House Votes Less Tax On Oil Profits

Basic Rate Cut To 60 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved a weakened "windfall profits" tax, Thursday, agreeing with Republican and oil-state lawmakers that the best way to spur domestic oil production is to leave more money with the oil companies.

However, the weaker tax, sponsored by oil-state Reps. W. Henson Moore, R-La., and James R. Jones, D-Okla., is still stronger than the one President Carter originally proposed and then challenged Congress to toughen.

The House approved the Moore-Jones substitute by a 236-to-183 vote, with 90 Democrats — many from oil-producing states — joining with 146 Republicans. A total of 173 Democrats and 10 Republicans opposed the weakening amendment.

Defeat For Leadership

The vote was a stinging defeat for Democratic leaders, who had urged approval of a tougher "windfall profits" tax, arguing that Thursday's steep increase in world oil prices already will pour billions of dollars more into oil company coffers.

The House then sent the amended bill to the Senate on a voice vote. The tax is expected to face more attempts to weaken it when it goes to the Senate Finance Committee, of which oil-state Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., is chairman.

The Moore-Jones substitute would cut the tax's basic rate from the 70 percent proposed by the House Ways and Means Committee to 60 percent. Carter had proposed a 50 percent levy

The change cuts the amount to be reclaimed from oil company profits resulting from oil-price decontrol by at least $5.9 billion over five years, according to congressional estimates.

Moore and Jones said their proposal would boost domestic oil production by giving the oil companies a greater incentive to search for new oil supplies.

Already Enough

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said that with the OPEC price hike, the oil companies already will get enough money to encourage their search for oil.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised the price for crude oil to between $18 and $23.50 a barrel Thursday. The base price had been $14.55 a barrel.

Ullman said that with the OPEC price hike and with no "windfall" tax, the oil companies would more than double their after-tax profits, from $15 billion a year to $32 billion. He said the Ways and Means Committee's bill would have left the oil companies $22 billion in net profits.

Figures were not available on comparable profit figures under the Moore-Jones substitute.

Carter's decision to phase out controls on domestic oil prices, which began June 1, will permit the price of U.S. crude oil to rise to world levels by 1981 and allow U.S. producers to benefit from the higher oil prices.

Special Energy Fund

The "windfall" tax bill is designed to funnel some of the billions of dollars resulting from decontrol into a special energy fund that would help pay for research on alternative fuels, mass transit and the higher fuel bills of low-income Americans.

According to a Treasury Department estimate, prepared before the OPEC price hike, oil companies will reap $94 billion in additional gross revenues from decontrol between 1980 and 1984. The committee's bill was expected to reclaim $29.1 billion of that money over the five-year period.

Carter's original proposal would have raised $21.2 billion over five years, according to congressional estimates.

However, congressional tax experts said that, based on the new OPEC price increases, the committee's tax would have raised $44 billion over five years and Carter's bill would have netted $32.5 billion. The amount raised by the Moore-Jones substitute would fall in between those two figures.

Moore argued that the Carter proposal had struck a balance between encouraging increased oil production and reclaiming some of the higher oil company profits.

"The Ways and Means Committee bill destroyed that balance," Moore said. He added that his substitute would restore the balance by giving more money to the oil companies to encourage more drilling.

Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, disputed the need to give the oil companies more profits. "They have enough profits to search all over the moon (for oil)," Vanik said.

Gross revenues from oil decontrol represent the extra money consumers will pay to the oil companies because of Carter's decision to decontrol domestic oil prices.

Meanwhile, two major fuel suppliers told Congress that consumers should brace for home heating oil prices approaching $1 a gallon this winter and hope for mild weather.

Inflation Nips At Water Bonds

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

INFLATION, compounded by courtroom challenges, has reduced the buying power of water improvement bonds approved by voters in 1977 by $3.2 million, the Lubbock City Council learned Thursday.

City Manager Larry Cunningham told the council $10.3 million in water bonds will remain unsold following a planned August bond sale. However, new cost estimates show those remaining water projects will cost $13.5 million to complete.

More than $6 million in water improvement bonds are included in a scheduled Aug. 21 sale, but Cunningham said those bonds also will fall short of financing all planned projects.

For that reason, Cunningham recommended the council proceed with one of the water projects with funds from increased water rates.

Water rates were increased to pay off water improvement bonds, but litigation has prevented the sale of all but $400,000 in water bonds in the past two years. The money has been placed in a reserve fund in anticipation of the bond sales.

The council approved Cunningham's recommendation that bids be taken for a water line along 82nd Street from University Avenue to Quaker Avenue at a cost of between $450,000 to $475,000.

The line should increase the amount of water available to Southwest Lubbock residents, but will do nothing to improve the water pressure.

Pressure problems will be corrected with construction of a pump station and reservoir at 82nd Street and Memphis Avenue. The $2 million construction cost is to be financed from bonds sold in August.

However, there are serious questions whether the August bond sale will occur.

When the Lubbock Property Owners Association files its petitions with the city calling for a tax limitation election, the city may lose its bond rating. That would make a bond sale impossible, at least until next spring, Cunningham has said.

The council officially received a cost estimate on construction of two reservoirs 60 miles southeast of Lubbock as the city's thrid major water source.

109 Million Cost Seen

However, after being told the reservoirs would cost $109 million if built today, the council took no action on a plan to finance the project.

The council plans to meet with financial adviser Joe Smith of First Southwest Company next month to discuss recently enacted state legislation which permits cities to create non-profit corporations to finance mortgage loans for low and moderate income persons.

Finance Director Sterling Miller said such a corporation, if created in Lubbock, could provide lending institutions will up to $26.4 million annually based on the formula set in the legislation. If the loans were being made now, Miller said they would carry 8 1/2 percent interest rates.

First Southwest Company would absorb all cost of a feasiblity study on the concept if it proved infeasible, Miller said.

"The city incurs absolutely no liability," he stressed.

Gasohol Symposium Proposed

Councilman Bill McAlister suggested a symposium be held in Lubbock sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, Texas Tech University and possibly the city to stimulate gasohol production in this area.

Lubbock is in a "strategic position" to be a leader in the production of the gasoline and alcohol mixture because of its proximity to agricultural interests and refining capacity.

"We need to get the experts out here and let them talk," McAlister said, noting not many facts are available on the production of gasohol.

If the federal government sees this area as valuable both for the production of food and energy, McAlister said water importation has a much better chance of becoming a reality.

Also at the meeting, council members set a July 26 hearing at 1:30 p.m. on a request by Norton Baker and Leroy Elmore to annex a tract of land between Indiana Avenue and University Avenue from 107th Street to 114th Street.

The annexation request, made more

Tech School Of Nursing Plan Backed

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE LOCAL Texas Nurses Association is heading a petition drive to request that funding for the Texas Tech University School of Nursing be considered in a special session of the Texas Legislature.

Although the House and Senate approved funds for the Tech school for the 1980-81 biennium, Gov. Bill Clements used his line item veto power to eliminate the nursing school budget.

"We were shocked and dismaged to learn of the veto," said Sherry Whiteaker, president of District 18 of TNA. "It is our opinion that Gov. Clements did not have benefit of sufficient facts and input regarding nursing and the needs and desires of the citizens of this region."

Others Provide Support

Several individuals and representatives of organizations spoke in favor of the petition at a meeting Thursday called by the local TNA.

Bill Tinney, speaking on behalf of three organizations, said, "We commend the governor on his good intentions to cut the (state) budget. But we cannot depend on schools of nursing in other areas of the state. Good judgment tells us they won't migrate to our area." Tinney is president of the South Plains Perinatal Association, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Education Committee and a representative of the March of Dimes.

Statistics Quoted

Miss Whiteaker cited statistics showing that most nurses are employed within a 46 mile radius of the university from which they graduated. The only baccalaureate degree nursing program in the area is at West Texas State University in Canyon.

The Tech School of Nursing, if funded, would offer a multiple entry program so that Licensed Vocational Nurses and others with nursing training could enter and receive credit for their previous training.

Debbie Chaney, an LVN, told the audience at Thursday's meeting, "I want and need to further my education." For

Animal Rabies Rages In Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas has an animal rabies epidemic that could easily spread the fatal disease to people, state and local health officials heard Thursday.

"With as many cases as we have in Texas, unless we can get ahead of the problem, I'm almost certain we're going to have cases in humans," Dr. Raymond Moore, state health commissioner, told a meeting of public health officers, private physicians and veterinarians.

"The diagosis of rabies in humans is usually tantamount to the death sentence," Moore warned.

Only Two Deaths

Only two Texas residents have died of rabies in the last 20 years, said Dr. Jerome Greenberg, deputy health commissioner.

However, two children from the Eagle Pass-Piedras Negras, Mexico, area recently became infected with the disease. Mexican officials report that a girl died of rabies there, and an 8-year-old Mexican boy, who resides in Eagle Pass, is in critical condition at a San Antonio hospital with the disease.

Rabies is a viral disease affecting the central nervous system and is usually transmitted through a diseased animal's saliva.

Treatment for human victims includes a painful series of 21 abdominal shots that costs between $247 to $390. The state provides free treatment for indigent victims.

However, the shots are not 100 percent effective, said Dr. Charles Webb, head of the health department's communicable disease division.

The state health department has recorded 567 animal rabies cases this year, compared to 563 for all of 1978. Texas accounts for one-fourth of all reported cases this year.

Mostly Skunks

This year's statistics break down to 450 skunks, or 80 percent; 44 dogs; 24 cattle; 16 cats; 12 bats; 9 horses; 7 foxes; and 5 raccoons.

Rabies cases are confirmed by the state health laboratory before entering the record books. Heads of suspected animals are shipped to the Austin lab, where brain tissue is tested for the virus.

Despite the alarming numbers of rabid skunks, control of wild animals is considered impractical. As of Sept. 1, it will be illegal or sell skunks for pets, although individuals may own them.

Vaccinated pets provide the best buffer between humans and the highly contagious virus, Moore added.

Despite mass immunization clinics, El Paso still has a rabid dog problem, said Dr. John Bradley, regional health officer in El Paso.

"We've just about saturated our domestic animals (with vaccine) but that's not our problem," Bradley said. "Canine rabies is rampant along the entire U.S.-Mexican border. We've picked up dogs in the river carrying rabies, and they're traveling north."

The state health department gained additional power to quarantine suspected animals under a law that takes effect Jan. 1, 1980. Many unincorporated areas have no authority to take a suspect animal from its owner for an observation period.

The law also will require pet owners to vaccinate their dogs or cats before the animals are four months old.

State law does not require annual pet vaccinations, as often is done by local communities. However, state officials said they would try to develop a state guideline.

Daughter Locked Up 20 Years

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A 33-year-old woman, who told police she spent two decades as a beaten and hungry captive in her mother's home, was found bound in the back seat of a car, police said Thursday.

The woman's mother, Ethel Mae Mottinger, 61, of Long Beach, was arrested for investigation of suspicion of false imprisonment and held on $1,000 bond.

Charlotte Elaine Mottinger went to stay with relatives after being freed by police, Wednesday night, officers said.

Miss Mottinger was found after officers Tom Hibbison and Allan Huff, responding to a report of a possible kidnapping, stopped Mrs. Mottinger's car in Long Beach about 8:20 p.m.

Inside were two small children — Mrs. Mottinger's niece and nephew — and, in the back seat, what appeared to be a teen-ager bound hand and foot. The woman appeared to be about 14, officers said, but told police she was 33.

The officers said that after they untied Miss Mottinger she asked repeatedly: "You're not going to drown me, are you?" Her mother, the officers said, told her: "Don't talk to them."

Miss Mottinger later told police her mother had warned that if she ever talked to police, they would beat her and drown her.

The woman told police her ordeal began when she was 13, after her father's death. She said she spent days tied up in a bathroom without food and was beaten with electrical cords, a broom, a belt and at least once with a soda pop bottle, the police report said. And she claimed she was fed mostly a concoction of rice, corn, bread and water her mother called "slop," police reported.

The police report quoted Miss Mottinger as saying: "I had been a bad girl. I stole some bread because I was hungry. I had not eaten for three days. About a month ago, I stole a candy bar. That time I was left tied in the bathroom for 10 days."

The police report said Mrs. Mottinger told officers her daughter was retarded and diabetic, and that she had to be punished and restrained to keep her from stealing, especially from taking sweets which would aggravate diabetes.

Police said Miss Mottinger was treated at St. Mary's Medical Center a year ago, and records indicate she was neither retarded nor diabetic.

DEATH PENALTY OKAYED

BOSTON (AP) — With hardly any dissent, the Massachusetts House has given final approval to a bill renewing capital punishment. The death penalty bill cleared the lower chamber Thursday. Only one lawmaker rose to oppose it after it was brought up bebore a near-empty chamber.

End Of School Term Hikes Jobless Rate

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A FLOOD of vacationing students caused Lubbock's unemployment rate to rise .7 percent during May, and further increases are expected through July.

The Texas Employment Commission's Labor Market Review shows that unemployment here jumped from 3,210 or 3.1 percent to 3,820 or 3.8 percent between Mid-April and mid-May.

The increase is not as sharp as TEC officials had anticipated and it still is better than the 4.2 percent Texas average and well below the 5.2 percent rate nationwide.

Approximately 6,000 students now are looking for jobs, said Jerry Boudreau, TEC office statistician. This number does not include the graduates who are looking for permanent employment.

The rise in the unemployment rate is "the seasonal effect of the school term ending," he said. "June (unemployment figures) will be even higher."

Total resident employment slipped for the second consecutive month to 97,360 individuals, according to the report.

As the summer job market tightens and competition becomes stiffer, even more people will be jobless in June, Boudreau said.

This number is expected to sharply decline in July, he added, because by that time "a lot (of people) will have decided they didn't need a job after all."

However, the TEC anticipates Lubbock's unemployment rate will rise to 4.4 percent in August, with 4,600 workers without jobs.

Employment trends for the month of May showed contract construction, finance, insurance and real estate employers adding to their work force. Construction contracters registered a 400-worker increase and 30 new employees were hired among the other groups.

Good weather and the return of construction workers idled by the labor dispute during April were responsible for the great increase.

"The bulk of construction happens during the fair weather months," Boudreau said. "Accordingly, it goes up every year as regular as clockwork.

"It's a little late this year because of the strikes during April," he noted. "It's not up to plateau at this time, but they're not in bad shape."

Settlement of the trucking strike in April also was responsible for employment gains in transportation during May.

Manufacturing was the only industrial group to show a decline in comparison to levels a year ago. One of the main factors for the decline was the closing of

Russian Immigrant Denied Citizenship

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court ruled Thursday that the U.S. citizenship of Russian immigrant Feodor Federenko must be revoked because he lied about serving in a Nazi death camp when he entered this nation.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals returned the case to U.S. District Judge Norman C. Roettger J. at Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

It was not immediately known whether the 3-0 ruling would be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The appeals court said the overriding factor was that Federenko, 72, "was guilty of making a misrepresentation and concealment of material facts" when he won a visa for immigration to the United States in 1949.

When Federenko, now living in Miami, entered the country, he said he had spent World War II as a farmer and factory worker. In fact, it was learned later, he served as an armed German army guard at Treblinka, in Poland, where Jews were gassed under the Nazis' extermination plan.

L.A. Declares Air Pollution Alert

By the Associated Press

Midday temperatures reached 110 degrees in the Southern California desert and 89 in downtown Los Angeles on Thursday as the area declared an air pollution alert.

A stagnant air mass bovering over the Los Angeles metropolitan area prevented cooler sea air from sweeping pollutants out of the 6,400-square-mile basin.

Elsewhere, up to five inches of rain fell in southeast Nebraska. Rain also was recorded in the Mississippi Valley, the Gulf Coast, Kentucky, New York and New England.

There were clouds over the Pacific coast but otherwise skies were sunny.

Friday's forecast calls for showers and thundershowers for the Ohio Valley, and for the Atlantic Coast from Virginia to Delaware. The Great Lakes, the Tennessee Valley, Florida and Montana will also get rain. Skies elsewhere will be mostly sunny.

Readings will be seasonably mild along the Atlantic Coast. It will be hot in Southern California's inland regions, and in Nevada, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico, Texas and Montana. The rest of the nation will be warm.

Midafternoon temperatures around the nation ranged from a low of 53 at Monterey and Arcata, Calif., to a high of 110 at Needles, Calif.

Following were some early afternoon weather conditions in some key cities around the nation:

Eastern U.S. — Atlanta 81 fair; Boston 78 cloudy; Buffalo 66 partly cloudy Caribou 75 cloudy; Charleston, S.C. 81 partly cloudy; Cincinnati 80 hazy; Cleveland 74 hazy; Detroit 78 fair; Indianapolis 84 fair; Knoxville 80 fair; Miami 88 partly cloudy; Nashville 81 partly cloudy; New York 72 partly cloudy; Philadelphia 77 partly cloudy; Pittsburgh 74 hazy; Richmond 80 hazy; Washington 80 fair.

Central U.S. — Bismarck 79 fair; Chicago 78 hazy; Denver not available; Des Moines 72 foggy; Fort Worth 93 fair; Kansas City not available; Mpls-St. Paul 71 cloudy; New Orleans 89 hazy; St. Louis not available.

Western U.S. — Los Angeles 78 fair; Phoenix 100 partly cloudy; Salt Lake City 90 fair; San Diego 76 fair; San Francisco 54 cloudy; Seattle 68 fair.

Canada — Montreal 73 partly cloudy; Toronto 70 hazy.

Hot Temperatures, Sunny Skies Forecast

Hot temperatures and sunny skies should continue to send many Lubbock area residents to the refuge of air conditioned homes and offices through Tuesday.

Forecasters predict the mercury will continue to soar into the middle 90s in the afternoons through the weekend, with more of the same expected Monday and Tuesday.

Buildings where employees already are enduring uncomfortably warm working conditions will get little chance to cool at nights as the mercury is expected to fall only to 70. Many thermostats have been kept slightly higher this summer in an effort to cut down fuel consumption and costs.

Those seeking outdoor recreation may find some relief during the weekend as southwesterly winds provide breezes at 10 to 15 mph.

Continued warm weather also is expected to continue throughout the rest of the state with possible isolated thundershowers in the Panhandle and northeast Texas.

Buy Correct Sun Lotion For Body

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's sunshine season and the Food and Drug Administraton urges you to remember the Sun Protection Factor when shopping for sunscreen lotions or creams.

The factor is listed on many of these products as a number that tells you how much protection you will get by using the lotion or cream. Here's a rundown of what the numbers mean:

—SPF 2-4: For persons who seldom burn and who tan well.

—SPF 4-6: For persons who need extra protection from sunburn.

—SPF 8-15: For maximum protection with little tanning.

—SPF over 15: An ultra rating that permits no tanning. This is for people who always burn in the sun.

Smothering Smog Blankets Southern California Area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ten million Southern Californians sweltered under a blanket of hot, choking smog Thursday as automobile pollutants — blamed in part on the high cost of gasoline — mixed with smoke from brushfires and other airborne wastes in stagnant air.

At midday, temperatures had reached 110 degrees in the desert and 89 degrees in downtown Los Angeles, where a brown, noxious pall hung over the area.

"If everything develops as we fear, we could pass yesterday's values," said Jim Birakos, a spokesman for the Air Quality Management District, which has responsibility for air quality in a 6,400 square mile area. "It could not only be the worst pollution day of the year, but the worst of the 1970s."

Almost 2,800 businesses, industries and government agencies in the four-county area were ordered to begin anti-pollution measures. But spot checks for violations were to be conducted at only 400 to 500 sites because of inadequate staff.

Birakos said the smog levels in Los Angeles, Riverside, San Bernardino and Orange counties were partly due to motorists who "poison" their cars' catalytic converters with cheaper, leaded fuel.

"People are using regular gas instead of unleaded because it's cheaper," he said. "With those poisoned catalytic converters, it's like instant smog coming out."

In addition, Birakos said, aging converters, no longer able to cut pollution, were adding to the problem.

Fires in Riverside, San Bernardino, San Diego and Los Angeles counties had blackened 8,300 acres by early Thursday and destroyed several buildings. Six farm animals were killed in one fire Wednesday, and five firemen were injured in another.

The stagnant air was the result of a high pressure system sitting over the metropolitan area. The system was blocking relief by a flow of cooler sea air, said the National Weather Service.

Officials of the Air Quality Management District said second-stage smog alerts were issued in eight areas and less-severe first-stage alerts were in effect in 20 areas of the four-county South Coast Air Basin.

The second-stage alert imposed restrictions on 2,750 government, business and industrial agencies beginning at Wednesday midnight. The rules required that employees cut driving by 65 percent — either by using carpools or buses.

Oil refineries must reduce some emissions by 20 percent and fuel unloading or transfers at harbors is banned. Power companies are required to use natural gas instead of the dirtier fossil fuels such as oil.

A first-stage alert is a voluntary recommendation that people restrict physical activity and to drive only when necessary.

LOTS OF VISITORS

A total of 31,042 Americans arrived in Curacao by air in 1978. Curacao officials say this was an increase of 7.5 percent over 1977. Visitors from all areas numbered 158,628, up from 135,838.

Begin Defends Israeli Role In Clash With Syrian Fighters

TEL AVIV (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin Thursday rejected U.S. criticism of Israeli bombing raids in southern Lebanon and said his pilots were flying missions of "legitimate defense ... for the protection of our citizens" when they clashed with Syrian MiGs.

In Damascus, a top-ranking Syrian official told the Associated Press Syria's air force has been ordered to intercept Israeli warplanes in the future whenever they raid Palestinian targets.

In the air battle above Lebanon on Wednesday, Israel claimed its highly sohisticated U.S.-made F15 Eagles, in a world combat debut, knocked out five Soviet-made Syrian MiG-21s. The Syrian military command admitted four planes were downed and claimed to have shot down two Israeli planes.

In Washington, government sources said Syria lost six MiGs and that all Israeli planes returned unscathed.

Begin's office issued a statement defending the Israeli attacks on Palestinian positions and said the air battle erupted only after the Syrian jets challenged Israeli warplanes.

After Wednesday's air battle, the State Department expressed "serious concern" over the use of the sophisticated F15 warplane.

According to the agreement under which the United States provided the planes, Israel is bound to use them only for legitimate self-defense, and a U.S. note delivered to Begin Wednesday night termed the raids "preemptive bombing."

Israel says its frequent raids on guerrilla targets in Lebanon deter terrorist attacks on Israel. Both Israel and Syria often fly in Lebanese airspace, but Wednesday's dogfights were the first air clashes between the Mideast antagonists since 1974, in the aftermath of the 1973 war.

Begin said Israel had no wish to fight Syria's air force, but claimed that Syrian pilots took to the air to shoot down the Israeli planes.

"This will not be permitted by the Israeli air force under any circumstances," Begin said.

The prime minister received a report Thursday on the battle from Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan and the air force commander, Maj. Gen. David Ivri.

On Wednesday night, Begin was attending ceremonies at his granddaughter's school in Tel Aviv when the U.S. Embassy received the protest note from Washington. Ambassador Samuel Lewis rushed to the school to deliver the note, which called for "a more responsible attitude on the part of all involved, including the Palestinians."

The shooting war on the Israel-Lebanon border erupted again, and Israel television reported five Israelis slightly wounded. It said Soviet-made Katyusha rockets fell in northern Israel in the morning and evening, and Israeli gunners returned fire toward Palestinian positions in south Lebanon.

Authorities said the border area was quiet late Thursday night. Israel, its Lebanese Christian allies and Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon have battled with rocket and artillery fire repeatedly in recent months. Several United Nations-sponsored cease-fires have failed to keep the tense region quiet for long.

There were these other developments:

—President Hafez Assad's government hanged 14 terrorists and executed another one by firing squad in Damascus at dawn Thursday in a crackdown on the right-wing Moslem Brotherhood.

Syrian officials said the men were responsible for a wave of bombings and assassinations in the past few months aimed at the the minority Alawite Moslem sect, of which Assad is a member. Foreign observers estimated there were about 50 incidents.

—Lebanese officials resolved to seek U.S. diplomatic intervention to head off future Syrian-Israeli air clashes. The officials said Lebanese President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Salim El-Hoss would make their request through U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean and Lebanon's U.N. Ambassador Ghassan Tueini.

—Alfred L. Atherton, the United States' new ambassador to Egypt, presented his credentials to Egyptian diplomats.

The 57-year-old diplomat arrived in Cairo Wednesday to fill the post left vacant by the retirement of Hermann Eilts, who took a teaching position at Boston University.

Terrorists Executed In Syrian Crackdown

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria executed 15 terrorists at dawn Thursday as it cracked down on a right-wing Moslem sect blamed for a wave of violence that culminated in a massacre of military cadets June 16.

Informed sources say as many as 200 members of the outlawed Moslem Brotherhood have been rounded up and put on trial.

President Hafez Assad's government, which says the Brotherhood is responsible for the wave of bombings and assassinations, said 14 terrorists were hanged and the 15th was shot by a firing squad Thursday.

According to Radio Damascus, Assad commuted the death sentences of three others who cooperated with officials, and two more got prison terms.

Foreign observers say there have been about 50 incidents of violence Syria recently — aimed at the minority Alawite Moslem sect, of which Assad is a member, and not at the Sunni majority.

Most of the cadets at the military training center at Aleppo were Alawites. The attack there left 48 cadets dead and 37 wounded.

The Syrian government has said Israel, Egypt and the United States are behind the violence, which is considered the most serious domestic challenge to Assad, 49, in the nine years since a military coup brought him to power.

On Wednesday, when Syrian jets challenged Israeli jets over Lebanon, an Israeli Embassy official in Washington suggested Assad had been trying to divert attention from his troubles at home.

Diplomatic sources say it is unlikely Assad will be overthrown. Alawites mainly reside in northern Syria and account for 10 to 14 per cent of Syria's 8 million people. Diplomats said the Alawites gained influence in Syria through their positions in the army and with the help of French colonial authorities.

These same diplomats say the 49-year-old Assad has lessened Alawite dominance during his nine years in power.

AN EDITORIAL:

'...Men Are Created Unequal'

IN RULING THAT race can be a controlling factor in job opportunities, the Supreme Court did grievous damage to the concept of equality under the law.

Until the Court reverses itself—as it surely will in time—every American is vulnerable to being classed by the color of his skin rather than be judged on his individual merits and potential.

It matters not in the long run that the five justices who voted to legalize reverse discrimination were blinded to reality by their activist zeal to help racial minorities who have suffered historic discrimination.

They have, in the words of Justice William Rehnquist's stinging dissent, created "a two-edged sword that must demean one in order to prefer the other."

THE COURT VOTED, 5-2, that Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp. and a labor union did not violate the 1964 Civil Rights Act by creating a racial quota for an on-the-job training program.

A white employe, Brian Weber, had accused them of violating his civil rights by giving preferential treatment to blacks through an affirmative action program.

Even the ultra-liberal U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals agreed with Weber but the Supreme Court, feeling the heat from the greatest outpouring of unsolicited advice ever directed toward it, reversed Weber's victories at the trial court and appellate court levels.

"Had we lost this case, it was our prediction that the cause of affirmative action would have been set back 10 years," Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, exulted.

"It would be ironic indeed if a law...intended to improve the lot of those who had been excluded from the American dream for so long constituted the first legislative prohibition of all voluntary, private, race-conscious efforts to abolish traditional patterns of racial segregation," Justice William J. Brennan wrote for the Court's majority.

ALTHOUGH RULING THAT employers may offer special advantages to minority workers, the Court was careful not to "define in detail the line of demarcation between permissible and impermissible affirmative action plans."

It is along that "line of demarcation" that future battles will be fought until the Supreme Court restores Constitutional guarantees of equal treatment under the law regardless of race.

Rehnquist and Chief Justice Warren Burger, in dissent to the Weber ruling, identified the majority's error.

"There is no device more destructive to the notion of equality than the...quota," they wrote.

Congress could amend the 1964 law and thereby end the injustice of the quota system, but it is not expected to do so right away. Unfortunately, so long as the Weber decision stands, other individuals will be victimized by a well-intentioned law that creates rather than ends racial injustice.

AN EDITORIAL:

Revolution By No Means Over

THE IRANIAN revolution constitutes a serious long-term setback to U.S. interests in the Persian Gulf and significantly boosts the risk that the flow of Persian Gulf oil will be disrupted by local conflict.

James Phillips, a Heritage Foundation Congressional Fellow and foreign policy analyst warned this week in a new study:

"While the precise nature of the embryonic Iranian Islamic republic has yet to be determined, it is clear at this point that virtually any foreseeable outcome of the Iranian revolution will be a setback for international order, Western interests in the Middle East, and the U.S."

Iran under the Shah was a guarantor of stability in a volatile oil-rich region vital to the industrial West, a bulwark against Soviet influence, a dependable supplier of oil to the U.S. and Israel (albeit an OPEC hawk).

"IN CONTRAST," writes Phillips, "Iran under the Ayatollah Khomeini is currently an economically crippled, militarily weak anti-Western non-aligned state teetering on the verge of civil war."

In an alarmingly short period of time Iran has fallen from the American orbit and become a source of instability, uncertainty and insecurity in the Persian Gulf region, the single most important energy surplus area in the world.

"While Khomeini led an essentially Persian revolution against a Persian state," Phillips writes, "he inadvertently pried open a Pandora's box of local drives for ethnic separatism, political autonomy and cultural freedom among Iran's restive ethnic and tribal minorities."

PHILLIPS STRESSES in his study that Iran's revolutionary movement is not communist-led or communist-orchestrated but warns that "in a situation of flux the Kremlin could possibly capture the leadership of the revolution through the Tudeh Party, once the largest communist party in a non-communist country outside Europe."

Not only is Iran no longer willing or able to underwrite the security of other pro-Western states in the Persian Gulf, but the spillover effects of the unfinished Iranian revolution post several threats to the internal stability of other states in the region.

The current situation, Phillips concludes, already has damaged U.S. national security interests—depriving the U.S. of a dependable ally in the region, causing the U.S. to lose valuable missile monitoring facilities, and depriving the U.S. of a reliable oil supplier at a time when the long-term supply and price levels of petroleum are being determined by states which are unconcerned with the economic consequences of these decisions to the West.

M. STANTON EVANS:

There's Every Reason To Repeal Davis-Bacon

WASHINGTON—Examples of government programs that generate problems instead of curing them are legion. Few, however, are so obviously counterproductive as the Davis-Bacon Act of 1931.

This is a piece of labor legislation adopted in the trough of the Depression for the purpose of deciding wage rates on Federal construction projects.

It requires the Secretary of Labor to determine that workers on such projects are paid the "prevailing" wage of laborers in the vicinity—on its face, a seemingly innocuous idea.

In practice, however, Davis-Bacon has been a chronic source of economic trouble, and thus a perennial candidate for repeal or reformation.

Because it tries to regulate matters that would be better decided by the market, Davis-Bacon is flawed in concept. But it is even more erroneous in application.

SINCE THE Department of Labor is notoriously susceptible to the interests of the unions, the provisions of the law have been construed almost entirely to the satisfaction of organized labor.

The net effect has been to deploy the power of the government in support of the highest possible union wage rates.

The point is driven home in a recent report of the General Accounting Office, citing numerous instances in which "prevailing" wages determined by the Federal government were vastly higher than the general wages of the area—contrary to the stated intention of the law.

In one Tennessee construction project, the wages paid Federally employed construction workers were $8.75 an hour, compared to $4.25 for comparable labor in the local area.

Over-all, GAO evaluated 73 cases in which the Department of Labor had inaccurately determined "prevailing" wages, almost always in the direction of union-dictated wage rates.

Among the devices used to arrive at such determinations are such things as the "30 percent rule"—permitting wages paid this many workers in a given area to be defined as "prevailing," and stretching the area covered for comparison to connect up with heavily unionized locations.

This has the effect not only of increasing costs, but of discriminating against job-seekers in the local area—again contrary to the intent of the law.

Among those injured by this procedure are small contractors, non-union job-seekers, and minority workers priced out of the market.

ALL OF which has prompted Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah and Rep. Thomas Hagedorn, R-Minn., to press for repeal of Davis-Bacon.

Their legislation to this effect (S. 29, H.R. 1900)—which has attracted eight co-sponsors in the Senate and more than 80 in the House—is simplicity itself, declaring the law of 1931, and some 77 other legal provisos related to it, null and void.

And while it is doubtful at this point whether sufficient sentiment exists for outright repeal, support for the proposal could help to muscle through substantial revisions in connected areas.

PRELIMINARY SKIRMISHES on such points have been inconclusive.

The Senate Armed Services Committee, at the urging of Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., adopted an amendment which would eliminate Davis-Bacon provisions from military construction projects.

On the other hand, the House of Representatives voted down a motion to do the same in poverty neighborhoods and Indian reservations.

The GAO estimates that Davis-Bacon restrictions add $715 million to government costs each year—which adds to Federal deficits and inflation. All in all, a persuasive bundle of reasons for repeal.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

'Quick-Draw' Begin

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—When Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin on June 11 lashed out against national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, he was not only reaching a new low in a generation of U.S.-Israeli relations but was showing why the State Department's hope for a tough line toward Israel may be doomed.

The prime minister's wrath was incurred by Brzezinski's statement over CBS's "Face the Nation" a day earlier praising Israeli activists trying to reverse Begin's order establishing a new settlement on the West Bank.

The prime minister responded with a handwritten statement, in both Hebrew and English, distributed to the press. Without naming Brzezinski, he accused President Carter's right-hand foreign policy man of anti-Begin "incitement" and decried "the evil path of the enemies of our people."

That enraged the State Department in Washington. "Begin is saying that anybody who is against settlements is anti-Semitic," one high official said.

Yet, Begin's quick trigger as a weakened Carter nears his re-election showdown may doom Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's efforts to save this nation's Arab alliances through a tougher line with Israel.

Indeed, Vance seems eclipsed by the vastly more politically attuned Mideast troubleshooter, Robert Strauss.

Vance prefers a get-tough U.S. policy. His argument: by saying nothing, the U.S. is fast losing control over Israeli political actions in the Mideast after Camp David.

Yet, to advance the "peace process" beyond the separate Egyptian-Israeli treaty, Carter must convince America's Arab friends—Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Kuwait—that the U.S., not Israel, is in control of events.

VANCE HAS considered several ways to persuade Begin that the U.S. will not let Israel dictate ridiculously narrow limits on promised autonomy for 1.3 million West Bank and Gaza Arabs.

One would be to reduce Israel's annual aid from the U.S. for each new settlement. Another calls for a Carter speech describing why pressure on Israel is essential to keep the U.S. from losing the oil ballgame.

Political aides in the White House have other interests.

So, the White House men argue that the newly installed Ambassador Strauss should be given some time. The last thing wanted by Strauss, a careful mediator, is sudden U.S. pressure on Begin and his hard-line colleague, agriculture minister Ariel Sharon.

THE COUNSEL for delay seems likely to win the debate. But delay is being used by Israel to strengthen its political muscle in the U.S.—at Jimmy Carter's expense.

Months ago, when Carter accepted the long-held U.S. legal edict that Jewish settlements were "illegal" and (in the President's words) an obstacle to peace, leaders in the American-Jewish community agreed with him.

Top U.S. officials dealing with the Mideast believe Begin is subtly changing that opinion, swinging influential Jewish leaders here around to the anti-Carter position.

A case in point is the highly regarded, very moderate Theodore R. Mann, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations. Mann emerged from two long closed-door sessions with Begin in Jerusalem indicating a change of heart.

CARTER, HE SAID, would sooner or later shift his position about the "illegality" of settlements and embrace them.

Mann was joined by another Jewish leader with impeccable credentials: Howard M. Squadron, president of the American Jewish Congress.

He blamed the Carter administration for "creating an unneccessary cause of friction between the U.S. and Israel" by insisting that, under international law, settlements are illegal.

This suggests the longer Carter and Vance postpone a get-tough policy with Israel, the harder it will be to carry that policy with the American-Jewish community and its friends and allies in Congress. That helps explain the Vance line that a switch in U.S. policy is needed now.

FROM BEGIN'S government comes the most compelling evidence of all. In the face of confident Egyptian statements that Israel indeed can be brought around to true autonomy for the Palestinians, Sharon on June 15 declared, "We cannot under any circumstances reach understanding with the Americans" on the West Bank.

To turn American sentiment against Carter and toward Begin, Sharon is saying that Carter really wants a Palestinian state on the West Bank; that is palpably untrue.

If the President delays a hard-line policy now, as seems probable, he is buying escalating demands in the future. Prime Minister Begin, a man who knows exactly where he stands, makes that clear.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

The Sand Fighters

MOROCCAN KING Hassan II now has a whale by the tail in what was formerly the Spanish Sahara. The Spanish Sahara was the domain of the crack, colorful, 6,000-man Spanish Foreign Legion with its picturesque Camel Corps. Straight out of "Beau Geste," it was based there exclusively.

But, unlike its French counterpart, you found few foreigners in it. Spain regarded membership in the Foreign Legion as a great personal honor.

King Hassan, before Spain relinquished the rich territory, staged a dramatic, 300,000-man peaceful march to the Spanish Sahara's border, it having been a colony. Then Madrid negotiations allowed Morocco and Mauritania to annex it.

To divide the Spanish Sahara, King Hassan signed an agreement with Mauritanian President Moktar O. Daddah. Morocco peacefully annexed 70,000 square miles and Mauritania the southern stretch.

NEVERTHELESS, THE U.S. refuses to recognize the annexations. President Carter refused to sell Morocco scores of badly needed reconnaissance planes and then failed to approve the sale of a sensor network needed in the desert to detect enemy maneuvers.

King Hassan has survived at least six attempts on his life, including the cadets' bloody foray at his summer palace near Rabat. He has newly appointed popular Senior Col. Muhammed Abroq commanding the Spanish Sahara at Tantan, the provincial capital.

The Spanish Sahara covers 102,000 square miles, and is all but impossible to patrol. Morocco has stationed about 40,000 troops there. They have successfully established an 11-mile defense periphery around Tantan and secured the rich Bu Craa phosphate mines.

BUT ALGERIAN President Chadli Benjedid is a Communist stooge and so was deceased President Houari Boumedienne. Benjedid is mosaic-close to the USSR.

For Algeria's iron ore, Benjedid, like Boumedienne before him, is intensely interested in overland railway access to the Atlantic. Eventually, Algeria plans using the same route for Algeria's oil and natural gas for trans-shipment to Europe and the U.S.

The Polisario Front caused the virtual abandonment of the section annexed by Mauritania and used the long Atlantic coastline to kidnap for ransom Canary Island fishing vessels straying into Mauritania's waters.

Last July a Mauritania coup d'etat followed attacks by the Polisario against the feable economy. This caused a unilateral cease-fire. Promptly the Polisarios turned against the Moroccans.

THE 40,000 TROOPS in the Spanish Sahara are mostly Berbers, not ordinary Arabs, with their own special, ancient dialect known as Morehob ("Blue people") because of their indigo robes.

The Soviet operates the Polisario from a Leipzig, East Germany, headquarters. There it sends trained undercover personnel to the Polisario and gives them USSR arms, chiefly East German and Czechoslovakian.

The Soviet-inspired war in what was the Spanish Sahara is a war within the worldwide wars. On an unrevealed scale, it threatens the stability of pro-Western Morocco and Mauritania alike.

JAY HARRIS:

The Lost Dream...

IT HAS LONG been felt that the real challenge to America's future would come from within.

That time may now be upon us...

Down through more than 200 years of trial and tribulation, from revolution to wars to famine, depression and political skulduggery, the nation has survived. And emerged the stronger for it.

But, before another year rolls around, the U.S. may be more severely tested in its resolve to survive than at any time in its glorious past. From the smallest village gas pump to Moscow's most deadly missile, from City Hall to the Halls of Congress, from the pulpits to the idiocy that prevails in Tehran—the Time for Truth is upon us.

THE FACTS are that the American people today are perhaps as confused and "at odds" with themselves as they have been on only three or four occasions in their history.

Beset by claims and counter-claims on the energy front, pressured by an administration bent on seeking an "accommodation" with Soviet Russia on the one hand and kowtowing to two-bit black African despots on the other, and still mired in a backwash of guilt over Vietnam and Watergate, many persons who should know better have opted to "get off" at the next stop.

But, it's now a small world and there are no more nickel bus rides. In fact, there aren't any more nickel anythings. And therein may be one of the problems.

"It's a crazy, mixed-up world in which we live today..."

THAT ASSESSMENT, from Lubbock to Bombay, sums things up as far as the average citizen is concerned, whether he's a truck driver in Alabama or a sheep herder in Afghanistan.

The individual feels he has lost control of events surrounding his life. How and why it happened may offer the only clue to regaining a "piece of the rock" of stability.

Wilbur G. Landrey, foreign news editor of The St. Petersburg Times, says "the United States has failed. Americans are failing to meet a challenge more basic and more dangerous than the Soviet menace..."

Landrey argues that America, with less than 6 percent of the world's population, is using 35 percent of its energy, and driving the nation into bankruptcy in the process. He says that Americans do not want to believe there is an energy shortage because of "national selfishness and Congressional gutlessness."

IT IS NO small indictment, and one with which we do not entirely agree.

Such bombast ignores the fact that America also uses that energy to turn out far more than its share of the food, fiber and technology so desperately sought after by the rest of the world.

And such a stance seems to say the American people can't or won't rise to meet the challenge once convinced it is for real. Which brings us to the "causes" of our dilemma, our doubts and, if not corrected, our ultimate defeat...

Quite simply, the solution lies in finding the leadership in which the people can have confidence, which can inspire the sacrifices which must be made and which can command respect abroad and at home. It is no small order, for as such notables as former Sec. of State Henry Kissinger to former Sen. Margaret Chase Smith have noted: "The people have lost their will..."

WE RECALL that the affable "Henry K.," who evokes admiration or caustic criticism, stirred a hornet's nest while in office with an observation about the West's future.

In essence, Mr. Kissinger wondered out loud, as we recall, whether the West had the will and the stamina to face up to the challenge from the Soviets and the Third World. It was more a warning than a lament. Yet, the gregarious Henry was clobbered for suggesting, in the eyes of critics, that the curtain was coming down on Democracy as we know it. It was a Truth ignored.

In fact, since Angola, the former Secretary of State has been saying things which all too many have ignored. Mr. Kissinger has been much more hawkish vis-a-vis Moscow than his critics and the Carter administration.

In a similar vein, Mrs. Smith, the Maine mainstay who made her mark by hard work rather than because she is a woman, had some things to say in U.S. News & World Report.

ASKED WHAT she meant when she said the U.S. was going through a "national crisis," Sen. Smith said:

"I mean that people have lost their will. They're so confused, and they can't get the facts. They read or listen to one story today and another completely contrary one tomorrow...

"The country simply has lost faith in its public officials—and this is important...We've weakened ourselves in our defense posture..."

Mrs. Smith says that "people should be more interested in what their government is doing—and speak up if they don't like something...Sometimes I think there is just too much affluence...And perhaps the news media is partly at fault for keeping people confused. Put you have to report what public officials are saying. Today it seems to be a constant line of rhetoric rather than action, style rather than substance."

Today, we waste time "playing games" with so-called human rights crusades, yet kowtow to military bluster from the Kremlin and religious hypocrisy in Iran. We go bananas over the President using a three-letter word to say what he would do to an opponent, yet ignore what he says on lifting trade sanctions against Rhodesia. We spend time "talking to" everyone in the world and no time "talking with" them.

Time is running out on the American Dream. For the first time in history we have leaders who tell us we must cut back on that dream and our personal and national goals. If in one, five or eight years from now, the Dream becomes a nightmare, we will have only ourselves to blame.

L. M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

THE EARLY Russians in their search for gold a little over 150 years ago dug holes in their Ural Mountains to find not gold, but a whole batch of something else, platinum. How disappointing!

Never mind, Czar Nicholas I, let's mint coins out of the stuff. Or words to that effect. They turned out exquisite platinum coins until 1845. Far more precious was that platinum than was gold. But they didn't know that. The people simply wouldn't put up with the freak coinage. The czar recalled it all.

When this country goes metric, the traditional wearer of western clothing will don a 37.85 liter hat.

Oil Trucks Roll Out Of Well-Guarded Terminals

By the Associated Press

Freshly-filled tanker trucks rolled from two North Carolina oil terminals protected by more than 900 National Guardsmen Thursday as striking independent truckers elsewhere fueled their protest with gunfire, nails and convoys.

Despite Vice President Walter Mondale's appeal for an end to the protracted shutdown, renewed highway violence and vandalism broke out in about a dozen states.

Sniper fire directed at moving rigs wounded a 14-year-old boy in Arkansas and a trucker in Maryland, but neither was seriously hurt. A trucker in Utah was struck in the eye by flying glass after a 50-pound boulder smashed his windshield.

Interstate 10 at Mobile, Ala., was transformed into a mine field of roofing nails, which flattend tires and snarled traffic on the bridge over Mobile Bay and at Port City exits. Similar incidents were reported in North Carolina and California.

While there were signs of weakening support for the independents in a few states, drivers pressed on with protest convoys and demonstrations in Chicago, Maine, Connecticut and Tennessee.

"There's no way we're giving up," said Bruce Simone of West Haven, Conn., who acted as as spokesman for about 20 truckers who drove from Branford to Hartford, the state capital.

The truckers' protest over the cost of diesel fuel, weight and length regulations and the 55 mph speed limit is in its third week. It has left millions of dollars worth of crops rotting in the field and has caused hundreds of layoffs, especially in the meat-packing industry.

Food industry spokesmen have said shortages could soon occur in supermarkets, but so far supplies appear to be adequate in most parts of the country. In the New York City area, however, meat supplies were reported down between 25 percent and 50 percent Thursday, and one official attributed the decrease to panic-buying.

In North Carolina, National Guardsmen armed with bayonet-fixed M-16 rifles and automatic pistols protected operations at picketed storage and loading facilities in Charlotte and Greensboro. Some of the rifles were loaded, and authorities said ammunition was available for other weapons if needed.

More than 400 guardsmen arrived in jeeps at terminals at the Paw Creek depot near Charlotte and were greeted with a spray-painted banner that read: "Welcome National Guard — Gov. Come Talk To Us." An equal number were stationed at the Greensboro facility.

At Paw Creek, Guardsmen chatted and traded jokes with the pickets, who allowed trucks to load without difficulty. "When all this gets on TV, I hope it shows how jovial all this is," said Guard Capt. Jim Smith.

Gov. Jim Hunt told reporters Thursday that he activated the Guard because he received word the truckers had plans "to bring in more people and really shut things down."

"If we had not acted...we would have had a very ugly situation there today," the governor said. "We are not going to be intimidated in North Carolina, and we're not going to be shut down by these people," he added.

National Guard troops also were on duty Thursday in Illinois, where authorities have reported 66 separate incidents of violence since June 18, including six recent shootings.

Three truckers, one driving a car, were arrested in Chicago on Thursday and charged with obstructing traffic. Authorities said the three had been part of a 30-truck convoy that traveled two-abreast en route to Chicago. About six trucks entered the downtown area and circled Daley Center Plaza.

West Virginia officials increased their National Guard troop strength from 270 to 430 to help escort gasoline trucks, and nearly 300 troops were on duty at fuel storage areas and interstate overpasses in Kentucky.

A convoy of a different stripe was formed in Utah, where a 25-vehicle caravan rolled through Salt Lake City en route to a mass blood donation.

"We want some good publicity for a change," said Jim Shaw of the Independent Truckers Association.

And Mississippi Gov. Cliff Finch, clad in jeans and cowboy boots, steered an 18-wheeler up to a warehouse loading dock in Los Angeles, completing a 1,850-mile odyssey in support of working people. He was followed by a convoy of striking truckers, one of whom said they would "follow him to hell and back."

In Alabama, truckers resumed picketing Thursday at the Fleet Transport Co. terminal in Birmingham, a major supplier for independent service stations in the area. A dispatcher said the facility was brought to a virtual standstill. But spokesmen for other terminals in the state said trucks were moving normally.

The Florida Public Service Commission, meanwhile, granted a 9 percent rate hike for gasoline haulers to help them recover the rising costs of diesel fuel.

On Wednesday, Mondale appealed to the truckers to end their protest and "get the country moving again."

Ed Carpenter, a spokesman for striking truckers in Georgia, said Thursday the vice president was "completely out of line with the statement he made" and said, "We denounce it."

STRIKING TRUCKER ARRESTED — Mecklenburg County, N.C., police officers carry Clifford Belk to a waiting patrol car at the Paw Creek fuel terminal Wednesday afternoon. Belk is an independent trucker from Wingate, N.C., who was arrested when he refused to move from the front of a truck blocking one of the terminals. (AP Laserphoto)

Collapsing Machine Kills Three

AVONDALE, Ariz. (AP) — A woman and two grandchildren, taking a break from work in the cottonfields, sought relief from the 116-degree heat in the shade of an abandoned earth scraper. But as horrified relatives watched, part of the machine collapsed and crushed them to death.

Authorities said that Magdalena Levario, 56, and Rachel Orona, 12, had eaten lunch Wednesday and were lying under the huge rusted bucket of the earth mover as Rachel's brother, Gilbet, 8, crouched with them.

A cousin, Anastacio Moreno, 17, was removing a couple of old tires from inside the bucket, said Maricpa County Detective K.B. Shauinger.

"He threw them out and jumped," said Shauinger. "About the same time he landed on the ground was when the machine collapsed."

Moreno ran a quarter-mile to a farmhouse to summon help while Mrs. Levario's husband attempted first to jack up the heavy bucket with a bumper jack and then began digging.

"He got the young boy out and the grandmother but they were dead at the scene," said Shauinger. A passing road grader was hailed to lift the scraper, revealing the body of Rachel Orona.

The earth mover reportedly had been parked alongside the field for at least 10 years. The bucket was held about 30 inches off the ground by cables which might have been rusted or bound together by tension that was released when the youth jumped, Shauinger said.

"What actually made it fall, I can't say," the detective said. "We do have a couple of detectives looking into it."

Mrs. Levario was matriarch of a large family in the community of Cashion, near this farming town southwest of Phoenix. She and many of her chidren, in-laws and grandchildren were hoeing cotton for lease-farmer James Accomazzo when the accident occurred, Shauinger said.

"Every season the family works this way," said Raymond Orona, an uncle of the dead children. "The kid just went up there (on the earth mover). He didn't do anything foolish. It just went down."

Orona said several family members witnessed the accident but were in shock and unable to give details when he arrived.

Ownership of the machinery was in question. One man identified as former owner of the land denied the machinery was his. "When I sold that farm, everything went with it," he said. "I haven't got nothing to do with it."

Subsequent owners of the cotton field also have denied responsibility for the equipment. "Everybody's saying, 'I don't know anything about anything'," Shauinger said.

Cool Cooking from Milnot

Two refreshing recipes guaranteed to keep you cool and breeze you quickly through the kitchen. Make them with Milnot for the richest flavor ever, and you'll make a real hit with your family.

Lime Chiffon Sundae Pie

1 pkg. lime gelatin
1 cup boiling water
½ cup sugar
3 tbsp. lime juice (fresh frozen, bottled)
1 cup MILNOT, whipped

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water; then stir in sugar and juice. Chill until mixture starts to congeal. Fold into whipped MILNOT. Pour into chocolate crumb crust. Chill.

Crust:
2 cups chocolate cookie crumbs
½ cup melted butter or margarine

Mix together, press firmly around sides and bottom of 10-inch pie plate. Chill. Serve with fudge sauce and if desired top with whipped MILNOT topping garnished with chocolate mint patties, maraschino cherries and chopped nuts.

Variations:
Orange chiffon— substitute orange gelatin and orange juice.
Lemon chiffon— substitute lemon gelatin and lemon juice.
Pink chiffon— substitute red flavored gelatin and lemon juice.

Old Fashioned Homemade Ice Cream

3 eggs
2½ cups sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 tall cans MILNOT
6½ cups milk

Beat eggs well; add sugar, salt and vanilla. Beat thoroughly. Add MILNOT and milk. Freeze.

Variations:
Fruit: Add 2 or more cups of drained fruit, mashed or diced.
Lemon: 1 tablespoon lemon juice added with only 1 teaspoon vanilla.
To prevent quick melting 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin may be added (soak gelatin in ¼ cup water; melt over hot water, add to milk).

Employer's Disgust Gets Form Cut From Eight Pages To One

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (UPI) — The form was eight pages long and Mike Vehle had only read a few pages before he became disgusted.

So Vehle got the federal government to pare the eight-page form on employment practices to one.

He said he has yet to see the shortened form but, "More than likely I'll fill it out, if it's reasonable enough."

Vehle, who works in Mitchell, S.D., in a seven-person office at Shanard Inc. — a feed, grain and fertilizer business — received the original form in April.

Because his company sells grain in interstate commerce, it was required to certify, through the form, that it doesn't discriminate in employment.

The form was filled with obscure questions, Vehle said, and, "After reading a couple of pages I became disgusted and decided to write my congressman."

Rep. James Abdnor, R-S.D., took up the matter with a White House council whose job is to simplify federal regulatory requirements.

"To be real honest," Vehle said, "I thought nothing would happen because the bureaucracy is such that it won't change. I was elated when I was told the form was reduced to a page."

Abdnor said the Office of Federal Contract Compliance in the U.S. Department of Labor agreed on the revision.

"I think the person who drew up the eight-page form had the best intentions," Vehle said. "But as a small company, we just don't have the time to go through all this."

Vehle said he only read the first few pages in the form but recalled it asked questions on equal opportunity employment, annual reports, affirmative action, veterans, the handicapped, environmental protection, the Clean Air Act and the Federal Water Pollution Act.

"This experience shows that sometimes the little guy can fight the system and win," Abdnor said.

Separated Siamese Twins Due To Go Home Soon

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Separated Siamese twins Lisa and Elisa Hansen, once joined at the head, are being fitted with protective helmets and prepared to go home to gain strength for their next operations.

Hospital spokesman John Dwan said the two are in satisfactory condition, but no date has been set for them to leave the hospital.

The 20-month-old girls, who were separated a month ago at University Medical Center, will spend several months at home in Ogden, Utah, before returning for bone grafts across the tops of their heads. At separation, bone tissue was set aside for that purpose, Dwan said.

Iranian Official Describes Alleged Shah Murder Attempt

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The leader of the revolutionary regime's campaign to assassinate the exiled Shah of Iran vowed Thursday "we will use every means to exterminate him" even though there have been setbacks.

Meanwhile, a Tehran newspaper claimed that Iran's 79-year-old revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, is himself the target of two assassination teams. One was said to be part of a "master plan" drawn up with U.S. assistance. The other, linked to an alleged report from Iraq, was said to already be in Iran.

Ayatollah Sadeq Khalkhali, who has spearheaded Iran's attempts to have Shah MohammadReza Pahlai killed, insiste to reporters that his Islamic Fedayeen guerrillas had tried to kill the shah Tuesday night at the ex-monarch's residence in exile in Cuernavaca, Mexico.

Mexican police and the shah's chief of staff have denied claims that a helicopter fired on the shah's house.

"It would be against the prestige of the Mexican police and the FBI if they admitted there was a helicopter attack," the turbaned, bespectacled Khalkhali said. But he said his own sources in Mexico assured him the shah "is wounded and he also has a kidney ailment, and a bad one, too. Neighbors of the shah have reported that the attack has taken place and his car is wrecked."

Khalkhali shrugged off the failure of the alleged attack, told reporters not to be surprised if another helicopter attack is tried, and said: "This man is condemned to die. We will use every means to exterminate him ... We have other means. If we fail with helicopters, we will use ships."

What he meant by that was not clear. Cuernavaca is well inland, more than 100 miles from either the Atlantic or Pacific coasts.

Khalkhali, who says the shah has been sentenced to death in absentia by Iran's revolutionary courts, has publicly offered a reward equivalent to $143,000 to anyone assassinating the shah.

Khalkhali said Thursday the money did not come from the government, but from "people who will pay for this." He would not identify them.

"We have no alternative," Khalkhali said. "Other governments won't hand over the shah to us and won't kill him. So we have to kill him."

The Bahamas and Mexico both refused to extradite the shah for trial.

Tehran's Ettelaat newspaper reported Thursday that two hit teams were working to kill Khomeini. It quoted an Iranian Shiite Moslem clergyman returning from Iraq as saying "counter-revolutionary guerrillas" had already entered Iran. It did not say, however, that they had come from Iraq, whose relations with Khomeini's regime have been deteriorating.

The paper quoted an unidentified source as revealing another plot to kill Khomeini, this one allegedly involving 700 guerrillas outside Iran as part of a U.S.-aided "master plan" against the regime. The source claimed the U.S. government had allocated $1 billion for a coup d'etat.

In other developments:

Thousands of revolutionary guardsmen with flowers in their rifle barrels marched in Tehran to display the regime's strength.

Iranian Foreign Minister Ibrahim Yazdi said Wednesday that U.S. negotiators are studying a return of some military equipment bought from the United States under the shah. Iranian officials have said they want to sell back unnecessary expensive hardware, but have said they will keep some sophisticated warplanes for defense.

Newspapers announced a decree by the secret Islamic Revolutionary Council, the nation's top decision-making body, authorizing small councils for the purpose of solving local problems. The councils may provide some of the local autonomy sought by non-Persian ethnic groups.

In the oil refinery city of Abadan, the official Pars news agency reported several hours of trouble when unidentified assailants fired on revolutionary guardsmen. No casualties were reported. Earlier this month, guardsmen in Abadan battled Iranian Arabs demanding autonomy.

Health Care Ingrained In China

BOSTON (AP) — China's impressive system of health care is part of the nation's tightly-controlled Communist economy and could not be easily adopted in the United States, a study concludes.

"China's health care system is a reflection of the way China has chosen to organize its national life," wrote Robert J. Blendon of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation in Princeton, N.J.

"It is not, as some have written, a separable phenomenon — something that could be transported across international borders as could be done with a new vaccine or surgical procedure."

The report, published Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine, noted that China has made "monumental strides" in controlling infectious diseases, improving nutrition, decreasing infant mortality, lowering the birth rate and bringing health care to rural areas.

"Decisions to minimize imports, ban private economic activity, assign university graduates on a compulsory basis, control wages, maintain a large domestic standing army and prevent professions of universities from acquiring independent status led directly to the present system of medical care," the study said.

Blendon also noted that China's health system emphasizes simple medical technology and outpatient care instead of sophisticated medical centers. It would not be considered adequate by the standards of many in the West.

Anti-Booze Feelings Hamper Coors Plant

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — Adolph Coors Co.'s hopes of building its first brewery outside Colorado in the Shenandoah Valley have suffered a setback, and an attorney for the firm blames organized religious opposition to alcohol.

"That's generally the underlying aspect of it," lawyer Henry C. Clark of Harrisonburg said Thursday.

The issue has inspired a remarkable outpouring of public interest in Rockingham County, an area known until now mostly for its poultry industry, apple crops and independent-minded populace.

Last month, about 1,500 county residents turned out for a 4½-hour public hearing on the subject, held in the evening in the grassy courthouse square in downtown Harrisonburg. Sentiment at that time appeared to be evenly divided.

But on Wednesday night, the county Planning Commission voted 4-2 against Coors' application to rezone 236 acres of land near Elkton at the western base of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The matter now goes to the county's Board of Supervisors, and Clark said he feels the county's governing body will grant the rezoning at its July 9 meeting.

The Coors firm, based in Golden, Colo., wants the property rezoned from agricultural to industrial use so it can start constructing a $500 million complex of brewery, can and bottle plants and recycling plants.

Clark said much opposition, although it appears to be on economic and no-growth lines, has actually been raised because of the alcohol issue. Rockingham County has a large population of Mennonites and followers of the fundamentalist Church of the Brethren.

"Nine-tenths of the letters to the editor opposing the brewery have been on purely religious grounds, and the other tenth works it in somewhere," said an editor at the Harrisonburg Daily News Record.

On the other hand, however, county residents approved the sale of liquor-by-the-drink in a referendum last fall.

The project, which Coors says would employ some 6,000 people at the end of 20 years, has the blessing of Virginia Gov. John N. Dalton.

Engineering reports submitted to the county say water supplies in the Elkton area, on the Shenandoah River, are adequate for both existing industry and Coors.

Coors also has tried to defuse skeptics who say the firm isn't really interested in the county by promising in writing to build the brewery subject to rezoning, environmental permits and economic conditions.

Coors also has considered a brewery site in Anson County, N.C.

Virginia offers a welcome climate for big business because of the state's right-to-work law, which forbids closed union shops and allows non-union workers jobs in plants covered by union contracts.

In Golden, where Coors' only brewery is located, an impasse was reached in 1977 when Coors and the brewery workers union failed to agree on a contract. The union struck in April of that year and urged a national boycott of Coors, considered by some beer-drinkers a prestige item because of its high East Coast price and general scarcity.

Then-President Gerald Ford shipped several cases of the beer back to Washington when he took a trip out West aboard Air Force One.

Last December, Coors workers voted to oust the union and go back to work, but a few pickets still patrol the brewery gates at Golden.

When the rezoning case comes before the Rockingham County Board of Supervisors, only four of the board's five members will vote, raising the possibility of a 2-2 tie.

Supervisor William Sipe owns the core of the property that Coors has under option — some 2,000 acres in all — and has disqualified himself from voting.

Two other supervisors are thought to be against the brewery and two are thought to favor it. A tie, under county law, would shelve the application for at least a year.

Coors has purchased a natural spring, Lithia Springs, in the Elkton area. If the brewery is built, Coors probably would have to change its slogan — "Brewed with Rocky Mountain spring water" — to accommodate the new water source.

Elephant Not Blamed In Death Of Trainer

WOODLAND, Wash. (UPI) — The body of animal trainer H. Morgan Berry was crushed by an elephant so badly that doctors were unable to determine Thursday whether he had been felled first by the six-ton beast or by a chronic heart condition.

The cause of death of Berry, 68, was officially listed as "undetermined" following an autopsy, Dr. D.F. Wienbrenner, Cowlitz County coroner, said. His body was "just a pulp," Undersheriff Bill Stuart added.

A bull elephant identified by workers at Berry's 95-acre exotic animal farm as "Buddha" battered and stepped on the body during a tense drama that lasted more than eight hours Wednesday while handlers tried to distract the agitated animal long enough to remove the remains.

Berry had nine pachyderms at the farm. For years he was their keeper, trainer and closest friend.

There was no decision on what would be done with the Berry elephants, but Stuart said it was not expected that the bull that may have killed Berry would be destroyed.

A spokesman at the animal farm said the elephant would have become upset if Berry were in physical trouble, such as in the throes of a heart attack, Stuart said. Berry had a chronic heart condition, he added.

"In their opinion the elephant would not do it," he said. "They don't feel there is any way in the world he killed the man. They think he had a heart attack."

On the other hand, Stuart said, "We are told this is the mating season for the bulls and they have sexual problems because of that, so it is fairly dangerous."

A second bull elephant, a 12-year-old named Thai, broke out of Berry's farm during the incident and was at large in the southwestern Washington countryside for nearly a full day.

Thai ran down a hill from the farm, cutting a swath through a gorge like a bulldozer, and came to rest in an alder thicket, from which he steadfastly refused to budge. He finally was sedated with tranquilizer darts and led groggily back to the compound, following a smaller, docile female elephant brought out to entice him home.

"The elephant got out last night and decided to go exploring like any other normal young boy," said Roger Henneous, an elephant keeper from Washington Park Zoo in Portland, who had been called to the scene.

It was the second fatality involving elephants from the farm within 13 months. In May, 1978, Berry's partner, Elois Berchtold, 52, was walked on during a perfomance in Canada. She had helped raise the elephant and upon her death the animal would not allow circus workers to approach her body.

A police sharpshooter finally killed the creature.

People Flock To Statue

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (UPI) — Thousands of people, whether devout or merely curious, flocked to a Catholic church near Colombo today to see if the statue of Our Lady of Sorrows really does close its eyes.

Two girls, Swarna, 11, and Pinsy, 12, said they saw the statue blink Friday at the 100-year-old church of St. Sebastian in Galwetiya, 6 miles outside of Colombo.

Swarna recalled, "Pinsy and I finished saying our prayers in the church and as we walked towards the statue carrying candles we saw Our Lady close her eyes. We were frightened and we ran home."

Word spread and since Saturday a special mass is being celebrated daily at the church.

Rescued Spelunker Gives Up Sport

WAYNESVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Army Sgt. Kenneth Sekola says he's through spelunking after being pulled from a 40-foot-deep pit in a cave where he and two companions were lost for 3½ days with no food and only muddy water to drink.

"I'm the type of guy, if I fall off a bike, I'll get back on. But no more of this (cave-exploring) stuff," Sekola, 22, of Bloomer, Wis., said after his rescue.

Sekola entered Indian Cave in the Missouri Ozarks on Saturday afternoon with Spec. 4 Steve Mercado, 20, a fellow soldier at nearby Fort Leonard Wood, and Mercado's wife, Lynn, 20. The two men had explored the cave together two or three times before.

They were rescued n the pre-dawn darkness Wednesday — cold, thirsty, scared and hungry — by members of a spelunkers' club at the University of Missouri-Rolla.

"I used to drive a fuel truck in the mountains of Korea. It was a pretty hairy job ..., but I never worried about it. But you just can't compare this (cave experience) to nothing else," said Sekora Thursday.

Sekola and the Mercados were treated at the base hospital for exposure, then released. Sekola also suffered a cut on his head when hit by a rock knocked loose by a rescuer.

The three went into the cave intending to stay a couple of hours. They took flashlights and two extra sets of batteries, but no food or water, and no extra clothing to ward off 58-degree temperatures.

"We just went in a little faster than usual and a little farther than usual," Sekora recalled. "There are a lot of arrows painted in there, pointing directions. But someone went in there and messed around. Pretty soon we just started going in circles."

Two lights went out and the last good one fell into a pit. The men tied their belts together and tried to lower Sekola into the dark cavity. The belts broke and Sekola tumbled 40 feet down into the pit.

He was to stay there for the next 2½ days until he woke up to rescuers' lights Wednesday morning.

Sekola admitted getting "a little down" at times, but said he was confident someone would spot his car at the mouth of the cave and call authorities. "I didn't give up ...," he said.

The two men were concerned about Mrs. Mercado, a cave novice. Sekora said, "She was pretty broken up. We had a hard time keeping her calmed down."

Sekola found a puddle and drank some muddy water after the first day but the Mercados, who stayed near Sekora, went without water.

Two teams of searchers found the Mercados several hours after Sekola's car was spotted near the cave Tuesday night. "Thank God," the Mercados shouted when the rescuers reched them.

A second rescue team returned with a rope to haul Sekola out of the pit.

"They wanted to rig up something fancy, but I didn't want to waste the time," he recalled. "I crawled out under my own power. I'd been in there too long. I just wanted out."

Rescuers found the three a mile back in the cave, which had a dance hall and bar at its entrance until they were closed in the 1950s. The privately owned cave has never been closed off to the public, according to Jim Block, a member of the spelunkers' club.

Bodies Of Mountain Climbers Sent Home

SAGUACHE, Colo. (AP) — The bodies of four Missouri mountain climbers were sent home Thursday, three days after the three teen-agers and their adult leader fell to their deaths on 14,165-foot Kit Carson Peak.

Authorities said the four were roped together and apparently fell more than 1,000 feet after one of them slipped on glacial ice.

Coroner Bill Lewis identified the victims as Jess Donell of Clayton, a suburb of St. Louis; Carl Odem and Bill Rymer, both of Kansas City, and Robert Flemming of Chillicothe.

Lewis said Donell was supervising the teen-agers as part of a program for juvenile delinquents in Doniphan, Mo.

A helicopter team from Fort Carson Army Base in Colorado Springs spotted what appeared to be the four bodies Tuesday, and the recovery was made Wednesday.

Hospital Material Found Sabotaged

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Nurses in a hospital maternity ward here uncovered another case of suspected sabotage when they found a delivery of rubber nipples, napkins and syringes had been doused with toxic cleaning fluid, police reported Thursday.

Police said the parcel was delivered to the ward at Lowenstromska Hospital by an orderly who has since disappeared. Last year 16 elderly patients in a hospital in southern Sweden died after being poisoned with the same cleaning fluid.

Confined U.S. Woman Seeks Israeli Parole

TEL AVIV (AP) — Terre Fleener, the young American woman caught in a web of Middle East espionage, appears before a parole board Friday to plead for her freedom after 20 months in an Israeli prison.

Miss Fleener, 24, the only American now imprisoned in Israel for security offenses, completed two-thirds of her 2½-year sentence this week and became eligible for parole under Israeli law.

Her original five-year sentence for aiding Palestinian guerrillas was cut in half three weeks ago after pleas for leniency from U.S. officials, including Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

An Israeli official, who requested anonymity, said the United States had exerted "tremendous pressure" for the commutation of Miss Fleener's sentence and her release.

"We're hoping she'll be released," said her attorney, Felicia Langer.

The attorney told The Associated Press she would argue for Miss Fleener's release on ground of her good behavior in prison, her good character and the fact that her offenses caused no actual damage or injury to Israeli security.

The only other U.S. citizen ever imprisoned here on security charges was Palestinian-American Sami Esmail, convicted of undergoing training at a guerrilla base in Libya. He was paroled in October after serving two-thirds of his 15-month sentence and was deported immediately.

Miss Fleener, of San Antonio, was arrested Oct. 25, 1977, as she arrived at Ben-Gurion Airport on her second trip to Israel. The following January she was convicted in a one-day trial behind closed doors.

Initially, few details of the charges against Miss Fleener were released. But recently Israeli authorities, apparently anticipating criticism from the young American once she returns home, have publicized accounts of her alleged activities on behalf of Arab guerrillas.

Miss Fleener went to Lebanon in 1975 and was hired as a stewardess for Kuwait Airlines. According to Israeli authorities, she became friendly with members of the Palestine Liberation Organization, which enlisted her help when she decided to travel to Israel in January and February of 1976.

The Maariv newspaper recently printed a long article containing quotations from Miss Fleener, who has not been allowed to give interviews in prison. The comments apparently were taken from her secret court testimony and leaked to the Tel Aviv newspaper.

According to Maariv, Miss Fleener said she gave the PLO "photographs of hotels in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and Haifa. I photographed beaches I had been requested (to) ... I told them about the security arrangements in the post offices and theaters I had been to in Israel."

Israel regards such acts gravely, charging that Palestinian guerrillas use the material to plan terrorist attacks. No specific link was alleged between Miss Fleener's activities and terrorist actions.

According to Maariv, Miss Fleener said "I was not coerced. I agreed. They asked me to take note of the Haifa coast area and to photograph it. I guess they wanted this for landing boats there....

"I was assigned to visit Galilee and photograph public buildings there, to visit a kibbutz in upper Galilee and memorize its structure, the location of the power station. I suppose these assignments were all intended for the purpose of attack and sabotage."

In an court hearing last year on reducing Miss Fleener's sentence, Mrs. Langer had said the young woman's "only intention was to do an innocent favor." The lawyer said, "Pictures like this you can buy here by the hundreds."

Russia Stresses Saving Energy

MOSCOW (AP) — Each Soviet citizen and industry has a duty to save energy so the nation can build reserves for winter, Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, wrote in a front-page editorial Thursday.

Even though the Soviet Union is the world's largest oil producer it is beginning to feel the energy pinch with existing reserves drying up and new finds hard to make in the rough Siberian territories.

The Soviets produce 11 million barrels of oil daily and have reserves of 71 billion barrels, according to American Petroleum Institute estimates. Saudi Arabia has 165.7 billion barrels in reserve, the most of any nation, and is approximately tied with the United States for second place in output.

Tough Greek Laws Make Small Dent In Oil Bill

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Radical fuel-saving measures imposed on motorists in Greece — among the strictest in the West — have brought only minimal savings in the steeply rising bill for oil imports, according to government statistics.

But they have succeeded in stemming some equally ugly aspects of modern developed societies: a high accident rate, traffic congestion and wasteful consumption.

A statement by the Ministry of Transport and Communications said that since the restrictive car circulation measures were imposed in April, there has been a 5 to 6 percent drop in gas consumption. A Motorists' association, which has fought the measures as excessively suppressive announced that this represented a mere 1 percent saving on all imported oil and was thus "negligible and unjustified."

In April, the government imposed an alternate weekend driving ban: drivers with odd-numbered reistration plates can drive on one weekend and those with even numbers the next. It also said a gas rationing would begin in a few months and imposed a 50 mph speed limit on most highways.

Violators — scores are arrested every weekend — have been fined the equivalent of as much as $3,000.

Such measures have since been copied by other countries, including Yugoslavia. But the Greek Motorists' Association has taken legal action against the government here, demanding a partial refund on the road circulation tax corresponding to the weekend bans.

The 1 percent saving, according to an official of the Energy and Industry Ministry, represents only about $10 million of the $974 million Greece paid in 1978 for oil. Private cars and other vehicles used about 14 percent of total imports.

At $3.15 a gallon for premium, Greek gasoline prices are among the highest in the world. Greece currently imports all its oil — 66.5 million barrels in 1978 — but starting in 1981 it is expected to produce 10.5 million barrels of crude annually from its Aegean sea depositsm

For the Greek motorist, forced to stay at home every other weekend or rely on taxis and buses, the economic argument is not satisfactory.

But, says the ministry official: "The measures limiting car circulation are not really only for fuel saving. They come more within the government's general anti-inflation drive. If a motorist is limited in his movements, has to stay grounded, he will also spend less. You know that Greeks are notorious for their weekend entertainment spending."

Greek Economic Coordination Minister Constantine Mitsotakis has warned that the rising oil bill and ensuing inflation is the economy's current key weakness, upsetting most development plans.

Government officials concede that original estimates for a 10 percent inflation rate this year no longer hold. The figure is more likely to reach 18-20 percent.

Yet even the small economic saving is being wiped out by rising world oil prices and high Greek consumption. The Energy and Industry Ministry official said that while Greek oil consumption will rise 4 to 5 percent this year, the import bill will increase up to 50 percent, to $1.5 billion.

This means that oil imports alone would absorb the entire receipts from Greece's tourist trade, the country's largest source of income.

Gasoline economy measures are also being defeated by car purchases. The number of vehicles is rising at about 13 percent per year.

Traffic police reported that the alternate weekend driving ban has eliminated the customary weekend congestion on the roads and brought down the country's fatal accident rate.

The 1978 average was four dead and 32 injured daily on Greek roads, a traffic police spokesman said, terming it "by comparison by far the worst rate in Europe and America."

He said official statistics on the accident rate following the alternate weekend ban were not yet available, but he personally estimated it to have dropped "by at least 70 percent."

The government also has imposed tough anti-congestion measures in the center of Athens, stiff fines for illegally parked cars, and towing for the worst offenders. Communications Minister Alexander Papadongonas said the measures, which have infuriated Greek motorists are aimed at easing traffic in the city center and would therefore also save fuel.

Energy-Saving Ad Campaign Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is considering a $50 million national advertising campaign to encourage Americans to conserve energy, a House panel was told Thursday.

Taking a cue from the Canadian government, the Department of Energy would buy prime radio and television time and space in magazines and newspapers to carry the conservation message into American households.

Keyed to the advertising would be free books, available by mail, with instructions on how to save gasoline and home heating oil.

"In my judgment, $50 million will handle a quite respectable campaign," said Jackson Gouraud, a deputy undersecretary of energy, outlining the plan to a House Commerce subcommittee.

Canadians started their campaign in 1975, paying top advertising dollars to put the conservation message before the highest possible number of Canadians.

Impact is lost if the message is left to news organizations or free public service announcements which are run at all hours, said Bryan Kelly, a Canadian government official who briefed the subcommittee.

Canadians think the campaign has been chiefly responsible for reducing the rate of their increased energy demand from 6.1 percent annually to 2.1 percent. Demand for heating oil in Ontario has been reduced by an average 5 percent annually, Kelly said.

Kelly said the Canadian campaign was apolitical and straightforward — no jokes, no scare tactics. Canadians have responded to the point where conservation books have now been mailed to half of Canada's 7 million households.

Gouraud said the department probably will adopt much of the Canadian approach in order to move quickly. He said it should be possible to start with a test campaign in a regional U.S. market Jan. 1.

Gouraud said his hope is that the advertising campaign could eventually save some 170 million barrels of crude oil annually — about $3.4 billion at today's imported oil prices.

Amoco To Run Iowa Gasohol Pilot Program

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) will become the first major oil company to market gasohol when it begins a pilot program in Iowa next month.

Standard of Indiana, which sells gasoline under the Amoco brand name, later could expand its gasohol marketing to a dozen states.

Five Amoco stations in Ottumwa, a southeast Iowa city with 30,000 residents, will participate in the test of gasohol, a motor fuel blend consisting of 90 percent unleaded gasoline and 10 percent ethanol.

The Iowa Development Commission and the Iowa Corn Promotion Board have been promoting gasohol sales in Iowa for more than a year. The popularity of the product has surprised those organizations, as more than 400 stations are currently dispensing the fuel.

But the venture by Amoco is the first step by a major oil company into the gasohol market.

The U.S. Department of Energy Wednesday authorized Amoco to sell 1 million gallons of gasohol a month in 12 midwestern states.

Carl Meyerdirk, director of media relations for Amoco in Chicago, said in a telephone interview Thursday that the other cities in the test have not yet been selected.

The test in Ottumwa, an industrial and farming community some 75 miles southeast of Des Moines, is expected to last a year or more.

Ottumwa was selected for the first phase of the marketing test, he said, because Amoco has a distribution terminal there.

"We feel we can make sure the product is properly blended at the terminal in Ottumwa," said Meyerdirk.

Meyerdirk said the fact that Ottumwa is located in an agricultural area was also a factor.

"We will be using 200 proof ethanol distilled from agricultural products. We are not distilling it ourselves but are stipulating to our supplier that the alcohol will be from agricultural products," said Meyerdirk.

The gasohol sold in the Iowa Development Commission project is made with ethanol distilled from corn.

Meyerdirk said gasohol will replace the premium unleaded fuel now sold by the five Amoco stations. The stations' two other grades of gasoline, unleaded and leaded regular, will be maintained.

The success of the marketing test will be determined by surveys of motorists, demand for the product and other measures, Meyerdirk said.

"We are trying to determine if the problems that have been encountered by others (with gasohol) can be minimized or overcome," he said. Meyerdirk said he was referring to problems of blending the product properly, keeping it segregated from gasoline and so on.

ARTHUR LEVITT JR.

Small Business Booster Wants Tax Break Law

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — In his spare time, 48-year-old Arthur Levitt Jr. enjoys photography, mountain climbing and once worked as a drama critic.

These days the lean, soft-spoken Levitt is considered one of the country's top spokesmen and biggest advocates of small business.

He's in a position to know about small businesses. As chairman of the American Stock Exchange, he presides over a financial market on which the shares of many small businesses are traded. And he also serves as chairman of the President's Commission on Small Business.

In both capacities, Levitt is a persistent proponent of the view that small businesses have the power to introduce significant innovations into the American marketplace — if only they aren't squelched by government regulation.

As chairman of the Commission on Small Business, Levitt last year spearheaded an ill-fated effort to get tax breaks for investors in small businesses by forming a coalition of business leaders, union officials, politicians and investors to testify before Congress on needs of small businesses.

And, despite the fact that it didn't survive the last session of Congress, Levitt said he has hope for the future.

Since taking over as president at the American Stock Exchange in January 1978, Levitt has followed an aggressive expansion plan begun several years ago designed to build up what many considered to be the "little sister" to the giant New York Stock Exchange into a broadly diversified "market of the future."

A few years ago the Amex began trading options, and since Levitt took over last year after a long career as a Wall Street broker, it has begun trading commodities contracts and is expanding into futures on many financial instruments.

Levitt says even the nature of Amex's traditional stock and bond business has changed in recent years.

"The quality of the companies on the Amex is substantially higher now than several years ago," he said one Saturday afternoon in his skylit weekend house in this beach community on Long Island Sound.

"Our standards have tightened," he said. "The companies have become more seasoned."

Levitt, the son of the former New York state comptroller came to his current post through a circuitous route.

He worked for a time as a drama critic for the Berkshire Eagle, the daily newspaper in Pittsfield, Mass. After a stint with Life Magazine he went to Colorado where from 1959 until 1964 he raised, bought and sold cattle.

He left to help start an investment firm in New York, which later became part of Shearson Hayden Stone Inc. A year and a half ago the Amex picked him as the chairman of its board of governors and its chief executive officer.

Levitt and his wife, Marilyn, have a son, 21-year-old Arthur Levitt III, who is a marine biologist, and a daughter, Lauri, 19, a college student.

He spends at least a day every weekend in his home here, dressed in jeans,his long graying hair in mild disorder, developing his color photographs.

Among the best, he says, are those he takes during rock-climbing expeditions — some of them with other members of the Wall Street establishment.

This year he's gathering a team of 21 business and stock exchange leaders for a September rock-climbing expedition. It's designed to strengthen the ties between members of the expedition, for in Levitt's view, the resilience of the stock exchange rests partly on the cooperation of those individuals.

"When you get a floor member hanging on a rope held by a company head," he said, "I hope that will build a kind of cooperation that will spill over into their business relationships as well."

OPEC Background Queries Answered

By WILLIAM GLASGALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Here are some questions and answers about the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and about the oil cartel's action on prices in Geneva on Thursday:

Q. What did OPEC decide to do?

A. The organization of 13 oil exporting nations on July 1 will raise its base price for a 42-gallon barrel of crude oil to $18 from $14.55. But it will allow members to add surcharges of as much as $2 a barrel as market conditions permit. In addition, OPEC set a top price for its best-quality oil of $23.50 a barrel. The official ceiling price had been $21.31, the amount charged for a barrel of high-quality Libyan oil. The split-price system is similar to one in effect for six months in 1977.

Q. Wasn't a lot of oil already selling for more than OPEC's latest prices?

A. The average price of a barrel of OPEC oil was $17 as the OPEC oil ministers began their meeting this week. That's because several of the cartel's members were tacking on surcharges to their prices as a reaction to the oil shortage that followed the revolution in Iran. Iran, which last year was OPEC's second-largest member behind Saudi Arabia, has cut its oil output sharply this year.

Q. Can you explain what "base price" is?

A. It's that charged on a grade of oil called "Arabian light." This oil is low in sulfur and is easily refined into gasoline, heating oil and other fuels. Grades of lower quality carry lower price tags; higher-quality oils cost more than the base price.

Q. How much of U.S. crude oil needs come from OPEC?

A. OPEC nations supplied about one-third of U.S. oil requirements last year. But the cartel's members' shipments accounted for more than 80 percent of U.S. crude oil imports in 1978. Saudi Arabia alone provided more than 18 percent of the United States' crude oil imports last year.

Q. Are OPEC members just from the Mideast?

A. While Saudi Arabia is the cartel's biggest nation, the organization also includes among its members a diverse worldwide assembly including Indonesia, Nigeria and Venezuela.

Q. Why does OPEC have such a tight hold on the oil market?

A. Simply put, the cartel's got a lot of oil. OPEC's combined production last year was 7.9 billion barrels — 36 percent of the world's crude oil output. OPEC production dwarfs the estimated output of the Soviet Union, which was 4.1 billion barrels last year, or that of the United States, which came to 3.2 billion barrels.

Q. When — and why — was OPEC founded?

A. The organization was born in September 1960, when Arabian light crude oil was selling for $1.80 a barrel. It was founded by Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Venezuela, who said at the time their move was "a response to the unilateral decision of the multinational oil companies to cut posted prices in February 1959 and again in August 1960, thus inflicting severe damage to the economies and development programs of oil-producing countries."

Q. Where does OPEC's money go?

A. According to a Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. estimate, OPEC oil revenues from 1974 and 1978 totaled nearly $600 billion — and are expected to swell to $600 billion a year by 1990. A large amount of the OPEC revenue is paying for oil industry development projects and for public works projects in the member countries. But OPEC also has agreed in principle to boost the size of its fund for aid to poorer nations by $800 million to a total of $1 billion. In addition, OPEC members are major buyers of U.S. government securities — in effect lending U.S. dollars to the United States.

Number Of Millionaires Higher Than Last Year

NEW YORK (AP) — One of every 400 Americans is a millionaire, and the number is increasing at a rate faster than inflation, according to a report by U.S. Trust Co. of New York.

About 520,000 Americans are now millionaires, some 15 percent above last year's 450,000, according to the report, which gives approximate figures developed through the use of a computer model.

The last government figures, for 1972, said there were 180,000 millionaires in the United States.

More millionaires choose to live in New York than any other state — 51,031, according to the report.

Other states in the top 10 were California, 33,509; Illinois, 31,131; Ohio, 27,607; Florida, 26,647; New Jersey, 26,565; Indiana, 24,345; Idaho, 23,797; Minnesota, 22,873, and Texas, 21,051.

Wyoming was last in the nation, with 84 millionaires.

Other states in the Northeast region included Massachusetts, with 18,015; Pennsylvania, 15,318; Connecticut, 10,811; Maine, 8,337; Delaware, 1,946; Rhode Island, 1,449; Vermont, 1,105, and New Hampshire, 603.

The company also ranked states by number of millionaires per thousand persons, and Idaho led that department with 28.65.

Others in the top 10 of that analysis were Maine, with 7.72; North Dakota, 6.9; Nebraska, 6.58; Minnesota, 5.7; Indiana, 4.56; Wisconsin, 4.05; Iowa, 3.95; New Jersey, 3.61, and Conecticut, 3.43.

The average density nationwide is 2.36 millionaires per 1,000 persons, and New York's millionaire density is a bit above that, at 2.93.

Other states in the Northeast included Delaware, with 3.29 per 1,000; Massachusetts, 3.1; Vermont, 2.23; Rhode Island, 1.54; Pennsylvania, 1.29, and New Hampshire, .70

According to U.S. Trust, New York City has 16,255 millionaires, but has a density of 1.73 millionaires per 1,000.

U.S. Trust Co. manages more than $11.5 billion, offering banking, investment, financial planning and trust and estate services.

The company's release did not give figures for other states.

Townspeople Vote To Abolish Police

VICTORY GARDENS, N.J. (AP) — The Borough Council has voted to abolish the town's six-man police force and padlock the police station. Beginning Saturday, the 1,000 residents of the Morris County community will be protected temporarily by the state police from the Netcong barracks.

The council voted Wednesday night to lay off the borough's police chief, three sergeants and two patrolmen because there is no money in the budget to pay them. The council is considering a plan to merge its police force with that of a nearby township.

Dow Averages To Drop Chrysler, Esmark, Substitute Merck, IBM

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones Industrial average — the best known barometer of trading on the New York Stock Exchange — is being revised for the first time in 20 years, Dow Jones & Co. announced in Thursday's Wall Street Journal.

The change will see International Business Machines Corp. return to the roster of 30 corporations that compose the index after a lapse of 50 years and the addition of one other, Merck & Co. That firm produces pharmaceuticals and other health care products.

Chysler Corp. and Esmark Inc., a diversified company in the food industry, will be deleted to make room for them.

The change takes effect today and marks the first time since June 1959 that the companies have been changed to update the index. At that time four stocks were deleted and four added.

"The change in the roster ... aims to improve the index as an indicator of the general price movement of shares on the New York Stock Exchange. IBM and Merck will help reflect the importance of technology and pharmaceuticals in the nation's economy and in the stock market," said the Journal, which is owned by Dow Jones & Co.

IBM, which now ranks as the seventh-largest company in the nation by sales, was first included among the 30 stocks in 1932 but was deleted in 1939 to make room for American Telephone & Telegraph.

Although Chysler, the smallest of the U.S. automakers, has been deleted, General Motors will continue to represent the auto industry in the index. In the food industry, several companies, including General Foods Corp., American Brands Corp. and Procter & Gamble Co. are represented.

The substitution of two new companies in the index will require a revision in the divisors used to calculate the Dow industrial average to maintain a continuity in the index. The same is true of the Dow 65-stock composite average, which includes the 30 industrials plus 20 transporation issues and 15 utilities.

The divisor is the number used instead of 30 to divide the total price of stocks in the list to arrive at the averages. Because of stock splits over the years, the divisor is now 1.443.

In addition to adjustments for the substitutions of two companies, Dow Jones said the new divisor will also take into account the split of DuPont stock today.

Dow Jones said it would calculate the new divisor on the basis of Thursday's closing NYSE stock prices.

With the substitutions, the following companies will comprise the Dow industrial index: Allied Chemical, Aluminum Co., American Brands, American Can, American Telephone & Telegraph, Bethlehem Steel, DuPont, Eastman Kodak, Exxon, General Electric, General Foods, General Motors, Goodyear, Inco, IBM, International Harvester, International Paper, Johns-Manville, Merck, Minnesota Mining and Manfacturing, Owens-Illinois, Procter & Gamble, Sears, & Roebuck, Standard Oil of California, Texaco, Union Carbide, United Technologies, U.S. Steel, Westinghouse Electric and F.W. Woolworth.

Dow Jones said it would revise the index by using the following procedure:

At the close of NYSE trading Thursday, the stock prices of all issues in the list will be totaled, then divided by 1.443, which will produce the industrial average for Thursday's trading. The prices of Esmark and Chrysler will be subtracted from the total and the prices of IBM and Merck will be added. To recalculate for the DuPont three-for-one split, its pre-split price will be subtracted and its post-split price will be added.

Dollar Finishes Mixed; Gold Takes Dive

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar turned in a mixed showing in currency exchange trading Thursday, but the price of gold plummeted by more than $5 an ounce on news that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is boosting the price of crude oil to between $18 and $23.50 a barrel.

The OPEC decision was seen as "an attempt to restore some sort of sanity" to the world oil trade, and sent "a sense of relief" through foreign exchange markets, said a New York trader.

"When the end result is only semi-disastrous, the feeling is that it's not so bad at all," the trader said.

OPEC's decison boosted the base price of crude oil, effective July 1, from $14.55 a barrel.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have been buying and selling over-the-counter stocks and am getting more confused with every trade. The brokerage house with which I do business "makes a market" in some of the stocks I have bought and sold but not in others. Is the brokerage firm entitled to a commission, when it makes a market in a stock?

A. That depends on how the brokerage house fills your order. In the over-the-counter market, a brokerage firm can act either as an agent or a principal.

When a brokerage house acts as an agent, it buys or sells stock for you at the best available price in the marketplace and charges you a commission.

When it acts as a principal, it sells stock to you that it owns and charges you a mark-up. Or, it buys stock from you, at a mark-down. As a principal, a brokerage firm buys and sells stock from its own inventory.

A brokerage firm making a market in a particular stock keeps a "position" — an inventory — in that stock. In filling a buy order from you, it might act as a principal, sell you stock it owns and charge a mark-up. Or it might act as an agent, buy the stock for you in the market and levy a commission.

And, in filling a sell order from you, it might act as a principal and buy the stock from you at a mark-down. Or it might sell the stock for you in the market and levy a commission.

There's no rule saying that a market-maker can't act as an agent and charge a commission. There are firm rules, however, prohibiting any brokerage firm from acting as both your agent and principal on one transaction. This means that a broker can't charge you both a commission and a mark-up or mark-down on an individual trade.

Q. I lost or destroyed an interest check received on a U.S. Treasury bond. I must have thrown it in the wastepaper basket and put it out with the trash or burned it. I had not endorsed it. Will the government make good for this? I am 94 and live alone.

A. Yes, you can get a duplicate check. Write to Division of Securities Operations, Bureau of the Public Debt, Washington, D.C., 20226. On the lower left part of the envelope, make a notation "non-receipt of interest." That should expedite things a bit.

Explain what happened and provide as many details as you can — the serial number of your bond, the date of the check and such.

The Treasury Department will send you a letter of indemnity, which you must sign and send back. Then, a new interest check will be issued. Unfortunately, it will take some time — at least three months.

Q. Back in April 1961, I started buying shares of a closed-end investment company on the New York Stock Exchange. I have reinvested all dividends and capital gains distributions and now own 230 shares. I am worried, because its shares are at a 25 percent discount. I am 70, a bachelor, comfortably retired on three pensions, with $20,000 in other stocks and $100,000 in banks. What do you recommend I do about the closed-end investment company?

A. I say hang on and stop worrying. The record books show that the company you named has done better than most closed-end investment companies and many mutual funds — which are open-end investment companies.

The stocks of almost all closed-end investment companies are now trading in the market at discounts — well below the actual dollars and cents values of their shares. That's happened before. When the market turns upward, that stock should do well.

Considering your overall financial position, you can afford the relatively small amount of money you have out at risk with that stock.

Cuba, Panama Seen Aiding Nicaraguan Guerrillas

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence reports disclose that the governments of Panama and Cuba have collaborated closely in assisting the Nicaraguan guerrilla movement with arms, ammunition and trained personnel.

The reports also say Cuba appears to have concluded that the weakness of the Nicaraguan government has "markedly improved" prospects for revolutionary upheaval elsewhere in Central America.

As a result, the report said Cuba has attempted to unify insurgent groups in El Salvador and Guatemala, both of which are under conservative military rule.

The documents, first made public in Wednesday's editions of the Chicago Tribune, indicate the administration was aware of the extent of Cuban-Panamanian involvement as far back as May 2.

The issue of Panamanian assistance to the Sandinista guerrillas has been a highly sensitive one on Capitol Hill, where the administration has been engaged in a lengthy struggle to win support for legislation to implement the Panama Canal treaties.

Administration officials have acknowledged all along that Panamanians have been aiding the guerrillas but have steered clear of implicating the Panamanian government in this effort.

Nonethless, the intelligence documents say a Panamanian Air Force plane was used last September to transfer eight crates of arms from Cuba to Panama for subsequent shipment to Nicaraguan guerrilla forces based in Costa Rica. The information was attributed only to "several sources."

Weapons of Soviet, Chinese and French manufacture were shipped to the rebels from Cuba through Panama this past spring, according to the reports.

The documents say a member of the Panamanian secret police reported on March 10 that Panama is serving as a transit point for Cuban-trained guerrillas en route to Nicaragua.

The reports also quoted a Nicaraguan guerrilla leader as saying on April 13 that Cuba has trained 300 Nicaraguan rebels. The leader of one of the guerrilla factions also was reported to have said in early April that half of his group's regular combatants have received training in Cuba.

In recent weeks, administration officials have acknowledged that they have pressed Panamanian officials to ensure that Panama not be used to aid the Nicaraguan guerrilla struggle.

They contended that support from Panama was jeopardizing passage of legislation to enable the United States to carry out its obligations under the canal treaty.

The House narrowly passed the legislation last week. Six hours later, the Panamanian government announced its recognition of the Sandinista-appointed provisional government as the legitimate representatives of the Nicaraguan people.

Although the documents were dated almost two months ago, the administration had remained silent about their contents until shortly after the House vote on June 20.

Addressing an Organization of American States foreign ministers meeting, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance cited "mounting evidence of involvement by Cuba and others in the internal problems of Nicaragua." He made no reference to Panama.

According to the documents, however, Cuba "clearly believes it has a stake in preserving its improving image with many governments in the hemisphere and wants to avoid provoking a U.S. counterresponse."

As a result, the documents say, Cuba has decided to use third country intermediaries, such as Panama, to deliver its assistance to the Sandinistas.

Cuban President Fidel Castro is reported to have denied providing any support for the Sandinistas.

City Woman Freed Following Shooting

A 34-year-old Lubbock woman was released Thursday afternoon from Lubbock County Jail on a personal recognizance bond in connection with the shooting death of Wanda Fay Parson, 26, of 1704 Vanda Ave.

Miss Parson was pronounced dead shortly before 1 a.m. Thursday on arrival at West Texas Hospital. She suffered a .22-caliber bullet wound near the left shoulder blade.

Justice of the Peace Charles Smith ruled the death a homicide, the city's 12th this year.

The shooting suspect was arrested after the incident on a count of voluntary manslaughter.

The case will be presented to the grand jury the second week in July, a spokesman for the Lubbock County District Attorney's Office said Thursday.

Another victim in the apparent domestic quarrel was Belvin Thomas, 43, of 3318 E. 15th St. He suffered stab wounds to the chest and arm during the altercation, which erupted about 12:15 a.m. Thursday.

Thomas remained in serious condition late Thursday in St. Mary's Hospital.

When police arrived at the East Second Street apartment they found Miss Parson lying in the driveway where a large group of people had gathered.

Reports indicate the shooting suspect stepped from the crowd wielding a .22-caliber blue steel revolver, handed the weapon to police and said she shot the victim, adding, "They was fighting and I shot her."

Officers entered the apartment and found Thomas in a bedroom suffering multiple stab wounds.

Several witnesses said Thomas had gone to the residence to talk to the suspect and was confronted by Miss Parson in the driveway, where the two began arguing.

Thomas reportedly was backing a vehicle out of the driveway when Miss Parson walked up and said to the man, "Get out of the car...I told you not to bring the car over here. I don't care what you are or where you go, I told you not to bring the car over here."

Witnesses said the couple had argued several minutes when Miss Parson displayed a knife and stabbed Thomas. The man and woman were pulled apart and Thomas was taken into the apartment, according to several witnesses.

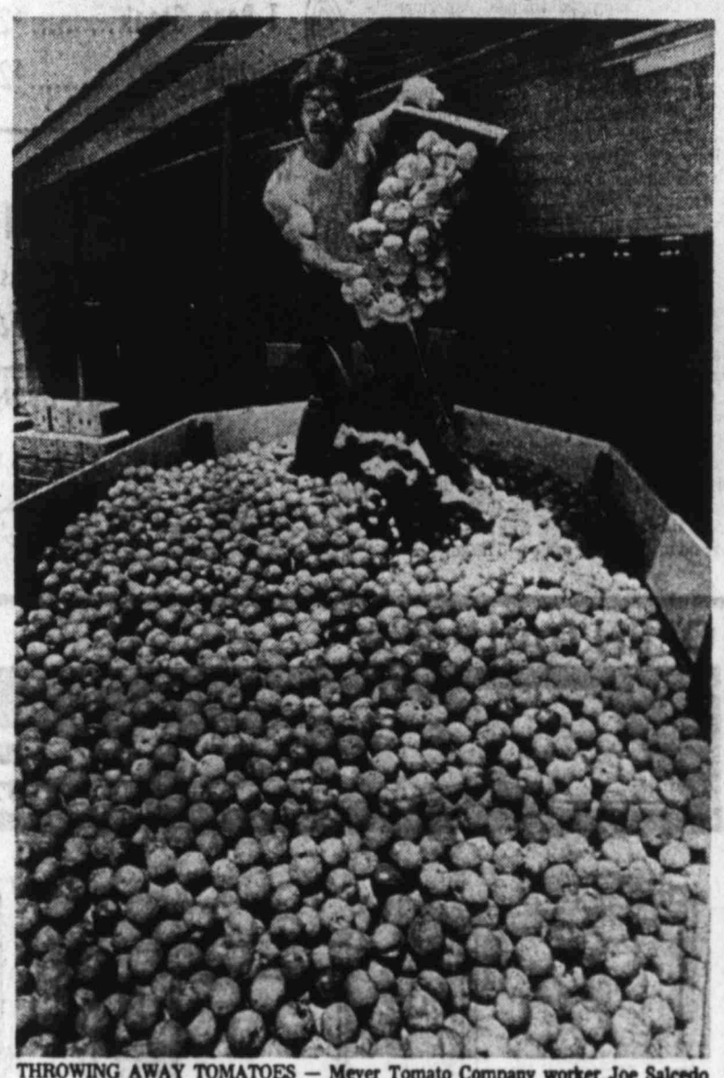
The suspect told police she was attending to the stabbed man when his assailant broke into the residence wielding the pistol.

Reports indicate the two women wrestled in the bedroom and Miss Parson dropped the gun. The 34-year-old female suspect told police Miss Parson picked up an ash tray stand and was about to strike Thomas — who was lying on the bed — when she shot her with the revolver.

The shooting victim then was taken outside and placed on the driveway where police found her.

The woman who reportedly fired the fatal shot remained in the county jail late this morning.

Miss Parson's body was taken to South Plains Funeral Home, where services were pending this morning.



THROWING AWAY TOMATOES — Meyer Tomato Company worker Joe Salcedo tosses out thousands of overripe tomatoes at the King City plant as a result of the truckers strike. Although tomatoes are still being picked, there are no trucks to take them to market. Company president Robert Meyer said the company is losing about $120,000 a day because of the strike. King City is about 160 miles south of San Francisco. (AP Laserphoto)

Burglars Strike Firm, Steal Tires, Wheels

Thieves made off with large hauls of property from a Lubbock business and a vacant apartment, police reports indicated Thursday.

About $1,800 worth of tires and wheels was reported stolen between 6:30 p.m. Wednesday and 7:15 a.m. Thursday by Mike Stevens, manager at American Equipment and Trailer Co., 3707 Quirt Ave.

Stevens said he arrived at work Thursday morning to discover six Goodyear tires mounted on Firestone wheels missing from a storage area behind the store building.

Police found a hole cut in a chain-link fence which surrounds the storage area, where the mounted tires had been chained together. The padlock securing the chain apparently had been cut by a bolt cutter.

Chester Campbell told police Thursday that about $785 worth of furniture and appliances had been stolen from a vacant apartment at 1121-D 43rd St. sometime Tuesday or Wednesday.

He had gone to make a routine check of the property when he discovered the loss.

In other activity, a Lubbock woman reportedly was beaten and pushed out of her car shortly after midnight Thursday after she resisted sexual advances made toward her by a man and a woman.

The 41-year-old victim remained in satisfactory condition Thursday evening at Highland Hospital, suffering from multiple cuts, bruises and possible broken ribs.

Police found the woman sitting on the ground crying in front of a convenience store at 29th Street and Slide Road.

Two men told police they found the woman, abandoned and naked from the waist up, at 82nd Street and Frankfort Avenue. They said they were taking her to the hospital when they decided to stop at the store and call police.

When first questioned, the woman reportedly refused to tell police what happened, saying, "I don't want anyone to know."

However, at the hospital, the victim said she had been assaulted by a man and woman whom she had given a ride from a 19th Street bar.

Police were told that while in the car the female passenger began pulling off the woman's blouse. When the victim resisted, the pair beat her and threw her out of the 1978 white and blue Buick, according to reports.

The suspects then allegedly drove off in their victim's car. Both were described as Mexican-American, between 18 and 25 years old, and short. The man reportedly was thin and sported a mustache. The female assailant was of medium build.

Too Much Milk Can Cause Stomach Aches, Study Says

BOSTON (AP) — School-age children who are bothered by recurring, unexplainable tummy aches may be drinking too much milk, a study shows.

The report, published Thursday, concludes that more kids than doctors previously realized may suffer pain because they are unable to digest a few glasses of milk.

Previous studies have shown that about 10 percent of all school children have episodes of unexplained abdominal pain. Usually their doctors assume it is caused by an underlying disease or emotional stress.

The latest study published in the New England Journal of Medicine was directed by Dr. Ronald G. Barr at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston.

The researchers examined 80 children ranging in age from 4 to 15 who complained of recurring abdominal pain. Using a newly-developed breath test, they found that 4 percent of them suffered from lactose intolerance, an inability to properly digest milk sugar.

Shot From Air Gun Fatal To Boy, 2

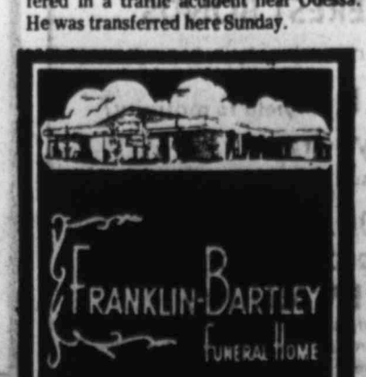
BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A 2-year-old boy was fatally wounded in the chest when a 4-year-old playmate fired a single shot with an air gun, police said.

The 2-year-old boy, Jesus Padin, was sitting on his mother's lap when the 4-year-old came into the room and fired the shot, authorities said.

The boy was rushed to St. Vincent's Medical Center at 3:05 p.m. Wednesday and die at 4:10 p.m., police said. The incident took place while the child and his mother were visiting the home of Miguel Torres, 63, police said.

The 4-year-old's name was not released.

Police said the gun was a combination BB-pellet gun which contained a single BB when fired. The child was struck near his heart, police said.



Young Campers Get VIP Treatment

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Outdoor Editor

Start with nine holes of golf, add a game of tennis, have a quick swim, enjoy a delicious meal, and then get a good night's sleep in an air-conditioned cabin surrounded by some of Texas's most scenic country.

If it all sounds like a resort for big-time executives you're wrong. It's a summer camp for youngsters!

The Chandler Ranch Summer Camp for boys and girls, ages 8 through 14, is now in its first season and has already been termed "a topnotch place" by campers and parents.

In Terrell County near Sheffield, the ranch site is blessed with huge live oak trees amid scenic plateaus where Independence Creek joins the Pecos River.

"It's absolutely beautiful!" exclaimed Lubbock resident Mrs. JoBeth Chandler Holub, assistant camp director. She speaks with a native's knowledge of the area, having been raised on the ranch that was homesteaded by her grandfather.

Mrs. Holub and her sister Mrs. Charlena Chandler Vargas-Prada, the camp director, recently assumed management of the facilities their parents made into an adult guest ranch in 1950.

"The ranch has always been a family operation," noted Mrs. Holub. "My sister has a degree in education and has worked with children on an educational basis for several years. Consequently, when our parents decided to turn over management of the ranch to us, we saw the opportunity to use the membership only camping and fishing retreat for adults as a summer camp for boys and girls."

The youth camp is accredited with the National Camping Association, plus it maintains a personal camper standard not found at some camps. For example, the campers take turns saying the blessing at meal times. Good manners and courtesy are an integral part of each meal and of the entire program.

Another feature departing from the norm of some youth camps is that camper-against-camper competition is not practiced at Chandler Ranch in the games and other activities. Instead, individual excellence, self competition and team cooperation are encouraged and developed. And everyone has an opportunity to participate regardless of size or level of skill.

Included in the activities are fishing, tennis, soccer, golf, arts and crafts, singing around a campfire and square dancing. These activities and many more guarantee hearty appetites, so the camp has its own food nutrition specialist.

The camp menu has been prepared by the Foods and Nutrition Department at Texas Tech. Parents are invited to partake of a barbecue lunch with the youngsters on the last day of the camp.

A registered nurse is a member of the staff residing at the ranch. There is an infirmary there and if a medical emergency should occur a hospital is less than an hour from the camp.

"We haven't had a single instance of homesickness or tears during the first session," noted Mrs. Holub, "so we're pleased and very surprised." Parents may phone their children and vice versa at any time.

Summer camp wouldn't be summer camp without cookouts and overnight camping. The ranch has plenty of interesting country for such activities, but two specific areas are favored.

The Shady Oaks Camp consists of large live oak trees with a view of the dramatic bluffs. The Divide Camp Site is on top of nearby mountains with a picturesque view of the ranch headquarters.

To reach either camp site, some hiking is involved after a ride in off-roadvehicles. Plans next year call for gentle mules to provide some of the transportation. On the overnight trips, the youngsters are taught how to safely build a campfire and to set up a basic camp.

Discovery

Fishing for bass, catfish and perch have become popular activities. Besides the creek and river, there are four private lakes on the ranch and they are stocked for guaranteed fishing success. According to Mrs. Holub, "The fishing is super!"

The camp program, understandably, is a complete success. Consequently, all sessions for this summer are completely booked. Applications are now being taken for next summer. There will be several two-week sessions, with each priced at $300 at this writing.

Because the camp is relatively close to Lubbock, area residents should make inquiries at this time. Additional information may be obtained from Chandler Ranch, P.O. Box 114, Dryden, TX 79881, or by phone at 792-0056 in Lubbock after 6 p.m.

With such high standards, varied activities, a ratio of one counselor per five youngsters and the parental guidance of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Chandler, the Chandler Ranch Summer Camp is a welcome addition to West Texas.

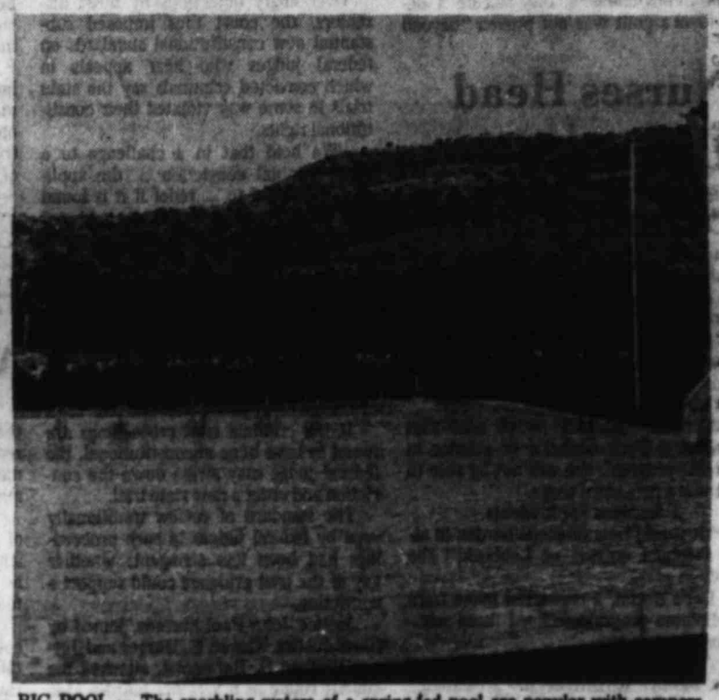
Wiener roasts and a beautiful golf course — marshmallow Camp is a welcome addition to West Texas.

Wiener roasts and a beautiful golf course; marshmallow toasts and spring fed swimming pool; big-time executives never had it so good!

LEWIS AND CLARK? — Two campers discover the fun of paddling a canoe. All activities for youngsters at the Chandler Ranch are supervised for safety and optimum learning.

GREAT GRUB! — The menu for campers has been prepared by the Foods and Nutrition Department at Texas Tech and family style meals are complemented by cookouts and picnics for variety.

ARCHERY SESSION — A full schedule of activities keeps campers busy. The new summer ranch camp includes arts and crafts along with varied outdoor oriented sports.



BIG POOL — The sparkling waters of a spring-fed pool are popular with campers. The youth camp is the only one in Texas with its own nine-hole golf course.

TIME OUT — The coeducational summer camp for youngsters 8 to 14 encourages individual excellence. Because camper-against-camper competion is not stressed, there is a strong feeling of fellowship among all ages.

UP GO OIL PRICES — Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheik Ahamed Zaki Yanani, left, and members of his delegation leave the conference room at the end of three days of OPEC oil cartel meetings in Geneva Thursday. As expected the conference set the rise in oil prices which will result in about a 4 cent boost in gas prices in the United States. (AP Laserphoto)

OPEC Price Hike Blasted By Carter

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The OPEC cartel raised world crude oil prices to a range of $18 to $23.50 a barrel Thursday, the biggest increase in five years. President Carter called the hike "extraordinary" and said everyone in the world would suffer.

The price boosts — at a time of shortage, huge gasoline lines in the United States and frantic bidding-up of prices on the world market — are designed to "bring some stability" to the situation, the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries said.

Experts estimate the OPEC decision by itself will add four to five cents a gallon to the retail price of gasoline and heating oil in the United States. When decontrol of domestic oil prices and other factors are added, the price may climb as much as 15 cents a gallon by year's end, some economists say.

All Will Suffer

President Carter, attending an economic summit in Tokyo, said: "There is no one on earth who will fail to suffer from these extraordinary increases in oil prices." He called on Congress to approve "billions of dollars" to develop alternative energy supplies and make the United States self-sufficient.

In Washington, private and government economists said the price boosts mean that an average family's bill for gasoline and motor oil will rise at least $230 this year, while the cost of home heating oil will increase more than $90.

The OPEC decision, announced after three days of tough bargaining between price "hawks" and "doves," establishes a multi-level pricing system, with Saudi Arabia at the bottom and such hawks as Libya at the top. It meant the various factions had failed in an effort to reach a new, unified base price.

The base price — for a 42-gallon barrel of Arabian light crude — was raised to $18 from the current $14.55, a 24 percent hike. Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani said Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar would stick with that benchmark price.

Surcharge Allowed

But the cartel agreed that any country could add surcharges up to $2 to the base price if market conditions permit. A $20-per-barrel base would represent a 37 percent increase.

On top of that, the OPEC countries, as they have always done, will add further premiums for higher-quality oil — up to a ceiling of $23.50 per barrel. Such countries as Nigeria, Libya and Algeria, which produce the best OPEC oil, are expected to post their prices at the $23.50 ceiling.

Currently the highest official price is $21.31 a barrel for top-grade Libyan crude.

In fact, though the UAE and Qatar officially will abide by the $18 benchmark with Saudi Arabia, they will tack on small premiums because theirs is better-grade oil.

The new sliding-scale set of increases is effective Sunday, July 1, and is to extend to the end of the year.

It amounts to the heftiest boost in OPEC prices since they were quadrupled in a matter of months in 1973-74, and the $18 floor is 42 percent higher than the $12.70 per barrel rice of just one year go.

The United States imports about 8.4 million barrels of oil per day, about 45 percent of its needs. One-quarter of the imports come from Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the UAE, and about 55 percent from the other OPEC nations, those that may boost their prices to the new ceiling.

Because of the transportation lag in getting the higher-priced oil to the U.S. marketplace, the direct effect of Thursday's decision is not expected to be felt until late summer.

Even harder-hit will be Western Europe and Japan, which import much more of their oil than does the United States, and developing countries of the Third World, who have had to borrow heavily to pay their oil bills.

The communique announcing the price hikes noted the OPEC nations had agreed to add $800 million to their fund to help developing countries overcome the problems of higher-priced oil, increasing the fund's balance to more than $1 billion. It accused the industrialized nations of failing to "face up to their responsibilities toward the problems of the Third World."

In Washington, Kahn said the OPEC increases were "a terribly painful additional twist on the inflation screw."

"Perhaps even worse, it will push all the economies in the direction of recession.... The only real solution has got to be curbing our purchases of oil," he said.

Saudi Arabi's Yamani, representing OPEC's biggest producer, predicted a recession in the United States "not because of the price of oil but because of the financial measures adopted late last year" — meaning the U.S. Federal Reserve Board's increase in interest rates.

But he told reporters the economic slump would deepen if oil use remains high. "Either you cut consumption by your own will or because of a recession," he said.

Supreme Court Widens Spectrum For Appeals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal judges are empowered to overturn state court convictions if they decide a defendant's guilt was not proven "beyond a reasonable doubt," the Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

Over angry objections by three dissenters, the court thus imposed substantial new constitutional standards on federal judges who hear appeals in which convicted criminals say the state trials in some way violated their constitutional rights.

"We hold that in a challenge to a state criminal conviction ... the applicant is entitled to ... relief if it is found that upon the record evidence adduced at the trial no rational trier of fact could have found proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt," Justice Potter Stewart wrote for the court.

Search For Errors

Under a system of review known to lawyers as habeas corpus, federal judges may review state proceedings in search of alleged constitutional errors.

If the criminal trial proceedings are found to have been unconstitutional, the federal judge may strike down the conviction and order a new state trial.

The standard of review traditionally used by federal judges in such proceedings had been less stringent: whether any of the trial evidence could support a conviction.

Justice John Paul Stevens, joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice William H. Rehnquist, attacked the court's ruling in a Virginia murder case as an unfounded "new constitutional formula" that will prove a waste of judges' valuable time.

"There is simply no reason to tinker with an elaborate mechanism that is now functioning well," Stevens wrote for the dissenters.

"Hours Of Labor"

He said the new standard "will seldom, if ever, provide a convicted state prisoner with any tangible benefits" but "will surely impose countless additional hours of unproductive labor on federal judges and their assistants."

The court's vote was 5-3. Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., who missed hearing arguments in the case, took no part in deciding it.

Ironically, the new standard did not benefit the man whose test case led to it.

The court ruled that James A. Jackson, who is serving a 30-year sentence in the Virginia State Penitentiary for first-degree murder, received adequate review of his conviction under the new standard.

Jackson was convicted in the 1975 shooting death of a woman friend, Mary Cole. Mrs. Cole's body was found in the parking lot of a Chesterfield County church outside of Richmond.

As they approached the end of the high court's current term, expected to be Monday, the justices in a separate decision gave the federal government's money managers a qualified victory.

They set aside two lower court rulings that monthly recommendations made by the Federal Reserve Board's open market committee are not exempt from "prompt" disclosure requirements of the Freedom of Information Act.

Nurses Head Drive For School Funds

three years she has hoped for the opening of Tech's nursing school, she said, because its multiple entry program would mean she would not have to repeat courses she has already taken for her LVN training.

But the Lubbock native said that without a Tech bachelor of science in nursing program, she will not be able to become a registered nurse.

Burdens For Students

"It would be a financial burden to attend school outside of Lubbock," she said.

Bebe Boren, a registered nurse from a diploma program, echoed those sentiments.

"I cannot leave Lubbock (because of my family) to further my education," she said. Although Mrs. Boren has an RN degree, she said her diploma program did not prepare her for the responsibilties she faces as a public health nurse and she would like a baccalaureate degree to upgrade her training.

Although they were not present at the meeting, Miss Whiteaker said State Sen. E.L. Short, Rep. Froy Salinas and Rep. Buzz Robnett "have individually expressed their support."

TNA requests that citizens and organizations which support the move coordinate their efforts through the TNA at P.O. Box 10308, Lubbock, TX 79408. She said letters, telegrams and resolutions are welcomed by the organization.

Nurses Urgently Needed

Miss Whiteaker said funding for the Tech school is urgently needed now, as it is "not uncommon for nurses here to have to work two shifts."

Statistics from the South Plains Health Systems, which is sending its own letter and resolution for the nursing school to the governor, show that 22 percent of nursing positions in the 15-county South Plains area are unfilled. In the letter to the governor, Ronald Warner, president of the group, noted that health care costs will rise without an adequate supply of nurses.

than a year ago by the pair, finally was recommended for approval earlier this month by the Planning and Zoning Commission.

The council delayed implementation of a portion of the state tax relief bill which specifies agricultural land should be taxed on its productive value rather than its market value.

John Brooks, city-school tax assessor-collector, recommended the implementation of the provision be delayed because of the time involved in changing the methods of taxing farm land for the current tax year.

The productivity value will be used beginning Jan. 1.

'Strong' Carter Letter Asks Somoza To Quit

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The United States asked President Anastasio Somoza to resign Thursday "in the name of humanity," but the Nicaraguan strongman vowed to stay in office and said he would dissolve congress if it asked him to quit.

U.S. sources said the new American ambassador to Nicaragua, Lawrence A. Pezzullo, personally delivered a "strong letter" from President Carter to Somoza.

Carter's message urged Somoza, whose family has ruled Nicaragua for 43 years, to resign "in the name of humanity and for the good of the country," the sources said.

The American sources did not disclose Somoza's specific reply to the Carter message, but the Nicaraguan president repeated his absolute refusal to step down in a series of interviews Thursday.

"I will stay in power at all costs, apd if congress asks for my resignation, I will dissolve it immediately," Somoza said.

Ignoring Somoza's comments, the Sandinista guerrillas battling his regime announced the appointment of a 30-member "junta of national reconstruction," including all opposition groups and the nation's largest labor unions. The guerrillas continued their military advance in the south.

Speaking by telephone from "The Bunker," his bombproof headquarters in the capital, Somoza told the Colombian newspaper La Republica his troops would fight on if they lost the civil war to the Sandinistas, taking up a guerrilla struggle if necessary.

Somoza called the Nicaraguan congress into special session Thursday, amid a number of rumors that his resignation was imminent. He emphatically denied all such speculation and said he had convened congress to consider the budget and other routine legislative matters.

"I have called this session of the congress because we need to arrange the budget," Somoza told UPI in a telephone interview. "Besides, we have to get business going normally in Nicaragua again."

On the military front, Sandinista troops partially surrounded a national guard commmand post in the key southern city of Rivas Thursday. There were reports that the local population had taken up arms against the national guard units on Wednesday.

Inflation Hike Seen; Gas Rationing Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Alfred E. Kahn said Thursday the government should consider rationing to ease the gasoline crisis. And, in the Carter administration's gloomiest assessment of the economy, he predicted that inflation this year will average 10 percent or more.

Kahn's chief deputy, Barry Bosworth, said the latest round of price increases by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raises the risk of recession and added that the nation is headed for bankruptcy unless it cuts its appetite for foreign oil.

The two officials said cutting oil imports, which account for half of U.S. consumption, must be the first step in fighting inflation. The Council on Wage and Price Stability, which they head, carries on the government's voluntary fight against inflation.

Blame Widely Spread

Testifying before the House Government Operations consumer subcommittee, Kahn and Bosworth agreed there is widespread price-gouging in the distribution of gasoline. They blamed some retailers, jobbers and mainly smaller refiners.

"I suspect, as a private citizen, that there are widespread violations at the retail level," Kahn said.

Bosworth was more certain. "Many (retailers) are violating (federal price) controls," he said. "On the basis of national data from the Consumer Price Index and the Producer Price Index, retail gasoline prices are going up far more rapidly than can be justified by refining costs."

It is almost impossible to administer the government's system of oil-price controls, which Carter has begun phasing out, Bosworth said. "People are just too damned ingenious at finding a way to get around them," he added.

As for rationing, Kahn said, "I feel that when the American people get mad enough about having to wait in line — and that is the inevitable consequence of price controls — they will be prepared to go to a system that limits consumption.

"We really ought to consider rationing," he added.

Earlier this year, the House rejected a plan that would have given the president standby authority to impose rationing.

Government As Buyer

Kahn also indicated he could support a move in Congress to have the U.S. government, rather than private oil companies, act as the buyer of whatever imported oil the nation needs. "It makes me nervous" that the big oil companies, which control U.S. production, also do the purchasing from foreign governments, he said.

Kahn's estimate that inflation this year will average 10 percent or more was the gloomiest assessment yet by any official in the Carter administration. The president proposed a budget, last January, that envisioned a 7.5-percent price increase this year.

Kahn told the subcommittee: "The OPEC increases yesterday raise the real specter that we will be bumping at double-digit inflation for the rest of this year."

He added that he expected the average to be at the bottom end of the double-digit level, meaning perhaps 10 to 12 percent for the rest of the year.

Consumer prices increased in the first five months of 1979 at an average annual rate of nearly 14 percent. The CPI rose nine percent in 1978.

Kahn and Bosworth agreed that energy has replaced food as the No. 1 cause of inflation. Although farm prices soared during the first three months of the year, they have stabilized. But the council is investigating why that moderation has not resulted in lower supermarket prices, they added.

Their solution for inflation was the same they have been offered all year: reducing oil imports, restraining federal spending and compliance with Carter's voluntary standards for wage and price increases.

While most of the news about inflation sounds bad, Bosworth said, there has been phenomenal compliance with the president's call to hold wage increases to seven percent or less. Kahn added that only two of the nation's 500 largest corporations have been found in violation of the price standards.

Food Price Levelling Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average increase in food prices this year could "moderately exceed" 10 percent, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The department issued a report projecting an average increase in food prices of between 10.2 and 11.2 percent. The department's previous estimate had been for a price rise of eight percent to 10 percent.

Department forecasters said they were forced to revise their previous estimates because of uncertainties throughout the economy, ranging from rising grain prices to fuel shortages and prices.

Small Increase In May

Over-all food prices increased 0.7 percent in May, the smallest change since November, the government said Tuesday. Grocery-store prices rose 0.5 percent, the lowest hike in a year, it said.

"Only modest food price increases are likely in the months ahead," the outlook board said, "but given the increases we've already had ... and the uncertainties which remain, it is likely that the average increase will moderately exceed 10 percent."

Higher grain prices, which will not influence most food prices until next year, probably will raise net farm income near the record $33 billion of 1973, the Agriculture Department report said. Previously, farm income had been expected to decline slightly from last year's $28 billion.

The actual difference between average 1978 grocery bills and 1979 averages depends heavily on whether the middlemen's share of consumer prices for beef and pork "continues to increase at a rate which exceeds apparent increases in marketing costs," the department forecast said.

Reports From Russia

Grain prices have risen following reports that the Soviet Union's crops may be poorer than expected, forcing the Russians to keep spending in the export markets and giving farmers reason to harvest more.

The price forecasts reflected those surges.

Corn is a key ingredient in the U.S. food supply. As the leading grain, its availability for animal feed and its price is crucial to the production of meat, milk and poultry products.

Soybeans are the source of vegetable oil and high-protein meal used in feed and many food products.

Although the U.S. grain stockpile is the largest since the early 1960s, export demand has been brisk.

For the year ending Sept. 30, the Russians have bought about 13.4 million metric tons of wheat and corn and are expected to buy up to 1.6 million more this summer.

Twisters Kill Three In Iowa

By The Associated Press

Tornadoes raged through at least four north central Iowa towns Thursday night, killing three persons and causing an undetermined number of injuries. One tiny town was evacuated after an anhydrous ammonia tank exploded.

The twisters wrecked a number of buildings, knocked out power and telephones and felled trees. Many roads were blocked.

The Iowa Highway Patrol reported three persons were killed. The precise number of injured persons was not immediately known, officials said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic Party, thinking kindly of the city where its wounds were healed and a winning candidate was chosen three years ago, decided Thursday to return to New York for the 1980 presidential nominating convention.

Also working in the Big Apple's favor with the site selection committee were such factors as the city's abundance of hotel rooms and its proven convention hall. Detroit and Philadelphia finished far behind.

The Republicans already have picked Detroit for their convention, which begins July 14, 1980. The Democrats will open in New York on Aug. 11.

The Democratic convention is expected to cost the financially strapped city $7 million in services and facilities. But it promises pay New York a dividend amounting to approximately $30 million in new business.

The site committee's decision is final and not subject to approval by the Democratic National Committee. The GOP choice was settled only after a bitter floor fight before its national committee.

Although the White House exerted no direct pressure in connection with the Democrats' decision-making process, New York was known to be the sentimental favorite from the start. It was there that Jimmy Carter, the self-proclaimed outsider, was nominated as his party's standardbearer in 1976 and went on to win the White House.

It also was at the last New York convention that Democrats finally buried the hatchet on a decade of internal reform battles and joined ranks for a comeback that left them the dominant political force in the federal, state and local governments.

"The theme song of this convention should be 'Jimmy Comes Marching Home Again. Hurrah. Hurrah,'" John C. White, Democratic Party chairman, said in a telephone call to New York Mayor Edward Koch immediately following the site selection committee's vote.

"We're going to have the convention and renominate the next president," Koch replied.

New York got its majority of 23 votes on the first ballot, with Detroit getting only three and Philadelphia two. Dallas, which had been an initial bidder, had withdrawn before the voting.

The promise of 100,000 hotel rooms within walking distance of the convention site at Madison Square Garden made New York's bid virtually unbeatable, all parties conceded after the decision.

The convention will draw more than 5,000 delegates and alternates alone, plus up to 2,000 reporters, broadcasters, photographers and technicians to cover the event. In addition, the big quadrennial political carnivals always attract untold thousands of interested onlookers

"It brings a certain 'up' spirit," Koch said. "People have confidence in New York. It means we'll have tourists from all over the world."

Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit, who also is a vice chairman of the Democratic Party, said right away that his city would bid again for the 1984 convention, and expects to get it.

"I do not think they could afford to go to New York three conventions running," Young said. "And we absolutely can match any other city.

"At the rate of construction in Detroit there will be another 2,000 hotel rooms in the city and another 1,000 in the perimeter by 1984," Young said.

But city executive Joe LaSala indicated there also would be a 1984 bid from Philadelphia, which last hosted a national convention in 1948, when the Democrats, Republicans and a major third party effort held nominating conventions there.

"The experience puts the city in a better position for the 1984 convention and other political conventions before then," LaSala said.

Bystanders Help Recover Nickels

NEWINGTON, Conn. (AP) — A 100-foot section of a street was covered with silver for a short time when four bags of nickels worth about $800 spilled from the rear of an armored-truck.

A Purolator Security Inc. truck bound for a Hartford bank spewed the nickels along the street Wednesday after a door flew open. Bystanders helped retrieve the coins, and a Purolator official said, "If we lost anything, it was probably $5."

Gas Supplies Tighten As Holiday Approaches

By The Associated Press

Millions of Americans approached the last weekend of June and the July Fourth holiday with uncertainty Thursday, as the flow from gasoline pumps slowed to a trickle.

An Associated Press spot check indicated that fuel will be hardest to find during the next week in the heavily-populated Eastern cities, many of which already restrict purchases.

But there were signs that the crunch is spreading. A survey by the Montana AAA, for example, showed that 10 percent fewer stations would be open this weekend than last. And the president of the Arkansas Gasoline Retailers Association said this Saturday and Sunday would be the "worst yet."

Prices continued their steady climb, with no relief in sight. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, announced it was raising crude oil prices to between $18 and $23.50 a barrel, a boost which is expected to add four cents to the cost of a gallon of gasoline in the United States.

The AAA, in its weekly survey on prices and supplies, said that the average price of regular gasoline at full-service stations was 89 cents per gallon. Premium sold for an average of 94.3 cents a gallon and unleaded for 92.9 cents, the AAA said.

The auto club said propsects for the weekend were gloomy. "Compounding the uncertainty were spot month-end shortages at the pumps, scattered delivery interruptions caused by striking independent drivers and the approach of the July Fourth holiday," the AAA said.

Its survey of 6,833 service stations showed 10 percent fewer stations would be open this weekend than were open last weekend.

Alfred E. Kahn, chairman of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability, accused many gasoline distributors of price gouging and recommended that the government consider rationing — an idea already rejected by Congress once this year.

Officials warned people not to panic. Damon Harrison, deputy energy commissioner of Kentucky, said, for example, that drivers should have enough fuel for the weekend and the mid-week holiday as long as they don't rush to the pumps to top off their tanks. He said panic is "the quickest way to guarantee there'll be a shortage this weekend."

The picture was complicated by threats from some gasoline retailers to shut down starting July 1 in protest of federal regulations which restrict their profit margins.

Potential shutdowns in New Jersey, Connecticut and Pennsylvania were called off at the last minute, but some Georgia station operators reportedly were still unhappy. "Some of the stations we surveyed were very tentative when we asked if they were going to be open this weekend," said Maurice Myers of the Georgia AAA Motor Club.

The situation varied from region to region, from state to state and from city to city. An American Automobile Association survey of New England showed that only 12 percent of the area's stations would be open on Sunday. Thanks to special allocations, however, 25 percent of Cape Cod's stations will be open on Sunday.

Sheila Molony of the Mississippi office of fuel and energy said, "We don't expect any major problems, but we urge people to stick to the main highways."

And James Benton, executive director of the Gasoline Retailers of Northeastern New York, added, "The further you get away from the urban areas, the better you are. If you can get to the hinterlands, they probably have enough gas to get you home."

Some service station operators arranged to borrow from July allocations to get them through June. But they warned motorists not to expect any major improvement in supplies.

"I don't think you'll see many more stations open this weekend than last," said Maurice Langelier, executive director of the Bay State Gasoline Retailers Association. Only 5 percent of the stations in Massachusetts were open last weekend, he said.

Pennsylvania began an odd-even sales system on Thursday; Delaware prepared for similar restrictions on Friday; and Rhode Island officials announced that odd-even rationing would go into effect next week.

Trouble In Finding Gasoline Drives Man To Suicide

MIAMI (AP) — A newspaper delivery man was found shot to death Thursday, and his wife said he had killed himself because he was despondent over difficulties in obtaining gas needed for his job.

James Rogers, 60, a Miami News carrier, was found dead in bed at home by Miami police. A .38-caliber revolver was on the bed next to him, officers said. He was shot once through the right ear, said Miami homicide detective Ron Ilhardt.

Rogers had been complaining about the gasoline situation all week, said fellow delivery man Wally Ballou. "He was really getting fanatical about it. He got depressed easily over little things."

Rogers had used a 1977 station wagon to deliver about 3,500 papers a week. Friends estimated he used at least 10 gallons of gas a day to deliver the papers.

Mrs. Bessie Rogers told police her husband became "extremely despondent over not being able to get gas to deliver his newspapers."

"Because of the gas situation, he was argumentative, despondent and short-tempered. He spoke of it often," she told police.

She told officers she had no other explanation for her husband's suicide besides the gas crunch.

Miami News circulation manager Ralph Gibson said delivery men have had problems getting fuel for their cars and trucks.

"They're in lines almost every day," he said. "Because of purchase limits many hit two lines a day just to get enough gas to keep them going."

Bell Seeking Revenue Increase In Texas Of $145.2 Million

AUSTIN (AP) — Most Texans' telephone bills would rise by $1.55 a month if the Public Utility Commission grants rate increases requested Thursday by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

Bell wants to increase its revenue by $145.2 million a year.

Commission chairman George Cowden said the panel probably would hear the Bell case in September.

"Continuing growth and inflation leave us no choice but to ask for increased rates," said Doyle Rogers, the company's vice president for Texas.

The Texas Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now said it was "outraged" at the request.

"For many low-and moderate-income people a phone is a necessity. Southwestern Bell's latest rate increase request is but one more assault on our already strained budgets," it said.

The rate increase package includes higher prices for PBX equipment, Centrex service, key telephones and installation service.

But higher prices for basic home and business telephone service account for $105.2 million of the requested increase.

The $1.55 flat-rate increase would jump basic monthly charges in Houston from $8 to $9.55, in Dallas from $7.50 to $9.05, San Antonio and Fort Worth from $7 to $8.55, and Austin from $6.50 to $8.05.

In Waco, Amarillo, Lubbock, Corpus Christi and Beaumont, the household rate would increase from $6 to $7.55 a month, and it would rise from $5.75 to $7.30 in Abilene, Texas City, Galveston and Wichita Falls.

Rogers said Bell needs $242.9 million in new revenue but held its request to $145.2 million — or 6.09 percent — because of President Carter's price guidelines.

B / NEWS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Friday, June 29, 1979

Consumers, however, would feel a greater percentage increase.

The $1.55 requested hike in one-party residential telephone rates would amount to 19.4 percent in Houston, 20.6 percent in Dallas, 22.1 percent in Fort Worth and San Antonio, 23.8 percent in Austin, 25.8 percent in Lubbock, Amarillo, Corpus Christi, Beaumont and Waco; and 26.9 percent in Abilene, Texas City, Galveston and Wichita Falls.

In the smallest class of cities — such places as Brackettville, Cameron, Marfa, San Diego and Refugio — the $1.55 increase would amount to a 32.6 percent increase.

The rate for residential party lines would increase by $1.30 in the smallest exchanges and $1.80 in the largest.

Rates for one-party business telephones would jump $4.65 per month.

Bell also wants to raise 30 cities to the next highest rating group, which would have the effect of increasing household rates by $1.80 instead of $1.55.

The cities include Cleburne, Marshall, Brownsville, Edinburg, Rockwall, Mathis, Brenham, Bay City, Mineral Wells and Mercedes.

Besides the $105.2 million from rates on local residential and business service, Bell's request for more money breaks down this way:

— Key telephones, $7.1 million.
— PBX, $4.4 million.
— Centrex, $6.2 million.
— Touch-tone intercommunicating devices, $1.3 million.
— Service or installation charges, $8.5 million.
— Miscellaneous, such as bells, buzzers and gongs, $3 million.
— "Other," $5.7 million.
— Increased charges for city gross receipts assessments, $3.6 million.

Maximum charge to install a telephone would rise from $44.50 to $54.30.

No increases are sought for long distance calls, WATS lines, coin telephone calls, private line service or directory assistance calls.

Bell requested $298 million in rate increases in 1976 but was granted only $57.8 million in additional revenue. The telephone company filed a $214 million request last year and was granted $124.5 million.

Each time, the commission rejected Bell requests for higher residential rates and in 1976 ordered a reduction.

Rogers said the company spent almost $3 billion on construction to keep up with increasing consumer demand over the past three years and expects to spend another $1.2 billion in 1979.

"We've trimmed expenses, we've generated additional revenues through sales efforts, and improved technology has helped blunt the effects of increased costs. Yet our earnings in Texas still fall well below our need," Rogers said.

He said the company's rate of return on its investment in Texas is 8.35 percent, compared with the 9.488 percent authorized by the commission in 1978.

Rogers said a $145.2 million revenue increase would raise the rate of return to 9.91 percent.

25 Percent Rate Hike Requested By Bell

Lubbock's one-party residential telephone rates would go up by more than 25 percent under a rate increase request submitted to the Public Utility Commission Thursday by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

The proposal would hike Lubbock's monthly rate for the single-party, non-measured service from $6 to $7.55 monthly.

Bell's Lubbock spokesman, Jim Goodwin, said the boost would be in keeping with a statewide flat rate increase of $1.55 the company is seeking. Bell's last rate increase was about 1½ years ago.

Other Lubbock rates affected would include two-party hookups, which would go from $3.75 to $5.25; and business service, from $14 to $18.65 a month.

One-party measured residential service — which allows 25 calls per month with each call above that number billed at 25 cents — would go from $3.95 to $5.50.

Telephone wiring and installation costs would go from a minimum of $44.50 to a maximum of $54.30, Goodwin said. However, he noted that persons who already have telephone wiring and jacks in their houses or apartments, and who could pick up their phones at Bell's phone center, still could get telephone installation for the current $24.25 charge.

Long distance and Directory Assistance calls will not be affected by the proposed rate increase, Goodwin said. Lubbock's Directory Assistance allowance of 10 requests per month is one of the largest in the state, he said. Elsewhere, the allotment is five calls, according to Goodwin.

Bell's rate increase package also includes higher prices for PBX equipment, Centrex service (like that at Texas Tech University) and key telephones.

Texas Gasoline Rationing Plan Going Well, Clements Believes

CLEMENTS

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements placed Waller, Fort Bend, Denton and Galveston counties under his odd-even gasoline rationing plan Thursday, extending its coverage to a dozen counties.

Odd-even rationing will start in the four new counties Monday, July 2, an even-numbered day.

Clements said no other counties have applied to come under the gasoline sales restriction program.

"Things are going well on the gasoline front as far as I know. I would say complaints are at a minimum. There have been a few, but none significant," Clements told his weekly news conference.

The governor said authorities in counties under the gas rationing program "are satisfied with it and are convinced the lines are shorter and the system is indeed working."

He said "misbehavior is at a minimum" in the gasoline lines. "I am not familiar with any incidents in that regard," he said.

Clements said gasoline supplies are "somewhat tight" because the end of the month is approaching. "First-of-the-month allocations will ease the situation somewhat," he suggested.

He said he was "thinking about" an order requiring service stations to stay open on Sundays but "we are still of the opinion we'll leave it as it is."

Bill Lauderback, administrative assistant to energy adviser Ed Vetter, said the governor's office would monitor the gas situation on two more weekends before deciding on a Sunday sales order. He said he hoped the odd-even rationing system would leave stations with enough gasoline to voluntarily open on Sundays.

Clements said he "can't understand" why the U.S. Department of Energy allows new service stations to open at a time when existing ones can't get enough gas.

"They've done such a good job of botching up the program that I just assume this is one of their mistakes," he said, adding it was another example of the department's "pussy-footing around."

On other matters, Clements said:

— His talks with striking independent truckers Wednesday left him hopeful they would start transporting farm produce and other goods again soon.

— He believes Attorney General Mark White will uphold his vetoes of several appropriations bill riders directing expenditure of more than $95 million.

"If I hadn't thought those were valid vetoes, I wouldn't have done it," he said.

Chairman Bill Presnal of the House Appropriations Committee contends a governor cannot veto riders and requested the attorney general's opinion.

— There are about 20 persons under consideration for appointment to the Texas Public Utility Commission vacancy created by the resignation of Alan Erwin. Clements bridled at suggestions by the Texas Consumer Association and others that he appoint a "consumer advocate" to the job.

"I don't think the commission should be divided on that kind of basis. I think the board should represent all of Texas. I'm not going to appoint a member to represent the utilities. That's not my approach," he said.

Poisoning By Gasoline Ingestion More Common

GALVESTON (AP) — Incidents of gasoline poisoning have increased along with the length of gas lines, says the Southeast Poison Center.

Mike Ellis, director of the center at the University of Texas Medical Branch, says it is receiving almost 10 calls daily about gasoline poisoning, compared with last year's average of about one a day.

About 100 calls have been received in June alone, he said, easily exceeding calls received in all of 1978.

"We've been mighty lucky no one has died," Ellis said. "A teaspoonful of gasoline can kill any adult."

When it is sucked into the lungs, gasoline coats the lungs and prevents the vital exchange between oxygen and carbon dioxide. If heavy enough, that barrier can cut off oxygen to the body and kill.

Or, seeking to dilute the gasoline, the lungs might flood themselves with fluid, cutting off air.

If gasoline is ingested, it is carried through the bloodstream to the heart, where it irritates heart muscles. Physical activity or even being startled increases adrenaline output, and the heart can fibrillate, or beat out of control.

"That person can be dead in four minutes, unless remedial methods, such as countershock, are performed," Ellis said.

Symptoms, however, do not appear for up to 18 hours, leaving the victim unaware of how critical the situation is.

"Eighteen hours seems to be the magic number," said Dr. Earl Stramoski of the poison center. "A person may experience a burning sensation in the chest or throat, pain in the chest, a heavy feeling or congested cough."

But don't induce vomiting, Stramoski said, because that only re-exposes the lungs or other organs to gasoline.

Instead, the center recommends calling its hot line at 713-765-1420.

Drinking milk or water to wash out the gasoline is OK, Ellis said, but fluids like carbonated drinks may cause burping and force gasoline back up the throat, aggravating the situation.

The poison center often asks the individual to undergo hospital tests or come in for examination. He may then be put on a special diet and a reduced activity schedule.

"We work with gasoline all the time, put it into our cars or the lawnmower, and we just forget the dangers," Ellis said.

"So many of our callers say, 'Well, I did something stupid today. I swallowed gas. Now I don't think it's anything real important, but...'"

Gasoline poisonings increase each summer, he said, as people try to siphon gas from car to lawnmower.

"One of the most dangerous things is siphoning gasoline with a hose and your mouth or leaving it out for kids to get hold of," he said.

"Your chance of survival is 50-50, and those aren't good odds when you're betting your life."

City Cuts Forced By Fuel Shortage

DEER PARK (AP) — With a 3,000-gallon gasoline delivery Thursday, the cutback in city services is over in this petroleum refining center on the Houston Ship Channel.

Dwindling gas supplies forced city administrator Olen Petty to trim services Monday, including police patrol, the dog warden patrol and building inspection services. He also asked the Deer Park Volunteer Fire Department to use only diesel vehicles.

Facilities in the city include a 300,000-barrel-a-day Shell Oil refinery, but last week the city was told it would not receive any more gasoline until after July 1.

The delivery, however, allowed Petty to lift the emergency measures.

Officials Ignore Jimmy Carter's Thermostat Edict

HOUSTON (AP)— Harris County commissioners, ignoring a proposal from President Carter, voted unanimously Thursday to set thermostats in county buildings at 76 degrees.

The president wants thermostats in all commercial and federal structures placed at 80 degrees.

The county health department had advised the commissioners that the president's plan would present a potential public health problem hot, humid Houston.

And, Assistant County Attorney Anthony Sheppard said the commissioners were not defying the federal government, "but possibly educating them."

Dr. Francine Jensen, director of the health department, said at 80 degrees, air conditioning units in Houston could not be adequately controlled to keep humidity below acceptable levels.

She said such illnesses as hypertension, heart disease, and emphysema are aggravated by hot, humid conditions.

R.B. Richardson, county building engineer, also told the commissioners had put into effect measures to cut the use of energy by 11 percent.

At Wit's End...

Editor's Note: While Erma Bombeck takes a one-week vacation, we are taking the opportunity to reprint three of her most popular AT WIT'S END columns. Erma Bombeck will resume writing next week.

By ERMA BOMBECK

When I am reincarnated, I want to come back in this world as a mother who doesn't drive.

I have noted with some bitterness that mothers who do not drive have time to paint sunsets, knit coats, bake bread and write symphonies.

Not only that, they are fully dressed by nine in the morning, have a deep bronze tan by May 20 and somehow seem taller.

Fifteen years of car pools does something to a woman. It makes her a little strange. For example, I cannot sit in a chair and delicately cross my legs at the ankles like other women. Instinctively, my right foot extends in an accelerator position and remains there until I stand up.

Also, I mumble a lot. That comes from spending years on the telephone trying to figure out that if Mary Jane's husband goes to the doctor's office on Wednesday, she will have to bundle the baby up and take him to work and trade with Martha who is having a cyst removed. On the other hand if Peter was really exposed to measles that means he will have them by Wednesday and Ada, who already exchanged with Charlotte because Charlotte had trouble starting (the car, not Charlotte), would have to trade with Muriel because she has the convertible with the top that is stuck and it is her hair appointment day. (She also cannot drive on rainy days.)

Probably the most disconcerting hazard of being a "listed parent" in a car pool is that intellectually, I have become stagnant. My vocabulary at the moment is down to four basic sentences: "Fill it up with regular," "Lock the door," "Keep your feet on the floor," and "Didn't you go before you left home?"

The other night at a party I was standing alone holding my handbag in front of me like a steering wheel when a handsome man approached me and said, "You look like you could use a drink. What'll it be?"

I handed him my Shell card and said, "Fill it up with regular." He laughed and steered me toward the kitchen where the bar was set up.

"Lock the door," I said mechanically, "and keep your feet on the floor."

He looked around nervously. "Listen," he said, "I just remembered I have some unfinished business to attend to. Would you excuse me, please?"

"Didn't you go before you left home?" I snapped.

If Ralph Nader doesn't recall me soon, it may be too late.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to ask "Turned Off" to give her sweetheart another chance. She wrote to say that the first time he kissed her his glasses caught on her earring and he nearly ripped her ear off. This is my "kiss" story which might make her more tolerant.

I met this very shy guy. We dated for two months before he attempted to kiss me. (We were no teenagers either. I was 23 and Clyde was 24.) Well, the night finally came. He kissed me so hard I thought he'd break my neck. He also liked to "nibble" on my lower lip. After every date I would go home with a sore neck and a swollen lip.

This torture went on for three months. By then I was experiencing severe neck problems. I went to a doctor who took X-rays and told me I had "whiplash." He said it was the strangest case he'd ever seen. (Most whiplashes occur when someone is hit suddenly from behind.) I was too embarrassed to tell the doctor the truth.

The next night when Clyde kissed me, I told him to quit kissing me so hard and to stop chewing on my lip because he had already cost me a $75 doctor bill. He apologized all over the place and I never had any kissing problems after that. (We've been married three wonderful years.)

So — please tell "Turned Off" to give her guy another chance. If he really loves her, he'll kiss her the way she likes to be kissed. — Happy Now

Dear Happy: How sweet! Your letter is additional evidence that it's dumb to suffer in silence when one could solve the problem. How often this principle can be applied!

Dear Ann Landers: Lately there have been several letters in your column from wives complaining that their husbands don't talk to them when they come home at night. What is the poor stiff supposed to do? Entertain the little woman with funny stories about what happened at the office?

I know it's not easy to listen to baby talk all day, do the marketing, run errands and cook and clean. A woman needs something to challenge her intellect, especially if she's a college graduate. But a wife and mother must expect to do mundane chores. That's what homemaking is all about.

Men don't have it easy, Ann. They must show the boss a friendly face and take what he dishes out. Sometimes the people he works with can be a real pain in the neck — and other places, too.

A man looks forward to coming home to be with his family. He needs the same sympathy a wife expects from him. Home is supposed to be a haven from the jungle of his work world. A welcome-home kiss can mean a lot to a tired, disgruntled guy. So please, women, give your guy a break. — I Hope My Wife Reads This

Dear Friend: I don't know your wife, but if she's from the new breed of "independent women" the letter you're so proud of might net you a fat lip.

These days, many husbands and wives are coming home from work together. Haven't you heard that more than 40 percent of America's work force is made up of females?

Your letter sounds as though it was written by a man who's been out of touch for a few years. Wake up and smell the coffee, Buster.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a much-loved, irreplaceable 33 RPM record which has become badly warped.

Would you have an answer to my problem? — Mrs. Dorothy Bedder

As a matter of fact, I do, because the same thing happened to me a few years back. As in your case, it was a favorite record but too expensive to replace.

What I did was to place the record (in the paper insert) on top of my TV set while it was on, so the set's top would be warm. I then piled several record albums on top of the warped record, topping it off with a heavy statue.

I left the record there for several hours (TV set on all the time) disturbing it only to turn the record over once.

If your TV isn't large enough to hold the record, the top of the refrigerator might work, or a heating pad (be sure to place the heating pad, turned to low setting, on top of the record, the record being placed on a flat surface and then weighted down.)

Sure hope this works for you as it did for me. At least it's worth a try if the record doesn't work anyway.

Nothing ventured, nothing gained, right? — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I finally found a workable solution to combating clutter in my children's playroom.

I purchased several inexpensive plastic shoe boxes from the dime store.

One box stores little "people," another Tinker toys, another crayons, marbles, and so on.

They're stackable to save space and also see-through which helps even the youngest child find what he wants. Pamela Saley

DEAR HELOISE:

The floor plan of our do-it-yourself cabin looked great — on paper!

Alas, when we were ready to order the kitchen cabinets, we realized that the room was one foot too narrow to have base cabinets on both sides.

After a year of frustration from lack of work space and storage, we solved the problem by buying wall cabinets (13 inches deep) and hanging them at the same height as base cabinets, topping them with a laminated plastic "counter."

The overhead cupboards were hung higher than usual to avoid bumps on the cook's skull.

That extra 13 inches depth of counter space provides room for small appliances, sandwich-making, etc.

Consequently, we turned our "mistake" into a "we planned it this way" kitchen. — Pat Stevens

DEAR HELOISE:

While at a restaurant recently, my husband spilled gravy on his tie.

After telling the waitress, she brought him a container of club soda. He dipped the corner of his napkin into the soda and proceeded to clean his tie.

The soda cleaned the tie and didn't leave a spot or ring. — Margaret Mulay

DEAR HELOISE:

I found the handiest kitchen helper and it didn't cost me a cent!

I used to use a brush to scrub all my fruits and vegetables. One day, after removing some onions from the small plastic mesh bag they came in, I put my hand into it, thinking, "What a cute little bag ...too nice to throw away... maybe I can use it for something."

Suddenly the thought came to me, "Use it to scrub the fuzz off peaches." Worked beautifully, so used it to remove the wax from cucumbers, and scrub potatoes.

I just slip it over my hand like a glove. Found if you wear one on each hand the work goes much faster.

It leaves my hands freer to work, dries in no time and tucks away any place. — Helen M.

Youths Should Protect Assets

(Editor's Note: This is the last of a five-part series on "What We Haven't Taught Our Children's" financial planning for young people. This series is a special report by Purdue University.)

WEST LAFAYETTE, IND. (Special) — Today's youth need to be more knowledgeable about protecting their assets, according to Leslie A. Bryan, consumer economist on the staff of Purdue University's School of Management.

"Life, health and property insurance as well as a clear understanding of the basics of saving and investing are all tools in the protection of assets," he says.

He quotes the average amount of life insurance per family in 1977 as $32,400; per insured family, $36,900.

"Is this enough? Who knows without considering the total financial situation," he answers.

One life insurance statistic that worries many family advisers is the lack of life insurance within one-parent families, Bryan notes. In 1977, family heads were insured in 91 percent of families with children under 18 years of age and in which both parents were present.

In contrast, only 71 percent of the heads of "incomplete" families were insured. Bryan defines an imcomplete family as one in which the head does not have a spouse living in the household.

"Families with one parent plus children make up the bulk of this catagory," he says. "Considering the welfare of the children, lack of life insurance on the heads of incomplete families is far more serious than it might be in the complete family."

Today's young adult lacks consumer skills not only in life insurance but also in property and health insurance and in the area of saving and investing, a Purdue survey indicates.

Obviously, before one can invest, one must save," Bryan points out. "A savings account is necessary, but shop around for the best interest available — savings and loans and credit unions often pay more than full-service banks."

Once the savings account is large enough to purchase certificates of deposit which pay higher interest rates, do so, he advises, then look for investments which will yield more than inflation will eat up.

Bryan believes a wise home purchase (he underscores wise) is probably the best investment a young couple can make in their early married life. A home typically appreciates at a faster rate than inflation.

"As parents and educators reflect on their early experiences of personal and family money management, they will probably recall many poor financial decisions in their early adulthood," Bryan says.

"The lesson learned in this reflection is that youth today are no better prepared. We have an obligation to prepare the high school and college student not only for a career but also how to handle the financial rewards accruing from that career."

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: How does an elderly person clear mucus from his chest? — A.K.

It's a problem, especially for an elderly patient with lung problems — like emphysema, which you may or may not have.

A common cause of the difficulty is insufficient fluid intake. A healthy person needs about eight glasses of liquid a day, so take stock of that. Avoid lung irritants, such as smoking. Lungs remove a certain amount of fluid from the body by themselves each day (several ounces). Any disruption can make them less efficient in doing this job.

How can you force removal of lung secretions? The answer is in "postural drainage." Prop a hip on several pillows and lie on that side for a few minutes. Alternate with the opposite hip. If you can manage, perhaps a better way is to lie over your bed with your upper body leaning toward the floor. It requires some agility, so go about it carefully.

If you have a therapist, a family member can be taught another effective method — percussion. This involves a rhythmical tapping on your chest with open hands to help loosen mucus in the bronchial tube. Some people can do it themselves, but it requires practice. Percussing is done on each side of the chest (under the arm area) while the patient is lying face down. Some doctors recommend steam inhalation.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: My son is a diabetic. He is on insulin (70 ccs a day). He was told he can drink whisky or gin — up to nine shots a day, or more, so long as he dilutes with water, pop, tomato juice, or orange juice. Do you think this is correct? — G.E.R.

I don't think his doctor is telling him this. I certainly wouldn't. The fact that he is on this much insulin tells me he should be doing his level best to restrict carbohydrate intake (from any source). Diet, even for one on insulin, is the most important thing in controlling diabetes. Alcohol is a carbohydrate which is converted to sugar. This excess should be avoided no matter what it is mixed with or how it's diluted.

The pop and juices are sources of calories and must be taken into account in his daily intake of food in general. It sounds as though your son is missing the boat entirely in his control program. He needs clearer instructions. Some areas conduct diabetic control classes. Check with a hospital near you.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I just had an audiology test that showed I get plenty of volume, but the sounds or words are "garbled." The specialist gave me little hope that this can be corrected, even by a hearing aid. Your comments will be appreciated. — J.W.M.

Such tests answer more questions than the mere loss of hearing. You should be able to find out if your hearing is better or worse in one ear than in the other or the specific type of loss you have. Loss for high-pitched tones usually indicates nerve deafness, which is difficult to improve even with hearing aids. Loss for low-pitched tones usually indicates "conduction" loss — interference with the middle ear mechanism. That type is more easily helped with the aids. More intricate testing may be needed to pinpoint the exact cause of your loss. The specialist will be more specific as to your test results if you ask him.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please tell me about hypertension. Some doctors claim salt causes it. Others say excess weight. Others say nerves. Who's right? — Ms. I.B.

They are all partly correct, but the actual sequence of events that leads to hypertension (high blood pressure) in any individual is difficult to trace. It's a combination of things. Those factors you mention in your question aggravate it. Obesity may be the chief factor for some, tension for others, hardening of the arteries for still others. I think the material you ask for will make the picture a bit clearer for you.

FOR MRS. A.B. — Based on the very nice photograph (full length) you sent me of your son, I see no need in the world for him to lose weight. Nor do the statistics (5-10, and 170 pounds) indicate any serious overweight problem.

• • •

Emphysema can be controlled. To learn how to live with this serious lung problem, write to Dr. Ruble for a copy of his booklet on "How to Control Emphysema," P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Things didn't look good for South after the defense started with two spades and a spade ruff. East had passed as dealer and since he had already shown up with the ace-king of spades the diamond finesse was a very probable loser.

West led a trump at trick four. South won in dummy and decided to see if something good could be done with clubs. Maybe someone held king-queen-small. So he cashed dummy's ace of clubs and led and ruffed a second club. Neither honor dropped so no good could come of the club suit. He couldn't get more than one discard.

It looked as if the diamond finesse would be necessary, but South saw one slight extra chance.

He led his jack of spades.

Eureka! The extra chance had paid off.

West could not ruff and South was able to discard one of dummy's diamonds on that good spade. Then it was a cinch to cash the ace of diamonds and cross ruff for the rest of the tricks.

APPLE-BARBEQUED SPARERIBS

2 lbs. country spareribs
¼ cup salad oil
2 med. onions thinly-sliced
2-3 apples, pared, cored and grated to measure 3 cups
1 cup ketchup
1 cup water
1 tbsp. brown sugar
2 tbsps. Worcestershire sauce
1 tbsp. lemon juice
½ tsp. salt

Cut ribs into serving pieces. Place in a shallow baking pan and bake at 500 degrees for 30 minutes, then drain off melted fat. Heat salad oil in a saucepan and saute onions until tender. Add remaining ingredients and simmer gently for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Pour sauce over ribs and bake at 325 degrees for about 2 hours, or until tender. Makes 4 servings.

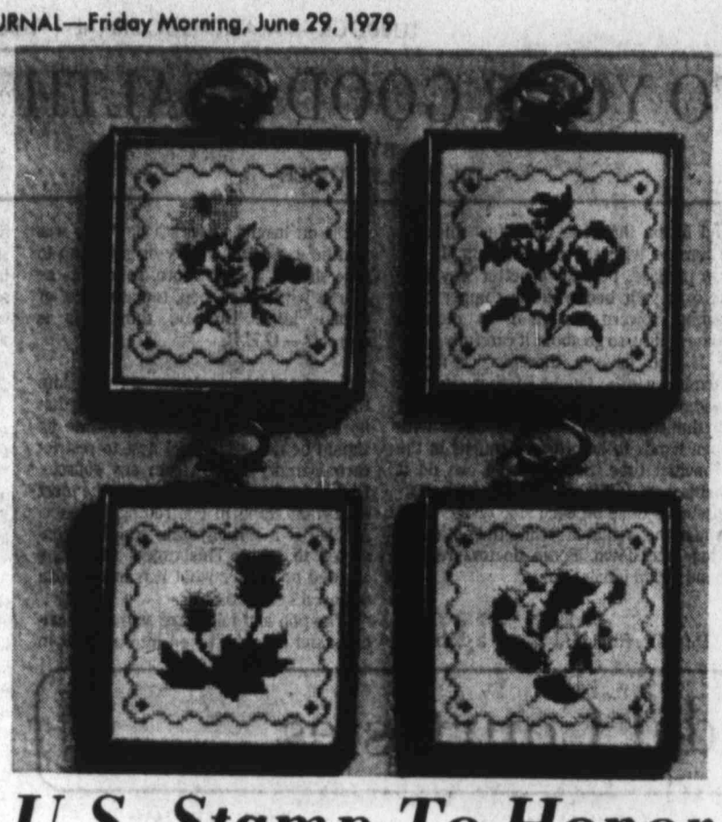
Cross-Stitch Sampler Easy To Do



Why not capture the beauty of the colors in your flower garden for year-round enjoyment by making a cross-stitch sampler?

Cross-stitch is easy to do and is an age-old favorite whether you're putting a decorative trim on a shirt or a blouse, edging a pair of pillow cases, or making a lovely wall hanging.

If you've done cross-stitch before, you'll know how to get started, but if this is a first for you, here are a few pointers.

First, think of your design. Trace a variety of flowers from magazines or even from flower seed envelopes. If you're really talented, draw free-hand style your favorites right from the garden.

Once your actual-size pattern is down on paper and you've decided on what color of floss to use, you're ready to begin.

Don't limit yourself! Add a decorative trim to bathroom curtains, put a rose on a denim shirt or a daisy on your favorite smock.

For those unsure of tracing or drawing abilities, here is a floral arrangement of dainty petite flowers to cross-stitch in a hurry. The kit comes complete with instructions, white fabric, cotton floss, diagram, color chart and includes the mounting board and four gold plastic 2 ½ inch frames.

Order kit no. 14117 for $6.99 plus $1.45 postage and handling Creative Home Crafts is required to collect and pay sales tax in Texas.

Send your name, addressed, order and remittance to Creative Home Crafts, Dept. 8BB, P.O. Box 1281, 17th and Locust, Des Moines, Iowa 50336. If you wish to use your Visa, Master Charge or American Express, please give the Master Charge interbank number, credit card number and expiration date.

U.S. Stamp To Honor Vietnam Veterans

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

A 15-cent stamp paying tribute to Veterans of the Vietnam War is to be issued Nov. 11.

The new design features the service ribbon for the Vietnam Service Medal, an emblem of special significance to the many Americans who saw duty there. The Vietnam Service Medal was awarded to those who served in that country and contiguous waters from July 1, 1958, until U.S. withdrawal.

The designer of the stamp, Stevan Dohanos of Westport, Conn., used an enlarged replica of the service ribbon and raised lettering. The ribbon appears in the center of the stamp superimposed on a khaki background.

Above the ribbon is "USA-15 cents" and beneath it, in two lines, is the phrase "Honoring Vietnam Veterans" and "Nov. 11, 1979." A red, white and blue bunting is seen across the upper left corner.

This stamp is not considered a commemorative but rather a regular issue. The regular issues are printed in larger quantities and remain on sale longer than commemoratives.

Additional details concerning first-day cancellations will appear in this column as soon as they become available.

• • •

A special first-day cover has been produced by the International Stamp Collectors Society in honor of the issuance of the block of four 15-cent "Endangered Flora" U.S. commemorative stamps.

The red, white and green cover will contain the new stamps, plus the cachet, which is an artistic rendition of flowers bearing the legend "for the preservation of natural beauty."

The covers are available at $3.95 each from: Flowers, International Stamp Collectors Society, Equitable Bldg., Hollywood & Vine, Hollywood, Calif. 90028. Allow four to six weeks for delivery.

Speaking of endangered species, the Fiji Islands — located about 1,200 miles south of the equator in the Pacific Ocean — has issued a new set of four stamps to publicize the plight of some of its endangered animals. The species featured are the banded iguana, tree frog, long-legged warbler and the pink-billed parrot finch.

The 4-cent shows the banded iguana, the only Polynesian iguana in existence. It is endangered by the clearing of wooded areas for new construction. The 15-cent depicts the tree frog, which is endangered because its forest habitat is being reduced by agriculture.

The 25-cent illustrates the long-legged warbler and the 30-cent the pink-billed parrot finch. The birds are in trouble because of the encroachment of both man and animal in the islands.

STAMP NOTES: The Republic of China on Taiwan has issued a new stamp honoring Lu Hao-tung, one of its martyrs who died in 1895 in support of the revolution headed by Dr. Sun Yat-sen ... Gambia hails the 14th anniversary of its independence with the issuance of three new stamps. The adhesives depict various public services of the country — police, fire and ambulance ... The American Topical Association's latest computer printout of its topical check list shows 104 subjects on some 6,000 stamps issued by various government of the world during the past year.

New Accessory Extends SLR Viewing Systems

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

A new accessory is now available that extends the viewing systems of most popular SLR (single lens reflex) cameras by more than a foot above eye level.

Labeled "Spiratone Periscope Viewer," it literally lifts a photographer above a crowd for clear shooting.

Visualize a long, tube-like device which incorporates a 10-element optical construction, with an adjustable dioptic eyepiece and rubber eyecup at the bottom, and an adjustable bracket to support the camera at the top. Custom fittings mate the eyepiece of the periscope to most camera viewfinders. And because it has been designed for rotating, it can be used for very low angle shooting as well as shooting around corners.

Still another unusual application is its use for shooting just under the water surface. In use, the camera and periscpe attachment are enclosed in a long, clear plastic bag and held under water while leaving the eye-piece and plastic bag opening well above water level.

There must be many non-routine photographers seeking offbeat heights — above and below — in shooting, and one of them was inventive enough to originate this gadget as the solution.

For details, write: Spiratone, 135-06 Northern Blvd., Flushing, N.Y. 11354.

From the same source comes news of the Spiratone Motionmaker, a filter-like attachment which creates a streaking effect over almost half the subject.

With half of the picture sharp and clear and the rest blending off into a comet-like, blurred action finish, the effect is suitable for conveying the impression of a child's wagon or bicycle speeding, a runner jogging, a baseball being thrown or a football kicked.

The effect is produced by a cylindrical lens ground into slightly less than half of the face of the Motionmaker. Like a filter, it comes in screw-in sizes from 49mm to 67mm and in series VII and VIII. When attached to the lens, the effect is seen in the viewfinder and the mount is rotated to select the exact position of the subject which is to be shown "in motion."

When writing for further details (address above), send a stamped,self-addressed envelope and include information about the type of cameras you have. For their latest catalog, send 50 cents for postage and handling.

County Fails To Pick Financial Advisers

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock County Commissioners failed Thursday to appoint either a chairman or members for a Lubbock County Hospital District financial advisory committee.

The commissioners are to reconvene Tuesday to open bids for the construction of a $1 million county juvenile detention center and possibly will act on the committee then, County Judge Rodrick Shaw said.

Shaw and the four commissioners had the names of 21 persons who had agreed to serve since hospital district representatives came to the commissioners court earlier this month with the information that Health Sciences Center Hospital was in financial straits and possibly would run out of money in August if property taxes were not doubled.

The commissioners later rejected a tax increase, but they have been working on appointing a committee since then.

In other business held over from a regular Monday meeting, the commissioners today heard County Court-at-Law Judge J.Q. Warnick and Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford elaborate on their request earlier this month for approval of a third County Court-at-Law to handle the rapidly increasing civil and criminal case load.

Warnick said the two courts-at-law now in operation "are the busiest in the state." The judge said he had surveyed all of the metropolitan counties in Texas to draw his conclusion.

Commissioner Alton Brazell said the state should pay more of the costs of operating state-created courts rather than counties having to pay increasing costs of the criminal justice system with property tax revenues.

Shaw and commissioner Jim Lancaster of Idalou expressed support for the request, which would cost a minimum of about $168,000, including construction, from the first year of operation.

The proposal was discussed but not acted on.

In other business, the commissioners approved a South Plains Association of Government's (SPAG) proposal for an area-wide economic development district to bring federal funding into underdeveloped South Plains counties for their economic advancement.

Giles Dalby of Post, a SPAG board member, made a presentation on the proposal at the request of commissioner Coy Biggs, who said Monday that he wanted more information about it.

The commissioners accepted a Blue Cross-Blue Shield bid for hospitalization insurance for county employees.

1954 Lubbock High Grads Plan Reunion

Former students and faculty of the 1954 Lubbock High School graduating class will meet for a reunion at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the Memorial Civic Center.

An informal gathering will be held at 7:30 p.m. today in the Hilton Inn, and former class members are also invited to a gathering at 10 a.m. Saturday in the school cafeteria. Coffee will be served.

Cocktails will be served at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. and a dance at 9 p.m. The Electric Ear will provide the music.

The cost for the dinner is $4.50. For more information call 799-6748.

TOO MANY GRASSHOPPERS

Experts say a grasshopper infestation on many ranges in the western United States may reach eight or more of the insects per square yard. It has been estimated that just eight grasshoppers per square yard on 10 acres can, through a summer, eat as much forage as a cow.

Texans Stand Up For Expanding Depot

WASHINGTON (AP) — The entire Texas congressional delegation has taken a stand for a military plan that would expand the Corpus Christi Army Depot.

Congressmen asked President Carter in a letter sent Wednesday not to intervene and halt plans to transfer a hlicoptedepot maintenance program from the New Cumberland, Pa., Army Depot to Corpus Christi.

The letter signed by both Texas senators and all 24 congressmen was a response to earlier efforts by members of the Pennsylvania congressional delegation.

The army realignment plan would drop 870 jobs at the New Cumberland depot. The Corpus Christi depot would gain 236 positions and the rest of the Pennsylvania slots would be relocated elsewhere or eliminated.

"The Texas congressional delegation has learned that the Pennsylvania delegation has asked you to reverse the army plan," the letter said. "We respectfully request that you insure that the Army is allowed execute their proposed realignment."

Bill Cornell, legislative aide for U.S. Rep. Bill Goodling, R-Pa., said the Pennsylvanians are concerned the plan to drop employment in the area will be an added blow after the Three-Mile Island nuclear accident.

The validity of the Army study is also in question and the Government Accounting Office has been asked to examine it, Cornell said. The depot is in Goodling's Central Pennsylvania district.

PRIMITIVE INHABITANTS

When the Spanish arrived at the Caribbean Island of Aruba about 1500, they found the Caiquetios, a tribe of the Arawak Indians, still living in Stone Age style. The last Indian died in 1862.

Hart Talked Of Wish 'To Be Left Alone'

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — "Mainly, I just want to be left alone," Gene Leroy Hart told an interviewer after his acquittal on charges of first-degree murder in the slayings of three Girl Scouts.

Hart, 35, gave only one interview after the jury was selected in his month-long trial.

But he later decided that his people, the Cherokee Indians, should hear from him once more. On June 1, he volunteered his first and last interview to his tribal newspaper, the Cherokee Advocate, a monthly, which published the interview Thursday.

Hart died three days after the interview, victim of a heart attack.

"I felt like the world had been lifted from my shoulders" when jurors returned an innocent verdict March 30, Hart told the Cherokee Advocate. "Just knowing that it was all over and justice had been served. As far as I'm concerned justice had been served. The jury voted right. There is no question in my mind but what they voted right."

After his acquittal, Hart — a convicted kidnapper, rapist and burglar — was taken to the Oklahoma State Prison at McAlester to serve time on earlier convictions.

He had been a fugitive since a 1973 escape from the Mayes County Jail when he was charged 10 days after the June 13, 1977, Girl Scout slayings. He was at large until April 6, 1978, when police arrested him at an isolated shack 50 miles from the murder scene at Camp Scott.

During the search for Hart, authorities said he was an expert woodsman who could live indefinitely in the rugged countryside.

"That's not possible," Hart told the Advocate. "Nobody can live out there that long. As cold as the winters are and what with the parasites in the summer and the snakes and the weather. Why, nobody can live out there like that. Live off the land. Our ancestors might have done it, but I can't.

"When I realized I was charged with it, my idea, my thinking at the time, was, 'I'll just lay low and the longer I stay away from them, sooner or later these people are going to solve this and they'll leave me alone.' .... I thought sooner or later they'd solve it. They should have been able to, and they still could if they wanted to, I think."

Asked about references to him as a folk hero among Indians, he said:

"I don't like to be looked upon like that. I'm no different than anybody else, except I'm in the penitentiary," Hart said. "I don't want to be a hero, I have no desire to be a hero, I can't help the way people look on me, but that's not my desire. Mainly, I just want to be left alone."

To those who still considered Hart guilty, he said, "Anybody can believe what they want, and they can express their beliefs. There's always going to be people who feel that way and are going to say, 'Yeah, the man got off because he had him a damn good lawyer.'

"Some people say that," Hart added. "I know that. I understand that and I can see their point of view. But those are the ones, they don't go over the transcript.

Consumer Alert

By JOHN HILL
Attorney General Of Texas

AUSTIN — If you're out of work and want some help in locating a new job, the ads for "executive search" firms may catch your eye. Many of these servicesclaim to be totally different from the traditional employment agency, and many claim to have excellent track records in relocating out-of-work upper level management personnel and executives.

The services they offer frequently include in-depth analyses of an individual's work patterns, with emphasis on identifying strong and weak points; specialized psychological testing for skills and interest; practice interviews, including videotaped ones that are analyzed for improvement in presentation; advice on what to wear and say at job interviews; and several versions of resumes, each written from different angles to stress different aspects of the jobhunter's abilities and to appeal to different employers.

In addition, some such executive search services claim to have connection with major national and regional employers which give them early knowledge of potential job opportunities, since on this level of employment, many companies do not actively advertise available positions.

Attorneys in our Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division say that it's usually in this last area that problems arise between the search firms and individuals who use them.

Some individuals pay the hefty advance fee with the impression that they will be guaranteed a job within a certain amount of time. Others enter such arrangements with the mistaken idea that the search firm operates like an employment agency and has listings of scores of jobs that will be made available to them, and that interviews with a number of prospective employers will be set up.

Our lawyers say that sometimes these misunderstanding are the result of a too-hasty decision on the part of the job hunter, and sometimes they are the result of too-little or too-hazy information being provided by the search firm. And sometimes, too, they are the result of deliberate misrepresentation of services by dishonest individuals who are out to make a fast buck off job hunters.

According to reports reaching our Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division from other states, persons who have had problems with deceptive executive search firms frequently complain that all they got for their advances fee, which usually runs into several hundred dollars, was a collection of resumes and a videotape.

Our attorneys caution persons who are considering using such firms to exercise as much care in selecting the firm as they would in any other consumer transaction. They note that individuals who are out of work are frequently vulnerable to a smooth sales pitch, tending to hear what they are made orally are written into the contract that's offered for signature. Job hunters who are expecting the company to set up job interviews should be sure that's spelled out.

If you have problems with misrepresentations by an executive search firm, contact our Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division in Austin, Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, El Paso, Lubbock, or McAllen. Or get in touch with your local district or county attorney or Better Business Bureau.

Local Woman Charged With Perjury

A Lubbock woman Thursday was charged with aggravated perjury in connection with testimony about an alleged murder she gave before a Lubbock County grand jury in March.

Gloria Moreno, 20, of 1912 Ave. P was named in the aggravated perjury charge filed by the Criminal District Attorney's Office. A $25,000 bond was recommended.

Miss Moreno is accused of knowingly giving a false statement to the grand jury that she witnessed the Feb. 8 beating death of Dillard Odell Gaddy at his 2910 Ave. H, No. 58 apartment.

The charge alleges that while under oath, Miss Moreno told a 140th District grand jury that she watched David G. Coronado kick and beat the 54-year-old Gaddy. Earlier this week, while police were questioning Miss Moreno about another matter, she provided them with a notarized statement saying she had lied about watching Coronado beat Gaddy in February.

Gaddy was discovered dead at his residence about 10 a.m. Feb. 8. Autopsy results showed that the man had died of an apparent heart attack and Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy ruled, the death was of natural causes.

But about a week later, Miss Moreno, who had traveled with Coronado to his Tulsa, Okla., home, told Oklahoma officials Coronado had beaten Gaddy to death.

Coronado was arrested by Tulsa police and transfered to the custody of Lubbock authorities. Murder charges were filed against the 21-year-old Coronado and the March grand jury returned a murder indictment against him in connection with Gaddy's death.

Investigators say the case against Coronado has been re-opened and will be re-evaluated before any decision is made as to whether to dismiss the murder charge or continue prosecution procedures.

In other charges filed Thursday, Debra Dianne Anderson, 22, of 709 Ave. R, Apt. 27, was charged with the Monday theft of more than $2,500 and a $300 diamond ring from Lubbock Bail Bond, 808 Main St.

The district attorney's office recommended that bond for Miss Anderson be denied because she is free on bond posted on another charge.

James Edward Ward, 26, of Hobbs, N.M., was charged with possession of a forged check, with intent to cash the check.

Ward allegedly tried to cash a forged check Tuesday at a drive-in window of First National Bank, 1500 Broadway. A $15,000 bond was recommended.

Two Lubbock men were charged with stealing four tires and and wheels from Gene Messer Ford, 31st Street and Avenue H, June 12.

Named in that theft charge were Willie Lee Thomas, 29, of 1122 43rd St. and Clarence Robinson Jr., 20, of 2125 Emory St. A $15,000 bond was recommended for Thomas and a $5,000 bond for Robinson.

Douglas Sims was charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and a $2,500 bond was recommended.

Sims allegedly stole a van June 18 from from the parking lot of Don Crow Chevrolet, 5211 South Loop 289.

Houston Executives En Route To China

HOUSTON (AP) — A group of 20 Houston businessmen left Wednesdy for a two-week trade mission to the People's Republic of China.

Energy and energy projects will be the focus on the first official mission from Houston, says J.L. Taylor Jr., a director of the Chamber of Commerce and mission coordinator. The business leaders will discuss future development of energy resources in China and Houston's ability to provide petroleum equipment and technological services.

Chinese Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping invited the group during his visit to Houston earlier this year. Several other China officials have also toured the Houston area.

Napoleon Bonaparte abdicated as emperor of France in 1814.

Quake-Proof Pipes Rated Faulty In Nuclear Power Plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pipes in at least 11 nuclear power plants do not match their original earthquake-resistance design requirements, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's staff asserted Thursday.

Staff members told the commission that a bulletin would soon be issued to all nuclear plants, requiring studies of their quake-proofing features. These studies would be aimed at determining whether pipe designs are safe and whether they were actually built as designed.

Departures from quake-proof design are considered serious because of the possibility that inadequate construction could lead to the breaking of these pipes, which are vital to reactor safety systems during an earthquake. The failure of these safty systems could cause a nuclear accident as severe, or worse, than the one three months ago at Three Mile Island near Harrisburg, Pa.

William Russell, head of a commission task force on seismic design, presented a listing of "significant differences between original design and as-built condition of piping systems" in the 11 plants.

Russell said the following discrepancies were found:

—Surry Unit 1 at Gravel Neck, Va., had pipe supports in the wrong locations, the wrong types of supports, and pipes that are laid out in patterns different from the original design.

—The Fitzpatrick plant at Scriba, N.Y., had "differences similar to Surry" and its actual construction features were being re-analyzed for earthquake safety.

—In the Beaver Valley plant at Shippingport, Pa., the plant licensee reported significant differences between actual features and the original design but did not tell the NRC exactly what they were. The NRC staff summary said the "as-built condition resulted in both pipe and support overstress."

—The Pilgrim plant at Plymouth, Mass., had incorrect piping attachments and was "shut down to restore original design condition".

—Brunswick Units 1 and 2 at Southport, N.C., had undersized pipe supports and both units were reported shut down to restore them to the original design condition.

—The Robert E. Ginna plant at Rochester, N.Y., had "pipe supports not built to original design", which were repaired while the plant was shut down for refueling.

—The St. Lucie plant in St. Lucie Couny, Fla., was missing some seismic supports and had some supports attached to the wrong piping; the supports were repaired before the plant was restarted after refueling.

—Nine Mile Point at Oswego, N.Y., was missing seismic supports which were installed before restarting the plant after refueling.

—Indian Point Unit 3 at Buchanan, N.Y., had incorrect support construction and supports in the wrong places; the unit's as-built condition was to be reviewed by July 1.

—And the Davis-Besse Unit 1 at Oak Harbor, Ohio, was missing parts of its main steam line supports; repairs were to be made before plant start-up.

The NRC staff had checked these plants after questions about earthquake-proof design calculations and construction arose in connection with the Beaver Valley plant.

Russell said the staff has found so far that "as-built construction is causing the majority of the problems", rather than incorrect design calculations.

Nuclear Insurance Program Examined

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nuclear power industry, acting on the costly lessons of Three Mile Island, announced Thursday it is exploring the idea of an insurance program financed by the 70 utilities that use the atom to generate electricity.

"It would be useful in dealing with extraordinary expenses resulting from a large outage," said Floyd W. Lewis, chairman of an industry committee created as a result of the Three Mile Island accident.

Such an insurance plan could be in place by next year, Lewis told a news conference called on the 3-month anniversary of the accident that shut down the plant near Harrisburg in south-central Pennsylvania.

He also announced creation of a national institute to monitor and improve the operation of nuclear reactors, and a series of industry-supported studies of the health effects on residents of the Three Mile Island area.

JOHN E. LIST

Legal Death Won't Stop Vast Search

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A surrogate's court soon may declare John E. List legally dead, but it won't stop a worldwide search for the mass killing suspect who has eluded authorities for almost eight years.

List might have been declared legally dead by today, but a Newark law firm won a court hearing delay for the State Mutual Life Insurance Co., which is fighting payment of a $225,000 death benefit.

The next brush with legal death for List, the only suspect in the 1971 shooting deaths of his mother, wife and three teen-age children, probably will come in August.

A surrogate's court clerk in Union County, where the case will be heard, explained Thursday that insurance company lawyers needed more time to question police and FBI agents about List, 53.

Lawyers for List's estate say they want him declared legally dead in order to pay debts and settle the estate. His sole heir, Brenda DeYoung, his wife's daughter by a previous mrriage whom he adopted, was last reported in Kalamazoo, Mich.

A ruling that List is legally dead would not free him from homicide prosecution nor end a manhunt by police agencies throughout the world.

"There's no statute of limitations on murder. If he's found alive, someone'll have to pay back the insurance money," said Westfield Police Sgt. William Muth. List is technically being sought as a fugitive from justice on homicide charges.

Muth has been working on the case since police found the bodies of List's wife, Helen, and children neatly laid side by side in the ballroom of their 19-room mansion on Dec. 7, 1971.

Upstairs, police found the body of List's mother, Alma. All were shot and all had been dead about a month.

"... I'm getting ready to retire and I want to grab him before I go," Muth said.

Authorities believe that List, a church deacon and former accounting executive who was in financial trouble, planned the killings.

He stopped mail deliveries and withdrew the children from school by explaining that they were going to North Carolina.

Authorities claim he then committed the grisly killings, laid out the bodies in the sparsely furnished home, penned a note to his church pastor and disappeared.

Police later found his car at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York.

Radioactive Steam Released During Nuke Plant Mishap

PEACH BOTTOM, Pa. (AP) — Radioactive steam escaped into the turbine building of the nuclear power station here in the plant's fourth mishap this month, according to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Radiation monitoring shed no noticeable increases in radioactivity outside the building, NRC officials said, and the firm reported no releases of radioactivity into the environment beyond normal operating levels.

The leak was stopped about two hours after a small test fitting in the turbine building was forced open by steam pressure at about 5:20 p.m. Tuesday.

Two uncontrolled radiation releases were reported at the plant late last week, but state officials said they presented no health hazard. Those leaks occurred as technicians attempted to start up the Unit 3 reactor, which was shut down June 13 because of mechanical problems.

Philadelphia Electric Co., which operates the plant, reported the latest problem to the NRC and said crews were reducing the electric output of the plant's Unit 3 as they worked to stop the leak.

After the repair work was completed, the plant increased power and was brought back to full-power operation, the NRC reported. Maryland and Pennsylvania state officials were advised of the incident, commission officials said.

Of the 33.3 million visitors to Canada in 1978, 31.6 million were from the United States.

Community Center Program Takes Trainee Group

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Sitting around the large work table, the Community Center workers for the Lubbock Housing Authority stare nervously at each other. Talking about unemployment is not always a pleasant subject — especially if it's your own.

But these people have traded the stigma of unemployment for what may be another kind of stigma altogether. The Housing Authority placed them in their expanded community center program with funds from the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act — CETA.

CETA workers have gotten a bad name in the past year or so. Charges of fiscal irresponsibility and general mismanagement of programs has left a sour taste in many taxpayers' mouths, who eventually foot the bill for the program.

Some of the people actually employed by the program have been rather confused by the bad publicity. For people who may not have worked for several years, getting a job of any kind is not something you criticize.

Most of the community center's CETA workers were recruited; that is, Social Services Director Greta Wood applied to CETA to create their positions after several Greenfair Manor residents (where the community center is located) inquired about working there.

Cynthia Wilson is a good example of how the others got into the CETA program. Now 21, she was 19 when she got on Welfare to support the baby she was expecting.

"I want to make it," she explained. "I know you've got to get a job."

Miss Wilson says she had tried before to get a job, but was always told that she needed experience. She was faced with the age-old problem of how to get experience when you can't get hired in the first place. And her incomplete high school education didn't help.

She still lives in Greenfair. She even considered joining the Air Force to support herself, though it would have meant giving up her baby for adoption or foster care. She said she used to look at the way other people were able to take care of their kids and wish she was able to do the same.

But on $86 a month in welfare, the choices were limited.

Gloria Ransom got quick agreement from others sitting around the table when she said she got "tired of counting stray dogs wandering into the projects." The boredom of unemployment can apparently be as stifling as the obvious shortage of money.

Mrs. Ransom was forced to get off welfare when she turned 18. She had been collecting off her mother's account and federal regulations prohibited her from drawing support from her mother's monthly check after she reached legal age.

She had worked when she was younger, selling clothes at a South Plains Mall department store. She described the problems involved with getting to and from work without a car, as well as the frustrations of the job itself. She eventually lost her job.

Eventually it was her mother who approached Mrs. Wood about the prospects of a job at the community center. Mrs. Wood by that time had had other inquiries and referred Gloria directly to CETA.

The paperwork involved in placement with CETA is admittedly a roadblock for many applicants. Mrs. Ransom said many people just aren't patient enough to go through the channels to determine eligibility.

"Anywhere you go they're going to have to tell you to wait," she said. She talked about the problems which occur when people expect an instant job.

Angelina Santibanez and Dorothy Thomas also have been recently hired through CETA for the community center. Both have children and their CETA applications included stipulations that they be able to work around their kids' needs.

Mrs. Thomas explained that she had heard about the charges against the CETA programs — including the charge that time cards had been changed to pay employees for work they hadn't done.

But she says she hasn't had any problems with the program and says none of the other community center workers has ever received pay for work they didn't do.

Thomas Sanders has been with the CETA program for about a year, now. He previously worked in a drug abuse youth center but lost his job when the program was cancelled due to lack of funding.

As a community center recreation specialist, he organizes programs for both Greenfair Manor and Hub Homes. The programs cover all age groups.

But in addition to his on-site work at the community center, Sanders works as a public relations man for the housing authority — seeking funding from agencies and community groups for the community center's programs.

The CETA jobs are not permanent for any of the community center workers. When Mrs. Woods applied for the money to create their positions, she asked for "sustaining slots". The participant is guaranteed funding for the job for a year and a half, but CETA hopes the worker will find another job before the time limit is up.

And the job is not guaranteed if the worker's services are lacking. It's supposed to be a normal employer-employee relationship, even though the worker's beginning skills may be deficient.

Kerry Zubraz, a CETA counselor for the community center workers, hopes the housing authority will be able to find funding to keep the jobs now paid for by CETA. But Social Services Director Mrs. Wood stresses that the jobs are training positions. Four of the workers currently are enrolled in a Texas Tech Adult Learning Center program to strengthen their office skills.

Baptists Set Resolutions During Meet

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Delegates to the Mexican Baptist Convention here Wednesday adopted resolutions on treatment of undocumented aliens, collective bargaining for farm workers and equal protection in law enforcement.

About 600 delegates from 197 Spanish-speaking Baptist churches in Texas, who met in the Memorial Civic Center for three days this week, voted to urge churches and associations throughout Texas "to help provide Christian social ministries, basic education opportunities, programs for meeting emergency needs, and at least basic counseling rights, privileges and documentation."

The resolution urges the Texas Baptist State Missions Commission to explore opportunities for training pastors and lay people in counseling undocumented aliens "to increase opportunities for witnessing to the love of Jesus Christ.

The resolution pointed to "strong blood ties with our neighbor to the south, Mexico," and "evidence that the Immigration and Naturalization Service procedures have been continually violated."

Convention delegates also called upon the Texas legislature to pass workers compensation laws protecting farm workers and to establish procedures guaranteeing farm workers the right to bargain collectively.

That part of the resolution stated there are virtually no social restraints on the exploitation of farm workers in Texas and that the migrant farm worker is cut off from the privileges afforded all American citizens, including educational, social and political opportunities.

"The farm worker has the right to expect decent housing with proper sewage and safe drinking water," the resolution states.

Another resolution said there are significant evidences that individuals being held by law enforcement officials have suffered violations of their civil rights. It also says there are needs for reform in the entire criminal justice system in Texas.

"We call upon our duly elected public officials to investigate and bring criminal charges where needed and rectify all instances of civil rights violations."

Crosbyton-Tech Solar Project Funds Approved

WASHINGTON (Special) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, announced Thursday a Senate panel has voted to appropriate $1 million in fiscal 1980 to complete the first phase of the Crosbyton-Texas Tech University solar energy project.

"I am pleased the subcommittee has agreed to provide the $1 million needed to complete the work fund under the first phase of this innovative solar energy program," Bentsen said. "Without this action there was a very real danger the project would have been abandoned."

The Senate subcommittee on Energy and Water Development authorized the $1 million despite a recommendation for only $100,000 under the President's budget. The U.S. House of Representatives earlier approved the $1 million amount.

The Crosbyton-Texas Tech project, as envisioned in its final form, will consist of 10 mirrored "dishes," each 200 feet in diameter, lined up in a row and facing southward. The dishes will concentrate sunlight into receivers suspended above them that will act as boilers, heating a fluid to power steam turbines.

Carlsbad Art Show Scheduled

CARLSBAD, N.M. (Special) — Lubbock artists Mike and Terri Sodd will be among 65 artists from Texas and New Mexico participating in the 1979 Carlsbad Artaffair July 7 and 8.

The arts and crafts arena will be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. July 7 and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. July 8. Various types of works will be featured, including leather goods, stoneware, wood creations, weavings, paintings and jewelry.

Entertainment in the fair bandshell will include dancers, musicians and gymnasts. Food will be available.

Admission to both the arts and crafts arena and the bandshell is free.

The fair is funded in part by a grant from the New Mexico Arts Division and the National Endowment for the Arts, with matching funds from the City of Carlsbad.

SPC To Host 'Sandyland Opry'

LEVELLAND (Special) — The Bluegrass and Country Music Department of South Plains College will host its monthly "Sandyland Opry" at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the student center on the college campus.

Featured performers at the show will include the Resthome Playboys, singer and pianist Mickey Austin of Littlefield, singer Paul Zamora of Levelland and the Leonard Martin Family of Levelland.

Soft drinks, coffee and snacks will be served from the snack bar beginning at 6:45 p.m.

The event, which has run every month since its inception in 1975, charges $1 for adults and 50 cents for children. Tickets will be available at the door.

Cottle Gasohol Discussion Set Today

A-J Correspondent

PADUCAH — Construction of a possible gasahol plant in the Paducah area will be discussed at a public meeting at 7 p.m. today in the Cottle County Commissioners Courtroom.

Farmers who have visited other plants will discuss feasibility of gasahol in this area and methods of production.

Fair Slated For Paducah Meals Fund

A-J Correspondent

PADCAH — Carry-Out Meals for Paducah is planning a country fair July 11 in the former city bakery building.

The event has been scheduled to raise funds to continue the carry-out meals program for elderly shut-ins, said president Yvonne Caraway.

Activities planned include a bake sale, quilt auction, drawing for a 17-inch color television set, various entertainment and sales booths for arts, crafts and home-canned foods.

Persons unable to attend may donate items by contacting Viola James at 492-3153.

Cottle School Reunion Set Saturday

A-J Correspondent

PADUCAH — The Paducah and Cottle County Ex-students and Ex-teachers Association will have its eighth tri-annual all-school reunion Saturday in Paducah High School.

Registration will begin at 10 a.m. in the front hall of the high school, followed by day-long visiting among participants.

Supper will be at 6 p.m. in the cafeteria, followed by a business meeting and program at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium.

At 9 p.m., a dance will begin in the Veterans Memorial Building with music by a progressive country group, the Red Sand Band.

Tickets are $7.50. More information is available from association president Joann Love at 492-3536 or 492-3011.

Chamber Panel Eyes Candidates

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Officials expect an executive vice president for the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce will be named within two weeks.

Jack Redding, chairman of the search committee to find a successor to Bill Albright, reported to chamber president Johnnie Lou Avery that 11 persons have applied for the position.

Two of that group are business persons within the community.

"We feel that we've gotten less than half of the applications that we're going to get," Mrs. Avery said. "We're going to give ourselves about two weeks for the elimination process."

The chamber will begin interviewing candidates today and Mrs. Avery said she expects to call a board meeting July 11 or 12 regarding naming a new executive vice president.

Howard County Welfare Post Filled

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Kathryn Hise has been named Howard County welfare director, succeeding Ruby Phillips who resigned last week.

Mrs. Hise was secretary of the county welfare office for more than five years. County commissioner Paul Allen said she was selected because of her long association with the office.

Son Of Famed Diver Dies

ALVERCA, Portugal (AP) — A seaplane piloted by Jacques Cousteau's son Phillipe clipped a sand bank while landing Thursday, capsized and sank in the Tagus River, drowning the 37-year-old son of the noted French oceanographer, police in this Lisbon suburb reported.

Police in this Lisbon suburb said seven persons managed to escape from the 33-year-old plane, but despite rescue efforts by fishermen, Cousteau drowned at the controls.

The surviving crew members, two Frenchmen and five Portuguese, reported they were stunned by the collision. They said they thought Cousteau might have hit his head and lost consciousness when the plane flipped over.

One survivor, 25-year-old Cousteau diver Den Phan, told reporters the plane went tail-over-nose about five seconds after coming down on the water at the end of a test flight.

One of the crew broke an arm and another was hospitalized for shock. Jacques Cousteau was reported en route to Lisbon to claim his son's body and accompany it home to France.

The World War II craft had been undergoing repairs here for several months and was purchased in 1974 by his father to film bird migrations and study river courses.

Philippe Cousteau was a photographer, author and diver, but he devoted as much passion to flying as his celebrated father did to underwater research. He barely escaped death in a 1976 helicopter crash on Easter Island.

From childhood he sought to fly, and won a glider pilot's license at the age of 16.

Philippe made his first aqua-lung dive in the Mediterranean at age 4. He has dived in every ocean in the world and shared the experience with millions of people as TV producer, photographer, and lecturer.

He received a degree in science from the College de Normandie, spent a year as special student in electrical engineering at MIT, then went back to Paris to train as a cinematographer.

During all his school vacations he worked with his father as photographer and diver abord the Calypso, his father's research vessel. He worked on the award-winning feature film "World Without Sun" and was one of six "oceanauts" to live 235 feet below the sea for 28 days dring the historic Conshelf III Project in 1965. Filmed for a National Geographic special on CBS.

Others May Join Bosworth Via Layoffs

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

After losing his job as executive director of the Lubbock County Hospital District, Gerald Bosworth expressed concern Thursday for the other hospital employees who might lose their jobs as a result of Health Sciences Center Hospital's financial crunch.

But he stressed that through relocation efforts within the hospital, as well as natural attrition, many of the planned cuts will not involve layoffs.

Bosworth's own contract was not renewed by the LCHD board in a meeting earlier this week. But before voting for his dismissal, the board authorized Bosworth to begin plans for the elimination of about 87 employee positions.

However, he said that of the planned approximately 87 position cuts, only about 56 are left to go since attrition has reduced the hospital staff.

And of the remaining positions to be cut, many of the employees will be offered the chance to relocate to other jobs within the hospital, he said. Of the original planned 87 cuts, almost 60 were on the nursing staff.

Included in the nursing staff category are attendants, licensed vocational nurses (LVNs), ward clerks, technicians and registered nurses (RNs). But RNs will be the last to go, if included in the layoffs.

Each hospital department head has been asked to turn in a list of positions — and names — which can be cut from the budget. Once the list is developed, the people affected should know by next week, Bosworth said.

However, Bosworth's last day on the job is Saturday and it will be up to someone else to initiate the cuts.

Bosworth is scheduled to meet with LCHD board chairman Jack Strong and associate director of operations George McGowan Monday to discuss the transition period between executive directors.

McGowan is responsible for the day-to-day operation of the teaching hospital and has taken over for Bosworth during his vacation periods. But Bosworth said he didn't know if McGowan would be appointed interim executive director.

Bosworth said the attempt to keep RNs off the layoff list is, for the most part, due to the difficulty in recruiting them. He added that other employees are considered just as valuable, but that the institution must keep those employees who are most flexible.

Recruiting efforts for RNs have been slowed, he said, but not stopped. He explained with a natural turnover rate of 37 percent for RNs — which probably will increase with the turmoil at the hospital — stopping recruiting efforts would mean being understaffed for the number of beds the hospital plans to keep open.

"I feel really sad that some of the people who are not RNs will be affected," Bosworth said. He added that "there is a great deal of feeling in the place" but doesn't know if the institution has been open long enough to create the kind of team effort needed at this time.

"Even if I'm not here, they're still going to do their work."

Bosworth has refused to comment on the actions leading to his dismissal, referring all questions to the board of managers. He has not indicated any plans for the immediate future, but has expressed concern over an anticipated drop in employee morale.

In recent months, he said he has met with workers in various departments and had planned to continue the meetings on a cyclical basis to keep employees briefed on the hospital's financial situation — which includes the possibility of a shutdown in future months if extra funding does not turn up.

He said that, obviously, he wouldn't be here to brief the employees, but added the employees were much more important to the operation of the hospital than the executive director.

Bosworth had no specific words for his successor, but stressed he still believes Health Sciences to have a great deal of potential as both a medical learning center and hospital.

"I'm pleased to have been a part of it for as long as I have been," he said.

MRS. PAUL'S SUPREME LIGHT BATTER FISH FILLETS. THE BEST WE EVER MADE.

We've made a lot of great seafood in the past 30 years and we're getting a lot of letters from people who feel Mrs. Paul's Supreme Light Batter Fish Fillets are our best ever. Their quotes make tasty reading.

"More fish than batter." Ms. Sandra Diamond, Brooklyn, NY. Try Mrs. Paul's and you'll see for yourself. We give you more fish than batter. And each thick white fillet is quick-frozen to lock in the fresh-caught mild flavor that people love.

"Nice and crispy, delightful flavor." Mrs. Leathia McPherson, Chicago, Ill. Mrs. Paul's supreme light batter lets the delicious mild taste of our premium haddock fillets come through. Our batter is always prepared in small batches for a fresher, better taste. Delicate and crunchy, never doughy or greasy-tasting, it's the best batter we've ever made.

"No preservatives in the finished product." Mrs. Jessica Getz, Lakehurst, NJ. We don't use anything in our kitchen you wouldn't use in yours. Everything from our fillets to the natural ingredients in our batter is the best. Others use additives like sodium tripolyphosphate and monosodium glutamate. Not Mrs. Paul's.

We're a family company and families come first with us.

"Mrs. Paul's gives you the best for your money." Mrs. Donna Cooper, Saylorsburg, PA. Our price is based on our quality. We use only the finest premium haddock, eggs, natural seasonings and we even top it all off with a Create-a-Sauce mix in every package. There's also a money-back guarantee right on the package if you're not completely satisfied. Mrs. Paul's goes to great lengths to give you the highest quality. That's why we're Supreme.

Look for Mrs. Paul's Supreme Light Batter Fish Fillets and the rest of our Supreme line of frozen seafood in your grocer's freezer. We guarantee you'll love them all.

Official Rates School Fund Measure Good For Lubbock

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A top state education official today rated the complex Texas school finance bill as excellent if judged according to the benefits reaped by the less wealthy school districts such as Lubbock's.

Raymon Bynum, associate commissioner for finance at the Texas Education Agency, said in an interview with The Avalanche-Journal that the recent measure is excellent "if you believe the state should fund schools in relation to the amount of wealth per pupil."

Bynum, who was at Texas Tech University for the annual School Business Services workshop, was referring to the increase in equalization money granted by the Legislature.

Equalization aid, which will be increased during the coming school year from $185 to $275 per pupil, is money provided by the state to districts that have the lowest amount of wealth per average daily attendance in the schools.

"The largest amounts of money went to the poorest districts," said Bynum. "Lubbock fares well because it is not a wealthy district per pupil."

The educational finance expert also called the Tax Relief Amendment "tax redirection" rather than relief. "Tax relief only takes place when governmental spending decreases," said Bynum. "We had tax redirection."

He explained that the burden for some school expenses simply will be shifted from the local taxpayers to the state. "The state revenue (such as sales taxes) would pay for what would have been paid for out of the three property taxes — the regular homestead ($5,000), the additional homestead for the elderly ($10,000) and the ag tax," Bynum said.

He said the tax relief measure is part of a 25-year trend toward a reduced dependence on the property tax. "Contrary to what most people believe, state spending for education has gone up faster than property taxes have gone up," Bynum said. "I know that's hard for most people to believe."

He said that despite the losses to school districts due to the tax exemptions, "I have not heard of a single one who is going for cutbacks" in the school budgets.

He said that about half the school districts in the state are eliminating taxes on automobiles.

Bynum does not agree with the opinion voiced by many teachers in the state that the 5.1 percent salary increased granted by the Legislature is inadequate. "I have a hard time talking about the increase as little," said Bynum. "It's the largest they ever got."

He also does not accept the argument that teachers are paid less than other state officials, even though teachers do not receive all the fringe benefits guaranteed to other state employees.

"Teachers get an automatic step increase (a jump in salary according to experience), but the state employee gets only what he's given (on an individual basis)" Bynum said. He added that teachers have a higher salary than the state employees that work for him.

Bynum says both teachers and state employees are underpaid, and "to be at war with each other is bad."

The education official also says he believes that more emphasis should be placed on funding areas determined by each local district than for areas mandated by the state. "There is a need to emphasize not categorical money but money to go to districts to make their own local decisions," he said.

Bynum concluded that Texas education financially is in good shape. "We're financially fortunate. We're a sunshine state and we have a good economy." He said that deregulation of oil in the state would increase the state revenue and improve the overall economic situation.

"The states in bad shape are New York, New Jersey and Ohio — the old block of northeastern states. They're declining in (school) enrollment and in revenue."

He explained that industry is moving to the South and is taking the money with it. He said that school enrollment is declining because of the industry moves and because of the declining birth rates in that area. "We're growing slightly here," Bynum said.

'Survivors' Get T-Shirt

MERRITT ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — The people who worry about Skylab have their T-shirts. Now those who don't do too.

Three Florida men are producing T-shirts emblazoned with a drawing of the falling space station and the proclamation "I am a Skylab survivor."

It is an upbeat answer to Skylab worriers who are buying bull's eye T-shirts, said Dick Baumbach, one of the partners in the survivor venture.

"Unlike other people who are taking negative attitudes toward Skylab, we feel we're taking a very positive attitude," he said.

Citing projections made by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Baumbach said a given inhabitant of the Earth is 6,000 times more likely to be struck by lightening the day Skylab falls than to be hit by a piece of its debris.

Nevertheless, a broker for Lloyd's of London said Wednesday that it has had hundreds of inquiries about Skylab insurance and has writen one policy for $1 million against the death of an unidentified Texan by Skylab debris.

NASA predicts the space station will end its six-year sojourn in space sometime in mid-July. When it come down, experts say, 500 pieces, including one weighing 5,000 pounds, will reach the surface.

Baumbach says sales of survivor shirts have been brisk in this eastern Florida area where Skylab was launched on May 14, 1973, with half of the first 1,000 shirts gone at $4.50 each.

"Everybody we've talked to wants one," he said.

Soviet Views Star's 'Fall'

MOSCOW (AP) — John Travolta is already a has-been at the box office — at least that's the way a Soviet journalist sees it.

TRAVOLTA

In this week's issue of Literaturnaya Gazeta, Yuri Borovoi says Travolta's "fall" from stardom only a year after his big success in "Saturday Night Fever" illustrates how fleeting fame is in the West.

"Only one joy is left to him — the childish habit of gluing together brightly colored model airplines," Borovoi wrote. In Los Angeles, the writer said, people don't even recll where the "former star" lives now.

Borovoi said Travolta "has become uninteresting to the powers-that-be" since the critics panned "Moment by Moment," his film with Lily Tomlin.

A spokeswoman for LeMond-Zetter, Travolta's New York manager, laughed when asked about the Soviet's comments.

She said Travolta is in Texas doing a movie, "Urban Cowboy," which will take up his time for the "next several months."

Borovoi's article notes the wide impact of "Saturday Night Fever," the story of a Brooklyn youth who seeks escape at discotheques.

"In multitudes of discotheques ... John Travolta fans of both sexes were dancing in white-vested suits or the black leather jacket fashions of the 1950s. ... On the streets of Western cities, vendors were selling empty bottles with the breath of their idol supposedly inside," Borovoi wrote.

But when the actor wanted to break out of his Hollywood mold and play a serious role in "Moment by Moment," Travolta was punished, Borovoi said.

Governor Directs Traffic

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. Fob James took on a new job on the way to work Thursday — traffic cop.

GOV. JAMES

The governor's car, which was being driven by chauffeur Paul Cain, was involved in a minor accident Thursday morning, so James got and directed traffic around the wreck until state troopers arrived to take him to work.

James' news secretary, John Ham, said the governor's car and another auto collided at an intersection, knocking the governor's car into a third car.

Nobody was hurt and no charges were filed.

Attorneys Squabbling

DETROIT (AP) — Christina and Henry Ford II are already squared off in a divorce case. Now Mrs. Ford's attorneys are squabbling.

MRS. FORD

Carl Tunick of New York, formerly Mrs. Ford's chief trial lawyer, has gone to court seeking a court order requiring Mrs. Ford to pay him and lawyers from two Detroit firms $350,000 in legal fees.

However, Mrs. Ford's new attorney, Robert Zeff of Detroit, says he doesn't want his client to pay any legal fees until she has an itemized statement from the two Detroit firms. He also is seeking all documents relating to the divorce that are held by Mrs. Ford's former attorneys.

The Fords separated four years ago, 10 years after their marriage. She filed for a legal separation in December 1977 and he filed for divorce a month later.

Despite the fighting between Mrs. Ford's attorneys, Ford lawyer Milton J. Miller has asked that a trial date be set, saying his client should not be penalized for Mrs. Ford's decision to change lawyers.

"This woma has consulted every lawyer from A to Z," Miller said. "The scales of justice ar large, but they can't accommodate that many lawyers ... Their divorce case is liable to last longer than her marriage."

Town Feels Overshadowed

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — This community feels overshadowed by its Canadian cousin to the north, so residents are trying to win a little recognition with T-shirts.

Backed by the City Council, community leaders are selling T-shirts emblazoned "Vancouver U.S.A." that they hope will make people realize that Vancouver is not just in British Columbia.

Some 2,400 of the shirts went on sale Thursday at fireworks stands associated with the Fourth of July Committee.

Council members helped kick off the campaign Monday night by declaring July 1-7 as "Vancouver U.S.A. Week." To add support to their action, council members left their official meeting briefly and rurned wearing Vancouver U.S.A. T-shirts.

The campaign was begun last year by a Chamber of Commerce committee. It resulted in five "entering Vancouver U.S.A." signs being erected on state highways leading to the city of 40,000 people across the Columbia River from Portland, Ore.

"We just want to try to grab a little bit of extra identity for Vancouver (Washington) as opposed to Vancouver, British Columbia," said committee chairman Bob Moser.

Previous attempts at the polls to change the name of the city to avoid confusion with the larger Canadian city have failed.

Gas Woes Fall On Just...

CLEVELAND (AP) — How do some of Ohio's representatives in Congress cope with long gas lines? Sen. John Glenn and Rep. Louis Stokes let others do the waiting, Rep. Charle Vanik dictates letters and Rep. John Seiberling has bought a bicycle.

"I'll tell you what a heel I am — I have my wife get the gas," says Glenn, who drives to the Capitol from suburban Potomac, Md. "The longest wait she has had was about two hours," he said.

His wife, Annie, says she doesn't mind waiting in line because it gives her a chance to catch up on reading newspapers and magazines. But she does have one complaint about her husband's comment: it was three hours in line, not two.

Asked how he was coping, Vanik said: "Rather miserably. It's not only paying 93 cents for unleaded gas — it's the three hours of time."

He says he uses a tape recorder to dictate letters while he waits.

Stokes has delegated filling up duties to his 16-year-old daughter, who just got a driver's license and is happy for any opportunity behind the wheel — even if it means waiting two hours or more to get gas.

When Stokes is forced to wait for his own gasoline, he says, he uses the time to compose speeches.

Seiberling bought bicycles for himself and his wife. He plans to pedal the 10 blocks from his home to his office.

Speeding Car Driven Into Middle Of Street Party; Woman Killed

CHICAGO (AP) — Three black men, apparently enraged because they were ordered to leave a street party in a white and Latin neighborhood, returned in their car a few minutes later and plowed through the crowd, killing a woman and injuring eight persons, police say.

"It was the craziest thing I ever saw," said Thomas Casa, who lives in the neighborhood and was at the party Wednesday night. "They just came flying through at about 50 miles an hour and bowled them over like tenpins.

"This is a white neighborhood," Casa said. "It's Bridgeport. You know what that is."

James E. Burns, director of the Chicago Commission of Human Relations, said the incident was the first major racial flare-up to come to his attention this summer in the blue-collar South Side neighborhood, birthplace of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley and former Mayor Michael A. Bilandic.

"Nothing like this has happened before," said Gloria Rodriguez, a friend of the dead woman, Conchetta Chira, a 40-year-old mother of six. "A kid threw a beer can at the car when it was leaving, and they came back flying. I saw a kid fly into the air, so I was looking for my kids and I saw my lady friend lying on the ground in terrible shape, dead.

"I fear my Bridgeport neighbors will seek revenge — they will, especially since someone was killed," said Mrs. Rodriguez, 29.

On Thursday, police were checking license plate numbers provided by witnesses but no arrests had been made.

Witnesses said the trouble began as a small band was performing in a street of the modest residential area. There also was singing and disco dancing. Most of those taking part were teen-agers. Older persons watched from the sidewalks and porches.

Police officer Robert Clark said the three blacks drove past, heard the music and stopped to listen.

Anthony Kuesis, 14, said two of the men began dancing in the street.

"Someone in the party asked them to leave because it was a private thing and as they did they pushed some of the kids aside," said Kuesis.

Kuesis said one of the youths hurled a can partly filled with beer at the car as it left. The can struck the rear window.

"We'll be back," Kuesis said one of the men shouted.

The car went up the street and about five minutes later came tearing back and "it looked like it was going about 50 miles an hour," said Kuesis. "The crowd scattered but some couldn't get out of the way fast enough."

Mrs. Chira was slammed full-force by the speeding car, dying at the scene, police said. Eight other persons, ranging in age from 11 to 20, were hit. They suffered lacerations and deep bruises and were treated at hospitals and released.

Pope Feels Newsmen Have 'Tough Job'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II Thursday characterized journalism as a "tough" job and asked journalists to be truthful.

Addressing a group of Belgian Catholic journalists in an audience, he said he had "learned how hard it was during my recent visit (to Mexico and Poland). I encourage you to serve the truth and fraternity, with a free spirit, respecting the convictions of others while at the same time being strong in your convictions as men and as Christians."

Breaking tradition, the pope mixed with journalists accompanying him on the plane during his trips to Mexico and his native Poland.

OPEC Decision's Effect On Consumer Figured

WASHINGTON (AP) — OPEC's 1979 price boosts mean that an average family's bill for gasoline and motor oil will rise at least $230 this year, while the cost of home heating oil will increase more than $90, private and government economists say.

These dramatic increases for necessities will force consumers to cut back purchases elsewhere, further aggravating the trend toward recession, these economists said Thursday.

Meanwhile, Carter administration officials estimate OPEC's announced price rise Thursday, on top of other increases this year, will add two more percentage points to the nation's inflation rate — now running at 13.4 percent annually — through the end of 1980.

Today's FOCUS

This assumes, however, that the oil cartel won't increase prices again for the next 18 months.

The number of unemployed Americans, meantime, will grow by 800,000 more through 1980, directly because of OPEC actions which have upped the price of imported crude oil from the $14.55 it was at the beginning of the year.

OPEC — the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — agreed Thursday to set a two-tier price structure under which Saudi Arabia will charge $18 a barrel and other producers can demand up to $23.50.

To the American, stuck in long gasoline lines and concerned about heating a home this winter, the new price boost can only aggravate an already dismal situation.

Albert H. Cox, president of Merrill Lynch Economics, said the average family as of the fourth quarter of 1978 spent $737 annually for gasoline and motor oil.

That was before OPEC's price actions and before President Carter decontrolled some domestically produced crude.

Now, Cox says, the same family will spend $230 more, or almost $1,000, in gasoline and motor oil.

His estimates were corroborated by the Congressional Budget Office.

Similarly, Cox said, home heating oil as of the last quarter of 1978 cost an average family $184 annually. By this year's fourth quarter, that figure will reach at least $274.

For all consumers, says the Merrill Lynch economist, the gasoline and motor oil bill this year will increase $15 billion to $18 billion; home heating oil costs, $5 billion to $7 billion.

Food prices also will shoot up because of rising world oil prices, although economists were unable to predict precisely how much. This will result from the impact of oil prices on food transportation and processing costs.

James Annabell of the Congressional Budget Office said the OPEC increase "should blunt the recent drop in some food prices at the farm."

OPEC's impact on the U.S. economy can be illustrated by some simple arithmetic.

The Library of Congress calculates, and the Council of Economic Advisers agrees, that the effective price for a barrel of imported oil will now be $20, or $5.45 more than at the year's start.

That comes to an annual increase in the nation's imported oil bill of $16 billion, the Library of Congress says.

But that's not all. Domestic stripper wells and crude from the Alaska pipeline, as a result of decontrol, are pegged to the world price. The OPEC increase means this oil will cost consumers $4.8 billion more than it would have at the beginning of the year.

The final bill, then, for oil is nearly $21 billion more, the library projects, with about half of it attributed to OPEC's latest increase.

Many private economists are saying the nation already has entered a recession and OPEC's actions only aggravate the situation.

Carter administration officials dispute that a recession is upon us. Charles Schultze, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, was asked Thursday whether the country is in a recession, and replied, "It would be premature to make that judgment now."

But administration officials acknowledged that OPEC price boosts will reduce economic growth, putting the gross national product two percentage points below what it would have been by the end of 1980.

New Board Member Gives Views On Education

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Newly elected school board trustee Deaton Rigsby views the attainment of quality education in a practical light: Success or failure, he believes, hinges on the basic factor of money.

During an interview after his appointment as an interim board member during a special session Thursday, Rigsby said the board's priority should be on quality education. "But it's going to be difficult. During the last few years inflation has hit the school systems like everything else."

The former city councilman was chosen from among 12 candidates for the position left vacant by the June 22 death of board president Charles Waters.

"The school system survives by money derived from taxes," Rigsby said. "And I think the people have said they've carried as much of the tax burden as they can carry. So the squeeze is going to be on," he said.

Rigsby supports the automobile tax exemption aimed at providing relief from some of that tax burden, just as he backed it when he was a city councilman. "I supported such a stance when I was on the City Council (from 1968-1972), but there was no place to go with it," he said.

He said he will support the exemption "if there's not something in there (the Tax Relief Amendment passed by the Legislature) that I don't know about yet."

The independent insurance agent would not speculate on the possibility of a tax rate increase this year for the school district because he is not aware of the budget demands yet.

"But the money has got to come from somewhere," he added, noting the "sizable growth in the tax base during 1978 through new construction and re-evaluation" might provide the needed income.

Rigsby said during a press conference Thursday morning that he believes his term on the Tax Board of Equalization has given him an understanding of the tax system.

"I think I have a grasp of what the other side of the tax issue is in working with the board and the people who come before the board," he said. "I think I have a feel for where the monies come from."

Rigsby also addressed the issue of busing to achieve desegregation, saying, "I'm not in favor of it but I realize it's not a matter to be voted on now. I don't think it was ever the wish of the majority of the people or the board to have a busing situation, but it's out of our hands right now," he said.

He continued, "I think we need to pursue the litigation we're in now. We have to try to get settled on construction (of new buildings) and where the kids will be going to school. We'll just have to look at where we are."

Rigsby said he would consider running for a board position when his interim term expires in the spring, but said that to make a definite commitment now would be premature.

School board trustees unanimously elected Rigsby from among 12 candidates who applied or who were suggested by someone else for the position. Other candidates were Dr. Robert Carr, Dr. Charles Henry, Floyd Honey, Med Hunt, Dr. Heenan Johnson, Carolyn Lanier, Mary Nell Mathis, Joe Robbins, Howard Schmidt, George Scott and Joan Turner.

Rigsby said he did not know who nominated him for the position, but that "if they (trustees) want me to try to make a contribution to the school board, I'll give it a try."

He said, "We have a good school system. I want to continue that good system and improve it also."

He was sworn into office by newly elected board president Monte Hasie. Hasie said Rigsby would be "a real asset to the board with his background and qualifications," but said that the choice of the new member was difficult.

Hasie said that during the brief executive session a number of candidates were considered, "but we tried to choose according to the qualifications. What eliminated most was their not having kids," he said. Board criteria for the job included that a candidate have children attending school in the Lubbock Independent School District.

Rigsby, 46, is a Texas Tech University graduate who has been in Lubbock since 1950. He currently owns an insurance agency. Rigsby and his wife, Jan, have six children.

In other business, the board elected vice president Monte Hasie to succeed Waters as president, named Harold Harriger as vice president and re-elected Jose Ramirez as secretary.

Trustees also named Otis "Red" Simmons and Med Hunt to the Tax Equalization Board.

Deputies Seeking Murder Suspect

Lubbock County sheriff's deputies continued searching Thursday afternoon for a suspect in the Wednesday shooting death of Arthur Williams Jr., 48, of Route 1, Box 588.

Chief investigating deputy Ernest Rector said that several tips have been received about the killing, but that the homicide still is being investigated.

One of those tips is that Williams and another man had argued Monday about the victim's hog farming operation.

Williams was shot five times in the head and once in the heart. His body was found outside his home about three miles east of the city shortly after 7 a.m. Wednesday.

Justice of the Peace Charles Smith ruled the death a homicide, the county's seventh of the year.

An autopsy revealed that Williams suffered .22-caliber bullet wounds through the heart and in the chin, nose and right side of the face. Four spent .22-caliber shells were found next to the body.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JUNE 29, 1979

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

CAL JORDAN IMPLEMENT CLOVIS, N. MEX. 505-763-5517

Some ideas work and some won't! In 1978 over 2000 growers from California to Delaware and from Canada to Florida agreed that the Spray Sickle is one weed control idea that really works.
The 1979 Spray Sickle is better than ever — (Over 35 New Improvements.) If you have Johnson Grass (or any other problem weed) the Spray Sickle is really the only sure way to eradicate it.

Young Adult Businessmen and Women for...Delivery of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

A young adult on a Avalanche-Journal route is a part-time business person. He/She is in business for themsel and will learn fundamentals of good business practice through actual experience.

The Avalanche-Journal carrier buys for wholesale and sells for retail, realizing a gross profit. He learns to operate his business as efficiently as possible to assure maximum profit. The A-J carrier builds his business by giving good prompt delivery service and through the use of good salesmanship.

It is important that he learns how to keep accurate records. The Avalanche-Journal carrier has the responsibility of keeping his accounts receivable in order so he can take care of his obligations promptly.

This early training will be useful to a child through his adult career. Many parents encourage their children to accept the challange offered an Avalanche-Journal newspaper route.

Energy Tops Mart Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy issues, responding to the latest price increase by the world oil cartel, led the stock market to a moderate gain in a busy session Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 2.52 to 843.04 on top of a 2.86-point gain Wednesday.

New York Stock Exchange volume reached a two-week high of 38.47 million shares, up from 36.72 million the day before.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, concluding its meeting in Geneva, set a base price of $18 a barrel, with allowances for prices of up to $23.50 for some of the top grades of oil from African countries. That compares with the former base of $14.55 and recent average prices of $17 to $18.

Three of the five American Stock Exchange volume leaders were energy issues — Houston Oil & Minerals, up ¾ at 21⅛; Husky Oil, up 2⅛ at 51½, and Great Basins Petroleum, up ⅛ at 13.

New York (AP) — Thursday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Outplacement Service Helps Ousted Executives Get Jobs

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The words sting like a hard slap in the face: "We can't afford you anymore. We're going to have to let you go. Sorry."

Few persons are prepared to receive walking papers — especially loyal executives who have been around for awhile. But it happens, about an estimated 100,000 times a year to mid-to upper-level executives.

Mergers, reorganizations, budget belt-tightening, company politics or personality conflicts rank among the major reasons why people are fired.

The standard termination practice of most organizations is to give the pink-slipped executive a vague explanation of why he or she is being canned, pad the final check with a few weeks' severance pay and politely, but firmly, point the way to the exit.

But some companies take as much care in separating their employees as they do in hiring them. The concept — called "outplacement" — is a process normally reserved for middle-to upper-management levels.

Rather than washing their hands of any responsibility after a corporate execution, a few blue chip corporations are turning to outplacement consultants to help recycle the unwanted administrator.

"It's a very much behind-the-scenes process," said Curt Kampmeier, president of The Kampmeier Group, a Columbus-based management consulting firm. "Companies using it don't brag about it, of course. But it's a more humanistic approach to separating a long-time employee."

'Our job," Kampmeier explained, "is to help the individual do some career planning. We try to help him identify what he ought to be doing at this point in his life; we try to help him clarify what he wants to be doing and to think about particular industries or jobs."

Kampmeier's firm uses a group of psychologists at Princeton University that test and compare the person's strengths and weaknesses to 400,000 business executives who have been evaluated and followed in the past 21 years.

Such a comparison can provide an indication of which characteristics are the most marketable and which areas need refinement, he said.

"We've found the system to be around 85 percent accurate," Kampmeier added. The goal of the outplacement specialist is to help the ousted executive separate from his present company with minimum hostility and to pave the way for a smooth transition into another organization.

The first meeting with an executive who has been asked to leave can be a touchy confrontation. The individual, as a rule, is responding to a severe emotional crisis. The initial shock of losing a job is normally followed by a combination of other feelings.

"We try to assist the candidate in expressing those feelings," explained David Hoffman, president of Executive Assets Corp., an outplacement firm headquartered in Chicago serving only corporations. "We are, in effect, an emotional dumping ground. But we try to head off any sour grapes attitude that could show up in an interview situation."

Kampmeier agreed. "We'll usually meet with the executive as well as his supervisor and tell him: 'Now look, the company is going to invest time and energy and money in order to make this a good transition. We realize you're bent out of shape, scared, your feelings are hurt. But we're here to work with you and to help you get the best job of your life.'"

Outplacement specialists work on a percentage of the executive's pay, usually 10 percent to 15 percent, plus a flat expense fee. This fee covers the firm's administrative costs of furnishing the candidate an office, secretarial and telephone support as well as all printing and letter writing services during his career campaign.

The outplacement firm usually recommends the corporation continue the executive's salary for at least a two-or three-month period, depending on the circumstance. By this point, he should have developed several leads with various companies or executive search firms.

"Statistically speaking, it takes an average of three months and two days to conduct a campaign," said Hoffman.

Overall, the field of outplacement is one with a very bright future due mainly to the social consciousness that many corporations have developed. This, of course, is combined with increased concern over the legal liabilities companies have in the treatment of their employees.

Fewer Working Days Lost To May Strikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of working days lost in May because of strikes declined significantly from April's levels, to 3.8 million, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

It said businesses lost 1.4 million fewer days to strikes than in April, when a trucking industry work stoppage and a strike against United Airlines boosted the number of idle days to 5.2 million.

The proportion of total working time lost to strikes during May fell to 1.8 per thousand, compared with 2.8 per thousand during April. Through May 1979, strikes have cost business 13.7 million working days, down from the 19.7 million days lost during the first five months of 1978.

GREECE TREATY APPROVED

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The Parliament ratified Greece's accession treaty Thursday, making the Mediterranean nation the European Economic Community's 10th member. Of the 300 members in the single-chamber Parliament, 193 voted in favor of joining the EEC, three abstained and 104 deputies belonging to the left-leaning Socialists and Moscow-line Communists, were absent during the roll call vote.

Pentagon May Ask For More Fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is considering asking for special allocations of jet and diesel fuel to avoid cutbacks in military operations and training.

The Defense Department now is about 12 percent short in its fuel inventory and has had to tap some war reserve stocks. Pentagon officials said the problem is compounded by some suppliers who claim they are unable to fulfill fuel contracts at prices agreed to before their costs surged.

"We've not had to go deeply into reserve stocks, but it's been happening more frequently than it should be," said one official. He said these stocks had been replenished as soon as possible.

The armed services burn about 460,000 barrels of petroleum products a day, or about 2.5 percent of total U.S. usage, defense officials said. They claim to have reduced military usage by 30 percent since 1973.

Ashby Triggers Astros By Giants, 6-5

By The Associated Press

Alan Ashby's leadoff homer triggered a four-run fourth-inning rally that included a run-scoring single by Craig Reynolds and a bases loaded walk and lifted the Houston Astros to a 6-5 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Right-hander Rick Williams, 3-3, withstood a four-run first inning by the Giants and got relief help from Randy Niemann, who came on in the eighth and picked up his first save. The Astros won for the ninth time in the last 11 games.

Bill North's leadoff triple and a three-run homer by Willie McCovey were the big blows in the Giants' first. McCovey's homer was his 12th of the season and the 517th of his career.

Ed Halicki, coming off the disabled list and making his first start since May 26, was reached for two runs in the third as Houston began its comeback.

Terry Puhl walked, stole second, took third on a wild pitch and scored on Reynolds' groundout for the first run. Cesar Cedeno singled, stole second and came home on Enos Cabell's double to make it 4-2.

After Ashby's homer pulled the Astros within a run, Rafael Landestoy walked and was forced at second by Williams. Puhl singled and Williams scored on a throwing error to third by right fielder Jack Clark.

Reynolds followed with a run-scoring single and the rally concluded on a bases-loaded walk to Dennis Walling by loser John Curtis, 3-4.

The Giants made it an exciting finish by scoring once in the eighth and threatening in the ninth.

Singles by Jack Clark and McCovey chased Williams in the eighth and Darrell Evans greeted Niemann with a sacrifice.

Clark scored on Terry Whitfield' groundout for the Giants' fifth run. Pinch-batter Mike Ive walked and stole second but Marc Hill struck out, ending the threat.

North singled with one out in the ninth and stole second with two away. Clark was walked intentionally and Niemann registered the save when Johnnie LeMaster flied to left for the final out.

Joe Strain, the infielder recalled from Phoenix to take Bill Madlock's place at second base, fielded flawlessly but was hitless in three trips to the plate.

Reliever Pedro Borbon, acquired from Cincinnati earlier in the day, arrived in time to warm up in the bullpen during the eighth inning.

All season, Houston manager Bill Virdon has said that the reason for the Astros success this season has been the acquisition of catcher Ashby and shortstop Craig Reynolds.

Ashby proved Virdon's point with a homer to spark Thursday's rally.

But also, Houston has been able to win the 1-run games all year.

For that Virdon credits the pitching staff.

Knuckleball hurler Joe Niekro became the first pitcher in the major leagues to win 11 games this season in a string that included a team record nine games in a row.

But despite Houston's commanding lead in the division race, Virdon is well aware there is a long way to go. And for that reason, the Astro manager isn't ready to celebrate just quite yet.

"The really good teams are the ones that are consistent," said Virdon. "They don't let a little losing streak bother them. They come right back. We have a long way to go to September."

San Francisco Giant Billy North dives back into third base after belting a triple during a major league game against the Houston Astros Thursday afternoon. North sparked a four-run first inning rally, but Houston didn't lose its composure and rebounded to edge San Francisco 6-5. (AP Laserphoto)

Wimbledon Seeds Keep Losing

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Tim Wilkison, an athletic 19-year-old from Shelby, N.C., conquered Guillermo Vilas 5-7, 6-2, 6-1, 7-6 Thursday as the slaughter of seeded players continued at the Wimbledon tennis championships.

With the second round of the men's singles completed, only nine of the original 16 seeds were left in contention.

To throw the tournament even more open, defending champion Bjorn Borg was troubled by a thigh injury and had doubts about going through with his third-round match today.

The Swedish star said in the morning he had only a 25 percent chance of playing. But he practiced later and was reported to be moving well about the court.

Also eliminated was Manuel Orantes of Spain. Gilles Moretton of France outlasted him 7-6, 3-6, 7-6, 3-6, 6-1.

Meanwhile, in the women's draw, 16-year-old American Tracy Austin opened her Wimbledon bid by overcoming South Africa's Brigitte Cuypers 4-6, 6-1, 6-2 in the second round. She had a first-round bye.

It was a patchy encounter with a lot of errors by both players, but Miss Austin showed no ill effects from the groin muscle injury that forced her to pull out of a warm-up tournament at Eastbourne last week.

Seeds previously put out were Vitas Gerulaitis, Arthur Ashe, Corrado Barazzutti, Jose Higueras and Wojtek Fibak.

Jimmy Connors, warming up after a sluggish start, downed Marty Riessen 6-7, 6-3, 7-6, 6-0 for a place in the third round.

The upset results have left Connors with no seeded players in his way until he reaches the quarterfinals. If play continues according to form, he then would play Victor Pecci, the tall, big-hitting Paraguayan, who defeated Australia's Phil Dent 6-4, 7-6, 6-3.

Pecci, who was little known until earlier this month, defeated Connors in the semifinals of the French Open.

If Borg withdrew, ninth-seeded Brian Gottfried would also have an easy passage to the quarters — if any matches in this cut-throat, see-sawing competition can be called easy.

John McEnroe, the No. 2 seed, already was safely through to the third round.

Two American seeded players in McEnroe's half of the draw progressed Thursday. Roscoe Tanner demolished Peter McNamara of Australia 6-1, 7-6, 6-4, and Tim Gullikson beat big Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia 7-5, 6-7, 6-2, 6-4.

Wilkison, ranked No. 41 in the United States, threw himself about on the grass court and retrieved everything in sight to beat the sixth-seeded Vilas.

Wilkison led 5-3 in the first set but temporarily lost his touch. From the second set on, however, the young American looked more like a seeded player than his famous opponent, who has won the U.S., French and Australian opens but never gotten beyond the quarters here.

In the last three sets Vilas double-faulted six times. He led 5-2 in the fourth but blew his chance of a comeback and lost the match on a tiebreaker.

"He played very well, but I think I helped him," Vilas said.

Riessen, at 37 the oldest player in the second round, gave Connors a good workout. He came close to a 2-1 sets lead, but lost the tiebreaker of the third 7-6.

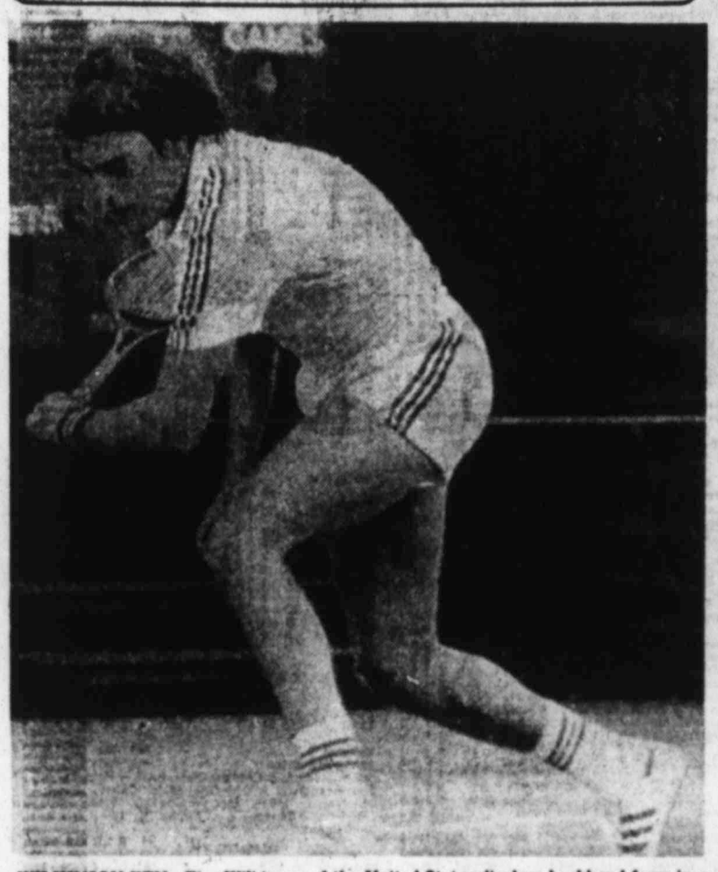
Riessen said the court was slow and the balls heavy. Connors tried to force the pace from the start and made a lot of mistakes in the first set.

But by the end of the match, Connors was in top gear. He dropped only six points in the last five games.

The women's singles are running more to form than the men's. Of the 16 seeds, 14 have made the third round.

The exceptions are Britain's Sue Barker, ousted by Argentina's Ivanna Madruga in the first round, and America's 16-year-old Pam Shriver, who withdrew with an injured shoulder.

American Kathy Jordan, the No. 14 seed, outstroked Swiss-born Bettina Bunge of the United States 6-1, 6-4.



WILKINSON WIN—Tim Wilkinson of the United States displays backhand form in a match against Guillermo Vilas of Argentina during the Wimbledon tennis tournament Thursday afternoon. Wilkinson upset Vilas 5-7, 6-2, 6-1, 7-6 to advance in the competition. (AP Laserphoto)

WHEN TIME AND space run short. . .

Not only can he pitch a baseball, but the Yankees' Ron Guidry can throw a plug, too. He's been named chairman of National Hunting and Fishing Day. (It's Sept. 22, or a week before end of the regular baseball season.) . . You know the Astros, those guys who are the surprise of the majors now. Well, not everyone knows them. When ABC-TV sets up a Monday night telecast, it always sends a guy into the host city two days early to pick up some local flavor and player anecdotes to feed to the announcers. Well, the Astros are so well known that the network sent its man to Houston three days early. "I didn't really know much about them," admitted Jerry Klein. . .

Don Beck, the former Olton coach who dropped out of the profession after a stint at Perryton? He's back on the sidelines, hiring on at Sweetwater as head coach. . . Congratulations dept: Texas Tech's golf brochure, edited by Keith Samples and Joe Hornaday, was picked fourth best in the nation by the college tub-thumpers' organization. . .

• • •

THE NATION'S HIGH school coaches have picked their outstanding member for the year; it's Gordon Wood, the Brownwood legend. Fact that he's the winningest high school coach in the nation had something to do with it, one would suppose, with 343 wins and only 67 defeats in 38 years in the business. . . And a couple more statistics: Abe Lemons figures out that if Larry Bird, he of the big rookie cage contract, averages 30 points (15 field goals) per game, each goal will be worth $540. His salary comes out to $8,100 per game. . .

Bill Parcells, the former Tech grid aide? He's now working with a land-development firm at Colorado Springs, Colo. He splits his time between the firm's real estate work and in a recreational program at its country club. Parcells coached the Air Force Academy for one year, went to the New York Giants for only a month in the spring, then returned to Colorado Springs. . . How's this for a successful stay? During his four-year career at Tech, Geoff Huston helped the Raiders win 83 basketball games, against 36 losses. And the Raider guard didn't spend all his time in the coliseum either; he missed graduating in four years by only six hours. . .

THE PROS' THREE-point bucket (to be added next winter)? Abe Lemons, the UT cage coach, likes the idea. "I always thought that shot (from beyond 22 feet) was worth more than a layup." . . They're on the same side now. Raider coach Rex Dockery and Southern California linebacker coach John Marshall will be lecturers at a football clinic next weekend by West Texas State. Two months later (Sept. 8) they'll line up on opposite sides of Jones Stadium when the Raiders host USC. . .

How do you get from South Bend, Ind., to Miami, Fla.? Well, for the Notre Dames, you go by Tokyo. Notre Dame and Miami finish the 1979 grid season in that Japanese city. Which prompted the Irish's Dan Devine to observe: "We open with Michigan, Purdue, and Michigan State and during the season play Navy, Southern Cal, Tennessee and Clemson and then (finish) in Tokyo — which might not be a bad place for me to set up residence at that time." . . It's official that Charley McClendon will coach only one more year at LSU, then he can stay on as assistant AD if he desires. But, after '79? "I think this year may have a lot to do with my decision. I think I'd be making a mistake if I tried

Rangers Bomb Angels For Sixth Win

By The Associated Press

The Texas Rangers scored 12 runs and rapped out 16 hits off three California pitchers in the first two innings and cruised behind Ferguson Jenkins' five-hit pitching for a 14-4 victory over the slumping Angels.

Jenkins, 8-4, struck out eight and walked one. Two of the hits off him were homers, solo shots by Carney Lansford in the sixth and Don Baylor in the seventh. It was Texas' sixth straight victory and California's seventh straight loss.

Jim Baar, 3-4, lasted only one-third of an inning, giving up five singles, including Billy Sample's with the bases full. The Rangers then blasted reliever Ralph Botting for four hits, including Dave Roberts' bases-loaded single and Bump Wills' RBI double.

Botting, making his major league debut, was shelled in the second, when the first four Rangers got on base, one by a throwing error. Sample and John Grubb got RBI singles off Botting, and Wills' single off Steve Eddy made it 12-0.

Sample knocked in four runs in the game, one in the sixth inning on a bases-loaded grounder. Roberts, who was 4-for-5, singled in the eighth and scored Texas' last run on Buddy Bell's sacrifice fly.

INDIANS 6, ORIOLES 3

Ron Hassey drove in three runs and Rick Wise and Sid Monge combined on a five-hitter as the Cleveland Indians beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-3, ending a 10-game losing streak.

Hassey singled home a run during a two-run second inning and had a two-run double in the fourth, doubling his 1979 RBI total for 14 previous games.

Andre Thornton hit his 10th homer, off Dennis Martinez, 10-4, who lost his second straight game after winning 10 in a row, and Mike Hargrove had an RBI double.

Wise, 7-5, allowed three extra-base hits in the first three innings, including Lee May's 12th homer.

The Orioles scored two more runs off Wise in the eighth on two walks, an error by first baseman Andre Thornton, and Ken Singleton's two-run single.

The Cleveland right-hander gave up a single and a walk in the ninth before needing Monge's last-out relief help. Monge picked up his sixth save of the season.

TIGERS 6, RED SOX 3

Champ Summers drove in three runs with his third homer in as many games as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Boston Red Sox 6-3.

Tigers starter Jack Billingham, 7-4, scattered seven hits in seven innings to pick up the victory with relief help from Aurelio Lopez. Boston starter Steve Renko, 5-3, took the defeat.

Detroit took a 1-0 lead in the second when Jason Thompson led off with a double, went to third on Summers' one-out single and scored on Aurelio Rodriguez' grounder to short, sliding in under a good throw from Rick Burleson to Boston catcher Gary Allenson.

YANKEES 5, BLUE JAYS 3

Jim Spencer doubled home the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning and scored on an error by losing pitcher Mark Lemongello as the New York Yankees defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 5-3.

Lou Piniella singled with one out and Spencer, who entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning, drilled a pitch from Lemongello, 1-8, off the center-field fence to break a 3-3 tie. Graig Nettles then grounded to second, but Lemongello, covering first base, let Dan Ainge's throw get past him for an error, allowing Spencer to score.

The victory went to rookie reliever Ron Davis, 6-0, who replaced starter Tommy John in the eighth inning but was nicked for the tying run in the bottom of the ninth on Bob Bailor's leadoff single, a sacrifice, a stolen base and a single by Luis Gomez.

BREWERS 6, TWINS 5

Ben Oglivie slammed his 15th home run in the 10th inning to lift the Milwaukee Brewers past the Minnesota Twins 6-5.

Oglivie's blast came off Mike Marshall, 9-7, with two out and foiled a comeback rally by the Twins, who had tied the game with two runs in the ninth.

Bill Castro, 2-0, picked up the win in relief.

Minnesota trailed 5-3 going into the ninth. Ron Jackson singled, moved to third on Willie Norwood's single and scored on Butch Wynegar's sacrifice fly. Jerry Augustine then walked Edwards and was replaced by Castro, and Bombo Rivera greeted Castro by chopping a high bouncer near second base for an infield hit.

Minnesota took a 3-0 lead before Oglivie hit a two-run double in the fourth and raced home on the play when shortstop Roy Smalley first could not handle Hosken's Powell's poor throw from left, then threw the ball past third base.

Oglivie scored the fourth Milwaukee run off starter Dave Goltz in the sixth when he reached first on a fielder's choice, stole second and came home when catcher Btch Wynegar's throw hit Oglivie and bounded into left field.

Milwaukee made it 5-3 in the eighth when Charlie Moore singled with two out and score on a triple by Molitor.

METS 3, PIRATES 2

Catcher John Stearns shook off a home plate collision with former teammate Tim Foli and slammed a seventh-inning solo homer that provided the victory margin as the New York Mets beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2.

With the Mets leading 2-1 in the bottom of the sixth and Foli at second after a double, Bill Robinson singled to right field off reliever Neil Allen.

Right fielder Joel Youngblood made a one-hop throw to the plate, where Stearns tagged out Foli, and both were slammed to the ground. As Foli and Stearns rolled in the dirt, both benches emptied, but no punches were thrown and order was quickly restored.

With one out in the top of the seventh, Stearns drove a pitch from Jim Bibby into the left field seats to give the Mets a 3-1 lead.

Stearns' fifth homer of the season proved pivotal when pinch hitter Ed Ott singled home another Pirates run in the bottom of the seventh on a high chopper to the right side that apparently was lost in the lights by first baseman Willie Montanez.

Bibby, who fell to 3-2 with the loss, yielded a pair of first-inning runs on singles by Youngblood and Frank Taveras, an RBI double by Richie Hebner and a wild pitch.

Robinson hit a solo home run, his 17th, in the fourth off Mets starter Kevin Kobel, who left in the fourth with an arm problem. Allen, 2-5, got the victory, and Ed Glynn earned his third save.

WHITE SOX 2, MARINERS 1

Ross Baumgarten and Steve Trout scattered nine hits as the Chicago White Sox held off the Seattle Mariners 2-1. Trout, picking up his fourth save, replaced Baumgarten, 6-5, with two runners aboard and none out in the ninth.

Seattle's Dan Meyer, trying to sacrifice, beat out a bunt to load the bases. Trout then got Bill Stein to ground into a double play with the Mariners picking up their run.

PADRES 6, BRAVES 5

Paul Dade and Jerry Turner each contributed a pair of doubles and Turner also knocked in two runs to lead the San Diego Padres past the Atlanta Braves 6-5.

John D'Acquisto, 4-5, went 72-3 innings in relief of starter Eric Rasmussen to pick up the victory. Rasmussen left the game with a sore foot after surrendering a pair of first-inning runs. Rollie Fingers relieved with two outs in the ninth to register his 11th save.

ROYALS 7, A's 6

Al Cowens greeted Jim Todd with a single that scored George Brett from third with the winning run in a two-run ninth inning, propelling the Kansas City Royals to a 7-6 conquest of Oakland for their sixth straight victory.

Jamie Quirk led offhthe Kansas City ninth with a single off Dave Heaverlo, 3-8, and went to second on Willie Wilson's sacrifice bunt.

After George Brett was walked intentionally, Amos Otis singled home the tying run and sent Brett to third before Brett delivered the game-winning hit.

Al Hrabosky, 6-3, was the winner in relief.

Jeff Newman had hit a home run and a double and drove in three runs.

McGowan, McCumber Share Memphis Golf Lead

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Pat McGowan sank a 55-foot putt on the 15th hole Thursday to tie early leader Mark McCumber at five-under-par 67 for a share of the first-round lead in the $300,000 Danny Thomas Memphis Classic.

McCumber, a 28-year-old Floridian who won the Doral Open three months ago, hung up five birdies over the par 72, 7,249-yard Colonial Country Club course during the morning round.

Just behind McCumber were Gary Koch and Tom Jenkins, both at 68, and 1974 Memphis Classic champ Gary Player, Mike McCullough, Victor Regalado, Wally Armstrong, Brad Bryant and J.C. Snead — all at 69.

McCuber's lead seemed secure for the day as McCullough went to five under on No. 16, then doble bogied on 17 before inishing with a 69.

Then McGowan, a 24-year-old Colusa, Calif., resident in his second year on the tour, hit a hot streak. He sank a 40 footer on No. 3, parred the next three holes and birdied 7, 8 and 9.

"I started off just a little slow," McGowan said in the clubhouse. "Then I knocked in that 40 footer on the third hole and that got me going."

McGowan, whose best finish this year was a tie for fourth in the Phoenix Open, avoided the "bogey man."

"You know you're going to have a pretty good round if you don't have any bogies," he said.

McCumber, playing his first full year on the PGA tour, was driving along and dropping putts as he birdied 6, 7, 9, 13 and 14. On the par four 13th, he hit a seven iron shot to the green and dropped a 30 foot putt for a birdie.

McCumber, who has collected $58,362 this year, returned to the tour this week after a two-week layoff.

The Jacksonville, Fla., professional said he was concentrating on isolating his shots.

"I'm taking one shot at at time and ignoring the consequences," he said. "I...pick a spot and hit the shot that has to be hit the best that I can. I was doing that Sunday at Doral and I think that's why I won."

Player, who is in McCumber's threesome, collected six birdies, but bogied two holes as he became the only former Memphis Classic winner among first-round leaders.

Defending champion Andy Bean turned in a 71 and two-time winner Lee Trevino fell to a disappointing 72. Gibby Gilbert, the 1976 champ, was at 73 and 1977 winner Al Geiberger was at 71.

Player's 17-year-old son Wayne carded a 73. Young player, an amateur playing under a sponsor's exemption ballooned to a thee-over-par 39 on the front nine, but recoveredwith a two-under-par 34 on the backside.

Pinehills Slates Partnership

Only one opening remains in the summer partnership at Pinehills golf course which is scheduled for Saturday and Sunday.

Tournament officials report that 119 teams have already registered for the tourney, leaving space for one more team. The entry fee is $55 per team and the deadline is 6 p.m. today.

Golfers will have a choice of shotgun tee times at 9 a.m. or 2 p.m. Saturday. The teams will be flighted after the first round on the par-72 course.

Austin, Barrow Top Golf Field In Michigan

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Debbie Austin rammed home two birdies on the front nine and added four more on the backside to finish with a 3-under-par 69 and a first-round tie with Barbara Barrow Thursday in a $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at the Dearborn Country Club course.

Miss Austin boomed her drives and hit 16 greens, which were softened by a severe overnight thunderstorm, on the way to her "best round in weeks."

Miss Barrow, 24, in her second year of the LPGA tour, matched two brdies and two bogies on the back nine and then ran in three long birdie putts on the front for her best round as a professional.

Seventeen golfers were buched within two strokes of each other in the 7-hole Lady Stroh's Open, which carries a first prize of $22,500.

At 2-under-par 70 were five golfers — defending champion Sandra Post, veteran Susie Berning, Beth Solomon, Debbie Massey and Gail Toushin.

At 71 were ten players, including Pat Meyers, who lost in a sudden death playoff to Post in the tournament's innaugural last year. Veterans Sandra Palmer, Jan Ferraris and Kathy McMullen also hit 71s.

The husky, 5-foot-11-inch Miss Barrow, former national collegiate champion, hit 17 fairways on the 6,411-yard layout. On her final nine, she sank birdie putts of 10, 30 and 35 feet.

Miss Barrow was exuberant — and nervous.

"It feels kind of different to be in the lead. This is the first time," Miss Barrow said after grabbing the lead early. "I'm trying not to think about it.

"There was no wind — ideal playing conditions. I kept the ball in play better than I have all season."

The rain "helped a whole lot," said Miss Austin, one of the latest finishers. "The greens here are usually hard.

"This course demands excellent iron play and I'm a straight hitter," Miss Austin said. "Now, it's just a matter of putting. I had 29 putts today, which wasn't bad, and I was swinging the club well."

The field of 101 professionals and six amateurs will be pared to 70 players plus ties at the 36-hole cut Friday.

Pat Bradley, who is third on the LPGA money list, finished the first day with a 72. LPGA Champion Donna Caponi Young shot a 77. The tour leader in titles and money this year, Nancy Lopez, skipped this event, after winning last week at Hershey, Pa.

The rain ended before play started Thursday, and play was held under sunny skies with temperatures in the 80s.

ENMU Signs Recruit

PORTALES, N.M. (Special) — Austin Henderson, a 6-6 forward from Anoka-Ramsey Community College in Minneapolis, Minn., has agreed to play basketball for Eastern New Mexico University.

A 20-year old junior, Henderson averaged 13.2 points and 9.6 rebounds a game as a sophomore at Anoka-Ramsey.

Ali, Alzado Fight Receives Stamp Of Credibility

DENVER (AP) — The fight some people thought would never come off was given the stamp of credibility Thursday when Muhammad Ali appeared in Denver to promote his eight-round exhibition bout with Denver Bronco defensive lineman Lyle Alzado.

About 1,000 people greeted Ali at Denver's Stapleton International Airport. The World Boxing Association heavyweight champion shook hands, kissed babies and joked with he crowd before departing for a news conference at the Marriott Hotel, where he was welcomed by several hundred more fans.

Ali proved once again that he is as good a showman and promoter as he is a fighter.

He playfully sparred with Alzado on several occasions and recited some poetry predicting his success in the bout, scheduled for July 14 at Mile High Stadium.

Ali also formally signed the contract for the bout during the news conference.

He entered the news conference with a stream of remarks about the fight. "I destroyed Sonny Liston, I destroyed Floyd Patterson, I destroyed Joe Frazier, I destroyed George Foreman," he said. "Ain't no football player going to beat me."

During a live televised segment of the press conference, Ali grappled with Alzado, insulting his challenger and again predicted a knockout victory in a dramatic performance. At the close of the TV interview, Ali asked the assembled reporters, "Did we sell some tickets?"

Ali, who announced his official retirement from the ring, Tuesday, said he was firm about that decision. "I'm 37, that's old," he said. "I'm the three-time champ. Why should I fight again? I'm going to be the first black man ever to get out on top. I'd be a big fool to keep fighting."

The champ on several occasions seemed to stumble over Alzado's name and at one time asked, "Lyle who? What's your name? I've never heard of you before. But after this fight, you're going to be world known. I'm going to give you a world-wide whipping."

Ali referred to Alzado as "The Bear" and said, "We're friends — we smile and joke — but when the bell rings, we rumble. You are a crazy white boy."

Alzado, 30, bore the brunt of Ali's verbal assault, but at one point, the 250-pound lineman silenced Ali with his own poem: "You may float like a butterfly and sting like a bee, but when I get you, I'm going to take you in three."

Alzado, who had a standout Golden Gloves boxing career, said he aproached the fight as "a great challenge for me. I know Muhammad is a great fighter, but I think I still have a chance."

Surprises Fill Slate In Rainbow Stakes

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (Special) — There were plenty of surprises in Thursday's race slate. Each race on the the expanded agenda was 400 yards in preparation for the upcoming $496,000 Rainbow Quarterhorse Futurity, the second leg of the triple crown.

In order to make the qualifying cut, a hopeful had to finish first or second.

One of the big surprises concerned Favorite Past Time, the winner of the recent $28,000 Kansas Futurity. The filly looked sluggish at the end of her heat, drifted to third as a towering favorite and was ruled out.

Seco Mighty Talk, who took second in the Kansas Futurity and was then disqualified and placed third for interference, went into another wayward course in her Rainbow trial on Thursday. The filly finished second, but was disqualified to third, and that eliminated her Rainbow hopes.

But perhaps the biggest surprise of all was a coasting length win in the 18th race by the 112-1 longshot, Breezing Angel. She led all the way and paid $225.60, one of the highest win prices in Ruidoso history.

Here is the complete list of the first round qualifiers from Thursday's card: Tonya Jay Bar, Wired To Run, Chicks Charger, Jaimie Jay, Power Swivel, Blazing Feet, Nine Ohs, Lito Gray Baby, Sotrs Jet Deck, Miss Mito Jet, Pa Pa Wheelie, Staunch Avenger, Call Me Smooth, Johnny Drag, Easy Dame, Flying Chicks Bar, Acceptable, Mito Straw, Mr. Laico Bird, Try Si, Mighty Malice, Kitalfa, Gorthington, Breezing Barmeon, Oh Bar Oh, Smooth Feelin, Say Moon, Mitos King Bee, Rocket Jet Bug.

EARLY OILERS

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers will be the first National Football League to report for 1979 preseason training camp, the NFL announced.

Lee To Coach Six-Man Stars

STEPHENVILLE (Special) — Cotton Center's Monte Lee will be coaching the West All-Stars in the annual Texas Six-Man Coaches Association Clinic and All-Star Games at Tarleton State University July 15-21.

The clinic and football and basketball games are being sponsored by the Stephenville Chamber of Commerce.

The squads are dotted with players from the South Plains.

Jimmy Avery and Roger Reding of Whitharral High School, along with Jeff Young of McAdoo and Mike Gibson of Guthrie, will be playing for the West squad in the All-Star basketball game beginning at 4 p.m. on July 21 in Tarleton's Wisdom Gym.

Avery averaged 24 points and 14 rebounds per game while Reding chipped in an average of 15 points and had 12 rebounds and eight assists a game. Both were all-district players, Avery for four straight years and Reding for two. Avery also made third team all-state.

Young averaged 23 points per game in his senior year.

The All-Star football game, where Lee will be coaching the West, will beginat 8 p.m. on July 21 at Tarleton's Memorial Stadium.

The teams will gather for a week of activities that conclude with the all-star games on Saturday. While the players are preparing for the game, coaches from six-man schools will be attending lectures and demonstrations by the players.

WILLIAMS HOMERS

TOKYO (AP) — Bernie Williams of Hankyu, formerly of the San Francisco Giants, hit his ninth homer of the Japanese League season as Braves played a 3-3 tie with the Lotte Orions in the opener of a doubleheader Thursday.

It was the 40,000th home run recorded in Japanese pro baseball since 1936.

Baseball Surprises

Giants Trade Madlock...

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Reaction was swift and somber after the San Francisco Giants swapped popular second baseman Bill Madlock to the Pittsburg Pirates Thursday.

"It's basically a giveaway," said third baseman Darrell Evans, refering to the fact that the Giants acquired right-hander Ed Whitson and two minor league hurlers for Madlock and veteran lefty Dave Roberts. San Francisco also reportedly sent Lenny Randle from their Phoenix farm club to Pittsburg.

Madlock, a two-time NL batting champion, is thleague's career batting leader among active players. Whitson has a 2-3 record, one save and a 4.34 earned run aerage this season. Roberts currently is 0-2 with a 2.57 ERA.

Madlock and General Manager Spec Richardson insisted the move was not the result of a recent feud between Madlock and Manager Joe Altobelli. Madlock recently criticized a team meeting called by Altobelli and, as a result, was benched for four days.

The Giants, in the same deal, also acquired right-hander Fred Breining and left-hander Al Holland. They will move from Pittsburg farm clubs to minor league teams run by the Giants.

"It doesn't look like a very fair deal," Evans said after the announcement was made at a Candlestick Park news conference. "For our two guys, you've got to get a 20-game winner."

Willie McCovey, the club's elder stateman at 41, had similar feelings. "I wouldn't have made the deal. But I'm not the general manager."

Richardson justified the move by noting the Giants' 4.26 team ERA entering Thursday's game with the Houston Astros. The Giants were in third plac in the NL West with a 37-37 record.

"We needed pitching help," explained Richardson, who earlier in the day obtained veteran Cincinnati reliever Pedro Borbon in exchange for utility man Heity Cruz.

"We've been blowing too many ballgames in the eighth and ninth innings," Richardson said. "Now we have Borbon and Whitson to help us out down there and Joe Strain from Phoenix (PCL) to play second base." Strain was in the lineup Thursday.

But that rationale didn't placate some of the Giants, who were well aware that Madlock's seven game-winning RBIs were tops on the club. After a slow start Madlock lifted his average to .261 and had 41 RBI. He will play third base for Pittsburg.

"It was 3 panic-button push," said reliever Gary Lavelle. "Our pitching problems have been blown out of proportion. I don't think the deals will solve our problems. How do you replace a .300 hitter?"

"I don't think we gave up too much," said Altobelli. "We got three players. Madlock is tough to replace, but we have outstanding reports on Whitson and everyone feels Strain is ready to play."

Madlock, four years older than Whitson at 28, wasn't critical of the move.

"I figured I'd be gone by June 15," he said. "But when that passed, I figured I had at least another three months here. I expected a trade much sooner, but it took so long because the Giants kept waiting for (Randy) Moffitt and Lavelle to come along." Moffitt is on the 21-day disabled list.

"I'm happy," said Madlock, "because I'm going to a contender and to a park that is good for a hitter. I can understand the Giants thinking. They need pitchig."

...Horton Finds Home

SEATTLE (AP) — Willie Horton sits heavily on a stool in front of his dressing cubicle. His breath comes in gasps and sweat pours from his body.

At 35 going on 40, the well-worn, one-time Detroit Tigers' slugger has to work hard in the twilight of his distinguished career.

There is gray in Horton's hair now and the expression on his face after the pregame workout is one of pain. He asks a reporter to please give him five minutes to regain his wind.

In contrast to his solitary figure on the stool, many of his younger Seattle Mariner teammates are busy chatting and joking among themselves.

Diego Segui was the original Ancient Mariner. Horton is Seattle's Ancient Mariner II.

In the short three-year history of the Mariners, successors to the ill-fated 1969 Seattle Pilots, Horton is their first real big name player.

Horton is in his 18th summer of professional baseball and the years have added up. At 5-feet-10 and 210 pounds, he has to fight hard to keep in playing shape. The battle of the bulge is an unending one.

On the basis of what he's accomplished in the first three months of the season, Horton is one of baseball's most remarkable stories of 1979. Perhaps, the most remarkable.

After Wednesday night's game with the Chicago White Sox, he was hitting .303, with a club-leading 15 home runs, and 53 runs batted in.

In this era of the million dollar free agents, the Mariners are paying a peon's wage to Horton. The aging veteran signed with the American Legue expansion club as a free agent Jan. 27 for modest $36,500 salary.

With bonuses and incentive clauses, Horton may wind up with as much as $75,000 — pocket money to a Rod Carew or a Reggie Jackson or a Jim Rice. Especially considering the fact that the Mariners' designated hitter has established himself as a strong candidate for AL Comeback of the Year Player.

Horton didn't figure to have this kind of a season, of course. Since being dealt away by Detroit in 1977 for a pitcher by the name of Steve Foucault, he has been with five different clubs, three of them last year.

But Horton and the Kingdome, smallish home of the Mariners, have become fast friends. Nine of Horton's first 15 home runs this season were at home.

The unflappable Horton is takin his fast start in Seattle in stride. He's been around long enough to know not to make too much ado about half a season.

"I'm doing the same things I've always done," he stressed. "The only thing different from last year is that I'm playing every day and I'm happy."

Horton, who was signed by Detroit when he was only 17, spent last season in Cleveland, Oakland and Toronto. It was not a joyful season. At Cleveland, he was released. In 115 games, he batted .252 with 11 homers and 60 RBI.

In his 75 Mariner games, he has pushed his major league career statistics to 303 homers and 1,074 RBI.

Handball Experts Make Lubbock Stop

Fred Lewis, a professional handball player who has been world champion five of the last seven years, and Pete Tyson, a physical education instructor and handball coach at the University of Texas, were in Lubbock to conduct a clinic at the Executive Athletic Club.

"Lubbock has a good nucleus of players," Tyson said. "That's why we stopped by."

Lewis and Tyson are on their way to an annual handball camp in Steamboat Springs, Colo. and conducting clinics in various cities along the way.

Tyson said handball could become more popular in Lubbock if there were better courts available. Unlike racquetball and tennis, handball is not booming.

"Racquetball is a phenomenon-not a fad-a phenomenon," Tyson said. "Handball is more difficult to play and its been stationary."

Speedway To Resume Action

After a rainout last Saturday, Lubbock cycle and auto racers are set to go again at Lubbock Speedway.

Bikes race tonight in both motocross and short track events, while three classes of cars — mini stocks, street stocks and late model/modifieds — go Saturday at 8:30 p.m.

With the rainout, points remain unchanged, although officials released the standings in the powder puff and junior stock classes. Both events will join the Saturday night racing program.

The powder puff and street stock points:

POWDER PUFF

Rita Payne 38, Lottie Winton 34, Carolyn Peters 20, Vickie Jarrett 18, Berelyn Whitehead 18, Betty Gschwend 16, Linda Davis 14, Brenda Simmons 12, Rebecca Small 8.

JUNIOR STOCK

Roddy Pope 40, Stevie Helpain 38, Robby Bilbrey 24, Mike Grandbury 14, Troy Spear 11.

Tag Team Tops Wrestling Card

A tag team match is the main event at tonight's wrestling at the Fair Park Coliseum. The matches begin at 8:30 p.m.

Cyclon Negro and Dick Murdock will face Black Jack Mulligan and James Dillon in the main event. In other matches El Mongol faces Dennis Stamp and Larry Lane tackles Kiyo Moto.

Also, Ricky Romero will wrestle Alex Perez while Akio Sato is scheduled to tangle with Ted Heath.

Lubbock Team Wins Levelland Golf

LEVELLAND (Special)—Doris Wright, of Hillcrest Country Club teamed with Meadowbrook's Karen Henderson to win the Annual Ladies Partnership at Levelland Country Club Thursday.

The duo shot a 67 on the par-72 course to edge Carole Cordom and Jan Leir by two strokes in the championship flight.

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT

67—Doris Wright-Karen Henderson, Lubbock. 69—Carole Cordom-Jan Leir, Odessa; Joyce Vanlandingham-June Mooreland, Levelland.

FIRST FLIGHT

75—M. Richardson-M. Brisco, Littlefield. 77—B. Shumaker-Ruth Biggers, Lubbock. 78—V. Hicks-Joe Evans, Lubbock.

SECOND FLIGHT

81—H. Johnson-P.T. Webster. 82—D. Vlaille-Jay Stephens, Levelland. 83—M. Davis-B. Wille.

THIRD FLIGHT

85—Z. Stovall-V. Holley. 87—B. Tarpley-Kathy Roberts, Levelland. 88—V. Quezada-L. Vickson.

Houston Narrows AD Choices

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Houston officials plan within 48 hours to narrow the list of candidates for athletic director to only two.

Dr. Barry Munitz, central campus chancellor, said Wednesday the selection committee hopes to bring in the two candidates early next week.

Munitz mentioned no names but those most prominently mentioned have been Lavon McDonald of New Mexico and Lou McCullough of Iowa State.

"Our hope is to name a new athletic director no later than July 15 and we should be able to do that barring further complications," Munitz said.

Harry Fouke, athletic director since 1946 and the only man ever to hold the post, is to retire Aug. 31.

Kings' Decision Due Today

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Whether the Kings remain in Kansas City or go somewhere else hinges on a decision to be made today by the 10 owners of the National Basketball Association franchise.

The club has received a firm offer for the team, adding to a financial and scheduling crisis precipitated by collapse of the Kemper Arena roof during a storm June 4.

Source of the offer has not been disclosed. Possibilities mentioned have been St. Louis, where the Kings played three games last season, Minneapolis and Dallas.

Brownfield Sets Firecracker

BROWNFIELD (Special)—The 11th Annual Firecracker 10-mile and 3-mile race, sponsored by the West Texas Running Club, is scheduled for July 4 at the Colonial Heights School.

Youngsters can participate in a 1-mile race which begins at 8:45 a.m. The other races begin at 9 a.m.

Competition in the 10-mile run will be divided into the open, high school and under, 30-39, 40-49, 50-and-over, and ladies age divisions. In addition, the 3-mile run includes an open 15-and-under, girls 15-and-under and 16-24, and a ladies 25-and-over divisions. The 1-mile run is open to boys 11-and-under and girls 14-and-under. Trophies will be awarded to the top finishers in each division.

The races will travel over a flat asphalt course and the entry fee is $1. Interested persons should contact James Morris, the race director at 806/ 637-2728.

The entry fee includes admission to the Brownfield Municipal swimming pool.

Corro Confident Of Title Defense

SAN REMO, Italy (AP) — Hugo Corro of Argentina left for Monte Carlo Thursday, confident of retaining the world middleweight boxing crown he will defend Saturday against Vito Antuofermo, an Italian-born New Yorker.

Corro, 25, said before departing for the nearby principality of Monaco, "I feel in good shape after training hard in San Remo. This is my favorite place because it was here where I won the world title last year."

Corro took the world crown after outpointing Colombian veteran Rodrigo Valdes.

Meanwhile, Antuofermo changed his plans and also left for Monte Carlo from Genoa after completing training in that port city. And, like Corro, the Italian said he wanted to be in Monte Carlo two days before the match to test the ring.

Jackson Returns To Active List

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees returned slugger Reggie Jackson to their active roster Thursday and placed pitcher Ed Figueroa on the 21-day disabled list, retroactive to last Monday.

Jackson has been on the disabled list since June 2 when he suffered torn muscle fibers in the lower part of his left leg.

NL Lineup Remains Unsettled

NEW YORK (AP) — With one week left in the balloting, the National League's starting lineup for the July 17 All-Star Game against the American League in the Seattle Kingdome remains unsettled.

Shortstop Larry Bowa of the Philadelphia Phillies, St. Louis catcher Ted Simmons and outfielder Dave Winfield of the San Diego Padres all moved into tentative starting roles at their positions in results released by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office Thursday.

Bowa moved in front of Cincinnati's Dave Concepcion by just over 10,000 votes with a total of 904,495 to 894,261 for the Reds' shortstop.

Simmons, now on the disabled list with a broken bone in his left wrist, has received 989,664 votes to 911,728 for Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, the NL starting catcher for every All-Star Game since 1970.

Winfield has received 862,911 votes, just ahead of Cincinnati's George Foster, who has 862,223. Dave Parker of Pittsburgh (1,095,582) and Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski (948,878) are the other outfield leaders.

Besides Bowa, Phillies third baseman Mike Schmidt and first baseman Pete Rose continue to lead at their positions.

Ozark Clings To Phillies' Job

AP Sports Analysis

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Shhh. The Do Not Disturb sign is up. Please, tread quietly past the slumbering Philadelphia Phillies. After all, you wouldn't want to wake them up.

Here is poor Danny Ozark, clinging to his job by the skin of his chinny chin chin, swimming furiously, trying to stay afloat while the Phillie anchor weighs him down. He will eventually drown, as all managers do and the All Star Game, a natural break in the season, could be the target date.

Ozark, of course, was doomed in December when Ruly Carpenter dug into his petty cash and added Pete Rose to the Phillie cast. That was suoposed to be the final piece of the jigsaw puzzle, the last part that would complete the picture.

The arrival of Rose was an unspoken message to Ozark. Here are all the weapons you need. Now go win the division, the pennant and the World Series. Or else.

His players apparently have chosen or else.

Don't blame Rose. He has been everything the Phillies expected and more. He's among the league leaders in three offensive categories and played first base as if he was born there. He has earned his hefty salary. The same can't be said for some of the other financiers posing as stars in the Philadelphia dressing room. The ones who haven't been injured have been inconsistent.

When all else fails, baseball lore tells us that a good fight can stir an otherwise lethargic ball club. Certainly the Phillies have tried that tactic, too.

When some of the high rollers suggested that the limping, lame pitching staff was the cause of all the team's woes, Coach Herm Starrette, who is in charge of the hurlers, responded by tossing a couple of chairs to and fro around the clubhouse.

That did not work.

After Chicago pitcher Mike Krukow hit Garry Maddox in the midst of an 11-4 debacle Wednesday, Phillie reliever Kevin Saucier bounced a baseball off the Cub hurler, touching off a brief brawl.

"I told him to do it," said Ozark, taking responsibility for that particular bit of nastyness. His admission could result in a fine. It did not, however, result in a victory.

Ozark's patience has worn thin. He's smart enough to see the handwriting on the wall and knows you can't fire 25 players so you do the next best thing — keep the culprits and fire the manager. He said as much after the team's latest loss.

"Maybe the best thing to do is fire me," he bristled. "I'm so ashamed of some of the things that happen and some of the things that are said when we get beaten."

Nobody on the club is willing to take the blame when the Phillies lose. They all pass the buck and it always seems to find its way to the manager's door.

Say what you want about Ozark's often amusing wholesale destruction of the English language and his failure to take the team past the playoffs for the last three years. The fact is that when it comes to basic baseball, he's not that bad. His team, however, has been.

Spicing a 13-25 slump that has dropped the club to fifth place a mere two games over .500, was an inspirational message from General Manager Paul Owens that sounded to some like word salad. It either was or was not a vote of confidence for the manager. Linguistics experts are still studying the speech to determine its full significance.

The slide started after the Phillies won a 23-22 nightmare in windy Wrigley Field back in mid-May. The problem is the nightmare has continued for them and no one knows when it will end.

There are some people who thought Sparky Anderson might have been the manager in waiting in Philadelphia, just as they thought he might wind up in Yankee pinstripes. But Anderson is too much his own man to get involved with either of those clubs where front office management likes to have heavy input into field operations.

So Sparky chose the serenity of Detroit, instead. Too bad. It would have been interesting to see what he could have done with the Phillies' cast of characters.

A "furlong" in horse racing, 220 yards, is the contraction of an old farming term, a "furrow long."

to (decide) now." . . Kyle Money, the quarterback from Dallas who signed a football letter with Baylor but then went the professional baseball route is reported to have received an $80,000 bonus for his signature. . .

Don't forget George Woodard, not yet. Seems that the big Aggie fullback, who punished 300 pounds for a time, has dropped to 274, which is just 14 pounds above the maximum set down by Tom Wilson. If Big George gets rid of that last 14, he's welcome to return to the Aggie grid squad. . .

Heartline

(Heartline is a service for seniorcitizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 East Dayton Street, West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply, but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.)

HEARTLINE: I am a senior citizen. My only income is my Social Security benefit. One of my problems is trying to figure out what is in some of the foods that I buy. The reason I worry about this is that I am allergic to some artificial additives. Do you know if there can be anything done on this? — L.L.

We can recommend two booklets through the Consumer Information Center in Pueblo, Colo.

The first is the Consumers' Guide to Food Labels. It discusses ingredient and nutrient lisitings, open dating, metric units and symbols used on food labels. To obtain a copy of this booklet, write to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 550-G, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The second booklet is Read the Label: Set a Better Table. It explains how to use nutrition information on food labels to save money and serve balanced meals. This booklet also includes a chart of U.S. recommended daily allowances and lists major food sources for each nutrient. For a copy, write to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 553-G, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

HEARTLINE: My uncle served in World War II and he has an honorable discharge. He is very ill and is practically bedfast today. I have heard that veterans are eligible for nursing home care in a Veteran's Administration nursing home. Can you tell me which veterans are eligible? — F.R.

Veterans in need of care n a Veteran's Administration nursing home care unit may be admitted or transferred according to the following priorities.

First: veterans receiving hospital or domiciliary care in Veteran's Administration facilities when transfer is required for service-connected or adjunct disabilities; and persons being furnished care in armed forces hospitals who will require a protracted period of nursing home care upon release therefrom and will become veterans on discharge from active military service.

Second: veterans not hospitalized or domiciled in Veteran's Administration facilities who require nursing home care for service-connected or adjunct disabilities.

Third: veterans receiving hospital or domiciliary care in Veteran's Administration facilities whose transfer is required for nonservice-connected disabilities.

Fourth: veterans not hospitalized or domiciled in Veteran's Administration facilities who require nursing home care for nonservice-connected disabilities.

HEARTLINE: I am 53 years old. I was on Social Security disability for three years. These benefits stopped in 1977 because my condition improved enough to go back to work. I reinjured myself in late March and had to go back in the hospital. It does not look like my condition is going to improve. What do I have to do to get my benefits started again? — Z.H.

Go to your local Social Security office to file a new application for disability benefits. Include in this application all new medical information that you may have. If the updated medical reports show that you are again disabled as defined by Social Security law, your benefits will start effective with the month you became disabled again.

Unlike your first entitlement, you would not have to wait five months for your benefits to start since you were previously entitled to disability benefits. This only applies when the period of time between your last month of disability status in the first entitlement to the date of your second application is less that five years.

For people on Social Security benefits, Heartline has written a book to help you understand this program. Written in easy-to-understand, question-and-answer form, it covers the major benefits you may be eligible to receive, as well as problem areas in the Social Security program. To order, send $2.00 to Heartline's Guide to Social Security, P.O. Box 11934, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Problems To Delay Space Shuttle Launch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Technical and management problems will delay by several months the first manned launch of the space shuttle, and there's only a 50-50 chance it will get off the ground by July 1980, the head of the space agency said Thursday.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration had been working toward a Nov. 9 launch, but for several weeks officials have said it would have to be put off until next year because of the problems.

Robert A. Frosch, NASA administrator, told a House subcommittee Thursday a complete review of the program has developed a new schedule that could result in a first launch next March.

"If I include some conservatism ... I would have to add some 10 to 12 weeks to that date," he said. "In summary, I feel we have one chance in five of launching by the end of the first quarter; I believe the chance of flight by the end of the second quarter of 1980 is 50-50."

Frosch testified at a hearing called by the House subcommittee on space science and applications to consider NASA's request for an extra $220 million in its fiscal 1980 budget.

Frosch said that if Congress does not approve the additional funds, the shuttle's maiden flight could slip another six months. He said the money is needed to pay for costs incurred because of the problems.

The shuttle, designed to be flown on repeated missions into orbit, has encountered technical problems throughout its development. Several systems have been involved, including the main engine, thermal protection device, fuel tank, rockets and electronics.

Frosch emphasized that most of the problems have been resolved, adding, "I have found no reason to question the basic soundness of the shuttle concept or its technical design."

The NASA chief also said the shuttle management structure is being tightened to streamline preparation of the first shuttle, the Columbia, now at Cape Canaveral, Fla., and the production of three additional shuttles. Corrective action is being taken in subcontract management and cost analysis by the major shuttle contractor, Rockwell International, he reported.

Frosch said the agency plans four or more manned orbital test flights of the shuttle, aiming for an operational capability by September 1981. That's a delay of seven months in the earlier operational target.

NASA projects a launch rate of about 50 a year by 1983, with each shuttle capable of making 100 or more roundtrips into space.

D. William J. Perry, undersecretary of defense for research and engineering, told the subcommittee the Defense Department supports NASA's request for the extra $220 million.

The department plans extensive use of the shuttle for military space activities and will have its own operational shuttle launch base at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., in 1983. Perry said the present Defense Department schedule calls for 113 shuttle launches between 1981 and 1991.

Property Near Nixon Home To Be Sold

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Nearly all property surrounding the home in which Richard Nixon secluded himself after resigning the presidency will be used for single-family homes, say the three men who bought the 28-acre estate.

Donald Koll, George Argyros and Gavin Herbert said, however, that "La Casa Pacifica," known as the Western White House during Nixon's 5½ years as president, would be kept intact and "available for private residency" on its lushly landscaped 5.9 acres.

The three said Wednesday that single-family dwellings would be built on the remaining land if the City Council and the California Coastal Commission approve.

The three men did not disclose the price they paid for the estate, which was owned by the Nixons and Robert Abplanalp, a close friend.

It was announced May 25 that the property had been sold and that the Nixons would move into a $650,000 home in the closely guarded community next door, Cyprus Shore.

In announcing the sale last month, Nixon spokesman Jack Brennan said the government was apparently no longer interested in having the place. Nixon had said in 1973 that he would eventually donate it to the public.

Nixon bought La Casa Pacifica, known also as the Cotton estate, in 1969 during his first year as president. Questions were raised thereafter as to the ownership of the land and the fairness of the assessed valuation assigned to it for tax purposes.

In addition, controversy arose over millions of dollars worth of improvements to the estate, which the Secret Service and the General Services Administration said were necessary for security.

Herbert is president of Allergan Pharmaceuticals in Irvine. He and Argyros, president of Arnel Development Co. in Santa Ana, are members of the United Republican Finance Commitee which sponsored a fund-raising event at the Nixons' home last August 27.

TAMING THE KILLER CELL

Various Programs, Groups Give Cancer Victims New Hope

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of 10 articles detailing the little-known story of the amazing progress being made against cancer in humans. It is the story of some battles won, some being fought, and some coming up. It tells about the skilled doctors and researchers and the thousands of volunteers whose costly efforts to solve the incredibly intricate mysteries of the disease are backed by the faith and funds of America. The author, a retired science editor of the Associated Press, is one of the best known science writers in the country.)

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

The lives of thousands of cancer victims are now being saved each year — thousands of men, women and children.

The quality of their renewed lives is a main concern of literally millions of volunteers from public and private agencies.

For example, life can be made simpler for women who lose breasts — unfortunately some 50,000 to 60,000 a year still do — with prosthetic devices and counseling from women who have been through the same tragedy, in Reach to Recovery programs. Other thousands need, and now get, sound advice and reassurance when they have colostomies or lose their voices. Young adults need counsel, and so do their families, when Hodgkin's disease occurs.

By the thousands, cancer patients go back home, back to jobs, back to living in their hometowns. Various groups help, advising how to care for patients at home, educating employers that the cured cancer patient can be as productive and deserving of bigger jobs as anyone else, shooting down the totally unfounded fear that cancer is somehow contagious, that the cured cancer patient should be shunned on the job or in the community.

The support of training and other programs by the American Cancer Society, the National Cancer Society, the National Cancer Institute and other groups, has created the whole world of better care of cancer patients, says Dr. Arthur I. Holleb.

Impressive Progress

As measures of progress, he points to changes in his own medical lifetime in the past 35 years. The list of innovations is impressive:

Knowledge of and action against dangers of cigarette smoking ... awareness of the roles of dietary factors and some industrial chemicals such as asbestos...cancers induced by radiation...by DES and alcohol...heritable cancers...the Pap Smear and a 60 percent reduction in deaths from cervical cancer.

Gains in detection and diagnosis including automated cytology and flexible fiberoptic scopes...screening programs and self-help programs such as breast examination...new knowledge of risk factors...greater motivation of the public toward earlier diagnosis and treatment...progress in treatments, including combinations of drugs and supervoltage radiation...simpler surgical procedures...more reconstructive surgery...keen attention to human values in cancer and psychosocial aspects of the disease.

Last In A Series

"Nothing in the biochemical history of any nation has been more complex, visible, and emotional than cancer," says Dr. Frank J. Rauscher Jr.

We are not confronted with one disease such as paralytic polio — which at its worst struck about six out of 100,000 people — yet our attack on one cancer alone, Hodgkin's disease, has been as successful as that in the control of polio.

"Really, there should be as great public rejoicing as there was in control of polio, German measles and other diseases. Maybe it is because people do not know or understand what has happened.

"There's been solid progress, yes, but of course we have a long way to go, calling for faith, patience and public support."

Steady Advances

Projecting the future, Rauscher and others see serious needs being met — such as identifying more clearly the people at high risk of cancers from heredity or environment...earlier detection and treatment...more and better drugs...greater knowledge of environmental hazards and their control.

"Breakthrough" is a badly abused word in medicine. Instead of startling single steps, progress in cancer comes through "a broad advance on an entire front," says Dr. James P. Holland. For the future, "steady accelerating advance and increasing cures of more kinds of cancer appear likely, with an increasing appreciation by society that cancer research is indeed progressing towards what society wants: prevention of cancer; failing that, cure of cancer in increasingly higher percentages; and failing that, improvement in the treatments available which extend life of high quality and which decrease suffering."

The fact that the prognosis on some forms of once-fatal cancers has been turned around is a portent of what lies ahead.

"Science is moving fast enough now that we can be surprised at any time," says Dr. Lewis Thomas of Memorial Sloan-Kattering Cancer Center. "Whatever we are after (in understanding cancers), it is going to surprise us all. I haven't a ghost of an idea when. It could be next week or the turn of the century. I'm now more optimistic than I was a few years back, due to the pace of new knowledge. It's clear we must make a long-term commitment if society wants to get rid of cancer. We must have high-grade science."

Law Mandates Speedy Trial Or Dismissal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department says thousands of criminal cases might have to be dismissed starting Monday if Congress does not act soon to amend a law requiring speedy trials for defendants.

The Senate has voted to postpone for two years the law's requirement, effective Sunday, that charges be dismissed if defendants are not put on trial within 100 days of their arrest.

The House, however, was preparing to adjourn until July 9 for the Independence Day recess without taking action.

"Literally thousands of cases might have to be dismissed" if Congress does not act soon, Assistant ttorney General Philip Heymann told a hearing Thursday of the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the subcommittee, told a reporter: " don't think this thing is as serious as those fellows make out."

"It's very dramatic stuff to talk about thousands of criminals roaming around loose and all laughing because they got around some dumb congressional law," Conyers said.

He predicted, however, there would be few if any dismissals because under the law, judges can extend the time limit "in the interests of justice" if they state their reasons.

The Speedy Trial Act, passed four years ago, established progressively narrower time limits within which the accused must be brought to trial. Until now, it provided no sanctions for failing to comply. But starting July 1, which is Sunday, the final time limit of 100 days goes into effect and cases not in compliance must be dismissed.

It would be up to the judge whether to dismiss cases with prejudice, meaning they cannot be filed again, or without prejudice, meaning they can.

Heymann, chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, told the subcommittee the final phase of the law obviously would be in effect "for some period of time" before Congress and the president could complete action on amendments.

"What it looks like there is going to be is a lot of confusion and uncertainty and litigation about it all over the country," Heymann told a reporter.

Roger Pauley, director of legislation in the criminal division, said he assumed defense lawyers would be in court in some places on Monday with motions for dismissal. "I would if I were a defense counsel," he said.

Pauley said he did not expect "large-scale immediate dismissals." But if the act is allowed to stand unchanged for as long as a month, he said, "there will be a significant flow of motions for dismissal and some will presumably be granted."

Heymann said that if the 100-day limit and dismissal sanction had been in effect last year, courts would have been required to dismiss more than 5,000 felony cases, nearly a quarter of them burglary, larceny and stolen property cases.

Wagon Accident Kills Idaho Man

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A 69-year-old man was fatally injured when he was run over by a wagon pulled by a team of mules, authorities said.

Deputy Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg said Ivan Phillips of Boise was trying to lead the team through a gate at his home Wednesday when he apparently fell. The team bolted and Phillips was run over by wheels of a wagon.

Actor Finds Niche In CBS Series About Texas

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jim Davis says that whenever he's ready to slip into his role as the silver-haired Jock Ewing of CBS' "Dallas," he just remembers the advice his wife gave him.

"Blanche told me just act like you do at home and you won't have any problems," he says, chuckling.

Davis' Ewing is "The Man" on "Dallas." He calls the shots in the Ewing's vast oil and cattle empire, and everyone from Miss Elly to J.R. to Bobby jumps to his tune. In a series filled with characters you love to hiss, J.R. may be nastier, but Jock's tougher.

Davis stars in the hit Friday night CBS series with Larry Hagman and Patrick Duffy as his sons, J.R. and Bobby, and Barbara Bel Geddes as his wife, Miss Elly. "Dallas" also stars Linda Gray, Steven Kanaly, Victoria Principal and Charlene Tilton.

Davis looks like he was born to play a Texas oil baron. His hair is steel gray, he's 6-foot-3, ruggedly built and has shoulders like a pro fullback. His gnarled hands are large and powerful. The voice is like a load of gravel sliding into a vat of honey — commanding, yet gentled by a homey Missouri drawl.

"I think Jock had his day," says Davis, who is in his early 60s and plays Ewing near 70. "He was young, tough, ruthless. I think J.R. may be doing some of the things Jock did when he was younger.

"He's a diamond-in-the-rough who thinks young. He'd still fight at the drop of a hat, and I'm sure he could lick either of his sons. He has compassion for people, but on the other hand he can be ruthless if he feels his legs are being chopped off."

Ewing is a confirmed male chauvinist and makes no apology. "He has respect for Miss Elly," Davis says, "but in his view a woman runs the home and that's it. However, I do think he's softened and lets Miss Elly have her say."

"Dallas" has been a hit since it was first tried as a spring series a year ago. It's developed an almost cult following of people who will get up and leave dinner parties — or whatever — to avoid missing the show. People love to see the rich misbehaving, especially in a trashy show that's done with such high style.

The show has burrowed into its 10 p.m. EDT time slot, where Davis thinks it has a good chance of making it to the Top 10 next year. It follows another CBS hit, "The Dukes of Hazzard," which makes the rest of television look like Chekhov.

Davis says he's convinced the show could just as easily be called "Jasper" or "Boise." "You can call it whatever," he says. "You can go to any city and find a family like that. Not everybody, but there's always one family."

Davis has been kicking around the movie and television business for a long time, sometimes as a star, sometimes as a character actor. Thirty-eight years ago, he made his screen test with Esther Williams on Stage 22 at MGM — the same stage where "Dallas" is filmed when it's not on location in Texas.

When MGM offered him a contract, he turned it down. The $75 a week they wanted to pay him was less than he had been making as an oil company salesman.

"I said I might as well stay in the oil business," he says. "So they jumped it to $250 a week. That was a lot of money then. Hell, $75 was a lot of money then."

Davis starred with Ann Sothern in the "Maisie" series, then served in the Navy during World War II. On his return he starred with Van Johnson in "Romance of Rosy Ridge" and with Bette Davis in "Winter Meeting."

His career took occasional slumps, such as when he played a lot of Western bad guys. Still, he's chalked up 150 movies, more than 300 TV shows and starred in five series.

TV Appearance Makes Singer Overnight Sensation -Literally

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I'm not really used to being a star," says Rex Smith. No wonder — a lot of other people are still getting over the shock waves generated by Smith's lightning success.

The 23-year-old singer-guitarist is quite literally that rarest of creatures — an overnight sensation who can pinpoint the night of the sensation. It was March 25, 1979, when NBC aired the film "Sooner or Later," in which he co-starred.

Now television has created rock stars before. But teen idols like the Monkees, David and Shaun Cassidy and Leif Garrett built their followings through repeated exposure on network series.

Smith had only the one shot, but it was in a dream role for a musician who had never before acted.

The film centered around the dilemma of a mature-looking 13-year-old girl who passes herself off as a 16-year-old and attracts the interest of Smith, playing a 17-year-old rock 'n' roller.

The dilemma was that 17-year-olds expect more action on dates than most 13-year-olds are prepared to offer, even to curly blonde-haired Adonises (Smith happens to be gifted with one of the fairest faces in the business, with a physique to match).

TV being what it is, Smith emerges as a genuine nice guy: After some irritation at finding out he's inadvertently become a cradle-robber, he comes back to the girl and promises to give things a try.

Along the way, audiences were administered healthy doses of Smith doing his rock 'n' roll thing — both on camera and in the soundtrack.

The response to this potent brew of heart-throb and music was so swift that even Smith's record company was caught by surprise.

The film was aired on a Sunday, he recalls, and "by about Wednesday we had thousands of letters pouring in, and we knew something must be happening. And they were all screaming, 'Where's the album?'"

Frantic record store owners were asking the same question. Smith's two earlier albums with a heavy-metal band, Rex, were flops that by then had disappeared from the racks. And Columbia Records hadn't anticipated the swarms of young fans that swamped stores with requests for Smith's solo "Sooner or Later" album.

The situation was subsequently remedied, and by mid-June both the album and the single cut, "You Take My Breath Away," were bulleting up the higher regions of the record charts.

"I had no idea," Smith says of all this. "I mean, I knew there was power in TV, and I had a feeling.... I knew it would happen but at the same time, you know, I didn't."

Smith grew up in Atlanta and various other southeastern points, and his voice still bears a slight trace of a drawl. He moved to New York in 1975, and his first album deal came through shortly thereafter.

The next few years were spent recording and touring as opening act for such groups as Foreigner and Ted Nugent. It was while playing with Nugent at Madison Square Garden that Smith was spotted by writers-producers Bruce Hart and Carole Hart, who cast him in "Sooner or Later."

"The character was a lot like myself, so it was really easy for me to act it," says Smith, caught here recently between discussions of movie offers that have been pouring in along with the fan mail.

Although he'd never been interested in acting before, Smith now wants to pursue films as well as music. "I don't see any problem," he says. "You can have them both — you just have to work twice as hard."

Meanwhile, Smith plans to reconcile his two musical images — the hard rocker of the Rex albums and the softer sound of "Sooner or Later" — when he goes into the studio later this summer to record a disc that will be somewhere between the two.

"I'm going in all different directions, I'm always moving and I hope my public can stay open-minded about me jumping around and trying different things," he says.

Smith Foresees Ex-Boss' Success

NEW YORK (AP) — Howard K. Smith says despite his differences with Roone Arledge, his boss at ABC until a month ago, "I think he'll succeed" in his quest to make the network No. 1 in news.

"With all that money, and some of these gimmicks are going to work, and with all those big, new market stations, he's bound to succeed," Smith told NBC's Tom Snyder in an interview for Snyder's "Tomorrow" program, broadcast earlier this month.

Smith, for years one of TV's foremost commentators, said his parting of the ways with ABC followed a "classic conflict" with Arledge.

It was a case, said Smith, of "a boss who took over the news department, not knowing very much about news, and an emloyee who's been in news forever, since it started, and who knew everything, and kept telling the boss that."

"Well, when you have a conflict like that, one man has power, and one man doesn't, you can guess who wins."

Smith said he's considering work in print journalism. "I haven't consummated the deal yet, but I think we soon will."

Network Film To Feature Only Women

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The first thing you notice on the set of the NBC movie, "The Walls Came Tumbling Down," is the women.

It's not unusual to see a few women working behind the camera now. But on this film the men are in a minority — and deliberately so.

"We tried for an all-women crew," says Ellen Wittmann one of two executive producers on the project. "There's only one woman camera director, and she's working, and no women sound mixers. So we had to compromise."

The movie's other executive producer is Wendy Rich. The producer is Jacqueline Babbin. The director Ann Shanks. Writer Joanna Crawford adaptedthe screenplay from a book by Babs H. Deal. Executives at Warner Bros. Television and NBC overseeing the production are women.

"The Walls Came Tumbling Down," to be broadcast in the fall, stars Stella Stevens, Paula Prentiss, Loretta Swit, Shelley Fabares, Tina Louise, Cathryn Damon and Sondra Locke, There is not a man — not a one — in the film.

It's not the first film ever produced without men. Clare Booth Luce's play "The Women" was made into a movie in 1939. Last year, NBC had "Charleston," written, directed and produced by women, but there were men in the cast.

Miss Wittman says she looks on using so many women in the crew as a stunt, but, in fact, saw benefits. "There are none of the sexual threats you see on so many sets," she says. "No guy is coming on macho. There is none of the subconscious kind of pressure you get from men on the set."

The two-hour movie was filmed in Monrovia, about 30 miles northeast of Los Angeles, because there are no palm trees or other California giveaways. The story is set in Pennsylvania.

It's a mystery about six women who live in the same small town and have remained friends since their college days 20 years before. It's a pleasant, serene life until their old sorority house is torn down. When the walls come tumbling down, the women find the skeleton of a baby killed 20 years earlier.

"It turns into a battle of pro-and anti-abortion forces as charges are made that if women had had a choice in those days this wouldn't have happened," Miss Wittman says.

Miss Wittman says she and Miss Rich first took another project to Warner Bros., a true story about sexual repression and a sensational murder trial. NBC was interested, she says, but they couldn't get the rights to the story.

Then Alan Shayne, president of Warners Bros. Television, remembered a book he had read 10 years earlier.

"It was this and we took an option on it," Miss Wittman says. "We felt great empathy for the women. We took it to Deanne Barkley at NBC and she loved it. She tested the concept — baby bones found in a sorority house — and it went through the roof.

"Then nothing happened for a year. It finally sold when it was rewritten to take the men out of the cast and make it all women."

It's the first production for the two women. Miss Wittman was a stage manager on Broadway for 15 years until she took a job as a programming executive at ABC in 1973. She later left to become a free lance writer, and wrote for "The Bionic Woman" and "Fantasy Island."

Wendy Rich was a secretary at ABC and later an associate producer for late-night programming there. She is writing a series pilot with another woman, and will co-produce a feature film written by Miss Wittman.

Latin American Health Spots In Works

NEW YORK (AP) — The people who produce television's "Sesame Street" are at work on a series of TV and radio spots designed to encourage improved health practices in Latin American countries.

The series, "Minutos de Salud," or "Minutos de Saude" for Portuguese-speaking Brazil, is being produced by Children's Television Workshop, with help from health experts and filmmakers from 19 countries in Central and South America and the Caribbean.

"Minutos de Salud" — "Health Minutes" — will cover topics like maternal and child care, communicable disease, accident prevention, sanitation and general care of the sick.

The 50 segments — short, dramatic messages, 60 seconds long — were filmed in Latin America. James Benjamin, the CTW executive in charge of the project, says most of the spots were made as "telenovelas," a program form similar to the American soap opera.

In addition, 25 radio spots were adapted from the TV messages.

A series of five booklets — "fotonovelas" — written to reinforce the health messages, will be distributed in the countries in which the TV and radio spots are broadcast, CTW says.

Benjamin says more than 200 health educators and medical experts from government and private agencies in Latin America were involved in the project.

Xerox Corp., which funded the first two international productions of "Sesame Street," is underwriting the "Minutos de Salud" project. Xerox is supplying the messages to stations in Latin America at no cost, over a five-year period.

Ferdinand de Lesseps, builder of the Suez Canal, died in 1894.

WORLD RENOWN VIOLINIST — Ani Kavafian, hailed as "one of the world's top violinists" by the Washington Post, will open the first concert of the 1979 Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival with Walter Trampler in a performance of the Mozart Duo for Violin and Viola in B flat major on Sunday and Monday. Miss Kavafian will be heard in many of the major works of the festival, including the Sophr Duo in D major for Two Violins with Franco Gulli on July 8-9, and in succeeding weeks in works by Strauss, Franck, Haydn, Mendelssohn and Bach.Advance subscriptions and tickets orders may be obtained by calling the festival office in Santa Fe at 505-983-2075 or 505-982-2616, or by writing to the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival, P.O. 'Butch And Sundance: The Early Days' Better Left Forgotten

"Butch and Sundance: The Early Days." Written by Allan Burns, based on characters created by William Goldman. Photographed by Laszlo Kovacs. Music by Patrick Williams. Directed by Richard Lester. Stars Tom Berenger, William Katt, Jeff Corey and Jill Eikenberry. Rated PG. At Showplace Six.

A-J FILM REVIEW

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

It's hard to believe that it's been 10 years since we were enthralled with the enchanting exploits of Paul Newman and Robert Redford in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," the first of the buddy flicks and one which made "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head" a hit tune and "Who are those guys?" an instantly recognizable phrase. From the first moment the film's sepiatone merged into beautiful color, and audiences recognized something special, something unique, was present. And when the film took home four Oscars for its song, music score, cinematography and screenplay, it was only natural for 20th Century-Fox to want to capitalize further on the picture's success.

There was just one tiny problem: Butch and Sundance were both killed at the end.

Ah, but never underestimate the power of greed. If a sequel is impossible, well then, why not a prequel? The result is "Butch and Sundance: The Early Days," a film attempting to tell the story of how these two outlaws met and what happened before they found fame as train robbers with the Hole in the Wall Gang. Unfortunately, though, Oscar-winning screenwriter William Goldman decided he'd rather play producer this time. A disastrous decision, since new screenwriter Allan Burns has come up with a script totally predictable, snail-paced and devoid of charm.

Mind you, the casting couldn't be better. Not only do Tom Berenger and William Katt bear close physical resemblances to Paul Newman and Robert Redford, respectively, but they are also both extremely talented and accomplished young actors. But Burns' script and Richard Lester's surprisingly lackluster direction bog down the film from start to finish with formula confrontations and uninspired talk. The action never complements the excellent scenery and cinematography and, indeed, it's at least 45 minutes before these guys even get their nicknames down pat.

As the picture opens, we're introduced to Berenger as Butch Cassidy, earning early parole from a Wyoming prison by promising the governor he'll commit no more crimes in that state. We wander with him a bit across state lines and soon come upon Sundance, still using his real name Harry Longabaugh, unsucessfully trying to rob a casino. Butch, suitably impressed with the Kid's shooting ability, sets out to find him and convince him to become a partner.

And here is where the film makes its first mistake. If Burns is going to exploit the success of "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," then he should capitalize on the fact most viewers have already seen that film. Why try to create suspense where there is none? We already know Butch and Sundance meet, become friends as well as partners, do not get killed and wind up robbing trains. So why in the name of good popcorn does he try to make us question these things?

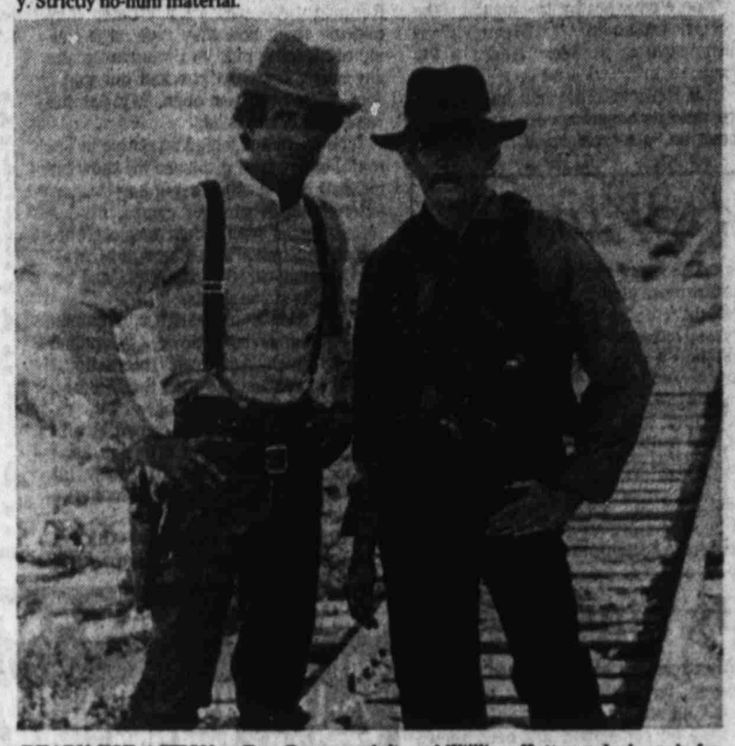
It must be noted Richard Lester is no hack. He's handled comedy beautifully with the Beatles' films, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" and "The Three Musketeers." And his "Juggernaut" was better-than-average suspense. But the man simply has no tools to work with here. For every wonderfully underplayed comic bit like Butch and another outlaw riding toward — and continuing past — each other while conversing in a canyon, there are umpteen predictable slapstick motions. The tracking lawman with a straw hat, Joe LeFors (played by Peter Weller) is given no air of mystery or competency; and Sundance's first killing affects us not in the slightest.

What it does, in fact, is bring back that memorable scene in the first film in which Butch and Sundance gunned down the Mexican bandits, a scene haunting in its irony as we realized that the two outlaws were forced to kill only after "going straight." None of that irony or impact lives on in this prequel.

The new film had possibilities. Jill Eikenberry is affecting as Butch's common-law wife, and more time might have been spent on the story of a woman trying to survive with two children and a wandering husband. We also wonder why more time is not spent with LeFors, explaining what drives him to risk his life to track these two rather inept crooks. But instead Burns gives us a series of robberies and close calls, none very harrowing or hilarious, leading up to the expected first train robbery. Strictly ho-hum material.

Jeff Corey, the only original cast member retained, is again impressive as Sheriff Bledsoe. And both Berenger and Katt are talented and will give us better films in the future. Laszlo Kovacs' cameras skillfully capture the reds of New Mexico landscape and the snows of Colorado. And yet the film remains mediocre. Burns is more anxious to have Katt grow a moustache like Redford's than he is to have the plot take off on an interesting tangent. As a result, "Butch and Sundance: The Early Days" is but exploitation with a good cast and a rotten script.

Indeed, had this picture's characters been named anything but Butch and Sundance, the film probably would have never been made and prequels would have never been born. As it is, well, would you like to hear this story idea I have about the building of a ship called Poseidon...



READY FOR ACTION — Tom Berenger, left, and Willliam Katt may look ready for action in this scene from "Butch and Sundance: The Early Days," but Alan Burns' script never provides it. In fact, the film, which supposedly tells us about what Butch and Sundance did before becoming famous in an Academy Award-nominated fim in 1969, is reportedly a predictable prequel. Rated PG, it is currently playing at Showplace Six.

Wildlife Specialist Urges Capture, Sale Of Baboons

SALISBURY, Rhodesida (AP) — A wildlife specialist suggested Thursday Rhodesian farmers could turn crop-raiding baboons into a profitable export if instead of shooting the creatures the farmers drugged, captured and sent them abroad to research centers.

"Veterinary and medical research laboratories and universities all over the world are crying out for primates for experimental purposes," said Ron Thompson of the National Parks and Wildlife Managment Department.

Producer Builds Followup To 'Animal House'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can box-office lightning strike twice for 31-year-old Ivan Reitman? Paramount Pictures certainly hopes so and is giving his "Meatballs" a hefty push.

Czech-born Reitman was the co-producer of "National Lampoon's Animal House," which stunned the movie trade last year by racking up domestic rentals of $52.4 million, making it the 15th biggest moneymaker of all time.

Now Reitman is telling the world what he did on his summer vacation: He went to summer camp and directed a movie. It cost $1.4 million and stars yet another alumnus of "Saturday Night Live," Bill Murray.

A slender man with dark, amused eyes in a long face, Reitman paused the other day during the final sound mix of "Meatballs" — This only four days before the final preview.

"Just some fine tuning," he explained. "We sneaked the picture in Phoenix and some of the lines I felt were important to the story were lost because of the laughter. So we're souping them up. Also I cut 30 seconds and added a song that NSU is going to release on the soundtrack album."

"Meatballs" stems from the 12 years Reitman spent in summer camps of Ontario. The escapades are played for laughs, of course, but not the kind in the R-rated "Animal House."

"There we went for the jugular," the director explained. " 'Meatballs' is much warmer, gentler." Hence a PG rating.

Ivan Reitman's life had high adventure amid its begnnings. He was born in Komarmo, Czechoslovakia, where his father owned the country's biggest vinegar factory. When the communists began imprisoning capitalists after the war, the Reitmans decided to escape. They traveled in the nailed-down hold of a barge headed for Vienna.

"I remember flashes of scenes," said Reitman, who was 4 1/2. "Later they told me about how they gave me a couple of sleeping pills so I wouldn't make any noise. I was so knocked out that I Sept with my eyes open. My parents were afraid I was dead."

The Reitmans joined a relative in Toronto, where Ivan displayed his show biz inclinations: starting a puppet theater, entertaining at summer camps, playing coffee houses with a folk music group. He studied music and drama at McMaster University in Hamilton, Ont., and began making movie shorts.

With friends and $12,000, Reitman made a nine-day movie, "Cannibal Girls," which American International agreed to release. He then produced on a $500 budget a weekly TV revue,"Greed," with Dan Ackroyd as emcee and Doug Henning as magician. That led to co-producing the Broadway hit "The Magic Show" starring Henning, a buddy from McMaster U.

Reitman became associated with the Lampoon group in its off-Broadway revue that featured John Belushi, Gilda Radner and Murray. Reitman helped develop "Animal House" and co-produced with Matty Simmons.

"After the picture was a success, I realized I didn't have to go to work right away," said Reitman. "In fact, with my percentage of the profits, I wouldn't have to work again."

He felt the urge to direct again, and in Canada. He and producer Dan Goldberg dreamed up the idea of a summer-camp comedy. Three writers, including Harold Ramis from "Animal House" prepared a script in three weeks. With financing from the Canadian government and private investors, Reitman lined up a cast and summer camp — But no star.

Topless Tennis Sampled At Wimby

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Staid old Wimbledon blushed but declined to be offended by the plunging neck line that plunged too far in the 102nd All-England tennis championships.

The accident happened to 18-year-old Linda Siegel of Piedmont, Calif., in a second-round match Wednesday against Billie Jean King, six-time ladies' champion.

She lost the match 6-1, 6-3 and some of her dignity, when a thin shoulder strap on her white dress slipped, leaving her left breast exposed.

Before matters could be rectified, photographers had clicked their cameras. Miss Siegel awoke Thursday to find herself the most talked-about player in the tournament.

London's tabloids used pictures of her on their front pages, full-length, while the more conservative papers mentioned the incident discreetly.

Miss Siegel, embarrassed but good-natured, said she had thought the dress might be "a little dangerous because I couldn't wear a bra," but she added, "It was the only one I took with me. I didn't realize it was so revealing."

The All-England Croquet and Tennis Club, which banned Gussie Moran's lace panties 30 years ago and snobbishly stuck to an all-white dress code until the 1970s, hardly fluttered an eyelash.

"I know of no official reaction," said Christopher Gorringe, who is slated to become secretary of the club. "We have more important matters to occupy our time."

Male Conception Said Enhanced By Timing

BOSTON (AP) — Increasing the odds of bearing a son is possible if a woman conceives her child at the right time of the month, a study shows.

Two days after ovulation, the midpoint of the woman's monthly menstrual cycle, is the perfect time for making little boys, according to the latest research. The chances of conceiving a male on this particular day are two out of three.

During the rest of the woman's fertile time around ovulation, the odds of creating boys or girls are roughly equal.

The study was conducted by Susan Harlap at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. It was published Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine.

One doctor who reviewed the boy-making technique said that it could lead to a temporary excess of men in the world.

However, the researchers warned that limiting sex to late in the cycle may also heighten the risk of genetic malformations in the newborn because the woman's egg may be "overripe."

"Couples should be cautioned against attempting to conceive a boy by delaying intercourse until after ovulation until further research has established whether delayed fertilization causes birth defects," the study said.

Delayed conception has been shown to cause birth defects in some animals, but there is no firm proof that this also happens in humans.

The study examined 3,658 infants born to women who said they conceived on the five days around ovulation. Overall, 53 percent of the babies were boys. But of the 145 women who said they became pregnant two days after ovulation, 66 percent of the children were male.

Mrs. Harlap said she could not explain the biological process that led to the difference in the birth rate.

The women who participated in the study were orthodox Jews who practice niddah, the ritual abstinance from sex during menstruation and seven days thereafter.

Samuel de Champlain, searching in 1613 for a northwest passage to China, reached the site of what is now Ottawa.

ABC Says 'Roots' Sequel Deeply Felt

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC says research it conducted both before and after broadcast of "Roots: The Next Generations," shows the miniseries stimulated "deep emotional reactions and had a measurable impact on viewers."

"Roots II," as the seven-part series was popularly known, strengthened viewers' understanding of black history and the black experience, and gave those who saw it "a sense of hope in people's abilities to overcome hard times," the network says.

Information from the random sampling was discussed recently by Melvin A. Goldberg, vice president of primary and social research for ABC Television.

The network says the study indicates about 45 percent of the country's TV audience saw at least six of the seven installments of "Roots II," which was broadcast in February.

HARD ROCK PROVIDED — Over 3,000 fans showed up at the Civic Center exhibition hall Wednesday night for an evening of hard rock provided by Mahogany Rush and headliners Nazareth. And according to A-J critic Williiam Kerns, the fans apparently left satisfied. Frank Marino, left, is the guiding light behind Mahogany Rush and he managed to provide both rock music and sound effects. Nazareth is led by singer Dan McCafferty, center, whose raspy voice and stage performance kept the crowd keyed to a fever pitch. Some of the best guitar of the evening, though, was provided by Zal Cleminson, right, who once played with the Sensational Alex Harvey Band. (Staff Photos by Gary Davis)

Nazareth Uses 'Cocaine' (The Song, Folks) To Get Off In Concert

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Perhaps this is the wrong time to bring this up, what with all the indictments that have been handed down of late, but there's no denying cocaine was the turning point in Nazareth's concert Wednesday night at the Civic Center exhibition hall. No, not that! You see, despite the flashing neon and smoke, the band's booming start lacked cohesion and a solid foundation. So when raspy vocalist Dan McCafferty calmed things down a bit later with a nicely arranged version of J.J. Cale's song "Cocaine," the band was at last able to build upon its own music, rather than sheer volume.

The musicians sat down (yes, at a rock show!) and concentrated on their own instruments instead of visual antics. The guitar work was outstanding and, indeed, so was the show from that point on.

And thanks to some excellent phrasing and working-of-the-crowd by McCafferty, the audience of 3,556 which had come only for ear-splitting pleasures, not only accepted the transition but joined in. McCafferty would wag his finger like a scolding mother and chant, "She don't like, she don't like, she don't like..." and the crowd would complete the chorus loudly with the song's title. Both the band and the fans remained at that same fever pitch the rest of the night.

A-J CONCERT REVIEW

Despite Nazareth's rising fame (songs like "Love Hurts" and "Shape of Things to Come" are incredibly popular), I must admit to being surprised by the excellent musicianship provided Wednesday. I'd never seen the band perform before and most of the ticket-holders I spoke with in advance seemed to be leaning toward Frank Marino's Mahogany Rush, the band which would open the show. And it was hard to dispute them while watching the front band's 40-minute set. Marino's guitar abilities provided the desired commodity: loud, hard rock. Cranking the volume up a bit with every subsequent song, and wasting very little time talking or spouting song titles, Marino took off on one lead tangent after another.

Marino is the sort who can make his guitar scream when he wants, and yet knows how to keep a melody intact. His string phrasing is too repetitive at times, but he succeeded Wednesday with everything from a semi-R&B number to a spiced-up cover version of "Johnny B. Goode."

But the crowd wanted effects and he gave it to them with what I call "music for World War III." Using an anthem-like arrangement as a base, he took off and offered machine gun effects along with the sounds of bombs dropping and buildings exploding. The harsh strobe lighting transported the listeners directly into the fray. It wasn't art, but it was just as effective as earlier songs like "King Bee" and the crowd ate it up.

During intermission, I asked the fellow seated next to me what he thought of Nazareth. "Too predictable," was his reply. And the band's first few songs lived up to this stranger's warning. Formula decibels and dumb little ditties like "May the Sun Shine" called for a lot of arm waving but little else. But following the J.J. Cale number, the band turned around. Having proven their musical skills, the band could now increase the tempo again and again, drawing the crowd closer with earth-shaking rockers from both new and old albums.

If there is but one reason Nazareth wound up more impressively than the opening band, it was its unit play. Mahogany Rush is basically a one-man band, the spotlight always monopolized by Marino. Nazareth is a group and plays like one. Sure, McCafferty and his scratchy vocals are often at center stage, but the singer knows enough to vacate the premises and also let guitarists Manny Charlton and Zal Cleminson show their stuff. The strategy worked, too, since Charlton and Cleminson, the latter dressed in an Arab sheik's headdress as though informing us in advance there would be no energy shortage, were the evening's highlights.

Pete Agnew's bass work was also fine.

Playing old hits like "Hair of the Dog" and "Expect No Mercy" and closing with more familiar material like "Shape of Things to Come" — complete with explosions, fire, smoke and their huge overhanging neon logo glowing green — the band got better with each song, drawing the fans closer and closer to the stage. But when they finally left, one teen-aged girl turned to her friend and said, in a disgusted tone of voice, "They didn't even play 'Love Hurts' and that's my favorite song."

Never fear. The Scottish rock band soon walked back on stage and dove right into the effective guitar introduction to that popular AM hit of a few years back. As McCafferty stepped through the smoke to provide the lyrics, the aforementioned teen-ager broke into a grin. No doubt she, too, left satisfied.

Social Security Raise To Begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 9.9 percent cost of living increase will show up today in benefit checks sent to 3.9 million poor persons receiving Supplemental Security Income from the government.

On Tuesday, Social Security recipients will find a similar increase in their monthly checks. There are 34.9 million elderly or disabled persons and their dependents now on Social Security.

The extra SSI benefits will cost the Treasury $415 million over the next year. The Social Security trust fund will pay out $10.2 billion more in the coming year due to the record increase. The benefits are raised automatically each year as the Consumer Price Index climbs.

Man Struck By Baseball, Dies; Autopsy Ordered

KEARNEY, Neb. (AP) — A 48-year-old man died Thursday of injuries received when he was struck in the nose with a baseball, authorities said.

Authorities said Robert L. "Pete" Markus had apparently gone to Dryden Park in northeast Kearney to pick up his son Wednesday night.

Markus was walking when the baseball hit him in the nose. It was not known if the ball had been thrown or hit by someone.

He was taken to the hospital suffering from a nose bleed and a possible broken nose. He was hospitalized for observation and died at 5 a.m. An autopsy was ordered.

Dieting Western Star Disappearing Rapidly

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Johnny Russell doesn't want to be the biggest country music entertainer anymore.

Russell, who once weighed 332 pounds, has lost about 40 pounds through a strict diet and exercise.

"People have a hard time seeing me," he jokes.

Russell, who wrote the classic "Act Naturally" which was recorded by Ringo Starr, wants to get down to 200 pounds.

"I feel better and stronger," says Russell, still a hefty 290-pounder.

Under the close supervision of a doctor and a psychologist, he's been on a low-calorie diet and exercise program since November.

"It's a modified fast," laughs Russell, whose biggest country song was "Red Necks, White Socks and Blue Ribbon Beer" in 1973.

For breakfast, he eats one scrambled egg and three ounces of ham. For lunch, and supper, he has four ounces of cucumber, lettuce, celery and low-calorie dressing.

"I miss the good ol' country foods," he says. "But if I stick to this for four days, on the fifth day I'm not hungry. The saliva is not stimulated; the taste buds are not there."

He also does situps, pushups, knee-bends and other exercises. And he walks more than two miles every day. He was 15 minutes late to the interview to complete his prescribed walking.

"I've never exercised before," he says. "I really enjoy the walking. You can let your mind wander. You don't have to be thinking about anything."

He admits, though, that he breaks his diet and goes on some benders.

"I'll go a couple of days and eat like a fool, then go four or five days on my diet. But I exercise, and it maintains me. Last week alone, I lost 8 1/2 pounds.

"You kind of have to find your groove. The key is commitment. It can't be a punishment thing. If you stumble for three or four days, start over."

Russell, 39, acknowledged that his career has fallen off recently.

"My diet is more interesting than my career right now," he chuckles. "My career has been stale in some ways, but in some ways it hasn't. I haven't had a Top 10 song in three years, but I made more money last year than ever before thanks to personal appearances."

He has been portrayed as a beer-guzzling redneck, but this isn't so, he says. "That was just an image. I dont drink, smoke or take dope. Three out of four ain't bad."

Hybrid Cotton 'Near Reality'

A&M Researcher Here Reports Progress

Hybrid seeds have been providing corn and grain sorghum producers a generous bonus for many years. In these crops, hybrids have increased yields 15 to 25 percent with essentially no increase in production costs.

Dr. Levon L. Ray, cotton breeder at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, north of the Lubbock airport, is currently conducting research into the development of hybrid cotton.

This research indicates cotton farmers may have hybrid seed available in the not distant future.

"Developments over the past decade have brought hybrid cotton production near reality," Ray said. The components are available to develop hybrid cotton seed, yet some questions relating to its feasibility are not fully answered, he said.

"In most hybrid crops," the TAES researcher said, "a cytoplasm-genetic system is used to produce the seed." This is the system which has been developed in cotton, he reported.

"However," Ray said, "pollen must be transferred between plants. And because of cotton's heavy pollen, insects are required for cross-pollination, a possible problem in hybrid cotton seed production."

The High Plains is relatively free of damaging cotton insects and a minimum of insecticides are used.

"Because of this," the TAES cotton breeders said, "the South Plains could become an important hybrid seed producing area."

Research has shown that it would be difficult to produce hybrid seed where insecticides are extensively used. It is generally agreed that bees are the most important pollen carriers. These include wild bees as well as the domesticated honey bee. The use of honey bees for this purpose would add another important industry, honey production, to the South Plains, he added.

"More research is needed to determine the effectiveness of native insects in pollination across the area," Ray said. "We have obtained surprisingly good seed set on male-sterile cotton varieties, even without the use of honey bees."

A cytoplasmic male-sterile cotton variety has been developed and released by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. This line is being used by several commercial companies in the development of a hybrid seed production program.

"The development of practical hybrid cotton seed program would be a major breakthrough for cotton breeders," Ray said. "Hybrids should boost yields by 10 to 25 percent.

"But perhaps more importantly," the scientist added, "hybrids would provide shortcuts in breeding programs."

"Increased yields are not the only potential benefits of hybrids," Ray said. "With hybrids, it may be possible to increase the level of insects and disease resistance and provide more desirable fiber combinations in high yielding cotton," he said.

"Although some hybrids have been developed," Ray said, "they have not been adequately tested and are not currently available to cotton producers."

More than 20 hybrids from commercial companies are being tested by TAES this year. The outcome of these tests will give a good reading on the potential and future for hybrid cotton.

"I feel confident that hybrid cotton seed will be available to producers within the next few years," Ray said, "and hopefully increase the profitability of cotton farming."

Lamesa Entry Takes Horse Show Honors

Dana Boyer of Lamesa captured top individual honors during the annual District 2 Horse Show here this week.

Kathleen O'Shea of Lubbock took second high individual honors. The two top competitors were among the 20 4-H members who qualified to represent the district in the State 4-H Horse Show July 25-27 in Odessa.

A total of 176 contestants from 20 South Plains counties which make up District 2 of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service competed in the two-day show at the Panhandle South Plains Fairgrounds.

High point counties in the contest were Castro, with 51 points, first; Lubbock, 50 points, second; and Bailey, 39½ points, third.

Carol Bagwell of Castro County showed the grand champion mare, Two-eyed Pet. Reserve champion mare was Speckasalt, show by Jerri Ka Clark, also of Castro County.

Grand champion gelding was Possums Rusty, exhibited by Shea Floyd of Gaines County. Ronee' Thornton of Floyd County has the reserve champion gelding, Afton Socks.

Other top honors went to Zane Reagan of Briscoe County, who had the top registered mare under five years old; Kim Farmer of Bailey County, first place grade mare; Kim Howell of Castro County, top registered gelding under five years old, and Jim Waller of Floyd County, first place grade gelding.

Carol Bagwell took top honors in showmanship; Perry Smith of Borden County won first in breakaway roping; Jym Rinehart of Borden County placed first in judged roping; Blaine Todd of Dawson County took first in team roping, and Kathleen O'Shea was first in hunter under saddle.

In performance classes, first place awards went to Todd Wilson, Lubbock, western pleasure; Dana Boyer, Dawson, western horsemanship; Brad Bradley, Swisher, reining; Lee Ann McMurty, Briscoe, polebending; and Jimmy Whitehead, Cochran, barrel racing.

Debie Dennis of Castro County received a trophy for being selected by the other contestants as the most congenial entry in the show.

The contest was broken into eight halter and five performance classes, plus showmanship, hunter under saddle and roping. Winners of showmanship, the five performance classes and those showing the four top halter horses go to the state contest. The other 10 district entries at the state event were selected on total points accumulated.

The 20 4-H members who qualified for state competition are, by counties:

BAILEY — Kim Farmer, Brenda Flowers, Shonnee Hodnett, Kristi Spies; BRISCOE — Lee Ann McMurty; CASTRO — Carol Bagwell, Jerry Ka Clark, Kelley Hill; COCHRAN — Jimmy Whitehead; DAWSON — Dana Boyer, Shelly Jones; FLOYD — Ronee Thornton; GAINES — Shea Floyd, Toby Floyd; LAMB — Lesa Templeton; LUBBOCK — Todd Wilson, Kathleen O'Shea, Pam Greaves; SWISHER — Brad Bradley, Dudley, McClurg.

The top three winners in each class were:

Class 1 — Showmanship: Carol Bagwell, Castro, first; Ronee Thornton, Swisher, second; Jerry Ka Clark, Castro, third.

Class 2 — Registered mare, any breed, five years of age and over: Carol Bagwell, Castro, first; Jerri Ka Clark, Castro, second; Toby Floyd, Gaines, third.

Class 3 — Registered mare, any breed, under five years of age: Zane Reagan, Briscoe, first; Gayla Newton, Borden, second; Kin Burson, Briscoe, third.

Class 4 — Grade mare, any breed, all ages: Kim Farmer, Bailey, first; Celia Berry, Swisher, second; Carla Porter, Lubbock, third.

Class 5 — Champion and reserve champion mare: Carol Bagwell, Castro, champion; Jerri Ka Clark, Castro, reserve champion.

Class 6 — Registered gelding, any breed, five years of age and over: Shea Floyd, Gaines, first; Ronee Thornton, Floyd, second; Jill Brown, Castro, third.

Class 7 — Registered gelding, any breed, under five years of age: Kim Howell, Castro, first; Brad Bradley, Swisher, second; Steven Bagley, Castro, third.

Class 8 — Grade gelding, any breed, all ages: Jim Waller, Floyd, first; Claudia Guin, Lynn, second; J. Brett Foster, Swisher, third.

Class 9 — Champion and reserve champion gelding: Shea Floyd, Gaines, champion; Ronee Thornton, Floyd, reserve champion.

Class 10 — Western pleasure: Todd Wilson, first; Brenda Flowers, Bailey, second; Pam Greaves, Lubbock, third.

Class 11 — Western horsemanship: Dana Boyer, Dawson, first; Kathleen O'Shea, second; Kelley Kill, Castro, third.

Class 12 — Reining: Brad Bradley, Swisher, first; Dudley McClurg, Swisher, second; Wade Donnell, Lamb, third.

Class 13 — Polebending: Lee Ann McMurty, Briscoe, first; Kim Farmer, Bailey, second; Cam Forbes, Briscoe, third.

Class 14 — Barrel racing: Jimmy Whitehead, Cochran, first; Shonnee Hodnett, Bailey, second; Shelly Jones, Dawson, third.

Hunter-under-saddle: Kathleen O'Shea, first.

Judged roping: Jym Rinehart, Borden, first; Perry Smith, Borden, second; Travis Rinehart, Borden, third.

Breakaway roping: Perry Smith, Borden, first; Sid Westbrook, Borden, second; Jim Forbes, Briscoe, third.

Team roping: Blaine Todd, Dawson, first; Zane Reagan, Briscoe, second; Kerry Baird, Briscoe, third.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE BOB BERGLAND said this week the administration is leaning toward having no set-aside program for wheat in 1980.

Bergland said the U. S. Department of Agriculture probably would reopen the farmer-owned reserve in 1980 if the decision is made not to have a set-aside program.

Under that option, the loan rate would be raised, resulting in higher release and call levels for the reserve than now are in effect.

The administration plans to wait until the July crop report before deciding on the 1980 wheat program, Bergland said.

IF THE DECISION IS FOR NO WHEAT set-aside, Bergland said, an announcement probably would be made next month.

But if the administration decides to adopt a "modest" set-aside program, he said, the announcement probably would be made close to the Aug. 15 deadline.

The only basis for having a set-aside program again in 1980 would be a sharp downturn in the markets, Bergland said.

In each of the past two years, the USDA has established a 20 percent set-aside program.

THE RANGE BETWEEN THE RELEASE level and the call level in the farmer-owned grain reserve may be too narrow and the USDA will study the possibility of widening it, Bergland said.

This applies especially to corn, he said, and the USDA may widen the range from the present 30 cents per bushel to perhaps 50 cents.

Bergland pointed out that prices are much more volatile now than just a few years ago. "Prices can go up as much as 30 cents in a matter of days and then decline sharply in the same length of time," he said.

The release level for corn currently in the reserve is $2.50 per bushel and the call level is $2.80. The release level already has been reached.

THE PERIOD FROM WHICH NATIONAL average prices are determined in reaching the respective levels, currently five days, also may need to be extended, Bergland said.

Wide swings in prices in relatively short periods, he said, could result in grain being released from the reserve in a period of falling prices.

He said he has directed USDA officials to be sure prices actually are on an upward trend before loans are called on reserve grain.

Bergland said calls of loans on commodities from the reserve will not force farmers to sell their wheat or feed grain.

CALLS ON COMMODITIES IN THE RESERVE would only require farmers to pay back their reserve loans within 30 days, he said. Even if a farmer's grain were called from the reserve, he said, growers would have the option of repaying their loans and maintaining possession of the reserve grain.

This would allow farmers to wait for more attractive market prices before selling their grain, Bergland said.

Farmers would be required to forfeit grain called from the reserve to the Commodity Credit Corp. only if they were unable to repay their reserve loans before the deadline designated by the USDA, he said.

Deadlines on loan repayments for commodities called from the reserve will be extended by the USDA in areas where the department determines that transportation problems or a lack of commercial storage facilities make it impossible for farmers to market their grain.

THE U. S. COTTON PLANTING ESTIMATE of 13.9 million acres, released by the USDA after the market closed Thursday, was considered neutral to the market and in line with the expectations of floor traders, commission house analysts and cotton merchants.

Texas upland plantings were estimated at 7.5 million acres, down from April intentions of 7.6 million but up from 6,950,000 in 1978. The High Plains acreage was estimated at 4.4 million, including 800,000 in District 1-North and 3.6 million in District 1-South. High Plains plantings in 1978 totaled 3,955,000 acres, including 775,000 in 1-N and 3.180 million in 1-S.

Plantings in the Lower Rio Grande Valley were estimated at 360,000 acres, compared with 329,000 in 1978. The acreage in the Northern Low Plains District of 2-North was estimated at 765,000 acres, down from 780,000 in 1978, and plantings in the Southern Low Plains District of 2-South were pegged at 840,000 acres, up from 735,000 last year.

Observers were somewhat surprised that the 1-N and 2-N estimates were not larger. They also were surprised by the estimate for the Lower Rio Grande Valley, where private surveys had indicated plantings of 400,000 to 425,000 acres.

COTTON FUTURES AT NEW YORK CLOSED near the lows Thursday, off 112 points in near October to 25 points in forward deliveries, on speculative booksquaring ahead of the USDA cotton plantings report.

Floor brokers said the market slipped in mid-afternoon on general commission house selling, also inspired by weak metal, soybean and grain markets. A Chicago-based commission house, active in the market of late, was reported a buyer of October.

Trading on Telcot totaled 780 bales. The average price to farmers was 52.13 cents, an average of 889 points over the loan. All except 62 bales was old-crop cotton on which Commodity Credit Corp. loans were expiring.

MORE OPTIMISTIC

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Beef Industry Council thinks $2 a pound ground beef is not on the horizon, as some other sources suggested recently. The council, a member of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, a trade organization, expects price increases of only 20 percent over last year's. Because cattlemen are no longer sending huge numbers of non-fed animals (mostly cows) to market, the supply of beef for grinding is declining and sending retail prices up. The council's newsletter predicts price rises probably won't start until late in the first quarter of the year.

Corn Trails Soybeans In U.S. Planting Estimate For 1979

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American farmers will harvest 69.5 million acres of corn for grain, 1 percent less than last year, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

Experts had expected rising corn prices — based on increased Russian demand and domestic demand for pork and poultry production — would encourage farmers to plant more corn, but a large increase did not materialize.

Experts said part of the reason was late planting that caused farmers to switch to soybeans, which have a shorter growing season, and a favorable price ratio for soybeans.

For the first time in history, soybean acreage was greater than corn acreage for grain harvest.

Based on a June 1 survey, soybean acreage was estimated at a record high 71.7 million acres, up 12 percent from last year, when a record 1.84 million bushels was harvested.

Compared to last year, a 4 percent decline in planting of corn for grain harvest in southern states and a 1 percent dropoff in the Corn Belt offset increases in the rest of the nation.

Last year farmers planted 79.8 million acres of corn and harvested 69.97 million acres for grain for a record crop of 7.1 billion bushels. The survey indicated 79.8 million acres of corn was planted for all uses, the same as last year and 1 percent more than forecast in April.

With acreage off slightly, the crop is likely to be less than last year's, when average national yields set a record of 101.2 bushels an acre, unless weather is extremely favorable.

The first estimate of this year's corn crop will be made July 11.

Both winter and spring wheat were seeded on 71.2 million acres, up 8 percent from last year. Last year's crop of 1.8 billion bushels was the first crop of less than 2 billion bushels since 1974.

Durum wheat was seeded on 3.98 million acres, down 3 percent from last year, and other spring wheat was seeded on 15.6 million acres, up 9 percent from last year. Despite weather delays, farmers were able to plant more spring wheat than was expected, experts said.

Growers seeded 51.7 million acres of winter wheat, 8 percent more than last year.

Acreage of all feed grains — Corn, sorghum, barley and oats — intended for grain harvest was estimated at 117 million acres, down 4 percent from last year.

The Crop Reporting Board estimated 15.6 million acres of sorghum would be harvested for grain, down 6 percent from last year, the smallest acreage since 1962.

Cotton acreage increased 4 percent to 13.9 million acres.

Estimates of corn acreage for 1979 grain harvest based on June surveys compared with the 1978 crop included Texas, 1.2 million compared with 1.44 million.

Grain sorghum acreage planted in Texas was shown as 4.7 million for 1979, compared with 4.65 million a year ago.

Upland cotton acres in Texas this year were 7.5 million, compared with 6.95 million in 1978.

Wheat and soybean plantings for Texas were not listed.

Gasoline Poison Cases Reported

GALVESTON (AP) — The Southeast Poison Center says the gasoline shortage has been accompanied by a sharp increase in gasoline poisonings. Mike Ellis, director of the center at the University of Texas Medical Branch, attributed the increase to inept siphoning of gas tanks.

Ellis said Thursday that the center is receiving about 10 calls a day on gasoline poisoning, compared with last year's average of about one a day. He said the total of about 100 such calls so far in June easily exceeds the total number received in 1978.

Cotton Conference To Be Conducted Here On Saturday

The third annual Lubbock Cotton Conference, sponsored by ContiCommodity Services, Inc., is scheduled at 11:30 a.m. Saturday at the Lubbock Club.

Mike Stevens, president of Conti and manager of the firm's Lubbock office, said six speakers will address a press gathering.

They are:

— Berson Frye of Fresno, Calif., president of Berson Frye Cotton Co., who will discuss the "Outlook for California and Arizona Cotton."

— James King of Greenville, S. C., vice president for cotton purchasing with Burlington Cotton Co., who will speak on "The Domestic Mills in 1979."

— Peter Leavitt of Bedford, Mass., vice president of Weather Services International Corp. and executive vice president of Weather Services Corp., who will describe "The Weather Picture in Cotton Growing Areas."

— Neil Mearns of Memphis, Tenn., president of the Fibreco Division of Valmac Industries, who will talk on "World Trade in Cotton."

— George Mullendore of Starkville, Miss., extension cotton specialist with Mississippi State University, who will report on "Delta Crop Conditions."

— Fred Traylor of Lubbock, president of Traylor Cotton Co., who will outline "Texas Cotton Prospects."

— Bert Kyle of Lubbock, assistant general manager and sales manager of Plains Cotton Cooperative Association, who will discuss "The Outlook for West Texas Cotton in the Far East."

A barbecue dinner is scheduled at 5 p.m. at the Lubbock Country Club.

Frye is a past director of the Fresno Cotton Exchange and a past president of the Western Cotton Shippers Association and Cotton Council International.

King is a past president of the Greenville, S. C., Cotton Exchange and a past chairman of the cotton buyers division of the South Carolina Textile Manufacturers Association.

Leavitt is director of agricultural services for his firms. He is a charter member, a director and president-elect of the National Council of Industrial Meteorologists and a charter member and former councilor of the National Weather Association.

Mearns, a native of Liverpool, England, supervises the international operations of Valmac Industries. His responsibilities include merchandising cotton of all world growths with the exception of U. S. cotton.

Mullendore, son of a Mississippi county agent, is widely known as a crop authority on Delta cotton. He recently returned from a cotton trip to Russia.

Traylor is a past president of the Texas Cotton Association and the Lubbock Cotton Exchange. He has been a member of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Cotton Advisory Committee, a director of the National Cotton Council and the American Cotton Shippers Association, and has served on the board of the Oklahoma State Cotton Exchange.

Kyle, who first became affiliated with PCCA in 1963 and headed the Greenville, S. C., office for seven years before moving to Lubbock, returned earlier this year from a U. S. trade mission to the Far East. He left Lubbock in May 1976 to become vice president in charge of sales for Staplecotn at Greenwood, Miss., and returned to PCCA's headquarters in September 1977.

Planes, Insecticide Used To Combat Grasshoppers

BELVIDERE, S.D. (AP) — Three crop-dusters flew into the morning sun to rain insecticide upon hordes of grasshoppers who are stripping the ground of green in numbers as high as 200 per square yard.

One light plane buzzed over a hilltop, roared about 30 feet over rancher Jerry Ireland's head, made a horseshoe turn and returned on a path about 75 feet closer to the river.

"He's coming in mighty tight," said Ireland. The grasshoppers swarming around his feet were not immediately affected by the light mist of Sevin 4-Oil. It kills them when they eat it on foliage.

One pint of the common garden insecticide, mixed with four ounces of diesel fuel, covered each of 30,000 acres in the state's first grasshopper control spraying program this year. State officials say up to 1 million acres may have to be treated.

The spraying must be completed by the first week in July to be effective, according to the state Department of Agriculture. After that, the grasshoppers lay eggs and next year's problem grows worse.

Grasshopper numbers have been increasing for the past few years, but this year they have thrived on near-drought conditions.

"Wet weather will kill them, but we didn't have any" said F. H. Ireland, who runs the 4,400-acre ranch with his son, Jerry. "I think every one of them that hatched lived."

Agricultural specialists have counted as many as 200 grasshoppers per square yard on the Ireland ranch.

"They've taken 100 percent of the growth in some areas," said the elder Ireland. "It isn't as bare as a road, but it's bare enough that livestock can't get any grazing."

Ireland, 56, was just a boy in the 1930s when drought and grasshoppers last laid bare the prairie.

"I could see them in a cloud way up high," he said. "When they run out of things to eat, I don't believe there's any limit to the distance they can travel."

Sixteen ranchers put up about $30,000 to spray some 25 miles on both sides of the White River. The federal and state government will make up the remainder of the spraying cost, estimated at about $2.10 per acre.

But ranchers have chafed over delays caused by weather and federal red tape.

"The 'hoppers aren't moving yet, but they're getting wings and getting ready too," said Ireland. "I believe we should have sprayed last week. We had our money down and we were ready to go."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that more than 4 million acres of rangeland in 14 western states are due for spraying. Acreage is eligible if it has more than eight grasshoppers per square yard.

But spraying is just beginning in South Dakota.

"And we feel we're approaching the critical time," said Jerry Ireland. "If they get any bigger, they're going to be real hard to kill."

D-FW Airlines Deny Sect Disclaimers

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Several airlines operating out of the Dallas-Fort Worth Reional Airport here have begun reading disclaimrs over the public address system in an effort to counter complaints about solicitation by the Hare Krishna religious group.

"This is something the various airlines are doing and is not official policy," said Jim Street, D-FW public information officer.

The action came in the wake of a court ruling on Jan. 30 that allows the religious sect to peddle magazines, candy, literature and to solicit donations in the terminals.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat, corn and soybean futures fell sharply Thursday for the second consecutive day amid heavy speculative selling on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Corn and soybean futures tumbled by as much as the daily trading limit before the release, set for after the close, of an Agriculture Department report on acreage devoted this year to various crops.

The report was expected to show an increase in corn and soybean acreage over the levels indicated April 1 when the department reported farmers' planting intentions.

An important feature of Thursday's selloff was heavy liquidation by brokerage houses as prices crossed established points at which automatic sell-orders were issued for outside customers. Light local and commercial selling was enough to set off a chain reaction of selling, and there were no buyers to be found at limit-down prices for two contracts in soybeans at the close.

Cattle Mart Contracts Off Sharply

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed down 70 to 150 points lower led by various contracts at the limit decline Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. The market reacted after an early gain of 25. Sales totaled 21,318 lots.

Aggressive profit taking and other selling followed Wednesday's advance to one month highs. Increased cattle arrivals and freer movement of trucks brought pressure as did weakness in the pork complex.

There have been 264 deliveries thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 107 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $70 per hundredweight at Omaha. Slaughter was 118,000 head. About 2,400 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed down 50 to 150 led by November at the limit decline. Volume was estimated at 5,814 cars.

Prices tumbled in the late trade after climbing 60 early. Continued weakness in grains along with limit losses in other meat pits brought pressure after outset buying on light feeder cattle runs and well sold up feedlots.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $1 with the best top $103 per hundredweight. Receipts at the major terminals today are expected to total 800 head.

Hog futures closed 82 to 150 lower led by December through August at the limit decline. Sales totaled 7,420 contracts.

Local and commission house selling was touched off by heavy hog runs and mostly lower prices coupled with easiness in most of the pork complex. Continued weakness in feedgrains was also a factor and forced October and December to new season's lows.

There have been 65 deliveries thus far. Wholesale hams were off 2 to up ½ at 73½ to 77½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were off $2.50 to up 50 cents with the best top $45 per hundredweight at Indianapolis. Kill was 319,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 155 to 200 lower paced by various contracts at the limit decline. July and August tumbled to new season's lows with prices lower from the start. Sales totaled 7,691 cars.

Further sharp declines in cash bellies and increased hog supplies combined with freer movement of trucks to easily offset another reduction in local belly stocks.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market Thursday was moderate. Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate and demand was moderate.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations held steady.

Mixed lots brought growers around 900 to 1,100 points over 1978 loan rates.

Forecasts of precipitation in some areas of the corn and soybean belt, plus reports of light showers in the Soviet Union's drought-stricken sunflower area, were depressing factors.

At the close, soybeans were 26¾ to 30 cents lower, July $7.71½; wheat was 12¾ to 19½ cents lower, July $4.45¼; corn was 7 to 10 cents lower, July $2.94¾; and oats were 2¼ to 3½ cents lower, July $1.62.

Man's Hot Air Balloon Repair Service Soaring

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Raymond Anderson has one of the few jobs in the world that depends on hot air, and his work has really ballooned since 1977.

That's when Anderson opened his own hot air balloon inspection and repair service — one of the few of its kind in the country.

"The balloons are licensed and they have to be inspected once a year," says Anderson, a retired aircraft mechanic. "But, anytime they are damaged, they bring them in. I don't ask for work, they just come."

A Federal Aviation Administration official encouraged Anderson to get into the business when he retired from his job at the University of Illinois' Willard Airport. There were no other balloon inspection and repair stations within hundreds of miles of Urbana.

Anderson says he now inspects or repairs about three dozen balloons a year.

"No two are alike," he says. "Every time you monkey with one you find something different."

Anderson begins by stretching the huge, brightly colored nylon balloon out in a friend's 1½-acre backyard. He carefully inspects every inch of fabric, stitching and cables, and the hardware that connects the balloon to the burner and passenger basket.

He tries to schedule his customers so that all the inspections for the year are done before winter.

"It gets pretty cold spreading them out on the snow," he says.

Anderson, who sometimes gets help from another inspector, says the next step is to examine the inner surfaces of the balloon.

"Sometimes we use a fan to fill it, and we take off our shoes and walk inside," he says. "But we've crawled in there too. In this summer heat, it is really hot in there."

Small holes in the material, especially if they are below the mid-section of the balloon, do not have to be repaired.

"Anything under the midway point is not too critical," Anderson says. "I've seen them fly where you could walk through the holes."

The top is more important because the air is hotter in that part of the balloon. And that is where there is a large flap that can be opened to let out the hot air so the balloon can descend quickly. There also is a side vent for releasing air and controlling altitude.

The most common problem is scorched material near the burners at the bottom of the balloon. It is brittle and can tear easily. Anderson, using a sewing machine in his shop, replaces damaged sections.

"Landing in corn stalks, brush and fences don't do it any good either," Anderson says. But he says owners of the balloons, which cost an average of $8,000, want to take care of them.

An inspection without repairs usually takes about two hours, Anderson says.

He says there has been a big increase in the number of hot air balloons in recent years. Some are used for pleasure flying and others for advertising.

Anderson does not fly balloons but has ridden in them and enjoyed the experience.

"It's like going up in an elevator," he says. "We were 20 feet off the ground before I knew it. It is very quiet."

Amputee To Retire From Military

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sgt. Laurence Chamberlin III, who lost both his feet in a tragic incident last winter in a New Mexico town, says he's walking well on artificial feet and looking forward to leaving the Air Force.

Chamberlin said Wednesday he has started driving again and has a job application pending in Port Hueneme, a Navy base near Oxnard, Calif. He said he wants to work with computers or in computer supplies.

The soft-spoken 21-year-old said in a telephone interview from Fitzsimons Army Medical Center near Denver that he's getting a medical discharge, which will qualify him for civilian training and a monthly pension.

"Yes, I want to get out," Chamberlin said. "They are going to discharge me Monday and I'm now waiting for retirement."

A Pentagon spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said, "Normally, because amputees are restricted from serving worldwide, they are found unfit and retired for disability."

Chamberlin's hopes for a military career ended during a chain of events that occurred in February while he was driving from California to Lowry Air Force Base in Denver for more training.

"I had my checkbook and my military ID, and knew I had a couple hundred dollars in my account," he said.

After a car repair in New Mexico wiped out most of his cash, Chamberlin filled his tank and kept driving north toward Denver, confident that he could cash a check for gas.

When he rived in Raton in the northeastern corner of New Mexico, he was out of both cash and fuel. Three banks refused to cash his out-of-state checks because he did not know anyone personally at his California bank. Chamberlin did not tell bank officials he had no other money. He also was unable to cash any checks at a half-dozen motels and gas stations.

Chamberlin, who had no experience living in cold areas, trudged through 12 inches of snow. He wore only a light jacket a low-cut loafers on his feet. He slept that night in his car.

Next morning, a gas station manager noticed him walking the streets as he had the day before. He offered assistance and called police.

But Chamberlin's feet had become frozen from walking through snow and the sub-zero nighttime temperatures. The feet became infected and military surgeons were forced to amputate.

People in Raton said later that if they had known the serviceman's situation they would have taken him in.

Askedwhy he didn't seek help or shelter, Chamberlin said: "I just didn't think of it."

Raton's attitude toward travelers has changed since Chamberlin's ordeal. Merchants now prominently display telephone numbers where travelers can get assistance after businesses have closed.

East European Countries Stress Energy

MOSCOW (AP) — Comecon, the Soviet bloc's economic alliance, ended its annual session Thursday by signing three long-term cooperation agreements, including one on atomic energy production.

One Eastern European source noted that the three-day meeting of Comecon's governing council spent a "surprising" amount of time on energy issues, more than had been expected by observers.

A key topic was nuclear power. On Thursday, Comecon's 10 members agreed on a specialization plan for building atomic energy plants that would involve Bulgaria, Hungary, East Germany, Poland, Romania, Czechoslovakia and associated member Yugoslavia.

Comecon spokesman Rolf Goerbing of East Germany told a news conference here that only two socialist nations will build nuclear reactors from now on — the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia.

The other countries will specialize in other production areas, but Goerbing would not specify what these would be.

Comecon's aim is to increase its energy potential by one-third before 1990. The east bloc countries are slated to have an independent atomic energy potential of 37 million kilowatts by then.

East European sources say that combined with the Soviet Union, the countries would have a total capacity of 150 million kilowatts. But Goerbing refused to confirm this.

One of the purposes of this week's Comecon council meeting was to pin down a broad long-term cooperation agreement on energy that was approved at last year's session in Bucharest.

The six East European members of Comecon depend heavily on Moscow for fuel and raw materials. But there was much "back-patting" at this session by socialist premiers who claimed they had "escaped" the energy crisis affecting the West.

However, the Communist Party organ Pravda said in a front-page editorial Thursday that it is every Soviet citizen's duty to save energy and that industries must stop wasting precious fuel.

The Pravda appeal followed a Kremlin decree June 14 calling for "very strict" controls over the use of energy supplies.

Nuke Power Firms Eye Insurance Idea

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nuclear power industry, acting on the costly lessons of Three Mile Island, announced Thursday it is exploring the idea of an insurance program financed by the 70 utilities that use the atom to generate electricity.

"It would be useful in dealing with extraordinary expenses resulting from a large outage," said Floyd W. Lewis, chairman of an industry committee created as a result of the Three Mile Island accident.

Such an insurance plan could be in place by next year, Lewis told a news conference called on the 3-month anniversary of the accident that shut down the plant near Harrisburg in south-central Pennsylvania.

He also announced creation of a national institute to monitor and improve the operation of nuclear reactors, and a series of industry-supported studies of the health effects on residents o the Three Mile Island area.

GRASSHOPPER INFESTATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's program to control what it calls the worst grasshopper infestation in 21 years has been expanded from 4 million to 5 million acres. Officials say the bugs are chewing on every square yard in some areas. Nebraska, Oregon and Texas are the worst affected states.

Announcing good taste at only 3 mg. tar.

Read how new Flavor-Intensified™ Triumph gives you taste good enough to stay with at only 3 mg. tar... one of the lowest tar levels in cigarettes.

Triumph. The first and only cigarette that delivers good taste with only 3 mg. tar.

If you've ever been disappointed by one of the very low tar cigarettes, you will understand why Triumph is quite an achievement.

Even the draw is a surprise.

The smoke comes through abundantly. The taste reaches you smoothly. Effortlessly. With none of the struggle you may have experienced in other very low tar brands. You don't have to pull—you just puff on Triumph.

No gimmicks, no miracles.

No less remarkable than Triumph itself, is the technology that enabled us to build it.

The crux of it: Instead of searching for some yet unimagined answer, Lorillard scientists took a more sensible tack.

Why not, they said, take everything we've learned about cigarettes, and push that technology further than we've ever pushed it before.

Delivering taste, limiting tar.

We found, for example, that combining two types of filter fiber produces the best combination of taste and draw.

That tiny "vents" in the filter-rim smooth the taste.

That lower-leaf tobaccos (shaded from the heat of the sun) tend to be milder and lower in tar than those at the top of the plant.

In short, everything we could find that might intensify flavor at 3 mg. tar, was built into Triumph.

Taste you won't get tired of.

What it all comes down to is this: Triumph is not one of those ultra low tars that spoil your pleasure by short-changing you on taste.

Triumph, at only 3 mg. tar, is a cigarette with a taste you can stay with. So good, we believe you'll never want to go back to your old cigarette.
