Congress sends Obama bill to ease access to records

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress on Monday sent President Barack Obama legislation making it easier for Americans to obtain government records.

The bipartisan bill would require federal agencies to consider release of government information under a "presumption of openness" as opposed to a presumption the information is secret. Supporters of the shift said it would make it harder for agency officials to block release of government records.

The House approved the bill Monday on a voice vote, three months after the Senate acted.

Obama is expected to sign the measure, which aims to reduce the number of exemptions the government uses to withhold information from the public and news media. It also would create an online portal for individuals to submit a request under the 50-year-old Freedom of Information Act. Such requests currently are handled by separate agencies in different ways.

The legislation was sponsored by Sens. John Cornyn, R-Texas and Patrick Leahy, D-Vermont. Leahy said he could "think of no better way to celebrate the 50th Anniversary of FOIA than by passing the FOIA Improvement Act."

Love, life & chaos: Take a moment and breathe

Life can get a little overwhelming at times. It is your day off, all you want to do is relax, maybe watch a movie or read a book you have been putting off. Then it happens. Your little girl wants to go to a party and your son wants to go hang out with his friends.

Your peaceful morning just got filled. You drop your son off down the road at the friend's house on your way to drop the princess off at the birthday party. Now, perhaps you will get a moment for yourself.

As you pull in the driveway you see that the grass is a little too long, someone threw another bottle in your front yard and there is someone on your porch waiting to talk to you about more life insurance to protect your family in the unfortunate possibility of your death.

You thank them, but no thanks while you hurry in to change into some yard clothes to cut the grass.

As you finish cleaning up from your time outside, you start to picture sitting with that glass of sweet tea and cracking open that new book then the phone rings. The princess is not feeling well and she needs to be picked up immediately. You look longingly back at your book as you grab your keys and head out the door.

While you are picking up the little one, you remember that you needed some milk. So, since you are out and about, you head on over to the store. You'll need some medicine for the little one with you anyway. Since you are at the store any, well, what else do you need, you think. That's right, go ahead and grab eggs, bread, some afternoon snacks for the kiddos. Are we out of toilet paper? Better grab some just to be on the safe side.

Now, pay and get everything loaded in the car. As you pull into the driveway at the house, you realize you forgot the medicine. Run everything in the house and head back up to the store!

Ok, now the little one has been fed, given medicine and placed in bed. You head to the sitting room, place your glass on the coffee table, pick up your book and read the first few lines when all of a sudden, the door bursts open and here come your young son holding his face as blood pours down the front of his shirt and he is wailing.

Upon forcing his hand from his face, you discover that he has taken a basketball to the face which bloodied his nose and gave him a fat lip. You take him to the kitchen and begin handing him damp paper towels and tell him to hold it on there until the blood stops. He finally calms down and begins bragging about how he stopped a layup which would have cost his team the game by throwing his face in front of the ball.

As you take a deep breath and try to relax, you notice that your spouse will be home very soon and you never thawed anything out for dinner. Rummaging through the cupboards, you find some things to throw together. It isn't your best meal, but it will fill everyone up.

As soon as dinner is over you collapse in a chair and sigh heavily.

Your loving spouse looks at you and says, "It was such a long day at work. I am so happy to have a few hours to relax before I start again tomorrow. How was your day?"

You think of the dishes that have yet to be done, the baths that needs to be given, the bedtime stories and tucking in of the little ones.

You smile at your spouse and reply, "Oh, you know. It was just another day."

We don't always burden our partners with the day to day struggles that we have when it comes to work, kids or chores. Most of us feel that we can handle everything on our own and we don't wish to upset or worry our loved ones with the "little things" that we deal with.

Those little things can add up though and the combined stress and fatigue can wear a person out. Make sure to take a few minutes for yourself each day to unwind and let go of the day. Take a quiet bath. Go ahead and read a chapter of that book. Snuggle with your loved ones. If you aren't at your best, you can't give your best to those around you.

Chicago-area woman who created beehive hairdo dies

CHICAGO (AP) — Margaret Vinci Heldt, who became a hairstyling celebrity after she created the famous beehive hairdo in 1960, has died at age 98.

Ahlgrim Funeral Home in the Chicago suburb of Elmhurst said Monday that Heldt died Friday at a senior living community.

The beehive — a tall, conical woman's hairstyle — became a cultural phenomenon during the 1960s and evolved into a style worn for decades as Hollywood's starlets walked red carpets. Heldt created it on the request of a hairstyling magazine that published images of it in February 1960 and called it "the beehive" because it resembles the shape of a traditional hive.

"I have lived a charmed life," Heldt said in a 2011 interview with The Associated Press. "The opportunities opened to me and I said, 'Now it's up to me. I have to make it work.'"

Heldt said the inspiration for the hairstyle came from a little black velvet hat, shaped like a small bump and lined inside with red lace. Heldt went downstairs to her family room one night while her family was sleeping. She put on music and started working with hair atop a mannequin head.

The magazine article described the hairdo as a "tall wrap-around crown, creating a circular silhouette with high-rise accents." Over the years, it was worn by cultural icons, including Amy Winehouse, Audrey Hepburn and Marge Simpson.

Heldt grew up in Chicago and loved hair as a child. She won a beauty school scholarship in high school, but her family couldn't afford to buy her a hair switch — a piece of fabric with long hair attached so students could practice — so she cut her mother's long hair into a short bob and sewed that onto burlap to use in class. She passed the state board exam in 1935.

Heldt opened her own salon — Margaret Vinci Coiffures — on Michigan Avenue in 1950. She won the National Coiffure Championship in 1954.

Janet Waldo, voice of Judy Jetson and Josie, dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Janet Waldo, who provided the voice for Judy Jetson and many other cartoon characters, has died.

The veteran film, TV and radio actress died Sunday at age 96 at her home in Encino, California.

Her daughter Lucy Lee told The Associated Press on Monday that Waldo had been battling a brain tumor.

A native of Yakima, Washington, Waldo was featured in the futuristic series "The Jetsons," which initially aired in the 1960s. Her other credits included Josie in "Josie and the Pussycats" and Fred Flintstone's mother-in-law in "The Flintstones."

Before "The Jetsons," Waldo had been an actress for decades, appearing on such sitcoms as "I Love Lucy" and "The Andy Griffith Show," plus dozens of movies and radio programs.

Waldo's husband, playwright Robert Edwin Lee, died in 1994.

Join the club: Palahniuk now part of coloring book craze

NEW YORK (AP) — The author of "Fight Club" has joined the coloring book club.

Dark Horse Books announced Monday that Chuck Palahniuk's "Bait: Off-Color Stories for You to Color" will come out this fall. "Bait" is a hybrid of short stories and black-and-white illustrations by a variety of artists that readers can fill in.

Breakfast Bites

Healthy recipes to start your day off right

(Family Features) It is well-known that the best way to start the morning is with a balanced breakfast — it's not called "the most important meal of the day" for nothing, after all.

Breakfast is also linked to many health benefits, including weight control and improved performance. Studies show that eating a healthy breakfast can help you enjoy a more nutritionally complete diet that is higher in nutrients, vitamins and minerals, improved concentration and performance at the office or in the classroom, more strength and endurance, and lower cholesterol levels.

According to the USDA's MyPlate Food Guide, a healthy breakfast should contain a well-balanced variety of foods from the major food groups, including fruits, vegetables, whole grains, low- or non-fat dairy and lean protein.

These recipes for Protein Pancakes, Pumpkin-Banana Bread and Oat Bran Blueberry Muffins from registered dietitian Shanna Stewart, of Wellness For The Win, can help you put your best foot forward to tackle everything the day ahead throws at you. Find these healthy recipes and more at culinary.net/bb.

Power-Up with Pancakes

Breakfast food is delicious at any time of the day, but is the most beneficial when it packs a flavorful punch to help jumpstart your day. Packed with protein, hearty whole-grain oats and banana, and topped with mounds of walnuts and sweet, delicious berries, such as strawberries, these mouth-watering pancakes will help give you the energy you need for any task at hand and keep you feeling full until lunchtime.

Protein Pancakes

- 1 1/2 cups quick oats
- 1 scoop vanilla protein powder
- 1 ripe mashed banana
- 1/2 cup fat free Greek yogurt or cottage cheese
- 1/4 cup almond or skim milk
- 2 egg whites
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- dash of cinnamon
- berries (optional)
- walnuts (optional)

In blender, combine oats, protein powder, banana, Greek yogurt, milk, eggs, vanilla, baking powder, baking soda and cinnamon. Blend until smooth batter forms.

Cook on griddle until golden brown.

Add mixed berries and walnuts (or other toppings) as desired.

Serving suggestions: Pour the juice from the fruit on top of pancakes as "syrup" or top with reduced-sugar strawberry jelly and light syrup.

Healthy Spin on a Breakfast Classic

Banana and pumpkin make for a delicious duo, so bringing them together in this spinoff of a classic recipe only seems right. Moist and delicious, and made with healthy substitutions your family will love, this fall-infused Pumpkin-Banana Bread makes for a quick, easy breakfast or a healthy anytime snack.

Pumpkin-Banana Bread

- 2 mashed, ripe bananas
- 1 cup pumpkin puree
- 1/4 cup canola oil
- 1 egg
- 2 egg whites
- 2 cups whole wheat flour
- 1/2 cup rolled or old fashioned oats
- 5 tablespoons sugar substitute, plus 1 teaspoon
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon ginger
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- chocolate chips (optional)

Heat oven to 350 F.

Spray 8 1/2-by-4 1/2-inch loaf pan (or 4 mini loaf pans) with non-stick cooking spray.

In large bowl, combine banana, pumpkin puree, oil, egg and egg whites. Beat with electric mixer on low speed.

In medium bowl, whisk together flour, oats, sugar substitute, baking powder, baking soda, salt, nutmeg, ginger and cinnamon.

Add flour mixture to banana and pumpkin mixture and beat until just moist.

Pour batter into loaf pan and sprinkle with chocolate chips, if desired.

Bake 50-60 minutes or until a toothpick comes out clean.

Note: It is best to store bread in airtight container in refrigerator for up to 5-7 days as healthy ingredient substitutions do not stay fresh as long.

Breakfast on the Go

Muffins are perfect for an on-the-go breakfast or as a healthy snack option. Homemade oat bran muffins are a great alternative to large, store-bought muffins that are usually packed with calories and fat. Oat bran is a good source of soluble fiber, which can help reduce cholesterol. Not only do these muffins offer health benefits, the recipe is also effortless, making it a morning time-saver when you need to get out the door in a hurry. You can also switch out blueberries for different fruits, such as a banana, giving you the option to have something new each time.

Oat Bran Blueberry Muffins

- 2 cups oat bran hot cereal, uncooked
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar substitute
- 2 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt (optional)
- 1 cup skim milk
- 2 egg whites, slightly beaten
- 1/4 cup honey or molasses
- 2 tablespoons canola oil
- 1/2 cup fresh or frozen blueberries

Heat oven to 425 F.

Line 12 muffin cups with paper baking cups or spray bottoms only with non-stick cooking spray.

In bowl, combine oat bran cereal, brown sugar substitute, baking powder and salt, if desired; mix well.

Add milk, egg whites, honey, oil and blueberries; mix just until dry ingredients are moistened. Do not over-mix.

Fill prepared muffin cups about three-quarters full.

Bake 15-17 minutes, or until golden brown.

Variation: In place of blueberries, stir 1 medium mashed, ripe banana or any other fruit of choice into batter before baking.

Cavs live to play another day

Irving, James lead the way as Cleveland takes Game 5 of NBA Finals

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — So much noise surrounded LeBron James heading into Game 5 of the NBA Finals.

It came from the Golden State Warriors players, who chided James for being overly sensitive to trash talk in the heat of the moment.

It came from raucous Oracle Arena, one of the loudest fan bases in the league that wanted a pound of flesh from James for his involvement in Draymond Green's suspension.

It came from the vocal group of James detractors, who were delighting in the possibility of the four-time MVP falling flat in the finals again, further proof in their eyes that he will never measure up to the unprecedented hype he received from his formative days in Akron, Ohio.

Facing elimination and a fifth career loss in the finals, James delivered a tour de force of a performance with 41 points, 16 rebounds, seven assists and three blocked shots in the Cavaliers' 112-97 victory that pushed the series back to Cleveland.

It was an emphatic response to three days' worth of controversy. And as chaotic as it seemed from the outside, the 31-year-old James soaked it all in with the perspective born from 13 years in the pressure cooker.

"I guess when you're with the game of basketball and big moments like tonight and moments throughout your career, you wish you could get back," James said. "No matter how slow you turn the stereo system up in your house, you'll never be able to get it back. You just don't take these moments for granted, no matter if you're at home or on the road."

Mychal Thompson and Ayesha Curry mocked him. Marreese Speights essentially called him a baby, and the Warriors fans booed him mercilessly every time he touched the ball on Monday night.

James insisted he heard none of it. Instead, he saw a weakened opponent and a chance to get one more game back in Cleveland, and he pounced.

"My only motivation is how can I be there for my teammates and my coaching staff," James said. "That's it. I mean, at the end of the day, nothing else really matters."

It was an overpowering performance reminiscent of the 45 points and 15 rebounds he put up for Miami against Boston in Game 6 of the Eastern Conference finals in 2012. Only this time, James had a little more help.

Kyrie Irving was sensational, scoring 41 points on 17-for-24 shooting to give the Cavaliers the first pair of teammates to score at least 40 in the same game in NBA Finals history.

"It's probably one of the greatest performances I've ever seen live," James said of Irving, who had struggled with his efficiency through the first four games of the series. "To put on the show that he did, you just go out and follow the keys and play

Bad night by the bay

Oakland Athletics' Khris Davis (2) celebrates his three-run home run against the Texas Rangers with teammates Coco Crisp (4) and Danny Valencia (26) during the third inning of a baseball game Monday in Oakland, Calif.

Rangers steamrolled by Oakland, 14-5

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A breakout night for the Oakland Athletics' offense was tempered by concerns about an injury to pitching prospect Sean Manaea.

Khris Davis homered and drove in five runs, Marcus Semien and Jake Smolinski each had three hits and the Athletics pounded first-place Texas 14-5 on Monday night, hours after the Rangers put Yu Darvish on the disabled list.

The A's snapped a seven-game losing streak on Sunday, then beat a Texas team that had won eight of its previous 10 games.

But Manaea, a left-hander acquired last year from Kansas City in a trade for Ben Zobrist, exited after 4 1/3 innings with a strained left forearm. He will have an MRI on Tuesday.

"My first thought was, it's pretty scary because I hear forearm stuff all the time and the 'TJ' (Tommy John), that word, I don't like to think about it," Manaea said. "But (A's trainer Nick Paparesta) told me it's nothing too serious. Hopefully it's nothing bad. (A team doctor) took a look at my ligament and said it was good as far as he could tell. I'm just hoping the MRI says the same."

Manaea said he felt similar discomfort earlier this season, including as recently as during a bullpen session over the weekend in Cincinnati, but not as severe as it was Monday.

A's manager Bob Melvin said he was concerned when he noticed Manaea's velocity dropped starting off the fifth.

"At some point, you're trying to distinguish changeup speeds and his fastball and it's time to go out there and check," Melvin said. "I could see during the inning the velocity wasn't quite there."

Manaea struck out four batters and allowed two runs on four hits.

"He seems like he's more comfortable each and every time out," Melvin said. "He's pitching a little better, he's mixing up his pitches."

Rangers outfielder Shin-Soo Choo homered off Manaea in his first game back from the disabled list following a hamstring injury.

Davis drilled his 15th homer off Cesar Ramos (1-3) in the bottom of the fifth.

Ramos allowed eight runs in 3 2/3 innings. He started in place of Darvish, who had been scheduled to start this game before experiencing shoulder discomfort. Darvish has made three starts since returning from Tommy John surgery.

"(Ramos) was pressed into duty, got ground balls but they went for hits," Rangers manager Jeff Banister said. "He kept falling behind and it's a challenge to pitch when you fall behind like that. We wanted to get some innings out of him but it didn't work out the way he wanted."

Daniel Coulombe (1-0) allowed two runs in 1 2/3 innings.

The Rangers had three homers Monday and have hit 10 in their last four games.

US Open:

Oakmont to provide brutal test

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Sam Parks Jr. rates among the most unlikely winners in U.S. Open history, especially compared with the Hall of Fame list of champions at Oakmont.

He was a 25-year-old club pro from Pittsburgh who played on the winter tour without ever winning. And then he took down a field in the 1935 U.S. Open that included Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen, Denny Shute and Horton Smith.

An upset?

Maybe in pedigree. But not in preparation.

In the months leading up to the U.S. Open, Parks played nine holes at Oakmont every morning before going to work at nearby South Hills Country Club so he could learn the nuances of the fastest greens in golf and develop a strategy. Sarazen wrote of Parks in a column going into the Open, "His knowledge of Oakmont and its pitfalls should be a great asset." And it was.

USGA executive director Mike Davis only wishes more players would take note.

Considering the U.S. Open is held at different courses — this is the record ninth time at Oakmont in the last 89 years — Davis is perplexed by those who show up on Monday as if it were any other week and then play no more than two practice rounds.

"If you think about what the U.S. Open has been for a long time, it's golf's ultimate test," Davis said. "It's testing every aspect of the game to the nth degree. ... That rolls into course management in the sense that when you take this ultimate test, you're put on the greatest architectural golf courses. Great architecture seems to bring out better strategy. It requires you to study it."

Davis doesn't think it's any coincidence that the two players he saw the most often at Merion ahead of the 2013 U.S. Open were Justin Rose and Phil Mickelson, the winner and runner-up. He mentioned Jordan Spieth showing up at Chambers Bay last

Gemini Sky Dialogue

The dialogue will begin under this Gemini sky and keep going on until the issues are hashed out. Most importantly, the people involved will be satisfied by the exchange of love and respect that comes with each argument. This is how intimacies are established between people who would otherwise never know one another. This is how strangers unite.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Boundaries are set for so many reasons -- property, communication, fear, etc. There doesn't always need to be a reason to draw a line, and yet there is one now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Your job will continue to be difficult if you don't ask for help. So ask for help. Many capable people surround you, all of whom are looking forward to being able to support you in some way.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Maybe "tree hugger" is a hippy stereotype, but there is real logic to wanting to wrap your arms around nature. The natural world connects people in a way that nothing else can. Get into it.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). It is good to be able to represent to yourself and others that you are not afraid, that you will make a difference and that you are completely able to stand up for your beliefs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The one who challenges you isn't sure about your strength, but he or she will be soon. These are the kinds of tests that bring about your finest moments of personal fortitude.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The idea that "everything" could hinge on one thing is usually an overstatement. But today it rings true in some way. Your "everything" -- that is, however you feel about yourself

Tomorrow's Horoscope

-- becomes magnified. Take an inventory of your best attributes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). The thing about it is that you don't know what you've got till it's gone. That is the way it goes in the song, and the way it goes in real life, too -- for the clueless ones. Not you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You like to learn -- need to, even -- and learn you do. Today will bring you the entire scope of the lesson up front so that you can decide what to do with the fallout of this.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). A difference of views will occur -- strengths and weaknesses will be pointed out. It's nothing that you don't know already; this is an ongoing argument. But past today it won't go on much longer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The one who respects you has good reason. Now what do you think that reason might be? Investigate it. You're great. Why don't you know this about yourself already?

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "Dear Holiday, my great grandmother was psychic, and she gave readings in the small town where she grew up. Her mother (my great-great-grandmother) also had the gift, and her sister had it, too. The gift skipped a couple of generations, but I'm wondering if I can have it, too? I feel a strong connection to certain objects and people even when there is no logical reason why I should. Maybe these feelings are leading me to my roots. But how can I develop this weird talent? I'm a Cancer."

I believe that humans, to varying degrees, are born with a sensory power beyond their five senses. Animals have it, too, and it is part of our animal nature. Water signs (that's Cancer, Scorpio and Pisces) can use this talent to help and heal themselves and others. To develop your "weird gift," cultivate a playful imagination. Messages are likely coming to you all the time that you discount as unreal because they come from the land of imagination. But imaginings can be truer than what is in front of your eyes. Here's an exercise: Touch the object you are drawn to and ask yourself, "What do I imagine about this?" Whatever pops into your head is valid. Write it down and move on.

CELEBRITY PROFILES: He broke Hollywood stereotypes with his characterization of the wheelchair-using Artie Abrams in the television series "Glee," and now Kevin McHale is filming the television mini-series "When We Rise" about the gay-rights movement. McHale's sun, moon, Mercury and Venus are all in Gemini, the sign that starts dialogues, tips trends and begins social movements.

Dear Readers: Today is Flag Day. We promised to print some of the patriotic poems that readers have been sending in for July 4, but we thought this one would be perfect for today. The author is Audrey Bashlor.

Honor our flag of red, white and blue, remembering our war heroes brought freedom to you.

Men and women of today and years past fought with valor so our freedoms would last. The colonials bravely fought the British red-coats; our warriors fought the Nazis and their U-boats.

Many wars have been fought through the ages filling our history books with a great many pages.

So very long ago our independence was declared; something for over 200 years we have all shared.

Raise the flag, rejoice this day, strike up the band, people of many races enjoy freedom in this land.

Remember our brave men and women who fought giving their lives to keep the freedoms we sought.

Give thanks to those in our armed forces today

Respect our flag and to them a "thank you" say.

Dear Annie: The use of hyphenated names seems to be becoming too commonplace. Once the domain of Britishers yearning for social distinction, is this what is happening in the States? What is the rationale for thus naming oneself?

Having both memory and hearing problems, it is often difficult for me to comprehend and repeat both names. Is it acceptable to select one name instead of using both? Is it possible for those who introduce others to actually say the word "hyphen"? For example, "This is Mr. Jones hyphen Smith." Not only would it help to select between the names, it would increase my awe of what surely must be a distinguished person.

-- Bryan, Texas

Dear Bryan: Dear Bryan: Had your fun, have you? The point of a hyphenated name in this country is neither to display one's elevated social status nor to become burdensome to others. It is to acknowledge that two people have joined their names, as well as themselves, in marriage, or to denote that two people produced a child. It used to be that only the man's surname counted. We agree that, sometimes, those hyphenates can be overly long or complicated. But people are entitled to be addressed by the name they prefer. Please do your best with it. Of course, if you fumble too much, the person is likely to say, "Please, just call me Tom."

Dear Readers: Today is Flag Day and the 37th Annual National Pause for the Pledge of Allegiance at 7 p.m. (Eastern time). For more information, log on to americanflagfoundation.org.

Opening lead — ten of hearts.

It does a player little good to be proficient at squeezes, coups and other advanced plays if he regularly mangles the play of the simple hands that occur far more frequently. An occasional spectacular success cannot make up for the loss of thousands of points on the so-called bread-and-butter hands that arise in between.

Take this case where declarer failed in a slam he should have made.

Tomorrow: Sylvia.

Mexico salvages tie with Venezuela

HOUSTON (AP) — Mexico's Jesus Manuel "Tecatito" Corona missed shot after shot on Monday night with El Tri trailing Venezuela by a goal.

That didn't stop the 23-year-old from taking one more late in the game.

And this time he scored to give Mexico a 1-1 tie and first place in Group C of Copa America.

It was in the 80th minute when Tecatito took on five defenders before firing off a shot from 10 yards to tie it and thrill the overwhelmingly pro-Mexico crowd.

Tecatito said there was no grand plan to his goal, that it was improvisation.

By winning their group, El Tri avoids a quarterfinal matchup with Lionel Messi and tournament favorite Argentina. They're likely headed for an easier matchup with Chile in the knockout round, leaving Venezuela to face mighty Argentina.

Mexico defeated Uruguay 3-1 before downing Jamaica 2-0 to earn a berth in the quarterfinals.

"Football is very, very even, so we believe we have competed with three strong teams with particular ways to play," Mexico coach Juan Carlos Osorio said.

"Jamaica, the most combative team, the most athletic, and of all the stronger, the faster. Uruguay, because of its history being a soccer country and Venezuela, we consider it is very commendable having clinched the first spot in the group and we will continue competing and trying to get as far as possible."

Venezuela surprised Mexico with an early goal. The Vinotinto used a free kick to get it in the box, and Jose Manuel Velazquez gave Venezuela the lead in the 10th minute after taking an assist on a header from Christian Santos and volleying it in for the goal.

Velazquez was proud of the way his team fought, but disappointed it wasn't able to come out on top.

"We came here for the win," he said.

Venezuela had a chance to take the lead in the 84th minute, but goalkeeper Jose de Jesus Corona saved a bicycle kick shot by Josef Martinez.

RANGERS

Josh Phegley added a three-run homer for the A's — his first.

Zach Neal allowed one run on two hits over three innings for his first save.

BEER SHOWER:

Per baseball tradition, Melvin said Coulombe got a beer shower after collecting his first career victory. "I'm sure he's enjoying that, but he's probably a little bit cold," Melvin said.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Rangers: Darvish on Monday had MRIs on his neck and shoulder that revealed no structural damage. He is expected to join the team in St. Louis this weekend. ... 3B Adrian Beltre, out since June 8 with a left hamstring injury, was available for pinch-hitting duties on Monday, manager Jeff Banister said. The Rangers have set Thursday as the target date for his return to the lineup. ... The Rangers activated LHP Alex Claudio from Triple-A Round Rock and optioned OF Jared Hoyer to Triple-A.

A's: RHP Henderson Alvarez, who's recovering from shoulder surgery, pitched 3 1/3 innings in a rehab assignment for Class A Stockton.

UP NEXT

Rangers: LHP Martin Perez (5-4, 3.22 ERA) will pitch for the Rangers in the second of a four-game series against the A's. Perez has thrown seven straight quality starts and is 5-2 with a 2.65 ERA over his last nine starts.

A's: The A's will tap their minor league system yet again for starting rotation help, recalling LHP Eric Surkamp for the fourth time this year to face the Rangers. Surkamp is 0-3 with a 6.41 ERA in seven starts.

year to play two rounds on the weekend, another on Monday and two nine-hole rounds before it started. It helped that Spieth's caddie, Michael Greller, used to caddie at Chambers Bay when the course first opened.

Practice and study only goes so far or Mickelson would have a gold medal instead of six silvers.

And the crowded calendar in golf — especially in an Olympic year — makes it impractical for players to pour everything into one tournament.

Even so, Davis felt so strongly about preparation for a new course last year that he said, "There is no way — no way — a player would have success here at Chambers Bay unless he really studies the golf course and learns it."

"The idea of coming in and playing two practice rounds ... and using your yardage book, that person's done — will not win the U.S. Open," he said.

More players are taking time to see a U.S. Open course in advance. Rickie Fowler, Smylie Kaufman and Justin Thomas were at Oakmont two weeks ago. Jason Day checked in Friday. Adam Scott was another early arrival.

Spieth played 27 holes in early May when he was in town. He has been at Oakmont over the weekend and planned to stick to the same plan as last year — 72 holes over five days — even if that means not playing in Mickelson's famous money game at majors.

Jack Nicklaus occasionally played four practice rounds, keeping track of his 72-hole score to help figure out what it would take.

"I threw the ball in the rough around the greens," Nicklaus said. "But when I played, I played. I always felt when I played a practice round, it's a practice round for how I'm going to play in the tournament."

Nicklaus, a four-time champion, considers it "mind-boggling" that players would not see a course until the week of the U.S. Open.

"It's only the most important championship of the year," he said.

He said any U.S. Open requires players "to be playing one to two shots ahead." If a player gets in trouble, what's the best way out? And the greens are critical at Oakmont because of so many contours that feed the ball toward — or away from — the hole.

"More than any U.S. Open course, you've got to figure out how to be on the right side of the hole location," Davis said.

Parks died in 1997. It sounds as though he would have agreed with Davis based on his comments after his 1935 U.S. Open victory.

"A lot of players back then just weren't familiar with the fast greens like Oakmont had," Parks said. "I knew how to deal with the greens better than most did."

winning basketball, and we did that tonight."

The two of them got whatever they wanted against a Warriors defense that looked lost without Green, their emotional leader and defensive anchor.

Green watched Game 5 from the neighboring Oakland Coliseum, serving the one-game suspension he received after hitting James in the groin in Game 4.

Without Green in the middle, James bulled his way to the basket time and again. He also hit four 3-pointers and answered every Warriors push with a push of his own.

"Over the course of this series, we've done a pretty good job of containing them and trying to force them into tough spots on the floor," said Stephen Curry, who had 25 points. "Tonight they kind of overcame that."

James and Irving seemed to wear down in the fourth quarters of the first four games, the weight of carrying the Cavaliers offense with little rest sapping their energy as the Warriors kept coming at them in waves.

But they faced little resistance defensively in Game 5, which helped them stay fresh all the way through.

"Our defense wasn't nearly as good as it's been," Warriors coach Steve Kerr said. "So when you don't play great defense for the first three quarters, your opponent isn't going to be worn down in the fourth."

Miami used James' dominant performance in Game 6 in 2012 as a spring board to a Game 7 victory that propelled them into the finals. Now Cleveland is equally desperate and hoping for a similar effect heading into Game 6 in Cleveland on Thursday.

"I think that the main thing is that we were able to give ourselves another chance," James said. "Going into Boston, being down 3-2, we understood that the season is over if we don't go out and take care of business."

"Being a big part of our success, I had to come out and do some things to help us win the ballgame, and tonight was just another example of that."

Now it's back to Cleveland. Green will be back in the lineup for Golden State, and the Cavs still trail in the series 3-2. But it's not over yet, and they have James, Irving and maybe a few of those smack-talking Warriors to thank for that.

"To repeat a performance like this would definitely be tough," Irving said. "But whatever it takes to win."

News in brief

Orlando mourns as possible motives emerge for club gunman

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — As thousands in Orlando turned out to mourn 49 people killed inside a gay nightclub, federal investigators examined possible motives for the gunman who committed the worst mass shooting in modern U.S. history.

The White House and the FBI said 29-year-old Omar Mateen, an American born Muslim, appears to be a “homegrown extremist” who had touted support not just for the Islamic State, but other radical groups that are its enemies.

“So far, we see no indication that this was a plot directed from outside the United States, and we see no indication that he was part of any kind of network,” FBI Director James Comey said Monday. He said Mateen was clearly “radicalized,” at least in part via the internet.

Despite Mateen’s pledge of support to the Islamic State, other possible explanations emerged. His ex-wife said he suffered from mental illness. There were questions emerging if he was conflicted about his own sexuality. And his Afghan-immigrant father suggested he may have acted out of anti-gay hatred. He said his son got angry recently about seeing two men kiss.

Meanwhile, thousands gathered Monday night in downtown Orlando for a vigil to support the victims and survivors of the Pulse nightclub shooting. The names of the dead were read aloud. It was held on the lawn of Orlando’s main performing arts venue, where mourners created a makeshift memorial of flowers, candles and notes for the victims.

In Orlando, the ‘Happiest Place’ confronts a sad reality

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Coloradans Randy and Tammy Harris had been planning the trip for 10 months. Seven-year-old son Jackson had his heart set on Space Mountain; his 4-year-old sister, Anabelle, was hoping to meet her namesake from “Beauty and the Beast.”

They’d come to experience what’s billed as the “Happiest Place on Earth.” And then, just a few miles away, there was another superlative: The deadliest mass shooting in modern U.S. history.

The Harrises are certainly not insensitive to tragedy. They live in Aurora, Colorado, where a man dressed in black body armor rampaged through a movie theater in July 2012, killing 12 and wounding 70 others.

“There is no place that’s completely safe anymore,” said Tammy Harris, a middle school writing teacher. “Absolutely no place. These things happen in theaters, in schools, etc. It is just pervasive, unfortunately.”

Sunday’s massacre at Pulse Night Club in downtown Orlando was another reminder. That’s what she’ll think about as she remembers this trip, she said as she slathered her daughter with sunscreen in the Magic Kingdom’s parking lot. “Unfortunately, it’s just becoming a bit of the norm now where these tragedies happen.”

Making no promises, Obama struggles for solution on violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Was it homegrown terrorism, bigotry or random gun violence?

Americans searching for answers after the Orlando shootings are finding no easy solutions from President Barack Obama, who is conceding that a deadly mix of extremism and easy gun access have made future tragedies almost a foregone conclusion.

In the days after the deadliest shooting in modern U.S. history, Obama has offered no simple prescriptions or promises for new action — even as the candidates vying for his job put forward aggressive plans of their own. Instead, the president has suggested the root causes behind a “disturbed” man’s actions are difficult to determine and may be less important than a sort of “soul searching” about what to do about it.

“We know that at some point there are going to be, out of 300 million, there are going to be some individuals who find for whatever reason that kind of horrible propaganda enticing,” Obama said Monday. “And if that happens, and that person can get a weapon, that’s a problem.”

The comments were Obama’s most direct acknowledgment yet that the attacks like the one in Orlando may be a new fixture of American life — the sort of observation that could only be delivered by a second-term president with seven months left in office. Obama’s two-prong message, delivered with weary resignation to reporters, was unlikely to quell the fears of those hoping such attacks will never happen again.

Puerto Rico prepares for wave of losses after club shooting

PONCE, Puerto Rico (AP) — Eduardo Pacheco wrote the names of every person killed in an Orlando nightclub on a bright green poster spread across the hood of a car, preparing for a vigil to the fallen. He stopped halfway, unable to go on as tears filled his eyes.

Five of the names on the list were his friends, all from the city of Ponce in Puerto Rico, an island preparing for a wave of losses following early Sunday’s attack in the Pulse gay nightclub as it was celebrating Latin night. Mourners young and old clutched candles and posters at Monday night’s vigil in this southern coastal city, still stunned by the news.

“It was such a tremendous loss. He was such a great human being. All five of them were,” said Pacheco of his best friend, who was among those killed, and the other four victims.

He said two of them were on vacation in Orlando, while the other three had moved there in recent years.

While many Latinos were among the dead, Puerto Ricans feared their island would be inordinately hit as LGBT activists were struck by how many had characteristically Puerto Rican names.

So far, nearly “all of the names of the victims seem to be Puerto Rican,” Karina Claudio Betancourt, a Puerto Rican activist who is a program officer with the Open Society Foundations, said as the names rolled out.

Clinton and Sanders to meet as DC marks the final primary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders are ending the primary calendar with a face-to-face meeting on Tuesday that could set the tone for Democratic unity and next month’s party convention in Philadelphia.

Clinton and Sanders plan to meet on the night of the final presidential primary in the District of Columbia, a contest that will have no bearing on Clinton’s role as the presumptive nominee but marks a transition in the lengthy primary fight between the two rivals.

The Vermont senator has vowed to do all he can to prevent Republican Donald Trump from reaching the White House but suggested he will not endorse Clinton immediately. Sanders said the private meeting will help him determine how committed Clinton will be to the policy issues he has staked out during his 13-month campaign.

“I simply want to get a sense of what kind of platform she will be supporting, whether she will be vigorous in standing up for working families and the middle class, moving aggressively in climate change, health care for all, making public colleges and universities tuition-free,” Sanders said in an interview Sunday with NBC’s “Meet the Press.” After the discussion, Sanders said he will “be able to make other decisions.”

Sanders met last week with President Barack Obama and Vice President Joe Biden, who both later endorsed Clinton, and signaled to Democrats that he hopes to play a constructive role in helping the party regain control of the Senate in the 2016 elections.

Frenchman shot video of attack on police, had terrorist past

PARIS (AP) — A Frenchman once convicted for recruiting jihadi fighters recorded video of the attack in which two police officers died, authorities said Tuesday, as France’s leadership reeled from what the president called a new terrorist attack.

The Islamic State’s Amaq news agency cited an unnamed source as saying an IS fighter carried out the late-night attack in the Paris suburb of Magnanville.

While the extremist group has not officially claimed responsibility, French authorities view it in the context of the large-scale threat hanging over the country since IS attacks on Paris in November.

Two police officers, a man and woman who lived together, were killed. The attacker, identified as 25-year-old Larossi Abbala, was also killed, while the couple’s 3-year-old child survived.

French President Francois Hollande held an emergency security meeting Tuesday about what he said was “incontestably a terrorist act.” He said France was facing a terror threat “of a very large scale.”

“France is not the only country concerned (by the terrorist threat), as we have seen, again, in the United States, in Orlando,” he said.
