Iranian mobs protest 'mercenary' bombing

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Street mobs surged through Tehran today protesting an explosion that killed Ayatollah Mohammad Behshti, considered Iran's second most powerful man, and 68 other revolutionary leaders, the Iranian government and news agency reported.

Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai and Parliament Speaker Ayatollah Hashemi Rafsanjani, who along with Behshti formed Iran's temporary ruling triumverate, were called out of the Islamic Republican Party headquarters only minutes before Sunday night's bombing, an observer told The Associated Press in Beirut.

Crowds in Tehran chanted "Death to America" and Tehran Radio blamed the bombing on "mercenaries connected to the U.S.A."

Pars, the official new agency, accused "counter-revolutionaries," the fundamentalist government's label for the underground leftist groups that rallied to the defense of fugitive ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

The leftist groups, labeled "hypocrites" by the government, also came under fire from the demonstrators swirling through the streets of Tehran.

"Hypocrites, Your Death Has Come," shouted the demonstrators, many of them members of Beheshti's fanatical Hezbollah, or Party of God, organization.

The bombing, the boldest attack yet by anti-government forces, and the reprisal demonstrations appeared to edge the nation closer to a civil war between secular and fundamentalist factions.

It was the second bomb attack in two days on leaders of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary regime. Leftists were blamed for a booby-trapped tape recorder that exploded Saturday in a crowded Tehran mosque and wounded the Islamic Republican Party's chief spokesman, Seyyed Ali Khameini.

Those killed at the party headquarters included four ministers and six deputy ministers in Rajai's government and 20 members of the Majlis, the Iranian Parliament, Pars said.

A state funeral was scheduled Tuesday for the victims, and a week of mourning was proclaimed.

Hojatoleslam Mohammad Montazeri, the fiery Tehran prayer leader who on Friday defended the execution of Bani-Sadr's supporters, was also killed.

Beheshti, the 52-year-old president of the Iranian Supreme Court, was regarded as the man most likely to succeed Khomeini as supreme leader of the Iranian revolution, and many considered him the most powerful man in the country.

He headed the IRP, which controls the Majlis and the government, and directed the party's successful power struggle with Bani-Sadr. He was a member of the three-man Interim Presidential Council that took over the presidency.

Komeini appointed Seyyed Abdolkarim Musavi-Ardabili, a cleric and prosecutor general, as president of the Supreme Court to replace beheshti, Tehran Radio reported. He also named Rabbani Amlashi as prosecutor general, the radio said.

Pars said Khomeini met with Rajai and Rafsanjani today to begin filling the goverment posts left vacant by the explosion. Khomeini said the blast was the work of "opponents of the revolution, who direct their attacks against the most dedicated servants of the revolution," Pars reported.

Tehran Radio said the search of the wreckage of the two-story party headquarters on downtown Sarchechmeh Street ended at dawn with 32 bodies recovered. But Pars quoted the Tehran coroner's office as reporting 69 people killed. Pars said at least 30 people were injured.

The bodies were taken to the medical examiner's office, where a crowd of about 400 weeping women and men assembled. Revolutionary guards armed with automatic rifles patrolled the city, but persons in Tehran reported by telephone to Beirut that there were no disturbances or demonstrations.

State Minister and govenment spokesman Behzad Nabavi told a news conference that a 66-pound bomb planted in an adjacent building exploded and tore into the IRP headquarters.

U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler foresees no problem adding Midland to his 21st Congressional District if the State Legislature approves proposed plans for redistricting.

Currently, his district extends south to North San Antonio and west to Fort Davis, encompassing what he calls a cross-section of life in Texas. It ranges from a large metropolitan area, such as San Antonio, to small towns, and with the main interests being oil and gas, farming and ranching.

Loeffler visited Midland today as an introduction to the Tall City and its problems to be prepared whenever the redistricting plan becomes finalized. A news conference was held this morning in the Midland Hilton and a reception was scheduled for this evening in the Petroleum Club.

Midland currently is being represented by Kent Hance.

A member of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, Loeffler, a Republican, also holds the job of Minority Deputy Whip. According to Ernest Angelo Jr., who introduced Loeffler, this latter job puts Loeffler into a powerful position, one which is "almost unheard of for a congressman in his second term."

Angelo is a member of the National Republican Committee and spear-

Emergency Medical Technicians treat Judy Hasley, 45, after a two-car head-on collision Sunday about 1 p.m. near the intersection of Big Spring Street and FM 868. Ms. Hasley was listed in critical condition this morning at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital.

One killed, two injured in collision

One person died and two others were injured when two cars collided head-on on a curve near the intersection of Big Spring Street and FM 868 shortly after 1 p.m. Sunday.

Dead is 17-year-old Kitty Hensley of 109 Wadley Ave. Space 23, Midland. Police said she died instantly when the 1980 Ford she was driving northbound on Big Spring, crossed the center line and struck a southbound 1979 Buick driven by Judy Hasley, about 45, of 5007 Belle Grove.

Ms. Hasley was listed in critical condition this morning at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa, where she was taken following initial treatment at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Hensley's husband, 20-year-old David Hensley, also of 109 Wadley Ave. Space 23, was a passenger in her vehicle. He was in serious condition at MMH. He suffered multiple facial injuries and, police said, lost his left eye in the crash.

Units of the Midland Fire Department washed fuel from the road and the Jaws of Life had to be used to extract all three victims from the wreckage. Both cars were destroyed, according to police.

Investigating officers said the Hensley woman was apparently talking to her husband and didn't realize she had entered a slight curve in the road. She was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine. Her body was taken to Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Reagan out 'to lift entire country'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan, trying to reassure blacks that deep cuts in social programs will not worsen their plight, says his plan will give them economic freedom because it is aimed at "lifting an entire country and not just parts of it."

Reagan planned to tell the NAACP's national convention in Denver today that federal programs of the past have not worked for minorities and the poor and that his tax and budget cuts deserve a chance.

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the 400,000-member civil rights organization, said in advance that Reagan could expect a polite but cool reception, with convention delegates likely to "disagree without being disagreeable."

The speech, delivered as the president returned to Washington after a five-day stay in California, was Reagan's first since the Democratic-controlled House approved his budget-cutting package including reductions in food stamps, housing subsidies, welfare, shcool lunches and Social Security.

In portions of a text released Sunday, Reagan said, "I genuinely and deeply believe the economic package we have put forth will move us toward black economic freedom because it is aimed at lifting an entire country and not just parts of it."

He also pledged "a national commitment to battle discrimination" but stopped short of endorsing renewal of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, key parts of whih are due to expire in August 1982.

In Los Angeles on Sunday, Reagan was asked if his position on the legislation could be seen as a payoff to Southern congressmen who backed the administration's budget program in the House last week.

"There was never any discussion of a payoff to anyone" with regard to the Voting Rights Act, he said.

Echoing a stand taken by Southern lawmakers whose states fall under provisions of the act, Reagan said, "I have said from the first time that it was ever passed I'd like to see it applied to all the states. I think voting is a sacred right that should be protected every place."

In his speech, Regan vowed: "We will not retreat on the nation's commitment to equal treatment of all citizens."

Asking blacks to give his economic program a chance to work, Reagan said the well-being of blacks and other Americans is directly linked to the health of the economy.

"The failures of the past have been particularly hard on the minority poor," he said, "because their hopes have failed as surely as the federal programs that built those hopes."

In preparation for the address, Reagan invited Hooks and Margaret Bush Wilson, chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, to the White House last week.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Sunday that there were "considerable discussions within the administration about this speech, which the president does regard as an important one."

However, Hooks came away from the meeting saying he told Reagan the feeling in the black community is that "the programs which he has advocated will worsen conditions and not make them better."

"He assured us," Hooks aid, "that ultimately our goals were his goals, but he admitted, and we all acknowledged, that our methods are different in attaining those goals."

A new office park concept is being brought to downtown Midland in the form of Dinero Plaza. It will consist of two six-story buildings, which will add 240,000 square feet of office space to Midland. The office park will include a plaza and a three-story parking garage.

Office park planned

Dinero Plaza Associates of Midland this morning revealed plans for a downtown office park that will bring a new concept to the Tall City.

This concept, according to Russell Ramsland Jr. who unveiled the plans during a news conference in the Petroleum Club, calls for transplanting the traditional satellite office park, with all its advantages in terms of plentiful parking, ease of access and green areas to the downtown area's hub of activity.

Ramsland is project manager and managing partner of the development and is also handling the leasing.

Dinero Plaza will be located on 300,000 square feet in the 1000 block of North Big Spring Street, bounded by the YMCA, Cuthbert Avenue, Big Spring and Whitaker Streets.

Groundbreaking on the $11.3-million project is scheduled next month and completion is anticipated in 14 months.

Ultimately, it will consist of two six-story office buildings of 120,000 square feet each, situated around a plaza featuring trees, walkways and a sunken area with seating. At the back of the complex will be a three-story parking garage providing 690 parking spaces.

Exterior of the buildings will be a burgundy, black and gray granite chip in pre-cast concrete with dark gray window panels butt-glazed end to end. Fronting both buildings will be an area of shrubs, trees and lawn.

When the project is completed, said Ramsland, it will bring Midland's total office space to 5 million square feet.

Work on Phase One, which will encompass one building, the plaza, several planted areas and a 370-space parking area, will begin immediately, he said. Already the structure is 39 percent pre-leased, said Ramsland.

An important part of the first building is a six-story lobby utilizing slate, carpets, marble and a six-story glass wall surrounding a water feature sculpted in the shape of a tetrahedral pyramid. Most of the offices will enjoy a view of the lobby or the outside world, Ramsland said.

Additionally, there will be three high-speed, glass-backed elevators, a card-oriented security system and a fire protection sprinkling system throughout the building.

Ramsland said the project should appeal to employees because of the layout and landscape, design of the buildings, high parking ratio and easy access off Big Spring or Cuthbert streets. Another advantage, he said, is the convenience to the downtown YMCA with its health and recreational facilities.

Ramsland noted that a poll of downtown had indicated both employees and employers did not like being "isolated" in "glass boxes." He said the company is attempting to build a quality of life factor into the downtown area.

Ramsland explained that Dinero

Fire destroys apartments in Holyoke 'flats'

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — A photo in the Daily Hampshire Gazette last May showed a message scrawled in Spanish in the hallway of a 19th century five-story brick tenement.

The inscription read: "The Mafia will burn this building."

That building and two others connected to it stood in ruins today after being ravaged by flames Sunday. More than 200 people in the densely populated, predominantly Spanish-speaking neighborhood were driven from their apartments, said the Red Cross.

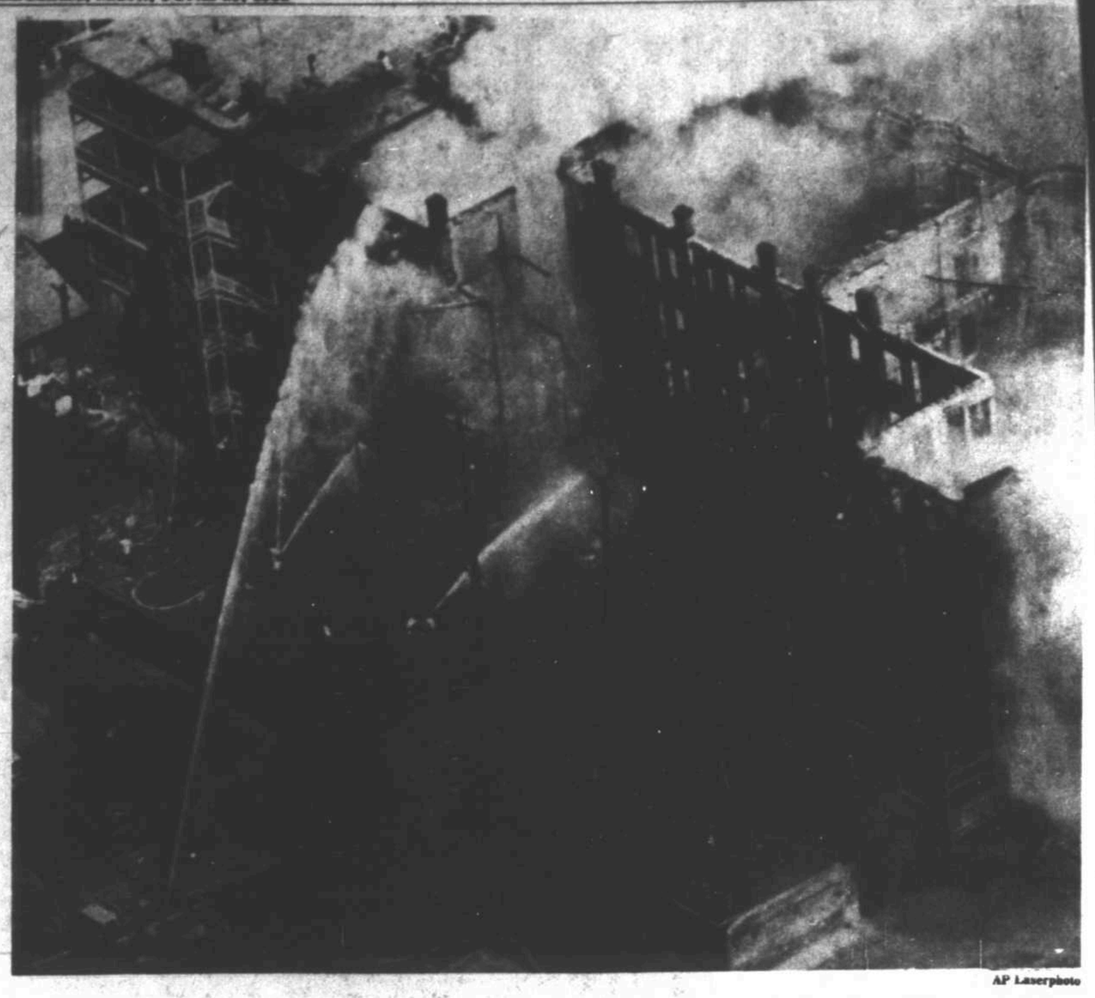

The Fire Department said there were no casualties.

The inscription, which worried many residents, appeared May 29 at the end of a month in which fires — including six in one eight-day period — left at least 168 people homeless.

Fire officials said then they believed arsonists were responsible for some of the blazes. But they said Sunday's fire appeared to be accidental.

"We don't think it was incendiary," Deputy Fire Chief John Barnett said after Sunday's fire. "We're still investigating. We think the cause of the fire might be accidental. We think it started in a certain apartment."

There was no official damage estimate, but the buildings were destroyed.

Four apartment blocks were destroyed by fire in the "Flats" section of Holyoke, Mass., Sunday, leaving over 200 people homeless. This marked the fifth major fire in the city in the past two months.

Polish, American face espionage charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Polish national and a former engineer at Hughes Aircraft Co. face charges of transmitting secret documents about weapons and radar devices to the Polish intelligence service.

Authorities said they assume the information was passed along to the Soviet Union.

William Bell, 61, a Hughes employee for nearly 30 years, and Marian Zacharski, 29, were arrested Sunday at their separate apartments in a beachfront complex in Playa Del Rey, said Dick Mellitt, assistant special FBI agent in charge of criminal foreign counterintelligence.

The two men were held without bail pending arraignment today in U.S. District Court on charges of gathering and delivering classified material to a foreign government. If convicted, both men could be sentenced to life in prison.

The FBI said both have been under investigation since shortly after Zacharski entered the country in 1977 as a commercial representative for a Polish government-owned machinery manufacturing company in Elk Grove Village, Ill.

The two men, each married with two children, struck up a social acquaintance in 1978, the FBI said.

The Polish American Machinery Co. produces heavy equipment to manufacture machine parts and has a West Coast office in Santa Fe Springs. Zacharski is president of U.S. operations for the concern and until recently was its West Coast manager, the FBI said.

Agents said Bell received $110,000 for his part in the alleged conspiracy, which involved the transfer of several classified documents on defense-related radar systems beginning in 1980 and ending early this year.

"We assume the Poles shared this information with Russia since Poland is a Warsaw Pact member," Mellitt said at a news conference, adding that, "Any case that involves classified information is an important case."

"These highly classified documents were exchanged at locations in this country and Europe and pertained to U.S. military weapons and radar systems," said an FBI statement in Washington, D.C.

Mellitt said the Polish government has been notified by the U.S. State Department of Zacharski's arrest.

Foreign spies operating in the United States usually are immune to arrest and trial because of their dipomatic immunity, Mellitt said. But he said Zacharski is not a diplomat and is in this country on a commercial visa.

Bell had been employed by Hughes Aircraft in El Segundo since 1952. Lee Pitt, communications director for Hughes, said Sunday Bell had secret clearance, but not top secret clearance.

He said Bell was a member of the company's Radar Systems Group and also was a project manager. He was dismissed from his job June 23, but Pitt would not say why.

Mellitt said Bell's dismissal was in connection with the FBI investigation and that Hughes Aircraft had cooperated with the probe.

Pitt said it was the first case of espionage linked to Hughes Aircraft since 1948. The company makes radar systems for defense, military aircraft and for the space shuttle in addition to aircraft and missiles, he said.

The most recent previous espionage charge in the United States was filed against David Henry Barnett of Bethesda, Md., last October. A former CIA agent, Barnett pleaded guilty to giving details of a 1960s CIA operation in Indonesia to the Soviets. The government also said Barnett revealed the names of 30 agents.

Barnett got more than $90,000 from the Soviets, the government said. He was sentenced to 18 years in prison last December. The Justice Department said at the time it was the 13th spy case in five years.

Air Force Titan II missile officer 2nd Lt. Christopher M. Cooke, 25, of Richmond, Va., is under military investigation. He is charged only with unauthorized visits to the Russian Embassy and with revealing defense information to unauthorized persons.

Man held in Vatican bomb try

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Vatican security agents today arrested an Italian man trying to light the fuse of a home-made bomb in St. Peter's Basilica, where 20,000 people were waiting to attend Mass, Italian police reported.

The man, identified by police as Giuseppe Santangelo, 54, of Salerno, was near the main Bernini altar of the largest church in Christendom when he was stopped by two Vatican agents minutes before a Mass to mark Saints Peter and Paul Day, police said.

Police said the agents overpowered him as he tried to ignite the fuse of an explosive device they described as a "crude home-made bomb.

"He made wild gestures, waving his hat in mock salute to the crowd," said a police officer. "He seemed like a crazy person."

Bomb experts said the explosive would have caused heavy damage to the basilica adorned with priceless art works by such great masters as Bernini, Michelangelo and Raphael.

The bomb was described as a 10-inch-long iron tube filled with one pound of powder and steel pellets.

"The consequences for the persons inside the basilica would have been tragic," one expert was quoted as saying by Italia news agency.

Police said the man carried no documents. Vatican security turned him over to Italian police and he was taken to a nearby police station for questioning.

Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the No. 2 man at the Vatican as secretary of state, was to celebrate Mass with 180 priests from many countries a special Mass honoring the two Apostles.

Casaroli was not in the basilica when the man was arrested. After the man was taken out, the Mass began on schedule.

There was no indication of any link between today's incident and the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II nearly six weeks ago.

The pontiff was seriously wounded by a would-be assassin's bullets fired while he was greeting pilgrims in St. Peter's Square outside the massive basilica on May 13.

After two weeks in a Rome hospital, the pontiff was released, only to be re-admitted last week because of a virus that brought a recurrent fever. Doctors have said he may remain hospitalized for one to three weeks more.

Police are holding a rightwing Turkish terrorist on charges of shooting the pope and two American women who were wounded by the gunman's fire.

Loeffler ready to 'branch out'

Loeffler explained that the basic philosophy running throughout his district is that there is a strong mandate for a conservative thrust in Congress.

"You represent basically every problem in America in this district," he noted.

The primary issues facing Congress, in Loeffler's view, are the Windfall Profits Tax, the budget and tax cuts, and foreign policy.

Loeffler said his primary efforts are trying to get the Windfall Profits Tax abolished. Falling short of that, he hopes to get a 1,000 barrel exemption into law for royalty owners. Both bills he has co-sponsored with Democratic Congressman Hance of Lubbock.

"I believe the Windfall Profits Tax is the most onerous piece of legislation to be levied. It falls upon the industry and all individuals," he said, noting that it affects individuals not involved in the oil industry by raising the prices they must pay for petroleum products.

Although he would like to see the tax repealed now, he hopes eventually "to fashion the best possible relief."

Obtaining decontrol on natural gas prices won't come until the end of this year and Loeffler predicted a "long, difficult political battle." However, getting a bill passed probably will be put off until next year.

The congressman who comes from a ranching background denied media reports that last week's vote on the budget reconciliation bill involved a lot of "give and take" on the part of congressmen.

Speaking of Texas Rep. Charles Stenholms' request to include a solar energy project in the budget, Loeffler said he supported Stenholm's plan. "I feel the Administration has overlooked the development of solar energy while hundreds of millions of dollars have been poured out for conservation."

Unlike the previous budget bill when votes could be tabulated before the actual roll call, Loeffler said there was so much wavering on the part of Democratic and Republican congressmen that "there was no time to buy votes."

He called the passage of that bill on Friday the results of a "bi-partisan coalition working together to achieve victory."

And he praised efforts of Democrats, such as Hance and Phil Gramm, in voting for the bill.

Loeffler refused to take a stand on the proposed MX missile, but supported increased defense spending, saying the U.S. ranks behind the Soviet Union.

Although a clear foreign policy has yet to be formulated, Loeffler claimed President Reagan "is sending clear warnings and messages to countries. But until we have a strong defense, there can be no definite foreign policy."

He supported bilingual education, but not with federal guidelines. Saying that "education is essential" and that "youth are important to the future of America," Loeffler preferred leaving the guidelines up to the state and local school districts as to how those bilingual programs should be operated.

"What applies to the San Antonio school district wouldn't apply to Midland," he explained.

"I believe the Windfall Profits Tax is the most onerous piece of legislation to be levied."

Land sale, trade resolution adopted

Meeting in special session this morning, the city council adopted a resolution calling for the sale or trade of the land on which the county library now sits.

A new library is under consideration and the 12 lots of jointly owned city-county land will go to the highest bidder — either sold outright or traded for land of equal value.

Bids will be opened at a special combined meeting of the city council and county commissioners. The meeting is scheduled for 2 p.m. Aug. 3 in the commissioners' courtroom.

Following adoption of the resolution, council members began studying the proposed city budget for 1981-82.

New office park plans revealed

Plaza Associates anticipates a significant demand for high quality office space in Midland over the next three years as local business expands, new businesses move in and older businesses seek to upgrade their current office space.

"This is a first-class rendition of a new concept to Midland and mirrors the quality-oriented, innovative people who live and work in the Permian Basin," said Ramsland.

He also discounted the possibility that Midland's current construction will result in the city overbuilding, noting the tremendous growth experienced in recent years and the fact that many more years of oil production from this area can be anticipated.

Canadians pay tribute to runner, Terry Fox

NEW WESTMINSTER, British Columbia (AP) — Canadians paused to pay tribute to marathon runner Terry Fox, the man who raised millions for cancer and helped bring Canadians closer together through his struggle against cancer.

Provincial and federal politicians were united in praise for the 22-year-old who died early Sunday after lapsing into a coma the night before. The cancer that claimed one of his legs had spread to his lungs, and he had contracted pneumonia.

In an unprecedented move, the federal government ordered all its flags to fly at half mast in honor of the young runner whose Marathon of Hope ended last September, an honor generally reserved for distinguished politicians or statesmen.

But apart from the official reaction that poured in Sunday, admiration also came from dozens of average citizens polled across the country by The Canadian Press.

"It took the foreign-ness out of cancer," said Debbie Walsh, a 26-year-old student in St. John's, Newfoundland.

Montreal accountant James Gow, 29, said the Marathon of Hope helped bring Canadians together. "We've been hearing quite a bit about him through the news media. It has brought Canadians a bit closer, perhaps."

In Ottawa, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said, "Canadians mourn the passing of a young man whose courage and awesome determination inspired this country as no one else has ever done."

In a message to the Fox family, opposition leader Joe Clark said the runner was a symbol of courage to the world.

"He fought for life against overwhelming odds and his courage will stay a beacon for everyone with illness or fears," the Progressive Conservative leader said.

Many of those interviewed said Fox's marathon was the catalyst that caused them to contribute to the Canadian Cancer Society. The last estimate of contributions to the Marathon fund was placed at more than $23 million.

Fox tried to run his cross-Canada marathon last summer on one leg, having lost the other to cancer. Ill health pervented him from completing his run, however.

Plane sale delayed again

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time, the Reagan administration is delaying its proposed sale of advanced radar planes to Saudi Arabia in the face of serious opposition in Congress.

But Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig says the deal will not be dropped, and an Associated Press survey shows that it may yet be salvageable.

Haig said Sunday that the latest delay "will not be substantial, and it will not change the intent of the president to proceed with this sale."

Questioned on the CBS program "Face the Nation," Haig said the administration is "developing the arrangements under which the sale will be made, and we think it's very important that these arrangements be known and understood by those who have reservations."

"We've asked them to be patient," Haig said. "And I think that is a major consideration on timing."

The AP survey taken late last week found 47 senators planning to vote against the sale — four short of a majority — but several of them said they could change their minds if the administration resolves their concerns.

And 10 of 54 senators who asked President Reagan last week to drop the deal said they have not decided definitely to vote against it.

Since rejection by both the House and the Senate is necessary for Congress to veto the deal, the administration can save it by avoiding defeat in the Republican-controlled Senate. A majority of House members went on record against the sale last week.

Reagan announced last March that he intends to sell the Saudis five Airborne Warning and Control System — AWACS — radar planes plus missiles and long-range fuel tanks for 62 F-15 jetfighters already on order. He delayed sending the package to Congress because of building opposition but intended to submit it formally July 8.

However, Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Charles Percy and other Republican leaders asked the White House last week to wait longer in hopes of crafting a package that would meet concerns of Senate opponents.

Haig said Sunday that the judgment of Senate GOP leaders is a major factor in when the deal will be submitted to Congress since they "are, after all, going to have to carry this battle forward."

While the AP survey found 47 senators planning to vote against the sale, 10 others said they were inclined to vote against it and 10 more said they were concerned about it.

The survey was conducted by contacting most of those who were undecided or concerned in an earlier survey, rather than all 100 senators.

Eleven senators who said in the initial survey that they planned to vote for the sale and four who were inclined to vote for it were not queried this time.

In the latest survey, 14 senators either were still undecided or did not respond to calls.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., said he is leaning against the sale but added: "I think it is only fair to wait and see what the president of the United States says."

And Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., said he has not decided definitely to vote against the sale, although he was one of the 54 senators who signed the letter urging Reagan to drop it.

"I'm very concerned about seeing sophisticated equipment going to the Saudis and the Mideast," Kasten said. "I'm just concerned about seeing the administration send the package up with so many questions unresolved."

The chief concerns expressed in floor speeches are that the AWACS would increase the Arab threat to Israel, that AWACS secrets might be compromised, that the sale might fuel an Israel-Arab arms race and that the Saudis should not be rewarded for refusing to support Mideast peace efforts.

Learning the hard way

There seem to be a few diehards in the Democratic-controlled U.S. House of Representatives, notably Jim Wright of Dallas and Tip O'Neill of Massachusetts, who continue to struggle against the overwhelming wave of fiscal prudence sweeping the nation.

Late last week the developments as the House was addressing President Ronald Reagan's stringent budget cut package forecast the things to come. Majority Leader Wright and House Speaker O'Neill squirmed uneasily more than once and, at one point, Wright asked, "How many more jokers are in this deck?"

"These are the times that try men's souls and make no mistake about it," remarked O'Neill after the first and most critical of several parliamentary votes went Reagan's way 217-210.

It's kind of remarkable that Wright and O'Neill would find the will of the people of the United States, expressed through their elected representatives, so difficult to swallow. Surely they realized it would be this way after witnessing the results of the victory which catapulted Mr. Reagan into the Oval Office.

Perhaps they didn't. After all, each has been a noted liberal living in a liberal period. Maybe they thought they had the American electorate figured out. They were used to providing what the voters — virtually all the voters — wanted. And they did it consistently.

Maybe the change materialized too rapidly for them. There were, after all, a lot of people caught by surprise when the shift finally revealed itself.

It's sad in a way that Wright and O'Neill after all these years have to learn the realities of American politics in this manner. But easy lesson or not, it's here so they'd better start accepting it.

This is just not the year to be in politics and to be a liberal.

Fruits of friendship

President Reagan's two friendly meetings with Mexico's President Lopez Portillo have borne fruit.

At the first of those conferences, a sort of get-acquainted session held in Mexico prior to the Reagan inauguration, the statesmen talked in general terms about the need for closer economic cooperation between the two nations. They agreed that avenues of trade could be improved on both sides of the border.

At the second conference Reagan and Lopez Portillo and their aides got down to specifics. They agreed that the first step in developing economic ties that bind the national neighbors together more profitably would be the creation of a joint commission on commerce and trade.

This has come to pass.

The agreement was signed in Washington last week, and the leaders who will direct the commission's cooperative efforts have been appointed. They are good choices. The Mexican chairman will be that nation's secretary of commerce, Jorge de la Vega Dominguez. Co-chairmen will represent the United States. They are Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldridge and Reagan's special trade representative, Bill Brock.

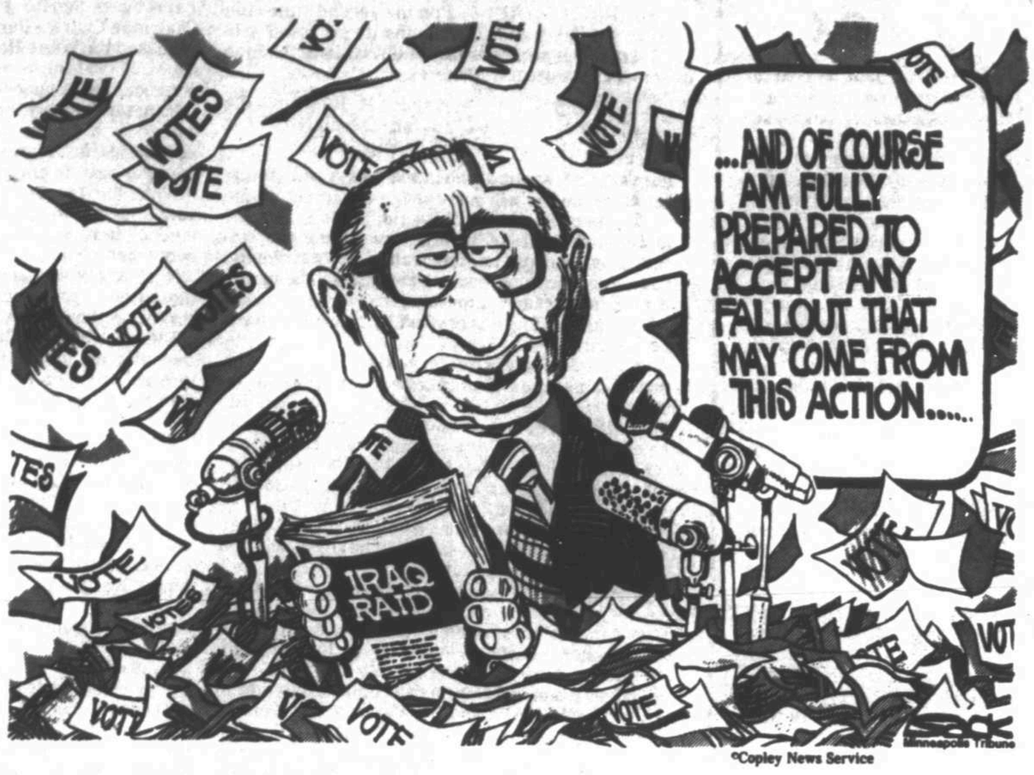

Baldridge expressed high hopes. The new trade commission he said, "begins a process that I anticipate will be instrumental in creating a new trading environment."

Thanks to the friendship and mutual respect of the two presidents, a significant move has been made toward creating what may eventually become a North American Common Market. Canadians have recently expressed interest in such a project.

The good news of the moment is that President Reagan has moved swiftly and boldly to repair an international relationship that has been sadly neglected.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Greed, errant patriotism motivated 'gang'

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the most disturbing feature of the Edwin Wilson-Frank Terpil arms-dealing and terrorist-training story is the ease with which American businessmen, former CIA agents and military specialists were recruited to work for the likes of Libyan dictator Muammar Qaddafi.

Jack Anderson

Dozens of American experts in the dark arts willingly went to work for the power-mad Libyan who has turned his country into a refuge and training camp for assassins, hijackers and other scum of the earth. How could they do it?

My associate Dale Van Atta has been chasing the Wilson-Terpil story for 10 months and has learned that, surprising as it seems, some Americans joined up for patriotic motives: They honestly believed they were part of a super-secret CIA operation. In fact, CIA involvement cannot be ruled out, though hard evidence is lacking.

But for most of the Wilson-Terpil gang, the motive was simple greed. One such was Jerome S. Brower of Pomona, Calif. Here's what a classified Treasury Department memorandum had to say about Brower, whom it recommended be indicted:

"(He) is licensed as a manufacturer of explosives ... He is president of the International Society of Explosives Engineers ... and he has an extensive history of support and assistance to federal, state and local law enforcement. Yet, with knowledge and intent, he supplied high explosives for terrorist use at an inflated price and illegally shipped those explosives to Libya and Uganda."

Brower also supplied the experts who taught his customers how to use their deadly merchandise, the memo noted. After initially lying about his involvement, Brower finally copped a plea. He was fined $5,000 and ordered to serve four months of a five-year prison term.

In addition to the patriotic and the greedy, there were some who were used by Wilson and Terpil for the prestige they added to their operations. One of these was retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Joseph Cappucci, a decorated veteran of World War II and an acknowledged expert in counterintelligence and security. He served as head of the Air Force Office of Special Investigations and as director of the Defense Investigative Service.

"Ed (Wilson) specialized in recruiting senior military officers for their contacts," explained Kevin Mulcahy, a onetime associate turned government witness. He pointed out that Wilson had dozens of companies, and "about 90 deals out of 100 were perfectly legitimate, while the others were sleazy."

After meeting Wilson, Cappucci had him checked out with some intelligence contacts. Unfortunately, the word came back that Wilson was OK.

So Cappucci headquartered his private security business in a Washington townhouse owned by Wilson, used Wilson's attorney and employed at least one of Wilson's associates.

According to secret government files, Cappucci told investigators that Wilson had lent him the money to start his business.

In May 1978, investigators for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were told by an informant that one of Cappucci's employees was trying to obtain a large quantity of arms for export to Libya.

Cappucci denied that the man in question had ever worked for him. He denied involvement in any foreign arms shipments, and, in particular, denied the informant's claim that Cappucci himself had discussed arms for Libya with a munitions maker in Springfield, Mass.

The federal investigators could find "no ... evidence of criminal activity by Cappucci," and finally dropped the case. They zeroed in on Wilson and eventually got the indictments against the Wilson-Terpil gang.

Cappucci says his experience with Wilson has taught him a lesson: Check out thoroughly anyone with whom he has business dealings. He said he wised up when he "started hearing incredible stories about (Wilson) — so I stayed the hell away from him."

Far from having any record of arms dealing, Cappucci has an intensely personal reason to view such tradesmen in terror with distaste. In 1975, he was sitting in the lobby of the London Hilton when a bag of plastic explosive blew up a few feet away. Cappucci caught a bomb fragment and sustained a hearing impairment that persists to this day. He doesn't rule out the possibility that his long and effective career in counterintelligence had made him the terrorists' target.

UNDER THE DOME: Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., is not noted as a shrinking violet. But he thinks the Ethics Committee staff is getting out of hand. It cited him once for using "I" too many times in his newsletter to constituents. And the committee counsel chided him for a recent newsletter that was heavier on personal reminiscence than on Senate business. Moynihan's response was a withering attack on the burgeoning bureaucracy of the Ethics Committee. The diatribe was contained in another newsletter, naturally.

— I reported recently on a Senate bill that would compensate manufacturers of baby clothes treated with the cancer-causing fire retardant Tris. The $50 million bailout is being considered at a time when investigators for Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., have found Tris-treated garments on sale in Florida, California, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Pennsylvania —though such garments were banned in 1977. Not only that, but the National Cancer Institute has new data that shows Tris is more dangerous than earlier believed — ranking 13th in potency of 70 carcinogens the agency has tested.

INSIDE REPORT:

U.S. officials wary of presence of France's Regis Debray

PARIS — The presence of the notorious leftist adventurer Regis Debray as a high official in the Elysee Palace heightens the alarm aroused in Washington by President Francois Mitterrand's new Socialist regime despite his professions of deeper concern than his conservative predecessor over Soviet military might.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Debray was Che Guevara's boon companion and chronicler in his disastrous communist insurgency in Bolivia in the 1960s. High French officials assure the U.S. that Debray is a mere functionary in Mitterrand's political household, not engaging in policy determination. Nevertheless, his presence symbolizes a troubling mindset by Mitterrand's French Socialists.

While claiming to be more attuned to Soviet expansionism and more aligned against neutralism in Western Europe than defeated conservative President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, the Socialists stand with Regis Debray in supporting worldwide insurrection — especially in Latin America. Therein lies the fatal plan of the non-communist left internationally: While opposing the Kremlin, it backs causes whose anti-Western animus is no less intense than Moscow's.

Nor is this the only disturbance beneath the facade of avowed greater anti-Soviet steadfastness here now that Mitterrand is in power. While decrying Soviet SS-20 missiles aimed at Western Europe, the new government emphasizes negotiations to get rid of them rather than balancing Western weaponry. Furthermore, the presence of communist members in the new cabinet (even though the Socialists won an absolute majority of the National Assembly) undermines Franco-American relations more than anybody admits officially.

All this diminishes the importance of anti-Soviet rhetoric by Mitterrand and his foreign minister, Claude Cheysson, in addressing the Reagan administration. Condemning Giscard for insufficient outrage over the Soviet rape of Afghanistan, they say it is not enough merely to say there must be no more Afghanistans but Moscow still should be pressured to free Afghanistan itself.

Privately Cheysson goes beyond that, saying: We would return to pre-Gaullist adherence to U.S. leadership in the West if only Washington showed it stands for something. That something, however, embodies the contradictions of the non-communist left.

Cheysson actually is seeking U.S. endorsement of anti-Western, anti-democratic movements in the Third World supported by the Socialist International and its French members, including Francois Mitterrand. The new French president upholds the romantic tradition of the French left that invests any insurgency against authoritarian right regimes with the highest values of mankind. Whereas Chancellor Helmut Schmidt resists such dogma in his German Social Democratic Party, Mitterrand enthusiastically embraces it.

In Africa, where the practical interests of France intrude, Socialist support for the Polisario insurgency in Morocco is being tempered by dealings with King Hassan. The new government's ardent backing of SWAPO guerrillas in Namibia is kept within the framework of a unified Western European approach.

But in Latin America, there are no constraints on transforming the impulses of Regis Debray into policy. French Socialist leaders point to repressive Nicaragua as a model for Third World democracy. Madame Mitterrand's patronage of leftist terror in El Salvador reflects the government's bias. Fidel Castro's warm exchange of letters with Mitterrand upon his election was not an aberration.

Nor can Mitterrand be excused for playing Third World parlor revolutionary on grounds he is measurably superior to Giscard in confronting Moscow. Unpleasant though he was in dealings with Americans (as indeed with Frenchmen), Giscard performed signal backstage services in stiffening West German resolve against creeping neutralism. Whether Mitterrand, while publicly denouncing Soviet expansionism, is similarly useful is yet to be determined.

However annoying Giscard could be, he never posed the prospect of communist ministers. French assurances that any communists will be excluded from international and internal security questions do not mollify Washington, which sees a bad example that finally could push Italy over the edge into a Christian Democrat-Communist coalition.

Conversations between France's new leadership and U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartman (whose expected shift to Moscow conceivably could be cancelled by the change of regime in Paris) are intimate and candid. Hartman's hand in dealing with the French could be strengthened if President Reagan called for arms control talks with the Soviets. For now, the ambassador is urging the Mitterrand regime at least to look at German reports of the true Salvadoran situation before embracing the insurrection.

But the new problem in U.S.-French relations lies beyond the skill of even so experienced a professional diplomat as Hartman. Mitterrand, genuinely pro-democratic and anti-Soviet, represents the unwillingness of the democratic left to see Third World revolutionaries as auxiliaries for Soviet expansionism, a failure that has contributed to the decline of the West since World War II. Whether or not seven years in power will change this, that is where the new president of France begins.

CHARLEY REESE

Being 'poor' doesn't bring special rights

The Poor. Don't you get sick of hearing liberals talk about "The Poor" as if they were some special species of human being with inherent virtues the rest of us don't have? I do. To heck with the Poor.

Charley Reese

I have been poor and I can tell you there is no virtue in it. Poor people are a liability. They don't invest in the country, they don't pay their fair share of the taxes, and they consume a disproportionate amount of the public benefits. They are parasites.

Some people are poor through no fault of their own, just bad luck, but some people are poor entirely because of ther own fault. They deserve no sympathy whatsoever. Their poverty is a form of justice. People who are lazy, dishonest, and irresponsible deserve to be poor forever. It's insane to believe, as liberals do, that the situation they themselves created and deserve confers on us an obligation to take bread out of children's mouths and give it to them, less a deduction for the bureaucrats in the poverty industry.

Every decent poor person I've ever known hoped fervently that his poverty was a temporary condition. He certainly didn't go around bragging about it and labeling himself "The Poor." His goal was to become part of "The Rich," instead of a permanent lobbyist for "The Poor."

I'm sick of this inverted system liberalism has imposed on us. You hear people complain, well the poor can't go to college. The poor aren't supposed to go to college just like the poor aren't supposed to go to the Riviera. Being poor means not having enough money to do much more than just get by, so where does some poor person get off claiming he has a right to all the things he can't pay for?

Poor people, like rich people, have their rights enumerated in the Bill of Rights. Nothing in the Bill of Rights says that those who work are obligated to support those who don't. Nothing in the Bill of Rights says that those who are lucky are obligated to support those who are unlucky.

If a poor kid wants to go to college, then he should do the same thing millions of other poor kids have done: work his way through. If he can, great; if he can't, too bad. There is nothing in the Constitution which guarantees that everyone will be able to do exactly what they would like to do. A man's goal ought to be to go as far as he can within the limits circumstances impose on him. That's better than sitting around bewailing the circumstances.

People used to be ashamed of being poor, but now some poor people are arrogant about it. To heck with them. I don't say let them eat cake; I say let them eat anything they can acquire through honest labor — theirs, not mine.

Human nature being what it is, we ought to devise ways to make it tougher on The Poor instead of easier. As Brother Dave says, when a man is down, kick him and you'll give him an incentive to get up.

I think, for example, we ought to take the vote away from The Poor. They can't pay for government, so why should they have a voice in running it. We ought to levy a special tax on cheap wine and on low rents. We ought to tax the unemployed and if they can't pay it, put them in public workhouses to work it off.

When I was a member in good standing of The Poor, I couldn't wait to get out. Now, too many people are enjoying poverty. We should see to it that poverty is once more the miserable state it should be.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, June 29, the 180th day of 1981. There are 185 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 29, 1966, North Vietnam's capital — Hanoi — and principal seaport — Haiphong — were bombed by the United States for the first time during the Vietnam War.

On this date:

In 1776, the Virginia state Constitution was adopted and Patrick Henry was made governor.

In 1880, France took control of the South Pacific island of Tahiti.

In 1946, the British arrested more than 2,700 Jews accused of terrorism in Palestine.

Oil states paying little attention to Israeli election

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The opulent oil states of the Arabian peninsula are paying little attention to the Israeli election and the heated competition between Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Shimon Peres.

"We are not haunted by the Israelis," said one cabinet minister who refused to be identified. "We are more interested in our own economic development programs and trade with the West."

Newspapers in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman seldom comment on the election next Tueday.

Interest in the election is higher in Kuwait than in the other states because of the 300,000 Palestinians working there. But "Begin and Peres are two sides of the same coin," said one Kuwaiti newspaper editor. "We can only expect the worst from either one.

"No matter who sits in the premier's seat, the unmistakable Zionist tinge will remain, equally evident with Labor or Likud. That tinge stands for territorial expansion at the Arabs' expense, continued occupation of Arab lands, unreenting import of Jews into Israel and more settlements to displace the Arabs."

An editor in the United Arab Emirate said the Aras would "commit a grave error if they entertained any delusions that Peres will be any better than Begin."

"Peres has been feigning flexibility, only to deceive world opinion and placate some Jews who call for peace with the Arabs," he said.

But another editor in the U.A.E. contended that Peres and the Labor Party would be receptive to peace overtures and would treat the Arabs in the occupied territories better than Begin's government has.

Sources in Saudi Arabia expressed the hope that Begin would fall, complaining that his "impetuous actions" have put the United States and its moderate Arab friends on the spot.

"The Israeli attack on Iraq and Begin's bellicose statements about the Arabs and Syria have impelled many average Arabs to demand of their governments strong action against the United States, Israel's prime arms supplier and financier," said one Saudi merchant. "This is embarrassing to us and the United States alike, I presume."

The "man in the street" along the Persian Gulf also sees no difference between Begin and Peres. To him, both are enemies of the Arabs and Islam.

"Even if a peace treaty was accepted by all Arab governments, the Jews will remain Jews," said a schoolteacher in Qatar. "Our history with the Jews is replete with Jewish perfidy and letdowns against Moslems and Islam. It would be a fatal mistake to trust these Zionist Jews."

"We should seek avenues and channels of better trade relations with the West rather than be haunted only by the Israeli menace and be preoccupied with the Israeli elections," said one high-ranking official in Bahrain. "If we do that, the Israelis will take us into consideration, no matter who wins in the elections."

But one articulate merchant, a naturalized Kuwaiti of Palestinian origin, said he was "praying to Allah for Begin to win."

"Begin is rash and ugly," he said. "Begin has burned many of his bridges with his supporters, and I believe the Americans are steadily growing sick and tired of him and Irael. If Begin continues to be prime minister, all remaining bridges with America might be burned. Nothing would be better for the Arabs than that."

Attorney says Williams could be '29th victim'

ATLANTA (AP) — Mary Welcome, the attorney representing the man charged with murder in one of the 28 Atlanta slayings, says extensive media reports about alleged evidence against her client could make him "the 29th victim" by tainting potential jurors.

Ms. Welcome, a former city solicitor who began representing Wayne Williams before he was charged a week ago, said Sunday night she has not yet decided whether to seek a change of venue if Williams is indicted for murder by a Fulton County grand jury next month.

Williams, 23, is charged with murder in connection with the death of 27-year-old Nathaniel Cater, the most recent in a series of slayings that has terrorized this city for almost two years. Georgia law requires that a grand jury consider any murder charges before a suspect can be brought to trial.

Ms. Welcome complained last week that reporters were competing to publish reports that tended to make Williams appear guilty.

The jurors "are going to remember them (the reports), whether or not they ever come out in a trial," Ms. Welcome said, noting that one news account said a victim's father recalled his son was going to a recording studio with Williams, a self-styled talent scout. "That was very damaging."

"The media is such a pervasive entity that unless some caution is exercised, you are going to have a 29th victim, my client," she said in a telephone interview Sunday.

Ms. Welcome had filed a petition in federal court June 12 asking for a temporary restraining order banning news organizations and law enforcement officials from linking Williams to the youth slayings.

After he was arrested, however, U.S. District Judge Orinda Evans denied the petition, saying that since Williams had been charged he had become a public figure whose right to privacy had been lessened.

Judge Evans also said her court had no jurisdiction to decide whether pretrial publicity would damage Williams' right to a fair trial since his case is being handled in the state courts.

The attorney said she and her co-counsel in the case, Tony Axam, are weighing the pros and cons of seeking to move the trial from Atlanta.

One drawback is that if defense and state attorneys cannot agree on a new trial location, the judge will decide, causing "the risk of putting it in 'Nowhere, Georgia,'" she said. "And the 'Nowhere, Georgia,' might be worse than Atlanta."

During a court hearing last week, police stakeout officers testified they had heard a splash in the Chattahoochee River May 22 shortly before Williams was seen driving slowly over the bridge. Cater's body was hauled from the river downstream from the bridge two days later.

A microanalyst testified hairs and fibers found on Cater's head were virtually identical to fibers found in Williams' home and auto.

Ms. Welcome said she hopes if Williams is indicted, she will be able to find jurors "who are the kind who are going to want more than a splash and some fibers" to convict a defendant.

"We are counting on that," she said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Fear of failure not a new idea

Dear Dr. Solomon: The son of a friend of mine dropped out of college during his senior year, even though he was an honor student and on the dean's list. Needless to say, his parents were shocked when he told them what he had done. Fortunately, the parents and their son have a good relationship, and they convinced him to go for counseling.

When I saw the parents a few days ago, they told me that their son would be returning to school next semester to complete his work and get a degree. They also said the counseling sessions had shown their son that his reason for dropping out of school was based on a fear of success. I've hear of fear of failure, but fear of success is new to me. Is this a new disorder that doctors have discovered? — Mrs. A.J.

Dear Mrs. J.: The idea that an individual may fear success is not new; in fact, the trait was first described by Freud about 65 years ago. From a psychoanalytic standpoint, success in the minds of these patients somehow becomes associated with a tremendous amount of guilt. This, in turn, results in the unconscious fear of succeeding.

Two Duke University psychiatrists, Drs. Jesse Cavenar Jr. and David Werman, have studied the problem and suggest reasons other than that advanced by Freud to explain it. One posibility is that a person who is catered to excessivly during the early years of life may become passive and dependent and, therefore, unable to cope when on his own. Another explantion applies primarily to women who, the psychiatrists say, may harbor a fear of losing their femininity if they succeed.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am a regular reader of your column and find comfort and helpful information from most of your material. One of yor recent columns contained a question about the emotional reactions to hysterectomy. You referred to the recent study by Dr. Ronald L. Martin and associates indicating that women who have hysterectomies do not develop an excess of psychiatric symptoms, and that those in the study who were found to have emotional problems following surgery had had similar problems before their operaions. You concluded that the statemet that hysterectomy causes emotional problems is just not so.

While this study may have been correct, there is no mention in your column of the possibility that some women may have a grief reaction following the removal of an organ so emotionally charged as the uterus. As your column now reads, any woman who does have such a reaction wold tend to feel there is something wrong with her, rather than to realize grief at such a time is quite normal.

You will forgive my correcting you, I hope, but you happen to have wandered into my area of specialty. There are losses in addition to death which require grieving. Grief is normal and necessary. Often normal grief resembles emtional distrubance, and is sometimes confused therewith even by us in the helping professions. — Bertha G. Simos, DSW, Los Angeles, Calif.

Marchers express 'Gay Pride'

By PETE JACOBS
Associated Press Writer

About 200,000 marchers — some garbed in sequined dresses and some barely dressed — wound their way through downtown San Francisco to cap a weekend of celebrations nationwide in honor of Gay Pride Week.

In New York, thousands of marchers paraded Sunday up Fifth Avenue, some pausing in front of Saint Patrick's Cathedral to chant "2-4-6-8 — How do you know your kids are straight?"

A Chicago crowd estimated by city police at 25,000 included a group calling itself the "Oral Majority" that denounced the activities of the Moral Majority, a fundamentalist religious group active in politics.

Rallies were also held in Miami; Denver; Seattle; Minneapolis; Portland, Ore.; and Des Moines, Iowa.

Criticism of the Moral Majority was a theme at many of the rallies.

"The Moral Majority is trying to continue to define gay people as monsters to be feared," said Harry Britt, an acknowledged homosexual who is a member of San Francisco's Board of Supervisors.

The two-mile parade along Market Street was the largest in the nation, drawing marchers from England, France, Sweden and Australia to a city regarded as a focal point for gay rights. City police estimated the crowd at about 200,000.

"We have been given a chance to really participate in this city and overcome stereotypes of gay people," said Britt.

Authorities said the parades, picnics and parties generally were peaceful, but some observers were irritated.

"I thought San Francisco was a beautiful city," said Ellen Rogers, 25, a tourist from Chicago. She called the parade "the most disgusting thing" she'd ever seen.

One float was a 13-foot-tall replica of a nun representing the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence, a group of men who dress as female clergy. Two young men skipped along wearing only red T-shirts, followed by 20 riders from the Gay Rodeo Association and 25 men in high heels wearing athletic supporters over their pantyhose.

One young woman, one of several with lavender-painted breasts, said her partial nudity was a gesture of freedom, demonstrating that women "are not sex objects who exist only to bear children."

New York's march was held to commemorate the 12th anniversary of the Stonewall riot, which occurred June 28, 1969, at the Stonewall Inn in Greenwich Village. The riot is regarded as the start of the nationwide gay rights movement.

New York's celebration had its detractors, including Rabbi Abraham Hecht, president of the Alliance of American Rabbis, who said his group "utterly deplores" such marches.

"There's nothing to be proud of about sexual perversity and abnormality," the rabbi said, "In any event, a public thoroughfare...is not a place to flaunt one's bedroom preference."

In Miami, where homosexuals intensified their activities after singer Anita Bryant successfully campaigned against a proposed homosexual rights measure, about 2,500 turned out, including roller-skaters and leather-clad motorcycle riders.

Jackson leads blacks on voting rights march

EDGEFIELD, S.C. (AP) — Blacks angered by Sen. Strom Thurmond's opposition to extending parts of the 1965 Voting Rights Act have taken the battle to the Republican's home turf.

Led by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, more than 1,000 blacks marched four miles to the Edgefield County Courthouse here Sunday in an orderly protest of Thurmond's stand on the 16-year-old law.

"We're not crying out just because we have nothing else to do. There is evidence all around that we've been cut out (of our rights)," Jackson told a predominantly black audience at a prayer vigil at Strom Thurmond High School outside Edgefield.

Walking two abreast and chanting slogans and singing hymns, the marchers strode in a half-mile-long column down state Highway 23, past the two-story, white frame house in which Thurmond was born 78 years ago.

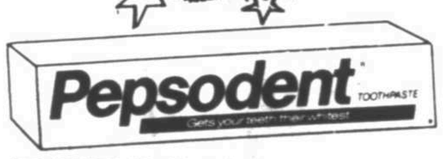

With Jackson exhorting onlookers to join in the march, the protesters rallied in the town square around a monument commemorating Thurmond and other former governors from the area.

Thurmond, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, is a vocal opponent of a provision of the Voting Rights Act requiring South Carolina and other states, mostly in the South, to have changes in election methods cleared in advance by the justice Department.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K943 ♡KQJ53 ◇52 ♣106
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
2 ♠*	3 ♠	Pass	?

*Weak two bid.
What action do you take?
A.—This is tough. Since partner is obviously short in spades, he might well have a fit for your fine heart suit. But introducing your suit at this point risks bypassing three no trump. Partner must have a reasonably good hand to overcall at the three-level vulnerable. Considering all the factors, we feel that game is more likely to be in no trump, so that is the bid we would make.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q10874 ♡53 ◇J982 ♣AK
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♠	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♦	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Despite the fact that you passed originally and merely attempted to correct the contract at the one-level, partner felt that his hand rated a move toward game. You couldn't possibly have a better hand on this auction, so to bid less than four spades would be a gross dereliction of duty.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K72 ♡AQ10 ◇AK6 ♣KJ72
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	2 ♦

What action do you take?
A.—Beware! Excessive joy over the possession of 20 points must not tempt you into any rash action. Partner could not act over your one club opening bid, and you have the worst distribution possible. In addition, East's reopening showed strength. Any attempt to buy the contract under these conditions could be disastrous. Pass.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ8 ♡6 ◇AQ52 ♣KQ943
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have sufficient strength to warrant some strong action, but don't look to the black suits to solve your problem. To jump raise partner's suit you should have four trumps, and a jump rebid of your own suit promises a much better suit. The solution is to make a reverse bid of two diamonds. Unless partner does something unexpected over the reverse, your intent is to support spades at your next turn to complete the description of your hand.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A2 ♡9652 ◇QJ1032 ♣K8
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♠
3 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You could have a slam, but it is up to partner to judge. The easiest way to tell him of your ambitions without getting to an uncomfortable level is to make a cue-bid of three spades. If partner signs off with three no trump, that is probably the right spot. If partner probes for slam with some other bid, you should be delighted to cooperate since your king in his suit is a very important card.

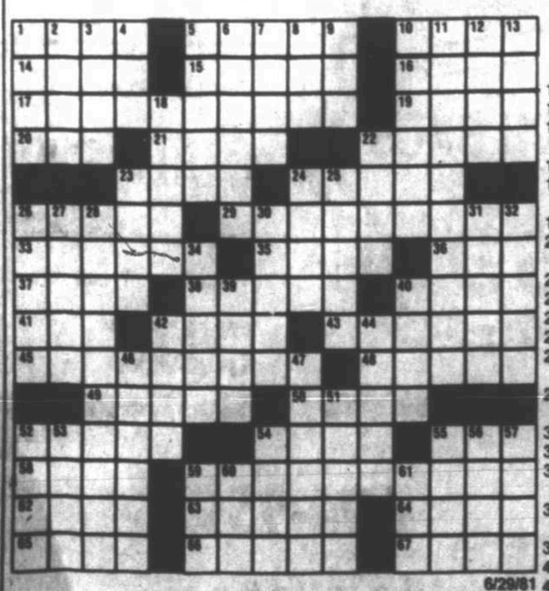

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J54 ◇J10962 ♣AK932
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—What started out as a rather mediocre hand has suddenly grown in stature—even slam is possible. Start your investigation by jump-shifting to three clubs. By a passed hand, a jump shift is forcing for one round and usually shows a fit for partner's suit. Don't jump to three diamonds—that is not even forcing. You do not want to settle for anything less than five diamonds.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today, picking up where it left off in last week's sluggish performance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 3.32 last week, slipped 3.43 to 989.44 by noontime today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a narrow margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Precious-metals prices continued their recent slide. Gold was down $15.20 to $426 an ounce, and silver tumbled 56 cents to $8.70 an ounce, in early trading on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

The news depressed gold mining shares. Homestake Mining dropped 1 to 47½ and ASA Ltd. lost 1¼ to 43¼.

Texasgulf, subject of a takeover bid from Elf Aquitaine of France, jumped 11 to 48½.

The NYSE's compositeindex lost .03 to 76.94. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .88 at 377.83.

Volume on the Big Board came to 17.06 million shares at noontime, against 17.73 million at the same point Friday.

Boeing discusses MX alternative

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Boeing Co., a major subcontractor for the proposed MX missile system, has briefed a Defense Department advisory panel on an alternative, small-missile system, a company spokesman said Sunday night.

The Washington Post said in Monday's editions that Boeing told experts in the Pentagon and on Capitol Hill it could begin deploying 3,350 single-warhead missiles by 1986.

Bill Jury, Boeing's spokesman on military matters, said in Seattle, however, "I think it would be wrong to call this a proposal."

"We have 1,500 people working on MX. I would be surprised if we had 10 people working on this," Jury said.

Boeing would build the giant transporter vehicles that would haul the 91-ton, 10-warhead MX from silo to silo in the "shell game" envisioned in the current plan for the MX missile. The ever-changing location of 200 missiles among 4,600 silos in Nevada and Utah is supposed to make it impossible for Soviet missiles officers to know where to aim their weapons.

The plan has aroused heavy opposition in Nevada and Utah.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger convened a special committee, chaired by physicist Charles Townes, to advise him on ways to base the MX missile other than the Nevada-Utah plan. Its report is expected soon.

"We were asked to brief the Weinberger panel," Jury said.

The Boeing alternative missile, called SICM for Small Intercontinental Missile, would be based in silos hardened to withstand blast pressures of 3,000 pounds per square inch, requiring a direct hit to knock it out, the Post said.

The missile would weigh only 11 tons and could be moved about on trucks if mobility were desired.

Such a concept has circulated in defense circles for several years as a way to use the silos of the existing 1,000 Minuteman missiles. It was not immediately known if the Boeing missile would do so or would require new silos.

So many missiles would exceed the limit of 2,400 launchers specified in the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union.

Longtime Texas newsman dies

MOUNT PLEASANT, Texas (AP) — W.N. "Dub" Furey, longtime Northeast Texas newspaper man, died Sunday following a lengthy illness. He was 72.

Furey retired in 1972 after 43 years as a reporter, editor and publisher.

Furey's grandfather, William Norman "Billy" Furey, came to Texas in 1869 from Alabama and worked for two newspapers in Dallas, predecessors of The Dallas Morning News and The Dallas Times Herald. He and A.P. Boyd established The Paris News as a daily newspaper.

Furey began his newspaper career April 25, 1929, when he was hired as a cub reporter for the Paris News. He became managing editor of the paper in May 1935, at the age of 24. At one time he was part owner and publisher of The Hillsboro Daily Mirror and Hillsboro Weekly Mirror.

In 1957, he and several associates purchased The Mount Pleasant Daily Times and Times-Review. He became sole proprietor in 1959.

Furey sold the Daily Times in 1972 to the Mount Pleasant Daily Tribune.

He was a life member of Sigma Delta Chi and a past member of the Texas Newspaper Association, Texas Daily Newspaper Association, Texas Press, American Newspaper Publishers Association and the Press Club of Dallas.

Furey is survived by his wife, Sarah, and one son, William N. Furey Jr., of New York City. Services are set for Tuesday afternoon at Tennison Memorial Methodist Church in Mount Pleasant.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

'Bearer' bonds could be called

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I own a "bearer" municipal bond issued by the state in which I live. Suppose the bond is "called" for early redemption, before its scheduled maturity date, as I understand sometimes happens. Would I lose money?

A. Yes. You would lose the use of your money from the date on which the bond was called for redemption until the day you turn in the bond for its redemption price.

Almost all "marketable" bonds — those traded in the marketplace — have call features. This means the "issuer" — in this case a state — has the right to redeem the bond before its stated maturity.

When a bond is called, it stops paying interest as of the call date. If you don't learn about that call until some later date, you're simply out of luck. At that point of course, you should turn your bond in and get cash for it.

This is a big reason why some people prefer to hold bonds in "registered," rather than "bearer," form. When a bond is in registered form, your name is on the bond and the record books of the issuer. Interest checks are mailed to you and you are notified if your bond is called for redemption.

A bearer bond has interest coupons attached. You have to clip a coupon each time an interest payment is due. There is no record of your ownership on the issuer's books. You have to watch for a redemption call, or have somebody do that for you.

Many owners of bearer bonds leave them with brokerage firms or banks, which keep tabs on redemption calls. If you have possession of your bearer bond, you have to take on that chore yourself.

About the best way to handle that do-it-yourself project is by checking the Standard & Poor's and/or Moody's "bond manuals" you'll find in brokerage offices or the reference sections of some public libraries.

Q. I read about a company paying off some of its debts to banks at 30 cents on the dollar and issuing to the banks preferred stock. There are many millions of dollars involved. Who is taking that loss — investors or the bankers personally? Also, isn't the issuance of preferred stock an injustice to the company's common stockholders.

A. The difference between the total amount of the loans and the 30 percent of that amount the banks settled for is a loss to the banks. Commercial banks — the kind that make loans to corporations — are owned by stockholders. The "bottom line" is that the stockholders of those banks take that loss.

Banks "write off" and take full losses or "write down" and take partial losses on loans that go bad frequently. That's one of the risks of the banking business.

In this case, if that company turns around and becomes profitable, the preferred stock it issued to the banks will have a value — reducing the bank's loss on the loan settlement.

Because dividends must be paid on preferred stock before any dividends are paid on common stock, the issuance of the preferred does mean the common stockholders will have a longer wait for any future dividends — when and if the company returns to profitability.

Q. As the result of a 10-for-one stock split, I now have 340 shares of stock in an oil company. I have two certificates — one for my original 34 shares and one for the 306 shares I received in the split.

I would like to sell 100 shares. I assume it is necessary to have a certificate for the exact number of shares to be sold. How can I get these certificates changed to 100-share units?

A. You can send your certificates to that stock's transfer agent, with instructions to issue three 100-share certificates and one 40-share certificate. The name and address of the transfer agent is printed in the company's annual report to stockholders. If you do that, do it by registered or certified mail — return receipt requested.

But you don't have to. You can sell 100 shares, or any other number you like. Give your sell order to a broker. Turn the 306-share certificate over to the broker. After the sale is completed, you'll get a check for the proceeds from the sale of 100 shares and a certificate for 206 shares.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Unforeseen, unexplainable plague economic picture

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The best laid plans, the most scholarly research, the most reasoned explanations sometimes are flawed. The unforeseen the unexpected, and the unexplainable occur often enough to prove it.

—Critics have said that Reagan administration plans for a personal income tax cut aren't consistent with supply-side economics, but that may not be the case.

First, the background: The supply side is the economy's production (business) side, as opposed to the consuming side. Supply siders seek to spur production, hoping that more output will mean less inflation.

To feed the supply side through personal income tax cuts, the critics say, is contrary to supply side goals in that it might spur consumer buying and thus add to inflationary pressures.

But Professor William Dunkelberg of Purdue University, a consultant to the National Federation of Independent Business, has some perceptive observations about that view. In brief, he thinks it's somewhat wet.

About 47 percent of American businesses are unincorporated, the professor points out. And that means the owners of these companies pay taxes as individuals rather than corporations. To them, a personal tax cut is a business tax cut, a cut that quite likely will be reinvested.

His defense of a personal tax cut as being good for business doesn't end there, says Dunkelberg, an economist. More than half of all businesses have fewer than 20 workers, he points out, reminding us that surveys have shown such businesses to be among the most prolific job creators — more productive in that sense than blue chip corporations.

And, he adds, they can use a tax deduction, because the tax code has been hurting them more and more, and forcing them to abandon the personal rather than corporate mode of doing business. As corporations, their maximum tax liability is 48 percent of income; as individual business people it can, and increasingly does, run to 70 percent.

Perhaps as a result, the number of unincorporated businesses has been shrinking. In the mid-1970s, says Dunkelberg, 55 percent of businesses were unincorporated. The current 47 percent rate represents the inroads of inflation, and the resulting higher tax brackets.

As he sees it, the situation puts an unfair and largely unforeseen demand on small business. In some states it costs thousands of dollar to incorporate. And, he feels, incorporation probably leads to an even larger burden of paperwork in order to comply with regulations.

—Anyone who has ever dreamed of retirement has heard about the monster fly in the ointment: the threatened inability of companies to come through on their financial promises

But Jeremy I. Bulow, assistant professor of economics at Stanford's Graduate School of Business, says those corporate pension funds really are fatter than we think they are.

The reason: inflation permits companies to pay today's promises of fixed pensions in tomorrow's cheaper dollars.

"The corporations are in fine shape," he says. "They have plenty of money to pay off the claims, while the workers get paid in money which is worth less."

Bulow points out a major difference between corporate pension funds and Social Security. "Social Security benefits are indexed to inflation," he says. "Most pension funds are not."

But, it was pointed out, if inflation recedes then the corporate pension funds won't be as fat as they now might appear. True, he said, before noting that this hasn't been the case during the past 30 years.

—In Manhattan, and in many other areas throughout the country, there has been a strong demand for office space during the past few years. And, as you might expect, rents have soared.

So have the expectations of some landlords, especially those who projected the current rate of rent increases far into the future. But there are signs now that their sights are focused too high.

Robert Corso, a New York office broker, comments that in Manhattan, at least, the commercial boom is threatened by the inability of small-space tenants to maintain office space in prime business districts.

"While demand for large blocks of space by major foreign an domestic corporations continues at an all time high," he says,"smaller firms are finding it increasngly difficult to pay three times more for new leases." As a result, they are leaving. They just won't pay the rent.

That leaves the big corporations without some of the services they and others need. Services, for example, of lawyers and accountants, to say nothing of advertising agencies and architects.

And what company in this day and age of taxes and inflation doesn't need accountants and lawyers? Without them, some businesses would be lost. And without them, some rents might level off, says Corso.

SWAT team kills gunman

ATLANTA (AP) — The FBI and police say a breakdown in negotiations forced them to gun down a heavily armed man described as "quiet and kind of strange-acting" who took over the FBI office here and threatened 12 workers.

Morris E. Roberts Jr., 26, a golf course crewman with a suburban recreation department, was killed Sunday by gunfire from FBI agents and the Atlanta police Special Weapons And Tactics unit, authorities said.

Roberts, armed with two handguns, a short-barreled automatic weapon and a sawed-off shotgun, took the hostages late Sunday morning after forcing a guard to let him into the 10th floor FBI office in the federal building downtown.

Police were unable to determine what the man hoped to accomplish.

Roberts made no "political demands of any kind," said Angelo Fuster, spokesman for Mayor Mayard Jackson. "He said he wanted to speak to an FBI agent — he didn't ask for a specific $gent. Then he named a chaplain," Fuster said. The chaplain was not identified.

"We attempted to negotiate with him," said John Glover, the special agent in charge of the Atlanta office. "As long as an individual is willing to talk, we will talk and negotiate with him."

One of the police negotiators was Frank McClure, the detective who successfully diffused Atlanta's a 1979 hostage incident that took place in the Hyatt Regency Hotel next door to the federal building.

In the October 1979 incident, a young man's alleged robbery attempt went sour, and he held a woman hostage for 20 hours until McClure talked him into releasing the woman unharmed and surrendering.

On Sunday, however, "the negotiations broke down" about 3½ hours after the man entered the FBI office "and it was necessary to terminate the hostage situation," Glover said.

Reporters posted on the 11th floor at the Hyatt Regency said they heard about 25 shots in rapid succession and then three single shots.

The Rev. Michael Morris, pastor of a nearby church, was called to the scene to talk to the gunman, but the shooting occurred just as Morris was being taken up an elevator to the office.

The Catholic priest said he talked to a few of the hostages, who were "very much upset," and then gave last rites to Roberts.

"I presume he was lying where he fell," Morris said. "I gave him last rites on the possibility he was Catholic. The (authorities) were taking photographs of him. As far as I could see, the man was dead.

"It was not a pleasant sight," the priest said.

Field Day radio contacts below record

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Field Day closed down at high noon, the rigs were shut off and the antennas came down.

"We had a pretty good Field Day, I think," said Banks Campbell, as he and his son, Pete, were calling it quits.

Thousands of amateur radio operators (hams) across the nation were doing likewise. The 24-hour Field Day exercise and contest sponsored by the American Radio Relay League was finished for another year at noon Sunday.

Objective of the worldwide transmissions was to make as many contacts via the microphone (voice) or via continuous wave (code) as possible under emergency-like circumstances.

"We didn't really do too good (in that respect) this year," said Pete Campbell, who was somewhat let down by the showing. "This year, we're going to be way down," he said, though the Field Day was "one of our better efforts."

The Campbell low-power (about three watts) transmitter worked all right on the 20-meter band, but the antenna malfunctioned around midnight Saturday, and the rig was shut down. About 90 contacts were made via low power.

But two other Midland rigs, operating around 200 watts near an old oil field cable-tool derrick at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, made about 800 contacts across the nation and halfway around the world from noon Saturday to noon Sunday.

Some radio operators did rather well by making 60 contacts in an hour.

"That's keeping your mouth in gear," joked Banks Campbell.

Campbell and son had opted to operate on low power. Under the contest rules, each low-power phone contact means five points and each continuous wave (CW) contact means 10 points. Those fellows operating with the high-power (mostly 200-watt but up to 1,000-watt) transmitters get only one-fifth the number of points per contact: one by voice, two by code.

"It's harder, more difficult to do," young Campbell said in explaining why ARRL allows more points for transmitting in code than it does by voice.

The more powerful transmitters tend to drown out the "little fellow," who has to be somewhat more selective in trying to "get through."

"There's a lot of technicalities, a lot of frustrations, operating like that," he said of the low-power setup.

Campbell and Campbell figured that the efforts made by the Midland Amateur Radio Club in the 1981 Field Day will fall far short of that in 1979, when the club ranked fifth worldwide in points and contacts. But in '79, the club had a distinct advantage.

"See, we had this antenna on top of a derrick," father Campbell said of the wood replica of a turn-of-the-century cable-tool derrick.

"Everybody was feeling 'break neck' (back then in scaling the derrick)," said the son.

"Too many nails have worked loose," figured the father. "It makes you leery about climbing that dude."

The Midland hams will be set up about this time next year for another emergency-preparedness contest. The rigs are powered either by batteries or by self-contained generators.

"It's a good exercise," said the younger Campbell. "It challenges you."

Campbell estimated that about a third of the world's 100,000 amateur radio operators participated in the contest in one fashion or another.

"It's the world's largest (sports) contest, far and away," he said. "It's three-times the size of the Boston Marathon, and it (hamming on Field Day) is a marathon, too."

Wayne Robinson, president of the Midland Amateur Radio Club, spent the day and night out on the Field Day camp. He was tired and seemed almost as pooped out as if he had been in a marathon.

"I'm not going to run another one. I'll guarantee it," he said. "I've had my fill."

After a year's rest, he'll be back in good form and will be eager to set up his rig, turn the frequency dial, key in, transmit-and talk.

Fugitive to be returned to West Virginia

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Ronald Williams, one of the most hunted West Virginia fugitives in recent years, will be under extremely tight security on his return to prison this week to guard against attacks by inmates who blame him for a penitentiary crackdown, officials say.

Authorities were also taking extra steps to insure that Williams — who was captured after a shootout in a New York City that ended his 17 months on the loose — would not escape again from the state penitentiary at Moundsville.

"He'll be coming home. And extraordinary procedures will have to be taken simply because he is who he is," said Tom Cook, a state Corrections Dep$rtment official. "He is an extreme escape risk."

Williams, 38, broke out of prison with 14 other convicts in November 1979. He was captured by the FBI after a gunfight in the lobby of a hotel June 8. Williams, who was on the FBI's 10 most-2anted list, was wounded in the shootout.

Authorities suspected Williams was in the New York City area, Cook said. He said they were able to close in on Williams after they began receiving more information following an Associated Press story on the hunt for him. Cook said authorities got a tip that Williams had been at the New York hotel after the story ran.

"It did have a strong part in their (informants) willingness to provide information," Cook said.

Authorities traced Williams to the Hotel George Washington. When agents surprised Williams in the hotel lobby he drew a gun. An agent posing as a hotel clerk ordered him to drop the pistol.

"Drop dead. Drop yours!" Williams reportedly said as he pulled the trigger of his gun. But Williams' gun misfired, and another agent shot and injured Williams, authorities said.

Williams, who has escaped from prison at least five times and is regarded by some police officers and convicts as a genius with an IQ of 145, uses disguises ranging from a stockbroker to a woman. He was the last of the Moundsville escapees to be captured.

He taunted authorities with their failure to capture him. He sent friends at Moundsville cards saying "Wish you were here."

Cook says Williams may be in considerable danger once back at Moundsville. While some prisoners view him as a hero, others blame him for a crackdown after the escape that led to a curtailment of prisoners' privileges, he said.

"As soon as we get him back we're going to have to provide the greatest security we can not only to protect him but to prevent him from escaping," Cook said.

Williams, who has spent half of his life in prison, was serving a life sentence for killing a police officer when he escaped.

Recipes for making jams, jellies, preserves

A good jelly is clear, sparkling and beautiful in color, according to Betty Ambrose, homemaking teacher at Lee High School. She was an instructor in a recent food preservation seminar.

The event, held at the high school, was sponsored by the homemaking department and the County Extension Office. Sharon Hillis, county extension agent, also presented programs which were free and open to the public.

A good jelly will hold its shape when removed from molds, yet is so tender in texture that it cuts easily with a spoon and is firm enough that it retains its shape, said Mrs. Ambrose.

Pectin, acid and sugar are necessary to make jelly. They must be of the right kind and in the proper proportion.

PREPARING THE FRUIT

- Select a mixture of slightly underripe and ripe fruit.
- Wash fruits, discarding any spoiled parts.
- Cut hard fruits, such as crab apples, quinces and apples into pieces. Berries and currants may be slightly crushed.
- Add enough water to barely cover hard fruits (about one pint water for each pound of fruit).
- Currants, grapes and berries need only enough water to start them cooking (about 1/4 cup water for each quart of fruit.) Boil until fruit is tender.
- Pour the hot, cooked fruit at once into a jelly bag and let drip. When dripping has almost ceased, press jelly bag. Re-strain as clear as possible.
- Jellies and preserves made in small quantities are more satisfactory. Work with not more than 6 to 8 cups of juice at a time. Use a kettle that will hold 4 to 6 times as much juice as used. Unsweetened fruit juices may be canned and made into jellies later.

TESTING FOR THE JELLY POINT

Bring jelly to a full, rolling boil that cannot be stirred down. Dip a spoon in the boiling jelly. As it nears the jelling point it will drop from the side of the spoon in two drops. When the drops run together and slide off in a sheet from the inside of the spoon, the jelly is finished and should be removed from the heat at once.

A candy or jelly thermometer may be used. The temperature of the boiling juice at the jellying point will be from 220 degrees to 222 degrees F. at sea level. At higher altitudes the temperature will be lower. Remove the foam from the jelly and pour at once into sterilized jelly glasses or jars. Fill to within 1/2 inch of the top. Place lids on jar—screw band firmly tight. Process 5 minutes in boiling water bath.

PECTIN

Pectin is a substance in fruits which, when heated and combined with fruit acid and sugar, causes the substance to congeal or "jell." Not all fruit contains pectin, but the homemaker may extract pectin from fruits such as apples, plums, quinces, etc., and combine it with other fruit juices, or use commercial pectin. When using commercial pectin, be sure to follow the recipe thsat comes with the pectin. Powdered pectin will not dissolve in already sweetened juice.

TO TEST JUICE FOR PECTIN

The juice may be tested to determine whether it contains sufficient pectin to make jelly. The amount of pctin will indicate the amount of sugar to be used.

Mix two teaspoons sugar, one tablespoon Epsom Salts, two tablespoons cooked fruit juice. Stir well and let stand for 20 minutes. If mixture forms into a semi-solid mass the juice contains sufficient pectin.

TO TEST FOR ACID

Juice high in pectin may lack acid to make good jelly. The fruit juice should be as tart as one teaspoon lemon juice mixed with three tablespoons of water. If necessary, lemon juice may be added to the fruit juice Usually one tablespoon lemon juice to each cup of fruit juice is sufficient.

ADDING THE SUGAR

The amount of sugar to be added will be determined by the pectin content of the juice.

Juices high in pectin should have 3/4 cup sugar for each cup of juice. Juices low in pectin should have 1/2 cup of sugar for each cup juice.

Juice should be boiling when the sugar is added. Boil jelly as rapidly as possible.

SEALING JELLY

Paraffin Seal — When jelly is cold and firm, remove any particles of jelly on glass above surface. Melt paraffin over low heat. Pour thin layer of hot paraffin (about 1/8 inch thick) over jelly. Slightly rotate the glass so paraffin will stick to sides of glass above jelly surface. Place clean, dry lid on jelly glass. Label and store in a cool, dry place.

Vacuum Seal — Use half pint jars or country kitchen jars, fill to within 1/2 inch of top of jar with boiling jelly. Wipe sealing edge. Put on cap, screw band firmly tight. Process 5 minutes in the boililng water bath.

To remake jelly that did not jell — Measure jelly to be recooked. For each quart of jelly, measure 1/4 cup sugar, 1/4 cup water and 4 teaspoons powdered pectin. Mix pectin and water and bring to boiling, stirring constantly to prevent scorching. Add jelly and sugar. Stir thoroughly. Bring to a full rolling boil over high heat. Remove foam from the jelly and pour at once into sterilized jelly glasses or jars. Fill to within 1/2 inch of the top. Process 5 minutes in boiling water bath.

To make jelly with all white corn syrup or honey, use 3/4 cup corn syrup or 1 cup honey to each cup fruit juice. However, flavor of syrup or honey may be more pronounced than the fruit flavor. It is best to replace not more than 1/2 the sugar with white corn syrup or honey by using 1 cup syrup or honey for each cup sugar omitted. Proceed same as for jellies made with sugar.

PRESERVES

Food preserves are whole fruits or pices of large fruits cooked in heavy syrup until clear, tender and transparent. The fruit should keep its form and plumpness and be somewhat crisp and tender, rather than tough and soft.

Fruits for preserves should be tree-ripened and fresh. Success in making preserves depends in a large measure upon using firm, sound fruit. Some of the fruits best adapted for preserving are strawberries, cherries plums, peaches, crab apples, berries and currants. Thoroughly wash the fruits dicarding any bruised, mushy, or decayed portions. Large fruits such as pears and peaches should be peeled and cut into uniform pieces.

Usually 3/4 pound of sugar is allowed for each pound of fruit. (If scales are not available, use 3/4 cup sugar to each cup of fruit.) The manner in which the sugar is added depends upon the texture of the fruit used. Firm fruits such as pears, quinces, melon rind and crab apples are better if cooked in boiling water until slightly tender. Make a syrup of the sugar and water in which fruit has boiled. Allow this syrup to partly cool before addig the precooked fruit. When precooked fruit is added, bring the mixture slowly to a boil. After mixture has reached the boiling point it should be cooked rapidly until the fruit is clear and tender and the syrup thick.

Such fruits as plums, currants and berries (other than strawberries) can be cooked until the syrup gives a jelly test. These fruits contain pectin and will form a jelly-like consistency. Long, slow cooking may develop a strong flavor. When using small, soft fruits such as cherries and berries, the sugar may be mixed with the fruit and allowed to stand until some of the juice begins to flow, after which it is brought slowly to the boiling point and then boiled rapidly until fruit is tender and transparent.

When the preserves are finished, remove kettle from heat, skim to remove foam if necessary. Preserves will have a better consistency if allowed to plump (stand in shallow trays or pans until cold) before packing into jars.

Jars for preserves should be sterilized by boiling at least 15 minutes, then inverting on a clean, folded cloth. This may be done before the preserves are made. When the preserves have cooled, pack them into sterilized jars to within 1/2 inch of top. Adjust the cap by placing the scalded lid on the jar with sealing composition next to the glass and screw the band firmly tight. Process jars in the boiling water bath.

JAMS, MARMALADES, CONSERVES AND FRUIT BUTTERS are made from the fruit products. Basically, these products are much alike. Their individual characteristics depend on kind of fruit, preparation and method of cooking.

JAMS are made of crushed fruits, mixed with sugar and boiled rapidly until thick.

MARMALADES are made from fruits or combination of fruits often including citrus fruits. The fruit appears in small pieces throughout the clear, transparent jelly-like product.

CONSERVES are mixtures of several crushed fruits often combined with raisins and nut meats, mixed with sugar and boiled rapidly until thick.

FRUIT BUTTERS are the fruit pulp, pressed through a sieve and slowly cooked with sugar (spices if desired) until thick enough to spread.

Below are several recipes handed out by Mrs. Ambrose at the seminar. Booklets, pamphlets and other recipes are also available from the County Extension Office.

APPLE CINNAMON JELLY

1 quart bottled apple juice
1 package powdered pectin
4 1/2 cups sugar
1-2 teaspoons cinnamon candy, red-hots

Prepare parafin. Combine juice and pectin in large sauce pan. Bring to a full rolling boil, add sugar and candies, stirring constantly, and return to boil. Boil 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let boiling subside. Skim. Pour into hot jelly glasses to within 1/2 inch from top. Seal with parafin. Makes 7 1/2 pints.

PRICKLY PEAR JELLY

To make prickly pear jelly, carefully pick the ripe fruit, caled tunas, with tongs or heavy gloves. Use the tongs to hold the fruit over an open flame to singe the spines.

An alternate method is to blanch four to six tunas at a time in boiling water for about 10 seconds. Quickly peel the tunas while the spines are still soft and discard the peeling. Work quickly with a few tunas at a time because the spines will become hard and stickier when they cool.

Cut the fruit in half and cover them wih water. Bring to a boil and simmer until tender. Strain the fruit through a jelly bag to get the juice you'll use in this recipe.

4 cups prickly pear juice
1 pkg. powdered pectin
1/4 cup lemon juice
4 1/2 cups sugar

Combine prickly pear juice lemon juice and pctin. Bring to a boil and boil hard for one minute. Add sugar, bring to a boil again and boil for three minutes. Pour into hot sterilized jelly glasses and cover with hot paraffin. It makes about six glasses.

PEPPER JELLY

3/4 cup bell peppers (ground)
1/4 cup hot peppers (ground)
green food coloring
6 cups sugar
1 1/2 ciup vinegar
1 bottle (6 oz.) fruit pectin

Grate or grind peppers. Do not use seeds or the juice. Bring to a rolling boil in large pan. Remove from heat and let cool for 5 minutes. Add food coloring and fruit pectin. Pour into jars and seal. Makes 3 pints. Good seaved with meats, or as snacks served with crackers that are spread with cream cheese and the jelly.

FIG PRESERVES

3 quarts boiling water
4 quarts fig
6 cvups sugar
1-2 lemons
2 quarts water

Pour 3 quarts boiling water over figs. Let stand for 15 minutes, drain.

Rinse figs in cold water. Prepare syrup by mixing sugar and 2 quarts water, add lemon slices. Bring to a boil over high heat; cook for 10 minutes. Drop a small amount of figs at a time into syrup. Cook over high heat until figs are transparent. Lift figs out and boil syrup until thickened. Return figs to syrup mixture. Fill sterilized jars to within 1/2 inch of top. Cover figs with syrup. Seal jars immediately.

Use leftover syrup for pancakes or waffles.

EASY PEACH PRESERVES
(Can also use apricots in this recipe)

8 cups peaches, cut up
8 cups sugar

Place peaches which have been cut in small pieces in large pan. Add sugar; bring to a boil. Cook and stir for 10-13 minutes or until as tender as desired. Pack in hot sterilized jars and seal immediately.

APPLE BUTTER

4 lbs cooking apples
2 cups apple cider
1/2 cup sugar (per cup of pulp)
3 tsp. cinnamon
1 1/2 tsp. cloves
1/2 tsp. allspice
grated rind and juice of 1 lemon

Cook apples slowly until soft in the apple cider. Put fruit through a fine strainer. Measure pulp and add correct amount of sugar. Add cinnamon, cloves, allspice, rind and juice. Cook the fruit butter over low heat, stirring constantly until the sugar is dissolved. Continue to cook, stirring frequently until the mixture sheets from a spoon. Can also place a small quantity on a plate. When no rim of liquid separates around the edge of the butter, it is done. Pour into hot sterilized jars. Makes 5 pints.

TUESDAY: Freezing and drying foods.

Whale oil in demand

Whale oil is in demand for everything from automobile transmissions to airplane engines, according to National Geographic. However, if jojoba were cultivated again, it might take some of the pressure off whale oil. Jojoba oil duplicates the composition of whale oil. The jojoba plant is among dozens of former American Indian crops that today still grow within the United States.

Monkeys like cold climate

Monkeys are thought to be residents of hot, steamy jungles. But some monkeys make their home in the mountains of Japan. Over thousands of years, they have developed longer fur and different habits that help them get along in a cold climate, said National Geographic.

Scientists receive award

PITTSBURGH Pa. (AP) — Dr. Mary Dawson has received the Arnold Guyot Prize awarded by the National Geographic Society in recognition of her outstanding contributions to science through her research in the Canadian Arctic.

The paleontologist at Carnegie Museum of Natural History, Carnegie Institute, will share the $4,000 prize with her colleague, Dr. Robert M. West, a geologist at the Milwaukee Public Museum.

The pair presented fossil evidence from Canada's Ellesmere Island that North America and Europe were linked by a land bridge and shared the same animal types 45 to 80 million years ago.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

How to work with adhesive

DEAR HELOISE:

When my husband and daughter laid asphalt tiles in our basement, they used that gooey black adhesive to stick them down.

Naturally it got on their hands as well as the tiles. My husband started cleaning it with gasoline but it just smeared the black goo, not to mention the smell.

I remembered baby oil removed oil paint from the skin, so I tried it on their hands — great! Then (bright idea!!) I thought why not on the tile floor. Beautiful!

Even the next day, when I returned to finish the job and the adhesive had hardened, it came off with just a little longer rubbing with a soft cloth saturated with the baby oil.

I couldn't remove the smears left by the gasoline treatment completely, as it had penetrated the tile, but I did lighten them considerably.

The baby oil (a less expensive store brand) did such a wonderful job that I had to pass the tip on. Just be sure and go over the area afterwards with a clean cloth to remove the oil residue.

So, before your husband goes for the gasoline or paint remover, try the baby oil — The Loyles

+ + +

Now that's smart! And it's much easier on the skin, not to mention the nose! — Heloise

SMART COVER UP

Dear Heloise: When opening a new can of scrubbing cleanser, remove the square piece of tape from the holes on the lid and replace the tape, leaving only one or two holes open.

This allows you to adequately dispense the cleanser but cuts down on the waste. — Jane Coursin

BABY'S WIPE-UPS

Dear Heloise: When my first baby was born, I bought two packages of disposable dishcloths and cut them in half.

Pre-moistened washcloths were too expensive and I didn't have a large enough supply of standard washcloths to use for baby as well as family.

The disposable dishcloths solved my problem. I use them for every baby need from diaper change to bathtime.

They've lasted several months, and I just throw them into the washing machine with the other baby laundry and they come out as good as new. — S.E.R.

Pittsburg's history preserved in cemetary

By KATY BUCHANAN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — On a cool spring day, children play near an entrance to the Allegheny Cemetery, squirrels dig busily for last year's nuts, and blossoming cherry and crabapple trees wave their branches in a gentle breeze.

In an unused section of the cemetery, gardeners tend rented vegetable plots in the early spring sunshine.

The cemetery stretches across 300 acres in the city's sturdy, blue-collar Lawrenceville and Bloomfield sections. But once a visitor steps inside the burial ground's stately gates, the workaday world slips away.

For it is here that much of the city's history is preserved.

Soaring obelisks, serene stone angels and lavish vaults — monuments to famous Pittsburgh families like the Mellons, the Hornes, the Negleys and the Hunts — crowd the low, rolling hills that are part of the cemetery's original 100 acres.

Two time-blackened stone figures guard the huge, church-like mausoleum of PPG Industries founder J.B. Ford.

Much of America's past is here too. Actress Lillian Russell and her fourth husband, Alexander Penn Moore, a Pittsburgh publisher, lie in a simple mausoleum.

Composer Stephen C. Foster also is buried here — the story of his life and music rendered in a shimmering stained glass window by Philadelphia glass master Henry Lee Willet.

"We're really the history-keeping device for the city of Pittsburgh," Thomas Hornstein, the general manager, said during a recent interview.

But keeping history has become costly. Daily cemetery operating costs have increased 250 percent in the last decade, Hornstein estimated, and many of the 137-year-old cemetery's stone buildings are in the early stages of decay.

The elegant sandstone administration building, built in 1888, retains many of its original trappings inside. A white marble fireplace still graces Hornstein's office, although the room is heated by radiators.

A richly carved wooden staircase curls upward from the Gothic-style building's ground level to the second floor. But outside, scaffolding has been erected under the porch to protect pedestrians from falling ceiling stones.

A tall, stone tower at the cemetery's Penn Avenue entrance has been closed due to its antiquated condition.

Some of the older monuments have been worn down by time and the elements, their stone angels featureless and their cut inscriptions blurred.

The upkeep of a structure is the owner's responsibility, although endowments can be made specifying care instructions, Hornstein said. Even century-old graves must be maintained with the interest from their endowments.

To maintain the cemetery's unofficial status as preserver of the past, its board of directors sought and recently won a listing on the National Registry of Historic Places.

The Allegheny Cemetery Historical Association was then formed, and already it has raised $200,000 to repair the stone tower, built in the 1840s.

The board of directors also ordered an energy-saving program, which included shortened visiting hours and limiting plantings by lot owners to save maintenance costs.

But despite the slow deterioration of some of its buildings, the cemetery has pursued a program of new construction and beautification in recent years.

A 7,000-crypt "Temple of Memories" was completed in 1961 at a cost of $4 million.

A public gallery in the huge mausoleum showcases donated art works, insured for more than $500,000. The collection includes a painting by famed French Impressionist Jean Baptiste Camille Corot.

A 300-year-old Flemish tapestry, also donated, hangs on a chapel wall. The building's walls and floors are lined with huge marble slabs from around the world.

In 1968, the cemetery commissioned a three-ton bronze statue of Christ, cast in Ital, insuredfor $50,000. The 33-foot figure now stands in the cemetery's five-acre Garden of Peace burial ground.

"In order to keep new business coming here, we have to provide facilities that are attractive to the burial customs of the day," the general manager said.

"If we stopped, if were not progressive enough to provide above-ground burial, or a memorial park plan, then all the people who would normally supply us with new money and new business would go elsewhere," said Hornstein, who's headed cemetery operations since 1958.

The popularity of inexpensive, easy-to-maintain burial spaces may have ended the day of the elaborate mausoleum and extravagant vault. But it hasn't diminished the cemetery's drawing power.

American style: Bilingual preacher-lawyer bridges gap between professions, cultures

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Careful planning — and a lot of prayer — have helped Rafael de Armas bridge two cultures, two languages and two jobs that some would say are conflicting.

De Armas, 44, is a bilingual attorney who sandwiches his duties as head of Orlando's Primer Iglesia Bautista (First Baptist Church) around court appearances.

The Cuban-American noted that many people who share William Shakespeare's sentiments about attorneys ("The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers" — Henry VI, Part II) don't see how he can also serve in the ministry.

"They think all attorneys are crooks and all pastors are not," de Armas said, laughing.

"But I can tell you something that will surprise you. There is more professionalism among lawyers than among pastors.

"And, there is swifter, more severe punishment — I'm talking about punishment during this life — for a lawyer who violates the code of ethics than for a pastor who breaks the rules."

As hectic as his schedule tends to be, de Armas, true to Cuban tradition, insists that his family must take precedence over all.

"I am a father and a husband first, a pastor next and a lawyer last," de Armas said.

De Armas came to this country in 1954 as an 18-year-old student interested in mechanical engineering.

After the Lord called, de Armas studied for the ministry. Following graduation, he was married and took a job with the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Conference.

He worked in California before moving to South Florida, where he served as a pastor in Hialeah and then as a missionary to migrant workers in Perrine.

After four years, de Armas moved to Orlando to become a weekday minister at the First Baptist Church. He did much work in the Spanish community and this eventually led to formation of Primera Iglesia Bautista under the umbrella of the First Baptist Church.

His bilingual abilities came increasingly into use as de Armas attempted to counsel and help Hispanics with a poor understanding of the city or county establishment.

Frequently, he was called upon to interpret for lawyers or their troubled clients. He often found that lawyers wouldn't take cases because they couldn't make any money off the poor.

"With immigration problems, traffic tickets, et cetera, where little money was to be made, it was hard to get an attorney. They weren't interested," de Armas said.

"Nobody spoke Spanish. It was a mess. Nobody was willing to take a case with little hope of gain," de Armas said.

In attempting to establish a legal aid clinic, de Armas himself was talked into going to law school by officials at the University of Florida.

His church agreed to keep him on as part-time pastor.

And de Armas began the long grind of law school, traveling to Gainesville and preaching in Orlando while his wife stayed home and worked and took care of the four children.

"My wife is the real hero," he said.

After obtaining his law degree, he "established" his firm by working out of his car to keep expenses to the minimum.

He now has an office in a converted house in downtown Orlando. But he works alone: no secretary screens his calls, takes dictation or does the filing.

"If the phone rings, who is it going to be for?" he said. "The pope? No, it will be for me, so I might as well answer it."

There have been many times when de Armas has had to make a "conscious choice" between doing the Lord's work or legal work.

"I've found that when the time comes to do the law work, the Lord will open doors for me and help me.

"People say if a pastor has another full-time job, he doesn't have enough faith. They say the pastor should trust in God and He will take care of him.

"I say it is because I have faith that I am doing what I am doing," de Armas said.

DEAR ABBY

Driver's happy hour results in tragedy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Last February, our daughter, a beautiful, talented, 16-year-old high school senior, was killed by a driver who admitted that he had been drinking in a bar for five hours. Our daughter and a group of 20 youngsters were walking home from a religious convention when the driver plowed into them, killing three and injuring three others. (The driver got off with a $100 fine for a "minor traffic violation.")

We later learned that about 25,000 Americans are killed and over 500,000 more are injured every year in accidents involving drunk drivers.

Legislation is now being sponsored across the nation to toughen laws dealing with drunk drivers. But more important, if people would realize the misery they can cause by driving after they've had a few drinks, possibly some lives could be saved.

Our tragedy inspired me to write the following poem. I hope you will publish it. — CYD (MRS. ALFRED) HASSNER, BINGHAMTON, N.Y. A CHILD'S PLEA

"Daddy, it was your night out with the boys;
"You drank for hours while I played with my toys.
"Drove into the night, as bold as can be
"And in one moment, destroyed the lives of three.
"For years you taught me, 'Thou shalt not kill,'
"How can I follow your guidance, your will?
"Why did you drink and drive that night?
"I need a father to show me what's right.
"You silenced forever the lives of three.
"Why, Daddy, did you kill someone like me?"

DEAR READERS: An interesting footnote: When I telephoned the Hassners to express my sympathy for the loss of their daughter, I said, "I do hope she wasn't your only child." Mr. Hassner replied, "No, fortunately we have two others, a 22-year-old daughter who was recently married, and a 10-year-old son." Then he added, "But we lost a 7-year-old daughter to leukemia 12 years ago, and three years later, our infant son was killed in a car crash. But my wife and I were lucky. We survived the Holocaust in Vienna."

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the idea of an Adulterers Anonymous: It's a terrific idea. I know exactly what she's talking about. I have the same illness. And I believe it's an illness, just like alcoholism.

I'm in Alanon (the organization for friends and families of alcoholics), and this last week I allowed the same "higher power" (God for me) help me from making a phone call that would have led to another affair.

I would give anything to be able to talk to someone who knows and understands my feelings. Yes, if there were an Adulterers Anonymous, I would have made a phone call without question. — GROWING STRONGER IN ARIZONA

Anorexia factor

NEW YORK (AP) — A psychotherapist who has been treating victims of anorexia nervosa for the past 10 years, places some of the blame for the current prevalence of the disease on fashion designers, and fashion photos which feature very young and thin models.

"In essence, anorexia nervosa becomes an absurd exaggeration of fashion's message to women," says Steven Levenkron in an article in Forum magazine about the psychological disorder characterized by self-induced starvation.

Fifteen years ago the illness was almost unheard of, says the therapist. Today one out of every 250 girls in the "thin" nations of the world — North America, Western Europe and Australia — is an anorexic, Levenkron claims.

'Worldy' matters often seen on TV in some parts of world

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

A kiss on the cheek marks the limit of decency on television in India. Full frontal nudity causes little stir in Yugoslavia and Australia, but one Australian show bans the word "divorce."

Whatever the standards, ranging from prudish in the Soviet Union, Argentina and the Islamic world to permissive in most of Western Europe, few nations have the kind of decency campaign being waged in the United States by the Coalition for Better Television, an Associated Press survey shows.

In Britain, 18 years after Mary Whitehouse founded the National Viewers and Listeners Association to promote "spiritual and moral values" on television, viewers still adore the leering Benny Hill. Frontal nudity is occasionally shown in Britain.

In Japan, television dotes on strippers and titillating documentaries despite protests by the Parent Teachers Association. PTA director Kengo Takeuchi admits: "We haven't been too effective."

Several years ago the group pressured a sponsor to drop a particularly offensive program, Takeuchi said, "but other sponsors jumped right in."

The "11 p.m. Show" on week nights and Saturday night's "Adult Hour" dish up bouncing bare breasts and pseudo-documentaries on sex shops, massage parlors and coffee shops where waitresses wear sheer pantyhose but no panties beneath their miniskirts.

Despairing of influencing sponsors and broadcasters, Takeuchi said the PTA now tries to encourage parents to monitor their children's viewing.

The Coalition for Better Television, a group sponsored in large part by the Moral Majority, has met with representatives of some companies to ask them to stop sponsoring shows the group finds too violent or sexy.

Cal Thomas, vice president of Moral Majority, said Sunday the discussions with advertisers were so successful that the Coalition may drop a plan to boycott sponsors of shows it considers objectionable. A decision was to be announced today.

Even without formal decency campaigns, every nation has its standards. "Dallas" is a convenient gauge.

The exploits of J.R. Ewing are wildly popular in South Africa, but the Rev. P.J. Van Staden of the Nederduitsch Hervormde Kerk has condemned the show's "free sex" and "glorifying of thugs."

"Dallas" is top-rated in Denmark, but the Radio Council panned it for "trashy" scripts and characters. In the Persian Gulf, "Dallas" is shown with every kiss deleted.

Between the world's puritans and its libertines, tastes vary widely. Argentina banned the Three Stooges, Brazil a show portraying a man doing housework. For Soviets a bedroom scene is OK as long as the couple is at least engaged and the sheet is tucked tightly under their chins.

Many countries draw the line in children's bedrooms. The barriers come down once the little nippers are presumed to be asleep.

"Sex, profanity, nudity, violence; you name it, it all goes," said Roland Bekking, a spokesman for the Dutch Broadcasting Foundation. "The only problem is the time it is aired."

Australians have seen "Last Tango in Paris," uncut, and "Let's Go Naked," a BBC documentary about a nudist colony, after 8:30 p.m. But the government licensing board banned the word "divorce" on a 6 p.m. soap opera, lest it upset children, and banned the film "Taxi Driver" after President Reagan was shot by a man allegedly influenced by the film.

Yugoslavian viewers see it all — sex, homosexuality, profanity, full nudity. There were only a few protests when a closeup of a penis was shown in "Breakdown," a Yugoslavian film.

France's three government-owned television networks are lenient about sex and nudity, but sometimes excise particularly violent movie scenes.

In permissive Sweden, said Lars Bergman, director of the radio board, there are more complaints about heavy drinking on U.S. shows than about sex or violence.

Austrian TV showed "Last Tango" uncut, but there was a furor last year when the punk rocker, Nina Hagen, demonstrated a masturbatory technique on a late-night talk show.

Israeli TV usually permits the most provocative profanity in news and talk shows, but last week, television director Yitzhak Shimoni vetoed an appearance by "Happy Hooker" Xaviera Hollander on an early evening show.

A variety show hostess, Mehtab Channa, was sacked by Pakistan Television last winter because she dropped her "dopatta," a veil which covers the top and sides of the head.

Moslem Malaysia bans kissing in local productions, but a brief kiss or a bikini-clad woman is tolerated in an imported show.

In neighboring Singapore, shows are heavily censored to remove any sex, nudity or suggestion of drug addiction. "Starsky and Hutch" used to be shown, but any scene showing a police officer being killed was snipped out.

In China, kissing, profanity and stylized violence appear on TV, but a series called "Eighteen Years Behind Enemy Lines" was criticized for showing too much flesh — an actress doing a bathing scene in a one-piece swimsuit.

In South Africa, where a restrictive code is dictated by the strait-laced ruling Afrikaans minority, even a little nudity makes a big impact. There was public outcry over a scene showing a bare-breasted woman portraying an aborigine in an Australian series, "Against the Wind." One excited Johannesburg newspaper interviewed the actress about what it's like to be bare.

Argentina's National Department of Radio and Television, an agency of the military government, weeds out violence, profanity and sex. In 1978, one station was ordered to stop showing the Three Stooges for fear of inciting violence in children.

In Brazil, censors forced changes in an episode of "More Than Just Friends" because it showed the bachelor hero, Edu, doing housework while his girlfriend worked in the city — an affront to macho sensibilities. Censors also demanded changes in an episide where Edu was carrying on an affair with a women and her mother.

Talks with sponsors may be sufficient

WASHINGTON (AP) — Talks with TV advertisers have been so successful that the Coalition for Better Television may drop its threatened boycott of sponsors of programs it finds too violent or sexy, a Moral Majority official says.

"Because of the tremendous positive response from sponsors, the coalition is leaning toward not having a boycott," Cal Thomas, vice president of Moral Majority, said Sunday.

A decision on a boycott was to be announced at a press conference today in Washington, according to Thomas, who said the matter was discussed Sunday night by the Rev. Donald Wildmon, head of the coalition, and the Rev. Jerry Falwell, Moral Majority president.

Thomas, in a telephone interview from his home in Lynchburg, Va., said the coalition, of which the Moral Majority is a key supporter, has asked some companies to stop sponsoring shows it finds objectionable.

"We're just delighted in the calm, rational response," he said. "Many had no idea what they were underwriting. And they're now doing a reassessment of their advertising procedures."

The major networks have criticized the coalition as would-be censors. But fall schedules made public in April — and recent announcements by major advertisers — suggested Wildmon's message had been heard.

"Our new schedule reflects something important that is happening in the country right now," ABC's executive vice president, Frederick A. Pierce, told affiliates in May.

PEOPLE

Religious leaders still recuperating

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A St. Peter's Square crowd estimated at 7,000 heard Pope John Paul II thank the world's Roman Catholics for their prayers and support "in these difficult weeks and months" following the attack on his life.

John Paul II

"How deeply I want to thank all those who, in consideration of my weakness, have offered and continue to offer me support," the 61-year-old pontiff said in a taped message from his Gemelli Hospital bed broadcast Sunday to the pilgrims at the V$tican.

John Paul is suffering from a virus that has slowed his recovery from gunshot wounds received May 13. He was released June 3 after three weeks in the hospital but returned June 20 suffering from pleurisy, an inflammation of the membrane surrounding the lungs.

Vatican sources said the pope spent a tranquil day Sunday. He celebrated a Mass attended by a small number of prelates and hospital workers.

Doctors said Saturday it may be as long as three weeks before the pope can be released from the hospital. It is not known when surgeons will perform a second operation to reverse the colostomy, a procedure creating an intestinal bypass, performed after the pope was shot. It originally was scheduled for early July.

S.W. Kimball

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball was listed in good condition at a hospital after undergoing minor surgery for adjustments on his heart pacemaker, a church spokesman said.

Doctors attempted to make the adjustments on the pacemaker, which was implanted May 16, without surgery but couldn't, said Jerry Cahill, a spokesman for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Kimball, 86, entered LDS Hospital Saturday and underwent surgery less than an hour later. Cahill said doctors gave the church leader a local anesthetic, and he was alert and chatting during surgery.

Cahill said Kimball might be released from the hospital today.

●

BOSTON (AP) — The crowd was large and the music was beautiful, but people didn't know whether to cheer "Pavarotti" or "Giorgio."

The two-hour event Saturday on Boston's Esplanade attracted an estimated 110,000 people, who gave Italian opera tenor Luciano Pavarotti four encores.

The affair on the banks of the Charles River was staged as part of a $15 million movie, "Yes, Giorgio!" with Pavarotti in the title role.

Hundreds pulled up to the banks in small boats to listen to Pavarotti and the orchestra, conducted by Emerson Buckley, who is "Klaus Eisenstaedt" in the movie scheduled to be released in June 1982.

Approximately 10 to 15 minutes of the concert will be included in the movie, according to MGM publicist Sara Keene.

Film director Franklin J. Schaffner shouted instructions from atop the roof of a nearby Emerson College dormitory.

A section of the crowd seated on chairs paid $300 each to attend the concert as guests of state officials. The money, at Pavarotti's request, was divided among three charities.

●

NEW YORK (AP) — Although millions of kids will flock to see Christopher Reeve in "Superman II" this summer, one who won't be allowed to attend is his 18-month-old son, Matthew.

"I'd be appalled if anyone called him Superboy," Reeve, 28, said in an interview published in the current issue of People magazine.

He denies the Man of Steel's affair with Lois Lane is the reason for keeping his son away.

Big melon has big price

LULING, Texas (AP) — The champion watermelon at the annual Watermelon Thump was no bargain. The 69-pound, 2-ounce melon was auctioned off for $3,300 — or more than $47 a pound.

Luling farmer Preston Briscoe grew the melon, which was bought by J.J. Leasing Co. of Luling.

Why would anyone pay more than $3,000 for a melon?

"After they buy them they donate them to a retirement home or something like that," said Briscoe. "Then they can take it off their taxes."

Winkler, Midland gain discoveries

Two discoveries and a confirmer have been announced for the counties of Midland, Winkler, and Mitchell. Also confirmers have been announced in Winkler and Pecos counties.

MIDLAND COUNTY

A.J. Vogel Inc. of Midland has announced completion of a San Andres discovery four miles east of Midland.

Designated the No. 1 Dunn, the well was potentialed to pump eight barrels of 19 gravity oil per day.

It was drilled to 4,438 feet with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,316 feet from a ground elevation of 2,774 feet.

WINKLER COUNTY

Wood, McShane and Thames has annouced the completion of the No. 1 Keystone Cattle Co. as an undesignated discovery in Winkler County, five miles northeast of Kermit.

Potentialed to flow 330 barrels of 37 gravity plus 1,600 barrels of water through a 30/64 inch choke, production was gained through perforations at 4,190 to 4,466 feet which had been acidized with 2,500 gallons and fractured with 43,000 gallons plus 125,000 pounds. The gas to oil ratio is 4848-1.

It was drilled to 4,512 feet and plug back to 4,487 feet with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,499 feet.

Location is 330 feet from the north line and 330 feet from the east line of section 11, block B-3 of the Public School Lands survey.

****

William E. Hendon Jr. of Midland will drill the No. 1 Hogg "14" as a confirmer to the GPM (Pennsylvanian) field of Winkler County, 4.5 miles southeast of Kermit.

Location is 1,980 feet from the north line and 467 feet from the west line of section 14, block B-10 of the Public School Lands survey.

The site is 5,000 feet southeast of the 8,980-foot Hilliard Oil and Gas, abandoned September 1977.

MITCHELL COUNTY

The Jameson, North (Ellenburger) field of Mitchell County has gained a comfirmer with the completion of Marshall & Winston No. 2 J.F. McCabe "C" finaled for 129 barrels of oil, gravity unreported, plus 40 barrels of water per day.

Production was gained through perforations at 7,259 to 7,276 feet which had been acidized with 250 gallons.

Drilled to 7,288 feet, 5 1/2 inch casing was set at 7,188 feet and plugged back to 7,276 feet.

Location is 645.7 feet from the north line and 674.4 feet from the south line of section 4, block 12 of the H&TC survey and is four miles north of Silver.

PECOS COUNTY

PDC Gas Commission of Midland will drill the No. 7 University "A3", a 1,826-foot field test to the Cardinal Queen, West field, three miles southeast of Bakersfield.

Location is 1,980 feet from the north line and 1,980 feet from the east line of section 11, block 17 of the University Lands survey.

****

A.G. Hill of Dallas will drill the No. 1 Trees Co. "46" as a confirmer to the AGH Cherry Canyon and as a wildcat test in Pecos County, 7.5 miles northeast of Coyanosa.

Location is in section 46, block 8 of the H&GN survey and is 2,300 feet southwest of 2,382-foot production.

Contract depth is 6,000 feet.

Only money lacking UT professors say

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two University of Texas professors claim the diverse technology and most of the engineering knowledge to supply solar energy in Texas already are available.

John Howell, professor of mechanical engineering, and John Bordie, professor of linguistics, noted that a state solar advisory committee had stated solar and wind resources could provide up to 15 percent of the projected energy needs of Texas by the year 2000.

That is the equivalent of 400 million barrels of oil or two trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

"The energy collection systems can be in place almost as soon as the capital to construct them is available since the designs are well known and understood," the professors said.

Capital, building codes and some legal redefinitions are the main barriers remaining, they said.

In Texas, they said, the average amount of solar energy available daily for conversion ranges from a low of four kilowatt hours a square meter in Beaumont to a high of 7.5 kilowatt hours in El Paso.

"With a conversion efficiency of 20 percent, the roof surface of a 2,000-square-foot house with good insulation provides at least one half of the energy required for domestic use by the average Beaumont resident, the professors said. In El Paso only about half that area would be needed to supply a similar amount of energy.

"Wind energy has a different distribution," Howell and Bordie said. The supply ranges from a low of two kilowatt hours a square meter from the area swept by the wind generator blades along a line from San Antonio to Lufkin to a high of 4.5 kilowatt hours in the Amarillo area.

"Although energy levels are lower for wind energy than they are for solar energy, the availability of wind at night compensates for this factor, so that the total extractable energy for both sources is approximately equal on a 24-hour basis," the professors said.

They discussed solar and wind energy in Texas Business Review.

Neighbor alerts crews to leak in storage tank

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — About 1,000 gallons of thick No. 2 heating oil spilled from a 3 million gallon tank Sunday before the leak was stemmed by crews alerted by a neighbor, police said.

John Kirley was sitting on his front porch when he "apparently heard a pipe or valve that broke," said Police Lt. Richard Duffy. "He heard a breaking sound and saw the oil filling a dike around the tank."

In a matter of minutes, the oil spilled over and began flowing into the street, he said.

Repair crews from the Davis Fuel Co., owner of the tank, answered within two minutes after Kirley called an emergency telephone number painted on the side of the three-story tank.

"It was a real biggie," said Duffy. "What would have been the worst part of the spill was that this tank is right on the edge of Lake Massasoit which flows into the Mill River which flows into the Connecticut River.

"If this spill had happened at night, when no one could see it, the whole three million gallons would be going through Hartford about now."

Lake Massasoit is in central Springfield and Hartford is about 30 miles south. Duffy described the neighborhood as mixed residential and commercial, and said no residents had to be evacuated.

Officials investigate four-state ring

DALLAS (AP) — A Louisiana "suicide," a Dallas shooting, a millionaire oilman and a reputed Mafia chief could be linked to a four-state oil fraud ring being investigated by federal officials, a Texas newspaper reports.

A federal grand jury in Tulsa is investigating an alleged oil fraud scheme that could involve up to $600 million in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Arkansas, The Dallas Morning News said Sunday in a copyright story.

William O. Johnson, 59, a Lafayette, La., accountant, refused to give information to the grand jury, the newspaper reported. Johnson was found dead of a gunshot wound to the head at his office June 9.

Authorities first reported the death to be a suicide. But no formal ruling was made and the body was exhumed June 19 for an autopsy because of "unanswered questions."

Robert B. Sutton, a millionaire Tulsa oilman, reportedly made threats against witnesses in an oil investigation during a taped telephone conversation with reputed New Orleans Mafia chieftain Carlos Marcello. Sutton uses a Lafayette law firm that referred almost all its accounting jobs to Johnson, the News said.

The Daily Oklahoman has reported that FBI agents intercepted the call between Sutton and Marcello, whose phone was tapped as part of the federal Brilab investigation that led to indictments against several public officials and labor leaders in Texas and Louisiana.

During the call, Sutton "reportedly discussed a plan to break the legs of one witness and to intimidate others involved in an oil fraud investigation," the Oklahoma newspaper said.

In April, the FBI said Sutton's company was one of several involved in a "daisy chain" — transferring crude oil from company to company and changing its certification from "old oil" to higher-priced "new oil."

Joe Hegeman, described as an oil broker or consultant from Florida who had business dealings with Sutton, survived a gunshot wound to the head Jan. 16 in Dallas.

Hegeman was shot in the head Jan. 16 while riding in a car with two men in North Dallas, authorities said. He was robbed of about $200, his watch and coat during the shooting and was dumped into a field, police said.

Although two men are scheduled to stand trial on robbery charges in connection with the shooting, the News quoted sources as saying federal agents are investigating the possibility the shooting could be linked to the oil investigation.

Sutton met Hegeman when Sutton was buying the Xanadu Hotel in Freeport, Grand Bahamas, from Howard Hughes' Summa Corp. several years ago, said Gary Glanz, a private investigator working for Sutton.

"There is no connection between Mr. Sutton and BPM (BPM Ltd., Sutton's Tulsa-based oil marketing firm) with that shooting of Joe Hegeman at all," Glanz said.

Hegeman was associated with the Summa Corp., he said, but was "never a consultant" to BPM, although "he did business with BPM."

Sutton "never met Johnson," but Johnson "was doing records for numerous oilmen. And the reason he was doing those records is because he works for Charley Wooten, who is Mr. Sutton's lawyer," Glanz said.

He said Sutton is under a doctor's care in Los Angeles after suffering a stroke in December.

The Energy Department started proceedings last fall to recover what it said was $195 million in overcharges by AWECO, Inc., a Dallas-area reseller of oil that owns BPM Ltd. and that filed for bankruptcy in March.

In March and April, a special Gregg County grand jury in Tyler, Texas, indicted 21 people from Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana on charges of conspiracy and oil theft.

Tragedy, as well as money, feature of many boomtowns

By BILL CURRY
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

RAWLINS, Wyo. — He had come to town like so many others, an itinerant oilfield worker who had traveled an archipelago of energy boomtowns in the West.

He was going to Rawlins to look for a job, Frank Delapena had told the folks back up the road.

He stayed only two hours. But before he left, law enforcement officials here say, he imposed the harshest incident yet of the rising violence that has afflicted this once-tranquil community.

In Rawlins, the Key Motel had already been robbed at gunpoint — twice. There had been a holdup at the Bridger Inn. A woman had been raped at knifepoint by a man who had climbed into her car in front of the post office.

But none of that had prepared the town for the shock and grief caused, the authorities say, by Delapena's fleeting visit last month. In broad daylight, at a busy intersection one block from police headquarters, they say, Delapena abducted two local girls, ages 9 and 12, held them for several hours, apparently molesting them, then suffocated them and abandoned their bodies beside a busy interstate highway.

It was an inexplicable tragedy, one made all the more mysterious by Delapena's suicide 10 days after his arrest, but nevertheless an extreme illustration of the rising crime now plaguing scores of boomtowns in the Rocky Mountain West.

Whether because of oil shale in Colorado, oil and gas in Wyoming, coal in Montana or molybdenum in Idaho, thousands of newcomers, many of them transients, are migrating to the region's small, remote communites. And there is mounting evidence that they are causing crime, especially violent crime, to increase faster than the population.

As a result, scores of formerly safe and secure places throughout the mountain region are being altered, perhaps forever. It is part of a change brought about by corporate and governmental decision-makers many miles away — and accepted in some communities but resisted in others.

"I kind of welcomed the growth, and I knew there was going to be a price for it," Rawlins Police Chief Abe DeHerrera said of the two girls' murders. "But now we realize what the growth is costing us."

"These are the things that happen in big cities, not in our area," said Lois Penman, a 30-year resident of Rawlins who now oversees a memorial fund for the two girls, RaNae Davidson, 9, and Penny Swanson, 12, at the Rawlins National Bank.

Wyoming found recently that its energy-rich counties — with increases in reported crime as high as 71 percent — had spurred a 7 percent increase in statewide crime in 1980. And, in 1981, crime was up 25 percent statewide over the first there months of last year.

Herb Covey, a Colorado state official who, in a new study, found a nine-year, 140 percent increase in crime in 11 counties on the state's energy-rich western slope, observes: "This is just the beginning. I don't think the vast amount of Colorado has experienced what is going to happen. Crime is not a passing thing, it's a permanent fixture of boomtown life.

"It's as if these boomtowns are catching up with the rest of urbanized society — in a short period of time."

Adds Richard Miklich, a retired Denver policeman who is now sheriff of one of those west slope counties, Delta: "I came out here to relax, and all at once I find myself into it again." He spoke at the end of a three-week period in which the county experienced two attempted safecrackings, two armed robberies, one rape and one throat-slashing.

"The highest toll extracted from boomtowns is the literal destruction of a community which has in the past sustained and nurtured its people," Doyle Jackson, the former mayor of booming Craig, Colo., says. "The decline in quality of life has stolen a community from its people."

Crime in the West's boomtowns is apparently increasing at a rate greater than the increaee in population. Covey found, for example, that the 140 percent increase in reported crime in energy areas occurred while the population was growing by 38 percent. He projected a 94 percent increase in serious crime in the next five years as the state undergoes massive oil shale development.

That disproportionate increase in crime is seen by some as the result of the transient nature of the "boomers," many of them young, single males — and the heavy consumption of alcohol in towns that offer little recreation and entertainment except bars. There is also a feeling that unskilled workers are drawn to the boomtowns by the promise of jobs and that when they fail to find employment, turn to theft or robbery.

It is such an influx that many communities in the West are seeking to avoid, whether they are threatened with MX missile construction, energy development or mineral mining. Residents of one Colorado community facing a huge mining operation, for example, are even opposing a plan to pave their town's dirt streets for fear of changing its character.

Regular gas said cheaper than diesel

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Drivers filling their cars with regular leaded gasoline have been getting more change back lately than if they had bought diesel fuel.

And an oil industry analyst says that change could affect the popularity of diesel-powered vehicles.

Analyst Dan Lundberg said June marked the first time in six years that the price of regular leaded fuel — generally the cheapest gasoline — dropped below that of diesel.

"The motorist deciding whether to purchase a diesel passenger car may want to consider whether diesel fuel will continue to be generally cheaper than gasoline," he said in the weekly Lundberg Letter released Sunday.

During the past 14 months, Lundberg wrote, diesel fuel had been selling for as much as eight cents a gallon less than regular leaded gasoline. But a nationwide survey of service stations during June showed regular gasoline at self-service stations selling for an average $1.283 a gallon while diesel fuel was going for an average $1.288, Lundberg said.

The analyst said increased competition in the glutted gasoline market caused the price drop.

TIPRO to begin oil field theft reporting system

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State law officers and oil and gas officials today announced a theft-reporting system to catch thieves who steal oil field equipment each year valued at up to $1 billion nationwide.

Starting Wednesday, people can call collect to report a theft or to relay information regarding a theft.

The Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association — TIPRO — said this would be the "first statewide reporting system for equipment stolen from the oil patch."

The theft-reporting system will be based in Wichita Falls, at (817) 723-1114.

TIPRO also said several associations have established a reward program of up to $2,500 for the arrest and conviction of people who steal oil field equipment.

Gov. Bill Clements recently signed into law two bills aimed at stopping theft in the oil fields. The laws would increase the penalty for stealing oil field equipment and would require more detailed record-keeping on the sale and exchange of used oil field equipment.

A person who steals oil field equipment, or petroleum, regardless of the value, could be sentenced to up to 20 years in prison and fined $10,000.

Todd Allison of the Lubbock YMCA shows his winning form as he splashes to victory in the 200-meter fly during the West Texas Invitational Swim Meet held over the weeknd at Alamo Pool. Allison was leading in the total point race after the first two days but was nipped by Jody Barrett of the Amarillo Mavericks on the final day of competiton. Allison's victory helped Lubbock finish fifth in the team standings with 90 points while Barrett and the Mavericks finished in sixth with 72½ team points.

COM rolls to WT swim title

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Sitting on a 109 point lead after Saturday's second day of the West Texas Invitational Swim Meet, the City of Midland Swim Team could have rested on their laurels and claimed the team title easily Sunday.

That wasn't the case, however, as the entire COM squad came through with a big day Sunday at Alamo Pool as COM swamped Amarillo Aquatic Club 1203 to 938.

LEADERS ABOUNDED for the victors. Perhaps it was Bruce Quenzer, who won the 200 IM and had seconds in the 100 fly and the 200 breaststroke, as he over took Todd Allison of Lubbock YMCA to win senior top point honors with 56 points.

You can't overlook Michaela Hasek, who claimed three victories — 50 butterfly, 50 breaststroke, and the 100 breaststroke — and was top point gainer with 81 points in the girls' 10 and under. In all, Hasek entered and won nine individual events during the three day water carnavel.

IF YOU still need a leader, cast your eyes toward Lori Thompson in the senior girls divison. Thompson had a first in the 200 IM, second in the 100 back, and a third in the 100 fly Sunday as she garned 72 points to win the points race.

Still need a hero? How about Caroline Reed? All Reed did Sunday was bag three firsts — 100 fly, 200 IM, and the 100 back, as she led the 11-12 girls' scoring parade with 77 points.

Despite the big day for COM, only Heather Hardy of Amarillo Aquatic Club could set a new record. Hardy's time of 32.54 in the girls' 11-12 back broke the old pool mark of 32.68 and Hardy's own West Texas standard of 32.68. In addition to her record, Hardy took firsts in the 50 fly and the 100 breaststroke as she collected 75 points to outdueled teammate Rhonda O'Neal for top point honors.

GARY ILMAN, coach of COM was fairly satisfied with what he saw. On Hasek he said, "She needs some more competition in the lane next to her. Her times are running just about the same; she needs someone to really push her."

For Bill McNeely and his Indian River team from Fort Pierce, Fla., there was disappointment in finishing fourth in the team race with 631 points despite firsts from Andy Garick in the 13-14 boys 200 IM and the 200 breaststroke, Joan Carbonara's first in the senior girls' 100 back, and Mary Gorham in the 13-14 200 breaststroke.

McNeely said, "We had some good swims and just enjoyed being here. Our head coach, Doug Ingram, is a former COM coach so when we were looking for a place to swim out of state we selected this meet. Our kids were enthusiastic about coming to Texas as most of them had never been here before."

McNeely added, "Each year we like to travel to one meet in a different state. Out kids hold a swim-a-thon to raise money each year and this year we decided on this meet. It has been a realy well ran pool, the people in Midland have been real friendly and we have enjoyed ourselves very much."

BESIDES THE top point getter, COM received some sterling efforts in the senior girls' division. One came from Bridgette Coon, who claimed a first in the 100 fly and added a third in the 200 IM and a sixth in the 100 back.

Andrea Freeman splashed to a first place in the 1500 freestyle in 18.28:83 but had to settle for runnerup in the 200 breaststroke and fifth in the 200 IM. Suzi Simpson crossed the wire fifth in the 100 fly and added a fourth in the 100 back. Doreen McGookey managed a fifth place in the 200 breaststroke.

COM's senior boys sprang several surprises during Sunday's action. Fred Hogan turned in a third in the 1500 freestyle, fourth in the 100 fly, and a fifth in the 200 breaststroke. James Schupp swam to thirds in the 100 fly and the 100 back while Mike Seay had a fourth in the 100 back and an eighth in the 200 IM.

Additional scoring came from Pat Rhamey with a second in the 1500 free and a fourth in the 200 breaststroke and Mark Quenzer's third in the 200 breast and sixth in the 200 IM.

JAY BARRETT was the big winner in the 13-14 boys. Barrett took three first — 100 fly, 200 IM and the 200 breaststroke — as the Amarillo Maverick came-from-behind to gain top point honors over Steve Harding of Lubbock YMCA.

The 13-14 boys is a weak division for COM. Scoring highest was Wesley Evitt with a third in the 200 back and John Huff with a third in the 100 fly. Evitt added a sixth in the 200 IM and Huff collected a sixth in the 200 IM and a seventh in the 100 back. Jeff Smith finished with a fifth in the 100 fly and a sixth in the 200 breaststroke.

Jana Housman was the only other COM 13-14 girl to score besides Reed. Housman took home a second in the 100 fly and thirds in the 200 IM and the 100 back.

Tina Stephens picked up some valuable points for Midland YMCA with a second in the 200 breaststroke.

Robert Fulton of AAC had the 11-12 boys competition in his hip pocket. He took home gold medals in the 50 fly, 200 free, and the 100 breastroke as he topped the divison with 75 points.

COM's best efforts in the divison were turned in by Jay Green with seconds in the 200 free an the 50 back plus a fourth in the 50 fly. Alan Reed added a third in the 100 breaststroke, a fourth in the 200 free and a seventh in the 50 fly. John Beasley rounded out COM's scoring with fifths in the 50 back and the 100 breaststroke.

HARDY AND O'Neal were the class of the 11-12 girls. Scoring for COM came from a second in the 200 free and thirds in the 50 fly and the 100 breaststroke by Becky Simpson. Laura Morse added a third in the 50 back, fifth in the 200 free, and a sixth in the 100 breaststroke. Tracey Delaney notched a second in the 50 back to go along with fourths in the 200 free and the 100 breaststroke while Kelly Gosnell added a sixth in the 50 back.

It was all Hal Noelke of San Angelo Swim Club in the 10 and under boys. Noelke finished first in the 50 back and second in the 50 fly and the 100 breaststroke as he collected a divison-leading 68 points.

COM's best effort was a fourth turned in by Chris McLucas in the 100 breaststoke and fourth by Seth Randle in the 50 fly. Randle also collected a fifth in the 50 back while Kelly Delany notched a sixth in the 50 fly and Travis Sturdivant splashed to a fifth in the 50 fly and a sixth in the 50 back. Chris Beasely rounded out COM's scoring in the division with a fifth in the 100 reaststroke and an eighth in the 50 back.

Kristen Henry was the only COM girl other than Hasek to score in the 10 and under division. Henry took home an eighth in the 50 breaststroke.

In the relay competition, COM took firsts 10 and under boys 200 medley and the senior boys 400 medley. The senior girls added a second in the 400 medley and the 10 and under girls added a third in the 200 medley.

El Paso clubs Cubs, 11-7

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

For a while Midland appeared headed for its second straight whitewash and maybe it would have hurt a little less if El Paso lefthander Mike Madden had finished the job.

Madden took a 5-0 three hiter into the sixth only to be bombarded for four runs by the Cubs. Midland then tied it in the sixth at 6-6 on Mel Hall's two-run homer, the kind of comeback that left the Cub fans with great expectations.

Unhappily, the Diablos hadn't finished taking their 18-hit batting practice on five Midland pitchers and when the home runs and extra base hits stopped falling, the Diablos had an 11-7 win at Cubs Stadium Sunday night.

But the resilient Bruins don't die gracefully. When the game ended one run was in and the bases were loaded before Larry Montgomery, El Paso's third pitcher, could claim his fifth win in six decisions.

ADDING INSULT to injury, catcher Mike Diaz and Manager George Enright were thumbed by plate umpire John Madsen in the seventh and the Diablos inched percentage points ahead of the Cubs in the Texas League West Division pennant race.

Every batter not only got a hit, most of them got more, but every Diablo also scored in the opener of the six-game series. John Evans cracked out his 17th homer, a solo blow in the fourth, to tie teammate Stan Davis for the league lead, but that didn't last long. Davis poled No. 18 to the centerfield side of the scoreboard to plate three runs in the sixth, giving El Paso its 5-0 lead.

Madden, who had beaten Midland with a four-hitter here earlier this season, had a three hitter perking going into the sixth when former Colorado State teammate Jack Upton took him over the left field fence with two out. Fritz Connally ripped a double, Joe Carter tripled to the angle in right center and Randy LaVigne cleared the green monster in center for two runs, an awesome power display that made left the Cubs one back, 4-5.

The surge ended a string of 14 scoreless innings for Midland.

El Paso scored off Tim Millner, who had relieved starter Craig Lefferts in the sixth, when Chic Valley, a relief pitcher playing first base for the Diablos, slashed a double to left center, his third hit of the night.

MIDLAND tied it in the seventh when Craig Kornfeld singled and Hall pulled his 12th homer over the right field fence. When Javier Fierro stretched his hitting streak to 10 games with a single, Larry Montgomery relieved Jim Koontz, and although giving up a single to Upton and walk to Connally, escaped the bases loaded situation by getting Carter to hit into a double play.

Terry Shoebridge's two-run double in the eighth highlighted a three-run rally and proved the winning blow.

Diaz was trying to go from first to third on a looping single behind second by Kornfeld, but was an easy out. Umpire Madsen, making the call, gave two quick pumps, one signaling Diaz was out at third and the next that he was out of the game. It may have been the quickest thumb on record. Seconds later Enright was on his way out, too.

"I didn't say anything," Diaz said later, "Maybe he threw me for throwing dirt."

Enright said, "There wasn't any question that Mike was out. I was just trying to find out why he had been tossed when he threw me out, too."

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Calvin Coolidge Julius Ceasar Tuskahoma McLish, just one person, that is, the Milwaukee Brewers pitching coach is in Midland with the Diablos. In case you are wondering, he answers to the name of Cal...Eight of Evans' 17 homers have come against the Cubs...Randy Clark lost his first six, but will be going for his sixth straight win tonight...Mike Shepston took over as catcher and acting manager after the departure of Enright and Diaz....

Pate scores big victory

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The two-stroke victory in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic could serve as a major career turning point for aquatic Jerry Pate.

"I think you can look for a lot from Jerry Pate in the next 8-9 years," said Bruce Lietzke, who tied for second with Tom Kite.

"I think this very well could be a stepping stone for Jerry to becoming one of the great, great players in the world.

"His swing has the beauty of (Tom) Weiskopf's.

"And his execution — I hesitate to use the two hallowed words— he has the execution, the ball-striking ability of Ben Hogan."

Pate, a more seasoned, more mature man than the rookie who scored his first victory in he 1976 U.S. Open, also pointed to the triumph — which he celebrated with a fully-clothed leap into the lake in front of the 18th green — as a career turning point.

"THIS IS very important to me," he said Sunday after completing his 3-under-par 69 and a 274 total, 14 shots under par on the 7,249 yard Colonial Country Club course.

Lietzke, Pate's brother-in-law, and Kite were two strokes back at 276. Lietzke had a last-round 67, and Kite, who has challenged so many times this year, shot a 68 in the warm, muggy weather.

Pate won $54,000 from the total purse of $300,000 and achieved two cherished goals: at 27 he became the youngest man to go past $1 million in career earnings (he now has $1,035,-620) and he nailed down a spot on the U.S. Ryder Cup team.

Nancy wins Coventry again

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton would like to get into the Ladies Professional Golf Association Hall of Fame.

As if that goal were not lofty enough, the ranking LPGA superstar also has a timetable.

"I'd like to be off the tour within 10 years, so I'd like to make it before then," the 24-year-old California native said Sunday after winning the $125,000 Sarah Coventry by two shots over Pat Bradley. "I want to try to be No.1 while I'm out here, but it's grueling and you can feel really exhausted playing week in and week out. I'm playing a lot this year, and it's going to take a lot out of me."

Lopez-Melton, who won Sarah Coventry tournament for the third time in three tries on Locust Hill Country Club course, needs seven more titles, at léast one a major, to qualify for the Hall of Fame.

IN HER 17th tournament this year, Lopez-Melton collected her third triumph, the 23rd of her career and a $18,750 check which boosted her 1981 earnings to $132,668.

Starting in a 3-under-par tie with Bradley and four shots ahead of Jan Stephenson and Alice Ritzman, she shot 2-under-par 71 — the same as Stephenson — to Bradley's 73 for a four-day total of 285 which bettered par by seven strokes on the 6,155-yard course.

Bradley finished at 287, and Stephenson was the only other competitor to break par at 3-under 289. Ritzman fell far back with a closing round 80.

Hendrix named SID at NM St.

LAS CRUCES (AP) — The sports information director at Creighton University, Kirk Hendrix, has been named the new sports information director at New Mexico State University.

Hendrix replaces Mike Ryan, who resigned to become director of public relations with the Houston Astros.

In his new job, Hendrix will be responsible for all phases of sports information for the Aggie men and women. He is expected to be on campus in early July.

Goalby grateful for nostalgia

MARLBORO, Mass. (AP) — Bob Goalby thinks "the country is on a little nostalgia kick" and he's happy to be part of it as a member of the 2-year-old PGA Seniors golf tour.

Goalby, winner of the 1968 Masters and 10 other PGA tour championships during his career, captured his first PGA Seniors title Sunday with a 2-stroke victory over Art Wall Jr. in the $150,000 Marlboro Classic.

"It's fantastic and I'm very, very pleased," Goalby said after adding a 1-under par 70 to earlier rounds of 70 and 68 for a 54-hole total of 208. "The name of the game still is to win.

Goalby, now a gentleman farmer in Belleville, Ill., with a driving range among various interests, won close to $700,000 on the PGA tour, but his best year was 1967 when he banked $77,000.

His Marlboro Classic victory added another $25,000 to his account, boosting his 1981 Seniors' tour earnings to more than $48,000 in three appearances.

Memo cautions striking players

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A memo circulating through an advertising agency representing several striking baseball players has advised against committing them to any engagements after July 7, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reports.

The memo also said that the All-Star Game, scheduled for July 14 in Cleveland, would be delayed, the newspaper said in its Saturday editions.

The alternate date for the All-Star Game, routinely chosen every year in case of a rain out, is July 30.

Club executives, player representatives and others close to the baseball negotiations could not verify that any timetable for ending the strike existed, the newspaper said.

Representatives of the striking players last week said they felt the owners schedule for ending the strike. Negotiators for the owners, however, denied that any such schedule existed.

Strike just one big laugh for Lenny Randle

By JIM COUR

SEATTLE (AP) — For Lenny Randle, the Seattle Mariners' veteran infielder who makes a reported $150,000 a year, the baseball players' strike has been one big laugh.

The laughs have been provided by Randle — in a comedy act he has offered in Seattle area nightclubs and restaurants.

During the players' strike, in its 17th day Sunday, other out-of-work Mariners joined Randle, 31, on stage. Randle wants to become a standup comedian when his playing days are finished and he's working in that direction.

"But it's time to start playing baseball again," he sighed.

Randle is an 11-year major league veteran who came to the Mariners as a free agent last February.

Since the strike started, Randle has been working with his Mariner comedy and singing act that has included pitchers Mike Parrott, Larry Anderson, Dick Drago, Shane Rawley and Bryan Clark, outfielder Joe Simpson, second baseman Julio Cruz and designated hitter Gary Gray.

There are a lot of laughs. But his nightclub pay is minor league income compared to his big league salary, which has stopped.

"I enjoy entertaining," Randle said. "But I love playing baseball. There's a big difference between loving something and enjoying something.

"I think you'll find that most big league players love what they do. Sure, there's some griping by some guys who sit on the bench. But I think you'll find that most players are happy to be in the big leagues and just be on a 25-man roster."

Even though the players and the owners are stalemated on the issue of compensation to teams losing free agents, Randle is attempting to stay optimistic.

In fact, he says he's looking for a settlement before the All-Star game July 14.

"I feel like any day a miracle will happen," he laughed. "President Reagan didn't want to get involved in this so maybe Moses or God will. We need some message from somewhere to get things rolling. Hopefully, that message is right around the corner."

Women's matches look settled before they start

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — If past records could be relied on, three of Monday's women's quarterfinals at Wimbledon looked settled before they were started.

Chris Evert Lloyd, the favorite, took on Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia. They have played 12 times before and Lloyd won every time.

THIRD—SEEDED Tracy Austin faced her 11th match against Pam Shriver. Austin has won all 11.

Fourth-seeded Martina Navratilova, Wimbledon singles champion in 1978 and 1979, hoped to continue an 11-0 winning streak against Virginia Ruzici of Romania.

Only the fourth match, between second-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia and Wendy Turnbull of Australia, was less predictable. Mandlikova has a 4-3 head-to-head lead over her rival.

Of the eight players, only Navratilova is a true serve-and-volley player in the tradition of Maria Bueno, Billie Jean King and Evonne Goolagong, great Wimbledon champions of the last two decades.

LLOYD, WHO last won Wimbledon in 1976, has not dropped a set and has lost only 14 games on her way to the quarterfinals. She had her easiest match of the week Saturday, going past 18-year-old Swiss Claudia Pasqale 6-0, 6-0 in 36 minutes.

"I haven't had a hard match so far," she said. "Usually, before I reach the quarter finals I am extended in at least one match. But I don't worry about it. I will just have to practice twice as hard"

Lloyd is working out with her husband, British Davis Cupper John Lloyd, and Dennis Ralston, who reached the Wimbledon men's final in 1966 and was the U.S. Davis Cup captain for five years.

Navratilova, who recently had shoulder trouble and has been struggling to get her service right, was in good shape as she beat American Betsy Nagelsen 6-3, 6-1.

BUT SHE admitted: "I am still looking for my right type of service. I am trying to get more spin on the serve."

The Czechoslovakian exile said Lloyd is playing well. But she added: "There is no such thing as a bad Chris Evert."

Austin stayed on the baseline to defeat big serving Barbara Potter 6-4, 6-0. Shriver defeated Jo Durie of Britain 6-3, 6-4 and reached the quarterfinals for the first time.

The big three of the men's singles — Bjorn Borg, John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors — all won convincingly. Their quarter finals are set for Tuesday.

Borg, going for his sixth straight Wimbledon title, edged his old friend Vitas Gerulaitis 7-6, 7-5, 7-6, playing his best shots on the big points.

McEnroe downed Stan Smith 7-5, 3-6, 6-1, 6-2. Connors beat Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

All three were optimistic about their title chances.

"I AM improving with every match and feeling very good," Borg said. "But I will have to play well from now on, because it is going to get tougher and tougher."

McEnroe declared: "Some guy is going to have to play exceptionally well to beat me."

Connors remarked: "It's absurd that the bookies make me a 12-to-1 outsider."

New conference in early stages

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Five universities — Old Dominion, William & Mary, James Madison, Richmond and East Carolina — each reportedly has pledged $10,000 toward forming a new athletic conference.

Ben Carnevale, retiring Tuesday as athletic director at William & Mary, has led the organizing effort and would be commissioner of the new conference, he told the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

The conference would operate in six sports, including basketball but not football.

The conference would include a sixth school. To qualify for NCAA basketball tournament berth, a conference must have at least six schools.

After retiring from his position at William & Mary, Carnevale, 65, will become a fulltime consultant to the James Madison athletic program. In that capacity, he will coordinate efforts to form the conference.

Carnevale has pursued the regional conference concept for the last four years in his role as W&M athletic director.

Dr. Thomas Graves, president of William & Mary, said, "We at William & Mary aren't losing Ben. We're behind his efforts to form this league."

The Virginian-Pilot said Old Dominion is committed only to the funding.

"We're still looking at four alternatives," said Paul Webb, ODU's basketball coach. "A new conference is one of them. The others are major independent, the Sun Belt Conference and the league now known as the Eastern Eight."

Old Dominion, formerly a member of the ECAC, plans an independent course for the 1981-82 school year, "but that could change," Webb said.

Carnevale said he feels he is close to putting the new conference together.

"We hope to add a sixth school within the next few months, then take our time picking seventh and eighth members," he said.

George Mason and UNC-Wilmington also are interested in joining.

But the five schools now involved in the planning are believed more interested in the Naval Academy, VMI and UNC-Charlotte.

McEnroe wages crusade

Within limits established by Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England — "You can't change a century of thinking," John McEnroe says.

But that doesn't mean you can't screech about it.

Within the limits set down by a threat of expulsion from the tournament, McEnroe seems to have launched himself on a crusade against the establishment that runs Wimbledon, the world's most prestigious tennis championship.

McEnroe has already made a perfect fool of himself with smart-aleck remarks, endless pouts and general ill behaviour. Most of the time he behaves like a little boy in need of a paddle on the rear.

Yet on one issue — the obstinence of Wimbledon's elders — the wild, red-headed youngster has most of his fellow players as allies. A surprising number have come to basically the same conclusion after a stormy first week of Wimbledon 81.

As the tournament paused for breath on the traditional Sunday afternoon of rest, one thing remained painfully obvious: The officiating at Wimbledon is not too hot, or at least the players feel that way. And whether it be good, bad or indifferent, the officiating is most certainly inflexible. And on that point, everyone agrees.

Much as one wants to jump into any contest on the side opposite McEnroe, this issue has two sides. The tournament rulers, insisting on proper court manners and fearing further disruptions of play by whining players, have cracked down with a rigid set of rules for its umpires and linesmen to follow.

The players contend the new strictures take human nature completely out of the game. As Jimmy Connors says. "When the guy up in the chair won't even look at you or talk to you, no matter what, that's what sets up the situation like what happens with McEnroe."

Apparently weary of antics from McEnroe, Ilie Nastase and others that reached boorish proportions last year, Wimbledon arbitrarily decided that, henceforth, its sacred championships would be run like a military school.

If a player holds up the action to argue a call, the umpire simply says: 15 seconds. If the player does not resume play in that time, he is assessed a penalty point. Then another. Eventually, he could be disqualified entirely. McEnroe's outburst in a first-round match on Monday cost him $1,500 and the threat of a bigger fine and suspension.

Umpires back in court over strike insurance

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Major league umpires were due back in federal court this morning to press their case for preventing baseball's team owners from collecting on a $50 million strike insurance policy.

The Major League Umpires Association, represented by attorney Richie Phillips, contends the owners aren't trying to settle the midseason baseball strike because of the insurance policy that pays owners $100,000 for each game not played.

Phillips says a state court should decide the issue and asked U.S. District Court Judge Donald Van Artsdalen to rule on the matter. The judge set a hearing for 9 a.m. to listen to Phillips' motion.

The insurance policy was to go into effect last Wednesday, after 153 games were cancelled, but Philadelphia Common Pleas Judge Stanley Greenberg issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting the owners from collecting on the policy.

Greenberg's order, however, was thrown out Friday by Van Artsdalen.

"I can see no legal basis, either under federal or state law, to issue an injunction in this matter," Van Artsdalen ruled.

"We all know when there is a major strike, like those affecting utilities, public employees, and even baseball players, that there are some people who are going to get hurt," said the judge.

"The umpires are being paid, and will be paid at least for the next 15 days and are incurring no damages, whatever, except that they are on a forced paid vacation. So at present, there is no irreparable harm."

Judge Greenberg, who told a reporter he was "an avid baseball fan," had reluctantly given up the case.

Mears nips Rutherford at Kraco Atlanta 125

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Rick Mears got stronger as the day went on, pulling off a tough double by winning both ends of the Kraco Atlanta Twin 125s Indy car program at Atlanta International Raceway.

MEARS, WHO caught Johnny Rutherford to win the opener then outdueled Mario Andretti and Rutherford in the nightcap, was elated by his big day.

"I've always liked the high banks and I really like this track," the boyish-looking driver from Bakersfield, Calif., said. "Everything just seems to go well when I race here."

The triumphs were his third and fourth Indy car victories in as many tries on the 1.66-mile, high-banked oval.

The double victory was even sweeter since it came in his first racing appearance since suffering facial burns in a pit fire during the May 24 Indianapolis 500.

MEARS UNDERWENT plastic surgery on his nose, then had to abide by doctor's orders to take it easy and stay out of the sun.

"I felt a little rusty and apprehensive at first out there, and I ran pretty conservative at first," Mears explained.

"But this track is always hard on tires and being conservative early in the race has paid off for me before."

Mears caught Rutherford, who dominated much of the first 125-miler, when the latter experienced tire and chassis problems late in the race.

But, in the nightcap, Mears challenged Rutherford right from the start, taking the lead for good 22 laps into the 83-lap event.

"I RAN a little harder than I wanted to at the start, and Mario really put pressure on me later in the race," he said. "But the car never missed a beat. It ran almost identically all the way."

Rutherford finished third in the second race, while Gordon Johncock was fourth and Pancho Carter fifth in both races.

Andretti, who was third in the opener in his Patrick Wildcat, was close behind over the last 15 laps of the 83-lap second race. He tried to zip past Mears' red, white and blue Penske PC-9B on the inside as the two sped into the third turn of the last lap with the leader held up by traffic.

But Mears, making his first start since suffering facial burns in a pit fire during the May 24 Indianapolis 500, cut the trailing car off and went on to beat Andretti to the finish line by 1.7 seconds.

Mears averaged 167.073 mph in the fast second race, which was marred by just one short caution period.

THE TWO victories gave Mears and the team operated by Roger Penske a payday of about $28,000, with each first-place finish bringing about $14,000 from the total purse of $240,000.

The field was rolling along at a record pace in the nightcap, averaging more than 188 mph with Mears holding a lead of more than six seconds, when Indy car rookie Ross Davis lost control on the backstretch.

The car — one of zeveral added to the field for the second race — spun and slid across the infield grass and hit a high dirt embankment, throwing up a cloud of dust. Davis was not injured, but ll the leaders took advantage of the caution flag to pit for fuel.

IN THE first race, Rutherford built leads of up to four seconds as he dominated most of the event. However, Mears began slicing into the margin with about 13 laps to go.

Dodgers slip by Sox on mistake

By Associated Press

A throwing error in the 10th inning brought home the winning run as the San Antonio Dodgers slipped past the Amarillo Gold Sox, 8-7, in a Texas League baseball game Sunday night.

In other Texas League action, El Paso beat Midland, 11-7, and Tulsa swept a doubleheader from Jackson, 2-1 and 6-1.

Steve Sax singled to lead off the 10th inning for San Antonio. There was one out when Dale Holman struck out. Catcher Ron Tingley let the ball get away momentarily on the third strike and threw the ball to first base although Holman was out anyway since Sax was on first. The ball got away and rolled into the outfield as Sax scored all the way from first with what turned out to be the winning run.

A two-run homer by Greg Brock highlighted a six-run outburst in the sixth inning for the Dodgers. Leo Hernandez and Ross Jones each had two-run singles in the sixth for San Antonio.

Jeff Pyburn, Aaron Cain, Don Gausephol and Tingley all had triples for Amarillo.

Dave Stockstill singled home Ron Gooch with the winning run in the sixth inning as the Tulsa Drillers edged the Jackson Mets, 2-1, in the first game of a doubleheader.

Mike Jirschele had a solo homer to account for Jackson's only run.

Pete O'Brien had a solo homer in the sixth inning as the Drillers beat the Mets, 6-1, in the second game.

Wyoming Oil Leases To Be Awarded in July

ONTARIO, CALIF. — Hundreds of average citizens will acquire oil lease rights in upcoming public awards conducted by the State of Wyoming. Some may achieve overnight wealth by selling their rights to oil companies and retaining lifelong royalties on any oil or gas production.

Incredibly, most will risk no more than $25 and a minimal filing fee to enter the little-known program that offers every American the opportunity to compete on an equal basis with giant oil companies for leases of public lands.

Information and entry details are available from The H. Kirk Sanders Co., Public Lands Division, Box 3697, Ontario, Calif. 91761 (2032 Caroline). Enclose $1 for postage and handling.

Official entry cards will be rushed by return mail to permit the timely filing of entries before cut-off date.
