Trade policy, strong dollar costing Texas, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texans are losing thousands of jobs, billions of dollars in oil and gas tax revenues because of the nation's trade imbalance and the strong U.S. dollar, according to a new study.

The study, conducted by two Southern Methodist University professors, was released over the weekend by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. Bentsen, a member of the Joint Economic Committee and a leading sponsor of trade legislation, said the study is an attempt to show that international markets and economic policies do have an effect closer to home.

The study backs Bentsen's contention that U.S. industries are being forced to compete against foreign manufacturers who enjoy unfair advantages.

"Texas businesses have been players in the world marketplace for decades, and they can meet these challenges if allowed to compete on a level playing field," concluded the professors who authored the study, Bernard L. Weinstein and Harold T. Gross.

The implications of the changing world marketplace, in the meantime, are "severe" for the state's three big industries — energy, high technology and agriculture, they said.

"Generally they are manifested in three fairly distinct ways — job losses, purchasing power losses and state tax revenue losses."

The professors said Texas is no longer the "archetypical Sun Belt state" but instead is being "buffeted severely by changing patterns of world commerce and today boasts an unemployment rate that exceeds the national average."

Texas' October unemployment rate jumped a percentage point over September, to 8.1 percent, while the national figure remained the same at 7.1 percent.

"The problem is that we don't have an effective trade policy, and we don't have a good energy policy, and the farm policy is not working," said Bentsen in a statement released with the study.

The strong dollar is making it harder for Texas industries to sell goods overseas while imports increase, according to the study.

The state has lost 120,000 jobs since April 1981, most in the energy industry, the study said.

With the loss of jobs, many of them high-paying, there are $2.6 billion fewer dollars in the state to spend at the establishments of Texas merchants, the professors said.

A decline in drilling activity has reduced the state's major sources of revenue — severance taxes on oil and gas production and sales taxes on manufactured equipment.

It has been estimated that for every dollar-a-barrel drop in crude oil prices, Texas loses $40 million in severance taxes, $30 million in franchise and other taxes, and $30 million in taxes on sales of oil field equipment, the study said.

There are only a handful of U.S. industries more dependent upon foreign sales than the oil field equipment industry, said the professors.

Domestic drilling activity has fallen to 1978 levels and capital expenditures are down 30 percent, they said.

Officials: Only 11 percent of voters will go to polls

Midland polling places listed

From Staff Reports

Midland voters will join their state counterparts this week in determining the plight of the Texas water plan, which will be comprised of Amendments 1 and 2 in Tuesday's constitutional amendments election.

In addition, voters will cast ballots on 12 other amendments.

Polling places for Tuesday's election will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Registered voters will go to the following polling places:

Precinct 101, 107: Airline Mobile Home Park, recreation room, West Highway 80.

Precinct 102, 103: Alamo Junior High School, 3800 W. Storey Ave.

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials predict only 11 percent of the state's voters will go to the polls Tuesday to vote on a variety of issues, including a $1.43 billion statewide water development and conservation plan.

State lawmakers debated and negotiated the plan for much of their 140-day legislative session in 1985 before finally sending the issue to voters.

Legislative leaders and the governor are behind the plan, listed on the ballot as Amendments 1 and 2. A Gulf Coast senator and some environmentalists oppose it, while others, including the Sierra Club, remain neutral.

"It's a far better plan than none at all, and it's probably better than we're likely to get in the future. It provides for (environmental) protection of the bays and estuaries that no prior plan has," said Gov. Mark White.

Amendment 1 would authorize issuance of $980 million in bonds for construction of reservoirs, pipelines, treatment plants and flood-control projects statewide.

It also would create a $250 million state insurance fund to guarantee water bonds issued by cities and other local government units, enabling the local governments to sell their bonds more easily.

Amendment 2 would authorize another $200 million in bonds, with the proceeds financing low-interest loans to farmers who buy water-saving irrigation equipment. Agriculture is a major water user in the state.

A separate law that would take effect only if the amendments pass would place conservation requirements on cities seeking state aid for water projects and would provide for special local districts to control groundwater pumping.

The new law also would restrict reservoir construction near Gulf Coast bays to protect fish and shellfish that depend on rivers to carry fresh water and nutrients to the sea.

Reagan tells Soviet journalists 'Star Wars' will be shared

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said in an interview with Soviet journalists that the United States would not deploy the "Star Wars" system to defend against nuclear weapons "until we do away with our nuclear missiles, our offensive missiles."

Reagan, however, appeared to indicate that the United States also would require the Soviets to eliminate their missiles as well before America dismantles its nuclear arsenal.

Reagan said the United States would share its Star Wars technology with other countries in order not to have an unfair advantage.

Star Wars, formally called the Strategic Defense Initiative by the administration, envisions the use of lasers, particle-beam weapons and other elements of high technology to shoot down incoming missiles.

Reagan said he was prepared to tell Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, at their summit this month, "that if such a weapon is possible, and our research reveals that, then our move would be to say to all the world,

"Here, it is available."

"We won't put this weapon — or this system in place, this defensive system, until we do away with our nuclear missiles, our offensive missiles," the president added. "But we will make it available to other countries, including the Soviet Union, to do the same thing."

Reagan said, "And if the Soviet Union and the United States both say we will eliminate our offensive weapons, we will put in this defensive thing in case some place in the world a madman some day tries to create these weapons again — nuclear weapons — because, remember, we all know how to make them now."

Reagan was interviewed by four Moscow journalists in the Oval Office Thursday, the first time an American president has held an interview with the Soviet press in 24 years.

In the very first question, a Soviet journalist criticized Reagan's written answers to printed questions that had been submitted in advance, dealing with U.S.-Soviet relations, Star

Midland man dies in Sunday accident

From Staff Reports

Two Sunday-morning traffic accidents left one Midland man dead, another in the hospital and a third in the city jail, according to police reports.

Tracy Christopher Hagins, 19, Route 2, 101 Shanks, was killed when a 1976 Chevrolet pickup driven by Joe Hopkins, no address given, rolled over about 3:19 a.m. in the 3200 block of Cynthia Street. The pickup had been swerving back and forth as it headed north on Cynthia, then rolled over and rested on its roof facing south, reports said.

Hopkins was apparently unhurt in the accident.

One hour later, an accident in the 1300 block of Front Street left 56-year-old Sid Trevino in serious condition in Midland Memorial Hospital, while the other driver involved was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated.

Trevino, 2501 Harvard, was driving west on Front in a 1986 Ford Thunderbird at 4:19 a.m. when his left front struck the left front of an east-bound 1980 Chevrolet Bel-Air driven by Sergio Villa Porras, Route 2X, Box 197, Porras, 25, remained in jail this morning on a $500 bond, and Trevino was still listed in serious condition, according to police and hospital reports.

Texas girl youngest living heart recipient

HOUSTON (AP) — When in the company of other children her age, 20-month-old Sara Remington shows no signs that a year ago she underwent a transplant and now remains the youngest surviving recipient of a new heart.

Sara is so active her mother keeps the kitchen chairs turned over on the table to prevent her from climbing to the salt shaker and sugar bowl.

Her three older brothers have learned to keep their bedroom doors shut as protection from a roaming Sara, says Jane Remington, Sara's mother.

Sara was only 8 months old when she had the transplant Nov. 1, 1984, a week after Baby Fae was given a baboon heart in California.

Dr. Denton Cooley, one of the doctors who performed the transplant, called Sara's operation "a pilot study" for infant transplants.

"It's almost like a fairy tale," said Mrs. Remington as she cradled her daughter recently at their Houston-area home.

Sara's health problems started in July 1984 when she developed a respiratory infection and tests showed an enlarged heart losing elasticity and struggling to keep beating.

By September, the Remingtons were told a transplant might be Sara's only hope, but there were strict criteria for accepting a child as a transplant candidate.

Cooley and Dr. O. Howard "Bud" Frazier, head of transplantation at the Texas Heart Institute, agreed to do the transplant.

The Remingtons were told about a couple of 2-year-olds in other cities who successfully underwent heart transplants, but none as young as Sara.

"When the alternative is death, it's not that difficult a decision," Mrs. Remington said.

Virginia GOP battling for governor seat

Associated Press

Virginia Republicans are waging an underdog campaign to regain control of the governor's office on Tuesday and offer fresh evidence that the once solidly Democratic South is a growth area for the GOP.

Democrat Gerald L. Baliles and Republican Wyatt B. Durrette are battling to succeed Gov. Charles S. Robb, whose election four years ago ended a 15-year period in which Republicans had carried Virginia in every campaign for president, governor and U.S. Senate.

The only other statewide contest this quiet political year is in New Jersey, where Republican Gov. Thomas H. Kean is heavily favored to defeat Democratic challenger Peter Shapiro, the 33-year-old Essex County executive.

A survey conducted last month by the Eagleton Institute at Rutgers University said Kean was leading Shapiro by 51 points. Republicans are hoping the governor's popularity will help the GOP gain control of the state Assembly, where they need to pick up only five seats.

Statewide polls in Virginia have said Baliles is as much as 19 points ahead of Durrette, but the Republicans claim the margin is closer and that their candidate is gaining ground.

In advance of the voting in both states, the national party chairmen are already positioning themselves to claim some sort of victory no matter what the results.

Frank Fahrenkopf Jr., chairman of the Republican National Committee, described New Jersey as a state that "fits the old Democratic coalition mold" and added that "there's a tradition in Virginia of Republicans running behind."

As for Virginia, where polls have said Baliles and the Democratic candidates for lieutenant governor and attorney general are running ahead of their Republican opponents, Kirk said a Democratic victory would be "another signal that the claimed realignment has not been proven."

Virginia Democrats nominated state Sen. L. Douglas Wilder for lieutenant governor, and Delegate Mary Sue Terry for attorney general. If elected, they would be the first black

Total of 53 statewide issues on ballots across nation

Associated Press

Voters in nine states and scores of cities and towns will tackle a variety of economic and social issues on Tuesday, from abortion in Bristol, Conn., to rent control in Washington, D.C., and water conservation in Texas.

A total of 53 statewide ballot measures will be decided, about normal for an off-election year with an expected light turnout.

Only a handful have stirred much interest or emotion this year.

In Texas, voters will decide whether to adopt a two-part, $1.43 billion water conservation and development plan to build reservoirs, pipelines, water treatment plants and flood control projects.

Texas have turned down water plans in 1969, 1976 and 1981.

This time, the measures are backed by Gov. Mark White and other leading politicians, but some question whether the plan has adequate financial and environmental safeguards.

Nuclear waste disposal is the topic in Maine where voters face three potentially confusing referenda. One measure would give Mainers a "people's veto" over any plan to store or dispose of nuclear waste in Maine or out-of-state. A competing referendum would give citizens a much more limited veto, while a third ballot alternative, backed by Central Maine Power Co., amounts to a "no" vote on the other two.

Ohioans, meanwhile, will consider whether to give the state authority to borrow up to $100 million for research in removing sulfur from coal as a way to boost that state's depressed coal industry.

The most heated contests seem to be over local ballot measures:

In Santa Barbara, environmentally-conscious celebrities like Jane Fonda and John Travolta are doing battle with well-financed oil companies over a ballot measure that would put tight restrictions on off-shore oil drilling. The resort city was the scene of a disastrous oil spill in 1969.

Bristol, Conn., voters will be asked in a non-binding measure whether they think the U.S. Supreme Court should rescind its 12-year-old ruling legalizing abortion. Two New Hampshire cities, Dover and Derry, face similar ballot measures.

Oak Park, Ill., one of four cities with handgun bans, will decide whether it wants to repeal its 13-month old prohibition. The vote is non-binding, but national pro-gun groups have spent about $45,000 to support the measure.

St. Louis, as part of a two-year-old voluntary desegregation plan, is asking voters to approve a $155 million bond to pay for repairs and construction in that city's schools. If the bond is defeated, a federal judge will order the city and the state of Missouri to come up with the money anyway.

District of Columbia residents will consider a measure that would tighten rent control. Mayor Marion Barry has joined with landlord groups who oppose it, as well as local civil rights leaders who fear a provision that could remove certain tax incentives for landlords to renovate rundown property.

and the first woman to win statewide office. State Sen. John Chichester is Wilder's Republican opponent and Delegate W. R. "Buster" O'Brien is running against Terry.

Each camp in the Virginia race is trying to capitalize on the popularity of two men who aren't on the ballot — President Reagan and Gov. Robb. Robb, who cannot run for re-election, has campaigned with Baliles. Reagan made one trip into the state to help Durrette.

The Republicans have tried to portray their Democratic opponents as liberals in the national party mold and have said that programs advocated by Baliles would require a tax increase if enacted.

Kirk, who has kept a low profile in the Virginia race, said the Democratic tickets are "just focusing on some of the issues that are of concern to Virginians and where they're going and not necessarily trying to make it a referendum on either national party."

The Baliles-Durrette race is a rematch of the contest for attorney general four years ago which Baliles won.

In other contests around the country, New York's Mayor Ed Koch is heavily favored to win a third term. His opponents are Republican Diane McGrath and City Council President Carol Bellamy, running as the Liberal Party candidate after losing the Democratic primary to the mayor.

Detroit Mayor Coleman Young is favored to defeat 36-year-old Thomas Barrow, nephew of former heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis, and win a fourth four-year term.

In Houston, AIDS is an issue in a campaign that pits Mayor Kathy Whitmire, 39, against Louis Welch, a 66-year-old former five-term mayor. Welch, speaking into what he thought was a silent microphone, joked before a scheduled television interview that one way to rid the city of the disease was to "shoot the queers."

Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich, 49, is seeking a third two-year term against Democratic challenger Gary Kucinich, the brother of former Mayor Dennis Kucinich, the man Voinovich defeated to win the office. In Miami, Mayor Maurice Ferre has nine opponents to his bid for re-election.

VOTERS

Opponents say the plan doesn't address problems with groundwater that is being pumped out for irrigation, falls short in emphasizing conservation, and weakens public control over how much should be spent on water projects.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, a leading spokesman for opponents, argues that the plan lacks adequate controls for financial and environmental protection.

"In short, it would make pork-barrel heaven for the water hustlers and the bond hustlers every time the Legislature convenes," Truan said.

Among the plan's backers is Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot, who compared the need for a water plan with that for public school reforms.

Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, another supporter and a drafter of the plan, said voter apathy is the biggest threat to passage of the statewide plan.

"Many areas of the state do not have any contests on Tuesday, and it will be a problem to get voters out," Montford told the Texas Association

Only 11 percent of the state's voters are expected to go to the polls Tuesday, Secretary of State Myra McDaniel said.

Mrs. McDaniel, who is calling on voters to "prove me wrong," said her prediction is about average for an off-year election on constitutional amendments and is based on "the low number of absentee ballots which have been cast."

The polls will be open from 7 a.m.

Besides the two water plan amendments, the other dozen proposals cover such diverse topics as ex-changing prison inmates with other states, making more money available for family farmers, and abolishing some county treasurer and surveyor positions.

COSTS

According to figures from the Oil and Gas Journal, said the professors, the number of refineries in Texas rose by 11, from 45 to 56, between the years 1975 and 1980. But between 1980 and 1984, 23 refineries closed in Texas.

"Automated refineries abroad possess a critical advantage over American refineries, whose labor costs are increasingly the only variable cost over which control may be exercised," said the study.

Texas' high-technology industry has seen a turnaround after years of growth because of over-production of semi-conductors and computers, the strong dollar overseas, and competition with Japan, the study said.

Thousands of workers have been laid off because of the slump, the professors said, noting that Dallas-based Texas Instruments posted a $3.9 million loss in the second quarter of this year, but had a $85.9 million profit during the same period last year.

Agriculture has been unable to effectively sell its products abroad despite its competitiveness in terms of technology and resources and its government-backed loans and subsidies, said the study.

The professors said this "suggests strongly that recently less may be attributed principally to the effect of the strong U.S. dollar."

The professors said figures from the Texas Agriculture Department and the Chicago Board of Trade show that prices for Texas-produced commodities generally declined or rose somewhat between 1981 and 1983. Meanwhile, prices Korea received for the same commodities rose across the board, some significantly.

For instance, Texas farmers received 25.5 percent more for their cotton in 1983 than in 1981, while Korean cotton farmers increased their price by 47 percent.

Wheat prices declined for Texas farmers by 14 percent during the period, while Korean wheat farmers saw an increase in prices of 137 percent.

Soviet soldier leaves U.S. Embassy for home

Associated Press

An official at the State Department said today the Soviet soldier who sought refuge in the U.S. Embassy in Kabul, Afghanistan, has left the embassy and agreed to return to the Soviet Union.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said the 19-year-old private left the embassy after meeting twice with Soviet and American officials. The soldier signed a statement saying he is leaving with Soviet officials on his own will, the official said.

Following that, the lights that had been cut off Saturday were turned back on at the U.S. Embassy and the troops that had been withdrawn, authorities said. Searchlights had been playing across the embassy building at night since the incident started Friday.

"He agreed to return to the Soviet Union," the official said. "He signed a statement that the decision was made on his own. The troops have been removed and the lights are back on and communications with the embassy have been restored."

Earlier, State Department officials said the soldier met with Soviet ambassador Fikryat A. Tabeev in the presence of U.S. charges d'affaires Edward Hurwitz and a Marine guard, then asked for time to think about his options.

U.S. officials who were with U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz in Helsinki on Sunday, as well as officials in Washington and Islamabad, Pakistan, earlier provided information about the situation.

U.S. diplomats in Islamabad said the staff of the Kabul embassy had stayed inside after an American was mistreated by Soviet and Afghan troops who ringed the compound after the Soviet soldier entered Friday.

According to U.S. officials, the soldier had been on guard duty at Radio Kabul near the U.S. Embassy when he entered the compound.

The officials said the unidentified soldier seemed confused, and said at first he wanted to go home and was tired of taking part in the war that Afghanistan's Marxist regime, backed by an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops, is waging against Moslem guerrillas.

REAGAN

Wars, nuclear arms and other subjects.

The journalist told the president that his replies "basically reflect the old U.S. proposals" and were considered by the Soviets to be "unbalanced and one-sided in favor of the U.S. side. And you have not answered concerning the new Soviet (arms control) proposal."

In reply, Reagan told the reporters the United States would submit a counter-offer to the Soviet proposal the very next day, Friday. Without discussing specifics, Reagan said the U.S. plan reflected "the acceptance on our part of some of this latest (Soviet) proposal as well as compromises with earlier figures that we'd proposed."

Both sides now are calling for roughly a 50 percent cutback in nuclear arms, but would apply the reduction differently.

The Soviets told Reagan that a recent poll taken by the Washington Post and ABC said that 74 percent of Americans would like to see the superpowers reduce their nuclear arsenals and the United States drop its development of space weapons.

"So, how then will you react, Mr. President, to this opinion expressed by the American public?" he was asked.

Reagan complained that the term Star Wars did not accurately describe the U.S. plan. "We're not talking about Star Wars at all," he said, calling the program a defensive plan to protect against nuclear missiles.

As for American sentiment, Reagan said there was a misconception among people "when you use the wrong term," such as Star Wars.

Reagan said the same poll asked if people approved of "a strategic defensive shield that doesn't kill people but would allow us one day — all of us — to reduce, get rid of nuclear weapons. And over 90 percent of the American people favored our going forward with such a program."

Can Houston's 'Straight Slate' win hearts of voters with single issue?

HOUSTON (AP) — Eight political newcomers known as the "Straight Slate" say they are running for City Council seats to protect the populace from what they consider the rampant spread of AIDS.

"Our main issue is health cards and AIDS," says council candidate O.J. Striegler, a spokesman for Straight Slate. "It's beyond any of my wildest imaginations why they (City Council) don't take a stance on AIDS. Even our entire military is screening for AIDS."

Striegler said the slate supports the reinstatement of the health cards used to combat tuberculosis in Houston from 1941 to 1978, but with two changes — checking for AIDS and re-testing every six months.

"What we're doing now is nothing, so it's better than nothing," Striegler said. "It's not a cure-all but it's a step in the right direction."

The Straight Slate candidates seeking election Tuesday want food handlers, blood bank personnel and day care workers to be issued health cards indicating they are free of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The Straight Slate emerged after the City Council in July 1984 adopted a gay rights law barring sexual discrimination in municipal hiring.

An irate citizens' group gathered 63,000 signatures to force a referendum and city voters threw out the ordinance in January. The Straight Slate's organizer, Steven Hotze, headed the group that pushed to overturn the council's July 1984 vote.

All eight Straight Slate candidates are running against incumbents who supported the gay rights referendum, and each race has at least one other candidate. The Houston City Council has 14 members and a voting mayor.

Few of the incumbents targeted by the Straight Slate, however, seem overly worried about losing to the political neophytes.

"They are running on a single issue and no voter will vote for someone running on a single issue," said Councilman Anthony Hall, who introduced the gay rights anti-discrimination ordinance and is Striegler's opponent.

"Our polls show that Straight Slate isn't going anywhere," Bob Stein, a political science professor at Rice University, said Friday. "Our polls have them getting less than 1 percent of the vote."

"We found there is no evidence that a person's preference on the gay rights referendum in January was in any way related to the mayor's and council races," Stein said.

The 576 registered voters surveyed in the Rice poll were more interested in street repairs, police and traffic than AIDS and homosexuals, he said.

Stein blamed the slate's single-issue campaign for its poor showing in polls.

Still, Hotze, the organizer, is using the public concern about AIDS to build on the momentum of January's referendum.

"Last January, we broke the branch, but it will bud again until we remove those City Council members. We have to take the ax to the root and remove them from office," says Hotze, whose mother, Margaret Hotze, is a Straight Slate candidate.

The other six candidates are David Justus, Jim Kennedy, Leon Spivey, Charles Carter, Jimmy James and Joseph H. Mattingly.

An appeals court rejected the Straight Slate's request for a straight-ticket punch, but the eight names on the ballot will be designated "Campaign Houston-Straight Slate."

The candidates have gone to City Council meetings weekly to urge health cards, even though a committee appointed by the council to study AIDS has said health cards are not the answer to curb the disease.

The group has also circulated petitions aimed at gathering 35,000 signatures to put the health cards issue on a ballot.

Although polls show that AIDS is not an issue in the council or mayoral races, mayoral challenger Louie Welch gained national media attention when outlining his four-point plan to curb the spread of the disease.

Welch's joking solution to the AIDS problem — "shoot the queers" — accidentally went over a live microphone before a televised interview, resulting in death threats against him and a need for police protection.

Welch, Houston's mayor from 1964-1974, has sought to align Mayor Kathy Whitmire with the city's gay community. Mrs. Whitmire, who supported the anti-discrimination ordinance, has retreated from political links with the gay community.

The Straight Slate has endorsed Welch over Mrs. Whitmire, who is seeking her third two-year term.

Although the name Straight Slate implies they are anti-gay, Hotze maintains they are just "pro-family."

"Families are the cement that glues a civilization together," he said. "We believe in traditional roles of father and mother, and our kids understand those."

New investigation into 1981 murder may help mentally retarded inmate

CISCO (AP) — Convicted murderer Thomas Leflore works in a prison kitchen and tries to learn basic skills as he serves a 50-year sentence and anxiously waits to go home.

Leflore was convicted of murdering Debra Jo Garcia, who was shot to death nearly four years ago after being kidnapped from a convenience store in Cisco and then repeatedly raped for two days.

But in Eastland County, where the shooting death occurred, authorities investigating the brutal murder are finding new evidence that casts doubt on the mentally retarded inmate's role in the crime.

Leflore's younger brother, Charles, also was convicted of murder in the case and is serving a 60-year sentence.

Before Thomas Leflore went to prison, he named five other people involved in the woman's death. But authorities seemed neither willing nor able to investigate at the time, and only the two brothers were punished for one of the most heinous crimes in Eastland County's history.

"Whatever I tried to do, I couldn't get anyone to help," Monty Booth, Ms. Garcia's mother, told the Dallas Times Herald. "It seemed like I was fighting a losing battle."

Almost four years after the murder, a special grand jury appointed by state District Judge Jim Wright convened in secret, hired its own prosecutor and re-examined the case.

In June, the grand jury indicted Richard Edward Hinton, Joe Thomas

Thomas Leflore

Perry, Brenda Andrews, Elizabeth Perry Peacock and Pat Ingram — the people Tom Leflore named years earlier.

All are charged with aggravated kidnapping and robbery, and all have pleaded innocent except for Perry, who has not been apprehended. Their trial is scheduled for December.

Officials say additional evidence has clarified Thomas Leflore's role in the crime. It appears he never participated in the kidnapping or the killing of Ms. Garcia, and his involvement in the rape apparently was the act of a mentally retarded man mimicking the actions of others.

Despite the new evidence, his 50-year sentence still stands.

"I want to get out of here and go home," he said in a recent interview at the Beto I Unit, one of the state's maximum security prisons.

Although Leflore provided the information about others allegedly involved in the crime, he never received any offer of immunity from prosecution or a reduced sentence.

"It was always kind of frustrating to know that dumb old Thomas was down there in prison and these so-called smart guys were walking around," said Jim Farrar, Leflore's lawyer. "That's an affront to your own sense of fair play that that could happen."

"Thomas was the one that fingered all of these individuals and in my opinion he was the least capable of any of them. Thomas, as pitiful as he is, is all they've got to bear the burden of that murder," he said.

Nearly four years ago, Charles Leflore walked into the convenience store where Ms. Garcia worked, pulled out a .22-caliber pistol, and forced the 28-year-old woman to leave the store and get in a car with his friends, authorities said.

Ms. Garcia was taken to a house a few miles outside Cisco where she was the victim of brutal sexual assaults in which as many as eight individuals may have participated or watched, authorities said.

Bush keeps political plans quiet as he aids fellow Republicans

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Vice President George Bush is keeping his own political plans under tight rein as he campaigns for fellow Texas Republicans across the state.

Bush said during a $500-per-plate fund-raiser for U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter Saturday that his top priority is to keep Republicans in control of the Senate next year and battle "a real problem" in the Democrat-controlled House.

"We've got to make the House more like the Senate," he said.

When asked specifically if he planned a run for the presidency, Bush said at a news conference that he would make a decision after the 1986 elections.

He acknowledged that a political action committee has been set up in his name but said it was to help candidates in elections next year. However, he said because the 1988 delegate selection process was beginning already in early 1986 in Michigan.

"We'll have to do something there — not that I'm running, but to protect myself."

Later, when talking about the presidency to Boulter supporters at a rally, he asked them to "save a little politics for the future. Heaven knows what's going to happen."

He also said that every day when he drives through the White House gates, "I still get a kick — a lump in my throat. I feel that way every day I go to work."

Bush's itinerary for today includes functions in Dallas and Fort Worth to continue five days of self-proclaimed "out and out political activity" in Texas.

On tap were appearances at the U.S. League of Savings Institutions convention and a pair of fund-raisers for U.S. Rep. Steve Bartlett, all in Dallas, plus money-raising events in Fort Worth for the Texas GOP.

On Saturday, the vice president held five fund-raisers for freshman U.S. Rep. Mac Sweeney before flying to Wichita Falls for three similar affairs for Boulter.

The final Boulter fund-raiser drew 176 people and raised $88,000.

Bush told reporters Saturday that a new proposal aimed at trimming the nuclear arsenals of the United States and the Soviet Union does not signal any change in the Star Wars missile defense plan.

The Choice Is Yours.

Vote Yes - Props. 1 & 2 Tuesday, Nov. 5 Water For Texas' Future

There's no doubt about it: Texans are running out of water. West Texas has been hit the hardest. Repeated droughts have devastated farmers and ranchers and hurt economies in cities and towns throughout our area.

Here in West Texas, depletion of our aquifers threatens to leave us without the water we need for irrigation, industry and home consumption.

Without water, West Texas will return to the desert. Sixty-five percent of the state's irrigation occurs in West Texas—and 80% of this water is now drying up.

On Tuesday, November 5, West Texans will have a chance to help approve a comprehensive, long-range water plan for Texas—by voting "Yes" on Proposition 1 and 2.

Your "Yes" vote will bring desperately-needed help to West Texas, creating bonds for new reservoirs, water conservation programs and projects for water supply, wastewater treatment, desalinization and flood control.

Best of all, the plan requires no new taxes. Don't let any other part of the state decide the future of West Texas! Vote "Yes" for Propositions 1 and 2. The choice is yours!

Afghan horror

It's easy to forget about the war in Afghanistan, where marauding Soviet forces have been attempting to subjugate rebellious Afghans for six years. It's a difficult war to cover, reports indicate, and that's part of the problem.

Soviet-style censorship of war coverage keeps reports minimal, but the Afghanistan horror story remains visible for the free people of the world to see — if they'll only open their eyes.

A recent article in National Review reported that the war "... continues to provoke in the Western democracies a reaction that Montaigne calls 'voluntary ignorance.' This deliberate neglect of the facts is a wonderful prophylactic against the temptation to act. In this sense, Afghanistan is a reflection of our cowardice. It offers an instructive look at the way the democracies justify, or conceal, their failures in the face of totalitarian expansionism."

Part of the "problem" is that the Soviets do not carry out their wars in the same manner that the United States does. They're not open to world scrutiny — and criticism — and, therefore, the Soviets do not have to abide by the socially accepted code of conduct.

"By closing Afghan territory to TV teams and non-communist reporters, by imprisoning journalists and even doctors who have entered the country clandestinely, the Soviets have kept the Afghan horror story from being told by the mass media. Thus they have prevented the vast wave of worldwide opprobrium that would engulf a democracy guilty of far lesser crimes but accessible to news coverage by nature of its politics and principles."

The war in Afghanistan is more than a testing point for the stamina of a people longing to be free. It is a testing point for journalists who long to show the world what freedom of the press is really all about. Bringing to the world the hard facts about the difference between war waged in the interest of people's rights as compared to war waged merely to spread the clutches of totalitarian regimes.

That "horror story" can be told time after time in the media and eventually will help to arouse a public outcry against the atrocities being afflicted on the people of Afghanistan.

Be sure to vote

Tuesday is election day in Texas and although no candidates for local or statewide office will be on the ballot in Midland County, this election remains vitally important to the community's residents.

Fourteen amendments to the state Constitution are being proposed — including two that would help ensure adequate water for Texas' future, which is expected to be marked by major growth in both population and industry. The other 12 proposals address various aspects of life in the Lone Star State.

Some of the proposed amendments are worthwhile; some are less than worthwhile, for various reasons. But none will become reality if not enough of the state's voters recognize in them those laudatory qualities and make it a point to vote Tuesday.

As in all elections, the Reporter-Telegram has made its recommendations known as have various politicians and groups around the state. In many cases those recommendations and opinions can help guide voters, but still the final responsibility for deciding whether to favor or disapprove each of the proposals lies with the individual voter. That voter conscience is cut short if voters do not go to the polls on election day.

Make up your mind about the 14 proposals and be certain to vote on Tuesday. It is your cherished right and responsibility.

Another View: The shell of reform

Tax reform as currently defined by the president and Congress is a trade-off: lower rates for fewer preferences. Fiscal considerations — the president is opposed to a tax increase, the deficit rules out a cut — have locked the two halves of the process together. To do a lot of rate cutting, you need to do a fair amount of preference cutting as well. The bill taking shape in the Ways and Means Committee would do less and less of both. Increasingly it looks like an empty reshuffling of present law whose only purpose is political.

The tax bill has been useful to the president as a distraction from the deficits his leadership has produced, and he is happy to be identified with lower rates. He has not been able to gin up appreciable public or congressional support for the plan. Even so he has thrown the Democrats on the defensive. Their overriding concern on this issue has been to produce a bill — any bill — so that they cannot be jumped next year as the party that blocked "reform." It has become the task of Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski to pick up for some semblance of the president's plan the votes that the president himself has not been able to generate.

These votes have been costly. Mr. Rostenkowski has had to yield to members of both parties on his committee who are determined to save certain preferences. The more preferences he agrees to preserve, the less revenue he has available to give up in rate cuts. The classic example so far is the deduction for state and local taxes. The president proposed repealing it. High-tax states, which include many of the most populous — meaning those with the most votes in the House — instantly resisted. Mr.

Rostenkowski may now be about to give up on repeal in return for votes. But that will cost an estimated $65 billion over the next five years in the revenues that were to be applied to reducing rates.

The bill has also lost in sharpness, and in what might be called integrity, in the trading that Mr. Rostenkowski has been obliged to do. For instance, one set of proposals was to reduce the generous tax preferences now enjoyed by timber producers. At the behest of Ways and Means member Beryl Anthony Jr., D-Ark., whose family has timber interests, this was altered so that the preferences of only large producers would be affected.

Instead of simplification, one supposed goal of reform, a new distinction would be introduced into the code. Similar concessions were made in other areas — for example, a proposal to limit future use of tax-exempt state and local government bonds for nongovernmental purposes.

If Ways and Means stays on this path it will not produce reform as currently defined, but its shell.

Petition No. 4 an NRA 'bullet'

WASHINGTON — Seated at a desk just below the House Speaker's imposing rostrum, a "journal clerk" has been presiding for the last couple of weeks over a piece of legislative legerdemain titled simply, "Petition No. 4." From time to time, a member quietly slips up and signs the petition, and the clerk checks off the name on a secret tally sheet.

Under House rules, no one may linger over the petition, or copy down the names of the signatories. The clerk's office will divulge neither the names nor the number of members who have signed.

What is this document that requires such tight security? Petition No. 4 is a discharge petition prepared by the National Rifle Association's friends in the House. If it hits its target of 218 members' signatures, Petition No. 4 will blast an NRA-backed bill out of the Judiciary Committee directly to the House floor for a vote.

The legislation would weaken the 1968 Gun Control Act, and the discharge petition would prevent a full hearing by the committee. The bill could be sneaked through the House as quickly and quietly as the purchase of a Saturday Night Special.

In July, the rifle association's friends in the Senate pulled a different but equally effective parliamentary procedure to get the bill to a floor vote without Judiciary Committee hearings.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, and Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., has been condemned by the Fraternal Order of Police, the National Sheriffs Association, the Police Foundation, the International Association of Chiefs of Police, and the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives.

Arrayed against the law enforcement community is the National Rifle Association, its huge nationwide membership and its Political Victory Fund.

Our reporters, Tony Capaccio and Jenny Cunningham have pierced the veil of secrecy shrouding the NRA-backed discharge petition. They have identified 31 of the first 68 House members who signed or said they would sign the petition in the first two days it lay on the journal clerk's desk.

Federal Election Commission records disclose that the petition signers have received a total of $275,002 in direct or indirect donations from the rifle association's political fund during the past 30 months. Here's the breakdown:

— Of the 12 signers who received contributions in the first six months of 1985, the top amount of $4,950 apiece went to Reps. Tommy Robinson, D-Ark.; Beau Boulter, R-Texas; Larry Craig, R-Idaho; Bill Schutte, R-Mich.; and Paul Kanjorski, D-Pa.

Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Texas, received $3,000; Rep. John Grotberg, R-Ill., $2,500; Reps. John Dingell, D-Mich., and Larry Combest, R-Texas, $2,000 each, and Reps. Volkmer, Alan Mollohan, D-W.Va., and Charles Wilson, D-Texas, $1,000 each.

The Victory Fund had already shelled out a total of $39,897 during the 1983-84 campaign period to Craig, Dingell, Grotberg, Mollohan, Volkmer and Wilson.

Among the discharge-petition signers who benefited most from the rifle association's largesse during the 1983-84 period were Reps. J. Alex McMillan, R-N.C., $35,819; Jim Lightfoot, R-Iowa, $28,145; Dan Schaefer, R-Colo., $20,988; David Monson, R-Utah, $19,340; Robert Smith, R-N.H., $17,885; and Barbara Vucanovich, R-Nev., $11,957.

Almost as generously treated were Reps. John Kasich, R-Ohio, $8,339; Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., $8,019; Bob Stump, R-Ariz., $7,507; Jack Fields, R-

Texas, $6,524, and Dan Burton, R-Ind., $6,140.

Signers getting less than $6,000 from the rifle association during 1983-84 included Reps. Tom Foley, D-Wash., $5,924; Arian Stangeland, R-Minn., $5,854; Bill Emerson, R-Mo., $5,257, and Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., $3,250.

Footnote: Handgun Control Inc., a public-interest group, has asked legislators not to sign the discharge petition. So far, 180 members have given their pledge.

TAX REFORM (CONT.) Here's the latest forecast on two of the most controversial proposals in President Reagan's tax reform plan: Revenue from the elimination of state and local tax deductions is crucial if tax rates are to be cut, but the White House will have to compromise because of opposition from high-tax states. Look for elimination of about two-thirds of the current deduction. The second-home mortgage interest deduction has only the barest chance of surviving. The deduction for interest on primary residences will remain intact, though.

MINI-EDITORIAL: We've never been enthusiastic members of the Paul Volcker Fan Club. The Federal Reserve Board chairman has been too secretive for our taste in his handling of decisions that can make or break the U.S. economy. But we don't think Volcker deserves the Reagan administration's unseemly rush to ease him out of office. The White House has done just about everything but send Volcker the help wanted ads to make clear he's no longer wanted. The president's advisers seem to forget that it was Volcker who engineered the economic boom that re-elected the president, and without him to kick around, whom will they blame for the next recession?

Senator's travels gives 'em shivers

WASHINGTON — Sen. Jesse Helms, scourge of the State Department, will go to Geneva with a high-powered delegation of right-wing aides to counsel President Reagan during the summit — sending shivers through the administration high command.

Helms fears that the diplomats may persuade Reagan to accept a bad arms control bargain from the Soviets. Traveling with him to Geneva to help guard the president's ideological convictions will be the senator's closest adviser: Tom Ellis, who runs the fund-raising Congressional Club in Raleigh, N.C. Also on hand will be David Sullivan, who serves as a Soviet analyst for several conservative senators, and James Lucier, Helms' top foreign policy aide.

No president has been monitored by the personal presence of political backers at any previous summit. Although the White House is saying nothing publicly, insiders wish that Helms would stay away.

NO-DEGREE IACocca Duke University officials, while overjoyed at getting Lee Iacocca to deliver next year's commencement address, are worried about an explosion in Detroit when the hot-tempered Chrysler chief finds he won't be getting an honorary degree.

Duke's stuffy Academic Council, which has refused to permit a presidential library for alumnus Richard M. Nixon, insists that Iacocca does not deserve an honorary degree from so elite an institution. The auto magnate thinks he is getting one. University officials so far have had no luck trying to get the professors to change their minds.

A footnote: New York Gov. Mario Cuomo is no longer listing Iacocca as a 1988 presidential possibility when he tends off speculation about his own intentions. Iacocca recently told the governor he will not run under any circumstances.

NIXON'S REGRETS The White House public relations promotion for a pre-Geneva meeting between President Reagan and the three living ex-presidents is being spoiled by Richard M. Nixon's lack of interest in being part of a group scene.

Nixon told the White House that he had unspecified personal plans for the proposed date, Nov. 8, that could not be changed, but suggested Nov. 6 as an alternative. But ex-presidents Gerald R. Ford and Jimmy Carter, who had agreed to Nov. 8, could not make the alternative date. Tentative plans are to go ahead with just Ford and Carter.

The impression given to the White House was that Nixon was not all that interested in sharing time with his two successors. He has conferred privately with Reagan and been briefed personally by national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane. Public relations impresario Michael K. Deaver has made a special trip to New York to confer with Nixon about preparations for Geneva, according to White House sources.

NO VIRGINIA ENCORE Although Virginia Republicans were crestfallen to learn that President Reagan could not make a second campaigning trip to that nearby state before Tuesday's election, the decision against a presidential encore was made weeks ago.

White House political experts smelled a Republican disaster shaping up in Virginia, with the Democrats in good shape to capture all three statewide races: governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general. It was decided to get Reagan there early in the campaign and never return, so that the prospective loss would not rub off on him.

A footnote: Following his success in talking ex-governor Richard Snelling into running for the Senate from Vermont, the president has asked Rep. Thomas F. Hartnett to run for the Senate instead of governor in South Carolina. While Snelling is an even shot to unseat Sen. Patrick Leahy, Hartnett would be an underdog against Sen. Ernest F. Hollings.

LIZ VS. GERRY

Understandably angry at public scolding that she should bow out of a rematch against Republican Sen. Alfonse D'Amato if Geraldine Ferraro decides to run, Brooklyn District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman tells intimates she has done far more for the Democratic Party than the 1984 vice presidential candidate ever thought of doing.

Actually, Ferraro may not run. But Holtzman's passion, which has surprised her supporters, is real and deep. An officeholder for over 13 years, ex-representative Holtzman would not consider dropping out of the race no matter what relative newcomer Ferraro does or what Democratic leaders say.

The only Democrat who might persuade her to reconsider running is former governor Hugh Carey, if he were interested. But Carey has decided not to seek the Senate seat.

FLORA LEWIS Reagan must decide what to do

PARIS — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is off to Moscow to make final preparations for the Nov. 19-21 Geneva summit. Meanwhile, Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger is damming Soviet bargaining offers and arguing against any American concessions on the arms buildup.

If this were a Mutt and Jeff act, the classic routine of the mean cop and the kindly cop working in turns to soften up the suspect, it might be a plausible gambit.

Even so, it would risk not only bewildering the Soviets but confusing allies. Congress and the American public to a degree that undermines broad, firm support for its foreign policy that the United States sorely needs.

But all the evidence is that there is no such canny coordination. On the contrary, there is a continuing free-for-all within the administration trying to tug President Reagan in one direction or the other, and still no decision.

President Reagan, in his speech to the United Nations last week, deliberately avoided the crucial issue of arms control. It focused on the parts of the world where the U.S. would like to force back the Soviets. "I wouldn't call it hard-line," a White House official said, "I would call it uplifting."

In the context of current diplomacy, it could only have lifted the spirits of those who are trying to persuade Reagan to put nothing on the table at Geneva except a pounding fist. Shultz said afterwards that the U.S. will respond to Soviet arms control proposals "in due time," but so far there has been "no decision" on what to say.

Only after a heated intervention from Shultz did the White House rule for an internal compromise on the lead-up question of interpreting the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The outcome was to uphold the new, provocative claim that the treaty permits full speed ahead on the Star Wars program, stopping only short of actually deploying systems which are still nothing but concepts. But meanwhile, since the scientists are many years away from significant tests, the U.S. will stick to the narrow interpretation allowing only research.

It is reasonable enough to put off decisions on hardware. But this begs the political issue of whether or not Reagan wants arms control. The latest Soviet offer which would strengthen the ABM treaty is intriguing. It is Moscow's first move to recognize American complaints that the vast Krasnoyarsk radar it is building violates the treaty, and therefore reinforces arguments of those Americans who say the U.S. can violate it, too.

The Russians now say they would abandon the complex if the U.S. foregoes modernizing its early-warning radars at Fylingdales in Britain and Thule in Greenland. That is not acceptable as it stands. But it should be negotiable if the U.S. wants to sustain the treaty and go on to other agreements. That is the central question and it can't be put off much longer.

The necessary decision isn't whether or not the U.S. should seek "agreement for agreement's sake," as some administration officials accuse critics of suggesting. That's persiflage. Reagan must decide what if any concessions the U.S. will make to obtain the concessions it requires from the Russians, what if any limits on the U.S. arms buildup are worth imposing verifiable limits on Moscow.

The President's dilemma lies deep in his gut. It is a conflict between his anti-Russian reflex, his conviction that there can be no compromise between the good he sees in America and the evil he sees in Russia, and his understanding that he must be seen to be seeking peace in the world, his promise to "go half-way."

The opportunity to find out how far Mikhail S. Gorbachev is really ready to go won't last indefinitely. Probing requires some sign that the U.S. is willing to bargain, not just demand and denounce.

Sooner or later, and probably sooner with his important Party Congress coming up in February, Gorbachev will come to his own conclusions about what the contradictory American messages really mean.

No doubt, one purpose of the flurry of conciliatory hints that have come recently from Moscow is to stir argument in the West and divide its opinion. Gorbachev's approach has made useful propaganda for his side. But his main need, as he reaches his vital decisions, is to form his own view of America's real intentions.

Rhetoric at Geneva won't fool him. It's obvious to everyone else that Reagan hasn't made up his mind. Unless he does, makes it clear and enforces his decision on his squabbling administration, the gleam of hope for easing world tensions will be doused.

Mandela recovering following surgery

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Jailed black leader Nelson Mandela was reported in stable condition following surgery to remove an inflamed prostate gland at a Cape Town hospital.

The Department of Prisons issued a statement Sunday on behalf of three urologists who conducted the surgery on Mandela at the Volkskospitaal (People's Hospital), saying Mandela's gland was successfully removed "and no complications are expected."

Mandela, 67, was jailed for life in 1964 for plotting sabotage by the armed wing of the African National Congress, a black civil rights group that was outlawed in 1960 and began a guerrilla movement to overthrow the white-ruled government a year later. He is widely regarded as South Africa's most popular black leader.

In other developments Sunday, police headquarters reported a few overnight incidents, and said 12 people were arrested for rock-throwing.

In one clash, police said they fired birdshot and tear gas at a rock-throwing crowd in Sebokeng, south of Johannesburg, slightly wounding five people. Sebokeng was the site of the first major outbreak of anti-apartheid unrest on Sept. 3, 1984.

The attorney for Mandela's family, Ismail Ayob, said Mandela entered the Cape Town hospital from Pollsmoor Prison for the operation.

A government-appointed urologist, a doctor chosen by the Mandela family, and a urologist from a British university performed the surgery, said prison department spokesman Lt. Col. Abri van Vuuren.

International campaigns have repeatedly called on the government to release Mandela, but President P.W. Botha has said he will be freed only if he renounces violence as a method for political change. Mandela replied in February that he will not accept conditional release.

Ayob said the surgery was only for the prostate gland, not the liver and kidney cysts also found in a medical examination in September.

Inflammation of the prostate is common in men over 50. A swollen gland interferes with urination, which can lead to kidney disease.

Mandela's health is of great concern both to anti-apartheid activists and to the government, which could face further outbreaks of anti-apartheid violence if Mandela died or became seriously ill in custody.

On Sunday, Louis Nel, head of the Bureau of Information in the Foreign Ministry, accused some foreign correspondents of "unprofessional and unethical" behavior in reporting the restrictions the day before they were officially announced.

Nel said some journalists broke a promise of confidence in using material given at a courtesy briefing held Friday. He did not identify the news organizations.

The restrictions were protested by South African journalists and foreign news organizations.

The Detroit (Mich.) Free Press asked for their immediate withdrawal in a cable to Botha. The text of the cable, printed in today's edition of the paper, called the measures "contrary to the freedom-loving ideals repeatedly expressed by members of (Botha's) government" and said they would hinder the newspaper's correspondent and photographer "from adequately performing their duties."

In London, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said they would mean increased bloodshed. "You can be assured that as the lights go out in South Africa, the killings will go up without a body count," the American black activist said in a sermon at St. James' Church.

Apartheid is the system of legal racial segregation under which 5 million white South Africans deny the vote to 24 million blacks.

In an effort to quell the recent unrest, the government has imposed a state of emergency in 38 districts. New rules announced Sunday prohibit television and radio crews and photographers from recording scenes of violence in those areas without the permission of the police commissioner.

Groups meet to pick Marcos opponent

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Political foes of President Ferdinand E. Marcos met in urgent sessions today to try to agree on a single opposition candidate for the special presidential election Marcos said he may call by January.

Appearing on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley," Marcos said Sunday he could call the snap election "in three months or less."

He told reporters in Manila afterward that the balloting could take place on Jan. 17, the anniversary of the 1981 lifting of eight years of martial law.

Marcos, in power for 20 years, is under growing pressure from the United States to deal with a growing communist rebellion, and faces widespread political opposition at home.

Many opposition leaders see Marcos' announcement as the result of U.S. pressure for democratic reforms to counter the insurgency.

The president's domestic political opposition has been divided and has squabbled over choosing a single candidate to run against the 68-year-old Marcos, whose current term expires in 1987.

Opposition reaction to Marcos' unexpected announcement was generally favorable, although some leaders expressed wariness at Marcos' possible motives.

"We welcome the announcement of a snap election," said a statement from the anti-Marcos National Unification Committee, which convened a meeting of a dozen opposition groups today to discuss election strategy.

The Filipino constitution provides for a special presidential election only in case of a vacancy brought about by death, disability, resignation or removal. Marcos has said he does not intend to resign before his current term runs out.

A former foreign minister, Arturo Tolentino, warned that besides violating the constitution, the proposed election might trigger a "very dangerous" constitutional crisis.

"Assuming President Marcos loses and the opposition wins, don't you think there are people in the government who will not question it on grounds of constitutionality?" Tolentino said.

Pres. Ferdinand Marcos

The meeting of the National Unification Committee lasted more than an hour, but the statement did not give details of any decisions reached. Opposition parties were holding their own meetings, but their leaders said earlier they would respect the National Unification Committee's choice of a single candidate from among the various parties' nominees.

About a dozen opposition leaders have been mentioned, but the field in recent weeks has narrowed down to three favored candidates: former Sen. Salvador Laurel, who heads the coalition United Nationalist Democratic Organization; Liberal Party president Jovito Salonga, and Corazon Aquino, widow of opposition leader Benigno Aquino, assassinated in 1982 as he returned to the Philippines from self-imposed exile in the United States.

"We are ready to fight Marcos," said Laurel in a statement telephoned to his Manila office from the United States, where he is on a round of speaking engagements.

Mrs. Aquino has not made any statement since Marcos announced his readiness to hold the election. She had earlier disavowed any political ambitions, but later said she was keeping an open mind about a possible draft.

Army helps recover police officers' bodies

AP Laserphoto Map

MINATITLAN, Mexico (AP) — Police trying to recover the bodies of 22 officers killed in a shootout with drug traffickers in a remote marijuana-growing center came under fire and were forced to summon the army for help, Mexico's attorney general said.

Hundreds of police and soldiers pressed their search for the drug traffickers Sunday, encircling villages of southern Mexico that reputedly subsist on marijuana production.

A survivor of the Friday shootout was quoted as telling authorities he and other state and federal police fought the drug traffickers for three hours before they ran out of bullets and were gunned down. The state government said some were tortured before they were killed.

Sergio Garcia Ramirez, Mexico's attorney general, went to the gulf coast state of Veracruz to head the investigation and vowed the killings would not slow the government's anti-narcotics campaign.

Veracruz Gov. Agustin Acosta Lagunes said no suspects had been apprehended.

The victims' bodies were recovered Sunday in the Sanchez Taboada settlement near the village of Hidalgo, in the mountainous jungle of southern Veracruz. The site is accessible by helicopter or by a 90-minute ride on a river launch from Minatitlan, the nearest city.

Shots were fired at police as they approached the bodies, presumably by drug traffickers still in the area, Garcia Ramirez said. The army was summoned to help and the bodies were flown to an army barracks here for autopsy.

More than 600 soldiers and policemen were assigned to the search, some of them forming a ring around the villages, Garcia Ramirez and Acosta Lagunes said after a meeting Sunday.

Details of the ambush remained incomplete. Garcia Ramirez and his aides, including the head of the Interpol agency in Mexico and the head of the country's anti-narcotics campaign, released few details.

Two policemen managed to escape the ambush and gave the first account Saturday morning, said Arturo Reyes Isidoro, chief spokesman for the Veracruz government.

The Mexico City newspaper Excelsior identified the survivors as federal agents Jose Isidoro Chantal and Moises Gonzalez. It quoted Isidoro Chantal as saying they had hidden and escaped in a boat and were picked up Saturday morning by helicopter.

The newspaper quoted Isidoro Chantal as saying the agents were searching the area for marijuana and poppies early Friday when they surprised traffickers loading about six tons of marijuana on river launches.

A three-hour gun battle ensued with about 30 traffickers armed with high-power rifles, but the police ran out of ammunition and were killed, the newspaper quoted the survivor as saying.

In a somewhat different version, the state government said the agents discovered the marijuana sometime earlier and were ambushed when they returned in the pre-dawn hours Friday to cart it away.

The government statement said some of the officers were killed immediately and that others were captured and, with their hands bound behind their backs, were taken to a nearby ranch where they were tortured and shot.

Soldiers guarding the Minatitlan barracks where the bodies were held kept reporters and relatives at a distance Sunday night. A CBS News camera crew was ordered at gunpoint to stop filming, said CBS News correspondent George Natanson. He said the network would protest.

The mountains that span the border of Veracruz and Oaxaca state are among Mexico's most fertile marijuana-growing center.

Peasants move to Sanchez Taboada from other marijuana-growing states to grow the illegal weed, said Vicente Gonzalez Mendoza, chief of a nearby state police barracks. The army periodically sweeps through to destroy the crop, he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Leaky building withstands dynamite

LONDON (AP) — A 21-story apartment building that leaked when it rained was blown up in a controlled explosion in London's rundown East End Sunday and proved it could withstand dynamite if not the weather.

The top 13 floors slid to the ground at a rakish angle but intact amid the rubble after the blast involving 200 pounds of explosives.

The block was coming down beautifully, like a slow motion film, until it was stopped by some hidden strength. We just couldn't believe it," the embarrassed demolition contractors, I.E. Jones Ltd., said in a statement.

Plane spies materials transfer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A night flight over Cuba by a U.S. spy plane has confirmed that Soviet and Bulgarian ships are transferring war materials, including tanks, to Nicaraguan coastal freighters, according to a newspaper report published today.

A U.S. SR-71 Blackbird reconnaissance plane eluded Soviet-made SAM missiles fired by Cuban anti-aircraft batteries in making two sweeps over the port of Mariel in less than an hour Thursday night, said The Washington Times, which attributed its report to unidentified administration sources.

Soviet supplies have been transferred at Mariel to two small Nicaraguan freighters, which then proceed to the Nicaraguan port of El Bluff and go up the Escondido River to Rama, where they are unloaded, the officials told the newspaper.

Mexican marathon rescheduled

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The third annual Mexico City International Marathon, postponed in September by deadly earthquakes, has been rescheduled for Dec. 8.

Runners from 10 countries had already arrived here for the marathon, originally scheduled for Sept. 22, when the quakes struck, the city's sports promotion department said.

Record-high temperatures expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair weather will continue in the Permian Basin for at least the next couple of days with high temperatures near record levels, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Tonight will be clear with low temperatures expected in lower 40s and southerly winds at five to 10 mph.

Tuesday will be fair with high temperatures in the mid-80s and southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph.

The highest temperature ever recorded for Sunday's date was 83 degrees set in 1948. An all-time low for today's date was 22 degrees recorded in 1936.

STATE

Clear skies dominated the Texas weather picture today as forecasters looked for at least a couple of days of mild, dry conditions.

No rain was reported across the state before dawn.

Pre-dawn temperatures dipped into the 40s across most of the state. At 4 a.m., readings had dropped into the 30s across the mountains of the Trans Pecos, while temperatures were in the lower to middle 50s over portions of South Central Texas and the coastal plains.

The forecast called for sunny days and cool nights through Tuesday. Afternoon highs were expected to reach the 60s and 70s, with a few readings hitting the 80s in portions of West and South Texas. Overnight lows in the 30s and 40s were forecast for most of the state.

NATION

Rain dotted the nation from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic and moved inland from the Pacific Coast today, while fair skies prevailed over the Plains and Mississippi Valley and Michigan had a bit of snow.

A flood watch for streams and low-lying areas was posted for the western half of Virginia, which had heavy rain during the weekend and more rain forecast.

Rain spread from the lower Great Lakes across the mid-Atlantic states and the Carolinas to central and southern Florida.

Rain was scattered over eastern portion of the Ohio Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the upper Great Lakes and from the northern Pacific Coast to the northern Rockies.

A mixture of rain and snow fell on sections of western upper Michigan.

The Plains and Mississippi Valley were fair with early morning temperatures mostly in the 30s to 40s.

Oilers gush again on Zendejas' kick

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston kicker Tony Zendejas missed an extra point and a 39-yard field goal attempt in the first half of Sunday's National Football League game against Kansas City.

But those miscues were long forgotten after Zendejas booted a 38-yarder with 14 seconds to play to rally Houston to a 23-20 victory after the Oilers blew a 20-6 lead going into the fourth quarter.

"I wanted it that way," Zendejas said. "I needed some pressure to show that I could still do it. Everything went routine on the big kick just like in practice. I just said 'I've got to make it.'"

Zendejas said he had plenty of support from teammates after his early misses.

"A lot of players came up to me afterwards (missing early kicks) and told me to forget that one and wait for the next one," Zendejas said.

And when the next time came Zendejas was ready.

"It was very satisfying," he said. "It has done a lot for my confidence."

Zendejas' confidence dipped at halftime. He missed the extra point after Houston's first touchdown and his 39-yard attempt hit the cross-bar. He said his teammates support provided the difference.

"That's the thing about us," he said. "We are very close and work together as a team and we pull for one another."

Despite the loss, Kansas City quarterback Bill Kenney said the Chiefs were playing better.

"It was a big step forward for us," Kenney said. "We came off the field during 20-6, we told the defense we were going to score. We had the desire and enthusiasm we haven't had in the last few weeks. They just beat us."

Kansas City Coach John Mackovic said "The second half we played a lot better and got some points. The Oilers just made a few big plays at the end to win. This is a particularly hard loss when you battle back to tie the game."

The Oilers made a 57-yard drive in the final two minutes.

Quarterback Warren Moon hit tight end Jamie Williams with a key third-down pass and a holding penalty against Kansas City's Albert Lewis kept the drive alive.

Moon then hit wide receiver Tim Smith with a 24-yard pass to set up Zendejas' winning kick.

Houston, 4-5, won its third straight game for the first time since closing out the 1980 season with three consecutive wins. The Chiefs, 3-6, extended their losing string to five.

The Oilers took a 6-3 halftime lead on Moon's 17-yard pass to Drew Hill and built it into a 20-6 bulge on Moon's 3-yard touchdown pass to Chris Dressel and a 3-yard scoring run by Butch Woolfolk.

But Bill Kenney rallied the Chiefs to a 20-20 deadlock with 4:34 to play on touchdown passes of six yards to Herman Heard with 13:40 to play and 18 yards to Stephane Paige with 4:34 to go.

Kansas City's Nick Lowery kicked two field goals, including a 35-yarder in the second quarter and a 39-yarder in the third quarter.

The game appeared headed for a scoreless tie at the half until Moon flipped a third-down pass to Hill in the end zone for with 3:07 to go in the second quarter.

The Chiefs, aided by a 31-yard run by Heard, got on the scoreboard with a 35-yard field goal by Lowery with 29 seconds left in the first half.

Houston missed two first half scoring chances when Kansas City stopped the Oilers on fourth down at the Chiefs' 1 in the first quarter and Tony Zendejas missed a 38-yard field goal attempt in the second period.

The Chiefs drove to Houston's 15 in the first quarter and Lowery missed a 32-yard field goal attempt.

Kansas City pulled to a 20-13 deficit on Heard's 6-yard touchdown catch that followed a 27-yard pass interference penalty against Houston's Patrick Allen.

The Chiefs tied the game on Paige's 18-yard touchdown reception. The drive was keyed on Kenney passes of 25 yards to Heard and 17 yards to Carlos Carson. Carson's catch came on third-and-16 at Houston's 35.

Heard's 31-yard run to set up Lowery's second quarter field goal was the longest run from scrimmage by the Chiefs this season.

Woolfolk finished with 101 yards rushing on 14 carries, while Moon completed 24 of 35 passes for 255 yards. Mike Pruitt led the Chiefs with 82 yards on 18 carries and Kenney finished with 18 completions on 33 attempts for 271 yards.

Second Period
Houston—Hill 17 pass from Moon (kick failed), 11:53.
KC—Lowery 35, 14:31.

Third Period
Houston—Dressel 3 pass from Moon (Zendejas kick), 5:01.
KC—Lowery 39, 7:50.

Houston—Woolfolk 4 run (Zendejas kick), 13:15.

Fourth Period
KC—Heard 6 pass from Kenney (Lowery kick), 1:20.
KC—Paige 18 pass from Kenney (Lowery kick), 9:28.
A—41, 238.

Cards' plight no surprise to White

By PAUL LeBAR

ST. LOUIS (AP) — That the St. Louis Cardinals, considered a pre-season title contender, have come upon tough times during the 1985 National Football League season doesn't surprise Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White.

"I've seen that happen to our team," said White, who is hoping to add to St. Louis' miseries Monday night. "It's something that happens quite a bit, especially when you start finding yourself in the upper echelon."

The Cards, 3-5 following three straight defeats, probably will have a patched up lineup against Dallas, 6-2.

Running back Otis Anderson, who missed last week's game with a sore toe, suffered a recurrence of the injury Saturday. All-Pro wide receiver Roy Green is limping with a banged-up leg. And rookie Lance Smith may start at right offensive tackle in place of Tootie Robbins, who has a pulled hamstring.

However, White said, "None of us think the Cardinals are dead. They are a dangerous football team, and there's no doubt they will be back on top before long. We just hope we can get them while they're struggling a little."

In an effort to revive a sagging passing attack, St. Louis has brought back former quarterback coach Harry Gilmer to work with Neil Lomax. "Our timing hasn't been quite what it was last year," said Gilmer, who had been serving as a Cards' scout. "That's what I'm going to be looking at — situations to try and remedy."

Last week, during a 20-10 loss to the Houston Oilers, the Cardinals' problems also involved letdowns by the special teams that resulted in

Bulldogs, Rebels to tangle in intra-city fray Friday

By TED BATTLES

District 4-5A may have determined its playoff representatives last weekend, but some neighborhood business still remains to be determined on this final Friday of regular season play.

Midland High and playoff Midland Lee battle for Tall City bragging rights in this week's Reporter-Telegram High School Game of the Week.

For the Bulldogs, it's a chance to finish the season at 5-5 and boast of a victory over a playoff team.

For Lee, it's a game to generate momentum for the post-season challenge that lies ahead.

The way things are going this year, anything is possible. Lee had to survive a gamble for two by Odessa.

the same Odessa that had lost 34-16 to Big Spring the week before.

Midland suffered a 27-10 loss to state ranked Odessa Permian, but, except for a muffed opportunity late in the first half, with the score 14-7 Permian, might have made things even more uncomfortable for the district champions.

Permian faces Odessa High in another intra-city scrap, this one the farewell of OHS Coach Jerry Millsaps.

Abilene, which opened district so promisingly with a 7-7 tie against Permian, ends what has turned into a disastrous season against Abilene Cooper, a team that has known nothing but disaster all season.

And then there is Big Spring-San Angelo, and who knows what might happen in that one.

The Bobcats are coming off a disappointment, that 28-7 loss to Permian, a defeat that killed any post-season hopes the Concho Cats may have harbored.

And the amazing Steers are coming off their second straight district win, a 15-13 win over Abilene. And who is to say Quinn Eudy's bunch won't make it three in a row.

In District 2-4A, Sweetwater, 5-0, seems to have things wrapped up with two weeks to go. The race for second hangs in the balance with Lake View, Monahans, Andrews and Pecos all in the running.

Crane, tied for first in 7-3A, is play-off bound as it winds up against Colorado City.

McCamey clinched the 8-2A title by beating Eldorado 16-0 and will finish the regular season at Stanton Friday. The Buffs are coming off a heart-wrenching loss to Wall, 15-10, when the Hawks scored in the fading minutes on an 86-yard bomb.

Reagan County apparently nailed down the other 8-2A playoff berth with its win over Greenwood Friday.

In 6-A, Iraan is home free and Rankin will try to earn the other playoff spot against Wink in its regular season final.

Bengals 23, Bills 17
Boomer Esiason threw for two touchdowns and fullback Larry Kinnebrew rumbled for another as Cincinnati erased a 10-point deficit and beat Buffalo.

Esiason, the American Football Conference's highest-rated passer, threw a 68-yard scoring bomb to rookie Eddie Brown and a 22-yard touchdown pass to tight end M.L. Harris as the Bengals improved their record to 4-5.

Redskins 44, Falcons 10
Keith Griffin ran for 164 yards and two touchdowns, one a 66-yarder, and George Rogers had 124 yards rushing and one TD as Washington scored on its first five possessions in crushing Atlanta.

A fake punt gamble at its 29 by Atlanta in the second quarter helped launch the rout as the Redskins stretched a 10-3 lead to 17-3, then added two scores before intermission for a 31-3 advantage at halftime.

It was the fourth victory in the last five games for Washington, 5-4, and the 17th loss in 19 games for the 1-8 Falcons.

explosion for 23 points in the second quarter and beat the Raiders.

Rams 28, Saints 10
Dieter Brock passed for 256 yards and two touchdowns as the Rams bounced back from their first loss of the season to beat the Saints.

The Los Angeles defense sacked New Orleans quarterback Dave Wilson nine times, with Gary Jeter, Dennis Harrison and Shawn Miller each logging two.

The Rams' Eric Dickerson gained 108 yards on 23 carries, just the second time he's been over 100 yards this season.

49ers 24, Eagles 13
Matt Cavanaugh, filling in for injured quarterback Joe Montana, threw a touchdown pass to rookie Jerry Rice and made maximum use of fullback Roger Craig on three TD drives to help the 49ers beat the Eagles.

Montana sat out the game because of a strained sternum but is expected back next week. Cavanaugh also took his place against Philadelphia last season and guided the team to victory.

Chargers 30, Broncos 10
Dan Fouts fired two touchdown passes to Wes Chandler, and Gary Anderson rushed for another score as San Diego routed Denver.

Anderson finished the day with 116 yards on 22 carries, becoming the first pro player to rush for 100 yards in the same year in two different leagues.

Baylor-Arkansas hog attention in SWC showdown

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas A&M, Arkansas and Texas stayed alive while the Southwest Conference-leading Baylor Bears hibernated for a week.

All eyes will be on Little Rock Saturday as the Arkansas Razorbacks try to derail the Bears' Cotton Bowl express.

Arkansas rolled over Rice 30-15, Texas dropped Texas Tech 34-21 and Texas A&M upset Southern Methodist 19-17 Saturday. All three winners have just one SWC loss and are still very much alive in the league race.

In the other SWC game, Houston, the defending Cotton Bowl representative, won its first SWC game, downing Texas Christian 26-21.

Baylor, leading the SWC with a 5-0 record, sat back and watched the scramble for survival in the SWC.

The Bears and the Razorbacks will play at 2:30 p.m. Saturday before a national television audience. Baylor has games against Rice and Texas remaining after Arkansas takes its shot.

In other games, TCU is at Texas, Rice is at SMU, and Texas is Houston. Texas A&M has the week off.

The Aggies had to come from behind twice to beat SMU, snapping a five-game losing streak against the Mustangs. Eric Franklin got a second chance after it appeared he would be the game's goat with a missed extra point.

"I thought I had cost us the game," said Franklin. "It was redemption."

Trailing 17-16, the Aggies moved to within range for Franklin's 48-yard attempt that just cleared the crossbar with less than two minutes to play for the victory.

"It was a very big win for us," said Aggie Coach Jackie Sherrill. "We beat a great team out there."

Scouts from the Sun, Bluebonnet, Liberty, Holiday, Independence and Cotton bowls were on hand.

The Aggies have never been to a bowl under Sherrill.

However, Ted Nance, director of the Bluebonnet Bowl, said, "The Aggies are really looking good. They have a very attractive team this year and really draw a lot of fans where they go. We're taking a hard look at them."

A&M's lone conference loss has been to Baylor. The Aggies host Arkansas in two weeks.

Quarterback Bret Stafford led Texas against the snakebit Red Raiders. He passed and ran for 235 yards.

Stafford's tipped 69-yard touchdown pass to Everett Gay proved to be Texas Tech's undoing as the Red Raiders sank to an 0-5 SWC record.

Wayne Walker's 80-yard touchdown run on a reverse was Tech's big scoring play.

"A conference win means that we're staying in the chase for the championship," said Texas Coach Fred Akers. "I do think this bunch is putting things together and getting better as we go along."

Arkansas jumped to a quick lead over Rice and put away the improving Owls early as Mark Calcagni made his first start of the year for the Razorbacks.

Calcagni, who was playing for the injured Greg Thomas, rushed for 160 yards on 22 carries.

"I'm the worst runner of any of our quarterbacks but you have to take what they give you," he said.

"They stopped our halfbacks and gave us the quarterback," said Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield.

Houston Coach Bill Yeoman called the Cougars' victory over TCU "exceptionally hairy. I couldn't help but think what might happen."

TCU rallied from a 19-point deficit and had a chance to win until Houston tackle T.J. Turner forced a fumble in the final three minutes.

"It was just another frustrating loss for a bunch of good young football players," said TCU Coach Jim Wacker.

College Quotes....

Ohio State defensive back Terry White, describing an emotional pregame speech by injured tailback Keith Byars before the eighth-ranked Buckeyes intercepted four passes by Iowa's Chuck Long and beat the No. 1 Hawkeyes 22-13. "He said he was tired of hearing things about our defense. When he left the room, the defense took it upon themselves to win the football game."

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry: "This was a disheartening loss. I feel sad for my football team. They've come so far, and still we're just tied for the Big Ten (Conference) lead. They are acting like they are in the grave. They've never been No. 1 and undefeated and then lost, and they don't know how to act."

Florida Coach Galen Hall, a 14-10 winner over No. 6 Auburn, on whether his second-ranked Gators should be No. 1 following Iowa's loss to Ohio State: "Usually when No. 1 loses and you're No. 2, you move up. It would be really nice, but I'd rather it come around Jan. 2. I'm very happy to be there ... if we are there."

Boston College Coach Jack Bicknell, whose 3-

7 team blew a 12-3 lead and lost to third-ranked Penn State 16-12: "This would have been a great win. This would not have been, in my humble opinion, a great upset."

Illinois Coach Mike White, whose son, Chris, had a 37-yard field goal attempt tipped as time ran out, forcing the Illini to settle for a 3-3 tie with fourth-ranked Michigan: "I've never felt worse after a football game. I'm just sick."

Air Force Coach Fisher DeBerry, whose seventh-ranked Falcons defeated San Diego State 31-10: "The defense was just amazing. They gave up some yards, but they kept them out of the end zone. To me, that's the classification of a great team. They were averaging over 30 points a game and our defense only gave them 10 points. I think that's great."

Coach Barry Switzer following ninth-ranked Oklahoma's 48-6 rout of Kansas: "I don't know why I was worried, but I was."

Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden, after the 10th-ranked Seminoles' 35-27 loss to No. 11 Miami as Vinny Testaverde passed for 399 yards and four touchdowns: "Bernie Kosar never hurt us like this guy."

Oklahoma State Coach Pat Jones, on Thurman Thomas' 201 rushing yards in the 12th-ranked Cowboys' 14-11 victory over Colorado at Boulder: "Thurman complained about the altitude, but he really exerted himself."

Quarterback Mark Calcagni, who rushed for 160 yards and a touchdown in his first collegiate start and led No. 14 Arkansas over Rice 30-15: "I'm the worst runner of any of our quarterbacks. You've got to take what they give you, and they let our quarterback run."

Coach Ray Perkins, whose Alabama team raised its record to 6-2 and assured itself of a winning season, in the wake of its first losing campaign in more than a quarter-century, by trouncing Mississippi State 44-28: "I told our players it takes quite a bit to make me smile, but I am going home and laugh."

Brown recommends revolution

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — To take pressure off college basketball coaches as well as the temptation to break NCAA rules, the recruiting system must be "revolutionized," include all Division I teams in the playoffs and pay players $100 a month, Louisiana State University Coach Dale Brown said Sunday.

Those suggestions are just two of several put on the table by Brown in a letter to "1,200 coaches, athletic directors, all NCAA officers and others in Division I," the coach said at a Sunday news conference.

He disclosed the letter sent Oct. 21 at a news conference in which he announced that Alfredo "Tito" Horford of the Dominican Republic was kicked off the team.

Horford, a 7-foot sensation and target of a tug-of-war between the University of Houston and LSU, missed practice Friday and missed an intra-squad game Saturday.

Brown said Horford had been tampered with directly by other universities while enrolled at LSU and added that he was turning over all of his information to the NCAA and the Southeastern Conference.

The coach refused to name any universities allegedly involved.

Team captain Nikita Wilson said he felt Horford wanted to leave LSU because he was "confused."

In the letter, Brown said:

"There are many pressures on coaches to get their teams into NCAA tournament play plus to make money for their programs. To help alleviate these pressures, all 282 Division I basketball teams should be involved in the NCAA playoffs. All the money from the first-round games should be shared equally with all the teams.

"After one round, the field will now be cut down to 141 teams and all the money from the second-round games should be directed towards a fund to expand the athletic scholarship. The remaining portion of the tournament can now be run like the present format."

Other changes suggested by Brown include:

— Only one off-campus personal contact with the athlete and his parents instead of the present six visits.

"It would appear to be most difficult for anyone in just one visit to have the audacity to make an illegal offer during this meeting due to the fact that all parties are just getting acquainted."

'Big East' football league still far from reality

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE

NEW YORK — The Northeast, where intercollegiate football began and first flourished, remains the only region in the nation without a major football league. Advocates of such a conference, a concept at least three decades old, contend that the pattern of the current season demonstrates the need for a league, but there is no visible movement now in organizing one.

Such a league would embrace the East's nine major college football teams playing at the Division I-A level. These are Army, Boston College, Navy, Penn State, Pittsburgh, Rutgers, Syracuse, Temple and West Virginia.

Their status is that of independents, yet they are dependent upon one another in constructing sensible, attractive schedules. There are 26 games scheduled this season matching these nine teams, and those who favor a league say it would give such games more meaning.

And there would be attractive financial benefits in the opinion of several athletic directors. Eight of the nine directors gave favorable opinions about a league concept, although several had reservations of one kind or another.

The foremost obstacles are the position of Penn State, the Northeast's foremost football institution, and, ironically, the success of the Big East, a nonfootball conference flourishing because of its basketball program.

The sticking point is that Penn

State is not a member of the Big East and has never been invited to join because of its geographic isolation from major markets. This remains a sore point at University Park, Pa., where there is envy of the Big East's basketball success.

Football is a different matter, however. With a 80,000-seat stadium always sold out, the Nittany Lions can do without the benefits of a football league.

Jim Tarman, the athletic director, stated his university's position recently when he said, "Penn State has no interest at this time in being part of an Eastern football conference."

"Our position for the past five years is that we stand ready to discuss the possibility of an Eastern all-sports conference to include football."

He might have added basketball, the only other major revenue sport in intercollegiate athletics.

Penn State would have dominated an Eastern League in recent seasons; indeed, the Nittany Lions' league record for the last six years, including the current one, would be 25-1, with two conference championships, in 1981 and 1982, and another one likely for this season.

A year ago the Nittany Lions had an off-season, a 6-5 record and no bowl game for the first time since the 1970 season. This fall they are dominant once again with a 7-0 record.

Therefore, expectations are dim for a November crescendo among these candidates for a league. The Nittany Lions are high in the polls.

an attractive team for television and a prime candidate for a major bowl invitation; the others are left with crumbs.

There is no Doug Flutie to titillate this autumn, and except for Army-Navy and Penn State-Pitt, old-rivalry games that generate their own enthusiasm, the East lacks for anticipation or suspense in the remainder of the season.

But, the argument goes, if there were an Eastern League — a Big Nine or even a Big Seven that excluded Army and Navy — it would be quite different. Battles for second place or third and speculation about bowl bids would sustain interest from Morgantown to Boston.

"It would be great for Eastern football," said Boston College's athletic director, Bill Flynn. "I have always believed in this and extended my efforts to bring it about, but to no avail."

Four years ago the formation of an all-sports Eastern conference was close to reality. But Boston College, Pittsburgh and Syracuse balked at the requirement of giving up their affiliation in the newly formed Big East, which subsequently achieved enormous status and success in basketball.

But the dream continues.

A league would certainly fit Rutgers' considerable ambitions in football, according to Fred Gruninger, its athletic director. "The greatest long-term advantage would be dollars," he said, with regard to a television package and bowl games. In detailing his university's position, Edward Bozick of Pitt hit upon the sticking point. "Obviously there cannot be a football league without Penn State," he said.

Pitt is adamant about remaining in the Big East, a membership that has made its once-dormant basketball program thrive.

The Big East has nine members, but only three — Boston College, Pittsburgh and Syracuse — field Division I-A football teams. The others are Connecticut, Georgetown, Providence, St. John's, Seton Hall and Villanova.

Penn State, Rutgers, Temple and West Virginia belong to the three-year-old Atlantic 10 Conference in nine sports, one of them being basketball, but the conference is well behind the Big East in stature.

Ryding captures benefit Horse Trials

Jeffrey Ryding of New Mexico took first place in the Training Division of the third annual Benefit Horse Trials.

The two-day competition was presented by the West Texas Dressage and Combined Training Association and Midland Cerebral Palsy Center Parents Association.

Thirty riders from the Southwest performed in the dressage, stadium jumping and cross-country phases of the competition.

Following Ryding in the Training Division were Susie Braun, Colorado, in second, Marilyn Isaacs, Las Cruces, N.M., third, and Hillary Strumm, Midland, fourth.

Midland's Annie Koonce took first place in the Novice Division. This was her first trials.

Mike Huber, Norman, Okla., took second with Isaacs third and Braun fourth.

Proceeds from the sponsors and concessions went to the WTCTA and MCPPCA.

Walter Rule of Texas A&I kicked two of his five field goals in the final 140 of the game to keep the Javelinas undefeated in Lone Star Conference football action.

Texas A&I edged East Texas State 22-19 Saturday night in Commerce to take over sole possession of first place with a 2-0 mark.

In other LSC games Saturday, Angelo State knocked off Abilene Christian 35-18 in Abilene and Eastern New Mexico defeated Howard Payne 24-18 in Portales.

Next Saturday Texas A&I returns home to play Howard Payne. Abilene Christian is at home against Eastern New Mexico, and Angelo State entertains East Texas State.

Rule, a transfer from Cisco Junior College, tied an NCAA Division II national record with his five field goals of 32, 30, 27, 44 and 37 yards.

His 44-yarder with 140 to play tied the score 19-19, then with two seconds to play he kicked one from 37 yards out to win the game.

An interception by A&I defensive back Anthony Woods with 38 seconds left set up Rule's winning field goal.

East Texas State had taken a 19-16 lead with 4:01 to play on a 22-yard pass from Mike Trigg to Mark Eno. The Lions led in total offense, 319-292, but that was their only lead of the game.

Angelo State quarterback Ned Cox passed for 195 yards and two touchdowns and ran for 105 yards to lead the Rams over Abilene Christian.

Rufus Smith's 100-yard kickoff return in the third quarter sparked Eastern New Mexico. ENMU later added touchdowns on passes of 64 and 49 yards from Herman Evans to Derrick Harden.

NBA free agency considered ridiculous

Associated Press

Larry Fleisher, general counsel of the National Basketball Association Players Association, already knows what the focus of negotiations will be when the current collective bargaining agreement between the union and the league expires in 1987.

"Free agency in the NBA now is ridiculous," said Fleisher, who helped formulate the salary-cap system now in force in the league. "We had 70 free agents this year and had only two real signings. Joe Barry Carroll and Jerry Sichting, during the offseason."

By "real signings," Fleisher means that both a player's original team and other teams want a player enough to bid for his services.

Although Carroll stayed with Golden State, the Milwaukee Bucks had wanted him badly enough to sign him to a big money offer sheet that was worth far more than the Warriors had offered. But the Warriors matched Milwaukee's contract offer because they didn't want to lose him with no compensation.

He said the apparent lack of interest in players such as Utah's Darrell Griffith, San Antonio's Johnny Moore and New Jersey's Mike Gminski tells him that the free-agent system isn't working — and he says he knows why.

MONSTERS—

So, lo and behold, a wide open Perry took McMahon's soft pass for a gimme touchdown. Cumbe can't be blamed if he decides to claim a previous engagement next time the Bears are scheduled.

Still, Perry just doesn't seem legal. For one thing, he wears No. 72 and a rule was passed several years ago that required backs and ends to wear numbers below 50 or over 79.

Of course, you can alert the officials that a lineman is going to line up in a receiving position, which the Bears obviously did Sunday. It still doesn't seem right that a 300-pounder should catch a pass, even if he's wearing a 40.

As far as Cumbe is concerned that should include carrying the ball or running interference for Payton out of the backfield. Payton's enough of a handful without that kind of help.

Legal or not, the Refrigerator is the most refreshing thing in sports since the Mark Fydrich interlude in baseball, although Cumbe and his Packer teammates might take exception.

Crossing guard Abigail Cruz makes sure all the children are getting across the street before allowing traffic at Midland Drive and Neely Avenue to travel through the intersection.

Guarded Crossings

Through rain and hail and snow of the winter and steaming rays of the spring, they are always there.

These symbols of security and safety, school crossing guards, serve an important link between the schools, students and police department. Every morning and evening of each school day, these citizens clad in bright orange jackets guarantee parents that their children will get to and from school safely.

Sometimes, the scene resembles that of a mother duck and her ducklings — the guard steps out into the middle of the street, makes sure it is safe for the young ones and then leads them across to the other side.

It's a job that few crossing guards want to relinquish. They cite the positive aspects of letting them be around children without having to take a full-time job and the pleasant environment of talking with the youngsters.

There's also the bad points — getting up before the sun rises during the winter and standing outside in the snow and rain and sometimes dodging impatient motorists who refuse to stop.

For two guards, the job allows them to take their pre-school children with them to the site and avoid paying for a babysitter, as they would have to do with a full-time job. For another, the job gives him something to do with his time after taking an early retirement.

Abigail Cruz, who works at the intersection of Midland Drive and Neely Avenue, has a 9-year-old son and a 3-year-old daughter. "It was convenient. I can take my daughter with me. And if you like kids, it's fun."

Retired Texan's back yard blooms with fruits of his recent passion

By BILL DAVIS

FREERPORT (AP) — Viewed from the neat, quiet, tree-lined street, Russell Stingily's home looks unassuming. Maybe the lawn looks a little greener than most, and the edging along the sidewalk is cut a bit sharper, but still it looks ordinary.

The flower bed in front, planted with zinnias, petiwinkles, desert sage and roses certainly is bigger and lusier than those of the other houses on the block. The place seems to blend into the neighborhood, though.

But when Stingily swings open the gate to the back yard, you enter another world.

This is how God might have made the Garden of Eden if he had taken more than six days to do it.

Stingily has been working on his garden almost full time since he retired from Southwestern Bell a decade ago.

"Yeah, it's getting to where it's starting to look OK," he says modestly.

For Stingily, gardening was never a lifelong passion. Oh sure, he's had a vegetable garden on-and-off since he and his wife married in 1947. But it wasn't until eight or nine years ago, after a friend persuaded him to join the Men's Garden Club of Greater Brazosport, that he started putting time in it.

"One thing led to another before I knew it," Stingily says. "I really didn't plan for any of this." Now in the summer months he estimates it takes almost four hours a day to care for his plants.

A garage converted into a greenhouse stands out back; 55-gallon drums, to catch rainwater for watering the more delicate plants, rest against one side. The greenhouse is where Stingily takes his plants in the winter. But for now, most are outside catching the early morning sunlight. A 10-foot-tall double hibiscus in a plastic bucket, hummingbirds flitting among its delicate red flowers, fights for daylight with the billowing carnation of India plant next to it.

Russell Stingily, 68, of Freeport, stands beside one of the crotons that have helped him win 124 blue ribbons at flower shows.

"That thing grows real fast," Stingily says of the hibiscus. "I'm going to have to prune it back a little bit to get it into the greenhouse when the cold weather comes."

The hibiscus, about the size of a young oak sapling, looks like it will need more than a little pruning to fit through the greenhouse door.

Rows of plumeria, imported from Hawaii and in full bloom, give off a tropical scent. Their odor mingles with the sweet, almost cloying perfume of the rosebushes, making the senses reel.

"Can you smell this?" Stingily asks, offering a plumeria flower to a visitor. "I think they smell kind of light, but then maybe my nose is just used to it." Evidently, because the flower smells rich and full-bodied.

"The Hawaiians sew these flowers together to make leis," Stingily says of the plumeria's flowers.

Then he leads the way through the outdoor arbor covered with shade netting to protect the more delicate plants. Underneath the shade, it's cool and moist, a good 10 degrees cooler than in the sun.

Ferns, walking Irish, spider plants, asparagus ferns, fireballs and Chinese evergreens hang from the rafters. Poinsettias, jacobins, bougainvilleas, spathiphyllums — the varieties boggle the mind — all in five-gallon plastic buckets, are set on the ground or on waist-high tables.

Iola Mae Hines

Iola Mae Hines, 78, of Midland, died Sunday following a lengthy illness.

Services were to be at 3 p.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Neil Baker and Frank Davis, both of the Westcliff Kingdom Hall of Jehovah Witnesses, officiating. Burial was to be at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Hines was born Sept. 6, 1907, in Brady. She married Ervin Jasper Hector of Abilene. She moved to Midland in 1947 where she married Marion Overton Hines. She was a retired employee from Woolworth, a homemaker and a Jehovah Witness pioneer.

Survivors include her husband; four sons, Johnny Hector, Kenneth Hector, Harvey Hector and David Hector; two daughters, Juanita Capell and Cathy Murchison; two sisters, Joyce Burrow and Sally Smith; 32 grandchildren; and 33 great-grandchildren.

Palbearers were to be her grandsons, Steve Hector, Jimmy Hector, Mark Hector, Johnny Hector, John L. Soper and Larry McCurry.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland.

Will Army pay Salvadoran's hospital bills?

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Medical bills for treating the colleague of a former Salvadoran presidential candidate who was hurt when a bomb he was building exploded in his face may stay in the lap of the U.S. Army.

The bill is for the $1,610-a-day treatment Fernando Sagrera received during two months he spent at the Institute for Surgical Research at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, the San Antonio Light reported Sunday.

According to the newspaper, it is not clear who allowed him into the country and why his medical bill remains unpaid after 16 months.

Sagrera, a close colleague of Roberto D'Aubisson, the former right-wing Salvadoran presidential candidate, came to the burn center in May 1984 to receive treatment for severe burns, officials said.

The State Department, responsible for screening visa requests, refuses to say why Sagrera was allowed into a U.S. Army medical facility.

"We'll have to give you an official, 'no comment,'" State Department spokesman Gregory Lagana said.

But a former top Salvadoran official, who asked not to be identified, said the U.S. government agreed not to pursue payment of the bill in exchange for information on death squads operating in El Salvador, the Light reported.

The official said Sagrera was injured when a bomb he was constructing blew up in his face, the Light reported. He said Sagrera's burns came from sulfuric acid he had been using to build a time-delay fuse.

State Department officials refused to comment on how Sagrera was hurt.

An embassy official said he thought Sagrera was allowed into the United States after D'Aubisson had made a special plea. D'Aubisson, former leader of the National Republican Alliance party, has denied any connection to right-wing death squads in El Salvador.

"From what we know, D'Aubisson interceded for Sagrera in asking that he be permitted into the burn center," said Jim Williams, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in San Salvador.

Sagrera came to Brooke with burns on 41 percent of his body, medical center spokesman Ray Dery said. But Dery would not say what parts of the victim's body were burned or what had caused the injury.

Sagrera received skin grafts and other treatment between May 13 and July 1, Dery said. He returned to El Salvador after he had been successfully treated, but before he paid, the spokesman said.

U.S. officials claim to have no knowledge of any arrangements to have the government pay for the $1,610-per-day treatment, the Light reported.

The bill, which totals $78,910, remains uncollected more than a year after Sagrera was released, said Warren Lowder, a spokesman for the Army Accounting and Financing Center in Indianapolis, Ind., which is responsible for collecting the Army's bills.

GUARD

Patsy Painter, too, cited the aspect of taking her pre-school youngsters with her as a drawing card. "Plus I have the summers off and I'm home when my kids are home."

She stands guard at one of the more difficult crossings — it's a four-way intersection with no lights. "My head turns a lot," Mrs. Painter said with a short laugh. "I have to watch four lanes of traffic, plus two side streets."

And although the crossing guards are given whistles, some motorists don't pay attention.

"Either they're going to stop or they're not," said Mrs. Painter. "I go out there before the kids get out (in the street). If cars don't stop, I stay there and dodge the cars. But only a few won't stop."

Ira Holder took an early retirement from the U.S. Postal Service Aug. 31 and the next week started as a crossing guard. The biggest problem, he said in agreement with Mrs. Painter, are the motorists "who have their minds somewhere else. You have to watch out for people not watching out for you."

The first male crossing guard in Midland, Holder said the police department had trouble finding a uniform for him — they were all in women's sizes.

But when it comes to bad weather, he's equipped for it. Drawing on his years as a walking postman, Holder said he's used to working in bad weather. "I'll just put on my woolies and the department gave me a fine slicker," he said.

Instead, he turns his concern with the bad weather toward how it affects the children. "They can't help but get wet. And in bad weather, the visibility is worse. In bad weather, people should drive slower than 20 mph in a school zone."

Working as a crossing guard also means they get out and see the public and sometimes friends they wouldn't normally see. Mrs. Painter said she gets to wave at neighbors she wouldn't see otherwise. And Holder sees people at whose homes he used to deliver mail.

But most of all, Holder said, he enjoys seeing the children. "I visit with the kids. I'm interested in what they're doing. I think they ought to be happy. It makes me happy."

GSU complaints give commissioner 'deja vu'

AUSTIN (AP) — The complaints over Gulf States Utilities rates are coming from the other end of the state but sound all too familiar to Public Utility Commission Chairman Peggy Rosson.

Mrs. Rosson lived in El Paso when that city had the state's highest electric bills. GSU now sends out the highest bills each month, and the Beaumont-based company wants more.

"It's deja vu for me. El Paso had the highest rates and for exactly the same reason," she said, referring to participation in a nuclear power plant construction project.

The three-member commission, including new member Jo Campbell, travels to GSU territory this week for public hearings in Beaumont on Thursday and Conroe on Friday.

The hearings will mark the first public sessions for Ms. Campbell, a former assistant attorney general who had defended past PUC decisions against utility company challenges.

"I am at least somewhat familiar with Gulf States because I defended the last commission order in court when Gulf States appealed that order," Ms. Campbell said.

She refused to comment on the current case or GSU operations in general.

"I've been very explicit in what I expect utilities to do. As long as they do that, they are not going to have any problems with me. They do have a burden of proof to meet, and I expect them to meet it before they get any rate increase," said Ms. Campbell.

GSU, which serves 275,000 customers, wants a 14 percent overall increase next year, followed by a 9.6 percent hike in 1987. The 1986 increase would add 5.5 percent to residential bills.

A PUC survey of summer electric rates this year showed GSU customers paying $105.50 for 1,000 kilowatt hours, a normal monthly household load. Central Power & Light charged $68.71. Houston Lighting & Power charged $92.50 and Texas Utilities Electric Co. charged $75.09.

Company spokesman David White said GSU rates are high because of construction costs, including the River Bend nuclear plant in Louisiana.

Gov. Mark White has a close eye on how the PUC handles the GSU case.

"Gulf States Utilities has lost the confidence of its residential, industrial and commercial customers," he said when he appointed Ms. Campbell Thursday.

Mrs. Rosson said the commission has fielded "thousands" of letters from upset GSU customers. She said El Paso residents never drew much attention when their rates were the highest.

"Nobody ever pays any attention to El Paso because they think we're in New Mexico. It's kind of out of sight, out of mind. But the Golden Triangle (in Southeast Texas) isn't out of sight. The people there are very vocal," she said.

House damaged by heater fire

From Staff Reports

A house at 201 S. Tyler was damaged Sunday by a fire started by a kerosene heater in a bathroom, according to Fire Department reports.

There was heavy damage to the bathroom and moderate smoke and heat damage throughout the house, which is occupied by Estella Coffield and owned by Enis Cole, 703 S. Clay. The fire, which was reported at 6:21 p.m., was extinguished with about 150 gallons of water, reports said.

In other reports from law-enforcement agencies, a Midland man reported the loss of a $500 ring and other items worth about $1,500 in a burglary which occurred sometime between Saturday and Sunday.

George A. Gonzales, 4315 Neely, told police most of the missing items were jewelry, but two $110 money orders were also taken from his apartment.

John comes home late after a rough day. His boss dumped on him "unfairly" because traffic congestion made John late for work.

John's wife, Mary, has been pacing the floor. Dinner is dried out because John is late. Mary, who for the last half-hour has been building up a head of steam, flies at him as soon as his key turns in the lock.

"You never call when you're going to be late. I spend all day in the kitchen and you don't care. What I do isn't that important. If you loved me you'd call!" she screams at him.

John yells back, "What's the difference, you're a lousy cook anyway! How can it take you all day to cook dinner?"

Just then, little Mary comes in from playing and both parents turn on her. "I told you to clean up your room before you went out to play. You never listen to me. You're a real slob and nobody likes a slob. No dinner for you. Go to your room!" Little Mary goes to her room and kicks the cat.

John, Mary and little Mary aren't real people, but that scenario is played out in one form or another in many families that lack the skills to deal constructively with anger.

"Displaced anger often follows a pecking order," says therapist Lynne Salkowski, a faculty member at the Sheppard and Enoch Pratt Education Center in Baltimore, where she teaches a workshop on handling anger constructively. "The man gets mad at his boss and later blows up at his wife, who then takes it out on her daughter, who kicks the cat. All the way down the line. It's less threatening to displace the anger rather than to confront the real problem or to face your real anger."

BOTH MEN AND WOMEN have problems feeling anger, according to Salkowski. Women, she says, have learned that it's more acceptable to displace their anger. They are told it's not ladylike to be angry aren't even aware they are angry because it's so threatening for them to feel the emotion.

Men, as well, have been taught rules about anger.

"They are afraid if they acknowledge the original source of their anger they might kill the source. It's important to differentiate between angry feelings and angry behavior. Angry feelings are normal, but getting angry is too often associated with an action — with abuse, yelling and screaming, with hurting people, so people think that feeling anger is wrong."

"There's nothing wrong with beating on a pillow, but then I must ask myself, 'What am I believing about this? It's irrational if I know that my belief is laced with shoulds — I should do this, I should be treated better. There's a difference between being irritated, annoyed and being filled with rage. A lot of time we argue for the right to rage. We say, 'I can't stand it. I can't stand his being late.' That's ridiculous. I can stand it. I am standing it. To say, 'I can't stand it' is really saying, 'It shouldn't be.'"

Although feeling anger is normal, the underlying reasons why a person gets angry may be irrational. Events and other people may contribute to how we feel, but outside events and individuals aren't responsible for our good or bad feelings. We are responsible. If we "awfulize" or exaggerate what's upsetting us, if we have set up unrealistic demands filled with "shoulds" and "oughts," then our anger is apt to get out of control and we'll never move past the anger to problem-solving.

THE LEVEL OF ANGER is related to the rules people incorporate about what they think is making them angry — the "shoulds and shouldn'ts," Salkowski says. "They are saying, 'I shouldn't have to.' It's not fair or 'There should be someone in my life to take care of me.' Often, those philosophies say, 'I should be perfect, that people should be the way I want them to be. I should get what I want when I want it.' When John man dumps on Mary, he needs to identify what triggered the feeling. Is he really mad at his boss because he thinks his boss is unfair? What's fair to him may not be fair to another."

Another warning sign of problem anger are the "awfuls," which over-exaggerate a situation, blow it out of proportion, look at it from the standpoint of "My God, it's terrible, awful. I can't stand it."

She offers this example: You want to take something back to a store. You look for the receipt but can't find it. You pull out drawers and slam them shut, rifle through stacks of papers, all the while getting more agitated. "Where is it? I know I had

it. Why can't I find it?" Finally, you are yelling to yourself, "My God, I'm so stupid. I'm such an incompetent person." What you've done is define the situation appropriately. You feel powerless because you've lost a receipt and you go from the specific to a cosmic statement about who and what you are.

NOT EVERYONE who gets angry yells and screams. Some people, furious but unable to express it openly because they've incorporated so many rules about what a bad thing anger is, internalize it and get physically ill.

"They have so much discomfort surrounding their anger that they disguise it and get sick. Young children and older people often disguise their anger. A child is angry with his teacher, so he gets a tummy ache. Older people may turn to drinking to anesthetize their anger, or to food to stuff their anger back inside of them, or get a migraine or backaches."

Salkowski helps workshop participants to think of anger as a catalyst to get them in touch with problems that need to be solved, to manage their anger in such a way that helps them solve their problems. She thinks of rules as tapes programmed early on and which can be reprogrammed.

"How many turn on the TV or radio just to hear the noise. Rules run on and on, nonstop — a lot like a TV. Not until I go and turn up the volume do I listen. Not until I pay attention to the self-talk in my head do I find out what I believe."

Headache pain most frequent, but back pain most troublesome

NEW YORK (AP) — When it comes to pain, Americans say headaches are the most frequent offenders, but backaches are the most troublesome for many, according to a poll released today.

The nationwide telephone poll of 1,254 adults by Louis Harris & Associates found that headaches strike 73 percent of Americans each year. Young people were more likely to complain about headaches than older people.

Among people who suffer several types of pain, backaches were cited as most troublesome by 48 percent, far higher than those who said headaches or other types of pain were the most troublesome.

The poll found that severe pain limits work or routine activities about 6 percent of the time. The report also said that 550 million work days are lost to pain each year, but the question that result was based on did not actually ask whether respondents had missed a day of work.

Instead, respondents were asked how many days "you couldn't work or engage in routine activities" because of pain. With such a question, it is impossible to tell if the respondent actually missed a day of work or was referring to some other routine activities.

"We're not asking that directly, we're inferring it," said Nancy Curran, research director for the Harris polls, when asked how the figure on work days lost was reached. "We feel comfortable with that interpretation."

Most Americans complain about three or four different types of pain each year, the poll found. More than half the respondents said they suffered backaches, muscle pains or joint pains during the past year. Forty-six percent said they suffered stomach pains.

Alcoholism is disease, not disgrace

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: As one who was rescued by Alcoholics Anonymous, I have long appreciated your continuing public support of AA. However, I was deeply disturbed to read the letter in your column from "Had My Say," who was sick and tired of hearing that alcoholism is an "illness," and went on to call it a vice, a weakness and a lack of self-control.

While I respect your policy of allowing people of divergent opinions to have their say in your column, I think you owe it to your readers to publish a responsible response.

The American Medical Association does classify alcoholism as a disease. There is documented research showing that alcoholics have a different physiological makeup than non-alcoholics; their enzymes, genes, hormones and brain chemistry work together to create their abnormal reaction to alcohol. And yes, it is a hereditary, genetic disease.

The alcoholic is never "cured," but by abstaining from alcohol one day at a time, he can escape the hell of compulsive drinking.

Although I had no choice of physiological makeup, today I do have a choice to stay sober a day at a time — or take one drink and spiral back into illness.

I know that I will never be able to drink "normally" again. Knowing that alcoholism IS an illness has inspired me to seek the help I need to stay sober. — HAD MY SAY, TOO

DEAR HAD: As a recovering alcoholic, you are well aware that the alcoholic goes through a period of denial. He tells himself, "I am a social drinker... I can take it or leave it alone." When he finally reaches the point where he is taking more than he is leaving alone, and the taking becomes costly in terms of friends, family and job, then he must face the truth: He can't drink at all. Ever. Alcoholism is a disease — not a disgrace.

Readers, if you really don't know whether or not you have a problem with alcohol, I offer you this test:

1. Have you ever decided to stop drinking for a week or so, but only lasted for a couple of days? Yes ( ) No ( )
2. Do you wish people would stop nagging you about your drinking? Yes ( ) No ( )
3. Have you ever switched from one kind of drink to another in the hope that this would keep you from getting drunk? Yes ( ) No ( )

4. Have you had a drink in the morning during the past year? Yes ( ) No ( )

5. Do you envy people who can drink without getting into trouble? Yes ( ) No ( )

6. Have you had problems connected with drinking during the past year? Yes ( ) No ( )

7. Has your drinking caused trouble at home? Yes ( ) No ( )

8. Do you ever try to get "extra" drinks at a party because you did not get enough to drink? Yes ( ) No ( )

9. Do you tell yourself you can stop drinking anytime you want to, even though you keep getting drunk when you don't mean to? Yes ( ) No ( )

10. Have you missed days at work because of drinking? Yes ( ) No ( )

11. Do you have "blackouts"? Yes ( ) No ( )

12. Have you ever felt that your life would be better if you did not drink? Yes ( ) No ( )

If you answered "yes" to four or more of these questions, you are in deep trouble.

Alcoholics Anonymous is a fellowship of men and women who share their experience, strength and hope with one another so that they may solve a common problem and help others to recover from alcoholism.

The only requirement for membership is a desire to stop drinking. There are no dues or fees for membership. It is self-supporting through voluntary contributions.

Look for AA in your phone book, or write to Box 459, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017, for information.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

"The Weight Loss Professionals"

Serving the Permian Basin Since 1977

I kept gaining and losing the same 20 pounds. Then I said, this time it's going to be different.

I tried every pill, every gimmick to lose weight. Only to feel miserable when I gained it all back. Finally I said no, never again — this time I'm going to Diet Center. I lost the weight, without hunger. And I'm keeping it off.

My only regret? Not going sooner!

Oxygen key to aging

Associated Press

Scientists are learning that physically fit oldsters can literally outrun the aging process.

The key is maximal oxygen consumption — VO-2 max.

It is the body's ability to utilize oxygen, also called aerobic capacity, and according to an article in the September issue of Science Digest many fit 60-year-olds have higher VO-2 max levels than do sedentary 20-year-olds.

"We have learned that aging is a myth," said cardiologist and runner George Sheehan, 66, who at 61 ran a marathon in just over three hours.

VO-2 max — the V stands for volume, the O-2 for oxygen — measures the body's maximum capacity to oxidize glucose to energize contractions of muscle cells. A high VO-2 max implies large-capacity lungs, a strong heart, a good supply of blood vessels in the muscles and many mitochondria, the cellular energy factories in which glucose is oxidized.

VO-2 max is typically determined on a treadmill. As the treadmill speeds up and its slope increases, the subject's inhalation of oxygen and exhalation of carbon dioxide — the byproduct of fuel burning — is measured to determine how much oxygen has been processed.

Physiologist Michael Pollack, now director of cardiac rehabilitation and sports medicine at Universal Services in Houston, conducted research on aging and exercise at Mount Sinai Medical Center in Milwaukee.

Twenty-five competitive runners, all more than 40 years old, were tested on the treadmill in 1972 and again in 1982 to see how their VO-2 max had changed. Their average age now is 62.

Fourteen of the runners had continued logging the same number of miles but had cut down on speed. They showed a 10 percent reduction in VO-2 max over the 10-year period.

The other 11 runners had kept up the same distance and the same speed. They experienced no drop in VO-2 max.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, November 5, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: If you find yourself splashing around in troubled waters, have the good sense to accept the lifeline offered by a friend or relative. Everyone makes an occasional mistake. Do not let false pride stand between you and success. A timely financial loan can mean the difference between triumph and failure. Let loved ones know your plans. Prestige means more to you than wealth. You are likely to get both! CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: author-philosopher Will Durant, "Gone With The Wind's" Vivian Leigh, actresses Elke Sommer and Tatum O'Neal, cowboy actor-singer Roy Rogers, actor-playwright Sam Shepard, basketball's Bill Walton, folk singer Paul Simon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Work should go quite well today. An important customer or client is in a receptive mood. Make a shrewd offer and it will be accepted. Family ties are a positive force. TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Close associates admire your pluck and stand ready to help you. Good times lie just around the corner! Continue to do those things you do best. A recent disappointment is soon forgotten.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance and fun go hand-in-hand. Although you are eager to blaze new trails, you must complete a current project first. Meet your deadlines promptly. Higher-ups want results, not excuses. CANCER (June 21-July 22): Reduce the stress in your life before it affects your health. A peaceful home life is very important to your sense of well-being. Refuse to bicker. Call a friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel can lead business today. Your personal appearance affects a job decision. Dress attractively but on the conservative side. A fading romance can be revived if you are still interested. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Looking too far ahead could be counter-productive. Unless you keep your mind on current assignments, you may never get a chance to direct that dream project. Concentrate! Handle routine tasks with dispatch.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you have problems scheduling some of your work, seek help. Mate will be supportive. Be patient and a snag will smooth itself out. A real estate deal should be finalized without delay.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Concentration will not be easy, but it is essential. Keep personal calls to a minimum. A financial situation shows decided improvement. Continue to keep a close eye on spending. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Bright ideas abound! It is up to you to pick the ones that will prove most practical. A newcomer is a source of inspiration at work. Think about pooling your talents.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your positive, "can do" attitude begins to rub off on someone. You find you have a true ally. Another associate may not have your best interests at heart. Keep your guard up. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Heed a close friend's warning. Someone may not live up to a promise. Take a wait-and-see attitude. There could be more going on than meets the eye.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Close friend is key to getting behind-scenes data. Use it judiciously and you will reap profits. Social success is on rise, but it could cost you. Personal priorities come under review. Romance delights you.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—With neither vulnerable and the opponents 40 on score, you hold: ♠K6 ♥A105 ♦AQ832 ♣1072 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take? A.—Had there been no partscore, there is no question that you should pass—a takeout double, forcing partner to bid at the two-level would be fraught with danger, and a two diamond overcall on such a moth-eaten suit could result in an even greater calamity. Here, however, a raise to two spades by your left-hand opponent, which at this score could be made with quite a good hand, would leave you in a more perilous position. Therefore, we suggest you double now and then retire gracefully from the auction, leaving all subsequent decisions to partner. When you want to compete to prevent the completion of a partscore, do so early.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠K985 ♥KJ ♦A95 ♣Q1076 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♠ 3 ♦ 3 NT Pass 4 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now? A.—Since partner has taken you out of a game contract, he has a hand that is either very strong distributionally or very rich in high cards. In either case, your hand is admirably suited to slam overtures, and you should apprise partner of this by cue-bidding four diamonds.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠Q985 ♥95 ♦765 ♣J743 The bidding has proceeded: North East South 2 ♥ 2 ♦ ?

A.—Normally, when partner opens with a demand bid you don't want to double the opponents at a low level—the penalty might be inadequate to compensate for a game, or even a slam, that you might miss. The one holding where you should want to punish the opponents is when your only values are in their suit and so are unlikely to be of any use to partner offensively. Since that is the case here, double to advise partner to proceed with caution.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠Q10952 ♥J9842 ♦K8 ♣4 The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 3 ♠ 3 NT Pass ?

What action do you take? A.—The danger with becoming a nursemaid is that you might be left holding the baby! By bidding three no trump, partner has shown little interest in the major suits—had he wanted to hear from you he could have doubled. You have some useful cards for partner, so why should you suspect that there is a better spot to play the hand?

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠K763 ♥86 ♦KQJ5 ♣K92 The bidding has proceeded: North East South 1 ♠ 1 ♦ ?

What action do you take? A.—Even though partner is a pass hand, his jump shift is a one-round force. Your choice of rebid obviously lies between a raise to three spades or a bid of two no trump. With your dead minimum, balanced opening bid and no ruffing value, we feel that you should do as little as possible to encourage partner, so we would opt for two no trump.

PEOPLE

Comeidan Silvers' colleagues pay tribute at his funeral

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Phil Silvers, "Top Banana" of television's "Sgt. Bilko" series, drew a last round of laughs at his funeral as colleagues Milton Berle, Red Buttons and others shared Silvers stories with 100 mourners.

Sid Caesar, Carl Reiner, Nanette Fabray, Dudley Moore, Danny Thomas and Morey Amsterdam were among those attending the funeral services Sunday at Mount Sinai Cemetery.

"This top banana has joined the other top bananas," Berle said. "I'm sure somewhere up there that Phil is saying to Jack Benny (Jimmy) Durante... 'Hi, fellows. Nice to see you. Thanks for a million laughs.'"

Silvers, 73, died Friday of natural causes in his Century City condominium 10 miles west of downtown.

"We are not here to mourn Phil Silvers," Berle said in an anecdote-laced eulogy that often evoked laughter from the crowd. "I think Phil would have wanted it this way, without jokes — a laugh here, a laugh there at the anecdotes."

He said his 60-year friendship with Silvers began when they met as teen-agers in vaudeville.

"At this very moment, somewhere on this planet, some television screen is showing Phil Silvers as the inimitable Sgt. Bilko, that lovable con man character that Phil created," Berle said. "That sly, silky smooth voice. Those black horn-rimmed glasses."

Berle said Silvers left a note in his will that welcomed anyone to speak at his service after the eulogy. Thomas, Buttons, Allen, Miss Fabray and others took him up on it.

Songwriter Sammy Cahn said it was a great comic irony that Silvers' first screen test was for the role of a priest in 1940's "Pride and Prejudice."

"Thank God he didn't get it," said Cahn. "Could you picture Phil Silvers as a priest?"

Miss Fabray said she'd never forget how comical Silvers looked trying to learn ballet for a stage show, Caesar called him "one of a kind." Thomas said he was a "great conner" and "a lot of fun," and Buttons recalled how he first encountered Silvers in New York burlesque.

"I went to see the girls, but I fell in love with a guy, Phil Silvers. It has been a love affair for life," said Buttons. "He took a comic spark and ignited it into a comic brilliance. It translated itself into a character we all came to know as Bilko. It was nothing less than poetry in motion to watch Phil Silvers weave his own blend of magic as Bilko."

"He was totally professional," said Allen. "...one of a school of comedians who had a natural air of authority on stage. When he went on stage, he took charge and made people know they were seeing a professional."

Silvers' career as a comedian spanned the eras of vaudeville, burlesque, movies and television. But his greatest fame came as the manipulative Bilko, who gambled and schemed his way through his tour of duty at the mythical Fort Baxter in the "The Phil Silvers Show," also known as simply "Sgt. Bilko."

The series won three Emmys in 1955, including one for Silvers as best comedian, and another in 1957.

The Bilko character made Silvers' trademark horn-rimmed glasses, bald pate and mischievous grin familiar to American audiences. Reruns continue to this day, even though production stopped in 1959.

Silvers won a Tony for his stage acting in "Top Banana" in 1952, which he recreated on film a year later, and again in 1972 for "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." Other film credits included "It's a Mad Mad Mad Mad World" and the film version of "Forum."

He is survived by five daughters, Tracey, Nancy, Laury, Cathy and Candy, and a granddaughter, Jaclyn.

Silvers was married to former Miss America Jo Dennison from 1945 to 1950. His second marriage, to Evelyn Patrick, also ended in divorce.

NEW YORK (AP) — Dozens of stars danced and sang in the Metropolitan Opera House to raise $1.3 million and show, in the words of producer Barry Brown, that "caring and concern are spreading faster than AIDS."

A predominately male audience of nearly 4,000 gathered in the ornate hall Sunday evening for the "Best of the Best," an upbeat gala that included a ragtime ballet with Mikhail Baryshnikov, songs by Marilyn Horne, Carol Burnett, Melissa Manchester, Peter Allen, Victor Borge, the Harlem Boys' Choir and the New York Gay Men's Choir, and off-color humor by Bette Midler and Lily Tomlin.

The most uproarious applause, and the most somber moment, came during a comedy and musical routine by Ms. Midler, who began her career singing before gay audiences.

Recalling those happy days, she said, she recently visited her former hangouts and found that the "mood wasn't quite the same. It's like a wartime. 'I remember all the friends I have lost in the war, and join my prayers with yours that it will be over soon,' said Ms. Midler.

Money raised by the benefit will go to the AIDS Medical Foundation, the AIDS Resource Center, and the Gay Men's Health Crisis, three groups active in treating and seeking a cure for acquired immune deficiency syndrome. AIDS cripples the body's ability to fight disease and is almost always fatal.

CHICAGO (AP) — When Frances Pappas agreed to take her new husband, Michael Wittkowski, for richer or for poorer, there wasn't much doubt about which one it would be.

He won $40 million in the Illinois State Lottery in 1984, the biggest lottery jackpot in North America. The couple wed Saturday in a bilingual English and Greek service, then left for a honeymoon in Australia.

NEW YORK (AP) — As a glamorous royal asset, Princess Diana is probably worth about $500 million to Britain in goodwill value, People magazine estimates.

The publication reached the figure by estimating sales of products benefiting through association with the princess, including 27 million copies of books about her, and the amount she has drawn to Britain in increased spending by tourists eager to catch a glimpse of her.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Capt. John Testrake, pilot of the hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 847, says a key cause of terrorism is Western countries' indifference to oppression in the Middle East.

"We as a people have got to become better informed of what is going on around the world," he told 330 newspaper representatives at a Missouri Press Association convention Saturday at a Kansas City hotel. "If we can bother to take the time and trouble, we might head off the explosion. We might not get hijacked."
