Ag bonanza

LUBBOCK — Harvest equipment roared into action Tuesday on an 800-acre farm and ranch showplace billed as Texas' first working farm show. Spectators by the hundreds roamed amid the Farmer-Stockman Show fields and carnival-like tent during the opening of the three-day event. Smells of hay, barbecue — and, yes, manure — wafted over the grounds where salesmen were peddling cattle vaccines, windmills and fire-ant killers. The show featured exhibits, seminars and demonstrations./5B

Risky-like bash

SAN FRANCISCO — A teenager angry at his parents for packing him off to boarding school organized a "Risky Business"-like bash while they were taking him away. The savage soiree left the family's million-dollar home trashed and plundered. As many as 200 young people showed up at the party. 10 were arrested and more arrests were expected, police said Tuesday. The youth, believed to be 17, was not in custody Tuesday morning but was being interviewed in Colorado, where he and his parents were when the Friday night fete occurred, police said./8B

Amtrak crash probe

WASHINGTON — If the operator of a tugboat near Mobile, Ala., had known how to use his radar, he would not have misread a railroad bridge as a barge and hit it, a Coast Guard officer testified Tuesday. One of the barges being towed struck the bridge, setting in motion events that led to the deadliest wreck in the history of Amtrak, the House Merchant Marine Committee was told./4B

State switches to windshield stickers

■ New registration tags are designed to prevent theft.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Vehicle-registration sticker thieves may be thwarted come January 1994.

That is when the postage-stamp-size license-plate stickers start getting phased out on most cars and light trucks in Texas and will be replaced by 2¼-by-3¼-inch blue stickers inside the windshields.

Texas legislators authorized the new stickers to curtail the theft of license-plate registration stickers.

"As the laws get stricter and stricter, then stickers become more and more valuable," said Kathy Reeves, the Midland County tax assessor-collector. "They (thieves) have a tendency to steal them to avoid paying for insurance" and the vehi-

U.S. pulls anchor off Haiti

Clinton presses for renewed U.N. sanctions

■ President suspends deployment of noncombat troops; plan to restore Aristide to power on hold.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton abruptly withdrew a shipload of noncombat troops from Haitian waters Tuesday but warned defiant leaders there he was "dead serious" about the return of ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

President Clinton said U.S. soldiers will not return until Haiti's military leaders guarantee security, Aristide's safe return.

Clinton coupled his action with an urgent request for the immediate reimposition of U.N. economic sanctions against Haiti, targeted at military and police leaders trying to block Aristide's return under a U.N.-brokered accord.

"Now the time has come for the people who are clinging to their last gasp of power to honor the agreement," Clinton said. "They made the agreement; they've got to honor it."

He said, "I want the Haitians to know that I am dead serous about seeing them honor the agreements they made."

The fast-moving chain of events came one day after the USS Harlan County, an amphibious landing ship carrying about 194 U.S. and 25 Canadian noncombat forces, was blocked from docking in Port-au-Prince by armed toughs protesting U.S. involvement. The troops were on a U.N. mission to train the Hai-

Militants cheer retreat; Aristide plan unravels

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Hundreds of militant right-wingers cheered and fired guns into the air at dockside Tuesday as an American warship retreated from Haiti in a major setback for the U.N. mission to restore democracy.

The aborted troop deployment threatened to wreck international efforts to prepare for the return of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide on Oct. 30.

The National Coalition, a rightist military-backed group, declared Tuesday a "day of indignation," stopping buses to keep children out of school and urging their army to resist a foreign "invasion."

"We're ready to die!" said Jacques Robert, 32, an engineer who with scores of others stayed through an all-night "patriotic vigil" at the dock.

"We'll stay here 'til Oct. 30. We're mobilized. We don't want Aristide back!"

The USS Harlan County pulled anchor just minutes after the Pentagon ordered it to withdraw to international waters.

Among the 200 to 300 people cheering the ship's retreat was a senior aide to army commander Lt. Gen Raoul Cedras, the general who ousted Aristide in 1991.

Although only a minority of Haitians opposes Aristide's return, military-sup-

New threats to fine-arts courses draw standing-room-only crowd

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Midland parents turned out in full force Tuesday night to hear about high school fine-arts courses being threatened.

It was standing room only for more than 200 parents, students and teachers who packed Lee High School's library to hear about the state's recommended degree plan that emphasizes some academics at the expense of fine-arts courses.

"We are here to talk about one subject, and one subject only, and that is the state-recommended 24-unit high school degree plan," said Midlander Penny Angelo, meeting organizer.

Maridell Fryar, former Midland teacher, debate coach, and recently retired executive director of instruction for Midland Independent School District, explained the plan the State

2 former Detroit officers draw sentences in beating death

DETROIT (AP) — Two former policemen convicted of beating a motorist to death outside an inner-city crack house escaped life sentences Tuesday, one getting 12 to 25 years behind bars, the other eight to 18 years.

The judge said Larry Nevers and Walter Budzyn must be held accountable even if they didn't intend to kill Malice Green, 35, an unemployed steelworker who suffered at least 14 blows to the head and had part of his scalp torn off.

The dismissed officers — partners known as Starsky and Hutch on their beat — appealed to Judge George W. Crockett III for leniency in choking whispers.

They said they didn't mean for Green to die and said he just got out of hand. Crockett responded that it was the officers who got out of hand.

The judge gave Nevers the stiffer sentence, although both

Police group moves to drop civilianization of jobs lawsuit

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

Midland police officers who filed a lawsuit against the city in efforts to keep their positions as commissioned officers have requested that the case be dismissed, according to court documents.

The 15 named officers and a number of "John Does" filed a lawsuit in September against the city claiming that making some Police Department jobs civilian will circumvent the American Disabilities Act and strip them of their commissions.

The lawsuit, filed by several officers — some with disabilities — originally was filed in 238th District Court before Oct. 1 — the city's target date for the policy to go into effect.

The city attorneys had the case transferred to the federal system and no action was taken before

Yeltsin apologizes to Japan, eases dispute

TOKYO (AP) — Boris Yeltsin tried to improve relations with Japan by apologizing Tuesday for Soviet abuse of Japanese prisoners from World War II and promising to settle a decades-old territorial dispute.

The Russian president's three-day state visit may not produce major breakthroughs, but he appears intent on improving ties that have been chilly since the war ended and Soviet troops seized four northern islands from Japan.

Yeltsin invited Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa to visit Moscow, and Hosokawa accepted. The two leaders also agreed to begin twice-yearly meetings of their foreign ministers.

At a state dinner given by Emperor Akihito, Yeltsin said he hoped his visit would "open a new page in the history of relations between Russia and Japan."

Yeltsin's state visit to Japan, his first trip abroad since crushing a rebellion in Moscow last week, is only the second by a Russian leader since the war. Former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev visited in 1991.

Japanese officials were pleased that Yeltsin promised to uphold all Soviet commitments to Japan, presumably including a 1956 agreement to return two of the disputed Kuril islands once a formal peace treaty is signed.

Yeltsin's pledge to uphold earlier Soviet promises was surprising, since he had said on arriving Monday that he hoped the island dispute would not come up. Yeltsin twice had canceled earlier state visits, sensing Japan's insistence on an island settlement.

The two leaders agreed to step up talks on the treaty, and Yeltsin promised to withdraw most of the roughly 5,000 Russian troops still on the Russian-held Kuril islands.

Some reference to the 1956 accord and the islands was expected in a joint declaration to be issued today. An agreement on economic and technical cooperation also was expected to be signed.

Endorsing a previous accord may not seem significant, but Japanese officials said Yeltsin's gesture would help advance future talks and eventually lead to normalized relations between Tokyo and Moscow.

N. Korea blasts energy agency; seeks direct U.S. negotiations

TOKYO (NYT) — In its continuing campaign to avoid international inspections of suspected nuclear weapons, North Korea issued a blistering attack on Tuesday against the International Atomic Energy Agency and said only direct talks with the United States could resolve the crisis.

The broadside, issued in the name of North Korea's minister of atomic energy and carried by the official news agency, described a bizarre plot that it said was intended to discredit the country. The plot involved a letter North Koreans said was a forgery by the International Atomic Energy Agency that suggested North Korea was developing nuclear bombs.

Intelligence reports indicate the existence of a secret nuclear program, but North Koreans have long denied that intention and permitted some inspections earlier this year. North Korea has condemned demands for new inspections — to which it agreed when it joined the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty — as a violation of its sovereignty.

There is evidence of a nuclear program and North Korea has test-fired a missile this year that could reach Japan, but some U.N. members do not want to isolate further what is already one of the most isolated nations on earth or impose an economic embargo on a country where malnutrition is believed to be rampant.

Moscow police target various minority groups

MOSCOW (NYT) — Empowered by an eight-day-old state of emergency, Moscow police are using their extra powers as part of a wider crackdown on crime to conduct raids aimed at non-Russian minority groups throughout the city.

According to complaints registered at local embassies of former Soviet republics and at the local office of Helsinki Watch, a human rights organization, police have staged nighttime sweeps of hotels, dormitories and apartments frequented by visitors from the Caucasus and Central Asia, and in cases when permits are not in order, forced them out of town, in some cases even paying their fare.

The Omon, or special riot squads, have also conducted daytime raids at Moscow's farmers' markets, scaring away Azerbaijanis and other Caucasian traders who now dominate the fruit and vegetable business in the city.

Col. Gen. Alexander N. Kulikov, commandant of Moscow in the emergency, said Tuesday at a meeting that 3,457 people had been expelled from the city in the last week, but he noted that as many as 10,000 others may have left on extra planes and trains that have been added to regular schedules.

Kulikov told a news conference Monday that he did not expect the state of emergency, imposed before dawn on Oct. 4, as the government prepared its assault on the Parliament building, to last beyond Oct. 18.

Citing a ban on political meetings in the capital during the state of emergency, government officials on Tuesday ordered the International Press Center to postpone a news conference with Sergei Baburin, one of the former Parliament's most vigilant nationalists.

"They said it in a nice way, not a threatening way," said Harry Bodaan, president of the Press Center, who declined to identify the callers by name.

"They said if you decide to go ahead with the press conference, then you will leave us no choice but to inform General Kulikov. Rather than be at the mercy of General Kulikov, who has the power to come into the building and lock up the press center, we decided on a couple days' postponement."

NOTED DOCTOR 'PSYCHS' PEOPLE SLIM & SMOKE-FREE

SUCCESS RATES TOP 95% FOR WEIGHT LOSS & STOP SMOKING HYPNOSIS PROGRAMS

ODESSA- Betty Powell was an 'expert' on weight loss. "You name it, and I've tried it", she said, "... diets, shots, pills, Nutrisystems, Jenny Craig, Slim Fast, etc. Oh sure, I'd manage to lose a few pounds, but I always regained them, with a few extra to spare. I'd almost given up hope, when some of my friends told me how they each had not only lost weight but kept it off through a group hypnotherapy session conducted by Dr. Kaloski. Three and a half months after attending the seminar I had lost 43 lbs., reaching my goal weight of 115. It's been a year now and I haven't gained back a single pound! Best of all, I did it without dieting."

Frank Lopez was a 3 pack-a-day, 31 year smoker who had tried "the Patch", nicotine gum, white-knuckle willpower and even other hypnosis programs. "Five wall-climbing days was the longest I ever made it", he said, "Dr. Kaloski helped me quit smoking with absolutely no withdrawal. It's been 2 years and I've never felt better."

These people, and thousands more like them, are now being helped through the innovative and highly successful techniques pioneered by Dr. B. E. Kaloski. Holder of Doctorate Degrees in both Counseling Psychology and Clinical Hypnotherapy, Dr. Kaloski founded the nation's largest network of private hypnosis clinics, is a Fellow of the National Board for Hypnotic Anaesthesiology, past president of the American Board of Hypnotherapy and author of "Psych Yourself Slim" and "The No Nonsense Guide to Smoking Cessation." With over 100,000 patient hours in group and private practice, he ranks as one of the nation's most experienced hypnotherapists.

A dynamic speaker who brings a genuine enthusiasm to his seminars, Dr. Kaloski credits his phenomenal success rate, in the 95% range, to his exclusive and revolutionary Multiphasic Motivational Programming method, so unique that it is registered with the U.S. Copyright Office. "All habits are the result of both conscious and subconscious processing. To treat one area while neglecting the other is only doing half the job. MMP is the only program that's been designed to provide dynamic intervention on both levels - conscious and subconscious. The results may at times seem truly miraculous but these techniques are based on sound, proven and time-tested principles."

"Contrary to popular belief, everyone can be hypnotized. A hypnotized person is not asleep; they're just fully relaxed, intensely focused, aware and always in control."

"Dr. Kaloski has made a significant breakthrough in the areas of weight loss and smoking cessation," according to Dr. A.M. Krasner, a top hypnosis educator and author of "The Wizard Within", a definitive textbook." He's taken a centuries old technique, hypnosis, and given it a startling new dimension. I strongly recommend his program to everyone, especially those who've had little or no success with other programs or seminars. Simply put, his method works."

According to Dr. Kaloski, there are three main reasons why most people fail to permanently lose weight or stop smoking. "First, they rely on willpower - a very unreliable method. Willpower means you have to deprive yourself of something you want. With my method, willpower becomes unnecessary since you can't feel deprived of something you don't want. We redirect a person's priorities so that the desire for the fattening foods or cigarettes is replaced by a stronger desire for a slim, trim figure, vibrant health, longevity and abundant vitality. After our seminar a person eats less because they actually want less. They don't smoke because they actually don't want a cigarette. That's critically important."

"Second, they concentrate on changing the action but not the attitude... a big mistake. Before the weight can come off and stay off the body, it must come off from between the ears. The same principle applies to smoking. The only way to permanently lose weight or stop smoking is to change one's attitude toward food and cigarettes. That's exactly what this program accomplishes."

"Third, they often find a great void in their life without the food or cigarettes that have been their friends for years. This often causes a relapse. I've solved that problem by programming everyone, while in hypnosis, with three positive replacements to fill that void. Smokers also benefit by not gaining weight after quitting."

"The first hour is the same for everyone. That's when we lay the crucial groundwork for success. After a short break, I conduct the weight loss session, which takes about 30 minutes - sending the smokers off to puff to their heart's content since it'll be the last cigarettes they'll ever have. I then conduct the stop smoking session."

At his seminar, he also shows people how to improve other areas of their life as well, such as exercise motivation, stress, memory & concentration, self-esteem & confidence, financial success, procrastination, alcohol, insomnia, pain relief, depression, fears & phobias, to name a few.

He is so confident of these programs that he offers a lifetime guarantee. If anyone should ever need additional help, attend the same program at anytime in the future absolutely free of charge.

Dr. Bruce E. Kaloski backs his seminars with a lifetime guarantee

"I'm very pleased to offer this seminar for only $39.95 for either program or $59.95 for both," he said. "Compared to my $295 private session fee, this puts these outstanding programs within the reach of almost everyone. Furthermore, I offer a discount for groups of 3 or more."

Dr. Kaloski will personally conduct his highly acclaimed seminar in Odessa on Thursday, October 14 at the Odessa Hilton, 5200 E. University (at Loop 338) starting at 7:30 pm. Registration is at the door beginning at 7:00 pm. Cash, Check, MC/VISA are accepted. Dress comfortably and bring a pillow, if you wish.

Clinton aide talks peace with Somali warlord's representatives

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — President Clinton's diplomatic troubleshooter talked peace with representatives of warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid on Tuesday, but gunmen fired on two U.N. outposts and attacked a relief convoy.

Remains believed to be those of an 18th American soldier killed in a bungled Oct. 3 raid were turned over to U.N. authorities. Capt. Tim McDavitt, a U.N. spokesman, said all missing Americans are now accounted for.

Officials released no details of the meeting between Robert Oakley and members of the Somali National Alliance, Aidid's clan-based political group.

Oakley is pursuing a peace arrangment, and was also expected to press for the release of Chief Warrant Officer Michael Durant of Berlin, N.H., who was captured in the Oct. 3 raid.

Oakley also was expected to seek freedom for a Nigerian private captured earlier and also being held by Aidid.

In Washington, Secretary of State Warren Christopher reaffirmed that the United States is downplaying a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for Aidid's arrest.He said the focus is now on trying to reach a political settlement.

"The United Nations resolutions, of course, remain as they are, but it is a matter of where the focus of U.S. interest is," Christopher said.

The negotiations took place against a tense backdrop:

— U.S. warplanes buzzed the capital at least three times. Reporters in a pool organized by U.S. forces saw two flyovers by F-18s and one by an A-6.

— Gunmen still roamed the battered streets of Mogadishu and fired on two U.N. posts manned by Pakistanis during the night. The Pakistanis returned fire and were not hit, said Maj. David Stockwell, the U.N. military spokesman.

The attack shattered a three-day calm since Aidid issued a cease-fire order. Stockwell said the gunmen were believed to be from Aidid's militia.

— Bandits attacked a relief convoy from the aid group Irish Concern south of Mogadishu but it managed to reach the city without casualties, McDavitt said.

Aidid's faction was reportedly split over whether to free its two hostages now or only after the United Nations released 32 Somali prisoners, including four key aides of Aidid.

There was also uncertainty over whether the faction members who met with Oakley had any real clout with the fugitive warlord.

McDavitt said the Somali detainees would be held until U.N. authorities were convinced they played no part in attacks against peacekeepers, and refused journalists' requests to interview them.

He added there was no time frame for their release."It could take months," he said.

Stockwell said usually 30 to 40 Somalis were held by U.N. forces at any one time and stayed in detention for an average of 10 days.

"Aidid's people will certainly be held for more than 10 days," he said.

Despite opposition from Somali clan leaders, plans were proceeding for an Oct. 20 meeting on Somalia .

Envoy: China keeps grip on human rights

BEIJING (AP) — China's rulers show few signs of being ready to relax their grip on individual freedoms, a U.S. envoy said Tuesday at the end of two days of talks on human rights.

President Clinton has said human rights performance will affect the decision next year on renewing China's most-favored-nation trade status, which guarantees its goods the lowest U.S. tariffs.

"We've certainly indicated to them that progress is needed," said the envoy, John Shattuck, assistant secretary of state for human rights and humanitarian affairs.

The Clinton administration must give a six-month progress report to Congress within the next few weeks, although the deadline to renew or cancel China's trade status is not due until June.

Shattuck said he explained the administration's requirements in detail in meetings with Vice Foreign Minister Liu Huaqiu and officials from the police, judiciary, family planning, religious affairs and minority affairs departments.

But he refused to describe the Chinese reaction other than to say the officials were "attentive" and showed an interest in further discussions. Shattuck said he expected more high-level talks in coming months, but no dates or places were decided.

Although he did not claim any concrete progress, Shattuck said his meetings were important because they marked the resumption of a formal human rights dialogue that Beijing halted nearly two years ago.

The sides have clashed on trade, arms sales and nuclear warhead testing. But the chief tension in the relationship — ever since China's army crushed the 1989 democracy movement — has sprung from conflicting views of human rights and Chinese suspicion that Washington seeks to undermine Communist rule.

From the U.S. point of view, China recently has taken both positive and negative steps.

It released two political prisoners several months before their terms were to have ended, including China's longest-held dissident, Wei Jingsheng.

However, authorities also arrested two Chinese journalists, sentenced a college student to two years in prison for putting up pro-democracy posters, and announced a crackdown on private satellite dishes that get foreign television broadcasts.

In Washington, meanwhile, a senior Clinton administration official said Assistant Secretary of Defense Charles Freeman would travel to China within several weeks as part of a resumption of military exchanges.

The United States broke off the military relationship to protest the 1989 crackdown. But the administration decided several weeks ago to resume some contacts as an attempt to halt deterioration of Washington-Beijing relations.

The renewal of military ties will consist mainly of discussions on bilateral and global security issues. But military sales would not be included, the official said.

German court clears way for European union

BONN (NYT) — Germany's constitutional court removed the last obstacle to Bonn's ratification of the treaty on European union Tuesday, ruling that the pact could never impose a federal-style government or a common currency on individual members against their will.

Germany is the only member that has not formally ratified the treaty, which was negotiated in the Dutch town of Maastricht at the end of 1991 and has been a rallying point for fears that closer unity would submerge separate European national identities.

Rejection by any single country would have scuttled the treaty, which has been going through the perils of Pauline for the past year and a half as various parliaments and electorates threatened to reject it. Now it can finally go into effect on Nov. 1.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl welcomed the decision Tuesday as "an important milestone in the process of European integration and its continuation," but the treaty and the opposition it aroused may really mark the end of the road toward a United States of Europe.

In its ruling, the German court rejected the view that the treaty would set up a European superstate, with a single currency and a powerful central government in Brussels.

"The Union Treaty founds an association of states with the goal of an ever-closer union of European peoples organized as states," said the ruling, which came on an appeal from treaty critics who argued that it would surrender national power in violation of the German Constitution.

"Overall, the concerns of the plaintiffs — that the European Community, because of its ambitious goals, will develop without new parliamentary rights into a political union whose sovereignty rights cannot be foreseen — were unfounded," the decision by eight judges in Karlsruhe said.

European Community leaders will meet in Brussels on Oct. 29 to mark the end of the ratification process.

THREATS: Concerned parents, students turn out in full force

(From 1A)

Board of Education (SBOE) may vote on in November.

While MISD requires students to amass 22 credits in order to graduate, the new plan requires 24. It also recommends more math and science courses in a "core" plan of 21 credits, and a choice of three additional credits that includes one elective.

A second option to the plan would add three sequential courses of vocational credits to the core.

The core contains only one fine-arts requirement and one elective that could also be taken in a fine-arts field.

So what does the proposed plan mean for Texas students?

"Gone are the days of students singing in the choir and performing a theater arts production too," said Robert Floyd, executive director of the Texas Music Educators Association.

"Also, gone are the days when a student could be in the band and take all the computer science courses possible," Floyd said.

Ms. Fryar testified before the SBOE at a hearing last month. She said that Texas Commissioner of Education Lionel "Skip" Meno has said that school districts have the option of implementing seven-period school days.

MISD has an optional seven-period day, with an early morning class offered to students before the school day begins.

"Roughly 33 percent of our students in Midland choose to go seven periods," Ms. Fryar said. "That is a choice parents and students make. It is not mandatory. There are choices built into the system in Midland, Texas, to meet the commitment level of students and parents."

She said, if passed, the new degree-plan "narrows options," and "gives no credence whatsoever for students to focus on strengths in English language or fine arts. I don't accept that, and I don't think you as parents should accept it."

The problem, Ms. Fryar and Floyd agreed, is that the SBOE is not recognizing that rigor is demanded in some courses, such as understanding classical music, sight-reading music or in learning to play an instrument.

"Academic rigor, academic quality and academic excellence are not housed in the name of a course," Ms. Fryar said. "It is housed in expectations the teachers expect their students to meet. Excellence is attached to the quality of instruction that occurs. We need to make sure every class has academic expectations that cause students to stretch."

Floyd praised Geraldine Miller, the state chair of the Student Committee, for stopping a vote on the degree plan in July. "She is the reason the board delayed action on this. If it had been voted on in July it would have been a done deal and we wouldn't be sitting here today. She was successful in holding off the vote until the people of Texas could respond."

Floyd said Meno and the SBOE have said the expectations for Texas students are too low. "Meno said only 18 percent of the jobs available in the year 2000 will involve unskilled labor, and we need to put this plan out to challenge our students," he said.

The plan emphasizes higher-level math, science and foreign language courses. "Meno feels it is misleading to parents if they think students who graduate from high school are ready for the real world. . . . About 61 percent of Texas high school students graduated with the absolute minimum they could get by on last year," the TMEA director said.

One parent attending the meeting said that if students were taking the minimum courses required now, what will happen to the dropout rate when the courseload is increased.

"The state board is not asking which courses keep students motivated and keep them in school. It is not asking which courses develop self-esteem," Floyd said. "We are seeking a balance."

He also said the SBOE "is getting out of the business of recognizing honors courses or advanced transcripts."

"You can still continue to offer them locally, but deciding what constitutes honors courses is too complex," Floyd said.

Both speakers said the state is edging toward having the recommended plan and a minimum degree plan.

They allowed that the plan is only "recommended" at this time.

"But when does something just recommended assume enough status that universities begin requiring it?" Ms. Fryar said. "When districts began offering advanced and honors transcripts, major universities didn't pay attention (initially)."

She said the hidden agenda of the SBOE may be to relegate all extracurricular courses — such as band, choir, athletics, drama or speech — to after-school activities.

"Meno is from New York where all of extracurriculars are after school. They have bands you wouldn't want to field and debate teams that wouldn't stand in the wind," she said.

Floyd said the SBOE perception is that "band is marching band, marching band is half-time shows, half-time shows are football and football is extracurricular."

This is the perception we are fighting against," he said.

"Placing all of these activities after school will mean participants will be only the affluent, or truly committed, or commitable," Ms. Fryar said wryly, to a roomful of laughter.

"I don't think anyone intends to damage fine arts," Floyd said. "I think fine arts continues to fight for its life and it gets caught in the backwash of other state priorities."

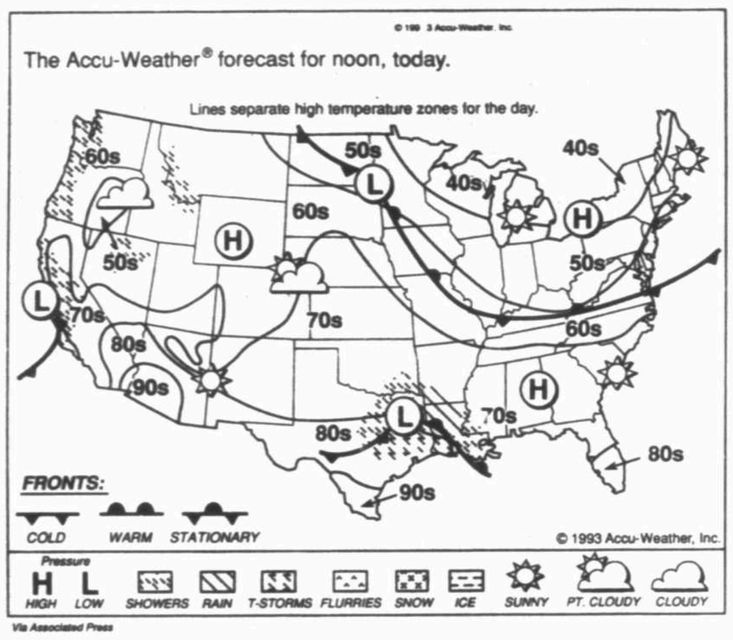

He said the state is putting forth the plan with the idea school boards will have to be the ones that become "imaginative and creative to put out a schedule to accommodate everyone."

The SBOE will be hearing public testimony on the issue Friday in El Paso.

If the plan passes in November it will affect students entering the ninth grade next fall.

Midlanders who would like to voice their opinion on the issue may write MISD's representative: Monte Haise of District 15 at Prudential-Bache Securities, 5211 Brownfield Highway, Lubbock 79407.

JOBS: Group of officers drops its lawsuit

the Oct. 1 deadline and the positions changed from peace officers to civilians.

A statement released by city officials, however, indicated that all of the officers affected by the reclassification of the eight positions were given three choices: continue to work in their present jobs as civilians, apply for a transfer to a police officer position elsewhere in the department or apply for another civilian position within the city.

The request for the dismissal of the case stated that the lawsuit was filed in state court before Oct. 1 for the purposes of establishing a class-action lawsuit to obtain temporary and injunctive relief before the deadline.

John Gunter, one of the attorneys representing the plaintiffs, indicated that a class-action lawsuit in federal court requires 26 or more plaintiffs. This lawsuit would not meet the stipulations, he said.

He called the city's request to move the lawsuit from the 238th District Court to the U.S. District Court a "delaying tactic" causing the officers to run out of money.

"Further, the temporary and injunctive relief which the plaintiffs sought in order to prevent the actions taken by the city of Midland . . . is no longer necessary," because the deadline has past, the dismissal request stated.

Milton O'Bryant, one of the plaintiffs in the case, said those are the two reasons they chose to request the dismissal of the case.

"No. 1, we don't have the money. No. 2, the whole idea of the class-action suit was to stop the city. . . ." O'Bryant said. "And to determine if their actions were legal under the (Americans with Disabilities Act.)

He said that because the Oct. 1 deadline was not met, the city's new policies went into effect.

"It is all sort of a moot point now," O'Bryant said.

He said, "They have unlimited tax money to fight you with. . . . Our attorneys basically donated their time."

City Attorney Keith Stretcher was out of town and unavailable for comment. Because he was the chief attorney on that case, First Assistant City Attorney Kevin Laughlin hesitated to comment.

"The only thing I can really say is that we're pleased (that the case will be dismissed.) We hope that this issue is behind us now," Laughlin said.

Rick Davis, an attorney representing the city, said officials are pleased the plaintiffs chose to drop the case, but declined further comment.

Federal court officials indicated Senior U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton would likely sign the dismissal order this afternoon.

However, Gunter indicated the attorneys will refile the lawsuit with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and ask them to pursue the case. He said the EEOC has 180 days to respond, but he will try and get the process expedited.

"It's not a done deal yet," Gunter added. "You've got to roll with the system."

STICKERS: State alters tags to hinder theft

cle-registration fees.

Mrs. Reeves noted that Texas laws prohibit the issuance of vehicle-registration stickers and license plates without proof of insurance liability coverage.

Of the approximately 14 million vehicle-registration stickers and license plates issued statewide last year, 568,885 were replaced, according to the Texas Department of Transportation. Of those, more than 340,000 or 60 percent of the replacements were due to theft.

Replacement cost is $5.30 per sticker.

In Midland County last year, more than 97,000 vehicles were registered, Mrs. Reeves said. And for the first nine months of 1993, more than 2,000 stickers, including stolen ones, have been replaced.

If the new sticker is peeled off the windshield, the word "VOID" will automatically appear on the sticker and will render the sticker "a useless piece of paper . . . not even worth stealing," according to state officials.

"When word gets out that these stickers are useless when peeled off the glass, (the) incidence of stolen stickers will drop quickly, as will the cost of replacing stolen stickers," said Jerry Dike, director of the transportation department's Division of Motor Vehicle Titles and Registration.

Dike said that "if all stolen stickers were used on vehicles that would otherwise be legally registered, state and county revenue losses could exceed $17 million. Recouping those losses could mean savings passed on for use on other projects."

The 72nd Texas Legislature in 1991 passed a law which mandated the sticker change from the license plate to the inside of the windshield to reduce the theft of vehicle-registration stickers.

"We haven't really seen a decline in (vehicle) registrations (due to theft), but the registration violations are out there," said transportation department spokeswoman Rexanne Meaux of Austin. "The sticker is really more valuable, worth more, than it used to be" due in part to Texas insurance laws.

The old postage-stamp-size registration stickers were first used in Texas in 1976 in part to save money on the annual cost of replacing the metal license plates.

Most license plates today are valid for eight years.

The new windshield registration stickers will be required for all road-worthy ground vehicles that have windshields except for vehicles such as the 18-wheel tractor trailers, which require an annual license-plate change, Ms. Meaux said.

State law requires that the metal license plates for most vehicles be replaced every eight years because of the diminishing quality of the plates' reflective material, according to Ms. Meaux.

Ruben Gonzalez, the transportation department's regional supervisor in Odessa, noted that Texas legislators in 1991 passed the new-sticker law to help counter "the big rash" of vehicle thefts. The positioning of the larger sticker on inside of the windshield is a "more secure location" for the sticker.

Motorcycle registration still will be indicated by the license-plate sticker, Gonzalez said.

Currently, the theft of a sticker from a license tag is a misdemeanor offense, Gonzalez said, since it is outside the vehicle. But the theft or attempted theft of the new sticker inside the vehicle would be a felony offense, possibly calling for a prison sentence, since the theft would involve the burglary of a motor vehicle.

"If someone breaks into your car and removes that sticker, the penalties are going to be stiffer," Mrs. Reeves said. "It flashes 'VOID,' so it won't do them (the thieves) any good to steal it."

men were convicted of second-degree murder. A request to extend bail was denied and they were taken to a state prison at Jackson for processing. They likely will be moved to a federal prison within weeks.

Before sentencing, Green's family made emotional pleas to the judge.

"It is time for the world to see through the excuses and face the truth — being black, unemployed and having used drugs did not kill Malice. Mr. Budzyn and Mr. Nevers killed my husband," said his widow, Rose Mary Green.

Witnesses during the officers' summer-long trial testified they saw the two white officers repeatedly beat Green with their heavy metal flashlights outside a suspected drug house Nov. 5 when he refused orders to open his clenched hand. Green died on the way to a hospital.

"I did not kill Malice Green," Nevers told the judge, his voice shaking and his body slumped. "I never intended to hurt him, to do anything to him other than to arrest him for a felony."

"I just reacted to the resistance to the arrest," said Nevers, 53, who had been honored several times during his 24 years on the police force.

Budzyn was barely audible, wiping tears from a face that had remained emotionless through the trial.

"I'm sorry for what has happened. I was just doing my job. I never struck Mr. Green — never," said Budzyn, 47, who served 19 years on the force and had been named precinct officer of the year in 1990.

The officers were convicted Aug. 23.

CHEER: Militants celebrate retreat

ported violence has hindered the transition government installed under the U.N. plan to restore democracy.

Some opponents of democracy have waved the flag of nationalism in their opposition to a U.S. military presence here. Haitians have bitter memories of a 19-year U.S. Marine occupation that ended in 1934.

In Washington, President Clinton said he thought the U.N.-brokered agreement to restore democracy "will come back to life, but right now it has been abrogated."

Clinton called for the immediate reimposition of U.N. economic sanctions against Haiti, targeted at military and police leaders trying to block Aristide's return.

Aristide, meeting with U.S. lawmakers in Washington, said he was confident that international pressure would impel the military regime to step down on Friday, as scheduled.

The Harlan County, carrying 472 servicemen from the United States and Canada, had floated 800 yards offshore since Monday, when military-backed port authorities, in a direct challenge to the U.N. mission, refused it a berth.

The troop deployment by 194 U.S. soldiers marked the beginning in earnest of the U.N. mission. About 100 U.N. personnel, including 46 Americans, arrived earlier as an advance operation.

The withdrawal followed anti-U.N. demonstrations, rampages by a small mob of army-backed gunmen threatening to create another Somalia if the United States helped Aristide return.

U.S. Sen. Bob Graham said Cedras, in a meeting, refused to guarantee the safety of the troops aboard the Harlan County. Cedras also refused to resign by Friday, despite insistence by U.N. officials that he had earlier agreed to do so.

Graham, D-Fla., told reporters that Haitian resistance has put the U.N. plan "into doubt."

The port incident Monday was the first indication of serious resistance to the U.N. mission, a spokesman for the U.N. force, Army Maj. Jim Hinnant, told The Associated Press.

Since then, "everything has come to a severe slowdown," Hinnant said.

PULLS: Clinton withdraws ship

tian military and to engage in construction projects involving roads, clinics and schools.

The ship was sent Tuesday to the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo, Cuba. A second U.S. ship set to arrive at Haiti today, the USS Fairfax County, was ordered not to leave its station at Little Creek, Va.

Kathleen deLaski, the chief Pentagon spokeswoman, said that 25 Americans who arrived in Port-au-Prince last week as an advance team "will remain there for a short time" but will leave Monday if no significant progress is made in calming the situation at the port, where the Harlan County was unable to land.

The United Nations is trying to put together a 600-man international police force, largely composed of French-speaking members, that would precede any U.S. troops into Haiti, said a congressional source, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Members of the Senate Armed Services Committee were briefed by Pentagon officials late Tuesday.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher accused Haitian Army chief Raoul Cedras and police commander Michel Francois of reneging on commitments last July for a return to democratic rule from military dictatorship.

"By their actions, Gen. Cedras and Chief of Police Francois are really inviting the reimposition of severe economic sanctions, which would affect their country and also affect them personally," Christopher said.

International sanctions against Haiti were lifted after the July agreements were signed. But the Organization of American States voted Tuesday afternoon to condemn the Haitian protesters and threaten to reimpose those trade sanctions if last July's commitments are not honored.

Aristide, after a meeting in Washington with Rep. Joseph Kennedy, D-Mass., said he was confident that international pressure would prompt the military regime to step down on Friday, as scheduled.

"Those killers stopped the process yesterday and their removal is indispensable to the restoration of democracy," Aristide said.

Clinton said he thought the U.N.-brokered agreement to restore democracy "will come back to life, but right now it has been abrogated."

The president said there is "still a chance" of returning Aristide to power.

Clinton drew a sharp distinction between the mission of the 600 noncombat troops headed for Haiti and the role of more than 4,700 forces in a casualty-marred peacekeeping assignment in Somalia.

Veterans, colleges included on ballot

Redemption of property sold at a tax sale, money to finance the continuation of veterans programs, a requirement for trustees of local public pension systems, and inclusion of the Texas State Technical College System in the funding apparatus of the Higher Education Assistance Fund will be addressed in four amendments to the Texas Constitution in the Nov. 2 election.

Those changes — included in Amendments 9, 10, 11 and 13 — are the topic of today's editorial.

AMENDMENT NO. 9 — This amendment would reduce from two years to six months the time during which all real property seized through tax foreclosure would be eligible for redemption. Supporters of this move say that buyers are now hesitant to purchase foreclosed property because of the two-year period in which the former owner can redeem the property. They argue that the shorter period will encourage investors and developers to purchase commercial property at tax sales and permit taxing entities to dispose of property more easily.

Since the reduction in the redemption period does not apply to residence homesteads or land designated for agricultural use, this appears to be a sound proposal. Voters should cast their ballots FOR it.

AMENDMENT NO. 10 — This proposal would authorize the state to issue $750 million in general obligation bonds, with the proceeds used by the Veteran's Land Board to purchase land for resale to veterans and to make home mortgage loans to veterans. In addition, the provision would authorize the board to issue revenue bonds payable from the Veteran's Land Fund and the Veteran's Housing Assistance Fund.

This would continue the Veteran's Land Fund that was started in 1946 and the Veteran's Housing Assistance Fund, which dates to 1983. Both programs have been highly successful and, as supporters point out, the programs pose virtually no financial risk to the state. The programs have never had to rely on the general revenue of the state. Voters should cast their ballots FOR this amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 13 — If approved by voters, this amendment would add the Texas State Technical College (TSTC) and its campuses to the list of institutions that receive funds from the Higher Education Assistance Fund (HEAF). The provision would also expand how the funds could be spent by institutions to include paying for buildings or facilities used jointly for educational and general activities and for auxiliary enterprises.

Supporters of this move point out that TSTC is the only public institution of higher learning in the state that does not have a dedicated source of revenue for capital expenditures. Including the institution in the HEAF will provide it with a steady source of capital construction income. Voters should cast their ballots FOR this amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 11 — This amendment would require the board of trustees of a local public retirement system to establish operation procedures for the pension system that benefit the system's members and beneficiaries. In addition, the proposition would require that any changes made in the structure of the board be approved by the system's members.

Texas has literally hundreds of public retirement systems and the state does not actively regulate most of them. This amendment, in fact, appears to tell trustees of local retirement systems to do what is expected of them under common law as fiduciaries. It's not needed and will only add more detail to a constitution that is already overburdened with too many laws. Voters should vote AGAINST this proposal.

JACK ANDERSON

Agency 'reinvents' itself into oblivion

JACKSON, Miss. — Ten months ago, a most unusual thing happened in the federal government — and it went virtually unnoted.

It was something that deserves special notice because it's seldom seen in the federal bureaucracy: A government agency accomplished its mission and shut itself down. It terminated all of its employees and ceased to exist as a federal entity. The Farm Credit System Assistance Board "reinvented" itself right out of existence.

Anderson

It was created six years ago when a crisis hit a $2 billion federal bank in this city. The Assistance Board accomplished its legislatively mandated mission without spending even half the money Congress allotted it.

In 1987, the Federal Land Bank of Jackson was in deep financial trouble. It was part of a 12-bank federal system that had been lending money for decades to farmers for the purchase of land. The overall farm credit system is a $55 billion system that accounts for one-third of all agriculture loans and pays for itself. The banks, in fact, were intended to pay for themselves through good loans and sound banking practices.

But the 1980s ushered in a farm slump, and the large federal land bank system was in trouble. The Jackson bank was the first to be red-flagged, threatening to fold and saddling the American taxpayer with more than $1 billion in outstanding loans. So Congress created the Farm Credit System Assistance Board in 1987, which was given a $4 billion line of credit by the U.S. Treasury. It hired a squad of tough-minded employees. The legislation asked the Board to be finished with its work — making the land banks solvent — by the end of last year.

One of the Board's first acts was to rush $30 million in emergency funds to this Jackson bank. Board members felt there wasn't any other choice. The bank and its 90 branches were responsible for the bulk of farm loans in this state, as well as in Louisiana and Alabama. But the Board, with a little breathing space, took a closer look. The $30 million was a drop in the bucket. And they weren't impressed with the way the bank was run. Jackson bank officials were asking for an additional $600 million without coming up with a workable business plan or even providing an accurate and complete list of its loans. Forty percent of its loans were in trouble.

On May 20, 1988, to the shock of bankers in this town and elsewhere, the Assistance Board did a blitzkrieg close-out. With an army of 350 bank examiners, they descended on the land bank's headquarters and its 90 branches and shut them down.

The bank is only a distant memory here. It did not reopen. All of its good loans were picked up by other federal land banks. The Assistance Board paid out $388 million to liquidate the bad loans and pay off the cooperative's stockholders. Subsequently, four other federal land banks across the country needed help. The Board judged them to be more efficient and potentially sound than the Jackson bank, and were given the assist. All were put on a sound footing and the Assistance Board closed its doors, as Congress mandated, last Dec. 31.

There was a bittersweet party because the employees had ironically worked themselves out of jobs, and had to go looking. Though the Board had $4 billion it could have spent, its total outlay to all these banks was $1.6 billion. And, to date, most of that amount has been paid back. The federal land banks, even in this recession, have become so responsible and healthy that they picked up the entire $388 million cost of the Jackson bailout.

Dream car drives new corporate statism

WASHINGTON — Who is the most powerful business executive in the United States today?

She is Dr. Mary Good, President Clinton's undersecretary of Commerce for technology, who has quietly been designated czar of the U.S. automobile industry.

Safire

The heads of her divisions — GM, Ford and Chrysler — are delighted with the government's friendly takeover. These newly middle managers no longer bear responsibility for R&D, can relax about antitrust, and can forget about the old competition among one another and from abroad. Fatigued by the stress of capitalist risk? Dr. Good will see you now.

Corporate statism arrived in America last week in the back seat of a dream car. The White House announced "a historic new partnership aimed at strengthening U.S. competitiveness by developing technologies for a new generation of vehicles." Triple the fuel efficiency; ultra-capacitors from despised "Star Wars" projects; stealth-technology windows; "virtual design and prototyping from the Army Tank Command."

And here's the beauty part: it's all free! "This project will not increase the government's total spending on research," promises the White House. But somehow, as "government money will be spent on riskier, longer-term projects," the Washington-Detroit axle will "produce competitively priced, high-performance, low-pollution, safe vehicles."

Do you believe that? The presumed guardians of free enterprise do. I called the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, whose president, Richard Lesher, called it "a step forward. It makes sense for the government to work with industry to advance the public good."

At the National Association of Manufacturers, President Jerry Jasinowski said: "This agreement to improve manufacturing techniques seems generally reasonable."

What a marriage: the Washington-knows-best set of liberal Democrats, going down the primrose path of industrial policy with a posterior-protecting bunch of corporate managers and business lobbyists who think they can get government money and management without government control.

Clinton is making no secret of his policy of half-free enterprise. Following the R&D takeover of the auto industry, he announced the taxpayer bailout of the leaky shipbuilding industry, piling billions in new liability on today's economywide $6 trillion in loan guarantees.

Then the 800-pound gorilla groom gave its blushing corporate bride a wedding present: an export-subsidy policy to join — rather than continue to fight — the nations that use tax money to prop up inefficient industry.

Why is the power-to-the-center crowd in Washington able to get away with this radical restructuring of the American economy?

Because fat-cat managers and their nail-nibbling lobbyists love it. Who wants to risk failure, hostile takeover and accountability by the bottom line — when an eager government is ready to relieve you of the rigors of competition. Only entrepreneurs object, and those non-team players are too busy creating new industries and jobs to join the hired managers at the public trough.

Can you imagine a self-starter with a far-out invention going up against the Big Three Plus the Bigger One? The Det-Wash deal to monopolize R&D eliminates innovative outsiders and makes a mockery of antitrust.

Do you remember Synfuels, the cockamamie Carter-era solution to high oil prices? Our super-efficient government created a giant corporation to produce oil out of rocks, with big business's blessing. After a decade of taxpayer losses in the billions, Synfuels was quietly folded up because the free market brought down prices with no government help.

Proponents of today's "partnership" cloak their takeover in the rhetoric of savings on research, promotion of exports, job creation, all those good things competent executives do better than bureaucrats. Ironically, we're aping Japan just when the terrible weakness of the protective Japanese system is becoming manifest.

Who will save the free enterprise system from Dr. Do-good?

Commerce Secretary Ron Brown is paralyzed by fear of indictment; the department's top level is wandering about unconfirmed; and its bureaucracy is disconnected from policy. Fortunately, this is the outfit charged with leading us into Clintonism's brave new world. That is how God protects drunks and the free market.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Pundit, partier ponders parenting potential

Two very close friends of mine recently became fathers for the first time.

Another friend's wife is scheduled to deliver their first child soon.

All three of these men are 40 or older.

"It's never too late," each has said to me at one time or the other during their wives' pregnancies.

Grizzard

I guess they're right. I'm 41, been down one time, two times, and three times in marriage, but as far as I know, I have held on to my ability to father a child.

We actually tried in my first marriage, but there was a problem she later overcame with medical help. Now, with her new husband, she is the mother she always wanted to be.

Second time was a whirlwind. Third time, she already had two, one out in the playroom screaming, the other outside riding his Big Wheel.

Ever hear the sound of Big Wheel — plastic tricycle — makes as it is pedaled across a driveway?

Severe nervous breakdowns have been spawned from less.

"Men," a wise person once said to me, "often want children to satisfy their egos. They want to look down in that crib and say, 'Hey, that's my boy!'

"They look upon their children as proof of their manhood, and as their link with immortality, but some never quite understand the responsibility that comes with being a father to a child.

"It takes a real grown-up to be a good parent. And some men never really grow up."

I've thought about those words, often, especially lately when previously childless friends suddenly turned faithful and multiplied.

Why would I really want a child? To satisfy my ego? To leave a living monument?

To have something I could love without conditions and be loved in return in the same manner? (That sort of thing is difficult to find, you know.)

In order to be the father I never really had? To be able to pass along what I have learned, what I think to be the truth and the way?

But a number of things stand between me and fatherhood. Number One being the fact I'm not married.

But even if I did marry again, I'd probably still think twice about children.

I've proved I'm not a good marriage risk. I came from a broken home. I don't want my child to have to do the same.

There remains childlike tendencies in my own repertoire. I have not quite given up on the idea of finding the ultimate party, and sometimes I have trouble giving up the night.

And there is the fact most things have an escape clause. You can leave a bad marriage, a bad job, and a city where the sun never shines. But children are forever.

What I could do rather than have children of my own is become the friendly uncle to my three buddies' children.

I could joke with them and bring them small gifts and enjoy their company while I am around them, and then split with no responsibility for them when the spirit moves me.

I'd miss the "goodnight-daddy's," but I also wouldn't have to put up with strange, loud music coming from the upstairs bedroom and explaining to my son if he didn't take off that earring, I would cut him out of the will.

This entire discussion, quite frankly, has made me nervous. Maybe I'll bring it up again next year.

Israeli, Palestinian negotiators to open talks on accord today

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian and Israeli negotiators were to open two months of talks today to turn their vaguely worded autonomy accord into a working formula for coexistence.

"Up until now we have had only the signing of the declaration of principles. Now we have reached the first stage," Foreign Ministry director Uri Savir told Israel radio.

The writers of the declaration of principles between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization described it as a "framework," and acknowledged it served only as a guideline.

The negotiators, who will meet in Egypt, have until Dec. 13 to work out the details. Some Palestinians and Israelis close to the talks were split on whether that deadline could be met.

On Dec. 13, Israel begins pulling out from the Gaza Strip and the West Bank town of Jericho.

Withdrawal is to be completed by April 13, 1994, when a five-year transitional period starts for the occupied lands. Exactly two years later, Palestinians and Israelis must negotiate the territories' final status.

Radwan Abu Ayyash, an adviser to the Palestinian negotiating team, said in an interview Tuesday, "Palestinians and Israelis have an agreement, but small details have to be discussed. There's a lot of work to do."

The negotiating is taking place in the Egyptian resort of Taba, on the border with Israel. It will run from mundane matters, like transferring responsibility for garbage collection and park upkeep, to more sensitive issues, like the size of the area of Jericho.

The teams are led by the Israeli army's deputy chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Amnon Shahak, and Nabil Shaath, a senior adviser to PLO chief Yasser Arafat.

"I've seen Israeli maps and they are minimalist — and I assume the Palestinian maps are maximalist," said Shlomo Gazit, a former chief of Israeli military intelligence.

Abu Ayyash agreed that Jericho's size is a potentially difficult point. "When we say Jericho we say one thing, when the Israelis say Jericho, they mean something else."

In the rest of the West Bank, Palestinians will be given control over the fields of health, education, tourism, agriculture and taxation.

Other sensitive issues include the size of the Palestinian police force, the redeployment of the Israeli army, and a closure that keeps Palestinians from employment inside Israel.

Some fear investment could spur market crash

By Bernard D. Kaplan
N.Y. Times News Service

■ News Analysis

PARIS — American investors are pouring so much money into Europe and the Far East that experts here have begun to worry about a stock market crash from over-speculation.

So far, the huge and unprecedented appetite of U.S. investors for foreign stocks shows no sign of slackening.

In August alone, U.S. investors — mainly mutual funds — bought $3.8 billion in shares in foreign companies, more than they did during the entire year of 1991, according to the European Investment Survey Service here. In September, 50 percent of total American investment in stocks headed overseas, the same organization estimated.

Analysts say the American investment offensive is driven by two predominant factors: belief that the United States's own disappointingly flabby recovery won't put on much muscle in the near future; and the expectation that Europe's irrationally high interest rates must come down soon, triggering an accelerated economic rebound over here.

Much of the cash flowing abroad has been transferred from certificates of deposit and other forms of savings offering low rates of return.

In the background, according to such specialists as Paris-based investment adviser Chris Sprinks, is an uneasy feeling among many Americans that the Clinton administration's domestic policies will act as a drag on U.S. economy, slowing it further.

As a result, U.S. investors have plunged into foreign markets "almost with abandon — many of them aren't sure what they're buying or why they're buying it, but they're gobbling up everything in sight," he warns.

A London stock exchange analysis reported that British brokers in September received five buy orders from America for every one from their own country.

The trouble is that American investors and their advisers, unhappy at the slowness of the recovery at home, may be exaggerating the prospects elsewhere, above all in Europe.

Economics, as someone once said, is as much about perception as it is about production. Right now, many Americans perceive their own economy to be so dim.

Three Western countries plan to exit Somalia

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Despite appeals from American and U.N. officials, some key Western countries contributing troops to the peacekeeping force in Somalia are planning to withdraw them by early next year.

France, Belgium and Sweden are planning to withdraw by mid-January, Western diplomats said.

The withdrawals could complicate President Clinton's plan to hand off military responsibility for the east African nation by March 31. The departure of the European and American forces will also present a challenge to the United Nations, which intends to continue its effort to restore order in Somalia and help rebuild its society.

Third World nations are dispatching troops, responding to calls for peacekeeping forces and attracted by U.N. payments of $988 a month for each soldier sent. But the forces that countries like Pakistan, India and Egypt have sent are not as well trained, as well armed or as capable as the Western peacekeeping troops.

U.N. officials said the force's changing composition would not present a problem if a political settlement could be achieved in Somalia. But if the effort to fashion an accord breaks down and fighting erupts, the lightly equipped Third-World forces will be hard put to maintain order.

"If they have to do the sorts of the things that are being done in Mogadishu now, they are not well equipped to do it," a senior U.N. official said.

Short finally wins game in world chess marathon

LONDON (AP) — Nigel Short finally won a game Tuesday in the Professional Chess Association championship, profiting from Garry Kasparov's risky and provocative play in the 16th game.

Short had beaten Kasparov, the highest-rated player in history, only one other time in 30 previous games, in a tournament in Brussels in 1986.

Kasparov now leads 10½-5½ and could claim the winner's purse of $1.5 million with just four draws in the remaining eight games — or two victories, or one win and two draws. The $2.55 million total purse would be split evenly if Short and Kasparov end the match at 12-12.

After 22 moves, most experts thought the game was heading for a quiet draw — but that's when it turned interesting.

Kasparov, playing black, apparently was anxious to fulfill his promise to avoid boring draws and started making risky moves.

"Kasparov has made ridiculous efforts to win the game. In that kind of position it was very stupid to try to provoke him (Short)," said Michael Adams, England's second-ranked player.

Kasparov's defense cracked on move 36, as Short captured a pawn. Kasparov desperately sacrificed another, but Short finished with an elegant knight, sacrifice forcing Kasparov's resignation on his 38th move.

With Kasparov firmly in control of the match, organizers are considering what to do once he clinches victory. Kasparov suggested on Saturday that he and Short might play "blitz" or quick games to finish out the scheduled 24 games.

Democrats struggle with lapsed jobless benefits

■ More nation news/4B

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bickering House Democrats have let lapse extra benefits given to the 60,000 Americans who each week exhaust unemployment compensation even though the problem is worse than when Congress first created the additional coverage.

Party leaders say they have resolved an impasse over financing the program and expect to begin moving legislation through Congress this week.

But the lapse has caused embarrassment among Democrats and exposed them to ridicule from Republicans, particularly with official figures showing that long-term joblessness has worsened from 1991 and 1992, when Congress and President Bush clashed over paying for extra benefits.

With divided Democrats unable to get a bill renewing the benefits to the House floor for more than two weeks, the old version expired Oct. 2.

That means that since that day, the 60,000 Americans who exhaust the basic 26 weeks of jobless coverage every week have been unable to apply for additional benefits.

The program had never lapsed since it was established in November 1991, as the recession was bottoming out and after initial opposition by President Bush.

The program was renewed twice in 1992, as Democrats used the bill during the presidential campaign to highlight what they said was Bush's indifference to domestic problems. It was also renewed last March under President Clinton.

Top Democrats said Tuesday they believed they have solved their internal impasse and would move a bill this week.

But even so, the delay came in the face of an embarrassing statistic for Democrats: there are about 400,000 more long-term unemployed Americans today than there were when the extra benefits were initiated.

"This is a Democratic program and you have to do it," said a frustrated Rep. Barbara Kennelly, D-Conn., a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, which oversees the program.

The internal Democratic dispute focused on how the measure would be paid for.

House bill opens way for PLO aid, offices in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House agreed Tuesday to a bill that lifts restrictions on aid to the Palestine Liberation Organization and opens the way for the PLO to set up an office in Washington.

The voice-vote approval came a day after PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat won endorsement from the organization's policy-making council for the peace accord with Israel signed in Washington on Sept. 13.

The Senate has already passed a similar measure, and Senate and House delegations are expected to meet this week to work out differences.

The Middle East Peace Facilitation Act authorizes President Clinton to waive legal provisions that prohibit the PLO from operating offices in the United States or receiving U.S. funds through international organizations.

The administration has pledged to contribute $250 million over the next two years as part of an international effort to promote development in the new Palestinian self-government areas of the West Bank and Gaza, now occupied by Israel.

The bill sets a Jan. 1 expiration date for the presidential waiver, and requires that new legislation be in effect by then if the waiver is to continue. Lawmakers set the deadline as a means of ensuring that the PLO is living up to its commitment to recognize Israel's peace and security and renounce violence.

Rep. Howard Berman, D-Calif., said quick passage was crucial because "it is critically important that Palestinians begin to see concrete improvements."

Two Americans share 1993 Nobel economic prize

CHICAGO (AP) — Americans Robert W. Fogel, who has argued that slavery was economically efficient, and Douglass C. North, a scholar of property rights throughout history, shared the Nobel Prize in economics Tuesday.

North, from Washington University in St. Louis, and Fogel, the fourth consecutive University of Chicago professor to win, were singled out as "leading figures within the field of 'new economic history.'"

The field, known also as Cliometrics, is the use of modern statistical analysis, mathematical models and computers to understand historical events — and their implications for the future.

North, 72, said he was "flabbergasted" to share the $825,000 prize. "It's the most exciting thing that can ever happen to one as a scholar."

Fogel, 67, was doing research at home at 5 a.m. when he got the call from the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences.

"I was pleasantly surprised but not shocked," he said. "I was very moved and very honored that they viewed my work the way that they did."

Fogel's view that slavery is economically viable was outlined in his 1974 book "Time on the Cross: The Economics of American Slavery," written with Stanley L. Engerman.

It generated criticism because Fogel was perceived as condoning slavery, but in a 1989 follow-up, "Without Consent or Contract: The Rise and Fall of American Slavery," Fogel made clear he thought it was immoral.

Turner denies charges of indecency with child at hearing

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Donald Turner likened the day he was accused of fondling a child to D-day during his testimony Tuesday at his probation revocation hearing.

Turner, 51, of Midland appeared before 142nd District Court Judge George Gilles on Monday and Tuesday during hearings to determine if his 10-year probation sentence should be revoked.

Turner had been charged with 10 counts of child molestation in 1990. After a mistrial he entered a plea-bargain agreement with the district attorney in which he pleaded guilty to three charges in exchange for a 10-year deferred adjudication sentence.

A condition of that probation included committing no other crimes. He was arrested on three separate occasions in September for two charges of indecency with a child and on a warrant for probation revocation. He posted bond for the first two charges, but claims he can't raise the money for the last bond, which was set at $40,000. He remains in custody.

Turner's probation hearing began Monday with the two alleged victims — who are friends of his youngest daughter — testifying Turner fondled them on separate occasions.

The girls — ages 5 and 7 — and their mothers testified Monday as did Turner's wife and two daughters. All of his family members said he was never left alone with children under 18, so the incidents could not have occurred.

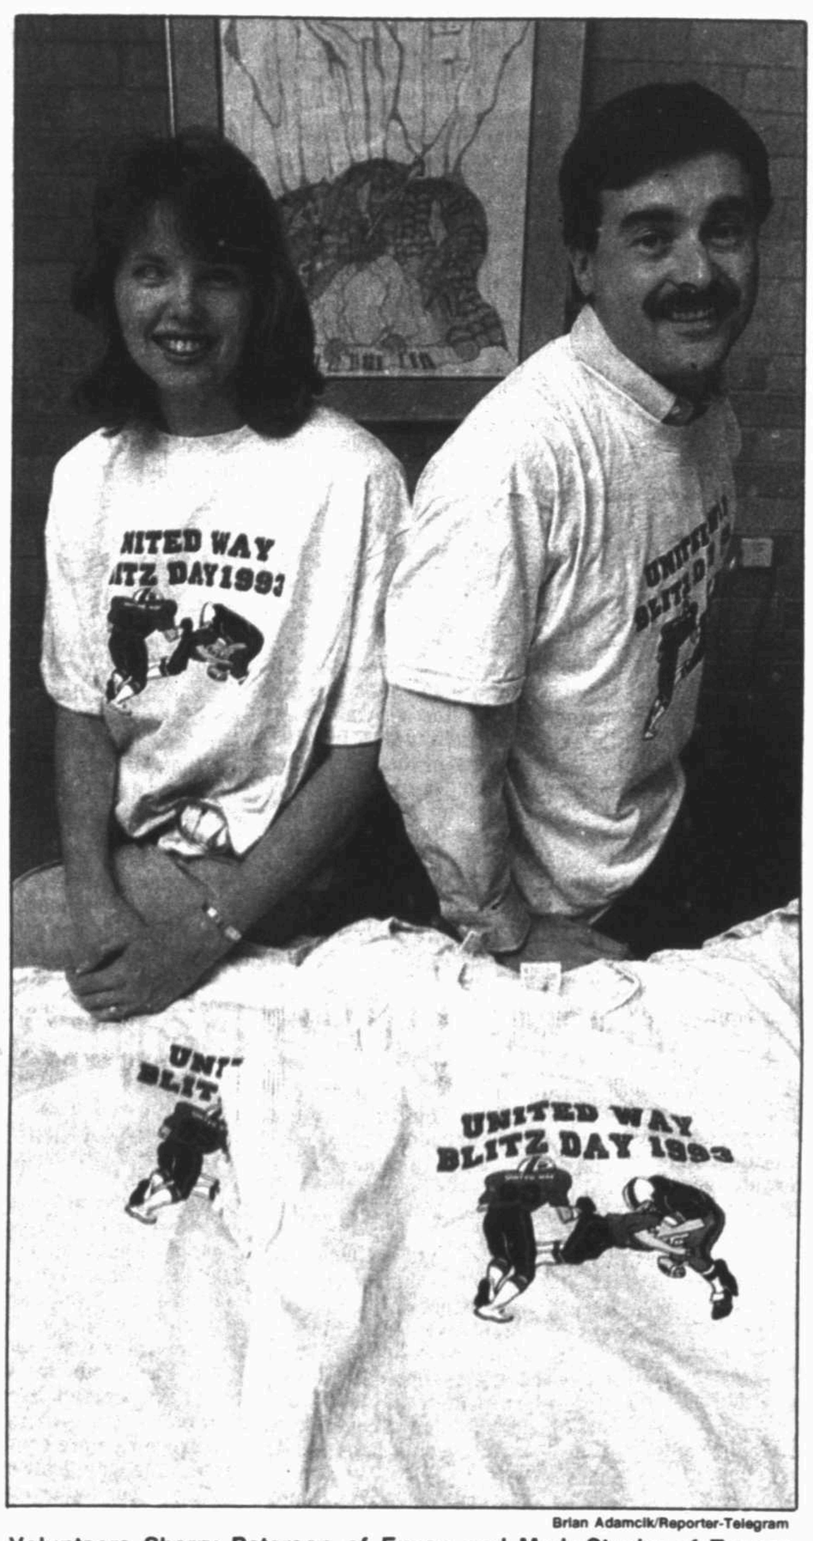

Defense attorney Paul Williams asked Turner if he remembered Sept. 1, the day he is accused of fondling the 5-year-old girl.

"Sort of like D-day," Turner said. "I remember."

He related his actions and those of the others at his house that afternoon with the aid of detailed diagrams of the movements of each person at his home.

Turner then told the court his version of what happened with the 5-year-old. He said as he played a video game in the "playroom" of his home, the girl asked to play also and leaned on his left knee as he placed his arms around the girl and showed her how to maneuver the game controls.

Volunteers to call on small businesses for 'Blitz Day'

Staff report

Some 100 volunteers will be "carrying the ball" for United Way of Midland today as they call on 500 small businesses for "Blitz Day."

The volunteers will be working a morning and afternoon shift to contact businesses to see if they will contribute to the United Way campaign. Along with getting a chance to "join the team," these businesses will be given opportunities to be included in drawings for free advertising from various local media. Merchants who participate in the Blitz Day also will be given a sign to display in their window, showing their support for United Way.

"Although small business giving tends to be modest, the Blitz is important as a long-term strategic effort to widen United Way's local base," said Blitz Co-Chairman Mark Stucky of Texaco Inc. "As Midland's corporate community continues to evolve toward more numerous but smaller-sized businesses, the success of the Blitz will have increasing impact on future funding for our 16 United Way agencies."

City protests costly impact of mandates

■ Council to support efforts to inform nation of expense of unfunded orders.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

In light of new landfill regulations that will cost local residents an extra million dollars plus a year, City Council publicly decried federal mandates that impose such costs.

Council unanimously adopted a resolution at Tuesday's regular meeting to support the efforts of the National League of Cities and the Texas Municipal League to "fully inform the nation of the impact of unfunded federal mandates."

A recent example involves guidelines on how to construct and maintain landfill pits at an initial cost of $2.6 million the first year and increase the pit-digging cost done yearly from $250,000 to $1.25 million. Furthermore, the city must monitor the landfills for years after closure.

"We are not only in the process of complying but in the process of protesting. I think this is something that needs to be publicized," said council member Pat Schneider, District 1.

Residents oppose site of tent revival

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Plans to put up a tent for an eight-day spiritual revival for some non-church-going apartment dwellers fizzled after homeowners publicly opposed the proposed site of the gathering.

Several people attended the Tuesday City Council meeting to express their opposition to a local church minister's request to provide the service in an empty lot north of Lanham Street, east of Ward Street.

City Council sided with the residents 4-1, with Mayor J.D. Faircloth dissenting.

The Rev. Charles "Chuck" Chapman of the Northeast Community Church asked the council to grant the temporary land-use permit.

"Our primary function is to canvass the apartment neighborhood ... to share the Gospel of Jesus Christ with those individuals," he said.

MISD board of trustees votes to keep pay plan, award merit pay monthly

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

All merit pay plans for Midland public school teacher aides, secretaries, clerks, counselors and diagnosticians will continue through this school year.

Midland Indepenent School District board of trustees voted unanimously Tuesday night to continue with the pay plans.

The board also voted to award merit pay on a monthly basis, rather than in split payments twice a year as was done in the past.

Administrators will consider restructuring the plans after this year.

Charlotte Starr, a counselor at Pease Elementary School, said counselors shouldn't be competing with each other for merit pay.

"We work together and have to depend on each other. A counselor at another school may have had a student before me. We are not competing," she said.

After this year, Ms. Starr said she would like to see trustees address a differentiated pay scale for school counselors.

In other action, trustees approved that some funds allocated to Chapter 1 schools may be used to hire a Chapter 1 Parent Education Trainer to go into homes of students and encourage parent involvement in the schools.

Trustees also voted in favor of MISD and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin jointly submitting a Title VII grant that would fund training bilingual teachers to also teach gifted education.

"The specific emphasis would be on working with preschool children with limited English proficiency," said Patricia Maurer, principal of the district's talented and gifted education program.

Court officials: Two men enter guilty pleas in June 7 carjacking incident

Staff report

Two New Jersey men indicted for a June 7 carjacking incident have entered guilty pleas before a federal judge and will be sentenced in December, according to court officials.

Michael Scott Mortenson entered a guilty plea to carjacking and his brother, Christopher J. Mortenson, entered a guilty plea to misprision of a felony. They will be sentenced on Dec. 30.

The men were indicted July 14 in connection with the incident involving a Seminole man who was traveling from Odessa to Seminole. The victim stopped at a roadside park on Highway 385 between Odessa and Andrews when he was approached by a man wearing a mask and carrying a gun, police said.

The masked man — which Michael Mortenson indicated he was by pleading guilty — robbed the Seminole man, tied him with duct tape and forced him into the car he and the other suspect had arrived in, reports stated.

The victim was found by Brownsfield police after one of the suspects was stopped by police for trying to make an illegal turn. The victim's car was recovered at the Lubbock airport.

Michael Mortenson was arrested in Brownsfield as a result of a routine traffic stop shortly after the carjacking incident. He remains in the Andrews County Jail.

Christopher Mortenson was arrested Aug. 5 by the FBI in Newark, N.J. He is in custody in the Ward County Jail.

Country store wins corporate battle with community's help

By Paul Powell
Associated Press Writer

MORALES — Folks who've been coming to Paula Kimbrough's tiny country store for years never have asked for much — a can of kerosine, a handful of nails, a couple gallons of gas to take them the rest of the way to Edna or Yoakum.

They don't mind the bumpy ride on the gravel driveway leading to the front door, or the weather-beaten old building's peeling white paint.

It doesn't bother them that there's no big, lighted sign they can see from a few hundred feet away as they cruise along state Highway 111.

In fact, they like the little store just the way it is — a breathing remnant of a dying place, just about the only building left here in Jackson County's second-oldest community.

They like watching the old-timers pitching horseshoes and tossing washers just outside, and the soothing sounds of clanking dominoes, muffled conversation and good-hearted laughter regularly heard inside.

But not evervone appreciates the TENT: Residents express opposition to site of revival

(From 1B)

Chapman, a Midland police officer said the crusade would help reduce crime at several of the apartment complexes nearby.

"I just feel like when lives are changed, crime is changed," he said.

Although the apartment complexes might harbor a criminal element, those who reside in houses south of the proposed revival site are law-abiding, one woman told the council.

Other residents agreed, and said noise, traffic and parking problems, and dust, would result if the permit were granted.

Those opposed also questioned why Wisconsin-based land developer David Shea agreed for the church to use only the south section of the large lot for the revival.

The residents suggested Shea was being vindictive for their protest over a recent zone-change request that would have allowed retail development on the lot. City Council nixed that proposed zone change in July.

One concerned resident, Agnes Fowler, expressed concern about the future use of the property.

"When is this going to stop? . . . Are we going to have elephant, tigers and zebras next with a large tent?," Ms. Fowler said.

"I'm truly opposed for any usage other than for the way this property is zoned," she said.

The lot is zoned for residential dwellings.

POLICE REPORTS

ODESSA — Investigators with the Permian Basin Drug Task Force took several people into custody Monday on separate narcotics charges.

CAMPAIGN: Volunteers to carry ball for 'Blitz Day'

(From 1B)

Working with Stucky as co-chairman is Sherry Y. Peterson of Exxon Co., U.S.A.

Volunteers will gather at 9 a.m. today in the Chaparral Room at Midland College Student Center. They will be given a short training session, handed their store assignments and assigned another volunteer as a team member. All volunteers will be given specially designed "Blitz Day" T-shirts to wear that will identify them as part of the Blitz Day campaign. These T-shirts have been donated by ARCO Oil & Gas Company. A second training session will be held at 1 p.m. for the afternoon group of volunteers.

"It's important for the businesses to know that our volunteers will be wearing the specially-designed Blitz Day T-shirts," Stucky said. "If a retailer is asked for a contribution by someone who is not wearing a T-shirt, they should contact the United Way office to verify that the person is associated with our Blitz."

Drawings for the winners of free advertising packages will be conducted at the Oct. 21 Report Luncheon that will be held at Centennial Plaza.

Prizes also will be awarded to teams of volunteers for categories including "Most Accounts Worked," "Most Money Raised," "Tallest Team," "Shortest Team," "Team with Worst Horror Story," and other unusual topics, according to Kay Bivens, campaign director.

For more information about Blitz Day, contact Ms. Bivens at 682-4358.

CITY: Council decries unfunded mandates

(From 1B)

The stricter guidelines require digging slope-sided holes instead of straight-sided holes, which will reduce the amount of space available. The holes also must include 2 feet of clay and a plastic liner along the bottom.

The measures are largely for environmental reasons, specifically to prevent ground water contamination.

But no ground water exists underneath the Midland landfill, and West Texas cities generally have the regulations — which began Oct. 9 and must be completed by April 9 — will be financed through the sale of bonds. On Tuesday, City Council approved a motion for preparation of $3 million in certificates of obligation for the landfill construction.

Council member Juluis Brooks, District 2, expressed concern about the high costs of the project, especially the plastic lining.

"What I'm trying to do is make sure we get the best for our money," he told fellow council members.

The city will go through the normal procedure of bids.

In addition to the high landfill costs, federal regulations also affect other city-run projects such as storm water drainage and air quality control.

"All those things look good from a federal standpoint . . . but they force all these projects down to the states and cities," Faircloth said.

Public outcry may not resolve the unfunded mandates, he said, "but at least Congress will know cities and municipalities are upset."

It (the mandate) is really overkill for us," Mayor J.D. Faircloth said.

Although Midland's situation may differ from other cities, an exemption isn't an easily attainable recourse, Faircloth said.

So residents are paying. Garbage disposal rates recently increased from $7.75 a month to $10.25 per month.

The initial cost to comply with low methane gas production and ground seepage because of the sparse rainfall, utility officials said.

HEARING: Turner testifies at probation trial

(From 1B)

During her testimony Monday, the girl claimed she was sitting on Turner's lap playing the video game when he placed his hand under her underpants and caressed her "private front."

However, Turner claimed he did not do anything "improper" with the girl noting that the only times he touched the child was while he helped her play the video game and when he pushed her awav from his leg.

The father of the 5-year-old alleged victim as well as family members from the victims from the original indictment in 1990 were all present in the courtroom on Monday and Tuesday.

From time to time, Turner would look at them while he testified.

The defense attorney asked him about the alleged incident involving the 7-year-old. Turner said he never touched the child and couldn't recall ever being alone with her.

The charges allege the incident occurred sometime between February and late July. Turner testified that he was in New Mexico during most of that time working on oil wells he operates there.

During her testimony Monday the 7-year-old alleged that Turner fondled her underneath her underpants while she was playing at his home. Turner disputed that testimony Tuesday, indicating he "never touched her like that."

Turner testified that the 5-year-old's father assaulted him and the mother of the 7-year-old used profanity toward his wife following the reports of the incidents.

During cross-examination he was asked if he considered himself a pedophile.

"No I do not," he said.

Testimony will continue Friday with Turner's psychiatrist taking the stand at that time.

ambiance of The Morales Store. Take the brass at Texaco, the gasoline giant whose fuel Paula Kimbrough has sold for more than four years.

Late last month, company officials told her she'd have to pave her driveway, repaint her building and put up a lighted sign or her customers would no longer be able to use charge cards to buy Texaco gasoline.

And they also told her she'd have to sell at least 20,000 gallons of gas per month, 10 times more than the 2,000 gallons per month now pumped by her regulars.

Two days after laying down these conditions, Texaco stripped her store of its credit-card privileges.

During the next week, she sold half as much gas as she usually does. Aware that she'd go out of business if she didn't do something fast, she summoned the same grit and guile that served those who settled Morales more than 100 years ago.

"The mainstays of my business are credit-card sales of gasoline and other assorted products to local residents, and especially to oil company workers and seasonal hunters," she said.

She talked to a lawyer, who told her that drawing support for her cause might be her only chance to get the company to reconsider.

That would be easy. She knew that the same customers who pitched in last year while she helped her husband recover from a heart attack would back her in this battle.

She plastered posters explaining what had happened on her doors and began lobbying her customers to sign petitions and help spread the word.

Petition blanks set out at the store at 4 p.m. Wednesday were filled with well over a 100 signatures by 10 a.m. Thursday.

News of the rescue effort made its way to a Victoria Advocate reporter, who called Texaco officials Thursday afternoon to find out why they were taking the action against Kimbrough. They explained that they have standards that must be met by every business that sells their gasoline.

But thirty minutes later, they called the reporter back and said they'd changed their mind. Paula Kimbrough's store could go on operating the way it always had.

"One of our top priorities is customer service," said Joby Humphrey, public relations manager for Star Enterprises, Texaco's parent company.

"Since the community apparently feels so strongly about this incident, we are happy to once again offer the convenience of being able to use a credit card at this Texaco-branded station."

Those were welcome words last Thursday night at The Morales Store, where regular customers clapped and cheered when the news reached Mrs. Kimbrough.

Her response? "My God, I can't believe it. That's wonderful. What happened?"

Some might say David slew Goliath. Others might offer a more homespun answer: tradition knocked the tar out of progress.

"I honestly don't know who's telling who," Mrs. Kimbrough said, "but Texaco's decision has evoked a very emotional response here.

"You'd think we'd all just won the lottery."

Dean to decide sorority's future on Texas campus

DALLAS (AP) — The University of North Texas could ban a sorority for hazing which already has brought jail terms to five members.

The university's dean of students was scheduled to meet Wednesday with Alpha Kappa Alpha's national representatives. Dean Greg Sawyer said he would then announce his decision about the sorority's future at the Denton school.

The sorority's UNT chapter has been suspended from group activities since April, when the hazing was first reported.

Criminal charges were filed against seven sorority members after accusations that pledges were struck with paddles and food and forced to eat hot peppers.

Phillip Bustos, associate dean of students, told The Dallas Morning News that UNT could expel the sorority from campus, place it on disciplinary probation or impose other sanctions.

"There were allegations of physical hazing, specifically paddling," said Phil Reynolds, Denton County assistant district attorney. "They were hitting them with eggs, breaking raw eggs over their heads.

"They were making pledges eat certain foods that they most probably wouldn't have eaten otherwise, like hot peppers," he said. "It was verbal, mental and physical hazing."

A Denton telephone number for the chapter was not listed. Officials at the sorority's Dallas office and Sawyer did not immediately return telephone calls Tuesday from The Associated Press.

In September, five sorority members were convicted of hazing, a misdemeanor. Each woman was sentenced to 90 days in jail and one year of probation, as well as 24 to 40 hours of community service. Two were also assessed $500 fines.

Two other sorority members also faced hazing charges but have not yet been tried.

The university will consider the sorority's hazing record when deciding whether it should be allowed to continue functioning on campus, said Sawyer.

"They had just got off suspension when this latest one was reported," he said.

Sawyer said national sorority rules and UNT regulations ban physical and psychological hazing that was once considered traditional.

Collider faces another fight in House this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The super collider's tortuous journey through Congress this year isn't over.

Unlike a year ago, when opposition was effectively quelled after the Senate rescued the giant atom smasher, critics are vowing to press their case further this time.

Collider supporters have been on a roller-coaster ride ever since the House voted in June to terminate funding. That low was followed by a peak in August, when the Senate breathed life back into the ailing program by a stronger-than-expected 57-42 margin.

House and Senate negotiators are expected to begin meeting Wednesday to hash out their differences over the super collider and other projects included in a $22 billion energy and water development appropriations package. The Clinton administration is seeking $640 million for the collider in the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

The normal course of business on Capitol Hill would dictate that the House and Senate ratify whatever the conferees decide. Ten of the 13 Senate conferees are collider supporters, as are 10 of the 11 House conferees who were appointed Tuesday — suggesting that the conference outcome should be collider-friendly.

But, as the House indicated in a vote on another contested science program, restive lawmakers are less inclined this year to settle for business as usual.

By a dominating 305-123 vote, the House last week refused to debate a conference report that contained $158 million for a NASA booster rocket project it earlier had voted to kill. Return of the report to conferees was widely viewed as the death knell for the Mississippi-based Advanced Solid Rocket Motor.

Collider foes seized on the vote as proof that the House won't back down in its opposition to contested science projects. They also are likely to use the same strategy as ASRM critics — waiting until the conference report comes back to the House and Senate before seeking again to derail the collider.

"It bodes very well for us that the House showed its willingness to stick to its position on a budget-cutting vote," said Joel Shapiro, an aide to the collider's leading House foe, Kansas Democrat Jim Slattery.

Noting that the House rejected the collider on a 280-150 vote, Shapiro added: "We're pointing to the vote and saying basically two-thirds of the House opposed this project. When two-thirds of the House say they don't want something, hopefully arm-twisting and procedural maneuvers and stuff going on with the Senate won't bring it back."

But Rep. Joe Barton and other collider backers said the rocket booster vote isn't an omen for the Texas-based atom smasher.

"I didn't view that as any precursor or predictor of the SSC," said Barton, an Ennis Republican whose district includes part of the collider project. "Our opponents grasp at every favorable interpretation possible."

And Gerald Staub, who is the chief lobbyist for pro-collider companies, professed little concern.

Woman's son takes stand in murder trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The young son of a woman charged with murder says three months before she fatally shot her ex-husband she sought the boy's forgiveness for the act.

The 11-year-old son of Dolores Markee told jurors about the conversation as the murder trial entered its second week Monday. The trial continued Tuesday with testimony from a psychologist called by the prosecution.

Ms. Markee, 31, is charged in the Jan. 6 slaying of George Paouris, 32, a Greek immigrant who was shot to death outside his home as his new wife and stepdaughters watched helplessly.

Ms. Markee contends she killed Paouris to stop him from molesting their daughter, who is now 5 years old.

As her son took the witness stand Monday, Ms. Markee sobbed but quickly regained her composure.

Ralph Serrano Jr., her son from a previous marriage, said that in early October 1992 his mother asked him:

"If I were to kill George, would you forgive me?"

The boy said he replied, "Yes."

The mother asked her son again in November or December if he would forgive her if she did "something bad" to Paouris, the boy testified.

He said he again told his mother "Yes."

Outside the jury's presence, the boy testified his mother gave him a Halloween costume of a dead man with a bullet hole in his forehead.

State District Judge Mary Roman, after objections from defense attorney Eddie Garcia, refused to allow the jury to hear testimony about the costume.

The boy and other witnesses were called by prosecutors to rebut Ms. Markee's contention she shot Paouris 10 times to stop the alleged molestation.

Paouris was indicted on a charge of sexual abuse of the girl, but the charge later was dismissed by the Bexar County District Attorney's Office.

On Tuesday, prosecutors called psychologist Joann Murphey, who interviewed Ms. Markee, Paouris and the daughter as the court-appointed psychologist in the couple's 1991 divorce.

She described Ms. Markee as "manipulative" and said Paouris was "terrified" of the way his ex-wife appeared to be using the legal system against him .

Diverse groups unite to fight NAFTA

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — The opposition President Clinton faces in selling the North American Free Trade Agreement has a thousand voices, and many of them could be heard at a recent lunch-hour rally.

From the bandstand, Eddie Starr, a steelworker from Granite City, Ill., led the crowd of 300 in a ballad of the moment: "Say no, say no/Don't let them send our jobs to Mexico/Say no, say no/'Cause NAFTA's such a sorry way to go."

In the crowd are three young women wearing tags saluting the grizzly bear, California condor and giant kangaroo rat, three animals they say the agreement would hurt.

There are Chinese-Americans and Mexican-Americans, Gray Panthers and college students, and followers of Ross Perot, Jerry Brown, Ralph Nader and Jesse Jackson. In other times, carpenters' union leaders and the Sierra Club's defenders of trees would not have been seen on the same side of the street.

They carry signs. "NAFTA Pollutes." "Shafta NAFTA." "For Workers. For the Earth. Labor & Enviros Working Together."

This is the grass of many roots. Here, and in states as diverse as Minnesota, Illinois, Georgia, Massachusetts and Michigan, coalitions of otherwise improbable allies have mounted an unusually broad campaign to try to stop a president from doing something that he insists would be good for them and that they are convinced would be anything but.

California, with unemployment at 9 percent, is an epicenter of a loosely coordinated, low-budget struggle to bring pressure on Congress.

Here, and throughout the state, the groups are directing their campaign at 10 to 12 of California's 52 House members to reject the agreement, which beginning Jan. 1, would gradually eliminate tariffs, quotas and other barriers to trade among the United States, Mexico and Canada.

For the moment, there's little doubt about whom the groups in San Francisco are after. The biggest banner they carry reads, "Save Your Job. Stop NAFTA. Call Congr. Nancy Pelosi. 415-556-4682."

Ms. Pelosi, who represents the Bay Area's Eighth Congressional District, is resolutely ambivalent about her vote, or, as she put it, "definitely undecided."

As lobbying organizations go, this one seems small potatoes. A tiny lobby in Washington, the Citizens' Trade Campaign, keeps track of local efforts but contributes little else.

Coast Guard cites tug chief in train wreck

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the operator of a tugboat near Mobile, Ala., had known how to use his radar, he would not have misread a railroad bridge as a barge and hit it, a Coast Guard officer testified Tuesday.

One of the barges being towed struck the bridge, setting in motion events that led to the deadliest wreck in the history of Amtrak, the House Merchant Marine Committee was told.

Amtrak's Sunset Limited passenger train derailed while crossing the Bayou Canot bridge early on Sept. 22. Forty-seven people were killed and 153 injured.

"If he (the towboat operator) had known how to use the radar, he would have seen something straight across the river and known he did not want to move toward it," Coast Guard Rear Adm. James C. Card told reporters after a hearing before the House Merchant Marine Committee.

The early morning scene was foggy and the towboat operator believed that he was near a barge to which he could tie up, the panel was told.

■ More news/8B

Dennis F. Sullivan, Amtrak's executive vice president and chief operating officer, said the passenger train derailed "because a section of the bridge had been struck by a tug and its barges and had been knocked out of line about three and one-half feet."

"This shift left a bridge girder fouling the track for our oncoming train," Sullivan said.

The committee was told that other than the radar and a radio, the towboat carried no chart, compass or other navigational tools.

"To the best of my knowledge there was no compass in that wheel house," Card said, adding that there is no regulation requiring such aids.

Rep. Billy Tauzin, D-La., said he is introducing legislation requiring that all towing vessels carry "basic navigational tools."

"This bill was drafted to fill the gaping hole that currently exists in the regulation of uninspected towing vessels," Tauzin said.

"Had there been navigational charts, that would have indicated the presence of a bridge; had there been a compass, that would have indicated that they were off course," said Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C.

Card also said there were no requirements for lights or warning devices on the Bayou Canot bridge because it was not located in a commercial waterway.

"I believe if we think there was a need to light a bridge like that, we could do that," Card said in response to a question.

City of Lubbock kicks off three-day working farm show

LUBBOCK (AP) — Harvest equipment roared into action Tuesday on an 800-acre farm and ranch showplace billed as Texas' first working farm show.

Spectators by the hundreds roamed amid the Farmer-Stockman Show fields and carnival-like tent during the opening of the three-day event.

Smells of hay, barbecue — and, yes, manure — wafted over the grounds where salesmen were peddling cattle vaccines, windmills and fire-ant killers.

"If your customers are here, you might as well be here," said Dewey Coffman of the Federal Crop Insurance Corp. in Oklahoma City. "It's the place to be."

The show featured exhibits, seminars and demonstrations.

Rows of neatly aligned machines were displayed almost everywhere. Some pick rocks, others grind hay or spray water across crops.

"Pretty tractor," remarked Lockney sorghum farmer Wayne Bramlet, who was poking the equipment with a give-away yardstick.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry called the event "one-stop shopping" for a farmer or rancher. Its benefits, Perry said, are in educating consumers and showcasing new products.

"My first impression was 'Big,'" Perry said, stretching his arms wide. The Lubbock show could become the world's largest of its type within three years, he said.

Texas Farmer-Stockman magazine sponsored the event at the city of Lubbock farm.

Doctor: Malaria therapy for Lyme disease works

EL PASO (AP) — A Mexican doctor says he has relieved the crippling effects of Lyme disease by infecting patients with malaria, then treating the second sickness — a practice condemned by some U.S. health authorities.

Dr. Sergio Perez Barrio said he successfully treated two Hungarian patients using malariatherapy this year at his clinic in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, across the border from El Paso.

"One of them was in a wheelchair when she came in, and now she can perform almost any movement normally and without help," Perez was quoted as saying in Tuesday's El Paso Times.

Lyme disease is caused by bacteria carried and spread by deer ticks. The disease attacks the joints, heart and nervous system and is sometimes fatal. It responds to antibiotics if treated early, but is often resistant to standard therapy in later stages.

Malariatherapy, which has previously been used in Panama and Mexico City, makes a difference in patients with advanced stages of the disease, said Perez, a general surgeon with a master's degree in public health.

The treatment calls for injecting patients with a certain form of malaria. The malaria is then treated with antibiotics.

By some as-yet-unknown means, the therapy allows the antibiotics to cross the blood-brain barrier and reach both the malaria and the Lyme disease bacteria in the brain, where the worst damage is done, Perez said.

The blood-brain barrier is a shield that allows blood to enter the brain but blocks many non-blood agents — such as antibiotics.

Perez estimated that overall about 30 people have been successfully treated with malariatherapy.

Some medical authorities dispute the therapy's effectiveness, however, and say it is too dangerous.

"Malariatherapy has not been shown to be effective. It's a treatment we don't recommend," said Tom Skinner, a spokesman for the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta.

"We're absolutely against (malariatherapy)," added Tom Forschner, director of the Lyme Disease Foundation in Hartford, Conn. "None of the people who have supposedly got cured actually got cured."

But the treatment also has its supporters.

Dr. Henry Heimlich, the prominent U.S. physician who developed the Heimlich maneuver to save choking victims, said he is familiar with Perez's two latest patients and reported on the Mexican cases, saying patients undergoing the treatment "have had remarkable results."

Heimlich told the Times in an interview that he supports malariatherapy because it was used in the past to treat neurosyphilis, an advanced form of the sexually transmitted disease that attacks the brain.

The bacteria that cause Lyme disease have much in common with those that cause neurosyphilis, Heimlich and Perez said.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ◇	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ◇

To paint a false picture of your hand you don't necessarily have to do anything bizarre. Sometimes just refusing to win a trick when given the opportunity will serve the purpose.

Although North's hand is a minimum, balanced opening bid, the raise to two spades was surely correct, since South more than likely held a five-card suit. With a full opening bid, South wasted no time in getting to game.

West led the top of partner's suit, East inserted the eight and declarer's jack won. A low trump was led to dummy's jack and East followed with the eight! Assuming it was an honest card, East could have only one of two holdings: A singleton eight, in which case declarer ran the risk of two trump losers by cashing the ace next; or a doubleton 10 8, in which case declarer could bring in the trump suit without loss and score an overtrick.

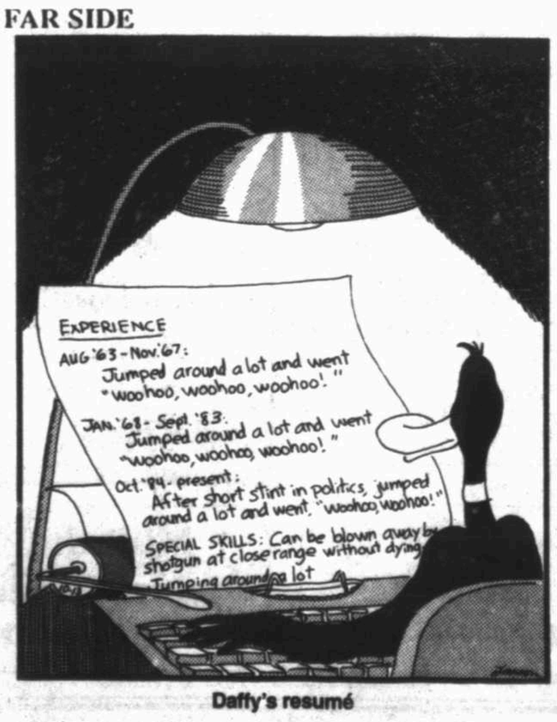

In either event, possession of the seven of spades gave declarer the option of neutralizing four trumps in the West hand. Greedily seizing the chance for an overtrick, South returned to hand with a club to the jack to lead the queen of trumps, hoping to pin East's ten. When West showed out, declarer could not avoid the loss of two trump tricks and two hearts for down one.

Note that had East captured the jack of trumps with the king, or followed with the six instead of the eight, declarer would have romped home. The logical play would have been to continue with the ace of trumps and, when West showed out, declarer would have had no problem losing only one trump trick.

Dietary-correct Oprah Winfrey orders fries, doesn't eat them

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — Don't worry, fellow dieters. She didn't eat the fries.

Oprah Winfrey, the talk show host whose diets have become a staple in the supermarket tabloids, walked into a Dock Square eatery Monday and ordered a grilled swordfish sandwich with seafood chowder.

She also ordered fries.

"She told me she just wanted to look at them," said Brian MacGillivray, owner of Alisson's Restaurant.

Winfrey drew stares as she ate lunch with two friends.

"She was very accommodating to the people who wanted to take her picture," MacGillivray said.

NEW YORK — Did Winona Ryder forget her address?

The actress is being sued for $93,600 for allegedly backing out of a lease on an Upper East Side apartment. John and Anne Janus said in court papers that she signed a two-year lease Dec. 31 for the duplex at $3,900 a month.

Ryder

Their lawyer, Charles Sloane, said Ryder gave the Januses a check for $7,800 for a month's rent and a month's security, then stopped paying.

It was unclear whether Ryder ever lived in the apartment. Her public relations people didn't return calls for comment.

Ryder, 21, has appeared in the movies "Beetlejuice," "Edward Scissorhands," "Bram Stoker's Dracula" and recently "The Age of Innocence."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Don Henley's at it again, raising money to save Walden Woods.

A variety of country music stars got together to record "Common Thread," a collection of songs made famous by the Eagles.

"Everybody flipped out," said James Stroud, Nashville president of Giant Records. "They wanted to be a part of it."

Vince Gill sings "I Can't Tell You Why," Diamond Rio sings "Lyin' Eyes" and Clint Black does "Desperado."

Travis Tritt, Little Texas, John Anderson, Alan Jackson, Suzy Bogguss, Trisha Yearwood, Billy Dean, Tanya Tucker, Brooks & Dunn and Lorrie Morgan also sang.

The Eagles, including Henley, Glenn Frey and Joe Walsh, broke up after releasing their last studio album, 1979's "The Long Run."

A portion of the album's royalties will go to Henley's Walden Woods project.

LOS ANGELES — The woman next door has come out of the closet.

Amanda Bearse, who plays Al and Peg Bundy's perky neighbor on the Fox series "Married ... With Children," acknowledged her homosexuality on Monday, National Coming Out Day.

She said she wants heterosexuals to know that gays and lesbians are normal people. And she joked about her decision to come out.

"There I was, staring at my wardrobe, totally uninspired," Bearse said at a news conference. "Then I said to myself, 'Amanda, come out of the closet.'"

GREENWICH, Conn. — "The Greatest" wasn't.

Muhammad Ali is supporting a friend's effort to make another movie about his life. A 1976 attempt "didn't really show my life, just boxing and my girlfriends," said Ali, who starred in "The Greatest."

"It wasn't done right," the former heavyweight boxing champion said.

Paul Ardaji, a friend of Ali's who lives in Greenwich, said he will try to make a film that will spotlight Ali's cultural impact in and out of the boxing ring.

"This is going to be a worldwide event," said Ardaji, chief executive officer of MEAMCO, an advertising agency in New York. "It will be an epic movie with a $40 million budget."

Ardaji said he's still looking for a director, screenwriter and co-producer.

NEW YORK — Gene Shalit does not count himself among the world's great billiards players, but he is lending his name to a tournament Tuesday evening for a good cause: to help find a cure for multiple sclerosis.

The occasion, "The First Annual Gene Shalit Pro-Celebrity Billiards Classic for MS," at the Ramada Hotel on Seventh Avenue in New York City, will be the curtain-raiser for the U.S. Open Pocket Billiards Championship this week.

Shalit, the television movie critic, became involved with the benefit because his adult daughter Emily has had the degenerative neurological disease for five years.

"I will be a spectating participant," Shalit said. "I'll look one way and shoot the other. I thought it might be more fun than a banquet or auction, so I called up a lot of folks to be in it, many of whom said they have never held a cue in their lives."

Among those he persuaded to play are Bo Derek, Carol Channing, Christopher Reeve, George Plimpton, James Galway, Regis Philbin, Keith Hernandez, Yogi Berra and Jerry Ohrbach.

Denny beating case slows when judge axes juror, kills verdicts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Deliberations in the Reginald Denny beating trial plunged into disarray again Tuesday as the judge dismissed another juror, threw out two verdicts and ordered the panel to start deliberations over again.

Superior Court Judge John Ouderkirk removed a middle-aged white male juror from the racially charged case because of personal problems unrelated to the trial.

The juror was replaced by a middle-aged black man who was selected by lottery, giving the reconstituted jury four blacks, two whites, two Asian-Americans and four Hispanics. There are 10 women and two men. It was the fifth time a juror was removed and it left just one alternate.

The judge didn't detail the juror's problems, but said he learned of them in secret meetings between him and the juror.

"These appear to be significant personal problems," Ouderkirk said.

The excused juror was ordered to not talk about the case or say anything that could identify himself or other jurors until final verdicts are in.

Before the juror was removed, the sequestered panel had reached verdicts on two counts against Henry Watson, 29, who is on trial with Damian Williams, 20.

They were accused of pulling Denny from his truck and attacking him and others on April 29, 1992, during rioting that followed acquittal of four policemen in the videotaped beating of motorist Rodney King.

The defendants face life prison terms if convicted of the most serious charge: attempted premeditated murder on Denny.

After deliberating about half a day, the jury had decided whether Watson should be convicted of assault with a deadly weapon in an attack on a second motorist and of robbery on a third, the judge said.

Pentagon seeks court delay on gay rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon will ask the Supreme Court to delay enforcement of a federal court order that banned discrimination against gays in the military, a spokeswoman said Tuesday.

"We will seek extraordinary relief from the Supreme Court," Kathleen deLaski told reporters at a Pentagon briefing.

In the meantime, the Pentagon has instructed units to suspend its ban on homosexuals in the military while it pursues the case, she said.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last Friday left in place an order issued Sept. 30 by U.S. District Judge Terry Hatter Jr. of Los Angeles banning discrimination against gays in the military.

A three-judge panel of the 9th Circuit court unanimously denied the Defense Department's emergency request to suspend or immediately overturn Hatter's decision.

On Oct. 1, Assistant Secretary of Defense Edwin Dorn issued a memorandum saying that, "No administrative action will be taken based solely on a service member's homosexual orientation or statements of homosexuality."

By taking that position, the department is acknowledging its well- established obligation to follow a judge's nationwide injunction, said John McGuire, the attorney for a gay sailor whose lawsuit led to the ruling.

In asking the court to suspend Hatter's ruling, Justice Department lawyers said it would "seriously interfere with management of day-to-day military affairs."

The appeals court's order did not comment on the merits of the case. But McGuire said the order "demonstrates a certain degree of confidence by the appeals court in Judge Hatter's finding."

The decision was issued by Circuit Judges Otto Skopil, David Thompson and Pamela Rymer. The same panel is scheduled to hear the administration's appeal of Hatter's ruling in December.

The Pentagon delayed implementation of President Clinton's "don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue" policy on Oct. 1 while it awaited congressional action on the issue and dealt with the court challenges.

The Defense Department said that for the time being the interim policy that Clinton ordered in January would continue. That policy stops the practice of questioning recruits about their sexual orientation and transfers to reserve status those who declare their homosexuality.

But the Oct. 1 memo by Dorn, who is responsible for personnel issues, halts transfers as well as discharges.

Anti-gay rights law goes to trial in Denver

DENVER (AP) — Supporters of Amendment 2 wanted to send a message to homosexuals that "we just don't like them," an attorney argued Tuesday at the start of a trial on the constitutionality of the state's anti-gay rights law.

Attorneys for the state are defending the law, trying to prove gays should not be a protected class, that they have political clout and that they may change their sexual proclivity.

A coalition of cities and individuals challenged Amendment 2, saying individual or group rights can't be infringed upon because a majority of citizens want it so.

The trial will be closely watched as witnesses for both sides were expected to testify on the sociology, economics and political power of the gay rights movement.

Mayor Wellington Webb, the first witness called Tuesday, acknowledged that Amendment 2 doesn't prevent homosexuals from voting. But he said its passage "denied them protection against discrimination in the cities in which they reside."

He said every individual and group deserves protection from discrimination. Jack Wesoky, an assistant state attorney general, asked if the protection extended to "short, bald guys," and Webb replied, "Yes, if they are being discriminated against."

Webb had been expected to testify about Denver's gay-rights ordinance, but the issue was only touched on briefly.

LeAnna Ware of the Wisconsin Civil Rights Bureau testified that about 100 of 8,000 complaints received by her agency every year pertain to discrimination based on sexual orientation. Wisconsin has a gay rights law.

She said the number of complaints required at least one additional employee to process them.

Coalition lawyer Greg Eurich said Amendment 2 supporters are trying to tell homosexuals: "We just don't like them."

Partiers wreck house after parents depart

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A teen-ager angry at his parents for packing him off to boarding school organized a "Risky Business"-like bash while they were taking him away.

The savage soiree left the family's million-dollar home trashed and plundered. As many as 200 young people showed up at the party, 10 were arrested and more arrests were expected, police said Tuesday.

The youth, believed to be 17, was not in custody Tuesday morning but was being interviewed in Colorado, where he and his parents were when the Friday night fete occurred, police said.

"All indications are that he helped set up this party," said Capt. Michael Lanam. "He told them when his parents would be gone . . . because he did not want to go to boarding school and he wanted to get some sort of retribution against his parents."

Windows and doors were broken. Carpets were damaged, and beer bottles and other trash were strewn about. A mixture of dish detergent and potato chips covered the marble floors.

The house also was stripped of most furniture and valuables — electronic equipment, paintings, jewelry and clothing.

"It turned out to be a looting party," Lanam said. "The kids called it that."

It was like something out of "Risky Business," Lanam said, referring to the hit 1983 movie in which Tom Cruise turns his family's house into a brothel and invites his high school pals over.

The youth lived with his mother in a fashionable area of Fremont, 20 miles southeast of San Francisco. The rap star Hammer lives only a few houses away. The teenager's father lives in Sacramento.

"The mother is denying he had any participation in this, but our indication . . . from his own friends . . . is that he did," Lanam said.

Detectives learned that the youth invited several friends at Mission San Jose High School to throw a party at his house when his family was taking him to a military-type boarding school in Colorado, police said.

It also wasn't clear if the teen told his friends to trash the house or just have a party, police said.

Police got wind of the goings-on when a neighbor complained about noise and when officers stopped a pickup loaded with valuables allegedly taken from the house, including VCRs, a fax machine, a compact disk player and camera equipment, Lanam said.

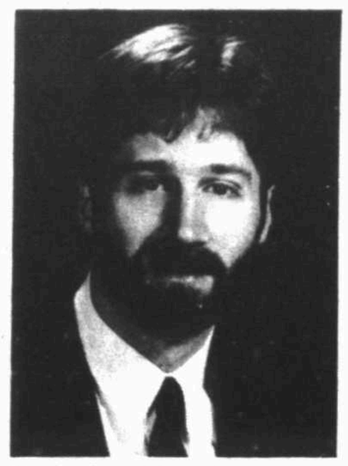

Surgeon Has Opened Facilities for Total Eye Care

Dr. Patrick Kelly Riggs, M.D. is announcing the opening of the Riggs Center for Diseases and Surgery of the Eye in Midland with secondary offices in Monahans and Pecos. The spacious new facility in Midland, over 3,000 square feet, is located at 3000 N. Garfield, Suite 215, and offers state-of-the-art equipment in a fresh setting of modern medical efficiency. There are four examination rooms and an operating room for minor surgical procedures, including Radial Keratotomy. The minor surgical room is equipped with Argon and Neodymium YAG lasers. In addition, Dr. Riggs has supplied Ward Memorial Hospital in Monahans and Reeves County Hospital in Pecos with the most advanced equipment available in order to provide his services to those people who live in Monahans, Pecos and the surrounding areas.

Dr. Riggs is an ophthalmologist certified by the American Board of Ophthalmology, with specialty training in cornea and external disease. Besides concentrating on small incision/sutureless cataract surgery and refractive surgery for the correction of nearsightedness and astigmatism, he offers a full range of ophthalmic services.

He received his undergraduate degree from Texas A&M University where he graduated with the highest honors, Summa Cum Laude. While working his way through college as a welder in a refinery, he majored in Biology with a minor in Chemistry. Because Dr. Riggs was among the top ten individuals within the College of Science, he was selected by the Dean of the College to receive a scholarship his junior year.

Following graduation he worked in the plastics division at Exxon

Research and Development. His assignment there was to determine the structure of certain plastic polymers. Dr. Riggs felt that the study of plastics would be useful in his later career as an ophthalmologist in the research and development of intraocular lenses. Concurrently, he was obtaining his Doctor of Medicine degree from the University of Texas Health Science Center in Houston, which has the largest medical center in the world. In medical school Dr. Riggs continued to excel academically. In the surgical rotation he was ranked in the top 10% by his written examinations and by his professors, among whom was Dr. "Red" Duke.

After graduation from medical school, Dr. Riggs went to Virginia for his internship in general surgery. Then he completed the basic science course in ophthalmology at Stanford University School of Medicine. His residency training in ophthalmology took place at the Eastern Virginia Graduate School of Medicine where he was selected by the staff physicians to be chief resident his last year. During residency Dr. Riggs continued his interest in research and development. Working in conjunction with fellow residents, he developed a topical drug for the treatment of eye disease.

Following residency Dr. Riggs was fellowship trained in cornea and external disease. Since then he has worked as a consultant in practice management and as chief surgeon in a large eye care center where he supervised the work of other surgeons. He has taught numerous surgeons the art of small incision/sutureless cataract surgery and the techniques necessary to achieve better results with corneal transplantation.

During the course of practice, he realized that there were many ways in which to manage a health care delivery system. He found himself dissatisfied with his level of understanding of the health care delivery system in our country as well as in other countries. Plagued by this discontent he sought further knowledge in a one-year course in Hospital Administration at the Kenan School of Business, University of North Carolina. Dr. Riggs finished that study in May 1993 and then chose his practice site and home in Midland, Texas

Dr. Riggs is a native Texan, born and raised in Pasadena. He chose to practice in Midland not only because he enjoys the regional dry climate, but also because he realized there is a shortage of ophthalmologists in West Texas. He would like to make his services convenient to all.

The Riggs Center is open six days a week. In addition, Dr. Riggs is available 24 hours a day. The area wide phone number is 915-570-0288. Dr. Riggs has the staff, resources, and training to provide the most advanced techniques.

'Boys grab vets

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys shook up their defensive backfield and upgraded their special teams on Tuesday, acquiring veteran safeties Joe Fishback and Elvis Patterson.

Dallas sent a 1994 draft choice to the Los Angeles Raiders for Patterson, and signed Fishback, a free agent. To make room for the two special teams standouts, the Cowboys waived reserve safeties Robert Williams and Chris Hall.

Patterson was selected to two Pro Bowls as a special teams alternate after the 1991 and 1992 seasons. Coach Jimmy Johnson called Patterson, 5-11, 195 pounds, "one of the finest special teams players in the league."

Patterson played for the Giants from 1984 to 1987. He led the 1986 Super Bowl champion Giants in interceptions with six.

Patterson, who went to Houston Yates High School, also played with the San Diego Chargers. He played collegiately at Kansas.

Dickerson traded

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Falcons traded Eric Dickerson and third-year cornerback Bruce Pickens to Green Bay today for running back John Stephens.

Dickerson, the NFL's No. 2 all-time rusher, was acquired from the Los Angeles Raiders during the summer and started the first two games of the season. He played in four of the first five games, all losses.

The trade came a week after Dickerson said he was told the Falcons were waiving him because coach Jerry Glanville wanted to use younger players. The next day, Falcons officials said it was a misunderstanding and he was not placed on waivers.

Pickens, the Falcons' first-round pick (third overall) in 1991 out of Nebraska, played 20 games, with eight starts, in three seasons. The 25-year-old started the first four games this season, but missed the game at Chicago with a hamstring injury.

Stephens, 27, broke into the NFL in 1988 with New England and was Offensive Rookie of the Year. He led the Patriots in rushing in 1988, 1989 and 1990.

He started all five games with the Packers (2-3) this year and had a team-best 173 yards rushing.

Toronto returns to Series

■ Blue Jay pitcher Dave Stewart works his big game magic and Pat Borders drives in three runs to spark Toronto to its second straight World Series appearance.

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The cold, the Chicago batters, the pressure of a big game. None of it bothered Dave Stewart.

Standing straight and staring ahead, he showed why the World Series champion Toronto Blue Jays got him, and why they're going back.

Stewart, simply the best playoff pitcher ever, won the fourth clincher of his career Tuesday night by leading Toronto past the White Sox 6-3 in Game 6.

Pat Borders, MVP of last year's World Series, drove in his first three runs of this series. His RBI grounder put the Blue Jays ahead 3-2 in the fourth inning against Alex Fernandez.

Devon White homered in the ninth and Paul Molitor, the Blue Jays' other offseason free agent signing, hit a two-run triple in the ninth, and that was enough.

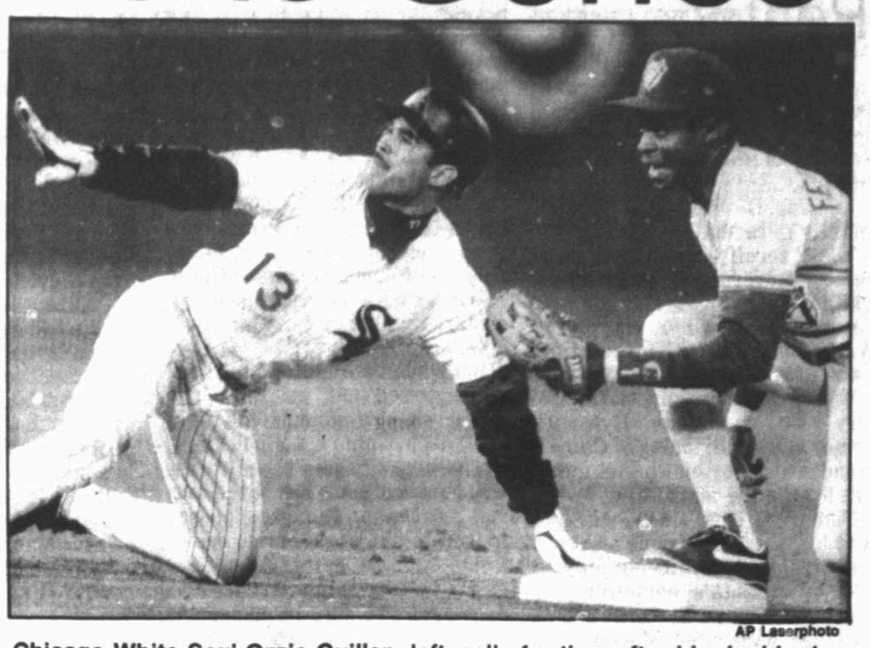

The victory was Stewart's second in the series and made him a perfect 8-0 with a 2.03 ERA in the playoffs. And, more importantly to him and the team, he sent the Blue Jays back to the World Series.

"They were a scrappy club, a good ballclub," he said. "They keep coming at you, keep coming at you. I figured ways to get them out."

Toronto will play Game 1 Saturday night at SkyDome against either Philadelphia or Atlanta. With the win, the NL playoff schedule was changed; now, Game 6 in Philadelphia will start at 8:12 p.m. EDT, rather than 3:07.

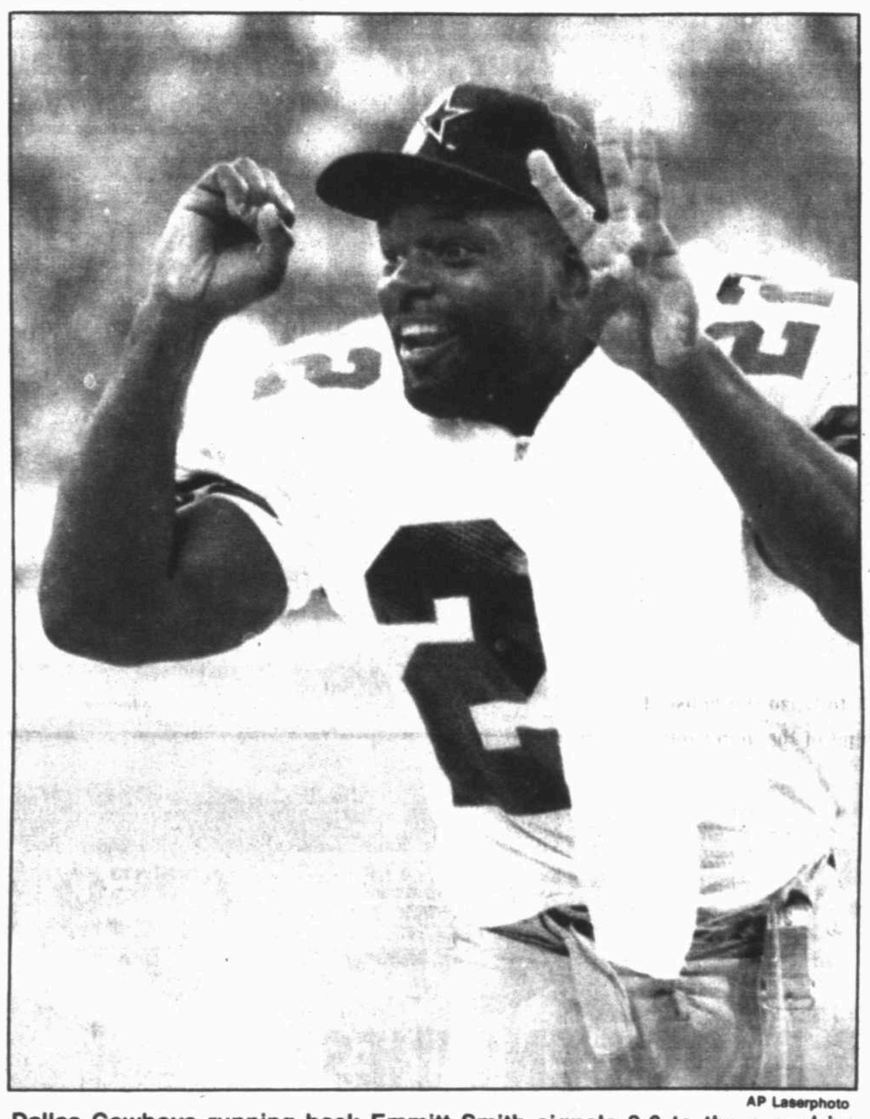

The Blue Jays are the first repeat AL champions since the New York Yankees in 1978.

Midland breezes to tourney win

■ The Midland College golf team tames Mission Dorado with a tournament record and wins it's first Odessa College Invitational by 14 strokes.

By Bill Petitt

ODESSA — Midland College golfer Lance McCullough said Monday the depth of the Chaparrals' golf team is so great it puts pressure on team members just to make the squad for tournament play.

It is that day-in-day-out pressure play that helped Midland College shoot a final round 293 to break a 54-hole tournament record with an 870 and take a 14-stroke victory at the Odessa College Invitational Tournament played at The Club at Mission Dorado Tuesday.

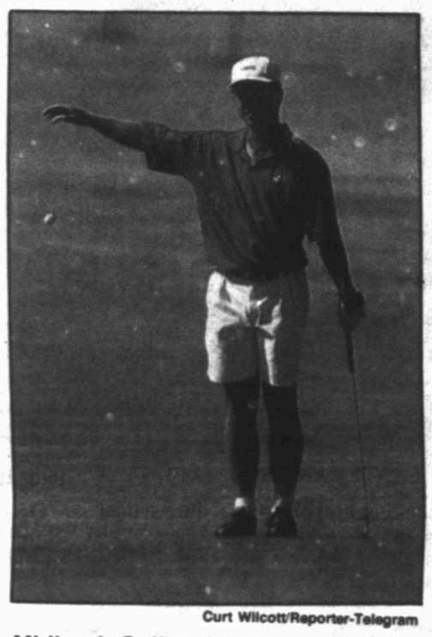

It's the first time the Chaps have captured the OC tournament and they did it in convincing style, leading from the first round and never allowing seven-time national champion Brevard Community College of Florida to close the gap.

"Any time you throw out a 74 then you know you are playing some pretty good golf," said Chap golf coach Delnor Poss. "This team played exceptionally well. Lance (McCullough) and Guy (Redford) had an exceptional tournament. All of our guys did a great job.

"We had really good preparation. The preparation we had going into this tournament was the best we've ever had."

Brevard finished in second place with an 884. New Mexico Junior College was

Cowboys to measure progress vs. 'Niners

IRVING — The defending Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys get to prove how far they've come since a near-disastrous start.

"We've come out of the hole we dug in the last three weeks," coach Jimmy Johnson said Tuesday. "Now, we have the opportunity to show if we belong among the elite in this league."

The Cowboys and the San Francisco 49ers meet Sunday at 3 p.m. in Texas Stadium in an NFC championship game rematch.

Dallas defeated the 49ers 30-20 in the muck and mire of Candlestick Park and went on to whip Buffalo 52-17 in the Super Bowl in January.

Without running back Emmitt Smith, who became embroiled in a bitter contract dispute with owner Jerry Jones, the Cowboys lost to Washington and Buffalo to open their Super Bowl defense.

Lee spikers take over first in 4-5A volleyball

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff writer

Just three days after the Midland Lee volleyball team played the part of the giant killer, knocking off previously undefeated San Angelo Central Saturday, the Lady Rebels survived a Odessa High comeback Tuesday night in the Lee gym to win 15-7, 11-15, 15-9 and take over first place in District 4-5A amidst a night of upsets around the league.

Because of the results in two pivotal matches around the district — Abilene Cooper knocked off San Angelo 22-20, 15-9 and Midland High defeated Odessa Permian 15-12, 14-16, 15-12 — the Lady Rebels took over sole possession of first place from San Angelo and the battle for

Lee's 4-5A quest becomes tougher

Midland Lee disappeared from The Associated Press' Top 10 this week thanks to Odessa High's 13-9 upset victory Friday night. But in more ways than one, it was like Lee putting a gun to its own head and pulling the trigger.

Williamson

It was a week of mistakes, and the price is being paid. In fact, Lee is in serious playoff trouble again.

There are two plays in the game against OHS that could be considered the fatal flaws.

First, the loss came when OHS recovered a kickoff in Lee's end zone. Obviously, the ruling was that a Lee player touched the ball, otherwise, it would have been a touchback and Lee's ball on the 20-yard line. However, no time elapsed from the clock, making it seem that the ball was in the end zone without having been touched. That is easily overlooked since the clock keeper was probably as confused as the fans in the stadium. Still, the officials didn't have two or three seconds removed from the clock after the play, leaving everyone in doubt as to what had happened.

Miller says that he was never informed of the official decision and didn't believe his team had touched the ball, a matter that he was more upset with than the ruling. "I don't see how a 5A team can make that kind of mistake," Miller said.

Second, Lee's failure to score with second down from the four-yard line with less than two minutes left in the game was critical. Fans can argue all they want about the call to run a bootleg pass on second down that went for an interception, but the bottom line is that the golden chance was lost. Miller, too, questions the wisdom of the call, but has more concern for his team's execution in the last three games when the team is inside the 30-yard line.

In district play, Lee has scored four times from outside the 30-yard line and six times from inside the 30-yard line, five of which came against Midland High. And one of those was from 21 yards out.

In those same three games, Lee has failed to score touchdowns after reaching the opponent's 30-yard line eight times. That means that Lee has failed to score more often than it has scored when getting into the "red" zone.

"We haven't helped the kids much in this regard," Miller says. "We have to put points on the board when we have a chance and we aren't doing that enough. There is no question about that and we're now in big trouble because of it."

The Lee offense has also given up a couple of TDs in the kicking game, allowing MHS a TD off a blocked punt, and of course, the kickoff TD to OHS Friday.

Of course, this is the disturbing trend that is gripping the Rebels down the district stretch run. With key games coming up against Odessa Permian and Abilene Cooper, the Rebs must establish scoring opportunities, probably without many chances against those two teams to break the big scoring plays from more than 30 yards out.

The one positive point from all of this is that Lee still has only one loop loss at this point. The opportunity for bigger things is still in the hands of the Lee team. The road would have been paved with a win over OHS, but now the Rebs must take the side roads and get caliche tough.

Rag-tag Phillies near unlikely championship

■ NL Playoffs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Their closer teeters on the brink of disaster with every pitch. Their top defensive replacement has nearly thrown away two games. Their opponent talks with the bold cockiness of a two-time defending champion.

Yet the Philadelphia Phillies have these talented, oh-so-confident Atlanta Braves right where they want them for Wednesday's Game 6 of the National League playoffs.

At home. Down a game. Needing another miracle.

These scruffy, unshaven, beer-bellied, underdog, overachieving Phillies lead the series 3-2 and need one more win to play in the World Series for the first time since 1983. They seized the lead with yet another impossible victory, 4-3 on Lenny Dykstra's homer in the 10th inning of Game 5 Monday despite blowing a three-run lead in the ninth.

Tommy Greene (16-4), who had won his last 13 decisions at Veterans Stadium before being torched 14-3 by Atlanta's home-run machine in Game 2, will be rematched with Greg Maddux (20-10) in Game 6. The game time — either 3:07 p.m. EDT or 8:12 p.m. EDT — wasn't determined until after Game 6 of the AL playoffs Tuesday.

The Phillies' rallying cry during their 1980 World Series championship season was "Ya Gotta Believe." But who would have believed this?

"A lot of people said we didn't belong on the same field as the Braves coming into this series," manager Jim Fregosi said. "But now you're seeing how we got here."

That they're even keeping up with the Braves — who have outscored them 30-17 — is inexplicable. Reliever Mitch Williams has blown two leads and nearly a third, and third baseman Kim Batiste's ninth-inning errors in Game 1 and Game 5 almost ruined two exquisitely pitched games by Curt Schilling.

But while the Phillies have been embarrassed 23-7 in their two losses, they're winning the tight ones: 4-3 in Game 1, 2-1 in Game 4, 4-3 in Game 5. Weren't the Braves, who have lost their last seven one-run postseason games, supposed to wait to the World Series before losing the close games?

"We better win big (Wednesday) because we're sure not doing the little things in the close games," Otis Nixon said.

"You can only get in these situations so many times," Jeff Blauser said. "We're used to having our backs against the wall, but you don't want to be doing this too often. But we've done it again."

What the 104-win Braves now will learn before a pumped-to-the-max sellout crowd in the Vet is if they have one more postseason escape act left in them.

They were in this identical position in the 1991 playoffs, down 3-2 on the road, but got shutouts from Steve Avery and John Smoltz to win in Pittsburgh.

Last year, Francisco Cabrera's two-run single in the ninth finished off a three-run rally that beat the Pirates 3-2 in Game 7.

Maybe it's because they're so accustomed to doing it the hard way that the Braves haven't conceded — and, in fact, with Maddux and Tom Glavine (22-6) ready to pitch, are talking like the favorites.

"We had exactly the same situation in 1991 against Pittsburgh and we came back and won it," Steve Avery said. "There's no reason we shouldn't be confident that we can do it again. We've gotten ourselves in a little hole, but it's tough to say with Maddux going that we don't have a good chance."

Ditto Blauser.

'Why change our attitude now?," he said. "Why let negative thoughts get into our mind now? We still get to keep our uniform. No one's taken anything away from us yet."

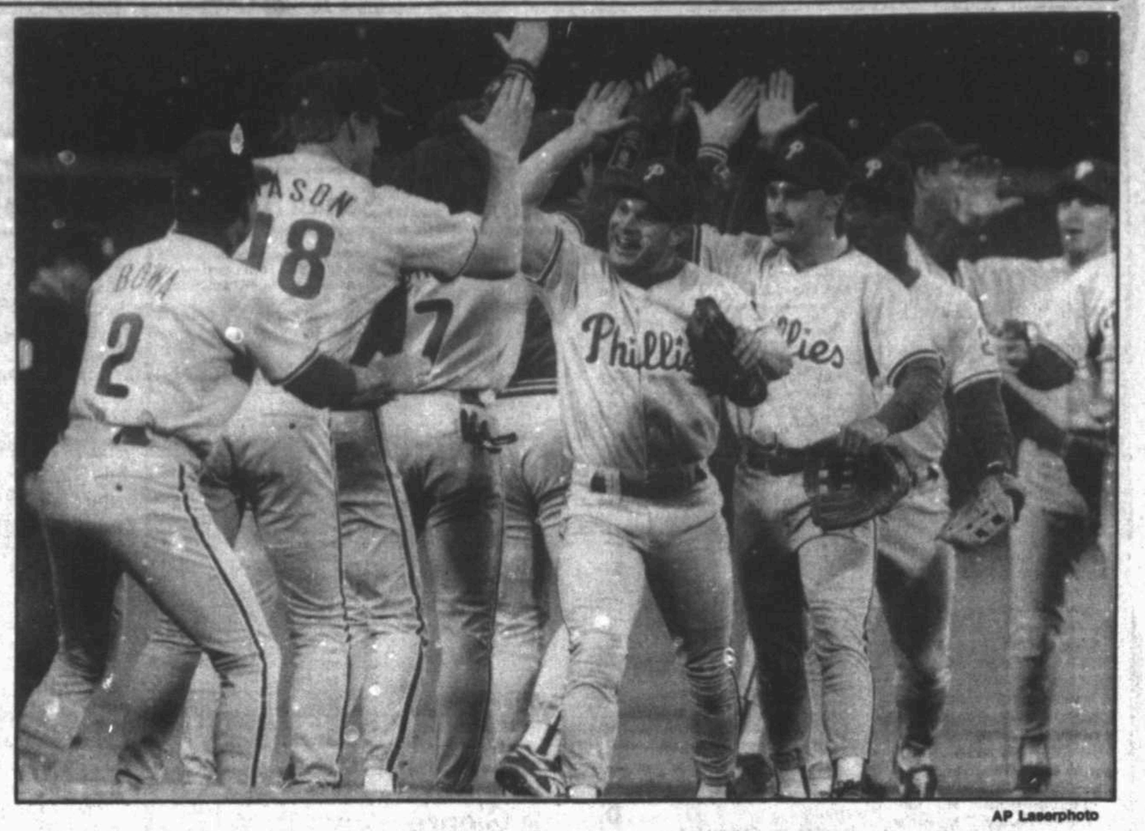

The Phillies certainly are trying. They're prospering with the us-against-the-world mentality they adopted to reflect Atlanta's status as big favorites, and they're becoming increasingly convinced they can pull this off.

"We've been perceived as underdogs all year," Pete Incaviglia said. "Everybody wants to look at the long hair and the bellies and the beer. Well, we thrive on that. We thrive on people saying we can't do this or we can't do that."

Not that they expect it to be easy. They know how one swing of Fred McGriff's bat, or Ron Gant's, or David Justice's, or Terry Pendleton's, or one more botched bullpen job, can rob them of the momentum they seized in Atlanta.

"There's nobody in this room who thinks we have anything won," Schilling said. "We're home, but we're going to face maybe the two best pitchers in the league."

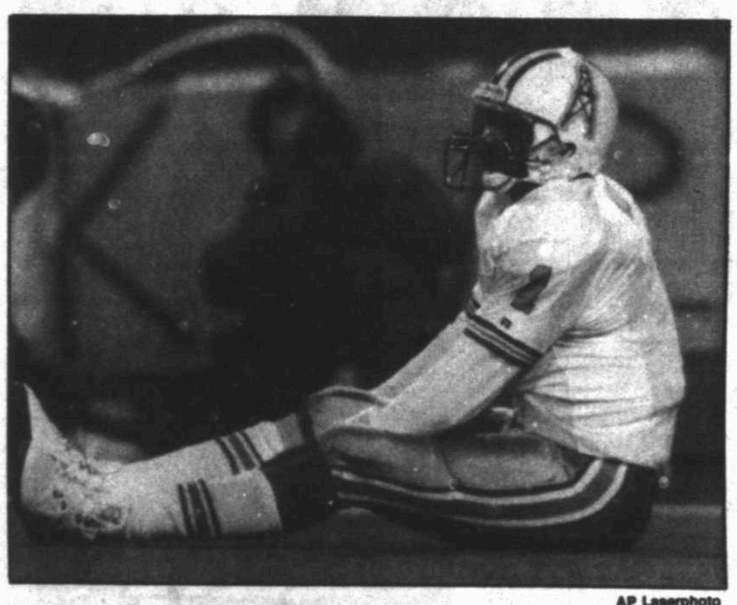

"I feel real good going into Philadelphia," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon pauses after taking a hit from the Buffalo Bills during the teams' game Monday night in Orchard Park, N.Y.

QB, coach may not survive Bill debacle

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers coach Jack Pardee hinted at benching Warren Moon Tuesday while dodging speculation that the quarterback was on the trading block after a humbling 35-7 loss to Buffalo.

Pardee, on the hot seat himself because of the Oilers' 1-4 start, said during his weekly news conference that he had not spoken with team owner Bud Adams since the Monday night debacle. Houston suffered seven turnovers and never challenged the Bills.

"If he wants me, I'm sure he'll call, but right now we've got a lot of work to do," Pardee said.

Team officials said Adams would make no statement on Tuesday.

As they have for weeks, irate fans again deluged radio talk shows with calls demanding Pardee's firing after the Buffalo game.

Columnists for both Houston newspapers also urged Adams to dump Pardee as well as the sputtering run-and-shoot offense. They further advised Adams to try to deal whatever star players he can before Tuesday's NFL trade deadline and begin anew.

Rumors on Tuesday had Moon going to several teams in need of quarterbacks.

Said Pardee, "I don't think that's going to be happening, but nothing is going on right now."

At the least, Moon is in danger of losing his starting job to Cody Carlson for Sunday's game at New England.

"It's something we'll have to look at," Pardee said. "We're looking for production and Cody did a pretty good job. One thing about Warren, he's had a great career and he wants to win as much as anyone."

Moon has thrown 11 interceptions this season, including three against the Bills Monday night, and has been benched for ineffectiveness two of the last three games. The Oilers have lost three consecutive games.

"I'm searching for answers and I'm running out of excuses," Moon said Monday night. "I'm not going to replace myself, but if I were the head coach, I'd seriously consider it."

Moon isn't the only one struggling. He has gotten little protection from an offensive line once considered among the NFL's best, and the situation got worse when guard Mike Munchak left the Buffalo game with another knee injury.

"Obviously, we're struggling and it's not all attributable to Warren," said offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride.

The Oilers are off to their worst start under Pardee. They were 2-3 in 1990, his first year as head coach and they've been 4-1 after five games in each of the last two years.

"I'm embarrassed," defensive end Sean Jones said. "I don't know what's happened. We've had so many breakdowns. I thought we'd play better, but I'm not giving up.'

Pardee's job status first came into question after Houston's infamous 41-38 overtime playoff loss to Buffalo Jan. 3. The Oilers had led 35-3 in the third quarter.

Pardee escaped that purge as general manager Mike Holovak fired defensive coordinator Jim Eddy and defensive backs coach Pat Thomas.

Buddy Ryan was hired as defensive coordinator on Jan. 29, putting the spotlight on Pardee again because of Ryan's ambition to be a head coach again.

Ryan's "46" defense hasn't lived up to its billing and offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride also been criticized because of problems in his run-and-shoot offense.

Indeed, all that stands between the Oilers and disintegration is a weak schedule in the coming weeks. Houston has upcoming games at New England (1-4) and at home against Cincinnati (0-5).

The Oilers were 1-1 after losing to New Orleans in the season opener and beating Kansas City the following week. They have since lost to San Diego, the Los Angeles Rams and the Bills.

Following the Rams loss two weeks ago, owner Bud Adams said he would not fire Pardee.

3-0: San Fran test Sunday

(From 1C)

Players went into helmet-throwing demonstrations because Jones wouldn't sign Smith, the NFL's leading rusher for two consecutive seasons.

After Smith returned $13.6 million richer, the Cowboys have defeated Phoenix, Green Bay and Indianapolis.

"We're playing well but we haven't faced a team the caliber of San Francisco," said Johnson. "We know they've been the best team in the NFL. They are a great team with one of the finest offenses in the league. They have Hall of Fame players."

Johnson said he won't have to say one inspirational word this week.

"There's going to be a lot of adrenalin on both sides," he said. "This is a key game for each team. The winner can say it is the best regardless of the records we have."

Both the 49ers and Cowboys are 3-2 with the San Francisco losses coming on the road at Cleveland and New Orleans. The 49ers were idle last Sunday, giving them two weeks to prepare for the Cowboys.

Once again, Johnson said the Cowboys will be faced with the chore of slowing down quarterback Steve Young.

"He can beat you with the pass and he can beat you with the run," said Johnson. "The 49ers are actively using him in running back schemes now. Sometimes you'll see the fullback lead him into the hole. He's very capable. He gives you more problems than most quarterbacks."

Johnson said the two weeks of preparation could work to the 49ers' advantage.

"They probably won't change a whole lot in what they do but it will give them a chance to zero in on what we do," Johnson said. "I'm sure we'll get their best effort."

Oddsmakers rated the Cowboys 6-point favorites in the 49ers' first visit to Texas Stadium since 1990 when they claimed a 24-6 victory.

LEE: Atop 4-5A

the third playoff spot heated up between Permian and Cooper.

A win for San Angelo, which fell to 21-4, 6-2, would have kept the Bobcats in first ahead of Lee. A win for Permian, which fell to 17-9, 5-4, would have given the Panthers a tight grip on the third playoff spot. Midland improved to 8-15, 3-5 to remain in sixth place, two games out of the contention for the third playoff spot. Cooper improved to 12-12, 5-4.

But the cards played out perfectly for Lee (10-12, 7-2), which travels to winless Abilene High Saturday afternoon. Midland High hosts Abilene Cooper while San Angelo travels to OHS.

Lee, however, had to deal with Odessa High first. The Lady Bronchos accounted for the only other blemish on the Lady Rebels' district record. San Angelo won a grudge match in the first round of district play for Lee's first district loss.

By the time the third game rolled around, the jitters had worn off and both teams were reading the other well. The result was what Lee coach Anita Corder called a "grudge match."

Odessa did what it wanted on its first three rotations — keep Lee from scoring. Meanwhile, the two best Lady Broncho hitters were rotating to the front row for what Odessa coach Diane Sandoval hoped would be a run of points for her team. Junior Donelle Jones and sophomore Terri Butler, both 6-foot-0, rotated to the front with their team leading 2-0.

But a strong Lee blocking scheme and floor defense, kept the big hitters from going on a big run. A kill each by Kim Richardson, setter Roseann Sullivan and Tera Mander, gave Lee three huge sideouts to move Jones and Butler off the front row while the Lady Rebels only allowed one point from that setup.

"We couldn't capitalize (when Jones and Butler were on the front row)," Sandoval said about the third game. "We were making mental mistakes and we couldn't keep the momentum going."

Corder said the Lee blocking a defensive schemes were the key to the third game win.

"We weren't stuff blocking them a whole lot but we were accomplishing what I call the third goal of blocking, which is to tip the ball or deny the court (to the Odessa hitters). Our floor defense was great."

ALCS: Jays back in show

(From 1C)

"It turned out to be a good six ballgames," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "We were real lucky this year."

Stewart, named playoff for the MVP second time, was not with the Blue Jays when they worked out Monday. Instead, he stayed behind in Toronto to help pass out food at a dinner for the homeless.

His late arrival Monday night, however, did not rattle him. He pitched 7 1-3 innings and gave up two runs on four hits. He walked four and struck out three.

Stewart extended his record for most playoff victories — teammate Juan Guzman is next with just four. He also passed Hall of Famer Catfish Hunter for the most innings pitched in the playoffs. Stewart does have two no-decisions in the playoffs — of course, his team won both of those games, too.

All evening, Stewart stayed hot even while the temperatures dropped into the low 40s. Blowing on his hand to keep warm, he blew down a revamped Chicago lineup. Warren Newson replaced slumping Bo Jackson as the designated hitter, homered in the ninth off Duane Ward, who got a save.

Stewart outpitched Fernandez for the second time in a week, all the while adding to his October legacy. The perfect picture of calm, he even seemed to laugh after giving up his first run on a bases-loaded walk to Frank Thomas in the third inning.

Stars, 'Hawks tie

DALLAS (AP) — Chicago's Brian Noonan scored the tying goal with 31 seconds left in regulation and the Blackhawks and Dallas Stars skated to a 3-3 tie Tuesday night.

Mike Modano's goal with 3:17 to play capped a third-period comeback and gave Dallas a 3-2 advantage.

Russ Courtnall had skated in alone but was stopped by Chicago goaltender Jeff Hackett. Paul Cavallini took possession of the puck to the right of the Chicago goal and passed in front to Modano, who whipped it past Hackett for his fifth goal of the season.

But the Blackhawks salvaged the tie when Noonan took the rebound of a slap shot off the boards and blasted a close-range shot past Dallas goalie Andy Moog.

Moog's save on Jeremy Roenick's shot from point-blank range with 2:30 left in overtime preserved the tie for Dallas.

Brent Gilchrist's goal with 10:29 to play gave Dallas a 2-2 tie. Mike Craig took control behind the net and passed in front to Gilchrist, who guided the puck past Hackett.

Dallas stepped up the pressure at the start of the final period, outshooting the Blackhawks 7-0 over the first 14 minutes.

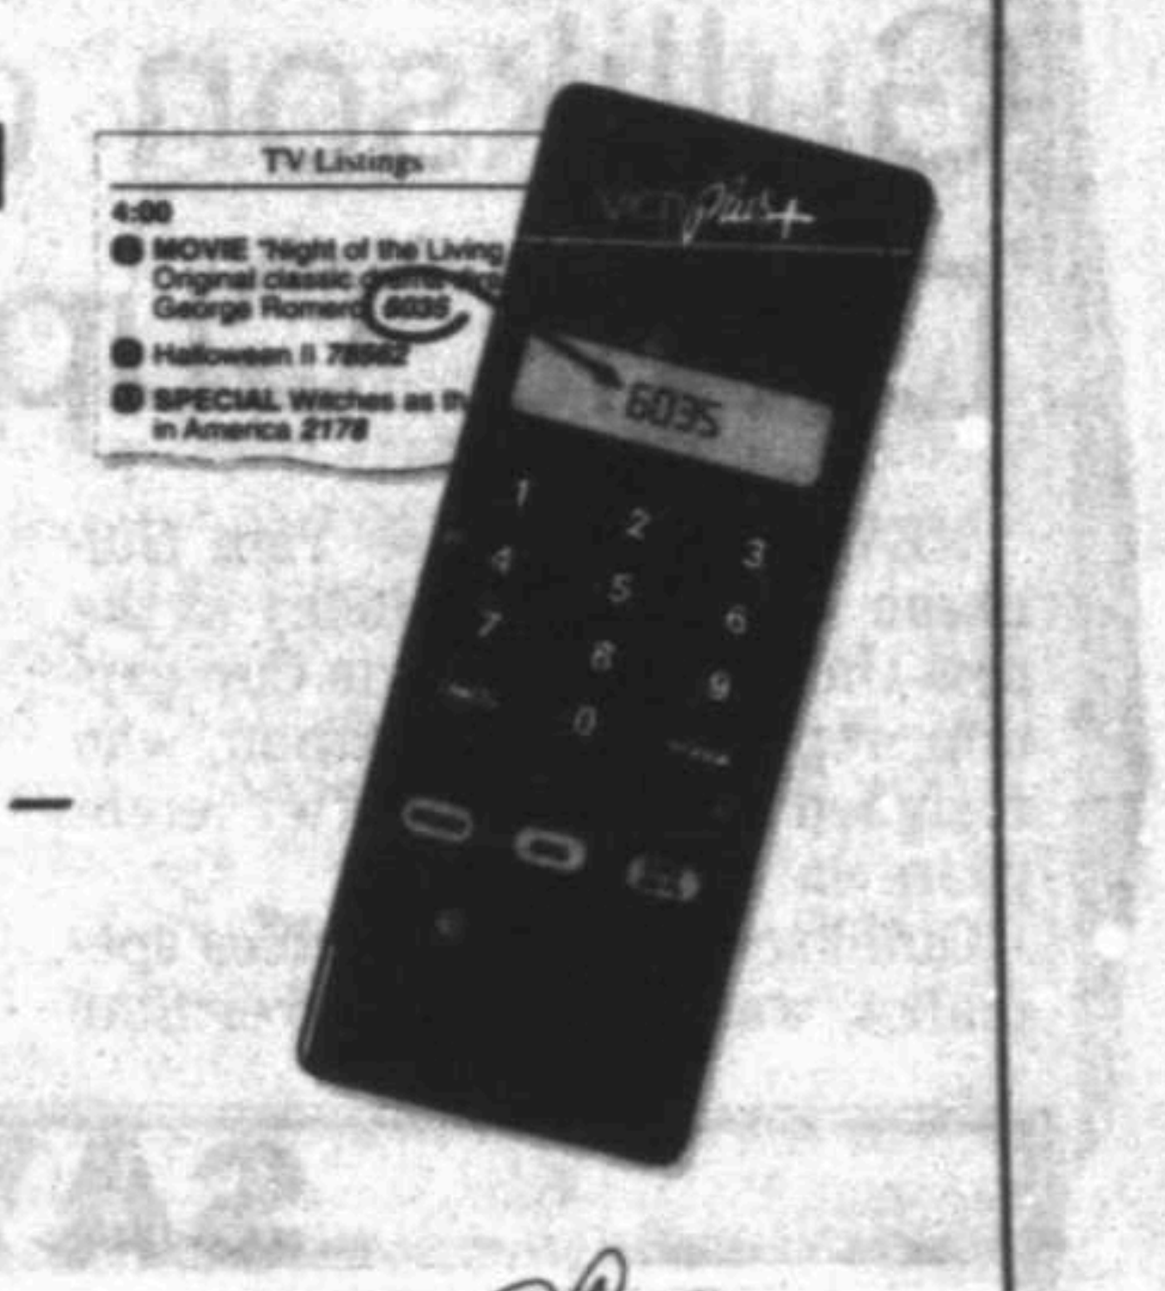

Hackett, getting his first start of the season, withstood heavy Dallas pressure.

■ NL Playoffs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Their closer teeters on the brink of disaster with every pitch. Their top defensive replacement has nearly thrown away two games. Their opponent talks with the bold cockiness of a two-time defending champion.

Yet the Philadelphia Phillies have these talented, oh-so-confident Atlanta Braves right where they want them for Wednesday's Game 6 of the National League playoffs.

At home. Down a game. Needing another miracle.

These scruffy, unshaven, beer-bellied, underdog, overachieving Phillies lead the series 3-2 and need one more win to play in the World Series for the first time since 1983. They seized the lead with yet another impossible victory, 4-3 on Lenny Dykstra's homer in the 10th inning of Game 5 Monday despite blowing a three-run lead in the ninth.

Tommy Greene (16-4), who had won his last 13 decisions at Veterans Stadium before being torched 14-3 by Atlanta's home-run machine in Game 2, will be rematched with Greg Maddux (20-10) in Game 6. The game time — either 3:07 p.m. EDT or 8:12 p.m. EDT — wasn't determined until after Game 6 of the AL playoffs Tuesday.

The Phillies' rallying cry during their 1980 World Series championship season was "Ya Gotta Believe." But who would have believed this?

"A lot of people said we didn't belong on the same field as the Braves coming into this series," manager Jim Fregosi said. "But now you're seeing how we got here."

That they're even keeping up with the Braves — who have outscored them 30-17 — is inexplicable. Reliever Mitch Williams has blown two leads and nearly a third, and third baseman Kim Batiste's ninth-inning errors in Game 1 and Game 5 almost ruined two exquisitely pitched games by Curt Schilling.

But while the Phillies have been embarrassed 23-7 in their two losses, they're winning the tight ones: 4-3 in Game 1, 2-1 in Game 4, 4-3 in Game 5. Weren't the Braves, who have lost their last seven one-run postseason games, supposed to wait to the World Series before losing the close games?

"We better win big (Wednesday) because we're sure not doing the little things in the close games," Otis Nixon said.

"You can only get in these situations so many times," Jeff Blauser said. "We're used to having our backs against the wall, but you don't want to be doing this too often. But we've done it again."

What the 104-win Braves now will learn before a pumped-to-the-max sellout crowd in the Vet is if they have one more postseason escape act left in them.

They were in this identical position in the 1991 playoffs, down 3-2 on the road, but got shutouts from Steve Avery and John Smoltz to win in Pittsburgh.

Last year, Francisco Cabrera's two-run single in the ninth finished off a three-run rally that beat the Pirates 3-2 in Game 7.

Maybe it's because they're so accustomed to doing it the hard way that the Braves haven't conceded — and, in fact, with Maddux and Tom Glavine (22-6) ready to pitch, are talking like the favorites.

"We had exactly the same situation in 1991 against Pittsburgh and we came back and won it," Steve Avery said. "There's no reason we shouldn't be confident that we can do it again. We've gotten ourselves in a little hole, but it's tough to say with Maddux going that we don't have a good chance."

Ditto Blauser.

'Why change our attitude now?," he said. "Why let negative thoughts get into our mind now? We still get to keep our uniform. No one's taken anything away from us yet."

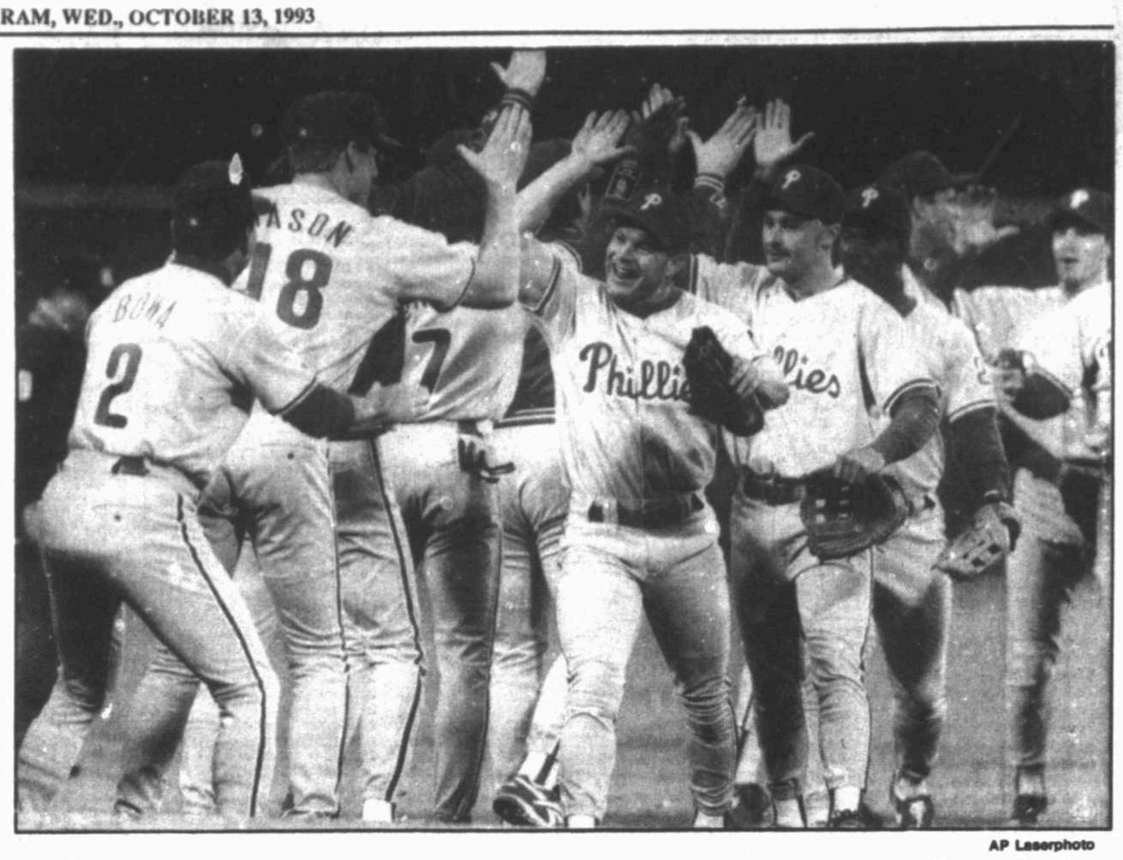

The Phillies certainly are trying. They're prospering with the us-against-the-world mentality they adopted to reflect Atlanta's status as big favorites, and they're becoming increasingly convinced they can pull this off.

"We've been perceived as underdogs all year," Pete Incaviglia said. "Everybody wants to look at the long hair and the bellies and the beer. Well, we thrive on that. We thrive on people saying we can't do this or we can't do that."

Not that they expect it to be easy. They know how one swing of Fred McGriff's bat, or Ron Gant's, or David Justice's, or Terry Pendleton's, or one more botched bullpen job, can rob them of the momentum they seized in Atlanta.

"There's nobody in this room who thinks we have anything won," Schilling said. "We're home, but we're going to face maybe the two best pitchers in the league."

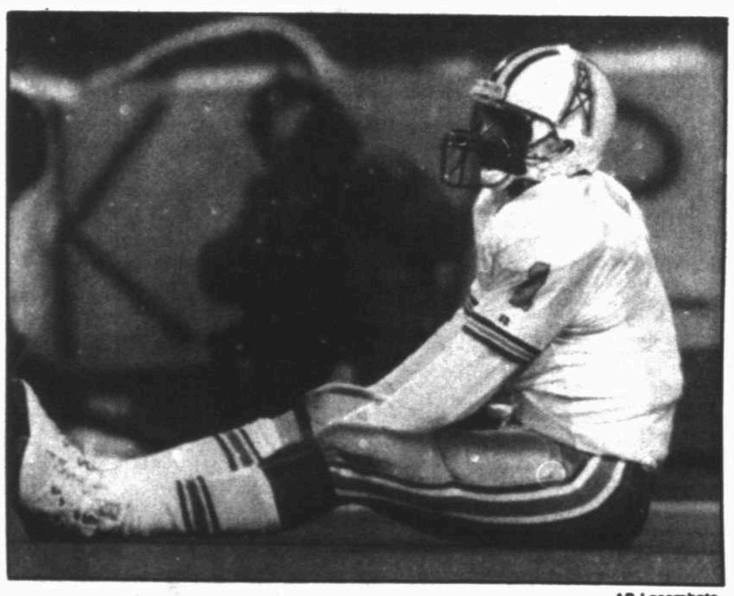

"I feel real good going into Philadelphia," Braves manager Bobby Cox said.

Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon pauses after taking a hit from the Buffalo Bills during the teams' game Monday night in Orchard Park, N.Y.

QB, coach may not survive Bill debacle

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers coach Jack Pardee hinted at benching Warren Moon Tuesday while dodging speculation that the quarterback was on the trading block after a humbling 35-7 loss to Buffalo.

Pardee, on the hot seat himself because of the Oilers' 1-4 start, said during his weekly news conference that he had not spoken with team owner Bud Adams since the Monday night debacle. Houston suffered seven turnovers and never challenged the Bills.

"If he wants me, I'm sure he'll call, but right now we've got a lot of work to do," Pardee said.

Team officials said Adams would make no statement on Tuesday.

As they have for weeks, irate fans again deluged radio talk shows with calls demanding Pardee's firing after the Buffalo game.

Columnists for both Houston newspapers also urged Adams to dump Pardee as well as the sputtering run-and-shoot offense. They further advised Adams to try to deal whatever star players he can before Tuesday's NFL trade deadline and begin anew.

Rumors on Tuesday had Moon going to several teams in need of quarterbacks.

Said Pardee, "I don't think that's going to be happening, but nothing is going on right now."

At the least, Moon is in danger of losing his starting job to Cody Carlson for Sunday's game at New England.

"It's something we'll have to look at," Pardee said. "We're looking for production and Cody did a pretty good job. One thing about Warren, he's had a great career and he wants to win as much as anyone."

Moon has thrown 11 interceptions this season, including three against the Bills Monday night, and has been benched for ineffectiveness two of the last three games. The Oilers have lost three consecutive games.

"I'm searching for answers and I'm running out of excuses," Moon said Monday night. "I'm not going to replace myself, but if I were the head coach, I'd seriously consider it."

Moon isn't the only one struggling. He has gotten little protection from an offensive line once considered among the NFL's best, and the situation got worse when guard Mike Munchak left the Buffalo game with another knee injury.

"Obviously, we're struggling and it's not all attributable to Warren," said offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride.

The Oilers are off to their worst start under Pardee. They were 2-3 in 1990, his first year as head coach and they've been 4-1 after five games in each of the last two years.

"I'm embarrassed," defensive end Sean Jones said. "I don't know what's happened. We've had so many breakdowns. I thought we'd play better, but I'm not giving up.'

Pardee's job status first came into question after Houston's infamous 41-38 overtime playoff loss to Buffalo Jan. 3. The Oilers had led 35-3 in the third quarter.

Buddy Ryan was hired as defensive coordinator on Jan. 29, putting the spotlight on Pardee again because of Ryan's ambition to be a head coach again.

Ryan's "46" defense hasn't lived up to its billing and offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride also been criticized because of problems in his run-and-shoot offense.

Indeed, all that stands between the Oilers and disintegration is a weak schedule in the coming weeks. Houston has upcoming games at New England (1-4) and at home against Cincinnati (0-5).

The Oilers were 1-1 after losing to New Orleans in the season opener and beating Kansas City the following week. They have since lost to San Diego, the Los Angeles Rams and the Bills.

Following the Rams loss two weeks ago, owner Bud Adams said he would not fire Pardee.

3-0: San Fran test Sunday

(From 1C)

Players went into helmet-throwing demonstrations because Jones wouldn't sign Smith, the NFL's leading rusher for two consecutive seasons.

After Smith returned $13.6 million richer, the Cowboys have defeated Phoenix, Green Bay and Indianapolis.

"We're playing well but we haven't faced a team the caliber of San Francisco," said Johnson. "We know they've been the best team in the NFL. They are a great team with one of the finest offenses in the league. They have Hall of Fame players."

Johnson said he won't have to say one inspirational word this week.

"There's going to be a lot of adrenalin on both sides," he said. "This is a key game for each team. The winner can say it is the best regardless of the records we have."

Both the 49ers and Cowboys are 3-2 with the San Francisco losses coming on the road at Cleveland and New Orleans. The 49ers were idle last Sunday, giving them two weeks to prepare for the Cowboys.

Once again, Johnson said the Cowboys will be faced with the chore of slowing down quarterback Steve Young.

"He can beat you with the pass and he can beat you with the run," said Johnson. "The 49ers are actively using him in running back schemes now. Sometimes you'll see the fullback lead him into the hole. He's very capable. He gives you more problems than most quarterbacks."

Johnson said the two weeks of preparation could work to the 49ers' advantage.

"They probably won't change a whole lot in what they do but it will give them a chance to zero in on what we do," Johnson said. "I'm sure we'll get their best effort."

Oddsmakers rated the Cowboys 6-point favorites in the 49ers' first visit to Texas Stadium since 1990 when they claimed a 24-6 victory.

LEE: Atop 4-5A

the third playoff spot heated up between Permian and Cooper.

A win for San Angelo, which fell to 21-4, 6-2, would have kept the Bobcats in first ahead of Lee. A win for Permian, which fell to 17-9, 5-4, would have given the Panthers a tight grip on the third playoff spot. Midland improved to 8-15, 3-5 to remain in sixth place, two games out of the contention for the third playoff spot. Cooper improved to 12-12, 5-4.

But the cards played out perfectly for Lee (10-12, 7-2), which travels to winless Abilene High Saturday afternoon. Midland High hosts Abilene Cooper while San Angelo travels to OHS.

Lee, however, had to deal with Odessa High first. The Lady Bronchos accounted for the only other blemish on the Lady Rebels' district record. San Angelo won a grudge match in the first round of district play for Lee's first district loss.

By the time the third game rolled around, the jitters had worn off and both teams were reading the other well. The result was what Lee coach Anita Corder called a "grudge match."

Odessa did what it wanted on its first three rotations — keep Lee from scoring. Meanwhile, the two biggest Lady Broncho hitters were rotating to the front row for what Odessa coach Diane Sandoval hoped would be a run of points for her team. Junior Donelle Jones and sophomore Terri Butler, both 6-foot-0, rotated to the front with their team leading 2-0.

But a strong Lee blocking scheme and floor defense, kept the big hitters from going on a big run. A kill each by Kim Richardson, setter Roseann Sullivan and Tera Mander, gave Lee three huge sideouts to move Jones and Butler off the front row while the Lady Rebels only allowed one point from that setup.

"We couldn't capitalize (when Jones and Butler were on the front row)," Sandoval said about the third game. "We were making mental mistakes and we couldn't keep the momentum going."

Corder said the Lee blocking a defensive schemes were the key to the third game win.

"We weren't stuff blocking them a whole lot but we were accomplishing what I call the third goal of blocking, which is to tip the ball or deny the court (to the Odessa hitters). Our floor defense was great."

ALCS: Jays back in show

(From 1C)

"It turned out to be a good six ballgames," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "We were real lucky this year."

Stewart, named playoff for the MVP second time, was not with the Blue Jays when they worked out Monday. Instead, he stayed behind in Toronto to help pass out food at a dinner for the homeless.

His late arrival Monday night, however, did not rattle him. He pitched 7 1-3 innings and gave up two runs on four hits. He walked four and struck out three.

Stewart extended his record for most playoff victories — teammate Juan Guzman is next with just four. He also passed Hall of Famer Catfish Hunter for the most innings pitched in the playoffs. Stewart does have two no-decisions in the playoffs — of course, his team won both of those games, too.

All evening, Stewart stayed hot even while the temperatures dropped into the low 40s. Blowing on his hand to keep warm, he blew down a revamped Chicago lineup. Warren Newson replaced slumping Bo Jackson as the designated hitter, homered in the ninth off Duane Ward, who got a save.

Stewart outpitched Fernandez for the second time in a week, all the while adding to his October legacy. The perfect picture of calm, he even seemed to laugh after giving up his first run on a bases-loaded walk to Frank Thomas in the third inning.

Stars, 'Hawks tie

DALLAS (AP) — Chicago's Brian Noonan scored the tying goal with 31 seconds left in regulation and the Blackhawks and Dallas Stars skated to a 3-3 tie Tuesday night.

Mike Modano's goal with 3:17 to play capped a third-period comeback and gave Dallas a 3-2 advantage.

Russ Courtnall had skated in alone but was stopped by Chicago goaltender Jeff Hackett. Paul Cavallini took possession of the puck to the right of the Chicago goal and passed in front to Modano, who whipped it past Hackett for his fifth goal of the season.

But the Blackhawks salvaged the tie when Noonan took the rebound of a slap shot off the boards and blasted a close-range shot past Dallas goalie Andy Moog.

Moog's save on Jeremy Roenick's shot from point-blank range with 2:30 left in overtime preserved the tie for Dallas.

Brent Gilchrist's goal with 10:29 to play gave Dallas a 2-2 tie. Mike Craig took control behind the net and passed in front to Gilchrist, who guided the puck past Hackett.

Dallas stepped up the pressure at the start of the final period, outshooting the Blackhawks 7-0 over the first 14 minutes.

Hackett, getting his first start of the season, withstood heavy Dallas pressure.

McCullough, a sophomore, shot a four-under 32 on the back nine to seal medalist honors. The sophomore from Victoria, British Columbia, birdied 11, 13, 15 and 16 on the back nine enroute to a 70 and a three-round total of 212.

McCullough came off the front side with a bogey on the 445-yard, par-4 No. 9 but regained his composure with a birdie on No. 11, a 530-yard, par-5.

"On No. 11 I drove the ball into the lip of a bunker on the fairway, but I was able to hit it out and then go up-and-down for birdie," said McCullough.

On No. 13, the start of "Amen Corner" at Mission Dorado, McCullough birdied a par-3, made par on No. 14, ranked the toughest hole on the 1992 professional Hogan Tour, and then birdied Nos. 15 and 16.

Winds that normally blow through the Mission course picked up Tuesday afternoon which played to Midland College's advantage.

"The wind made things trickier, but we are use to playing under those type of conditions," said Redford. "I think it gave us an advantage because we are familiar with the course."

Redford, a sophomore from Perth, Scotland in his final semester for the Chaps finished in fourth place in the medalist race with a 216 after a final day 74.

Teammates Chad Campbell of Andrews, Shawn Savage of Plainview and Jason Garduno of Monahans finished with 74s on Tuesday. Campbell and Savage finished in the top 10 in the medalist race.

The Midland College gold team finished in 13th place with a 915. Luke Mongrain, a sophomore from Yorkton, Saskatchewan, Canada, shot Tuesday's low round of 69. He finished with a 225 total.

The Chaps will travel to Austin to participate in the University of Texas Invitational, Oct. 18-19, and then to the Bossier Parish Community College Invitational at Bossier City, La. Oct. 21-22. Midland College then hosts the Midland College Invitational Oct. 26 at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Graf obsession led to stabbing

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — To Guenter Parche, an unemployed lathe operator, Steffi Graf was a dream girl with eyes like diamonds and hair like silk.

Seles

Her defeats drove him to despair, Parche testified today. He is accused of plunge a kitchen knife into the back of Monica Seles, Graf's arch-rival.

Parche described as he went on trial in the stabbing how his fantasy world collapsed every time Graf lost on the tennis court. This is a man who papered his room with posters of Graf.

The chubby, balding 39-year-old defendant from eastern Germany told the court he never intended to kill Seles, only to disable her briefly so Graf could regain the No. 1 ranking. In that, he succeeded.

"I didn't want to kill her. I just wanted to hurt her slightly so that Monica wouldn't be able to play for a couple of weeks," Parche testified in a quiet voice.

"I didn't want to hurt the head or the neck under any circumstances," Parche said of the April 30 attack, which came during a changeover at a Hamburg tournament in which Graf was also competing.

"I couldn't reach the arm. Then came the shoulder. I aimed at the shoulder and struck," he said. Parche has written a letter to Seles asking for her forgiveness, his lawyer disclosed at the trial.

Seles suffered a cut half-inch deep in her back and has not played since. She has fallen to No. 4 in the rankings and is expected to resume her tournament career in January.

The attack has prompted tournament officials to increase security, and it is now common for bodyguards to shadow players during changeovers.

Parche, who is charged with causing grievious bodily harm and could face five years in prison, said he thought about the attack for several weeks before coming to Hamburg.

In 1987, Parche bought an expensive video recorder from a colleague to be able to watch Graf's matches over and over.

Asked by Judge Elke Bosse to describe how he felt when Graf lost a match, Parche recalled how, when she lost at the 1990 German Open in Berlin "it was as if an earthquake destroyed everything around me. I cried a lot, at the time I didn't want to live any longer."

In 1991, when Seles took over as No. 1 from Graf, Parche quit his job and wondered through western Germany for a while. He then returned home but did not take up a job.

His adulation of Graf grew with years.

"I wrote to her four or five times a year, sometimes I sent her money," Parche testified.

"Once I sent her 300 marks ($185) to buy a necklace to wear at all tournaments," said Parche, who wore jeans and a blue sweatshirt in the small courtroom, which was crowded with dozens of reporters and spectators.

Several times, when the judge referred to Graf by her common name Steffi, Parche intervened to say she should be called by her formal name Stefanie.

He described Graf as "dream creation, whose eyes radiate like diamonds, whose hair shines like silk."

Parche showed remorse and said he would never attack Seles again.

In a letter he wrote to Seles read in court by his lawyer, Otmar Kury, Parche said: "I'm very, very sorry for what I did to you. I know that I cannot make it undone or make it up. I ask for forgiveness."

Seles is a co-plaintiff in the trial, which is to continue Wednesday, but will not appear in court.

Edberg, Becker advance in Seiko Super

TOKYO (AP) — Stefan Edberg and Boris Becker won second-round matches in the Seiko Super tournament on Tuesday, Edberg surviving an unexpectedly tough battle from American Chuck Adams.

The top-seeded Edberg, plagued by 10 double faults, battled for more than two hours to edge Adams 7-6 (11-9), 7-6 (8-6) on the artificial court at Tokyo Metropolitan Gymnasium.

Second-seeded Becker coasted past Australian qualifier Neil Borwick 6-2, 6-2 in less than 70 minutes.

Patrick McEnroe needed just 54 minutes to win his first-round match, beating Japanese wildcard entry Satoshi Iwabuchi 6-0, 6-4.

Jacco Eltingh of the Netherlands fired 28 service aces in beating American Doug Flach 6-7 (4-7), 7-6 (10-8), 7-5 in 2 hours, 35 minutes.

Porsche GP

FILDERSTADT, Germany — Zena Garrison-Jackson used an aggressive net attack to overpower fellow American Kimberly Po 6-3, 6-4 in the opening round of the Porsche Grand Prix.

In a struggle that lasted two hours, 47 minutes, Georgia's Leila Meskhi upset seventh-seeded Lori McNeil 7-6 (2-7), 6-4, 7-6 (7-3).

In other action, eighth-seeded Julie Halard of France outlasted American Nicole Arendt.

Gullikson chosen as Davis Cup captain

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Gullikson was introduced today as the new United States' Davis Cup captain, replacing Tom Gorman, who resigned last month after eight years on the job.

Gullikson, a retired doubles specialist, was was chosen over Stan Smith and Brad Gilbert. John McEnroe, another candidate, withdrew from consideration earlier this month.

Gorman, captain since 1986, left the team after the U.S. defeated the Bahamas in Charlotte, N.C., last month.

Judge: Wal-Mart prices predatory

■ Top retailer violated Arkansas law by selling some drugs, health and beauty aids below cost, ruling says.

Associated Press

CONWAY, Ark. — Wal-Mart Stores Inc. illegally tried to force competitors out of business with the same policy that made it the nation's largest retailer — low prices — a judge ruled Tuesday.

Judge David Reynolds said Wal-Mart violated state law by selling some drugs and health and beauty aids below cost at its store in Conway. He ordered an end to the practice and awarded the plaintiffs, three independent Arkansas pharmacies, nearly $300,000 in damages.

The decision was the first predatory pricing ruling against Wal-Mart, which critics have blamed for the demise of many long-established merchants in small towns and cities nationwide. But it was unclear whether the decision, which applied only to Arkansas, might lead to similar rulings elsewhere.

Wal-Mart said it would appeal to the Arkansas Supreme Court. Robert K. Rhoads, Wal-Mart's general counsel, warned of higher prices at stores throughout Arkansas.

Wal-Mart officials said during a two-day trial in August that some items were priced below cost to draw customers, not drive local druggists out of business.

Reynolds based his ruling in part on Wal-Mart's in-store displays comparing its prices to those of local retailers. The judge also noted Wal-Mart had different prices in different markets, and he pointed out the company's advertised policy of meeting or beating the competition without regard to cost.

The lead plaintiff claimed victory for small, independent retailers nationwide.

"It's important to beat Wal-Mart. They were literally driving the small people out of business," said druggist Dwayne Goode, who owns American Drugs in Conway.

Goode said he got fed up with trying to compete with Wal-Mart's pricing and sued two years ago. "There's no way anyone can keep their prices down with Wal-Mart and survive," he said.

Investors apparently shrugged off the decision and the possibility that it might lead to more lawsuits against Wal-Mart by smaller storeowners. Wal-Mart stock closed at $25.75 a share on the New York Stock Exchange, down 75 cents.

Some retail analysts said the chances of the smaller stores prevailing would be small if the case is appealed outside state courts.

Terence McEvoy of the brokerage firm Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in New York predicted the U.S. Supreme Court would reverse the decision if the case comes before the court.

Prices slip

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices settled slightly lower Tuesday in light trading that saw prices vary little during the day. Trading was quiet throughout the session with little news to affect prices.

After trading ended Tuesday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the American Petroleum Institute reported weekly inventory figures that were largely within published forecasts.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $18.71 per barrel, down 6 cents, at the Nymex Tuesday afternoon. During the session, prices wavered only 16 cents per barrel.

Early in the session, prices rose slightly on news that Elf Acquitaine had to cancel its second million-barrel cargo that was due to load in Nigeria a week from Saturday. Prices quickly dropped back, however.

Local villagers, protesting poverty in the area of an Elf oil field in Nigeria, were blocking the road leading to the field. The field is not expected to resume full production until the end of October at the earliest.

The API, an industry-funded group, reported higher supplies of crude oil, gasoline and distillates, which include heating oil. Refineries reduced operations during the week to 92.9 percent of capacity from 93.2 percent.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mostly lower on world currency markets Tuesday in uneventful dealings.

Gold prices were mixed overseas then surged in domestic trading. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery jumped $7.60 a troy ounce to settle at $367.80.

In New York the dollar settled at 106.00 yen, down from 106.19.

In New York it cost $1.5330 to buy one British pound, less expensive than Monday's $1.5335.

Stocks steady

NEW YORK — The stock market ended mixed Tuesday, with investors encouraged by some strong corporate earnings reports but still concerned about the economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 0.28 point to 3,593.13.

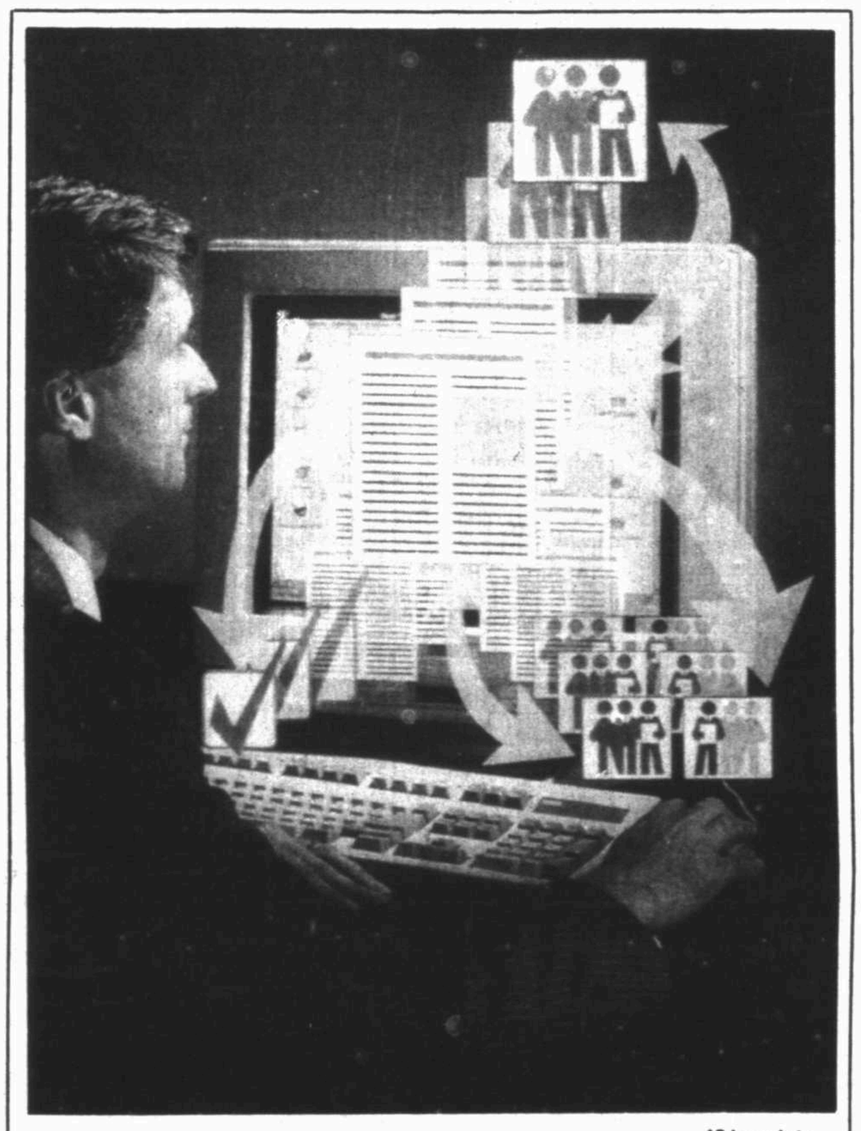

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 8 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 263.93 million shares, up from 182.71 million in the previous session.

Among other major market indicators, the Standard & Poors index of 500 stocks rose 0.24 to 461.12, while the NYSE's composite index rose 0.37 to 256.67. The Nasdaq composite index rose 4.81 to 772.46, eclipsing its previous record of 767.65 set on Monday.

Small-business owners fret over Clinton health reform

By Elizabeth Schwinn
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Small-business owners told Congress Tuesday that while they're willing to help corral skyrocketing health care costs, they're worried about their tab under President Clinton's proposed health care overhaul.

Clinton's blueprint, which seeks to guarantee access to health care for all Americans, would mandate most businesses to pay 80 percent of the insurance premiums for their employees, or 7.9 percent of their annual payrolls, whichever is less. Companies would also have to pay at least part of the premiums for their part-time employees.

None of four small-business owners who testified before a joint House committee hearing pay as much as 80 percent of their employees' premiums — and they're anxious about what Clinton's proposal might mean for them.

Elizabeth Hebson, whose family runs a chain of six restaurants in the Chicago area, said forcing employers to pay workers' premiums could mean layoffs.

Hebson isn't happy about the current system. Her company paid an extra $300,000 for coverage last year because of an unusual number of claims.

"We took a loss for that year," she said. "And we hoped it would be the last."

But covering all 300 restaurant employees would cost $260,000 every year. Only 58 "core" employees receive full medical benefits, Hebson told lawmakers. Covering all the employees, she warned, "inevitably means cutting jobs."

Rep. Henry Waxman, a California Democrat who chairs the House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, shot back, "If employers don't pay, who should?"

"Employees," replied Hebson, who said her restaurant workers earning the minimum wage could afford health care "if the system were fixed."

Fred Marks, chairman of the Vermont Teddy Bear Co. in Shelburne, said he pays 50 to 60 percent of health premiums for his 200 full-time workers. But 84 of those workers say they can't afford to subscribe to the company plan, Marks said.

"Management has been frustrated at its inability to provide more comprehensive coverage or to absorb more of the cost to provide wider access to the plan," Marks said.

But the company's insurance bills have shot up as it tries to provide all the benefits employees want and provide coverage to people with pre-existing conditions.

Panel's Gonzalez, Greenspan face off on central bank's future

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The champions of two very different American schools of thought will do battle this week when Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, torchbearer of Texas populism, enters the ring against Alan Greenspan, guardian of central bank independence.

After months of planning, Gonzalez, the truculent 77-year-old chairman of the House Banking Committee, has begun his most vigorous offensive ever to inject more democracy and accountability into the Federal Reserve, which has been insulated from political pressures for six decades.

He has planned a series of hearings to make the central bankers feel maximum heat: Not only has he called Greenspan, the Fed chairman, to testify this Wednesday, but he has called all 12 members of the Fed's main policy-making committee to a rare mass hearing on Oct. 19.

The bill he is pushing aims to remove what he sees as two blots on American democracy: the way that private bankers and business executives, rather than the president, appoint several main Fed policy makers, and the way the central bank makes its decisions in secrecy.

Gonzalez talks of the central bank as an elite, secretive club often unresponsive to the public's demand for faster growth.

"I am very determined about reforming the Fed," Gonzalez said in an interview. "This is no subterfuge. If the Fed became more accountable to the public on its own, it would be cause for celebration. But Chairman Greenspan has stoutly resisted even the least suggestion of change."

Although Gonzalez has flooded the news media with press releases over the last year lambasting the Fed for doing too little to spur growth, he asserts that his new campaign is not designed to assert political (read Democratic) control over the central bank's conservative policy makers.

All he says he wants is to remove some undemocratic warts from the Fed's structure.

But Greenspan isn't eager to buy what Gonzalez is selling. Fed officials say a central bank works best when it is most independent, and many view Gonzalez's plotting as a transparent effort to bring the Fed to heel.

Brokerages report sharp 3rd-quarter gains

NEW YORK (NYT) — Interest rates are low, stocks prices are high, individuals have more money to invest and corporations are issuing record amounts of new securities.

It all adds up to higher earnings for Merrill Lynch & Co., which said Tuesday that it earned a record $360 million in the third quarter, up 57 percent from the comparable period a year earlier.

Baring disaster in the last few months of the year, 1993 appears likely to be the third consecutive year of record profits for Merrill and most other securities firms. Others announcing sharp profit gains Tuesday included Paine Webber Group, and Bear Stearns Cos.

The higher-than-expected profits made securities firms one of the strongest group of stocks in Tuesday's trading. Merrill Lynch rose $2.875 a share, to $101.625; Paine Webber was up $1.625 at $34.375, and Bear Stearns gained 62.5 cents, to $24.75.

Despite the sharp gains recently, share prices of securities firms remain much lower relative to their earnings than other large companies.

"Their earnings are still quite cyclical," Guy Moscowitz, an analyst at Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., said. When interest rates turn up, brokers' profits should decline, he said, adding that he expected profits next year to be "modestly lower" than current levels.

But until that day comes, securities firms have been making the most of the current favorable environment by keeping a tight rein on expenses. "They are better-run companies than they used to be," said James Hanbury, an analyst at Wertheim Schroder.

John Sage, who developed a system he calls Budget Power, poses in San Angelo recently with the workbook that puts financial jargon into layman's terms.

Workbook simplifies financial planning

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press writer

SAN ANGELO — A financial planner is offering a solution to those who need help managing their money but whose eyes glaze at the sight of a standard ledger book.

"Personal budgeting is not a very friendly task. It's daunting to many people," acknowledged financial planner John Sage, who developed a system he calls BudgetPower.

"Many budget books fail because there's no mechanism," Sage said. "It's an exercise in posting records, but not knowing what's going on in the meanwhile. And then you get frustrated and quit."

Sage's $12.95 workbook — available in English and Spanish — puts financial jargon into layman's terms. Step by step the kit helps a user figure out his worth, develop a budget and track that plan with worksheets and envelopes.

Mexican border utility deal fizzles

MEXICO CITY (NYT) — An American utility company's plans to invest in and operate a huge $1.8 billion power plant in Mexico have collapsed after complaints that the plant might pollute a national park in Texas and amid differences with the Mexican government over the terms of the deal.

Mexican energy officials and SCEcorp, the big utility built around Southern California Edison, which had planned to buy 49 percent of the coal-fired generating plant, ended their negotiations Monday. The talks broke down nearly a year after they had initially agreed on terms for the plant's sale.

And while neither side would say in public what had gone wrong, the failure of the deal represented a serious setback for an ambitious Mexican government program to encourage private investment in the generating of badly needed electrical power.

With the 1,400-megawatt plant border plant as their vaunted example, Mexican energy officials had promised to attract almost $20 billion in private investment — much of it from foreign companies — to build about 40 new power plants around the country over the next dozen years.

"We can't afford to have stop-and-go electrical service," an under secretary of energy, Alfredo Elias Ayub, recently said to reporters. "In order to convert Mexico into a more modern country, we need a more effective electrical system."

Concerns had been raised by legislators and environmental officials in the United States that emissions from the plant, which is being completed 18 miles south of the Texas border, could damage air quality as far away as Big Bend National Park, 130 miles to the northwest in Texas.

Those fears dragged the plant into debate over the North American Free Trade Agreement because this seemed to be a textbook case of how American investment in Mexico might have adverse environmental consequences across the border. Under the pact and an environmental side accord, the United States has little regulatory power in such a case.

In trying to satisfy environmentalists and to shore up support for the trade accord, some American officials suggested expensive new emissions-control equipment that would soften the plant's impact across the border.

Executives of Mission Energy, the SCE subsidiary that was to buy the plant with a Mexican partner, responded that such equipment could raise its cost beyond what they could recoup under the terms of their agreement to sell power to Mexico's Federal Electricity Commission.

Still, when the sale fell through, Mexican and American officials were still negotiating with Mission Energy in an effort to resolve the environmental problems.

Tests were continuing to determine what sort of pollution-abatement approach might be needed, people involved in the talks said, and several less expensive options had been raised.

"This was a surprise to us," said an official of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, who talked about the sale's collapse on the condition that he not be identified.

NASD cuts Future Communications

DALLAS (AP) — The National Association of Securities Dealers is taking Future Communications Inc. from its list of publicly traded stocks on Thursday.

The NASD said the company had failed to provide complete and truthful information to investors.

The action, known as delisting, means investors won't be able to get publicly quoted share prices for the small Dallas-based television-programming concern.

The move comes one week after the Securities and Exchange Commission sued Future and its chairman, Sergio Bosco, accusing them of fraudulently boosting the company's share price.

A lawyer for Future, Richard M. Hewitt, said the company is studying an appeal of the NASD action, which must be requested within 15 days. Future officials have blamed the company's regulatory troubles on short sellers, whom they accuse of conspiring to damage the company for their personal gain. Short sellers make money when a company's stock price falls.

The NASD action resolves a 6-week review of the stock. The association, which oversees listings on the over-the-counter markets, halted trading Aug. 31 after learning through news reports that significant court actions against Future hadn't been disclosed to investors.

2 Paramount suiters pursue other interests

(NYT) — As much as the battle for Paramount Communications is a full-time spectator sport for many media addicts, some of the participants still have time to pursue other interests.

BellSouth Corp., a telephone company that has been considering making an investment in QVC Network Inc. that would bolster the home shopping company's bid for Paramount, agreed Tuesday to invest $250 million in a Las Vegas cable system with 185,000 subscribers, owned by Prime Cable.

This would mark the first time that BellSouth has invested in cable systems in the United States and reflects the growing appetite of telephone companies to lock up interests in the cable arena.

Separately, Paramount's other suitor, Sumner Redstone, the chairman of Viacom Inc., sought permission Tuesday to sharply increase his holdings in WMS Industries, a video game and pinball machine manufacturer.

Redstone and his privately held National Amusements already owns 24.9 percent of WMS and must get government clearance to boost those holdings to over 50 percent.

The filing is not believed to be directly related to Viacom's bid for Paramount Communications, although several industry experts said they expected Redstone to ultimately fold the video game stake into Viacom, a diversified media company that has extensive holdings in cable programming.

At least one analyst told Bloomberg Business News that there might also be some future opportunity to turn Paramount movies into video games, use them as the basis for an interactive video game network similar to what Time Warner Inc., Tele-Communications Inc., and Sega of America Inc. did earlier this year.

Redstone has been buying WMS's stock since the early 1980s at prices as low as $4 and $5 a share. Tuesday, it closed at $31, up $2.625.

The BellSouth deal is a tricky one. Prime Cable, which is based in Austin, Texas, and is a privately held company, owns and manages a total of about 500,000 subscribers.

Besides an interest in its Las Vegas operations, the investment would also give BellSouth a stake in Prime's cable management.

UNITED WAY AND RAPE CRISIS PROGRAMS... TURNING VICTIMS INTO SURVIVORS.

Genon French, volunteer advocate for rape crisis programs.

The Problem? Last year, hundreds of West Texans, men and women, children and adults, were victims of sexual assault. The recovery process, turning victims into survivors, requires special services in a variety of fields.

The Solution? Twenty-four hour hotlines, well-trained volunteers, education and prevention programs can make a difference. Just ask Genon French, a survivor of sexual assault, and now a volunteer advocate for rape crisis programs.

Through the United Way, your contributions to local rape crisis programs will bring support and recovery programs, education, and prevention strategies to thousands of West Texans this year.

WEDNESDAY

LIFE WATCH

Snacks vs. meals

"Don't eat between meals" has long been an edict of good nutrition. In fact, a recent study asserted that a long life was linked to three square meals a day and no snacking.

But it's probably not true, according to mounting evidence. In fact, better health may come from eating six or nine small meals instead of two or three large meals. Grazing, as our early ancestors did, keeps blood sugar and insulin levels more stable and lowers cholesterol, recent research shows.

Indeed, the notion of no snacking is "dead wrong," says Aaron Vinik, Ph.D., director of the Diabetes Institutes at Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk. He says multiple meals, such as three small meals and three snacks a day, are far healthier.

Recent research confirms that insulin levels shoot up much higher in non-insulin-dependent diabetics when they eat two large meals compared with six small meals during eight hours. Their insulin also has a dangerous yo-yo effect after two large meals.

Everybody, not only diabetics, should strive for stable, low insulin levels, say experts. High insulin can harm arteries, promoting heart disease, and may even encourage cancer growth.

Strokes and booze

Heavy drinking could rapidly make you a stroke victim. Even an occasional bout of heavy drinking may be followed by a stroke of the worst kind within 24 hours, according to recent research from Finland's Helsinki University Hospital.

The study of about 600 patients found that men consuming more than 120 grams of alcohol (about six mixed drinks or nine 12-ounce beers) in the preceding 24 hours were four and a half times more apt to suffer a "bleeding" stroke than nondrinkers.

Women who had imbibed more than 40 grams of alcohol (about two mixed drinks or four glasses of wine) were six and a half times more vulnerable to such a stroke as nondrinkers.

The type stroke linked to overloads of alcohol is a subarachnoid hemorrhage in which a weakened ballooning blood vessel ruptures and spills blood on the brain's surface. Such strokes are far more apt to cause permanent disability or death than clot-caused strokes, says the American Heart Association, although they account for only 7 percent of all strokes.

The researchers blame the strokes on alcohol-induced transient increases in blood pressure, and warn that they can result from both occasional and regular heavy drinking.

Nutty explanation

Nuts help fight heart disease, according to recent research. But why? Maybe it's the type of fat or fiber in nuts. But another reason could be nuts' high concentration of the mineral magnesium, suggests Ronald Elin, M.D., of the National Institutes of Health.

About 75 percent of Americans get less than the recommended dietary allowance of about 300 mg magnesium, he says. Yet, low magnesium has been linked in much research to heart disease. One study, for example, found that high-risk men who followed a magnesium-rich diet for 10 years had only half as many cardiovascular incidents as men eating one-third as much magnesium. Further, sudden cardiac deaths were one and a half times more common in the low-magnesium eaters.

Unquestionably, nuts are one of the richest sources of magnesium. Almonds and hazelnuts are highest, with about 300 mg - the daily allowance - in three and a half ounces. Cashews, pine nuts, pecans, walnuts and peanuts are magnesium-loaded to a lesser extent.

Women's cholesterol

Research show hormone replacement therapy in postmenopausal women lowers blood cholesterol, reports the October 1993 Reader's Digest.

Oral estrogen lowers LDL (the "bad" cholesterol) by about 15 percent and raises HDL (the "good" cholesterol) by about the same amount. Studies of postmenopausal women without heart disease have found that oral estrogen replacement cuts the risk of developing it in half. In postmenopausal women with heart disease, the apparent benefit of oral estrogen is even greater.

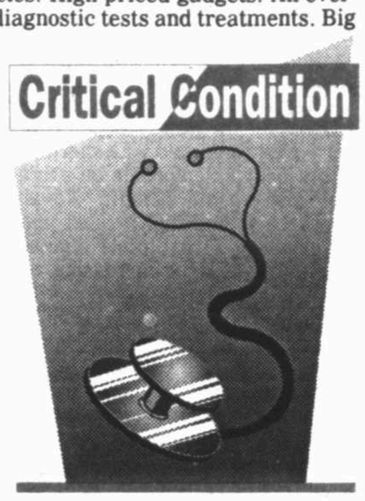

Changes ahead for health care workers

EDITOR'S NOTE — The throbbing employment machine of American health care, including hospitals, drug companies and makers of medical equipment, is slowing in anticipation of a reform-mandated transformation. In the first six months of 1993, well before President Clinton's reform plan started leaking out, health care companies laid off more than 5,600 workers. This story about apprehension and opportunity is part of the AP project "Critical Condition: U.S. Health Care in Crisis," which looks at factors driving reform or affected by it.

By Mariann Caprino

NEW YORK (AP) — Each year, health care in America creates many legacies. High-priced gadgets. An ever-expanding arsenal of diagnostic tests and treatments. Big bills.

But perhaps the most overlooked by-product of the $900 billion system is jobs.

U.S. Health Care in Crisis

For two decades, hospitals, drug companies, laboratories and makers of medical equipment have functioned as an enormous job-generating machine.

Last year, health care created on average 29,000 new jobs each month, putting its growth rate about 3 percentage points ahead of the rest of the nonfarm economy.

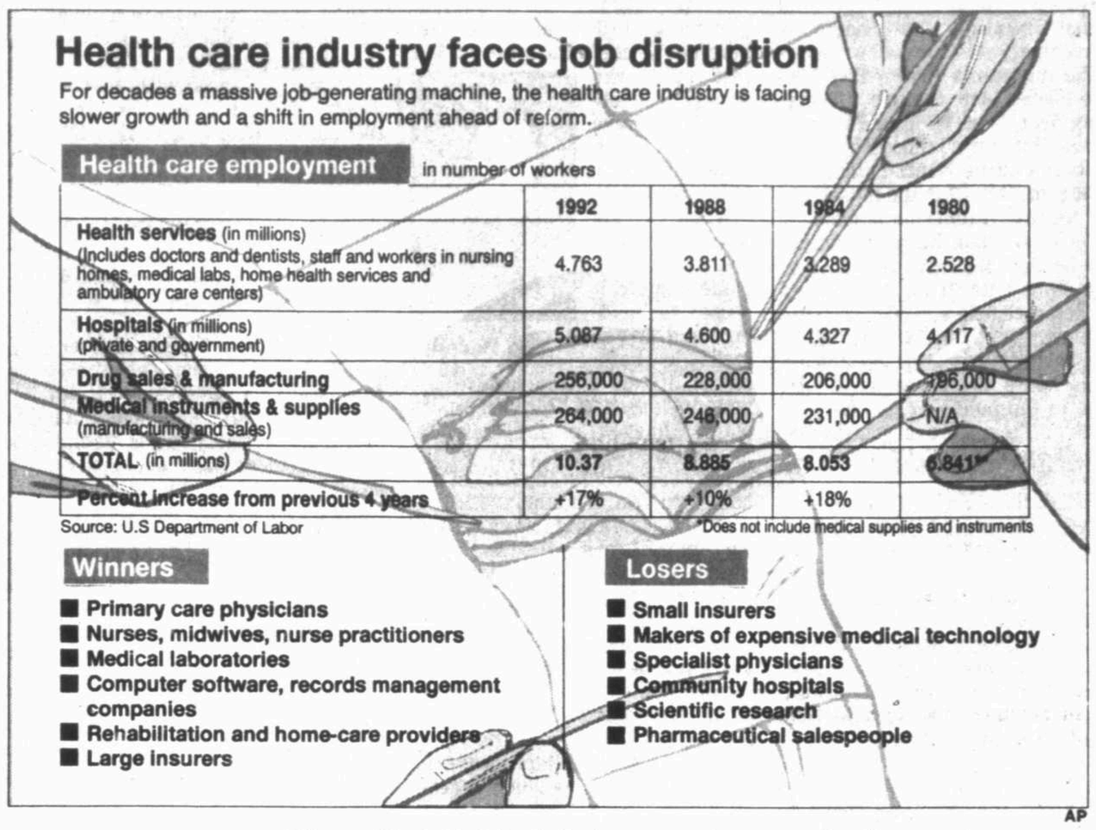

The number of health care service workers, from surgeons to lab technicians to hospital security guards, surged 88 percent over the last decade. Today, health care employs more than 10 million people — almost one in every 10 working Americans.

But a vast structural shift in health care employment is taking hold, accelerated by the Clinton administration's reform plan, and many analysts wonder whether the job machine is about to downshift.

Layoffs are cropping up, and growth — particularly at hospitals — is beginning to slow as the government focuses on reining in medical costs.

From January through June, health care companies announced more than 5,600 layoffs, according to the Chicago-based outplacement firm Challenger, Gray & Christmas Inc.

That trails other businesses — retailers slashed 60,000 jobs and transportation companies cut 11,500 positions in the same period — and even expanding industries experience alternating periods of layoffs and hirings as as companies fine-tune operations. Nevertheless, the health care layoffs may prove a worrisome harbinger of things to come.

"The reality is that the industry can no longer re-absorb a growing percentage of the employees being laid off during the industry's transformation," said Joseph Bucolo, senior vice president with the consulting firm Lee Hecht Harrison in Chicago.

The firm's recent survey of more than 500 unemployed health care professionals found 42 percent ended up with jobs outside the industry.

But what's happening in health care also goes beyond normal turnover — and doesn't show up in government statistics. Companies are eliminating positions that haven't been filled, for instance, and job duties are being expanded.

"This is just the beginning of anticipated reform," said Labor Department economist Laura Freeman. "At first, it will look like a slowing of the growth rate ... but eventually, the layoffs can become significant."

As more money is saved on health care, job losses likely will be greater. And if normal growth within this particular industry halts, it could cause the rest of the economy to stagnate.

Indeed, "firing people in health care and then having them do nothing or something of low value isn't really good for the economy. In fact, it could be

ADA sponsors Consumer Nutrition Hot Line

CHICAGO — Snacking can help a healthful diet. The American Dietetic Association (ADA) estimates that 75 percent of men and women snack at least once a day. That's why the Consumer Nutrition Hot Line (1-800-366-1655) of ADA's National Center for Nutrition and Dietetics (NCND) will feature a pre-recorded message "Healthy Snacking Ideas" during October.

"There's an unfortunate misconception that snacking is always harmful to your diet," according to Nancy E. Schwartz, PhD., RD (registered dietitian), NCND director. "By choosing snacks wisely, you can take sizable steps to meeting your nutritional needs while getting an energy boost to fuel your body between meals."

Many people can benefit from eating snacks. Preschoolers get nearly one third of their energy from snacks, while those with increased energy demands, such as athletes, active teenagers and pregnant women, often supplement regularly scheduled meals with energy-boosting snacks, according to Schwartz.

"Since most of us snack, it is important that we make wise snack food choices," according to Schwartz. "Ideally those snacks that offer the most nutrition bite-for-bite, yet are low in fat, are generally the best choice."

To help consumers dispel many snacking myths, a brochure, "Snack Attacks Are Okay," is available through the hotline. In addition, registered dietitians (RDs) are available to answer consumer questions weekdays from 10 a.m.— 5 p.m. Through the hotline, callers also can get referrals to local RDs for group or individual counseling. A recorded nutrition message, "Healthy Snacking Ideas" will air throughout October fro 8 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday through Friday. "Healthy Snacking Ideas" is supported by a grant from Pet Incorporated.

Stir-Fried Sirlon & Spinach with Noodles uses one simple marinade to flavor both the beef strips and the vegetable-pasta combination. This one-dish meal takes 30 minutes to prepare and cook.

'Skinny beef' makes debut

CHICAGO (AP) — Too busy to cook? Over 75 of the recipes in "Skinny Beef," a new cookbook by three home economists of the Meat Board Test Kitchens, can be prepared and served in 30 minutes or less.

Most of the recipes — more than 100 in all — are just right for everyday family meals, but easy entertaining ideas are featured as well (Surrey Books, $12.95).

Among the recipes: Stir-Fried Sirloin and Spinach with Noodles, Quick Fajitas, Curried Beef and Vegetable Pilaf, Steak Salad Antipasto and Fruited Onion Marmalade. Nutrition information is provided for each recipe.

The cookbook also includes tips for buying, storing and cooking beef, as well as successful measuring techniques, food equivalents and ingredient substitutions. Color photographs illustrate many of the recipes and line art drawings depict many of the basic preparation techniques.

"Skinny Beef" was written by Marlys Bielunski, Susan Lamb Parenti and Irene Yeh, home economists at the test kitchens of the Chicago-based National Live Stock and Meat Board.

The following recipe for stir-fried sirloin and noodles can be prepared and served in 30 minutes. The marinade of hoisin sauce, sesame oil and soy sauce impart characteristic Oriental flavors to the strips of sirloin, and doubles as a sauce for the vegetables and pasta. Use pre-washed packaged spinach found in the produce section of your supermarket.

STIR-FRIED SIRLOIN & SPINACH WITH NOODLES

1-pound boneless beef top sirloin steak, cut 1-inch thick
4 ounces uncooked vermicelli or thin spaghetti
10-ounce package fresh spinach leaves, rinsed and stems removed, thinly sliced
1 cup fresh bean sprouts
¼ cup sliced green onions
For the marinade:
¼ cup hoisin sauce
2 tablespoons reduced-sodium soy sauce
1 tablespoon water
2 teaspoons dark sesame oil
2 cloves garlic, crushed
⅛ to ¼ teaspoon crushed red pepper

Clear liquids OK before surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors are now saying it's OK for people facing surgery to have a few sips of water — or even a little black coffee — before they go to the hospital.

Physicians attending the American Society of Anesthesiologists annual meeting here said Monday that enough studies have been done to warrant easing the absolute restriction against clear liquids before surgery.

Medical authorities say solid food particles or stomach acids that back up from the stomach and enter the lungs while a patient is under anesthesia can produce serious, sometimes life-threatening, consequences.

But liquids like water, apple juice and black coffee consumed up until two hours before surgery make little difference, said Dr. Robert Stoelting of the Indiana University School of Medicine in Indianapolis.

"Many patients are addicted to caffeine. Not having that cup of coffee in the morning will make them extremely nervous before surgery when there is absolutely no risk (if they drink it)," said Dr. Paul White, professor of anesthesiology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas.

Doctors previously were taught to send patients home without surgery if they had so much as swallowed water while brushing their teeth. Evidence now shows that clear liquids actually help remove other foods from the system, said White.

"It's a message we haven't gotten out very well," said White.

The food ban still stands, said Stoelting.

Nutritionists seek place in new health-care system

By Marian Burros
N.Y. Times News Service

Hillary Rodham Clinton, who is shaping the administration's health-care reform proposal, believes strongly that nutrition is an important part of health care. For instance, she said through her spokeswoman that "good nutrition has proven health benefits and is one of the cheapest ways people can be more responsible about their health."

Because of her often-stated views, nutrition professionals eagerly awaited the specifics of the health-care reform plan last month, hoping to see Mrs. Clinton's interest reflected.

Although some were mildly satisfied because nutrition was mentioned at all, others were disappointed because they did not believe it was given a large enough role.

Even determining exactly what the administration is proposing is difficult at this stage. Answers are hard to obtain and the reality changes daily.

It remains unclear what kinds of nutrition services will be covered. As it stands now, coverage will be determined by individual health plans and not by the government. And the administration's proposal is still just that — a proposal — and may be significantly changed by Congress. During the coming debate there will certainly be lobbying by nutritionists who believe they should have a larger role in health care.

Judith Feder, an adviser on health-care reform to Donna E. Shalala, the secretary of health and human services, and to the White House, said that under the administration's plan providers would be reimbursed for nutrition counseling during covered preventive-care visits to doctors and as part of treatment for chronic conditions like diabetes and high blood pressure.

DEAR ABBY

Should one stall in busy rest room be reserved for few?

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to "Perplexed in Portland, Ore." regarding the use of the large stall in rest rooms was wrong. You obviously have never had to use crowded public rest rooms.

Van Buren

When the laws were changed to include handicap access to buildings and larger stalls in bathrooms, it was a step forward — and much needed. However, most places changed an already existing stall (or two) to comply, which greatly reduced the capacity of the bathroom. As a mother with two kids who "have to go now" — and who, myself, has a bladder about the size of a pea (no pun intended), I need the use of that stall if it is not occupied.

If a handicapped person arrived, she would always be next in line for the stall — even if there were 10 other women in line (which is not unusual). But when that person finished, the other people in line would be just as much in need of the facilities as she was.

When I enter a building, and there is no handicapped person using the ramp, I use the ramp because I find it easier than the steps — especially if I'm carrying something. But if someone who is physically challenged is using it, I'll always take the steps to give him plenty of room.

Never would I use the handicapped parking space, but I feel that bathrooms, ramps and dressing rooms are another matter. I have waited 30 minutes in line at a military PX to try on clothes because there were only two dressing rooms, and the one reserved for the handicapped was off-limits to able-bodied persons. I asked the salesperson when was the last time someone had used it, and she said she had worked there only a month, and no one had used it yet!

Grocery stores have special checkout counters to accommodate wheelchairs, and signs posted for the severely handicapped to proceed to the front of the line. This is great, but no store could afford to have a line exclusively for the handicapped.

Normally I agree with your answers, Abby, but you blew it on this one. — STANDING IN LINE WITH MY LEGS CROSSED AT OSAN AIR BASE, KOREA

DEAR STANDING IN LINE: You're not the only reader who responded to my answer. Read on for another perspective:

DEAR ABBY: Thank you very much for your response about rest room stalls for the disabled. I am in a wheelchair, and something that truly irritates me is finding the "large-door stall" occupied by an able-bodied person. It's especially irksome when it is a parent with one or more young children. I can understand a parent's need to get everyone to go potty and keep an eye on them at the same time; however, this is NOT the way to do it.

If I use the rest room anywhere "out," it is because I have that "urgent need" of which you spoke. I remember a particular episode when a woman with two young children was taking an extremely long time in a disabled stall. I begged her to hurry. She responded with, "We'll be out when we're good and ready!" I finally lost control and made a mess of myself. With tears in my eyes, I admonished her as the three of them left the stall. She gave me a dirty look and declared, "It's not against the law!"

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest. — RELIEVED IN DES MOINES, IOWA

New flavor for old favorite crackers

By Linda Anderson

Every once in a while an old, established company comes out with a new variation of one of its favorite products. This tactic makes a the new item easier to try — after all, you already know its family.

Anderson

We recently discovered that Sunshine, maker of Krispy saltine crackers (been around for years) has begun marketing a Mild Cheddar version of the crackers — kind of a combination of saltines and Cheez-Its. Of course we had to try them. I even brought the box to the office so the tasters here could give me their opinions.

Most everyone is familiar with Sunshine saltines (or any other saltine, for that matter) and how well they go with soup or chili or peanut butter or a lot of other things. And most everyone is familiar with cheese crackers and how well they go with some foods. Well, just imagine a saltine cracker with a cheese cracker's color and a slightly cheesey taste, and you get a rough idea of what Krispy Mild Cheddar is like.

A one-pound box of the cheese-flavored saltines cost 89 cents, or about what a one-pound box of regular saltines costs. The box contains four single-cracker "stack packs" in reclosable bags, and all four are in a larger plastic bag. I guess the Sunshine people are serious about keeping their crackers fresh!

The crackers, advertised as being "Low Cholesterol," are listed on the nutrition label as containing 60 calories per five-cracker serving (that's 12 calories each), as well as 2 grams of fat (or 18 of the 60 calories from fat).

The taste-testers opinions ranged from OK to pretty good to "I just love these crackers! Can I have some more?" No one didn't like them; most people thought they were good, and some (most of the advertising department, in fact) thought they were wonderful!!!

I didn't think they tasted all that cheesey (not like Cheez-Its do, anyway), but some tasters thought they tasted just like cheese crackers. I thought they tasted more like saltines.

However, we all agreed that the Krispy Mild Cheddar crackers would taste marvelous with chili. And it's getting to be chili weather — at last we have a reason to be glad the weather is getting cooler!

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

CARE: Finding jobs in health field expected to be tougher harmful," said Mark Pauly, a department chairman at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School. "What the country gains by spending less on health care, it loses to an army of unemployables."

While highly specialized physicians and some top administrators earn dazzling salaries, a sizable portion of workers — probably 25 percent or more who toil as janitors, cooks, orderlies and the like — earn low wages. With few skills, they are likely to be in for a hard time.

"Redistribution and retooling is going to impact a lot of nontechnical, nonprofessional jobs," said Richard D'Amaro, a partner with KPMG Peat Marwick in Atlanta. "Technology is driving some of that."

Drug salespeople will also be among the casualties, since pharmaceutical companies increasingly sell medicines to large purchasers like health maintenance organizations instead of trying to influence individual doctors' prescribing habits.

High-priced diagnostic equipment will likely become a tougher sell as well, as reform mandates greater scrutiny of expensive tests.

Still, reform will be a boon for many industry segments. Demand for family doctors, few in number and poorly paid compared with specialists, is increasing amid a heavier emphasis on primary care.

Nurses also should benefit. Advanced practice nurses will be increasingly called upon to perform physical exams and treat minor illnesses, one way to meet Clinton's goals of increasing access to care while containing costs.

Despite physicians' resistance to relinquishing turf, a nationwide Gallup Poll showed 86 percent of Americans are willing to receive routine medical care from registered nurses.

But this lowering of expectation for professional credentials trickles into other arenas as well. The American Nurses Association is concerned at the number of hospital nurses being replaced by lower-paid personnel, such as nursing assistants and medical technicians.

Additionally, as more procedures and treatments are performed outside hospitals, centers for ambulatory care, outpatient surgery and rehabilitation will expand. Lee Hecht Harrison's survey showed 58 percent of unemployed health care workers who found new jobs in the field took posts at such centers.

But hospitals, the industry's largest employer, are already feeling first pangs of what many analysts predict will be huge staff reductions amid mergers, closings and downsizings. Some experts say there will be 20 percent to 50 percent fewer hospitals by 1998.

This summer, Massachusetts General Hospital began eliminating 500 jobs. In Washington state, Group Health Association slashed 200 jobs and Providence Hospital cut 133 jobs.

This is a quick reverse of a long-term trend that saw hospitals steadily increase employment. In 1992, private hospitals created about 91,200 jobs, or an average 7,600 a month, Labor Department figures show. But in the first seven months of this year, growth slowed to about 5,400 new jobs a month.

Hospital administrators are concerned: 36 percent of 250 executives polled recently by TriBrook Group Inc., a Westmont, Ill., consulting firm, predicted their hospitals will be worse off next year.

Change is in store even for those who keep their health care jobs. Many are having to broaden their skills and take on more responsibility. Respiratory care specialists, who treat patients with asthma, emphysema and bronchitis, are being asked to administer a broader range of tests, including electrocardiograms.

"People are being asked to do more, work harder," said Sam Giordano, executive director of the American Association for Respiratory Care. "Hospitals can no longer afford health care professionals who satisfy a narrow range of patient needs."

Indeed, what is emerging is the need for "multiskilled practitioners."

"In the past, you might have had a nurse who administered medication, a lab technician who drew blood and someone else giving physical therapy," said consultant Bucolo. "Now someone will have to be trained to do all three, and that may require additional schooling and licensure."

PLAN: Nutrition's role in plan unclear

(From 1D)

In some plans only physicians would provide nutrition counseling, while in others it could come from licensed nutritionists. Health-care plans will be permitted, but not required, to offer nutrition counseling in health-education classes.

Lynn Margherio, a senior policy analyst on health-care reform at the White House, said, "We are exploring how we can make nutrition counseling and therapy available to people."

Nancy Foster, a lobbyist for the American Dietetic Association in Washington, says the message is ambiguous. "The nutrition component is not included as strongly as we'd like," she said.

But Dr. Michael Jacobson, the executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a Washington consumer advocacy group, said he was "pleasantly surprised that the word nutrition is in the plan."

Some experts who were involved in shaping the administration's proposals say there was an internal dispute over the value of nutrition counseling. Ms. Feder denies that was the basis for the decision not to specify counseling by nutritionists in the government's overall guidelines. She said that providers other than physicians have all been grouped under the term "health professionals" and were not broken down by category. That means there is no specific mention in the plan of chiropractors, nurse-practitioners or midwives either.

Leaving nutrition counseling to physicians worries many experts. Most doctors, particularly those who have been out of medical school for more than five years, know little about nutrition.

"Doctors don't know what people should eat," Jacobson said, "so saying doctors should do counseling is unrealistic. Nutrition experts should be the ones."

Dr. Steven Woolf, a science adviser to the United States Preventive Services Task Force of the Public Health Service, which provided much of the information for the administration's plan, agrees most doctors don't know as much as they should about nutrition.

Woolf said one problem is that the quality of nutrition counseling is so variable. "A blood test is a blood test," he said. "But what is counseling? Some should be paid for and some probably shouldn't, and it all looks the same when you call it nutrition counseling. Any expert in the field will tell you that nutrition counseling is the centerpiece of disease prevention along with smoking cessation and exercise."

Woolf said: "The nutrition community should continue to send the message that dietary factors account for a large portion of diseases that people suffer in this country, that prevention is a wise policy and nutrition is important."

RECIPE: Trim fat from beef steak

(From 1D)

Trim fat from beef steak. Cut steak lengthwise in half and then crosswise into ½-inch strips. Combine marinade ingredients; pour half over beef. Cover and marinate in refrigerator 10 minutes. Reserve remaining marinade.

Meanwhile cook vermicelli according to package directions.

Remove beef from marinade, discard marinade. Heat large, nonstick skillet over medium-high heat until hot. Add beef, half at a time, and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes or until outside surface is no longer pink. Do not overcook. Remove from skillet with slotted spoon; keep warm.

In same skillet, combine vermicelli, spinach, bean sprouts, green onions and reserved marinade; cook until spinach is wilted and mixture is heated through, stirring occasionally. Return beef to skillet; mix lightly. Makes 4 servings.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
