

Fiscal Year Ushers in 'Reagan Era'

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The first fiscal new year of the Reagan era was ushered in today with a tax cut that puts extra dollars in most Americans' pockets and budget cuts that pinch millions more, from mayors to welfare mothers. The start of the government's 1982 fiscal year was accompanied by a chorus of criticism of President Reagan's resolution to reduce the role of federal spending and regulation in American society, affecting the way of life for many and the type of burial for some. "I don't see why they pick on me to cut," Alice Smith of Hagerstown, Md., told The Washington Post. She and her two children are losing their welfare payments because of tighter federal eligibility rules that took effect today. "Reagan's doing all this cutting," she said. "But he has to cut the rich man, too." The New York City Opera's Beverly Sills, in a speech here Wednesday before congressional wives, lamented almost inevitable cutbacks in federal support for the arts and humanities. "We're really in for a terrible licking," she said. "We're all going to have to hustle a lot." Politicians are affected, too. Mayor Charles Royer of Seattle had no sooner handed his city council a budget with a $22.5 million deficit than Reagan announced a cut in revenue sharing funds that would cost the city another $1.2 million.

"This is an election year," Royer moaned. "I'm increasing business taxes. I'm cutting the budget, cutting out everything but the basics, making everybody angry, and I still have a $22.5 million deficit. Wait until I add on the revenue sharing cut and start laying off cops and firefighters."

A result of the first installment of Reagan's three-year, 23 percent tax reduction for individuals. A married worker with two children who makes $400 weekly, for example, will get a $3.70 increase in take-home pay.

Also starting today, savers will be able to invest in new, high-interest certificates, with up to $2,000 in interest exempt from taxes. Come Jan. 1, couples will be allowed a special deduction to help offset the "marriage penalty," of higher taxes compared with those paid by singles. And all workers — even those now covered by company pension plans — will be able to set up tax-deferred Individual Retirement Accounts. At the same time, however, hundreds of thousands of families will be thrown off the welfare rolls or see their benefits slashed. Many children will pay more for lunch in school cafeterias. College students will find it harder to get a tuition loan, and laid-off auto workers will have more trouble getting unemployment compensation.

Poor families will pay more rent in public housing and will have to meet tougher standards to receive food stamps. Elderly patients will pay more for hospital visits, and most wartime veterans (See YEAR, Page 2)

AWACS Sale Confirmed

By JIM ADAMS Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Reagan administration formally told Congress today it intends to sell Saudi Arabia sophisticated AWACS radar planes. But a knowledgeable source said the notification did not contain the compromise some senators have said is needed to save the deal from congressional defeat.

Less than an hour after the formal notification, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. met in private with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but the source said Haig could not tell the committee that the Saudis have agreed to long-term joint U.S.-Saudi manning of the planes.

"Haig did a good job of laying it all out to them," said the source, who did not want to be named. "But he told them nothing that they had not heard about before."

Without a compromise giving Americans at least partial control of the planes, President Reagan has been told, the deal almost certainly will not win the necessary Senate endorsement.

The formal notification was given to Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Percy's press aide, Scott Cohen, told reporters as the panel questioned Haig that the secretary was relaying "new information involving terms and conditions."

After the briefing, Haig was to testify in public in defense of the proposed sale.

Early this morning, the Senate Republican leader, Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said of efforts to reach a compromise:

"That thing has been up and down all day and I honestly don't know where it wound up. At one point they thought they had a favorable report."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said Haig told him early Wednesday evening that he thought he had something "that would be satisfactory" but gave no details.

Baker and other senators have told Reagan that the arms sale was almost certain to be vetoed in Congress unless a compromise for joint U.S.-Saudi manning of the

Fire Fighters Presented Bull Chip at Breakfast

By BOB NIGH
MANAGING EDITOR

The Hereford Volunteer Fire Department was awarded the coveted Bull Chip Award this morning as local citizens gathered for the bi-monthly Fun Breakfast at the community center.

Recognizing the efforts of the volunteer firemen, standing in emcee John Stagner made the presentation to a group of the fire fighters who were in attendance, including chief Bill Bankston.

Bankston, in turn, invited all local citizens to visit the fire station at any time, but especially during next week, which is National Fire Prevention Week.

The firemen will be conducting open house during the nationwide observation, and will be conducting tours of the facility for area students.

In other highlights of the breakfast, Neil Cooper missed out on $200 after his name was drawn in a chamber members' drawing and he was not present to claim the prize. Other drawings for $25 and $75 were held with Vera Threewit and Peggy Fox the respective winners of those prizes.

The fun breakfast was sponsored by the Deaf Smith County United Way, which had representatives of agencies present. The UW drive is scheduled to begin soon.

The usual announcements of upcoming community events were made, and chamber Executive Vice President Mike Carr and membership committee chairman Lathan Garnett welcomed three new C of C members. The new chamber members included James Self, Jerry Collier, and Ed Wuerflein.

Some of the upcoming events include:

- Hereford Fine Arts & Crafts Association Show, Oct. 17.
- The Community Concert Association ticket drive, now underway.
- The Rebecca Lodge chili supper, Oct. 10.
- A city-wide legislative

Building Permits Up In Sept.

Hereford building permits totaled $302,190 for the month of September raising the year to date total to $2,519,364.

The 18 permits issued fell one short of the number for the same month last year, but ran over the 1980 dollar amount. September 1980 permits totaled $171,750 for a year to date total of $1,496,550.

Permits for the first two single family residences for the year were issued to Clifford Allmon, $72,500 and Marie Griffin, $25,000.

S.L. Garrison, Garrison Seed, obtained a permit to build 17 metal storage bins which will hold 3,200 bushels each. Cost of the construction is estimated at $70,000.

Property Enterprises obtained a permit for construction of a residential duplex valued at $50,000.

Permits for moving structures were $53,050 and for additions to structures totaled $31,490.

Survey Shows Marketbasket Prices About Same in September

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

September brought little change in overall supermarket bills, according to an Associated Press market-basket survey.

Individual price increases and decreases just about canceled each other out; 25 percent of the items surveyed by the AP went up last month, while 26 percent went down.

The AP drew up a random list of 14 commonly purchased food and non-food products and checked prices at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed that the marketbasket bill went up last month in nine cities and down in four cities. Overall, the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores increased by only one-tenth of 1 percent during September.

The rise was the fourth monthly increase this year. The items in the AP survey also went up in January, June and July. They decreased in the remaining five months.

Comparing prices today with those at the start of the year, the AP found that the average marketbasket bill was 5.5 percent lower than it was nine months earlier.

Larger-than-anticipated supplies of meat and record grain harvests have contributed to the decrease. Economists note, however, that the farm value of the food we buy is only one factor in the final cost. George Casler, an agricultural economist in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell University, warns that food prices probably will rise "because of high marketing costs and inflation in production costs."

The AP survey showed that the most widespread price increases during September came on two breakfast items — coffee and eggs.

The price of a pound of coffee went up last month at the checklist store in seven of the cities surveyed and the price of a dozen eggs went up at the checklist store in nine cities.

There was good news last month for consumers holding late summer barbecues; the price of a pound of all-beef frankfurters went down at the checklist store in seven cities.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes or comparable

Community Services Administration Dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Community Services Administration, which once directed the nation's war on poverty, died today.

At age 17, it had been in ill fiscal health for years, never quite recuperating from the dismembering it took from the Nixon administration in 1973.

Death came at midnight, the result of budget cutbacks from a federal government intent on transferring many of the agency's functions to the state and local level.

It was the first major federal agency to die since World War II. But it may not be the last. President Reagan has served notice he will attempt to kill off the departments of Energy and Education, both given life by the previous Carter administration.

Termination of the agency almost passed unnoticed. Its closing orders were part of the budget bill passed by Congress last summer at Reagan's insistence.

Although once the centerpiece of Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society war on poverty, the agency had played a lesser role in recent years. It provided money for the energy conservation and weatherization program for the poor, development funds for industrial parks, some funds to combat hunger and malnutrition among the poor and helped finance state economic opportunity offices to assist governors.

In the months before its death, the agency ran 878 community action agencies located in 2,210 counties across the nation. More than 16 million people participated in the programs.

The House Education and Labor subcommittee on human resources took note of the passing Wednesday.

One Democratic mourner, Rep. Pat Williams of Montana, questioned whether the agency's demise signaled an end to the war on poverty and the beginning of a new war on the poor. Republicans dismissed those contentions and said the agency's death was only the beginning of a new era in federal-state relations.

But it was obvious the panel didn't have its heart in it. Only a handful of members showed up, and Democratic Delegate Baltazar Corrada of Puerto Rico presided in the absence of the chairman, Rep. Ike Andrews, D-N.C.

Even David Stockman, head of the White House Office of Management and Budget, the architect of the termination and a man who seldom misses a chance to appear at hearings, declined an invitation to attend.

Born as the Office of Economic Opportunity, the agency had a $2 billion budget under Johnson but was running on $500 million at the time of its death.

Easterners Get Jump On All Savers Certificates

By KEN O'QUINN
Associated Press Writer

BAR HARBOR, Maine (AP) — Eager to get a jump on their countrymen, a few residents of this small Yankee town turned out early today at New England's smallest savings and loan for the opening sale of the All-Savers Certificate.

The tax-sheltered investment, designed as a salvation for the savings and loan industry and a means to boost America's savings account, got a warm reception at midnight over hot doughnuts and coffee at the tiny Bar Harbor Savings & Loan Association.

Bar Harbor hotel owner Bernard "Sonny" Cough, 54, plunked down $7,945.22 to become the first person in the continental United States to buy an All-Savers Certificate.

"I don't stay up this late for no reason," Cough said.

"It's definitely going to be a big boost for housing," said Lee Freedman, a Southwest Harbor antiques dealer, who put up $1,000 for his certificate.

The savings and loan had closed as usual Wednesday afternoon, but reopened several hours later when reporters, prospective buyers and townsfolk were invited in out of the chilly air for snacks — and to wait for the stroke of midnight and the first sale of the 12.61-percent interest, one-year bond.

In Guam, Phil Flores, president of the Guam Savings & Loan Association, said he registered the very first U.S. sale, making out a certificate to elementary school teacher Selina Flores, no relation. The sale came at 7 p.m. EDT Wednesday, which was 9 a.m. Thursday in the U.S. island possession.

Bar Harbor Savings & Loan, with $6 million in assets, lost between $300,000 and $400,000 in the last year because, rather than keeping money in a passbook savings account, people have been "putting the money into these money market funds that pay a much higher percentage of interest," said Norman Shaw, the secretary treasurer.

Two Crewmen Burned In Helicopter Crash

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A civilian helicopter pilot who discovered a downed U.S. Air Force helicopter and helped rescue the two survivors said it was "just fortunate we were there at the right time in the right place with the right people."

The two crew members remained in critical condition with severe burns today in an Albuquerque hospital.

Four crew members on the HH-53 helicopter that crashed Tuesday in rugged, remote terrain eight miles north of Mount Taylor, near Grants, died in the mishap.

The civilian pilot, Bob Tumlin, said Wednesday he was flying three employees of a Kilgore, Texas, drilling company from Albuquerque to a Cabezon drilling rig about 10 miles north of Mount Taylor when he saw the smoke from the burning helicopter.

Tumlin said his aircraft passed over the site "probably two or three minutes" after the Air Force helicopter crashed. The military helicopter was still on fire when Tumlin touched his craft down, he said.

"Things were still exploding in the helicopter and the fellows were still smoking" when he landed, he said.

One of his passengers, Linda Pepper, a former U.S. Army nurse, attended to the two critically wounded crewmen, he said.

"The boys were pretty well burned and their clothes were burned off," Tumlin said. He said the two injured men were conscious and talked throughout their ordeal.

Robbery Suspect Shot In Motel Gunfight

HOUSTON (AP) — A robbery suspect shot and killed in a motel gunfight with police Wednesday had just tried to rent a room, an employee of the motel says.

James Earl Perry, 33, the manager of a laundry firm, was pronounced dead on arrival at Ben Taub Hospital Wednesday. A woman accompanying him was held for questioning but was not charged, police said.

Homicide Detective R.L. Delony said Perry and the woman were being sought in connection with a Wednesday morning robbery at a nearby lounge.

Bill Meyers, assistant manager of the Red Coach motel, said the couple had tried to rent a room just before the shootout took place. He said he told them there were no vacancies, and that they asked if they could wait for a cab in front of his building.

Meyers said he saw the couple run when the police car arrived. He said he heard four or five shots.

Delay At Airports

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A malfunction in an air traffic control computer delayed incoming flights at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional and Dallas Love Field airports for more than an hour Wednesday night before a backup control system was activated, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said.

The FAA's Fort Worth Center, which controls air traffic in southern Oklahoma, North Texas and parts of Louisiana, delayed all incoming flights at the two airports for 41 minutes, from 6:47 p.m. to 7:28 p.m., after the computer malfunction was discovered, assistant regional FAA chief Alan Larson said.

The center switched over to its backup Direct Access Radar Channel and "there was no derogation of safety during the outage," he said.

Incoming flights were delayed up to an hour throughout the evening, however, he added. Departing flights were delayed up to 30 minutes beyond their scheduled departure times.

Paul Harvey News

Not Tanks, Tractors!

Our nation's first line of defense is not tanks; it's tractors.

Despite a shrinking farm population, now numbering less than three million, each has become so efficient that he produces enough food for himself and 50 other people.

Enough food for all our homefolks and enough extra for export.

It is no exaggeration: Oil-price blackmail throwing our international trade desperately off balance would have caused economic collapse by now except for the money we get back from agriculture exports.

Now our farmers are finding new ways to produce more food for less.

In one year all the milk-producing dairy cows plus cattle and hogs raised for meat produce 119 billion gallons of waste.

It does not have to be wasted.

As fertilizer, replacing artificial fertilizer, it could save 10.6 billion barrels of oil.

Or—that manure could heat 750,000 American homes.

Or—it could fuel 730,000 cars.

Purdue University computes the amount of energy it takes to produce a typical corn crop and notes that 14 percent of that energy goes for farm machinery fuel, 7 percent goes into the manufacture of herbicides and pesticides, but the manufacture and transportation of fertilizer takes a whopping 55 percent!

Another 23 percent is consumed by artificial drying.

So fertilizer and artificial drying represent more than 80 percent of the energy needed to produce a crop of corn.

But we now can store natural manure and apply it to farm fields in liquid form.

And we now can use oxygen-limiting grain storage structures which totally eliminate any need for artificial drying of feed grain.

In the old days of cheap energy, farmers—even as the rest of us—gave little thought to recycling farm waste or to how much gas and electricity it took to dry their crop.

Even higher energy prices make "giving it some thought" both necessary and profitable.

If it costs farmers 60 cents a gallon to pay for oxygen-limiting storage facilities already in place, they're still saving more than $46 million a year in the propane gas they do not have to buy and are saving 1.2 million barrels of crude oil we do not have to import.

Combine these two technologies—recycle animal manure and store feed grain so it will not have to be dried artificially—and we'll save enough energy to:

Heat a million American homes...or.....

Power 1.3 million automobiles...or.....

Till, plant and harvest 133 million additional acres of corn.

This is not all farmers are doing to bail out the rest of us, but these are two things of significance.

Cameras Make Participants Alert

Wednesday, said the media "has helped and enhanced the court system in Florida, not hurt it."

A year-long pilot program has allowed cameras in all Florida courtrooms, under guidelines established by the state supreme court. The Florida Bar Association opposed the program, Overton said, as did trial judges.

Overton was the first speaker on one of the main topics the Texas judges will consider during their convention: "Media in the Courtroom." The judges are expected to take a straw poll on the issue Friday at the convention's close.

Responses from trial jurors in Florida showed the presence of TV and other media had little effect on decorum or on how the judiciary was perceived, Overton said.

"You must realize that if information and knowledge of the court system is to be given to the public, then the media must be allowed" to cover trials, Overton said. "We in Florida have an outstanding judicial system. We were not afraid to let the public see how the courts operate."

Florida judges were about evenly divided on camera access, Overton said. 90 to 95 percent of appeals judges believed jurors weren't affected by cameras. He said other supreme court judges feel media coverage doesn't interfere with due process in criminal trials.

However, the high court has also found that constitutional protections do not require that cameras be allowed into courtrooms.

radar planes was worked out. But administration officials told senators Wednesday that Haig will make "a major announcement" that "should pick up some votes," according to a Senate source who did not want to be identified.

Haig was scheduled to give members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a private briefing on the sale today. His public testimony defending the sale was expected to follow.

Formal notification of the sale had been expected Wednesday, but the administration abruptly postponed the notice as Haig hurriedly left the United Nations for Washington to try to save the arms deal.

The administration decided late Wednesday to formally notify Congress of the sale today, starting the clock running on a 30-day period for congressional review. Majority votes in both houses of Congress would be needed by Nov. 1 to block the sale.

The arms deal includes five Airborne Warning and Control System radar planes and air-to-air Sidewinder missiles and fuel tanks to increase the range and firepower of 62 Saudi F-15 jet fighters.

The administration says the sale is vital for defending the oil-rich Persian Gulf, but opponents say it is a threat to Israel and risks compromising the highly sophisticated radar planes if the Saudi monarchy falls.

Haig abruptly canceled appointments with six foreign ministers at the United Nations on Wednesday and returned to Washington. He went directly to the White House to brief aides there one effort by U.S. Ambassador Richard Murphy in Saudi Arabia to get the compromise on joint U.S.-Saudi manning of the radar planes.

Year

no longer will qualify for a burial allowance.

And that may be just the start.

Congress and Reagan, searching for billions of dollars more to balance the federal budget by 1984, are considering further cuts whose cost and impact cannot yet be predicted accurately. Many government agencies are revamping their programs on the assumption that there will be less money to spend.

There will be fewer government fellowships for painters and sculptors, and grants for biomedical research will decline. The government has reversed a ruling that mass transit systems must gradually rebuild their buses and subways to accommodate the handicapped, and it may abandon a proposal that all new large automobiles be equipped with automatic seatbelts or protective airbags.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission will have fewer regional centers open to handle citizens' complaints, and is halting its study of hazardous lawn mowers, light fixtures and playground equipment for toddlers. The Community Services Administration, which once directed the war on poverty, went out of business altogether today.

The Energy Department, which Reagan wants to abolish along with the Education Department, has targeted 200 of its nearly 300 regulations for modification or repeal.

Solidarity Debates Program

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — The Solidarity congress debated a new economic program for Poland, the Soviet Union called the plan counter-revolutionary, and the union accused the Polish Communist Party of waging psychological warfare against the country.

The delegates to the independent labor federation's first national congress began a three-day debate Wednesday on a 39-page plan to improve Poland's near-bankrupt economy.

The Sejm, the Polish parliament, approved a worker-management law last week giving the union a veto over the appointment of managers of state enterprises, but certain defense industries and public utilities were excluded. However, the program submitted to the congress went far beyond that.

A Polish journalist close to the 13-month-old labor federation predicted the congress would approve the program with "very, very few amendments and very, very few changes."

The plan took note of the incessant anti-Solidarity criticism from the Soviet Union and the rest of the Soviet bloc, saying: "We want to effect the task of great transformations in a way which will not infringe on our alliance with the U.S.S.R. A sense of responsibility for the nation compels us to respect the power setup which emerged in Europe after World War II and the position of our country in this setup."

It also said an awareness of the possibility of "bloodshed, or the annihilation of our spiritual and material heritage, compels us to fulfill our ideals gradually so that each successive task earns society's support."

The Kremlin was not satisfied. Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the program "is not a document of a trade union, but a manifesto of a political party that claims leadership of society and of the country."

Tass said although the union was blaming the Communist authorities for Poland's plight, "it is common knowledge that the present situation of anarchy and dislocation is entirely on the conscience of the extremist leaders of Solidarity and other counter-revolutionary forces."

The congress adopted a resolution Wednesday accusing Poland's Communist leaders of waging a "fear campaign" with their warnings hinting at Soviet intervention because of the congress's actions.

"We are warned we may lose our national independence," the resolution said. "We do not possess tanks and truncheons as a means of compulsion. It is rather our conviction that we are strong because we are right, and in the last analysis because we have the right to strike."

Despite the continuing barrage from Moscow, the Warsaw correspondent of the French newspaper Le Figaro reported from Gdansk that Soviet officials had made "discreet but direct contacts" with Solidarity officials.

Obsessive Habits

DEAR ANN LANDERS: For years I have been what some people call "crazy clean." Every time I touch a doorknob I must wash my hands. I have told myself, "It's not necessary - you DON'T HAVE TO DO IT!" But I become so uncomfortable after a few minutes, I give in to the urge in order to get some peace of mind.
It's a nuisance to wash my hands 15 or 20 times a day, but I MUST do it!
I am going on a trip soon, and dread checking into a motel. The thought of touching the TV dial, the handles of the wash basin and shower sickness me. Please say something to put me at ease. I don't want to be miserable on my vacation. - Too Fussy In Tuscaloosa

DEAR TOO FUSSY: You are not alone. A few moments ago I read a similar letter from Wisconsin. Here it is:

Bellview Reunion Scheduled

The Bellview Old Timer's Annual Reunion will be held Sunday, Oct. 5 at the Rosedale Baptist Church in Bellview.
A basket or covered dish luncheon will be held at noon with registration of guests to be at 1:30 p.m.
A musical program will begin at 2 p.m. Old timers will be recognized.
Everyone is invited to attend Sunday School at 10 a.m. and the morning church service will begin at 11 a.m.
Last year over 200 attended the annual reunion. All old timers are encouraged to attend.

DEAR ANN: I work in a small office with five other women. We share a powder room.
One gal has this thing about clean hands. Every half-hour she ties up the bathroom for at least 10 minutes washing her hands. She suds and rinses, suds and rinses, until she is sure that they are perfectly clean.
When questioned about this, her only comment is that she simply cannot stand to have dirty hands. We do the same type of work and our hands do not get dirty.
The other girls and myself have tried to kid her out of it, but no luck. We also have knocked on the door of the john and asked her to please hurry up, but it doesn't help.
Any suggestions? She's a nice person otherwise. - Five In Chippewa Falls, Wis.

DEAR SUFFERERS: A compulsion is an uncontrollable impulse to perform an irrational act. Many of us have minor compulsions, such as touching various pieces of furniture before we leave the house, or checking the lights and gas stove or the front and back doors before retiring. These rituals can be annoying, but we continue to perform them because we will feel uncomfortable if we don't.

A woman who spends 10 minutes washing her hands 16 times a day is more than overly neat or "crazy clean." She has what the professionals call an obsessive-compulsive neurosis.
I consulted with Dr. Francis J. Braceland, a

Healthy Snacks

Beverly Harder, home economist with Arrowhead Mills, shows Louise Walker County Extension Agent, some of the healthy snacks she'll be preparing at the Weight Control Seminar to be held Monday, Oct. 5, at 1:30 p.m. at the Heritage Room, Library. Beverly uses lots of whole grains and wheat for nutritious and filling snacks. Beverly has a home economics degree from Texas Tech and has taught homemaking at Vega for 7 years. The public is invited to the free seminar.

Around Town

An item of local interest is the recent marriage of Barbara Emerson and James Elliott, which occurred in Dubuque, Iowa, on Sept. 12.

Barbara Emerson and James Elliott are both associates of the James W. Witherspoon Law Firm.

The bride, Barbara Emerson, of Hereford, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Ager of Dubuque, Iowa. James Elliott, of Hereford, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Intelisano of Long Island, New York.

Attending the wedding from Hereford were Jim and Elizabeth Witherspoon.

Among the parties given for the young couple was a poolside party for all out-of-town guests, and also an open house for all the wedding guests, both given by Jim and Elizabeth Witherspoon.

The attendants of the wedding party included the maid of honor, the bride's sister, Debra Ager of Dubuque, Iowa; the bridesmaids, the bride's sisters, Karen Clark and JoAnn Wieland, both of Dubuque, Iowa, the groom's sister, Lisa Elliott of Long Island, New York, and a long-time friend of the bride, Karen Sawvel-Omori, of Galena, Illinois. Flowergirl was Heather Clark, the bride's niece.

The best man was Craig Heller of Tea Neck, N.J. and groomsmen were Lester Ottenheimer of Hyland Park, Ind. Douglas Beach of Kansas City, Kan.; Robert Schneider of Pittsburgh, Penn. and Pfc. Robert Ager, brother of the bride, stationed at Ft. Lewis, Wash. Ushers were Lewis Wasserman of Milwaukee, and Robert Elliott, brother of the groom, of Long Island.

Barbara's maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E.A. Foster, attended the wedding, coming from Laredo, Texas, where Barbara was born and where her family has resided for many years.

The reception following the wedding was a dinner, with favors for all guests, followed by a dance.

Wedding guests were from as far away as California, Nevada and North Carolina.

Following a honeymoon at St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands, the couple is now at home at 402 Fir St., Hereford.

Barbara is retaining her maiden name of Barbara Emerson in her profession.

Vaccination was discovered in 1786 by Edward Jenner. It laid the foundation for modern immunology.

COMMENTARY

A season of repentance

By David Hendin

This year the Jewish holidays of Rosh Hashana (New Year) and Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement) come at a time when Israel and the United States are closely examining their long, friendly relationship.

Israel leaders and many prominent American Jews would like the Reagan administration to reconsider its plan to sell a group of Airborne Warning and Control System planes — known as AWACS — to Saudi Arabia.

This all seems appropriate according to the Jewish calendar, since Rosh Hashana (which this year begins on the evening of Sept. 28) is the first of 10 days of penitence, the last of which is Yom Kippur (beginning Wednesday evening, Oct. 7).

According to "The Pictorial History of the Jewish People," this season "was designed to soften the erring heart of man with contrition for his misdeeds, thus leading him to wholehearted repentance by the time Yom Kippur arrives."

Realistically speaking, it is most unlikely that, in the eyes of Prime Minister Menachem Begin and other Israeli leaders, President Reagan will repent or pull back from his stated aim of selling AWACS to Saudi Arabia.

The administration appears to be committed to the sale. One reason, often ignored but not to be dismissed lightly, is that Saudi Arabia will pay about $1 billion for each of the five super-sophisticated surveillance aircraft. The income will help American industry as well as Reagan's financial recovery plan.

But the chief reason is the heat now on Washington to continue to display an evenhanded policy in the Middle East. Oil is an important factor and so is the stability of the region, as some Reagan advisers see it.

Apparently Reagan and his aides attempted to calm Begin's AWACS-phobia by noting that if the Saudis don't get their military equipment from the United States — which may be able to control its use to a certain degree — they may turn to other countries that won't much care how it is used.

This argument doesn't wash with the Israelis, who remember how many of their soldiers have been killed by American arms and artillery that were sold to various Arab nations and then used against Israel. In the 1967 Six Day War, Jordan's army was heavily supplied with American-made equipment.

Other U.S. politicians have taken a different approach. According to Begin, some "respected and important Americans" told him: "What are you worried about? You have a marvelous air force. If they (the AWACS) are stationed near the Israeli border instead of the eastern part of Saudi Arabia, you simply shoot them down."

One gets the feeling that both Reagan and Begin know exactly what they are doing, playing out a drama that will have a satisfactory conclusion for both Israel and the United States.

"Dead Heat" After overhearing an argument between two rivals,

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

There is a reason why more humor columns have not been written about the annual church Christmas bazaar.

It is because no one has ever been able to find humor in it. As reluctant as I am to mention the word Christmas this early, this is the time the annual bazaar gets into gear. They are staged to bring love and harmony through kind Christian deeds among the parishioners if the chairman has to bend a few faces on self-centered bodies to do it.

How are bazaar chairmen selected, you may ask. They are chosen from soft, matronly lumps of compassion who have the bad luck to go to the restroom while nominations are being made. When they return, it is to resounding applause and shouts of, "You'll make a wonderful chairman! If you need me, just call."

The voices are all unlisted. For the next several months, the chairman must convince parishioners that "Blessed are those who say yes, for they could inherit not only the earth, but the whole stinking bazaar."

She must convince each one they have been researched and are chosen for basic talents and skills.

Lucille Fronk, Crafts booth, whose husband has no desire whatsoever to get his car in the garage since last year when he ran over 185 bleach bottles being saved for piggy banks.

Evelyn Weiss, Pitch and Throw game, whose husband is an attorney and handled the lawsuit last year regarding the broken blackboard.

Sonya Flipper, Cake Walk chairman, who was overheard at a reception for the new minister to whisper, "If I couldn't bake a better cake than this, I'd sell my oven" and will never open her mouth again.

Dee Dee Dormat, Nursery, who is always pregnant anyway and assumed to love children when in fact she doesn't even love her husband.

Frances Firmwag, Telephone chairman, who is childless and has access to a phone.

Eveline Rumschussle, Antique Booth, because it takes one to know one.

Elaine Hensen, publicity, who once saved the life of a columnist who owes her.

Ah yes, one picture of a Christmas Bazaar chairman is worth 120 sermons.

Late Artist's Dream Comes True

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) —

More than 70 years after his death, Western sculptor Frederic Remington's dream has been realized with completion of a larger-than-life casting of his "Coming Through the Rye" statue.

The casting, done by San Francisco sculptor Franco Vianello, will be dedicated Oct. 9, at the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City. The U.S. Postal Service also will issue for the first time that day an 18-cent commemorative stamp honoring Remington and the statue.

The work fulfills a vision by Remington to cast in bronze and in heroic size his original "Coming Through the Rye," museum director Dean

Krakel said.

The statue, copyrighted in 1902, shows four jubilant cowboys, with guns and quirts raised, on running horses. Remington cast only 15 of the 28-inch bronzes, one of them now held in the Hall of Fame's collection, Krakel said.

Remington died in 1909 before completing his plan to create a larger casting of "Coming Through the Rye."

Krakel said he had discovered the sculptor's dream while researching Remington's life and decided to resurrect the plan when an offer came in 1977 to finance a memorial for Persimmon Hill, the museum grounds.

Mrs. D.D. Payne of Pampa, Texas, and an honorary life director on the museum board, was willing to sponsor the project in her name. "She is a ranch lady and has worked with cowboys," Krakel said.

She also has supported other major museum sculptures, "The End of the Trail" and "Buffalo Bill." "We like to think 'Coming Through the Rye' is the completion of our historic statuary," Krakel said.

Vianello was commissioned to do the casting from one of the original bronzes. He said he began three years ago by sculpting in clay a larger, 48-inch model.

He then carved in clay an 18-foot version and created a mold from that. The mold was used to cast the bronze in 14 pieces, each weighing about 1,200 pounds, Vianello said.

Materials and labor cost more than $150,000, not including his own artistic fee, Vianello said.

The statue, almost fully assembled, was shipped by truck from California, he said.

Dedication ceremonies begin at 11 a.m. Oct. 9 and the museum will open free of charge. The free admission day is the first such event for the hall since it opened in 1966, museum officials said.

The first-day-of-issue Remington stamp may be purchased and mailed at the museum post office from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. that day. A brass belt buckle, in limited edition of 1,000, also may be bought through the museum for $15.95.

Veleda Club Members Program On Potpourri

Veleda Study Club members met recently with Marcella McLain, 145 Oak, for a program on "potpourri."

Janice Brownlow conducted the business meeting. Betty Olson gave the program and demonstrated how to make sachets and containers of potpourri. Recipes on different combinations of flower petals, spices, herbs and oils were given to the members. All members present made a sachet.

Members present were Billie Birdwell, Marcella Brady, Janice Brownlow, Frances Crume, Darlene Fields, Betty Gilbert, Norma Marlin, Joyce Ritter, Jean Ruth, Norma Walden and Margaret Zinser.

Today in History

Today is Thursday, Oct. 1, the 274th day of 1981. There are 91 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 1, 1979, Panama's flag was raised over the Canal Zone, ending 75 years of American jurisdiction in the area.

On this date:

In 1928, the Soviet Union inaugurated its first five-year plan to increase farm and industrial production.

In 1949, the newly-established People's Republic of China took Mao Zedong as its Chairman, with Zhou Enlai as premier and foreign minister.

In 1970, United Arab Republic's Vice President Anwar Sadat succeeded Gamal Abdel Nasser as president. Sadat went on to succeed Nasser as president of Egypt.

And in 1977, the United States and Soviet Union outlined the aims of a proposed Middle East peace conference that would ensure what was called "the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

Ten years ago: a strike by some 80,000 miners shut down the nation's production of soft coal.

Five years ago: President Ford summoned Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz to the White House to reprimand him for making remarks of offensive to blacks. Butz resigned three days later.

One year ago: a Warsaw court gave legal approval to Poland's first six independent trade unions.

Today's birthdays: Former President Jimmy Carter is 57, as is Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist. Actress Julie Andrews is 46.

'SNL' With New Cast, Old Format

NEW YORK (AP) — Since Chevy Chase, John, Dan, Jane and Bill went Hollywood, no member of "Saturday Night Live" or any of its clones has gained any noticeable public recognition. Even today's weekend TV freaks would be hard-pressed to identify the names of their favorite troupe members.

So one measure of the appeal of NBC's "Saturday Night Live," which returns Saturday, will be the public's familiarity with the new cast. If a star emerges, like Chevy Chase did six years ago, "SNL" will have taken a big step.

"In its heyday, the audience knew the actors as friends," said Dick Ebersol, producer of the new "SNL." "The public had a sense that there were fights backstage, that John (Belushi) and Jane (Curtin) didn't get along. We did bits on John borrowing money for drugs and on what Gilda (Radner) ate during the week.

"There were scenes from the back lockers, with Dan (Ackroyd) and his motorcycle. We never took a straight slice of life, we bogused it up a bit. But it all had pseudo-humanizing effects."

Disdaining heavy make-up also helped. "When Chevy did Gerald Ford, you knew it was Chevy," said Ebersol, who also developed the first "SNL" and hired original producer Lorne Michaels.

Ebersol says the same approaches will be applied to the new repertory company. One player, Mary Gross, is here while her boyfriend is in Chicago. "We can't do anything with that yet. But in a show or two, we can get into it."

Whether the cast develops some stars and a strong team identity, it will suffer initially with comparisons to the "Not Ready For Prime Time Players." The original also had the advantage of being original. "It was the first show for and by the TV generation," said Ebersol. Ebersol doesn't plan major structural changes, but the show won't rely as heavily on parody. "It will aspire to 'Saturday Night Live's' first two years, when it was more a multi-element show. Later on, it went for longer sketches. We plan 20-25 elements and one long sketch."

To pick up the pace, "Weekend Update" — still associated with Chevy Chase — will be seen as periodic segments of "Saturday Night Live: Newsbreak." One actor does ABC's Ted Koppel.

Although the players are unfamiliar, if the material is good, people will return for more samples. Then the word might spread Monday mornings on commuter trains and at the office.

Saturday's guest host is a secret, and Ebersol has restricted the news media from rehearsals. "We'll have fights, and I don't want anybody to hold back."

Only two cast members from producer Jean Doumanian's 1980-81 fiasco remain: Eddie Murphy and Joe Piscopo.

The new company also includes Ms. Gross, Robin Duke, Tim Kazurinsky, Tony Rosato and Christine Ebersole — just names now, but if they do become people, rushing home by 11:30 might become "in" again.

A season of repentance

By David Hendin

This year the Jewish holidays of Rosh Hashana (New Year) and Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement) come at a time when Israel and the United States are closely examining their long, friendly relationship.

Israeli leaders and many prominent American Jews would like the Reagan administration to reconsider its plan to sell a group of Airborne Warning and Control System planes — known as AWACS — to Saudi Arabia.

This all seems appropriate according to the Jewish calendar, since Rosh Hashana (which this year begins on the evening of Sept. 28) is the first of 10 days of penitence, the last of which is Yom Kippur (beginning Wednesday evening, Oct. 7).

According to "The Pictorial History of the Jewish People," this season "was designed to soften the erring heart of man with contrition for his misdeeds, thus leading him to wholehearted repentance by the time Yom Kippur arrives."

Realistically speaking, it is most unlikely that, in the eyes of Prime Minister Menachem Begin and other Israeli leaders, President Reagan will repent or pull back from his stated aim of selling AWACS to Saudi Arabia.

The administration appears to be committed to the sale. One reason, often ignored but not to be dismissed lightly, is that Saudi Arabia will pay about $1 billion for each of the five super-sophisticated surveillance aircraft. The income will help American industry as well as Reagan's financial recovery plan.

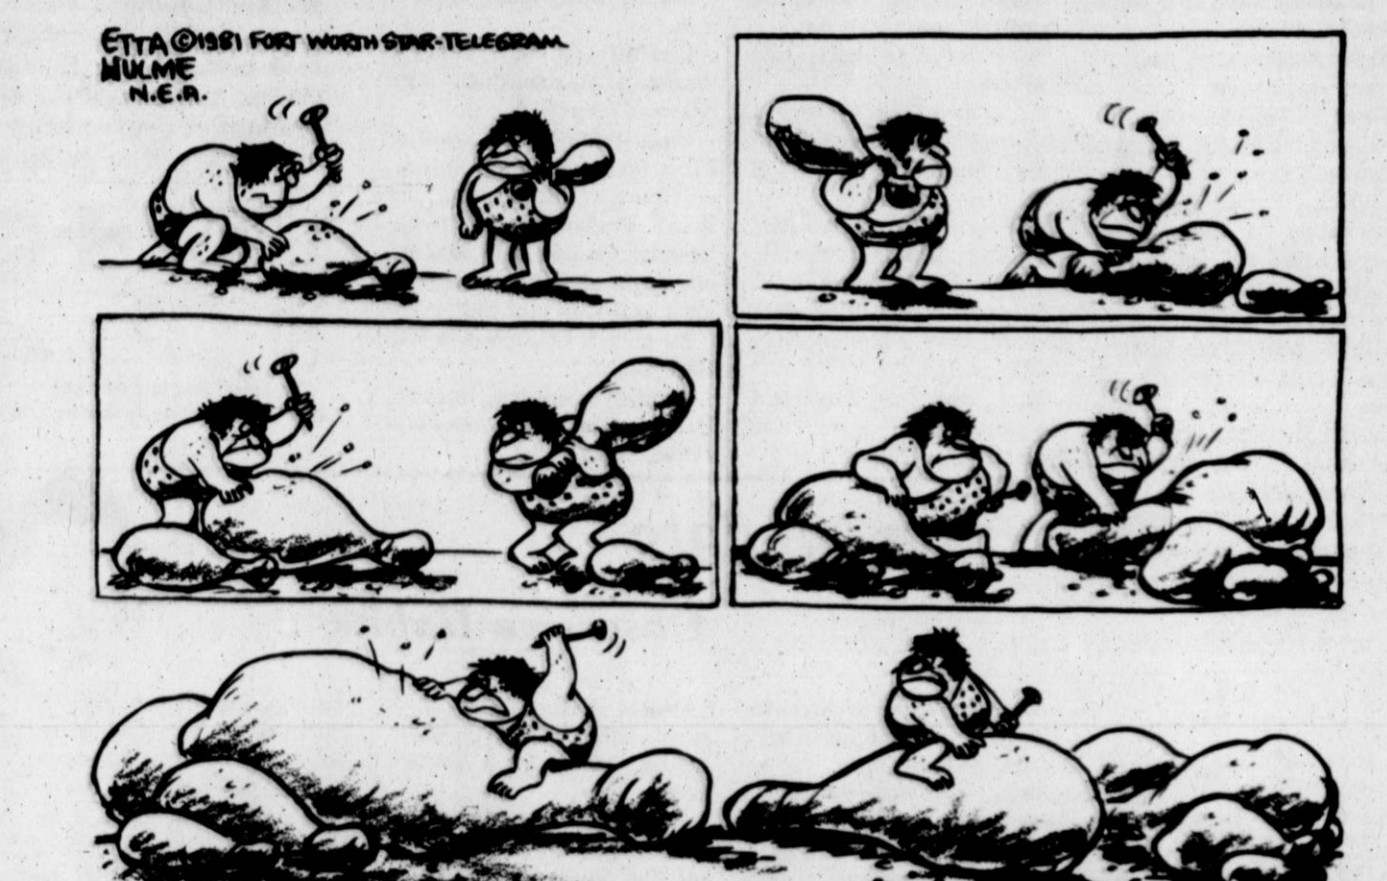

But the chief reason is the best now on Washington to continue to display an evenhanded policy in the Middle East. Oil is an important factor and so is the stability of the region, as some Reagan advisers see it.

Apparently Reagan and his aides attempted to calm Begin's AWACS-phobia by noting that if the Saudis don't get their military equipment from the United States — which may be able to control its use to a certain degree — they may turn to other countries that won't much care how it is used.

This argument doesn't wash with the Israelis, who remember how many of their soldiers have been killed by American arms and artillery that were sold to various Arab nations and then used against Israel. In the 1967 Six Day War, Jordan's army was heavily supplied with American-made equipment.

Other U.S. politicians have taken a different approach. According to Begin, some "respected and important Americans" told him: "What are you worried about? You have a marvelous air force. If they (the AWACS) are stationed near the Israeli border instead of the eastern part of Saudi Arabia, you simply shoot them down."

One gets the feeling that both Reagan and Begin know exactly what they are doing, playing out a drama that will have a satisfactory conclusion for both Israel and the United States.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

There is a reason why more humor columns have not been written about the annual church Christmas bazaar.

It is because no one has ever been able to find humor in it. As reluctant as I am to mention the word Christmas this early, this is the time the annual bazaars get into gear. They are staged to bring love and harmony through kind Christian deeds among the parishioners if the chairman has to bend a few faces on self-centered bodies to do it.

How are bazaar chairmen selected, you may ask. They are chosen from soft, matronly lumps of compassion who have the bad luck to go to the restroom while nominations are being made. When they return, it is to resounding applause and shouts of, "You'll make a wonderful chairman! If you need me, just call."

The voices are all unlisted.

For the next several months, the chairman must convince parishioners that "Blessed are those who say yes, for they could inherit not only the earth, but the whole stinking bazaar."

She must convince each one they have been researched and are chosen for basic talents and skills.

Lucille Frank, Crafts booth, whose husband has no desire whatsoever to get his car in the garage since last year when he ran over 185 bleach bottles being saved for piggy banks.

Evelyn Weiss, Pitch and Throw game, whose husband is an attorney and handled the lawsuit last year regarding the broken blackboard.

Sonya Flipper, Cake Walk chairman, who was overheard at a reception for the new minister to whisper, "If I couldn't bake a better cake than this, I'd sell my oven" and will never open her mouth again.

Dee Dee Dormat, Nursery, who is always pregnant anyway and assumed to love children when in fact she doesn't even love her husband.

Frances Firmwag, Telephone chairman, who is childless and has access to a phone.

Eveline Rumschussle, Antique Booth, because it takes one to know one.

Elaine Hensen, publicity, who once saved the life of a columnist who owes her.

Ah yes, one picture of a Christmas Bazaar chairman is worth 120 sermons.

Late Artist's Dream Comes True

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) —

More than 70 years after his death, Western sculptor Frederic Remington's dream has been realized with completion of a larger-than-life casting of his "Coming Through the Rye" statue.

The casting, done by San Francisco sculptor Franco Vianello, will be dedicated Oct. 9 at the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City. The U.S. Postal Service also will issue for the first time that day an 18-cent commemorative stamp honoring Remington and the statue.

The work fulfills a vision by Remington to cast in bronze and in heroic size his original "Coming Through the Rye," museum director Dean

Krakel said.

The statue, copyrighted in 1902, shows four jubilant cowboys, with guns and quirts raised, on running horses. Remington cast only 15 of the 28-inch bronzes, one of them now held in the Hall of Fame's collection, Krakel said.

Remington died in 1909 before completing his plan to create a larger casting of "Coming Through the Rye."

Krakel said he had discovered the sculptor's dream while researching Remington's life and decided to resurrect the plan when an offer came in 1977 to finance a memorial for Persimmon Hill, the museum grounds.

Mrs. D.D. Payne of Pampa, Texas, and an honorary life director on the museum board, was willing to sponsor the project in her name. "She is a ranch lady and has worked with cowboys," Krakel said.

She also has supported other major museum sculptures, "The End of the Trail" and "Buffalo Bill." "We like to think 'Coming Through the Rye' is the completion of our historic statuary," Krakel said.

Vianello was commissioned to do the casting from one of the original bronzes. He said he began three years ago by sculpting in clay a larger, 48-inch model.

He then carved in clay an 18-foot version and created a mold from that. The mold was used to cast the bronze in 14 pieces, each weighing about 1,300 pounds, Vianello said.

Materials and labor cost more than $150,000, not including his own artistic fee, Vianello said.

The statue, assembled, was shipped by truck from California, he said.

Dedication ceremonies began at 11 a.m. Oct. 9 and the museum will open free of charge. The free admission day is the first such event for the hall since it opened in 1986, museum officials said.

The first-day-of-issues Remington stamp may be purchased and mailed at the museum post office from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. that day. A brass belt buckle, in limited edition of 1,000, also may be bought through the museum for $15.95.

Veleda Club Members Program On Potpourri

Veleda Study Club members met recently with Marcella McLain, 145 Oak, for a program on "potpourri."

Janice Brownlow conducted the business meeting. Betty Olson gave the program and demonstrated how to make sachets and containers of potpourri. Recipes on different combinations of flower petals, spices, herbs and oils were given to the members. All members present made a sachet.

Members present were Billie Birdwell, Marcella Brady, Janice Brownlow, Frances Crume, Darlene Fields, Betty Gilbert, Norma Marlin, Joyce Ritter, Jean Ruther, Norma Walden and Margaret Zinser.

Today in History
Today is Thursday, Oct. 1, the 274th day of 1981. There are 91 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 1, 1979, Panama's flag was raised over the Canal Zone, ending 75 years of American jurisdiction in the area.

On this date:

In 1928, the Soviet Union inaugurated its first five-year plan to increase farm and industrial production.

In 1949, the newly-established People's Republic of China took Mao Zedong as its Chairman, with Zhou Enlai as premier and foreign minister.

In 1970, United Arab Republic's Vice President Anwar Sadat succeeded Gamal Abdel Nasser as president. Sadat went on to succeed Nasser as president of Egypt.

And in 1977, the United States and Soviet Union outlined the aims of a proposed Middle East peace conference that would ensure what was called "the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

Ten years ago: a strike by some 80,000 miners shut down the nation's production of soft coal.

Five years ago: President Ford summoned Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz to the White House to reprimand him for making remarks of offensive to blacks. Butz resigned three days later.

One year ago: a Warsaw court gave legal approval to Poland's first six independent trade unions.

Today's birthdays: Former President Jimmy Carter is 57, as is Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist. Actress Julie Andrews is 46.

'SNL' With New Cast, Old Format

NEW YORK (AP) — Since Chevy Chase, Gilda, John, Dan, Jane and Bill went Hollywood, no member of "Saturday Night Live" or any of its clones has gained any noticeable public recognition. Even today's weekend TV freaks would be hard-pressed to identify the names of their favorite troupe members.

So one measure of the appeal of NBC's "Saturday Night Live," which returns Saturday, will be the public's familiarity with the new cast. If a star emerges, like Chevy Chase did six years ago, "SNL" will have taken a big step.

"In its heyday, the audience knew the actors as friends," said Dick Ebersol, producer of the new "SNL." "The public had a sense that there were fights backstage, that John (Belushi) and Jane (Curtin) didn't get along. We did bits on John borrowing money for drugs and on what Gilda (Radner) ate during the week."

"There were scenes from the back lockers, with Dan (Ackroyd) and his motorcycle. We never took a straight slice of life, we bogused it up a bit. But it all had pseudo-humanizing effects."

Disdaining heavy make-up also helped. "When Chevy did Gerald Ford, you knew it was Chevy," said Ebersol, who developed the first "SNL" and hired original producer Lorne Michaels.

Ebersol says the same approach will be applied to the new troupe company. "We're going to be as real as we can," he said. "If a boyfriend is in a picture, we can't do that yet. But in time, we can get into ches. We plan 20-25 elements and one long sketch."

To pick up the pace, "Weekend Update" — still associated with Chevy Chase — will be seen as periodic segments of "Saturday Night Live: Newsbreak." One actor does ABC's Ted Koppel.

Although the players are unfamiliar, if the material is good, people will return for more samples. Then the word might spread Monday mornings on commuter trains and at the office.

Saturday's guest host is a secret, and Ebersol has restricted the news media from rehearsals. "We'll have fights, and I don't want anybody to hold back."

Only two cast members from producer Jean Doumanian's 1980-81 fiasco remain: Eddie Murphy and Joe Piscopo.

The new company also includes Ms. Gross, Robin Duke, Tim Kazurinsky, Tony Rosato and Christine Ebersole — just names now, but if they do become people, rushing home by 11:30 might become "in" again.

Reds, Astros Fight For NL West Division Lead

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer
CINCINNATI (AP) — The last confrontation of the Cincinnati Reds and Houston Astros has become a showdown for the National League West lead.

Needing a victory to stay in the thick of the race, the hard-charging Reds knocked off Houston 5-2 Wednesday night to move just a half-game behind the first-place Astros.

But Reds third baseman Ray Knight said a loss in the final game with Houston today would waste the opportunity gained Wednesday when Mario Soto went eight innings for his third consecutive victory.

"We must win (today). Our whole season hinges on that game," said Knight, who doubled and scored in the seventh inning to help clinch the victory. "We have three games left after that, but I don't think it will matter if we lose (today)."

Astros Manager Bill Virdon agreed, saying, "It's still in our favor, unless they win (today)."

A victory today would put the Reds up a half-game with three to play. A loss would drop them 1½ back, meaning the Astros would have to lose two games to the first-half champion Dodgers in Los Angeles while the Reds beat Atlanta in a three-game series at home.

"If we can get our split (today), then we can still obtain our goal," said Astros starter Vern Riffe. "But we never make anything easy, do we?" Houston led 1-0 Wednesday on Craig Reynolds' third-inning home run off Soto, 11-9. George Foster's 21st homer tied the score in the fifth against Riffe, 4-6.

"That home run by Foster got them back thinking positive," Virdon said.

Ron Oester tripled in the sixth and Dave Collins singled to put Cincinnati ahead. Dave Concepcion doubled for a 3-1 edge.

After Cesar Cedeno's solo homer cut the gap in the top of the seventh, the Reds retaliated with a pair of runs in their half.

"It was a game in which everybody contributed," Collins said. "We've been doing that for some time. I think that's why we made our move (toward first place)."

Soto, an excitable right-hander, was in command until the ninth, when Tom Hume came on to shut the door for his 13th save.

"I was pretty relaxed. I don't know the reason why," Soto said. "I didn't think about us being 1½ games out."

The Reds and Astros send two of their hardest throwers to the mound today in the dogfight for the division lead. Cincinnati's Bruce Berenyi, 9-5, who has defeated the Astros three times without a loss this season, faces Houston's Nolan Ryan, 10-5 and 1-2 against the Reds this year.

Ryan called the game the most important of the year. "Even ahead of my game last week" when he tossed his fifth career no-hitter.

Adding to the drama is an early evening starting time, which could pose shadow problems for hitters.

McWhorter, Kimbrough Win 1st Matches

First round match play ended Wednesday with both Helen Ann McWhorter and Lynn Kimbrough of Hereford surviving. McWhorter beat Grace Kriskke 6-5 and Kimbrough bested Gloria Robertson 4-3.

In other action Wednesday morning, Mary Lynn Brown lost her first round match to Louise Brown 4-3. She will move to the consolation bracket to play Sally Milam who lost to Emily Entringer 1 up after 19 holes.

Second flight representatives from Hereford did not fare so well as both V.A. Allen and Jackie Hassinger lost their matches.

In the third flight Bobbie George of Hereford won her match, 6-5 over Ortha Zimmer. Evelyn Richardson lost her first round match, three up.

The fourth flight had

Hereford contestants going up against each other with Thelma Marsh edging Mary Harmon one up after 22 holes. In the other match Lois Bobbitt defeated Juanita Sims 5-4.

'Quick' Tillis, The Black Cowboy Turned Boxer, After WBA Title

An AP Sports Analysis By ED SCHUYLER JR. AP Sports Writer

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — James "Quick" Tillis is an unbeaten heavyweight fighter who, as an Oklahoma cowboy, roped steers for pay. Now, he wants to buy the ranch.

At a World Boxing Association meeting in Houston in June, at which Mike Weaver was told to defend his title against Tillis or be stripped of the heavyweight championship, Tillis was telling some reporters about his arrival in Chicago to seek fame and fortune as a fighter.

"I put my suitcase down and I looked up at the Sears Tower (the world's tallest building) and I said, 'Chicago, I'm going to conquer you!' When I looked down my suitcase was gone."

"I said a lot of things down there," said Tillis, who will fight Weaver, of Pomona, Calif., for the WBA title Saturday night in the 19,000-seat Horizon Arena. It will be the Chicago area's first heavyweight championship bout since Ernie Terrell outpointed Eddie Machen at the International Amphitheatre March 5, 1965, for the WBA title. At the time, the WBA did not recognize Muhammad Ali as champion. Tillis is still saying things. Such as:

"Their ain't no pressure on me. I'm unknown."

"Ain't no tougher than roping a 2,000-pound steer."

"I'm a fightin' cowboy," said the 24-year-old native of Tulsa, Okla., who fought his way to the WBA's No. 2 ranking with a 20-0 record, including 16 knockouts.

"Fastest heavyweight in the world and a fightin' cowboy

— a black cowboy."

"I'm going to make a lot of money," said Tillis, who plans to have the best of two worlds. "I'm gonna buy a ranch."

A victory could set up the winner for a lot of money. It could lead to a fight for the universal title against the winner of a March fight between Larry Holmes, the World Boxing Council champion, and unbeaten Gerry Cooney.

Tillis, who has a listed amateur record of 92-8, showed up in Chicago in 1978, got a job as runner at the Mercantile Exchange and met James Kauleitis, who became his manager.

Then the fighter-cowboy got hooked up with trainer Angelo Dundee, who has trained a well-known talker — Ali.

Tillis got Dundee in his corner because Kauleitis wanted to work at being a fight manager.

"I wanted the best for this kid," said Kauleitis, who sent tapes of Tillis' fights to Dundee and asked the trainer for advice, which Dundee volunteered. The advice was appreciated, but Kauleitis wanted more. He wanted Dundee's services...and last January Dundee took over the training of the cowboy.

Tillis, a converted left-hander, has only had one fight with Dundee, a 10-round decision over an opponent named Roughhouse Fischer, but Dundee feels the fighter has shown steady improvement since January.

"I'm very pleased with his progress," said Dundee, who has worked with several world champions.

Trevino Heads List Of Texans Entered In Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Lee Trevino, trying to shake a year-long slump, could find himself in the right place at the right time as he tries to defend his title in the $250,000 Texas Open golf tournament.

Trevino said he is buoyed by the reception he usually gets in this predominantly Hispanic city and plans to go all out to repeat as champion over the 6,525-yard, par-70 layout.

Amid shouts of "Viva," the 41-year-old Trevino rolled in a 20-foot putt on the 72nd hole a year ago to capture the title that had eluded him during his career.

Trevino headed a list of five sons of the Lone Star state regarded as the favorites in the tournament, which opened today at Oak Hills Country Club.

The "Merry Mex" is expected to battle fellow Texans Bill Rogers, Tom Kite, Ben Crenshaw and Bruce Lietzke in the late-season Tournament Players Association event.

Besides Trevino and Crenshaw, who won his first tournament here in 1973, other defending champions in the 156-man field included Ron Streck, Butch Baird and Terry Diehl.

Also present were five of the 1981 Top 10 money winners, including Kite who heads the list with $355,724.

"I haven't played well this year," said Trevino, whose win last year enabled him to edge Tom Watson for the Vardon Trophy for the tour's low-stroke leader. "I feel at home here in San Antonio, though, and that makes all the difference in the world."

Trevino is No. 22 on the winnings list with $131,426 — his lowest total since 1977 when he earned only $85,108 while struggling with back problems. The Texas Open carries a $45,000 first prize.

Rogers, sixth on the money list with $270,411, missed five cuts in the early months of this year, but roared back to capture the championships at the Sea Pines Heritage Classic, the British Open, World Series of Golf and Suntory Open in Japan.

"I won my last two tournaments and it would be nice to make it three," Rogers said. "A win here would be important, not only for the Player-of-the-Year honor, but just because it's a Texas tournament and a lot of people from my hometown (Texas) will be here."

Crenshaw, who has slumped this year, admitted,

"I've had a lot of problems, all golf related. Golf is so mental, I haven't been able to put anything together this year. Mechanically, I'm swinging well, but nothing has happened."

Lietzke has a chance to overtake Kite as the top money winner with a victory here, but two other players within striking distance — Raymond Floyd and Watson — bypassed the tournament.

Amarillo Sandies To Host Stampedin' Herd

By MARC HERRING
Staff Writer

Brad Williams, Monte Slaton, Jimmy Tyler, Troy Dye and Lyndall Flowers are going to have a very rough Friday night. This Amarillo High backfield combination must face the Hostile Herd defense, a group of stingy defenders who are allowing but 106 yards per game.

On the other side of the ball, Hereford is chewing out an average of 343 yards per game. So all in all, if the game is played according to the statistic charts, Hereford will have win number five wrapped up.

The only problem with this theory is that there have been very few games won with the calculator. Hereford's Don Cumpton feels that when these two teams play, the stats don't mean a whole lot and he expects Amarillo to be the toughest team the 'Faces will have played so far. "Amarillo might not have the best record of teams that we have played, but they are a hard-hitting, very tough team," Cumpton said. "They play a very physical game, which amounts to running right at you."

On offense, the Sandies use the services of tailback Williams to carry the brunt of their attack, but they also like to throw the ball to either Flowers or Dye.

To stop the running game of the Sandies, Hereford will once again depend on the impressive defensive unit that is allowing an average of four points per game. It will be up to linebackers Ken Cosper, John Phibbs and Freddie Garcia to stop the runs up the middle that Amarillo High uses as the backbone of their offense.

Offensively Hereford will rely on the steady mixture of running from Wayne High and Jeff Coupe and the passing of Alan Wartes to receivers Rudy Hernandez, Mike Mason, Alfred Ball and Don Delozier.

Statistically Hereford leads every District 4-5A offensive category, with High averaging nearly 100 yards a game and Wartes leads the passing with 119 yards a game and a 50 percent completion rate.

Hernandez and Mason are one-two in the receiving category with Ball and Delozier numbers five and six.

Amarillo High will try to stop the steamrolling Whiteface offense with a 5-2 defensive alignment. Leading the way for the Sandies in tackles is noseguard Mitch Woodward. Helping out on defense will be Tim Kratochvil at right tackle and strong side end Joe Bryant. In the secondary, cornerback Pat Sanders has been a potent stopping force for the Sandies.

The Harris rating system has Hereford rated 49th in the state, with a power rating six points higher than the Sandies, who are rated 96th. Hereford leads the area in the state rankings, with Plainview the closest, ranked in 55th.

Three Playoff Spots Still Up For Grabs

By TOM CANAVAN
Associated Press Writer

Baseball's second-season pennant races may be a few teams poorer, but that doesn't make them any less confusing — even the one in which the pairing for the divisional playoff has been decided.

Kansas City qualified for the division playoff against the Oakland A's in the American League West Wednesday, downing Minnesota 5-2. The victory didn't give the Royals the West title for the second season, but assured them of second place if Oakland repeats as division champ.

The Royals have five scheduled games remaining. But they could be forced to play a makeup game against Toronto Monday if they sweep Cleveland in a doubleheader today and only beat the A's in one of three games at home this weekend.

That would leave Kansas City with a 30-24 record and .555 percentage. Oakland would be 27-22 and .551, forcing the Royals to meet Toronto to determine the division titlist on Monday.

What is settled is that the best three-of-five series for the AL West divisional title will open Tuesday in Kansas City. Whether the second game also is there depends on whether the Royals win the second-half title. If they don't, the final four games will be in Oakland.

The number of contenders in the AL East slipped to three Wednesday when the Milwaukee Brewers crushed the Boston Red Sox 10-5, eliminating the Baltimore Orioles, who were rained out of their game at Detroit against the Tigers.

With four days remaining in the season, the Tigers held a slim three-percentage point lead over the Brewers with the Red Sox 1½ games back in third place and on the verge of being eliminated.

Boston (27-22) could be ousted today if Detroit (28-20) defeats Baltimore in the makeup of Wednesday night's game. The Red Sox could tie for the AL East title if they win their remaining three games, Detroit loses to Baltimore today and then takes two of three games from Milwaukee (29-21) this weekend. That would leave Boston and Detroit tied for first and force a one-game playoff.

If Detroit beats Baltimore, then the Tigers-Brewers three-game series this weekend at Milwaukee will determine the AL East second-half winner. The team winning two of those three games would win the second-half title and face the New York Yankees, the first-half winners, in a best-of-five divisional playoff, with the final three games in New York.

Both National League races got tighter Wednesday night.

In the East, the Montreal Expos moved back into first place by a half-game over the St. Louis Cardinals with a 3-2 victory over Pittsburgh. The Cardinals (26-22) lost an 8-5 decision to the Philadelphia Phillies, the first-half winners.

Both the Expos (27-22) and Cardinals have four road games left, but none against each other. The Expos meet Pittsburgh again tonight and conclude the season with three games in New York against the Mets. The Cards play the Phillies again tonight and close out the season with three games against the Pirates.

The Mets (23-26) and Phillies (23-25) both have mathematical chances at tying or winning the East title, but will be ousted if they lose one of their remaining four games or if Montreal wins one.

The San Francisco Giants face the same grim facts in the NL West, which is coming down to a duel between the Cincinnati Reds and Houston Astros to determine the Los Angeles Dodgers' opponent in the divisional playoffs.

Cincinnati (30-18) reduced the Houston lead in the West to a half-game Wednesday, downing the Astros 5-2. Both teams have four games left, including today's game in Cincinnati.

A victory by the Astros (31-18), who will play one more game than Cincinnati in the second half, would eliminate San Francisco and reduce the magic number for clinching the title to any combination of two Houston victories or Cincinnati losses.

A Cincinnati victory would leave the Reds with an edge. The Reds finish the season with three games at home against Atlanta, while the Astros close on the road against the Dodgers.

The Giants also have four games left, but the best they could hope for now is to tie the Reds for the West title.

NL Roundup

Expos 3, Pirates 2

Montreal's Rodney Scott drew a walk from Rod Scurry with two out and the bases loaded in the seventh inning to force in the winning run. Pittsburgh starter Eddie Solomon, 8-6, walked Parrish to open the inning. Following a sacrifice and a groundout, he also walked pinch-hitter Wallace Johnson. Scurry then wild pitched both runners up a base, walked John Milner to load the bases and then gave Scott a free pass.

Steve Nicosia homered for Pittsburgh and Bill Madlock flied out as a pinch-hitter but the one at-bat gave him enough plate appearances to qualify for the NL batting title. Madlock leads the league in batting with a .342 average.

Mets 2, Cubs 1

Lee Mazzilli pinch-hit a single in the ninth inning to knock in the decisive run. John Stearns led off the ninth with an infield single off Randy Martz, 5-7, advanced to second on Hubie Brooks' sacrifice and, after Dave Kingman was intentionally walked, Mazzilli batted for

Braves 9, Giants 2

Larry McWilliams threw an eight-hitter and was supported by the long ball, with Bob Horner and Dale Murphy each homering. Horner hit his third home run in two days and Murphy got his second in four days.

The loss virtually eliminated San Francisco Cincinnati by three with four games left.

Padres 2, Dodgers 0

Steve Fireovid, Dan Boone and Gary Lucas combined on a six-hitter and San Diego scored in the eighth inning on Tim Flannery's sacrifice fly and Jose Moreno's RBI single. Boone, 1-0, earned his first major-league victory. Lucas worked the final two innings for his 13th save.

The game was delayed by rain and did not start until 9:44 p.m. PDT. In Dodger Stadium's 20 years there have been only nine rainouts and none since Sept. 5, 1978.

AL Roundup

Brewers 10, Red Sox 5

The victory by Milwaukee assured the Brewers of the AL East title if they can beat Detroit two out of three games starting Friday.

Regardless of whether Detroit or Baltimore wins today's game, the Brewers would have to win two of three to finish first.

The same holds true for Detroit, although a Tiger loss today would keep Boston's slim hopes for a first-place tie alive.

Robin Yount lashed four hits and scored three times and Cecil Cooper knocked in three runs for the Brewers against the Red Sox.

Two errors by first baseman Carl Yastrzemski helped Milwaukee break a 3-3 tie in the fourth inning and Boston never caught up. Sal Bando hit a two-run single for the Brewers in their four-run fifth.

A's 3, Blue Jays 0

Mike Norris, in Billy Martin's doghouse in recent weeks, earned a start in next Tuesday's opener of the West playoffs by pitching a three-hitter for Oakland against Toronto.

Norris, who had lost three of his previous four decisions, allowed only three singles, struck out four and walked one to improve his record to 12-9.

Rob Picciolo homered in the third inning for the A's, and they got two more runs in the fourth, one on an infield single by Jeff Newman and the other on a steal of home by Dave McKay.

White Sox 10, Angels 3

Greg Luzinski hit his 20th homer and drove in four runs and Chicago scored seven runs on six singles and two California errors in the second inning.

Britt Burns picked up his 10th victory in 16 decisions with six innings of pitching and Lamarr Hoyt earned his 10th save.

Bobby Grich hit his 21st homer for the Angels, tying him for the AL lead.

Rangers 3, Mariners 1

Charlie Hough won his fourth straight game, all as a starter, tossing a three-hitter for Texas in its victory over Seattle.

Hough, 4-1, who struck out eight and walked four, surrendered the Mariners' only

Refugee Problem Frustrates Miami Hospital

By SUSAN POSTLEWATE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Doctors and nurses at Jackson Memorial, Florida's largest public hospital, are learning voodoo — along with new languages and new cultures — while they scramble to care for refugees pouring into the state.

The often indigent refugees are also biting deep into the county-funded hospital's budget.

"I've been here 10 years and over the last year, the whole face of the hospital has changed," says Dr. Bernard Elser, head of the emergency room.

Overcrowding is critical. Fire marshals recently ordered the hospital to find other quarters for 35 pregnant women, most of them Haitian refugees, lying on beds in hallways.

The cultural and language problems frustrate doctors, who must try to decipher patients' symptoms through translators. The hospital hired 20 translators in the past year; doctors say they need 200.

"We make rounds in the morning and we can't talk to them," Elser said in an interview. "I'm lucky. I have two doctors on my team who speak Spanish. Maybe one doctor in the whole hospital speaks Haitian creole."

"In the meantime, you've got a guy with a 103 temperature who could have anything wrong with him. And if they're coming from Haiti, they could have anything."

Parasites and exotic diseases such as malaria, yaws and dengue fever are rife among the refugees, and tuberculosis is a serious threat. The rate of tuberculosis in Florida's base population is 18.4 cases per 100,000 residents. The rate among Haitian refugees is 20 times that.

Natural illness is trouble enough, but some Haitians here subscribe to island voodoo beliefs which blame angry gods for their sickness. "Sometimes we have to 'exorcise' them," Elser said. "That's part of being a doctor, too — making a patient feel comfortable."

Jackson's Dr. Hazel Weidner, who has spent several years studying the health culture of Haitians, Cubans and Bahamians, said many Haitians don't understand physical functions and don't know the words for body parts such as liver or kidney.

"They can't define the kind of hurt it is, whether the pain is a sharp pain, of long or short duration," she said.

Jackson has ties with an outpatient clinic which can put patients in touch with traditional voodoo healers. The hospital also deals with what she called "culture brokers" who can help treat people for psychosomatic problems that may spring from religious beliefs.

While such cultural barriers vex the 6,000-member Jackson Memorial staff, the cost of caring for the refugees is a more serious problem.

The only public hospital for Dade County's 1.6 million residents was "a very busy hospital" before the refugees arrived, said Fred Cowell, president of the Public Health Trust, which operates Jackson.

"The refugee problem made it all that worse....We're beginning to compromise our health care delivery because of the refugees."

The taxpayers whose taxes support Jackson Memorial Hospital can't get the services because we are filled up with indigent patients," said Dr. William Cleveland, chief of pediatrics at the University of Miami School of Medicine.

Jackson bears the brunt of the refugees' health problems because all Dade County patients without health insurance must check in through its emergency room.

Of the 724,142 patients admitted to Jackson or treated as outpatients in the nine months between October 1980 and July 1, 1981, roughly 11,000 were Haitian refugees, 13,000 were Cubans and 2,000 were Nicaraguans.

Officials say they don't know when or if Jackson will be fully reimbursed by the Reagan government. So far, the hospital has received more than $10 million in federal funds, but only for services to Haitians and Cubans who arrived before October 1980 and were given a special "entrant" status by the Carter administration. The government does not reimburse treatment for Nicaraguans, and the hospital is out about $1 million in that area.

The government gave the hospital $2 million at the beginning of September, but Jackson's vice president of finance, Leon Zucker, says the hospital should get $4 million more for refugee care given since January.

That sum is in dispute. Zucker said the government is refusing to pay for aliens who weren't screened by the Immigration Service and state medicare department. Jackson has treated about 1,500 such refugees since Jan. 15.

Cowell said the hospital's worst crunches are in emergency and obstetrics.

Refugee babies have crowded the obstetrics and neo-natal care wards. Of the 11,000 babies born at Jackson last year, 18 percent were to Haitian mothers. In two weeks in February, the percentage was close to 19 percent, with 44 Haitian babies among 237 births.

The Jackson staff also reports a dramatic rise in stabbing and shooting cases. "The criminal element has increased," Elser said, referring to the convicts and mental patients Cuban President Fidel Castro sent to Florida on the "Freedom Flotilla" last year. "We have an increased number of trauma patients winding up as long-term care patients."

Nevertheless, the exotic nature of many of the illnesses has provided the teaching hospital with unusual learning opportunities.

"It's great if you're a doctor," Cowell said. "The staff has been absolutely heroic in keeping up with the volume."

But he's dismayed at the related problems: "It's creating an enormous pressure. We are having difficulty paying our bills."

Petition Seeks To Remove County Judge From Bench

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Webb County judge, accused of appointing his relatives to handle cases in his court, should be removed from office, says the Texas Commission on Judicial Standards.

The commission on Wednesday recommended that the Texas Supreme Court take Webb County Court-at-Law Judge Emilio "Chito" Davila off the bench. Davila, who was censured by the commission in May, should be suspended without pay pending disposition of the case, the commission said.

Davila appointed his relatives to cases in his court, left the scene of a 1979 auto wreck and lied to the commission, according to the commission's petition filed in the Supreme Court.

The judge was at a judicial conference in Corpus Christi on Wednesday and was unavailable for comment.

Davila was censured in May after the commission determined he had appointed Roger Rocha, his son-in-law, to 26 cases in his court, at a cost of $2,325 to the county. The censure also said Davila left the scene of a wreck in order to avoid arrest for driving while intoxicated.

Davila should be removed from office, the commission said, because he has engaged in "a variety of acts which were deemed to have been willful and persistent conduct which was inconsistent with the proper performance of his duties as a county court-at-law judge and conduct which casts public discredit upon the judiciary of the state of Texas."

The commission said Davila "did wrongfully sit in judgment" in the cases involving Rocha.

In February, Davila — despite a court-appointed special master's report about the 26 cases — again appointed Rocha to a case. The $6,000 fee approved in the case was "excessive," according to the commission.

Davila's ruling in another case involving his son-in-law was made with "the intention of forcing a sale of the realty irrespective of what was mandated by the law or facts," said the document signed by Commission Chairman Edward Coulson.

Another Davila son-in-law, Joe Nieto III, also was appointed to a case in the county court-at-law, the commission said.
