HEDDA HOYT TALKS ABOUT THE THINGS THAT INTEREST THE BUSY WOMAN OF 1926.

Fashion Notes

(Written for the United Press)
NEW YORK, July 7.—Bloused backs will put a crimp in the straight-lined silhouette this Fall. Nearly all of the cloth coats and many dresses designed for late Summer and early Fall wear have bloused waist effects; the blouse extending at the rear only, at the front only all the way about.

Coats, as a rule have the blouse extending low over the hips at the back only, the front being plain and straight-lined. Even some of the Winter fur models used the bloused back. The skirts of bloused-back coats are invariably very scant and short—having no flare to them. The full upper portion and scant skirt portion gives a very youthful line to the garment. On cloth models fur is used on the collar and cuffs mostly although in some cases it is repeated in border effect at the hem.

Dresses are bloused all the way about, in front or at the rear. Evening models as well as street models show these tendencies. Even the tailored jumper dress is becoming a bit bloused being held in by a narrow belt at the hips.

Most women will find the bloused bodice becoming. Straight lines, such as we are familiar with, feel no one after all. If the figure is plump straight lines tend to accentuate the curves. This is particularly true when the rear of the straight-lined gown is considered. The dress that is bloused at the rear conceals the curves of the back and for this reason alone the stout person will find it becoming. Slender persons will welcome the dress that is bloused both in front and in the rear after they have become accustomed to seeing it, since it offers us something new in the way of silhouette.

The blouse always extends low over the hips to give the desired long waist effect. In soft materials such as chiffons, silk crepes, chiffon velvets, etc., the bloused line makes a youthful evening contour.

A Senorita Fashion

Featuring a Few Spanish Style Notes

The Spanish influence is especially prominent in modes for summer, and this picturesque frock is regarded as a senorita fashion although originally designed in Paris.

For the reproduction of this model, one should have a size of very gay design. A background of black or dark navy blue with figures in light green, red, pale yellow and blue would do.

Ladies' and Misses' Dress No. 274, cut in sizes 34 years and 36 to 42 inches bust will be mailed, postpaid, upon receipt of 15 cents. Be sure to give correct number and size of pattern desired when ordering. Write name and address plainly. Send orders to Pattern Editor, this newspaper.

would be effective. The flare skirt is attached to a long-waisted semi-fitted blouse with round neck and drooping shoulders. The front is trimmed with a band of plain chiffon, set on to outline a deep V-shaped front. The edges of the band are pivoted, as are also the sleeves. Unless one gives careful thought to the subject, the flared skirt is apt to be difficult to hem, so that it will hang perfectly. The best way is first to turn under the edge about three-eighths of an inch. Baste, but do not hold the work so tightly that it will pull and destroy the line of the dress.

Now, take the facing and turn under both edges and baste. Carefully baste the lower edge of the facing over the turned-under edge of the dress. Next, baste the top edge and wherever the fullness becomes too unmanageable, gather it slightly to fit into the space allowed. Finally hem, with fine hemming stitches. If preferred, the skirt may be finished with a bias fold of self-material instead of a hem.

Dignified and Impressive Georgian Style

SEVEN LARGE ROOMS CLOSED-IN SUNPORCH

Both in exterior and interior, this attractive home lives up to the impressive and dignified appearance it presents. All of the charm of Georgian architecture has been woven into its design and the finished house carries real individuality. Especially well set off by the exterior finish of fluted portland cement stucco, this home in Wellesley, Mass., is one of which the owner may well feel proud. The selection of construction materials shows careful judgment. Walls of concrete masonry covered with stucco is a combination that grows stronger with age and never loses its attractiveness. (Either hollow block or concrete structural tile may be used.) In the interior, the central state hall arrangement is colonial. At the right is a spacious living room with fireplace, and just beyond is a fine glazed sunporch. The dining room with two groups of triple windows is at the left. The hall between the dining and living rooms gives much desired privacy during meals. Between the dining room and a small dining alcove is the well-equipped kitchen. A pantry of good size is a feature that housewives will not overlook. On the second floor are three bedrooms in all and a sleeping porch under the main roof. This home, as a whole, is one that will give a good account of itself wherever built, and will appear to best advantage on a lot that is spacious.

UNREST INFECTS LIFE

All modern life is infected with unrest, a striving for—it knows not what. There is a turmoil of distracting doctrine. There is reaction, rebellion, against the existing order, social, religious and governmental. Radical voices may be heard demanding the abolition of everything from marriage to government.

One need not lose one's equanimity in the face of such proposals, however: they are the savings of a really very scant minority. But it is a tendency that must be recognized and combated to prevent its possible spread to the majority. A program of the kind suggested by these radicals contemplates the complete destruction of the present fabric of society and civilization. It is up to the sane majority to inaugurate such a program of adherence of the law and order as to render the efforts of the radicals ineffective. If the radicals succeed in destroying the existing order that it has taken man countless ages to establish, it will be because of the lethargy of those who should have been its guardians. But, on the other hand, and to give both sides of this story, the radicals contend that to do so would be to stand still, that present order is a product of ceaseless evolution and that we are still on our way to the millennium, that we have not yet arrived. Changes, they contend, must, in the interest of constant progress, be made. Their argument is that we are still in a state of flux, that the existing regime must not be thought to be the summit of the mountain, but merely a half-way house in the climb. Reasonable? Yes, of course. Otherwise how could so many apparently thinking persons have come to be allied with allied with the radical tendency? They feel that in advocating further change that they are aligning themselves on the side of progress and not on the side of inertia.

Time alone will tell. And time, in its mysterious way, will effect many changes that not all the radicals in the world could not effect. We face the future, but who knows what it spells for us?

WHAT IS? TRUTH?

Man perceives truth through a series of approximations, none exact, but leading ever nearer to the truth. What we know today is only a part of the truth, which the discoveries of tomorrow may prove to be an inexact conception. Man approaches ever nearer the truth as he moves forward to a larger and more perfect thought process. Man's mind, then, should never be closed by present conclusions; it should be kept open and receptive, sensitive to the constant progress of knowledge and thought. One must go forward or go backward; there is no such thing as standing still, for while we hesitate the world races forward, widening the distance between. Activity is the price of vigor; without constant effort, man's power atrophies. The human mind, if this be true, should be not only open and sensitive, but actively striving for a more perfect conception of the whole truth, and any effort to restrain or deny freedom of investigation and experimentation is a blow to the progress of man toward his ultimate destiny.

IMPROVE ADVERTISING PRACTICES

The effort to have commercial schools and advertising agencies adopt a code of ethics to safeguard the public against misleading statements in publicity is a reflection of the great advance of business in the recognition of and the willingness to be governed by rules of fair play. The conference in Chicago to consider a code of ethics in advertising and selling practice recently drawn up by the National Better Business Bureau is hoped especially to establish honesty and accuracy in advertising matter relating to the earning power of graduates of various courses of study advertised. Statements now in vogue, based upon the exceptional rather than the average, so-called job guarantees, assurance of acceptance of work where no assurance is possible, the injection of matter implying a concession, such as special price inducements or personal interest, where in fact no such interest exists and the lower price quoted is the regular price upon to all, are practices of which advertising should be purged. Advertising today has become more than a voluntary adjunct of business, to be used or not as the whim of the business man dictated. It is highly specialized, scientific method of bringing together the buyer and the seller with the greatest efficiency and the greatest amount of goodwill. The old days of personal contact have been succeeded by an advertising contact. The potential buyer studies the advertisements and buys from them, believing that they are honest, as most are. He has a confidence in the integrity of the advertiser. But let this buyer experience a poor value for his money, let him lose confidence in even the smallest advertiser, and his confidence in the entire field of advertising is gone. Advertising ethics go much further than just protect the advertising profession—they guarantee that the merchant and the manufacturer are alive to the value of honesty in the conduct of their business. These ethics should be jealously maintained and guarded.

CANCER CURES

For many months the newspapers have been full of a number of "discoveries" concerning cancer and predictions as to early development of a cure for this peculiar ailment. But so far all these experts have done is to thoroughly explode each others' theories. The result is that today the medical fraternity looks forward to the world conference called by the American Society for the Control of Cancer with the gloomy prediction that it will come to naught. As far as the "sawbones" are concerned, cancer is still a mystery and the profession is far from a discovery of an effective method of cure and control.

WITH OR WITHOUT

Florenz Ziegfeld has taken unto himself the credit for introducing nudes to the American stage. Whether he did or not, is a question. Morris Gest says he did not, that the credit belongs to Isadora Duncan. However, that may be, when so many producers had shown nudes that the novelty had worn off. Ziegfeld announced a change of heart, confessed to the depravity of nudes on the stage and declared for more clothes behind and before the footlights. The other producers, scenting a publicity stunt, brand the episode as "pure bunk." Lee Shubert, A. H. Woods and Morris Gest defend the artistic use of nudes, citing the "female form divine" as the highest exponent of beauty, form and grace, and proving their point by the painter, the sculptor, and the art museums. It is a matter for much discussion since each has his private opinion; and no conclusions can be drawn, since each opinion differs. When all is said and done, however, if the public wants nudes it will have them, and, after all, that is their privilege. The only thing that might be suggested is the elimination of much of the smut contained in the lines of the various productions, since this element detracts from the artistic appeal and panders to the licentious.

PROFITABLE UTILITIES

Kipling's poem said that "he learned about women from her" and a new saga might be written about Worcester, Mass. and public utility executives throughout the country admonished to "learn about utilities from her." The city of Worcester is the location of the Worcester Electric Light company, which last year not only paid stockholders a 30 percent dividend instead of the regular 10 percent, but this year is presenting the customers with a 50 percent "dividend" on their bills, to the amount of $136,000, the surplus from last year's operation. This surplus, by the way, was not accumulated by excess rates charged by the company for the current it sold, but by the economical and efficient operation of plant and distribution lines and a generally broad-gauge policy. It is time other cities had a like experience. Public utilities are virtual monopolies. The returns on the capital invested must be earned, and, in most cases, this is accomplished by an excess charge on the customer. The executives of the companies are thus not forced by competition to work out the most economical methods of operation. The achievement of the Worcester Electric Light company should serve as a splendid example for other utility companies to follow.

IMPORTANCE OF ORATORY

The importance of oratory in schools and colleges is being more clearly realized. Not the old conception of oratory that had to do with reciting some famous speech of a Roman statesman or even an Abraham Lincoln, worthy as these may be, but oratory that has to do with the ability to clearly state the merits of a question and to achieve what is known in the vernacular as "putting it over," or "putting it across," together with the ability to sway and life one's hearers to a realization of the import of one's message. Together with the new personality study and cultivation, oratory becomes one of the most important adjuncts of education. How handicapped the brilliant mind possessing an unattractive personality and an inability to properly express itself in public. They are frequently surpassed in success, in accomplishment, by mediocre minds that fortunately possess more pleasing personality and fluency and ease of expression. Colleges do well to stress language, oratory and personality. The few who are doing so are pioneers in a field where there is room for much improvement.

THE SEASON CELEBRATION

It is well to remember, at this season of celebration, that the person or event raised to the pinnacle of greatness, reached that exalted height only through the mighty, upward, straining efforts of countless other persons and events. The honor and glory bestowed upon them are not and cannot be for themselves alone. They are for all those unremembered persons or events culminating in the splendid result, which is the symbol in which is vested the honor and glory of all. A Revolution, a Washington, a Declaration of Independence, a Constitution, a Civil War, a Lincoln, an Act of Emancipation—how many fought and bled and died, unhonored and unsung, that these might be realized, idealized, honored and celebrated? It is entirely fitting that these should stand as symbols for these legions, but, also, in our celebrations, let us consciously render tribute to even the small contributing factor or person in the glorious result.

So Think We

We think that the golf game will probably do a good deal toward the raising the price of farm products. It looks like most of the territory is going to have to be used for golf courses and that will naturally cut down the land available for crop growing which under the old and accustomed ideal will raise the price of produce. This may be where the farm relief is coming from after all.

We think that the City Commission should waste no time in giving Lubbock another fire station. It is costing Lubbock policy holders enough money every year now, to pay for and equip a station that will come within the requirements of the state fire insurance board, and give us a big reduction of insurance rates.

We think Lubbock will need more traffic cops. We believe that it is a good investment to have plenty of them, provided they are the right kind. Court-cous, energetic, traffic officers are a blessing to any city, and Lubbock has always been blessed by having men of this character.

We think Lubbock has one great advantage over New York and that is, we are never bothered with "sub-way" strikes.

We think Lubbock property owners should take more pride in their property and keep the weeds cut off it.

We think that most all of the legislators seem to be in favor of passing the buck to Old Sol to furnish all the farm relief that is necessary.

We think the cotton flea will probably do more toward raising the price of cotton than most anything else this year.

We think that if modern conveniences has made woman's work any easier, we certainly should not envy any of them, as they certainly deserve everything that can get in the way of helping them with their work.

We think that possibly about the happiest time in July for a man is when that June bride is trying to make amends for having let a mustard plaster blister her young husband.

We think even after several lots have been cleared of the weeds today there are still several acres of weeds that should be cut, raked and burned.

We think that yesterday was a fine day for battle axe. We noticed large quantities of it in and around the postoffice lobby, and in no man's land. We wonder why white folks will not ever be decent.

It Is Reported

That the Lamesa Reporter Editor has prophesied that Lubbock is already "blowed" up, and accuses us of "Four-flushing." The Reporter has had something like chronic indigestion for several years and seems to have "hobbyitis." The main hobby being to knock on Lubbock. Lamesa is a good town, and Lubbock people are inclined to be friendly toward her, and vice versa, and we are glad to know that the Reporter's feelings in the matter are not the feelings of Lamesa at all. Rave on old man, rave on.

Under The Capitol Dome

By PAUL E. MALLON (United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Gone are days when lobbyists sit around the halls of congress, button-holing senators and representatives upon pending legislation. The crudeness of those times has been replaced by high finesse of the legislative agents now in Washington to emphasize the viewpoint of their employers on bill before the congress.

In the olden days highly paid workers fraternized with senators and congressmen and reports of money exchanges were frequent and persistent. The late Senator Robert M. La Follette, Sr., has told in his book how he heard a vote bought in the cloakroom of the house of representatives one night for $500. But all that is gone now.

In these days every big group of industrialists has a public relations department and a legislative agent. The duties of these agents ostensibly are merely to keep the home office informed of the progress of legislation in congress. When hearings are held upon bills in which they are interested they appear and present the side of their employers. Their profession is highly respected, he good legislative agents know the first name of every senator and every congressman who is interested in subjects in which they are interested. There is no hint of corruption. There are no stories of vote buying. One of the reasons may be that there is no need to try. There is at least one senator or congressman who represents the viewpoint that the agents desire to express and that senator or congressman is only too anxious to champion that viewpoint to such an extent as he may desire, without pecuniary aid. There are stories founded or unfounded as they may be going around that when an agent wishes to reward a senator for aid given, that the stock market may sometimes be used as a channel. He may give the senator a tip on a certain stock and a small investment might net a valuable personal return.

The mere information that a certain big corporation is against or for a certain bill is however now of sufficient importance to accomplish the same results as were accomplished in the days by lavish use of funds for entertainment and interest.

That one auto driver who was making thirty miles per down Avenue Q last night without lights did not see the stop sign, and hit it squarely with one wheel of the car, and as a result a front axle is so badly sprung that it was necessary to take the car to the repair shop. Driving without lights is too dangerous to be tolerated.

That the Rotary Club has made a deal with the new hotel for their eats after this month. The ladies of the town have been serving the luncheons and in many ways the club regrets to dispense with their service.

That people in general are observing the stop signs on the streets, and in most cases they are meeting with the approval of autoists, more generally than any new traffic ordinance ever has.

That the queen of the Belgians has made a positive denial that she has bobbed her hair. What a disappointment that must be to some Americans.

That a Nebraska poultryman is suing the operator of an airplane because his plane frightened his chickens.

That Lubbock is going to pull off, one of the biggest parties that she has ever given for the traveling men soon after the new hotel is opened to the public.

That the Hubbers loafed on the job and let the Childress Iron Men get away with a game

THE UNKNOWN SCOUT

At the recent annual meeting of the Boy Scouts of America, in Washington, a bronze buffalo medal was awarded to "The Unknown Scout." The inspiration of this award was an unknown Boy Scout in London, who may be living today. This, briefly, is the story: Some years ago, William D. Boyce, a Chicago publisher, lost his way in a London fog. A young lad, noticing his embarrassment, approached him and briskly saluted said: "May I be of service to you?" Mr. Boyce inquired the way to his destination and the lad showed him the way. Reaching the place, Mr. Boyce offered the boy a shilling for his service, but the boy said: "I am a Scout; and Scouts do not accept tips for courtesies." Mr. Boyce was interested and impressed. He asked about the Scouts. The young friends took him to the office of Sir Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the movement, and as a result when Mr. Boyce later sailed for home he brought a trunk full of literature pertaining to scouting. Then he started the Boy Scout movement in America, with the aid of such training as it affords. The medal awarded to "The Unknown Scout," who befriended Mr. Boyce and thus caused the spread of scouting to America, was presented to the International Scout Bureau in London, where it will be kept as a permanent memorial. It is inscribed as follows: "To the Unknown Scout, whose faithfulness in the performance of the Daily Good Turn brought the Scout movement to the United States of America." Perhaps never has a simple act of kindness brought forth greater or more beneficial results than that performed by this unknown London Boy Scout.

The average man is at a disadvantage. He has to obey the city laws, the state laws, the federal laws and his wife's laws.

CHILDRESS IRON MEN DEFEAT HUBBERS IN LAST OF SERIES 6

VISITORS ROMP ON BASSINGER FOR 9 BINGLES; QUATT RELIEVES HIM IN FIFTH TO CHECK IRON MEN

Coming back as Iron Men do the Childress nine whipped the Hubbers' ears down with a score of 6 to 4 yesterday afternoon at the Merrell Park. The Hubbers seemed to have been as the visitors were in the first game of the series, that is, dead on their feet. There were errors and the poorest of base running ever displayed by the Hubbers shown in yesterday's tilt. In the sixth inning the Hubbers came to bat and were able to get the bases full and with the lack of proper base running were thrown out from all angles of the diamond only to go back to field with no scores; this inning was no doubt the only inning that the Hubbers were to score in but they were asleep.

The usual hard hitting was done by the lads of Lubbock as they got to Squires, a wrong hander of the Iron Men, for thirteen bingles. "Red" Hamilton rapped three doubles for four trips yesterday and was the leading hitter for the afternoon. Gib Jackson got on his hitting stride and came from under the terrible slump that he has been in for some time and panked three for five, one being for three bases.

Duke Bassinger, failed to hold the visitors, and was relieved in the fifth by Quattlebaum who held the lads for two hits for the remainder of the game. Quatt's splitter had too much of a downer for the Iron Men and they failed to connect at the right time. However Childress was credited with 11 safe hits for the afternoon.

The Iron Men leave today to battle with the Lamesa nine for a series.

REDS LOSE FULL GAME IN STANDING

Cincinnati lost a full game in the National league race when they lost to St. Louis Wednesday while the world's champion Pirates were beating Philadelphia. Luque hurled splendid ball for the Reds until the fifth innings when he was shelled from the mound. Before the inning was over, the Cards had made six runs and the game was in the bag. The final score was 11 to 2.

The Pirate-Phillies game was nip and tuck, ending 8 to 7 in Pittsburgh's favor. After rolling up 8 runs in the first four stanzas, Pirate pitching cracked and the lowly Phillies came within an ace of tying the score.

Brooklyn won a double header from Boston, 5 to 2, and 5 to 1. Vance's pitching in the second game featured his second win of the season. Nine Braves batters whiffed before his curves and speed.

The Athletics and Red Sox dividing a double bill in the only junior circuit contest scheduled. Philadelphia won the first 6 to 5 in 12 innings, but Boston, supporting Zahner's sterling pitching with perfect fielding, carried off the second game, 4 to 2.

One of the nine hits, five of them went for extra bases, Hale, Huie, Rhea and Sides each getting doubles. Tatum and Sides started each making impossible catches. The score:

ANCIENT STARS AT GOLFERS GATHERING FOR NATIONAL OPEN TOURNEY GET ALIBIS READY "TOUGHEST ROUGH EVER SAW" THEY

By MAURICE MERMEY
United News Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, July 7.—Twenty doddering ancients, staggered through a three inning baseball game at the Polo grounds Wednesday and were ready for the showers.

The Methuselahs, some of them as much as 35 or 40 years old, former ball stars who had consented to appear in an exhibition game for the benefit of the Christy Mathewson memorial fund; were ready to quit at the end of the third inning when the score was 4 to 3 in favor of the Matty team. The other team was designated simply as "Opponents."

Rotund Roger Bresnahan, once a crack Giant catcher but more recently manager of a minor league outfit, could not stand the gaff of such strenuous competition.

McMullen must have undergone a money glad operation recently for he played like an ambitious recruit—he is 33.

Iron man Joe McGinnity felt his former team mate, Roger, Joe used to pitch game after game back in the early days of the century, but he's over forty now and barely able to lift the cereal spoon to his mouth, in so far as athletics are concerned.

The game was so slow that Marquard stole second in the third inning, a feat the Rubs could not accomplish when he graced the mound on a salary basis.

Theilman, one time Giant, played right field for the opponents and decided he had better go back to his profession of pulling teeth. Red Murray, he of the famous wing, tried to show how young he was. The spectators agreed, after seeing him throw the ball to second on the hop, that Red had done wisely to go into business.

Johnny Evers, the brains of the Braves in field when they captured the world series in 1914, had his brains with him today but his legs couldn't hold up his two score years.

Fred McRike, now coach of the Yankees, showed that he has earned something since he covered the Giants' pasture in the good old days of consecutive pennants. Fred touched second when he doubled, a thing he forgot to do about 15 years ago.

Fred Tenny, ex-Pirate, held down first base. He scooped up one grounder and caught two balls thrown his way.

George Burns, who covered the sun field at the Polo grounds for years, is still playing professional ball. He got a hit in two trips to the plate for an average of .500.

The game was arranged as a curtain raiser for the activities to honor Christy Mathewson.

In the exhibition game between the Giants and Senators which followed the old timers contest McGraw's hand won 8 to 6.

SCIOTO COUNTRY CLUB, Columbus, Ohio, July 7.—All the good golfers gathered here cannot win the national open championship, but a majority of them are likely to be tied for the alibi championship.

Scioto's smiling fairways stretching away in the fading sunlight on the eve of the tournament, looked guileless as a Turner landscape. But, if the contestants who tried them out Wednesday are to be believed, the course over which the national golf championship of 1926 is to be played is lined with yawning pitfalls for even the most wary of men.

"The toughest rough I ever saw," said one pro after another, and the amateurs echoed the wail.

They tell stories of grass so deep that a player loses not only his ball but his caddy. Tough spears of vegetation reach up to snare the slightest slice and to punish the puniest putt.

Many contestants are threatening to use their irons off some of the tees to keep straight at any cost. Distance, they claim, must be sacrificed to direction in this championship.

These conditions, plus the mental hazard, may result in some surprising upsets during the next 3 days, during which the largest field that ever contested an open championship in this country will determine who is to be golf king of 1926.

Scioto has prepared lavishly and well to handle its first national championship and the arrangements have obviously been placed in capable hands. The galleries promise to be enormous, however, and many of the fairways are parallel, so that the large staff of marshals anticipate having their hands full.

Bobby Jones, fresh from his triumph on the ancient links of St. Anne's continues the favorites with many believing that Walter Hagen will this year snatch the prize which for the past eleven years has eluded ents in a pro-amateur best ball his grasp.

Walter and Bobby were opponents in a match Wednesday, the former being teamed with Willie MacFarlane, last year's champion and the latter having as his team mate young Watta Gunn, his protégé from Atlanta.

The professionals won the match 5 up and 3 to play, no cards being kept since each player picked up several times. At the finish of the match, Jones shot as pretty a birdie four as has been seen this week on the 18th hole, a 4 if was his usual contained but confident self.

Several faces, familiar to open championships of the past few years will be missing. Max Marsten, Ducky Corkeran, Jesse Guilford and Archie Compton have scratched from the tournament. Among the added starters will be youthful Joe Stein, who went abroad with the professionals last month.

All the contestants, alibis included, will play 18 holes Thursday and again Friday. The sixty players with low medal for the first two days will play 36 holes on Saturday, the championship being determined on the basis of medal score for the entire 72 holes.

COPS TO BE NICE TO AUTO VISITORS

CHIEF MAY PLANS SPECIAL COURTESIES FOR TOURISTS

Tourists who visit Lubbock during the summer are going to find a very enthusiastic bunch of police to welcome them, according to Chief T. E. May. Instead of forcing visitors to toe the line they are going to be given a number of privileges—privileges local citizens are not to enjoy. The reason for this is very few visitors know anything about Lubbock traffic ordinances. Many of them would find it rather embarrassing to locate a parking place where they would not get a "reed tag". So they are going to get a blue one.

The blue tag when properly signed by the police chief permits them to park for any length of time any where they may choose just so long as they keep out of alleys and away from fire plugs. The card reads: "Lubbock Guest Card. This card entitles you to park your car as long as you please while in Lubbock. Never mind the time. LUBBOCK WELCOMES YOU and hopes you will return often." On the reverse side of the card is a brief history of Lubbock—facts we would have visitors know. Local citizens are not allowed to make use of the cards under penalty of the law.

French People Don't Want to Pay Debts

PARIS, July 7.—In the most remote corners of France opposition to the agreement for the settlement of war time debt to the United States is increasing daily. Meetings of protest are being held, based almost invariably on refusal of the American government a safeguard clause in the Berenger-Mellon pact, which would protect France in case she should fail to collect reparations from Germany. Newspapers are fighting the agreement violently.

A. R. The Peddlers Jubilee is expected to be the biggest this year that it has ever been and more traveling men are expected to gather here as guests of Lubbock. ### APPROPRIATIONS FOR RUNNING FEDERAL GOVERNMENT NEXT YEAR TOTAL THREE BILLIONS

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER
United News Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Appropriations for the normal running expenses of the government during the current fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, total $3,046,483,929, a slight reduction below last year.

This figure includes an appropriation of $678,805,303 for the post office department which will be repaid by postal receipts, leaving the net cost of the federal government for the current year at approximately $2,367,678,626.

The total appropriation figure of $3,046,483,929 compares with $3,063,105,332 for last year, showing a slight reduction in operating costs. In addition, the government this year expects to apply $1,392,000,000 toward reduction of principal and payment of interest on the public debt as against $1,320,000,000 last year.

These figures are regarded by those having to do with the fiscal affairs of the government as indicating satisfactory progress in holding down the total cost of the government.

However, the democratic national committee takes exception to some of the administration economy claims. A statement issued by headquarters of the committee here lists appropriations for the District of Columbia as having been $24,466,000 the year Coolidge became president and compares this with the appropriation of $33,918,571 just made by congress for the current fiscal year.

"Expenses of many states, counties and cities, can and should be reduced," the committee says. "But the federal government is still the greatest spendthrift of them all. A million is a bagatelle in budgets now adays."

President Coolidge, in his recent budget address, said the government payroll in Washington has been reduced $5,000 in the last year at a saving of $8,000,000 a year.

Despite the agitation for farm relief, appropriations for the department of agriculture were reduced from $138,075,000 to $137,924,573 this year.

Expenses for national defense went up slightly. The navy department's appropriations was increased from $302,862,000 last year to $319,650,075. The army was increased from $339,765,000 to $342,609,000.

Chosen mayoress by the town council Mrs. Chandler arose at 6 o'clock for her first day at the helm. Before reporting for work she cooked breakfast for her family, washed the dishes, swept the porch and walks, watered the lawn.

RUSSIAN RETURN TO 40 PER CENT VODKA CAUSING LESS PRODUCTION ACCORDING TO FACTORY HEADS

MOSCOW—The restoration of the sale of vodka with its pre-war alcoholic content of forty per cent has put money into the Soviet State Treasury and has done something to check the universal activities of the peasant bottleggers and home brewers.

But it is also causing the Soviet industrial administrators and factory managers considerable concern in attention to deter the workers from excessive consumption of the fiery fluid. And it is providing a certain amount of extra work for the police and the courts.

The Russian worker is consuming the forty per cent vodka with the seal born of his long deprivation due to prohibition, according to official records. Effects are visible in slack work, especially on the Saturday payday and on Monday, factory managers state. Absence from work is pronounced on these days and the output of the individual worker slumps by thirty or forty per cent.

In general staying away from work is a serious problem in the Soviet factories. It averages twelve per cent. In some cases the workers try to persuade the factory doctor to give them a certificate of illness, so that they may be free and yet draw their wages. In other cases they damage a machine with a view to getting a free day while it is being repaired.

Kraval, manager of the economic department of the Supreme Economic Council, which manages the Russian state industries, recently recommended stricter regulations in connection with absenteeism, drinking while at work and other breaches of labor discipline. He suggested that persistent offenders should be dismissed, and that full wages should not be paid in cases of slight illness, since such cases were often nothing but a screen for drunkenness.

Meanwhile the problem of "hooliganism", or public rowdiness, due to police may largely to drink, is engaging the attention of the Soviet courts and police authorities. Drunken brawls, sometimes ending in serious physical injury, knocking people's hats off, damaging factory machinery and disconnecting electrical wires, are mentioned among the most characteristic manifestations of hooliganism. With a view to putting a stop to this the presidium of the All-Union Soviet Executive Committee has raised the legal maximum sentence for serious cases of rowdiness from three months to two years' imprisonment.

Typewritten legal documents are a recent innovation in France, where they have heretofore been written entirely by hand.

UNCLE SAM'S ADVICE ON RABBIT RAISING

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Saving and earning possibilities of rabbit raising as a side line for extra pocket money and at the same time a pleasure is easily accomplished, Uncle Sam advises.

"Rabbits are gentle and attractive. Their meat is as fine as that of poultry and a 10 pound doe can easily raise in a year 20 young, which at five months will produce not less than 50 pounds of meat," he points out in a Department of Agriculture bulletin.

"Half an hour of time a day, and some hay, roadside weeds and refuse from orchard, garden and kitchen, supplemented by a small quantity of grain cover the entire cost of production."

Uncle Sam says on Kansas City resident raises about 400 pounds of rabbit meat a year for his own table and a large religious institute in Nebraska reports that it is raising rabbits instead of poultry as the meat is more satisfactory than chicken.

Rabbit skins have a value also. The fur from thousands of tons of dried rabbit skins is annually manufactured into felt hats. Under a variety of names the skins are also used for ladies furs, the general names being cony, near seal, electric seal, and cony leopard.

There is a demand for rabbit skins and rabbit meat in the United States, Uncle Sam says. The domesticated rabbit as a producer of food and fur had never been fully appreciated until the conditions resulting from the war awakened many of our people to its economic importance.

Dr. J. M. Gordon and family and J. C. Duns and wife of Coleman, passed through Lubbock Wednesday en route to Colorado Springs, where they will spend three weeks in the mountains. ### MEXICAN GYROCOPTER

MEXICO CITY—Manuel Carlos Reyes, a Mexican inventor has developed a gyrocopter for airplanes which he claims will enable them to land vertically. He calls the device a "heliocoptero" and has left for San Antonio, Texas, where he will demonstrate the machine. It is reported to differ from the La Cerva invention in Spain and not to conflict with La Cerva's patents.

Oregon Jerseys To Feed New York Babies

What is said to be the largest shipment of purebred cattle to cross the continent has arrived at its destination in New Jersey from a shipping point in Oregon. This shipment, which consisted of 100 registered Jersey cows and heifers, was made for the Walker-Gordon Milk Company, one of the largest and best known producers of certified milk in the United States.

The Jerseys will be used as foundation stock in the Walker-Gordon herd, which at the time of the arrival of the Oregon cattle numbered 1371 head, and was made up almost entirely of grade stock. Greater and more economical production of high quality milk is expected from the new stock, and it is planned to gradually replace the grade cattle with a high producing purebred herd.

The selection of Oregon Jerseys for a commercial herd in New Jersey is a remarkable tribute to the Western breeders, for the Walker-Gordon Company had the entire country and the Island of Jersey to select foundation stock from. The Oregon cattle, however, have three or four generations of high-producing sires and dams behind them, and this undoubtedly was the deciding factor.

Girl Pleads For Her Brother's Life

LINCOLN, Neb., July 7.—Leta Ringer, 16, appeared before the state pardon board here to plead for the life of her brother, Donald, who is sentenced to be executed Friday for a murder which he committed at the age of 19.

Experienced attorneys have given up Donald's case as futile but Leta told the pardon board that it would be a sin to execute him because of his youth and the board took her plea under advisement. Leta was in tears when she asked that her brother's sentence be commuted to life imprisonment.

Donald was convicted of killing Carl Moore, a Hastings automobile salesman in 1924.

BLED SOE OIL RIG PASSES LUBBOCK

MACHINERY FOR WHICKER
WELL IS EN ROUTE TO LOCATION

Machinery for drilling the first test well at Bledsoe passed through Lubbock Wednesday en route to that city. The location for the test is three miles from Bledsoe, and because of the very favorable geological reports the test will be watched with keenest interest by members of the oil fraternity. It is thought.

The drillers, Cornelius Bros., and Tagger of Eastland, were to have met J. C. Whicker Wednesday for the purpose of making final arrangements for drilling.

The test is being financed by a group of South Plains men who think well enough of geological reports to influence the men to spend their money. As a matter of fact formations are good and there are flowing wells on three sides of the location. In New Mexico, the closest well to the Whicker test, one well is standing 800 feet in oil. Gas in large quantities has also been found in this section.

During an address delivered recently in Amarillo a Standard Oil official stated that in all probability the Amarillo-Upton-New Mexico fields are all connected. If this be true the Bledsoe country is in the center of the triangle.

Leases are in demand and quite a little acreage is changing hands. Some farmers are leasing their land for almost as much as they paid for it, and should oil be found royalties will pay for the land many times.

The test at Bledsoe will be drilled to a depth of 3,500 feet unless oil or gas is found at a shallower depth.

COCKTAILS ARE SERVED BY ENGLISH BARBERS

LONDON—"Will you have a cocktail, sir, while you are waiting for a shave?"

This is the latest tonorial greeting in London's fashionable barber shops. One of the most exclusive of the Bond street barber shops has just installed a bar on the floor above the barber shop. Smoking, reading and card rooms have also been established in connection with the bar to while away the ennui of protracted waiting.

Announcement of the opening of the bar has inspired facetious Americans to suggest that perhaps the drink is designed to alleviate the tortures of an English shave.

Receives Profits Of Play After 14 Years Litigation

NEW YORK, July 7.—After more than 14 years of litigation, Grace A. Sandler, author of a play "In Hawaii" will receive part of the profits made from the Oliver Morosco production "The Bird of Paradise," written by Richard Walton Tully.

The appellate division of the New York state supreme court has affirmed the decision of the lower court that "The Bird of Paradise" was plagiarized from the Sandler piece.

Warning Issued to Guard Mail Boxes

WASHINGTON July 6.—In order to prevent unauthorized persons from obtaining keys and gaining access to mail receptacles, the Post Office Department has cautioned postmasters to instruct apartment house managers to keep close tabs on keys furnished them by manufacturers and jobbers, John H. Bartlett, First Assistant Postmaster General, has announced. The manufacturers have also been requested to co-operate with the Department to prevent the manufacture of duplicate keys.

The full text of Mr. Bartlett's announcement follows:

To Postmasters: Your attention is directed to notice in Postal Bulletin of March 22, 1926, in the matter of key changes required when key locks are used in apartment house mail receptacles.

The attention of this office has been recently called to the fact that some manufacturers are still placing key numbers on barrels of locks to indicate receptacles, which practice makes it possible for unauthorized persons to secure keys and gain access to mail receptacles.

You are again requested to instruct apartment house managers that a record should be kept of key numbers, which should be furnished by manufacturers and jobbers relating the key number to the receptacle number so that when necessary new keys may be ordered and that such records should safely be kept in the custody of trustworthy persons. A letter along this line is being sent to all manufacturers of apartment house mail receptacles whose boxes have been approved by the Post Office Department.

SUNLIGHT FILTERED THROUGH WINDOW GLASS LOSES HEALTH GIVING QUALITIES

WOOSTER, Ohio, July 7.—Experiments conducted at the Ohio Experiment Station here indicate that sunshine filtering through window glass, upon infants and invalids fails to build health and vitality.

Dr. R. M. Bethke, conducting the study, is using two groups of baby chicks, a hundred to a group. Each group is housed and fed exactly alike—the only difference being in the sun porches attached to each of the three houses.

One sun porch is covered with window glass; a second with a substitute for glass, and the third with ordinary wire screen. Results carefully kept and recorded by Dr. Bethke have revealed that the group of chicks kept under the wire screen and the glass substitute, are even in size, and all healthy and scratching.

But the group securing its share of Old Sol's rays strained through the window glass, is a sore and motley crew—some larger, some smaller than others, many of them sickly, puny weaklings, and almost all of them afflicted with "stiff-legs" or rickets, causing them to fall over themselves as they walk.

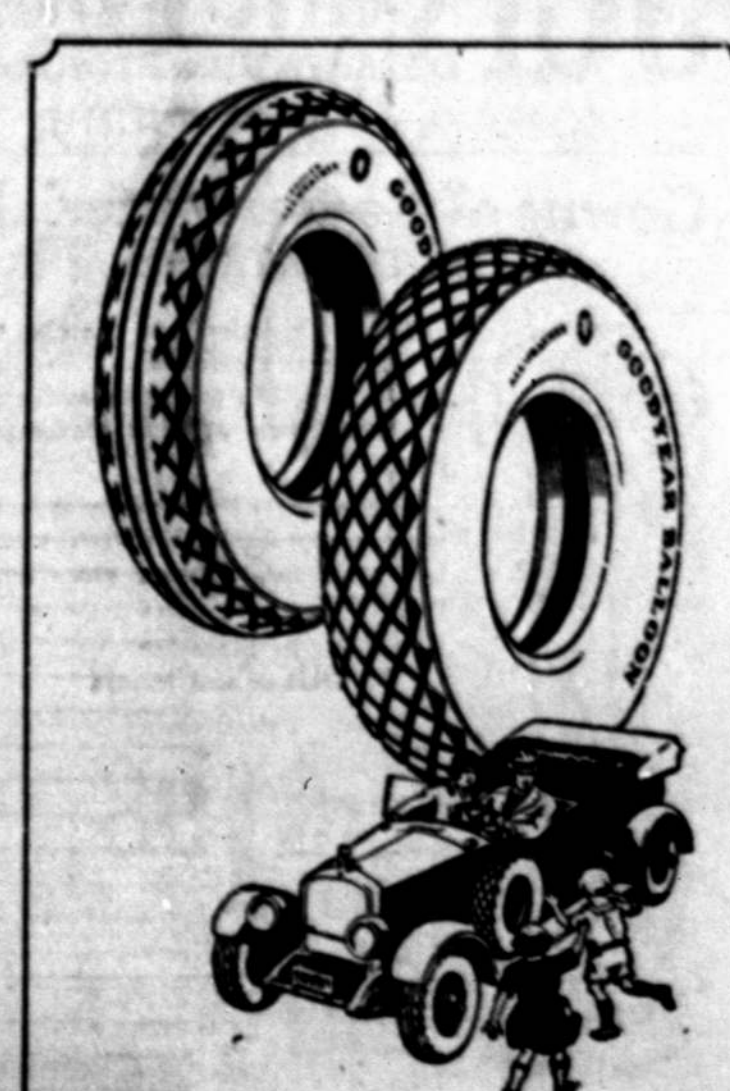

The lesson to be found from these tests, Dr. Bethke points out, is that window glass prevents the passage of the all-important ultra-violet rays, necessary to life and health.

"Sun parlors, especially where they are to be used for babies," Dr. Bethke advises mothers, "should have one section of some other substance than glass through which the sun's rays can reach the infant direct. The crib can be moved as the sun passes westward.

"Glass permits the passage of the red or heat rays and rays which kill germs. That is why we put many windows in a house or a barn which we desire to be especially sanitary. Physicians use the red rays of light in treating many forms of disease, but it is the ultra-violet rays that are necessary for proper bone development in children."

Mrs. Ella Soules of St. Paul was arrested while carrying home a side of bacon which she was charged with stealing.

Why Girls Go Back Home

BY CATHARINE BRODY

Copyright 1925 by Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

"Why Girls Go Back Home" with Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner production from this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Marie Dugan, a country girl as innocent as a daisy, thinks that because Clifford Dudley, a matinee idol, kisses her, they have thus become engaged; and naively follows him to New York. Clifford schemes to get rid of the unsophisticated girl without unpleasant publicity. Sally, an actress, befriends Marie, getting her to chorus job. Marie, defending Clifford's reputation, informs the show-biz she is his betrothed. This announcement leads to the papers and is a bombshell to Clifford's disgraced backers, who fear ruin of show.

CHAPTER V—(Continued)

"You shut your mouth!" snapped Mr. Sheridan. "You made enough trouble. What about that non-engagement or marriage clause in your contract. Yab! I've a blankety-blank mind to close the show and let you kick up your heels for a season. Serve you right. Yab!"

"Here Mr. Dugan took up the cudgels for his client.

"Well, it is a lie," he argued. "Why don't we call the reporters in and give her the razz. Say she's trying to frame him, see?"

"Yab!" snarled Mr. Sheridan, "and what about her? Seventeen, did you say, country girl, and cut-looking? Watch the papers eat it up. Great lover jilt beautiful country-fancied. Yab! Maybe you'd like that. Say, try to get the breaks against a woman in this country. Try, Blank!"

"That," began the press agent softly, "gives me an idea."

He was jumped on in chorus. "Yab! Let's about time." "What fool idea, now?"

But for the first time that month, he found courage to smooth down his hair and perk up his chin.

"Let's call Sam in." There was a port of new firmness and courage in his tone, and the others pricked up their ears. Mr. Sheridan himself opened the door and bawled, "Sam."

Marie opened the door.

One of those anomalous hangers on of theatrical offices, who are sporadically the press agent, playwrights, and stage managers, but usually just play the role of friend to the producer, made his entrance. And it was an entrance. For he was a big, jaunty man in tweeds, with broad, padded shoulders. He had a presence, and was never seen without his cane.

"Supposing we fix this girl," began the press agent anew.

"If you mean money," said Mr. Sheridan briskly, "talk to Dugan and Dudley."

"Now, that's a fool idea," said Mr. Dugan reproachfully, and Clifford's eyes fixed on the press agent with passionate hatred.

"I don't mean money. Listen, here's my little scheme. Sam, you're in on this—"

The three men drew together, and as they listened to the press agent's ebullient syllables, relaxation was visible in their taut features. Mr. Sheridan even had a sly little smile on his face. Mr. Dugan went further in his admiration. He slapped the press agent on the back heartily.

"Attaboy. You're all right. You're there."

"Yeh," commented Mr. Sheridan sourly. "I'll bet that makes Roy Rogers show. I heard it was going to the low wows fast."

"Well, that can't hurt us," argued Mr. Dugan reasonably. "We'll be in on the publicity too."

Clifford said nothing. He only sighed and staggered to a chair, smoothing out the lines that puckered his forehead. No one looked at him with any sympathy.

"It's a dirty trick," added Mr. Sheridan still further, "but okay, no help. Call her up now, Dudley, and let's get it over with. And It might be a good idea for somebody to call up the papers. And say something for Dudley about the engagement, you know, stall them. Bah!"

Thus, Marie, lying on the bed with her head in the pillows as Sally had disgustedly left her, heard the telephone ringing for the millionth time that morning, and ignored it. At every ring, however, her heart beat faster and she thought, "If that's Clifford!" She did not dare answer. But there was something urgent in the call of this telephone. After a few tries, all the other calls had ceased, but this one kept on and on and on and seemed to have every intention of keeping on until the Day of Judgment.

Marie could stand it no longer. There was something in the mysterious angle of a phone, anyway, that is almost irresistible, and there is a limit to human endurance of its shrieking persistence.

She answered feebly, but at the first sound of the voice, she sat up and hugged the telephone to her bosom.

"Oh, Clifford!"

"It's me, dear," said the voice of Clifford kindly.

"Oh, you aren't mad, then?" trembled Marie.

"Well, it makes it rather awkward for me. But there—don't worry."

"Oh, Clifford—darling! The girls were so horrid. You do forgive me, don't you?"

"Yes, Yes."

"You're—"

"Sure, Er—Er—Is Sally in?"

"No, I—I think she's mad at me. She said nasty things about you!"

"She did, did she? Well, if she should come in tell her to get out, will you? I want to see you alone. Get some thing nice for me. How'd you like a new job, for instance?"

"Oh, I'd love it. I can't bear those girls any more."

"Yeh? Listen, dear. A theatrical manager, a friend of mine, is looking for somebody for a fat part in a new show. I told him about you. Since you're my fiancee, of course, you understand? Well, this man's at the office now and wants to see you. We both want to see you. Better put on your best clothes. But make it snappy, because we'll both be around in fifteen minutes."

"All right. All right. I'll rush—darling."

"Goodby—darling! Remember, fifteen minutes!"

When Clifford's voice at its softest had ceased Marie snuggled her head into the pillows for a minute. Waves of sweetest relief and happiness surged through her, and triumph too. What would Sally say? It was an act of God that Sally was mad at her, for she could now stay away as long as possible. She jumped up and skipped with pure glee. She had just time to make up the couch in the living room, on which she slept. But no time for anything else. She must rush. For Clifford would be coming in fifteen minutes. Clifford was coming in fifteen minutes. It made a song in her throat.

When Clifford's voice at its softest had ceased Mr. Sheridan suggested, "God! What a sap she must be!"

"Sam, we better start," suggested the press agent as Sam, smoothly gloved and hatted and caned, stepped from the outer room, where he too, had been telephoning. "Is Florrie game?"

"Yeh," announced Sam.

Clifford and Sam and the press agent were soon on their way in a taxi, stopping only to pick up Sam's blonds and actual wife.

CHAPTER VI

The three men and the woman did not stop to ring the downstairs bell of the four story remodeled brownstone house where Sally and Marie lived. With every aspect of conspirators, they rolled up two heavy flights of stairs. At the head of the next flight was Marie's door. Sam straightened his shoulders and spruced his tie. His wife suppressed a giggle. The press agent, intent and serious, whispered:

"Now, we'll stop here for a minute and give you time to do your stuff. If Sally Short's there say you made a mistake and beat it. We'll have to try some other way. If the girls alone make it snappy, when you're in we'll walk up and stand outside the door. When you're ready cough hard or drop something. Make a noise. And make it snappy, do you hear?"

Sam nodded. He took the next flight of stairs on high, cleared his throat and tapped gently on the door.

Marie, with her hair smoothed and complexion neatly on, was standing before the mirror, hesitating between the choice of two dresses equally worn. She sighed a little as she looked at them. On such a day to have to wear an old dress!

"Oh, dear," she thought nervously at the sound of the knock, "and there's Sally. However will I get her out?"

LEEDS CELEBRATES THREE HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY WITH INDUSTRIAL CARNIVAL

LEEDS, Yorkshire, July 7.—The tercentenary celebration of Leeds opened this morning with a great parade.

Streets and buildings are gaily decorated with flags and bunting and most business houses and mills are closed for the great days.

It was on July 13, 1926, that Charles I granted a charter of incorporation to Leeds after an inquiry into complaints of maladministration. The thirteenth will be the big day of the celebration, but the carnival will continue through the eighteenth.

Many thousands of visitors from neighboring towns and cities and tourists have arrived to help Leeds in its birthday party. The Government is represented by Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, president of the Board of Trade, and Lord Eustace Percy, president of the Board of Education. The Earl of Crawford, president of the London Society of Antiquaries, is also here.

A great industrial exhibition has opened in the town hall, and in addition there is an "Old Leeds" exhibition. In the program every phase of the city's life will find illustration. A series of historical pageants will tell the story of the city's growth, and at night historical plays will be given in the Theatre Royal. The city is prepared to receive a million visitors, and there will be much fun with the lighter carnival attractions.

Everywhere may be seen the city's slogan, "Leeds Leads." While the past is being used as an educational background, many of the displays look to the future and a greater city.

Leeds was a tiny village in the days when the Romans made York their capital before London. Its important clothing trade had an almost equally ancient origin in the hand-loom of the farmer clothier. At the time of the first charter these farmers and cottagers would bring their bales of cloth on pack horses every Tuesday morning for the sale that they conducted on the bridge. A peculiarity of this trading is that it would begin on the striking of a bell, that it was conducted in silence and was terminated quickly. The people of Leeds point to this as an explanation of why they do business so rapidly and with little flurry.

Leeds was lucky to be out of the invader's track and therefore escaped the ravages of war, whether in the raids of Saxons or Normans or in the civil war clashes. The tradespeople prospered in a quiet way until the invention of steam power, which Leeds credits to Matthew Murray, who they say succeeded thirteen years before Stephenson applied the principle of steam power to machinery. With steam, mills sprang up and an industrial revolution occurred which has made Leeds such an important city of Great Britain, with a population of close to half a million.

WHIT DAVIDSON ASSAILS JIM

SAYS FERGUSON OUGHT TO KEEP PROMISE AND NOT RUN AGAIN

GONZALES, July 7.—T. W. Whit Davidson, speaking to a large crowd here this afternoon, assailed Jim Ferguson and asked that the voters not give him any further terms of office.

"We have in this campaign for governor a candidate for governor who is running by proxy. I take it that no man would ordinarily vote for a candidate for governor by proxy if he had one that would suit him otherwise as well. I take it that no man would give one candidate for governor four terms when there are other capable, competent men in the race that suit him as well. You didn't give James Stephen Hogg four terms in the governorship, and why should you give James E. Ferguson four terms in the governor's mansion. You did not give the old alcade four terms in the governor's office, and why should you give James E. Ferguson four terms in the governor's office by electing his wife in his stead."

"A man who promises his friends and political advisers and supporters in the hour of need that he will not be a candidate again should keep that promise. If he will not keep the promise made to those who counsel, aid, and advise him, then he cannot be expected to keep the promise with the whole people of the state."

"Governor Ferguson promised immediately after the first primary last year the people of this state that if they would elect his wife governor she would not be a candidate to succeed him. That when he had been thus vindicated, given an honorable name among the people of this state, that he would retire to private life, like Cincinnatus of old, and show the world how he could make the cabbage grow. He told a bunch of Dallas citizens so, he told Lynch Davidson so, and he told me so."

Borah May Be Candidate For Presidency

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The belief in Washington that Senator Borah of Idaho will be a receptive candidate for the presidential nomination against President Coolidge gained strength today from the senator's announcement that he will tour the South and West this summer to arouse sentiment against the world court.

Borah has been encouraged by the defeat of pro court senators in the primaries already held. He hopes to change the complexion of the senate so that the adherents to the court voted at the last session will be frustrated before it actually becomes effective.

TOO MANY DERBYS

LONDON.—British racing circles are again clamouring for the extinction of all the "secondary" Derbys in the world.

There are now, according to the records here, seventeen races throughout the world which call themselves "Derby" that, according to pundits, is exactly sixteen too many.

There is only one real, genuine "Derby" and that, it is maintained, is the one founded by the 12th Earl of Derby in 1789 on the great downs at Epsom.

But Scotland, Ireland and Wales has each its own "Derby" and even the King of England has, in the past, called one of his pet races during his own private race meeting at "Royal Ascot" by the familiar and affectionate name; he has, up to this year, called the third race in his private program on Ascot Wednesday, "the Ascot Derby." Yielding gracefully to the pundits, King George this year called that race the "King Edward VII Stakes."

In each of the Dominions there are two or three "Derbys" and in the United States there are the Kentucky Derby, the Landonia Derby, the Brooklyn Derby and the Chicago Derby.

Rev. Joyce Daplyn of the 12th, the first woman to become a Unitarian preacher, has bobbed hair.

WILL HOGG PARTY REVIVES FLOYDADA

BIG CROWDS TAX CITY TABERNACLE EVERY DAY

FLOYDADA, Texas, July 7.—The Will Hogg evangelist party is in the midst of a fruitful revival campaign in Floydada. The meeting is being held in the city tabernacle. The enormous crowds are taxing the tabernacle capacity. The stores of Floydada close each day from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m. for the meeting. Old settlers are agreed that this is the greatest meeting ever held in Floyd county. The Hogg party is composed of five people: Rev. S. J. T. Williams, manager; E. H. Martin, director of music; Miss Bessie Rice, pianist and young peoples director; Miss Mary Hogg pianist and children's worker and Dr. Will Hogg. The party goes from Floydada to Memphis, Texas.

Mrs. H. C. Allen of London, aged 65, had her 80-year-old husband arrested for "knocking her about every day."

New York Finance

By United News NEW YORK, July 7.—Although recent leaders in the stock market were called up to absorb heavy profit taking during Wednesday's session operations for the rise were continued in other portions of the list which have not yet to any great extent participated in the upward movement.

Speculative operations were shifted from the industrials to the oils and rails and also to some of the specialties which had been more or less neglected in recent weeks. Gains ranged from substantial fractions to more than 12 points. The maximum advance was registered by United States Cast Iron Pipe which soared to a new high record price for the year as a result of renewed accumulation. Other independent steel stocks were also sharply higher, particularly Bethlehem Steel common which advanced nearly 3 points.

The outstanding development of the day, however, was the urgent demand for railway shares, particularly those involved in the so-called Van Swearingen groups. Pere Marquette attracted particular attention by its sensational advance of four points to $100 a share, a new high record for the year. New York, Chicago and St. Louis also reported a new top for the year, while C. & O. and Erie issues scored substantial gains.

Good buying also was noticeable in Southern Railway which sold at 120, a new high, while demand for other investment issues, was also active.

Trading in the average run of industrials, however, showed some signs of slackening and prices yielded moderately under the weight of realizing sales. Offerings were absorbed without any noticeable effect upon quotations and price changes were unimportant in this group. United States Steel yielded slightly more than one point, but General

Plaintiff prays for process; that his debt be established for the full amount of unpaid principal, interest and attorney fees; that such be decreed a lien on the premises superior to all defendants; that such lien be foreclosed and the property sold to satisfy the same, etc.

DAILY MARKETS

Motors on the other hand closed 1-2 cent higher despite the fact that the stock writing subjects to unusually heavy profit taking throughout the session.

COTTON CLASSING IS BEING STUDIED BY A LARGE NUMBER OF PEOPLE IN TEXAS SCHOOL TO OPEN HERE NEXT MONDAY

L. E. Ross, who is a cotton classing expert, will be in Lubbock next week, and will take charge of the cotton classing school that the Lubbock Business College is going to have, and the people of this section of the state will have an opportunity to learn this very important lesson. Even though you are not expecting to make a professional cotton buyer, it would be worth your time to take this course. What is thought of Mr. Ross as an expert in his line is told in an article to the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, under date line from Round Rock. The writer who is Mrs. L. W. Ross, says:

"In Abilene, Taylor County, is a man who practices what he preaches. This exceptional person came to Round Rock and to Williamson county about 13 years ago. At that time he knew that he wanted to be a cotton buyer, also he knew that if you picked cotton steadily all day, only stopping an hour for dinner, you could pick 600 pounds, and so earn the magnificent sum of $4.50; but beyond that his knowledge of the cotton business was limited.

Still, this country boy was determined to be a cotton man and learn all the tricks of the trade. It was pretty hard at times, but he succeeded. At least the United States Bureau of Markets thinks he has, for it employed him for two consecutive years as Government cotton classer with headquarters at Washington, D. C., and it takes only experts, A. & M. College of Texas, at College Station, and the National Business College at Abilene, also think well of his ability, for at A. & M. he spent two seasons teaching the cotton business from a business man's standpoint to the Federal students, and at the National in Abilene he has spent four seasons teaching it to an assorted throng of farmers and business men.

Now He Knows How
"Between times this man has been and is in the cotton buying and shipping business for himself, and successfully too. When cotton is in full swing in Williamson County, this man practices what he preaches. When the cotton season is over he teaches others the profession.

And this is the boy who came to Round Rock 13 years ago, and did not know how to make out a bill of lading, but still called himself a cotton man! He knows how now, though.

"During that first time when this man whom we shall call L. E. Ross, because that is what he calls himself, first came to Round Rock, in 1913, and had to learn the cotton business in the hard school of experience, he often wondered why in the world there were no schools where the profession could be learned, just as there are schools for doctors, dentists, lawyers, and safe-crackers. If necessity is the mother of invention, it is also the parent of the cotton school, it would seem.

To J. B. Bagley, head of the textile department at A. & M. College, probably goes the credit for the idea of having cotton classing courses taught by real cotton men, and not by theorists. With this end in view, a number of experienced buyers were imported to A. & M. for a six weeks time in 1920, to teach the business to A. & M. boys. Something over 300 men and boys took the work that first year.

Teacher at A. & M.
"Ross, who is this summer with the National Business College at Abilene, was among the cotton buyers imported to A. & M. to teach that summer. He taught there two seasons, but the next year he was offered the work at Abilene, which he accepted, and has been going there ever summer for four years. This summer makes the fifth.

"According to Ross, most every one is interested in cotton. An assorted crowd takes it course every year at Abilene. In his classes, Ross has had two doctors, six bankers, lawyers, school teacher, four druggists and any number of farmers and large land owners who were taking it solely for their own protection. A Catholic priest and a protestant minister are also counted in on the enrollment list, and so are two women students, both of whom have done unusually well in the trade.

"Bearing in mind his own early tribulations, Ross shows the men who come to him for training all the practical details of the business which they will have to know if they are to become successful buyers. This includes street buying of cotton, classing, sampling and shipping. How to make out bills of lading and how to draw drafts are also taught.

Having something of the modest violet in his makeup, Ross dialikes to prate of the success of his man; but he is rather proud of the fact that out of 100 taking the state examination last year, over 70 came through with high grades.

The Practical Way
L. E. Dowd, a member of the State Board of Cotton Examiners, gave the exam last year. It seems this exam is not compulsory except for those desiring positions in bonded warehouses or as public classers. Any man or woman with enough sense to pay their poll tax can learn to class and buy cotton successfully, provided they are taught the real thing and not theory, Ross contends. "The practical way is the way any cotton man would teach it," says Ross, as he left Round Rock to begin his fifth term of teaching it at Abilene.

Rotarians Have Enjoyable Time At Luncheon

The Rotary club had a very enjoyable program at the midweek luncheon, at which time a number of the local artists featured. The program was arranged by Rotarian Lee Duggan, and presided over by Walter Jennings, pastor of the First Christian church at this place.

The first number on the program being a vocal solo by Mrs. McElvey, who responded to a hearty encore, and was accompanied at the piano by Miss Huff. R. C. White of the Bell Ice Cream company spoke briefly on the educational features of his business, which was enjoyed by the club, on account of the instructive thoughts contained therein. R. C. is a new member, but from the way he has started out he is going to make one of the very best Rotarians. Miss Pendleton of the Texas Technological college, gave two very highly appreciated readings. It was announced that the directors of the club had made arrangements with the manager of the new hotel to serve them in their weekly luncheons.

Mussolini Tightens Hold On Elections

ROME, Italy, July 7.—Premier Mussolini has made more absolute his iron grasp on government in Italy by suspension through government order of administrative elections both in municipalities and provinces throughout the country.

The system of "podesta government" of cities first introduced by Frederick I. when that German ruler began to assert his imperial rights over Italy in 1158, is to supplant municipal council government in all Italian towns and thus the "podestas" named in Rome, will carry out the will of the Italian dictator. The first order issued suspends administrative elections in municipalities. The council will disappear completely upon promulgation of a law placing political representative in municipalities on a guild basis.

MODERN MODEL HOMES SCORNED BY PEASANTS

MOSCOW, July 7.—"There's no place like home," the peasants of the village Lugansk, in the timber district of Northern Russia, told the state timber trust which wanted to take over the village land for its work and proposed to build the peasants new and more comfortable houses in a locality a few miles away.

The only condition on which they consented to move at all was that the new houses should be exact duplicates of the old with few and small windows and dark, smoky interiors. They watched the architects closely at their work; and one old peasant woman raised such a disturbance when she found that the ceiling in the new house would be higher than it was in the old that the engineers had to raise the floor, at great trouble and expense, in order to still her outcries.

Patrick Young, a professional beggar of Chicago was sent to jail for cursing a man who had refused to give him money.

Estonia is just becoming interested in vacuum cleaners.

Reed Wants Anti Salooners Known

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 7.—Until officers of the Anti-Saloon League are able to prove that the league is a non-political organization, the public is entitled to all facts concerning its organization, Senator Jim Reed, chairman of the senate primary investigating committee, believes. Commenting on the action of the committee in withholding figures on Anti-Saloon League contributions, Reed said:

"I left my vote to be cast on this question and it certainly was not for suppression of the contribution figures. Senator Reed is enroute by motor from Washington where he directed the primary investigation to his home in Kansas City.

WILSON POINTER PURCHASED BY FORRESTER

R. C. Forrester of Wilson was here yesterday in the interest of the Wilson Pointer, which publication he has recently acquired from S. J. Redman, who has been publishing it since last October.

Mr. Forrester is one of the old residents of this country having resided on the plains for about 26 years, and had Lubbock as host post-office before any of the other counties on the South Plains had been organized.

PEKING, July 7.—Peking motorists must henceforth refrain from driving their cars "at full speed" through the streets, says a police proclamation.

Two reasons are given: First, because of dry weather the streets are full of dust which is detrimental to health when inhaled. Second—apparently an after thought on the part of the police—accidents should be avoided.
