City mulls wastewater rate complaints

Snyder City Council members discussed complaints from local business owners over recent sewer and water rate increases and were briefed on other agenda items during a workshop session Friday.

The council's regular meeting is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at City Hall.

Carolyn House, director of customer service, told council members that the city had been contacted by members of the local motel association and Dave Wickline of Snyder Laundry concerning increases in their business' water and sewer rates.

House said the primary complaints were not on the base charge, but on the charge per 1,000 gallons, which are different for businesses which have a grease or sand trap.

According to a recent city ordinance, customers with a grease or sand trap will be charged $1.80 for the first 1,000 gallons of usage and $2 for each 1,000 additional gallons.

House said that the city was required by the Texas Water Development Board to begin figuring charges based on consumption. She gave council members a list of possible alternative charges to consider, but said that any amount other than the one currently being used would result in a loss for the city, because any alteration in the charges would alter revenue.

Mayor Troy Williamson said the fees were set in order to prevent others from paying additional charges to make up for customers with a large amount of usage.

Wickline and local motel owners are scheduled to address the council Tuesday concerning the rate changes.

City ordinances concerning utility rates and appropriation of funds to cover fiscal year 1999-92 budget amendments will also be considered on second reading by the council Tuesday, as well as an ordinance revising speed limits on College Avenue within the city limits.

According to the revisions, the College schedules WWII observance

Western Texas College's World War II Rememberance Committee will host its third observance honoring WWII participants Tuesday.

The presentation will begin at 7 p.m. in the Fine Arts Theatre and will honor the men who fought in the ground forces.

A panel of three veterans will discuss their wartime experiences. To be featured are Don Adams and Robert Swint, who fought with the ground forces in Europe, and Bill Hibbs, a veteran of the war in the South Pacific.

Dr. Ed Barkowsky, WTC instructor and chairman of the organizing committee, will serve as moderator.

The WWII committee is planning the celebration at WTC again this semester so students can share in the remembrance. The observances will continue through 1995, with one each semester. Previous rememberances have honored veterans of Pearl Harbor and the U.S. Army Air Corp.

Other members of the committee are Dr. Harry Krenek, college president; Dr. Franklin Pruitt, Marilyn Lancaster, John Gibson, Dick Lancaster, Dr. Jim Palmer, Shirley Leftwich and Donny Brown.

'Hound of Baskervilles' gets Friday the 13th opening date

Snyder High School drama department will present its fall production, "The Hound of the Baskervilles," with a Friday the 13th opening at 8 p.m. in Worsham Auditorium.

Additional performances are scheduled for Nov. 16 and 17, also at 8 p.m.

The play is based on the famous novel by Conan Doyle and is considered one of the greatest of the Sherlock Holmes adventure stories. Selection of the play is in keeping with the SHS Drama Department tradition of giving young actors an opportunity to try their acting skills in works of high literary quality. The book was adapted for the stage by Tim Kelly, and is produced by special arrangement with Samuel French Publishers of New York.

Starring as Sherlock Holmes will be veteran SHS actor Sam Grimes. His sidekick, Dr. Watson, will be portrayed by Craig Row. Sir Henry Baskerville, inheritor of the vast Baskerville estate and all its problems, will be played by Sam Cain.

Senior veterans Joellen King, Sara McDonald and Amy Beaver will play the female leads in the roles of Kathy Stapleton, Laura Lyons and Lady Agatha Mortimer. The role of Jack Stapleton will be played by another senior, J. Parker.

Supporting roles include Kevin Alejandro as the butler, Mr. Barrymore, and Katie Thornton as the housekeeper, Mrs. Barrymore. Stacy Wright will play the role of Perkins, the maid, while Marc Sparlin will play the role of a mystery intruder into the Baskerville mansion.

The play will feature a large set to resemble the mansion. Lighting and special effects will be extensive in order to carry out the mysterious mood of the play. Although the play is a mystery thriller, it is suitable for all ages, said director Jerry Worsham.

Stage manager for the production will be Michael McQuerry. Also included in the technical crew are Mark Bullard, Steve Bollinger, Mike Baker, Marc Sparlin, Josh Palmer, Chris Mitchell, Amy Patterson, Jiletta Kubena and Kristen Rinker.

Tickets will be $3 for general admission and $5 for reserved seating. Reservations can be made by calling the high school at 573-6301.

Only two weeks left to enter parade here

Entries for the 1992 lighted "Celebrate Christmas Parade" are being accepted through Nov. 20.

The parade is scheduled for 6 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 5. Boy's Club director Jack McGlaun is grand marshal for the event.

First place traveling plaques will be awarded for best theme, best use of lights and most unique floats.

Last year, the parade boasted 14 lighted floats. Organizer Pat Cunnington said she is hoping to double the entries this year.

Anyone may enter the parade, and entries are not limited to floats. However, all groups who enter are encouraged to register so that a parade line-up can be made in advance.

There is no entry fee.

Registration forms are available at the chamber of commerce and Humble-Smith School.

In addition to entries, volunteers are needed to help with decorations and to line up the parade on Dec. 5. Especially needed are volunteers who will help with costumes for parade walkers. Artists and carpenters are needed to draw and cut out a sleigh, reindeer and other figures.

Anyone able to volunteer is encouraged to contact Cunnington at Humble-Smith School.

C of C board slated to meet

A proposal concerning the 1993 chamber of commerce banquet, appointment of a board member and officer nominations will be considered when the Snyder Chamber of Commerce board holds its regular monthly meeting at 4 p.m. Monday.

The board will hear a request from Western Texas College Faculty Association member Donny Brown to take time at the annual chamber banquet to highlight the college's scholarship fund drive and recognize its participants.

A one-year replacement for board member Jerry Baird, who will resign Dec. 31, will be considered by the board, as well as chamber officers for 1993.

Approval of minutes from the October meeting and financial reports are the only other items on the agenda.

Right-of-way keys agenda for county

Scurry County commissioners will consider a resolution concerning right-of-way on Farm Road 1673 and a request from Scurry County Library as the court convenes at 10 a.m. Monday.

The court will consider passing a resolution to the state stating that all right-of-way for Farm Road 1673, which is the road to the landfill, has been properly acquired.

Commissioners recently voted to purchase right-of-way from land owners along 1673 in order to have the road paved and maintained by the state.

Commissioners will consider a letter from Scurry County Library requesting permission to dispose of receipt records at the library that are more than five years old. The request is being made to save space being taken up by old records at the library, which are duplicate copies of records stored at the courthouse.

Approval of minutes from the court's previous meeting is the only other item of business on the agenda.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The best way to save time is to read the instructions."

Right near the end of football season, Hermleigh's Kenneth Brackeen brought by a copy of a program from the Oct. 5, 1945 game between the Snyder Tigers and the Hermleigh Cardinals.

Brackeen said he wasn't sure who won, but the Scurry County Times revealed that an awesome passing attack gave the Cardinals a 12-7 victory.

Brackeen was a 160-pound halfback and he does remember running into Snyder right tackle E.J. (Tiny) Moore who was listed at 214 on the roster.

Starters on the Hermleigh roster were Jack Smith, Dub Wright, Adolph Mraz, Lowell Wade, H.B. Lewis, Dale Stewart, Fred Bowen, Henry Gafford, Billy Don Kimzey and Dillard Herrley.

Cardinal subs were Morris Lewis, Lonnie Stephens, Walter Ammons, Don Hale, Bob Frank Roemisch, Harold Brackeen, LeRoy Wilcox, Billy Simms, Bobo Pavlas and Billy Winn Lee.

There were some familar names on the Snyder roster. Starters were Joe Reynolds, Billy Burk, Raymon Bynum, Don Bynum, Billy Joe York, E.J. Moore, Elwood Blakely, Donnie Everett, Buster Woolever, Billy Longbotham and Bob Sealy.

Others on the Tiger roster were Jack Gorman, Louie Vaughn, Hariand Birdwell, O.P. Tate, Wayland Burton, Roy Trice, Billy Tom Deffebach, Bobby Shahan and Charles Birdwell.

Some of the program sponsors were interesting as well. There were Wade's Bread, Henry's Cafe, School Lunch Room, Economy Dry Goods, The Fair Store, Hollywood Shop, Bynum Produce, Ben Franklin, Stinson No. 1 and 2, Taylor Grocery, Beadel's Food Store and Pick and Pay.

Others on the Tiger scheduled that year were Roby, Merkel, C-City, Lamesa, Kermit, Rotan, Hobbs, Roscoe and the season finale on Thanksgiving Day in Loraine.

New lotto game underway

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Lottery on Saturday began selling tickets for its new "lotto" game with a minimum $2 million jackpot, and officials Friday said they believe the game will prove popular.

But they don't know what to expect for the first drawing.

"There's really no way to tell at this point. I just have no earthly idea," said Lottery director Nora Linares.

In the lotto games, a player picks a set of numbers from one to 50. Winning numbers will be chosen at random in each drawing.

While the minimum jackpot will be $2 million, it could go higher. Since the lotto is a parimutuel game, the more money wagered the bigger the prize, officials said.

Playslips for the game will be available at 5,000 lottery retailers at first. Each game costs $1.

"Lotto Texas and any kind of lotto game starts slowly and it builds, mostly because it builds as your jackpot builds. We expect the excitement will start to build towards the end of the week," Ms. Linares said.

Retailers will be allowed to sell lotto tickets from 6 a.m. to midnight, seven days a week, with a 15-minute "timeout" from 9:45 p.m. to 10 p.m. on the nights lotto drawings are held.

The first drawing will take place one week after ticket sales start, at 9:58 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, and will be shown on television stations statewide, Ms. Linares said.

After the first Lotto Texas drawing, there will be two per week: Wednesday and Saturday nights.

State officials have guaranteed that the jackpot for the first game will be at least $2 million. It could be more depending on how much is wagered.

The odds of picking all six out of the 50 numbers are 1 in 15,890,700.

Money also will be awarded to players matching five numbers, four numbers, and matching three numbers will win a guaranteed $3.

The odds of matching five numbers are 1-in-60,192; four numbers, 1-in-1,120; and three, 1-in-60.

Ms. Linares said the Texas Lottery will be offering special prizes to lotto retailers.

A bonus equal to 1 percent of the winning jackpot will be paid to the retailer who sells a six-of-six winner, she said, with a maximum bonus of $500,000.

"If Jane — the owner of Jane's Market in Texasville — sells a $4 million jackpot winner, Jane will pocket a $40,000 bonus," Ms. Linares said.

"Our retailers are the most important link to lottery players, and we know they'll share the excitement when one of their customers hits the jackpot. But we want them to share in the winnings as well," she said.

INS inspector accused of accepting bribes

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service inspector has been arrested on charges alleging he took bribes from drug dealers and allowed them to move narcotics from Mexico into El Paso.

Inspector Jesus L. Garcia also has been charged with illegally selling immigration documents to unauthorized persons from March 7, 1990, to March 16, 1992.

Garcia was arrested Wednesday. Bail was set at $100,000, but lowered to $20,000. He was expected to be released Friday after posting five percent of the bond, the U.S. Magistrate's office in El Paso said.

U.S. Attorney Stan Serwatka was out of the office and no one was immediately available to explain why Garcia's bond was lowered.

Two U.S. grand jury indictments charged Garcia with one count of conspiring with Aaron Northrup to smuggle drugs and two counts of accepting $12,000 in bribes.

Garcia also is accused of one count of conspiring with Guillermo Hernandez to give immigration documents to unauthorized people and other counts of giving the documents to unauthorized people.

The indictments accused Garcia of taking bribes from Northrup, one on April 1, 1991 and another Aug. 1, 1991, in return for letting an unidentified person smuggle more than 200 pounds of marijuana into El Paso.

Court records also made the following accusations:

— Garcia took INS applications for border crossing cards for nonresident Mexicans from INS facilities between March 7, 1990, and March 16, 1992.

— Garcia stamped the forms and delivered them to Hernandez who sold them to Mexican citizens. Garcia also is accused of selling INS forms to several other individuals who are not authorized to have the forms.

Lawyer says he won't try to block airing of TV film

CHANNELVIEW, Texas (AP) — An attorney for Wanda Holloway, who is accused of trying to have a neighbor killed to enhance her daughter's chances of becoming a cheerleader, said Friday he will not try to block this weekend's broadcast of a television movie about the case.

Dale Jefferson said Thursday he and Mrs. Holloway watched a video copy of the movie, "Willing to Kill: The Texas Cheerleader Story," which is scheduled to air on ABC Sunday night, and believed it was defamatory.

But Friday, Jefferson said he and ABC had reached an agreement.

"Our settlement resolved all claims against ABC for defamation, invasion of privacy and anything else we could have against them," he said.

Jefferson would not say what the settlement included. Instead, he read a statement he said was prepared by ABC's lawyers.

"The dispute between Wanda Holloway and Topazi and Hersch Entertainment, the producer of the made-for-television movie ... has been resolved, and the movie will air on ABC this Sunday as scheduled," the attorney said.

Jefferson said Thursday a five-figure settlement proposal had been discussed in his negotiations with ABC and Topazi and Hersch. He had threatened to file a motion for a temporary restraining order to keep the program off TV if no settlement was reached.

The network Friday did not immediately return a telephone message from The Associated Press.

Mrs. Holloway was convicted last year of trying to hire a hit man to kill neighbor Verna Heath. Prosecutors said Mrs. Holloway wanted to upset Mrs. Heath's daughter, Amber, so that the teenager would drop out of cheerleader competition and give Mrs. Holloway's daughter, Shanna, a better chance of winning.

Detroit cops may face criminal charges

DETROIT (AP) — The fatal beating of a motorist in an incident evoking the Rodney King case may result in criminal charges against the seven police officers involved, the police chief said.

Malice Wayne Green, 35, was beaten to death with a flashlight by two plainclothes officers who stopped his car on Detroit's west side, Chief Stanley Knox said Friday. The five other officers watched or took part, he said.

Criminal charges will be sought against some or all of them depending on the results of an internal investigation, Knox said. The seven have been suspended without pay.

Knox said Green parked his car about 10:30 p.m. Thursday and was approached by two plainclothes officers. The officers' call for backup was answered by at least four more officers and a sergeant, Knox said.

Knox said he couldn't say whether race was a factor. Green, an unemployed father of two children and three stepchildren, was black. The seven officers, whom Knox did not identify, included blacks and whites.

Still unclear was when the beating started and how many officers were physically involved. Knox said initial reports showed Green was beaten while still inside his car and again outside, even after he was handcuffed and paramedics arrived.

"Not everyone actually struck a blow," Knox said. "The fact remains he was struck and we are investigating to find out exactly when, where and how."

Green was taken to Detroit Receiving Hospital and pronounced dead at 11:06 p.m. The Wayne County Medical Examiner's Office said the death was a homicide caused by "blunt force trauma to the head."

At least one of the officers involved was investigated for complaints of abuse in the past, though none of the charges was substantiated, he said.

Knox admitted the case bore similarities to the March 1991 beating of King, a black motorist who was beaten by white officers after a traffic stop in Los Angeles.

The acquittal of four officers last spring on most charges in the beating led to riots in Los Angeles that left more than 50 people dead and triggered disturbances in other cities.

Detroit was proud to have avoided the violent reaction that hit other cities.

Mayor Coleman Young, who won election as Detroit's first black mayor in 1973 largely by promising to integrate the police force, also was outraged.

Perot's ads available on video

DALLAS (AP) — Just in time for the holidays, Ross Perot's commercials are for sale on videotape.

Video Plus, a Dallas company Perot hired to film his rallies, on Friday said it would sell a seven-hour tape of the independent's TV shows for $19.95 plus shipping.

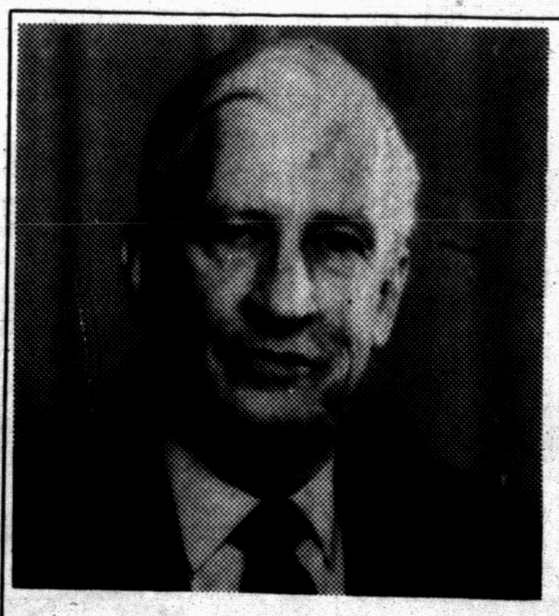

Perot's campaign authorized the tape, called "Ross Perot - The Complete Campaign Video," but will receive no proceeds from its sale.

The tape features each of Perot's nine half-hour political advertisements and highlights from his rallies and election night party.

"Our hope is it gets picked up in rental chains," said Stuart Johnson, president of Video Plus.

Astro-graphs

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Nov. 8, 1992

It will be possible for you to be lucky both materially and socially in the year ahead. This could be an exciting cycle with lots of travel and pleasant adventures.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your friends will be willing to go to bat for you today, but don't demand them to do so. Let their desire to help you be self-inspired. Scorpio, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Scorpio's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You should do well today in situations where you strive for some type of personal gain. However, timing is critical, and if you push things too fast, you might stumble over your own two feet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If your motivation is to do the greatest good for the largest number today, your involvements should turn out quite successful. If the emphasis is the "me" factor, they might not.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you're striving for an important objective today that also involves others, use your initiative instead of waiting on them. It will be up to you to establish both the timetable and effort requirement.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be hopeful regarding the outcome of events today; positive thinking will determine the end results. If you nurture self-doubts, you'll impede your progress.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Possibilities for gains through joint ventures look promising today, yet the rewards you anticipate might not live up to your expectations. Thus, don't think excessively.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your cooperative nature will be appreciated by friends today, but there is a chance someone you had problems with previously might not see this splendid side of your character.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In order to get something you want today, it might be necessary for you to first prime the pump. However, don't put in more water than you can get out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Seek activities today you can enjoy yourself in without having to spend an arm and a leg. Expensive pursuits don't carry guarantees that they will be the most fun.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Focus your efforts today on matters that are meaningful to you materially. This is where you are apt to be the most effective — and luckiest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you take yourself too seriously today, there is a chance you might get caught up in a one-upmanship game with a competitive friend. It's a no-win situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your financial trends look very encouraging today, so be alert for opportunities. Your breaks are likely to come through business associates, not social contacts.

Your Birthday

Nov. 9, 1992

The possibilities for fulfilling your hopes and expectations in the year ahead look promising. However, your patience might be severely tested as you climb the ladder of success.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be open-minded to the advice of others today, but don't be unduly influenced by an individual who always sees the dark side. Make judgments for yourself. Major changes are ahead for Scorpio in the coming year. Send for Scorpio's Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try not to be too demanding of subordinates today. They'll perform better and produce more if you minimize your supervision.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There's a possibility you might be unreasonable and stingy today with an individual who treated you rather generously in the past. This is not the way to pay someone back.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might be inclined to postpone things that require immediate attention today. But if you stall too long, the day could be over before you realize it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Results today will be determined, to a large degree, by the way you anticipate the outcome of events. This is not the time to focus on the negative.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today is a good day to analyze your spending patterns to try to find the holes that have been draining your budget. Improvements can be made — if you're earnest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Under most conditions, you're not the type of individual to back off from a challenge. However, if circumstances look too difficult today, you might not even make an attempt.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be as helpful as you can to others today, but also be cognizant of your own needs and limitations. If you take on more than you can manage, no one will benefit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Sometimes, when we probe too deeply into another's personal affairs, we learn things we're better off not knowing. Don't let your curiosity create this condition today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be extremely tactful today with important associates whose support you presently need. You're on shaky ground in this critical area.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Distasteful tasks you have to perform today could be compounded by a negative attitude. You might not be able to think of them as easy to do, but you can think of them as necessary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The temptation to take financial risks might be rather pronounced today. Unfortunately, where speculation is concerned, Lady Luck may not be there to back you up.

Russian roulette kills teen

HOUSTON (AP) — Police say a teen-ager is dead as the result of playing Russian roulette with friends.

Juan Zavala, 18, of Houston was pronounced dead Friday morning from a gunshot wound to the head, Harris County sheriff Sgt. John Denholm said.

The shooting occurred about 9:15 a.m. at a trailer home, Denholm said. Zavala and several other friends had skipped classes at Houston Madison High School and met at the home, he said.

One of the teens brought a .38-caliber pistol to the home and unloaded it, Denholm said. The boy's companions said Zavala picked up the gun and put a bullet in.

"He told his friends, 'If I do it, will you do it?'" Denholm said. "They told him he was crazy, so he spun the cylinder, put the gun to his head and pulled the trigger. He was dead before he hit the floor."

Smaller magnet school ok'd

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge, writing that he understands blacks' frustration over the long-delayed construction of a "supermagnet" high school, has approved a plan to scale back the campus.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders ruled Thursday that the Dallas Independent School District can spend one-third less on the Townview school planned for east Oak Cliff.

Sanders said he feared without the reduction, the $29.9 million school would not win voter support in a Dec. 5 bond issue.

Sanders also said he was swayed by school officials' intent to put the money saved on Townview toward relieving overcrowded, mostly minority campuses.

"African-American citizens of Dallas have relied on an expectancy of a magnificent Townview amounting almost to a promise; these citizens are justified in their frustration that Townview is even still a changing concept," he wrote in a 13-page ruling.

DISD Trustee Yvonne Ewell called the decision "a deep, dark disappointment."

"I would have thought there would have been more concern for the aspirations of some people in the minority community," she said.

Plans for Townview were announced in 1984 in response to a 1982 court order to consolidate magnet schools. Since then, the school district has been unable to raise funds for the school.

Financial Focus

A question facing many retirees today is, how much income will they need in the future to maintain their standard of living? The answer is, more. How much more depends on inflation, but retirement without an increasing income is a ticket to poverty.

According to recent figures from Morgan Stanley Research, during the most recent period of moderate inflation (1982-present), the consumer price index (CPI) rose at an annual rate of less than 4 percent. During the most recent period of rapid inflation (1971-1981), the CPI rose at an average annual rate of 8.3 percent. During that period, the dollar lost more than half of its buying power, a financial disaster for anyone living on a fixed income.

Add to this the steady decline in income from certificates of deposit and money-market funds, and you see the dilemma many retirees face. In just the past five years, income from CDs has dropped from more than 8 percent to less than 4 percent. Investors who have traditionally relied on these investments now must choose between staying in short-term securities and keeping their principal stable or picking up extra income by investing long term and risking a capital loss.

A wide range of mutual funds, generally classified as equity-income or growth-and-income, attempt to combine reasonably higher yields with capital appreciation. Their objective is to produce a higher income every year for investors and to keep shareholders' income ahead of inflation.

How do the funds accomplish this? The fund managers attempt to select securities with a history of increasing dividends and work to overcome a decreasing income by carefully monitoring their portfolios. During 1991, when the yield on the unmanaged Standard & Poor's 500 Composite Index was about 3 percent, some of these funds were providing an income return of more than 5 percent.

Of course, anyone investing in a mutual fund should be aware that the share prices will fluctuate.

These funds concentrate investments on large, well-known, well-financed companies that are broadly based to weather the normal ups and downs of the business cycle. The funds also hold non-equity assets such as bonds and Treasuries, which should enhance yields and increase stability.

The appeal of these funds is that their current yields are generally better than you would get on short-term investments. The possibility of significant capital appreciation is an added benefit. There is, of course, the risk of capital loss if markets decline.

There are additional factors, such as sales charges and expenses, which should be considered when choosing a mutual fund. Investors should always review the prospectus for a mutual fund before making any investment.

There are few guarantees in investing. If, however, you believe a rising income is an important part of your retirement planning, then you should consider investments with a solid history of regular dividend increases.

Don't let taxes take a bite out of your lump sum distribution.

If you're scheduled to receive a lump sum distribution from a pension or profit-sharing plan where you work, don't let Uncle Sam take a bite out of it in taxes. By rolling it over into an IRA, you may avoid paying taxes on this distribution until you retire.

Bush has plenty to do before leaving office

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lame duck or no, President Bush still has a deskful of unfinished business, from approving a new definition of wetlands to deciding whether to let British Airways buy a major chunk of USAir.

He served dramatic notice Thursday that he's still in charge when his trade representative slapped punishing tariffs on white wine imports from Europe.

That could trigger a transatlantic tariffs war — or it could force the European Community to curb farm subsidies and allow a breakthrough in stalled global talks.

Although Bush became a caretaker the minute he lost the election, he retains his constitutional powers to command the military, make treaties, pardon miscreants, and appoint ambassadors. He submits the next year's budget to Congress with the sure knowledge his successor will modify it.

White House officials insist they have no intention of ramming through a host of controversial regulations before the Clinton team takes over Jan. 20, as they contend the outgoing Carter administration did to Ronald Reagan 12 years ago.

But a senior official said, "There is a reasonable chance we'll get the final wetlands rule out" in December after a delay of more than a year.

The Bush administration backpedaled from an earlier wetlands proposal last year amid complaints from the Environmental Protection Agency and others that it would allow the destruction of up to 80 percent of the wetlands in some regions.

Other business will also go on in Washington for the next 11 weeks, even as the eyes of the world shift to President-elect Clinton in Little Rock, Ark.

Here's a rundown of some upcoming events and possible actions before the Bush administration leaves office:

—The Food and Drug Administration will promulgate new food label regulations on Monday, radically altering the format for disclosing fat, calories, cholesterol and other ingredients and redefining such terms as "light" and "low-fat." The FDA is under orders from Congress to meet that deadline.

—Attorney General William P. Barr must decide by mid-November whether to seek a court-appointed independent prosecutor in the loans-for-Iraq scandal, as Democrats on the Senate and House Judiciary Committees have demanded.

Barr has already rejected one request for an independent prosecutor to investigate illegal loans to Baghdad prior to the Gulf War, and he is unlikely to bow to the Democrats now. Barr recently named a retired federal judge, Frederick Lacey, as a special counsel to probe the scandal, but Lacey serves at the pleasure of the attorney general, unlike an independent prosecutor, who can be fired only under tight restrictions laid down by the Ethics in Government Act.

—Federal banking regulators are likely to shut several dozen banks under provisions of the stricter new banking law that kick in Dec. 19. The law empowers the regulators to close sick banks before they topple into insolvency.

—Transportation Secretary Andrew H. Card Jr. has promised to decide by Dec. 24 whether to allow British Airways' $750 million deal to buy a 44 percent stake in USAir to go forward.

The three largest U.S. carriers — American, United and Delta — have bitterly opposed the deal. They want wider access to the British market before the foreign carrier gets expanded routes and rights here.

—U.S. and Russian arms negotiators are still trying to nail down a second strategic arms treaty which Bush and Russian President Boris Yeltsin agreed to an outline of last June.

The original START treaty, reducing long-range nuclear weapons by one-third, has been ratified by the U.S. Senate, the Russian parliament and Kazakhstan and now awaits action by Ukraine and Belarus.

But Bush sought to throw cold water on speculation that he might make one final foreign trip to sign the arms pact. "I have no plans to go to Moscow," he said Thursday.

—Bush's foreign policy specialists are also worrying about getting sufficient relief supplies into Sarajevo and Bosnia before winter adds to the miseries of war-torn Yugoslavia.

2 WTC actors get accolades

Two Western Texas College actors received accolades for their work in "Waiting for Godot" last Sunday at the American College Theatre Festival at Collin County Community College in Plano.

Greg Combs who portrayrd Vladimir, and Virgil Snell in the part of Pozzo were named "outstanding actors," as part of the Irene Ryan Awards in conjunction with the ACTF. Both WTC students are from Muleshoe.

Being named "outstanding actors" gives Combs and Snell the opportunity to compete again in the ACTF. They will audition at the first competition of the Irene Ryan Acting awards in February and may advance to the last festival in April.

The WTC troupe was also recognized for "excellence in design." Jeff Black and Michael Endy received the "commendations" in this area of the competition. These awards went to Black for light design and to Endy for set design.

WTC competed with four other schools to garner these awards. "Waiting for Godot," written by Samuel Beckett, was presented locally Oct. 22-24 and 26, and opened Endy's first season as WTC drama instructor

The play was originally written and performed in French, and is considered by most theatre critics to be one of the greatest tragic comedies of the 20th century.

Cosmetology class now forming at WTC

A new cycle of cosmetology instruction begins at Western Texas College Dec. 1 and instructor Judy Border urges interested students to contact her as soon as possible to insure they be guaranteed a spot.

Persons interested should contact her or pick up a copy of the cosmetology information packet available through Student Services located in the Learning Resource Center on campus.

Prospective students must take the WTC placement test and be interviewed by Mrs. Border.

The class meets from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday. It takes 12 months to complete and graduates must then pass the state examination in Austin.

For more information, contact Border at 573-8511, ext. 267.

Bush sanctions could help Texas, Rick Perry says

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. trade sanctions against some European agricultural products could benefit Texas producers, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said Friday.

President Bush, arguing that government farm subsidies keep prices for European farm goods unfairly low, this week announced penalty tariffs for $300 million worth of white wine and other European goods.

Perry said the tariffs could be good news for the Texas wine industry, as well as cotton, soybean and other oilseed farmers.

"The tariffs on wine will cause the prices of most white wine imported into the United States to skyrocket," Perry said. "Obviously, Texas vintages will be a viable, economic alternative for wine lovers."

The U.S. action also would help oilseed farmers if it is successful in opening the European Community to U.S. oilseeds, Perry said.

"Full-scale trade wars help no one, especially farmers. However, the European Community insistence on oilseed subsidies is not only unfair to U.S. farmers, but it also inhibits what until now has been a movement toward freer trade that will help consumers worldwide," he said.

Perry said the government subsidies mean European soybean farmers receive about three times as much as U.S. farmers do for their beans. American producers are losing an estimated $1 billion in sales annually to the European Community because of the subsidies, he said.

Victory Baptist will mark 18th anniversary with Sunday services

Victory Baptist Church will celebrate its 18th anniversary Sunday. The church will observe the day with a special service at 10:45 a.m. and a gospel singing from 2-4 p.m.

Bill Buckingham, pastor of Landmark Baptist Church in Irving, will preach during the morning service. Special music will be provided by Crystal River, a gospel group from Lubbock. Crystal River will also be featured in the afternoon singing along with local talent.

The public is invited to attend Sunday's service and gospel singing. Victory Baptist is located at 3303 Apple Street in Snyder.

Victory Baptist was established in the home of Pat Githens in November of 1974 at which time he was "called" to be pastor of the new church.

The church continued to meet for the next three months in his residence which was located where the former Furr's plus building now stands. The church then met in East Elementary School for two years while the present church property could be purchased and a building constructed.

Rev. Githens resigned as pastor of the church in 1978 and was followed by Revs. George Harris, Don Gonce and Jim Dillow. Rev. Githens was again "called" to pastor the church in 1988.

The church in recent years has constructed a new educational and fellowship building and also new nursery facilities. These new facilities became a necessity due to continuous growth in attendance and membership.

SHS nudges Frenship

Fourth-quarter rally gives Snyder 24-21 win

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

WOLFFORTH — A game-winning 80-yard drive by the Snyder Tigers, capped by a 14-yard scamper into the end zone by sophomore Greg McAden, gave SHS its third straight winning season Friday, as they topped Frenship, 24-21 in the last game of the year for both teams.

The Frenship Tigers played most of the game without their most effective offensive weapons, 1,000-yard rusher Duane Young, who was nursing an injury from last week's game against Levelland, and standout split end Kendrick Hollie, who was knocked out of Friday's game in the second period.

"They're just like us," said Snyder coach David Baugh, "they didn't want to lose the last game.

"They have some good players. Young was hurt and we knocked Hollie out of the game, but they played hard."

Two fumbled kicks and two pass interceptions made the game a nip-and-tuck affair.

"I think our mistakes, though, helped them a bunch, particularly the two fumbled kicks. They got control of the football and kept it. They put us in a hole quick."

It didn't look like it would be as close a game as it turned out when Snyder cruised to a 7-0 lead less than three minutes into the game.

Tailback Ben Wilson rambled 72 yards on a second-and-five play from the SHS 25 on the second play from scrimmage. Quarterback Matt Cave took the ball into the end zone three plays later from a yard out.

Snyder's defense stuffed Frenship on its first possession, allowing a first down on a Shane Stewart-to-Hollie connection for 13 yards, but little else.

On fourth and eight, Frenship punted the ball to Snyder return specialist Barretta Collins, who fumbled. The recovery was made by Hollie at Snyder's 11-yard line.

It only took FHS two plays to score. Tailback Billy Vinyard used an offsides penalty by Snyder and a two-yard plunge to tie the game.

It didn't stay tied long, though. Stewart found an open Shawn Reeves for a 29-yard score on the next Frenship possession. The Chris Addington point-after put the home Tigers on top, 14-7, at the end of a quarter.

Snyder's offense was stifled until late in the second quarter, but following a fourth-and-six sack by SHS defenders Wayland Harrison and Todd Iglehart, Snyder took control at its own 40 for one last shot before intermission.

Cave hit Michael Humphrey for 12, then for four, before connecting with Collins for nine.

Humphrey hauled in a Cave toss covering the last 20 yards and tying the game at 14, with just one tick left before the half.

Frenship took the lead once again in the third when Stewart, who passed for 145 yards Friday, threw to a wide-open Mark Romo in the corner of the end zone.

J. Parker provided what proved to be the winning margin with a 22 yard field goal with 1:18 to go in the quarter.

Snyder's defense, which limited Frenship to only 82 rushing yards, shut Frenship off the scoreboard in the fourth, and its offense added McAden's TD run with under three minutes to play for the victory.

McAden, on the night, carried the ball seven times for 73 yards. Wilson topped the 100-yard mark against FHS Friday, getting 112 yards on six carries.

Frenship's Young, who had 1,012 yards going into Friday's tilt, came in briefly in the third quarter. He got 20 yards on four attempts before coming out for good.

Hollie caught four balls for 44 yards before a second-quarter shot by safety Humphrey put the Frenship receiver on the sideline.

The Snyder Tigers are out of the playoffs for the first time in three seasons, but coach Baugh still thinks his team made some strides this year.

"It was a weird season," the coach said. "We did some things really great and beat some great teams, then we lost to some teams we should have beaten.

"We didn't make it to the playoffs," he continued, "and that is disappointing. If this bunch could have made it to the playoffs, it would have been the biggest accomplishment of any team we've had here, because of all the adversity they've had. We're 6-4, and that's a winning record, and for what they went through and what they did, I'm proud for them."

Coyotes claim title with Friday victory

ROSCOE — Borden County claimed the District 6 6-man football championship Friday with a convincing 57-8 win over Highland in both teams' regular season finale.

The Coyotes were led by senior running back Clint Wills, who scored five touchdowns and rushed for 333 yards on the night.

For the season, Willis has a school record 2,014 rushing yards.

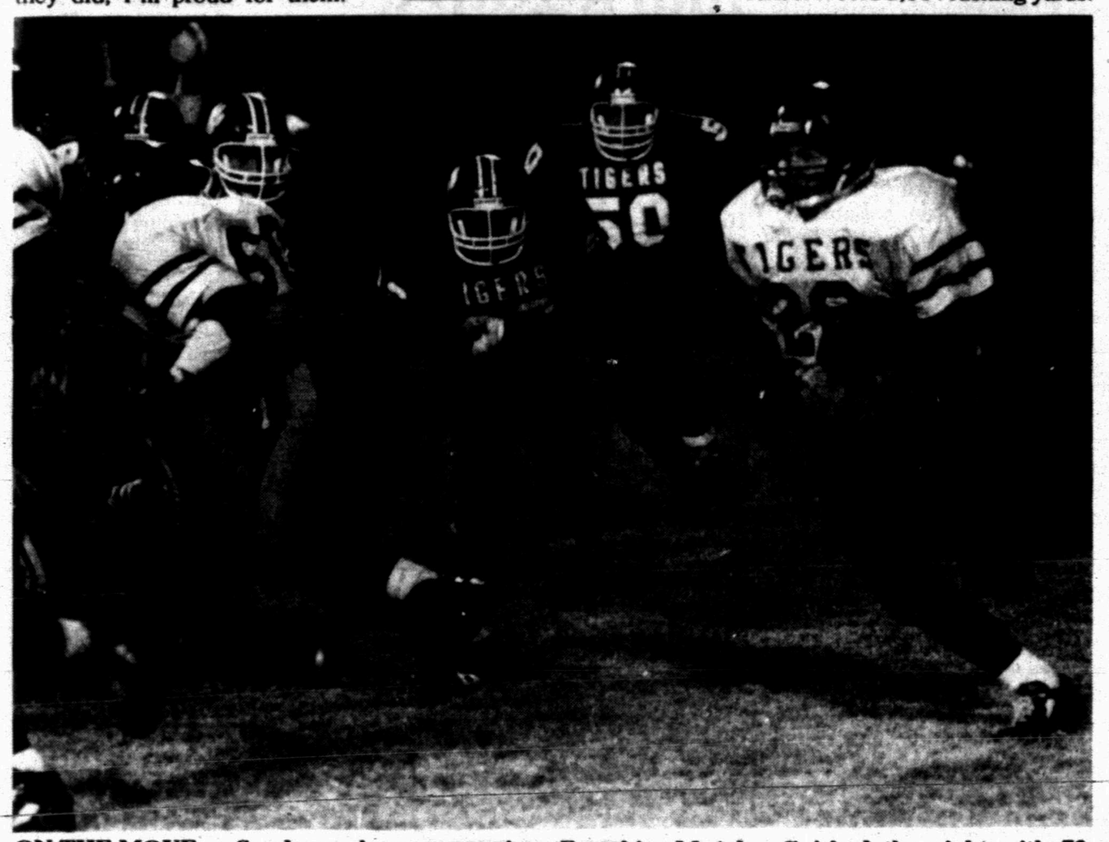

Wills put the Coyotes on top early with scoring runs of seven and 64 yards. John Paul Harris added a TD from four yards out and Borden County held a 24-0 advantage at the end of the first quarter.

Wills rambled in for a 3-yard score, then hit paydirt on a 12-yard jaunt before Brandon Bankhead scooted 60 yards with a Ricky Sutton pass for Highland's only touchdown.

Wills' last touchdown came on a 52 yard blast, followed by TDs from teammates Harris, on a 28-yard run, and Kirk Jones, who scored on a 24-yard scramble to end the game on the 45-point rule early in the fourth.

The Coyotes wrap up the regular season with a 9-1 record, 5-0 in loop games. Highland was winless in 10 tries, including five district battles.

Borden County will battle Klondike, District 5 runner-up, in the bi-district round of the state playoffs. A time and site will be announced.

ON THE MOVE — Snyder sophomore running back Greg McAden scoots around the end behind the block of Charles Richardson (60) for a long gain in Friday's 24-21 Snyder grid win over Frenship. McAden finished the night with 73 yards on seven carries, including a 14-yard touchdown run in the fourth period that proved to be the game winner. (SDN Staff Photo)

Loraine keeps Ira out of playoffs

LORAINE — It was literally a dogfight Friday as Loraine's Bulldogs earned a District 6 6-man playoff bid by upsetting defending loop champion Ira's Bulldogs, 37-32, with a three TD fourth-quarter rally.

The loss knocks Ira out of the postseason picture, and gives Loraine the district runner-up berth.

Ira opened the scoring when Bryan Luna blasted over from a yard away. Wyatt Webster's PAT kick put Ira on top, 8-0.

Loraine answered with two Arthur Garcia touchdowns, runs of 20 and 5 yards, to jump ahead 13-8 at the end of the first period.

Luna pounded in for another 1-yarder in the second before Jason Shy snagged a 4-yard touchdown pass from David Mitchell for Loraine to end the half.

Ira exploded in the third, scoring on a 25-yard Mike Hughes run, a Hughes-to-Luna connection that covered 10 yards and a toss from Hughes to Jim Gorman that went 17 yards to put IHS on top 32-19.

Loraine's last-quarter comeback featured a 15-yard scoring toss from Mitchell to Aunray Crawford, a 29-yard interception return by Mitchell and a 30-yard TD scamper by Garcia.

The win lifts Loraine to 7-3 on the year and 4-1 in district games. Ira finishes at 6-4 and 3-2.

Loraine's bi-district opponent will be District 5 champion Wellman. The game is set for 7:30 p.m. Friday in Grady.

Cardinals blast Trent in last game of season

HERMLEIGH — The Hermleigh Cardinals wound up their 1992 football season Friday with a 34-8 District 6 6-man victory over Trent in Cardinal Stadium.

Chris Velasco scored twice and Chris Roemisch hit Bobby Smith for a 22-yard score to lead the HHS charge

Hermleigh's defense dominated the Gorillas in the contest. Buddy Atkinson accounted for four quarterback sacks for the Cards, resulting in 40 yards in losses, and Jimmy Digby forced a first-quarter safety to open the scoring.

Trent ruined the shutout bid just before the half when Brett Sipe connected with teammate David Sanford for a 4-yard TD pass.

Velasco, who had 118 yards on the ground Friday , finished the campaign with 1,058 yards and 20 touchdowns.

The Cardinals, under first-year coach Mark Minor, posted a 4-6 season slate, 2-3 in district games.

Trent winds up the campaign at 1-9 and 1-4.

Dallas defense ready for revenge

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Silverdome redemption is at hand for the Dallas Cowboys defense, currently rated as the best in the NFL.

It was the NFL's worst last year in the Cowboys two appearances in the Silverdome. Now, Dallas has passed Philadelphia as the stingiest defenders in the league in a 7-1 run.

Detroit's 1991 run-and-shoot offense shot defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt's creation to shreds. It wasn't so bad in a 34-10 loss during the regular season because the defense gave up only two touchdowns. But the 38-6 playoff loss to the Lions was a disaster. The defense gave up 421 yards and five touchdowns.

"They embarrassed us, beat us bad," recalled defensive tackle Russell Maryland. "We have something to prove against Detroit. We have to prove we can play well in the Silverdome and we have to prove we can handle the run-and-shoot.

"People keep harping on it. We're ready to show what we can do."

What Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson did after the playoff game was vow to upgrade his secondary.

He drafted defensive backs Kevin Smith, Darren Woodson and Clayton Holmes and obtained Thomas Everett from the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"We wanted to upgrade the entire team talentwise but the last area we upgraded was the defensive backfield," Johnson said. "We knew we had to do it. We didn't have trouble just with Detroit. We had problems with Atlanta and Houston during the regular season. We knew we had made some changes. We feel we've done it."

The Cowboys worked long and hard against the run-and-shoot in training camp in several scrimmages with the Houston Oilers. They also played Houston twice in preseason.

The Dallas "nickel" or pass defense package has improved to the point where the Cowboys are first in the NFL in third down defense.

"I predicted in training camp that our biggest improvement this year would be on defense," Johnson said. "Now we've got the talent, an outstanding scheme and an outstanding coach. The biggest improvement on this team is the defense."

It's a no-star defense. None of the defensive Cowboys has made the Pro Bowl or been picked on an All-Pro team.

"We play together," said cornerback Issiac Holt. "We are 'the who?' defense. Nobody knows us for nobody."

Defensive tackle Tony Casillas said "the last time we played Detroit we weren't sharp at all. We owe them one. Just like we owed Philadelphia one last week."

Johnson is brimming with confidence this time around.

"We're better served to defend the run-and-shoot," Johnson said.

8th graders drop S'water

Snyder's eighth grade A team wound up a record-breaking year Thursday, beating arch-rival Sweetwater, 14-8, and setting its 1992 season record at 7-2.

"That's the most wins any team here has had in the 10 years I've been coaching here," said coach Roger Goodwin. "It's the best team I've had."

Snyder's L.S. McClain opened the scoring with a 15-yard TD run in the first quarter. McClain, who had scoring jaunts of eight and 87 yards in last week's 32-16 win over Lamesa, also eased over for the 2-point conversion against the Ponies.

Matt Fambro added a 15-yard touchdown run in the second.

Offensive standouts also included leading rusher Tywayne Rivers, who rolled for 80 yards Thursday.

Heath Porter, Tommy Morris and Patrick Cumbie were cited for outstanding efforts on the defensive side of the ball. Cumbie and McClain won the week's Big Hit Award.

Snyder's B team lost to Sweetwater, 12-0, in spite of what Goodwin called, "the best football game these guys have played all year."

After being beaten 40-0 in this season's first meeting with Sweetwater, Snyder's defense, led by defensive ends Gabriel Rios and Alfonso Delao, defensive tackle Freddie Rocha, linebacker Adrian Rodriguez and defensive backs Scott Sanders and Patrick Jordan, limited the Mustangs to just two TDs.

The B team wound up the year with a 4-3 record.

Beck paces 7th grade win

SWEETWATER — Snyder's 7th grade A team rolled for 324 rushing yards on its way to a 20-12 season-ending football win over Sweetwater Thursday.

The Tigers were led by fullback Kyle Beck's 180 yards and two touchdowns.

Tailback James Burks also topped the 100-yard mark, rumbling for 134 yards and a TD.

Quarterback Chris Riggins had 10 yards and a 2-point conversion in the contest.

Burks added an interception and a fumble recovery for the Tiger defense, and Chris West recovered a fumble.

Tiger offensive linemen John Border, Scott Lackey, Chris Sanchez, Chris West, Chris Fuentez and Eric Rodriguez were cited for outstanding play by Lambert.

Snyder's B team earned a 12-12 tie with the Mustangs Thursday when Mark Cave intercepted a fourth-quarter Sweetwater pass.

D.J. Garcia caught two TD passes in the contest from left-handed quarterback Chad Carter of Snyder.

The A squad winds up the year with a 6-3 record. The B team finishes at 4-2-1.

No individual statistics were available at press time Saturday.

In other action at the weekend tournament, WJCAC preseason favorite Howard College posted a 107-68 victory over Ft. Bliss, and host South Plains College dumped Panola JC, 96-77.

They return home to host the WTC-McDonald's Classic Thursday through Saturday at Scurry County Coliseum.

Season begins Nov. 20...

SHS cagers return to the gym

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

Snyder boys' basketball coach Bud Birks is fighting an uphill battle, even before the start of the 1992-93 cage season.

Birks lost his top six players from last season's Tiger squad, five to graduation and one moved away, and he, along with all the other District 2-4A coaches, must deal with the addition of powerful Plainview to their ranks.

Gone from last year's 18-13 squad are post players Hayward Clay and Barron Wesley, wings Eric West and Jeff Wortham and guard Jerry Don Tippens.

Birks hopes to fill the void with a trio of returning players and a core of JV move-ups.

Steven Bollinger, Anthony Alvarez and Tory Garza are the Tigers' three varsity cagers back from last season.

Bollinger checks in at 6-2 and will play wing and post for Birks.

"Steven is more of a wing than a post," Birks said, "but he'll have to play a little at the post for us this year. He's sort of a swing-man, between a wing and a post."

Alvarez is a 5-8 point guard and Garza, 6-2, is a wing player.

A pair of senior newcomers will also be counted on. Senior Barretta Collins, a two-way starter on the SHS football team, and Adrian Sneed, a 6-3 post-wing combination, can play inside or outside.

Birks also expects several football players, besides Collins, the grid season ends.

Among those are 6-5 senior post Chris Stansell, Jimmy Henry, a 6-5 junior post, Jim Pat Griffin, a wing at 6-2, and 6-2 junior post David Krenek.

Others already in the gym are 6-2 wing Jon Patrick, Tyson Cromeens, Cory Lelek, Cody Walker and Marcelino Aguirre.

"We've got a bunch of kids," Birks reported. "I would anticipate only 10 on the varsity. We have five seniors and a couple of others I'm pretty sure will make the varsity, so that only leaves three places.

"It's going to be pretty competitive for those last three or four spots."

Birks hopes to speed up Snyder's usual motion offense with some selected bursts.

"We'd like to try to run a little more, but the running game is a two-edged sword. If you don't have those monsters like we've had the last two seasons to get you the rebounds, it's hard to run.

"We're going to try to run, but we just can't take off and not block out. At times, depending on the situation, we will try to speed the game up a little bit."

The Tigers are noted for tenacious defense, so Birks won't move from a man-to-man base this year, but the defensive scheme will also include a little zone and some pressure.

"We've got a good bunch of kids," said the SHS coach. "We are a little quicker than we were last year, but we lack size and experience.

"We'll be young, no doubt, but I think this team will get after it. I think people will enjoy watching them play. Just be patient with us."

Birks, in his third year as head coach at Snyder High, agrees with most area experts when he picks Plainview as the loop favorite.

"They are already rated in the top 10 in the state," reported Birks. "Their coach told me, 'If we don't do well, it's my fault.' They're loaded with talent.

"They have size, shooting, you name it. I've never seen them play, but I've talked to coaches that have, and they say it's going to be awfully hard for any of us (District 2-4A teams) to beat them."

"Lamesa will be good, too. Everybody says every year that Lamesa can't be as good as the year before. And every year they prove us wrong.

"Plainview looks like they're a notch above everybody else, though. The only thing that could possibly slow them down, is if they go a long way in the football playoffs. Five of their top players are on the football team.

"But they have so much talent, they're so deep, they have to be the odds-on favorite to win district."

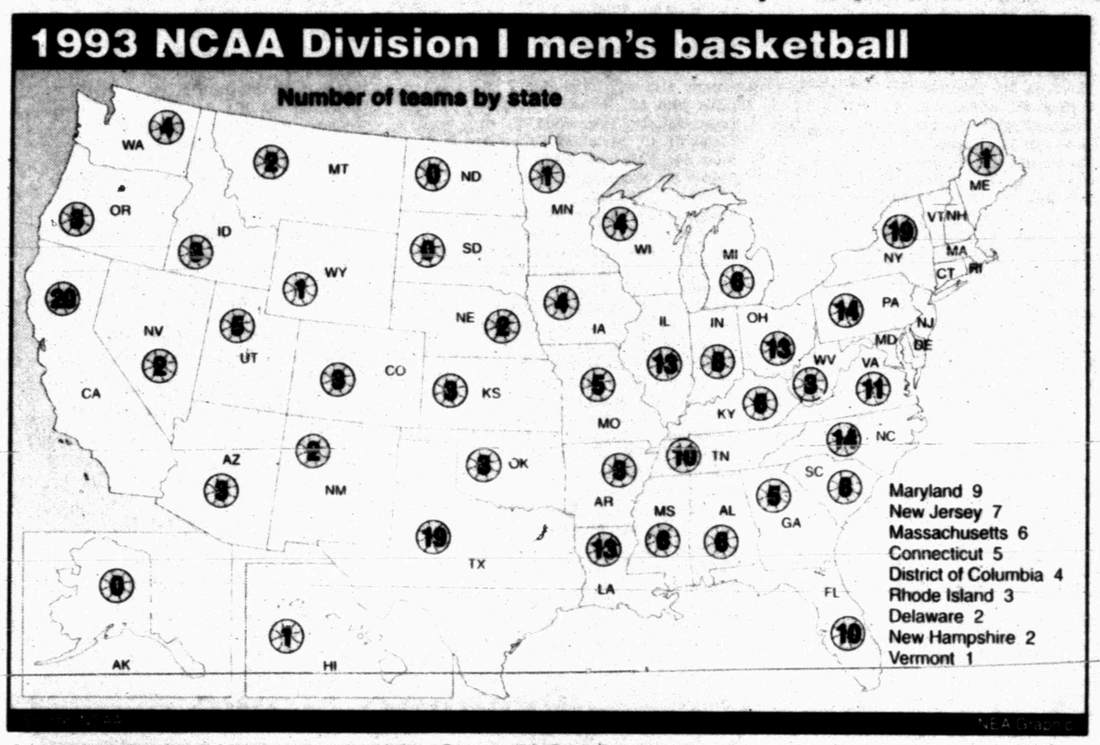

The regular season tips off Friday, Nov. 20, when Andrews visits SHS.

The District 2-4A schedule begins in Snyder when the Tigers host Frenship, Jan. 15.

A glance at the distribution across the United States of NCAA Division I men's basketball teams reveals a similar pattern to that of presidential electoral votes. The top three states — California, New York and Texas — coincide in order, and Pennsylvania is fifth on both lists. Alaska, North Dakota and South Dakota have no Division I basketball teams. Along with Montana, Wyoming, Vermont and the District of Columbia, they have the fewest electoral votes.

Stanford nabs bareback lead

LUBBOCK — Western Texas College's rodeo team continued their fall season dominance in roughstock events, placing two more bull riders and two more bareback riders in the top five of each event in Friday's second performance of the Texas Tech Intercollegiate Rodeo.

Slack was scheduled Saturday morning, with the short go, featuring the top 10 qualifiers in each event, slated for Saturday night.

WTC bareback riders Chris Stanford and Travis Whiteside bumped teammate Duane Evans from the top spot in the event standings Friday. Stanford posted a 73 for first place and Whiteside moved into second with his 65.

Evans' 62 from Thursday slipped from first to fourth following Friday's round.

Trey Griffin scored a 77 in Thursday's bull riding. He was able to maintain a share of the top spot, as Westerner Troy Thompson garnered his own 77 in Friday's section of the event.

Benji Fontenot slid to third position with his Thursday 70.

Other WTC riders in a position to make Saturday's finals include Griffin, whose 12.4 time in calf roping, was in fifth heading into Saturday's slack; Justin Peavey, who was in ninth following his 8.8 clocking in steer wrestling Friday; and team roping brothers Justin and Sid Morris, who were in fifth with a 10.0.

Western Texas' women were led Friday by Leslie Greer and Dusti Beaton in goat tying. Greer's 8.3 was good for fifth position with Saturday's slack remaining, and Beaton was in seventh with an 8.6.

Barrel racer Brandye Bitters posted a 14.44 for ninth place in the rodeo's second round Friday.

The Texas Tech rodeo is the last of the fall season for WTC.

WTC golfers wind up season at Sugar Tree

The Western Texas College golf team will compete in its last tournament of the fall season Sunday through Tuesday in the Shootout at Sugar Tree Invitational at Sugar Tree Country Club in Dennis.

Coach Milton Ham took a group of freshmen to play at last week's Texarkana Invitational in Arkansas. The Westerners shot a 351 on the first day of play, then improved 34 strokes to a 314 on Day 2 for a 36-hole 668.

Freshman Chris Rogers of Sweetwater led the WTC charge at Texarkana with his 82-73--155 in the rain and cold last week.

The Shootout at Sugar Tree is a 54-hole tournament. Teams will shoot practice rounds today, then will play a pair of 18-hole rounds on Monday then will wind up the tournament with a final 18 on Tuesday.

NBA roundup...

Johnson watches Lakers win

by The Associated Press

Magic Johnson watched from the stands while a couple of teammates who helped him win championships led the way for the Los Angeles Lakers.

Byron Scott scored 29 points, including the game-winner on a 15-foot jumper with 13 seconds left in overtime, and James Worthy had 24 as the Lakers beat the crosstown rival Clippers 114-112 on opening night in the NBA.

"The Lakers made the big shots," Clippers coach Larry Brown said. "Byron and Worthy played great."

The Clippers played the overtime without Danny Manning, who had 26 points before he fouled out in regulation. Ron Harper had 22 points.

In other NBA openers Friday night, it was Boston 113, Minnesota 92; New Jersey 114, Philadelphia 111; Orlando 110, Miami 100; New York 106, Atlanta 94; Chicago 101, Cleveland 96; Milwaukee 86, Detroit 81; Charlotte 126, Washington 119; Golden State 129, Utah 114; Seattle 111, Houston 94; and Sacramento 114, San Antonio 106.

Randy Pfund, a longtime assistant coach for the Lakers, was worn to a frazzle in his debut.

"Boy, I've been stealing money the last seven years if that's what it's going to be like," he said. "As a head coach, you've got to be in every play and be aware of everything out there on the floor."

Magic 110, Heat 100

Shaquille O'Neal, the top overall pick in the 1992 draft, was overshadowed by teammate Nick Anderson, the first draft choice in Orlando history, in the Magic's victory at home against Miami.

O'Neal had 12 points and 18 rebounds before fouling out, while Anderson scored a career-high 42 points. Anderson hit 17 of 26 shots from the field and scored 10 points in the first five minutes of the fourth period to help the Magic pull away from an 81-81 tie.

Dennis Scott added 27 points for Orlando, which held the Heat to 19 points in the fourth quarter. Willie Burton led Miami with 23.

Knicks 106, Hawks 94

New York won in Atlanta despite 30 points from Dominique Wilkins — including the 20,000th of his career — and 28 by Kevin Willis.

Wilkins, out since last Jan. 28 with a ruptured right Achilles' tendon, reached the milestone with his 25th point of the game, a running 12-footer from the baseline with 9:04 left in the game.

Patrick Ewing scored 22 points for New York, which never trailed in winning a season-opener for only the second time in the last eight years.

Bulls 101, Cavaliers 96

Scottie Pippen scored the first nine points of the fourth quarter and Michael Jordan scored 29 points as Chicago began defense of its two NBA titles by beating Cleveland at Richfield, Ohio.

Pippen had 22 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists for the Bulls, who ousted the Cavaliers in six games in the Eastern finals last season. Larry Nance led Cleveland with 24 points.

Cleveland entered the fourth quarter protecting a 77-76 lead, but the Cavaliers missed their first seven shots.

Kings 114, Spurs 106

Mitch Richmond scored 26 points at home for Sacramento as Garry St. Jean took coaching debut bragging rights over San Antonio's Jerry Tarkanian.

Rookie Walt Williams, who didn't sign a contract until Oct. 29, keyed a third-quarter rally that brought the Kings from a six-point deficit to a 70-65 lead with 11 straight points.

Spud Webb scored 23 points and Williams 15 for the Kings. Sean Elliott led the Spurs with 29 points, 24 in the second half.

Vinny Del Negro, who left the Kings two seasons ago to play in Italy, added 24 points for San Antonio.

Celtics 113, Timberwolves 92

Boston, which lost both games against Minnesota last season, opened the season with a victory at home behind 27 points by Reggie Lewis.

The Timberwolves were led by Chuck Person with 24 points.

SuperSonics 111, Rockets 94

Shawn Kemp had 29 points and 20 rebounds as Seattle beat Houston in the second regular-season opener played in Japan.

Behind 85-80 early in the fourth quarter, the SuperSonics pulled away with a 23-2 spurt and outscored the Rockets 36-15 in the final period.

Scrimmage date pushed back

Season-opening scrimmages against Big Spring for the Snyder Lady Tigers freshman, JV and varsity basketball teams have been moved back to Thursday, Nov. 12.

Games will begin at 5 p.m. in Big Spring.

The practice games were originally scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 10.

Tobacco industry legal troubles will continue in U.S.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The cigarette industry's legal troubles are far from over with the dismissal of a landmark liability case brought by a New Jersey lung-cancer victim nearly 10 years ago.

More than 60 cigarette liability lawsuits are pending in courts around the country, according to Richard Daynard, a law professor at Northeastern University in Boston and chairman of the Tobacco Products Liability Project.

"The number of cases is up significantly since June, when the Supreme Court decided the Cipollone case," said Daynard, whose organization encourages health-based lawsuits against tobacco companies.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in June in the case brought by the late Rose Cipollone that a 1965 federal law requiring warning labels on cigarette packages didn't shield the companies from all lawsuits based on state personal injury laws.

The 7-2 ruling also said smokers need to do more than prove that cigarette advertising and promotions tend to minimize the health hazards.

The case was sent back to federal court in New Jersey for retrial, but on Thursday a judge dismissed the lawsuit with the consent of the Cipollone family.

The family and their law firm have not disclosed the reasons for dropping the case. Daynard and other lawyers speculated that the firm withdrew because of the high cost of pursuing well-financed tobacco companies. In such lawsuits, firms are only paid if damages are awarded to their clients.

The facts in many of the other pending cases, Daynard said, are stronger than those in the Cipollone case.

Daynard said one stronger case is Haines vs. Liggett Group, brought by Susan Haines, daughter of Peter Rossi of Wayne, N.J.

"The Haines case is much clearer on the medical evidence," Daynard said.

He said the type of cancer contracted by Rossi, an ice cream company executive who died nine years ago after smoking up to four packs of cigarettes daily, is more clearly linked to smoking than that contracted by Cipollone, who died at age 58 in 1984.

Daynard also said that while Cipollone never seriously tried to kick the habit, Rossi did, "showing that there is an evidence of addiction."

A federal jury in 1988 ordered Liggett Group Inc. to pay Cipollone's husband, Antonio, $400,000. The jury absolved Philip Morris Inc. and Lorillard Inc., which made other brands of cigarettes she smoked.

A federal appeals court overturned the award in 1990 and ordered a new trial. The court also ruled that the 1965 warning-label law shielded the industry from claims over the adequacy of health warnings.

Under the June U.S. Supreme Court ruling, liability claims will be permitted under the theory that cigarette manufacturers were aware of the health hazards of smoking but conspired and lied about them.

The next liability case to go on trial probably will be in Illinois, Daynard said. Charles Keuper, a retired Army master sergeant in Cahokia, is suing the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Insurance squabble in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Auto insurers and the state's consumer counsel are at odds over implementing a plan offering discounts to drivers over age 50 and to good students.

Jerry Johns, president of Southwestern Insurance Information Service, said Friday that the Office of Public Insurance Counsel is depriving drivers of the cost-cutting plan by forcing it into a "burdensome hearing process."

But Amy Johnson, of the Office of Public Insurance Counsel, says "discounts for the few" could lead to "increases for the rest of us."

The proposal would allow discounts for accident-free drivers, for good students based on academic records, for students away at school and for drivers over 50.

Dr. Gott By Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband was recently hospitalized because of lung congestion, and his physician indicated that yellow nail syndrome was the culprit. Please explain.

DEAR READER: Yellow nail syndrome is an unusual condition marked by yellowish discoloration of one or more nails, associated with a variety of health problems, including AIDS, malignancies and certain lung diseases. Patients with the syndrome also have ankle swelling and fluid around the lungs caused by a deficiency of albumin in the blood. I believe that the nail abnormalities reflect (rather than cause) the malnutrition and poor health seen with many chronic illnesses.

Therefore, your husband's lung problem needs to be addressed directly; the yellow nails are incidental. Ask his doctor the nature of the lung disorder and what can be done about it.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Living With Chronic Lung Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from chronic pancreatitis and need some direction. Are there particular foods or vitamins I should stay away from, and is there any way to help my condition?

DEAR READER: This is a question you should direct to your doctor because I don't know the cause of your pancreatic inflammation or how far along you are in recovery. As a general rule, patients with acute pancreatitis are treated in hospital with no food, only intravenous nutrition.

Once released from hospital, such patients usually can eat normal, well-balanced diets. Beverages containing alcohol should be avoided indefinitely because they can re-inflame the pancreas.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What can you tell me about the use of vitamin B6 to treat carpal tunnel syndrome? Is it safe to use this vitamin over prolonged periods of time?

DEAR READER: Vitamin B6 (pyridoxine) is present in grains and vegetables. A deficiency causes weakness, irritability, insomnia, skin rash and anemia. The vitamin may prevent some kinds of kidney stones but is not useful for arthritis or carpal tunnel syndrome, which, in my experience, requires surgical release; carpal tunnel syndrome is caused by a mechanical constriction of a nerve in the wrist.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've read your column on aluminum and wonder if aluminum screen wire can adversely affect health. I'm about to re-screen a large porch and could use a different substance if you have reservations about the alumuinum.

DEAR READER: Aluminum objects in our environment do not pose a health threat. Thus, aluminum window screens and sashes are safe to use. The problem with the mineral stems from the POTENTIAL risks of aluminum-containing products that are ingested or applied to the skin.

Medical authorities have long recognized that the brains of patients with Alzheimer's disease contain high levels of aluminum. Nonetheless, no studies have conclusively shown whether the aluminum per se is the cause of the confusion and dementia seen in this neurological disorder — or whether some undiscovered enzymatic defect is the common cause of Alzheimer's disease and the aluminum abnormalities.

When confronted with the theory that aluminum causes Alzheimer's, most experts are quick to respond that there is no proof of a cause and effect. Also, it's not completely clear if the aluminum deposits come from food, medicines or anti-perspirants. Is the excess brain-aluminum the result of poor excretion by the kidneys or, possibly, individual differences in the rate each of us absorbs aluminum through the intestinal wall?

Despite the lack of clear-cut data, many consumers are choosing to avoid aluminum when possible, by changing to stainless-steel cookware, avoiding medicines (such as antacids) that contain aluminum, and refusing to purchase personal products that have aluminum-hydroxide as an ingredient.

Predictably, all this furor has caused the gigantic aluminum industry to pooh-pooh such behavior as overly cautious to the point of paranoia. I wonder if corporate pressure was one reason why a recent Australian study received no publicity in the American media. Here are the results, published in The Medical Journal of Australia, May 4, 1992. You decide if this information is of general interest to the American public.

Concerned that aluminum in canned beverages might be an unsuspected source of dietary aluminum, Dr. John Dugan and his colleagues at John Hunter Hospital (New Lambton Heights, Australia) tested the aluminum content of more than 100 samples of beverages, in cans and bottles, purchased commercially. More than 50 different brands of soft drink and beer were analyzed. The results were disturbing, to say the least.

The amount of aluminum in cola and non-cola (from cans) was more than 25 times that of tapwater and three to five times higher than the same brands in bottles. The differences between beers was statistically insignificant.

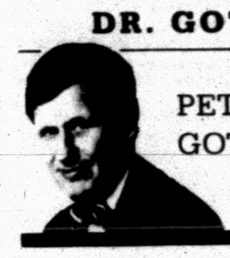

The researchers concluded that the acid content of soft drinks packaged in aluminum cans probably affected the lacquer coating inside the cans, leading to pitting of the protective layer and eventual leaking of aluminum into the beverage. The authors pointed out that the average daily aluminum intake among Western Europeans is less than 10 milligrams a day. Soft drinks from aluminum cans contain 4 milligrams, adding a considerable amount to the dietary intake. Thus, "if Alzheimer's disease is related to excessive intake of aluminum, then such drinks may pose a health hazard."

Do you believe that this news was greeted with enthusiasm in many board rooms?

Whether or not you'll continue to choose soda in cans is up to you. Whether or not you agree with the Australian findings, they are certainly thought-provoking.

Suspect charged in 1981 kidnapping, death of girl

BRECKENRIDGE, Texas (AP) — A man who confessed to the 1981 kidnapping and killing of a 3-year-old girl has been charged with capital murder.

Manuel Fernandez, 36, walked into the Fort Worth police station in June and said he had kidnapped and killed Ryan Nicole Burton, who vanished from her crib in 1981. Her body was discovered June 14, 1984, near the Breckenridge Country Club.

Fernandez also told police he killed a Fort Worth convenience store clerk 10 years ago. He was charged in June with capital murder in connection with the Nov. 28, 1982, Fort Worth slaying.

On Friday, Fernandez was transferred from Fort Worth to the Stephens County Jail. Bond had not been set late Friday.

District Attorney John Neal assembled a grand jury Friday to investigate the case. He said that may take two months to complete. Neal said he has 90 days to prosecute the case.

Fernandez was recently returned to the Tarrant County Jail after spending 30 days in the Vernon State Hospital. Tarrant County Assistant District Attorney Mike Parrish said Fernandez was ruled incompetent to stand trial on the Fort Worth murder charge. He was placed in the Vernon facility for 30 days and then was ruled competent for trial, Parrish said.

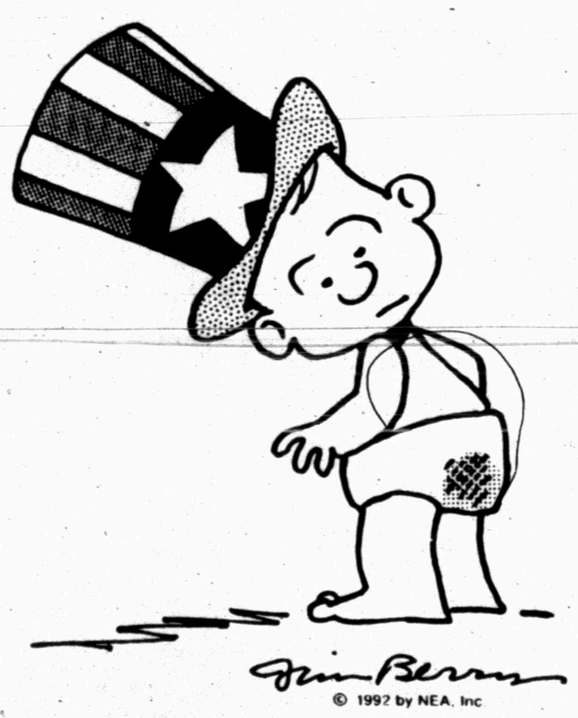

Fernandez has not been indicted in the Fort Worth case. Neal said Fernandez will remain in custody in Stephens County unless an indictment is returned against him in Fort Worth before the grand jury here completes its investigation.

Fernandez, who told police he was born in Breckenridge and grew up in Fort Worth, was working for an oil well service company in Breckenridge at the time of Ryan's disappearance, Neal said. Fernandez's sister lived across the street from the Burtons, but the sister never allowed him to stay there, Neal said.

Ryan Burton was kidnapped from her home in Breckenridge while her young baby sitter and her brother were asleep in different parts of the house. Her parents were away at a baseball game in Arlington. The Sept. 6, 1981, abduction prompted a nationwide search for the girl.

Her skeleton was found in 1984 in a pasture at the edge of Breckenridge about 21/2 miles south of the Burton house.

Journey to Eternity (28)...

FIRST CENTURY CONVERTS

By Homer Anderson

Sometime after Paul's conversion, he met Lydia in the city of Philippi. After God opened her heart and she was baptized, she invited Paul and his companions to make her home in that Roman colony in Macedonia (Acts 16:14-15).

As in so many cases, the preaching of the Gospel created a disturbance in Philippi. Paul and Silas were beaten and fastened in stocks in the dungeon of the prison. After an earthquake had loosed the prisoners, the jailer asked Paul and Silas the question that has been repeated thousands of times since that dark night, "What must I do to be saved?" (Acts 16:30). Paul's answer was, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved..." (Acts 16:31). The jailer showed repentance by taking "them the same hour of the night and washed their stripes and was baptized, he and all his, straightway" (Acts 16:33).

Thank you all for your kind expressions of sympathy in the loss of our beloved husband and father James C. Skelton.

The food was delicious, the flowers beautiful. Your prayers helped us through our time of grief, and will sustain us in the days to come, until time brings us peace. Our anchor in this time of grief is the knowledge that he is with our lord, in a better place, without pain and in a whole body. God bless you all.

Thank You

It is impossible to write each of you, so we take this means of sending our love and appreciation to each of you. Most of us love the city or town in which we live but we have never seen such outpouring of love and concern as you have shown to our daughter, Becky Johnson, and three precious grandchildren. You were each very dear to Eddie. I am sure of this by the floral tributes, food, visits, phone calls and other ways. Eddie was the son we didn't have. We all suffered a great loss.

May God bless and take care of you.

Some advising Bush to pardon defendants in Iran-Contra case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some senior Republicans and White House aides say President Bush should pardon former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and other Iran-Contra defendants, according to a report published Saturday.

No formal recommendation has been made to the president, but the idea has been discussed informally by some of his aides, The Washington Post said, quoting unidentified GOP and White House sources.

The New York Times, however, reported Saturday that the matter had not gone beyond discussions at middle levels in the administration.

The Times quoted an unidentified senior White House official as saying that the issue had not reached the president's desk and was not likely to be considered soon.

Questioned by The Associated Press, Weinberger lawyer Robert Bennett refused to comment on whether he has talked to White House officials about the possibility of a presidential pardon.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he had heard no discussion of a pardon, the Post said.

On Oct. 30, four days before the presidential election, Weinberger was charged in a new grand jury indictment that contradicted Bush's claim that he never knew that arms were being traded for hostages in the Iran-Contra affair or that two Cabinet members were opposed to the deal.

The indictment was based on Weinberger's handwritten notes of a Jan. 7, 1986, meeting in which President Reagan, then-Vice President Bush, Cabinet members and presidential aides discussed a straight swap of arms for American hostages held in Lebanon.

Bush is said to believe that Weinberger is "an innocent victim of (Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence) Walsh's drive to get (Bush) and that it is a travesty overall," the Post quoted an unidentified associate of the president as saying.

Police make three arrests

Snyder police made three arrests and responded to several disturbances Friday and early Saturday.

An offense report for aggravated assault was filed following an investigation at 1:47 a.m. Saturday. According to police, three men entered a residence in the 2600 block of Avenue G and assaulted two other men. One of the victims was treated for a head laceration at Cogdell Memorial Hospital emergency room and released.

No arrests have been made and the case is still under investigation.

Police arrested a 20-year-old man at 1:34 a.m. Saturday in the 1800 block of 37th Street for driving while intoxicated.

Friday, police arrested a 52-year-old man at 8:56 p.m. in the 900 block of 25th Street for public intoxication.

Officers also arrested a 32-year-old man at 10:11 p.m. Friday in the 3500 block of Avenue M on a blue warrant.

Police were called to a disturbance at Snyder Recreation Center at 8:33 p.m. Friday. They also responded to a domestic disturbance in the 700 block of Avenue R at 11:37 p.m. No arrest were made. An offense report for family violence was filed in response to the domestic dispute.

Red Cross convoy said cancelled

Herzegovina (AP) — A Serb commander threatened to destroy the capital Saturday unless officials allow the departure of thousands of refugees, news reports and Bosnian officials said. Serbs denied the claims.

Government radio said the ultimatum was delivered by Col. Komnen Zarkovic, who reportedly threatened to begin destroying Sarajevo systematically, beginning at 2 p.m, if the busloads of refugees had not left for Belgrade by then.

But the deadline passed without incident, and the streets of Sarajevo were filled with shoppers, despite the distant occasional sounds of mortar and small-arms fire.

Negotiators for the presidency had told Zarkovic the convoys could depart within a couple of days, but not Saturday, the radio said.

Kemal Muftic, a spokesman for the Muslim-led Bosnian government, said the reports of the ultimatum were true.

But Bosnian Serb sources telephoned by The Associated Press at their headquarters in Pale, east of Sarajevo, denied the report. Momcilo Krajisnik, the president of the Bosnian Serb Parliament, said an official denial would be issued later in the day.

Hundreds of Bosnians were stranded at the last minute Friday when military leaders canceled Red Cross evacuation convoys because of worries about losing fighters for Sarajevo's defense.

About 10 percent of the 6,300 evacuees, who were from all ethnic groups, were men. Some of the men were between 18 and 60 years old, an age group required to stay in Sarajevo to be available for military service if needed.

Divided Europeans rule out quick response to sanctions

LONDON (AP) — The European Community will resume talks with the United States immediately to head off U.S. plans to impose punitive tariffs on $300 million worth of French wines and other exports, a British official said Saturday.

Britain's agriculture secretary, John Gummer, said the two sides were "within a tiny hair's breadth" of an agreement.

But U.S. Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan told the BBC there were still major differences.

Dominique Strauss-Kahn, France's trade minister, said Friday his government would not act for a month, but could demand retaliatory measures if the United States imposes the tariffs.

France claimed Saturday that at least three other EC nations — Ireland, Belgium and Spain — would support trade sanctions against the United States.

"Either we'll convince the Americans not to apply their measures, or we won't. ... If we don't, the Community will have to react," Strauss-Kahn told reporters in Paris.

He indicated that Germany and Britain stood against retaliating against the U.S., fearing a global trade war that could cripple recession-bound economies.

Madigan insisted that France would have to give a little. "I must have an honorable deal, a responsible deal and a deal that is going to be perceived as being fair to the entire world, and we are not anywhere near that," he said.

Washington announced Thursday that it would impose 200 percent tariffs on some European products — mainly French white wine — within 30 days if the EC refused to slash payments to farmers. Trade talks on the farm subsidy dispute broke down Tuesday in Chicago.

France, Europe's biggest farm producer, has opposed efforts to slash agriculture payments as deeply as demanded by the United States. Its farmers have protested any cuts, and the government is worried about the farm vote in legislative elections next March.

Britain, Germany, the Netherlands and others have pleaded with the French for a compromise.

"We have to do everything to avoid a trade war," Jacques Delors, the president of the 12-nation community's executive commission, said Friday as EC trade ministers began two days of talks at a country manor north of London.

But some question the EC president's commitment to resolving the dispute. Ray MacSharry, the EC's agriculture chief, stepped down this week as negotiator in the farm subsidy talks, complaining that Delors has interfered and held up a settlement with Washington.

During Friday's workshop, Williamson discussed a presentation to be made by TCA Cable representative Larson Lloyd, who will propose a five percent, or 90-cent per month, increase in base cable rates for Snyder Cablevision customers.

According to Williamson, the council has no control over regulations concerning cable television rates. He said that recently passed federal regulations will soon override current regulations.

Williamson suggested that the council take no action on the matter, but should speak against any type of rate increase.

Other agenda items discussed Friday included a request from Christie Devers for additional water meters on land outside the city limits north of Snyder on Clairmont Highway.

According to city officials, water lines were installed in the area before an ordinance was passed prohibiting the city from providing water to residents outside the city limits.

According to council members, the request is not allowed by city ordinance unless the land is annexed into the city. The council has recently denied similar requests.

Council members were informed of upcoming meetings concerning the franchise agreement with Southwestern Bell Telephone.

A meeting is scheduled for Nov. 17 at 6:30 p.m. to discuss the franchise agreement and decide if anything about the agreement needs to be changed. In a Nov. 23 meeting, city officials will meet with representatives of Southwestern Bell to discuss terms of the agreement, which expires Jan. 1.

Tuesday, the council will hear a report from Paul Dowling of Petro-Global Consultants, Inc. concerning clean-up efforts at the city-owned service station at 37th Street and College Avenue, and presentation of preliminary blueprints for the expansion of Central Fire Station.

Newly appointed council member Dayton Robertson is to be sworn in at the beginning of Tuesday's meeting.

The council will consider replacements for Gary Sisson, who recently resigned from the board of adjustment, and Maurice Scott, who has resigned from the board of electrical examiners.

Present at the workshop session were Williamson and council members Jack Denman, Vernest Tippens, Robertson, Mike Post and J.D. Smith. Also present were City Manager John Gayle, legal advisor Ernie Armstrong, House and Director of Finance Jeanne Johnson. Not present was Councilman Mike Thornton.

Pro-Communists demonstrate on 75th anniversary of 1917 revolution

MOSCOW (AP) — Tens of thousands of Russians marched and waved the banners of monarchism and Communism Saturday, turning the 75th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution into a day of protest against President Boris Yeltsin.

Pro-Communist demonstrators gathered around a huge bronze statue of Vladimir Lenin in central Moscow's October Square to mark Revolution Day, the most sacred holiday under the old Soviet regime.

Waving both red Communist flags and the Russian imperial flag, they marched across the Moscow River to Manezh Square outside the Kremlin.

About 200 police blocked the entrance to nearby Red Square, where Revolution Day was traditionally celebrated with displays of military hardware and parades of specially selected workers.

Police and Russian media put the number of protesters in Manezh Square at 20,000. But the crowd appeared to number thousands more during the march, stretching for blocks.

Red Square was closed last month for repairs to its badly worn cobblestones. Diehard Communists say the closure was a deliberate attempt to disrupt their annual march.

"I stood on Red Square in 1941," said 80-year-old Boris Padoyev, marching with the pro-Communists.

"The Germans were all around us, but still we marched. But Saturday they're not letting us in. What kind of democracy is this?" he asked.

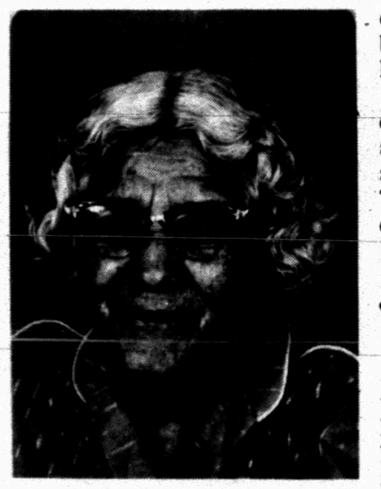

An elderly woman identified only as Karpenko stood amid the marchers and shouted: "My father was killed by Stalin, but I still love my Russia. That's more than Yeltsin does."

Yeltsin is under increasing attack by hard-liners who oppose his economic reforms and say they have created unnecessary hardships.

Hard-line lawmakers have vowed to try to force the government's resignation, slow Yeltsin's economic reforms and curb his special decree-making powers when the next session of parliament opens Dec. 1.

Several blocks away from the pro-Communist rally, about 200 people held a memorial service honoring the victims of Soviet repression. They gathered in front of the Russian Security Ministry in Lubyanka Square, the former headquarters of the secret police founded by the Bolsheviks.

Hardliners boycott German anti-racism rally

BERLIN (AP) — Two boys barely into their teens are arrested for wrecking 90 Jewish graves. Two others beat and partially blind an African man. More kids assault a girl they mistake for a foreigner.

This was 24 hours in Germany, and such routine attacks represent the nation's principal social problem as it prepares for a nationwide rally for tolerance this Sunday in Berlin.

But the event itself has divided Chancellor Helmut Kohl's political alliance and is being boycotted by hard-liners who call it a pathetic gesture that fails to deal with the real problem: too many foreign refugees.

Max Streibl, the powerful archconservative governor of Bavaria, derided the rally Friday as "a funeral march for a helpless democracy."

Streibl is a member of the Christian Social Union, the Bavarian ally of Kohl's Christian Democrats.

At a CSU meeting Friday, party leader and Kohl's own finance minister, Theo Waigel, backed Streibl's rally boycott. Waigel demanded instead that action be taken on toughening Germany's liberal asylum law, which he said has lured 70 percent of Europe's refugees to Germany.

Kohl, President Richard von Weizsaecker and numerous other influential Germans are to attend the rally. More than 80,000 people are expected for a march leading to east Berlin's Lustgarten, a plaza where East German Communists once held rallies.

The event falls one day before the 54th anniversary of Kristallnacht, or "Crystal Night," the Jewish pogrom on Nov. 9, 1938, that ushered in the Holocaust and left German streets littered with the shattered glass and crystal of Jewish shops.

The anniversary in recent years has taken on deeper meaning because it falls on the day East Germany's Communists opened the Berlin Wall on Nov. 9, 1989, leading the way to German unity and a corresponding surge in right-wing violence.

Sunday's rally is the government's almost desperate attempt to do something about the more than 1,600 acts of violence against foreigners this year. Most of the attacks have been by militaristic neo-Nazis, but also by regular young people.

Eleven people have died, hundreds have been hurt and scores of refugee homes have been burned.

The rally also is meant as a message to the rest of the world increasingly repulsed by the sort of attacks that evoke the Hitler era.

But the boycott by the Christian Social Union already has tarnished the event. The influential Roman Catholic bishop of Trier criticized the rally boycott by the predominately Catholic Bavarian party.

"I find that not good under the circumstances, which really affect the fundamentals of our democracy," said the Rev. Hermann Josef Spital in an interview on Saarland state radio.

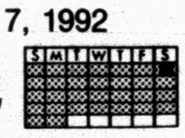

Alluding to the street violence that presaged Hitler's rise, he said: "If foreigner hatred takes hold here, then the hatred will go against not only the foreigners but over time against our own state."

Kohl and his allies, though they don't agree on the validity of the rally, want to toughen the nation's liberal asylum law. The opposi-

Fallout continues in Food Lion case

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Stock in Food Lion Inc. fell sharply Friday but the grocery store chain said it saw no difference in its sales after an ABC News report accused the company of selling spoiled meat and fish.

Food Lion class A stock fell $1 to $8.25 and class B shares dropped $1.37 1/2 to $8.62 1/2 following the airing of the 25-minute segment Thursday night on the ABC program "PrimeTime Live."

"We've been monitoring our store sales and they appear to be doing fine," Food Lion spokesman Mike Mozingo said from the company's Salisbury, N.C., headquarters. "Our stock is down, but we expected that to happen and we expect it to go back up to its previous level."

Mozingo said Food Lion — considered the fastest growing supermarket chain in the country — was taking the matter very seriously.

"When you get on an airplane you place your trust in the pilot," he said. "It's just the same when you shop for groceries."

The report included film that ABC said was shot with a camera smuggled into a Food Lion store by a producer who got a job as a meat wrapper.

Employees were filmed in the meat department rewrapping old meat, poultry, ham and fish past the "sell-by" dates. One former employee interviewed on the show told of soaking spoiled meat and fish in bleach to remove the stench so the food would sell.

Food Lion said in a news release it will review all allegations. But company president Tom Smith said, "It was pretty obvious that a lot of that was faked."

Rena Terracuso, a spokeswoman for "PrimeTime" in New York City, said Friday, "The story speaks for itself."

At the end of the segment, ABC News correspondent Diane Sawyer told viewers: "We want to make it clear that 'PrimeTime' staged nothing ... that what you saw on hidden camera is exactly as it happened."

Food Lion had sought unsuccessfully to prevent the segment from being aired. But a federal judge in Greensboro on Friday granted the company access to unedited footage obtained by ABC's hidden camera.

The ruling by U.S. Magistrate P. Trevor Sharp also means Food Lion can question producer Lynne Litt, the undercover reporter who went to work for Food Lion.

ABC played down the ruling, claiming it got what it wanted when the courts refused to grant discovery, in which attorneys share information, to Food Lion attorneys until after the report was aired Thursday night.

"One of our principal concerns was that we couldn't go ahead with discovery pre-broadcast," said ABC attorney Hugh Stevens.

Smith said most of the negative comments came from "employees who had an ax to grind against Food Lion" who were prompted by the United Food and Commercial Workers Union. He called the workers who were interviewed "stooges" for the union.

Some of the documents that appeared in the telecast were forged, Smith charged.

Food Lion, which has nearly 1,000 stores in 14 states, consistently has received high sanitation grades from regulators, something that would be unlikely if the allegations were true, Smith said.

Some workers who were supposedly taped without their knowledge appeared to be breaking Food Lion rules deliberately.

Redistricting to be examined

HOUSTON (AP) — The ouster of a black incumbent judge has sparked renewed calls for single-member voting districts.

Democrat John Kyles, who was appointed to the 208th District Court bench, was unseated by Republican Denise Collins, who is white, following the delayed count of more than 42,000 write-in ballots Thursday.

On election night, Kyles held a 4,092-vote margin in the race, but that was wiped out Thursday by the delayed ballots, which gave Collins a 19,547-vote lead.

Judges are elected county-wide in urban counties in Texas. The system is being challenged by a lawsuit, pending in the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

The suit claims such at-large elections unconstitutionally dilute minority voting strength.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled last year that the Voting Rights Act, designed to empower minority voters, applies to judicial elections.

Fed judge refuses to identify woman who is suing Magic

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — A federal judge has refused to identify a woman who claims Magic Johnson infected her with the AIDS virus, saying the woman's right to privacy is more important than the public's right to know her name.

Johnson declined to answer questions about the lawsuit Friday at the Los Angeles Lakers' season opener against the Clippers in Los Angeles. But he added, "You know people are going to come out when there's money involved."

The woman sued Oct. 30 in federal court, claiming Johnson gave her the human immunodeficiency virus when they had sex in June 1990.

U.S. District Judge Richard Enslen said Friday the privacy rights of the woman and her 4-year-old daughter outweighed the public's right to know who she is.

"Undoubtedly, revealing plaintiff's identity would cause them much humiliation and embarrassment, particularly the 4-year-old child," Enslen said.

The woman's attorney, Theodore Swift, argued the woman needed to be protected from "the surging and frantic press" who would pursue details of her private life if her name were revealed.

Swift had initially asked that Johnson's name be kept secret too, but Enslen said that was unnecessary since his attorney admitted Johnson is the defendant.

The Lansing woman did not appear in court Friday, but in a written statement read to the judge, she begged for secrecy.

"Living with HIV is enough. I have been victimized once. Please do not allow me to be victimized again," she wrote.

Attorneys for The Detroit News, the Detroit Free Press, the Grand Rapids Press and the Kalamazoo Gazette all said the name of the woman should be made public.

Leonard Niehoff, representing the News, said keeping the woman's name secret would be a sham because the press is soon likely to learn her name on its own now that Johnson has been identified.

Enslen didn't bar the media from reporting her name if they learn it. Niehoff said an appeal was unlikely.

Johnson said Thursday through his lawyers that he had sex with the woman. But he said he doesn't know whether he got the virus from her, she got it from him, or neither.

The woman's daughter and her ex-husband, the girl's father, have tested negative for the AIDS virus.

Johnson's lawyer, Howard L. Weitzman, said Thursday the woman's lawyers were seeking "a great deal of money." No attorney representing Johnson attended Friday's hearing.

Johnson, a Lansing native, retired last year from the Los Angeles Lakers after testing positive for HIV. He played on the U.S. Olympic team that won the gold medal in basketball in Barcelona last summer.

In September, Johnson said he would rejoin the Lakers. But he retired a second time Monday, citing other players' fears they might contract the AIDS virus from him if he were injured during play.

After his first retirement, Johnson joined the President's Commission on AIDS, but quit in September, saying the Bush administration did not support the panel's work.

He said Friday he had spoken to President-elect Clinton about a month ago regarding a return to the commission.

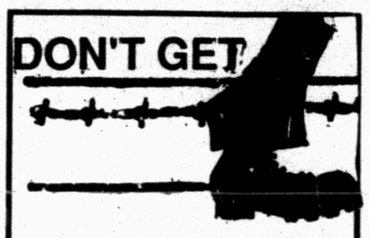

"He asked me if he was elected, would I come back," Johnson said. "I told him as long as he met certain criteria I have, we on the commission have, I would."

England's Charles I suffered his final defeat at the hands of Oliver Cromwell's army at the 1645 Battle of Naseby.

The Stars and Stripes officially was adopted as the United States flag in 1777.

Hawaii became a territory of the United States in 1900.

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

Ellen Rumpff can "speak" two languages.

Besides English, the language she grew up with, she also learned sign language in the early 1970s. That makes her a valuable asset to the Snyder Independent School District.

Sign language is just what its name suggests. Most words have their own sign. Words can also be spelled out letter by letter — that's called finger spelling. Facial expressions and body language also help convey meaning in sign language.

This school year marks Ellen's tenth interpreting for deaf or hearing impaired children who attend local schools. She has worked part-time at the junior high and West Elementary.

At present, she is the only sign language interpreter for the Snyder school system. Two years ago, she also home-schooled a Hermleigh student through a co-op program.

The 1992-1993 school year marks her fourth year as a full-time instructor. She currently works with two hearing impaired second graders at Stanfield. One is totally deaf and relies on sign language exclusively; but the other is partially deaf and can lip read also.

Since both her students are in Sherry Patterson's class, Ellen spends the entire day in class interpreting the daily lessons, assignments and tests.

"I sign whatever the teacher is saying. Sometimes, I have to go into more explanation. It's a roundabout way to tutor," Ellen said.

She signs questions on tests, but the students have to come up with the answer. "I can't prod them," she added.

She also accompanies the class on fields trips to such sites as the zoo in Abilene. She is available to help answer questions the hearing impaired students may have.

Every student in the class has a sign which makes it easier for the two children to identify and communicate with their classmates, Ellen said.

When interpreting, Ellen said she keeps in mind that signing is the students' first language and English is their second.

At the start of the current school year, Ellen also attended physical education classes until the students and instructor were comfortable with each other. This was necessary because hearing impaired children have to learn how to function in a hearing world.

During class, while most students are listening attentively to heir teacher, Ellen's students keep their eyes on her because in sign language "a movement takes the place of a noise which the students don't hear."

Since signing can be distracting to the other students in the class, Ellen said they are instructed to listen to and look at their teacher and not to look at Ellen or pay attention to what she is doing.

Ellen said that before the school year began, she and Mrs. Patterson had some frank discussions about what it would be like to have an interpreter in class. That helped everyone to make a smooth adjustment when school started.

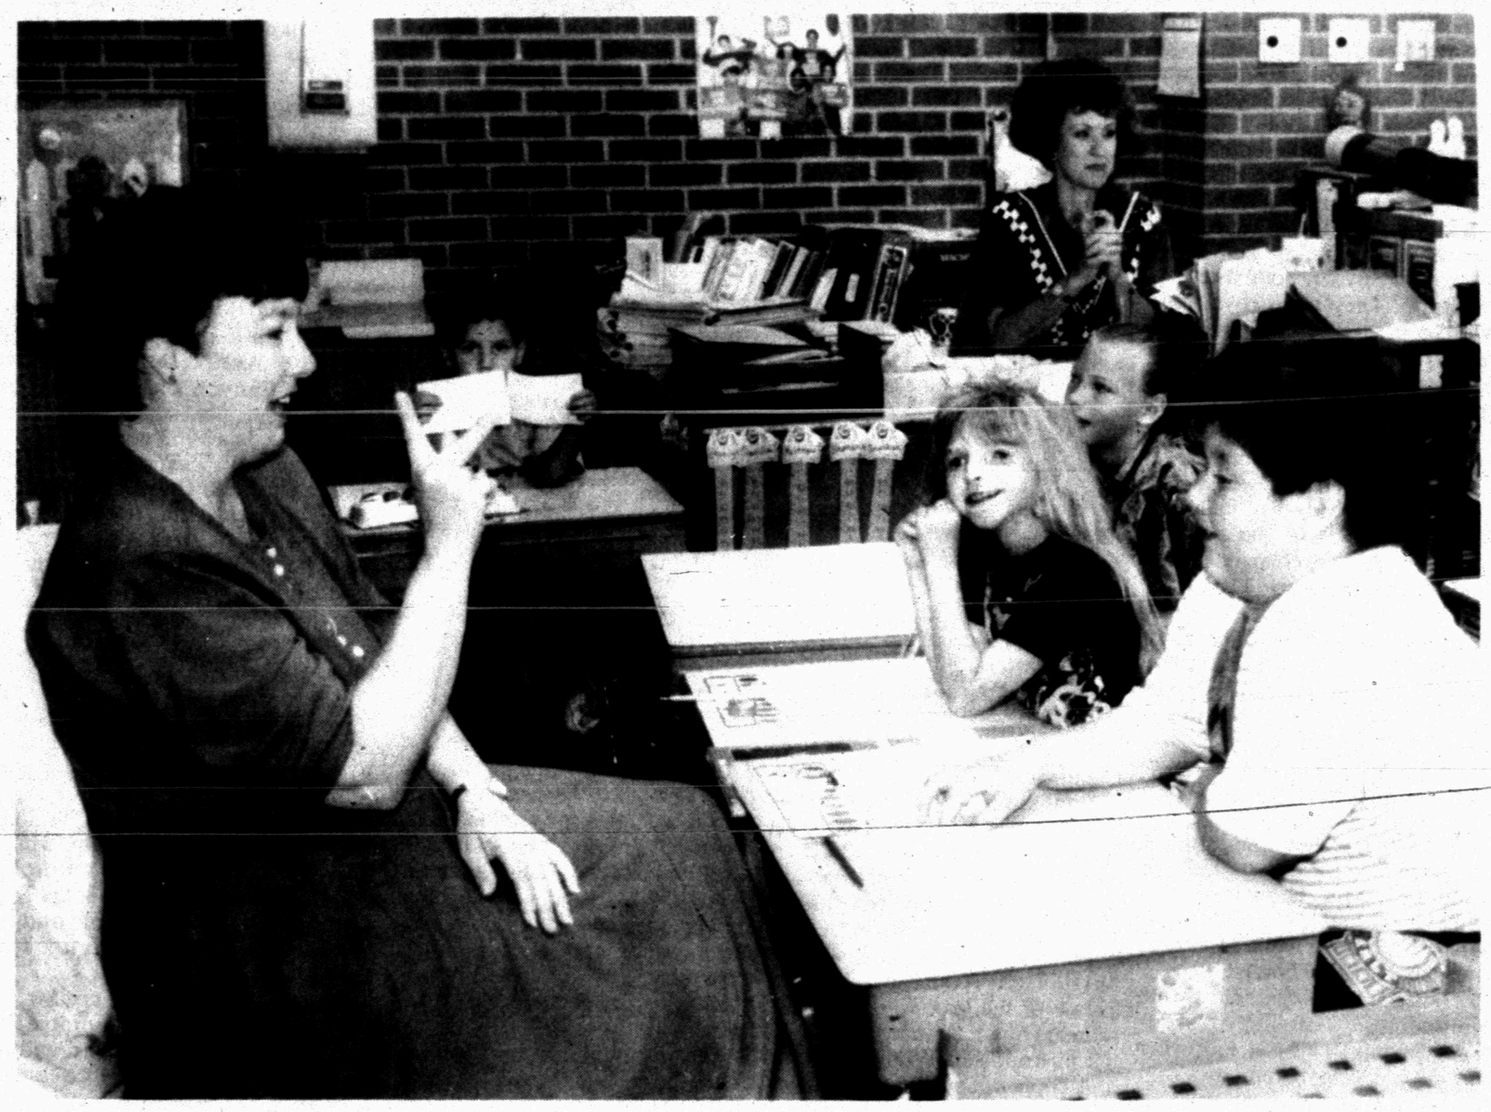

When Ellen isn't working directly with her students, she is usually busy looking through books and magazines for pictures to use during class.

Signing at Snyder Junior High School — especially in the life science class — was difficult because Ellen had to make up a sign for each scientific word or name. The hearing impaired student and the teacher helped create the appropriate signs.

While she loves her work very much — in spite of the occasional frustration — she said she has no desire to become a deaf education teacher.

Ellen said people don't always realize that deaf children are very

In double ring ceremony...

Vows promised in Church of Christ

The marriage of Wanda Ruth Hudgins of Snyder and James Earl (Jim) Crownover of Big Spring, formerly of Paducah, on Aug. 29 at 2 p.m. at the East Side Church of Christ, was the beautiful beginning of a new chapter in their love story. The ceremony was performed by Dean Morgan of Amarillo, a longtime friend of the bride and groom.

The church was decorated with small trees and potted plants.

Two registration tables in the front foyer were covered with royal blue cloths. They were made by Angelea Carey, overlayed with white Nottingham lace cloths purchased by the bride while an exchange teacher in England in 1975-76.

One table, attended by Barbara Hudgins of Midwest City, Okla., and Pat Hudgins of Hermleigh, sisters-in-law of the bride, had a Lenox china Indian wedding vase, a gift to the couple from Rosalie McGlaun of Snyder. It had been a gift to her and her late husband, Alfred, on their 50th wedding anniversary.

The second registration table displayed a framed picture of I Corinthians 13:7-8, a gift to the bride from the groom. It was attended by Phyllis Westbrook of Claude and Patti Turnbow of Carrollton, sisters of the groom.

Pens on the tables were white with royal blue and white flowers and white lace hearts, provided by Beverly Morgan of Amarillo. A bulletin board behind the registration tables with drawings of a bride and groom with the words "Wanda and Jim" was prepared by Barbara Sojourner of Snyder.

Beginning the ceremony, the mother of the bride was escorted in by her youngest grandson, Josh Hudgins of Hermleigh. The mother of the groom was escorted in by her husband. The brothers and sisters of the bride and groom, with their families, followed and were seated with the mothers.

Tom Holcomb, minister of East Side Church of Christ, welcomed those present and read a poem, God's Plan For Your Mate, which the couple believes is a description of their lives being in God's control. Congregational singing of How Great Thou Art, lead by Terry Bowden of Snyder, followed. Ralph Trevey of Snyder then sang a solo, What a Difference You Have Made in My Life. Ken Spoor of Snyder led the congregation in God Works in a Mysterious Way. Jeanne McCormick Kitchersid of Farmers Branch sang Heirlooms. Monte West of Snyder lead the congregation in My God and I. Ralph Trevey sang The Twelfth of Never.

The wedding party entered when the Lyon Singers, consisting of Bill and Sue Lyon, Ken and Kathy Spoor, Terry and Paula Bowden, and Peggy Martin, sang Whether Thou Goest.

The bride, escorted down the aisle by longtime friend Arvis Carey, wore a white eyelet, embroidered two-piece, tea length dress made by her sister, Nell Henry of Hermleigh. She carried a bouquet of five white roses, baby's breath and greenery tied with royal blue and white ribbons.

In keeping with tradition, for something old the bride carried two pennies dated in the years of their births; something new was her wedding attire; something borrowed was a diamond and gold, rose necklace belonging to her mother; and something blue was her garter.

Matrons of honor were Nell Henry of Hermleigh and Mary Carlton of Snyder, both sisters of the bride. They wore royal blue two-piece, tea length dresses and carried a bouquet of daisies, bluebonnets, baby's breath and greenery, tied with royal blue ribbon.

The groom was attired in a navy suit with a whte rose boutonniere.

Best men were R.D. Lewis of Gail and Loyd Mayes of Paducah, longtime friends of the groom.

The couple exchanged rings made by James Avery. They have two sets of three interlocking circles, one set signifying the Holy Trinity, the other set signifying the bride's and groom's lives with God at the center. Pattee crosses, between the circles, are a reminder of Christ's love and the forgiveness of sins as He died on the cross for them.

As the newly wed couple exited the church, they paused and the bride gave Mrs. Crownover one white rose, and the groom gave Mrs. Hudgins one white rose, both from the bride's bouquet.

The reception was held in the multipurpose building of East Side Church of Christ following the double ring ceremony.

The bride's table was covered with a white eyelet tablecloth, made by Angelea Carey of Snyder for her and her husband, Arvis', 50th wedding anniversary. The white cake was in five tiers. Each tier was heart shaped, and on a separate pillar in a spiral. It was decorated with three white roses on the top heart, signifying the Holy Trinity. A former student of the bride, Sandy Hall of Reta's Cake Shop, decorated the cake. A silver punch bowl held pina colada punch, a silver mint dish holding mints made by D'Lynn St. John of Amarillo, and a silver candelabra holding fresh flowers finished out the bride's table. Serving were Mande Henry of Lubbock and Lori Hudgins of Midwest City, Okla., nieces of the bride.

The groom's table was covered with a brown tablecloth, overlayed with an ecru crocheted butterfly cloth made by Jamie Gilreath of Snyder, and Angelea Carey.

A Texas shaped German chocolate cake with the Soil Conservation logo on top was served from a copper platter. The centerpiece was made by Phyllis Westbrook of Claude and Patti Turnbow of Carrollton, sisters of the groom, and their families. In the middle of a brown basket was the shape of Texas, made of 100-year-old barbed wire from the J.A. Ranch of Claude, collected near the groom's family home and shaped by Holland Westbrook, brother-in-law of the groom. It was surrounded by bluebonnets and dried wheat from the Westbrook farm.

A copper punch bowl with pina colada punch and copper nut bowl completed the table. Phyllis and Jennifer Westbrook of Claude and Patti and Charli Turnbow of Carrollton, sisters and nieces of the groom, served.

A third table at the reception, covered with a blue cloth and a small Nottingham lace cloth, was decorated with a Texas and school theme: a large brass school bell, brass apple, musical school house, school books and a large Texas book. Two large chocolate chip cookies decorated to look like double rings and a fruit punch were served by Lisa and Shara Carlton of Snyder, nieces of the bride.

Napkins of blue and silver were on the bride's table, and the third table. Napkins of ecru and brown were on the groom's table, all were printed with the message This day I will marry my friend; the one I laugh with, live for, dream with, Love.

Beverly Morgan of Amarillo was in charge of the reception.

White and blue wheat bags were passed out by Charli Turnbow from a white basket decorated with bluebonnets, all made by the groom's mother.

A rehearsal breakfast was hosted by the groom's parents the morning of the wedding at the Spanish Inn. Tables were decorated with bluebonnets in white vases.

Following the couple's honeymoon in Cloudcroft, N.M., Mr. and Mrs. Crownover will be at home in Hereford where the groom is employed as the District Conservationist, USDA. The bride has taught school in Snyder since January of 1970.

The groom is a 1964 graduate of Claude High School and a 1968 graduate of West Texas State University in Canyon with a degree with honors in plant science.

The bride is a 1963 graduate of Hermleigh and a 1967 graduate of Abilene Christian University with a B.S. degree with honors in elementary education.

Video camera services were provided by DeWarren Maple of Perryton, cousin of the groom, and Charles and Cindy Darlin of Snyder, friends of the bride.

bright. Hearing impairment does not mean they are dumb, she emphasized.

She said deaf children like and need music because they can feel the beat. Speech also has a rhythm to it, she said.

Ellen is certified through the Texas Commission for the Deaf in Austin. Both the written and oral exam must be taken every five years in order to maintain her certification.

During these tests she has to watch a video. If it's in sign she must interpret; if it is in regular speech she has to sign the words.

In addition to that first class in Dallas, Ellen attends numerous area workshops in sign language.

Ellen has also taught sign language at Western Texas College in past years. She is currently teaching a sign language class at Snyder Nursing Center, which has a deaf resident.

Ellen took her first course in sign language from 1972-73 at Collier's Hearing and Speech in Dallas. She said she had felt the call to work with deaf people since the age of 18 when she was involved with a mission group at her church.

Since learning to sign, Ellen has had many opportunities to help hearing impaired people communicate with the hearing world. While living in Abilene she interpreted a funeral at the First Baptist Church for a family with a deaf member.

She went through an entire pregnancy and delivery with a deaf friend also. In Snyder, she has interpreted a wedding at Colonial Hill.

She also interprets special music when church groups go on tour. The youth choir sings and signs "Holy Is He" at the end of their performances.

Reared in Abilene, Ellen and her husband Terry were married in 1969. He was a U.S. Marine then stationed in Jacksonville, N.C., which Ellen described as "a huge base and small town, just the opposite of Dyess AFB in Abilene."

She returned to Abilene briefly while her husband participated in a six month Mediterranean cruise. After he was discharged in 1970, they returned to Abilene for a while before moving to Dallas where he worked as a Marine Corps recruiter.

Except for a couple of years, the Rumpffs have lived in Snyder since 1977 when Terry was tranferred by Southwestern Bell.

Ellen's family has also learned to sign. At first, she said, all Terry knew was "I love you" and "popcorn," but when they met an elderly deaf man while living in Abilene, he learned more so they could communicate.

She said she and her husband sign messages to each other all the time. It's a very effective way to commmunicate at ballgames.

The Rumpffs' three children also know some sign language. Dora Jean (Mrs. Ricky) Clark lives in Lubbock and is a junior music education major at Texas Tech.

Ellen said her daughter was so excited one day because she was able to sign with a deaf customer who was trying to select a greeting card.

Andy, a freshman at Tech, is a music performance major. Mollie is a freshman at Snyder High School. She is a member of the marching band, as were her brother and sister.

Terry is also a volunteer fireman and he and Ellen help sponsor church choir trips. Ellen said they have a "wonderful family of friends at Colonial Hill."

Ellen likes to cross-stitch and sew in her spare time. She performs with the Hand Bell choir and is a member of band boosters. She also directs the Girls In Action program grades 1-6.

SPEAKING IN SIGN — Ellen Rumpff has been "speaking" in sign language for the past two decades. What started as a nine-month course in Dallas has long since blossomed into a variety of experiences which have included interpreting a funeral and a wedding as well as helping a deaf friend through her entire pregnancy and childbirth. For the past 10 years, Ellen has been using her ability to help school children in Scurry County. She worked part-time for the first six years at Snyder schools but recently started her fourth year as a full-time instructor. She is currently using sign language to help two Stanfield students. Since she also accompanies the class on field trips, Ellen is pictured signing that the class will be taking an exciting trip to the zoo, which will include seeing a zebra. (SDN Staff Photo)

'Look' broadens

NEW YORK (AP) — Revlon Inc. is expanding its product line, according to Lynn Korminga, president of company's new licensing division.

Revlon, the name, is synonymous with moderately-priced cosmetics, skin care and hair care products. The new items, 11 product lines from nine companies, will include electric hair dryers, hair accessories, cosmetic bags, costume jewelry and eyewear. Krominga says there also are plans for dolls and doll accessories, even women's denim jeans and other casual apparel.

Restoration: Congress, Term Limits and the Recovery of Deliberative Democracy, by George F. Will.

The degree of dismay about government today is perhaps unprecedented in our history. Americans are particularly convinced that Congress has become irresponsible, either unwilling or incapable of addressing the nation's problems. Many Americans have come to believe fundamental reform is needed, specifically limits on the number of terms legislators can serve. George Will makes a compelling case that term limits are necessary to revive the traditional values and to restore Congress to competence.

An old signal in a new guise

It has been traditional since the days of whist to play high-low in the trump suit to show a holding of three cards. If West had followed this dictum in today's deal, he would have finished many Australian dollars better off. The deal occurred in the high-stake rubber-bridge game at the Double Bay Bridge Centre in Sydney.

South bid the spots off his cards. Two diamonds was fourth-suit forcing, artificially announcing game values — with a hand that looks short of honors for this assessment. But it's the play that counts.

West led the diamond 10: three, four, jack. Now it seems normal to attack trumps, playing for a 3-3 break, and, if necessary, a successful spade finesse. As you can see, this line would have worked beautifully. However, South, whose declarer-play is as imaginative as his bidding, spotted an alternative approach. Immediately he started to play dummy's top clubs. On the third round, South threw his low spade while West ruffed with the heart 10.

Now, though, declarer had no alternative but to assume that the ace and king of hearts were doubleton. As they were, the game still made. But note the effect of West's ruffing the third round of clubs with the heart ace (or king). When South leads a trump, West plays the 10 and East overtakes with the jack. East plays another club, which West ruffs with the heart king. And East is still holding the 9-2 of hearts, which produce the fourth defensive trick.

Cream of veggie soups are easy, good

DEAR POLLY — I had the most delicious cream of cauliflower soup in a department store restaurant several years ago. I'd love to make something like this for a luncheon I'm giving. Do you have such a recipe in your files? — JANET

DEAR JANET — Cream of vegetable soups are delicious and so versatile. With the following basic recipe, you can make any number of different soups, each based on your favorite vegetable. After trying the cauliflower, you might want to try asparagus, zucchini, green peas or carrots. Delicious!

In a medium saucepan, simmer 2 cups chopped vegetable of your choice (or one 10-ounce package frozen vegetables) in 2 cups chicken broth until the vegetable is very tender. Puree in a food processor, blender or food mill. Return to the pan and stir in 1 cup heavy cream. Heat, stirring constantly, until the soup is hot but not boiling. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

A dash of nutmeg accents cauliflower nicely. You can try other herbs and spices with other vegetables.

If you want a soup that's lower in fat and calories, you may substitute half-and-half or regular milk for the heavy cream. I've even used skim milk to make a lighter, but still flavorful, soup. Of course, the heavy cream does make the thickest, richest, most delicious cream soup.

I'm sending you a copy of my newsletter, "Hot and Hearty Soups," which has more recipes for cream soups, including deluxe cream of mushroom and cream of broccoli that use a canned soup base. Other delicious soups featured in this issue are pumpkin peanut soup, lamb creole, French onion with cheese croutons, potato chowder, chicken soup with butter and egg dumplings, and more. Others who would like a copy of this issue should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Buffalo Reef

Statistics, statistics. Allies of politicians, sportscasters and special interest groups.

You can turn them, twist them, do all sorts of things with them.

But they're interesting, nonetheless, especially when you can be reasonably sure they're accurate. Each year, the National Safety Council puts out a report titled "Accident Facts."

It lists thousands of facts concerning driving, drinking, transportation laws and fatalities, both accidental and otherwise. You can find, for instance, motor vehicle deaths by day and month (January is the peak month; Saturday is the peak day of the week). And you can learn that leading cause for on-the-job deaths of women is homicide.

So, for your interest, here are some question and answer facts.

—Do all states enforce a 21-year-old drinking age limit?

Yes.

—Do all states have an open container law?

No. Twenty-six states, including Texas, have an open container law. Idaho does, but beer isn't included.

—Do all states have child safety seat laws?

Yes.

—Do all states have a mandatory seat belt use law?

No. Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Dakota, South Dakota, Vermont and West Virginia do not have mandatory seat belt use laws. Massachusetts and Nebraska did, but they were repealed.

—Among states which have mandatory seat belt use laws, can the law be forced on its own, or only if the vehicle is stopped for a separate offense?

In 10 states — and Texas is one of them — the law can be forced on its own.

—Are helmets required for those operating motorcycles in all states?

No. Colorado and Iowa have no helmet requirements. All other states have some helmet law, but many do not require helmets for operators age 18 and over.

—What percent of all traffic fatalities involve alcohol?

About 50 percent of all traffic fatalities in 1990 involved an intoxicated or alcohol impaired driver or non-occupant. Of those 22,083 alcohol-related traffic fatalities, an estimated 17,671 occurred in accidents in which a driver or non-occupant was intoxicated (blood alcohol content of 0.10 percent or greater) and 4,412 involved a driver or non-occupant who had been drinking but was not legally intoxicated.

—Do all states use a blood alcohol content (BAC) of .10 percent to determine whether a person is legally intoxicated?

No. Five states — California, Maine, Oregon, Utah and Vermont — use a BAC of .08 percent. And Ohio, Rhode Island and Wisconsin have different legal limit for minors.

—Is heart disease really the "number one killer?"

It depends on age. Among persons of all ages, heart disease is the leading cause of death, followed by cancer, stroke and accidents. However, among persons aged 1 to 37, accidents are the leading cause of death. And for youths 15 to 24 years old, accidents claim almost three times more lives than the next leading cause of death.

—How do homicides rank among the leading cause of death?

Well, among persons of all ages, homicides ranked 10th, making up just .010 percent of all deaths in 1989. But among youths age 15 to 24 years of age, homicides ranked second (16.9 percent) behind accidents (45.8 percent).

WHAT IS IT?

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I am 33 years old. I grew up in Snyder, but married and moved to Dallas when I was just 16. At that time, I couldn't wait to get out of this "dead" town and all my friends shared this opinion.

I moved back to Snyder about four years ago. I am now divorced with four small children — the oldest will be eight in a few days.

I have used Snyder Child Day Care Center as my child care for these past four years. I can't say enough about Shirley Fritz, the director, and the teachers at the Center. Shirley has been a real lifesaver for me — I don't know what I'd have done without her and the affordable child care she provides.

For the past two years I have been proud to be on the board of directors and have also been an active parent and was recently elected chairperson to the parent council of the Head Start program there.

We recently had a Halloween party to raise money to buy the kids Christmas presents. Its great success was mainly due to the parents and this not so "dead" town. I'm proud now to call Snyder my home town.

All the local merchants that were asked to help our cause chipped in cheerfully and generously so that our investment for the party itself was very minimal. We raised $227.53.

I think this is great when a group of parents and a lot of caring people get together and make things happen like this.

I would like to thank all of the businesses and individuals who helped in so many ways, and of course the parents and employees of Snyder Child Day Care Center.

Thank you for your support!

Sincerely,

Darla Traylor
Snyder, Texas

Dear Editor:

Everytime we open the newspaper or turn on the television these days it seems we are hearing only bad news. It seems our society seems to focus on the negative side of things. We forget to recognize the positive and that is what this letter is all about.

On Sunday, Oct. 18, John Gruben, his wife, daughter, and son-in-law decided to eat lunch at The Shack. After thay had eatén and left the restaurant, Mr. Gruben collapsed on the parking lot of an apparent heart attack as he was experiencing severe chest pain.

It seemed as if it was fated that at this exact time, Dr. Jay Kidd and his wife emerged from the restaurant. He immediately took control of the situation by taking Mr. Gruben's pulse. A nurse, Mary Helen Cervantez, also followed close behind Dr. Kidd and offered her assistance. They were going to stay with Mr. Gruben until an emergency unit could be summmoned.

When the situation deteriorated and it was evident there was no pulse, Dr. Kidd and Mrs. Cervantez went into action, administering CPR. By the time the ambulance had arrived they had Mr. Gruben breathing again. It is through these two people's quick action and the willingness to become involved that Mr. Gruben is alive and well today.

It is unusual in this day with so many cases of litigation that people are willing to become involved in such situations. We would like to publicly thank the staff at The Shack for their assistance.

A heartfelt thank you is extended to Dr. Kidd and Mrs. Cervantez for coming to Mr. Gruben's aid. The saving of another person's life is deserving of public recognition. The people of Snyder should be very proud to have two such heroic citizens.

The family of
John C. Gruben,

Dear Editor:

For all practical purposes the election is over. We need to let our newly elected officials know how we stand on the critical issues.

Senate Bill #574 and companion House Bill HR 1430 to me are two of the critical issues. These bills are to amend 1964 Civil Rights Statute to include affectional or sexual orientation.

The information I have says that Senator Cranston introduced the bill and was co-sponsored by Mr. Kerry, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Moynihan, Mr. Ionuye, Mr. Pell, Mr. Chafee, Mr. Simon, and Mr. Akaka. The House bill was introduced by Representative Ted Weiss, now deceased, and co-sponsored by one hundred other House Democrats, according to my count.

The bill, according to my understanding, would permit women to marry women and men to marry men, which would constitute a homosexual family. They could then adopt children, and use them in any way they desired in the privacy of their home.

The following is a quote from Firm Foundation magazine, Oct. 1992. Michael Swift was invited to write the guest editorial for Gay Community News, Feb. 15, 1987. He wrote, "We shall sodomize your sons, emblems of your feeble masculinity, of your shallow dreams and vulgar lies. We shall seduce them in your schools, in your dormitories, in your gymnasiums, in your locker rooms, in your sports arenas, in your seminaries, in your youth groups, in your movie theater bathrooms...Wherever men are together...Our only God is handsome young men."

We are promised freedom of religion by our constitution. This bill would make it against the law to use certain passages of scripture condeming homosexual behavior in any of the federal licensed media such as radio, TV, U.S. Postal Service and the like. The attorney general would be forced to prosecute any person accused of violating the civil rights of homosexuals.

We are already involved in a terrible idea in our schools, sex education. This is a start to deterioration of our American family values. It is a foot in the door for state control of children. By the same rule homosexuality will be taught your children.

It seems to me we should use every legal means we have available to stop passage of this bill. I leave you with this thought Ephesians 6:12: "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

We have a wonderful, free country. Let us keep it that way.

Yours truly,

Surry H. Gillum

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

I've been reading some of the great feminist writers of the nineteenth century lately, such as Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony, John Stuart Mill, Sojourner Truth, Virginia Woolf, George Sand and Lucretia Mott, and have come to the conclusion that we have still got a long, long way to go, baby.

Some of the writings leave me humbled. For example, I was unaware of how very hard women had to fight just to get the vote. I did not know that some women staged sit-ins at registration areas, or simply tried to register themselves and were promptly arrested. Once in jail, they launched hunger strikes and were force-fed, a dangerous practice that destroyed the health of them all.

I also did not know that when Margaret Sanger opened up a clinic at the turn of the century, to educate married women about birth control, the clinic was shut down and she was arrested. She had tried for years to get doctors to inform their patients about how not to have one baby after another until they died young — but was prevented because it was literally against the law to dispense birth control information, even to married couples.

"Women are a mere echo of men," wrote Elizabeth Cady Stanton; but a collegue, Emma Goldman, wrote, "We have not yet outgrown the theologic myth that woman has no soul, that she is a mere appendix to man, made out of his rib just for the convenience of the gentleman who was so strong that he was afraid of his own shadow."

What strikes me about these writings is that so many of them addressed concerns that are still predominant today, if not in quite so exaggerated a degree.

Equal pay was demanded for equal work, and conditions in the sweat-shop factories where women slaved for less than fifty cents a day were deplored. Unfortunately, sweat-shops that employ women - mostly non-English speaking imigrants, still exist today; and though they are now illegal, they are seldom investigated.

Women who did work at whatever trade was available to them still had to do all the housework once they got home, while men relaxed, a situation that has not changed a great deal, either. One woman grieved that she had to toil "on the Lord's Day," in order to get everything done — as do just about every working woman I know.

In fact, in doing a spot-check of the most successful women I have personally made friends with in male-dominated fields — every one of them is single and childless. As one of the first woman ministers said, "There is nothing I lack that the male ministers have — except a minister's wife."

I've noticed that as more and more women infiltrate more and more boardrooms, we're seeing corporate America wake up to the fact that, if they want to tap into this vast talent pool made available by women, they are going to have to make the work environment more "family-friendly," by providing on-site day care, flextime, and parental leave policies.

To me, the most telling quote came from an essay by Anna Garlin Spencer, who relayed this comment by Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi, the first woman to be admitted to the Paris School of Medicine, and its salutatorian: "When a century shall have passed after higher education has become diffused among women; after generations have increased opportunities for inheritance of trained intellectual aptitudes; after the work of establishing, in the face of resolute opposition, the right to privileged work, in addition to the drudgeries imposed by necessity, shall have ceased to preoccupy the energies of women; after selfish monopolies of privilege and advantage shall have been broken down; after the rights and capacities of woman as individuals shall have received thorough, serious and practical recognition; a century after this — we may fitly judge of the natural capacity of women for that intellectual leadership out of which genius must spring."

Yep. I'd say we've got a good seventy or eighty years to go.

Editorial Roundup

Dallas Morning News on Madonna:

Well, everybody assumes she's not, like, a virgin, you know, but when she sells her latest offering, "Sex" (the book), for $50, there's no question she's a material girl, is there? We speak, of course, of Madonna. The material girl who insists she's really an artist.

And an artist Madonna is — if by that exalted term is meant her having elevated hucksterism to an art form. In that, she is poetry in motion. The Countess of Compound Interest. The Duchess of Dividends. The Empress of the Exchequer. One can almost hear her declaiming: "Art, how do I love thee? Let me count my bills."

Having said that, is it appropriate that this person Madonna intrude into the nation's collective consciousness? What is it she really wants? Liberation? Attention? Freedom from all restraint — in a word, libertinism? ...

This is not to impede anyone's right to creative expression, including the too user-friendly Madonna. But in the end, "Sex" (the book) is more narcissistic than artistic. Dorothy Parker's review more than half a century ago, of a long-forgotten book, resonates appropriately. "This book should not be tossed aside lightly. It should be thrown, with great force" ..

The Lubbock A-J on congressional pay raises:

When Congress voted itself a pay raise in 1989 in what much of the American public thought was a sleight of hand, it also included cost-of-living increases — of which Americans were largely unaware until recently. ...

We do not think the increase should be paid at all this year. Congress is asking the American people to make considerable sacrifices so government spending can decline and the national budget deficit can be reduced. Yet, most of those same lawmakers are showing no evidence they are willing to make similar sacrifices.

In addition to the immediate salary increase, this 3.2 percent raise adds $700,000 to the pension of each member of Congress. Many Americans will work throughout their adult years for less money than that, and their retirement income — if they have any — will be a pittance in comparison.

Members of Congress who accept this increase show disdain and disregard for their constituents.

Appeals court rejects FCC rule on TV reruns

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal appeals court said television networks can sell their reruns to local and cable stations without restrictions.

A three-judge panel of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Thursday rejected a Federal Communications Commission decision that limited the networks' ownership and sale of rerun rights to their prime-time programs.

The FCC originally adopted the rule in 1970. It banned the three major television networks — ABC, CBS and NBC — from selling the syndication rights of programs they produced for broadcast on independent stations.

The FCC rule was aimed at preventing networks from driving independent stations out of business by monopolizing the syndication of programs. By refusing to buy programs unless producers surrendered their syndication rights, networks could effectively control independent stations' access to programs.

The television industry argued that changes since 1970 have resulted in fewer program producers and diminished network power due to the rise of cable television stations and the increased use of VCRs.

In 1990, the FCC responded by adopting new rules. The new rules, which went into effect May 1991, allowed networks to buy syndication rights, but an independent syndicator had to be hired to arrange for the distribution of programs to independent stations. And networks only could buy syndication rights on reruns, not first-run programs.

The networks petitioned the court to invalidate the 1990 modifications, arguing the FCC should completely repeal the 1970 rules in light of industry changes.

The appeals court threw out the 1990 rules and left intact the FCC decision that removed the 1970 rules.

Jamie Kellner, president of Fox Broadcasting Co., welcomed the decision.

"With a fourth network and scores of cable networks already in place and even more competition and diversity on the horizon ... the time is past due to set all networks free," Kellner said in a statement.

In 1801, the North African state of Tripoli declared war on the United States in a dispute over safe passage of merchant vessels through the Mediterranean.

GOP tries to assess what went wrong

WASHINGTON (AP) — Looking back on a lost cause, Republicans are debating who's to blame for their White House defeat and skimpy congressional showings as they compete for control of a party out of power.

Few were more candid in appraising the failures in President Bush's campaign than Vice President Dan Quayle, the loyal lieutenant who lost his job, too.

Quayle said the campaign had neither the boldness nor the strategy that might have averted the president's defeat. His post-election comments were a reflection of the frustration that was evident aboard Air Force II as Quayle campaigned in 20 states during the week before the balloting.

While he was upbeat and optimistic at his final rallies, saying Bush knew how to beat the odds and would win despite them, aides said the vice president knew what was coming.

Ever the loyalist, he blamed the faltering campaign on the managers and advisers who put it together.

Clinton and the Democrats ran a better campaign, Quayle said after the vote.

"The economy is not as bad as we've been told, and we were unable to push through that perception," he said, flying back to Washington from Indiana. "That takes a strategy, and being willing to take on the odds."

While he wouldn't elaborate, aides said he had sought more emphasis on issues including economic growth proposals, family values, school choice, legal reform and term limits.

At the same time, he'd wanted the Republicans to get even tougher on trust and character questions aimed at Clinton — the tactic he'd adopted in the vice presidential debate without consulting campaign headquarters.

Quayle also was said to have been dissatisfied with the electoral vote targeting by the Bush managers, feeling that once they'd written off California and the West Coast, plus New York and much of New England, they had to go all out everywhere else, and didn't.

While Quayle suggested that a better campaign might have won for the president despite the economic slump, Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said he doubted it.

Conservative Republicans said Bush had lost credibility, and votes, on their side of the party with the 1990 budget deal that reneged on his vow of no new taxes.

But he's still the boss...

Bush may be a lame duck

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush is president of the United States until Jan. 20 and nothing that happened Tuesday changes that fact. He also is a lame duck, a goner, history or — as he is fond of saying — "outta here."

Bush is in that 11-week nether world of politics where he conducts the nation's business while Bill Clinton is, in the Bush campaign imagery, measuring the White House windows for drapes.

The president has yielded none of his powers to command the military, make treaties, pardon miscreants, or appoint ambassadors. Until noon on Jan. 20, he is the nation's CEO with a constitutional duty to see that the laws are executed faithfully.

"It's important that a president be a president all the way to the end," says Ralph Bledsoe, director of the Reagan Library in California. "The president doesn't just really sit back and do nothing in that period. There's a great deal of activity in terms of transition."

Look no further than Jimmy Carter. He pulled an all-nighter wrestling with the Iran hostage crisis in the Oval Office until it was time to slip into a morning coat and get to the Capitol just in time for Ronald Reagan's inauguration.

What Bush will do in his lame duck mode is yet to be seen. He scotched reports that he would go to Russia to meet with Boris Yeltsin, and he encouraged the notion that he might extend his annual Christmastime quail hunt.

"'We will go inside, start readjusting," he said as he and Barbara returned to the White House as losers.

An outgoing president can choose to be a caretaker only or to smooth the way for his successor or to cause mischief with appointments and directives the next guy may not want.

Most take the middle course.

"It is neither desirable nor equitable to bind the hands of the next administration in major program areas unless there is overriding necessity to do so," Lyndon Johnson instructed his Cabinet. "We should not needlessly foreclose the options of the new administration to initiate their own program changes. It would be particularly unfair to take actions now which must be implemented over a period of time."

Gerald Ford told his Cabinet to "avoid major changes in policy or government structure."

And Bush: "Let's finish the job with style ... get the job done, cooperate fully with the new administration."

Presidents want history to remember them as statesmen. "The government goes on, as well it should," Bush said.

"The campaign is over, the divisiveness is over, you want to finish up your watch," said Mark Abramson, president of the Council for Excellence in Government. "There is a tendency to want to conclude things you started but in a positive sense. The tricky issue is what should the administration finish up and what should they leave for the next administration."

George Christian, Johnson's press secretary, says "if they think about it, an outgoing president is not going to deliberately antagonize his successor. There's too much a new president can do for an old president."

That includes invitations to Washington, consultations and regular national security briefings that help keep the past president current for speeches and commentary. Harry Truman felt so keenly that a president's experience should not be wasted he put Herbert Hoover in charge of feeding postwar Europe and promoted the idea that they be made senators-at-large with all the privileges of a senator except a vote.

Chelsea Clinton called just another 12-year-old

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Chelsea Clinton, like many 12-year-old girls, likes ballet and plays a solid third base in softball. She eats macaroni and cheese and broccoli, and she giggles and dotes on her father.

But she's not just any 12-year-old. She's the daughter of the man who was just elected the 42nd president of the United States.

President-elect Clinton, now the Arkansas governor, and his wife, Hillary, have worked hard to give their eighth-grader a normal life, despite living so close to the public eye. She attends a public school, pals with children of not-so-famous parents and is rarely seen in a political setting.

"Her parents have made an effort to make sure she remains a teen-ager and not grow up too fast," said Bill Trice, a family friend whose son plays with Chelsea.

"She's not a snob — not what you would expect," said Lea Russ, head of the PTA at Mann Magnet Junior High School.

"They are very protective of her private life," said longtime friend Skip Rutherford. "The result is a very nice, very polite, very well-adjusted young woman."

Another result is that the public knows very little about Chelsea, other than what adults say about her.

She's 5-foot-2, wears braces and size 5 shoes. Her long, curly brown hair whips from side to side when she dances with her girlfriends — "sort of a crazy slam dance," Trice said.

At last check, she wanted to be a scientist.

Chelsea prefers T-shirts and jeans, but can get dressed up for the right occasions.

For Clinton's 1990 inaugural as governor, Chelsea wore a new, floor-length purple gown described by her mother as "every little girl's dream of a dress." She arrived in New York for the Democratic National Convention wearing a short skirt that was in marked contrast to the more girlish dresses she favored previously.

Rutherford remembers Chelsea bounding into the kitchen one night. "Need some school clothes, Mom," she said. Mrs. Clinton rolled her eyes and smiled.

Clinton has always taken Chelsea into the voting booth, and old Election Day pictures show tiny feet and lacy skirts below the voting booth curtain. This year, it was faded jeans and big tennis shoes — father and daughter shuffled their feet nervously in time together.

While waiting in line, Clinton pulled a necklace out of his pocket and handed it to his wife. Chelsea flung her stringy hair from back to front while her mother fastened the necklace.

Still waiting, Clinton pulled his daughter close to his side and kissed the top of her head.

Cher sues Malibu

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cher has sued the city of Malibu because it won't let her build an ocean-bluff mansion.

The city denied Cher a permit in September, saying her plans violated a requirement that bluff homes be kept 25 feet from the edge.

Tattoo Ink as Well as Needle Are Risks in Spread of AIDS

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in regard to the letter from "Needs to Know," whose mother had recently been tattooed. (The husband of the tattooed woman was concerned that she had put them both at risk for AIDS with the tattooing process.)

You replied that the Centers for Disease Control had no recorded cases of HIV transmission from a tattoo needle. You then stated that transmission is theoretically possible, and that anyone being tattooed should question the artist about sterilization of needles and other skin-piercing instruments.

I would like to add to that caution: I was tattooed approximately five years ago. I was in nursing school at the time, and felt I would be able to determine whether or not the artist properly sterilized his instruments. I was satisfied with the process he showed me.

I now have my bachelor's degree in nursing and have been practicing for a year and a half. I am also in the U.S. Navy. The Navy doctor who gave me my physical asked me point blank, "Whatever were you thinking when you got that tattoo?" He went on to say that although I may have been satisfied with the sterilization of the needles and instruments, I should have been worried about the ink!

"The ink," he said, "is very expensive, and it's highly unlikely that all tattoo artists will discard the ink after tattooing each customer, and the ink could be contaminated by the blood." Abby, this was something I had not even considered.

The fact is, the HIV virus is very fragile, and would probably not have survived long in the ink, but of course, there is a slight possibility. Please warn your readers that although sterilization of instruments may seem complete, they may have cause to worry about the ink.

WASHINGTON STATE R.N.

DEAR R.N.: Thank you for wanting to share the warning. Anyone considering being tattooed should inquire about whether the ink is fresh, as well as the method used for sterilization of instruments.

People should also be aware that although there are local health regulations, tattoo parlors are rarely inspected by the health department because of a shortage of inspectors. (At least that's the case in Los Angeles.) Many states and counties have no regulations with regard to tattoo parlors, and they only recently have become aware that there should be more rigid government regulations. However, because of the state of the economy and competition for every dollar, tattoo parlor inspection may not be a high priority in state and local budgets.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "DOWN" IN RENO, NEV.: Someone said, "Health is the greatest wealth." And may I add, "... and the least appreciated until it's threatened."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: To celebrate our 25th wedding anniversary, my husband and I revisited the quaint European-style inn where we had spent our honeymoon. We had loved the place and found it very much like it was on our honeymoon, but there was one change that we did not care for, and we let them know about it when we checked out. In our room, we found an envelope with the following message:

"In the custom of the old world inns, a pittance was a voluntary gesture of appreciation for tidy accommodations. Your room has been carefully prepared by: Louise and Emma. Thank you."

The following morning, after our room had been made up, a second envelope was placed beside the first! This one was signed by "Louise, Emma and Debbie."

Abby, we know that tipping is important to those who work in hotels; we have always rewarded good service with a generous tip, and we do not need to be reminded to leave "a pittance" for the maid. After we returned home, we received a letter from the owners of the inn. It read (in part):

"We recently began leaving tip envelopes for guests who wish to leave gratuities. We are trying to cope with the high turnover of maids. After studying the problem, we learned that generally, hotels have a higher turnover rate of chambermaids because most people do not want to make a career of housekeeping. Thus far, the 'tip envelope' has been very successful. Our staff is thrilled with the response from our guests, and it has been a major morale booster.

"We carefully worded our message, using the words 'voluntary pittance' so the guests would know it was not required or demanded. We would appreciate your suggestions on how our message could be better presented."

Also, will you please review the rules for tipping at a hotel?

AN INN-GRATEFUL GUEST

DEAR GUEST: The standard tip for a hotel maid currently is $1 to $2 per night ($2 to $3 if two people occupy the room) depending on the class of hotel or motel.

If a guest requests extra service (towels, washcloths, soap, etc.), something extra should be given for the maid's trouble.

However, for the establishment to leave a "fresh" tip envelope in a guest's room every night as a "reminder" strikes me as coercive, regardless of how the message is worded.

The high turnover rate of maids is the problem of the innkeeper, not the guest. And to impose that upon the guest is not only bad manners — it's a bad business practice.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am sick and tired of people who ask, "How much did you pay for that dress (or those shoes — or that purse)?" You would be doing me, and a lot of other people, an enormous favor if you would come up with a snappy comeback that would put those nosy people in their place. In other words, is there an acceptable way of saying, "It's none of your business"?

HAD IT IN NASHVILLE, TENN.

DEAR HAD IT: The best response to a question that you don't care to answer is to counter the impertinent question with another question. Example: "Why do you want to know?"

A reader wrote: "I once had a nosy person ask me, 'How much are your car payments?' I replied, 'Why? Are you offering to make the next payment?' That shut her up in a hurry."

* * *

DEAR READERS: The shortest poem I've ever read:

"If called by a panther,
"Don't anther." (OGDEN NASH)

Silicon Valley looking for help

AUSTIN (AP) — Silicon Valley, which has viewed itself as the undisputed king of American high-technology centers, is looking to Austin for some advice on recruiting and keeping jobs.

A delegation of business leaders from San Jose, Calif., the Silicon Valley hub that is mired in an economic slump, are scheduled to visit the Texas capital later this month to reconnoiter the city's emergence as a rival technology center.

The Californians also hope to learn the local formula for attracting and keeping jobs.

Steven Tedesco, president of the San Jose Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce, calls the two-day trip a "reality check."

The visit, he said, is tied to a broad self-assessment by Silicon Valley's business community.

"We may have been too complacent in the '80s because we were doing so well," Tedesco told the Austin American-Statesman.

A 20-member contingent from San Jose and Sunnyvale will fly to Austin on Nov. 18. The business leaders plan to quiz executives at local operations of California companies that have expanded to Austin.

Judge dismisses suit by Cipollone family

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — After 10 years of high-profile litigation against the cigarette industry, the attorneys for the family of a woman who claimed she died from smoking have thrown in the legal towel.

The lawsuit over Rose Cipollone's death, which resulted in a landmark ruling from the U.S. Supreme Court, was dismissed Thursday with the family's consent, said an attorney for the family, Alan Darnell.

A court clerk said the case was dismissed with prejudice, which means the lawsuit cannot be filed again.

The dismissal order did not elaborate and Marc Z. Edell, a family attorney, wouldn't comment. Thomas Cipollone, who carried on the lawsuit after his parents' death, has an unlisted telephone number and couldn't be reached.

But one of Edell's colleagues in the case, Cynthia A. Walters, told The New York Times that the "Cipollones always felt that they got what they wanted out of the case."

Thomas Cipollone "was always of the view that 'I don't have to go back to court to get what I want,'" Ms. Walters said. "They were never sorry they got involved in it. Rose knew she would die long before the case got to court. She wanted to help people and I think she did."

The case began in 1983 when Rose Cipollone of Little Ferry sued the cigarette companies that made the brands she smoked for 42 years. She died at age 58 in 1984.

A federal jury in 1988 ordered Liggett Group Inc. to pay her husband, Antonio, $400,000 — the nation's first monetary damage award against the industry. But the jury absolved Philip Morris Companies Inc. and Lorillard Inc., which made other brands of cigarettes Mrs. Cipollone smoked.

Antonio Cipollone died in 1990 and Thomas continued the case.

In June, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that a 1965 federal law requiring warning labels on cigarette packages did not shield the companies from all lawsuits based on state personal injury laws. The 7-2 ruling also said smokers need to do more than prove that cigarette advertising and promotions tend to minimize the health hazards.

The case was sent back to federal court in Newark for a retrial. In September, U.S. District Judge H. Lee Sarokin withdrew after an appeals court removed him from a similar case at the request of a tobacco company, which said he was biased. Sarokin has said his rulings in tobacco cases are impartial.

Charles Wall, associate general counsel for Philip Morris in New York, said Thursday the lawsuit might have been dropped because the high court's ruling made suing cigarette companies more time consuming and expensive.

Richard Daynard, a law professor at Northeastern University in Boston and chairman of the Tobacco Products Liability Project, which encourages lawsuits against tobacco companies as a health issue, said dropping the Cipollone lawsuit would not deter future legal action against the tobacco industry.

Overhaul of state disease prevention said necessary

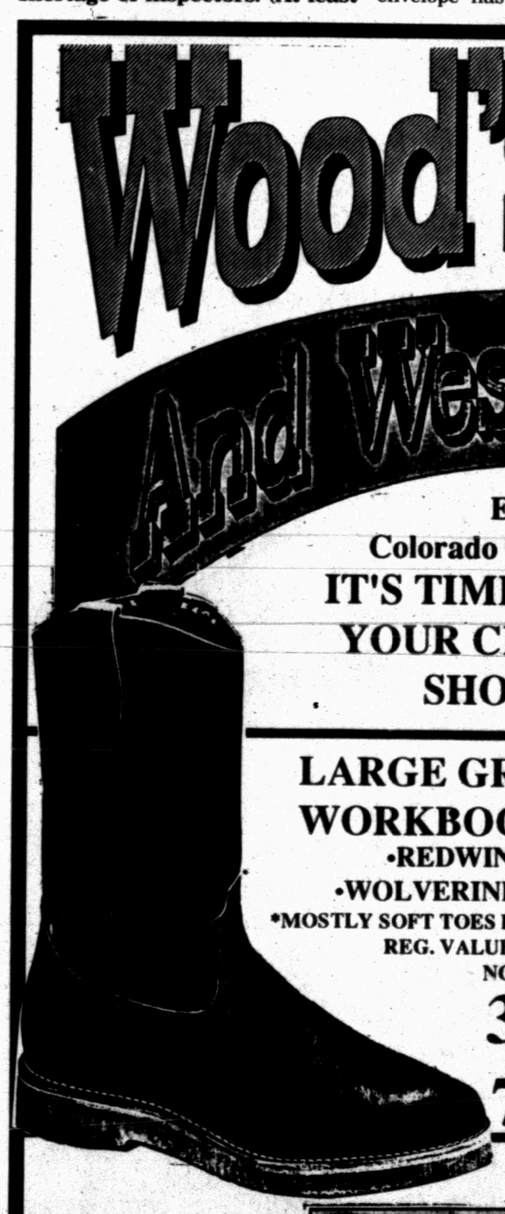

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Health has done a poor job of disease prevention for the past 20 years, and it's time the state took a fresh, new approach to the problem, according to a report sent to legislative leaders.

A review by the state auditor's office did not place the blame on the health department's commissioner, Dr. David Smith, noting that he was appointed only last March.

According to a report sent to legislative leaders on Thursday, the state's disease prevention program is underfunded, poorly organized and concentrates on treatment instead of prevention.

Texans wonder what they'll miss after Bush

HOUSTON (AP) — Texans for years have questioned how deep President Bush's ties run in his adopted home state, but they have not doubted the economic boon and prestige brought home by the leading non-native son.

Now that Bush will not be returning to the White House, locals wonder what Texas might lose with the shift in power.

"I think Gov. Clinton's going to be hard-pressed to do for Houston and for Texas what George Bush did, and I think that could be said of almost any president who is not from Houston and not from Texas," said Rob Mosbacher Jr., chairman of the Texas Victory Committee and son of former commerce secretary and longtime Bush ally Bob Mosbacher.

"The president continuously set up things that were important to the city and the state, whether you're talking about the super collider or the space program, or in Houston the (1990) Economic Summit and the (1992 GOP) convention — things that meant dollars for the city and the state," Mosbacher said.

"It's a sense of sadness. It's almost as if we'll drop a couple of notches in terms of political importance as a city," he said. "But hopefully Texas won't suffer too much."

Distinction and dollars brought by high-level visitors will take the biggest hits, agreed George Strake of Houston, former chairman of the Texas Republican Party.

"You won't have helicopters flying overhead and presidential caravans coming in and out of town, which in itself is a plus for any city, as far as prestige is concerned. Beyond that, I don't think Mr. Clinton will be bringing world economic summits or national conventions to Houston, so those are obvious big losses to the hotel sector, the restaurant sector, the taxicab drivers, and the community as a whole. There will be just a lot fewer Texans involved in this government," Strake said.

"However, I will also say that we survived before we had a hometown president, and we will probably survive without one," he added.

Bush has not yet announced what his plans are after next January. But many expect him to spend at least some of his time in Houston, where he is registered to vote.

Although he has not owned a home in Texas since becoming vice president in 1981 — instead buying a house in Kennebunkport, Maine — Bush's legal residence has remained a suite at The Houstonian hotel.

He does own a small vacant lot in Houston, and there has been speculation whether he will build a house on it.

Mosbacher said he was told Bush stopped his motorcade on the way to the airport the morning after the election to look at a house for sale.

"There's no doubt they're either going to buy or build one down here — at least there doesn't seem to be any doubt about it," Mosbacher said.

There also was no firm word on what Bush would do if he returned to town.

Rice University Provost Carl MacDowell said as far as he knows, the school has made no job offer to Bush or fellow Houstonian James Baker III, Bush's friend, key adviser and former secretary of state.

Similarly, George Edwards, director of the center for presidential studies at Texas A&M University, said the Aggies have not offered Bush a job. However, the school plans to include an apartment for George and Barbara Bush when his presidential library is built on campus, beginning in 1994.

"We encourage them to spend time here and we hope that memoir writing, for example, will take place here, but we've not offered anything more formally," Edwards said.

"It's very premature, and you don't call up the day after the election and say, 'Now that you don't have anything to do...' And you certainly don't call up before the election," he said.

Meanwhile, rumors have floated around Yale University that Bush may be asked to return to his alma mater as president.

But no matter what else Bush does, the welcome sign will stay out for him at some of his favorite local haunts long after he steps down as chief executive.

Clinton honed skills is different race for the presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a different race for president, nearly 30 years ago, Bill Clinton honed the political skills that won him the White House.

Skills like the art of regional compromise, building consensus and running a campaign.

"We knew back then that he'd run (for president) some day," said Judith B. Bacher, principal in a New York executive search firm and classmate of Clinton's at Georgetown University. "He's a born leader."

Bacher was one of four New York students who informally ran together as a slate for the freshman class offices in 1964. Their presidential candidate was the only one defeated — by Clinton.

New Yorker Robert Billingsley recalls when he first met Clinton.

"I hear this accent one day, this whiny Arkansas accent, so I went over to meet him," Billingsley said in a telephone interview from his office at a New York real estate company. "We became friends, and he said, 'Will you nominate me for freshman class president?' and I did."

"Clinton was already doing regional compromises," joked Paul Maloy, a New York banker and one of the winners of that 1964 election.

It was a close race, but Clinton won. And in the true fashion of a politician, he didn't forget those who had helped him.

"Our patronage was that we got to be on the orientation committee for the next year," Billingsley said. That meant they returned to school for their sophomore year a week early "and we had no curfew, and we got to meet all the good looking freshmen girls," he said.

Clinton's former classmates remember their friend fondly. Many of them have stayed in touch and say Clinton is the same today as he was back then — focused, intelligent, concerned and a good listener.

"He was always focused academically," Maloy said. "He was always interested in what was going on around him in the world of politics (while) most of us were worried about where we'd get our next beer. He was ahead of the curve when it came to that."

Clinton won his bid for sophomore class president, and as was the case freshman year, there was no heavy lifting. His main responsibility was to represent his class on the student council, his former classmates said.

His fortune was soon to run out.

He sat out the junior class election and instead concentrated on his studies and looked toward the race for student council president for his senior year, his friends said.

But, Terrence Modglin, vice president of their sophomore class, had the same thing in mind.

"We were both plotting for years to run," said Modglin, an official of the National Crime Prevention Council in Washington.

Clinton was favored to win, but he lost in what some of his former classmates describe as one of the hottest races for student council ever on the campus of the conservative Catholic university.

"I won and practically flunked out of school," Modglin said. "He lost and got a Rhodes scholarship."

Modglin thinks he won because "I worked harder, started earlier and I got a lot of the key people to support me," and he also thinks these lessons weren't lost on Clinton.

Should we believe things said in heat of campaign?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Should anybody ever believe anything said in the heat of an election campaign?

Bill Clinton, the agent for change, gave every indication he would go off in a different direction from George Bush.

And President Bush acidly declared only a week ago that first dog Millie "knows more about foreign policy than those two bozos" — meaning Clinton and Al Gore.

Ah, but that was before the election.

They may not like each other any more than they did, and Clinton may very well turn out to be an agent for change abroad as well as at home.

But now that the election is over, they are pulling together to make sure friends and foes of the United States do not assume from campaign rhetoric that the 11-week transition to Jan. 20 is a time of uncertainty and weakness.

Bush on Tuesday night offered support and cooperation to the man he had said was bent on tearing down America and would be unreliable in a crisis. And he told his cabinet to cooperate with Clinton's people.

On Thursday Clinton spoke by phone with Russian President Boris Yeltsin, and according to the Russian leader they agreed to exchange high-level emissaries. Yeltsin suggested an early summit, but Clinton did not commit himself right away.

Clinton surprised everyone Wednesday with a foreign policy statement after focusing almost entirely on domestic issues during the campaign. He urged "America's friends and foes alike to recognize, as I do, that America has only one president at a time; that America's foreign policy remains solely in his hands."

In what appeared to be a message to leaders of Iraq, Iran and China, the president-elect declared: "The greatest mistake any adversary could make would be to doubt America's resolve during this period of transition."

As for friends, the clear message from both Bush and Clinton is: Don't try to play one off against the other during these 11 weeks. Or as State Department spokesman Richard Boucher told Arabs and Israelis due to resume peace talks here Monday: "It's not profitable for anybody to wait anything out."

Clinton's statement had another objective, as well.

Clinton, at 46, is the youngest president since John F. Kennedy, and even less experienced in foreign affairs. Kennedy at least had the benefit of 14 years in the House and Senate.

During the campaign, Clinton often mused with advisers how he might be tested early in his presidency, considering Iraq's Saddam Hussein the likeliest to try.

With the statement, therefore, Clinton both began to set out his views and to affirm that "even as America's administrations change, America's fundamental interests do not."

He called for continued progress in the Mideast peace talks, conclusion of the nuclear missile-reduction agreement Bush and Yeltsin announced in July, progress on an international trade accord, bolstering democracy in Russia, resolution of the conflict in Yugoslavia and aid to famine victims in Somalia.

By anyone's calculation, these are among the toughest problems that await Clinton and maybe will not wait for him to take the oath.
