City accepts park improvement plans

The City Council met in regular session on Monday, January 9, with 28 visitors present. Visitors were Alice Hale, K.W. Cook, Vellie Pierce, Ann Pierce, David Carroll, Walter Farmer, Toby Virden, Anthony Smith, Kenneth Schooler, Jack Davis Jr., Leticia Ramirez, Nettie Flores, Stephanie Flores, Lillie Hernandez, Ruben Hernandez Jr., George Lozano, Cory Smith, Gabriel Lee Ortiz, Mary Lou Hernandez, Thomas Thormeyer, Scott Hay, Charles Grenwelle, Eva Reyna, Jennifer Reyna, Anthony Ochoa, Joe Reyes, Aldo Ray Torres, and Sara Esquivel. Councilwoman Shirley Hall was absent.

First business included retiring to executive session to hear complaints on (an) employee(s). After 40 minutes, the council returned and tabled any action at the request of the attorney for the complainant, the Hernandez family.

In other matters, Scott Hay of Hibbs and Todd Engineering introduced plans and specifications for improvements to the W. Lee Colburn Park. Winters has been awarded a grant from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD) Grants-In-Aid Branch for the construction.

The project includes further development of 50 acres of land located approximately 8 miles east of Winters on the eastern shore of Elm Creek Reservoir.

Proposed development includes 8 picnic tables with grills, 10 RV hook-ups, pavilion with 8 tables and 2 grills, lighted fishing pier, crappie house, 0.7 mile walking trail, baseball field, volleyball court, playground, utilities, bathhouse, roads and parking, landscaping, irrigation, and signs.

The planned total project cost is $293,300 of which 50 percent will come from local matching funds. It is the City's intention to provide as much of the local match as possible with force-account labor and equipment and materials from the City, and force-account labor and equipment from Runnels County. The only segments of the project that the City intends to complete by contract include: the reinforced cast-in-place concrete slabs for the pavilion and the restrooms. The construction of the septic tank and drainfield system for on-site sewage disposal and the construction of the lighted fishing pier and crappie house.

The City has three years from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission grant approval date to complete the project. The deadline is February 1, 1997.

The plans and specifications were accepted and will be submitted to TPWD for their approval.

Administrator Hassan stated that TEXPOOL's financial status may be in question, according to larger daily newspapers. As an obligation for the security of the public's funds and in accordance with the Local Government Code, the City felt it was in their best interest to advertise for depositary requests. Two bids were received by the January 6 deadline; one from First State Bank-Winters Branch and the other from Peoples National Bank. The more favorable bid came from Peoples Bank. Aldermen agreed to transfer funds from TEXPOOL to Peoples National Bank. The details of the contract and other requirements will be worked out between Hassan and Mac Sayles, president of PNB.

by Jean Boles

A very special group of hunters has been in the Winters area recently. And these fellows aren't just your everyday, run-of-the-mill hunters. These guys are extremely serious about their sport.

They require the normal hunting gear — a weapon of some sort, camouflage wear, just the right hunting cap, and patience — extreme patience.

And some assistance. These unique hunters are members of the Texas Handicapped Sportsman organization which promotes outdoor activities for the physically challenged, founded by David Brown of Wolfe City.

Three members of this organization recently were guests of Paul Michaelis and Ed Hall of the Wingate area. Michaelis and Hall allowed the men to hunt on their ranch land.

Alex Garcia of Amarillo, Mark Brown of Wolfe City and Jerry Scott of Kentucky and their assistants arrived in Winters with all the anticipation common to hunters. However, car trouble struck and the group was stranded until local businessman, Charles Bahlman of Bahlman Chevrolet, came to the rescue. Charles loaned the group a van, at no charge, to use while their own vehicle was being repaired.

So the hunters were back on track and anxious to try their skills.

While all hunters know that preparation is necessary, these fellows must prepare more than the average outdoorsman. For them, years of rehabilitation and therapy were necessary before they could hunt again.

Mark, 21, was critically injured in a car accident when he was 17. Because he suffered an extensive brain stem injury, his father was advised to put Mark in an institution and "get on with life."

But David Brown had other plans for his son.

Little by little David reintroduced his son to hunting, a passion they had shared for many years prior to Mark's accident. When Mark had improved enough, he was placed in a rehabilitation program for months and finally was physically able to venture to the great outdoors once again, with his dad at his side, acting as therapist, cheerleader, physical assistant, and fellow sportsman.

Mark is now able to shoot a variety of weapons from a cross bow to a muzzle loader to high-powered rifles. He is also training to participate in Olympic skeet shooting competition.

Alex Garcia sustained a serious back injury in July, 1990, and became so despondent that he stayed in his house for three years. In October, 1993, he saw a television program about disabled hunters and contacted David Brown.

Alex is quick to tell how getting back to hunting has turned his life around.

"I thought about giving up, after my accident. Getting to hunt again — be outdoors and associate with other hunters — has been real therapy for me," said Alex.

Jerry Scott's situation is a little different in that he was born with cerebral palsy. But his disabilities haven't stopped the 27-year-old from participating in various OIL BUSINESS . . .

By Reg Boles • 1994

I have had the opportunity to hear many interesting stories about personal experiences in the oil patch—"War Stories", if you please.

Some of the funniest have been those in far-off lands where the language was just one of the barriers faced by the oil patch traveler. I thought some of these might be of interest to you, but I have left out the names to protect the innocent and not-so-innocent.

If you have ever traveled out of the U.S., you have probably tried to learn a few lines of the language of the country of your destination. Those of us in the oil field are no different, and we do our best to at least learn common courtesy words such as "thank you", etc.

One intrepid traveler journeyed to the African continent to one of the many countries there where French is spoken. He was very timid about speaking any French, so he learned the phrase "I don't speak French". He was sure this would help in any situation.

As he arrived at his destination, he and a colleague acquired a driver and a car and headed for a remote field location. It was to be a long trip, so the driver and his two passengers took turns driving. On our guy's shift, he disobeyed some local traffic law in a small village and was pulled over.

Unfortunately, the driver, who spoke French, was not roused by the stoppage, but our man was not worried. He simply met any inquiries by the local peace officer with his oft-practiced phrase: "I don't speak French" followed by a very large smile.

Turns out, though, that our beleaguered traveler did not discover until he was pulled from the vehicle and arrested that he was telling the officer that the officer did not speak French! This was taken as an insult followed by a smug smile in the officer's eyes, so he arrested the poor guy.

It all ended when the regular driver awoke and explained the situation, including something about our guy not being too bright.

Another story tells of a guy who arrived at the airport in the Far East. He was welcomed by pre-arranged transportation in the form of a driver and a very small compact car with two doors. Unfortunately, the unlucky American had many bags and an extra passenger.

To make things worse, the driver also had a passenger. So, four people and a truckload of gear had to be hauled about 40 miles. The drivers said don't worry, as he pretended to put the baggage in the trunk of the car.

When they arrived, the traveler found that he had no baggage, only two chickens in the trunk. The native driver attributed the whole thing to the spirits and said the passenger should feel lucky it wasn't him that was turned into a chicken.

Finally, another friend of mine traveled to an area that also required drivers to get to a field location. The drivers worked under contract to deliver their passengers and baggage in good condition to a pre-determined site.

This time, when the American traveler arrived at the airport, he saw his driver holding up a sign with his name on it and headed over. He then handed the driver his business card.

Now, you should know that my friend worked for a consulting company made of two names (i.e. Smith & Jones).

As he showed the card to the driver, the small energetic man went berserk. He screamed and yelled—all in a language and dialect that my friend could not understand. He was sure they were angry words.

After a while, he was able to ascertain that the driver was upset because he had only been paid to carry one passenger and by looking at the card he thought he had to carry my friend, a Mr. Smith and a Mr. Jones.

These are just a taste of the stories I have heard over coffee all over the world.

And people think all we do is sit around and talk.

From The Well

by
Pastor Jim Hanson

I love bells. Sleigh bells. Church bells. School bells. My mother used to have a hand bell, the kind that school teachers of a one-room country schoolhouse used to have. She kept hers, after no longer teaching, and she used it as a dinner bell. Every night, at supper time, she'd stand on the back porch, ring the bell, and call out, "Jimmy, come home, it's time for supper."

I'll not forget, ever, the night World War II was over. In that little South Dakota city of Brookings, South Dakota, all the bells in all the churches were rung at the same time. They seemed to say, "The war is over, peace at last."

There is something special about bells. Every Sunday morning, just before worship, the bell rings out. It is a solemn moment. A Danish hymn writer by the name of Nikolai Grundtvig wrote a hymn entitled "Built on a Rock". The first stanza goes like this:

"Built on a rock the Church shall stand,
Even when steeples are falling;
Crumbled have spires in every land,
Bells still are chiming and calling—
Calling the young and old to rest,
Calling the souls of those distressed,
Longing for life everlasting."

Every time our church bell chimes I think of those words.

There are those who say that when people die, they hear bells ringing. I don't know that Scripture tells us that, but I do know that in many churches, including St. John's, there is a tradition of tolling the bell when there is a funeral in church. The idea had to come from somewhere. I'd like to think it was God's idea.

Hearing the bells on Christmas day lifted the spirit of the beloved American poet, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. The cruel miseries caused by the Civil War deeply distressed this man. But, as he says in his poem,

"I heard the bells on Christmas day their old familiar carols play, and wild and sweet the words repeat
of peace on earth, good will to men.
I thought how, as the days had come,
the belfries of all Christendom had rolled along th'unbroken song
of peace on earth, good will to men.
And in despair I bowed my head:
"There is no peace on earth," I said;
"hate is strong, and mocks the song
of peace on earth, good will to men."
Yet pealed the bells more loud and deep:
"God is not dead, nor cloth he sleep;
the wrong shall fail, the right prevail, with peace on earth, good will to men."
Then ringing, singing on its way, the world revolved from night to day—a voice, a chime, a chant sublime
of peace on earth, good will to men."

There is a power in the bells. Alfred, Lord Tennyson put it this way,

"But they the troubled spirit rule,
For they controlled me when a boy;
They bring me sorrow touch'd with joy,
The merry, merry bells of Yule."
And goes on to say
"Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good
"Ring out old shapes of foul disease,
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;
Ring out the thousand years of old
Ring in the thousand years of peace.
"Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be."

I wish I could have been in Winters on New Year's Eve. At midnight, I would have loved to have made our church bell ring - and ring out the old and ring in the new and pray a Happy New Year for all of you!

Commissioners Court welcomes Keith Collom as a new member

by SANDY OWEN
Special to The Enterprise

The Runnels County Commissioners Court broke in its newest member during a special meeting January 4. Newly-elected commissioner of Precinct 2, Keith Collom, joined in the motion made by commissioner Richard Strube to approve a request made by members of the Rowena Sons of Herman Lodge. Several members were present to ask the court to exempt the hall in Rowena from county taxes. The basis for the exemption is because the lodge is a non-profit organization and a historical site.

County Judge Michael Murchison welcomed commissioner Keith Collom and a motion was approved to accept his bond. Collom was sworn in the previous day when he signed the bond.

Business & Industrial Corporation seeks ideas to promote Winters

Winters Area Business and Industrial Corporation met in regular session on January 4. Members present were Mac Sayles, Nelan Bahlman, Aref Hassan, Archie Jobe, Gary Moore, Randall Conner, Tommy Russell, and Charles Bahlman.

As previously discussed, the old Winn's building now has two interested purchasers, Bill's Dollar Store and Family Dollar Store.

Texas Midwest Community Network will sponsor a management training course in April for Chamber of Commerce managers and officers to help them become more proficient in their jobs.

The cost of the year-round banners that were being considered for the city are very expensive. In lieu of purchasing banners, Archie Jobe volunteered to build them if someone could be found to offer a design and do artwork. If you are interested in donating ideas or your talents, contact either Archie Jobe or Nelan Bahlman.

As an idea to offer funds for the WABIC, members are considering building a house to be rented or sold. Anson Industrial Corporation has accepted this plan and they will be contacted for more information.

Poe's Corner

by Charlsie Poe

Pioneer medical practice

It comes as no surprise that Frances and Sheila Allen remember vividly their parents career in the remote area of early day Runnels County.

They fondly recall their Aunt Annie Emery's visits in the summer. And they returned every year to visit her after she married James W. Bright of Content and lived there for 30 years.

Although the little drug store has been removed from the front yard, the Allen sisters restored the greenhouse where their parents lived and dispensed medicine. Dr. Walter Allen was a surgeon as well. His wife's specialty was the diseases of women and children.

Together or separately the doctors administered to the needs of the country folk and did a typical "horse and buggy" practice, often going fifty miles on a call.

Dollie and Nellie were the names of the mares that pulled their buggy, and the lady doctor sometimes rode a bicycle when there was no one at home to help her harness the team.

She carried a bucket to gather chips for the fire as well as to feed the horses. One day, one of the ponies was disappointed because she had no feed and picked the doctor up by the back of her collar and shook her. The protection of a heavy corset helped her escape injury.

On one occasion when a man partly intoxicated came to the door and asked for the doctor, she replied, "I am the doctor."

He looked at her and sputtered, "One of them damn she doctors!"

History doesn't record her reply, but we are sure that a woman who had wanted to be a doctor since she was four-years-old didn't back down. When the Fort Worth's University Medical Board balked at admitting a woman, she pointed out rules for admission did not read "men only".

And so it was that pretty Daisy began the studies that led to her becoming the first woman to be graduated from a medical school in Texas (in 1897). She finished cum laude in her class of 17. Daisy took a serious look at her given name and it didn't sound dignified to her ears, so she changed it to Frances D. Emery about the time she had to hide any "ugh!" she felt when she began dissection.

From this beginning, Dr. Daisy Allen opened a private general practice in Fort Worth for women and children, that she would pursue for many years.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I read with interest the article on the Pierce brothers. They are very special to me, especially Jack. Our whole family has been through so much through the years, but we always have a closeness with one another during these times - whether it be a sad time or a joyous time.

Thank you so much for a good, hometown, down-to-earth article. It's good to hear hometown news, rather than all the bad that we read in the larger papers.

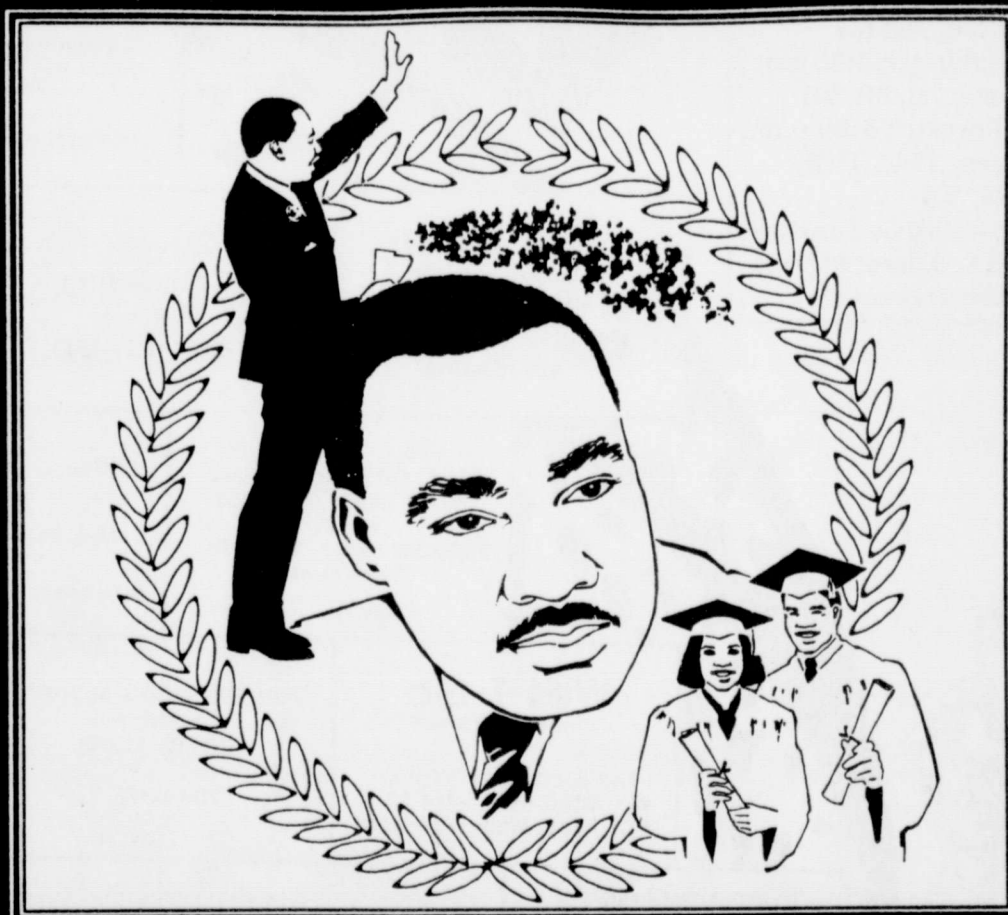

May you and your paper have a wonderful New Year in all that you do for the readers and the town of Winters, Texas.

Sincerely,

Karen Pierce Hicks

Bullock praises extra funding for Texas rural roads

Lt. Governor Bob Bullock on December 22 commended the Texas Transportation Commission for approving an additional $50 million saved in cost-efficiency measures for critically-needed maintenance on Texas' farm-to-market roads.

"This money will continue to help improve the safety of millions of Texans who rely on rural roads to get to school, to work, and home again," Bullock said. "I can't think of a way it could be put to better use."

The Department of Transportation made the funds available by adopting further efficiency measures in its budget, including delaying the purchase of high-cost construction equipment and reducing vehicle maintenance costs.

The $50 million the Transportation Commission approved is in addition to $57.6 million approved in July for the maintenance of farm-to-market roads, bringing the total money targeted for farm-to-market road maintenance to $253.6 million for fiscal year 1995.

Bullock appointed an interim legislative committee last summer to study what the state should spend on rural roads and infrastructure, the needs of counties and the equitable distribution of state funds.

Crews News

by Hilda Kurtz

Friends are those rare people who ask how we are and then don't wait to hear the answer.

A ball game, rodeo, and several weddings were taking place Saturday night; therefore, the attendance at the Community Stew & Chili Supper was small.

Brother Oscar and Janie Fanning and Juanita Shields were Sunday after church services dinner guests with Selma Dietz.

Former Crews resident, Thora (Bernard Kirby) Erwin, of San Antonio, was buried at 11 a.m. in the Glen Cove Cemetery on Friday. She also was a former school teacher.

Dennis McBeth shot a suspected rabid red fox Wednesday afternoon near their home. The McBeths spent Saturday in Midland with Roy and Shawn Graham and attended the Odessa Rodeo. Little Roy McBeth enjoyed it very much as he played with his buddy, Taylor.

Brenda Jacob of San Angelo spent Christmas and last week with Margie Jacob and relatives.

Sharon Englert took Corey Van Zandt out to the Pizza Hut in Ballinger for his 16th birthday. Others helping him celebrate were Margie Jacob, Brad and Beverly Van Zandt, & Bryce Busenlehner.

Spending New Year's Day with Margie Jacob were Sharon and Jerry Englert; Bryce Busenlehner; Brenda Jacob; Beverly, Corey, and Brad Van Zandt; Mike, Carol, Kathryn, Scott, and Jeanna Kozelsky.

WMU ladies Selma Dietz, Eileen Cartwright, and Netha Kirby met with Harvey Mae Faubion Monday morning.

Eileen Cartwright and family ate chicken and dumplings with Noble and Harvey Mae Faubion on Saturday. Carolyn Kraatz came and prepared Sunday dinner.

Ruth Pape's sons, Jack and Mike and David, all got together in Dallas Saturday and called Ruth. She also had a phone visit with daughter Elaine Kennedy of Tampa, Florida, on Sunday. Ruth spent Monday morning with Hilda.

Vickie Osman of Seymour, Wisconsin, a friend of Josie and Bill Hoppe, visited for two days. On Sunday, the Hoppe children and their families brought hamburgers, snacks, and a beautiful anniversary cake for Josie and Bill's 64th anniversary.

Bill, Marqué, Desiré, and Will Mathis spent the weekend in Denton with Marqué's folks. While there they attended the wedding of her brother, Mitch Burney, to Carrie Richey of Dallas.

Desiré Mathis and the Winters team won their game against Eldorado. The Mathis family attended the next game; Winters defeated Robert Lee.

Gladys Cotton of Ballinger and Walter Pape of Santa Anna spent Saturday afternoon with Noble and Harvey Mae Faubion.

Brian Faubion spent one day with Nila and Therin Osborne while home from college.

Pioneer Church of God News

Jesus is alive in 1995!

by HELEN MURCHISON

The Pioneer Church of God would like to thank Rev. Randy Mitchell and his wife for ministering to us on December 28, 1994. The Mitchells came from Cleveland, Tennessee, on Christmas vacation. Randy is the son of Rev. J.O. Mitchell and Sister Treva. Rev. Randy and his wife ministered to the church in music and song and brought forth the word of God.

Sunday, January 8, we had communion. Rev. J.O. Mitchell spoke to us about living a Godly life before the Lord and how to keep Jesus alive in our lives for the year of 1995.

We want to thank the visitors for coming to the services.

Please feel welcome to come and hear the word of God preached in spirit and in truth! Always remember Jesus is alive in 1995! May God richly bless each and everyone.

sports, including team roping and hunting.

It was during a rodeo that Jerry first learned of the Texas Handicapped Sportsman association. Now, with the help of an assistant, he can enjoy hunting on a larger scale, and is quite a spokesman for the organization.

Texas Handicapped Sportsman has a membership of about 45 challenged and 40 non-challenged individuals and is headquartered in Wolfe City, Texas. David Brown publishes a bi-monthly newsletter with a present circulation of 700, having grown from an initial ten handwritten copies.

The organization is in need of assistance, financially and personally. One particular need the hunters have is two-way radios to help hunters and assistants stay in contact when out hunting. And because each physically challenged sportsman must have an assistant, volunteers are always needed.

One such volunteer, a 76-year-old gentleman who likes to "tinker" with inventions, has developed an apparatus that, by using a common doorbell button, enables a quadriplegic to fire a gun. The sensitive button is connected to a solenoid that is connected to the trigger of a rifle. This particular hunter can fire his rifle by pressing the doorbell button with his tongue.

The THS club has received calls from Montana, Kentucky, New Mexico, and Texas, and membership continues to grow.

Anyone interested in helping this special group or obtaining information about joining may write to Texas Handicapped Sportsman, P.O. Box 370, Wolfe City, Texas 75496, or call David Brown at (903) 496-7871.

The Winters visitors wish to thank Paul Michaelis and Ed Hall for allowing them to hunt on their land, Charles Bahlman and his staff, Doxie Lou Marks at the Winters Motel, and Gayla McCullough at the Grazin' Patch Restaurant for their assistance and generosity.

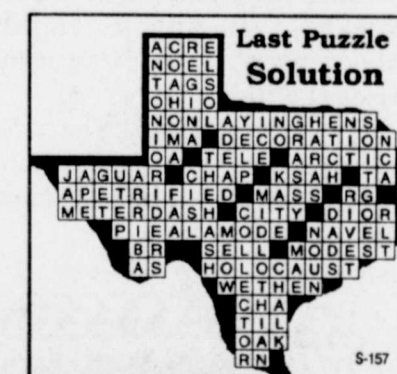

JV basketball starting times modified

The beginning of district play in basketball includes teams from far distances. Because of these great distances, a time change for the junior varsity team is necessary.

All games will begin at 5:00 p.m. for both the boys and girls junior varsity teams.

Home games will be played in the old gym and the new gym, with the teams alternating the nights they will play in each gym.

January 17, the boys JV will play in the new gym at the same time the JV girls will be playing in the old gym. The next homegame will have the JV boys in the old gym and the JV girls in the new gym, and so on for each home game.

Way up yonder in the land of cotton

Hello and greetings from beautiful, downtown Brownfield, Texas - where the wind blows and the cotton grows!

In case you haven't missed me, your monthly scribe and former resident of Rt. 1, Box 62 Drasco Road now wakes up each morning on the High Plains of Northwest Texas.

Well, how are things up there, you ask?

First off and you may not believe this, but there are almost no mesquite trees! Yep, lots of sand and space, but anything with bark and limbs is mighty scarce.

Even in places where the sod has not long since been busted by plow, the little scrub mesquites are not big enough to give decent shade to a rattlesnake.

Directions are another thing that you have to get used to up here.

In Winters, you might hear something like this:

"Take the road past Mustang Creek down to the big pecan tree, you'll see pasture on both sides. Go across Coyote Creek and Around Brownfield, you'll probably hear this:

"Go three hundred cotton fields to the east, then turn south until you come to the four thousandth irrigation pivot

This past November, the wind was blowing parts of somebody's field so hard that it sandblasted our barbecue grill by the back door. Tumbleweeds as big as Toyota's bounced across the front yard. I raked red sand out of the garage with a scoop shovel.

Up here, they call it "a blow". "You call this a blow?" my neighbor hollered over. "Wait'll this spring. There'll be enough dirt'n the air that you can't see past your porch."

Oh boy. But I guess that's what makes life so much fun - there's always something to look forward to!

For those of you who know and love her, my wife is still teaching her little heart out at Brownfield Intermediate School.

At first, she did not seem to adjust to the move very well at all. Leaving her friends and her bi-weekly San Angelo and/or Abilene shopping trip extravaganza was difficult for her.

But then it happened. She came home one day from a trip to Lubbock. She was breathless, excited and in a all-out tizzy.

"What's the matter," I jumped up. "Don't tell me, you've won the lottery, we're rich and we can go back home?"

"I found it," she said, her eyes bright and glowing. "You should see it, it's beautiful and so big and easy to get to!"

I didn't know if I like the sound of this.

"It has Sears and Penny's and Mervyn's and everything. It even has three Dillard's stores. Can you believe it, three...."

So friends, worry about her no more. She has found her pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. Yes, you guessed it, the SOUTH PLAINS MALL.

But the other day, she seemed dispondent after a marathon Saturday mall shopping trip.

"I miss the San Angelo and Abilene malls," she whimpered.

I looked in the back of the mini van. There was not a single package to be seen. Usually, you couldn't see out of the windows for all the stuff she bought.

She put her head on my shoulder.

"It sounds crazy, but it's the truth. There's absolutely so much merchandise stocked in all the stores, I can't find anything to buy."

"It's like that dumb saying you always say," she sobbed. "About not being able to see the pasture for the weeds...."

"The forest," I said. "The saying is that you can't see the forest for the trees."

"That's the one. I can't see the forest for the trees," she cried.

"I can't see the dresses for all the dresses. I can't see the blouses for all the blouses. I can't see the shoes for all the shoes. I want to go home. This was never a problem in the Sunset or Abilene malls. I could see the forest and the trees and the dresses and the shoes and...."

Last Saturday though, she pulled into the drive and honked the horn. I was out sweeping the sand away so we could get in the front door.

She was happy and smiling just like the old days. The mini van was loaded down with about a zillion packages.

Yep, I guess everything is right with the world and things are good out here on the High Plains of Texas.

My wife has returned in triumph from the South Plains Mall. I guess she kept looking through the forest until she finally found the trees.

And we have the Visa bill to prove it!

Congressional internship application deadline is near Congressman Chas. Stenholm reminds all college students and educators interested in participating in the 1995 Washington, D.C. Internship Program that the application deadline is January 17, 1995.

Four interns will be selected to work in the congressman's office for one-month intervals in June or July. The interns will be actively involved in the daily operation of the congressman's office, and duties will include researching and assisting with constituent inquiries and projects. Interns will also have an opportunity to attend committee meetings, floor debates, and a speaker's series.

Internships are available to college students from the 17th Congressional District of Texas or those attending college in the district, and teachers and administrators. The interns are paid a one-month stipend to cover living expenses.

Intern applications are available by writing Raymond McDaniel, Jr., Chairman of the Omar Burleson Congressional Internship Selection Committee, P.O. Box 543, Abilene, Texas, 79604 or by calling Elaine Talley in the Abilene district office at 915/673-7221.

The deadline to apply for an internship is January 17, 1995. Applications will be forwarded to a selection committee who will notify finalists by February 22, 1995. Interviews will be conducted in Abilene on March 18, 1995, and interns will be selected on that date.

February 3, last day to order windbreak trees

If you haven't purchased your windbreak trees, February 3 is the deadline. Over the past several years residents have purchased evergreen (conifer) and hardwood seedlings. These windbreak trees are well on their way to providing shade, beauty, and protection to their owners.

Evergreen conifers (12-inch) are sold in multiples of 20 for $35 and hardwoods are priced at $20 per 25 trees. Trees should arrive at the SCS office on February 15.

These seedlings, which are raised in the Texas Forest Service nursery near Lubbock, are healthy, viable seedlings that are well adapted to the soil and weather conditions here in Runnels County.

For a list of trees that are still available, please call the Soil Conservation office at 365-3415 or stop in at 2000 Hutchings Avenue in Ballinger. Make the commitment; don't put it off again this year.

Critical Area Treatment can correct erosion problems of your land

Critical Area Treatment can be used to correct deep gully erosion along rivers or streams. Treatment of the area includes shaping and grassing the area to hold the soil in place.

Shaping the gully begins at the stable point of the outlet such as natural ground with grass cover or if by a river or stream, the waters edge to prevent any headfall.

A designed slope will be established to insure a non-erosive velocity of the water through the channel. Sideslopes will be built so the area can be driven over with farm-type equipment for maintenance or weed control of the area. When shaping has been completed a firm seedbed should be prepared for planting of the grass cover. Both critical area treatment and waterways are required to be double sprigged or seeded.

Coastal Bermudagrass is an excellent cover for channels but is hard to establish on the sideslopes due to rain running off the slopes before soaking into the soil.

Another Bermudagrass variety that we are seeing more of is the Giant Bermuda. Advantages of the Giant variety are good ground cover as with Coastal, palatable to livestock and can be seeded like range grasses. Giant Bermuda can also be mixed with other grasses or over seeded when Coastal is sprigged. By being able to seed this grass, you would not have to worry with locating sprigs or sprigget. It will need to be seeded in early spring to take advantage of spring rains. Some results have shown that forage output is comparable to Common Bermuda.

Other grass options include Sideoats and K.R. Bluestem. These grasses have been used successfully as cover in the channel and sideslopes. K.R. Bluestem is somewhat less palatable to livestock than most of the other range grasses so stock tend to not graze it as readily. This will insure a longer cover for the critical area. If possible livestock should be excluded from this area until the grass is established.

Treatment of critical areas can be cost-shared by the Consolidated Farm Service Agency (C.F.S.A.) as well as other conservation practices such as terraces, waterways, ponds, and diversion terraces through the A.C.P. or L.T.A. programs or the Natural Resources Conservation Service, formerly the Soil Conservation Service. For more information on critical area treatment or any other conservation practices, contact your local Natural Resources Conservation Service at 2000 Hutchings Avenue in Ballinger or phone 365-3415.

Free booklet helps gardeners harvest backyard dollars

According to a recent survey by Rodale Press, one out of every five gardeners has expressed an interest in making extra money growing plants. Now a free 32 page booklet lists dozens of ways to harvest money from the backyard garden. "Profitable Plants - Your Guide to the Best Backyard Cash Crops" includes valuable growing and marketing tips on everything from herbs and flowers to bamboo and vegetables.

For the grower without a garden spot, there is information on hydroponics, and growing gourmet mushrooms and sprouts in a spare room, basement or garage. A resource section, listing growing and marketing information for over twenty high-value crops, is also included.
