitation.

Juan Gonzalez (46), Palmeiro (37) and Dean Palmer (33) combined for 116 home runs, an AL record. Each had career bests in homers and provided Texas with 90 or more RBIs from three players for the first time in club history.

Gonzalez won consecutive AL home run crowns for the first time since Boston's Jim Rice in 1977-78. He hit 46 homers this season after hitting 43 last year. But he missed 22 games with a bad back.

"If he ever stays healthy for 160, 162 games, he'd hit 50 home runs easily," Kennedy said. "If you make a mistake, Juan hits it out. If he lays off bad pitches, takes some walks, he's going to be awesome."



Texas' Nolan Ryan ...no more Express

Gonzalez hit .310 with 33 doubles, 105 runs and 118 RBIs. Palmeiro, heading into free agency, hit .295 with a team-record 124 runs, 40 doubles and 105 RBIs and added a team-record 113-game errorless streak at first base. Palmer had 96 RBIs.

Franco bounced back with a strong second half after his chronically aching knees finally healed. As the designated hitter, he hit 289 with 14 homers and 84 RBIs. But there may not be room for him and his salary in 1994, especially if he doesn't regain his mobility to play second base.

Canseco's $5 million salary would be hard to trade and he might have to be used at DH only if his arm hasn't healed enough to play the outfield next year.

Kennedy said the team's top priorities in the offseason are signing Palmeiro, who will be heavily pursued by others, and solidifying the starting pitching and middle relief.

"I'm going to take a couple days off, then go right to the winter meetings that we have in Port Charlotte, Fla."

Free agents let Astros down

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros can only wonder how much better their season would have been if free-agent signings Doug Drabek and Greg Swindell had winning seasons.

The Astros couldn't win more than five games in a row and didn't lose more than five straight games. They teased their fans each month of the season but never cut loose with the promise they showed at the end of 1992.

The 1993 season droned to an end with a loss in Cincinnati Sunday, leaving as many questions unanswered as the Astros faced at the beginning of the season.

Will Art Howe return as manager? Will multi-millionaire pitchers Drabek and Swindell rebound from poor seasons? Will owner Drayton McLane make wholesale changes?

"The magic of baseball is just beginning," McLane said, referring to the league playoffs and World Series. "The Houston Astros want to be involved with that. We want to go to the playoffs and win and go to the World Series and win that, too."

The Astros finished the season with an inverted pitching rotation with Drabek (9-18) and Swindell (12-13) at the bottom and Mark Portugal (18-4), Pete Harnisch (16-9) and Darryl Kile (15-8) getting the headlines.

Portugal and Harnisch were among the league-leaders in victories and ERA, and Harnisch was near the top of NL pitchers in strikeouts. Portugal is now eligible for free agency.

Bullpen ace Doug Jones, after earning team MVP honors in 1992, was a major disappointment in 1993.

McLane made changes in the Astrodome and attendance improved, but he was disappointed with the lack of pizzaz on the field. There was talk of contending in preseason, but that faded as the season plodded along.

McLane could create the fireworks in the off-season that the team didn't on the field. He is a cheerleader and likes that kind of personality. Howe is even-handed and low-key and wants another chance.

"I want to be back, but I have no control over that decision," Howe said.

"I'm proud of what we have accomplished this year. I want ot take us where we want to go, to a championship. I know we have made progress this year."

The Astros beat last year's .500 record, but their 85-77 record fell short of what McLane and many fans expected.

"We've done a lot of things right and a lot of things wrong," Howe said. "There are areas we have to work on, but I can see bright spots, too.

"I felt coming into this season that with Harnisch and Portugal matching up against other three and four pitchers, we'd have an edge, and that's how it turned out."

Drabek finished his season in Atlanta Wednesday night, pitching only three innings.

BO: Jackson's mystique catching on two runs of more than 90 yards.

That was nothing, or almost nothing, compared to what he did in the 1989 baseball All-Star game in Anaheim. He led off the first inning with a monster blast into the center-field stands, and went on to win the MVP award.

"He has that aura of dramatics. If there isn't a spotlight turned on, you don't want to see him. But when it is, look out," Raines said.

Jackson missed the entire 1992 season. He came back this year with an artificial left hip and, in the face of most everyone saying it could not be done, and played baseball again.

This week, Jackson, the first player to be an All-Star in the NFL and the majors, hopes to join Deion Sanders as athletes to play in the postseason in both sports.

White Sox manager Gene Lamont has not said how much Jackson will be used. Jackson and George Bell split time as the designated hitter but, with Frank Thomas nursing a sore arm, Thomas might get the job early in the series.

Jackson went 11-for-36 with three doubles and three home runs in his last 11 games. Bell finished in an 0-for-26 slump.

"I'm still not sure what I'll do," Lamont said Monday.

At least Lamont knows Jackson can hit, and that he always seems to make a big impact in big games.

He hit a home run on his first swing of the regular season. He hit a 472-foot home run, the longest of the season for the White Sox. He hit a three-run homer last week in the game that clinched the AL West.

"A lot of people might've thought Frank Thomas would hit the home run that would win it, but not me," Raines said.

"There isn't anything that he could do that would amaze me," he said. "Well, if he hit .350 and struck out only five times, that would amaze me."

Jackson batted just .232 this year, dropping his career average to .247 and struck out 106 times in 284 at-bats. The hip problems also robbed him of his speed — he was 0-for-2 in steal attempts this year and hit no triples.

The injury also took away a lot of the strength he got from the lower half of his body. He throws without stepping much, and he swings mostly with his arms.

Even so, he hit 16 homers and drove in 45 runs. It was when he came through, especially in the stretch when the White Sox were challenged, that most impressed his teammates.

His RBI single won a 1-0 game on Sept. 13. His home run won another 1-0 decision four days later. Then on Spet. 20, his two-run, pinch-homer with two outs in the ninth tied a game that Chicago eventually won 3-2.

"There's a mystique about Bo, that he can do almost anything," teammate Steve Sax said. "We believe it, because we've seen it."

JAYS: Molitor a key Toronto cog

(From 1C)

Minnesota.

"I always had respect for him," Alomar said. "He's 37 but he still does things like he's 25." said Alomar.

"I think I learned from both Molitor and Alomar, watching them play and learning what they are thinking about in different situations and how they go about hitting certain pitches," Olerud said. "Molitor helped me a lot from just watching him and trying to pick up things."

Molitor played with Milwaukee's home-run hitting "Harvey's Wallbangers" in the 1982 World Series and left the Brewers after last season for a fat free agent contract.

Now he finds himself in the middle of baseball's best offensive lineup, where in addition to Olerud and Alomar, pitchers like Chicago's Game 1 starter, Jack McDowell, must also face Rickey Henderson, Joe Carter, Devon White and Tony Fernandez.

"This team spread out the success and you can go out and relax and not try to do more than you're capable of, just be part of a machine rather than the one who is making it go," Molitor said.

"It makes it easier for everybody. When you have this many players with this type of talent, I think everybody was able to feed off each other and encourage each other and that's why so many players were able to have such great offensive years."

Molitor, whose early career was pagued by injuries, has been healthy for three straight seasons. And being the designated hitter, he's not called upon often to play the field, reducing the injury risk.

"Just being on a club with a guy like Molitor certainly helps a lot of other players," Gaston said. "He leads by example. He's not a rah-rah guy. He's just a quiet person who goes out and does his job."

NL: Smoltz in bullpen for Phillies

(From 1C)

he's 3-1 with a 2.96 ERA in league playoffs and 0-1 with a 3.60 ERA in four World Series starts.

"I'm going to relax today and not start thinking about the Phillies until Tuesday."

The Braves avoided a one-game NL West playoff with San Francisco by beating Colorado 5-3 Sunday before the Giants lost 12-1 to Los Angeles. Atlanta and San Francisco had entered the final game of the regular season tied for the division title.

The Braves got a day off Monday and will leave for Philadelphia Tuesday, arriving in time for a late-afternoon workout at Veterans Stadium.

Tom Glavine, who won his 22nd game Sunday, thinks the Braves have the edge because of their starting foursome — Avery, Greg Maddux, John Smoltz and himself. They have a combined 75-33 record.

"When push comes to shove, I think that gives us a little advantage," he said.

In Game 2 Thursday, Maddux (20-10) will face Tommy Greene (16-4). After a day off Friday, the series resumes at Atlanta Saturday with Glavine (22-7) facing Terry Mulholland (12-9). On Sunday, Smoltz (15-11) is scheduled to oppose Danny Jackson (12-11).

Smoltz, who would have pitched the playoff game against the Giants Monday night, was pushed back to Game 4 after allowing five earned runs in each of his last two starts.

Manager Bobby Cox said Smoltz will be used in the bullpen the first two games.

Stars shine in Dallas

Associated Press

The NHL season opens Tuesday night with a debut at Dallas and a renewal of rivalries at Philadelphia and New York.

The eyes of Texas will be on the transplanted Dallas Stars as they play the Detroit Red Wings in their first official NHL game at Reunion Arena.

If a recent exhibition game is any barometer, the Stars probably will fill the building — 15,452 showed up for a preseason contest against the Los Angeles Kings. Reunion Arena seats 16,814.

The most interested person in the arena will be Norm Green, who moved his Minnesota North Stars to Dallas because of what he claimed was non-support in the Minneapolis area. Green's move inspired "Norm Greed" T-shirts in Minneapolis and the North Stars' owner was called a "carpetbagger."

The NHL wasn't happy to see one of its teams leave the northern exposure of Minneapolis, but the move to Dallas suited the league in another way.

The NHL hopes to make hockey more than just a regional sport. Of the most five recent expansion teams, four have been in Sunbelt areas: the San Jose Sharks and Anaheim Mighty Ducks in California and the Tampa Bay Lightning and Florida Panthers in Florida. With Dallas joining the group, which also includes the Los Angeles Kings, the NHL now features six teams in warm-weather sites.

Meanwhile, two traditional rivalries will be among the four games opening the season, with Boston at the New York Rangers and the Pittsburgh Penguins at the Philadelphia Flyers. The New York Islanders play at Calgary in the other opening night game.

The Rangers and Bruins, two of the league's original six teams, have played 556 times in their storied rivalry with Boston holding a 254-209-93 advantage.

The Flyers and Penguins are meeting for the 163rd time in a rivalry that compares in intensity, if not in longevity, to the Bruins and Rangers. The Flyers lead the series 91-48-23, but the Penguins have dominated in the past two years with a 10-1-3 record.

Mario Lemieux, beset with back problems, won't be in uniform for the Penguins Tuesday night. But Eric Lindros will play for Philadelphia. He's the franchise player for a rebuilding Flyers team bent on restoring its glory years of the '70s and '80s.

The Rangers, meanwhile, would like to restore some dignity to their franchise which hasn't won the Stanley Cup since 1940.

Enter Mike Keenan, the team's newest coach.

If if were only 1994

NEW YORK (AP) — If this were next year, the AL playoffs would open tonight with the Chicago White Sox at the New York Yankees and the Toronto Blue Jays playing the Texas Rangers.

In the NL, San Francisco would be at Philadelphia and St. Louis would play Atlanta in the other series.

Both series would be best-of-5, with two games in the first city, a day off and three games — if necessary — in the second city. The rules for determining the site of the second series haven't been written.

Baseball owners — with the exception of George W. Bush of Texas — say three-round, eight-team playoffs will bring more excitement and attendance to the final weeks. Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council, said Monday that the new system will ensure that teams such as San Francisco, which finished one game behind Atlanta, will reach the postseason.

"Any team that wins 103 games derserves to be in the playoffs," Selig said in Milwaukee. "There are other divisions you would have had exciting races to the end. I couldn't help but feel sadness for a team that won 103 games and didn't go to the playoffs."

While the San Francisco Giants and Atlanta Braves were the 10th pair of teams to start the last day of the season tied for first — only the second since 1967 — everything would have been decided by Saturday if the new system were in place.

The Cardinals would have clinched the NL Central with a 5-4, 10-inning victory over the Phillies on Saturday, and the Yankees would have wrapped up the AL's wild-card berth Friday night with a 9-6 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The Braves (104-58) would have won the NL East by seven games over the Phillies (97-65). St. Louis (87-75) would have had a two-game margin over Houston and a three-game advantage over Chicago (84-78) in the Central. San Francisco (103-58) would have won the West by 22 games over the Dodgers (81-81).

Philadelphia and Montreal (94-68) would have been the only teams competing for the NL wild card.

In the AL, Toronto (95-67) would have won the East by seven games over the Yankees (88-74). Chicago (94-68) would have won the Central by 10 games over Kansas City (84-78), and Texas (86-76) would have finished four games ahead of Seattle (82-80) in the West.

Six teams would have been competing for the wild-card spot in the final week.

Texas running back Phil Brown gains 48 yards as Rice's Bobby Dixon hangs on. The Longhorns have Oklahoma upcoming.

'Horns silent on streak

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Longhorns players and coaches would rather not talk about their four-game winning streak against rival Oklahoma.

The Longhorns (1-2-1), who face the tenth-ranked Sooners (4-0) in Dallas on Saturday, have haunted Oklahoma over the past four years.

The Texas victories ranged from last-minute comebacks to last year's 34-24 decision, which was not as close as the score would indicate.

Fifth-year Oklahoma coach Gary Gibbs has never beaten the Longhorns, and Texas coach John Mackovic said Monday that any discussion of the streak will only make the Sooners seethe with more intensity.

"I think the streak means more to Oklahoma than it does to us," Mackovic said. "Perhaps Gary and perhaps the Oklahoma team say, 'Well, we have lost four years in a row, we have to go win.' "

After studying Oklahoma's game films, Mackovic said he does not want the Sooners to have any more motivational tools than they already have. He added that he has instructed his players not to say anything that might inspire their rivals to the north.

"Their offense is significantly improved from a year ago," Mackovic said. "The defense is sound Oklahoma defense that is physical, fast and ferocious. Everyone would like their (own) defense to play like theirs."

Oklahoma is an early 11½-point favorite over Texas, which defeated Rice 55-38 on Saturday for its first victory after tying Syracuse and losing to Colorado and Louisville.

Saturday's game will mark the 88th meeting of the two schools in one of the country's most heated rivalries. Texas leads with a record of 51-32-4.

The Sooners rolled over Iowa State 24-7 Saturday as senior quarterback Cale Gundy became the school's career total offense leader.

Gundy completed 14 of 23 passes for 190 yards and added 34 yards rushing in 14 carries.

"They are utilizing the total skills of Cale Gundy," Mackovic said. "He is running with the ball in the option phase of their attack and he is an excellent passer. Gundy is one of those types of players who can take over a game."

Mackovic said the Longhorns offense is improving behind redshirt freshman quarterback Shea Morenz.

"We are still not playing as well defensively as we think we are capable of playing," Mackovic said.

Cowboys confident

IRVING (AP) — It's amazing what a competent placekicker can do for an NFL team.

The Dallas Cowboys, defending Super Bowl champions, are chesty, confident and a .500 team again after a stumbling 0-2 start.

The reason: They have a placekicker who can't miss.

Veteran Eddie Murray's 5-for-5 performance against Green Bay in a 36-14 victory Sunday, including long-distance kicks of 48 and 50 yards, was just what coach JImmy Johnson needed.

"Now, we get something out of drives," he said. "I decided we'd give him a game ball. Not many kickers get game balls."

It was OK with quarterback Troy Aikman.

"This game was a great emotional lift and very important to our club," Aikman said. "It gives us a lot of confidence. Everyone on this offense has to play a part. If you take something out, the whole offense suffers. Now, we have a field goal kicker who can produce."

The only criticism against Murray was he doesn't know how to tackle. One of his short kickoffs was returned for a touchdown. Robert Brooks returned a kickoff 95 yards for a touchdown and Murray let Brooks fly right by him.

"I thought he was out of bounds and I let up," Murray said. "It was a stupid mistake on my part."

"We've got to teach Eddie to at least shove the guy out of bounds," Johnson said.

The 37-year-old Murray, kicking for his fifth NFL team in a 14-year career, said he needed a big game for his new team.

Prices drop

NEW YORK — Oil futures prices traded lower Monday as the Russian crisis seemed to dissipate, alleviating fears that Russia's oil wouldn't make it to market.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $18.42 per barrel, down 21 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $16.75 a barrel.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $2.197 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 8 cents.

Asbestos seminar

The Division of Occupational health of the Texas Department of Health is holding an "Asbestos Regulatory Compliance" seminar Oct. 12 at the Midland office, 2301 N. Big Spring, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

There is no cost for the seminar and reservations can be made by calling 683-9492.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar dropped against most major currencies Monday as Boris Yeltsin triumphed over Russian hard-liners, relieving investors' fears of an interruption in Russia's transition to a market economy.

Gold prices also fell. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivery closed at $352.70 a troy ounce, off $2.30 from Friday.

In New York, the dollar finished at 105.79 yen, down from 106.00 yen on Friday.

In New York, the pound was trading at $1.5140, more expensive than $1.5050 on Friday.

Other dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.6235 German marks, down from 1.6315; 1.4190 Swiss francs, down from 1.4240; 5.6645 French francs, down from 5.6930; 1,588.00 Italian lire, down from 1,593.00; and 1.3413 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3379.

Stocks mixed

NEW YORK — The stock market ended mixed in subdued trading Monday, as the Russian crisis eased and investors turned their attentions to corporate earnings.

Smaller company stocks continued to perform better than blue-chip shares, with the Nasdaq index setting another record high.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 3.35 to 3,577.76.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost 0.01 to 461.58.

Hospital firms propose merger

Would create world's largest hospital corporation

By Bill Hendricks
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — The planned $10.25 billion merger of hospital corporations Columbia Healthcare Inc. and HCA- Hospital Corp. of America would create the biggest hospital corporation in the world, with 190 hospitals.

Dr. John Holcomb, president of the Bexar County Medical Society, said the merger is but the latest move in a fast-developing struggle for dominance in the hospital business.

The hospitals — and their employees — will become casualties in what Holcomb said is a fast-escalating revolution in the way health care is delivered here and elsewhere across the country.

He said that, regardless of changes in health care that emerge from President Clinton's proposals for a national health-care system, employers already are forcing change by the way they select coverage for their employees.

"What we are seeing now is the rapid development of integrated health care that involves doctors' offices, (physician) group practices, large physician organizations — all integrated with hospital care and other kinds of services," Holcomb said.

Employers have begun to dictate the direction that health care is taking, he said, and they want to be able to get the full range of services from one entity at a good price.

That means survival of the fittest, Holcomb said.

There are more hospital beds than there are dollars to pay the cost of keeping them filled.

"It is clear that we (in San Antonio) are overbedded," Holcomb said. He predicted that "marginal hospitals" will close.

Columbia's president and chief executive officer, Richard Scott, said in an interview three weeks before Columbia and HCA announced their merger that his corporation has exactly that in mind for San Antonio.

At the time that Scott was talking about Columbia buying other San Antonio hospitals and then closing them, his Fort Worth-based corporation was completing a merger with Galen Health Care Inc. of Louisville, Ky., the owner of the four former Humana facilities in San Antonio.

That deal made Columbia the owner of San Antonio Regional Hospital, Metropolitan Hospital, Women's and Children's Hospital and Village Oaks Medical Center.

HCA never before has been a player in San Antonio's general hospital business.

But the end result of Columbia's two mergers is that nationwide the new ColumbiaHCA Hospital Corp. is one giant organization with 125,000 employees in 26 states.

Columbia is a relative newcomer to the investor-owned hospital scene.

But Columbia's strategy was familiar to those who watched HCA grow into one of the biggest operators of hospitals in the world.

Folger's unveils new look

Staff report

This weekend marked the grand reopening of Folger's Superstore, 25 Village Circle.

The electronics, appliance and sleep store recently completed a major six-month renovation project that saw both the exterior and interior of the building remodeled and expanded.

The building was expanded through enclosing some areas, giving the store a total of between 28,000 and 29,000 square feet.

Owner Van Folger said the project expanded the total space the retailer had and allowed for more televisions, audio equipment, car stereos, camcorders, videocassette recorders, computers, appliances and a vastly expanded sleep center.

"We wanted to provide for customers what research said they wanted, which was more of everything and more to choose from," Folger explained.

He added that he has taken advantage of the new physical appearance of the store to implement a new dedication to total customer satisfaction. "We now have a new creed, if you will, a 30-day seal of satisfaction. You must be 100 percent satisfied with your purchase, including the price you pay for it, or we'll refund it, with no questions and no hassle."

Manufacturers display variety of baby wares

■ Over 350 companies hit Dallas to display a vareity of baby-oriented products.

By Susan Hightower
AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Pacifier thermometers, stationary baby "walkers" and a pail that twists soiled diapers into supposedly odor-free packets were among the new products on display Monday at the International Juvenile Products Show.

More than 350 companies brought their baby wares to Dallas for the 24th annual show, sponsored by the Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association Inc.

One of 12 winners of the show's award for the most inventive new products was the Diaper Genie, made by Mondial Industries Ltd. of Macedonia, Ohio.

To use the 18-inch-high receptacle, a diaper changer shoves a dirty diaper in the top and twists the cap to seal the diaper in scented plastic film. The container holds up to 20 diapers squeezed into 4-inch rolls connected like sausage links.

Mondial president John Hall said more than 300,000 Diaper Genies, which were invented in England and cost around $30, have been sold in the United States since they went on the market in April.

"We knew that there was a need for an odor-free, germ-free disposal," Hall said.

Other products catching the buyers' eyes include alternatives to baby walkers from two companies.

Evenflo Juvenile Furniture Co. Inc. and Summer Infant Products Inc. have created playseats with trays and toys that allow babies to spin, bounce and stand. However, they do not have wheels on the bottom, so the chairs stay in one place.

"Because of the publicity against walkers, we looked to design a product as an alternative to a walker," said George Harris, president of Piqua, Ohio-based Evenflo Juvenile Furniture.

The rocking Exersaucer, which also won a show award and is expected to be in stores in February, should sell for around $60 or $70, Harris said.

"I think even a lot of mothers who are using walkers, they do it with a sense of guilt because there's really nowhere else you can sit your baby to get some exercise," said Doris Loehning, market development coordinator for Cumberland.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Ask broker if a stock has any market value

By Bill Doyle

Q: About nine years ago, I bought 104 shares of common stock and 67 shares of preferred stock in savings bank. That bank subsequently went out of business.

Doyle

I have tried to find out if the stock is worthless. When I asked at a commercial bank, I was told no one there could tell me if the stock is worthless or not. The woman I spoke to said I would have to go to a broker to check that out.

I don't know anything about stock and I am afraid a broker would charge me a large sum of money for something that is not worth it.

What do you advise?

A: Follow the suggestion you received from the banker. Phone a securities brokerage firm -- or several, if you are so inclined -- and ask if the stock can be sold and at what price.

If the answer is that the shares have no market value, they indeed are worthless. In that case, you can report the amount you paid for the stock as a capital loss on your income tax.

Capital losses can be used to offset capital gains. If you have no capital gains, $3,000 of your capital loss can be used to offset ordinary income and the rest carried over and used in future years. Either way, you save tax dollars.

Here's a kicker. A capital loss for worthless stock is supposed to be reported on your income tax return filed for the year in which the stock lost all market value. If that happened in a previous year, you can file amended return 1040X. With worthless securities, amended returns can be filed for seven years.

Just in case the Internal Revenue Service questions your worthless stock capital loss, you would be wise to obtain a letter from a brokerage firm stating there is no bid in any recognized market for the stock.

If it turns out the stock does have some market value, you will have to sell to establish a capital loss, which will be the difference between your purchase price and the proceeds from the sale.

Q: What is a "when issued" security?

A: As the words indicate, it is a stock, bond or other security that has been authorized but not yet issued. Usually, it will be issued in a few weeks to the people who buy it or are otherwise entitled to receive it.

"When issued" is short for "when, as and if issued." Even though the security has not yet been issued, it can be bought and sold in the marketplace.

The initials WI appear on when issued securities in newspaper tables.

Q: Are dividends paid on when issued stocks?

A: Technically, dividends can be paid on those stocks, because stocks represents shares of corporate ownership and all shares are entitled to the dividends declared.

In practice, dividends are not paid on when issued shares. That's because of the short period of time during which those shares are on a when issued basis.

Q: What is the difference between the U.S. federal budget deficit and the U.S. Trade deficit?

A: They are two very different things.

The budget deficit is the amount of money our federal government spends in excess of the money it takes in. Do not confuse the budget deficit with the national debt, which is the total of accumulated budget deficits over the years. As long as we have federal budget deficits, the national debt will keep growing.

The U.S. trade deficit, on the other hand, is the difference between the value of goods and services this country sells in foreign nations and the value of goods and services we import. That calculation is done monthly and annually.

CONGRATULATIONS!

Warren, Indiana
and Southern Wells School Community winners of the
1993 Midland Community Spirit Award

These communities were chosen as the 1993 Midland Community Spirit Award winners from among 130 entries from all over the United States, Nova Scotia and Scotland.

After a fire destroyed the Southern Wells elementary school last December, Warren organizations vacated an outdated school building and provided on-going support while Southern Wells volunteers donated labor and materials to bring the building up to code during the Christmas holidays.

The Midland Community Spirit Award honors communities for their unselfish contributions to a worthy cause that is beyond ordinary community response and inspires people to come together.

The award will be presented in a brief ceremony as part of the Midland Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting and Luncheon, 11:30 a.m., Tuesday, October 5 at Midland Center.

Our thanks to the Sponsors of the 1993 Community Spirit Award
