Joe Choate gave me a call Monday morning. He had a few things he felt needed saying, and after hearing him, I agreed wholeheartedly.

Joe pointed out that young people can get a bad reputation these days, when it is only a few of them who really cause the problem.

And to illustrate his point, he told me about what happened at his Skelly station in Bogata last Saturday night.

One young man broke the big glass windows out of the station front, then ran off. There it is, right, another nasty incident to shake our heads over! Wrong, because a number of other teenagers chased the culprit down, brought him back to the station, called Joe and then kept the boy there until Joe arrived and called Red River County authorities.

Joe thinks that many of the young people who like to drive around town, even though they are a little boisterous at times, are providing some of the best law enforcement. Obviously, the county law officers are easily recognizable, but not so the patrol of responsible youngsters who may keep many incidents from happening just by being around!

Actions such as these deserve commending. Young people as a whole deserve our attention and understanding.

And although littering and noise can create a problem, it needs to be brought to mind that basically the majority of "kids" are not harming anything.

Growing up in today's world isn't easy...growing up never is. There is more freedom than ever, and today's youngsters have to resist temptations that never arose only a few years ago.

Please, let us try to remember this, and also remember the many good actions that go on, not just the bad!

State Official To Check Into Dumping

By Nanalee Nichols

A major problem with dumping has been brought to the attention of not only the citizens of Bogata, but the State Department of Public Health in Tyler recently.

A dirt road, which runs behind the Bogata Assembly of God Church and their Christian Academy, has become a favorite location for trash dumping, which is creating more problems than just being an eyesore.

So much garbage, trash and discarded household material has been thrown under the bridge there that it has severely restricted water flow through the creek there, and this has caused water to back up, becoming extremely stagnant, and breeding huge quantities of mosquitoes.

To further aggravate the problem, dead animals have been thrown into the drainage creek, creating a health hazard, attracting hordes of flies, and causing such an odor that it can be smelled clear into Bogata.

The dumping is taking place within the city limits of Bogata, but the bridge that trash is being thrown under is under the jurisdiction of Red River County.

Victor Cain of the Texas State Department of Public Health said that he will be coming to look at the problem within the next few weeks, and will discuss determining who might be doing the dumping, and possible prosecution or remedies for the problem.

with the county commissioner.

The area has been a problem for a long time, and once before an article about the situation was run in the newspaper. Molly Williams, who lives near the contaminated area, says that the problem lessened for a while after the article appeared, but over the past years has increased again until it is creating a real health hazard, as well as being an eye sore.

DUMPING PROBLEM-Old hot water heaters, garbage, and a wide variety of trash is being dumped under a bridge on a dirt road in the outskirts of Bogata. Dead animals and stagnant water are creating a health problem, and an official from the Texas Public Health office is expected to come and look at the problem soon. (Staff Photo by Diana Eudy)

Pecans Need Attention For Production

By Chris Bull
This week's article will focus primarily on pecans. There are certain diseases and insects to be on the lookout for this time of year. Pecan Scab is a foliage and nut disease caused by a fungus. It effects rapidly growing shoots and leaves and later developing nuts. Pecan scab is the most destructive disease of pecans in Texas.

From now until the end of August, the primary objective for controlling scab is on the shucks. Scab lesions appear as small, black dots which are elevated or sunken in older infections. Eventually these lesions become large and the entire surface becomes black. At this stage, development of pecans stops and nuts drop prematurely. Benlate and Du-Ter are probably the best fungicide for scab. Insects to be looking for are walnut caterpillars, yellow aphids and second generation casebearers.

The walnut caterpillar can defoliate an entire tree overnight. Young caterpillars are reddish-brown with narrow, yellowish lines. Fully-grown caterpillars are almost black with two grayish lines on the back and two on the sides. Diazinon will control the walnut caterpillar. Diazinon or Malathion should control the yellow aphids when they are seen.

Second generation pecan casebearers emerge approximately 42 to 45 days after the first generation. Eggs are greenish white when deposited and gradually turn red in four or five days.

After hatching, larvae feed on buds and shoots for two to three days before entering the nuts. Insecticide applications should be timed so that trees are sprayed by the third day after egg hatching. Zolone is an excellent insecticide for controlling this insect.

In Peaches, look for brown rot, scab and foliage and fruit feeders. Plums are also susceptible to these and can be treated in the same manner.

Brown rot looks like its name. Scab is often called freckles or black spot. They cause lesions and often secondary decay in the fruit can occur. Benlate 50 percent WP, Botran 75 percent WP, Captan or Orthocide 50 percent WP or Sulphur 97 percent WP are used to control diseases.

Stink bugs and the plum curculio are the main insect pests. Both attack the fruit and can be controlled with 50 percent WP, Malathion or any insecticide labeled for their control.

Grapes may be experiencing powdery mildew and insect damage, too. Benlate, Dithane Z-78, Dithane M-22 or Captan will control mildew. Benlate, Dithane Z-78 and M-22 should not be applied within seven days of harvest.

BANK CENTS
By Neil Rozell

In the past 20 years, there has been a complete turn around in the banks' deposit structure. In the 1950's, less than 10% of the banks' total deposits were interest bearing accounts and the average size of the deposit was $1,000.00. In 1975, the interest bearing accounts, savings, C.D.'s, etc. represent over 60% of the total banks deposits and the average checking account is less than $500.

We want you to know more about our business!!!
