City Council rejects prison proposal

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The City Council rejected a proposal for a federal prison at the Midland Regional Airport and accepted a 1 percent sales tax on all city telephone services Tuesday.

The council unanimously rejected a proposal for a 512-bed maximum security federal detention center at the airport, accepting a recommendation by the Airport Planning and Development Board.

Mayor Carroll Thomas, who originally said he was in favor of the prison because it would bring jobs to the area and pump up to $170,000 a year in fees to city, voted against the center Tuesday.

The mayor said he had received a lot of "negative input" about the prison and that the "psychological argument" against it is too strong.

If the City Council had accepted the proposal, they would have leased 15 acres of airport land to Brady Contractor Ed Davenport.

Davenport, who built a minimum-security facility in Eden, said the federal government needed a prison somewhere between Oklahoma City and Midland by early 1988.

City Councilman Robert Rendall said during the meeting that the city might expose itself to lawsuits by federal prisoners, who would be housed in a 60 to 65 decibel noise level near the airport, where residential areas are prohibited by the Federal Aviation Administration.

"The potential for liability is there. If the city wasn't the middle man, I'd feel differently. But I don't see it as a city function," Rendall said.

Councilman Gordon Marcum said he voted against the proposal because, "If we're not going to have it at the airport, than I really wouldn't be in favor of it in the community. We don't need it close to town."

But Marcum said he was disappointed that the council did not approve of the airport location to bring a new "industry" into the area.

"It does seem like we talk out of both sides of our mouth. I don't know of any cleaner industry than that."

In other action, Midlanders will see their telephone bills increase by a 1 percent sales tax in October after a 6-1 vote for the tax Tuesday.

Councilman Kelly Fish, who voted against the tax, said, "It's premature to be raising taxes when we're not into our budget process."

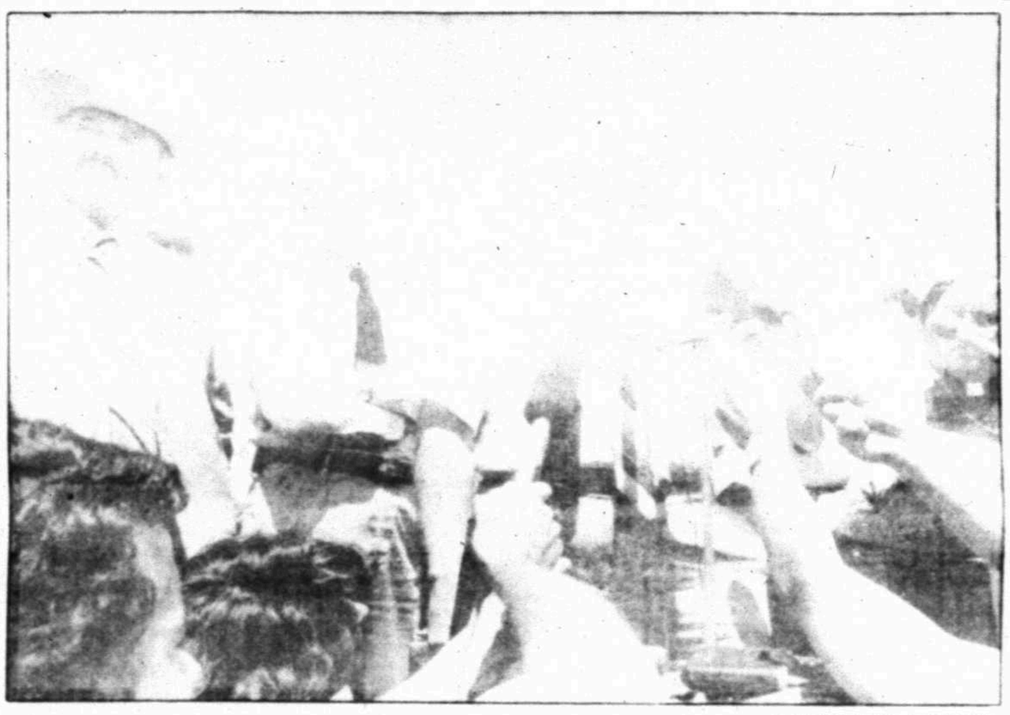

He added, "I would prefer to address our budget problem with an attitude of reduction first and use taxes as a last resort."

In 1985 the state legislature approved of House Bill 1949 that would allow cities to tax telephone services, but municipalities were not allowed to implement the tax until this year, said City Manager Fred Poe.

Clements announces aid, explains delay

Kent Porter Reporter-Telegram

Gov. Bill Clements, above, visited Saragosa Tuesday to view the devastation caused by Friday night's tornado and to discuss relief efforts for the small West Texas town. Also, funeral services were held for the 29 persons who died. Mourners, left, gathered to remember the dead. Please see related story, Page 1B.

SARAGOSA (AP) — When Gov. Bill Clements visited this tornado-stricken town he had more to do than witness the damage and announce that the White House had declared Saragosa a disaster area.

He also was questioned about complaints among townspeople that he had not come here sooner than Tuesday.

Saragosa resident Phillip Lopez told Clements "people are ticked off" by delays in aid and officials' neglect in not dispatching National Guardsmen to secure the area from looting Friday night.

Saragosa resident Braulia Natividad, 28, complained to Clements about thievery and then, near tears, said, "He (Clements) makes me sick, because he should have been out here Saturday."

The governor was asked pointedly and repeatedly by reporters why he had waited until Tuesday to visit the site.

MRT staffer out on bond after arrest in Saragosa

From Staff Reports

Midland Reporter-Telegram assistant city editor Rick Brown Tuesday was released on $500 bond following his arrest in Reeves County on a charge of disobeying a police officer.

According to reports, Brown was arrested about noon Tuesday on State Highway 17 outside the Saragosa Cemetery where funeral services were being conducted for 16 victims of Friday's tornado. The storm killed 29 persons and injured 162.

Brown said Reeves County Sheriff's deputies and Texas Department of Public Safety troopers had blocked the southbound lane of traffic to direct those leaving the cemetery, including other news media.

He said he was parked in the northbound lane awaiting passage to Balmorhea to cover Gov. Bill Clements' arrival in the area and that he approached Deputy Gary Ingram once to ask that he be allowed to proceed and on a second occasion to ask the deputy's name.

It was at that time that Brown said he was placed under arrest.

Judge orders Sprayberry to avoid woman

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Following a bizarre hearing punctuated by heated exchanges between former Justice of the Peace Charles Sprayberry and the woman he was convicted of attempting to sexually assault, Sprayberry this morning was ordered to "make every effort" to avoid contact with her.

The hearing, to amend conditions of Sprayberry's probation, was held before Judge Vann Culp in 238th District Court.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre sought the amendment after Sprayberry sent Wanda Niblett, his former secretary, a card through the mail. Inside the card, Sprayberry had written, "Why?," "The Truth Will Set You Free," and "Read Psalms 37." It was signed "Charlie."

Sprayberry

Sprayberry, 46, was convicted in April 1986 of attempting to sexually assault Ms. Niblett in April 1984. He was sentenced to four years probation and $2,000 restitution.

Ms. Niblett, Sprayberry's former secretary, was the only witness to testify at the hearing. The former magistrate, who represented himself, questioned the woman at length about the card and a personal visit he made to Midland Memorial Hospital, where Ms. Niblett is employed.

Sprayberry asked Ms. Niblett to read the contents of the card, as well as the address, aloud to the court. Haltingly, she complied.

Sprayberry then asked her why she thought the card was offensive.

"I'm not your friend, and you're not mine," she said. "Receiving anything from you is offensive."

Schorre objected several times to what he called Sprayberry's "picky" questioning of Ms. Niblett about the details of his alleged visit to Midland Memorial Hospital.

"Mr. Sprayberry just loves picking on this lady, and he has continued to do it," the prosecutor said.

Sprayberry, seated at the defense table, and Ms. Niblett interrupted each other repeatedly, as Schorre watched closely. The woman finally tired of the questions and told Sprayberry, "I don't have any reason to lie about what you did. What you did, you did."

Schorre objected at Sprayberry's attempts to question the woman about her "accusations" against him.

"He has been duly convicted," Schorre said. "It's over with."

Iran-Contra Affair

Aid hearings reopen with Col. Dutton

WASHINGTON (AP) — The retired Air Force colonel who managed a private air resupply network for the Nicaraguan rebels testified today that White House aide Oliver L. North "indicated that we were working for the president of the United States."

Dutton

Col. Robert C. Dutton, a former combat pilot in the Vietnam War, told Congress' Iran-Contra hearings that his mission in running the supply operation for the Contra guerrillas was similar to his work under President Carter in carrying out an abortive attempt to rescue American hostages held in Iran.

As the House and Senate investigative committees convened their fourth week of hearings on the Iran-Contra affair, Dutton said he worked directly under North, then a member of the National Security Council staff, and retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord. He said Secord had been deputy chief of the earlier covert operation to rescue hostages in Iran.

Asked about his understanding of President Reagan's role in the Contra resupply operation, Dutton replied that North, a Marine lieutenant colonel, was in charge of policy for the mission but "he indicated we were working for the president of the United States."

Thunderstorm system hovers over Permian Basin

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland is losing the airborne battle between cool Pacific winds and warm Gulf of Mexico gusts which collectively have wreaked barometric havoc in the area.

The two systems have wafted head to head into each other, said Richard Davis at the National Weather Service, and created the stormy weather West Texas has hosted for over a week.

Today's weather should be more of the same. Hail, which hit much of the Permian Basin Tuesday, is possible again today, Davis said.

And with the thunderstorms expected for the rest of the week's afternoons and evenings, there remains the chance of tornados.

It takes a "wall cloud" to create a tornado, a weather service specialist explained.

He said it is the wall cloud which dips down out of a cloud cluster and nearly touches the ground.

The wall cloud begins to swirl and the rest is evidenced in the existing state of the tiny hamlet of Saragosa.

May and June are the big tornado months, the weather specialist explained, but added they can can occur anywhere anytime.

Midland is on the western and southern fringes of the national region known to weather experts as "tornado alley," the specialist added.

A 30 percent chance of thunderstorms prevails for today and tonight with lower than normal temperatures expected, the weather specialist said.

The high should be near 80 today and the low tonight should be near 60 — temperatures lower than the seasonal average, the weather specialist said.

Window-washing platform makes fatal, 31-floor plunge

HOUSTON (AP) — Lunch-hour pedestrians watched in horror as gusty winds ripped a thousand-pound window-washing platform from near the top of a downtown skyscraper and hurled it to the street below, killing two men aboard it and a woman on the street.

"All I could see was a border of black coming down," a shaken witness, Dick Dentley, said after the Tuesday incident. "It was horrible. I was thinking, 'My God, people, get out of the way!' But you can't.

"Even if I had hollered, it was too late. By that time I was speechless."

The platform was near the top of the 36-floor Pennzoil Building, possibly the 31st floor, and hit the street shortly after noon, striking two female pedestrians at a busy intersection.

"I was just standing on the corner, waiting for the light to change," Julia Comeau, 35, said. Someone yelled the scaffolding was coming down.

"It hit me. I didn't have time to move. I couldn't see. I didn't have time to move. This person to my left was just knocked out flat. It's just a miracle. You're never prepared for these things. You're just so damn lucky you're alive."

Iranian attack 'matter of time?'

WASHINGTON — Iran won't be intimidated by U.S. or Soviet ships in the Persian Gulf, and it's "just a matter of time" before an American ship is attacked, a senator who just returned from the region said today.

Responding to plans by the Reagan administration for the Navy to escort Kuwaiti tankers flying under American flags in the gulf, Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn, said on NBC-TV's "Today" show:

"I think it's just a matter of time until the Iranians do (attack a U.S.-flag ship). Just a few days ago, the Iranians apparently, deliberately attacked a Soviet tanker flying the Soviet flag which had been chartered by the Kuwaitis. So the Iranians make no distinction between the superpowers and others in the Persian Gulf. And as we've seen in times past, the Iranians would like nothing better than to try to humiliate the United States."

Sasser was referring to the attack a week ago today by an Iranian gunboat on the 6,459-ton Ivan Koroteyev, as reported by the Soviet news agency Tass. No crew members were hurt in the cannon, machine gun and rocket attack, Tass said.

The Reagan administration, weighing options to protect oil tankers against Iranian attack, may increase U.S. naval forces in the Arabian Sea or ask Britain, France and other allies to provide air cover for the gulf, U.S. officials said Tuesday.

Sasser said today he doubts that the escorting of reflagged ships will begin soon. He referred to the 91-5 Senate vote last week on a proposal by the majority and minority leaders that the administration fully report to Congress on the risks and implications of a stepped-up U.S. presence.

A third option under consideration, the administration officials said, is to ask an unidentified gulf country for landing rights for American fighter planes.

"We're not planning another D-Day," said an official in discussing on an anonymous basis ways to protect the 11 Kuwaiti tankers that will fly the U.S. flag beginning, probably, in early June. "But we must decide how to do it."

Falwell urges Bakker to 'come clean', repent actions

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell today said he doesn't see "an ounce of repentance" in Jim Bakker and said the fallen PTL evangelist needs to come clean about a 1980 sexual encounter and his "homosexual problems."

Bakker also should "return millions of dollars taken from the coffers of this ministry at the cost of widows" and people who sacrificed to make payments to the television ministry, Falwell said at a news conference after a meeting here of the PTL board.

The board, appointed by Falwell after Bakker turned the ministry over to the fundamentalist Baptist in March, is trying to bring fiscal control to PTL, now estimated to be $70 million in debt.

Late Tuesday on ABC's "Nightline" program, Bakker accused Falwell of pretending the takeover of PTL was necessary to forestall a "hostile takeover" by another TV evangelist, the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart.

Bakker, in an interview from his home in Palm Springs, Calif., said Falwell had promised him he could return to PTL at any time.

"I did not choose Jerry Falwell to take my ministry," Bakker said.

"He said he would be a caretaker and never would even be on the air, and would never have anything to do except to be a part of holding it to keep it from a hostile takeover.

"He said he wanted to save his own ministry which he felt would be next destroyed by Swaggart," Bakker said. "He wanted to help me and that he would never touch my ministry, he would not manage it, ... that I could appoint a board of directors and that I would have actually their resignation in writing before the board meeting so that it would give us the security to know that nobody was going to play any tricks on us."

Bakker said it was only under those conditions that he agreed to step down. He said he was pressured to do so at a meeting with Falwell and others days before the sex scandal involving church secretary Jessica Hahn broke.

"We had 25 minutes to make this decision," Bakker said. "Looking back, I made a terrible mistake."

Bakker said his wife, Tammy, had just finished a drug treatment program, and "we were very vulnerable. We were in a period of recuperation."

Falwell said today that Bakker wasn't pressured: "We were not there 25 minutes. We were there six hours."

Falwell also said he first believed Bakker had engaged in one brief sexual encounter with Ms. Hahn, and that intercourse did not take place because Bakker was impotent.

Since then, Falwell said, he learned Bakker and an associate had sex with Ms. Hahn and a third person tried to.

Later, Bakker asked the third person, "Did you get that, too?" Falwell said.

"Jim, that made my blood boil," Falwell said.

Falwell said he later "sat across the table" from men who described homosexual advances made by Bakker.

"I would be doing a disservice to God, if I allowed you to come back," Falwell said.

Asked during the news conference if Bakker is ill, Falwell replied, "Either he has a terrible memory or is terribly dishonest, or he's emotionally ill."

Reagan says U.S. will avoid war

LONDON (AP) — President Reagan denied that an increased U.S. presence in the Persian Gulf would lead to war with Iran, and said his government was "doing everything we can" to end the Iran-Iraq war, a newspaper reported today.

Reagan, who was interviewed Tuesday at the White House by reporters from six non-American newspapers, said U.S. ships would defend themselves but would not start any hostilities.

"We are not out to attack, but if fired upon we'll fire back," he said, according to today's editions of The Independent, a London daily represented at interview.

On other matters, Reagan said he never has considered resigning over the Iran-Contra affair, and promised the United States would uphold the interests of Western Europe in arms control talks with the Soviets.

Reagan was asked if his policies in the Persian Gulf might involve the United States in a war with Iran, which has been battling neighboring Iraq since September 1980.

"I don't think they (Iran) would like to take on the United States in addition to Iraq," the newspaper quoted Reagan as saying.

He said he did not see that "defending ourselves and maintaining trade and open waters" would bring on a war with Iran.

"As a matter of fact, we are doing everything we can to try and bring about an end to the (Iran-Iraq) war that we have," he was quoted as saying. The United States already patrols the Persian Gulf to protect U.S. commercial shipping, and has agreed to provide protection for 11 Kuwaiti tankers that are expected to start flying under the U.S. flag in June.

U.S. officials in Washington told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity that the Reagan administration is considering increasing its naval presence in the gulf, asking U.S. allies to provide air cover or asking an unidentified gulf country to grant landing rights to U.S. warplanes.

Iran frequently has fired on Kuwaiti ships, charging they are aiding the Iraqi war effort, and the Tehran government says it will not abandon the attacks even if the tankers are registered in the United States.

Iraq attacked the USS Stark, part of the U.S. Naval Task Force in the gulf, on May 17, and officials said the raiding pilot mistakenly thought his target was an Iranian ship.

The president was asked if he had considered resigning over the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran, and where he found the strength to carry on.

"I think the strength to carry on was because there wasn't any truth and there isn't any truth in the charges that are being leveled at me," he was quoted as saying.

"I sleep very well at night. And I know the truth will come out. I don't feel that I'm faced with any crisis and, no, I never considered resigning," the paper quoted him.

Reagan appeared to want to assure Europeans that the United States will not abandon Western Europe's interests.

The Independent quoted him as saying that if the United States and Soviets reach an accord on eliminating battlefield nuclear weapons, the two sides must also agree on cuts in conventional weapons, in which the Soviet Union has an advantage.

"You in the media have got to write and talk about something, and I suppose that's worth talking about," Clements said. "But while you're doing the talking, we're doing the action."

Clements announced that the White House had issued a major disaster declaration, qualifying Saragosa for a wide range of financial aid and assistance.

His visit came four days after the tornado destroyed 70 percent of the community, killed 29 people and left 162 injured.

"All of us are here in sorrow," said Clements, who described the damage as the worst he had ever seen.

Asked about the economic impact on the tornado, Clements said, "This is not a dollar problem. This is a people problem. We're here to try to help and console, to extend our sympathy to the community and to the people that have had this terrible loss."

"We're here to reinstate a community that has just been devastated by a natural event," he added.

Clements said the Memorial Day weekend may have hindered the disaster proclamation's speed.

"This happened on a holiday weekend, which certainly did not help things in terms of getting an emergency declaration out of the White House," Clements said.

Bob Lansford of the governor's emergency planning office said that several emergency workers were on the way to Saragosa, and a disaster assistance center would be set up in the next several days.

Clements noted that the highway department had assisted Reeves County workers in clearing off debris. He said funding for that came from the governor's emergency fund.

Traveling with Clements from Austin was state Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, who had asked the governor for assistance in the Saragosa tornado after receiving such a request from Reeves County Judge Bill Pigman.

Pigman said the state's response was quick. He said two hours after he talked with Sims on Saturday morning the governor's representative, George Bayoud, was on the ground in Saragosa.

Ms. Comeau suffered cuts and bruises and underwent foot surgery Tuesday.

The woman standing next to her, Emily Perry, 37, was killed immediately, authorities said. Also killed instantly were the two window washers, identified as Baudilio Argueta, 23, and Efraim Ribas, 47, both of Houston and both five-year employees of the window-washing firm.

"They rode it down. They were locked into it," Deputy Fire Chief L.O. Martin said. "These men were dead on impact and so was the lady. There was no help for them."

Four bolts anchoring the window-washing platform to a permanent track at the top of the building gave way as stiff winds blew the scaffolding sideways, Martin said.

ARREST

"The upshot is that a reporter was prohibited from covering the news by police action," Brown said.

"There was a breach of one of the very fundamental rights we enjoy in a democracy. It's unfortunate that some law officers feel they need to resort to Gestapo tactics."

Reporter-Telegram editor Jim Servatius said Brown's arrest had nothing to do with intruding on the privacy of the mourners in Saragosa.

"When a tragedy like the Saragosa tornado hits a town, particularly a small community, tensions are bound to arise as scores of reporters and photographers converge from throughout the country. That invariably causes conflict and some members of the press may have been out of line at times as they tried to do their jobs. By the same token I think there's no doubt that some officers over-reacted in trying to cope with the situation.

"We don't believe our reporter was out of line whatsoever and we know his arrest had nothing to do with intruding on the privacy of those who were grieving in Saragosa. But he apparently annoyed someone who also had a job to do and probably was also under a lot of stress.

"News people have a responsibility to cover the personal side of such a tragedy with caring and concern, but they also have the right to be on the scene and to report the news as thoroughly as possible.

"We support Brown and our attorney is looking into the matter," Servatius said.

COUNCIL

Poe estimated that the average bill would increase about $8 per telephone a year and generate up to $200,000 a year for the city.

Southwestern Bell manager of community relations, Darlene Gifford said the state has charged a 4.25 percent sales tax for more than a year.

She added that a charge now listed as a special municipal fee on telephone bills is a franchise fee paid by the company for use of city alleys and right of way. This fee is passed onto the customers.

The council also approved of a resolution Tuesday honoring racehorse Alysheba owned by the Midland Scharbauer family.

After the City Council's action, Scharbauer Drive and "A" Street will become Scharbauer Drive and Alysheba from June 4 to 6.

Alysheba, who won the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, will capture the Triple Crown of horse racing, if he wins the Belmont Stakes on June 6.

Sprayberry then said Ms. Niblett had been "stopped for shoplifting," and asked Culp if that was relevant to the hearing.

Before the judge could answer, Ms. Niblett called Sprayberry a "liar," and said, "I'm not the only somebody who was sexually harrassed by you.... I don't feel like a man like that has any right to ask me anything...all of the dirt needs to come up about you too.

"To have to sit here and look at filth like you just makes me sick," she said.

Sprayberry then asked the woman "if it was filth when you asked me over to your apartment to have sexual intercourse?"

Culp also was asked to rule on two motions by Sprayberry to amend his probation, including one to reduce the amount of his restitution.

Sprayberry told Culp that Schorre had agreed not to oppose his motions, but the district attorney jumped out of his seat, and told the judge, "I've seen such a vindictive man...the State is going to oppose every motion."

Schorre also said he would likely file a motion asking that Sprayberry be required to undergo psychiatric counseling as a condition of his probation.

Schorre told the court Sprayberry was "obviously obsessed with the matter."

In January, Sprayberry angered authorities when he placed an Odessa American newspaper advertisement that asked for information about perjury committed during his trial, Schorre said.

The ad, which was pulled after running several days, displayed the telephone numbers of Midland Crime Stoppers and the county courthouse.

GULF

The Navy, meanwhile, took the unexpected step of escorting a Kuwaiti merchant ship carrying U.S. arms to Bahrain, the Pentagon disclosed Tuesday. The ship carrying American-made M-60 tanks sold to Bahrain completed its journey Monday night "without incident," the Pentagon said.

President Reagan, in an interview published today, said he sees no danger of America getting into war with Iran.

"We are not out to attack, but if fired upon we'll fire back," Reagan was quoted as saying in the London daily, The Independent. The president was interviewed in the White House on Tuesday by reporters from six foreign newspapers.

"I don't see the danger of a war. I don't see how it could possibly start," the president was quoted as saying.

U.S. Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, today disputed that assertion, however, saying, "War is combat, and we're more likely to be at combat in the Persian Gulf now than we were before, particularly as we start escorting Kuwaiti tankers under the American flag. ... As I see it, we are going into a situation there where we can no longer bluff."

Glenn was preparing to leave for a fact-finding tour of the area.

Appearing with Glenn, Republican Sen. John Warner of Virginia said "the important thing is that Iran knows that this nation can and will strike back when attacked, and what better example than Libya?"

Warner was referring to the U.S. bombing raid on Libya in April 1986 in retaliation for terrorist activities linked by the administration to Libya.

Reagan will meet later in the week with the National Security Council. He is focusing his attention on the talks he will join in Venice on June 8-10 with the leaders of six other industrialized countries.

Among them are Britain and France, the two key allies in erecting a Western deterrent to Iranian attacks on gulf shipping. So far this year, 20 ships, 16 of of them connected with Kuwait, have been hit.

HEARING

Dutton said that when he returned from Central America in September 1986, satisfied with the outcome of his mission, North had told him:

"This has been a success. You'll never get a medal for this, but someday the president will shake your hand and thank you."

He said North and Secord had emphasized that "we were working with donated funds" for the Contra operation. For two years, from October 1984 to October 1986, direct and indirect U.S. military aid to the Contras was forbidden by Congress.

Dutton said his field staff communicated with the commander of Contra forces on the southern front in Nicaragua through the CIA station chief in a neighboring country, whom he identified only as "Joe." Previous witnesses have described help supplied on the southern front by the CIA station chief in Costa Rica, who went by the alias Tomas Castillo. American crews were used to airlift supplies after an effort to recruit experienced British pilots had failed, he said.

But Dutton said Secord had convinced him from the outset that the resupply operation was entirely legal, so long as deliveries of arms and other military equipment originated outside the United States and no American troops were involved.

He said he accepted Secord's assurances that this was "being done at the behest of the White House," and understood that North was "working at the behest of the president."

Dutton, who retired from the Air Force a year ago after more than 26 years' service, testified under limited immunity from proecution.

The week was to have begun with testimony from Albert Hakim, an Iranian-American businessman and partner of retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, who ran much of the Iran arms sale deal and the diversion of profits to help the Contras.

But in private interviews that stretched through the weekend, Hakim raised new issues and left so many questions unanswered that investigators were not prepared to go ahead with his testimony. His appearance is being postponed until next week.

Hakim controlled the Swiss bank accounts used in the deals.

Federal school funding on decline

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average salary for the nation's 2.2 million public school teachers is now $26,704, and the cost of educating each student in grades K-12 is just under $4,000 a year, the National Education Association said today.

The teacher union, in its annual compendium of school statistics, also reported that the federal share of the public school budget has dropped to its lowest level in more than two decades: 6.2 percent.

NEA President Mary Hatwood Futrell scheduled a news conference today to release the report.

"The public is clamoring for education reform, yet education revenues are barely keeping pace with inflation, and federal funding is on the decline. It's time to take a good look at what's needed to bring about real education reform," she said in a statement.

The NEA contends that taxpayers will have to pump 20 to 25 percent more money into teacher salaries and other public school expenses each year if they want to see dramatic improvements in children's learning.

Public school revenues were up by nearly $10 billion, or 6.3 percent, to $160.9 billion for the 1986-87 school year. Since 1976-77, school revenues have shot up 114 percent.

But adjusting for inflation, "public school revenues increased by only 13.8 percent over the decade," according to the NEA report "Estimates of School Statistics: 1986-87."

Bill Kristol, chief of staff to Secretary of Education William J. Bennett, dismissed Futrell's criticisms, saying that total national spending on the schools has gone up every year.

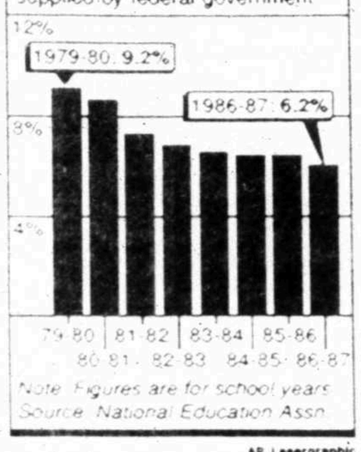

"It's an advantage to have the money spent at the state and local level, where it's more likely to be spent responsibly," Kristol said. "It's really amazing that after the last two decades, when we increased federal spending and achievement went down, that the NEA is still obsessed with federal spending."

The salary figures, enrollment numbers and other data are the NEA's own estimates based on a survey of state education departments. It is the 45th year that the union's research department has compiled the statistics.

Last year, when consumer prices rose less than 2 percent, the average teacher got a 5.9 percent pay raise that boosted his or her salary from $25,206 to $26,704.

South Dakota pulled up the rear, with salaries averaging $18,781. Mississippi ($19,575) and Arkansas ($19,951) were the only other states below $20,000. Maine ($21,257) and Louisiana ($21,280) rounded out the bottom five.

The top five on the pay scale were Alaska, where virtually everything costs more and teachers command $43,970; the District of Columbia, $33,797; New York, $32,620; Michigan, $31,500; and California, $31,170. The only other state in the $30,000-bracket was Rhode Island ($31,079).

The fall 1986 public school enrollment was 39,800,608, up by 271,000 over a year earlier. A big jump — 400,000 — in elementary enrollments, offsetting a secondary school drop of 129,000, is expected to push the figure over the 40 million mark this fall for the first time since 1981-82.

The schools' average daily attendance — not counting absentees — was 36.8 million.

The average per-pupil cost of educating them was $3,970 in 1986-87, up by $215 or 5.7 percent over last year, the NEA said. The expense ranged from highs of $8,842 in Alaska, $6,299 in New York, $6,229 in Wyoming and $6,120 in New Jersey to lows of $2,455 in Utah, $2,534 in Mississippi, $2,555 in Idaho and $2,610 in Alabama.

State governments provided 50 percent of public school revenues, while local support of schools hovered at 43 percent.

The federal share dipped from 6.5 percent in 1985-86 to 6.2 percent this year. In actual dollars, it rose from $9.8 billion to just under $10 billion, an all-time high.

But in inflation-adjusted dollars, the federal share has fallen from a peak of 9.2 percent in 1979-80 and 8.7 percent the following year, when President Reagan entered the White House.

Public schools had looked to Washington for about 8 percent of their budgets since 1965, when the Johnson administration launched education programs for the disadvantaged. The federal share in 1964-65 was only 3.8 percent, but it jumped to 7.7 percent the next year.

Federal aid to the schools fell from $9.3 billion in 1980-81 to $8.4 billion the next year.

Raymond G. Hunthausen, center, archbishop of Seattle, talks to parishoners after delivering a Mass in Great Falls Tueadsy evening. Hunthausen, who was in Great Falls helping to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the ordination of another priest, declined comment on reports he would have his full authority restored by the Vatican.

Archbishop Hunthausen gets authority restored

SEATTLE (AP) — Roman Catholic Archbishop Raymond G. Hunthausen is getting his full powers restored eight months after the Vatican generated discontent in the U.S. church by limiting the authority of the liberal cleric.

While being returned to full status, however, Hunthausen will be forced to accept an assistant, or coadjutor, who would eventually succeed him, according to a panel of three bishops assigned to consider the situation.

The apparent compromise comes four months before a visit to the United States by Pope John Paul II.

In limiting his power as archbishop in September, the Vatican had accused the archdiocese of being lax in granting annulments, general absolution of sins, allowing intercommunion with Protestants, and letting homosexuals meet in church facilities.

The bishops panel, in a report issued Tuesday, said problems still exist in the Seattle archdiocese, and attributed them in part to a perception that Hunthausen is permissive.

Bishop Thomas J. Murphy, of Great Falls, Mont., was named by the Vatican today to be coadjutor. The Vatican annoucement did not mention Bishop Donald Wuerl, who had assumed the powers taken from Hunthausen. He was expected to be transferred from the archdiocese.

Hunthausen, 65, and Murphy, 54, were in Great Falls on Tuesday night to help retired Great Falls Bishop Eldon Schuster celebrate his 50th anniversary of ordination into the priesthood. Neither Hunthausen nor Murphy would comment when asked about the bishops' commission report.

While a coadjutor is designated eventually to succeed an incumbent bishop when he retires, this often is done long in advance to lighten heavy responsibilities, and does not necessarily imply imminent retirement. No retirement date was specified for Hunthausen, who at 65 is 10 years away from normal retirement age.

The Vatican's discipline of Hunthausen had been unprecedented in the American church and had distressed many U.S. bishops, sparking extensive protests, particularly among clergy and laity in Seattle.

Hunthausen and many others had called the split-authority arrangement with Wuerl humiliating and unworkable.

The National Federation of Priests Councils, representing most of the nation's Catholic priests, overwhelmingly passed a resolution May 14 calling for immediate restoration of Hunthausen's full authority.

The three-bishop commission, made up of Cardinals Joseph Bernardin of Chicago and John O'Connor of New York and Archbishop John Quinn of San Francisco, said in a letter to U.S. bishops that additional steps need to be taken to bring the Seattle archdiocese in line with Vatican guidelines.

Quoting from the Second Vatican Council, the three churchmen said a bishop "exercises his office only in communion with and obedience to the head of the college of bishops, the pope."

They said the archdiocese's problems were perhaps due to Seattle Catholics putting too much weight on Hunthausen's "almost legendary" compassion and too little on the "place and demands of law."

"Without intending it he is perceived as generating or at least accepting a climate of permissiveness within which some feel themselves free to design their own policies and practices," the bishops wrote, adding that the climate remains substantially unchanged.

The panel said none of the actions taken against Hunthausen was intended as punitive.

Danny Barrett, a spokesman for Catholics United Against Marxist Theology and one of Hunthausen's chief Seattle critics, said he was satisfied that a coadjutor would be appointed. Barrett called Murphy "a man with whom we can work."

Questions had been raised about why Hunthausen was singled out for his penalties when practices of which he had been accused by the Vatican exist in many other dioceses.

Doctors debate blood transfusion need

CHICAGO (AP) — Patients who need new kidneys but refuse blood transfusions before transplants because of their faith or fear of AIDS can undergo successful operations if they get a well-matched organ, experts say.

But that's not so easy when the pickings are so slim overall, according to researchers at the University of California at Los Angeles who are studying the issue.

"For some centers...the possibilities of finding a well-matched graft are rather small," said Dr. J. Michael Cecka, who helps keep UCLA's world registry of kidney transplants. "That's one of the reasons why we're advocating a national organ-sharing system."

Although transfusions are given to most of those about to receive their first transplanted kidneys, preparing their bodies for their new organs, more and more patients are expressing concern about receiving donated blood, according to Cecka.

They're afraid, he said, of getting the deadly AIDS.

"We have a lot of problems right now since there is such a public awareness or association with the idea of transfused patients being in the (AIDS) risk group, even though that's probably not the case," he said Tuesday at the American Society of Transplant Physicians' annual meeting.

Blood screening tests virtually have eliminated the chance of contaminated blood being passed along to unwitting patients, according to Cecka. So far, only seven cases of AIDS have been reported in transplant patients, all of them before the screening process, he said.

Such assurances aren't allaying patients' fears, however, prompting some of them — and some of their physicians — to opt for a potentially long wait for a better-suited organ rather than blood transfusions and a less than ideal but somewhat more successful match.

Other doctors are improving the odds for untransfused patients, some of whom refuse blood on religious grounds, by reducing organ rejection through improved immunesuppression.

"I don't think there is any accepted practice," said Dr. Nancy Goeken, the society's president. "Everyone's reading the story a little bit differently."

In both cases, the success rate is higher than ever, thanks in large part to the anti-rejection drug cyclosporine, according to Cecka. The powerful drug was approved by the federal government in late 1983 for general use.

Of the approximately 6,000 people on UCLA's registry who received their first kidneys from brain-dead patients and were treated with cyclosporine, 90 percent received transfusions, Cecka said. Their success rate, at one year, was 79 percent.

The one-year success rate for the approximately 600 who did not receive transfusions was 69 percent, somewhat lower than the transfused patients but still considerably higher than what was achieved in the pre-cyclosporine era, Cecka said. Because the data came from more than 200 kidney transplant centers around the world, no explanations were given for the lack of transfusions.

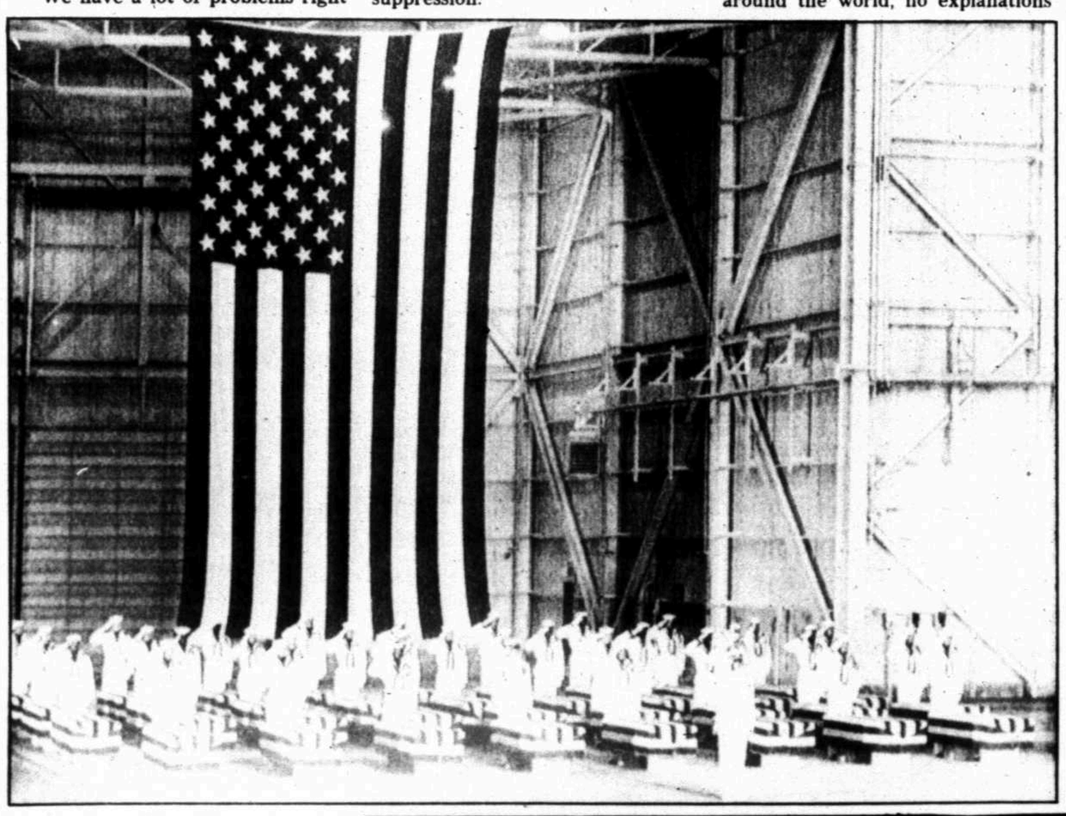

For blacks, however, the success rate was much lower — 72 percent for those receiving transfusions and 55 percent for those who did not, Cecka said. The difference between white patients was 5 percent.

"Matching (for transplant antigens) tends to be a little bit poorer in black patients," although no one knows precisely why, he said. "There's a significant difference in the number of blacks with mismatches."

Unlike Cecka, who believes transfused patients have an edge, doctors at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston contend blood transfusions offer no real advantage, a view that is sparking hot debate.

"There is no price to pay clinically in terms of renal function," the university's Dr. Ronald Kerman reported Tuesday.

Kerman and three of his colleagues compared 220 first-time kidney transplant patients who received blood transfusions over a six-year period with 100 who did not.

Saragosa residents deserve assistance

Saragosa's people have buried their dead now — 29 of those who had toiled beside them, shared a classroom with them, joined them in worship — but the devastation assures the memories of Friday's night tornado will linger even after life returns to a semblance of normalcy.

The tornado wiped away a community as easily as an eraser wipes away chalk, and left in its wake the 29 dead and another 121 injured, some critically. Saragosa, the reports indicate, wasn't noteworthy as a community anyway — lacking in size, amenities and other attractions that would separate it from a thousand other West Texas communities. But Saragosa was home to the people who live there and who, until Friday night, had lived their lives in the quiet obscurity of a small farming community. The tornado changed all that.

Now the task is to rebuild, as much as humanly possible, the lives devastated by the violent storm. Help was fast in coming to Saragosa. In the late hours of Friday night and the wee hours of Saturday, emergency units from Midland, Odessa, Pecos, Balmorhea and other West Texas communities reacted with the compassion and brotherly love for which this area has long been noted. Area hospitals opened their doors to provide needed medical services and the wheels of disaster relief were set in motion by Red Cross workers and other organizations. The true meaning of "neighborliness" was in abundance to help those wracked by the storm's fury. But the need for assistance didn't end after the immediate response; lives torn apart by nature take time, hard work and effort to repair.

Gov. Bill Clements toured the destruction and promptly issued a request to President Reagan for disaster assistance. That declaration came Tuesday to the relief of all those people who had witnessed the work of their lifetimes swept away by nature. Now those people will be able to acquire federal help in rebuilding their lives as much as possible.

Ironically, the federal government's help was received after hundreds of thousands of dollars had already been pledged by concerned individuals hoping to help the people of Saragosa to rebuild. The contributions came from as far away as Canada.

That's the shining light in the Saragosa story. The tornado that devastated the community, in another respect, touched lives thousands of miles away, drawing people together in a singular effort of humanity. As the people of Saragosa are saying now, with God's blessing they will rebuild and start anew. From nature's devastation, new life will arise.

Lives depend on untested pacemakers

WASHINGTON — Thanks to a dangerous loophole in a 1976 law, 5-year-old Jessica Taylor of Millbury, Ohio, is walking around with a vital pacemaker part that was never tested or approved by the Food and Drug Administration. She is one of millions of Americans whose lives depend on similarly untested medical devices because of the legal loophole.

Jack Anderson

The Medical Device Amendments of 1976 were intended to assure that pacemakers and other devices would be proven both safe and effective before they were implanted or otherwise made available to patients. But a gaping loophole allows manufacturers to market their products by simply claiming they are "substantially equivalent" to devices manufactured before the law was passed — even though the pre-1976 devices had never been tested and approved by the FDA.

According to Jessica's mother, Pam Taylor, the little girl began having blackouts about 11 months after she had a pacemaker implanted at the age of 16 months. Taylor said the doctors discovered the problem was with one of the two wires, or leads, running from the pacemaker to Jessica's heart.

The doctors replaced Jessica's pacemaker with one that required only a single lead, hooking it onto the lead that still worked. Because it is risky to remove leads from the heart, the surgeons capped the defective wire and it remains in Jessica's body.

Both leads — the one that was disconnected and the one on which Jessica's life may now depend — were Model 4951 manufactured by Medtronic Inc., an industry leader. The lead was put on the market without FDA testing under the "substantial equivalency" loophole.

Model 4951 does indeed have similar characteristics to other Medtronic leads — including Model 6972, which was recalled in 1984 as dangerously defective.

In a 1981 letter to the FDA obtained by our associate Lisa Sylvester, Medtronic stated its intention to market Model 4951 through the equivalency loophole. The company named two other models as being substantially equivalent, but went on to state that Model 4951 "utilizes the same materials and general design features as those used on currently marketed Medtronic leads." It is in a footnote to that sentence that the recalled lead was listed as having the same materials as the new model.

The recalled model was taken off the market because the thin plastic coating on the wire tended to crack. Yet the urethane material used to insulate Model 4951 is the same plastic that was used for the recalled lead, according to the Medtronic letter.

Medtronic spokesman Ray Dittrich said the company's position is that "substantial equivalency" worked well in the case of Model 4951, and he maintained that no defect had shown up in Jessica's lead. Out of 10,000 implants using the lead, he said, there have been only 19 reported failures, including four due to insulation problems. Dittrich said that about 80 percent of Medtronic's leads have reached the market on the basis of substantial equivalency.

The 1976 law required the FDA to set up a regulatory process that would require testing and approval of certain medical devices before they reached the market. There was no exemption for pre-1976 devices.

But the FDA never did evaluate pre-1976 devices. An agency spokesman explained that such an effort "would inundate our staff, overtax our limited resources and delay the review and approval of new and innovative medical technologies."

In the case of Model 4951, an FDA employee actually did ask Medtronic if it had clinical data showing that the lead was safe and effective, according to a Medtronic memo we have obtained. In a telephone conversation, the FDA employee "wanted to know where our clinical data was," and the Medtronic employee wrote: "I pointed it out in the submission. We briefly discussed it." The FDA employee then said the agency was "ready to sign it off," the memo stated.

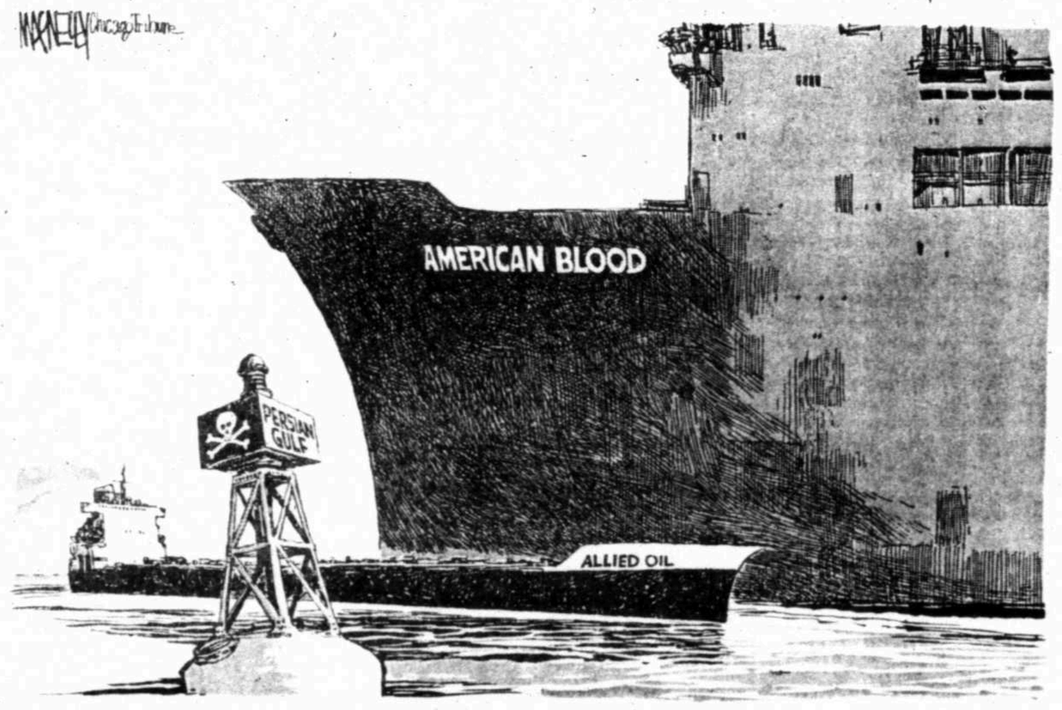

Discussing the urethane insulation problem, the FDA employee said, "Nobody (including the FDA) wants to make a big deal out of this situation," according to the company memo.

But Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., does. He plans to introduce legislation that will at least make it harder for the many manufacturers of medical devices to take the "substantial equivalency" route.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Mikhail Gorbachev's efforts to reform the Soviet economy include cutting back on the wasteful redundancies that have developed over the years in the scientific field. Gorbachev reportedly hopes to trim 10 percent to 25 percent of the superfluous scientists from the state payroll. That's no easy goal in a field where some of the top brains stay on the job long past the normal Soviet retirement age. But when the cutbacks zero in on less senior scientists, they have a tough time finding comparable jobs.

Another View:

Respect for truth

The Federal Trade Commission under Ronald Reagan has taken the view that consumers are smart enough to spot false advertising when they see it. Hence, it has stopped barring deceptive ads in the interest of reducing regulation of business.

But a private suit by the American Home Products Corp., the makers of Anacin-3 and Advil, against Johnson & Johnson's ads for Tylenol has re-established the principle that truth in advertising is important. U.S. District Judge William C. Connor ruled claims for Tylenol asserting, "You can't buy a more potent pain reliever without a prescription," are simply untrue and constituted false and misleading advertising. He barred this and several other ads for Tylenol. But American Home didn't get off free, either. The judge found many of its claims for Anacin-3 also were false and ordered them stopped, too.

The $1.8 billion-a-year non-prescription drug industry sells products so similar that it has become common practice to rely almost totally on marketing for success — including deceptive advertising if necessary. And the industry isn't alone in this regard. Since the FTC virtually stopped enforcing its truth-in-advertising regulations, disregard for the facts seem to have again become the American way of advertising.

Judge Connor has taken a small step toward restoring the principle that it is illegal to lie for money, at least in print and on the air. He appreciates that our sense of public morals is determined partly by whether advertisers are required to at least stay within the bounds of truth, even if they exaggerate their claims. But only the FTC can effectively enforce truth-in-advertising. It should do so by again vigorously policing false advertising.

FLORA LEWIS

As 'spectator' U.S. not advancing its needs

The ardor of the wealthy people who gave money for a plane and military supplies to the White House contra cause is a reflection of the broader attempt by hard-liners to take foreign policy out of functioning international relations.

Flora Lewis

Joseph Coors and Ellen Garwood, who contributed to the "private" fund for Nicaraguan rebels, did not imagine they were just buying television ads, as President Reagan said he supposed. They knew they were supporting an armed campaign.

This approach to the "Reagan Doctrine" — find a cause — is distorting American relations in several parts of the world. It is abetted rather than blocked in Congress in some cases, and it is responsible for quarrels within the administration that are hamstringing U.S. policy.

It is hard to see the point, for example, in the decision to provide so-called covert aid to Jonas Savimbi's Unita guerrillas in Angola, who are backed by South African armed forces as well as supplies. Leave aside for the moment whether or not there is something to be gained by keeping the guerrilla war going in Angola. South Africa is going to do that in any case. Why would the U.S. want to take on the expense, and the onus in the rest of Africa, of adding its bit from far away so that Washington can also be seen in Savimbi's corner?

The explanation, given privately from within the National Security Council staff, is that Savimbi offers an irresistible anti-Communist cause to crusaders. There is no real expectation that he can win, and that is not South Africa's aim. Pretoria's purpose is to keep the situation unstable in neighboring black states. That doesn't help the U.S. It only assures that Cuban troops will remain in Angola. But it does give a chance to keep an anti-Communist conflict alive for some Americans to support without a big commitment of money and men.

Similarly, congressional right-wingers led by Sen. Jesse Helms are trying to drum up support for the Renamo band in Mozambique. Originally organized by Rhodesia when it was fighting against the demand for a black majority government, Renamo has backing from some right-wingers in Portugal who never liked that country's move to democracy, from South Africa and from a bunch of desperate, dispossessed peasants in a country wracked by famine and disorder.

To pursue that fight against the State Department's effort to help Mozambique regain stability and turn away from Soviet support, Helms and his group are blocking the appointment of the new U.S. ambassador, Melissa Wells.

They have nothing against Wells, a career Foreign Service officer with a good record. But they consider her representative of State's policy of "constructive engagement" in southern Africa, a policy denounced by antagonists of the apartheid regime but also by opponents of diplomacy to woo Marxist-oriented states away from Moscow.

Renamo has a particularly unsavory reputation for brutal terrorism, and no particular program. It can keep Mozambique in distress but it cannot construct anything. Again, it offers a cause to militant "anti's" in the U.S. at low immediate cost, though without thought for the longer-range damage to the U.S. in the world and basic U.S. interest in seeing black Africa begin to surmount its devastating turmoil.

Secretary of State George Shultz has told Mozambique officials that he and Reagan fully support help for Mozambique, but Helms and Sen. Larry Pressler have sponsored an amendment that would deny any aid to Mozambique and Angola.

Foreign policy by symbol has brought even more dramatically visible disaster in the Persian Gulf. As Sen. John Glenn pointed out after the Stark was attacked, this attempt to use force as a bluff in wartorn areas has come to boomerang. The massacre of the Marines in Lebanon came as a result of giving them a mission to show themselves, without considering how they needed to be equipped and deployed in case of challenge.

Apparently warships in the Persian Gulf are expected to dominate by "showing the flag," not by carrying out their missions. Certainly, this situation has become a case for invoking the War Powers Act. But the administration refuses because there is still an attempt to replace decision with display, to cheer a cause without facing the consequences.

What all these efforts have in common is a ballgame mentality, pick a side and make cheering noises but let somebody else run the game. The focus is on domestic politics, not on advancing U.S. needs in the world.

The issue for the U.S. in dealing with other nations cannot be just to find relatively cheap involvements that show whom the U.S. opposes. The world out there is real and dangerous. These are irresponsible ways of achieving self-righteousness.

LETTERS

Lives lost for 'goods'

Wake up, America, you're being sold a bill of goods. We just lost 37 precious lives, possibly more, in the Persian Gulf. We're told that this is a vital mission, to keep the Russians out of a warm water port, and to make sure that oil gets out.

We can't keep the Russians out of Cuba! If they decide to take over Iran, Iraq or all the Middle East, how will we stop them?

And, who gets all that vital "cheap foreign oil?" Japan gets some 70 percent, European countries about 24 percent, and the U.S. of A. gets maybe 5 or 6 percent! How come we see no Japanese, French, Italian, Spanish, etc., patrolling those waters?

There is not enough money in the world to compensate those who lost loved ones in that stupid "incident." I'm not at all sure that this tragedy (they say "incident") was an accident.

They keep talking about how Iraq is our ally, but are they really? Just as they say, the Saudis are our friends. I wonder how quickly they'd turn on us should we decide they are responsible for keeping the Straits of Hormuz and the Persian Gulf open?

Perhaps now the White House will reach the conclusion that all that foreign oil is not so "cheap." Why not impose an import fee, variable, with no exclusions, on all imported outside crude and products, OPEC or otherwise, and see how they react? It might give us some needed income, while forcing the multi-national companies to accept the fact that we must, sooner or later (preferably sooner), come up with alternative energy sources.

We've got the energy resources, the technical know-how and the people to do it. Do we have the guts?

ART BUCHWALD

Take-charge president knows who to blame

The White House has changed its strategy in regards to what the President knew about the contra connection and when he knew it. Originally the President didn't know anything. He didn't even know where Nicaragua is.

Art Buchwald

But now he insists he not only knew what was going on, he thought up all the ideas in the first place. Happily, the President prefers taking the credit to having to say he lost his memory.

"Well, boys, are we going to overthrow any governments today?"

"We can't do it, Mr. President, without the approval of Congress."

"Congress has no right to tell me what to do. Where is my attorney general who is so well versed in the Constitution?"

"He's being investigated by a special prosecutor for a conflict-of-interest case in the Bronx."

"I'll take full responsibility for that."

"Mr. President, you don't have to take the blame for everything that goes on during your Administration."

"I insist on it. I'm the Commander in Chief and anything that happened was my idea. You know, I was the one who encouraged Mike Deaver to go into the public relations business."

"Please, Mr. President. You're taking enough flak by sticking your neck out on the Iran-contra business."

"I'm not going to turn my back on Col. North, no matter what he's done. He is like a son to me."

"We don't expect you to deep-six Col. North."

"If he did anything illegal, which he couldn't have if he was working for me, he's still a hero. I'll make him Commandant of the Marine Corps. That will fix those wimps in Congress. I have the urge to make a speech defending my policy in Central America and then give a pardon to everyone involved in the mess."

"I'm not sure that's legal, sir."

"If it's not legal I'll say I knew it was illegal, and that's why I did it. Is there anything else I can be blamed for?"

"President Botha of South Africa is arresting thousands of blacks every day."

"That's my fault. Our foreign policy in South Africa is a mess."

"Mr. President, are you sure you want to say that?"

"Everything that happens has to be placed on my doorstep. Besides, I like to be held accountable for things when they go wrong."

"Do you want to say you're responsible for the attempted overthrow of the government in Fiji?"

"It took place on my watch. Fiji is in our back yard. This is so much more fun than saying I can't remember. Are there any CIA covert operations I can say I bollixed up?"

"Mr. President, we prefer to keep you out of covert stuff as sometimes it's better when the White House doesn't know what's going on."

"Not this President. I want to go down in history as a man who knew everything that went on during his term, including where Fawn Hall hid her notebooks."

"You really are a hands-on executive, sir."

"That's how they taught us at Warner Brothers. What else can I answer for?"

"Not much, Mr. President, unless you want to take the blame for the garbage barge off Islip, Long Island."

"Why not? Call Col. North and tell him to raise some money from the conservatives to liberate the scow."

Lawmakers hotly debate who should be tested for AIDS

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

STATE

AUSTIN — What started Tuesday as a bill to clean up part of the state's health code turned into a passionate debate over AIDS and who should be tested for the deadly disease.

By the time the mounds of amendments had gone through the process, the House agreed to make a test for Aquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome a requirment for receiving a marriage license. Also under the House plan, local health officials would have to inform one spouse if the other spouse is tested positive for AIDS or the AIDS virus.

Rep. Nancy McDonald's original bill removed outdated langauge and created a new communicable disease section to the health code. But Rep. Jim McWilliams, D-Hallsville, successfully amended McDonald's legislation to include AIDS testing for certain people, including inmates.

By the time the bill underwent the changes, McDonald, D-El Paso and a registered nurse, said, "It's going to cause more harm than (cause) preventive medicine."

But McWilliams, who was accused of attacking the gay community with his amendments, said he merely was trying to tackle a serious health problem. "I don't care if someone is embarassed because they test positive for AIDS," he said. "It's something that goes beyond privacy and embarassment. If I'm found to have AIDS, I'm not worried about being called a homosexual. I'm worried about infecting my wife, my family and my neighbors."

In 1983 Texas repealed the requirement for a blood test when applying for a marriage license. Under the bill, blood would be taken and analyzed for AIDS before a couple could receive a marriage license.

Under McWilliams' original amendment, health officials would have to notify not only the spouse but also anyone over 16 years old living with an infected person. The only medical doctor in the House, Democratic Rep. Mike McKinney of Centerville, killed most of that section and limited notification to the spouse. McKinney said McWilliams was going to far in his effort to control AIDS.

"If you got the claps, then we're going to call your 16-year-old sister and tell her," McKinney said of McWilliams proposal. After fighting several McWilliams amendments, an angry McKinney said, "I have an amendment to make homophobia a reportable disease."

The package faces a final House vote today and opponents said they can kill the measure in the Senate in the remaining days of the legislative session, which ends Monday.

Rep. Lena Guerrero opposed AIDS testing for marriage licenses and argued that AIDS results on public records would lead to discrimination. "I don't know why you just don't tatoo them," Guerrero, D-Austin, told McWilliams.

But WcWilliams denied he was "bashing gays" or trying to discriminate and emphasized that a person should know if his or her prospective spouse has the disease. "Why should they be allowed to murder the person they live with?" he asked.

The bill also requires the Texas Department of Corrections to test inmates for AIDS within their first 10 days in prison.

Lewis doesn't expect budget before June 1

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State leaders Tuesday threw in the towel on efforts to balance the budget before the regular session ends at midnight Monday.

The Senate, meanwhile, scheduled a hearing for today on bills extending the temporary sales and gasoline-tax increases lawmakers passed last summer.

"Unfortunately, we seem to be at something of an impasse right now," said Gov. Bill Clements, noting that he hasn't discussed the budget with House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby since the threesome fled the Capitol for a skeet shoot two weeks ago.

"I think we have made an effort in this regard on meeting one-on-one," Clements said, "and actually, it didn't accomplish anything."

Despite progress toward House-Senate agreement on the size of the 1988-1989 spending bill, legislative leaders agreed with Clements' assessment. Leaders in the House, where all tax bills must originate, said they expect no action on a second tax hike necessary to finance the compromise budget and polls show no more than 55 of the 150 representatives would support a tax increase now.

"I don't see realistically, with the amount of time left, how we can act on that major of an issue," Lewis said. "At this point you can say, we'll be back here in June or July trying to straighten out the budget."

"If that's the speaker's view, then it is my view," said Hobby, who presides over the Senate. "And you know the tragic part of that is that there is not a single new fact known now that was not known last July, not known a year ago when the Legislature began a year of negotiations."

Meeting in special session last summer, lawmakers increased the state sales tax from 4.125 percent to 5 percent and hiked gasoline taxes from 10 to 15 cents a gallon. Those increases expire Aug. 31. In March, the House passed two bills making those higher rates permanent.

The Senate is scheduled to debate those bills today and Hobby said he expects senators to approve them — with an expiration date of Dec. 31. He said that would bring new revenue into the Treasury while lawmakers work on tax reform.

Clements said he remains optimistic lawmakers will solve the problem "in due course."

"It's going to take a meeting of the minds," he said. "It's going to take an understanding that we are in very difficult circumstances in the state of Texas in our fiscal matters today. It's going to take an understanding that the people of Texas do not want higher taxes. Once we reach that understanding, I think we can move forward."

SMU considering legal options against ex-student

DALLAS (AP) — A United Methodist Church official says administrative, civil and legal options are being considered against a former Southern Methodist University student who falsely told reporters that football players had engaged in academic cheating and female students had been involved in prostitution.

Bishop John Russell said Tuesday that the options are being considered against Kevin L. Lerner, who has admitted spreading what he termed "disinformation" about activities at SMU.

Lerner's widely publicized reports came on the heels of a football recruiting scandal that resulted in the National Collegiate Athletic Association suspending SMU's football program for the 1987 season for illegally continuing to play players while on probation for earlier similar offenses.

Russell's comments came during a meeting of the North Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church.

SMU attorney Leon Bennett said that the school is considering its legal options against Lerner, but he said no action has been taken.

Lerner's allegations, made in anonymous telephone calls to newspapers and radio stations, said that students had been paid by football boosters to take tests for football players and that boosters had paid some female students to have sex with prospective football players.

"The university's investigation has found no evidence in support of these allegations," Russell told conference members Tuesday. "The individual responsible for the allegations has been identified in the Dallas media and the university is consdering a variety of administrative, civil and criminal legal options aginst this person."

Bishops in the South Central Jurisdictional Conference, which technically owns SMU, agreed each would make a statement about SMU's football scandal and the resulting reorganizational changes to the various conferences that are meeting, Russell said.

Mother forced to listen while daughter sexually assaulted

DALLAS (AP) — A woman was forced to listen as one of two burglars sexually assaulted her six-year-old daughter while she was lying on the bed beside her, police say.

The man then assaulted the woman and the two men took a television set and a video recorder and fled in the victim's station wagon, police reported.

Officers said the woman told them the 3½ hour ordeal began early Tuesday when she awakened to find a man attempting to steal the television equipment.

The man told her he had a gun and the woman pleaded with him to take what he needed and leave, officers said.

After tying up the woman, the men continued to ransack the house.

The child told officers that she awakened while one of the men was going through drawers in her dresser. She said the man rubbed a knife along her cheek and told her to be quiet or her mother would be hurt.

The other robber then came in and tied the girl's arms and legs and took her to a bedroom and placed her on the bed next to her mother.

Police said the man then covered the girl's face with a pillow and assaulted her after covering the woman's face with a robe. He then assaulted the mother, police said.

Both victims were taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital, where they were treated and released, police said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Thunderstorms strafing state

Strong thunderstorms roared across West Texas early today, dropping destructive hail across a vast area.

Most of West Texas was under a severe thunderstorm watch during the pre-dawn hours.

Hail, ranging from the pea-size to marble-size was reported at several cities on the South Plains and marble-size to golf ball-size hail covered the ground at Post in Garza County southeast of Lubbock before dawn.

Several tornadoes were reported across Northwest Texas Tuesday afternoon and evening, but there were no injuries and only minor damage, authorities said. No tornadoes were reported during the early morning hours.

Other showersand thunderstorms dotted parts of the western Texas Panhandle, the Trans-Pecos and the Red River Valley west of Wichita Falls during the night.

The showers and thunderstorms developed in moist, unstable air to the east of a boundary that separated the dry air to the west. The boundary, called a dry line, extended early today across eastern New Mexico into the Trans-Pecos and the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Forecasts called for scattered showers or thunderstorms through Thursday across portions of North Texas, West Texas and South Texas. Forecasters say the thunderstorms will be more numerous over West Texas east of the mountains and said some of the storms may reach severe levels in the Panhandle, South Plains and Permian Basin.

It will be warm and windy over the state through Thursday.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s and 70s with a few readings expected to dip into the mid 50s in mountainous areas of Southwest Texas.

NATION

Rain and thunderstorms were widespread across the Plains and Midwest today while the Nevada high country was under a travel advisory for snow.

Clear skies prevailed from southern California to central New Mexico and southern Colorado as well as from the Gulf Coast into southern Missouri, southern Illinois and southern Indiana.

Strong thunderstorms rumbled across much of Kansas, western Oklahoma and northwest Texas early today.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered from eastern Iowa across Wisconsin to northern Michigan and across the northern Great Lakes region.

Rain was widely scattered from the central Appalachians to western New England and rainshowers dotted much of the West.

Jury finds doctors innocent of malpractice

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

It took a district court jury less than two hours Tuesday afternoon to strike down a Midland man's $650,000 malpractice suit against two local physicians.

Plaintiff James Morgan's assertion — that physicians B.K. Khandelwal and Brian D. Mohr had exhibited substandard care and negligence which resulted in the death of Morgan's mother in October 1983 — was rejected by the 10-woman, two-man jury in 238th District Judge Vann Culp's courtroom at approximately 6:30 p.m.

Eleven jurors agreed the physicians were not guilty and one juror abstained from a decision, court records showed.

Jurors also found that Khandelwal did not administer an excessive amount of morphine to Morgan's late mother, Mrs. Gertrude Ritter, on Sept. 26, 1983 and that Mohr's authorization for Mrs. Ritter's transfer to a Lubbock nursing home was not a display of negligence.

Mrs. Ritter had been admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital for double knee surgery on Sept. 12, 1983. After surgery, Mrs. Ritter had experienced excessive amounts of pain, which resulted in her surgeon's administering of between 12 and 36 milligrams of morphine to her daily, testimony revealed.

At the request of a floor nurse who said Mrs. Ritter was "screaming in pain" on the morning of Sept. 26, 1983, Khandelwal, Mrs. Ritter's internist, told the court he had written orders for a four-milligram dosage of morphine.

Mrs. Ritter's surgeon, Dr. Charles Younger, was out of town, Khandelwal testified.

Shortly after Khandelwal's prescription was given, Mrs. Ritter suffered either a cardiac arrest or respiratory failure — testimony was never definite on that point — and lapsed into a coma from which she never recovered.

Eighteen days later, consulting physician Mohr, an internist and cardiologist, authorized her transfer to a Lubbock nursing home. Mohr cited for the court during testimony medical evidence that any hopes of recovery from the coma were slim to none.

Mrs. Ritter died Oct. 15, 1983, one day following the transfer.

Throughout the four-day trial, which began last Wednesday, plaintiff's attorney John Green of Odessa argued that Khandelwal's dosage had been too much for the woman's 72-year-old body to handle.

Following her death, Khandelwal was called back into the woman's intensive care unit.

Acting on what he called an attitude of "being on the safe side," Khandelwal issued a verbal order for a nurse to administer 4 milligrams of the morphine "antagonist," the medical terminolgy for an overdose antidote, to Mrs. Ritter, Khandelwal testified.

Throughout the trial, Green maintained that order constituted an admission that the woman had received an overdose.

However, testimony never revealed if the antidote ever was administered.

Expert witnesses for the defense maintained that the four milligrams of morphine could not have caused the medical condition that served as a catalyst for the woman's slippage into a coma.

Mrs. Ritter received little more than custodial care after that morning of the 26th, Mohr's testimony revealed.

Several days before the woman's death, Mohr told Morgan a transfer to a Lubbock nursing home was the only option for treatment, the physician testified.

Commissioners defer action on conflict issue

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Consideration of a policy that would prohibit Midland County employees from doing business with the county was deferred Tuesday by county commissioners.

Commissioners voted in their regular meeting to circulate copies of the conflict of interest policy to county department heads, and vote on the policy at the June 8 meeting.

The policy, drafted by County Attorney Mark Dettman, states that no officer or employee of the county, can enter into a "bid, contract, sale, purchase...either directly or indirectly," with the county.

The policy also forbids county employees who own "substantial" interests in businesses from participating in transactions between the businesses and the county.

A "substantial" interest is defined by the policy as ownership of at least 10 percent of the business, or if the share of the business is worth more than $2,500.

Guy McCrary, precinct two commissioner, described the policy as "dandy," but he said he wanted a chance to study it. Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter asked that the policy be distributed to department heads for review.

Dettman said the proposed conflict of interest policy is more restrictive than the state policy; he agreed with Durward Wright, precinct one commissioner, that the policy was simply an expansion of the state requirement to include all county employees.

Dettman said the county has operated without a policy against conflict of interest, that up to this time, the county has attempted to follow the state policy.

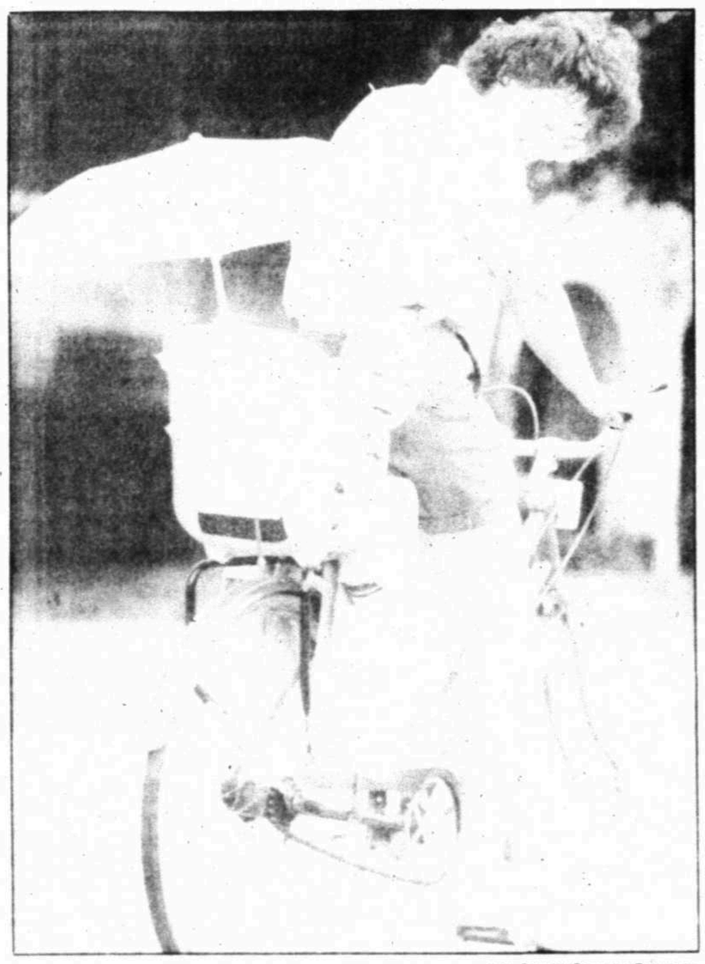

Commissioners also heard from Don Parks of the county extension service, who announced "West Texas Pride in History," a day-long gathering of exhibits focused on the history of the Permian Basin.

The event will be held in early November at the Midland Center, Parks said. One of the reasons for its organization, he said, is the desire to recognize equally the twin heritages of the area.

"We may have a little bit of a gap between the agricultural sector and the industrial, or oil and gas sector," Parks said.

"It is designed, first as a fun day for families, and second as an educational program so that we all understand everything we can about our heritage."

Cash donations needed, say relief groups

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

As food and clothing aid flow in abundance to the survivors of the Saragosa tornado, an increasing need for cash donations to both the Salvation Army and American Red Cross is needed, according to officials of both disaster-relief organizations.

"We need the monetary help," said Mrs. Maj. Harvey (Wilma) Harwell of the Midland Salvation Army, which has been at the tornado-ravaged site since shortly after the tornado plummeted into this farming-ranching town, virtually destroyed the community, took 29 lives and injured 121 people. Mrs. Harwell, a high-ranking member of the Midland unit, is known as Mrs. Maj. Harvey Harwell. The Salvation Army, which operates a canteen and aid station at Saragosa, has been "giving out articles of clothing" to the homeless survivors.

Her husband, Maj. Harvey Harwell, who is commander of the Midland Salvation Army, still was in Saragosa today in ministering to the needs of the people there.

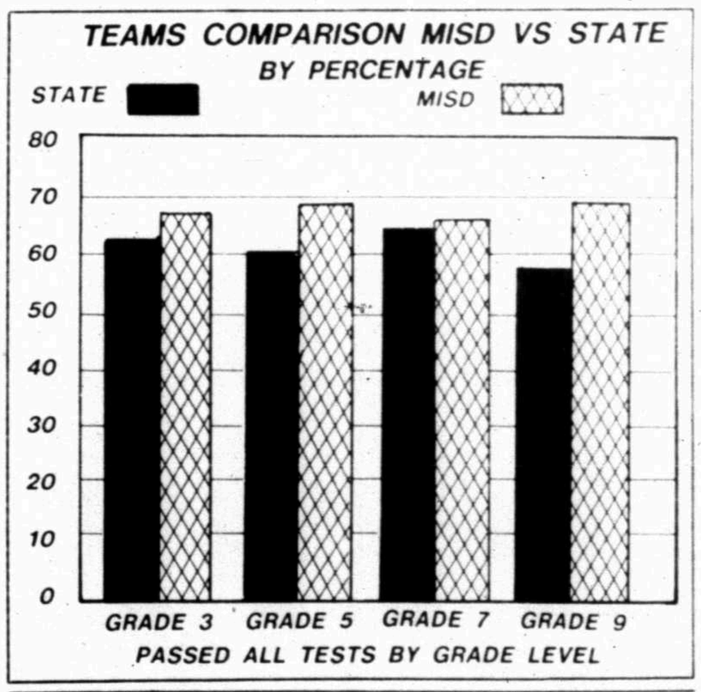

Mrs. Harwell noted that the Salvation Army "served long after the (1979 Wichita Falls) tornado," which left 53 dead and 1,812 injured and caused $500-million in property damage.

In the five days since the tornado devastated the Saragosa community of adobe, tile and frame houses, a Catholic church, school, Community Center and grocery and dry-goods store, the Midland chapter of the American Red Cross has raised more than $8,000 to benefit Saragosa survivors, said Elvis Curb, Midland ARC executive director.

"We will be there as long as the people need us," said Curb. The Red Cross has set up a Disaster Assistance Center (DAC) at Saragosa's closest community neighbor, Balmorhea, which is eight miles to the south. And DAC is to determine what the families lost and what their needs are in terms of clothing, medical care, household items, occupational supplies and tools and to fulfill those needs.

In wake of the tornado, Curb said that "all of the disaster-relief agencies, including the Salvation Army, Red Cross and several church groups, were "blessed with an overabundance of donations 'in kind' " — food, clothing, furniture.

Trustees hear consolidation proposals

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Friendly discussion turned to mild confrontation Tuesday when school board members heard a proposal to consolidate elementary school programs, then directed their attention toward pleas from teachers for salary and benefit increases.

Responding to school board requests to save money, Midland Independent School District administrators offered proposals to save about $86,000 per year to consolidate Houston and West elementary schools.

The district could save another $54,000 by relocating Head Start and prekindergarten classes from the DeZavala Annex to Bunche Early Childhood Center. Kindergarten children from the South Elementary School neighborhood who attend Bunche would transfer to South.

The hour-long discussion turned sour when Trustee Joe Golding and members of the West End Heritage Committee charged that such a plan might do more harm than good.

"I'm personally disappointed that the proposals are coming in this late when we knew this was coming for two years," Golding said.

Golding, who resides in the Houston attendance area, said he either supported merging Houston and West entirely or housing grades K-1 at West and grades 2-3 at Houston and employing a full-time principal at each school.

One administrator presently serves both schools on a half-time basis.

"One principal cannot run two schools effectively," said Golding. "There comes a time when you've got to stop talking about cost effectiveness and start talking about education effectiveness. That time has come."

West End Heritage Committee spokesman Earl Wright said his primary concern is to protect the "unique quality and character" of the residential area bounded by downtown, Missouri Avenue and Garfield Street.

West Elementary School, which lies in the extreme northwest corner of the Heritage area, is that neighborhood's "most architecurally significant" public building and is a "keystone" in the district, he said.

"The school is important not only in terms of maintaining an attractive neighborhood for current and future homeowners, but also in terms of othe overall integrity of the district," Wright added.

Trustees agreed that any action on the consolidation would be premature. A public meeting has been tentatively scheduled for 7 p.m. June 8 in the Houston Elementary School cafeteria.

Soon after trustees tabled action on the consolidation plan, the Joint Teacher Salary Committee approached the podium to plea for salary step increases and to re-instate or maintain various benefits.

Committee spokesman Bob Fennell of Midland High School told trustees that teacher compensation should reflect accolades for their efforts and student accomplishments.

Fennell cited recent reports of students "scoring subtantially higher than the national average at each grade level" while "teachers' salaries were below the national average and that of similar districts in Texas.

The committee requested that the sick-leave rebate for employees be returned to $50 per day.

Fennell said the MISD allocates $390,0000 annually for substitute pay — an amount that would be "more than adequate to compensate substitutes and to rebate teachers for accrued sick-leave in excess of 30 days."

The rebate would provide incentive for highly qualified instructors to be in the classroom regularly, Fennell said.

If state monies are curtailed, the committee requested that dollars currently allocated by MISD for the career ladder be retained to reward exceptional teaching.

Odessa council rejects plan for private jail

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — City council members Tuesday unanimously rejected a proposal to establish a minimum security jail within the city limits.

Contractor Jimmy Moore said he felt the decision to reject conversion of the old Gulf Oil building into a privately run jail facility to house non-violent prisoners "was emotional rather than rational."

His intention in proposing the jail's construction, he said, had been to "enhance Odessa, not to detract."

As proposed by Moore, conversion of the 26,000 square-foot building in the 900 block of West 2nd Street would have allowed housing of as many as 125 state prison inmates. The facility would have employed about 20 people with an annual payroll of as much as $500,000.

Moore's proposal had previously been turned down by the City Planning and Zoning Commission, with only commission member Jerry Gentry voting in favor of granting a specific use permit to allow the facility's construction.

City Planning and Inspection Director Judy Miller told council members that 101 notices of the application for the specific use permit had been mailed to residents nearby the proposed location. Of the 34 responses returned, she said, 21 protested and 13 favored approval of the proposal.

Councilman J.L. "Barney" Barnett said the return response was disappointing and "shows a lack of interest."

"It's upsetting to me that we only had a 30 to 33 percent response," he said.

Attorney Richard Buck, representing Armco Steel — which owns the National Supply Co. building on West Murphy — said his client believed the proposed jail facility "would have a negative impact" on

Local man to head state program

From Staff Reports

The director and originator of the Midland Crime Stoppers Program, David Cobos, will become the state coordinator of about 161 Texas Crime Stoppers programs in June.

Cobos, 31, said he will tentatively begin work as the Texas Crime Stoppers' coordinator in Austin, June 22 and direct a staff of two.

The state agency, under the direction of the governor's office, will assist the local programs with technical advice and training, Cobos said.

The Midland County Sheriff's office will begin in-house interviews to fill Cobos' position Friday, he said.

Returning to college seemed like good idea at the time

Ott

One of the things you constantly hear around a place like Midland, especially during an economic downturn, is that all kinds of people are thinking about going back to college.

They get laid off one job so they figure, "What the heck?" I'll change majors and start over.

In a way, it makes sense. If employers aren't hiring in your particular field, you've gotta go where the jobs are. And, if a certain background is required, then you get that piece of paper that says you are adequately educated.

If it takes four years and several thousand dollars to get it, so be it. That's considered your investment.

A friend was telling me about his decision recently. He had been laid off by an oil company late last year and now his unemployment cash is about to run out.

Panic is beginning to set in. You can see it in his eyes — dark rings have begun to form. And, he has started to talk crazy. He babbles a lot.

He called me the other night. The conversation went something like this:

"I've decided to do it," he semi-shouted, before saying "hello" or announcing who he was. "I have no choice. I've got to do something. I can't go on like this forever."

"Hello?" I said.

"Huh? Oh, yeah, right, hi," he said. "I'm going to do it. It's my decision and there's nothing you or anyone else can say to change my mind."

By this time I'd figured out who I was listening to.

I said, "Rog, what in the hell are you talking about? It's two in the morning and I'm in no mood for your ramblings. You've got five minutes, so get to the point."

He seemed hurt but that did not deter his enthusiasm. He charged on at full blast. "College," he said. "I'm going back to school."

There was a pause.

"Good," I yawned. "See you at homecoming."

"Wait," he screamed. "Don't you want to hear about it?"

I started to tell him exactly what I thought about the whole situation, but, instead, I glanced at the clock, lit a cigarette and resigned myself to a one-sided conversation.

"I'm going to become a teacher," he said. "I will mold the minds of today's youth. I'll be their role model."

"Yeah, right," I said, trying to blow a smoke ring.

"Actually, going back to college will be a good learning experience for me. Think about it. I'll hear some of the most intelligent professors in the country discuss everything from 14th century France to the philosophical changes taking place on the Supreme Court. It'll be fascinating."

"Sounds like fun to me," I said.

"And, remember those wine and cheese rap parties we used to have?" he said. "It'll be just like old times — sitting around on the floor cross-legged, passing the bottle of wine around and rapping about social injustices."

I couldn't help but laugh. "Roger," I said. "College kids don't talk about that kind of stuff any longer. They're into tax shelters and mutual bonds. And, if you get caught using a word like 'rapping' they'll think you're a extraterrestrial being."

"Well, I still think it will be very rewarding," he said. "I always did enjoy hearing those lectures. It will be stimulating. College life was one of my happiest times. I'm looking forward to it. Football games, pretty coeds, beer parties."

"Great," I said. "And, don't forget the tests. Remember those all-night cram sessions? Weren't they fun, too?"

"Hmmm," he muttered. "I do seem to remember those. They weren't so terrific, were they?"

"Not at all," I said. "They nearly killed me. You'd better give them some serious thought before making a commitment."

There was a pause.

"Maybe you're right," he said. "I think I'll check on an extension on my unemployment benefits."

"Good idea."

Spokesman says statement could hurt AIDS victims

HOUSTON (AP) — Suggestions that retired United Methodist Church Bishop Finis Crutchfield contracted AIDS through casual contact could provide ammunition for those seeking to segregate AIDS victims from society, a spokesman for a homosexual group says.

"This misinformation could put hundreds if not thousands of people who are sick at the risk of being shunned," said Joe Thornton, a member of the executive board of Houston's Gay Political Caucus.

Following his funeral Saturday, Crutchfield's family released a statement confirming the 70-year-old church figure died of AIDS, but said he did not contract the disease through a homosexual or extramarital relationship.

Crutchfield also was not an intravenous drug user and had not received a blood transfusion that any family members could recall, according to a statement from the Rev. Charles N. Crutchfield of Odessa, the dead bishop's son.

"I do know, however, that over the past two years, in the course of his work as bishop in residence on a local church staff in Houston...Dad was called upon to minister to many persons suffering from AIDS," the statement released after Crutchfield's funeral said.

"He helped to plan and conduct funerals, provide transportation to the hospital and clean the apartments of AIDS vicitms," it added.

Thornton said Monday the family's statement could provide fuel for state lawmakers to set up concentration camps for AIDS victims.

Dr. James Haughton, Houston health department director, said that if Crutchfield contracted AIDS through casual contact, he'd be the first such case on record.

Bishop Ben Oliphint, who succeeded Crutchfield as bishop, said he had never heard even rumors suggesting the bishop might have been a homosexual.

Oliphint distributed several hundred copies of the family's statement to delegates to the annual meeting of the Texas United Methodist Annual Conference this week.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

The Volunteer Center's purpose is to increase the effective use of resources for community problem solving through volunteerism. This week's column will be dedicated to help specifically the tornado victims in the Saragosa area.

The Volunteer Center has recruited caring volunteers from Midland to personally deliver donated goods to the victims and their families in Saragosa. Individuals and organizations are urged to join in the caring spirit!

The following items are desperately needed:

■ Emergency needs — Any and all underwear, laundry and bath soap, toilet paper, paper towels, paper plates and cups, baby formula, baby food, baby diaper rash ointment, baby powder, baby oil, baby cloth or paper diapers.

■ Comfort needs — Food: Canned foods, potted meat, Spam, dry milk, bread, bottled water.

Kitchen items: Plastic utensils, manual can openers.

Clothing: Socks and nightwear for men, women, boys, girls, toddlers, and infants.

Toiletries: Kotex, toothpaste, toothbrushes, hair combs and brushes, deodorant, face cleansers, makeup and nail polish, shaving cream, razors and razor blades.

Miscellaneous: Kleenex, clothes pins, portable clothes lines, children's toys, games, puzzles, Spanish and English books and magazines, pillows, and any and all construction items.

Volunteers make a difference! For more information on how you can volunteer or on how your agency can join the Volunteer Center, call 684-5866.

MISD

The committee also requested that trustees re-instate the matching annuity from 2.5 to 3 percent and that state salary increments be distributed to all MISD teachers.

"We request that this pay step be provided for the veteran as well as the beginning teacher," Fennell said. "The policy of providing a pay staep should be continued to maintain a superior staff."

In other business Tuesday, trustees learned that students in grades 3, 5, 7, and 9 improved significantly in their performance on the Texas Assessment of Minimum Skills Test.

The MISD student mastery of the TEAMS, according to officials, was better than last year on every test at every grade level.

At third grade level, 66 percent of all students mastered all tests compared to 63 percent of Texas third graders. On the subtests, 86 percent mastered math, 79 percent mastered reading and 75 percent masterd writing.

In the fifth grade, 68 percent of the students mastered all tests compared to 60 percent for the state and 58 percent locally last year. Eighty-four percent mstered math, 83 percent mastered reading and 79 percent mastered writing.

Sixty-six percent of all seventh graders mastered all tests compared to 65 percent for the state and 54 percent locally last year. On the subtests, 83 percent mastered math, 83 percent mastered reading and 74 percent mastered writing.

At the ninth grade level, 68 percent mastered all tests compared to 58 percent at the state level and 60 percent in MISD last year. Ninety-two percent mastered math, 81 percent mastered reading and 75 percent mastered writing.

Trustees also:

— Renewed probationary teacher contracts.

— Approved teacher assignments to the Career Ladder Level II.

— Approved librarian assignments to the local merit pay program.

— Heard a presentation on budget matters from the Texas State Teachers Association.

— Authorized a request for assistance from the Texas Association of School Boards Legal Assistance Fund for the MISD's case against the League of United Latin American Citizens and Black Advisory Council.

— Adopted a resolution naming the Lee High School Auditorium in memory of the late Stan Cobb.

DONATIONS

"Many churches have adopted disaster relief as part of their mission work," said Curb, who cited the work of the Texas Baptist Men. That group's role includes preparing hot meals for disaster survivors.

Red Cross does "work closely" with the Salvation Army, the Texas Baptist Men, the Mennonites and other disaster-relief groups, Curb said. Mennonites are members of an austere but industrious Protestant group. Mennonites often provide skilled labor in rebuilding communities ravaged by natural disasters. The Mennonites, Curb said, helped in the building and rebuilding of houses which were destroyed in the 1982 Paris tornado. The Red Cross, he said, furnished building materials rebuilding houses.

Curb said that the Red Cross was mandated by the U.S. Congress in 1905 to coordinate civilian-disaster relief, to provide emergency services to members of the Armed Services and their families, and to work with governments in enforcing "humanitarian treaties" by helping wounded and ailing combatants and non-combatants in warfare.

The Salvation Army is a Christian religous body which provides food, shelter, and clothing to the needy, responds to people's needs at disasters, and administers to the spirit.

Like the Salvation Army, the Red Cross is funded by voluntary contributions and receives no federal funds. Both are members of the United Way.

Neither agency sells disaster-relief supplies.

But Curb said that a Midland schoolteacher has "made statements in class" that the Red Cross is selling disaster supplies at Saragosa.

"This is not the case," Curb said. The erroneous information, he said, is an apparent effort "to dissuade them (the students) or their parents from supporting the Red Cross."

The teacher "will be confronted," he said. "I'll guarantee you that. Red Cross is not selling anything related to disaster relief at Saragosa or anywhere else. We do not sell disaster-relief (supplies) nor do we ask for repayments of loans." He said the Red Cross does not make loans but does give grants for rebuilding or replacing housing after other means are exhausted.

Donations for Saragosa relief are fueled by the "compassion and empathy" of both adults and children, Curb said.

"What still gets to me is particularly the young folks that come in and say, 'I was saving in my piggy bank to do something specific, but those kids at Saragosa need this worse than I do.'"

DOCTORS

Although Morgan maintained he gave no one from MMH permission to transfer his mother, the defense argued that he did.

Green argued that Mrs. Ritter, a Medicare patient, was weakened to the point of death during the two hour, 45 minute-ambulance transfer to Lubbock.

An expert witness called by Green failed to convince the jury that the ambulance ride had been in unbearable weather conditions and had ultimately dehydrated Mrs. Ritter, according to responses contained in the judge's charge.

Records from the nursing home taken upon Mrs. Ritter's arrival Oct. 14, showed her skin to be "moist and pink" — not characteristics of a dehydrated person, the defense told the court.

The defense further presented evidence from the National Weather Service indicating the temperature outside the air-conditioned ambulance during transfer was in the 70s, not in the 90s, as Green had argued.

And though the plaintiff's expert witness, Dr. Anne Robbins of New Jersey, a retired thoracic surgeon turned nursing home administrator, maintained that a morphine overdose was the root of Mrs. Ritter's death, the witness made no mention of the overdose in a February letter she wrote to Morgan advising him of the viability of his case, the defense maintained.

Questioning the credibility of the witnesses was a central gambit during closing arguments made to jurors by attorneys for both sides.

One expert witness for the defense, Dr. Willaim McGavran III, testified under Green's cross-examination that he charged $200 for the first hour of his services as a witness and $100 every hour thereafter.

The defense, led by Midland attorney Mike McKinney and Lubbock attorney D. Murray Hensley, argued that Dr. Robbins knew nothing of the case herself and had never been exposed to the standards of medical care in Midland, Texas.

"I'm almost speechless," Mohr, who "didn't sleep at nights" during the trial, said Tuesday evening. "I'm ecstatic the jury exonerated Dr. Khandelwal and me."

Dr. Khandelwal said he also hadn't slept at night during the trial. "I feel great," he said afterward. "I never felt I was negligent. I did the best I could."

Both physicians said undergoing the trial would cause them to make records in greater detail. However, they were angry at no one, they said.

"No one had won the trial...especially not Mrs. Ritter," said Mohr.

Morgan said he would not appeal the jury's decision.

"It just proves that justice isn't blind because it wasn't a unanimous decision," Morgan said.

"In Midland County the odds are stacked against you," he added. "People are deathly afraid to go against their doctors and their hospitals."

Exhibits on such topics as diverse as nome life, such as cooking and quilting, fiddling and military history will be among those presented, Parks said.

"I think all of this would be a good opportunity to learn just what our ancestors did for us," Parks said.

"I think it's an excellent idea," added County Judge William Ahders. "I think we ought to endorse it."

Parks told the commissioners no county funds would be required to stage the event. He said most likely, participants would handle their own expenses.

In other action, commissioners OK'd payment of $19,000 to Midland College to maintain the county's breath analyzing devices. Dettman said the money will pay the salary of a technical supervisor at the college, who calibrates the intoxilyzers and trains law enforcement officers to use them.

Dettman said the next closest qualified technical supervisor is headquartered in Pecos, 90 miles west of Midland.

"It (the funding) is not something that is essential, but I think our DWI program would be hanging by a bare thread if we have to rely on somebody from Pecos," Dettman said.

"Prosecution would be severely hampered."

From Staff Reports

A man who startled a burglar outside his residence early today jumped in his car, chased the burglar and held him at bay with a baseball bat until police arrived, police reports said.

According to police spokesman Cpl. Jim White, at about 5:45 a.m. today Estella Moya, owner of the 1-2-3 Club, 2007 E. Front St., heard someone break a window to the business. Ms. Moya woke her son, Louis Aranda, who walked outside and found a man's legs sticking out of the window.

White said the man then ran; and Aranda chased him in his car to the 400 block of North Lee Street. A fight ensued, and Aranda was hit in the arm with a large board. The suspect, a 43-year-old Midland man, was hit in the face and chest with a baseball bat, but refused treatment for the injuries, White said.

Police today also are investigating the burglary of a building in the 3600 block of North Big Spring. According to reports, a racing go-cart valued at $800, a 19-inch color portable television valued at $400 and assorted tools valued at $500 were stolen. Police said the burglary occurred between Dec. 1 and Tuesday.

Police have a 50-year-old suspect in custody for the theft of a satellite dish valued at $500. According to reports, the dish was stolen in the 1000 block of North Midkiff Road.

In other reports, police are investigating two vehicle burglaries. One burglary occurred in the 2400 block of Loop 250, and a radar detector valued at $150 and a citizens' band radio valued at $40 were taken. Reports for the other burglary said a leather attache case valued at $46 and a check were stolen from a vehicle parked in the 3200 block of West Cuthbert.

both the area's business and residential properties.

A resident of the area, Mark Ritter, 208 N. Sam Houston Ave., told council members the area "has enough problems" without putting a prison facility there.

He suggested that if he wanted to put such a facility within a mile or so of Permian Mall "you'd have lots of people up here protesting" rather than the handful that turned up Tuesday.

Jamie Berryhill, president of Berryhill Investments — the company that converted an old West 2nd Street motel into the London Square shopping center — said he had explored the possibility of using the old motel for a detention center but abandoned the idea.

He told council members a survey just completed showed there is "a low self image" in Odessa and concerns about security in the Permian Basin area in general.

Berryhill suggested Odessa should concentrate on further development of health care and retirement industries.

Area resident Lois Ball, 608 N. Graham, asked council members if they would "like to live in the shadow of a prison."

Another suggested the old Gulf Oil building has historical value, and if Moore wanted to do something worthwhile he could donate the building to the city for preservation as a historical landmark.

Prior to calling for a vote, Mayor Don Carter said the issue has caused great concern, that whatever the decision, "It is not being made because of a lack of love for this city and its citizens."

The unanimous council voted to reject Moore's proposal followed Carter's statement and a reading of the special use permit ordinance.

COBOS

Cobos started the Midland program in 1984. Crime Stoppers is a community program designed to involve citizens in helping solve crimes by offering anonymity and a cash award, he said.

If the tips lead to an arrest or indictment, anonymous sources become eligible for a cash award of up to $1,000, Cobos said.

Since the Midland program began in 1984, the tips have led to 360 arrests, 464 cases cleared, $419,603 worth of stolen property recovered, $433,416 worth of narcotics recovered and the program has paid cash rewards of $55,350.

GOP lawmakers endorse Bush for president

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland Rep. Tom Craddick joined 50 of his 61 GOP colleagues in the Texas Legislature Tuesday in endorsing Vice President George Bush for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

Craddick, most senior of the Republicans in the House, pulled 44 of the 55 other House Republicans in backing Bush. All six of the GOP senators said they support the vice president.

Former Congressman Tom Loeffler, co-chairman of the Bush for President campaign in Texas, called the announcement "a remarkable level of support from the elected leadership in the Legislature."

"I am very proud to be a part of this group of legislators who understands the wisdom of supporting Vice President Bush," Craddick said. "Being a Texan does indeed make him special, but over and above that he is the natural leader for Texas and the nation looking toward the 1990s."

Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris of Dallas, dean of the GOP's senatorial delegation, called Bush "the best person for the job.

"He defends his beliefs and he believes in Texas," Harris said. "My support is unqualified."

STATE IN BRIEF

Ex-detective pleads no contest in possession of eagle carcass

BEAUMONT (AP) — A former Jasper police detective pleaded no contest in federal court to charges of unlawfully possessing a bald eagle carcass.

Former detective Sgt. Gaynne W. "Fuzzy" Foster, 34, appeared Tuesday before U.S. Magistrate Harry McKee of Tyler during a brief hearing to answer the charges. Foster faces a maximum penalty of one-year in prison and a $5,000 fine when sentenced June 9.

A federal grand jury in February indicted Foster on two charges of possessing a bald eagle and possession of an endangered species. Assistant U.S. Attorney John Stevens agreed to drop the possession of an endangered species count in exchange for Foster's plea.

Police officials suspended Foster shortly after a federal game warden said he recovered the carcass of a bald eagle from a freezer at Foster's home on Nov. 16.

The Jasper City Council fired Foster one day after the grand jury indicted him.

Dallas caddie charged in death

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A caddie who was in town for the Silver Pages Classic golf tournament last weekend has been charged with first-degree murder in the shooting death of another caddie.

Joe Willie Benton, 39, of Dallas, who caddied for Jim Barber on the PGA Senior Tour, is accused of shooting Walter J. "John" Gerski, 37, of Akron, Ohio, early Saturday with a .22-caliber pistol at an Oklahoma City motel.

Gerski caddied for PGA Senior Tour golfer Dale Douglass.

Benton, who was arrested Saturday, was charged Tuesday in Oklahoma County District Court.

Assistant District Attorney Ray Elliott said Gerski was angry because a woman staying with him had moved in with Benton after an argument.

He said Gerski went to see Benton twice and was shot in the chest, hand and arm during the second encounter.

Clements vetoes adjudication bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements vetoed a change in court procedure Tuesday that had been recommended by the Texas State Bar.

Clements vetoed a bill by Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, that would allow a defendant to get deferred adjudication, a form of probation, if convicted by a jury after he or she pleaded innocent.

Deferred adjudication is currently available only to those who plead guilty and cooperate with authorities.

"To expand availability of deferred adjudication across the board would defeat the policy underlying this procedure by encouraging more contested criminal trials," Clements said.

Davis' lawyer wants chance to unmask killer

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — A lawyer defending millionaire Cullen Davis in a wrongful death suit says if given the judicial green light, he might unmask the gunman in a murderous 1976 shooting spree at the Davis mansion.

Dallas lawyer Steve Sumner said he wants the latitude to explore who besides Davis had a motive to kill and indicated he might pinpoint who "actually committed the shootings."

Sumner has said in and out of court he feels he can shed new light on the identity of the gunman in black who killed two and wounded two at the secluded $6 million mansion on the night of Aug. 2, 1976.

Davis, 53, is the defendant in a trio of multimillion-dollar civil suits stemming from the death of Andrea Wilborn, 12, the daughter of his ex-wife Priscilla, and her second husband, Jack Wilborn.

Lawyers were to resume their efforts today to seat a jury for what they predict will be a lengthy trial.

Mrs. Davis, 45, has contended for 11 years that it was Davis who wounded her and killed her boyfriend and her daughter during the savage midnight assault by a man dressed in black and wearing a woman's black wig.

An Amarillo jury acquitted the wealthy Fort Worth oil heir of the child's death in 1977, but that verdict has no legal bearing on the current civil proceedings.

State District Judge Claude Williams said he intends to keep the focus of the trial on one issue: Did Cullen Davis kill his stepdaughter?

"It's just as simple as it can be," Williams told Sumner. "The plaintiffs say Davis shot these people. You say he didn't."

Davis said Tuesday he considered the wrongful death suit "an imposition on my time" because "the facts of the case have already been adjudicated" by the Amarillo jury.

"The whole reason for this is greed," he said. "I don't expect them to get a judgment...They might end up getting a judgment, but they can wallpaper their house with it."

Davis also said he no longer is a millionaire, that he owns only "my house and my car." Later, he modified that a bit, saying, "Well, I'm no longer a multi, multi, multi, multimillionaire."

The Davis family's oil-related business empire, Kendavis Industries International, is in state bankruptcy court.

Davis and another victim of the mansion shootings, Bubba Gavrel, now 33, reached an out-of-court settlement last year which reportedly approached $1 million in land, cash and deferred payments.

Principals in the current case, asking that their names not be used, said Davis proposed a $100,000 settlement last week, but that plaintiffs rejected it as "outrageous and insulting."

Davis refused to discuss figures, but said, "I would like to have settled it out of court so I wouldn't have to be here."

Dollar climbs

LONDON (AP) — The dollar continued to climb against major foreign currencies today, but European currency dealers predicted the rally would soon run out of steam because of profit taking. Gold prices fell.

The dollar gained against the yen on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market for the fifth consecutive day, closing at 143.15 yen compared with Tuesday's 141.85. The dollar hasn't been that strong in Tokyo since April 16. Later, in London, it was quoted at 144.30 yen.

In London, the British pound fell sharply for the second day in a row. It cost $1.6090 to buy one pound, more than three cents cheaper than Tuesday's late price of $1.6455.

GOLD

Bullion dealers said the price of gold fell in thin trading, pushed down by the strong dollar.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $450.50 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $452.00. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $447.90.

In Zurich, the bid price was $448.25, down from $451.50 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $8.12 to close at a bid $450.88.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $7.35 a troy ounce, down from Tuesday's $7.44.

Getty board denies Pennzoil agreement

By ROGER GILLOTT
AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In an action that could be a setback for Pennzoil Co., 13 former Getty Oil Co. directors said they never agreed to sell Getty to Houston-based Pennzoil.

The statement comes as Pennzoil is pursuing a $10.35 billion judgment it has won against Texaco Inc. for interfering with a merger between Getty and Pennzoil.

"For years, Texaco and Pennzoil have been telling the world what they believe happened," Pittsburgh, Pa., attorney Steve Feirson, said Tuesday as he released the statement from the former Getty directors.

"Now we will hear from those who were there and voted and know what they intended and didn't intend."

The former Getty directors said they authorized management to enter into talks with Pennzoil only on condition that whatever came from those talks must come back to the board for further consideration.

"The truth is that Pennzoil tried to acquire control of Getty Oil by forcing through a transaction at an unfair price (that) was far from adequate. Texaco simply outbid Pennzoil," the directors said in their statement.

Texaco agreed in 1984 to buy Getty for $10.1 billion, or about $989 million more than the value Pennzoil's offer placed on the company.

Pennzoil spokesman Robert Harper said the company found it curious that the former Getty board members waited three years to make their remarks.

"We would only assume at this point that the reason the former Getty directors issued the statement is because they are somewhat nervous about the indemnities that Texaco agreed to," Harper said Tuesday.

In White Plains, N.Y., Texaco said it "is most pleased by the support expressed by the former directors of Getty Oil Co."

Feirson said the former directors didn't issue the statement at the behest of Texaco, although he said Texaco did receive an advance "courtesy copy."

No advance copy was sent to Pennzoil, he said.

Pennzoil, claiming it had a binding agreement to buy the Los Angeles company, sued Texaco in Texas court and won.

Texaco, which has steadfastly insisted there was no agreement between Getty and Pennzoil, sought Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors to keep from posting a $12 billion bond while it appeals the award to Pennzoil.

Feirson said he represents 11 of the former directors and that two others concurred with their statement.

Getty at the time of the deal with Texaco had 16 directors. One has died and two others — Gordon Getty, head of the family trust, and Harold Williams, head of the Getty Museum that was a major stockholder in the oil company — received advance copies of the statement but made no effort to attach their names to it, Feirson said.

Gordon Getty's attorney, Moses Lasky of San Francisco, confirmed he had received a copy of the letter but said Getty had not seen it.

Nonetheless, Lasky said, "I think he (Getty) would be quite in accord that there was no agreement with Pennzoil."

Williams is traveling in Europe and hadn't seen the document, a spokeswoman for the museum trust said.

Those who signed the statement included Sidney Petersen, the company's former chairman and chief executive, and Robert Miller, its former president and chief operating officer.

Atlantic Southeast Airlines to serve Midland/Odessa

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Permian Basin air travelers will be able to connect with an additional 209 domestic and international Delta Air Lines flights plus have five additional daily departure times to choose from on July 1, when Atlantic Southeast Airlines begins nonstop service between Midland Regional Airport and Dallas/Fort Worth Regional Airport.

Atlanta-based ASA is an original "Delta Connection" commuter airline, signing on with Delta on May 1, 1984. That status allows ASA to offer on-line fares and excursion fares with the larger airline.

"We are delighted to have this opportunity to serve the Midland-/Odessa to Dallas/Ft. Worth market," John W. Beiser, ASA's senior vice president of sales and service, said at a press conference this morning.

The inauguration of Midland service by ASA complements an aggressive market expansion program by Delta in Texas, Beiser said. "Delta hopes to have 300 daily departures from D/FW by 1988."

ASA will serve its new Midland-Dallas route with 30-passenger Embraer Brasilia twin-engine turboprop planes. The Brasilia features a flight attendant, beverage service and ample overhead and underseat storage areas, Beiser said. ASA is the world's first commuter operator of the aircraft which is powered by two Pratt & Whitney engines and cruises at 345 mph.

"ASA considered entering the Midland/Odessa market last year, but we postponed our decision until this aircraft was available," Beiser said. He added that the airline expects its tenure in Midland to be a long one, because the plane has a breakeven load factor of 34 percent, which means flights carrying as few as 10 passengers will not lose money for the commuter carrier.

Dow defies glum economic reports

By VIVIAN MARINO
AP Business Writer

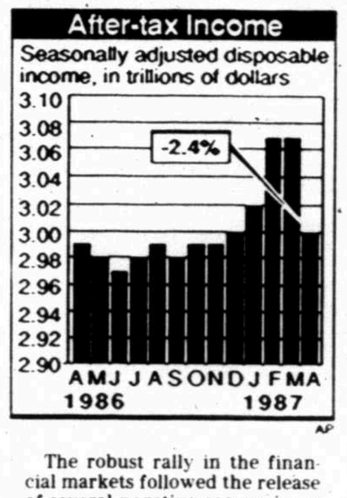

The financial markets have shrugged off a new set of gloomy economic reports, with the stock market posting one of its best days ever and interest rates declining sharply.

The Dow Jones industrial average shot up 54.74 points Tuesday — its third-best session — to close at 2,297.94. On the New York Stock Exchange, more than four stocks rose for each issue that declined.

Analysts said stock prices surged as anxieties about inflation were eased by a rise in the dollar and drops in interest rates and commodity prices.

The Treasury's bellwether 30-year bond was up more than $25 per $1,000 face amount Tuesday while its yield tumbled to 8.66 percent from 8.92 percent Friday, following the Memorial Day weekend. Short-term interest rates also were mostly lower.

On foreign-exchange markets, the dollar jumped higher against most major currencies.

The robust rally in the financial markets followed the release of several negative economic reports from the government and private groups.

The Commerce Department said Americans' after-tax income plunged 2.4 percent in April, the sharpest drop in more than a decade, forcing many to dip into their savings to pay off hefty tax bills.

A real estate group, meanwhile, reported sales of existing homes edged down 1.4 percent last month and automakers said domestic car sales lagged nearly 25 percent in mid-May.

The Commerce Department said April's 2.4 percent drop in after-tax, or disposable incomes, came as personal savings fell to an all-time low of 0.1 percent, from 3.2 percent in March.

Analysts said the figures primarily reflected big tax bills facing Americans on April 15. The department estimated that personal tax payments increased last month at an annual rate of $85.5 billion.

Higher-than-normal tax payments occurred because Americans sold assets at the end of last year to take advantage of lower tax rates for capital gains under the old tax law, analysts said.

First RepublicBank Corp. merger gets 'thumbs up'

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND

First RepublicBank

With the blessings of the stockholders of its two component companies, First RepublicBank Corp. emerged today after five and one-half months of attending to the details of creating the nation's 12th largest bank.

Stockholders of Dallas-based RepublicBank Corp. and its former crosstown rival, InterFirst Corp., voted today to approve the $544 million stock transaction which will create First RepublicBank.

"Today is an historic day — the way has been cleared for the merger of RepublicBank and InterFirst Bank," said Matthew P. Murphy, president of RepublicBank First National Midland, in Dallas for the stockholders' meeting.

"The shareholders of both companies have approved the merger to join a First RepublicBank Corp., thus creating the largest banking corporation in the Southwest.

"Locally, RepublicBank First National Midland will change to First RepublicBank Midland and InterFirst Bank Odessa will become First RepublicBank Odessa," Murphy said.

"The merger will take effect June 6 and we will begin doing business as First RepublicBank on Monday, June 8."

Consumers will not see any immediate or drastic changes in bank operations under the new corporate umbrella, according to Jane Simon-

Murphy

Standard Oil to sell assets

By JONATHAN P. HICKS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK (NYT) — The Standard Oil Co. said Tuesday that it would sell some of its manufacturing and mining assets, as well as a note held by one of its units, in a complex financial transaction valued at about $1.8 billion.

The buyer, Shearson Lehman Brothers, said in turn that it had already arranged the sale of most of the manufacturing and mining assets for $190 million.

STANDARD OIL
BP

Analysts said that Standard was divesting itself of some unprofitable operations before the completion of its previously announced acquisition by the British Petroleum Co. British Petroleum, which already owned 55 percent of Standard, agreed in late April to acquire the rest for $7.82 billion. The acquisition is expected to be completed within a month.

Shearson, for its part, was basically acting as a middleman. It said it did not plan to operate any of the units for the long term.

The largest part of the transaction involved a $1.6 billion note from Standard Oil held by its Industrial Holdings Corp. The note represents a loan made by Standard to its Peabody Coal unit.

Foreign trade deficit shrank 0.7 percent in first quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's merchandise trade deficit narrowed slightly to $38.3 billion during the first three months of the year, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the imbalance between what America imports and what it exports shrank 0.7 percent from an all-time high of $38.6 billion during the October-December quarter of 1986.

The new report confirmed parallel figures released earlier which put the first quarter deficit at a slightly higher $41.0 billion. The new deficit totals are lower because they reflect trade on a "balance of payments" basis, omitting such factors as military sales and the cost of shipping and insurance.

These new figures will be used in computing the broadest measure of foreign trade, the current account, which includes not only trade in merchandise but trade in services as well. That report for the first quarter will be released on June 16.

During the first three months of the year, imports rose 1 percent to $96.5 billion while American exports rose 2.1 percent to $58.2 billion.

Study: Textile quotas equal 152,000 jobs

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to limit the growth of textile and apparel imports to 1 percent a year would create as many as 152,000 new jobs within two years, according to a study commissioned by an industry-labor coalition lobbying for the bill.

The study, which the Fiber, Fabric and Apparel Coalition for Trade planned to distribute to members of Congress this week, was done by ICF Inc., a Washington economic consulting firm.

The bill examined in the study was introduced earlier this year by Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C., chairman of the Congressional Textile Caucus. It would set a global limit on textile and apparel imports based on 1986 levels and permit a 1 percent annual growth in each import category.

Derrick's bill is a scaled-down version of the textile bill that President Reagan vetoed in the major trade battle of the last Congress. The House failed by eight votes last August to override that veto.

The ICF study attempted to predict the impact of the Derrick bill on the U.S. economy in 1987 and 1988 by using three levels of possible import growth: the 17 percent annual rate that existed from 1980 to 1986; the 9.9 percent rate from 1973 to 1986; and the 6 percent annual rate called for in the MultiFiber Arrangement, the international agreement governing textile and apparel trade.

Using the 17 percent rate as a baseline, the study estimated that the bill's import restrictions would increase domestic textile and apparel production to the point that 81,800 new jobs would be created in 1987 and 152,100 in 1988.

At the 9.9 percent annual growth rate, the study estimated that the bill would create 53,800 new jobs in 1987 and 101,700 in 1988. At the 6 percent import growth level, the study projected net employment gains of 26,600 in 1987 and 52,200 in 1988.

The impact of those employment gains on the U.S. economy, however, would be offset to some degree by the price increases and resulting drops in consumption that likely would result from the reduced availability of textile and apparel imports, the study said.

New club more than 'just another disco'

By DEANNA J. NEAL

Neal

If you're looking for a fun time this summer in an elegant, first-class atmosphere, Kenny's Bar & Grill, next to the Golden China in Mission Square, could be just the spot.

Set to open in early June, the 6,000 square-foot club will offer food, drink and dancing. Managers Ted Walker and Doug Berry have more than 27 years combined management experience in the food and beverage business.

Berry said the establishment will endeavor to hire professional, experienced wait persons to gain a competitive edge in the market.

Menu items will include steaks, seafood and lobster. The grill will be open at lunch and dinner. Walker says "Top 40" dance music will begin at 10:00 p.m. but stresses that the Tall City's newest nightclub will not be "just another disco."

"The country club atmosphere and elegant surroundings make it different than the typical Midland nightclub," Walker notes.

Kenny's features a $15,000 aquarium display and a state-of-the-art disc equipment and sound system.

Owner Kenny Ho says the all-new club will employ approximately 15 workers.

One of the hottest trends in business today is the temporary help industry. Midlanders Joni Hodges and Joan Pertree, jumping on the temporary help band wagon, have obtained the license for Olsten Temporary Services in Midland/Odessa.

The new office located at 103 Wall Towers East. "Olsten of Midland is a major supplier of temporary personnel throughout the Permian Basin," says Hodges.

She was previously the office manager of Energy Plus, Inc. and has 9 1/2 years experience in the temporary help field. Partner Joan Pertree has been active in the industry for five years and was previously associated with Temporary Services Division of Energy Plus, Inc.

Donuts and ice cream. Sound like an unlikely combination? Not according to Jim Gentry and John Offenback. Gentry, lease-owner of the local Bosa Donuts franchise supplies donuts to Offenback's Scottie's Ice Cream store in Midland Park Mall. Gentry says the idea of selling Scottie's Ice Cream in his donut store came up over a shared cup of coffee with Offenback.

Last week Bosa began selling ice cream in its store on North Big Spring Street in Midland. "We have had some bad weather since we began offering the ice cream, so it's hard to gauge sales, but we anticipate good results. We have over 2,100 customers each week — if only 20 percent buy ice cream, we'll do very well," Gentry says.

He adds that the shop will offer 14 flavors of ice cream.

Standard Sales Co., Inc., local distributor of Anheuser-Busch beers, has been named winner of the world's largest brewery's "Dimensions of Excellence" Gold Eagle Award for outstanding corporate community service in 1986.

Standard Sales was cited for "establishing a blueprint for success that other wholesalers and brewers can emulate, greatly enhancing the image of the malt beverage industry and the credibility of its members."

Standard Sales, with its corporate offices in Odessa, is the Anheuser-Busch distributor for Odessa, Midland, Big Spring, Colorado City, Lubbock and San Angelo in Texas and Colorado Springs and Idaho Springs in Colorado, as well as Olive Branch, Miss. The company annually sells in excess of 6 million cases of beer.

ECONOMY

The year-end sales meant higher 1986 tax liabilities, requiring Americans to dip into their savings during the month, they said.

Before adjusting for taxes, incomes showed a modest increase of 0.3 percent in April while consumer spending climbed 0.6 percent during the month, the government said.

In its report, the National Association of Realtors said sales of existing homes edged down 1.4 percent in April to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.63 million units. That followed a 0.3 percent drop in sales in March.

Also Tuesday, automakers said sales of domestic cars lagged 24.9 percent in mid-May compared to a year ago, with industry leader General Motors Corp.'s sales off 37.8 percent.

"The main difference is that incentives are having a much smaller impact this year because consumers are sort of tiring of them," said Michael Luckey, an auto industry analyst with the investment firm Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York.

TRADE

The trade improvement was even better in volume terms than in dollar totals because the costs of imports were inflated by higher prices caused by the weaker dollar.

While imports rose 1 percent in dollar totals, the volume of imported goods fell 3 percent. The difference reflected a 4 percent increase in import prices.

The Reagan administration two years ago launched a strategy of driving the value of the dollar lower as a way of shrinking Americans' appetite for foreign goods while boosting the competitiveness of American products overseas.

This program is finally beginning to pay off, although the rise in prices of imported goods has boosted the inflation rate in this country and raised some worries that inflation could once again get out of control.

The gain in exports came from a 3 percent increase in non-agricultural exports, which rose to $51.6 billion.

This strength offset a 6 percent drop in agricultural sales, which slipped to $6.6 billion during the first quarter.

Imports of non-petroleum products rose by less than 1 percent to $87.9 billion while the volume of shipments decreased by 1 percent. The largest increase was in automotive parts from areas other than Canada, which were up 18 percent during the first quarter.

Imports of petroleum increased 8 percent to $8.7 billion, a gain attributed entirely to higher prices. The average price per barrel rose to $15.63 from $12.74 while the average number of barrels of imported oil declined from 6.90 million barrels daily to 6.09 million.

BANK

"Customers will be able to use up their existing inventory of checks and deposit slips," Simonitsch said. "Bank signage will be changed this summer and other items, such as stationery, will be switched as soon as it is feasible."

It has not yet been announced how the addition of the Odessa, Amarillo and two El Paso InterFirst banks in West Texas will be incorporated into the former regional structure utilized by RepublicBank. Murphy, in addition to serving as president of RepublicBank First National, also serves as regional chairman for the company's Lubbock and Brownwood banks.

The two Dallas-based firms announced their intention to merge on Dec. 16 and received needed Federal Reserve System approval April 29.

STANDARD

The note was purchased by Shearson. Standard, in turn, repaid the loan. Analysts said the complex transaction, which primarily amounted to an exchange of paper, was arranged in a way that would reduce Standard's tax liabilities.

The balance of the deal represented the acquisition of Standard Oil Proppants, which makes products used in oil and natural gas drilling, and Arendal Smelteverk, a Norwegian silicon carbide producer. Various short- and long-term notes were also included.

A spokesman for Shearson said the investment concern was parceling out the holdings for other investors.

In separate transactions, Standard Oil also sold three companies that make up its industrial products group. The sales, to various investors, were worth another $200 million. Standard Oil, which is based in Cleveland and is ranked 12th among the nation's oil companies, reported sales of $9.22 billion last year.

For the most part, the transactions have further dismantled units that were originally part of the Kennecott Corp., Standard's mining unit. Kennecott, the nation's largest copper producer, was bought by Standard in 1981 for $1.8 billion, which was considered a high price.

Since then, Standard Oil has been shedding the various manufacturing components that came with Kennecott. However, the copper-mining operation that had once been a part of Kennecott remains intact.

For Shearson, the transactions followed a string of merchant banking activities in which the large securities house put up its own capital.

"We acted as a principle in the sense that we laid out $1.8 billion of our own funds," a Shearson spokesman said of the Standard deal. "But there was very little risk involved because we were able to place these assets fairly quickly and profitably after the acquisition."

Shearson said it was too soon to determine its profits from the transaction, since not all of the terms of the disposition of the operations had been completed. A source familiar with the deal, however, said Shearson expected to make at least $40 million in profits and fees from the transaction.

Standard said the transactions would have no immediate impact on the company's financial results. The businesses that were sold had operating losses of $28 million last year, the company said. It added that "the net cash generated from the transactions, after adjustment for cash and cash equivalents in the divested business," was about $325 million.

In the deals that did not involve Shearson, the industrial products units included operations that were formerly part of Kennecott: Dorr-Oliver Inc., Pfaudler and Electro Minerals. Standard said they no longer fit its long-term strategy. The company announced plans to sell the operations last July as part of an aggressive reorganization.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Warrants — Lessons in pure speculation

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I purchased a total of 580 warrants of a semiconductor company at an average price of $10 per warrant. The exercise price is $40 and the warrants expire May 15, 1995. The stock now trades at $45 and the warrants at $15.

What are the pros and cons of warrants?

Doyle

A. Your experience demonstrates the pro side. Warrants provide a way to speculate by putting up less money than would be needed to buy the underlying stock. If the stock's price goes up, the warrant's price rises even faster — 50 percent, in your case.

A warrant is a certificate giving its owner the right to buy some other security — usually common stock of the same company — at a fixed price. Some warrants are perpetual and remain in force forever. But most, including yours, expire at a predetermined date.

Warrant provisions vary all over the lot. So it's important to learn the details before buying. Each of your warrants gives you the right to buy one share of that company's stock at $40 any time through May 15, 1995.

Because it guarantees you the opportunity to buy stock now worth $45 by surrendering it and putting up $40, the real or intrinsic value of each of your warrants is $5. Yes, it's trading at $15. The other $10 represents the value of its "call" — the right to buy the stock at a fixed price for almost eight more years.

The con side is that warrants are straight speculations — not investments. They receive no dividends and, unlike stocks, have no vote in corporate affairs. When they expire, they become worthless.

That shouldn't bother you, however, as long as your warrants remain above their exercise price. If the stock's price continues to rise, the warrants will show proportionately larger gains.

Congratulations. It's obvious you have picked a winner.

Q. What will happen to my warrants if the company that issued them splits its stock or is merged into another company?

A. Again, it's important to stress that different warrants have different provisions. Check yours with your broker, the company or in financial manuals you'll find in many large public libraries.

In most cases, warrants are "protected against dilution." That means, when there is a stock split or a stock dividend, the warrant's exercise provision is adjusted accordingly.

Let's say the stock is split, two for one. Because of the protection against dilution, each warrant normally then would be entitled to buy two shares of stock at half of the old exercise price per share. To be certain about your warrants, check it out.

What would happen to your warrants in case of a merger depends on the terms of that merger. Remember that a merger must be approved by majority vote of stockholders — but not by warrant owners.

Rest easy. The value of your warrants would not be wiped out by a merger. Warrants are an obligation of a company that issued them and would remain an obligation of the merged company.

After the merger, the warrants might give you the right to buy stock in the merged company at an adjusted price. Or some other arrangement might be made.

Q. In previous columns, you have indicated definite differences between a stock split and a stock dividend. A recent report relating to one of my holdings states, "The board of directors declared a two-for-one stock split, effective in the form of a 100 percent stock dividend."

Can you clarify my confusion?

A. You have misread this column. It has been explained here, often, that a stock split and a stock dividend have the same result. They are just accomplished by different bookkeeping methods. As far as stockholders are concerned, there's no difference between the two.

A 100 percent stock dividend doubles the number of shares outstanding and the number owned by each stockholder, while cutting the market value of each share in half. A two-for-one stock split does exactly the same thing.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Judge OK's Boesky civil suits

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that disgraced stock speculator Ivan F. Boesky cannot use his cooperation with the federal probe of Wall Street insider trading as an excuse to delay several civil suits against him.

In a blistering, 16-page opinion, U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack said Tuesday that Boesky "deliberately courted the impediment he seeks to erect as a shield."

Boesky is being sued by several limited partners in his $1 billion investment partnership.

Jovanovich rejects $2 billion

NEW YORK (AP) — The board of publisher Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc. has rejected as inadequate a $2 billion takeover offer from British publisher Robert Maxwell and approved a vast recapitalization plan.

The Orlando-Fla.-based Harcourt, a leading publisher of textbooks, said Tuesday the recapitalization plan calls for the payment of a special dividend worth about $50 a share to its shareholders of record as of June 8.

Maxwell had offered $44 a share for Harcourt on May 18 through his British Printing & Communication Corp. PLC.

USAir, Piedmont seek merger

WASHINGTON (AP) — USAir Corp. and Piedmont Aviation Inc. have asked the Transportation Department to speed up its decision on whether to approve the merger of the two airlines.

Spokesmen for the two air carriers said Tuesday the request was made after the Justice Department said it would not oppose the merger on competitive grounds. Agreements also have been reached on minimum service levels in New York and Massachusetts.

The Transportation Department had held up approval of the $1.65 billion merger because of concerns about the deal's possible effect on competition.

AIRLINE

Beiser said that ASA plans to match American Airlines' fares and that the company's relationship with Delta will allow fliers to participate in Delta's frequent flier program. As an added inducement to try the new service, ASA will offer double mileage credits during July and August. The July 1 fare will be $37.

Atlantic Southeast flights will depart Midland daily at 6:15 and 9:55 a.m. and 1:12, 4:40 and 8:30 p.m. Return service will depart Dallas/Ft. Worth at 8:20 and 11:45 a.m., and 3:05, 6:30 and 9:59 p.m.

Midland will be the tenth market served from ASA's Dallas hub. The company serves San Angelo, Abilene, Wichita Falls, Beaumont/Port Arthur, Killeen and Texarkana, plus Fayetteville and Fort Smith, Ark. and Lawton, Okla. with 62 daily departures.

From its primary hub in Atlanta, Atlantic Southeast serves 27 cities with 132 daily flights. ASA ranks as the third largest carrier at Atlanta's Hartsfield International in terms of departures and passenger boardings.

Boston's Larry Bird goes for a block of a lay-up by Detroit's Adrian Dantley in Tuesday's NBA playoff action at Boston Garden. The Celtics took a 3-2 edge in the series with a 108-107 win.

Bird steals one for Celts

By HOWARD ULMAN

BOSTON (AP) — "I was right there," Boston's Jerry Sichting said. "I saw how it happened."

Years from now, similar words undoubtedly will be uttered by some of the 14,890 spectators who witnessed another amazing play by Larry Bird.

It was a play that saved the game and, very likely, the NBA season for the Celtics. It was a play that not even Bird's teammates expected. It was a play that Detroit certainly didn't anticipate.

"I'll put that on top of everything Larry's ever done," Boston assistant coach Chris Ford said.

Trailing by a point, Bird stole Isiah Thomas' inbounds pass with five seconds left and fed Dennis Johnson for the winning layup with one second to go Tuesday night. The basket gave Boston a 108-107 victory and a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven NBA Eastern Conference final.

"We had the game won," said Thomas, who added that he didn't see Bird race to the ball.

"It looked bleak," said Sichting, who was guarding Thomas and forced him to throw the ball from the sidelines backward to Bill Laimbeer under Boston's basket.

"It happened so quick, you don't have time to think about it," Bird said. "It was just a reaction. I was going to foul Laimbeer. I stuck my hand in there and then I knew I had it stolen. He (Thomas) didn't throw a good pass. He just lobbed it in the air."

"As soon as I got it I was going to shoot. I was counting four seconds in my head and then I turned around and saw D.J. cutting down the lane."

Despite being guarded closely by Joe Dumars, Johnson put the ball up with his right hand from the left side of the basket. It rolled around the rim and dropped through.

"We have a very good sense for each other," Johnson said of himself and Bird. "I'm really becoming a believer in the Boston Garden mystique."

THE VICTORY was Boston's 35th in its last 36 games in the Garden and 17th straight there over Detroit. But now the Celtics must play Game 6 Thursday night in Pontiac, Mich., where they lost by 18 points Saturday and 26 Sunday.

"Yogi (Berra) said it first," Boston forward Kevin McHale said. "It ain't over 'til it's over. Then Larry said it. And, sometimes, it's still not over."

If Bird didn't steal the ball or if Johnson missed the shot, the season would have been just about over for the defending champion Celtics. To stay alive in the playoffs, they would have had to win Thursday night on the road, possibly without center Robert Parish.

Now if they lose the next game, they'll return home for Game 7 Saturday to determine who will play the Los Angeles Lakers in the championship series.

Parish was helped off the floor with 7:19 remaining when he re-injured his sprained left ankle. He returned to the game 58 seconds later only to leave for good with 3:41 left when he fell and couldn't stand without help.

"I wasn't concerned with Parish leaving the game," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "I was concerned with what happened with five seconds left."

Bird led the Celtics with 36 points, McHale added 20 and Dennis Johnson 18. Detroit was paced by Adrian Dantley with 25, Vinnie Johnson with 20 and Thomas with 17.

THE CELTICS' only deficit in the first half was 2-0 and they led 58-56 at intermission. They let a 69-58 advantage three minutes into the third quarter drop to 86-85 entering the fourth.

Thirty-six seconds after Parish left, Vinnie Johnson's jumper put Detroit on top 99-95 with 3:05 to play. But Darren Daye had the first five points in an 11-4 Celtics' run that gave them a 106-103 lead with 53 seconds left.

Laimbeer hit a jumper from just beyond the foul line with 46 seconds remaining. Bird missed a short shot with 28 seconds to go and Thomas connected from the foul line, giving Detroit a 107-106 lead with 17 seconds to play.

Then Dennis Rodman blocked Bird's shot with seven seconds remaining and the ball went out of bounds off Sichting.

"I thought we had it," Rodman said. "I though it was our game."

Then Bird changed his and the other Pistons' minds.

Daly said he wanted to call a timeout before the pass was made. After Johnson scored, Detroit did call one.

When play resumed, Dantley's inbounds pass from mideourt went off Laimbeer's hands and out of bounds as the game ended.

Sugar Ray Leonard hangs up gloves one more time

By DAVID GINSBURG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, saying he no longer has the "stimulus to continue his boxing career", announced his retirement as a fighter today.

"There's no one out there to give me that motivation," Leonard, the World Boxing Council middleweight champion, said at a press conference. "I'm going to try to retire, to give it a shot."

It is the fourth time since 1976 that Leonard has announced his retirement.

Leonard's latest return to boxing lasted for one fight — a spectacular upset to dethrone middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler on April 6.

The fight was only the second in five years for Leonard, who had undergone surgery inp 1982 to repair a detached retina. He attributed his comeback for that bout to his desire to fight Hagler.

Well-off financially, Leonard said that fighting Hagler was "something I had to do."

Leonard closes his career 34-1. His only loss came at the hands of Roberto Duran. He won titles in three different weight classes since he began his pro career Feb. 5, 1977, with a decision over Luis Vega.

IN ANNOUNCING his latest retirement, Leonard said, "For me to perform, it takes a stimulus. I have to be motivated.

"That burning desire has been taken care of," Leonard said, referring to his victory over Hagler.

But Leonard left open the possibility that he might return.

"You guys know me. I don't fool anyone."

Leonard, 31, turned professional after winning the gold medal in the welterweight division during the 1976 Olympics.

He underwent retinal surgery in May 1982, three months after beating Bruce Finch to retain the undisputed world welterweight title. And he announced his retirement in November 1982.

Leonard announced in December of 1983 that he was coming back, and he fought Kevin Howard in May 1984, but quit again after a lackluster victory in which he suffered the only knockdown of his career.

HAGLER'S CAMP immediately announced its disappointment at Leonard's decision to retire rather than give Hagler a rematch and called on him to reconsider.

"We all feel that the results of the April 6 bout were tainted by the present investigations of the refereeing, judging and even the medical reports," said Morris Goldings, Hagler's attorney, in Boston.

"We would have expected that Sugar Ray Leonard would want to have these matters cleared up as a true champion before he made his announcement.

"The best way to handle this situation would be a rematch. Marvin was available for Sugar Ray's challenge."

Goldings said the Hagler camp is awaiting the results of an investigation by Nevada authorities and will decide "on any further steps about the title which our attorney may take based on those results and his own inquiries with Nevada officials."

The Nevada commission has been looking into reports of irregularities in the Las Vegas fight which Leonard won by a split decision.

"The middleweight division has had only one undisputed champion in our time — Marvelous Marvin Hagler," said Goldings.

Gibson ignites Tigers over slumping Rangers

AL Roundup

DETROIT — It's a night when you've fallen behind three times in 11 innings, there are about 100 people left in the stands and you've been cold and wet for nearly four hours.

"Believe me, you've got to kick yourself in the tail to get it going again in those situations," Detroit slugger Kirk Gibson said.

Gibson, who had homered earlier, hit a two-out, two-run double in the 11th inning Tuesday night to lift the Tigers to an 8-7 victory over the Texas Rangers.

The victory was the third straight for the resurgent Tigers, who have won 11 of their last 13 to go over .500 for the first time since April 19.

After Pete O'Brien led off the Texas 11th with a home run, Detroit's Dave Bergman singled with one out and Lou Whitaker followed with a single. Darrell Evans hit a long flyball that was caught at the fence in left field, with Bergman moving to third and Whitaker holding first.

Gibson then lined a 2-2 pitch from Dale Mohorcic, 3-2, up the gap in left-center.

It was a crushing defeat for the struggling Rangers, who lost for the ninth time in their last 12 games to drop from three to nine games behind Kansas City in the American League West.

"We'll get our act together," said Texas Manager Bobby Valentine, pounding a wooden desk with his fist. "We've got a lot of good baseball to play yet. We've just got to ride this thing out."

Ruben Sierra hit two home runs for Texas and drove in four. Pete O'Brien homered and Scott Fletcher had a pair of doubles.

Rookie right-hander Bob Malloy, making his major-league debut, turned in six innings for the Rangers. He gave up five runs — only four of them earned — on six hits while striking out five.

Right-hander Mike Henneman, 2-0, the fourth Detroit pitcher, worked the final 2⅓ innings and got the victory. The game, held up for 31 minutes at the start because of rain, took 3 hours and 51 minutes to play.

Royals 5, White Sox 4

Willie Wilson opened the game with a home run and Danny Jackson struck out a career-high 12 as Kansas City beat Chicago.

The Royals have won three in a row and 11 of their last 13, opening up a five-game lead in the AL West.

Jackson, 2-6, walked only one and gave up eight hits, including Greg Walker's two-run homer with one out in the ninth inning. Dan Quisenberry recorded the final two outs for his sixth save.

Wilson hit his first home run of the season opening the game against Bill Long, 1-1. Wilson also hit a two-out double in the seventh after a single by Jamie Quirk, setting up a two-run single by Kevin Seitzer that made it 4-1.

Red Sox 6, Indians 5

Dave Henderson hit a three-run homer and Wade Boggs had two doubles and a single as Boston beat visiting Cleveland. The Red Sox won two games in a row for the first time in three weeks.

Henderson's homer capped a four-run second inning and made it 5-0 against Greg Swindell, 3-4. Al Nipper, 4-4, pitched 7 1-3 innings and gave up 11 hits, including a home run by Tony Bernazard.

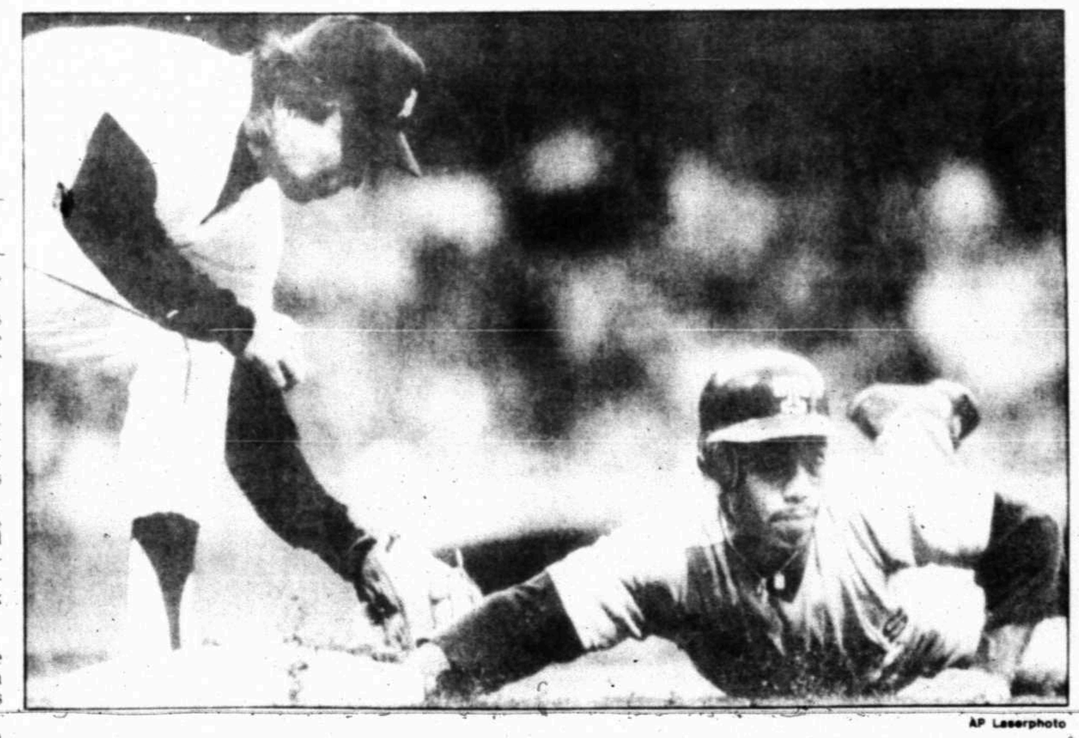

Joe Carter hit a three-run homer, his eighth, with two outs in the Indians' ninth against Calvin Schiraldi.

Twins 4, Brewers 2

Bert Blyleven and Jeff Reardon combined on a four-hitter and Tom Brunansky homered and tripled, leading Minnesota past visiting Milwaukee.

Blyleven, 4-4, pitched seven innings and gave up four hits, including a two-run homer by Jim Gantner. Blyleven, who allowed a major-league record 50 home runs last season, has given up 20 this year and at least one in all 11 starts.

Reardon finished with hitless relief for his 10th save.

Texas' Oddibe McDowell dives back safely into first base as Detroit's Darrell Evans makes the tag Tuesday night in Detroit. The Tigers handed the Rangers their ninth loss in 12 games.

Travelers are happy staying in home park

From Staff Reports

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The Arkansas Travelers are certainly proving to the Midland Angels that they are more than happy to stay at home.

Arkansas tripped the Angels twice Tuesday, taking a 3-0 lead in the five-game series with a pair of one-run victories. The first game saw the Travelers take a 4-3 decision on the strength of a Mike Fitzgerald home run, while in the second, it was a 1-0 shutout performance by Chuck McGrath and Steve Peters.

The double-dipping dropped Midland deeper into the Texas League West basement, five games behind first place Wichita with a 21-25 record. Arkansas edged closer to Shreveport in the East with a 26-20 mark, two games behind.

Fitzgerald hit his game-winning homer in the fifth, his 11th, to break a 3-3 tie and erasing an early 2-0 Midland lead. Starter Mike Romanovsky, 3-3, went the distance in the seven-inning ballgame.

Sal Agostinelli was the nemesis in the nightcap, rapping a triple to score Marty Pevey with the game's only run in the fourth off David Martinez, 4-4.

The Travelers' Steve Peters came on for 1⅔ innings of spotless relief in both games to earn saves No. 7 and 8. Peters struck out six batters in his 3⅓ innings of hitless relief in the twinbill while walking none.

The two teams hook up for the fourth game of the set tonight before concluding on Thursday. The Angels will take Friday as a travel day and return for an 11-game homestand Saturday against San Antonio. The Travelers own a 5-3 edge in the season series and Midland must win the final two games to salvage a season split.

MC opens NJCAA in style

From Staff Reports

TYLER — The first step was the easiest for Midland College here Tuesday at the National Junior College Athletic Association men's tennis tournament.

MC found the competition to its liking as the Chaps are among six teams tied atop the here after sweeping nine matches in first and second round play.

The Chaparrals, ranked second in the nation going into the tournament, received a pair of first round byes in singles play for Jean Roussel and Eric Lingg at No. 1 and No. 2. Both Roussel and Lingg advanced to the third round with wins Tuesday.

Elsewhere, MC had little trouble at Nos. 3-6 in singles or in any first round doubles matches.

But right alongside the Chaparrals are a pair of Texas teams in host Tyler JC and McLennan JC, as well as Florida Junior College, North Greenville (S.C.) and Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College (Ga.). All have 11 points going into today's play.

The Chaparrals received high draws in all positions, but received just one top seed, Lingg at No. 2. Roussell, despite his status as the top-ranked player in the nation, drew the third seed.

Even defending champion at No. 5, Herve Rousseau, was given just a fourth seed. As a result, many of Midland's players are in the same bracket as both Tyler and McLennan.

NJCAA Tennis Championships (at Tyler)

Singles: No. 1-Jean Roussel, MC, bye. Roussel, MC, d. Gene Hagan, Sinclair (Ohio) 2-6, 6-2, 6-1. No. 2-Eric Lingg, MC, bye. Lingg d. Greg Swenson, Roane St. (Tenn.), 6-1, 6-0. Flyers spoil Edmonton's parade plans

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — The citizens of Edmonton had a parade planned in the event of a Stanley Cup victory by their beloved Oilers. But the Philadelphia Flyers rained on it, thanks to a hail of assists by Brian Propp.

"Brian has really developed into a fine playoff performer and he's demonstrating that this year," Flyers Coach Mike Keenan said after watching his gritty left wing set up all four goals in Tuesday night's 4-3 victory in the Stanley Cup final.

Propp's four points gave him a team-leading 27 in the playoffs on 11 goals and 16 assists. His four assists also tied a Flyers playoff record shared by three others.

NHL Roundup

On the brink of elimination, the Flyers battled back twice from two-goal deficits to pull this one out and send the series back to Philadelphia for Game 6 Thursday night.

Holding a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series, the Oilers still need only one victory to win their third Stanley Cup title in the last four years. But they'll have to play better than they did in Game 5, when they blew leads of 2-0 and 3-1.

Before the game, there was talk in the newspapers of a big victory parade for the Oilers in the event they won the contest.

"The parade talk had us geared up," said Rick Tocchet, who scored two goals, including the game-winner at 5:26 of the third period.

The contest was almost a replica of Game 3 of the series, when the Oilers dominated early and took a 3-0 lead.

This time, they led 2-0, thanks to Jari Kurri's playoff-leading 14th goal and the first of two by Marty McSorley.

It looked like a safe lead for the Oilers until Tocchet scored with just 50 seconds left in the first period off a perfect feed from Propp.

Bass unloads on Pirates

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A day off was just what Kevin Bass needed even if he didn't like it.

The Houston rightfielder sat out Monday night's game, mired in a bad hitting slump, but he came back to slam a game-winning bases-loaded double as the Astros defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates, 10-3, Tuesday night.

Bass, who was 1-21 before singling in the sixth inning, collected three RBIs that turned a 3-3 tie into a 6-3 Astro lead and eventually 9-3 after a seven-run seventh inning.

"I don't think any player likes to sit out even though it may be good medicine," Bass said. "Mentally you lose confidence."

Houston manager Hal Lanier made the decision to give Bass a day off and he thinks it was a good idea.

"I'm a firm believer in giving players a day off when they're not going well," Lanier said. "A day or two on the bench gives a player a break from what he's doing at the plate or the field and a break from thinking about it."

Houston's Glenn Davis extended his hitting streak to eight games with a ninth-inning homer and a single.

"We're starting to execute the way we can," Lanier said. "Coming back tonight with a big inning helped bring back our confidence."

Alan Ashby and Bill Doran each drove in two runs as Houston benefitted from 11 walks off four pitchers and eight runs off three relievers with Hipolito Pena, 0-2, taking the loss.

Pittsburgh had taken a 3-2 in the sixth inning, as Morrison knocked in his second run.

Left-handed reliever Dave Meads, 4-1, pitched three innnings to notch the victory.

NL Roundup

Red 3, Cubs 2

Dave Parker hit a home run to lead off the bottom of the ninth inning as Cincinnati beat Chicago.

As Parker's ball headed toward the 408-foot sign in center field, Bob Dernier threw himself at the wall and stretched his glove over the top. The ball went into his glove, then popped out as he started bringing it back.

"When you're 35 years old, you don't like to go past nine innings," Parker said "I said, 'I'm going to try to take one deep.' "

The victory was only the Reds' third in 11 games, yet they are only one game behind division-leading San Francisco in the National League West.

John Franco was given the victory despite allowing Chicago to tie the game 2-2 in the ninth.

Mets 3, Giants 2

Scott Garrelts' two eighth-inning wild pitches scored Keith Hernandez and Darryl Strawberry, enabling New York to rally past San Francisco.

Trailing 2-1, New York loaded the bases against Jeff Robinson, 3-3, on a single by Hernandez, a walk to Strawberry and an infield single by Mookie Wilson.

Garrelts then relieved Robinson and threw a 2-2 pitch into the dirt to Howard Johnson, allowing Hernandez to score, and two outs later threw another one to Rafael Santana, scoring Strawberry.

Doug Sisk, 1-0, pitched the seventh for the victory and Jesse Orosco pitched the final two inning for his ninth save.

Expos 8, Dodgers 3

Andres Galarraga had three RBI and Herm Winningham hit a two-run homer, pacing visiting Montreal over Los Angeles, the Expos' fourth straight victory.

Galarraga drove in the Expos' first run in the first inning with a single and hit a two-run single in the third to put Montreal ahead 4-0.

Bob Sebra, 3-4, pitched a seven-hitter, allowing seven hits, striking out seven and walking three for his first complete game.

Phillies 3, Padres 1

Glenn Wilson hit a two-run, sixth-inning homer to help Shane Rawley win his fourth consecutive game as Philadelphia beat San Diego.

It was the fourth straight loss for the Padres, who have lost six of their last seven. The win was the Phillies' eighth in their last 11 games.

Wilson's seventh homer came off San Diego starter Jimmy Jones, 0-2.

Rawley, 5-2, allowed five hits, struck out six and walked five in 7⅓ innings. Steve Bedrosian pitched the last 1⅔ innings for his ninth save.

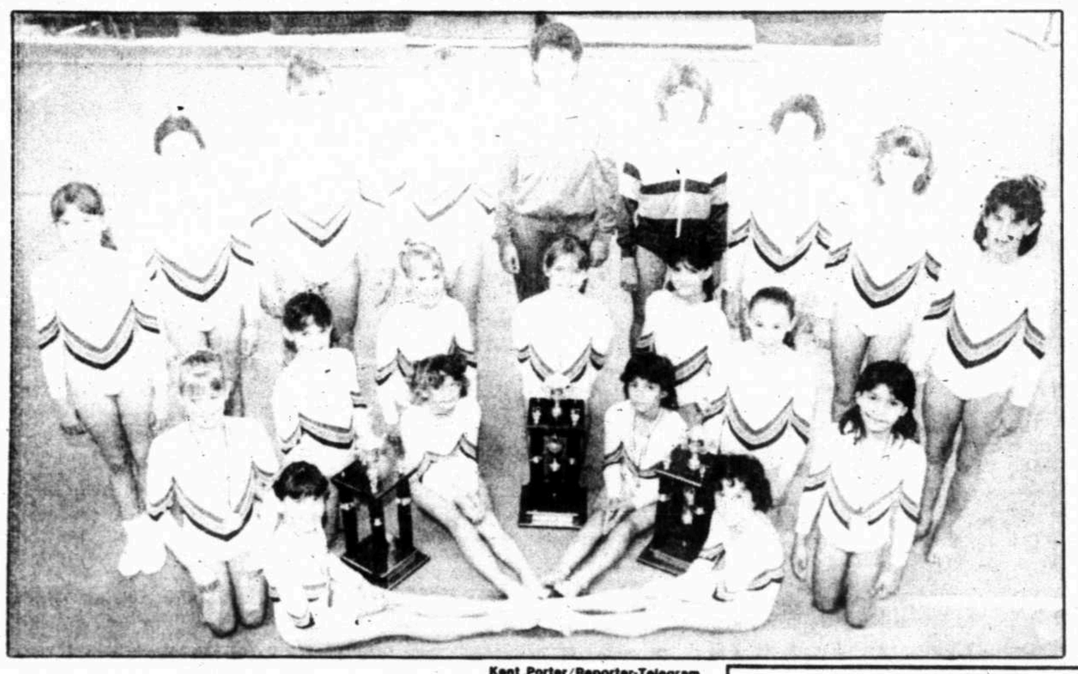

Braves 5, Cardinals 4

Ken Griffey's sixth inning, lead-off homer snapped a 4-4 tie and Doyle Alexander made a successful 1987 debut as Atlanta beat St. Louis.

Alexander, who was not signed as a free agent in the off-season, pitched six-plus innings, striking out six and walking none. Jim Acker pitched three innings for his fifth save.

Bill Dawley, 0-4, took the loss after pitching four innings in relief of Bob Forsch.

Terry Pendleton's 19-game hitting streak, the longest in the majors this season, came to an end when he went 0-for-4.

Other top placers were Anne Kintner, third in floor exercise and eighth in bars; Kerri Stiles, 10th in vault; Christine Lambert, 10th in floor; Caroline Bryant, ninth in floor, fifth in vault and sixth all around; Leslie Taylor, 10th in vault; and Christy Connell, eighth in vault.

Players, owners open talks to avert strike

By DAVE GOLDBERG

NFL

NEW YORK (AP) — NFL players and owners are stepping gingerly onto the tender path that they hope will avoid a repeat of the 1982 strike that shut down pro football for half the season.

The chief negotiators for the two sides met Tuesday for the first time since they formally exchanged proposals April 20 and acknowledged that it would take many such meetings to reach an agreement by the Aug. 31 expiration of their contract.

"It will be a repetitive process," Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council and the owners' chief negotiator, said after the unannounced meeting. "This is only the first in a series."

Tuesday's talks followed a series of committee meetings both before and after the formal presentation of proposals. Those smaller sessions were procedural, aimed at amending commas and semi-colons in the existing agreement.

These were philosophically more substantive, focusing on what each side included in its opening propsals. The management side presented its draft contract at 46 pages; the union draft contract is 123 pages long.

"Basically we told each other how much we didn't like about each others' proposals," said Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association and the chief union negotiatior.

THE CURRENT labor contract expires two weeks before the start of the 1987 NFL season. Some union officials have predicted talks will continue beyond the expiration date, but some owners have suggested that if no contract is reached by the deadline, they might lock the players out of camps.

"It's time to get down to serious business," Donlan said after the day-long discussions at a New York hotel. "We have to do some talking on a continuing basis so we can fully understand each other's positions."

Both sides have reiterated they hope to avoid a repeat of the 57-day strike in 1982, which eliminated seven weeks of the regular season.

Donlan emphasized that the key to avoiding a strike or lockout is continual discussions. He and union officials have both stressed that the situation will be helped by the better personal relationship Donlan has with Upshaw than what he had with the union head's predecessor, Ed Garvey.

BOTH SIDES said one issue touched on only briefly at Tuesday's session was drugs. An arbitrator overturned Commissioner Pete Rozelle's enactment of random testing last summer on the grounds that it is an issue that must be part of collective bargaining.

But sources on both sides said there was considerable discussion of what is being viewed as the major difference between the sides — the players' demand for unconditional free agency and the owners' adamance against it. They both agreed that there was little give either way on the issue.

Mavs will talk with Nelson

Mavs owner Don Carter was to contact Milwaukee owner Herb Kohl today to obtain permission to interview Nelson, Mavericks spokesman Kevin Sullivan said Tuesday.

The Associated Press attempted to contact Carter and his general manager, Norm Sonju, but neither returned calls.

Kohl already has said he would give the Mavericks permission to talk to Nelson, who has said he won't coach at Milwaukee next season because of differences with the owner.

Kohl has also said he would require compensation in the form of a top player or No. 1 draft choice, or both, for Nelson, who despite his resignation has two years remaining on his contract with Milwaukee.

Sullivan said the talks had not yet reached the compensation issue. Carter and Sonju have said they would not talk to any coach under contract until they settled any compensation question.

Nelson had indicated at one time that if he coached next season, it would be in Milwaukee. But over the weekend, he said he finds exciting the prospect of coaching a Mavericks team that finished 55-27 this season with a roster that averages 26 years of age.

Seniors don't have to act old

Cochran

I was sitting around the office the other day pondering what topic to write about in the next sports medicine column. I was uninspired, and frankly, coming up with a blank.

The phone rang and I had a delightful conversation with a lady from Midland College. She was in charge of a new pilot program at MC devoted to exercise programs and the elderly. After our phone call, I had my topic!

You know, when we think about it, we all know people in their 60s who are old and also we know people in their 60s who are young. When I see these people in the clinic, I automatically consider their chronological age (how many years they have) and their metabolic age (what kind of shape they are in).

Some people may look 60 and look 70 whereas others are 60 and look, act and feel that they are 40. I tend to put these people into two groups — the elderly and the mature. Believe me, there is a lot of difference. Let me give you three examples.

A. DWAYNE is a 54-year-old oilman who runs 6-8 miles a day. He is most fastidious about his diet and usually avoids red meat. His dietary program is basically low fat, low salt. He is a remarkable to me in two ways: 1) He has the physique of a 35-year-old person. 2) He is the person who turned me on to sports medicine five years ago.

Dwayne commonly participates in 10K runs and half marathons and is known as being very hard to beat.

B. Bob is an Aggie in his late 50s who treadmills about 15 miles per week. My wife says he has a "cute butt." When is the last time you heard that about a guy, almost 60-years-old, who had a "bubble butt."

Bob's wife is his dietary architect. She watches his diet closer than I watch my 13-year-old daughter. Mrs. Bob leans toward chicken (without the skin, not fried), turkey and stinky ol' fish. He is not allowed salt either.

This is basically a low fat, low salt, low cholesterol cardiac diet. I have seen Bob's lab work. He has the metabolism of a 30-year-old. The amazing thing is that he had cancer (God and doctors cured it) and a heart attack (Bob and exercise cured it). He is doing great!

C. Lawson is 74-years-old and just got married to a beautiful lady. He is active in sporting activities appropriate to his age. He plays a lot of golf and stays very active. We just arthroscoped one of his shoulders because it was hurting and limiting his exercise activities. (I actually think he is trying to lower his handicap.)

Because of his diet and activity level, he leads the life of a much younger man. He, by the way, had open heart surgery several years ago. He is excited about life.

IT HAS been noted that many exercise related functions tend to decline with age. These changes may not be "normal." Habitual physical exercise usually begins to taper in early adulthood and to be nonexistent in the elderly.

Could not these declining exercise related functions be due to the lack of physical activity seen in older people? I think so.

Cardiac function tends to decline with increasing age. The incidence of congestive heart failure, high blood pressure and peripheral vascular disease tend to increase with age. Proper exercise and diet will improve cardiac function and help congestive heart failure, high blood pressure and peripheral vascular disease.

Pulmonary function (breathing ability) also tends to fade with age. However, with exercise, lung ventilation seems to improve. This goes hand in hand with the improvement in the cardiac status. With age, the bones tend to lose mass and strength and the muscles atrophy or get smaller. Once again, exercise can reverse these untoward effects.

Dr. Herbert DeVries of USC in his text "Physiology of Exercise for Physical Education and Exercise" points out that it has been clearly shown that elderly exercisers adapt physiologically to physical training in much the same manner as their younger counterparts.

AT THE American Symposium for Sports Medicine held in Oklahoma City in 1983, a study was presented that involved nursing home residents who were placed on appropriate exercise programs for six weeks. At the termination of the study period, all of the exercisers experienced strength gains, improvement in cardiopulmonary status and improvement in MENTAL CLARITY AND FUNCTION!

I realize that my readers over the last year have been served up an ample portion of the benefits of exercise, but it is so important to get this message across. If your doctor had a pill that you could take that would improve the function of your heart, lungs, muscles and bones, and in addition would make you feel land look younger, wouldn't you want to take it? At any cost?

My dear friends, please get on an appropriate medically designed exercise program and start eating correctly. It is not too late. Only you can decide whether you want to be elderly or mature.

Jerry Cochran is president of the Midland Orthopedic Clinic and specializes in sports medicine and arthroscopic surgery.

BASEBALL

NEW YORK — First baseman Jack Clark, who hit .474 and drove in 12 runs for the St. Louis Cardinals last week, was named NL Player of the Week.

Clark had nine hits, including two home runs. He also scored four runs and walked 10 times...

NEW YORK — Jim Clancy, who pitched two complete-game victories for the Toronto Blue Jays last week, has been named AL player of the week.

Clancy pitched a two-hitter last Monday as the Blue Jays blanked the California Angels 12-0. On Saturday, he tossed a six-hitter in a 6-2 victory over Seattle. Clancy struck out a total of 18 batters in the two games...

SAN DIEGO — The Philadelphia Phillies put third baseman Mike Schmidt on the 15-day disabled list because of a pulled muscle in his lower left rib cage area.

Schmidt left Monday's game against San Diego in the fifth inning. He leads the Phillies with 13 home runs and 36 RBI while hitting .285, the top mark among team regulars.

The Phillies have recalled infielder Greg Legg from their Triple-A affiliate in Maine and he will report as soon as possible.

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox, trying to bolster a battered pitching corps, recalled right-hander John Leister from Pawtucket of the International League.

To make room for Leister, the Red Sox sent right-hander Jeff Sellers, 2-1 with a 7.57 earned run average, to Pawtucket.

Leister, 5-1 with a 2.67 ERA at Pawtucket this season, was named to make his major league debut Thursday night against the Cleveland Indians...

SAN DIEGO — Veteran first baseman Steve Garvey will undergo surgery Saturday to repair a ruptured left bicep tendon in the left shoulder area, the San Diego Padres said.

The rehabilitation period following surgery will take three to six months, team officials said.

BASKETBALL

BOSTON — K.C. Jones will not coach Boston in Game 6 of its NBA playoff series with Detroit Thursday night because of the death of his mother.

Eula Jones died Monday afternoon in the San Francisco area after a lengthy illness and the Celtics coach will attend her funeral there Friday. Assistant Coach Jimmy Rodgers is expected to take over for Jones in Pontiac, Mich., Thursday night with Chris Ford as his assistant.

HOCKEY

CHICAGO — Bob Murdoch, who was an assistant coach with the Calgary Flames for five years, was named head coach of the Chicago Blackhawks.

Murdoch, 40, replaces Bob Pulford, who now will devote his full time as general manager of the NHL club.

AUTO RACING

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — NASCAR officials announced that Geoff Bodine is being fined $15,000 and placed on probation until Dec. 31 for rough driving during the Winn-Dixie 300 Busch Grand National race at North Carolina's Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Three days before that Saturday event, Bodine was fined $1,000 and required to post a $4,000 bond for unsportsmanlike conduct in The Winston on May 17 at Charlotte.

BOXING

WEMBLEY, England — Previously unbeaten British middleweight boxer Hero! Graham lost his European championship and the chance for a world title fight when he was outpointed by Italian-based African Sambu Kalambay over 12 rounds.

Rated the No. 1 contender for the WBA title, the 27-year-old Englishman had a standing eight-count and finished the fight with blood pouring from his right eye as he turned in a ragged performance against the durable 34-year-old, who was born in Zaire.

Gooden not overpowering the minors

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The closer Dwight Gooden gets to pitching in the major leagues, the more unsteady he looks in the minors.

Gooden, making his fourth start since undergoing cocaine rehabilitation, struggled through seven innings Tuesday night for Class AAA Tidewater in a 5-4 victory over Pawtucket in the International League.

Gooden gave up four earned runs on nine hits in the seven-inning game, the first of a doubleheader. He allowed several hard-hit balls and was behind in the count to 11 of the first 13 batters.

"He was frustrated. It took him a little longer to get going," said Greg Pavlick, the New York Mets' roving minor-league pitching coach who is overseeing Gooden's comeback.

Gooden is scheduled to make one more start in the minors, on Sunday for Tidewater at Maine. It will be his first road game.

The Mets plan on Gooden making his first start in the majors on June 5, at home against Pittsburgh.

"He's getting closer," Pavlick said. "I think his next start could be his best."

So far, Gooden has not flashed the form that enabled him to win 58 games for the Mets in the last three seasons.

Gooden's best start since he was discharged from the Smithers Alcoholism and Treatment Center on April 29 after a 28-day stay was his first one. He pitched three scoreless innings of one-hit ball for Tidewater on May 12.

Since then, Gooden has been plagued by inconsistency. He threw 52 pitches, only half of them for strikes, in four innings for Class A Lynchburg and then last Thursday night allowed nine hits in six innings.

Becker, Connors easily advance in French Open

PARIS (AP) — Boris Becker and Jimmy Connors completed straight-set victories but last year's runner-up, Mikael Pernfors, joined the list of upset victims at the French Open today, where rain interrupted play for the second day in a row.

Before showers turned into steady rain and officials ordered the clay courts covered for about two hours, the second-seeded Becker battled inconsistent play in the third set to beat Diego Perez of Uruguay 6-0, 6-1, 7-5 in the first round.

Connors, seeded eighth, had less trouble completing a 7-5, 6-2, 6-2 victory over fellow American Todd Nelson.

Another men's seed, No. 11 Kent Carlsson of Sweden, also finished with a victory in a match halted by rain Tuesday, beating Arnaud Boetsch of France 6-1, 6-0, 6-3.

And No. 15 Brad Gilbert of the United States came from a set down to beat Bruno Oersar of Yugoslavia 1-6, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

But Pernfors, a Swede seeded 13th after reaching the final here a year ago, became the fifth men's seed ousted in the first round as he lost to Tarik Benhabiles of France 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-0.

Pernfors injured his ankle last week practicing for the tournament and was a doubtful starter until last weekend.

"It's always disappointing to lse in the first round," the former University of Georgia star said. "I had a good tournament last year but I tried to tell people that wouldn't win me any matches this year."

His loss means that only defending champion Ivan Lendl remains from the four men's semifinalists of a year ago. Losing earlier in the tournament were American Johan Kriek and Henri Leconte of France.

Lendl was playing Jonathan Canter of the United States in a second-round match later in the day.

Becker trailed 2-1 in the third set as play resumed in drizzle and fell behind 5-3 as Perez took advantage of the West German's erratic serve and groundstrokes.

Becker started the ninth game with a double fault but held serve with an ace; then broke Perez for 5-5 after holding off five set points. He won the game on a stinging backhand passing shot down the line.

Becker held for 6-5 and Perez looked disgusted. The Uruguayan steadied briefly, moving within one point of sending the set to a tie-breaker, then collapsed from 40-15 and Becker broke for the match.

Create Restaurant Style SANDWICHES At Home

Classic restaurant sandwiches like a Reuben or a Monte Cristo may seem too difficult or complicated to make at home. Now, making those deli-style sandwiches can be a breeze. Conveniently packaged sliced meat and cheese can be grilled and ready to eat in minutes.

Well-known restaurants and delicatessens use only the finest ingredients, such as carefully trimmed corned beef, hickory-smoked turkey and home-cured honey ham in their specialty sandwiches. You can too. Conveniently packaged deli-style meats that are 95% fat-free will make your Swiss Pastrami Sandwich taste just like it came from the deli down the street. And, with less than 25 calories per slice, you'll know your family is eating right.

Eating right means that natural ingredients are also important. Choose 100% natural cheese slices with no preservatives, additives or artificial ingredients when preparing your favorite sandwich. Pre-sliced and conveniently packaged, natural cheese slices are available in a variety of flavors from Swiss to mozzarella. For a delicious, open faced Chicken Avocado Sandwich, 100% natural Swiss cheese with its rich nutty flavor provides a great accent.

Preparing such specialties as a Taco Pocket or Pocket Divan, can also be easy ... especially if you use an electric sandwich grill that seals sandwiches into easy-to-eat pockets. Your favorite sandwich will bake golden brown in just two minutes ... and with a non-stick interior, clean-up is as easy as 1-2-3.

Stopping at the deli for a favorite sandwich is always a treat. But when there's no time for eating out, eat in with these favorite restaurant combos.

Taco Pocket

- 1 2 lb. ground beef or ground turkey
- 1 8-oz. jar taco sauce
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 1 tablespoon cornmeal
- 3 4 teaspoon chili powder
- 2 100% natural mozzarella cheese slices, cut in half
- 8 tortillas
- Oil

Brown meat; drain. Add taco sauce, green pepper, cornmeal and chili powder. Simmer 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Preheat sandwich grill. Trim tortillas to 5-inch squares. Oil one side of each tortilla. Place 2 tortillas, oiled side down, in sandwich grill. Top each tortilla with approximately 1/3 cup meat mixture, cheese and second tortilla, oiled side up. Close grill, catching latch. Grill 4 to 6 minutes or until desired doneness.

VARIATION: Substitute flour tortillas for corn tortillas.

Pocket Divan

- 4 whole-grain bread slices
- 4 smoked turkey Select Slices
- 4 100% natural mild cheddar cheese slices
- 1 cup frozen chopped broccoli, thawed, drained
- Soft margarine

Preheat sandwich grill. Spread one side of each bread slice with margarine. Place 2 slices of bread in sandwich grill, margarine side down. Top each bread slice with turkey, cheese, 1/4 cup broccoli and second bread slice, margarine side up. Close grill, catching latch. Grill 2 to 3 minutes or until desired doneness.

4 sandwiches

Classic Reuben

- 1 8-oz. can sauerkraut, drained
- 1 tablespoon thousand island dressing
- 8 rye bread slices
- 8 corned beef Select Slices
- 4 100% natural Swiss cheese slices, cut in half
- Soft margarine

Combine sauerkraut and dressing; mix well. Preheat sandwich grill. Spread one side of each bread slice with margarine. Place 2 slices of bread in sandwich grill, margarine side down. Top each bread slice with cheese, meat, sauerkraut mixture and second bread slice, margarine side up. Close grill, catching latch. Grill 2 to 3 minutes or until desired doneness.

4 sandwiches

Easy Monte Cristo

- 2 frozen French toast slices
- 1 smoked turkey Select Slices
- 1 tablespoon strawberry preserves
- 1 honey ham Select Slices
- 1 100% natural Swiss cheese slice, cut in half
- Powdered sugar

For each sandwich, top one bread slice with turkey, preserves, ham, cheese and second bread slice. Bake at 350°, 15 minutes, turning after 10 minutes. Sprinkle with powdered sugar.

1 sandwich

Swiss Pastrami Melts

- 4 onion rolls, cut in half, toasted
- Horseradish sauce
- 8 pastrami Select Slices
- 4 100% natural Swiss cheese slices, cut in half

Spread bottom halves of buns with horseradish sauce; top with pastrami and cheese. Broil until cheese begins to melt. Cover with top of bun.

4 sandwiches

Chicken Avocado Sandwich

- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 1/2 cup plain yogurt
- 1 tablespoon chopped chives
- 4 whole-wheat bread slices
- 4 lettuce leaves
- 8 crisply cooked bacon slices
- 8 tomato slices
- 8 smoked chicken Select Slices
- 4 100% natural Swiss cheese slices, cut in half
- Avocado slices

Combine mayonnaise, yogurt and chives; mix well. For each sandwich, spread one bread slice with mayonnaise mixture. Top with remaining ingredients and additional mayonnaise mixture.

DEAR ABBY

Wife welcomes dental work that takes big bite out of budget

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 70 and recently retired. I am 65. We live comfortably and are in relatively good health. I'm a nice-looking woman, but my teeth are ugly, and I want to have them fixed. I'm talking about extensive dental work — crowns, bridgework and beautification. My dentist says the job would run me about $9,500. My husband says we can't afford it — that I'm better off having all my teeth pulled and getting dentures, which would be cheaper and just as pretty. He's had dentures for years and says they're fine. Dentures would run me about $1,500.

We own $200,000 in certificates of deposit, bonds and short-term savings and checking accounts. Our home is valued at $160,000 and we have made provisions (trusts) for our three grandchildren when they reach 18 years of age. We give generously to our church and local charities and, of course, we both get Social Security checks every month. Can we afford a $9,500 dental bill? — I'LL NEVER SMILE AGAIN

DEAR I'LL: You certainly can! Do not consider having all your teeth extracted and getting dentures. Keep your natural teeth as long as you can, and tell your husband to put his money where your mouth is. Besides, it's your money, too, so get your teeth fixed, and may your smile brighten the rest of your days.

DEAR ABBY: I was moved to tears reading the letter signed "His Widow in Idaho," who approved of her husband's corresponding with his childhood sweetheart until they were both disabled by old age.

As her husband was dying, he asked her to please call this lady to convey his final farewell. The wife called, and the lady said, "Tell him I love him in the same old way." They were both 91.

What a beautiful lady that wife was! It is a testament to the unselfish spirit that some people are capable of. Sad that so many of us do not have that capacity of understanding.

We all have wonderful memories of youth and the people who were so important during that period. It has nothing to do with the love we have for husband or wife.

Her husband must have loved her very much, knowing she transcended petty jealousy. God bless that woman — but he already has! — A READER IN EAST MEADOW

DEAR READER: You and I are in total agreement. However, another reader wrote to express an entirely different point of view:

DEAR ABBY: To the "Widow in Idaho" who helped encourage correspondence with her late husband's first girlfriend, I have a message for her: You are sick, sick, sick!

If feelings existed for so many years between these two ex-lovers, why didn't they get married? Also, how could she stand being with a man who still thought of his ex-girlfriend? Strange relationship! — PLEASE, NO NAME OR TOWN

CONFIDENTIAL TO HURT AND DISAPPOINTED: When people snoop around in the drawers of others and read diaries and letters that were not meant for their eyes, whatever are they looking for? I'm not sure, but invariably they find something that will hurt and disappoint them.

DEAR ABBY: On behalf of all hearing-impaired people like me who have to read lips, will you please remind professionals such as doctors, lawyers, actors, clergymen, etc., to trim their mustaches and beards?

In order to read their lips, we must SEE them. — SUN CITY LIP READER

Vitamin overdose can be fatal

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Warning! The unsafe use of vitamins and mineral supplements can be dangerous, especially to children.

When three national organization of health professionals and a consumer health protection group join forces for the first time to warn Americans of a possible health danger, it would be foolhardy to ignore them.

What are they so concerned about? Overdoses of vitamin and mineral supplements by innocent, unwary consumers who don't understand that excessive amounts can be deadly because they are toxic (poisonous) in large quantities.

So many people still believe the nonsense that "if a little medicine, or a little vitamin or a litle mineral is good for you, a lot must be better," and they proceed to take (or worse, give children) large quantities of substances that are only healthfully effective in very tiny amounts.

"Evidence of widespread use of supplements, projections of further increases and professional concern that what consumers don't know may hurt them prompted the initiative," said C. Wayne Callaway, M.D., at a New York news conference.

"Contrary to the implications of supplement promotion, there is litte scientific evidence that vitamin and mineral pills will prevent cancer, osteoporosis or heart disease," Callaway said.

American consumption of vitamin and mineral supplements is soaring in the face of growing evidence of potential harm, a leading government researcher warns.

"Some people are consuming many times the Recommended Dietary Allowances of potentially toxic nutrients," according to Alan S. Levy, Ph.D., consumer science specialist with the Food and Drug Administration.

The heaviest users of supplements, according to Levy's study, average a daily intake of 777 percent of the RDA for nutrients consumed as supplements, not including those from foods.

Even moderate users averaged 168 percent of the RDA for nutrients supplemented daily. The heaviest use was most often without the advice of a doctor.

There are five circumstances where supplements are said to be helpful: pregnant or lactating women, excessive menstrual bleeding, those on low-calorie diets, strict vegetarians and people whose nutrient needs are altered by medication or illness.

One daily multivitamin, mineral supplement or a single nutrient supplement that does not exceed the RDA was condoned as a minimal health risk.

Safe intake levels vary widely from nutrient to nutrient and with the age and health of the individual, according to Callaway.

The high-dose vitamin and mineral supplements can interfere with the therapeutic effects of certain drugs. High doses of calcium can interfere with iron absorption, and zinc has a similar effect on copper, said Calloway.

Overuse of vitamins A, B6, C and D, and the minerals zinc and selenium cause the most concern, because of the severity of the overdose symptoms. Iron overdoses can be extremely dangerous, even fatal.

Alice Smitherman, R.D., president of the American Dietetic Association, who assembled the coalition and expressed a consensus said, "Consuming nutrients from food doesn't put you at as much risk as overdose or toxicity as the improper use of supplments can.

"The long-term ramifications of excessive doses of single nutrient supplements just aren't known," she said.

A consumer booklet on the safe intake of nutrients is available. Send a self-adressed, stamped envelope and $1 to Dept. 33AS, American Dietetic Association, 430 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, IL 60611.

WHAT'S COOKING

VIPS member volunteers recipes

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Sara Shands, a member of Volunteers in Public Schools, quit her job about three years ago, but she didn't quit work. She volunteered to work with VIPS. "I wanted to be busy," she said. "You can't sit home all the time." And in appreciation of the time she has volunteered, Mrs. Shands was awarded a PTA Life Membership by Alamo Junior High School.

Mrs. Shands and her husband, Bill, have two daughters — Kristi and Kimberlea — so her school volunteer work is divided between two schools.

"This year I was ways and means chairman at Bonham Elementary, and first vice president and VIPS chairman at Alamo," she said. "Next year I'll be first vice president and VIPS chairman at Bonham elementary and city council PTA representative for Lee Freshman."

As ways and means chairman, Mrs. Shands has worked with the book fair, century resources and Santa's Secret Shop, which helps children do their own Christmas shopping.

As VIPS chairman, her duties included distributing VIPS request forms to parents, "checking off what they would like to do at their child's school and categorizing them."

Fathers often join VIPS, she said. "There are fathers who volunteer, especially in secondary schools, who chaperone dances and parties. Dads are also involved with Halloween carnivals."

Mrs. Shands also has helped out with elementary school plays and "I always go to Carver Center" with the children.

She has made costumes for the school play, chaperoned various school trips, helped with classes while teachers were busy elsewhere and "been room mother for three years," she added.

In addition to her work with VIPS, Mrs. Shands has been co-leader with a Cadet Girl Scout troop and leader of a second grade Brownie troop.

Although she has found her volunteer work to be rewarding, it is, she said, "a lot of work. No matter what you do, it's a lot of work. You can't do anything without a lot of work. If you're going to do anything, you have to accept that fact."

Cooking for an active family is a lot of work, too, but Mrs. Shands has volunteered some of the family's favorite recipes.

¾ cup flour
½ cup cocoa

Mix eggs, sugar, salt and vanilla at medium speed for 1 minute. Add melted butter or margarine. Beat thoroughly. Mix in flour, adn cocoa at low speed.

Stir in 1 cup chopped nuts, if desired.

Spread evenly in greased 8-inch microwave safe dish. Cook on high power for 6 to 7 minutes. Rotate ¼ turn every 2 minutes. When done top looks dry and will spring back when lightly touched.

MY GRANDMOTHER'S WAFFLES

MIX THOROUGHLY
2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar

ADD
4 tablespoons cooking oil
1½ cups milk
3 egg yolks

Beat egg whites with ¼ to ½ teaspoon cream of tartar until stiff. Fold into batter. Pour 1 cup batter per waffle onto preheated waffle iron.

Book explains dessert techniques

By JIM WOOD
Hearst News Service

I was sitting at dinner at Casa Madrone in Sausalito, Calif., with a snooty food critic from New York (or is that redundant?) and the dessert menus had just been presented. All through the meal the New York person and her husband had been giving a new and noisy dimension to the word "critic." Then the husband noticed the word "infused" on the dessert menu.

"Infused," he said scornfully, "infused! Why don't they put the cinnamon in there? Why infused?"

An excellent new book, "Desserts," by Nancy Silverton, explains why — clearly, concisely and with grace. "Infusing," she says, "is a method of adding an intense, concentrated flavor to a dessert, especially one made with milk or cream. The milk or cream is placed in a saucepan with a flavoring like lemon or orange zest, vanilla beans, ginger or fresh herbs and is heated to scalding. The saucepan is then removed from the heat, covered and allowed to stand for at least one hour until the liquid is completely infused with the flavor. The flavoring is usually strained out and discarded." Infusing imparts the flavor, minus the particles, which would taste too strong if you bit down on them. Here is a spectacular recipe from "Desserts."

THIN APPLE PANCAKES WITH BROILED APPLE SLICES AND APPLE CIDER ICE CREAM

Every component of this beautifully composed dessert can be eaten separately, but in this case the whole is greater than the sum of its parts. The contrasts of warm and cold, chewy and creamy, crisp and soft make it very special.

CARAMELIZED APPLE SLICES
2 to 3 tart green apples
2 cups dry sparkling apple cider (preferably imported French "brut" cider)
½ cup granulated sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon

PANCAKE BATTER
½ cup flour
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 egg white
½ cup milk, at room temperature
½ cup apple cider, at room temperature (from macerating apples)
¼ cup clarified unsalted butter, melted

APPLE CIDER ICE CREAM
8 egg yolks
2 cups heavy cream
2 cups milk
1¼ to 1½ cups apple cider (what remains after macerating apples and measuring cider for the pancakes)
1 cup granulated sugar
2 large cinnamon sticks

To prepare the apple slices, peel and core the apples, leaving them whole. Cut them crosswise into rings ¼-inch thick, discarding the slices at the ends. There should be about 6 rings from each apple. Place the apple slices in a bowl and pour on the apple cider. Let stand 2 hours.

To make the batter, sift the flour into a large bowl and make a well in the center. Sprinkle the sugar and salt on the flour. In a small bowl, lightly beat together the egg, egg white, milk, apple cider and butter with a fork. Pour the liquid ingredients into the well. Using a whisk or a wooden spoon, slowly stir the liquids together, gradually drawing the dry ingredients into the liquid little by little until combined and smooth. Let stand at least 1 hour. The batter can stand refrigerated overnight. Bring it back to room temperature before cooking.

To make the ice cream, in a large bowl, whisk the egg yolks lightly to break them up. Set aside. In a large heavy saucepan, scald the cream and milk. Keep warm.

In a saucepan, combine the apple cider, the sugar and the cinnamon sticks. Cook over high heat until the mixture reduces and turns a dark amber color, 20-25 minutes. Immediately begin whisking it into the warm cream in 3 or 4 batches. Be careful — the cream will spatter and bubble up. The caramel must be poured into the cream as quickly as possible or it will continue to cook and burn in the pan. When all the caramel has been whisked in, reheat the cream mixture, stirring constantly, until the caramel is completely incorporated.

Pour about one fourth of the hot cream mixture into the egg yolks, whisking continuously. Return the mixture to the saucepan and whisk together with remaining liquid. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon, until the mixture thickens enough to coat the back of the spoon. Strain through a fine-mesh strainer into a bowl. Whisk a few times to release heat. Chill.

Freeze in an ice cream freezer according to manufacturer's instructions.

To cook the pancakes, preheat the pan (a 5-inch Silverstone pan is recommended) over medium-high heat, testing the temperature by flicking a drop of water on the surface. When the pan is at the right temperature, the water will spatter and dance. If the pan is too hot, it will bubble. If it's too cold, it won't do anything.

Stir the batter each time before you measure it. Measure 1½ tablespoons batter into a small container and then pour it all at once into the pan, swirling it around to make an even coating. Each time the batter is poured into the pan it should sizzle. Cook over medium-high heat for 1 minute, until the edges are nicely browned and the pancake lacy-looking. Run a spatula around the edges of the pancake and flip it over. Cook for 30 seconds more. Stack the pancakes (there should be 18) on a plate as they are finished. Pancakes can be made a day in advance and stored at room temperature, wrapped in plastic wrap.

To assemble the dessert, preheat the broiler. Toss the sugar and cinnamon together. Pat the macerated apple slices dry. Dip one side of each slice in cinnamon-sugar to coat. Arrange on a broiling pan sugar side up and broil 3-5 minutes, watching carefully, until the tops of the apples are caramelized and the slices are tender. They will not all take the same amount of time to caramelize; remove the apple slices that are done and reposition the others to continue cooking.

Lay one pancake flat on each plate. Lay 2 apple slices in a circle on the pancake and cover them with 2 more pancakes. Place a third apple slice on top.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Warm each serving for 3-5 minutes. Top each serving with a small scoop of ice cream in the center of the apple ring. Serve immediately.

Cake topped with whipped cream

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

If you can't find cake and pastry filling with the other baking supplies in your supermarket, decorate the cake with plain whipped cream. Add 2 teaspoons of Amaretto or a few drops of almond extract for the almond flavor.

ALMOND APRICOT CAKE

1 package 2-layer white cake mix
12-ounce jar apricot preserves
2 tablespoons Amaretto
1½ cups whipping cream
½ cup almond cake and pastry filling
Sliced almonds, toasted (optional)

Prepare and bake cake mix according to package directions, using two 8x8x2-inch baking pans. Cool 10 minutes on wire racks. Remove from pans; cool. Cut layers in half horizontally, forming 4 layers. Stir together preserves and Amaretto.

To assemble, spread 1 cake layer with one-third of the apricot mixture. Repeat with 2 more layers and the remaining apricot mixture. Top with final layer.

Beat cream to soft peaks. Gently fold in almond cake filling. Using pastry tube and decorative tip, pipe whipped cream mixture over top and sides of cake (or spread with narrow metal spatula). Garnish cake with toasted almonds. Chill. Makes 16 servings.

Menu for four includes curried shrimp

New York Times News Service

When fixing dinner for four, a suggested menu is Curried Shrimp, Peas and Potatoes, Sweet and Sour Cucumber Salad, Toasted Pita, Sweet and Sour Cucumber Salad and Hot Chocolate Bananas.

CURRIED SHRIMP, PEAS AND POTATOES

1½ pounds small new potatoes
4 tablespoons corn or safflower oil
1½ pounds sliced or chopped onion
2 teaspoons ground cumin
2 teaspoons ground coriander
1 teaspoon turmeric
¼ to ½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
20 ounces frozen peas
1 pound fresh, cooked, peeled and deveined shrimp
2 to 3 cups low-fat plain yogurt
4 tablespoons minced mint or coriander (optional)

Scrub the potatoes and halve but do not peel them. Cook, covered with water, in covered pot, about 15 minutes.

Heat the oil in a skillet and saute the onion, cumin, coriander, turmeric, cayenne and black pepper in hot oil.

When the onions begin to soften stir in the peas.

When potatoes are cooked, drain and quarter and add to the peas and onions along with the shrimp and yogurt. Heat the shrimp and yogurt through, but do not allow to boil or the yogurt will separate.

Sprinkle the mint or coriander over the shrimp mixture, if desired, and serve.

Yields 4 servings.

HOT CHOCOLATE BANANAS

2 large or 4 small bananas
4 tablespoons butter
Cinnamon to taste
3 to 4 ounces semisweet or bittersweet chocolate, broken in small pieces.

Peel the bananas and halve them lengthwise.

Heat the butter in a skillet large enough to hold all the bananas. Then place the bananas, flat side down, in the butter. Sprinkle with cinnamon.

Saute a minute or two and turn. Place the bits of chocolate on top of each half. Cover and heat 2 to 3 minutes longer, until the chocolate melts. Cool slightly before serving.

Yield: 4 servings.

TOASTED PITAS

4 to 8 small whole-wheat pitas
Butter (optional)

Split the pitas into two rounds. Butter lightly, if desired.

Toast for 4 minutes, until the pitas are crisp.

Classic 'potluck' dish microwaved

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Here's a 4-serving microwave version of a classic potluck dish.

GREEN BEAN CASSEROLE

9-ounce package frozen cut green beans
7½-ounce can semicondensed cream of mushroom soup
¼ cup dairy sour cream
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
¼ can of a 3-ounce can french fried onions

In a microwave-safe 1-quart casserole cook green beans according to package microwave directions. Drain. In the casserole stir together soup, sour cream and pimiento. Stir in beans. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 4 to 6 minutes or until bubbly, stirring twice. Sprinkle onions on top. Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 70 and recently retired. I am 65. We live comfortably and are in relatively good health. I'm a nice-looking woman, but my teeth are ugly, and I want to have them fixed. I'm talking about extensive dental work — crowns, bridgework and beautification. My dentist says the job would run me about $9,500. My husband says we can't afford it — that I'm better off having all my teeth pulled and getting dentures, which would be cheaper and just as pretty. He's had dentures for years and says they're fine. Dentures would run me about $1,500.

We own $200,000 in certificates of deposit, bonds and short-term savings and checking accounts. Our home is valued at $160,000 and we have made provisions (trusts) for our three grandchildren when they reach 18 years of age. We give generously to our church and local charities and, of course, we both get Social Security checks every month. Can we afford a $9,500 dental bill? — I'LL NEVER SMILE AGAIN

DEAR I'LL: You certainly can! Do not consider having all your teeth extracted and getting dentures. Keep your natural teeth as long as you can, and tell your husband to put his money where your mouth is. Besides, it's your money, too, so get your teeth fixed, and may your smile brighten the rest of your days.

DEAR ABBY: I was moved to tears reading the letter signed "His Widow in Idaho," who approved of her husband's corresponding with his childhood sweetheart until they were both disabled by old age.

As her husband was dying, he asked her to please call this lady to convey his final farewell. The wife called, and the lady said, "Tell him I love him in the same old way." They were both 91.

What a beautiful lady that wife was! It is a testament to the unselfish spirit that some people are capable of. Sad that so many of us do not have that capacity of understanding.

We all have wonderful memories of youth and the people who were so important during that period. It has nothing to do with the love we have for husband or wife.

Her husband must have loved her very much, knowing she transcended petty jealousy. God bless that woman — but he already has! — A READER IN EAST MEADOW

DEAR READER: You and I are in total agreement. However, another reader wrote to express an entirely different point of view:

DEAR ABBY: To the "Widow in Idaho" who helped encourage correspondence with her late husband's first girlfriend, I have a message for her: You are sick, sick, sick!

If feelings existed for so many years between these two ex-lovers, why didn't they get married? Also, how could she stand being with a man who still thought of his ex-girlfriend? Strange relationship! — PLEASE, NO NAME OR TOWN

CONFIDENTIAL TO HURT AND DISAPPOINTED: When people snoop around in the drawers of others and read diaries and letters that were not meant for their eyes, whatever are they looking for? I'm not sure, but invariably they find something that will hurt and disappoint them.

DEAR ABBY: On behalf of all hearing-impaired people like me who have to read lips, will you please remind professionals such as doctors, lawyers, actors, clergymen, etc., to trim their mustaches and beards?

In order to read their lips, we must SEE them. — SUN CITY LIP READER

Vitamin overdose can be fatal

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Warning! The unsafe use of vitamins and mineral supplements can be dangerous, especially to children.

When three national organization of health professionals and a consumer health protection group join forces for the first time to warn Americans of a possible health danger, it would be foolhardy to ignore them.

What are they so concerned about? Overdoses of vitamin and mineral supplements by innocent, unwary consumers who don't understand that excessive amounts can be deadly because they are toxic (poisonous) in large quantities.

So many people still believe the nonsense that "if a little medicine, or a little vitamin or a litle mineral is good for you, a lot must be better," and they proceed to take (or worse, give children) large quantities of substances that are only healthfully effective in very tiny amounts.

"Evidence of widespread use of supplements, projections of further increases and professional concern that what consumers don't know may hurt them prompted the initiative," said C. Wayne Callaway, M.D., at a New York news conference.

"Contrary to the implications of supplement promotion, there is litte scientific evidence that vitamin and mineral pills will prevent cancer, osteoporosis or heart disease," Callaway said.

American consumption of vitamin and mineral supplements is soaring in the face of growing evidence of potential harm, a leading government researcher warns.

"Some people are consuming many times the Recommended Dietary Allowances of potentially toxic nutrients," according to Alan S. Levy, Ph.D., consumer science specialist with the Food and Drug Administration.

The heaviest users of supplements, according to Levy's study, average a daily intake of 777 percent of the RDA for nutrients consumed as supplements, not including those from foods.

Even moderate users averaged 168 percent of the RDA for nutrients supplemented daily. The heaviest use was most often without the advice of a doctor.

There are five circumstances where supplements are said to be helpful: pregnant or lactating women, excessive menstrual bleeding, those on low-calorie diets, strict vegetarians and people whose nutrient needs are altered by medication or illness.

One daily multivitamin, mineral supplement or a single nutrient supplement that does not exceed the RDA was condoned as a minimal health risk.

Safe intake levels vary widely from nutrient to nutrient and with the age and health of the individual, according to Callaway.

The high-dose vitamin and mineral supplements can interfere with the therapeutic effects of certain drugs. High doses of calcium can interfere with iron absorption, and zinc has a similar effect on copper, said Calloway.

Overuse of vitamins A, B6, C and D, and the minerals zinc and selenium cause the most concern, because of the severity of the overdose symptoms. Iron overdoses can be extremely dangerous, even fatal.

Alice Smitherman, R.D., president of the American Dietetic Association, who assembled the coalition and expressed a consensus said, "Consuming nutrients from food doesn't put you at as much risk as overdose or toxicity as the improper use of suppiments can.

"The long-term ramifications of excessive doses of single nutrient supplements just aren't known," she said.

A consumer booklet on the safe intake of nutrients is available. Send a self-adressed, stamped envelope and $1 to Dept. 83AS, American Dietetic Association, 430 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, IL 60611.

WHAT'S COOKING

VIPS member volunteers recipes

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Sara Shands, a member of Volunteers in Public Schools, quit her job about three years ago, but she didn't quit work. She volunteered to work with VIPS. "I wanted to be busy," she said. "You can't sit home all the time." And in appreciation of the time she has volunteered, Mrs. Shands was awarded a PTA Life Membership by Alamo Junior High School.

Mrs. Shands and her husband, Bill, have two daughters — Kristi and Kimberlea — so her school volunteer work is divided between two schools.

"This year I was ways and means chairman at Bonham Elementary, and first vice president and VIPS chairman at Alamo," she said. "Next year I'll be first vice president and VIPS chairman at Bonham elementary and city council PTA representative for Lee Freshman."

As ways and means chairman, Mrs. Shands has worked with the book fair, century resources and Santa's Secret Shop, which helps children do their own Christmas shopping.

As VIPS chairman, her duties included distributing VIPS request forms to parents, "checking off what they would like to do at their child's school and categorizing them."

Fathers often join VIPS, she said. "There are fathers who volunteer, especially in secondary schools, who chaperone dances and parties. Dads are also involved with Halloween carnivals."

Mrs. Shands also has helped out with elementary school plays and "I always go to Carver Center" with the children.

She has made costumes for the school play, chaperoned various school trips, helped with classes while teachers were busy elsewhere and "been room mother for three years," she added.

In addition to her work with VIPS, Mrs. Shands has been co-leader with a Cadet Girl Scout troop and leader of a second-grade Brownie troop.

Although she has found her volunteer work to be rewarding, it is, she said, "a lot of work. No matter what you do, it's a lot of work. You can't do anything without a lot of work. If you're going to do anything, you have to accept that fact."

Cooking for an active family is a lot of work, too, but Mrs. Shands has volunteered some of the family's favorite recipes.

MIX THOROUGHLY
2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

ADD
4 tablespoons cooking oil
1½ cups milk
3 egg yolks

Beat egg whites with ¼ to ½ teaspoon cream of tartar until stiff. Fold into batter. Pour 1 cup batter per waffle onto preheated waffle iron.

Book explains dessert techniques

By JIM WOOD
Hearst News Service

I was sitting at dinner at Casa Madrone in Sausalito, Calif., with a snooty food critic from New York (or is that redundant?) and the dessert menus had just been presented. All through the meal the New York person and her husband had been giving a new and noisy dimension to the word "critic." Then the husband noticed the word "infused" on the dessert menu.

"Infused," he said scornfully, "infused! Why don't they put the cinnamon in there? Why infused?"

An excellent new book, "Desserts," by Nancy Silverton, explains why — clearly, concisely and with grace. "Infusing," she says, "is a method of adding an intense, concentrated flavor to a dessert, especially one made with milk or cream. The milk or cream is placed in a saucepan with a flavoring like lemon or orange zest, vanilla beans, ginger or fresh herbs and is heated to scalding. The saucepan is then removed from the heat, covered and allowed to stand for at least one hour until the liquid is completely infused with the flavor. The flavoring is usually strained out and discarded. Infusing imparts the flavor, minus the particles which would taste too strong if you bit down on them. Here is a spectacular recipe from 'Desserts.'"

THIN APPLE PANCAKES WITH BROILED APPLE SLICES AND APPLE CIDER ICE CREAM

Every component of this beautifully composed dessert can be eaten separately, but in this case the whole is greater than the sum of its parts. The contrasts of warm and cold, chewy and creamy, crisp and soft make it very special.

CARAMELIZED APPLE SLICES
2 to 3 tart green apples
2 cups dry sparkling apple cider (preferably imported French "brut" cider)
½ cup granulated sugar

PANCAKE BATTER
½ cup flour
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 egg white
½ cup milk (at room temperature)
½ cup apple cider, at room temperature (from macerating apples)

APPLE CIDER ICE CREAM
8 egg yolks
2 cups heavy cream
2 cups milk
1¼ to 1½ cups apple cider (what remains after macerating apples and measuring cider for the pancakes)
1 cup granulated sugar
2 large cinnamon sticks

To prepare the apple slices, peel and core the apples, leaving them whole. Cut them crosswise into rings ¼-inch thick, discarding the slices at the ends. There should be about 6 rings from each apple. Place the apple slices in a bowl and pour on the apple cider. Let stand 2 hours.

To make the batter, sift the flour into a large bowl and make a well in the center. Sprinkle the sugar and salt on the flour. In a small bowl, lightly beat together the egg, egg white, milk, apple cider and butter with a fork. Pour the liquid ingredients into the well. Using a whisk or a wooden spoon, slowly stir the liquids together, gradually drawing the dry ingredients into the liquid little by little until combined and smooth. Let stand at least 1 hour. The batter can stand refrigerated overnight. Bring it back to room temperature before cooking.

To make the ice cream, in a large bowl, whisk the egg yolks lightly to break them up. Set aside. In a large heavy saucepan, scald the cream and milk. Keep warm.

In a saucepan, combine the apple cider, the sugar and the cinnamon sticks. Cook over high heat until the mixture reduces and turns a dark amber color, 20-25 minutes. Immediately begin whisking it into the warm cream, in 3 or 4 batches. Be careful — the cream will spatter and bubble up. The caramel must be poured into the cream as quickly as possible or it will continue to cook and burn in the pan. When all the caramel has been whisked in, reheat the cream mixture, stirring constantly, until the caramel is completely incorporated.

Pour about one fourth of the hot cream mixture into the egg yolks, whisking continuously. Return the mixture to the saucepan and whisk together with remaining liquid. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon, until the mixture thickens enough to coat the back of the spoon. Strain through a fine-mesh strainer into a bowl. Whisk a few times to release heat. Chill.

Freeze in an ice cream freezer according to manufacturer's instructions.

To cook the pancakes, preheat the pan (a 5-inch Silverstone pan is recommended) over medium-high heat, testing the temperature by flicking a drop of water on the surface. When the pan is at the right temperature, the water will spatter and dance. If the pan is too hot, it will bubble; if it's too cold, it won't do anything.

Stir the batter each time before you measure it. Measure 1½ tablespoons batter into a small container and then pour it all at once into the pan, swirling it around to make an even coating. Each time the batter is poured into the pan it should sizzle. Cook over medium-high heat for 1 minute, until the edges are nicely browned and the pancake lacy-looking. Run a spatula around the edges of the pancake and flip it over. Cook for 30 seconds more. Stack the pancakes (there should be 18) on a plate as they are finished. Pancakes can be made a day in advance and stored at room temperature, wrapped in plastic wrap.

To assemble the dessert, preheat the broiler. Toss the sugar and cinnamon together. Pat the macerated apple slices dry. Dip one side of each slice in cinnamon-sugar to coat. Arrange on a broiling pan sugar side up and broil 3-5 minutes, watching carefully, until the tops of the apples are caramelized and the slices are tender. They will not all take the same amount of time to caramelize; remove the apple slices that are done and reposition the others to continue cooking.

Lay 1 pancake flat on each plate. Lay 2 apple slices in a circle on the pancake and cover them with 2 more pancakes. Place a third apple slice on top.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Warm each serving for 3-5 minutes. Top each serving with a small scoop of ice cream in the center of the apple ring. Serve immediately.

Cake topped with whipped cream

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

If you can't find cake and pastry filling with the other baking supplies in your supermarket, decorate the cake with plain whipped cream. Add 2 teaspoons of Amaretto or a few drops of almond extract for the almond flavor.

ALMOND APRICOT CAKE

1 package 2-layer white cake mix
12-ounce jar apricot preserves
2 tablespoons Amaretto
1½ cups whipping cream
½ cup almond cake and pastry filling
Sliced almonds, toasted (optional)

Prepare and bake cake mix according to package directions, using two 8x8x2-inch baking pans. Cool 10 minutes on wire racks. Remove from pans; cool. Cut layers in half horizontally, forming 4 layers. Stir together preserves and Amaretto.

To assemble, spread 1 cake layer with one-third of the apricot mixture. Repeat with 2 more layers and the remaining apricot mixture. Top with final layer.

Beat cream to soft peaks. Gently fold in almond cake filling. Using pastry tube and decorative tip, pipe whipped cream mixture over top and sides of cake (or spread with narrow metal spatula). Garnish cake with toasted almonds. Chill. Makes 16 servings.

Menu for four includes curried shrimp

New York Times News Service

When fixing dinner for four, a suggested menu is Curried Shrimp, Peas and Potatoes, Sweet and Sour Cucumber Salad, Toasted Pita, Sweet and Sour Cucumber Salad and Hot Chocolate Bananas.

CURRIED SHRIMP, PEAS AND POTATOES

1½ pounds small new potatoes
4 tablespoons corn or safflower oil
1½ pounds sliced or chopped onion
2 teaspoons ground cumin
2 teaspoons ground coriander
1 teaspoon turmeric
¼ to ½ teaspoon cayenne pepper
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
20 ounces frozen peas
1 pound fresh, cooked, peeled and deveined shrimp
2 to 3 cups low-fat plain yogurt
4 tablespoons minced mint or coriander (optional)

Scrub the potatoes and halve but do not peel them. Cook, covered with water, in covered pot, about 15 minutes.

Heat the oil in a skillet and sauté the onion, cumin, coriander, turmeric, cayenne and black pepper in hot oil.

When the onions begin to soften stir in the peas.

When potatoes are cooked, drain and quarter and add to the peas and onions along with the shrimp and yogurt. Heat the shrimp and yogurt through, but do not allow to boil or the yogurt will separate.

Sprinkle the mint or coriander over the shrimp mixture, if desired, and serve.

Yields 4 servings.

HOT CHOCOLATE BANANAS

2 large or 4 small bananas
4 tablespoons butter
Cinnamon to taste
3 to 4 ounces semisweet or bittersweet chocolate, broken in small pieces.

Peel the bananas and halve them lengthwise.

Heat the butter in a skillet large enough to hold all the bananas. Then place the bananas, flat side down, in the butter. Sprinkle with cinnamon.

Saute a minute or two and turn. Place the bits of chocolate on top of each half. Cover and heat 2 to 3 minutes longer, until the chocolate melts. Cool slightly before serving.

Yield: 4 servings.

TOASTED PITAS

4 to 8 small whole-wheat pitas
Butter (optional)

Split the pitas into two rounds. Butter lightly, if desired.

Toast for 4 minutes, until the pitas are crisp.

Classic 'potluck' dish microwaved

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Here's a 4-serving microwave version of a classic potluck dish.

GREEN BEAN CASSEROLE

9-ounce package frozen cut green beans
7½-ounce can semicondensed cream of mushroom soup
¼ cup dairy sour cream
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
¼ can of a 3-ounce can french fried onions

In a microwave-safe 1-quart casserole cook green beans according to package microwave directions. Drain. In the casserole stir together soup, sour cream and pimiento. Stir in beans. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 4 to 6 minutes or until bubbly, stirring twice. Sprinkle onions on top. Makes 4 servings.

1 can (6½ oz.) Honey Boy Skinless & Boneless Pink Salmon
1 Package (8 oz.) curly-edged noodles such as rogati, riccini or rotini
¼ cup hot melted butter or margarine
2 eggs, beaten
Freshly grated Parmesan cheese, at room temperature
½ cup chopped parsley
Salt and freshly ground pepper
Drain salmon; break into large chunks. Set aside. Cook noodles according to package directions. Drain noodles, immediately pour in hot butter, tossing to coat evenly. Add eggs, 1 cup Parmesan cheese, parsley, and pepper and salt to taste and toss again. Sprinkle salmon chunks over; toss lightly taking care not to break up salmon chunks. Serve with additional Parmesan cheese, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Summer parties sail with nautical theme

Copley News Service

If you're swept up in the wave of the America's Cup victory and nautical mania, you can celebrate the coming of warm weather in seafaring style no matter where you live.

Here are a few potentials for this summer's get-togethers:

BY THE SEA

The beach or lake, of course, is the natural location for a nautical celebration.

Pack up the portable barbecue grill or lay claim to a fire pit early in the day. Then, center your activities around the water.

You could rent a sailboat or canoe and stage your own mini America's Cup. Or, organize a fishing contest and catch-your-own-fish fry — with hot dogs on hand for the landlubbers whose big catch got away (or who don't like fish). Give a gift certificate for fishing gear or pool accessories for the biggest fish.

When mealtime finally arrives, fire up the coals and cook the quintessential hot dogs and hamburgers or the catch of the day while you share the tales of your adventures on the high seas.

After dinner, relax by the campfire and have a guest read from the pages of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island."

POOLSIDE SAIL

It doesn't matter if you don't live by a lake or the sea. Capitalize on the natural beauty of your pool to frame a festive nautical gathering instead.

Keep your poolside party cool and simple, suggests Marjorie Reed in her book "Entertaining All Year Round" (Ballantine). You can set up an outdoor buffet, have guests come into the house to serve themselves or set up individual trays in the kitchen and bring them out to the guests.

Mosquitoes will stay away from your party if you have your yard sprayed with insect repellent beforehand.

Create a breezy party atmosphere by covering tables in pretty red linen tableclothes and serving light foods on navy-and-white dinnerware. For a centerpiece, try a sailboat ice sculpture or artfully arranged sailor caps.

To quench summertime thirst, serve coolers in chilled tulip-shaped or tall glasses, suggest the makers of Stolichnaya vodka, topped off with fresh fruit garnishes and novelty stirrers. For a casual gathering, supply a cooler stocked with ice and frosty beer.

For the menu, serve foot-long deli heroes made with fresh French bread and piled high with assorted cold cuts and cheese, suggest the makers of Guinness imported beers. If you'll be dining under the stars, opt for seafood — grilled swordfish, lobster or crab.

CRUISING WITH THE FAMILY

There's nothing like getting the whole clan together to rekindle family ties, especially when you stage a reunion at a lakeside or beachside resort or campsite.

Set the nautical stage with invitations shaped like boats or anchors. When planning the agenda, use your imagination to add a mariner's touch to games, family projects and activities.

Try to plan at least one main meal together, suggests the Better Homes and Gardens Family Network guidebook "Gathering the Generations: A Guide to Family Reunions," since mealtime provides a great opportunity for socializing.

There are several ways to feed the family, and if the reunion spans several days, you can utilize more than one. Here are a few of the guidebook's suggestions:

■ Pot luck: Each family brings something different. As a variation, everyone provides a side dish and chips in for the meat or poultry. Print this information on the invitations.

■ Round robin: Plan menus in advance and then assign a different duty to a family group each day, covering food, shopping, preparation, serving and cleanup. Each family could wear T-shirts emblazoned with a team name (Moores' Mess, Smiths' Sailors) to identify them on their designated day.

Shoppers think egg comes before chicken

NEW YORK (AP) — The egg comes before the chicken as far as supermarket shoppers are concerned, according to a New York marketing communications concern.

Based on a survey of some 4,000 consumers nationwide, the Howard Marlboro Group found that eggs are purchased by 14 of every 100 shoppers while chickens are bought by only 12.

Fresh milk topped the list of supermarket purchases, with 33 percent of the shoppers taking home a quart or two. Other choices included:

Packaged bread, 25 percent; crackers, 11 percent; cookies, 10 percent; luncheon meat and refrigerated orange juice, 8 percent.

Beef divided into meat, milk classes

By MERLE ELLIS

There seems to exist, and I'm not surprised, a certain confusion regarding sex in the meatcase. I received last week not one but two letters with questions on the subject. It must be spring.

One reader wanted to know what the difference is between heifer beef and steer beef: ("...I had always supposed that a heifer was simply a young animal of either sex that had not reached sexual maturity.")

Another reader asks, "What is a cow? What is a steer?" But then she adds, "Actually, I know the answer but this leads to the next questions — the ones I really want to know: Are cows upgraded the way steers are — Prime, Choice, Good, etc., or are they excluded and can an inspector tell the difference after a carcass is broken down?"

As I said, there seems to exist some confusion, and while Masters and Johnson I am not, I may be able to clarify, simplify or, at least, identify sex in the meatcase. I'll try.

To understand such things, one must first realize that the cattle industry in this country is sharply divided into two different classes. Call them, if you will, the meat class and the milk class. Each class has both male and female members and all members of both classes end up at some time, in some form, in the meatcase. Is that clear? That's not clear.

OK, let's take it a class at a time. The dairy industry, the milk class, contributes generously to our meat supply but primarily as a by-product, either in the form of veal, hamburger, or some kind of sausage.

The breeds of cattle that make up the majority of the milk class — Holsteins, Jerseys, Guernseys — are selected and bred for their milk-producing characteristics, not for their meat. As a result, most of the male calves born in this class are slaughtered at a tender young age for veal; very few are normally raised for beef. The best of the young male calves in the milk class are saved, allowed to mature sexually to become bulls used for breeding purposes. They are slaughtered only after they have outlived their usefulness. They yield mostly lower grade USDA Utility, Cutter, and Canner — sausage-type carcasses.

The female calves of the milk class are used largely as replacements for the dairy herd. They are raised to sexual maturity, at which time they are called heifers, then they are bred. When a heifer has a calf, she becomes a cow, gives milk and becomes part of the dairy herd. At the end of her productive life as a milk producer, she, too, like the bull before her, becomes low grade USDA Cutter or USDA Canner beef.

The steaks and roasts that fill most meatcases in this country come not from cattle in the milk class but from those in the meat class. There are dozens of breeds — Angus, Brangus, Shorthorn, Hereford, Brahma, Charolais, Santa Gertrudis, just to name a few.

The bulk of the male stock is castrated — that makes a steer — and raised for high grade USDA Prime, Choice, or Good beef. The female stock is not bred, hence they remain heifers and are raised, fed and fattened along with the steers to provide beef equal in quality to that of any steer.

The top quality bulls and cows of the meat class, like those of the milk class, are saved for breeding. Somebody has to carry on: the steers can't do it and a heifer wouldn't be one it she did. But in the end, they, too, are likely to end up sausage, a sad end for the torchbearers for the bovine world.

Warm-weather weekends call for light, easy brunch

By MAUREEN CLANCY
Copley News Service

Warm weather brings with it the promise of flowers and fresh herbs, vegetable gardens, lighter flavors and easy, outdoor entertaining.

The festive weekend brunch captures all that promise in a meal that can be designed for two people sharing a hammock under a flowering tree, a busy family enjoying the back yard or an elegant patio affair for a dozen guests.

Freshness and simplicity are the menu keys.

There's no need for the home cook to labor over a hot stove while others sip icy wake-up drinks in the garden.

Concentrate on made-ahead soups and pastry-wrapped fish or poultry. Toss together a salad with unusual greens and a fruity vinaigrette. Splurge on fresh fruits and bring out their early-season flavor with a honey yogurt dressing or a spritz of citrus.

Pick up rolls, breads and cookies at your favorite bakery and set the fruit juices, champagne and Bloody Marys in a bucket of ice.

Egg dishes are a tradition on many breakfast tables. However, a brunch that requires no last-minute cooking or complicated timing schemes is more appropriate for this occasion.

We turned to four well-known chefs for their secrets for a successful brunch.

DENNIS BARRY of Borel's says his idea of the ultimate celebration would include a light salad, such as his grilled duck salad with endive, field greens and walnut-Grand Marnier dressing; poached eggs in puff pastry and fresh fruit drizzled with honey-yogurt dressing.

"And plenty of champagne, of course," he adds with a laugh, "quality champagne."

Patty and Catherine Morris, owners of Calliope's Greek cafe in San Diego, have captured the Greek love of camaraderie and celebrations with their popular Sunday brunch.

The restaurant's menu includes lamb souvlaki, spinach-filled filo triangles, and scrambled eggs a la Grecque. "Aphrodite," described by Patty as "a Greek blintz" is filled with feta and ricotta cheeses and topped with a fresh blueberry compote. The rich purple hues and the accompanying fresh fruit make this an especially tantalizing choice for a brunch.

Rolf Steiner and Beat Wick of Chez Beat and Rolf are masters of the long and picture-perfect buffets that have become equated with brunch in the United States. Trained in Swiss national cooking schools and the massive Southhampton Princess Hotel in Bermuda (where 17 pastry chefs worked together to prepare brunch buffets), the men turn out more than 50 items for their restaurant's buffet each Sunday — foods that are as glamorous to look at as they are good to eat.

Steiner says a simple brunch should be well balanced and "definitely include something with fruit" as well as something with bread or pastry dough. He also tries to use the best fruits and vegetables of the season.

Scott Meskan never runs out of tantalizing ideas. The chef at George's at the Cove in San Diego changes the restaurant's Sunday brunch menu every week.

"Where I was born and raised in Atlanta, Ga.," says Meskan, "... brunch is a very big meal, period."

Meskan cites the beginning of the polo and steeplechase season as especially good excuses for festive brunch parties in Atlanta.

An Oriental duck salad with warm gingered vinaigrette is high on his list of brunch favorites, along with a marinated salad of mango, avocado and jicama in cayenne-peppered lime juice, and a grilled chicken sandwich with Brie and browned onions.

Use these recipes to put together a menu that will please cook and guests alike.

SALMON EN CROUTE

1½-pound salmon filet (boneless)
12 ounces sea bass filet (boneless)
1½ pounds puff pastry dough
1 cup whipping cream
1 medium-sized red pepper, seeded
1 medium-sized green pepper, seeded
1 small ripe lemon
1 whole egg
Salt
White pepper
SAUCE
2 cups brown stock or canned bouillon
1 ounce Dijon mustard
¼ cup red wine
¼ cup whipping cream
1 small ripe lemon
Salt
White pepper

Skin salmon filet and remove bones. Cut into 2 equal pieces. Place on plate and season with salt and pepper. Squeeze some fresh lemon juice on top and refrigerate.

Skin sea bass and remove bones. Dice into small cubes. Place sea bass in food processor and blend, adding cream slowly until you achieve a mousse texture. Season with salt and pepper. Refrigerate for 30 minutes.

Dice peppers into tiny cubes. Carefully mix peppers into sea bass mousse trying to maintain white color of mousse.

Spread mousse on top of 1 filet and cover with second filet.

Roll puff pastry dough to ⅛-inch thickness and carefully wrap around filets, placing seam on bottom. Cut away excess dough and use it to decorate top. Brush dough with 1 beaten egg and let salmon sit for 20 minutes. Poke holes in dough before baking.

Bake at 400 degrees for 60 to 75 minutes, depending on thickness of salmon.

DIJON SAUCE

Heat brown stock and mustard using a whip to mix thoroughly. Add red wine, cream and lemon juice. Mix throughly. Let sauce cook down until desired thickness is achieved. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Serves 6. (Chez Beat and Rolf)

ORIENTAL DUCK SALAD

4 ounces duck leg meat (sliced)
4 ounces lettuce mix (romaine, red leaf, etc.)
2 tablespoons sesame seeds
1 tablespoon almonds toasted
Chopped scallion greens
Chevre cheese
Dressing

Toss meat and greens together with dressing. Garnish with sesame seeds, almonds, scallions and crumbled chevre cheese.

ORIENTAL DUCK SALAD DRESSING

2 cups rice vinegar
⅛ cup soy sauce
⅛ cup dry mustard
⅛ cup fresh grated ginger
10 ounces brown sugar
Splash sesame oil
½ tablespoon cornstarch (mixed with 2 tablespoons water)
4 cups light vegetable oil

Bring to boil rice vinegar, soy sauce, mustard, ginger, brown sugar, sesame oil and cornstarch mixture. Cool. Put in mixer and slowly add vegetable oil until desired consistency is achieved. (George's at the Cove.)

GRILLED CHICKEN SANDWICH WITH BRIE AND BROWN ONIONS

1 piece french bread (approximately 8 inches)
4 ounces chicken breast, boneless and cubed
2 ounces onion julienned
3 ounces brie (skin on) cut into thin strips
1 pinch basil (chopped fresh)

On flat griddle, saute chicken and onions until brown. Add basil. Remove and keep warm. Slice bread on side approximately ¾ the way through and stuff in cheese and warm chicken mixture. Place sandwich on griddle and press down with a weight. Turn when brown and repeat. Cut sandwich as desired. Serve immediately. (George's at the Cove.)

APPLE STRUDEL

1 cup sour cream
1 sheet of puff pastry (10x13x⅛)
3 Granny Smith apples
1 cup chopped roasted hazelnuts
½ cup raisins
½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons cinnamon
1 egg, beaten
Flour to roll puff pastry

Peel, quarter and slice apples crosswise. Place in large bowl. Add nuts, raisins, sugar and cinnamon to apples, mixing gently. Roll puff pastry to about half again as large, brush off excess flour. Mound apples along longer edge of pastry about ½ inch from bottom. Put sour cream in dollops on top of apples. Beat egg and put on edges of pastry.

Fold bottom 1 inch of pastry over apples, then continue to roll till you can feel sour cream on top again. Fold ends of strudel in and under. Brush loaf with rest of beaten egg. Cut 5 1-inch holes at an angle. Bake at 350 degrees for about 20 minutes or until golden brown. Serve warm with ice cream. (George's at the Cove.)

KOURAMBIETHES

1 pound unsalted butter
1 egg yolk
1 pound powdered sugar
1 ounce brandy
1 cup blanched almonds, chopped
Sifted flour

In large bowl of electric mixer whip butter until very light and fluffy. Add egg yolk, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar and brandy, beating well after each addition. Then start adding flour a little at a time, at low speed, until a stiff batter is formed. Add almonds and mix well. Change to dough hooks or knead by hand and keep adding more flour until dough can be rolled into a ball without sticking to your hands. With pieces of dough about the size of large walnut make crescent shape cookies. Bake in a 325 degree oven for ½ hour. Cookies will be pale in color but must be baked through to center. Place them on a bed of sifted powdered sugar and sift more sugar over them until completely covered. Let cool thoroughly before placing on platter. (Calliope's)

APHRODITE

3 cups milk
½ cup fine semolina
¾ pound cream cheese
1 pound feta cheese, crumbled
3 eggs and 1 egg yolk
1 pound filo pastry
¾ pound unsalted butter

Pour milk and semolina into saucepan, and while stirring with whisk, bring to boil. Lower flame and simmer until thickened. Remove from heat and let cool. Add cream cheese, feta and eggs; beat until well blended. Brush 10x14x2-inch pan with butter and line bottom and sides of pan with 8 sheets of filo, brushing each sheet with butter as it is placed in pan. Spread cheese filling over buttered filo and fold down edges of filo to hold in filling. Next, layer 12 to 15 more sheets, buttering each sheet as before. Trim filo even with edge of pan, and with a sharp knife cut top layers only, into desired number of pieces. Bake in a preheated oven at 350 degrees until top is delicately browned and filling has set, about 1 hour, 15 minutes. Serve with blueberry compote or pureed fruits. (Calliope's)

CHILLED AVOCADO SOUP WITH CAVIAR

1 pint whipping cream
1 pint half-and-half
Avocados (very ripe)
3 cloves of minced garlic
2 tablespoons fine chopped shallots
1 tablespoon Worcestershire
Lemon juice (juice from 1 lemon)
Salt
White pepper
Garnish: 2 each slices of avocado, dollop of caviar

In blender, puree half-and-half with avocados, garlic, shallots, Worcestershire until very smooth. Gradually add whipping cream. Puree on low speed. Finish with lemon juice and season to taste. Chill for 2 to 4 hours and garnish with avocado slices and caviar.

Serves 6. (Borel's)

CHOCOLATE TRIANGLE

3 envelopes gelatin
9 tablespoons orange juice concentrate, thawed
12 egg yolks
2¼ cups sugar
3 cups sour cream
1½ cups plain yogurt
4½ cups whipping cream, whipped into soft peaks
7 ounces milk chocolate
7 ounces semisweet chocolate
7 ounces white chocolate

Melt each type of chocolate separately in double boilers.

Combine gelatin and orange juice concentrate until gelatin is softened. Whisk together with egg yolks and sugar in top of double boiler, over simmering water, until ribbons form (about 5 minutes).

Remove from heat and whisk until cool. Mixture will become thick and stringy. Stir in sour cream and yogurt. Divide mixture into 3 equal portions. Add each melted chocolate mixture to 1 of the portions. Divide whipped cream into 3 portions. Gently fold each chocolate mixture into a portion of whipped cream.

Prepare chocolate ganache (recipe follows).

Pour each chocolate mixture into a mold (the Borel's triangle is made in three separate triangle molds). Freeze individual molds for 2 hours. Unmold, and assemble all chocolate shapes together in desired pattern, with white chocolate in center. Ice sides with chocolate ganache. If desired, cut sheets of baked puff pastry to cover sides.

CHOCOLATE GANACHE

10 ounces semisweet chocolate, cut into small pieces
10 ounces whipping cream

STRAWBERRY MOUSSE

1 quart ripe strawberries
4 ounces sugar
½ lemon, juiced
1 quart whipping cream
1 ounce gelatin

Put strawberries in blender, add lemon juice and sugar, blend until smooth.

Let sit overnight.

Place strawberries or any other decorative fruits in bottom of glass or plastic mold. Whip cream, dissolve gelatin in 2 tablespoons of hot water, gently add to strawberries. Fill mold and chill 3 hours.

Unmold on chilled plate and garnish with fresh fruits. (Chez Beat and Rolf)

SACHER TORTE

For three chocolate sponge cakes:
10 eggs
12 ounces sugar
12 ounces flour
3 ounces cocoa powder
1½ cups raspberry jam
12 to 16 ounces bittersweet chocolate
2 ounces vegetable oil

Warm eggs and sugar together in double boiler until warm to touch but not hot. Remove from heat and whip mixture with electric mixer for about 15 minutes, or until light and frothy.

Mix flour and cocoa powder together. By hand, gradually add flour mixture to egg mixture, mixing only until thoroughly blended.

Pour into 3 9-inch buttered cake pans. Bake in 350 degree oven for about 40 minutes, or until cake springs back when touched lightly.

Remove from pan to rack. Cool completely.

When cool, cut each cake into 3 layers. Spread layers with raspberry jam. Spread whole cake with thin layer of chocolate butter cream (recipe follows) and refrigerate until firm.

Melt bittersweet chocolate with vegetable oil in double boiler. Spread whole cake with melted chocolate. Let sit until chocolate is firm.

Styles of cooking omletes vary from country to country

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — I am always amused by the way cooks of different nations can conceive what is ostensibly the same dish yet render it differently. The most famous rice dish in Italy, to choose one example, is risotto, which is creamy, almost saucelike, as opposed to the French interpretation, in which the grains of rice must remain separate or "stand apart," as some cookbooks phrase it.

Perhaps the most interesting difference between the cooking techniques of Italy and France, however, is in the preparation of omelets. The word omelet, of course, is basic French, while the Italians call their version a frittata.

The French omelet is made with beaten eggs cooked as quickly as possible over very high heat. The result is then rolled and folded quickly and shaped with pointed ends. The center of a perfect omelet is creamy and slightly runny. The Italian frittata is generally cooked over low heat in a leisurely manner so it remains flat and round. When ready it is relatively firm but tender to the bite.

Fillings for a French omelet are rarely complicated and are often made with a single flavoring, like tarragon or fines herbes, or a single savory, like ham or creamed chicken. A frittata may be composed of many things, as in the recipe indicated here, which uses red and green sweet peppers, onion, ham and cheese.

FRITTATA

1 sweet red pepper, about ¼ pound
1 sweet green pepper, about ¼ pound
1 red onion, about ¼ pound
½ pound cooked ham, cut into ½-inch cubes
¼ pound Gruyere or Swiss cheese, cut into ¼-inch cubes
10 eggs
Salt to taste if desired
Freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons olive oil

Cut the peppers in half, remove the inner veins and cut them into ½-inch cubes. There should be about 1½ cups of each. Set aside.

Peel the onion and cut it into ¼-inch cubes. There should be about 1⅓ cups. Set aside. Cut the ham into ½-inch cubes. There should be about 2 cups. Set aside. Cut the cheese into ¼-inch cubes. There should be about ¾ cup. Set aside.

Break the eggs into a mixing bowl. Add salt and pepper.

Heat 1 tablespoon of the oil in a large nonstick skillet and add the peppers. Cook, stirring often, about 3 minutes and add the onion, salt and pepper. Cook about 2 minutes and cover. Continue cooking about 1 minute. Uncover and cook until the liquid from the vegetables evaporates. Sprinkle with cheese and ham.

Add the remaining tablespoon of oil. Beat the eggs thoroughly and add them. Cook, stirring from the bottom, until the eggs start to set, about 1 minute. Cover closely and cook about 2 minutes.

Place a large round dish over the skillet and quickly invert both the skillet and the dish, letting the omelet fall into the dish. It should be golden brown on top.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

THURSDAY, MAY 28, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Something to think about in the year ahead: Are you really making the best use of your many talents? It may be time to consider a major career change. Discuss your options with those who have been loyal and helpful in the past. Following the herd would be a mistake now. Strike out in a different direction. Find a group of friends who will provide you with the intellectual stimulation you thrive on.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Detroit Tigers slugger Kirk Gibson, Houston Astro Bill Doran, actresses Carroll Baker and Sondra Locke, Olympic athlete Jim Thorpe, Lakers General Manager Jerry West, singer Gladys Knight, actress Beth Howland, author Ian Fleming.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A positive self-image works wonders when you seek a loan or job. Concentrate on handling one project at a time. Be informed when you speak out on political matters. Read the newspaper.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Procrastination is all that stands between you and a major triumph. You are cheered by some excellent family and financial news. Keep a lid on your opinions until a check arrives.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have many brilliant ideas but must look for ways to apply them. Merge the original with the practical and you will reap tremendous financial rewards. Travel brings excitement. Cultivate new acquaintances.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Moonlighting could help you pay the bills until you find a permanent job that pays better. Fight off feelings of self-doubt. You are a creative, capable human being. Move ahead with confidence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are looking at life through rose-colored glasses. It is time to pull up your socks and work up to your potential. If single, you could meet a new love interest today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A raise is likely if you keep your nose to the grindstone and know your priorities. Make summer recreation plans. Even minor financial gains are welcome now. Return phone calls promptly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A generous bequest or bonus relieves financial worries. Marital strife ends when you are able to reduce problems to a manageable size. Avoid making mountains out of molehills. Make intelligent concessions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accept a child's decision. This young person clearly earned your trust! Your actions, more than your words, put other family members in a conciliatory mood. Recent troubles have only made your family stronger.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Try to narrow your choices. You cannot keep your options open forever, and a lot of money is involved. The opportunity to fulfill a lifelong dream arrives. You get a lucky break.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep better track of business entertainment expenses. You can be reimbursed or take a tax credit. Your energy is at a peak despite your brisk social schedule. New alliances enjoy favorable influences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Try to disregard nosey neighbors. You accomplish more when you work alone. You may have to take the first step if a romance is to be revived. Show mate more consideration.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take things one at a time. Your verbal expressions of goodwill help speed on-the-job progress. Double-check all facts and figures.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♢

As a general principle, you signal attitude at trick one—whether you like the lead or not. However, suppose dummy shows up with a singleton in the suit led. Now third hand can use a suit preference signal: the highest card in the suit led requests a shift to the higher-ranking side suit; a low card asks for the lower. But what if he wants opener to continue the suit led? A bit of card-reading and a modicum of intelligence can work wonders.

Consider this hand, where North-South quickly found their way to six spades. Note that North had no inclination to probe for a grand slam—a preemptive opening denies possession of two aces, so North knew his side was off a quick trick.

On this type of auction it is often unwise not to cash an ace right away, and West had no hesitation in choosing the ace of diamonds as his opening lead. East could see that, if he could get his partner to continue with a diamond, thereby forcing dummy to ruff, he would score a trump trick to defeat the slam. How could he prevent his partner from shifting at trick two?

East chose to follow to the first trick with the eight of diamonds, and it was up to West to read its meaning. West could not be sure the eight was not his partner's lowest diamond, but a club shift didn't seem right. And East certainly had to have a higher diamond, and could have used that to signal for a heart. So West wisely decided his partner did not want a shift, and he continued with another diamond. It took declarer only a few moments to realize that his contract had gone the way of all flesh when West showed out on the first trump lead.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Sadat's widow not afraid of attacks by fundamentalist religious fanatics

Jehan Sadat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jehan Sadat says she's not deterred by fears of attack by "narrow-minded or fundamentalist" religious fanatics such as those who assassinated her husband, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

"I believe Islam is for love and not for this kind of violence at all," Mrs. Sadat said Tuesday as she promoted her autobiography at the 87th annual convention of the American Booksellers Association. The book, "Jehan Sadat: A Woman of Egypt" is scheduled for publication in mid-August.

Mrs. Sadat, 53, whose husband was slain in 1981, also said she never thinks of remarrying "because there will not be anyone who will replace Sadat."

Queen Mother Elizabeth

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Queen Mother Elizabeth of Britain is spending a few days in northern Italy visiting a writer friend.

The 86-year-old mother of Queen Elizabeth II is staying in a hotel in the town of Asolo during the five-day visit, which is mainly to spend time with 96-year-old writer and traveler Freya Stark.

"This is an entirely private visit and we are giving no details of the Queen Mother's program. She will be coming back on Friday," a spokesman for the Queen Mother's Clarence House residence said Monday.

SINGAPORE (AP) — A 22-year-old fashion designer from Chile won the 36th annual Miss Universe pageant today, and Miss U.S.A., a blue-eyed Texan, came in third place.

Winner Cecilia Bolocco, who lists "talking to people" among her hobbies, burst into tears when the decision was announced. The 5-foot-7 green-eyed brunette from the Chilean capital of Santiago will collect prizes worth $225,000, including $81,000 in cash, organizers said.

Runner-up Miss Italy, 18-year-old Roberta Capua, a Naples model, hugged the winner as a crowd of more than 3,000 cheered.

The winner's diamond crown was placed on Miss Chile's head by the 1986 Miss Universe, Barbara Palacios Teyde of Venezuela. Because of the 12-hour time differential, the pageant was shown live on television in the United States Tuesday evening.

Miss Bolocco emerged as the favorite after she captured the swimsuit, evening gown and interview competitions. She listed other hobbies as ballet and modern dancing, origami, drawing and listening to music.

Michelle Royer, 18, of Keller, Texas, was second-runner up. Miss Royer, who won cheers from Singapore's large U.S. community, attended junior college before moving to El Paso to prepare for the contest with a firm that specializes in pageant consulting. She won the Miss U.S.A. title in February.

The crowd, dressed in evening wear, showed up at a warehouse-like exhibition hall in Singapore's World Trade Center in bright sunshine at 9 a.m. Women from South America or the Caribbean accounted for half of the 10 semifinalists.

Fourth among the 68 entries was Miss Venezuela, 18-year-old Ines Maria Calero, a student at Domingo Faustino Sarmiento University. Miss Puerto Rico, 18-year-old Lauri Tamara Simpson of Guaynabo, finished fifth.

The other semifinalists were Miss Peru, Jessica Newton, 21; Miss Philippines, Geraldine Asis, 23; Miss Singapore, Marion Nicole Teo, 19; Miss Sweden, Susanne Karin Thoerngren, 19; and Miss Turks and Caicos, Carmelita Ariza, 18.

Sean Penn

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Sean Penn was booked for investigation of drunken driving after failing sobriety tests, police said.

Penn, 26, the husband of singer Madonna, was stopped by a patrol car early Monday. He failed both a field sobriety and breath test, was booked and released on his own recognizance, police Lt. Dan Cooke said Tuesday.

Penn, star of such movies as "At Close Range" and "The Falcon and the Snowman," was described as cooperative during the arrest and booking. He has a history of striking photographers and fans, with two of those incidents resulting in misdemeanor criminal charges.

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — Former world welterweight boxing champ Thomas Hearns has agreed to help in a fight against mental illness.

Joyce Walker of Community Mental Health Services of Muskegon County says Detroit's "Hitman" agreed to appear in four, 30-second public service announcements promoting the center. They will be broadcast through June.

Walker said she met Hearns in the late 1970s while a reporter for the Detroit Free Press. "He was Tommy then, he's Thomas now," she said. "I guess with fame comes some sophistication."

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A doctor has denied in jazz saxophonist Stan Getz's divorce case that he ever had an affair with Getz's wife, Monica.

Dr. Sune Byren also told the civil jury Tuesday he was unable to have sex due to a stroke and kidney ailment.

Byren and his wife, Jane, both told of a close relationship with Mrs. Getz, 54. Mrs. Getz and the Byrens founded anti-alcohol groups and traveled together as part of their anti-alcohol campaign, according to testimony.

Getz, 60, a Grammy award winning jazz musician, is suing his wife of 31 year for divorce. Mrs. Getz is contesting it.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

THURSDAY, MAY 28, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Something to think about in the year ahead: Are you really making the best use of your many talents? It may be time to consider a major career change. Discuss your options with those who have been loyal and helpful in the past. Following the herd would be a mistake now. Strike out in a different direction. Find a group of friends who will provide you with the intellectual stimulation you thrive on.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Detroit Tigers slugger Kirk Gibson, Houston Astro Bill Doran, actresses Carroll Baker and Sondra Locke, Olympic athlete Jim Thorpe, Lakers General Manager Jerry West, singer Gladys Knight, actress Beth Howland, author Ian Fleming.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A positive self-image works wonders when you seek a loan or job. Concentrate on handling one project at a time. Be informed when you speak out on political matters. Read the newspaper.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Procrastination is all that stands between you and a major triumph. You are cheered by some excellent family and financial news. Keep a lid on your opinions until a check arrives.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have many brilliant ideas but must look for ways to apply them. Merge the original with the practical and you will reap tremendous financial rewards. Travel brings excitement. Cultivate new acquaintances.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Moonlighting could help you pay the bills until you find a permanent job that pays better. Fight off feelings of self-doubt. You are a creative, capable human being. Move ahead with confidence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are looking at life through rose-colored glasses. It is time to pull up your socks and work up to your potential. If single, you could meet a new love interest today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A raise is likely if you keep your nose to the grindstone and know your priorities. Make summer recreation plans. Even minor financial gains are welcome now. Return phone calls promptly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A generous bequest or bonus relieves financial worries. Marital strife ends when you are able to reduce problems to a manageable size. Avoid making mountains out of molehills. Make intelligent concessions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accept a child's decision. This young person clearly earned your trust! Your actions, more than your words, put other family members in a counciliatory mood. Recent troubles have only made your family stronger.

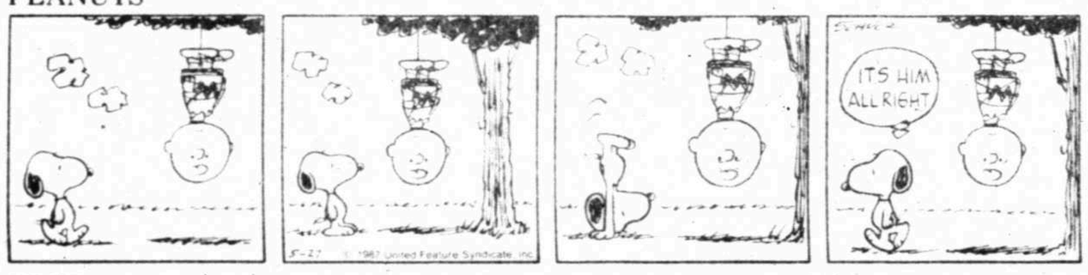

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Try to narrow your choices. You cannot keep your options open forever, and a lot of money is involved. The opportunity to fulfill a lifelong dream arrives. You get a lucky break.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep better track of business entertainment expenses. You can be reimbursed or take a tax credit. Your energy is at a peak despite your brisk social schedule. New alliances enjoy favorable influences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Try to disregard nosey neighbors. You accomplish more when you work alone. You may have to take the first step if a romance is to be revived. Show mate more consideration.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take things one at a time. Your verbal expressions of goodwill help speed on-the-job progress. Double-check all facts and figures.

SIGNAL THE SHIFT

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ K 7 ♡ A J 5 ♢ K ♣ A K J 8 6 4 3
WEST ♠ Void ♡ Q 10 9 3 ♢ A J 10 7 6 2 ♣ 10 5 2		EAST ♠ J 9 6 5 ♡ K 8 6 ♢ Q 9 8 4 ♣ 9 7
	SOUTH ♠ A Q 10 8 4 3 2 ♡ 7 4 2 ♢ 5 3 ♣ Q

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♢

As a general principle, you signal attitude at trick one—whether you like the lead or not. However, suppose dummy shows up with a singleton in the suit led. Now third hand can use a suit preference signal: the highest card in the suit led requests a shift to the higher-ranking side suit; a low card asks for the lower. But what if he wants opener to continue the suit led? A bit of card-reading and a modicum of intelligence can work wonders.

Consider this hand, where North-South quickly found their way to six spades. Note that North had no inclination to probe for a grand slam—a preemptive opening denies possession of two aces, so North knew his side was off a quick trick.

On this type of auction it is often unwise not to cash an ace right away, and West had no hesitation in choosing the ace of diamonds as his opening lead. East could see that, if he could get his partner to continue with a diamond, thereby forcing dummy to ruff, he would score a trump trick to defeat the slam. How could he prevent his partner from shifting at trick two?

East chose to follow to the first trick with the eight of diamonds, and it was up to West to read its meaning. West could not be sure the eight was not his partner's lowest diamond, but a club shift didn't seem right. And East certainly had to have a higher diamond, and could have used that to signal for a heart. So West wisely decided his partner did not want a shift, and he continued with another diamond. It took declarer only a few moments to realize that his contract had gone the way of all flesh when West showed out on the first trump lead.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Sadat's widow not afraid of attacks by fundamentalist religious fanatics

Jehan Sadat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jehan Sadat says she's not deterred by fears of attack by "narrow-minded or fundamentalist" religious fanatics such as those who assassinated her husband, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

"I believe Islam is for love and not for this kind of violence at all," Mrs. Sadat said Tuesday as she promoted her autobiography at the 87th annual convention of the American Booksellers Association. The book, "Jehan Sadat: A Woman of Egypt" is scheduled for publication in mid-August.

Mrs. Sadat, 53, whose husband was slain in 1981, also said she never thinks of remarrying "because there will not be anyone who will replace Sadat."

Queen Mother Elizabeth

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Queen Mother Elizabeth of Britain is spending a few days in northern Italy visiting a writer friend.

The 86-year-old mother of Queen Elizabeth II is staying in a hotel in the town of Asolo during the five-day visit, which is mainly to spend time with 95-year-old writer and traveler Freya Stark.

"This is an entirely private visit and we are giving no details of the Queen Mother's program. She will be coming back on Friday," a spokesman for the Queen Mother's Clarence House residence said Monday.

SINGAPORE (AP) — A 22-year-old fashion designer from Chile won the 36th annual Miss Universe pageant today, and Miss U.S.A., a blue-eyed Texan, came in third place.

Winner Cecilia Bolocco, who lists "talking to people" among her hobbies, burst into tears when the decision was announced. The 5-foot-7 green-eyed brunette from the Chilean capital of Santiago will collect prizes worth $225,000, including $81,000 in cash, organizers said.

Runner-up Miss Italy, 18-year-old Roberta Capua, a Naples model, hugged the winner as a crowd of more than 3,000 cheered.

The winner's diamond crown was placed on Miss Chile's head by the 1986 Miss Universe, Barbara Palacios Teyde of Venezuela. Because of the 12-hour time differential, the pageant was shown live on television in the United States Tuesday evening.

Miss Bolocco emerged as the favorite after she captured the swimsuit, evening gown and interview competitions. She listed other hobbies as ballet and modern dancing, origami, drawing and listening to music.

Michelle Royer, 18, of Keller, Texas, was second runner-up. Miss Royer, who won cheers from Singapore's large U.S. community, attended junior college before moving to El Paso to prepare for the contest with a firm that specializes in pageant consulting. She won the Miss U.S.A. title in February.

The crowd, dressed in evening wear, showed up at a warehouse-like exhibition hall in Singapore's World Trade Center in bright sunshine at 9 a.m. Women from South America or the Caribbean accounted for half of the 10 semifinalists.

Fourth among the 68 entries was Miss Venezuela, 18-year-old Ines Maria Calero, a student at Domingo Faustino Sarmiento University. Miss Puerto Rico, 18-year-old Lauri Tamara Simpson of Guaynabo, finished fifth.

The other semifinalists were Miss Peru, Jessica Newton, 21; Miss Philippines, Geraldine Asis, 23; Miss Singapore, Marion Nicole Teo, 19; Miss Sweden, Susanne Karin Thoerngren, 19; and Miss Turks and Caicos, Carmelita Ariza, 18.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Sean Penn was booked for investigation of drunken driving after failing sobriety tests, police said.

Sean Penn

Penn, 26, the husband of singer Madonna, was stopped by a patrol car early Monday. He failed both a field sobriety and breath test, was booked and released on his own recognizance, police Lt. Dan Cooke said Tuesday.

Penn, star of such movies as "At Close Range" and "The Falcon and the Snowman," was described as cooperative during the arrest and booking. He has a history of striking photographers and fans, with two of those incidents resulting in misdemeanor criminal charges.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A doctor has denied in jazz saxophonist Stan Getz's divorce case that he ever had an affair with Getz's wife, Monica.

Dr. Sune Byren also told the civil jury Tuesday he was unable to have sex due to a stroke and kidney ailment.

Byren and his wife, Jane, both told of a close relationship with Mrs. Getz, 54. Mrs. Getz and the Byrens founded anti-alcohol groups and traveled together as part of their anti-alcohol campaign, according to testimony.

Getz, 60, a Grammy-award winning jazz musician, is suing his wife of 31 year for divorce. Mrs. Getz is contesting it.

Strategies mean slimmer summertime

Copley News Service

Summer is fast approaching, but there's still time to shape up and shed a few pounds before you hit the beach. Following are some useful tips to help you trim calories:

■ Milk and cheeses are the major sources of calcium for most Americans, but they're also high in fat. Use skim or low-fat milk, and cheeses like ricotta, mozzarella and low-fat cottage cheese to cut calories, but still get the calcium you need.

■ Eat plenty of fresh, raw vegetables (they'll fill you up), and treat yourself to a heaping helping at the salad bar. Veggies like lettuce, tomatoes, chives, carrots, cauliflower, broccoli, cucumber and green pepper combine an interesting variety of textures and flavors — with very few calories. Avoid high-calorie items like avocado and olives, and watch it with the dressing. A salad that was low-calorie can quickly become otherwise when drowned in a rich dressing. Limit yourself to two or three tablespoons of reduced-calorie dressing or a light vinaigrette.

■ Keep a variety of healthful, low-calorie snacks on hand. And bring carrot or celery sticks, an apple, or a few crackers and a slice of low-fat cheese with you to work. That way, when the urge to nibble strikes, you won't find yourself in front of the candy machine popping coins in the slot, and cookies in your mouth.

■ Drink plenty of water — at least eight glasses a day. An increase in water helps to reduce fat deposits and fight water retention, as well as ridding the body of waste produced when fat is metabolized.

Your microwave can help in the battle against the bulge. Sauces added to conventional recipes to keep foods moist are unnecessary in the microwave. Fish and vegetables steam in their own natural juices and retain more nutrients than when cooked conventionally. And since microwaved foods don't stick to cooking surfaces, there's no need to grease pans and dishes — which means fewer calories.

Today's low-calorie microwave recipes are from "The Slim Line," a publication of Sweet 'N Low (a registered trademark of Cumberland Packing Corp.).

CHEESE AND CRAB CASSEROLE

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 cup sliced celery
¼ cup sliced onion
½ cup thinly sliced carrot
½ cup sliced mushrooms
¼ cup diced green pepper
1 (28-ounce) can whole tomatoes, canned without salt
1½ cups cooked brown rice
1 packet Sweet 'N Low granulated sugar substitute
1 bay leaf
1½ cups fresh or frozen flaked crab meat
½ cup (2 ounces) grated low-fat cheddar cheese

Preparation Time: 5 to 10 minutes
Cooking Time: 11 minutes (plus 2 minutes standing time)
Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Place celery, onion, carrot, mushrooms, green pepper and oil in 3-quart microwave-safe casserole. Microwave, covered, 3 minutes, stirring after 1 minute, until vegetables are just soft.

Drain and break up tomatoes. Stir in tomatoes, rice, granulated sugar substitute and bay leaf. Cover and microwave 8 minutes, stirring after 4 minutes, until bubbling hot. Stir in crab and sprinkle with cheese. Cover and let stand 2 minutes, until cheese is melted.

Serves 6 (200 calories per serving).

PINEAPPLE-PEACH UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

TOPPING:
2 tablespoons light brown sugar, packed to measure
2 tablesoons margarine, melted
1 (8-ounce) can sliced pineapple in juice, drained
1 (8-ounce) can sliced peaches in juice, drained
CAKE:
¾ cup cake flour
¾ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
2 eggs, separated
⅓ cup low-fat milk
2 tablespoons margarine, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
¼ cup sugar
1¼ teaspoons Sweet 'N Low granulated sugar substitute

Preparation Time: 5 to 10 minutes
Cooking Time: 13 minutes (plus 3 minutes standing time)
Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power); MEDIUM-HIGH (70 percent power)

Place 2 tablespoons margarine in 9-inch round microwave-safe cake pan. Microwave at HIGH setting 45 seconds to 1 minute, until melted. Sprinkle sugar over evenly. With paper towels, pat pineapple and peach slices dry; arrange in pan; set aside.

Prepare cake: In small bowl stir together flour, baking powder and salt; set aside. In large bowl beat eggs yolks; add skim milk, 2 tablespoons margarine and vanilla. In another bowl beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Gradually add sugar and sugar substitute, continuing to beat until stiff but not dry. Fold into egg yolk mixture. Fold into flour mixture, ¼ cup at a time. Pour into pan.

Microwave at MEDIUM-HIGH setting 12 minutes, giving dish a quarter-turn every 3 minutes. Cake is done when toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Invert onto serving plate, leaving pan on top of cake about 3 minutes to allow topping to separate from pan. Carefully remove pan. Cool completely before serving.

Makes 8 servings (185 calories per serving).

Weight loss prompts cook to open low-cal restaurant

Associated Press

Six years ago Catherine weighed more than 220 pounds. A year later she'd dropped down to 135 pounds — the weight she's maintained for the past five years.

This 32-year-old woman's sustained weight-loss success is especially commendable because she had been overweight most of her life, says Better Homes and Gardens Low Calorie Recipes. A love of food, says the magazine, particularly her family's Italian and Cajun specialties — contributed to the weight problems that Catherine and her brother and sister developed as children.

Years ago Catherine's mother, Alice Deano, tried to help her children lose weight. Deano posted their weights and denied them TV if the figures were too high. The ploy never worked. "My grandmother lived across the street," says Catherine.

By the time Catherine was 25, she had ballooned. "I stopped getting on the scale at about 220 pounds," Catherine notes. "But I still gained more."

Public embarrassment finally prompted Catherine to lose weight for good. At a Mardi Gras celebration, her sister announced in front of friends that Catherine did not need another bowl of chili. "Nobody but my parents ever had given me any trouble before," Catherine says. "Two days later when Mardi Gras ended, I began dieting for the last time. I was finally ready to lose weight for myself — not for anybody else."

Cutting portion sizes was Catherine's key to trimming calories. Before she began dieting, Catherine's typical dinner was 6 ounces of meat, a cup of vegetables swimming in cream sauce and a baked potato smothered with butter and cheese.

Her new approach: "I'd start out with half the amount of food I used to eat, and I'd eat half of that. Then I'd sit back and drink a glass of water. If I wanted some more food, I'd eat some more," she says. Any leftovers she threw away to avoid temptation.

At the same time, Catherine went back to Louisiana State University as a full-time student. Walking on campus helped her burn additional calories. In 10 months Catherine lost 85 pounds.

After Catherine reached her weight-loss goal, she opened her own low-calorie restaurant, The Paradise Cafe, serving the Italian, Cajun and Creole entrees she'd eaten to lose weight.

Using significantly less fat made the biggest dent in calorie reduction. "In Cajun cooking, just about every recipe starts with a stick of butter or a cup of oil," says Catherine. She would use one-quarter of that — or less.

Instead of browning meats in fat, Catherine sprayed skillets with non-stick coating. Vinaigrette salad dressings were prepared with a minimum of salad oil.

Catherine also found a flavorful substitute for a roux, which is made by browning equal parts of flour and oil together. (A roux is one of the main calorie culprits in Creole soups, gumbos and stews.) In its place, Catherine began using browned flour, which is simply oven-browned flour — no fat.

Removing separable fat from meats was another tactic. Catherine skinned chicken, trimmed pork chops and drained fat from cooked ground beef.

Webster sworn in to CIA

McLEAN, Va. (AP) — William H. Webster, taking charge of the CIA in a time of uncertainty, is pledging to conduct the nation's clandestine activities "with fidelity to the Constitution and the laws."

Webster, who was sworn in Tuesday as the 14th director of the CIA, said Congress has a legitimate role in overseeing the nation's spy activities.

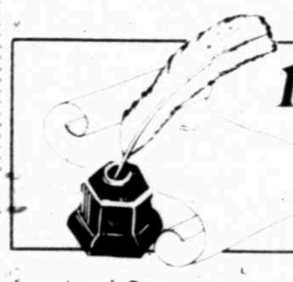

"We will work with the congressional committees, which must act in secret matters as surrogates for the Congress and the American people, and we will be worthy of their trust," said Webster, who headed the FBI for nine years.

Webster was sworn in by Supreme Court Associate Justice Lewis F. Powell in a ceremony on the steps of the main entrance to the headquarters building in McLean, a suburb of Washington, D.C.

Webster did not allude to the various investigations into the sale of U.S. weapons to Iran and aid to the Nicaraguan Contras, although he did quip at one point that his confirmation process took place "on a tough line of scrimmage."

During his confirmation hearings, Webster had been questioned sharply on the FBI's handling of evidence shortly after the Iran-Contra link was discovered. However, the Senate overwhelmingly approved his nomination, 94-1.

Webster declared Tuesday that "we will diligently carry out our assignments around the world, however difficult, with fidelity to the Constitution and the laws of our beloved country, so help us God."

1787 Constitution Daybook

Associated Press

Sunday, May 27, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

The wind swung around to the west-northwest, and brought cold, and clouds.

Cabinetmaker David Evans made a sign — the sign of the Greyhound — for a man at the corner of Sixth and Market streets. Perhaps George Washington glanced out from his room in the Robert Morris house to watch the sign being hung from its post.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

Since it was Sunday, Congress did not attempt to meet. Federal offices were closed.

CONVENTION TODAY

The Convention was in Sunday recess and its members were initiating what became a Sunday habit — catching up on their letter writing.

DELEGATES TODAY

William Samuel Johnson was in Stratford, Conn., enjoying his last day at home until late July.

Washington and several of his colleagues attended mass at St. Mary's, then dined, drank tea and spent the evening at his lodgings. He used the evening to write a long letter of instructions to his nephew and farm manager, George Augustine Washington.

James Madison wrote his father on business (the iron his father wanted was not available from the Andover Furnace; the Virginia legislation requiring cargo bound for Fredericksburg to enter first at downriver ports is hurting trade), and to summarize the first day of the Convention. He also wrote Edmund Pendleton, a long-time friend who had been Revolutionary leader in Virginia, to report on attendance and the election of officers. Madison's old friend Gov. Edmund Randolph wrote Acting Gov. Beverly Randolph also to report on the Convention to date.

Rufus King of Massachusetts wrote Secretary of War Henry Knox and Massachusetts Congressman Nathan Dane to report on the Convention and ask for information about events in Massachusetts.

King's colleague, Nathaniel Gorham, turned 49.

LOOKING BACK

Nathaniel Gorham (1738-1796)

Nathaniel Gorham was born on this day in 1738 in Charlestown, Mass., of ancestors who had arrived on the Mayflower. Locally educated, he was apprenticed to a merchant when he was 15. In 1759 he began his own mercantile business. Four years later he married Rebecca Call and they had nine children. Four years service in the Colonial legislature was succeeded by two years in the State House of Representatives. After helping draft Massachusetts' constitution in 1780, Gorham again served in the legislature, being three times speaker.

In 1782 he went into Congress where he served five years. From June 1786 until January 1787, he was President of Congress — thereby being the sixth head of state in the United States under the Articles of Confederation.

His political service ended with the Convention. In the next year, Gorham became a partner with Oliver Phelps in one of the great land speculations in Massachusetts. In 1786, as part of a boundary settlement worked out between New York and Massachusetts, New York ceded title to all land in the state west of Ithaca, in return for which Massachusetts gave up its claim to jurisdiction over the land. In 1788, Massachusetts sold this land, over 6,000,000 acres, to Gorham and his partner, Oliver Phelps, for about $1,000,000 payable in state consolidated notes in three annual installments.

But Phelps and Gorham were unable to make the required payments. Gorham died in 1896, insolvent but still highly esteemed in his native town.

NATION IN BRIEF

GED exams passed by near half million people

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half a million people in the United States and Canada last year proved they had the equivalent of a high school education by taking the General Educational Development test, the American Council on Education says.

The council reported Tuesday that 785,076 people took some form of the GED and 487,692, or 66 percent, passed and qualified for the high school credential.

The multiple-choice exam tests knowledge in reading, writing, math, science and social studies. To pass, a person must score as least as high as 30 percent of graduating high school seniors would on the exam.

About 120,000 people who took the GED enter college each fall. Almost one in seven high school credentials is awarded through the GED.

'Ulysses' may be tested

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission's attack on raunchy radio may put James Joyce's literary classic "Ulysses" to another test of its literary value.

Pacifica Foundation Inc., already warned by the FCC about its broadcasts, has asked the agency whether its noncommercial WBAI-FM in New York City can air the annual "Bloomsday" show.

For the past seven years, WBAI has presented readings from "Ulysses," including the lustful ruminations of Molly Bloom, on June 16 — the day depicted in the novel.

In 1933, the U.S. government tried to ban the Irish author's book as obscene. But a federal judge ruled the book was not obscene and said such material "must be treated in the context of literary and aesthetic merit."

Nixon papers to go public

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Archives plans to unseal a half-million pages of documents Thursday that were created or seen by Richard Nixon while he was president, including papers of Republican presidential candidate Alexander Haig when he was Nixon's chief of staff during the Watergate battles.

The papers have been closed to the public since Nixon's resignation in 1974.

Among the 490,000 pages to be opened are the files of 14 Nixon aides, including Haig, who also served as secretary of state under President Reagan. The release will be the second of material from special files containing 1.5 million documents deemed by the White House to be particularly sensitive.

The first, 252,000 pages, was on May 4.

U.S. team holds 'technical talks' with Iraq

Iraqis deny pilot who fired missile was beheaded

WORLD

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — A Pentagon and State Department team held "primarily technical" talks with Iraqi defense officials on the attack against the USS Stark, and the Iraqis denied reports that the pilot blamed for the raid was beheaded.

"Everything seems to be going well," a diplomatic source reported after the eight-man American team held its first session with senior Iraqi officials Tuesday morning.

The team, led by Rear Adm. David Rogers, deputy director for operations with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is investigating the May 17 Iraqi missile raid on the guided-missile frigate that killed 37 American sailors.

The investigators later drove to the fortified U.S. Embassy, where they met with American officials and spoke to Washington, diplomatic sources said.

There were unconfirmed reports in the Iraqi capital Tuesday that the pilot of the Mirage F-1 blamed for the missile attack was beheaded for embarrassing President Saddam Hussein's government. Information Ministry officials denied the reports.

In Bahrain, meanwhile, a Navy spokesman said officers probing the damage to the Stark were "getting closer to a decision" on where the frigate should be repaired.

Lt. Col. C. Manicer said the frigate would have to be repaired enough to be able to cross the Atlantic. He would not say if that meant work would be done on the Stark off Bahrain, where it is anchored.

In Brussels, U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger called on America's allies to help keep open the Persian Gulf's oil-shipping lanes. He told reporters he did not win immediate commitments from any of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies attending a two-day meeting.

The Stark is one of seven ships in a Navy task force assigned to the gulf, and Britain and France also already patrol the waterway to protect their nation's commercial vessels.

The Pentagon and State Department team spent most of the afternoon inside the embassy in Baghdad. Several of the Navy, Army and Air Force specialists shuttled between the compound and the Iraqi Defense Ministry, but neither they nor the Iraqis would comment on the talks.

"Both sides are determined to stay with this until they can wrap it up," one U.S. official said privately. "There's no deadline. They're here at the invitation of the Iraqi government, and they're engaged in talks to determine what happened and prevent it happening again."

He said initial sessions with the Iraqis were "primarily technical meetings."

He did not elaborate. One key question expected to be raised was how many planes were involved in the raid. Iraq has said the pilot of one plane fired the missiles, thinking he was attacking an Iranian ship.

U.S. investigators also want to know why the pilot did not respond to two signals from the Stark identifying it as an American ship. Iraq has said the pilot did not receive the signals.

American investigators have demanded the right to question the pilot, who has not been identified, but the Iraqis have not indicated whether they will allow it.

Senior Western diplomats said the two sides are "cooperating closely."

Other Western sources with knowledge of military affairs noted, however, that the Iraqis are very sensitive about security matters. One said: "Obviously there are things they would prefer the Americans not know."

Iraq and Iran have been at war since September 1980. Both attack commercial ships in the gulf in an effort to strangle each other's oil-dependent economies.

About 230 ships have been hit and more than 200 seamen killed since the warring nations began striking at commercial shipping in 1984. The attack on the Stark was the deadliest such strike and the first on an American vessel.

Iraq's official news agency said Hussein received a cable from President Reagan marking the end of the Moslem holy month of Ramadan that said: "The tragic attack on the Stark underlines the need to bring about peace to the region."

Gorbachev explains reforms to Romanians

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev gave Romanians their first detailed explanation of Soviet reform — changes they are unlikely to see because of resistance by Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu.

The Soviet leader is to travel today to Berlin for a Warsaw Pact summit during which he is expected to make a new disarmament proposal regarding conventional forces.

Gorbachev is scheduled to address the Soviet-led military pact meeting when it opens Thursday at an East Berlin hotel. Western diplomats in East Berlin and government sources in Bonn said this week he might announce the withdrawal of some of the estimated half-million Soviet troops stationed in Eastern Europe.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Yuri Gremitskikh said in Moscow that the leaders from the seven Warsaw Pact countries would discuss "defusing tension in Europe" and "measures of nuclear disarmament."

Speaking Tuesday at a Romanian-Soviet friendship rally marked by characteristic adulation for Ceausescu, Gorbachev emphasized the need for "glasnost," or openness, in developing socialism.

"The half-truth is worse than a lie," Gorbachev told an audience of about 4,000 people.

"A must in developing democratization is open and full information of the masses," Gorbachev said.

Romania's state-run media have displayed none of the openness on selected social problems that has characterized Soviet newspapers and the arts in recent months.

"Keeping the public informed is not always easy," said Gorbachev. "We all care for socialism and want to make it as attractive as possible, but if we go on brushing up, gilding things, they get worse."

Ceausescu has shunned Soviet-style reforms, and Gorbachev's nationally televised speech Tuesday was the first chance for most Romanians to hear directly about the new policies.

Gorbachev alluded to Romania's austerity drive to pay off the country's $2.1 billion hard-currency foreign debt.

"We know your country has had problems, and there are still difficulties that tell on your people's everyday life," Gorbachev said.

In communist Romania, a traditionally independent-minded Kremlin ally, the past three winters have been marked by shortages of food and fuel for the country's 23 million citizens.

Gorbachev stressed the need to promote "honest and highly qualified people...whether they are communists or not" and said his Communist Party is ridding itself of those who had used corruption or nepotism to achieve their positions.

Some of the comments could be seen as indirect criticism of Ceausescu. The president's wife, Elena, is first deputy premier, and his son, Nicu, is head of the Young Communist League. Other Ceausescu family members hold fairly senior posts.

Despite differences, both men indicated they agreed during talks Monday and Tuesday to improve bilateral cooperation.

The contrast between Gorbachev, 56, who has soft-pedaled public adulation of Kremlin leaders, and the 69-year-old Ceausescu was evident during the 2½-hour friendship rally.

During an hourlong speech by Ceausescu, the audience rose 19 times in ovation and chanting. But it sat mostly in silence as Gorbachev talked about his restructuring efforts in the Soviet Union.

When the audience clapped and chanted for the Romanian leader, Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, reluctantly took up the clapping while Ceausescu waved to his people.

Their faces grim, Gorbachev and his wife increasingly hesitated to rise for the ovations during Ceausescu's speech.

Gorbachev eventually signaled with his hand that the audience should remain seated. The crowd rose only four times during his own speech, which ended with a ritual ovation and with Ceausescu taking Gorbachev's hand and raising it high.

Defiant Barbie forced to face accusers in court

LYON, France (AP) — A former Resistance fighter called Klaus Barbie a coward to his face after a French judge required the accused war criminal to present himself before some of the people he allegedly tortured.

A defiant Barbie, former Gestapo chief of Lyon, was returned to the courtroom against his will Tuesday to face five of his alleged victims. He looked directly at each of his accusers, but refused to respond as they identified him as the man who tormented them, then sent them to concentration camps more than 40 years ago.

Barbie, 73, who since May 13 had boycotted the court trying him for crimes against humanity, smiled and nodded to his attorney and the French-German interpreter as he was brought in.

"I am here illegally and here by force," he told the court's three judges and nine-member jury during the 25-minute confrontation. "And, as judicially I am absent, I will not answer."

Assistant Prosecutor Jean-Olivier Viout said the defendant would not be in court today, the last day before a long holiday weekend in France. He added, however, that there were other witnesses who had not been confronted with Barbie and that he could be brought to court again at a later stage.

As Barbie's manacles were removed in court Tuesday, someone in the crowd murmured, "Bastard!"

Lucien Margaine, 66, Mario Blardone, 63, Vincent Planque, 68, Raymonde Belot, 66, and Robert Clor, 65, took the witness stand in succession. Barbie stared at them without expression.

Blardone, a member of the French Resistance during Barbie's tenure in German-occupied Lyon from 1942 to 1944, appeared almost overwrought on the stand, saying to Presiding Judge Andre Cerdini: "Look at that glacial stare, that mouth. I recognize it."

Then, to the interpreter, he said, "But he understands French! When he interrogated me he spoke French. Look! He understands me. He has just closed his eyes. That's real cowardice."

Barbie is charged with arresting, torturing and deporting hundreds of anti-fascist guerrillas and Jews to German death camps.

"It's certainly him," said Lucien Margaine, 66. "I couldn't be mistaken."

"Look at that grin, that smile," Margaine nearly shouted. "It's too bad he has nothing to say. I would have had some questions to ask him."

Some of the hundreds of people in the courtroom applauded, forcing Cerdini to call for silence.

After each identification, Cerdini asked Barbie if he had anything to say. Each time he refused. The session then was adjourned and Barbie led away.

On Monday, after the testimony of two witnesses who had not previously been confronted with the defendant during judicial investigation, Cerdini indicated he would use his authority to have Barbie brought to the courtroom by force if necessary for face-to-face identification.

WORLD IN BRIEF

NATO welcomes accord

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO defense ministers today welcomed the possibility of an East-West accord to remove medium- and short-range missiles from Europe but warned it would require NATO to beef up its conventional defenses.

The ministers, ending two days of talks, issued a communique saying the April 14 offer by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to remove hundreds of short- and medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe suggested "the possibility for real progress in relations between East and West."

But it added that any such nuclear arms accord "must address the disparities...that underlie our existing relationship with the East."

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, speaking to reporters, said "there was a general recognition...that we are closer to a general arms reduction than we have been in a very long time."

Four charged in China fire

BEIJING (AP) — Authorities charged four people with starting the biggest fire in Communist China's history, a blaze that killed about 200 people in a 20-day march across the northeast before being extinguished, the Forestry Ministry said today.

Forestry Vice Minister Liu Guangyun also told reporters that Chinese satellite photos showed recent forest fires in the Soviet Union had affected areas three times as large as those involved in the Chinese fires, which ravaged 2½ million acres in Heilongjiang province.

He said most of the Soviet fires north of the Heilongjiang river dividing the two countries had been put out, although a Soviet fire still posed a threat to the Inner Mongolia autonomous region of China.

Peres: I acted properly

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said today he had "no reason to apologize" for his handling of the Pollard spy case after a Parliament committee blamed him for not adequately supervising Israelis involved in the affair.

Peres, who was prime minister when Jonathan Jay Pollard was recruited to spy for Israel in 1984, said he felt his actions once the case was uncovered had prevented further harm to U.S.-Israeli relations.

"I acted properly, the way I had to act," Peres said in an interview on Israel army radio. "In my opinion, I also saved the country from the most difficult, the most horrible situation. I have no need to apologize."

Two committees investigating the Pollard case concluded Tuesday that Israel's political leaders didn't know about the operation but should accept responsibility because they failed to supervise those involved.

San Luis Potosi governor asks for leave of absence

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — San Luis Potosi state Gov. Florencio Salazar Martinez, whose administration has been beset with charges of human rights violations, apparently has stepped down after less than two years in office.

Salazar, a member of the dominant Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, petitioned the San Luis Potosi state Legislature Monday night for a 10-month leave of absence.

The Legislature immediately appointed Leopoldino Ortiz Santos, a minister of the federal Supreme Court, to fill the governor's post.

In an interview published Tuesday by the influential Mexico City newspaper Excelsior, Ortiz Santos said "the lack of unity is our principal affliction. I will try to make Potosinos abandon resentments, quarrels that don't lead to anything good and only put up obstacles to the progress of our beloved state."

Salazar did not cite a specific reason for seeking a leave of absence. But had he resigned without having completed a minimum two years of his six-year term, the PRI-controlled state Legislature would have had to call for new elections.

This way the Legislature will be able to appoint Salazar's permanent replacement when his 10-month "leave" expires, avoiding another confrontation with the opposition National Action Party, or PAN, at the polls.

The left-leaning Mexico City newspaper La Jornada, which has been following the situation closely, ran as its banner headline Tuesday, "Florencio Salazar Fell; Leopoldino Ortiz Santos, New Governor."

Salazar's problems began during municipal elections in the city of San Luis Potosi in December 1985, just months after his own election. Two PAN members were reported killed in a confrontation with police during a riot over election results at the city hall.

Then in December 1986 prisoners at the state penitentiary, seeking better food and conjugal visits, staged a riot.

No one was killed in the riot, but in early April two prisoners were found beaten to death at the penitentiary and later that same month another prisoner involved in the riot was found hanged.

A commission of opposition legislators found recently that serious human rights violations exist at the prison, the Mexico City newspaper El Universal reported.

On April 24, opposition legislators sought formal judgment against Salazar, but the Legislature conceded only to investigate the deaths in the penitentiary.

La Jornada, quoting state government sources, said Salazar Martinez traveled to Mexico City Sunday and met privately with President Miguel de la Madrid.
