School vote delayed

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Midland Independent School District elections, originally scheduled for May 3, have been postponed indefinitely until an appellate court decides whether it should uphold or overturn a federal judge's order to abolish the district's at-large method of electing school board members.

After reviewing the case last week, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La. on Monday issued the stay and ordered elections be postponed indefinitely, thus prolonging a legal battle between the MISD, the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council over minority representation on the school board.

MISD attorney Charles Tighe said a representative with the appellate court clerk's office notified him of the stay by telephone late Monday afternoon, but Tighe refused comment on the ruling saying, "I would really like to see what they wrote first."

In February, the school district asked for an expedited appeal hoping the appellate court would overturn U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton's order to switch from the at-large method and adopt a plan dividing the city into seven single-member districts. Bunton ruled that the at-large system was unconstitutional.

In addition, MISD requested the appellate court consider its original compromise proposal for a 4-3 plan (four single-member districts and three at-large positions). Bunton had rejected that plan also and ordered the board to hold elections on May 3 for two minority districts as proposed by LULAC and the BAC. The remainder were to be divided into five additional single-member districts.

Tighe said the eight candidates seeking election to the two minority districts as well as the present board were told of the stay late Monday. Under the terms of the order, trustees currently holding office will continue to do so until a ruling is issued in the case.

Although LULAC and BAC attorney Rolando Rios had not been notified of the postponement, he argued that the action would only delay the inevitable.

"I don't think there's any way they can go with the 4-3 plan because it's a violation of state law," Rios said in a telephone interview from his San Antonio residence. He noted a 1982 statute that requires school boards to have at least two minority representatives if a district abolished at-large elections.

Rios speculated that the appellate court chose to postpone the election until the U.S. Supreme Court rules on a pending case dealing with racially polarized voting.

"Personally, I would have rather had the election go on and have at least two minorities on the board, but I presume the court felt it would be judicially wise to wait and see how the Supreme Court rules on this case," he said.

But Tighe, who requested the stay, said he believes the panel of judges opted to issue the mandate in order to study the evidence and decide the case on its merits.

LULAC president Edia Hernandez, a candidate for the District 1 seat, said she was disappointed to learn of the delay. "They say its indefinite, but how long is indefinite?"

Khadafy urges Arab attack

Oil minister to seek OPEC embargo

By ROBERT BURNS

GENEVA (AP) — Libya's oil minister said today he will ask an OPEC conference to consider imposing an embargo on oil shipments to the United States in response to the American bombing raid against Libya.

Fawzi Shakshuki was asked by reporters in a Geneva hotel if he would ask his OPEC partners for an embargo in retaliation for today's U.S. air raids. He replied: "We did ask it one time. We did ask it." Asked if he would renew the call, he said, "Yes, we will ask it again."

"We did fight back and we will defend our country. We will fight them not only for Libya but for all Islamic countries," he said of the U.S. attack. "They killed civilians. They shot civilians."

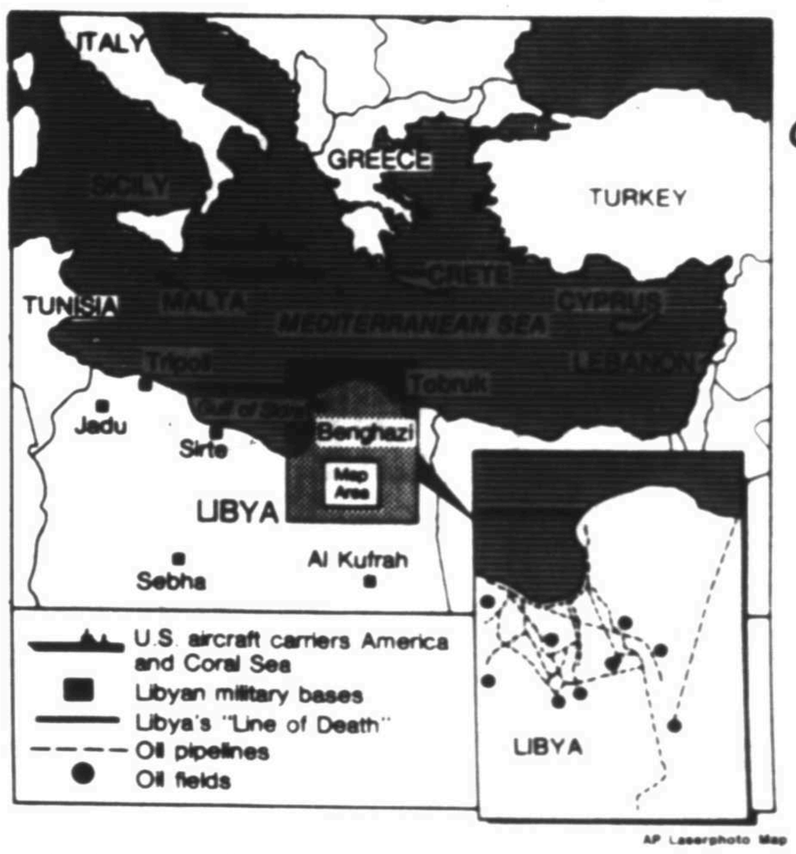

Shakshuki said Libyan oil installations and delivery systems were not damaged in the attack.

He did not specify if he was advocating an embargo by all members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which includes non-Arab nations, or a strictly Arab move.

Most OPEC ministers stayed clear of public view as they prepared for the opening of the conference today. The Kuwaiti minister, Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, would make no comment on the U.S.-Libya confrontation except to say "it's an area for foreign ministers" to consider.

Libya ships no oil directly to the United States. OPEC as a group supplies barely 10 percent of U.S. oil consumption.

Libyan launch fires at American facility

By KEVIN COSTELLOE

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy's government today called on Arab nations to strike American targets worldwide after the nighttime U.S. bombing raid of military targets near the port cities of Tripoli and Benghazi.

Libya state radio called it a "cowardly" attack, and said innocent people were killed and residential areas in both cities bombed. Several buildings in downtown Tripoli were blasted to rubble.

Government officials took foreign reporters to the affluent Bin Ashur — 7th of April — residential neighborhood, where five or six civilian houses and the back of the French Embassy were damaged.

In the soft dawn light, the streets were littered with smashed cars and huge chunks of concrete; power lines were down and water spurted from broken water mains.

Residents said many people fled in panic, racing about the streets in their nightclothes screaming for help, when the bombs fell around 2 a.m. (7 p.m. EST).

Hundreds of young men, many dressed in green fatigue uniforms and some carrying weapons, shouted "Down with America" and "Assassins, assassins. Criminal, criminal."

Khadafy did not appear in public today, did not immediately make any broadcast statements, and there was no indication of his whereabouts. A government official said Khadafy survived the bombing raid.

In Rome, Antonio Ghirelli, a spokesman for the Italian premier, reported a Libyan motor launch fired today at a U.S. telecommunications facility on the Italian island of Lampedusa, about 175 miles north of Libya.

Many Midlanders praise action

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

The topic of the day for most Midlanders on their way to work this morning was President Reagan's decision to retaliate against Libya with Monday evening's five-point attack.

Many praised the bombing.

"I think they should have done it to start with instead of just agitating them," said L.D. Romack, referring to the recent "open seas" maneuver by U.S. naval forces in the Gulf of Sidra.

Romack, a 20-year Midland resident employed as a drilling consultant, indicated he has had personal experience with terrorist-type activity working in the oilfields.

"I've made more than 20 trips to South America and each time I wondered whether I would make it back," he said, referring to the various guerrilla movements in Latin America.

Romack, however, suggested Monday's attack may not have been strong enough.

"I think it will slow him down, but we'll probably have to do more later," he said.

Another man agreed.

"You bet it was the right thing to do," he said. "I think we should have bombed them a little bit harder."

Other Midlanders interviewed on their way to work downtown also agreed with Romack.

"I'm glad we did it," said Felicia Pierce. "But I think he'll come back madder than ever."

"I was all for it," said Peter Bike "I think he (Moammar Khadafy) was asking for it," he said.

"I was all for the bombing," said Doris Green. "We have to show Khadafy that we really mean what we say."

White House labels strike against Libya 'successful'

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House today declared the U.S. military strike against Libyan terrorist targets a success that "struck a blow against terrorism and sent a message" to Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy.

Spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed that American military and diplomatic facilities have taken security precautions across the world, and said it was too early to say whether an attack in Japan was retaliation for the bombings.

Speakes, summed up the White House view in a mid-morning briefing for reporters that provided little new detail on the extent of damage to terrorist facilities in Tripoli or Benghazi.

He did confirm that one Air Force F-111, and its crew of two, remained unaccounted-for and is the subject of a naval and air search.

He said the middle-of-the-night air strikes had "successfully accomplished" their objective. "We're determined to put an end to terrorism and make Khadafy pay the price," he said.

"When we can clearly identify persons responsible for terrorist attacks we will hold them accountable," Speakes said. He repeated statements from Monday night that American intelligence had considerable evidence that Khadafy had planned a series of future anti-American attacks.

"The president said he would be prepared to do it again," Speakes said when asked about the prospect of Libyan retaliation.

He said 5,836 telephone calls to the White House gave the president "an 80 percent approval rating."

1985 tax deadline arrives two weeks before 'Tax Freedom Day 1986'

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Midnight is the deadline for most Americans to settle accounts with Uncle Sam for another year, but a private study shows the average worker will have to put in another 15 days on the job before reaching "Tax Freedom Day 1986."

Perhaps 10 million couples and individuals waited until the final day of the tax-filing season to drop their returns into the mailbox. The Internal Revenue Service estimates another 4.4 million were taking automatic four-month extensions. Some were leaving the country today, which won them an extension to June 16. And still others were simply planning to miss the deadline and pay a penalty.

The great majority of the 104 million couples and individuals who are expected to file returns this year had done so before the last-minute crush. And about 40 million already have received their refunds.

While the Postal Service prepared for what has become a modern-day ritual and the IRS stood by to process the returns, the independent Tax Foundation was calculating that it will take until May 1 for the average worker to make enough money to pay his or her federal, state and local taxes for 1986.

That assumes every penny earned up until "Tax Freedom Day" is earmarked for taxes.

That is the same time the typical worker had to devote to the tax collector in 1985, the foundation said. The date was May 4 in 1981, before passage of the Reagan tax cuts; it dropped to April 28 in 1984.

Viewed another way, the foundation calculated that if all the business and personal taxes by government at all levels were divided among the work force, a worker would have to devote 2 hours and 39 minutes of an eight-hour day to paying taxes. That is the same as last year and 1980.

In announcing the new calculations, the foundation, a nonpartisan research organization, said, "The May 1 date marks the third time in the 1980s that Tax Freedom Day has coincided with May Day, "an interesting convergence in view of the international acceptance of that term as a distress call."

Distressed taxpayers who were forced — or chose — to wait until the last minute to file their federal returns were converging on financial institutions to deposit money into tax-deferred Individual Retirement Accounts. And professional tax preparers had their hands full.

"We expect to prepare about 10 million returns this year, and about half of them waited until the last two weeks," said Al James Golato, a spokesman for the giant H&R Block tax preparation company. "The places are crowded, people are coming in late and we don't know if we can handle them."

Texans applaud action, question its effectiveness

Associated Press

Texans at home applauded the U.S. bombing of strategic sites in Libya for terrorist acts against American citizens, but some questioned whether the raids will end terrorist activity.

Many who fear reprisals by Libyan Col. Moammar Khadafy said it is now the terrorists' next move and their target is uncertain. But one Texan who has defied President Reagan's order to leave Libya said Reagan was "insane" for ordering the attacks.

A random poll conducted by the Dallas Morning News Monday night showed 75.9 percent of respondents in favor of the air strikes. But only 48 percent of those polled said they believe the air strikes will stop future terrorism.

The air strikes were opposed by 13.4 percent of those polled, and 10.7 percent of respondents had no opinion.

In a copyright story Tuesday, the newspaper reported 30.6 percent of respondents said they do not believe the strikes will curb terrorist activity and 21.4 percent had no opinion.

The poll questioned 702 people selected at random from Dallas, Tarrant, Collin and Denton counties and has a margin of error of no more than plus or minus 4 percentage points..

The poll showed a slight difference between male and female respondents, with 81 percent of the men supporting Reagan's actions compared to 70.9 percent of the women.

Much of the reaction across Texas indicated a growing frustration, starting with Vietnam and building up through the Iranian hostage situation and subsequent terrorist attacks.

"It's about time we did something," Jessica Mowad of El Paso said Monday. "We can't just let people like Khadafy tell us what to do."

Javier Macias told the El Paso Times, "I was hoping we would (bomb). Khadafy has to be kept in line. All the terrorism, and Khadafy, ties right into the Soviet Union."

Dallas Cowboys majority owner H.R. "Bum" Bright applauded the U.S. air attacks.

"Hooray for us," Bright told the Dallas Times Herald. "I think we ought to quit worrying about what other people think about us and let them start thinking about what we think about them."

Bright said he was angry that the French government would not allow U.S. fighter pilots to fly over their country.

"I was over in France rescuing them from the Germans (in World War II), and brother, I'm upset with the Frenchmen," he said. "I'm for this country and our young men."

Pete Sandoval of El Paso said, "I feel the military ought to go in there and do what they have to do, as they did in Grenada. I feel it's wrong what Khadafy's doing.

"If the U.S. continues to let his terrorism go unpunished, we're going to lose the U.S. We just have tc stop it. It's for my kids, mainly, that I feel this way," said Sandoval.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros said he fully supported Reagan's decision but doubted it would forestall any further terrorist actions against Americans.

"I would suspect that there will be more activity because of the zealous fervor of the terrorists, but there was nothing lost in hitting them," Cisneros told the San Antonio Light. "My suspicions are that it will not head off any future attacks."

The mayor said the United States had no choice in the raid after finding evidence Libya was involved in the recent bombing of a West German disco.

"We must acknowledge that Americans have been killed and there have been orders out to kill more Americans. America must try to preempt these actions," he said.

Bexar County Judge Tom Vickers said, "We had to do something. If someone attacks us we just can't do nothing. The danger is whether this will escalate the situation.

"I don't think there's any question it got the message across, but we have to continue to use other means such as intelligence to stop the terrorist acts."

Jeswald Salacuse, dean of Southern Methodist University School of Law, said, "The question is what's his (Khadafy's) response? Is he going to say, 'Okay, I quit.'

"I don't think so. I think he's got to come back with some other action," said Salacuse, who has lived in the Middle East.

"I believe we need to deter him (Khadafy) as much as possible before he makes another terrorist attack," said 19-year-old Kirk Bennett of San Antonio. "We have to use force because I just don't think he has enough intelligence to talk."

Ralph Zamora of San Antonio said it was time the country's leaders took action.

"I support Reagan," he said. "It's an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

Jack May of Palestine, Texas, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in a telephone interview from the Libyan Desert that the U.S. attacks will only increase terrorism.

"Rambo Reagan is insane," May said. "He is trying to win an Academy Award for this performance."

May, 57, is working in an oilfield 700 miles south of Tripoli, the main target area. He is one of about 800 Americans who have defied Reagan's orders to leave the country.

"I think there are a lot of ways of solving problems without dropping bombs on on people's head in the middle of the night," May said. "When you kill innocent women and and children here, that will not stop terrorism. That will increase it tenfold.

"These people want to live in peace and not be bombed by some damned maniac in Washington," he said. "They know they cannot whip us in a fight and that this (terrorism) is the only weapon they have to fight us with."

U.S.

"In our assessment we believe we have struck a blow against terrorism and we have sent the message to Khadafy," Speakes said.

Speakes was asked about reports from Japan concerning an explosion at a U.S. military facility and he told reporters in the White House briefing room:

"At 6:10 Eastern time this morning, a truck exploded at the gate of the U.S. facility. Japanese police responded. There was no loss of life or injury. The truck contained rocket launchers which exploded."

He said it was the only such incident at an American facility.

Speakes declined to say whether or not the military operation against Libya was complete.

"I don't think it serves any purpose for me to discuss the tactical operations of the United States goverment in this mission...we have done that (sent a message), now we will wait and see (what Khadafy's reaction is)," he said.

Speakes was asked about reports that a residential area of Tripoli apparently hit by one of the 33 American war planes was a stronghold of Palestinian terrorist Abu Nidal.

"I have seen those reports but I cannot confirm what the situation is with regard to Abu Nidal," he said. He described the targets as "very specific."

He said the president decided "sometime last week that the United States would take the military route."

Asked to describe the timing of the decision-making, Speakes said, "when they (military advisers) came forward and said, 'Is Monday night all right?' The president said, 'Fine'."

Asked if the operation was an attempt to overthrow Khadafy, Speakes said, "Our strategy has been stressed many times over...(it) is to change his behavior in the world community."

Earlier, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said the administration hopes the bombing of Libya will shock people into seeing how serious terrorist attacks against Americans are, and help diminish them.

"What we want to see is an end to this terrorist activity," Shultz said in an appearance on the NBC "Today" show. "We hope that this move will, on the one hand, shock people into seeing how serious it is and, on the other, bring about its diminution and a rallying of people."

U.S. Air Force and Navy bombers blasted five military targets around the major port cities of Tripoli and Benghazi to punish Libya for what Reagan called Khadafy's "reign of terror."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said one Air Force F-111 and its two-man crew were unaccounted-for after the bombing ended. He and other Pentagon officials refused to say the missing plane had been shot down, suggesting it could have experienced radio trouble or been diverted to another landing field.

"We are continuing to make every effort to locate the one plane that is still unreported," Weinberger said today on the ABC program "Good Morning America."

"We don't think that there were any planes that we know of that were hit by fire," Weinberger said. "As far as this one plane is concerned, we just don't know what has happened to it."

Weinberger and Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said 16 of the two-seat bombers returned safely to bases in England. The 17th plane landed at a Spanish-American naval base in Rota after an engine overheated.

Libyan radio claimed three U.S. planes were hit and the crewmen of one jet were killed on the ground by Libyan citizens after their plane was downed.

The planes struck Khadafy's headquarters, two military airfields and what were termed terrorist training facilities.

Weinberger today sidestepped questions about civilian casualties and damage to residential buildings and the French embassy in Tripoli.

The secretary said there were military targets very close to the French embassy "that we believe were hit, and we'll have full reports on the damage assessment later this morning."

"We don't know what hit it (the embassy) at this point. What we know is that Libyan sources are reporting it and there were also a substantial amount of attempts through machinegun and other local air-defense systems to try to hit the planes. They didn't succeed, but they may have hit a lot of other things."

LIBYA

Ghirelli termed the incident "very small" and said he didn't believe there was any damage or casualties on the island. Libyan radio, monitored in London, claimed the facility was destroyed.

On Monday, President Reagan said the raids on Libya was to retaliate for Libyan-sponsored terrorism, in particular the April 5 bombing at a Berlin nightclub frequented by American soldiers.

Eighteen British-based F-111 fighter planes joined 15 A-6 and A-7 U.S. Navy attack jets based on carriers in the Mediterranean and thundered in the attack on the North African country, the Reagan administration said.

Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said 16 of the two-seat F-111s returned to bases in England. One F-111 landed in Spain after reportedly experiencing mechnical trouble, and one plane was unaccounted for.

U.S. military bases and embassies around the world were reported on full alert to guard against terrorist attacks.

Anti-aircraft fire could be heard in Tripoli at the time of the early morning bombing raid. Machine-gun volleys echoed through the streets, indicating possible street fighting, and at least two huge explosions rocked the city.

Later, a bright blue flash exploded over the harbor, where Libyan naval ships had been seen. There was no immediate explanation for the later activity.

By 6:15 a.m., life appeared to be returning to normal in the Libyan capital. Cars drove down the streets and people gathered at shops. The international airport at Tripoli was reported open.

(Libyan radio monitored in London said the attack caused "extensive destruction" of civilian targets in Benghazi, the North African country's second largest city with about 650,000 people. Homes, schools and a center for disabled people were destroyed, the broadcast said.)

Windows were blown out at the French Embassy, but French officials said no one was injured in the mission. Some foreigners in the damaged Bin Ashur neighborhood said a Libyan security headquarters in the area might have been a target.

The body of an elderly man was removed on a stretcher from one of the buildings, and guides said many people were taken to hospitals.

Dr. Fathi Benghazi of the Central Hospital said 60 to 100 people were brought in with wounds, but that many of the injuries were superficial.

A Libyan government official who did not permit use of his name said civilians had been killed during the raid. "Women and children were killed in three blocks of apartment buildings," he said.

The official said victims were being pulled from the rubble, but he did not know the number of casualties.

Khadafy's home and headquarters reportedly were hit in the attack, but a Libyan government official said Khadafy was not hurt.

"He's OK, he's OK," Information Director Ibrahim Seger said in a brief comment to The Associated Press in the lobby of the Hotel Al Kabir.

Another unidentified woman shouted over her shoulder as she disappeared into a waiting elevator.

"I think it's great," she said. 'I'd have done it a long time ago."

James Marshall, too, supported the president's actions.

"I think the U.S. was right," he said. "It had to be done to stop all of this terrorism."

Two other Midlanders shouted "It's great" and "It's about time" as they rushed by.

Among those interviewed, there was little concern the Libya bombing would have much affect on the current oil situation in the Permian Basin.

"I sure hope it doesn't," indicated Ms. Green.

Permian Basin Petroleum Association President Harry Spannaus, didn't see the bombing as relevant to the local economic slowdown.

"It won't have any affect on it," he said.

Libya's oil minister, however, called for an an "embargo on oil shipments to the U.S." by Arab countries today as OPEC reconvened.

Midland Mayor Thane Akins, a candidate for the Republican nomination to the 21st Congressional race, agreed with most that the bombing was necessary and that the incident may or may not affect the local oil situation.

"I think we should have done it even before this," said Akins. "We shouldn't put up with that kind of bully in the world. Anyone who indiscriminantly kills women and children shouldn't be tolerated."

Akins suggested there could be some affect on the local economy if the crisis were to escalate.

"If it spread to other Arab countries, it could affect us somewhat," he said. "However we import most of our oil from Mexico and Canada right now. I don't think there will be any affect in the short run. But with the decline in the domestic oil industry there could be an affect in the long run."

Despite the president's address to the nation Monday evening and steady media coverage of the attack, some Midlanders either had not heard of the bombing or had heard very little.

"I just came from my parent's house where I heard about it," said one woman. "I really don't know anything about it yet."

Still another asked "what bombing?"

OPEC

In October 1973, the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries, a forum for oil producers rather than a policymaking group like OPEC, imposed an embargo on oil shipments to the United States and the Netherlands for their support of Israel's invasion of Egypt.

The embargo triggered an explosion in oil prices and thrust OPEC into a period of power that lasted until 1981, when a world glut began pushing prices back down.

OPEC ministers have gathered for a new round of talks on ways to boost oil prices. Industry analysts said they see little chance of a meaningful agreement.

Crude oil prices on the open market fell sharply Monday, one sign that oil traders doubted OPEC could reach an accord. May contracts for the most popular grade of American oil fell 64 cents a barrel, to $12.97, in light trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Oil industry sources in London who spoke on condition they not be identified quoted Kuwait's al-Sabah as saying Monday that he held out little hope OPEC could resolve its differences soon.

Al-Sabah was quoted as saying it was more likely OPEC would aim for a comprehensive oil price and production accord at its regular summer conference, scheduled for late June in Yugoslavia.

The IRS kept its telephone information system and many of its offices open past normal business hours. Officials said the IRS anticipates no problem handling what could be a record number of returns filed in a span of several hours.

That is quite a change from April 15, 1985, when persistent computer problems produced the worst snafu in IRS history. The backlog of unprocessed returns reached 40 percent of the number filed; at last check this year, only 22 percent were waiting to be handled.

"Things are back to normal," IRS spokesman Steve Pyrek said Monday.

On the average, getting a refund has been taking about 5½ weeks. But returns filed this late will take up to eight weeks.

Austrian Jews report harassment

By GEORGE JAHN

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The Jewish Center here recently received an anonymous postcard addressed to the "Jewish Swine Department," advising Austrian Jews to clear out for Israel and adding, "Hitler should have gassed you all."

Jewish community leaders say prominent Jews are being harassed by a flood of anonymous telephone threats, and some parents have begun escorting their children to religious instruction out of fear a Jewish school bus might become a target of violence.

The Jews of Austria are used to crank mail and calls. But many of them say overt anti-Semitism has mushroomed because of the argument about Kurt Waldheim's wartime past.

The World Jewish Congress has accused the former U.N. secretary general of having covered up for decades a past that included membership in Nazi-affiliated organizations and in a German army unit implicated in the deaths of 43,000 Greek Jews.

The resulting debate has even inspired President Rudolf Kirchschlaeger, who rarely makes public comments on controversial issues, to warn against anti-Semitism in Austria. Other prominent non-Jews have bought space in newspapers to express consternation at the anti-Jewish threats.

"The letters we have been getting are like a thermometer" measuring public sentiment toward the Jewish community, Jewish editor Karl Pfeifer said of the recent increase in hate mail.

Pfeifer, editor of the weekly Gemeinde, said in an interview there are normally no more than one or two such letters a month. But Leon Zelman, the Jewish community's official spokesman, said he alone received about 50 in one week after he criticized Waldheim in a radio interview.

Waldheim, a leading candidate in the May 4 presidential election, says he did no wrong. He has infuriated many Jews by accusing unspecified "Jewish circles" of trying to harm Austria's image.

Jewish leaders counter that Waldheim and some supporters are trying to draw the votes of Austrian anti-Semites with such statements.

Jewish leaders also are angry at Michael Graff, a leader of the conservative People's Party, which nominated Waldheim, for suggesting recently that too vocal criticism of Waldheim could feed anti-Semitism. Jewish leaders call such comments an attempt at intimidation.

"They all want only one thing," Zelman said of those who make such statements. "They are saying, 'Remain nice and quiet and then we'll be able to live with each other. We will put up with you just as long as you do not remind us of the past.' "

That past has been darkened by anti-Semitism as bad as any in Nazi Germany, which formally absorbed Austria in March 1938. During World War II, Jews here were persecuted as harshly as anywhere in Adolf Hitler's Third Reich.

Austrian history books represent the "Anschluss" — the consolidation of Austria into Germany — as an act of Nazi aggression, saying Austrians had no voice in the matter. But many Austrians supported Hitler. In a referendeum after German troops crossed the border, 99.73 percent of Austrian voters were said to have favored the union with Germany.

Fearing for their lives, many Austrian Jews emigrated in the 1930s, and many more died in the Holocaust. Their vibrant prewar community of 250,000 was reduced to 200 by 1945.

Today, they number about 9,000 people, concentrated in central Vienna. Their synagogues, kosher restaurants and other establishments are watched over day and night by police and by television cameras mounted after a wave of Arab-inspired violence against Jewish targets in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Some Austrian Jewish leaders say anti-Semitism has been a worrisome problem for them throughout the postwar period.

Efforts to delay trial fail; Artukovic's indictment read

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Artukovic

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — Andrija Artukovic, who was extradited from Southern California after he was accused of being one of the most monstrous war criminals of the Nazi era, went on trial here Monday.

His attorneys sought to delay the trial on the grounds that the 86-year-old defendant was suffering from ill health and senility, but they were overruled.

Artukovic, the former interior minister of the Nazi puppet "independent state of Croatia," appeared to doze off as the prosecutor, Ivanka Pintar-Gajer, read a 38-page indictment that accused him of ordering some of the most brutal mass murders of World War II.

Although he is legally blind, almost deaf and arrived in Yugoslavia on a stretcher from the United States two months ago, Artukovic walked unaided into the courtroom and answered quickly and accurately when asked routine questions legally establishing his identity.

Dressed casually in a sport jacket and tieless shirt, the one-time police boss of wartime Croatia, who has been dubbed "the Butcher of the Balkans" by the Yugoslav press, appeared at times to be alert and at other times to be indifferent to the proceedings. He sat in a bullet-proof glass booth facing the judges under close guard by two policemen who helped him to his feet from time to time when he was asked to stand up.

When it looked as if Artukovic were asleep during the reading of the indictment, one of his defense attorneys, Srdja Popovic, shouted across the courtroom, "Let him listen to the indictment; don't let him fall asleep."

Artukovic sat stiffly with his mouth slackly open, and his hands clasped across his midriff, during much of the three-hour, 30-minute proceeding, but near the end he appeared to relax as he crossed his legs in a casual attitude.

Monday's session was adjourned before Artukovic would have been asked whether he undertood the indictment and had any comment on it, a process required by Yugoslav law.

Duvalier assets frozen

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Swiss authorities announced today they have moved to freeze any assets that deposed President Jean-Claude Duvalier of Haiti might have in Switzerland.

The action was requested today by the new Haitian government in a telex to the Swiss Federal Police, a Justice Ministry statement said.

Haiti asked for a freeze on any Duvalier accounts in banks in Geneva, Zurich and Lausanne, the statement said. It did not list the banks or how much money was believed involved.

On Monday, a Justice Ministry official said Swiss officials met last week with Haitian government representatives who are tracking Duvalier's foreign assets.

Talks focus on trafficking

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) — U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese and his Mexican counterpart, Sergio Garcia Ramirez, met Monday at this Caribbean beach resort where the main topic of dicussion was illegal drug trafficking.

The meeting between Meese and Garcia Ramirez marked the fourth time the two men have met since Meese became attorney general a year ago. The talks were scheduled to conclude today.

While the two men were meeting, Mexican and U.S. federal law enforcement officials were conducting separate sessions dealing with narcotics, fugitive issues and general law enforcement topics, according to U.S. Department of Justice spokesman Terry Eastland.

Marcos loyalists react

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Supporters of deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos clashed with police today in a fray that injured 60 people, and Marcos loyalists called for civil disobedience at a rump session of the abolished National Assembly.

Anti-riot troops tangled with Marcos followers in a melee of rock-throwing and gunfire. The loyalists were protesting the ouster of former Mayor Joseph Estrada, who served under Marcos, in the Manila suburb of San Juan.

Police Chief Lt. Col. Enrique Aguinaldo said police were attacked first by stones, Molotov cocktails and gunfire from the crowd at San Juan.

Police said that 60 anti-riot police had to deal with a crowd of up to 1,000 that was caught up in the fighting.

Hospitals reported 60 people hurt, including 18 policemen.

AN ANGEL TIP BY- PITCHER DON TIMBERBLAKE
CONCENTRATION & CONDITIONING

Many people feel the pitcher has the hardest job on the team. After all, he's got to start every single play by throwing the ball to home plate. And he has got to throw it hard and with great accuracy. He cannot relax or let up. A mistake could cost his team a ball game, especially if the score is close.

The pitcher must be strong and in excellent physical condition. He must take good care of his arm. But he must also keep his legs in shape. If his legs get tired, he won't pitch right, no matter how strong his arm feels.

Besides pitching, the pitcher must be ready to act as an infielder if the batter hits the ball toward him. He must also watch the base runners to keep them from stealing.

WHO'S RIGHT?

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ 8 6 4 3 ♡ Q J 9 ◇ 9 5 3 2 ♣ 8 5
WEST ♠ 9 5 2 ♡ 7 4 3 ◇ J 10 8 ♣ A J 10 6		EAST ♠ Q J 10 7 ♡ 8 ◇ K Q 6 4 ♣ Q 7 4 2
	SOUTH ♠ A K ♡ A K 10 6 5 2 ◇ A 7 ♣ K 9 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇

We have often maintained that rubber bridge and duplicate pairs are more like two different games than two versions of the same game. Consider this hand. Should you make your contract at rubber bridge? At duplicate?

The bidding was old-fashioned but accurate. South's opening two heart bid was strong and North's jump to game showed good trumps but denied a side-suit ace, king or singleton.

If you go down with this hand at rubber bridge, you must be squandering thousands of points each year. You can afford to lose two club tricks and a diamond, and you can assure your contract by simply winning the ace of diamonds and then leading a club from hand at trick two. (Don't hold up the ace, because the opponents might be able to defeat you by shifting to a trump at trick two.) Now there is no way the defenders can stop you from ruffing a club in dummy, limiting your losses to two diamonds and a club.

At duplicate you must consider what the rest of the field will do. Most will be in four hearts, though here and there you might find a three no trump contract, which will make nine tricks on any lead except a club, and ten with a club lead.

If East has the ace of clubs, you can score an overtrick at four hearts. Even if the ace is with West, you can still make four hearts if trumps are 2-2 or in the unlikely event that the defender who wins the second club started with a singleton trump. So it is probably right to win the ace of diamonds, cross to the table with a trump and lead a club to your king. All West has to do is win and return a trump to set your contract.

Strait takes top country music honors

Strait

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — Singer George Strait's two awards prevented another sweep by Alabama at the Academy of Country Music Awards, but the quartet won entertainer of the year and top vocal group for the fifth straight year.

Strait won the album of the year award Monday night and was named top male vocalist, an award he also won last year.

Alabama's two awards gave the group a record 14 "Hat" trophies.

"It's probably more important than the first one, because we've outdone ourselves," Alabama member Jeff Cook said backstage at the end of the nationally televised show from Knott's Berry Farm.

Strait said he was stunned to win the top male vocalist again.

"I never expected this two years in a row," Strait said after "Does Fort Worth Ever Cross Your Mind?" was named best album. "I really didn't think I was going to win, but I'll take it."

Ronnie Milsap's "Lost in the Fifties," a nostalgic mix of country and doo-wop, won song of the year. Earlier this year, Milsap won a best country male vocal Grammy for the same tune.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Catherine Oxenberg says Richard Burton "sparked the fantasy of acting" in her as a youngster, when he dated her mother.

"He was a brilliant man and I was fascinated by him. We'd sit for hours and he'd teach me crossword puzzles and coach me in Shakespeare for school," the "Dynasty" star said in the May issue of McCall's.

Miss Oxenberg said Burton also "taught me how to drive his Mercedes when I was 13. Can you imagine me propped up on six pillows, peering over the steering wheel like a little dwarf?"

The actress is the daughter of Princess Elizabeth of Yugoslavia, but has no title of her own. "I'm very happy about that," she stated. "I think in many ways it's an obstacle and a hindrance. People look at you as a dodo bird, a strange, obsolete creature who's not quite real."

• • •

Nelson

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Willie Nelson wants to stage a repeat performance of the FarmAid concert on the Mall in Washington, officials say.

The 1985 14-hour concert was organized by Nelson, who wants a second show in the nation's capital on Labor Day.

Sandra Alley, a spokeswoman for the National Parks Service, said Monday that Nelson has asked about using the Mall but made no formal application.

The FarmAid concert by more than 50 rock 'n' roll and country music acts last September at the University of Illinois, raised pledges of $9 million for the nation's farmers.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — The daughter of columnist Ann Landers says she rejected the only bit of advice her mother ever offered.

"If she ever gave me a substantial piece of advice, I think it was that people are better off marrying within their own religion," said Margo Howard, a Jew, who married actor Ken Howard, a Christian. "I...have been deliriously happy."

In interviews published in the May issue of McCall's magazine, other women recalled advice their mothers gave them.

Former Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, D-N.Y., said: "Long before the nation recognized in 1984 that 'women can be whatever we want to be,' my mom assured me that nothing except a lack of will would prevent me from reaching goals I set for myself. I took her seriously!"

And Actress Sophia Loren said: "My mother taught me to walk proud and tall, 'as if the world was mine.' I remember that line, and I think it brought me some luck."

• • •

Cara

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Irene Cara, star of the film "Fame" and winner of an Oscar and Grammy for the title song from the movie "Flashdance," has married a veteran stuntman atop a sea cliff, her spokesman said.

"I knew he was the guy for me when, after a career of jumping off tall buildings and being involved in high-speed car chases, he told me I brought the excitement to his life," said Miss Cara, 27.

She married Conrad Palmisano, 27, president of the Stuntmen's Association, Sunday in Palos Verdes on the cliffs above the Pacific Ocean, her spokesman, Mitchell Schneider, said Monday.

Miss Cara met Palmisano in 1984 on the set of "A Certain Fury," a film in which she starred.

• • •

Genet

PARIS (AP) — Jean Genet, whose life and works made him one of the most controversial French writers of the 20th century, has died at the age of 75, his editors said today.

A seedy, brutal world peopled with homosexuals, convicts, pimps and thieves was created by the works of Genet, himself a homosexual and admitted prostitute. Between 1940 and 1948 he wrote four works from prison: "Our Lady of the Flowers," "Miracle of the Rose," "Pompes Funebres" and "Querelle."

Genet was best-known for his skills as a dramatist. His first play, "Deathwatch," showed the hierarchical relationships between criminals. Other plays included "The Maids," "The Balcony," "The Blacks" and "The Screens."

• • •

de Beauvoir

PARIS (AP) — Simone de Beauvoir, a leading light of French literature, a torchbearer of the world feminist movement with her book "The Second Sex" and lifelong companion of the late Jean-Paul Sartre, died Monday. She was 78.

Miss de Beauvoir died almost six years to the day after Sartre's death.

She established her intellectual credentials internationally with the 1949 publication of "The Second Sex." Five years later she wrote "The Mandarins," winner of France's most prestigious literary award, the Goncourt.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — J. Lindsay Almond Jr., governor of Virginia during the state's stormy school integration battles of the late 1950s, died Monday night. He was 87.

As governor, he closed schools in three areas rather than allow them to be integrated. In January 1959, the Virginia Supreme Court and a federal appeals panel declared the state's school closing law unconstitutional.

It's happening!

You remember the deficit, that great fiscal monster that Walter Mondale assured everyone was going to devour the economy. Even President Reagan's former budget director, David Stockman, once forecast $200 billion deficits "as far as the eye can see." Stockman even once briefly predicted a $300 billion deficit.

Congress, unable on its own to stop spending, grew so frightened of the projected deficits that it enacted Gramm-Rudman, which is a way of making members of Congress do what they ought to do anyway.

Through it all, Reagan remained largely unruffled. He was concerned about the deficits but not obsessively so. He favored holding down spending and letting growth diminish the deficits automatically. Above all, he wasn't about to be stampeded by fear of the deficits into Congress's preferred remedy — a huge tax increase. Critics scoffed but Reagan stood his ground.

Well, guess what? Events are vindicating the president. The latest projections by independent economists, the administration's Office of Management and Budget, and Congress's Congressional Budget Office all show the same trend: The deficits are now shrinking, not expanding. What's more, they should continue to diminish by about $20 billion per year even without additional budget cutting by Congress. The shrinking deficits would shrink still faster, of course, if Congress adheres to the declining deficit ceilings set by Gramm-Rudman.

But even absent Gramm-Rudman's enforced discipline, the most recent projections show the deficit falling from about $200 billion this year to perhaps $104 billion by 1991. That would still be a sizable deficit, to be sure. But measured in real terms (as a percent of gross national product, for example) a $100 billion deficit in what should by then be a $5 trillion economy is hardly cause for alarm. With Gramm-Rudman, the 1991 budget could be balanced or show a surplus.

Several factors are making this good news possible. Falling interest rates mean smaller government outlays for debt service and additional borrowing, costs that now constitute the third largest item in the federal budget. Budget cuts already forced this year by Gramm-Rudman plus the very sharp cuts in defense that began last year exert a sort of multiplier-in-reverse effect, shrinking government outlays throughout the 1987-91 period.

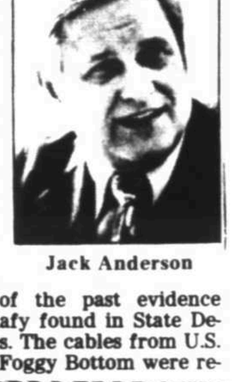

But, of course, the most important factor of all is a growing economy. Growth cuts the deficit in two ways, by generating more tax revenue for the government even as it cuts into outlays by diminishing the need for various support payments. An increase of only 1 percent in the projected 4 percent growth rate for 1986-87 would shave another $20 billion off the deficit.

Reagan's economic policies — especially the 25 percent cut in income tax rates — have now produced 41 consecutive months of economic growth, a record unequalled in more than 30 years. Keeping this growth going, even speeding it up, are central to keeping the deficit heading on a downward curve.

All the more reason, then, for the White House to keep resisting Congress's itch to raise taxes, a move bound to slow or halt growth. Now that Reagan's strategy for fighting the deficits is being vindicated by events, those who said it could not work are left to explain why it is working.

Cables point to Khadafy's terrorism

WASHINGTON — Until very recently, the Reagan administration offered no hard evidence to back up its charges that Libyan dictator Moammar Khadafy is responsible for much of the random terrorism that has made Americans nervous about traveling abroad. Now the White House and the State Department are giving the public chapter and verse on Khadafy's involvement.

Jack Anderson

Lest anyone get the idea that the latest outrages laid at Khadafy's door are his only offenses — and may be a justifiable response to his Gulf of Sidra humiliation — we can now disclose some of the past evidence against Khadafy found in State Department files. The cables from U.S. embassies to Foggy Bottom were recently declassified.

The cables, reviewed by our associate Lucette Lagnado, make clear Khadafy's willingness — nay, eagerness — to finance terrorism and subversion virtually anywhere in the world, from assassination of Libyan dissidents to coups against vulnerable governments. He has also provided generously from Libya's oil wealth to give training and refuge to various terrorist groups.

Here are some examples of Khadafy's mischief-making:

— Nigeria. In April 1983, the American ambassador in Lagos sent Washington a detailed report on an alleged plot to overthrow the Nigerian government. The plot was "personally approved" by Khadafy and bankrolled by him to the tune of $40 million.

A Nigerian on trial for plotting the overthrow "had testified of several clandestine trips to Libya ... last year, and said he and seven other plotters had received cash payments of over a million dollars in Tripoli, Accra and Lagos," the cable stated. The ambassador added that the supposed plot may have been a scam "in which several Nigerians were able to con large sums out of the Libyans."

The authenticity of the plot was largely irrelevent. In fact, if it had indeed been nothing more than a confidence game it demonstrated that Khadafy was so enthusiastic about aiding the overthrow of the Nigerian government that he hadn't made even a cursory check of the supposed plotters' credentials or chances of success.

Con men or coup plotters, the Nigerian group "met with Khadafy at a military farm on the outskirts of Tripoli," the ambassador reported. The Libyan leader "approved and encouraged their scheme, telling the Nigerians that he had two other groups in Nigeria, but they were ineffective." The next day, the visitors met with members of the Libyan revolutionary council and were given money.

— Egypt. In November 1984, Egyptian intelligence held Khadafy up to worldwide ridicule by announcing — falsely — that a Libyan opposition leader had been assassinated in Cairo. Khadafy immediately claimed credit, whereupon the Egyptians produced the supposed victim at a press conference, alive and well. The Libyan hit squad assigned to the task had been captured by the Egyptians and persuaded to confess.

Among other things, as the Cairo embassy reported to Foggy Bottom, the gang that couldn't shoot straight had confessed that Khadafy also had plans "to assassinate various heads of state, including (West German) Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Saudi Arabia's King Fahd, the United Arab Emirates Sheikh Zayed Bin Sultan and Pakistan President Zia ul-Haq."

— Tunisia. When Khadafy complained about a supposed plot by Palestinians based in Tunis to assassinate Libyans working abroad, the U.S. ambassador in Tunisia reported: The Libyan charge might be "a response in kind to the Tunisian public statement implying Libyan responsibility for the sabotage of the Algerian-Tunisian pipeline."

GORGE ISSUE RISING: The 41,000 or so residents of the Columbia River Gorge area along the Oregon-Washington border are divided over legislation that would turn the spectacular section into a federally protected scenic area. Environmentalists and Oregon's two senators support the bill, which would put the gorge under federal management. They say it would protect the area from development. Not so, say many local critics, who fear that the scenic-area designation would only draw hordes of flatland tourists and lead to construction of resorts and hotels. And if anyone's going to mess with their land, they don't want Uncle Sam doing it.

DEEP BACKGROUND: Eli Rosenbaum is the World Jewish Congress bloodhound who has been doggedly sniffing out the Nazi background of former U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim. Rosenbaum was amused recently when he came across a photograph Waldheim is using in his campaign for president of Austria. It shows a smiling Waldheim with the famous Manhattan skyline in the background. And there — right there, see? — Rosenbaum spotted his own apartment building. Unfortunately, Rosenbaum wasn't waving from his balcony when the picture was snapped.

Another View:
Conflicting strategies

Nobody, in practice, really likes floating exchange rates very much. Currencies swing madly and unpredictably up and down, causing embarrassmen' among politicians and heart tacks among manufacturers. Floating is the worst possible monetary regime except, to borrow a famous line, all the others. Recognizing that truth, the International Monetary Fund's interim committee ended its meetings here with a decision to abandon the idea of a world conference to reform the system.

That idea enjoyed a brief prominence last winter when President Reagan called for "reliable" exchange rates in his State of the Union address. "We must never again permit wild currency swings to cripple our farmers and other exporters," he said, and he told the secretary of the treasury to consider whether a world conference should be held to straighten out the rates. The IMF seems to have delivered the answer.

The political constituency for stable exchange rates, in any country, is above all the producers — not only the farmers but everyone else who grows, mines or fabricates goods that can be traded across borders. Americans sometimes look with envy at the European Monetary System, the working model for the proposals to establish limits, or target zones, within which the world's currencies would be held. But the European agreement works because European governments follow domestic economic policies that are consistent with each other. Because the United States has been following policies that are not consistent with Europe's, there is no way to hold their currencies in a constant relationship to the dollar.

Recent experience illustrates the point unpleasantly clearly. In the 1980s Europe has been running a sharply restrictive policy, trying to get budget deficits down. The only important exception was France's fling at reflation when the Socialists took power, and that didn't last long. In contrast the United States has been running very large budget deficits since 1982, when Mr. Reagan's tax cut began to take effect. The brake in Europe and Japan, pulling against the accelerator in this country, pushed the dollar up. That in turn hurt American exports, encouraged imports and produced the gigantic trade deficits that now bring demands from American industry for more stable exchange rates.

But there's no reform of the exchange rate machinery that can produce them as long as the United States, Japan and Europe follow conflicting economic strategies. If they choose to bring their plans into harmony, the present exchange rate markets will produce stability without further reforms. That's a choice for Mr. Reagan and his colleagues to talk about at their economic summit meeting next month in Tokyo.

EVANS & NOVAK
O'Neill practicing alternative diplomacy

WASHINGTON — The Buenos Aires shoot-out between the speaker and the ambassasdor was important, not in demonstrating ambassadorial indiscretion, but in revealing how far Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. has taken his alternative government.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

While a member of Speaker O'Neill's delegation was telling the president of Argentina that Ronald Reagan is a warmonger, another House Democrat was in Panama putting his nose into the Contadora talks. These Easter Recess activities, again violating the convention that political criticism stops at the water's edge, also pursue a diplomatic course independent of the U.S. government.

That is the conspicuous valedictory of Tip O'Neill's six-year leadership of the only Democratic-controlled branch of government. The speaker concedes that his views are shaped by the Vietnam syndrome and the advice of leftist Maryknoll nuns. Now he and his followers have put before the world a Central American policy that can be viewed as an alternative to President Reagan's. With the congressional tide shifting toward aid for the contras, O'Neill has devised a new parliamentary boobytrap.

Although the bizarre meeting in Buenos Aires has received more attention thanks to a leaked cable, a more flagrant instance of alternative diplomacy was the visit to the Contadora meeting by three House Democrats. Rep. Michael Barnes of Maryland, an increasingly harsh foe of Reagan policy, had quietly been asked by the State Department not to go to Panama.

But Barnes turned up there anyway (with Reps. James Slattery of Kansas and Bill Richardson of New Mexico). Unable to penetrate closed-door negotiations, they hung around the coffee shop buttonholing diplomats and advising them what to do. Whereas diplomats from the Contadora group of 13 Latin states conceded Sandinista intransigeance, Barnes publicly blamed Ronald Reagan for the breakdown in talks.

The O'Neill delegation was less active diplomatically but produced more fireworks. The speaker and Rep. George Miller of California, who last year dismissed embassy officials when he conferred with Nicaraguan communist leaders, repeatedly complained about America's "gunboat diplomacy."

Other delegation members told us the most extreme anti-administration attacks came from Reps. Fortney H. Stark of California, one of the most ideological members of Congress, and Rep. Marty Russo of Illinois, no ideologue but fiercely partisan. They were particularly "strident" in Buenos Aires, a fellow delegation member told us, attacking the president and urging the Argentines to do the same.

An unpublished U.S. Embassy telegram reported that Stark informed President Raul Alfonsin that Reagan "wants a war in Central America." Russo, another congressman told us, said to Foreign Minister Dante Caputo that "Reagan's not going to be happy until he gets into a war in Central America." Russo stayed with Caputo after the others left, to press home his point.

These were the comments, rather than anything the speaker himself said, that led to Ambassador Frank V. Ortiz's bitter parting remarks to O'Neill that were included in his now-celebrated telegram to Washington. When that cable was published in the Washington Post, delegation members savaged Ortiz. O'Neill operatives whispered that Ortiz, worried he might be bounced because of insufficiently anti-communist credentials, was polishing the Reagan apple.

Actually, Ortiz is a senior career Foreign Service officer whose failure to put human rights above the interests of his country got him in trouble in the Carter administration. Now facing retirement, he neither needs nor seeks notoriety. His State Department cable had highest classification and a "no distribution" label, restricting it to cleared personnel.

Ortiz's outrage, while stemming mainly from Stark and Russo lobbying the Argentines to oppose U.S. policy, also was inspired by the absurdity of amateur congressional diplomacy. The peak was reached when O'Neill, saying Reagan insists that Latin leaders "privately" support the contras, demanded President Alfonsin's "private views" while Marty Russo ground away with a home video camera.

Such gaucherie revolted Ortiz. But it was business as usual for the delegation (including Republican members, who thought the ambassador "a little uptight"). Back in Washington, the speaker found the tide shifting against him and adopted a parliamentary maneuver to scuttle contra aid that he had earlier promised to forego.

CHARLEY REESE
Falling oil prices not as bad as Bush says

If you can recall all the weeping and wailing over the international oil cartel's outrageous rape of the world economy, then surely it must strike you as strange to see Vice President George Bush hike off to the Middle East to ask them to stop the fall of oil prices.

Charley Reese

Falling oil prices, to be sure, is a gain-loss proposition. Consumers of oil gain; producers of oil lose. There has already begun a depression in oil states like Texas and Oklahoma. Banks in those states will be falling like Comanches at the Battle of Adobe Walls. And banks that foolishly lent billions to oil producers like Mexico and Venezuela have already developed shingles.

What infuriates me is oil-heir, oil-millionaire Bush raising the banner of national security to explain why he wants oil prices to stabilize. National security my you-know-what!

In so far as national security goes, the drop in oil prices is an unmitigated blessing. It will lower our defense bill. It will allow us to fill up our strategic oil reserve on the cheap. It weakens the Arabs and strengthens Israel. It offsets inflation. Outside the oil patch, it will stimulate the American economy. It hurts the Russians who are big oil exporters.

I don't see any excuse at all for our government leaders not to be honest with the American people. Why can't Bush simply say, "Hey, guys, this is killing the oil states' economies and scaring the hell out of the New York bankers, not to mention playing heck with my kids' trust funds?" As Americans, we all recognize that people in the oil states and even New York bankers have some claim on our sympathy. As a father, I even respect another father's concern for his own kids.

But what I bitterly resent is a politician trying to dupe the American people. The notion that falling oil prices will hook us on foreign oil is pure bunk. In the first place, if we don't continue conservation and utilize alternative energy sources, we are going to be hooked on foreign oil in the long run anyway. In the second place, just because Americans cap wells and temporarily go out of the oil business, doesn't mean the oil disappears. It's still there whenever it once again becomes profitable to pump it out.

It's also bunk to blame Mexico's problems on falling oil prices. Mexico is ready to blow because it's had one party rule, mismanagement, and world-class corruption for 50 years. Mexico went bankrupt before oil prices fell. The New York bankers just don't want to admit it.

Finally, it helps to understand the situation if you keep in mind there are really two oil industries. One oil industry is the independent producers — the wildcatters — who find and pump nearly all of America's oil. The other oil industry is the international corporations, like Exxon, which deal mainly in foreign oil.

It's the independents who are hurt most, but they are a tough bunch who know the oil business is a boom and bust business anyway. They are people who are used to being broke and used to being rich. We could help them with tax laws and by putting an import tax on foreign oil.

The problem is that the independents don't have nearly the clout in Washington that the multinationals do and the multinationals, of course, will oppose an import tax. Every academic and think tank flack who sucks on the teat of international oil and banking money will grind out 10,000 philosophical reasons why a tax on imported oil would be the next worse thing to nuclear war. Employees rarely defy bosses.

That's why when the international oil cartel raped the world economy, Washington's response was first to put price controls on domestic oil and later an excise tax on domestic oil. That was the equivalent of fighting Nazis by shooting Jews. The only people making excess profits at that time were international companies selling foreign oil, not American independents.

I never have thought very highly of Bush. I think even less of him now.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

In the early morning hours of April 15, 1912, the Titanic, a British luxury liner on its maiden voyage, sank in the North Atlantic off Newfoundland, less than three hours after striking an iceberg. Some 1,500 of the more than 2,200 people aboard died in the disaster.

On this date:

In 1850, the city of San Francisco was incorporated.

In 1865, at 7:22 a.m. President Abraham Lincoln died, several hours after he was shot by John Wilkes Booth. Andrew Johnson was sworn in as the nation's 17th president.

In 1920, a robbery at the Slater and Morrill Shoe Co. in South Braintree, Mass., resulted in the deaths of a paymaster and guard. Italian-born anarchists Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were subsequently convicted of the murders and executed.

In 1945, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was buried at the Roosevelt family home in Hyde Park, N.Y.

In 1959, Cuban leader Fidel Castro arrived in Washington to begin a goodwill tour of the United States.

In 1980, philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre died in Paris at age 74.

Reagan: Evidence on Libya 'irrefutable'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the United States not only has "irrefutable" evidence linking Libya to the West Berlin disco bombing but solid intelligence of Libyan plots to commit atrocities such as the massacre of civilians waiting for visas at a U.S. embassy.

Reagan, in a television address Monday night outlining his reasons for sending warplanes to strike targets in Libya, said the planned embassy massacre was aborted "with the help of French authorities."

"We have solid evidence about other attacks Khadafy has planned against American installations and diplomats and even American tourists. Thanks to close cooperation with our friends, some of these have been prevented," Reagan said.

One of those attacks, he said, was "a planned massacre using grenades and small arms of civilians waiting in line for visas at an American embassy."

He did not identify the embassy.

Secretary of State George Shultz said the United States had gathered evidence to varying degrees "of Libyan efforts to attack...up to 30 of our embassies."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters, "In Africa, Libyans have been planning attacks and conducting surveillance of U.S. facilities in 10 countries. Last week three Libyan agents arrived in one African state to set up the bombing of our embassy, chancellery and the kidnapping of our ambassador."

Reagan said of the April 5 discotheque bombing in West Berlin that claimed the lives of Army Sgt. Kenneth Wood and a Turkish woman and wounded 230 others: "Our evidence is direct, it is precise, it is irrefutable."

"On March 25, more than a week before the attack, orders were sent from Tripoli to the Libyan People's Bureau in East Berlin to conduct a terrorist attack against Americans to cause maximum and indiscriminate casualties. Libya's agents then planted a bomb.

"On April 4th the People's Bureau alerted Tripoli that the attack would be carried out the following morning.

Terrorists 'have to expect to get burned'

Associated Press

Robin Beecham

Alice Beecham

Relatives of the GI killed in a terrorist bombing at a West Berlin discotheque say the U.S. retaliatory attack on Libya was overdue, while a man who lost three members of his family in the recent TWA jet bombing says those who sponsor terrorism "have to expect to get burned."

"I think we did the right thing. The president did what he had to do," said Robin Beecham of Detroit. "I think it's long overdue. I don't think they bombed just because of my brother."

Beecham's brother, Army Sgt. Kenneth Ford, 21, died in the April 5 explosion at the La Belle disco a week before he was scheduled to return to Detroit for the first time in 2½ years. The bomb also killed a Turkish woman and injured more than 200 people, including about 60 Americans.

"We're trying to take our mind off it," Beecham said. "Right now we're not paying much attention to (the military action). I'm just trying to read the Bible and figure out what's what."

"We're a little relieved, yet we're still sorry because more people will die," said Alice Beecham, Ford's mother. "I just want this nation to pray for the U.S. and pray for Libya that whatever was done, the right decision was made."

In his statement Monday night on the retaliation, President Reagan called the disco bombing an act of "monstrous brutality" and said "our evidence is direct, it is precise, it is irrefutable" that Libya was behind it.

He did not cite the other recent terrorist incident involving Americans — the bombing of the Trans World Airline jetliner over Greece on April 2 that resulted in the death of four passengers. But relatives of those victims also expressed support for the retaliation, although some said they feared innocent people could be harmed.

Warren Klug Jr., whose wife, daughter and mother-in-law were killed in the bombing, said he had mixed feelings about the U.S. attack.

"It's about time America got together as a nation," said Klug, of Annapolis, Md. "Once these people realize that we are together as a nation, maybe they'll stop messing with us."

"They burn other people, they have to expect to get burned themselves," he said.

Klug's wife, Maria; her mother, Demetra Toula Stylian; and the Klugs' 8-month-old baby, also named Demetra, died in the TWA bombing along with a Colombian-born American, Alberto Ospina of Stratford, Conn.

Mrs. Klug's sister, Kathy Stylian, 25, said everyone in the family was shocked by the announcement.

Demonstrators protest U.S. strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several dozen demonstrators, chanting "We do not want to see Rambo in Tripoli," gathered outside the White House to decry the U.S. military strike against Libya.

The demonstrators came out on short notice Monday night with signs printed in advance that read simply: "End Military Intervention."

"There are plenty of occasions for using such signs, unfortunately," said David Cortright, executive director of the Committee for a SANE Nuclear Policy, which organized the protest in Lafayette Park opposite the presidential mansion.

The anti-nuclear war activists were joined by foes of President Reagan's Central American policies.

"We think the issue here is not so much Libya, but Nicaragua," said Cortright. "It's part of an orchestrated campaign to whip up military frenzy in this country so that the president can stampede the Congress into supporting his request for aid to the Nicaraguan terrorists."

Earlier in the day, police at the U.S. Capitol arrested 57 demonstrators who oppose aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels after they refused to leave the Capitol Rotunda. A vote on Reagan's $100 million military aid package for the Contras was scheduled in the House as early as today.

Cortright said he called the demonstration at the White House on one hour's notice. "We called a few of our church friends and the people at home and everyone was already outraged about the conflict and said they would try to come out."

"We think it's an act of war, a violation of all standards of international law, and a very dangerous and deadly game which could lead to a much wider military conflict."

To Reagan's charge that he has "irrefutable" evidence that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy ordered the fatal bombing of a discotheque in West Berlin on April 5, the protest leader said, "If there is such irrefutable evidence, let's bring it to an international tribunal, let's bring it to a court, let's see if the evidence is as valid as he says."

"These actions are done best if they are supported by the United Nations, by our allies in Europe, by the other Arab states. But in this instance, we're acting completely on our own," Cortright said.

Portion of shuttle booster joint recovered

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A huge piece of Challenger wreckage with a 2-foot-square hole burned through its steel casing is the most important piece of debris recovered because it may show why a joint failed and caused the shuttle explosion.

The two-ton section contains the portion of the joint that ruptured and spewed flame 15 seconds before the Jan. 28 tragedy that killed seven astronauts.

The Navy reported Monday that the salvage ship Stena Workhorse had recovered the 10-by-20-foot chunk Sunday in 650-foot-deep water 40 miles offshore.

Lt. Cmdr. Deborah Burnette, a Navy spokeswoman, said the hole burned in the joint and casing by the plume of escaping flame measured 1-foot-by-2-feet. The surrounding area was badly scorched.

The presidential shuttle commission had announced the recovery earlier Monday, and commission member Eugene Covert and staff members flew here and were scheduled to inspect the piece today.

Also here are NASA's acting administrator, William Graham, and the agency's shuttle program director, Richard Truly, who are to be briefed on a preliminary report the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's investigative task force will present to the commission Friday.

A statement by the commission chairman, William P. Rogers, said one of the two sections of critical interest had been recovered and was from the joint area blamed for the accident.

The other key piece, the bottom of the joint, still has not been found but is believed to be in the same area.

Finding these two parts have been high priority items for the recovery fleet.

Experts have said the accident resulted from a failure in the joint that allowed the flame to escape and sever a bottom rocket attachment, causing the top of the booster to swivel into the large external fuel tank and setting off the explosion.

J.R. Thompson Jr., vice chairman of NASA's task force, said last week that the investigation is focusing on possibly defective O-rings designed to stop hot gases from escaping through the joint.

He also said it is focusing on the effect of the rotation of the joint when subjected to ignition pressures; on characteristics of the putty intended to put pressure on the rings; a possible joint alignment problem; and the effect the freezing temperatures and high winds aloft on launch day might have had on the rings or the putty.

Commission member Richard P. Feynman said recently that testing of sub-scale models designed to recreate the conditions on the day of the explosion would never be able to find the exact cause.

Feynman said, however, that a new joint could be built to prevent all possible causes.

The man in charge of redesigning the joint, James Kingsbury, head of engineering at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., said last week that 70 engineers are now working on 10 possible alterations in the joint.

NASA is expected to announce soon that it has completed operations in the area where the crew cabin wreckage and astronaut remains were found.

Most of the key cabin debris has been retrieved. And sources report divers believe they have recovered all the remains they expect to find.

The remains are being examined and identified in a medical laboratory here.

NATION IN BRIEF

Busing backers will ask court to block neighborhood plan

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Busing supporters say they will ask the courts to block a plan to return to neighborhood elementary schools, approved after 15 years of busing in a bid to stem white flight to the suburbs.

The city school board voted unanimously Monday to end cross-town busing for the city's 20,000 elementary school pupils. The new plan would make 10 of 35 neighborhood elementary schools virtually all black.

Board members said the neighborhood schools plan would end white flight and increase parental involvement in the schools. But opponents charged it would resegregate the schools and some blacks called for an economic boycott of businesses to pressure the board into rescinding its action.

"We will never go back to the dark days of segregation," said Shirley S. Richardson, a parent. "This whole country is going to go up in flames and it's going to start right here in Norfolk, Virginia."

The system had 56,000 students and was nearly 60 percent white when busing started in 1971. The system now has 35,375 students and is 59 percent black.

Helicopter, plane collide

HOLLISTON, Mass. (AP) — A helicopter and a small plane collided Monday in a cloudless sky, killing the four people in the helicopter, authorities said.

"The plane went one way, the rotor went another and the helicopter fell right out of the sky," said Bernie Doherty, a witness. He said that as the rotor fell to the ground "it kept spinning like a top" until it landed in a swimming pool a quarter-mile from the point of impact.

Witnesses said the plane skidded off the helicopter, glided silently away and made an emergency landing. The two men aboard the plane escaped with minor injuries.

The victims were employees of a high-technology company, Millipore Corp. of Bedford, which uses helicopters to shuttle employees to a subsidiary in nearby Milford.

LaRouche finances probed

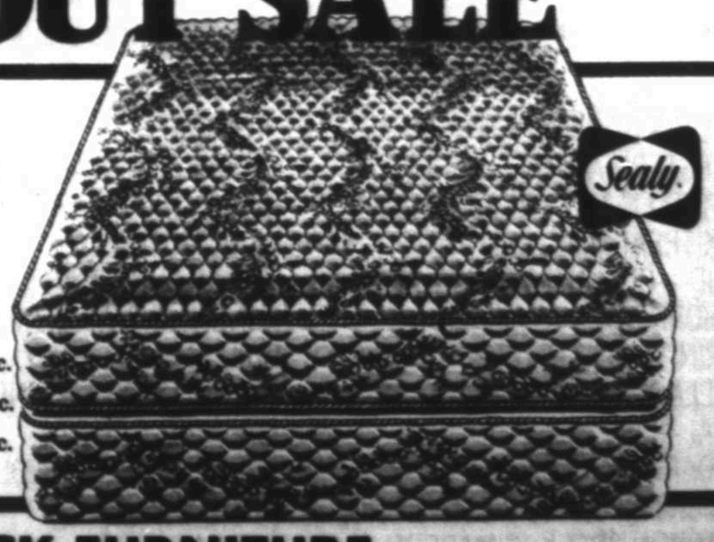

WASHINGTON (AP) — A preliminary investigation indicates groups and companies associated with political extremist Lyndon LaRouche have collected hundreds of thousands of dollars through illegal use of credit cards, government lawyers say.

The government, in court papers, also contends a LaRouche-related company has failed to report or pay taxes on employees' salaries, and says taxes have become a part of the government's investigation.

A LaRouche spokesman said Monday the allegations are false.

Mild weather will continue through Wednesday according to reports from forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. A high in the upper 70s and partly cloudy skies are being predicted.

A low in the lower 50s is called for tonight. Under partly cloudy skies, winds will be out of the southeast at five to 10 mph. Winds will shift to the south at 10-20 mph on Wednesday.

Monday's high was 21 degrees below the record high of 95 set in 1935. The 48 degree low this morning was 21 degrees above the record low set in 1933.

STATE

A high-pressure system building over Texas kept skies mostly fair today while cool, dry air settled across the Lone Star State.

A cold front stalled in the lower Rio Grande valley, producing patchy light rain. Much of deep South Texas and coastal waters remained under a blanket of low clouds before sunrise.

Winds were light and variable statewide as predawn temperatures fell into the 40s over the northern third of the state. The rest of Texas experienced temperatures in the 50s and 60s, except for a few 70 degree readings in the extreme south.

Extreme readings ranged from 40 degrees at Lubbock to 75 degrees at McAllen.

The National Weather Service said it should be fair to partly cloudy tonight statewide, except for mostly cloudy skies and widely scattered showers in the deep south.

Sunny days and clear nights should be the rule in North Texas. Highs were expected in the 70s and lows generally in the 40s.

Other temperature readings at 5 a.m. were 45 degrees at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and Abilene, 44 at Waco and Wichita Falls, 48 at Midland and San Angelo and 53 at Austin and El Paso.

NATION

A low pressure system today spread snow and strong winds from eastern portions of the Dakotas and Nebraska across northwest Iowa and western Minnesota.

The severe weather prompting travelers' advisories for most of the region, where wind chills in some areas were below zero after a low temperature record was set.

A mixture of rain and snow was falling through much of Minnesota and Wisconsin. Snow was scattered over northern Illinois.

Cooper, Permian meet in key 4-5A baseball outing

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

While Midland High hosts San Angelo and Midland Lee travels to Big Spring today, all District 4-5A eyes will be turned to Abilene Cooper's trip to Odessa Permian, a game carrying a heavy load of playoff berths.

Of the eight league teams, none have as much anxiety about the game as the Bulldogs and Steers. However, the two teams may be rooting for different teams to win.

For the Bulldogs, tied with Permian for second at 7-3, there is still a good chance of catching 8-2 Abilene Cooper in the final four games of the season. So, they've got to be hoping for the Panthers to take them down a notch, setting up a three-way tie.

If that happens, combined with a Midland High victory over San Angelo, then the Bulldogs can control their own playoff destiny, rough as it may be. The 'Dogs have road dates with both Permian and Cooper and it would be a boost to go into those games with a 4-5A title on the line.

The Steers, alone in fourth place at 5-5, have to be rooting for a Cooper victory. They have a better chance of making the playoffs as the 4-5A runnerup. Since Cooper has both second place hopefuls left to play, a Cougar sweep would benefit the Steers most.

Three other district teams tied at 4-6, Lee, San Angelo and Abilene High, are all but mathmatically eliminated from the race.

FOR THE Bulldogs, today's 4 p.m. game at Angels Stadium looks like a classic hitting vs. pitching duel. While San Angelo is hitting .328 as a team to Midland High's .276, the Bulldogs hold a big edge on the mound with a 3.25 team ERA to the Bobcats' 5.41.

The Bulldogs will likely pitch Kenny De La Garza, second only to Abilene Cooper's Danny Whitford in ERA. However, De La Garza has pitched 39⅓ innings to Whitford's 18. For The Bobcats, Jim Childress shutout Abilene High on Saturday and leads the team with a 2.05 ERA and is a possible candidate to face the Bulldogs today.

At the plate, the Bobcats have Chris Lowry in contention for the 4-5A batting crown with a .571 average. Lowry and Cooper's Chris Moore, .594, have been alternating games with the hitting league in hand.

Also for San Angelo, Jim Childress is hitting .500 in 16 at bats while David Hulse has a .475 in 40 trips to the plate.

For Midland High, Jim Werner moved to the top of the team hitting charts with a .394 average while De La Garza moved to second at .385.

In the stolen base race, De La Garza moved into the lead with 10, one better than Cooper's Bill Dehlinger and foug ahead of San Angelo's top stealer David Hulse at six.

MIDLAND LEE has fallen to long-shot status in the race for a 4-5A berth. The Rebels will have to be sharp because the Big Spring Steers are still smelling playoffs and have been playing an improved brand of baseball.

Before Cooper took care of the Steers 12-3 Saturday, Big Spring was the hottest team in the league with five straight victories.

Offensively, Lee has a strong edge, .328 to .267 and also has a long-shot contender for the league hitting title in catcher Jason Logi at .483.

Logi isn't alone with a hot bat for the Rebels as Raul Pena and Jay McCarty slowly climb up the stat sheet, .472 and .467 respectively.

Big Spring's Randy Hayworth leads his team with a .482 average while Aaron Allen, .345, is a distant second.

On the mound, the Steers have two pitchers starting to gel, Mike Dood and Allen. Between them, they have four of the five 4-5A victories and own ERA's of 4.87 and 6.33 respectively while the team has an ERA of 5.60.

For Lee, Tuey Rankin has been the only effective pitcher at 2.93 while the staff owns a mark of 6.49.

Beaumont wins, Angels strand 10

From Staff Reports

BEAUMONT — The Midland Angels had the bases loaded with no outs in the eighth inning here Monday night and failed to score in a 3-2 Texas League loss to the Beaumont Golden Gators.

The loss dropped the Angels to a 3-4 mark on the season opening road trip and this one hurt as Midland could not come up with a key base hit, leaving 10 men stranded on the base paths while the Gators stranded only two runners.

It was the fatal eighth inning that did in the Angels. Raul Tovar, James Randall and Billie Merrifield opened the inning with consecutive singles, but Glenn Walker flied out, John Hotchkiss struckout and Keven King grounded into a force play to leave the bases jammed with Angels and trailing by a meager run.

MIDLAND TOOK a 2-0 lead in the third inning off winning pitcher Joe Bitker in the third, but didn't scratch again as Bitker pitched seven innings of six-hit ball before giving way to three relief pitchers, the last of which was Don Ford, who gained his third save of the year.

In that inning, Mark McLemore walked and Tovar singled to lead things off. McLemore stole third and Tovar stole second on different plays and Walker drove them home with a single.

But the Gators came back with the game's three winning runs in the fourth off Sherman Corbett, who lost the game despite going the distance and allowing only six hits.

Corbett gave up four of his six hits in the fourth and all of them were costly. Eric Hardgrave and Randall Byers had RBI doubles in the inning while Shane Mack drove home another run with a single.

Midland's Jeff Schaffer singled with one out in the ninth inning, but Ford came on to record his save by getting the last two Angels in easy fashion, one by strikeout.

The game was delayed one hour and four minutes by rain before the game ever got underway.

The two teams meet again today at 7 p.m.

A SINGLE by Garrett Nago in the bottom of the eighth inning drove in a run to help the El Paso Diablos to a 4-2 victory over San Antonio in the other Western Division game.

In the East, the Shreveport Captains squeezed by the Jackson Mets 5-4 and Arkansas beat Tulsa 7-4.

San Antonio pitcher Greg Mayberry had a no-hitter going into the fifth before Steve Stanchek singled and John Gibbons walked. . Bob Nandin had an opposite field double to drive in Stanchek.

With two outs in the sixth, Gibbons had a two-run single to make it 3-2. Chris Gwynn and Tracy Woodson lated had back-to-back singles.

Mayberry, 0-2, claimed the loss.

The Captains grabbed a 3-0 lead in bottom of the first on a two-run single by Angel Escobar and a bases-loaded walk to John Grimes. Mike Jones scored on the bases-loaded walk.

The home opener of the new 5,300-seat stadium for Shreveport, Fair Grounds Field, drew an attendance of 7,213.

Shreveport got two runs in the bottom of the seventh to cinch the win. Steve Miller doubled to right center to open the inning. Mike Jones struck out, Deron McCue walked and Mackey Sasser singled just over shortstop to score pinch-runner John Verducci. Alan Cockrell hit a sacrifice fly to left field.

Stuart Tate pitched the last two innings for the save. Scott Medvin, 1-0, was credited with the win.

Arkansas Catcher Harry McCulla went 2-for-3 Monday night, earning two RBI and scoring twice.

Starter John Martin was the winning pitcher for the 4-1 Travelers. The loser was starter Dan Olsson, now 0-2.

Waco honors Tony Benford

WACO (AP) — Tony Benford, who sparked fifth-place Texas Tech to the Southwest Conference post-season basketball tournament championship and almost led an upset of heavily-favored Georgetown in the NCAA championships, Monday was named winner of the R.E. (Bill) Henderson Sportsmanship Award.

This is the eighth annual award named after the late Baylor basketball coach and athletic director and co-sponsored by the Waco Chamber of Commerce and Texas Basketball Hall of Fame. Benford was selected for his sportsmanship in his senior season in a vote of Southwest Conference head basketball coaches, team captains and SWC game officials.

Voted outstanding player of the SWC post-season tournament held last month, Benford will receive his plaque at the Hall of Fame induction luncheon April 19 in Waco.

Scheduled to be inducted into the Hall at that time are Margaret Menard LaFleur, an East Chambers player in the 1940s; Buck Overall, who played at Cushing, Tyler Junior College and Texas in the 1930s; George Carlisle, long-time coach at Clear Lake; Larry Franks, who played at Nacogdoches and Texas in the '60s; Russell Boone, a Sweeney High and Rice star of the '50s; Dwight Jones, who played at Houston Wheatley and University of Houston in the '70s; and O.W. Follis, coach at Lamesa High.

Benford won the balloting over Karl Willock of Texas, Terrence Cashaw of Rice and Butch Moore of SMU.

Oakland beats homers with singles

Associated Press

In baseball, it's not necessarily how far you hit the ball or how many you hit over the wall that makes the difference.

The Oakland A's proved that Monday night by edging the Minnesota Twins 7-6 despite being outhomered 4-0. Tom Brunansky had two of those home runs for Minnesota, while Gary Gaetti and Kirby Puckett also connected.

In the end, however, it was Carney Lansford's seventh-inning single that scored two runs to lift the A's to a 7-6 victory over the Twins at the Metrodome.

"You are not going to be in too many games when you give up that many home runs," A's Manager Jackie Moore said. "But the bottom line is we won and we'll take it."

Brunansky, who had a solo homer in the second inning, hit a tremendous 463-foot, two-run shot in the fourth. Gary Gaetti followed with another two-run homer to give the Twins a 5-3 lead, and Kirby Puckett increased the lead to 6-3 with a solo homer in the fifth.

"We didn't die when they hit four home runs," Lansford said. "It doesn't matter how we won, just that we won."

They won with a seventh-inning, two-out rally. Dwayne Murphy was hit by a Roy Smith, went to second on Dusty Baker's walk and scored on Mike Davis's double down the right-field line. Lansford then singled to left.

"People have been talking about games slipping away from us," Moore said. "Tonight we came back and got one.

"Enough runs is never enough. Or enough runs is never too much."

Rangers 10, Brewers 1

Milwaukee's home opener was delayed by rain for two hours, nine minutes, then ruined by four Texas home runs and staunch pitching by rookie Edwin Correa, who allowed only three hits over eight innings.

Darrel Porter's solo homer in the second inning gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead, and they scored twice in the third before Oddibe McDowell led off the fifth with a solo homer.

Texas also got a solo homer from Steve Buechele in the eighth and a three-run blow from Larry Parrish to cap a five-run ninth.

"It's kind of hard sitting around for a couple of hours, but it worked," said Correa, 19 and the youngest player in the major leagues. "I was rushing my tempo a little early in the game, so I had to slow myself down.

"I feel confident. I had it in my mind that I was a big leaguer."

Angels 7, Mariners 6

Rookie Darrell Miller's run-scoring single won the game in California's home debut. Losing pitcher Pete Ladd opened the ninth inning by hitting Brian Downing with a pitch. George Hendrick, who had three hits (including a homer) and a walk in the game, hit a grounder under the glove of shortstop Spike Owen for an error as Downing took third. Miller then collected his second hit of the game.

Miller was booed by the Anaheim Stadium crowd when he was unable to make a couple of diving catches in the earlier innings. But he was cheered mightily when he delivered in the ninth.

"The boos bothered me a little for awhile," Miller explained, "but I'd forgotten about them by the time I came up in the ninth. (Manager) Gene Mauch took all the pressure off me when I came up. He told me, 'I know you can drive the ball to center, so just go up there and do your best and have fun.'"

Miller drove the ball — to left — to win it.

'Sneak Attack!'... ...Hampton's loose

Last week Midland Lee track star Quintus Hampton spent most of his time tying up a few loose ends on the educational front, which seemed like some bad news for track fans who enjoy seeing Hampton stroll around the oval.

During the week prior to the Tall City Relays, Hampton signed a track scholarship with Texas. There was also a matter of taking the ACT college entrance exam on Saturday morning when he was scheduled to be qualifying in the 300 intermediate hurdles at Memorial Stadium.

WITH HAMPTON making talk of running in the 35-second and national record range in the hurdles, the education first approach was commendable, but disappointing to track fans.

Hampton did say during the week that he would enter the 200 meters if he could finish his ACT test in time to qualify. The 200 qualifying was the last of the day. There was a chance he would show up and run in an event that he had never run in.

Hampton got his ACT together. He walked through the Memorial Stadium gate just minutes before his qualifying heat in the 200. He qualified — no sweat.

In Saturday's afternoon finals, Hampton wiped away the expected disappointment with a district best 21.49 victory. Everything this kid touches turns to gold. Midas doesn't have the gold market cornered.

Hampton is excitement wrapped in fireworks, but he is so talented that he has given Lee head track coach Eddie Wolski a headache just trying to figure out where and when to use him.

The all-important District 4-5A track meet is Saturday at Memorial Stadium. Hampton is allowed to enter only three running events by UIL rules. When Hampton won the 200 with ease, Wolski suddenly found himself in the spotlight. Where will Hampton be used this week?

Hampton has been a member of both Rebel relay teams, leaving him only one running event. He also has been a winner in the high hurdles, 300 hurdles and now the 200.

YOU CAN be sure Hampton will be in the 300 hurdles Saturday. He is a state class runner in that event. Where else will he be used? Wolski will be head scratching this week while making that decision. You can bet the end result will be another "sneak attack" by Wolski.

"The way our sprint relay team is running it's tempting to think about using Quintus somewhere else," notes Wolski with head gears turning. "It's just impossible to run him in both the 200 meters and 300 hurdles because those events are back-to-back and that would ruin him for the 1600 relay where we have the best time in the district."

Wolski adds, "Quintus and I are going to talk this week," which means something might be in the works. You might see Hampton for the first time in the 100 when all is said and done.

And if Wolski dismantles his sprint relay team, look for Brad Cooper, unbeaten in the 400, to move into the 200 competition.

This may sound like some wild maneuvering on the week of the district meet, but the Rebels are searching for ways to make up a few points that could bring them another 4-5A crown.

THAT WOULD be enough excitement for 4-5A track fans, but Mike Garza, unbeaten this year in the 3200, tossed another wrench into the Lee framework. Garza ran the 800 for the first time Saturday and brought home a record 1:56.31 in his first effort.

The 3200 is now gone for Garza. The 800 is in. The feeling is that Garza's showing makes him a state class runner in the 800 and gives him a better shot at making the state meet than in the 3200.

Wolski is famous for his "sneak attacks" at district time, but Saturday's 4-5A meet may be the sneakist of all attacks.

Inky ups Ranger budget

ARLINGTON (AP) — Pete Incaviglia of the Texas Rangers knew things were going to be different when he saw Dave Stieb's breaking pitches on opening night.

"Ain't nobody in college can pitch like that," said the raw rookie in awe of the Toronto Blue Jays' ace right-hander.

The Rangers' heralded right fielder came directly to the major leagues out of college where he set an all-time NCAA record at Oklahoma State with 48 homers and 143 RBI.

Incaviglia displayed tremendous power in spring training. Once, he knocked a hole in the fence with a line drive. His seven homers were a Rangers' record for Pompano Beach.

The Rangers' fans couldn't wait for his debut. They put up "Inc Spot" signs all over Arlington Stadium awaiting their hero's first major league blast.

On opening night, Incaviglia blistered a one-bounce double off the leftfield wall but had trouble hitting hitting the curve. There were no shots to the "Inc Spots" although he hit a memorable foul ball that traveled over 375 feet.

However, his 12 homers in batting practice had the fans buzzing.

"We're going to have to expand our budget," said Texas General Manager Tom Grieve. "Let's see, 81 home games and balls at $2.50 each and a dozen each game that's over $2,000. He's fun to watch isn't he.?"

However, Incaviglia had a much tougher time in the Rangers' first homestand against major league pitching.

After 10 straight groundouts and some strikeouts, Incaviglia finally got his first major league homer on Friday night. He timed a fastball from Baltimore reliever Tippy Martinez and the ball carried over the center field fence at the 400 foot mark.

"It was a tremendous feeling," said Incaviglia, whose homer came on his 17th at-bat.

It came as some comfort to the Rangers' broadcasting team who jokingly pointed out that it took Babe Ruth 18 at-bats to get his first homer.

Team officials, who took a big chance on bringing Incaviglia directly to the major leagues, breathed easier.

"It got the monkey off his back," said Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine. "He was starting to press a little. Now he can relax."

Incaviglia completed the home stand on Sunday with another double but his batting average after a week of big league pitching was 3-for-24 and .125.

"It's going to take time for him to find his groove," said Grieve. "We believe he will. And nobody hits a ball harder than Pete does. He absolutely crushes it."

However, Incaviglia found out something about the infamous Texas prairie wind Sunday. He hit a shot he thought was out of the park and was into his home run trot.

"That one's out of here," Incaviglia said. "Then I saw Fred Lynn patting his glove."

Incaviglia also still has a lot to learn about fielding. He made two errors in the first homestand, dropping pop fly and later kicking a ground ball.

"Pete's a better fielder than our scouting reports showed," said Valentine. "It's just going to take some time for him to get adjusted out there. We're glad he's on our side."

Unknowns ruin Dodgers

Cards, Pirates win in extra innings

Associated Press

What should have been Bob Welch's night to remember became a night Bruce Bochy and John Kruk — two very unlikely heroes — may never forget.

Welch had a career-high 12 strikeouts and was within an out of pitching the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 3-2 victory. But Kruk, a 25-year-old rookie, singled for his first major-league hit to drive in the tying run in the last of the 10th inning.

In the 11th, Bochy, a seldom used 30-year-old catcher, with 16 career homers in eight seasons and a sore left knee, hit a pinch homer off reliever Ed Vande Berg.

THAT LIFTED the San Diego Padres to a 4-3 victory in one of three extra-inning games played Monday night in the National League. Elsewhere, it was St. Louis 6, New York 2 in 13 innings, and Pittsburgh 3, Philadelphia 1 in 10 innings.

"I had to hit it out to make it to first," said Bochy, who twisted the knee on Sunday against Cincinnati. "I told him (San Diego Manager Steve Boros) I could swing the bat, but I couldn't run."

Batting for winning pitcher Craig Lefferts, Bochy hit a 1-1 pitch from reliever Ed Vande Berg over the wall in left-center field for his first home run of the season.

Kruk, who played last season at Las Vegas, drove in Tony Gwynn with a two-out pinch single. Gwynn had reached second when left fielder Ken Landreaux dropped his liner for a two-base error.

Kruk, 0-3 as a pinch hitter, including a game-ending strikeout on Saturday, said he was hoping to make a contribution.

"I finally did something," he said. "When it (the count) went to 3-2, I knew he was going to challenge me," Kruk said of Welch. "It's not hard to guess what's coming when it's 3-2."

Mariano Duncan's leadoff home run in the top of 10th off Lefferts had given the Dodgers a 3-2 lead.

It was the eighth consecutive one-run game to lead off the season for both the Dodgers and Padres, extending their major-league record. They have played each other in five of those games.

"It'll make an old man out of a manager," the Dodgers' Tom Lasorda said of the streak.

National League

Cardinals 6, Mets 2

Willie McGee is hitting .462 against Dwight Gooden and defending NL East champion St. Louis is 5-1 and 2½ games ahead of New York.

"It doesn't look like it's going to stop any time soon," McGee said of the Cardinals' hot rivalry against New York after he singled and scored the tie-breaking run in the 13th inning when Mets third baseman Howard Johnson comitted a two-run error.

McGee, the Most Valuable Player and batting champion last season, is 12 for 26 lifetime against the Mets' 1985 Cy Young Award winner. He singled home the tying run in the sixth inning, and put St. Louis ahead 2-1 with a sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Gooden was behind 2-1 when he left after eight, but Darryl Strawberry's RBI single in the ninth got the 21-year-old right-hander off the hook.

"This is the way we started with the Cards last season," said New York Manager Dave Johnson, whose club has lost three straight games.

Pirates 3, Phillies 1

Pittsburgh, the critics' choice to finish last in the NL East for the third straight year, apparently isn't reading its reviews.

Among those paying no attention is left fielder R.J. Reynolds, who doubled in the go-ahead run in the top of the 10th inning as the Pirates won their third straight game.

"He's swinging the bat real good," rookie Manager Jim Leyland said of Reynolds. "He's a hungry player, and we've got quite a few hungry players. They're playing hard and I really appreciate that."

Reynolds' hit came off reliever Steve Bedrosian, 1-1. Rafael Belliard, pinch running for Steve Kemp, who had walked to start the inning, scored from first base. Joe Orsulak singled in Reynolds to make a winner Cecilio Guante, 1-0, who has appeared in four of the Pirates' five games.

Philadelphia got its only run on a sacrifice by Milt Thompson.

Toronto fans turn to Hyde

TORONTO (AP) — It was, in the words of those who witnessed it from field level, "inexcusable," "ignorant" and "the absolute worst behavior by fans I've ever seen in baseball."

Toronto's baseball fans, normally a well-mannered and appreciative lot of Dr. Jekylls, showed their Mr. Hyde side Monday and spoiled an otherwise splendid spring afternoon at the ballpark.

The trouble began when the Exhibition Stadium doors swung open at noon. A group of perhaps 10,000 adolescents, some of whom had decided to go shirtless in the heat of the midday sun, stampeded into the north grandstand bleachers 10,000 strong.

"Oh God, here they come," moaned Toronto third baseman Rance Mulliniks as he watched in disbelief from beside the batting cage, almost sensing the nonsense which was to follow.

Ironically, it was Mulliniks who appeared to be the target of the first fan to interfere with the game in the fourth inning. Standing on third base, Mulliniks watched as a young, fully-clad female staggered toward him from the left-field bleachers — apparently intent on impersonating Morganna, baseball's 'Kissing Bandit.'

Stadium security personnel intercepted the intruder and whisked her away. Then more fans took to the field. They started one at a time, then in groups of three and four and then three and four dozen at a time, running from the bleachers beyond the center-field fence to the right-field grandstand. Having dealt with similar invasions in the past, security staff had erected four waist-high fences to impede the trespassers' progress.

Some speedier fans eluding guards, but the majority were chased down and gang tackled. Two mounted police arrived on the scene, but their presence had little effect.

By the sixth inning, the interruptions now had become so bothersome — and tiresome — that Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver informed home plate umpire Steve Palermo that the Orioles' were playing the game under protest.

Repeated warnings over the public address system that the Jays could stand to forfeit the game unless order was restored went unheeded.

"I've never seen anything this bad," Mulliniks said once safely inside the Jays' clubhouse. "It's just totally inexcusable and there's no need for it."

Asked what he thought could be done to prevent it from happening, Mulliniks replied, "I'd take a night stick to them.

"It may not stop them, but it'd sure slow 'em down."

Toronto center fielder Lloyd Moseby, who was almost struck by a bottle thrown from the bleachers, said, "It was a total embarrassment. That's not Toronto."

Moseby said he was anxious to stay clear of those who stumbled around the field.

"Anybody's who's got enough nerve to go out on the field wouldn't have any second thoughts about hitting me upside the head," said Moseby.

"We've got great fans in Toronto," said Manager Jimy Williams. "But I don't know who those people were today."

Niekro gets new start, but anger, sadness linger

By GERALD ESKENAZI
New York Times News Service

CLEVELAND, Ohio — Phil Niekro dipped into his banana-laced Special K and chewed slowly Saturday morning. Not just another gray-haired man having breakfast in a hotel coffee shop. The anger — perhaps touched with sadness — showed in his eyes.

This was going to be the year he and Brother Joe always had fantasized about: together for a whole baseball season.

But 47-year-old Phil — the oldest player in baseball and one of three active 300-victory pitchers — was having breakfast in Cleveland before going back to the shabby, Depression-era park where, pitching well, he lost in his debut as an Indian Friday. Forty-one-year-old Joe was back in New York to suit up in Yankee Stadium.

"In spring training we were living in the same hotel. We drove to the park every day for five weeks and it was all we talked about during the winter — committing ourselves to the Yankees organization and how we were going to the playoffs together and having the best year we were going to have."

The Niekro Brothers, who have combined for 504 major league victories, have been on the same team only parts of two seasons — in 1973 in Atlanta and the last month of last season in New York. But when the Yankees re-signed Joe and Phil as free agents in the offseason, they would be together again. After all, Phil not only had won 16 games last year, but had 32 victories over the last two campaigns for the Yankees.

And then on March 28, four days before his 47th birthday, the Yankees dropped him.

"Oh, Joe. I've never seen my brother like that before," recalled Phil Saturday. "He still hasn't calmed down. We were such a dominant force for each other. Almost like we were one. We were going to live together this season, help each other out. We were going into the playoffs together."

Joe, meanwhile, said at Yankee Stadium Saturday: "I've cooled down somewhat, but it leaves a sour taste in your mouth. Just because it's a few weeks later doesn't mean the taste is gone. It's like the taste of garlic. It stays for a while."

When Phil told Joe, after a couple of days of deliberations, that he had chosen the Indians — the team that lost an American League-high of 102 games last season — Joe was shocked.

" 'Cleveland? Cleveland?' he said. "I think he was so motivated to thinking we'd both be in the playoffs with the Yankees this year that he couldn't believe it. What's the Indians chances of getting in the playoffs, he thought."

But the Indians wanted Phil, and, in a sense, he has always wanted the Indians.

It wasn't merely because "they were the only club that didn't ask my age," said Niekro. One club told him they were interested, but said they wished he was 20 years younger.

He grew up with the Indians, in Lansing, Ohio, two and a half hours from here, grew up listening to an announcer named Jimmy Dudley, the voice of the Indians.

"To me, Jimmy Dudley was the first Indian hero I had. Then came Wynn, Feller and Boudreau and Garcia."

His closest pal was a neighbor named John Havlicek, a much better basketball player than Niekro, who was the star of the baseball team in high school, where Phil threw the knuckler. It was the first pitch he learned from his father.

"John and I were closer than friends. We were brothers. We did everything together. I had a couple of scholarship offers," he said. "But I figured that with my high school pitching, all I'd have to do was sit on the front porch and wait for the scouts to come around with the offers. I didn't get one."

There was a job in the coal mine — "if you had one that was an elite position" — and there was a job with Continental Can and then semipro baseball and, finally, a tryout with the Milwaukee Braves. He came up for 10 innings with the Braves in 1964 and remained with them through 1983, when he was released after the season.

Then came a 32-20 record for the Yankees, part of his 300-251 big-league record that includes a no-hitter, five Gold Glove awards, a record-equaling four strikeouts in one inning, and National League leader in starts three times.

The Indians know that, but they want something more from him, explains their energetic, perpetually optimistic president, Peter Bavasi, starting his second season with the club.

"Phil can bring, for the first time in a long while, a great player who wants to come to Cleveland," Bavasi said. "We need that to restore credibility to the franchise."

Tigers 10, White Sox 8

Darrell Evans contributed a two-run homer and also singled to spark a six-run sixth inning. Lance Parrish and Harry Spilman added homers for the Tigers, while Greg Walker hit a pair of solo shots for Chicago, which is 1-6 — all at home — this season.

Evans opened the sixth with a single. Larry Henrdon singled, then Chet Lemon greeted reliever Gene Nelson with a run-scoring single to give Detroit a lead. Alan Trammell walked to load the bases.

Dave Collins' foul pop was dropped by third baseman Wayne Tolleson for an error and Collins followed with a two-run single.

Darnell Coles sacrificed and pinch-hitter Tom Brookens tripled, then scored on a single by Parrish.

Royals 8, Red Sox 2

Kansas City lost its home opener and one in Yankee Stadium in the first week of the season, no way for the defending champions to behave. So the Royals put together a six-run eighth inning to spoil Boston's home debut. Willie Wilson triggered the eighth with his third consecutive single.

George Brett also singled and Wilson easily scored on a slow grounder to the left of the mound by Hal McRae. Frank White doubled in another run, Steve Balboni, who had three hits, and Darryl Motley followed with RBI singles.

The other runs scored on an error and a Rudy Law RBI single.

Orioles 2, Blue Jays 1

Mike Boddicker threw a four-hitter to outpitch Toronto's Doyle Alexander. Consecutive two-out doubles by Rick Dempsey and Alan Wiggins produced Baltimore's tying run in the third. Successive singles by John Shelby and Juan Bonilla and Dempsey's double gave the Orioles their winning run in the fifth.

Tony Fernandez singled to lead off the first, stole second and came around to score when Dempsey's throw hit him and rolled into left field for Toronto's only run.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. attack on Libya boosted the American dollar against European currencies and the Japanese yen in early trading today, but dealers predicted the rise would be short-lived. The price of gold fell.

The dollar's main gain was against the West German mark and Dutch guilder, with more modest advances against other currencies.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose for the second straight day after hitting post-World War II lows the previous week, closing at 179.30 yen from Monday's 178.30. Later, in London, it was quoted at 179.10 yen.

In Frankfurt, dealers said the dollar had advanced prior to the attack on Libya as traders sought a haven for their currency in time of international tension. But they expected the dollar would fall back later. Dealers in Japan and Italy also attributed the dollar's gains to the U.S. attack on Libya.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4775, compared with $1.4810 Monday.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

Rates slip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities plunged further in Monday's auction, with the rates on both three-month and six-month securities dropping below 6 percent for the first time since 1977.

The Treasury Department sold $7 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.84 percent, down from 6.19 percent last week. Another $7 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.93 percent, down from 6.17 percent last week.

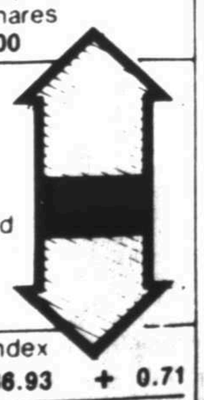

The rates were the lowest since three-month bills averaged 5.55 percent on Sept. 2, 1977, and six-month bills sold for 5.85 percent on Sept. 2, 1977.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 6.01 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,852.40 and 6.20 percent for six-month bills selling for $9,700.20.

Governors gather to hold 'summit on energy'

IRVING (AP) — Seven governors and representatives of three others gather here Tuesday for a "summit on energy" organized by Texas Gov. Mark White.

James Schlesinger, former secretary of energy and defense for President Jimmy Carter, was announced Monday as the luncheon speaker.

White called the summit to discuss problems faced by states as a result of declining oil prices. He invited 20 governors.

The invitation was accepted by Govs. George Nigh of Oklahoma, Toney Anaya of New Mexico, Bill Clinton of Arkansas, Ed Herschler of Wyoming, George Sinner of North Dakota and John Carlin of Kansas.

Representatives will be sent by Govs. Arch Moore of West Virginia, Martha Layne Collins of Kentucky and Bill Sheffield of Alaska.

After Schlesinger's speech, each of the governors will make a short statement. Several guest speakers will then make presentations, followed by a federal discussion.

Nigh said Monday he will use the summit to discuss a proposed natural gas compact commission, although he is cool to the idea.

The House and Senate have passed a resolution calling on Nigh to discuss the gas compact with the governors of Texas, Louisiana and New Mexico at a meeting in Dallas.

Oklahoma and the three states account for nearly half of the nation's production of natural gas, according to Sen. Gene Stipe, D-McAlester, sponsor of the concurrent resolution.

Gov. Mark White

While Nigh acknowledged the natural gas industry has problems, he said those troubles could possibly be addressed by the Interstate Oil Compact Commission.

Nigh said "if there's a need to change or broaden" the IOCC's responsibilities to deal with problems in the natural gas industry, that should be done first.

"There's no reason that we need another state association. We already have plenty of meetings to go to," said Nigh, a former co-chairman of the IOCC.

But Stipe said issues facing the natural gas industry are not being addressed and a new compact to promote rules governing production and protecting correlative rights could provide a nucleus for initiating reform.

"There's a reluctance on the part of everybody to do anything and that's why we're in the mess we're in," Stipe said Monday.

"The state of Oklahoma is the one suffering and it's suffering because of the indifference of its leadership," Stipe said.

Problems in the industry, facing a gas bubble that has in some cases driven prices below the cost of production, include violations of correlative rights — the rights of royalty and working interest owners to their share of profits from a producing well, Stipe said.

Another problem, he said, is that some producers are draining reserves because they are being forced to sell huge volumes of gas to make up for low prices.

Violations of correlative rights and other problems are tying up hundreds of millions of dollars and are resulting in waste of natural gas "just because of our leaders' indifference to do anything about it," Stipe said.

In a letter to Nigh, petroleum geologist Martin Vaughan of Tulsa said: "this excess deliverability ... results in lowered tax receipts to the state, lowered activity in gas drilling, lowered income to operators and royalty owners and is so severe that the financial stability of many companies and banks are severely impaired."

Nigh's senior executive assistant, Ed Pugh, said he doesn't think an association of four states would have much clout in solving problems in natural gas, partly because protecting correlative rights is a state issue, while other problems need to be addressed by the federal government.

Those federal issues include the interstate transportation of natural gas and the Fuel Use Act, which prohibits the use of natural gas in electric-generating plants.

Also, Canada and Mexico are making further inroads into U.S. markets for natural gas, especially along the East Coast and the southwest, further taking the state's clout to deal with the situation out of Oklahoma's hands, Pugh said.

But Stipe said the Corporation Commission is not protecting correlative rights, and because the four states control half of national natural gas production gas they could have an impact.

"The four states could go a long way in protecting the correlative rights of the citizens," Stipe said. "It's their (the Corporation Commission) duty but they're not doing it. I'm not sure they have adequate mechanisms to work with."

Asked if the existing structure could be changed to deal with protecting correlative rights, Stipe said: "The existing structure is nonfunctional."

The proposed compact has been criticized as a political move by some legislators to gain favor with royaly owners, but Stipe said good politics means looking after those in trouble.

"It's never good politics to ignore someone's problems," Stipe said.

Stipe estimated in the billions of dollars the money not getting to royalty owners because of violations of correlative rights.

"It's a need and it needs to be dealt with," Stipe said.

Stipe said he has spoken with leaders of Texas and Louisiana, and they appear receptive to the idea of a gas compact.

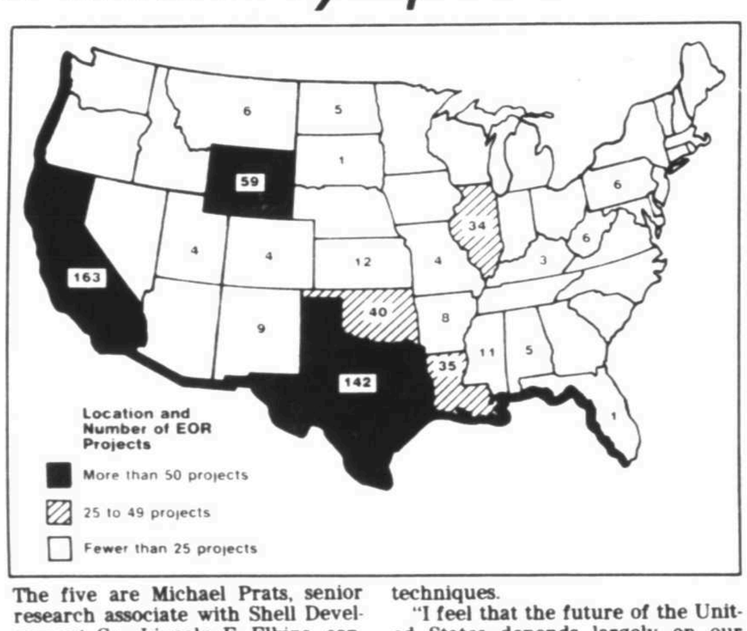

Panel to discuss enhanced recovery issues at fifth annual symposium

RICHARDSON — How far has costly enhanced oil recovery, EOR, technology come, and where is it going?

U.S. Energy Secretary John S. Herrington will address these and other critical EOR issues with a panel of experts, including Donald G. Russell, vice president of production for Shell Oil Co., Marvin L. Katz, vice president of engineering for ARCO Oil & Gas Co., and EOR pioneer R.J. Blackwell, senior research scientist for Exxon Production Research Co.

The panel's subject, "EOR: Miles Traveled, Miles to Go," will open the fifth symposium on enhanced oil recovery on April 21. Co-sponsored by the Society of Petroleum Engineers and the U.S. Department of Energy, the event offers a close look at evolving EOR technology and its rapidly shifting economics. "At first glance, it doesn't make sense, but declining crude oil prices have increased interest in the symposium," said Jerry Bowen of Amoco Production Co., meeting official. "More and more people are wondering what affect the drop in prices will have on EOR."

Monday's recognition luncheon in the Radisson Excelsior Hotel will honor five engineers for their pioneering contributions to EOR techniques, which enable the industry to produce oil left in the ground after conventional production methods.

The five are Michael Prats, senior research associate with Shell Development Co.; Lincoln F. Elkins, consultant; Ben H. Caudle and Claude Hocott, petroleum engineering professors at the University of Texas, and Blackwell. Between them, the five men have published more than 100 technical papers on EOR processes in chemical flooding, miscible injection and thermal recovery techniques.

"I feel that the future of the United States depends largely on our ability to get a political and economic policy in which EOR plays a greater part for recovering the large body of known U.S. reserves," said Hocott, the luncheon's keynote speaker, whose topic will be "All You Wanted to Know About EOR and Never Asked."

Knight-Ridder chairman Alva Chapman, left, and Gannett chairman Allen Neuharth talk with reporters in Detroit as they announce a joint operating agreement under which the Detroit Free Press and the Detroit News will cooperate in their publishing.

Detroit papers agree to joint operating agreement

DETROIT (AP) — Owners of Detroit's two daily newspapers announced plans to merge their production and business operations and end more than a century of competition between the papers, which have lost more than $50 million between them in the past five years.

If the joint operating agreement proposed Monday is approved by the U.S. Justice Department, the Detroit Free Press and The Detroit News would become the largest newspapers in the country joined in such an agreement.

They would publish separate weekday newspapers but a joint edition Saturdays and Sundays.

"This market cannot support two high-quality, high-cost, independent newspapers," said Allen H. Neuharth, chairman of Gannett Co. Inc., which owns the News. "The demise of either newspaper in this market would be tragic."

Alvah H. Chapman Jr., chairman of Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc., which owns the Free Press, said the agreement should stem the two papers' losses.

"We would certainly hope we would be profitable from the start," Chapman said at a news conference with Neuharth.

Editors at the two papers vowed that the newsrooms would remain strong competitors.

"We're still going to have competition, but its nature changes somewhat with the merger of the business sides of the newspapers," said Kent Bernhard, Free Press executive editor.

"There's always a momentary sadness whenever you see change in newspapers," added Ben Burns, Bernhard's counterpart at the News. "We're a very tradition-oriented lot." But he said the change was better than having one newspaper fail.

Gannett, which has headquarters in Arlington, Va., and Miami-based Knight-Ridder said the News lost $20 million on operations in the last five years and the Free Press lost $35 million.

Consumer debt grows $5 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans took on $4.97 billion more in consumer debt than they paid off in February, the smallest monthly increase in eight months, the government reported Monday.

The Federal Reserve Board said consumer debt was growing at an annual rate of 11 percent in February, compared with a 17.2 percent rate of increase in January, when debt increased by $7.66 billion.

The big change was a 39 percent fall in auto loans in February reflecting weaker sales as automakers curtailed their financing incentive programs.

In February, automobile loans grew by $2.54 billion, an annual rate of 14.4 percent, compared with a January increase of $4.18 billion, an annual rate of 24.3 percent.

Other details of the debt report:

—Cash loans from banks and other short- and medium-term personal debt rose $1.21 billion in February, down from a January increase of $2.18 billion.

—Revolving debt including credit card debt rose by $1.04 billion in February, down slightly from $1.39 billion in January.

—The various changes put total consumer debt at $547.73 billion at the end of February.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Sears restructuring slashes 1190 employees

Sears, Roebuck & Co. said Monday that it will lay off up to 1,190 people in a restructuring of the Chicago retailer's field management organization.

Sears will close four territorial offices responsible for overseeing retail stores, administrative groups and most of the company's U.S. support facilities. Two new field organizations in Chicago will assume those responsibilities, a Sears spokesman said.

Of the 1,800 people employed at the four territorial offices, 1,190 will find their jobs "discontinued," the spokesman said.

The actual number of layoffs probably won't reach 1,190 at the four offices because an undetermined number of employees will be offered new jobs with Sears, while others can take early retirement, the spokesman said.

The four offices, which will be closed on June 30, are in Alhambra, Calif., Atlanta, St. Davids, Pa., and Skokie, Ill. The cost of closing the offices will have a minimal effect on 1986 earnings, the company said.

Smith International losses soar from judgement

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Smith International Inc., an oil field services concern, Monday reported losses of $206.8 million, or $9.10 per share, in the fourth quarter and $265.1 million, or $11.66 per share, for the year.

The huge deficits reflect the impact of a $205.4 million patent-infringement judgment handed down against the company in February in federal court.

Smith said the judgment, plus legal fees and other expenses from the company's 14-year legal battle with Houston-based Hughes Tool Co. totaled $216.9 million. The case involved Smith's use of a seal ring for rock drilling bits that Hughes developed in 1968.

The judgment forced the company last month to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization to gain protection from creditors.

The company also disclosed that last Friday it filed a notice of appeal of the ruling to the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C. The appeal had been expected.

In releasing its financial statement, Smith, which has been hurt by a slump in the oil industry, said revenues were down by 14.4 percent to $172.4 million for the three months ended Dec. 31 and by 6.6 percent to $697.3 million for the full year.

Without the extraordinary writeoffs because of the patent case, Smith posted an operating loss for the year of $3.2 million.

FAA orders modifications of jumbo jet tails

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has ordered a modification of all Boeing 747 jetliners in an effort to avert accidents like the one that killed 520 people aboard a Japan Air Lines jumbo jet last year, officials said Monday.

The FAA directive requires that a cover plate be placed over an access door in the tail section of the plane to prevent a rush of pressurized air from damaging the tail and critical control lines if the rear cabin wall fails.

FAA spoklesman Fred Farrar said 165 Boeing 747s are subject to the modification, which must be completed within six months. The agency said the change will cost about $240 per airplane.

The Boeing Co. last year also recommended that the tail section's access hole be covered and some airlines already are believed to have made the modification on some of their jumbo jets.

The change can be performed during routine maintenance and probably will not take any Boeing 747s out of service.

Since the Aug. 12 accident involving a domestic flight in Japan, the FAA has ordered inspections of rear cabin bulkheads on all Boeing 747s to uncover any unusual metal fatigue. No serious problems have been found, officials have said.

Venezuelans, Union Pacific to buy refinery

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Union Pacific Corp. and Petroleos de Venezuela, the state-owned oil company of Venezuela, will jointly buy and operate the Champlin Petroleum Co. refinery at Corpus Christi, Texas, company officials announced.

Included in the purchase will be Champlin's marketing and distribution system, officials said Monday. Terms were not disclosed pending completion of the agreement, which is expected this summer.

The planned venture will include joint ownership of the refinery and working capital and continuation of all marketing programs now in effect. Officals said no changes would be made in employment or managment. About 450 people work at the refinery, which can process 160,000 barrels of oil a day.

Commissioners weigh proposals on jail study

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Midland County Jail-Courthouse issues still are far from being resolved. But another in a series of steps toward resolving those issues came Monday, when the commissioners considered proposals by two teams interested in carrying out a study of "long-term Courthouse and Jail needs" for Midland County.

The study was authorized almost a year ago — last May 11 — by Midland County voters. At that time, voters approved a $3 million bond issue to renovate the jail, to expand Culver Youth Home and to fund a study of Midland County Courthouse and jail needs into the 21th Century. In doing so, voters rejected a $9.9 million proposal to build an $8.4 million jail apart from the courthouse.

And despite the depressed West Texas economy, Midland County still is a prime candidate for funding a courthouse-jail project, suggested a member of a bidding team.

"Your credit is more than sound," said Charlie Zapalla, president of Russell, Rea & Zapalla Inc.

But Commissioner Durward Wright cautioned the planners not to get carried away.

"It should not be so grandiose that we will be unable to pay for it," Wright said.

FOLLOWING ONE of two presentations, David Arnspiger, director of finance for Cowen & Co. of Houston, zeroed in on the cost of a courthouse-jail complex to serve Midland County into next century.

"There's always a bitter pill attached to everything," Arnspiger said.

A $30 million project financed over 20 years would cost the county about $2.25 million a year figured on the present tax base, he said. To finance that indebtedness, a homeowner's county taxes on a $50,000 house would increased about $24 a year or about $2 per month, Arnspiger said.

Further, Arnspiger projected long-range economic prosperity for Midland and Houston. The economy of both cities is strongly keyed to petroleum.

"We're having a little rough time now," Arnspiger said.

He said that there has been over-reaction to the The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal reports on depression of the oil economy and dropping oil prices.

"We won't say you all are on the edge of collapse," he said. Although he noted that petroleum is a depleting natural resource, he said that West Texas oil reserves are among the largest in the nation.

"Believe it or not, we are going to have to use oil and gas for awhile."

THE COMMISSIONERS' launching of the study almost a year after the voters recommended it came under attack by Matt Blair, Republican Party candidate for county judge.

"Why wasn't this started a year ago," he asked. "There's never time to do it right," he said, "but there's time to do it over."

Blair is opposing County Judge Bill Ahders for the party's nomination.

Norm Cox, president of N.R. Cox & Associates, a correctional planning and management firm based in San Antonio, said his team would hold "planning sessions" with the county in carrying out the study.

"We recognize that you don't build a jail in a vacuum," he said in alluding to other county growths.

Su Cunningham, who represented a competing Dallas firm on the master-plan bid, said her company was "trying to be responsive to the economics these days" in the Midland area.

"We are very interested in getting the most out of your...construction dollar."

Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig said while the Midland County "jail problems" are "most acute," he said that those needs should not be "over emphasized."

Craig cited the county's courthouse, library and criminal justice needs.

And Wright noted that the county is "still throwing money down the jail in hauling prisoners" for lodging in other county jails due to space limitation of the Midland County Jail, where capacity is restricted to 85 inmates.

IN REFERRING to the "seven-year history" of the on-going courthouse-jail debate, Wright suggested that the team researching the master plan study proposals and suggestions by the various groups and interest dealing with the courthouse-jail issues.

Commissioner Scott Welch said that "90 percent of the problem" was in selecting a site for the jail. Proponents for a new jail or an expanded jail have disagreed on location of the a new jail. Some want it on or adjoining the courthouse square and others prefer the jail apart from the courthouse.

Welch said a study of the Midland County Public Library "ought to be in the (master-plan) study" even though the library was not mentioned in the wording of the $3 million bond issue proposition.

"Just because it's not physically attached to this building, it's (still) part of the courthouse," Welch said.

Only two of seven planners responded to the commissioners' invitation to bid on the master plan. The planners offered no costs on their services.

In other business:

— Wright noted that there would be a "tremendous decline" in ad valorem tax revenue for 1987 due to the declining property valuations. "Indications are there is going to be a large shortfall in ad valorem taxes."

— Gary Harris, engineer for Parkhill, Smith & Cooper Inc., told the commissioners that "It looks like we are going to be able to put water in the whole area" of Windowpane No. II. Should the county be awarded federal funds for the project to lay water lines in the undeveloped area in southeast Midland, then the city of Midland would turn the water on prior to the area being annexed. Funding for sewer lines would come in subsequent years, he said.

"Two years ago, we tried to put water and sewer in the area," Harris noted. "There was some opposition. I presume there's going to be some opposition this year."

Wright noted that "It may be several years before the city annexes" the area. "There's no definite assurance it would be annexed."

Wright noted the "main objective" to the annexation has been the levying of city taxes in the largely impoverished area, which has pockets of relative affluence and households with good well water and efficient septic tanks.

Sprayberry: Examiner asked wrong questions

By MARK LEWIS

ABILENE — Before jury selection began this morning in his second trial on attempted-sexual-assault charges, Charlie Sprayberry said the examiner who conducted his March 27 polygraph test had asked the wrong questions.

"There were some questions on which I had absolute certainty that were never asked," said the 45-year-old Midland justice of the peace.

According to Special Prosecutor Andy Shuval, Sprayberry failed the test after agreeing to plead guilty if he did not pass.

Sprayberry this morning attributed the test results to "the trauma that has been brought into my life" since he was indicted in November.

His first trial ended in a hung jury Feb. 20. Visiting Judge James H. Clack granted a defense motion to move the second trial to Abilene.

Sprayberry's attorney, John W. Smith of Odessa, said this morning that if Sprayberry were to be convicted he would ask Clack to decide punishment.

Smith said he didn't know if Sprayberry would take the stand. The defendant did not testify at his first trial.

"I'll just turn this over to the lawyers," said Sprayberry when asked how he felt about the trial.

Sprayberry is accused of trying to force his secretary to perform oral sex on him while they were riding in his car on April 26, 1984. Attempted sexual assault is a third-degree felony, with a penalty range of two to 10 years in prison and an optional fine up to $5,000.

Ex-Midlander gets 10 years for sexual assault

A former Midland man who pleaded guilty Thursday to sexual assault of a child was sentenced to 10 years in state prison Monday by 238th District Court Judge Vann Culp.

Joseph Vega, a 39-year-old Abilene jeweler, admitted having begun a sexual relationship with his stepdaughter when she was 12. He claimed she seduced him, but the girl, now 16, testified Vega came to her.

"It was never force," she said Thursday during the punishment phase of Vega's trial. "I'd tell him to quit and he just wouldn't."

Four escape injury when car crashes into store

From Staff Reports

Four people escaped serious injury Monday afternoon when a car crashed through the front of a drug store after being hit by another car, the store's manager said.

"We usually have an employee stationed at the register that was hit. Someone could have gotten killed," said Don Hynes, manager of the Service Drug of Midland, located at the intersection of A Street and Scharbauer Drive.

"I looked up and all I could see was a wall coming in in slow motion and then glass and the car come through," Hynes said.

Hynes said he wasn't sure why four employees at the front of the store escaped injury.

"I don't know why they didn't get hurt," he said.

"It really did scare me. I thought an employee was at the register, so I rushed toward the register," Marilyn Hynes said.

Midland police did not file an accident report because the accident occurred on private property, said police spokesman Hank Norton.

Hynes said the accident occurred around 4:43 p.m. Monday when a driver of a car traveling through the lot hit another parked car which crashed through the front of the store.

"If he hadn't hit that car then that car would have ended up in the back of the building and somebody might have gotten hurt," Hynes said.

Midland, Odessa sales tax rebates down from 1985

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Sales tax rebates reflecting sales in February showed a decline in comparison to the checks received by Midland and Odessa for the same period last year. But the two cities' financial directors indicated May rebate checks will be a better indication of the local economies.

Midland's April check was for $461,378.07, compared to $487,314.25 received in 1985. For the calendar year to date, Midland has taken in $2,671,250.19, which is 8.31 percent less than the $2,913,506.36 a year ago.

Odessa's check was written for $100,000 less than the $495,739.11 received in April 1985. This year's was for $393,750.01. Since January, the city has received a total $2,445,639.71, which is 5.87 percent below last year's $2,601,489.27.

The cities' checks represent the 1 percent local sales tax collected by the 20th of the following month and rebated by the State Comptroller's Office.

Frank Muser, Odessa's fiscal services director, said the lower check "reflects the overall economic activity decrease. We had expected it to be down, but it came in lower than we had expected."

The May payment will be for sales in March, and that should be a better indication of the area's economy, said Muser. He said it should be a large check since it will be the end of the quarter and some businesses report only on a quarterly basis.

Gifford, Midland's finance director, said the $461,000 was higher than the $450,000 he had expected to see and noted the check includes Easter sales.

He is expecting the May check to come in for about $1 million. If less than that, it means Midland's yearly total would drop to $8.2 million from the estimated $9 million. If it hits his estimate, the city's sales tax rebate total could rise to $8.5 million.

The two men had differing reactions to the United States' attack on Libya Monday night. Muser said he was hoping it might bring an increase in oil prices, which would translate into more jobs and a better local economy.

Gifford, who called it a "minor attack" in terms of ordnances dropped, said he doesn't expect any change in oil prices. "I don't think we did anything to disrupt Libya's flow of oil," he said.

Salvation Army seeks help from restaurants

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The Salvation Army is having a difficult time finding local restaurants to take up the slack left by a meal program discontinued in January, said Major Harvey Harwell.

Due to the Permian Basin's economic downturn an anonymous restaurant that prepared about 60 meals every day for the past five years had to stop in January. Since then the Salvation Army has been seeking restaurants to replace the donor. The meal donations fed residents at the Battered Women's Shelter, transients at the Salvation Army and the unemployed. Meals were served once a day at the West Kentucky Baptist Church. If new donors are found, meals will be given out at the Salvation Army, 300 S. Baird.

About six Midland restaurants have been contacted, but there has been no response, Harwell said. The agency is asking restaurants to donate food they would normally dispose of at the end of the day.

"We just want the surplus, what they are throwing away," Harwell said.

Many restaurants throw out food after it has set for a certain period and the agency is asking restaurants to save that food, he added.

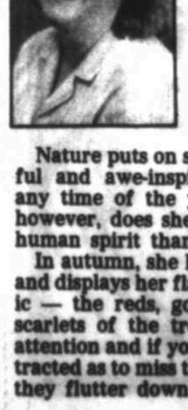

"You're throwing food away and the need is more serious than it was one year ago," said Jerry Calhoun, a volunteer with the food program.

A special truck would be used to pick up and preserve the food that would otherwise be discarded, Harwell said.

The Army is seeing between a 35 to 40 percent increase in people requesting meals. Many local people and women and children have joined the usual ranks of male transients that seek aid from the shelter, Harwell said.

"People who used to support us through United Way donations, we're now having to support," he said.

While the agency will accept all donations, prepared food is what is most needed, he said.

Nature puts on her most spirit-lifting show in spring

Nature puts on some very wonderful and awe-inspiring shows most any time of the year. At no time, however, does she do more for the human spirit than in spring.

In autumn, she lets down her hair and displays her flair for the dramatic — the reds, golds, oranges, and scarlets of the trees demand your attention and if you should be so distracted as to miss their performance, they flutter down and do their encore in front of your face and under your feet.

Winter shows nature at her most formal. She dresses in heaven's purest white and bejewels herself in the most valuable gems — valued for their perfection and brevity. This time she holds herself most aloof — drawing and imprisoning your attention, but discouraging your touch, lest the perfection be marred.

Summer is nature at work. She is as an industrious housewife, and hard as she might work, this is the time she is most touchable. Summer, bright, warm and vivid, invites human participation. Like a mother working in the garden, nature delights in watching her children frolic on the lawn.

Spring, though, is surely nature's most wondrous display. She paints her delicate colors with such care, one is reminded again of the mother, preparing the nursery for her firstborn. Spring gives one a most heartrending sense of anticipation.

You know that, just after the next buttercup blooms or the next tiny green leaf unfurls, everything will be exactly right with the world. Even in a barren place, if there is but one tree, one small patch of wildflowers, the anticipation of spring exists.

The sense of rightness that comes with spring extends far beyond the bond that you feel with nature. It demands expression in acts of generosity and good humor and tolerance, or just in hugging a child or playful squeezing a puppy. You couldn't possibly stop the smile that crosses your face at the sight of an old lady working her flowerbed, or the sigh of contentment at the smell of dew as you leave for work.

There is an answer to every problem, just as there is a hopeful spring to every austere winter. In spring, nothing is too difficult to accomplish, nothing so sad that there is no cheer.

If you don't believe me, listen to the morning news as you make ready for the day — then, stand still in the spring morning.

Pro-, anti-Contra factions march on statehouse

AUSTIN (AP) — Competing delegations marched on the Capitol grounds to support and oppose President Reagan's proposal to send $100 million in aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

The U.S. House is expected to vote today on a compromise version of the measure. The Senate approved a different version recently but it was rejected by the House.

A group of about 40 people sponsored by the Americans for Biblical Government marched Monday in support of aid to the Contra rebels fighting the Sandinista government.

About an equal number of people appeared to protest the proposed aid, waving signs that read, "Get High with a Contra" and "Why Aid Drug Smugglers?"

Literature distributed by the biblical government organization criticized U.S. Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Austin, for his vote against Reagan's proposal.

George Sebek, local coordinator of the group, said that "Nicaragua is the first domino in a long line" of Western nations that Marxists hope to take over, and that the eventual targets are Mexico and the United States.

Jennifer Long of the Central American Peace Initiative said the biblical government group had been misled to believe that the Sandinistas were killing Christians and Jews.

Temple has its own set of 'Blues Brothers'

By KAREN HEBERT

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — They could be called "The Blues Brothers," but around the Temple Police Department, Mike and Ronnie Wilcox are better known as "Big Wilcox" and "Little Wilcox."

The men are brothers and frequently are mistaken for one another, especially by citizens.

More than once, Mike and Ronnie Wilcox stopped the same motorist during the same day. Mike Wilcox said he once stopped a man at 57th and Avenue M. Minutes later, Ronnie Wilcox stopped the same man at 1st Street and Avenue M. "The man thought I had raced ahead so that I could stop him again," Mike said.

The confusion is understandable.

Aside from last names, the men resemble each other, they both work in the traffic division, they both work from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m., they live two houses apart and both are in the same history class at Central Texas College in Killeen.

But Mike Wilcox says the time spent together is not as constant as it may seem.

"It's a good relationship," he said. "We don't smother each other."

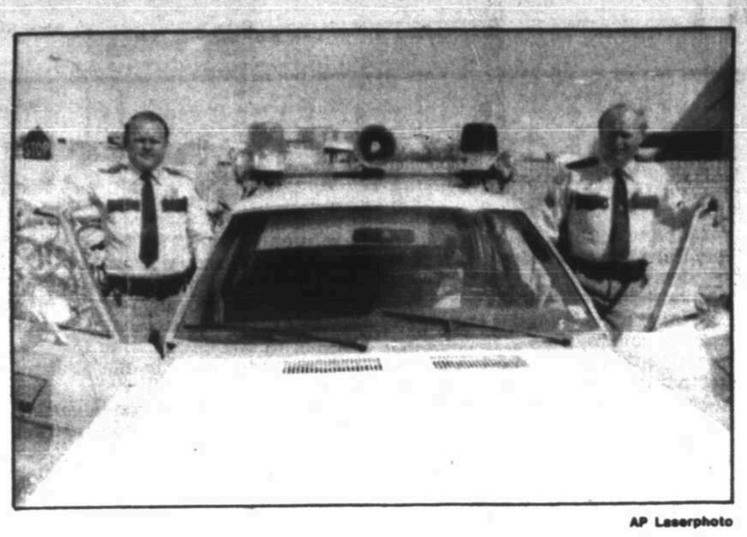

The men ride to work in the same car and usually spend their lunch break together, but Ronnie Wilcox says that, during other times, "We never keep track of each other."

Although Mike, at 37, is only two years older than his brother, he has a 10-year jump on him in police experience.

Mike Wilcox has been a police officer for 15 years and Ronnie Wilcox has been one for five years. Mike constantly reminds his brother of that fact.

"I told him five years before he did it (became a police officer) to do it," Mike Wilcox said. "If he would have listened to his brother, who knew better, he would already have 10 years on the job."

But, Ronnie said, "That's why I am the younger brother."

AP Laserphoto

Ronnie Wilcox, left, and his brother Mike pose by a Temple police car. The brothers both work in the traffic division of the Temple Police Department, where Mike has been an officer for 15 years, and Ronnie only five.

Before joining the police force, Ronnie lived in Copperas Cove and worked as an electrician in Killeen.

And, for five years, he would get off work at 5 p.m., drive to Temple and ride with Mike until 3 a.m. or later.

"Sometimes, we would get off at 5 a.m., just in time for him to go to work again," Mike said.

It took several years before Ronnie Wilcox said he believed it was the right time to make a career move.

"Ronnie has always been the stable one in the family," Mike said. "When he buys an automobile, he drives it until the wheels fall off. He doesn't like change."

Ronnie Wilcox agreed that he prefers to keep things the same in his life, but said he finally realized that he wasn't building a career or future in the job he had.

When Mike learned of his brother's decision, "I ran out and got the application and made him fill it out and give it back to me, before he could change his mind.

"I worried every day that he was going to back out," he said.

But Ronnie didn't back out, even when he went to the police academy and became his brother's student.

Mike, who still teaches at the police academy, said he was tougher on his brother because they are related and because he knew Ronnie was more familiar with the work than the other students.

During the five years Ronnie Wilcox rode with his brother, Mike shared his police knowledge and experience.

Fifteen years ago, Mike Wilcox started as a reserve officer in Copperas Cove, then went into the Army to attend military police school.

From there, he went to the police academy and worked as an officer in the Killeen Police Department. After five years, he moved to Temple.

Mike Wilcox said he became a police officer because "As long as I can remember, it's all I've ever wanted to do."

When Ronnie Wilcox decided to move to Temple, Mike found his brother a house — two lots away from his own.

Although it seems Mike plays big brother to Ronnie, the men agreed they watch out for each other.

However, Mike sometimes answers questions directed at his brother, which Ronnie said is easier "because he's going to be right and 99 percent of the time I'm wrong."

Mike laughed and said, "See," and remined Ronnie once again that he should have becme a police officer five years earlier than he did.

"The day he retires, I will let him forget," Mike said.

And Ronnie laughed — or was that Mike?

State officials fight over royalties from offshore leases

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The manager of the state's land sued the state's banker Monday for following the advice of the state's lawyer and defying the state's accountant.

The accountant also made it known that he would not accept the lawyer's final decision on how to spend the money, and the land manager said he would hire an outside attorney to argue the lawsuit.

The object of the suit: what to do with the nearly-half-a-billion-dollar settlement Texas received from the federal government Monday as its share of royalties, bonuses and interest from oil and gas leases off the Texas Gulf Coast. Ironically, that money arrived following last week's settlement of a six-year-old lawsuit that Texas had filed against the federal government.

"A constitutional crisis is imminent," said Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who filed the lawsuit against Treasurer Ann Richards in Travis County district court late Monday afternoon. "Ms. Richards is refusing to carry out her ministerial duty to properly deposit funds as directed."

Mauro said he has been trying for the last six months to convince top state officials to let the courts decide the fate of the $424.9 million settlement.

Shortly after noon Monday, Attorney General Jim Mattox advised Comptroller Bob Bullock that state law requires him to credit the money to the treasury's general revenue fund — the state's bank account for most expenses — until Mattox issues a legal opinion as to how the state may actually spend the funds.

Ms. Richards told Bullock she would follow Mattox' advise. "I am advised by counsel that the attorney general...has the power and the duty to advise state officials concerning the public interest and official duties."

Bullock, backed by Mauro, had other plans. He asked Richards to deposit the $214.5 million principal from the offshore revenues into the Permanent School Fund and the $210.4 million in interest into the Available School Fund.

Initially, Ms. Richards placed the money in general revenue, but later transferred into the school funds.

The Constitution prohibits the state from spending the Permanent Fund monies. All interest from Permanent Fund investments goes to the Available Fund. The Legislature may use the Available Fund only for public school operations; last year it appropriated $165 for every student in Texas.

Bullock told Ms. Richards that regardless of how she deposits the money, his records would credit it to the two school funds.

"By law, I am the sole accounting officer of the state; and I am responsible for managing the fiscal concerns of the state," he wrote. "As such, I am ultimately responsible for making the decision as to which accounts the funds should be deposited."

Other top state officials have become involved as well. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby believes the Legislature should have the authority to use the windfall to help cover a looming budget deficit. Gov. Mark White and House Speaker Gib Lewis have proposed placing the money into trust funds for research and economic development.

"Bad economic times are no reason for bad public policy," Mauro said. "This case is too important to the school children of Texas to be left to politics."

Mattox said his staff is conducting "difficult research" into legal precedents to determine exactly how the state may spend the money. "About the only thing you can say unequivocally is there is not an unequivocal position as to where this money will go," Mattox said.

Bullock spokesman Tony Proffitt said the comptroller will not follow the attorney general's final opinion if that opinion directs him to deposit the money into general revenue. "Bullock said that if there was a competent court who directed him to do it, he'd do it," Proffitt said.

SPRAYBERRY

According to Shuval, Sprayberry reneged on an agreement to plead guilty and accept 10-years probation and a $5,000 fine if he failed the polygraph test.

That agreement is probably not legally binding on Sprayberry, Shuval said, and the test results are not admissible in court.

"It's not a very pleasant case," Shuval told the jury panel this morning.

Shuval said they would hear testimony not usually heard "in polite company."

"Just because he's a justice of the peace doesn't give him any extra points," the prosecutor said.

VEGA

Vega was convicted for a December 1982 incident which occurred when the family was living in Midland.

He recently pleaded guilty to a similar incident which occurred in Abilene, and was sentenced to seven years probation in a Taylor County court. But because that conviction is still under appeal, Vega was eligible for probation in the Midland case.

"I would appreciate it if I could have a second chance," the tearful defendant told Culp Thursday.

Vega had elected to have Culp, rather than a jury, hear the case.

Originally indicted for aggravated sexual assault of a child because the stepdaughter was under 14 in December 1982, Vega was allowed to plead guilty to the lesser offense in order to shorten the proceedings, said Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors.

"It's less harsh on the kid," he said.

Sexual assault of a child is a second-degree felony with a penalty range of two to 20 years in prison and an optional fine up to $10,000.

Had Vega been convicted of aggravated sexual assault, he would have faced a penalty range of five to 99 years or life in prison.

After he pleaded guilty, the trial went immediately to the punishment phase, with the stepdaughter, her mother and Vega providing most of the testimony.

Vega was represented by Midland attorney Allen McFall.

Client's right to speedy trial violated, lawyer says

From Staff Reports

A lawyer for a Midland man who is being charged with allowing an animal to run loose said Monday his client's right to a speedy trial has been violated.

Clifford Hardwick, attorney for Mike Nickell, 25, 4618 Cherokee Drive, also urged the municipal court to find the city ordinance prohibiting animals to run loose and the charge against Nickell constitutionally vague and ambiguous.

Nickell is being charged with a Class C misdemeanor for allowing a pet wolf to roam at large, after the animal bit 18-month-old April Lamb in October.

Municipal Court Judge James Brazell denied the two requests to consider the constitutionality of the charge and city ordinance. He is expected to hand down a decision Friday on whether Nickell has been denied the right to a speedy trial.

Assistant City Attorney David Clyde said the city will not pursue the case if Brazell determines Nickell's right to a speedy trial has been violated.

Nickell is serving a five year probation from a 1983 felony conviction where he was found guilty of shooting a Barbado sheep from a helicopter.

If Nickell goes to trial and is convicted of the city ordinance, he may be found in violation of his probation, Clyde said.

"It's up to the federal probation officer. But certainly this is the same type of behavior he's on probation for and if he violates the same behavior, I'm sure the probation officer would want to know about it," Clyde said.

UT defends arrest of 42 protesters

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas officials are defending the arrest of numerous anti-apartheid protesters on campus last week, although the Travis County attorney had advised police against such action.

County Attorney Ken Oden said Monday that he was called by UT police Friday afternoon and asked for advice on whether arrests should be made.

He told them prosecution for disruptive conduct, a misdemeanor, would be difficult "because the statute is very narrowly drawn and requires specific proof that people had gathered for a demonstration and were completely blocking a public thoroughfare in the process."

UT vice president Ronald Brown said school officials "still maintained there was at least the potential of prosecutable cases" on disruptive conduct charges.

Read the copy when you're offered Princess Di's famous sapphire and diamond engagement ring for $4.99, or when you see any jewelery offer that seems too good to resist. The Direct Marketing Association says the copy holds the clue to what is being offered, and consumers need to understand the terminology used to describe jewelry in order to make a satisfactory purchase decision.

Faux — pronounced "foe" — is only your enemy if you don't understand the meaning of the word. Cassell's French dictionary defines faux as "false, untrue, erroneous, wrong, spurious, base, counterfeit, forged." In other words, faux means fake. Understand that a faux diamond is merely a fake, what some refer to as costume jewelry.

The Federal Trade Commission's "Guide for the Jewelry Industry" defines diamond as "a natural mineral consisting essentially of pure carbon crystallized in the isometric system and is found in many colors." The FTC warns that it is an unfair trade practice for any industry member to use the unqualified word "diamond" as description or identification of any object or product not meeting these requirements, or though meeting such requirements has not been symmetrically fashioned with at least 17 polished facets or sides.

Seventeen facets are usually found on smaller stones, according to Lisa Roman, Consumer Information Director for the Jewelers of America. Fifty-eight facets, a full cut, most effectively set off a stone's brilliance.

Chic fashion look can be inexpensive

Cheap chic?

Can we talk?

Want to look like you stepped out of the fashion pages of Bazaar or Vogue for about $100 (dress, shoes, stockings and jewelry included), and still have money to pay the rent and feed the kids?

Then let's talk chic on the cheap. It takes little cash but some personal dash — and quite a bit of time.

If you've got the time, read the fashion mags and newspapers, and clip out what look you'd like.

Study it. Notice what types of clothes the model is wearing. Disregard the intimidating designer name, because you're going to shop for that style in stores that don't have couture departments.

Once you know the dress styles that bespeak current vogue, zero in on the accessories that pull the look together.

Take note of the color of the stockings, the degree of sheerness (some seasons the trend is to opaque, others to glossy sheer) and the texture. This season there are a lot of colorful stockings influenced by the '60s revival, as well as textured ones. Tiny embroidered leaves and dots, laces and back seams are all hot this spring and summer, with interpretations by all the leading dress designers.

IS YOUR FAVORITE model wearing a hat? What kind? Memorize the styles being touted in this month's magazines.

Also the jewelry. Only your jeweler will know if those rhinestone earrings are fakes. And, quite honestly, who cares? Most jewelry worn in the daytime is supposed to be fun, so grab three knee-length strands of pearls and wear them with panache and a confident smile. Note: It's OK that they're costume jewelry, but make sure they're what's in — or you'll get snickers instead of praise for your ability to pull a fashion statement off the bargain rack.

Also take time to notice what types of shoes are current. Slim-heeled pumps are stand-bys, but there's a return to low-heeled shoes and platform soles.

If you've done your homework, you're now ready to go shopping.

Places to find good bargains on current fashions are in garment districts, brand-name warehouses and outlets, discount stores and middle- to lower-priced stores.

Some discount stores are always offering bargains on name-brand merchandise, although some are "seconds" or "overruns" instead of top quality. But you'll find popular designer names occasionally stuffed among a lot of merchandise that is often several seasons (or years!) old bearing a brand name you've never heard of.

The good stuff in these stores goes fast, so you've got to shop regularly and know what's a deal and what isn't.

WHILE YOU SHOP 'til you drop, look for classic, simple dresses on sale. A $100 silk shirtwaist or cashmere sweater dress that had been $200 is probably a terrific investment. If it's basic (no frills, trims that give away its age), you can wear it a long time and in a variety of ensembles, dressing it up or down over the seasons.

Fabric is one of the things you're paying for in a designer label dress. We all know that silk, cashmere, wool and, yes, even rayon, have that luxurious touch or drape to them that is reflected on the price tag.

If all you can afford is a rayon look-alike made of acetate, and you want it to last, be gentle with it. For instance, 100 percent polyester clothes often say machine washable and dryable, but if dry cleaned, they'll look new lots longer.

Less expensive clothes are usually of a poor-quality fabric and are also skimpier in the cut. In other words, if you wear a size 8 Liz Claiborne, you'll mostly likely wear a 10 or 12 in a cheaper copy.

Got the picture? Study fashion trends, pick styles that are going to be flattering to your coloring, figure and lifestyle, note the fabric content, never buy anything you can't try on and look at yourself in the mirror.

DEAR ABBY

Grandma doubts girl's 'good' effect

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My 15-year-old grandson, "Mark," has an 18-year-old girlfriend who has taken over his life. He is sexually involved with her — with his mother's knowledge and consent. This girl has quit school, quit her job, stolen from her grandparents, and was kicked out of her parents' home, so my daughter-in-law is letting her live with them. She says this girl is "good" for Mark because he is now getting A's and B's instead of failing, and is not skipping school anymore. My son is not in favor of this setup, but says he feels like an outsider and can't do anything about it. Meanwhile, it's setting a terrible example for the two younger children in the house.

Please advise the best way to handle this disgusting situation. — NEW MEXICO MESS

DEAR MESS: If this situation is as you have described, the 18-year-old girl can be charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Furthermore, your son and daughter-in-law could be in trouble with the law for aiding and abetting this unlawful situation.

Whether you want to alert the authorities and blow the whistle on your son and his wife is something you should carefully consider. Unless you have proof that the young people are sexually intimate, it might be in the best interest of everyone to back off.

DEAR ABBY: I am the original space cadet. I space things out of my mind very easily. Unfortunately, it's embarrassing and often gets people I'm close to angry with me.

I forget to pick up needed items after work and must return for them after I've arrived at home. I space out doctor's and dentist's appointments, meetings with teachers, school supplies for the kids, commitments to my wife, etc. I am plain unreliable.

I do remember some things, but it seems there are so many details to remember as part of day-to-day tasks, it's overwhelming! I've tried appointment books and tying strings around my fingers, but I forget to look at my appointment book, and I forget what the string on my finger is supposed to remind me of until it's too late.

I am an intelligent person; I just can't seem to get myself organized.

Sometimes when I'm in the shower I will remember two or three things that I must do, but by the time I get out of the shower, and near a pencil and paper to make a note of them, I forgot what they were.

Is there any help for me? — SPACE CADET

DEAR CADET: How long has this been going on? If it's fairly recent, see your physician for a checkup. If you're physically healthy, forget the strings on your fingers and the notes you will never look at until it's too late.

Get professional help. You are creating additional stress by trying to solve this problem alone.

Now, there are just two things to remember: First, make an appointment with a therapist. Then, keep it. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an attractive 24-year-old woman — single, self-supporting and still looking for "Mr. Right." I met a man last night who was so handsome he nearly took my breath away. He was also intelligent and a great conversationalist. He's the kind of man I could really be serious about, but here's the problem: He's married, but he said he has an "open marriage."

What should I do? — MARCIE

DEAR MARCIE: Tell him you have a closed mind — and the answer is no.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Texan living in Libya calls attack 'insane'

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 57-year-old Texas man working in a Libyan oilfield criticized American air strikes against the North African country, calling President Reagan's action "insane."

Jack May of Palestine, working in an oilfield 700 miles south of Tripoli, the main target area, was one of about 800 Americans who defied Reagan's orders to leave the country.

"Rambo Reagan is insane," May said Monday in telephone interview from the Libyan Desert with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "He is trying to win an Academy Award for this performance."

Air Force fighter-bombers, flying thousands of miles from bases in Britain and from aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean, blasted five military targets around the major port cities of Tripoli and Benghazi.

May said the strikes, which were in retaliation for a terrorist bombing in West Berlin last week, would only hamper efforts toward peace and increase the danger of terrorism.

"I think there are a lot of ways of solving problems without dropping bombs on people's head in the middle of the night," said May. "When you kill innocent women and and children here, that will not stop terrorism. That will increase it tenfold.

"These people want to live in peace and not be bombed by some damned maniac in Washington," he said. "They know they cannot whip us in a fight and that this (terrorism) is the only weapon they have to fight us with."

May said he earns $4,400 a month as a technician for Occidential Petroleum and has worked in Libya for the past four years. His wife, Myrtle May, said her husband continued to stay in Libya for economic reasons.

"He would be lucky at his age if he could find a job that paid $2,000 a month in Texas, particularly with the oil industry slump the way it is now," she said in a telephone interview from her home in Palestine.

May said, based on his experiences in Libya, it would be possible to negotiate with Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy "but you can't slap him in the face and expect him to turn the other cheek."

Mrs. May said her husband had written a letter last week saying "he was being treated like royalty" by the Libyan people.

"The average Libyan is not like Khadafy," she said. "They are people just like we are."

Jack May said he expected to be arrested when he returns to the United States because of his outspoken stand against U.S. military action.

A Libyan co-worker of May, who identified himself only as Shokrull, said Libyan radio reported that "a lot of civilians have died" in the bombing.

"A lot of them were sleeping in their beds when the bombs were dropped on them," Shokrull said.

GOP candidates focus attacks on White

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

HOUSTON — Sniping at each other over state spending, abortion and party loyalty, the three Republican gubernatorial candidates hammered strongly at Democratic Gov. Mark White in a statewide televised debate Monday night.

Former Gov. Bill Clements, former Democratic U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock and Congressman Tom Loeffler of Hunt all pledged to defeat White in November and bring needed new leadership to the Governor's Mansion.

Loeffler started out the debate — sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Texas and televised live to 19 TV stations from the KHOU-TV studios in Houston — by chiding Clements and Hance for violating the so-called 11th Republican Commandment and picking on each other recently.

"Please stop that quibbling and quabbling," Loeffler said. "It just makes Mark White smile, and it's Mark White's smile we want to take away."

Clements opened by stressing his business background; both of his GOP opponents are lawyers. "I started my business from scratch, and built it into a worldwide operation," he said.

Hance, who has recently begun a series of TV advertisements pointing out Clements' age — 68 — and 1982 upset loss to White, said, "We're going to have to have a new approach and new answers to be able to solve" the state's problems.

Recent polls show Clements leading in the May 5 GOP primary with 54 percent of the likely Republican voters. Hance and Loeffler trail with 18 percent each.

In answer to a reporter's question, Hance said he voted as a congressman for federal funding for abortions because the bill in question would not permit abortion for victims of rape or incest. He said he solidified his pro-life stance after viewing the graphic film "Silent Scream."

Loeffler called his own anti-abortion stance "absolutely consistent," and Clements called Hance's explanation about rape and incest "a cop-out." "This campaign boils down to credibility and integrity," the former governor said.

Hance switched parties last year and publicly supported Democrats Walter Mondale, Geraldine Ferraro and Lloyd Doggett in 1984. He said he switched to avoid having to back such liberals in the future. Loeffler and Clements both took Hance to task over that.

"I don't have any apologies to make because I'd never support anyone like Walter Mondale, Geraldine Ferraro or Lloyd Doggett," Loeffler said. Clements called Doggett one of his chief foes when Clements was governor and Doggett served in the state Senate.

Not leaving all the bad words for Hance, Clements criticized both of his opponents for supporting overseas trade offices for Texas. "I guess our two congressmen got used to those congressional junkets," he said.

Loeffler shot back at Clements, saying, "I wonder how many trips you took when you were deputy secretary of defense abroad."

All three men criticized White's poor relationships with the Reagan administration, his economic development policies and the record tax increase he backed to pay for massive changes in education and for highway improvements.

"He has created a climate in Texas that is not conducive to business," Clements said.

"He's not had any leadership, he didn't look down the road (and expect falling oil prices)," said Hance.

Texas doesn't have a revenue crisis, Loeffler said, "We have a leadership crisis."

Pouland says opponent 'hand-picked pawn'

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic Railroad Commission candidate John Pouland slammed other commission hopefuls, questioning one candidate's intelligence and characterizing Democratic opponent John Sharp as a lobbyists' pawn.

Pouland called a news conference Monday to complain that Sharp, a state senator from Victoria, is the "hand-picked pawn" of lobbyists.

"Where does John Sharp stand on the issues? He does more flips than Mary Lou Retton," Pouland said.

Sharp announced Monday he has been endorsed by former state Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, who resigned to become a lobbyist. Howard called Sharp "the most qualified candidate."

Pouland said he wants Milton Fox to win the GOP nomination over state Rep. Ed Emmett of Kingwood, John Thomas Henderson of Austin and Ralph Hoelscher of San Angelo "for two reasons. His IQ is room temperature and you've got to wear a coat, it's so cool in there. The other reason is we could come out against him like 'the fox guarding the henhouse.' "

Fox could not be reached by The Associated Press by telephone for comment Monday.

Pouland said Democratic candidate P.S. "Sam" Ervin could get as much as 20 percent of the primary vote as a result of his name. Ervin claims to be a distant relative of the late U.S. Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina.

Also Monday, all three Republican gubernatorial candidates claimed victory after their televised debate. Kent Hance said he was the real gentleman during the debate and Tom Loeffler said he always wins.

Former Gov. Bill Clements said November's gubernatorial election will be the most important since World War II and that Texans' quality of life is at stake.

The GOP candidates agreed on the need to diversify the economy. Hance outlined economic development proposals to create jobs. He advocated setting aside the severance tax for the first three years of oil drilling.

Earlier Monday, Clements rapped Tuesday's "oil summit" in Dallas as an "election year public relations gambit" orchestrated by Gov. Mark White.

White and several other governors planned to meet to discuss the oil woes.

Eighteen F-111s used in attack on Libya made in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH (AP) — The 18 F-111s flown from England and used in the attack on Libya were made at General Dynamics' plant in Fort Worth, a company spokesman noted.

Several of the fighter-bomber's features made it useful for the nighttime attack, said Z. Joe Thornton, spokesman for General Dynamics.

Thornton said the plane, which was made from the mid 1960s to 1976, has a long range — about 3,000 miles, according to the Pentagon — and can fly about 1,700 mph.

The F-111 is the only plane in the U.S. Air Force inventory that is capable of flying missions both day and night and in all sorts of weather, Thornton said.

The aircraft is capable of delivering laser-guided "smart bombs," as well as regular, heavier bombs, Thornton said, adding that the Air Force deems it one of the most accurate bombers in the world.

He said some F-111s have "terrain-following radar," which allows the plane to fly at high speeds at altitudes as low as 200 feet, but he said he did not know whether the planes used in the raid on Libya had the feature.

"The airplane adjusts automatically to hills, mountains and trees," Thornton said. "It will automatically lift the airplane and point the nose up, and automatically keeps it at a 200-foot altitude.

The F-111 was the first aircraft built with a swing-wing, Thornton said. At takeoff and at low speeds, the wings stick almost straight out. At high speeds, the wings sweep back.

Lawless days of frontier live on in Texans' battles with IRS

DALLAS (AP) — The rugged, lawless heritage of frontier days lives on in spirited battles between Texans and the Internal Revenue Service, giving the region some colorful tax evasion and fraud cases.

The IRS's eight-state Southwest region, including Texas, had the nation's highest ratio of tax trial convictions to guilty pleas, indicating people here are more willing to fight their case before a jury, federal officials say.

Last year, about 14 percent of the nation's 6,000 tax cases were initiated by prosecutors in this region.

"The people in Texas, especially North Texas, are more confident, more assertive and more willing to do battle with the government than any other part of the country," said Bob Davis, a prominent Dallas tax defense lawyer who worked as a tax prosecutor with the Justice Department in 1982 and 1983.

He said it's no accident Dallas has the nation's only regional office of the Justice Department tax division.

"The people like to fight," he said. "It's the Wild West spirit. It's still here to some extent."

Tax battles in Dallas have included high-profile trials and, in some cases, spinoff charges of extortion and bribery.

Dallas-based Zale Corp., the world's largest retail jeweler, agreed to pay the government $20.8 million in 1982 to settle a six-year investigation into what federal authorities first said was a $78 million tax-avoidance scheme.

Zale acknowledged it owed some back taxes when it fired its treasurer, Sol Shearn Rovinsky, in 1976, after accusing him of misappropriating $600,000.

But Rovinsky, a former IRS investigator, testified during his trial that the money he was accused of stealing was actually secret compensation for carrying out a series of tax-evasion schemes. He was acquitted.

A year later, Rovinsky was on trial again on charges he extorted $200,000 from late Zale board chairman Ben Lipshy to cover up tax misconduct. He was convicted by a judge, but the ruling was later overturned.

Another notable Dallas-area case, concluded in 1983, was the longest criminal tax trial on record. After 20 weeks of testimony, a federal jury found that seven former Braniff International pilots, led by a national tax protest movement leader, had avoided paying taxes on about $1 million in income from 1976 to 1979.

Prosecutors said the protest leader, Jerome Daly of Bloomington, Minn., convinced the pilots they could turn their salaries over to the Basic Bible Church of America, of which Daly was "pope and archbishop," and then exercise total exemption from federal taxes.

Daly was sentenced to 16 years in prison and fined $95,000. The pilots received penalties ranging from 24 to 30 months in prison and fines of $5,000.

Other notable Dallas cases include Lester Irvin Reeves, a member of the tax protest group Posse Comitatus, who filed a $250,000 common law lien against the Denton County home of an IRS investigator in 1983.

A federal appeals court ruling found Reeves "had acted with the intention of securing benefits for himself." He received a three-year prison sentence.

In another case, John Murfin of Richardson argued in a 1979 trial that the IRS could not require him to report his income because paper dollars are not legal tender.

"The people in Texas, especially North Texas, are more confident, more assertive and more willing to do battle with the government than any other part of the country."

Braniff flights take off on quest for Halley's Comet

DALLAS (AP) — About 300 people got a little closer to Halley's Comet on three special Braniff flights, giving passengers a look at the night sky from 27,000 feet.

The three weekend flights were billed "Quest for Halley's Comet" and numbered 1910, 1986 and 2072 to correspond with the last, present and next visits of the famous comet. Flight 2072 was for Braniff employees only.

While some comet-enthusiasts are roughing it in the Australian outback to get a better glimpse of the far-away comet, passengers aboard the Braniff flights had an easier ride, with free champagne and a science lecture laid on.

"We're going to take the runway and chase down a star," Capt. Fred Walters said to passengers on the leading aircraft. Once airborne, passengers in darkened cabins looked to the south to the spot 10 degrees above the horizon between the constellations Scorpius and Hydra.

"I've got it," said Gladys Frey, looking through binoculars.

"I must admit I expected it to be brighter," said Braniff flight attendant Lee Hirsh, looking through the cockpit window before passing out Milky Way bars to passengers. "But at least I saw it."

Halley's visit has passed in a disappointing blur for those in the Northern Hemisphere this year. Unlike the 1910 visit, when the Earth passed through the comet's tail, Halley's is further away and more difficult to glimpse.

The Braniff flights, priced at $100 for a couple and $75 for a single seat, offered a quicker and more economic alternative.

When Houston oilman O.R. Seagraves bought his "Hill Country heaven" in west Kerr County in 1929, he envisioned a retreat as compatible with the environment as it was luxurious. Financial difficulties befell Seagraves before his dream came true, but fellow oilman Daniel J. Moran bought the property and built Mo Ranch, which includes a palatial home, above, and a chapel, left. In 1949 Moran sold Mo Ranch to the Presbyterian church, which uses it for a retreat and conference center.

Mo Ranch is dream come true

KERRVILLE (AP) — When Houston oilman O.R. Seagraves bought his "Hill Country heaven" in west Kerr County in 1929, he envisioned a retreat as compatible with the environment as it was luxurious.

Financial difficulities befell Seagraves before he completed his dream — the Depression wiped out most of his fortune.

Fellow oilman Daniel J. Moran purchased Seagraves' nearly 7,000-acre haven in 1936. He liked Seagraves' ideas and was determined that the unfortunate oilman's dream come true.

Today that dream is called Mo-Ranch.

When Seagraves began his venture, there were no paved roads to the estate.

Not to be frustrated, Seagraves often used boats to carry men and materials on the Guadalupe River during initial construction.

One of the first buildings on the ranch was a large native limestone house that Seagraves designed.

The house rests on a hill overlooking the Guadalupe's north fork headwaters 23 miles west of Kerrville.

The palatial residence boasted an expansive Mexican tile roof, lathed native cedar walls plastered to a polished smoothness, hardwood cedar floors, and unusual arched passageways leading to 11 rooms downstairs and five upstairs.

Upstairs featured a four-room master suite. Other luxuries are four downstairs fireplaces and one upstairs in the master suite.

On the ranch, crews dammed the river and built docks on the riverbanks below the house.

When Moran purchased the property, the young Houstonian continued building on the property for 11 more years.

Illness forced him to cease construction in 1947. But in little more than a decade, Moran transformed thousands of cedar trees and miles of oilfield pipe into an impressive estate covering several acres.

Use of native limestone and oilfield pipe reflected Moran's penchant for employing available materials. Limestone is abundant in the Hill Country and oilfield pipe was easy to acquire since Moran was president of Continental Oil Company (Conoco).

Moran wanted a self-contained retreat, so a generating plant, distribution system and an ice plant were built. A large swimming pool was added next to his spacious home in 1938. It was inlaid with more than two million, handset tiles. Tiny colored mosaic squares spell MO-RANCH across the front of the pool.

A larger tile inset by the diving board features a hand-painted caricature of Moran in serape and sombrero strumming a guitar. Pool-side lights spell MO-RANCH. The lighting system was triggered by a unique cam operation that predates computerized light controls.

Moran later built a movie theater to entertain the ranch's many guests. Taking his hospitality a step further, he later added a roller skating rink.

Large columns in the rink supporting the ceiling at first look like massive cedar posts. A closer look reveals that they're actually oilfield pipes tempered and curved, then painted to resemble natural cedar wood, even down to the knotholes and cracks.

In 1941, Moran continued adding to the estate. Next came a tiny stone chapel, its custom-designed stained-glass windows imported from Germany. The chapel's ceiling was supported by massive cedar beams and again oilfield pipe was arched and painted to look like cedar posts.

Roman Catholic priests from St. Thomas School in Houston came to the ranch and conducted services for the family.

In later years, Moran built a guest house that he turned into a boy's camp that was run by priests. A massive fireplace in the building is unique, with ascending stairs going through the middle of a Y-shaped chimney.

A conservatory-greenhouse was brought from Moran's former residence in Ponca City, Okla. It was put on a grassy knoll beside the pool.

Dan Moran was still adding on when illness forced him to stop construction.

Moran's original 6,800-acre ranch was sold to the Presbyterian church in 1949 for $512,000.

In 1950, the state bought 6,500 acres of the ranch to create Kerr Wildlife Management Area. The church kept 377 acres, including most of the river frontage and permanent buildings and turned the estate into a year-round conference and retreat center.

Dallas' Bryan Place succeeds as 'cityburb'

DALLAS (AP) — Mark Mesec walks east on San Jacinto past the Wedgwood blue houses huddled in quiet cul de sacs and turns right on Allen Street. Tidy flower beds splash the morning with color.

A half-block ahead diesel fumes exhaust the scent of flowers. The rush of traffic drowns the crisp sound of footfalls. Pawn shops, used car lots and liquor stores line the street.

Mesec turns west on Ross Avenue, and downtown Dallas leaps into the sky five blocks ahead. Fifteen minutes after leaving his home, Mesec arrives at his law office in Thanks-Giving Tower.

It is a unique commute from a unique neighborhood: Bryan Place. In the quintessential commuter city, Bryan Place is an experiment in downtown living. Six years after its debut, about 1,000 people — most of them young, white and professional — call it home.

Carved out of an area of deteriorating houses and commerical buildings east of Central Expressway, the 30-acre development has enjoyed modest success in attracting both city lovers and suburbanites. The neighborhood, in turn, has grown into something of a suburb within the city — perhaps a "cityburb."

"I've always been a downtown sort of person. I like the bustle," says Mesec, a 30-year-old native of Chicago. "But I think a lot of the people moved here for the convenience. I don't think they have a real love affair with the city."

Bryan Place residents live minutes from museums, theaters, galleries, concert halls and the restaurants in Oak Lawn and the West End. They also acknowledge that automobile-dependent Dallas breeds few urban animals.

"I still want my spare bedrooms and bathrooms. I want my yard, and I want my garage," says antique shop owner Judy Fuller, who moved here six years ago afer living in Garland for 18 years.

"People talk about wishing they could walk to a grocery store, but I've never walked to a grocery store in my life. I doubt if many people have," says Marvin Thomas, a lawyer who moved in two years ago after 20 years in Richardson.

Few Bryan Place residents walk to work, and they usually drive to nightclubs in the West End, events at the Dallas Museum of Art and even to the small cluster of cafes and boutiques growing up nearby. Committed city dweller Christy Mesec would love to stroll around downtown Dallas but feels uncomfortable in the empty streets.

"It's not like New York. There just aren't enough people on the streets here," said Mrs. Mesec. Now a sales representative at the Apparel Mart, she lived in Manhattan before marrying Mesec.

Within Bryan Place, residents feel safe enough to jog and stroll at any time day and night. In fact, police report the area's crime rate is as good or better than in most North Dallas neighborhoods.

"I don't feel unsafe. I walk my dog at midnight — and she's just a little bitty Pomeranian," Thomas says.

Part of their sense of security results from a sophisticated alarm system installed as a standard feature of every house and condominium. Another part comes from the sense of community.

A tough fight with city hall to divert traffice from the area and a complicated deal to build themselves a clubhouse and swimming pool did much to bind them together. Proximity and common interests keep the friendships alive.

Four times a year the homeowners association sponsors a party. Every Christmas season brings an impromptu caroling party. And twice a week, it's poker night in the clubhouse — women play on Tuesdays and men on Thursdays.

"There's a definite neighborhood and community here. Even more than we felt living in Garland for 18 years," says Ms. Fuller.

Commissioners want to re-erect horse fountain

FORT WORTH (AP) — It's true that the horse fountain on the Tarrant County Courthouse lawn has sentimental value.

The Tarrant County Commissioners Court recently found out just how much.

The fountain, erected in 1892 by the Women's Humane Association, stood on the southeast lawn of the old courthouse from 1892 until 1940, when it was removed.

County commissioners tried to resurrect it, but they found it will require $150,000 that supporters do not yet have.

Ruby Schmidt, a student of the fountain's history, said a popular notion is that the fountain was torn down in 1940 because it was falling apart.

Actually, she said, it was removed to widen the street in front of it.

"They were widening the street, and there didn't seem to be a need for a horse fountain," she said. "But after they removed it, they realized they weren't going to have to widen the street that far."

Former county officials unsuccessfully tried to get the fountain back, and their predecessors have been trying ever since.

A horse fountain committee was established in 1978 to re-create the structure, but it made little progress toward construction.

The committee was revived earlier this year. Five companies bid on the project. The low bid was $169,983, and the high bid was $455,000.

"This is for one horse fountain, right?" a perplexed County Commissioner B.D. Griffin asked as the bids were opened.

Arthur Weinman, an architect who has been working on what he calls the "re-erection" project, said the question of money has stalled the project for some time.

"Money was the first reason for delay and has been all along," Weinman said.

"The second thing was getting the drawings done. We had to do it from old photographs, and it is a very complex, three-dimensional object. It's hard to figure out.'

Weinman conceded that $170,000 for a structure that serves as a monument to a four-legged creature may seem a bit extravagant. But he said the structure is a reminder of the region's past.

"A lot of people think that the significance is still very real," he said. "It is a very noble animal in our history. Let's face it, if it weren't for cattle drives and horses, we wouldn't be here right now."

It's time for planting and for a trip to Rosebud Nursery

It's time to put your garden in! That means it's time to go to Rosebud Nursery on the Rankin Highway, just 2.5 miles South of Interstate 20.

It may be a little out of the way, but one peek inside Rosebud Nursery's greenhouse will convince you that it is well worth the pleasant drive. Rosebud's greenhouse is absolutely filled with beautiful plants, just right for your garden. There are vegetable plants, flowering plants, cacti, vines, grass and indoor plants.

Rose Barten of Rosebud Nursery explains that she keeps a good stock of vegetable seeds and plants. You can be sure that Rosebud Nursery's tomato and pepper plants, which are about eight inches high, are ready for your garden. Then, before long, they'll be ready for your table.

Rosebud Nursery's other plants are equally beautiful. The variety is tremendous. Roses of many colors, honeysuckle vines, ivy and marigolds are just the beginning of the selection. There are indoor plants and outdoor plants. Plants that grow tall and terrific ground cover.

Trees and shrubs are also available at Midland's "down home" nursery, Rosebud Nursery.

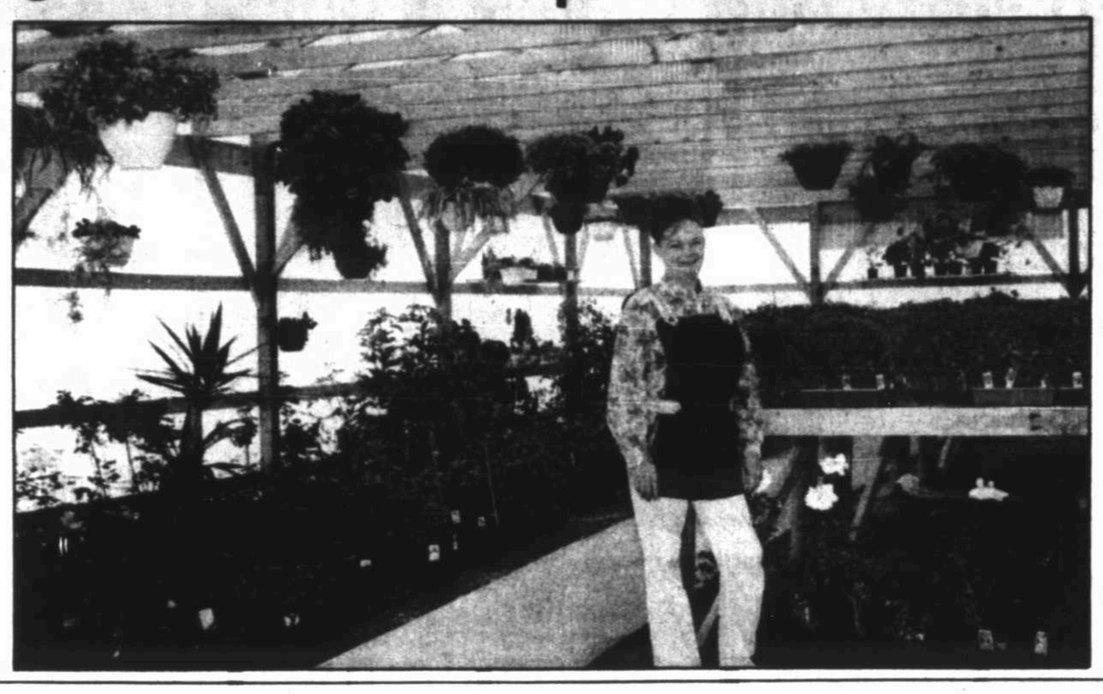

In addition, they have a stock of the most popular grass seeds.

Rose says this about her plant selection. "We try to order plants form differnet parts of the country that have approximately the same climaite we have here."

This assures her customers of a wide selection of hearty plants.

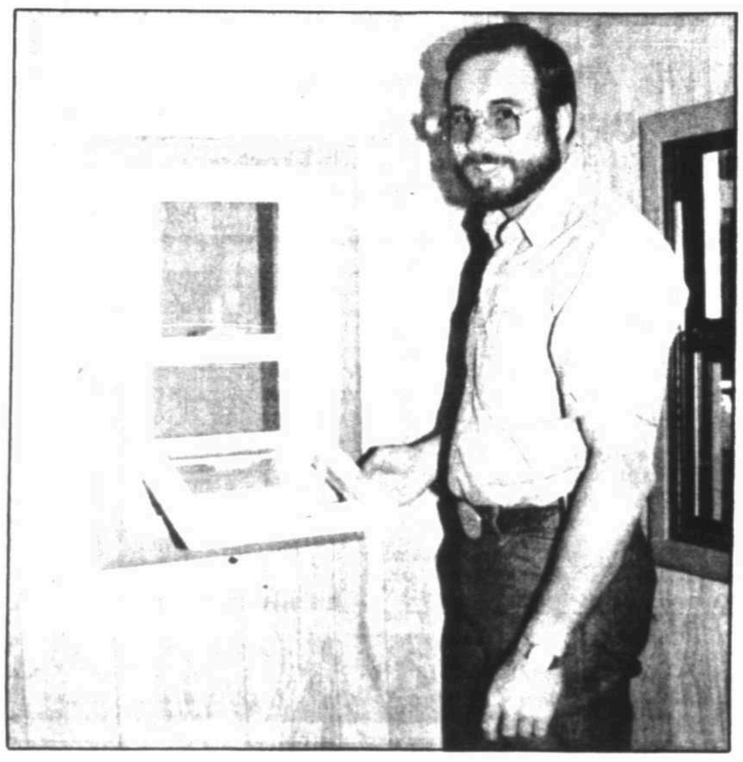

Rose also explains that she takes special care of the plants that are in stock. Of course, she also gives her customers the personal service they need. She'll be glad to answer your questions and help you select the plants for your garden.

Rosebud Nursery is open from 9 a.m. to sundown, seven days a week. Midland customers will find that it is well worth the drive 2.5 miles past I20 on Rankin Highway. Customers from Iraan and Rankin find it rather handy to stop by Rosebud Nursery after their shopping in Midland.

Rose of Rosebud Nursery on the Rankin Highway keeps a healthy stock of vegetable and flowering plants, as well as trees and shrubs. For a terrific selection and friendly service.

Lewellen will make your home beautiful, your vacation care-free

Bill Lewellen of Lewellen Construction recommends the Custom Seal vinyl window for versatility of style and energy efficiency.

Lewellen Construction, a locally-owned company that specializes in home improvements, has been serving Midlanders for a number of years and now they are gearing up to serve their customers even better.

Bill and Joan Lewellen recently returned from a conference of the National Association of the Remodeling Industry (NARI). NARI, a not-for-profit trade organization whose members are pledged to observe the highest standards of honesty, integrity and responsibility in the conduct of business, regularly sponsors educational programs and activities for its members. Attending important conferences, such as this, allows Bill and Joan to increase their knowledge of the home improvement field. At the NARI meeting these professionals also became acquainted with new products that may be of great benefit to their customers. The Lewellen's are hoping to be able to organize a local NARI chapter.

Recently at the Home and Garden Show, many Midlanders got to see Lewellen's wide variety of products and services. Siding, trim, manufactured stone, patio covers, as well as storm and replacement windows and doors are all available through this local company. And, customers can count on Lewellen Construction for expert installation.

Many products offered by Lewellen Construction not only improve the appearance of your home, but also offer energy saving advantages.

When you realize that old, loose-fitting windows are the greatest cause of heating and cooling losses in most homes, the wisdom of investing in replacement or storm windows will be evident. Almost 40 percent of all heating and cooling losses are through air change — leaks, opening of windows and doors, and the like — another 27 percent is through the glass in windows and doors. Homeowners can do something about this 67 percent loss.

Bill recommends Custom Seal vinyl replacement windows. This window, which has a 10-year warranty, is designed to open and close easily. Both the glass and frame offer added insulation. Even cleaning is simplified by the tilt-in feature on these durable windows. And the style? It's your choice - windows with traditional grids, casement windows, contemporary three-pane sliders and more are available.

Whether you select Custom Seal Vinyl replacement windows or storm windows offered by Lewellen, you can reduce your energy costs and improve the value of your home. Moreover, you will know that your home is more secure while you are away on vacation.

Joan Lewellen says members of Caprock Electric have a special opportunity when it comes to energy-saving home improvements. Members with good credit and a good payment record can borrow up to $3,000 at five percent interest for up to five years - for energy saving home projects like installation of storm/insulated replacement windows.

Now is also a great time to think about maintenance-free siding and trim. Why spend your vacation scraping and painting whey Lewellen Construction can put an end to that forever? Quality siding, soffit and fascia can eliminate constant repainting and improve the appearance of your home.

Call Lewellen Construction at 686-8007 to find out more about how they can make your home one of the sharpest on the block.

does your home need soffit and fascia?

First, you have to know what they are. Take a look at the overhangs of your home. The underside and outside facing of this area are where soffit and fascia are used. On most homes, even brick homes, these areas are made of wood, and, if your home's like most, they're in terrible, weather-beaten condition.
The answer to this problem is Revere Super-Gard Aluminum Soffit and Fascia. They provide beauty and protection to your home's eaves, requiring virtually no maintenance—ever!
Now that you know what they are, let us tell you more about what Super-Gard Aluminum Soffit and Fascia can do for your home.

Do you know who's living in your chimney?

If there are birds in your chimney now, or if they nested there last summer, there's a good chance insects may be getting into your home. This is the advice of the experts at All Seasons Chimney Service, who further point out the average family of birds will leave behind approximately two or three pounds of debris in the chimney. This debris can cause an unpleasant odor, attract insects and can also be a fire hazard.

The experts at All Seasons Chimney Service install custom caps, measured and designed to fit each individual fireplace. The owner of All Seasons Chimney Service is shown installing a custom cap after a chimney cleaning. For appointments or free estimates, call 697-7585 between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m.

All Seasons Chimney Service recommends cleaning the chimney to remove the birds and/or debris and installing a chimney cap to prevent further problems with birds and to keep the rain out.

"Rain causes the most destruction to a chimney. Seldom have we seen an uncapped chimney more than five years old that does not suffer from some kind of water damage," said the owner of All Seasons Chimney Service.

The personnel at All Seasons Chimney Service point out that rain puddles on the smoke shelf mix with creosote in the chimney and turn into a highly corrosive acid. The mixture then seeps down and attacks the mortar joints in the back wall of the fireplace. The mortar weakens and then becomes loose, causing structural damage.

Metal fireboxes will be permanently damaged in 5-10 years if left exposed. You probably won't see the oxidation (rust) until it's too late and fireboxes with metal flues are costly to replace.

All Seasons Chimney Service has several types of caps from which to choose. Flue caps offer complete protection to the internal part of a fireplace.

All Season's custom caps (see photo) cover the entire chimney top, protecting both the mortar top and inside, while providing a very attractive piece of fireplace hardware.

All caps are made of a strong galvanized steel and painted to provide extra protection and an attractive appearance.

All Seasons Chimney Service offers free estimates on caps.

If you already have a cap, remember that a dirty chimney with a build up of soot increases the chances of having a chimney fire.

So if a cleaning is all that you require, All Seasons Chimney Service's April package includes chimney cleaning, removal of ashes, minor firebox repair, chimney deodorizing and repainting of the firebox and grate for only $55.

These experts also offer gas log installation or replacement and fireplace repair.

For professional service in Midland, Odessa, Stanton and Greenwood, call All Seasons Chimney Service at 697-7585.

Contra-aid supporters try to defeat maneuver

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and supporters of his plan to aid the Nicaraguan rebels are trying to defeat a move by Democratic opponents that would tie the $100 million package to an unrelated spending bill that may be vetoed by the president.

Reagan denounced the move on Monday as "subterfuge and backroom deals" and Republican leaders in the Democratic-controlled House said they would try to separate the two issues.

The House was scheduled today to again take up Reagan's plan to provide aid to the Contras fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

At the Capitol, police arrested 57 protesters Monday opposed to Reagan's aid package. They were booked for unlawful entry after refusing to end a vigil in the Rotunda, near a bust of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Last month, the House defeated the aid package 222-210, but the Republican-controlled Senate later gave 53-47 approval to a slightly modified proposal and moved the fight back to the House. A $27 million package of non-lethal aid expired March 31.

The major fight today was expected to be on the rules under which the Contra aid package will be considered by the House. The aid package, along with several amendments that would alter it, is not expected to face a vote until Wednesday.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and other opponents of Reagan's plan have supported a parliamentary procedure which would make the Contra aid part of a bill making $1.7 billion in a variety of appropriations for the current fiscal year.

But budget director James Miller III said last week that bill should be vetoed because it contains money for several items Reagan doesn't want.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., and Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., the party's chief vote-counter in the House, Monday introduced an alternative proposal that would separate the Contra aid from the supplemental spending bill.

Mainline churches oppose Reagan's Nicaraguan policy

An Analysis

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Methodist bishop, puzzling over the different interpretations by the Reagan administration and churches of events in Nicaragua, proposes that a government-church delegation visit the Central American country "to evaluate together what we are seeing and hearing."

A prominent Catholic clergyman, saying he is similarly perplexed, said he would be delighted to lead administration officials on a guided tour of Nicaragua to show them the wrongness of "President Reagan's obsessive policy of destruction toward Nicaragua."

The statements reflect the deep divisions between the Reagan administration and mainline American churches over U.S. policy toward Nicaragua. Most churches are on record against Reagan's plan to give $100 million in new military aid to the Contra rebels, and are becoming increasingly vocal in their efforts to prevent it.

Monday, 57 religious protesters were arrested in the Capitol building after being charged with unlawful entry for demonstrating against the aid proposal. Fellow demonstrators, members of a group called Witness for Peace, prayed into the evening and promised to maintain a vigil until Congress votes on the aid proposal.

Several hundred demonstrators opposed to aid to the Contras sit on the Capitol steps Monday in Washington.

Also Monday, a group of church leaders, organized into a group called "Quest for Peace," disclosed they will try to match dollar-for-dollar in humanitarian aid for the Nicaraguans whatever aid Congress approves for the Contras in its vote, which could come as early as today.

"If Congress votes $100 million in aid to the Contras, we will match that with $100 million in humanitarian aid," said Bishop Thomas Gumbleton of Detroit.

"We believe U.S. policy is violent, lawless and morally wrong," said the Rev. William Callahan, who is coordinating the fund-raising effort through Quest for Peace. He said $20 million has been raised so far to offset the $27 million approved by Congress for the Contras last year.

The administration has been largely silent on the opposition of mainline American churches, not trying to explain why American churches seem to be defending a government the administration denounces as communist and anti-religious.

Officials, speaking when promised anonymity, say the churches are being naive and unrealistic, but said taking them on publicly would be "a no-win game."

Steve Champlin, an aide to Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., an opponent of Contra aid, said the churches have a major influence in the Contra aid debate and their influence is growing.

C.P. Minnock, a United Methodist bishop from Raleigh, N.C., suggested in a a recent interview the establishment of a government-church delegation to travel to Nicaragua. By talking to the same people, sharing the same experiences, and comparing observations, it might help bridge the gap, he said.

Doug of Doug's Baby Store was busy on his new expansion, so he was unavailable to be pictured with this beautiful combination brass/white nursery furniture at San Miguel Square.

Doug's has 2nd Anniversary Sale

A Second Anniversary Celebration Sale is now underway at Doug's Baby Store in San Miguel Square. Doug is excited about his two years in business in Midland and his new expansion, so he has slashed the prices on an unbelievable number or items. Furniture, clothing, baby accessories and strollers are all part of the Celebration Sale.

The ENTIRE STOCK of top-quality nursery furniture is marked at incredible sale prices. Even the twin-size juvenile furniture is red tagged for this big celebration.

The ENTIRE STOCK of summer clothing, size 3-24 months is 25 PERCENT OFF! That includes swim wear and sleep wear.

In addition, an array of things, including selected baby accessories and strollers, have been reduced for the Second Anniversary Sale. Just look for the red tags as you stroll through Doug's Baby Store, which will soon double in size for the second time since it opened two years ago.

Already, you've learned to depend on Doug's fine selection of nursery furniture. Whether you like wood tones, white, colorful or brass baby beds and nursery accessories, you know you can find them at Doug's. A new canopy baby bed and and an 18th century styled cherry wood nursery set are also in stock now. There are baby beds that will convert to juvenile beds and chest of drawer units that will beautifully endure for years of use.

Last time Doug expanded, he added a fine selection of juvenile furniture. Practical furniture with multiple uses, fun furniture with colorful, sturdy design and furniture with a feminine touch are all diplayed at Doug's.

As Doug doubles the size of the store once again, he will be able to offer an even wider selection of nursery and juvenile furniture. And, there will be more!

Doug's Baby Store will be the dealer for Wooden Swings. There will be infant and preschool toys, both educational and fun. Riding toys like trikes, bikes and motorized toys will make the store an absolute wonderland. Dolls and doll furniture are just a couple of the things you'll find in the expansion, which should be complete by July 1.

Go by Doug's grand Second Anniversary Celebration Sale in San Miguel Square and you'll find red tag prices that are as exciting as the expansion project.

Contra-aid supporters try to defeat maneuver

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and supporters of his plan to aid the Nicaraguan rebels are trying to defeat a move by Democratic opponents that would tie the $100 million package to an unrelated spending bill that may be vetoed by the president.

Reagan denounced the move on Monday as "subterfuge and backroom deals" and Republican leaders in the Democratic-controlled House said they would try to separate the two issues.

The House was scheduled today to again take up Reagan's plan to provide aid to the Contras fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

At the Capitol, police arrested 57 protesters Monday opposed to Reagan's aid package. They were booked for unlawful entry after refusing to end a vigil in the Rotunda, near a bust of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Last month, the House defeated the aid package 222-210, but the Republican-controlled Senate later gave 53-47 approval to a slightly modified proposal and moved the fight back to the House. A $27 million package of non-lethal aid expired March 31.

The major fight today was expected to be on the rules under which the Contra aid package will be considered by the House. The aid package, along with several amendments that would alter it, is not expected to face a vote until Wednesday.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and other opponents of Reagan's plan have supported a parliamentary procedure which would make the Contra aid part of a bill making $1.7 billion in a variety of appropriations for the current fiscal year.

But budget director James Miller III said last week that bill should be vetoed because it contains money for several items Reagan doesn't want.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., and Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., the party's chief vote-counter in the House, Monday introduced an alternative proposal that would separate the Contra aid from the supplemental spending bill.

Mainline churches oppose Reagan's Nicaraguan policy

An Analysis

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Methodist bishop, puzzling over the different interpretations by the Reagan administration and churches of events in Nicaragua, proposes that a government-church delegation visit the Central American country "to evaluate together what we are seeing and hearing."

A prominent Catholic clergyman, saying he is similarly perplexed, said he would be delighted to lead administration officials on a guided tour of Nicaragua to show them the wrongness of "President Reagan's obsessive policy of destruction toward Nicaragua."

The statements reflect the deep divisions between the Reagan administration and mainline American churches over U.S. policy toward Nicaragua. Most churches are on record against Reagan's plan to give $100 million in new military aid to the Contra rebels, and are becoming increasingly vocal in their efforts to prevent it.

Monday, 57 religious protesters were arrested in the Capitol building after being charged with unlawful entry for demonstrating against the aid proposal. Fellow demonstrators, members of a group called Witness for Peace, prayed into the evening and promised to maintain a vigil until Congress votes on the aid proposal.

AP Laserphoto

Several hundred demonstrators opposed to aid to the Contras sit on the Capitol steps Monday in Washington.

Also Monday, a group of church leaders, organized into a group called "Quest for Peace," disclosed they will try to match dollar-for-dollar in humanitarian aid for the Nicaraguans whatever aid Congress approves for the Contras in its vote, which could come as early as today.

"If Congress votes $100 million in aid to the Contras, we will match that with $100 million in humanitarian aid," said Bishop Thomas Gumbleton of Detroit.

"We believe U.S. policy is violent, lawless and morally wrong," said the Rev. William Callahan, who is coordinating the fund-raising effort through Quest for Peace. He said $20 million has been raised so far to offset the $27 million approved by Congress for the Contras last year.

The administration has been largely silent on the opposition of mainline American churches, not trying to explain why American churches seem to be defending a government the administration denounces as communist and anti-religious.

Officials, speaking when promised anonymity, say the churches are being naive and unrealistic, but said taking them on publicly would be "a no-win game."

Steve Champlin, an aide to Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., an opponent of Contra aid, said the churches have a major influence in the Contra aid debate and their influence is growing.

C.P. Minnock, a United Methodist bishop from Raleigh, N.C., suggested in a a recent interview the establishment of a government-church delegation to travel to Nicaragua. By talking to the same people, sharing the same experiences, and comparing observations, it might help bridge the gap, he said.
