New top oil lobbyist: Yes, he's a Democrat

Finkel says party affiliation shouldn't get in the way of energy policy

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The oil industry's new top lobbyist has an attribute that could give him an edge navigating the minefield of energy politics on Capitol Hill.

He's a Democrat.

The political party sets Louis Finkel apart from an industry perceived as having fealty to Republicans, even as he leads the American Petroleum Institute's grassroots, federal relations and advocacy programs.

Finkel, API's new executive vice president, wears the political label like a badge of honor.

"I'm a Democrat; I always have been," he said during a meeting Thursday with reporters. "I spent a lot of time on the Hill in Democratic politics, both in government service (and) working in campaigns."

Finkel is quick to say that party membership shouldn't change the way lawmakers approach energy policy, where historically the fault lines have been geographical, not political. "It's about the issues; it's not about partisanship," he said.

And he stresses that the API will give money and support to Democrats as well as Republicans who have a track record backing the industry's policy positions.

Most immediately, that means the group has no plans for retreating from backing Louisiana Sen. Mary Landrieu or Alaska Sen. Mark Begich, two Democrats who are battling for reelection this November, even though Republican wins against them could help put the Senate in GOP hands next year.

Barbara Gonzalez, public information officer for Immigration and Customs Enforcement, shows donated stuffed animals in an area where immigrant families are housed at the Artesia Residential Detention Facility inside the Federal Law Enforcement Center in Artesia, N.M., on Friday. U.S. Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson visited the facility Friday and warned immigrants that "we will send you back" if they try crossing into the country.

Johnson: Immigrants cannot stay, will be sent back

Associated Press

ARTESIA, N.M. — U.S. Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson visited a New Mexico detention facility housing 400 Central American women and children Friday and warned immigrants that "we will send you back" if they try entering the country illegally.

Johnson said the agency is working rapidly to open new detention facilities to house and more quickly deport the influx of immigrants fleeing violence, poverty and extortion in Central America.

On a tour Friday of a temporary center at a border patrol training facility in southeastern New Mexico, Johnson said more housing is needed so the administration can send a strong message back to Central America, where he said smugglers are telling families that if they make it to the United States they will get a free pass.

"Our border is not open to illegal immigration," he said. "Our message to those who come illegally is we will send you back."

After touring the recently opened center, he said staff told him that some of the immigrants told them they were surprised to be detained.

"This facility ... represents proof that indeed we will send people back."

But without more beds, the department says immigrants caught entering the country illegally will continue to be released while awaiting their deportation and asylum hearings. Right now, they are detained only if there is a place to house them.

Amazon asks FAA for permission to fly drones

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Amazon is asking the Federal Aviation Administration permission to use drones as part of its plan to deliver packages to customers in 30 minutes or less.

The news sent shares of the nation's largest e-commerce company up nearly 6 percent on Friday.

The online retailer created a media frenzy in December when it outlined a plan on CBS' "60 Minutes" to deliver packages with self-guided aircrafts that seemed straight out of science fiction.

In a letter to the FAA dated Wednesday, Amazon said it is developing aerial vehicles as part of Amazon Prime Air. The aircraft can travel over 50 miles per hour and carry loads of up to 5 pounds. About 86 percent of Amazon's deliveries are 5 pounds or less, the company said.

"We believe customers will love it, and we are committed to making Prime Air available to customers worldwide as soon as we are permitted to do so," Amazon said in the letter.

The FAA allows hobbyists and model aircraft makers to fly drones, but commercial use is mostly banned. Amazon is asking for an exemption so it can test its drones in the U.S. The Seattle company says its drone testing will only take place over Amazon's private property, away from airports or areas with aviation activity —and not in densely populated areas or near military bases.

The FAA is slowly moving forward with guidelines on commercial drone use. Last year, Congress directed the agency to grant drones access to U.S. skies by September 2015. But the agency already has missed several key deadlines and said the process would take longer than Congress expected.

So far, two drone models — Boeing and the Insitu Group's ScanEagle, and AeroVironment's Puma — are certified to operate commercially, but only in Alaska. One is being used by BP to survey pipelines, and the other is supporting emergency response crews for oil spill monitoring and wildlife surveillance, according to the FAA.

"We're continuing to work with the FAA to meet Congress's goal of getting drones flying commercially in America safely and soon," said Paul Misener, Amazon's vice president of global public policy, in a statement. "We want to do more research and development close to home."

The FAA did not respond to a request for comment.

Amazon's stock rose $18.28, or 5.6 percent, to close at $346.20 on Friday. The stock is down about 18 percent since the beginning of the year.

Ronald Lee Haskell collapses as he appears in court on Friday in Houston. Haskell, 33, is accused of killing his ex-wife's sister, Katie Stay, her husband and four children, ranging in age from 4 to 14, after binding and putting them face-down on the floor of their suburban Houston home.

Texas shooting suspect collapses twice in court

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A man accused of killing six members of his ex-wife's family, including four children, after forcing his way into their suburban Houston home collapsed in court twice Friday as a prosecutor read out details of the crime.

A shackled Ronald Lee Haskell was standing before a state district judge during a probable cause hearing when he fell to the ground. Deputies lifted him to his feet and the 33-year-old Haskell stood for about another minute before collapsing again.

He was then lifted into a chair and wheeled from the courtroom.

"His face, he obviously lost blood in his face, and his knees buckled," said Haskell's attorney, Doug Durham. "He's scared. I think he has a limited mental capacity of what's going on."

Before the collapses, Haskell had acknowledged with a quiet "Yes" a couple of questions put to him by State District Judge Mark Kent Ellis about his legal rights. Ellis ordered Haskell held without bond.

"Maybe reality is finally setting in," said Tammy Thomas, the lead Harris County assistant district attorney in the case. "It's not television, this is not fiction. He is facing his consequences."

Thomas said she expected a grand jury to issue a capital murder indictment as a result of Wednesday's fatal shootings of Stephen and Katie Stay and four of their children, ranging in age from 4 to 14.

Authorities have said Haskell was searching for his ex-wife, Katie Stay's sister, when he came to the home in the northern Houston suburb of Spring.

He tied up the family and put them face-down on the floor before shooting each in the back of the head, according to investigators. The family had refused to say where Haskell could find his ex-wife.

The couple's 15-year-old daughter survived by playing dead after she was shot and told police Haskell was planning to shoot other relatives, according to court documents. She suffered a fractured skull when a bullet grazed her head but was able to call 911 and provide Haskell's identity and description.

Police located Haskell's car and took him into custody after a three-hour standoff.

Durham, appointed by the court to represent Haskell, said his focus will be Haskell's mental condition "and whether he was legally responsible at the time of his conduct."

"I think the evidence is going to show ... he is a troubled individual and he has a history of mental illness," Durham said. "Unfortunately, the delivery of the health care has failed in this system."

Thomas said that strategy was not surprising, "because there aren't many explanations otherwise for him to grasp." But she said the probable cause in the case showed a "determined effort involved, the planning, the conscious decisions."

She said she would present evidence to a grand jury to seek a capital murder indictment and a decision on the death penalty would be made later by elected District Attorney Devon Anderson.

Katie Stay's father, Roger Lyon, said in a statement issued Thursday through the Harris County Sheriff's Office that his hospitalized granddaughter was expected to make a full recovery.

Stephen Stay was a real estate broker. Katie Stay was a helpful presence around the neighborhood, planning Halloween and Christmas parties for children, said neighbor Viri Palacios. Katie Stay also went to Utah last fall to help her sister escape her relationship with Haskell, neighbors said.

A divorce decree issued in February shows Haskell and Melanie Kaye Haskell were married in California in 2002. They separated in 2013.

Haskell had been jailed in 2008 on charges of assault and domestic violence in Logan, Utah. Those charges were dismissed as part of a plea deal, according to Logan authorities. Last year, Haskell was served with a protective order from his ex-wife. It was dismissed after the couple filed for divorce, online court records show.

Haskell's mother also had reported an argument with her son July 2 at her home in San Marcos, California, during which Haskell physically restrained her when she tried to leave the house to call for help, the San Diego County sheriff's office said Thursday. Haskell left after a few hours, and his mother contacted 911, the statement says. She later obtained a restraining order against her son, according to the statement.

ABILENE

Foul play ruled out in body found at Abilene lake

Investigators have ruled out foul play in the death of a swimsuit-wearing woman whose body was discovered at a West Texas lake.

Abilene police say toxicology results are pending on 30-year-old Amanda Conaway, who recently moved to Abilene from Stephenville.

Conaway's body was discovered Wednesday night along the shore at Kirby Lake in what police initially called a suspicious death.

Authorities later determined Conaway may have had medical conditions that contributed to her death. Further details on those issues weren't immediately released.

Sgt. Lynn Beard said Thursday that Conaway was identified through her fingerprints.

HOUSTON

Shooting survivor out of hospital

The lone survivor of a suburban Houston shooting that left six other members of her family dead is out of the hospital.

In a statement, Children's Memorial Hermann Hospital reported 15-year-old Cassidy Stay was discharged Friday "in good condition." The hospital said she's "expected to make a full recovery."

Ronald Lee Haskell is accused of killing Stay's parents, Stephen and Katie Stay, and her four siblings ranging in age from 4 to 14.

Authorities have said Haskell was searching for his ex-wife, Katie Stay's sister, when he came to the Stays' home in Spring on Wednesday.

MPD: Midland man is stabbed during argument

A Midland woman was arrested Thursday after she allegedly stabbed a 19-year-old man during an argument.

Brianna Coronado, 20, forced her way into a house in the 1100 block of East Chestnut Avenue around 8:25 p.m. and began arguing with the man, according to the arrest affidavit.

The verbal altercation escalated when Coronado grabbed a knife from the kitchen and stabbed the man in his torso, the document said.

The man was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital but the affidavit does not indicate the extent of his injuries.

Coronado admitted to police that she grabbed a knife and caused bodily injury to the man during an argument, according to the affidavit.

Coronado was charged with aggravated assault with a weapon, a first-degree felony. As of Friday evening, she was still being held in jail but her bond had not yet been set.

If convicted, Coronado could face between five and 99 years in prison.

CEDAR HILL

Man charged in fiery North Texas confrontation

Authorities have filed charges against a man accused of setting himself and a police officer on fire before dashing through the parking lot of a suburban Dallas shopping strip as flames enveloped his body.

Authorities announced Friday that 27-year-old Terrance Jarmell Dunn is charged with aggravated assault on a public servant. He underwent surgery following the incident Wednesday in Cedar Hill and remains hospitalized.

City spokesman Corky Brown says officer Ann McSwain also is hospitalized and will require surgery for severe burns.

Two other injured officers were treated and released.

Officers had intended to question Dunn about a burglary when he ran into a restaurant while holding a bottle of flammable liquid. He lit himself on fire and the flames spread to McSwain before he ran from the eatery.

BELTON

Suspect pleads not guilty in Texas officer slaying

A Central Texas man has pleaded not guilty in the May fatal shooting of a Killeen police officer who was serving a drug-related warrant.

The Killeen Daily Herald reports Marvin Louis Guy on Thursday pleaded not guilty to a capital murder charge.

A Bell County grand jury on June 18 indicted Guy over the death of Officer Charles "Chuck" Dinwiddie. Dinwiddie and three fellow officers were shot May 9 while serving a warrant at Guy's apartment in Killeen. Dinwiddie died two days later.

Guy last month pleaded not guilty to three counts of attempted capital murder in the shootings. He remains jailed on $4.5 million bond.

Texas man gets 12 year sentence in fatal crash

A 24-year-old North Texas man with a prior drunken driving conviction and several counts of public intoxication has been sentenced to 12 years in prison on an intoxication manslaughter charge.

Seth Michael Donnelly pleaded guilty Tuesday in the October 2012 death of 71-year-old Richard Franklin Lynn. He was sentenced Thursday.

Police say Donnelly was driving about 90 mph in an effort to flee an officer in Fort Worth when he slammed into the back of Lynn's motorcycle, killing him instantly.

Donnelly's blood alcohol content was 0.25, three times the legal limit.

NEW BADEN

Cutting torch used as Texas tank explodes, 1 hurt

State regulators say a worker had used a cutting torch when a Central Texas oilfield storage tank exploded and left him critically hurt.

The Eagle newspaper reported Friday that the worker was removing bolts from a catwalk atop the tank near New Baden (BAY'-dun).

Texas Railroad Commission investigators say the 12,000-gallon tank contained oil sludge during Wednesday's blast. Authorities say the worker was wearing a safety harness as he was thrown clear during the explosion, then the safety line slammed him face-first into the hot steel.

The fire burned through a strap and the man fell to the ground. He was in critical condition when transported to a Houston hospital. His name and further details on his condition weren't immediately released.

Model aircraft buffs in Texas warily eye FAA rules

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH — Darrell Abby carefully wipes down the fuselage of his Curtiss P-40 Warhawk for its first flight of the day.

He checks the flaps, wiggles the rudder, pumps in gas and monitors the air pressure for the landing gear. Then he pulls on a gray heavy work glove before spinning the propeller to start the engine.

While Abby's warbird has a wingspan of 86 inches — the real deal is 37 feet — the pre-flight checks he performs mimic those taken by a pilot before crawling into a cockpit.

"We're very big on safety," said Abby, a 66-year-old retired Delta Air Lines pilot at a recent "fly-in" of model aircraft buffs in Fort Worth. "In my opinion, these things are like a real airplane."

So it should come as no surprise that Abby and other hobbyists are in a four-foot hover over the Federal Aviation Administration's recent efforts to clarify its rules for flying model aircraft in the wake of recent incidents involving small remote-controlled aircraft, commonly referred to as drones.

Published in the Federal Register late last month, the FAA proposal restates some of the agency's established rules for model aircraft and tries to shed new light on others with the stated purpose of protecting the public both in the air and on the ground.

"We want people who fly model aircraft for recreation to enjoy their hobby — but to enjoy it safely," federal Transportation Secretary Anthony Foxx said last month.

But opponents to the FAA's recent attempt at rule-making say that what the agency is doing flies in the face of a law Congress passed in 2012 to protect the model plane community from "overreaching and onerous regulation" by the federal government.

Comparing it to the ongoing debate over gun control laws, Abby and others say a few bad actors are causing trouble for the vast majority of model aircraft owners who operate their miniature bombers, fighters, helicopters and blimps responsibly and safely.

"The FAA is trying to take part or all of our hobby away on a knee-jerk reaction to a specific problem that they will never be able to control," said Ed Couch, who has been involved in aeromodeling for 62 years. "It's the individual, not the vehicle, that is causing the problem."

The FAA says it published the new 17-page interpretation of its rules after receiving multiple inquiries regarding its enforcement authority over model aircraft. There have also been several high-profile incidents involving unmanned aircraft in the past year.

In March, a U.S. Airways jet flying from Charlotte, North Carolina, to Tallahassee, Florida, nearly collided with a remote-controlled aircraft. The airline pilot described the aircraft as a camouflaged F-4 Phantom jet.

Last month, the owner of a remote-controlled quad copter was flying — in apparent violation of FAA airspace regulations — over downtown Dallas and Arlington. He eventually lost control of the aircraft while flying over the $1.2 billion AT&T Stadium and it crashed onto the roof.

SpaceX development benefits Midland International Airport

An official nod from the Federal Aviation Administration means the private exploration company SpaceX is one step closer to its final destination.

The Office of Commercial Space Transportation on Wednesday issued its "Record of Decision" allowing Space Exploration Technologies Corp. to construct a private launch site at Boca Chica beach, near Brownsville.

It's a $2 million decision for Midland International Airport, which can finally receive its grant from the Office of the Governor's Spaceport Trust Fund.

City Director of Airports Marv Esterly said during Tuesday's Spaceport Development Corp. meeting that delivery of the funds depended on the SpaceX decision.

"They are going through the same process we are," said Esterly, noting Midland Development Corp. officials agreed to front the $2 million. "It takes time."

Midland's commercial airport, which is slated to become the first in the nation to offer space flights from its runways, is still waiting on its spaceport license. The FAA has until Sept. 15 to approve or deny it.

A growing population and need for disaster response has the American Red Cross asking for more helping hands.

The Permian Basin Area Chapter held an open house Friday at the Midland County Public Library Centennial branch to explain what volunteers do and how to sign up.

About 40 volunteers actively serve in the Midland-Odessa area, but another 10 to 15 are needed, said Stephanie Murphree, executive director of the chapter, which covers 20 counties in West Texas.

"As the population increases, so does the need for disaster response," Murphree said.

Office volunteers ideally handle one to two hours of administrative duties each week, she said.

"In our day-to-day operations, during non-disaster times, we need just as much help," Murphree said.

Disaster action team volunteers, who must be over 18, are asked to be on call at least one week each month.

One disaster requiring Red Cross assistance is house fires, which are common with an increase of temporary housing, Murphree said.

"We typically respond to house fires and wildfires. Recently, with all the rains (and storm-related damage), we offered a lot of assistance to folks renting apartments. There was one complex in Midland where 15 units were affected."

After filling out an application, passing a background check and interviewing, volunteers are given two to 10 hours of Red Cross training, said Murphree, noting schedules are very flexible.

"It doesn't have to be a full-time commitment," she said. "It could be as much or as little as you want it to be."

supportive of our policy objectives," Finkel said. "We've had an opportunity over a long window with both Landrieu and Begich to watch them and work with them and see how they are going to perform. They've been supportive and there's no reason for us to not continue our support."

Finkel has spent years focusing on food — not crude — as the executive vice president of government affairs for the Grocery Manufacturers Association. Finkel said he enjoyed working for "front-facing consumer companies" as the GMA's top lobbyist — a role that also had him collaborating with First Lady Michelle Obama on efforts to curb childhood obesity.

But he said he missed the work he had done on energy issues from January 2007 to January 2011 working for the House Committee on Science and Technology and during a brief stint lobbying for Exxon Mobil in 2006.

Finkel joins API at a time when the industry is eager to celebrate its success as a major contributor to the nation's economic recovery but reeling from local government moves to ban drilling practices amid a surge in domestic oil and gas drilling.

"For me, there's an element of excitement at being in the middle of ... the energy renaissance," Finkel said.

Finkel is stepping into major policy battles over industry taxes, the Keystone XL pipeline and whether the U.S. should export more of its oil.

As he does, Finkel admits his status as a card-carrying Democrat could be an advantage.

"Clearly it's easier for a Democrat to have a good dialogue with Democrats," he said. "I have lots of friends on both sides of the aisle, but I've spent a lot of time working with friends that are still on the Hill, that are in this administration, and that would be in the next administration, Democrat or Republican."

Other energy groups and firms have turned to Democrats to press their case in D.C.

For instance, former Democratic House aide Terry Fariello now lobbies on behalf of Exxon Mobil Corp. In "Private Empire," a book about the oil company, author Steve Coll dubs Fariello the company's "chief in-house Democrat" and describes the central role she plays gathering political intelligence from Democrats and dealing with the party's lawmakers. "More than any ExxonMobil executive ... she managed channels to Democratic lobbyists and allies during the Bush years," Coll notes.

Tesoro Corp.'s top D.C. representative, Stephen Brown, is another former Democratic Hill staffer, having once worked as an adviser to House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo. It may give Brown a jolt of extra credibility as he canvasses Capitol Hill. "I am able to walk into Democratic offices on a fairly regular basis and have pretty candid conversations," Brown acknowledged.

BBB: Be wary of gas-saving claims

By Rachael Gleason

rgleason@mrt.com

Better Business Bureau experts are asking drivers to look for the "red flags" of gas-saving claims this summer.

The average price of gasoline in the Midland-Odessa area is down from last month at $3.518 per gallon, according to GasBuddy.com.

But bureau experts warn drivers to be skeptical of fuel-efficiency products, additives and devices when prices at the pump start to rise.

"The Environmental Protection Agency has not found any product that significantly improves gas mileage after evaluating more than 100 alleged gas saving devices," according to the bureau.

Red flags include advertisements that list exact numbers or percentages because variables such as traffic, road and weather conditions impact fuel consumption.

"These factors made it close to impossible to attribute gas savings to an additive," the bureau states in a press release.

To save gas, experts recommend that drivers clean out their trunks, turn off their engines when parked or waiting, keep their tires inflated, purchase fuel-efficient vehicles and research which retailers sell the least expensive gasoline.

US border effort sputters as migrants cross again

Associated Press

MEXICALI, Mexico — A U.S. effort to discourage immigrants' repeated attempts to enter the country illegally by dropping them back in Mexico hundreds of miles away from where they were caught has been sharply scaled back after producing relatively modest gains.

U.S. authorities insist the Alien Transfer Exit Program has contributed to overall achievements in border security and say the cutbacks reflected a need to shift resources to deal with Central Americans pouring into Texas.

The government has flown or bused hundreds of thousands of Mexican men to faraway border cities since February 2008, believing they would give up after being separated from their smugglers.

But government statistics and interviews with migrants in Mexican shelters suggest the dislocation is a relatively ineffective deterrent, especially for immigrants with spouses, children and roots in the U.S.

After being dropped off, many get on another bus and head right back to where they started. Once there, they reunite with their smugglers for another attempt, taking advantage of a standard practice that they pay only when they cross successfully.

"It's a nuisance. That's all," said Pablo Hernandez, 50, who lingered in the hallway of a shelter in Mexicali, swapping stories with other migrants after the U.S. government took him on a five-hour bus ride from Tucson, Arizona.

He planned to take a commercial bus to the Mexican town of Altar to reunite with his smuggler, who provided a phone number and said he wouldn't demand his $3,400 fee until Hernandez made it.

The challenges illustrate the limits and pitfalls of massive spending increases on border enforcement.

Despite overwhelming numbers of Central Americans crossing in Texas, the Border Patrol is making strides by key measures, including a drop in the percentage of migrants who are arrested entering the country again after being caught.

The recidivism rate for all migrants arrested on the Mexican border fell to 16 percent in the 2013 fiscal year from 17 percent a year earlier, 20 percent in 2011, 24 percent in 2010 and 27 percent in 2009.

But results for ATEP, as the program is known, were higher: 25 percent last year, up from 24 percent the previous year, down from 28 percent the year before, 33 percent in 2010 and 34 percent in 2009.

Last year's 9-point difference between ATEP and the overall rate matched the widest ever.

ATEP has barely fared better than "voluntary returns," the term for migrants who are simply turned around without being charged. Criminal prosecutions have yielded the lowest recidivism rates.

Without fanfare, the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement agency largely withdrew from ATEP last June after spending $15.2 million to fly 50,295 Mexican men on 421 flights from Harlingen, Texas, to California's Imperial Valley, which neighbors Mexicali.

ICE virtually stopped providing detention space for ATEP and pulled back on bus transportation.

Thomas Homan, ICE's executive associate director for enforcement and removal operations, told a congressional panel in March that ATEP was "a good border enforcement strategy" but that ICE shifted money to flying home Central Americans who cross in South Texas, the busiest corridor for illegal crossings.

On Tuesday, President Barack Obama asked Congress for $3.7 billion in emergency spending to deal with that crisis.

U.S. Customs and Border Protection, which oversees the Border Patrol, said in a statement that ATEP has disrupted smuggling networks and contributed to an overall decline in recidivism rates. The program, it said, "was designed specifically to create displacement and increase time between entry attempts."

Asked to provide the cost, Customs and Border Protection said ATEP "uses resources that were already in place ... and cannot be separated from the normal cost of doing business."

Until last year, ICE typically paid a night of detention, which cost an average of $119 a person.

Air-conditioned buses still leave the Border Patrol's Tucson compound each weekday with up to 188 passengers. Two follow a 700-mile route east to Del Rio, Texas, where they are dropped off in the neighboring Mexican city of Ciudad Acuna. Two head about 300 miles west toward Mexicali.

As ATEP grew, Mexicali became the top destination for those deported to Mexico, peaking at 66,517 in 2012, a 24 percent increase from two years earlier, according to Mexico's National Immigration Institute. Several migrant shelters opened in the sprawling city of 750,000 to handle the influx.

Migrants gravitate to a breezy, sunlit hallway to discuss their next moves at the Hotel of the Deported Migrant, which housed up to 300 people a night after opening in 2010. The Mexican government offers discounted bus tickets and a limited number of free flights to their hometowns, but few consider it.

Abel Delgado, who lived in the Phoenix area for 23 years and was a cook and construction worker before he was deported in 2010, was bused from Tucson after four days of walking through the Arizona desert.

The 30-year-old planned to reunite with his smuggler for another attempt in Arizona after the summer heat, determined to rejoin his wife and daughters, ages 5 and 8.

"If I didn't have family, I'd stay here," he said.

Appropriations Committee Chairman Hal Rogers, a Kentucky Republican, said Friday that the House won't approve it.

U.S. Sen. Martin Heinrich, D-N.M., accompanied Johnson on the tour. On a call with reporters Friday afternoon, Heinrich said that in addition to opening more centers, the administration needs to engage with the Central American countries the immigrants are fleeing and crackdown on the smugglers who are persuading families to pay thousands of dollars to send their children here, then "leaving them in unsafe conditions."

"We need to make sure we go after the people who are misleading families," he said.

Johnson was also scheduled to meet Friday with officials in Weslaco, Texas, in the Rio Grande Valley, which has seen the biggest surge in illegal crossings.

More than 57,000 unaccompanied children and tens of thousands more Central Americans traveling as families have crossed the border since October, overwhelming Border Patrol facilities in South Texas.

The Artesia Center was opened in barracks of the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center. It now holds about 400 people but eventually will hold about 700 women and children, Johnson said.

Migrant boy's body arrives back in Guatemala

Associated Press

GUATEMALA CITY — The body of a 15-year-old migrant was brought home Friday, nearly a month after he died in the hot, dry brushland of southern Texas and became a symbol for the perils facing unaccompanied children who have been flooding illegally into the U.S.

The remains of Gilberto Francisco Ramos Juarez were flown to Guatemala City in a cargo plane and turned over to his father at the airport's small chapel.

Gilberto's father, Francisco Ramos, then took the gray and silver coffin with a photo of the boy attached to it in a pickup truck to his mountain hometown of San Jose de las Flores, where the family planned to hold a wake for him Friday night. He is to be buried today.

"I'm really sad because of his death," Ramos said while holding a photograph of his son standing next to a small wooden horse.

The man, who dressed in all black and wore a black hat, traveled 200 miles to Guatemala City accompanied by his brothers. He said the boy's mother was too ill to make the nine-hour journey.

House chairman: $3.7 billion request 'too much'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A key Republican said Friday that President Barack Obama's multibillion-dollar emergency request for the border is too big to get through the House, as a growing number of Democrats rejected policy changes Republicans are demanding as their price for approving any money.

The developments indicated that Obama faces an uphill climb as he pushes Congress to approve $3.7 billion to deal with tens of thousands of unaccompanied kids who've been arriving at the U.S.-Mexico border from poor and gang-ridden Central American nations. And they suggested that even as the children keep coming, any final resolution is likely weeks away on Capitol Hill.

As House members gathered Friday morning to finish up legislative business for the week, Rep. Hal Rogers of Kentucky, chairman of the Appropriations Committee that controls spending, told reporters: "It's too much money. We don't need it."

Rogers, who'd previously sounded open to the spending request for more immigration judges, State Department programs and other items, said that Obama's request includes some spending to meet immediate needs, and his committee is working to sort that out.

But he said other aspects can be handled through Congress' regular spending bills, though no final action is likely on those until after the November midterm elections. And asked whether the House would approve the spending package as-is, he said "no."

White House Press Secretary Josh Earnest responded by saying that "we're open to working with Democrats and Republicans in Congress to get this done."

"The thing that I would point out, though, is that the president has moved quickly to be very clear about what specifically needs to be funded," Earnest said. "And we would like to see Republicans back up their rhetoric with the kind of urgent action that this situation merits."

Rogers spoke shortly after the Congressional Hispanic Caucus convened a press conference to denounce efforts to attach legal changes to the spending measure that would result in returning the children home more quickly to El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala. Those countries account for the bulk of the more than 57,000 kids who've arrived since October.

Republicans are demanding such changes, and White House officials also have indicated support, while House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi and Senate Democratic Leader Harry Reid left the door open to them this week.

But key Senate Democrats are opposed, and members of the all-Democratic Hispanic Caucus added their strong objections Friday that sending the kids home quickly without immigration hearings could put them at risk.

"I don't know of a man or a woman in the Congressional Hispanic Caucus who is going to vote to undermine the rights of these children," said Rep. Luis Gutierrez, D-Ill. "It would be unconscionable for us to do that."

Gutierrez said the lawmakers would make that same case directly to Obama in a meeting next week. And he pleaded for Democrats to stand firm.

"I'm tired of every time the Republicans raise their voices against the immigrants that somehow we ameliorate, we change our position and weaken our stance," Gutierrez said. "Our stance should be clear — we're for the immigrants."

The policy changes in question concern a 2008 law aimed at helping victims of human trafficking that appears to be contributing to the current crisis by ensuring court hearings for the children now arriving from Central America. In practice, that often allows them to stay in this country for years as their cases wend their way through the badly backlogged immigration court system, and oftentimes they never show up for their court dates.

Hundreds battle central Washington wildfire

Associated Press

ENTIAT, Wash. — Several hundred firefighters worked Friday to contain a fire that has burned grass and brush across nearly 30 square miles.

The blaze threatened more than 200 homes and damaged a few outbuildings in Chelan County near Entiat, roughly midway between Seattle and Spokane.

Residents of about 40 homes have been told to evacuate, fire operations spokeswoman Laurie Dowie said Friday. Also, a stretch of highway south of the blaze has been closed.

Weekend forecasts call for a prolonged heat wave with high temperatures in the triple digits in the area, prompting concerns the fire could grow.

Because of the risk, state officials extended an outdoor burn ban to include all 13 million acres of lands that the state protects.

A burn ban, which has already been in effect in Eastern Washington, now includes Western Washington. The ban is in effect through Sept. 30.

Meanwhile, a wildfire burning fewer than 2 square miles near Spokane stopped growing overnight, spokesman Chuck Turley said.

Turley said firefighters working the blaze near Ford in Stevens County hope it doesn't flare up in the hot, dry conditions forecast for the weekend.

"As heat hit this area some of the areas will have a tendency to rekindle," Turley said.

He said the Lake Spokane campground has been closed to the public.

Officials are urging people to be vigilant as hot and dry conditions increase fire risks throughout the state.

The causes for both fires are under investigation.

Guilty plea in FBI chat room terror case

One of two men charged in an FBI online chat room sting operation has pleaded guilty to terrorism-support charges.

The U.S. Attorney's Office in Miami said in a news release that 31-year-old Gufran Ahmed Kauser Mohammed pleaded guilty Friday to one count of conspiring to provide material support to terrorists. He faces up to 15 years in prison at his Oct. 24 sentencing.

Mohammed is a naturalized U.S. citizen from India who relocated to Saudi Arabia in 2011.

Prosecutors say an undercover FBI employee posing as a terror-financing middleman used the chat room to pretend to work with Mohammed on financing for al-Qaida and affiliated terror groups in Syria and East Africa.

NEW YORK

Teacher tenure fight gains momentum with ruling

A month after a California judge ruled that job protections for teachers violated children's constitutional rights, one lawsuit making the same claim has been filed in New York, another has been announced and critics of teacher tenure in other states say they are preparing litigation as well.

The June ruling in California has been stayed pending appeal and may never take effect, but critics of teachers' unions are seizing on the idea of using the courts to weaken union power and thus try to improve schools.

Mona Davids, president of the parents group that filed the New York lawsuit targeting teacher tenure last week, called educational inequity "a crisis of epic proportions." She said New York City neighborhoods that are mostly black and Latino have the schools with the highest concentration of teachers rated unsatisfactory.

"Yet," Davids said, "every attempt to hold teachers accountable for educating our children is blocked."

The California ruling struck down state laws dictating how long it takes for a teacher to earn tenure as well as rules that protect senior teachers during layoffs. The plaintiffs argued that such union-backed job protections mean that poor and minority schools are staffed disproportionately by bad teachers, which violates students' rights.

Inventor pushes solar panels on roads

Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. — The solar panels that Idaho inventor Scott Brusaw has built aren't meant for rooftops. They are meant for roads, driveways, parking lots, bike trails and, eventually, highways.

Brusaw, an electrical engineer, says the hexagon-shaped panels can withstand the wear and tear that comes from inclement weather and vehicles, big and small, to generate electricity.

"We need to rebuild our infrastructure," said Brusaw, the head of Solar Roadways, based in Sandpoint, Idaho, about 90 miles northeast of Spokane, Washington. His idea contains "something for everyone to like."

"Environmentalists like it," he said. "Climate change deniers like it because it creates jobs."

While the idea may sound outlandish to some, it has already garnered $850,000 in seed money from the federal government, raised more than $2 million on a crowd-funding website and received celebrity praise.

Solar Roadways is part of a larger movement that seeks to integrate renewable energy technology — including wind, geothermal and hydropower — seamlessly into society.

The Solar Energy Industries Association, a trade group based in Washington, D.C., described companies like Solar Roadways as "niche markets" in the booming alternative energy industry.

Associated Press

In this May 2014, photo provided by Solar Roadways, Scott Brusaw drives a tractor on a prototype solar-panel parking area at his company's business in Sandpoint, Idaho. Brusaw's idea for solar-powered roads has gone viral and raised more than $1.4 million in crowdsourced funding. Brusaw is proposing to pave driveways, parking lots, bike trails and, eventually, highways with hexagon-shaped solar panels that will produce electricity and could even propel electric cars.

"They represent the type of creative innovation that addresses design and energy, while showcasing the diversity of solar applications," said Tom Kimbis, a vice president of the association.

Brusaw said that in addition to producing energy, the solar panels can melt away snow and ice, and display warning messages or traffic lines with LED lights.

There are skeptics, who wonder about the durability of the panels, which are covered by knobby, tempered glass, and how they would perform in severe weather or when covered with dirt.

"It seems like something reasonable and something that is going to be very expensive," said Lamar Evans of the National Renewable Energy Association in Hattiesburg, Mississippi.

Another problem would be how to store the electricity that could be generated, Evans said.

The Brusaws have produced no estimates of how much the solar panels would cost, so the financial realities of their vision remain an unknown.

To demonstrate the concept, the company has created a small parking lot at its headquarters, using 108 solar panels. Vehicles have been driven onto the space, without damaging the panels, he said.

"We'll start off small with driveways and walkways," he said.

His wife Julie came up with the idea after watching "An Inconvenient Truth," the global warming movie featuring former Vice President Al Gore, Brusaw said.

She remembered that Scott had long talked about the concept of electric roads.

The U.S. Federal Highway Administration gave the Brusaws $850,000 to develop Solar Roadways over the past few years, and build the prototype parking lot.

This year, they turned to the Indiegogo crowd-funding site to raise additional money and move to the next phase. Launched on Earth Day, the campaign got off to a discouraging start, Brusaw said.

US gov't sets duties on steel pipe from Korea

The U.S. government has imposed duties on imports of steel pipe from South Korea, India and seven other countries, ruling in favor of U.S. steel producers and unions that had complained those countries were unfairly flooding the American market.

The Commerce Department said Friday it had found that dumping of the steel pipe imports into the U.S. harmed competition. The steel pipe is used mainly in drilling oil and gas wells, and the imports, especially from South Korea, have figured heavily in the recent drilling boom in the southwestern U.S.

Companies including U.S. Steel Corp. as well as the United Steelworkers union had pressed the department to reverse its preliminary decision in February not to impose the duties on South Korea. It had imposed duties on the other countries on a preliminary basis.

In addition to South Korea and India, the countries involved are the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Taiwan, Thailand, Turkey, Ukraine and Vietnam.

The Commerce Department noted that the International Trade Commission, an independent federal agency, is scheduled to make a final ruling next month on whether the steel pipe imports have hurt the U.S. industry.

Following the Commerce announcement, the Alliance for American Manufacturing, a trade group, said in a statement, "Today is a good day for America's steelworkers and (steel pipe) producers, and also a good day for the U.S. economy."

Oil and gas regulator chairman makes fracturing plea

The head of the agency that regulates the oil and gas industry in Texas is asking officials of Denton in North Texas to withhold support from a grass-roots petition advocating a ban on hydraulic fracturing within the city limits.

The university town sits on the Barnett Shale, believed to hold one of the largest natural gas reserves in the U.S.

Barry Smitherman, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, called the measure "essentially a ban on drilling" that is "extremely misguided," in a letter Thursday addressed to Denton Mayor Chris Watts and the City Council.

"If other cities were to follow your lead, then we could potentially, one day, see a ban on drilling" in Texas, Smitherman wrote.

City leaders temporarily halted fracturing as they consider making their city the first in the state to permanently ban the practice.

The temporary ban does not apply to the 275 currently active gas wells in Denton, and likewise, a permanent ban would only prevent any additional fracturing from taking place, the petition's organizers have said.

Permian Basin rig count up two this week

From staff reports

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas in the Permian Basin increased three this week to 563, according to the weekly rotary rig count report released Friday by Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes.

In District 8, which includes Midland County, there were 321 rigs, down one.

Texas as a whole added two rigs for a total of 898. In other Texas basins, there were 218 in the Eagle Ford, up five; 75 in the Granite Wash, up five; and 24 in the Barnett, down two.

At this time last year there were 463 rigs in the Permian Basin and 836 in Texas.

The number of rigs in the U.S. increased one this week to 1,875. There were 1,563 rigs listed as searching for oil, up one; 311 for natural gas, unchanged; and one as miscellaneous, unchanged.

By trajectory, there were 377 vertical drilling rigs, down seven; 1,276 horizontal drilling rigs, up eight; and 222 directional drilling rigs, unchanged.

A year ago this week there were 1,769 rigs in the U.S.

The top five basins by rig count this week were the Permian; the Eagle Ford; the Williston with 179, up one; the Marcellus with 80, up one; and the Mississippian with 80, unchanged.

The top five states by rig count were Texas; Oklahoma with 198, down 11; North Dakota with 172, up one; Louisiana with 107, up two; and New Mexico with 92, unchanged.

In the U.S. there were 1,801 rigs listed as on land, down one; 18 in inland waters, unchanged; and 56 as off shore, up two.

There were 55 rigs in the Gulf of Mexico, up two.

The number of rigs in Canada increased six this week to 315. There were 178 rigs listed as searching for oil, down 12; 137 for natural gas, up 18; and zero as miscellaneous, unchanged. There were 294 rigs in Canada at this time last year.

The total number of rigs in the North America region — which includes the U.S. and Canada but excludes North America — increased seven this week to 2,190. A year ago this week there were 2,053 rigs in North America.

On Tuesday, Baker Hughes released its international rig count for June. There were 3,445 rigs worldwide. The U.S. accounted for more than half of all rigs globally with 1,861.

The following are June rig counts by region; the top three rig counts by country are in parentheses.

- Africa: 123 (Algeria, 42; Angola, 14; Chard, 12; Kenya, 12)
- Asia-Pacific: 251 (India, 125; China Offshore, 29; Indonesia, 28)
- Europe: 147 (Turkey, 42; Norway, 16; Romania 14)
- Latin America: 398 (Argentina, 107; Mexico, 88; Venezuela, 71)
- Middle East: 425 (Saudi Arabia, 104; Iraq, 96; Oman, 59)

House backs supporting Israel

The House has backed a resolution expressing support for Israel and its right to self-defense.

Lawmakers endorsed the non-binding measure by a voice vote on Friday. It condemns Hamas for unprovoked rocket attacks on Israel. The bipartisan resolution is sponsored by Democratic congressman Steve Israel of New York and Republican congressman Tom Cole of Oklahoma.

Israel has intensified its broad military offensive in the Gaza Strip to stop rocket fire from Palestinian militants targeting Israel. The death toll from the 4-day-old conflict has exceeded 100, and President Barack Obama has told Israel the United States is willing to negotiate a cease-fire between Israel and Hamas.

The measure includes a provision by Republican congressman Ed Royce of California highlighting Iran's role in supporting Hamas.

White House: 2014 deficit to drop $100B

The government's budget deficit will drop to $583 billion this year, the lowest level of President Barack Obama's tenure, the White House said Friday.

Last year's deficit was $680 billion. The latest update from the White House budget office is also $66 billion less than the administration predicted earlier this year when releasing the president's budget.

Obama presided over trillion-dollar-plus deficits during his first term as the economy struggled to recover from a deep recession and financial crisis. Attempts to strike deals on spending cuts and revenue increases with GOP leaders such as House Speaker John Boehner of Ohio have failed, though Obama was successful in muscling through a tax increase on wealthier earners in early 2013. Tight spending on annual agency budgets is also responsible for lower deficits.

The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office projects an even lower deficit of $492 billion for the budget year ending Sept. 30.

"Under the president's leadership, the deficit has been cut by more than half as a share of the economy, representing the most rapid sustained deficit reduction since World War II, and it continues to fall," said acting White House budget director Brian Deese. "At the same time, our economy is moving forward and businesses are creating jobs. Businesses have added nearly 10 million new jobs over the past 52 months."

The White House has also lowered its economic growth forecast for the current year to 2.6 percent, reflecting the unexpected 2.9 percent drop in gross domestic product in the first quarter of this year when unusually severe weather dinged the economy. Its earlier prediction was for a 3.3 percent hike in GDP.

US notified about newspaper data destruction

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration knew in advance that the British government would oversee destruction of a newspaper's hard drives containing leaked National Security Agency documents last year, newly declassified documents show.

The White House had said it would be nearly unimaginable for the U.S. government to do the same to an American news organization.

The Guardian newspaper, responding to threats from the British government in July 2013, destroyed the data roughly a month after it and other media outlets first published details from the top secret documents leaked by former NSA contractor Edward Snowden.

After news of the Guardian incident broke the following month, White House spokesman Josh Earnest said it would be "very difficult to imagine a scenario in which that would be appropriate." He had been asked whether the U.S. would ever order the destruction of a U.S. media company's computer data.

This Dec. 4, 2012 photo shows Guardian newspaper editor Alan Rusbridger in London. The Obama administration knew in advance that the British government would oversee destruction of a newspaper's hard drives containing leaked National Security Agency documents last year, newly declassified documents show. The White House had publicly distanced itself from doing the same against an American news organization.

The NSA emails, obtained by The Associated Press under the Freedom of Information Act, showed that senior intelligence officials were notified of Britain's intent to retrieve the Snowden documents and that one senior U.S. official appeared to praise the effort.

"Good news, at least on this front," the current NSA deputy director, Richard Ledgett, said at the end of a short, censored email to then-NSA director Gen. Keith Alexander and others. The subject of that July 19, 2013, email was: "Guardian data being destroyed." A paragraph before Ledgett's comment was blacked out by censors, and the NSA declined to answer questions about the documents.

The White House said Thursday the comment from Ledgett — then the head of the NSA's Media Leaks Task Force — was confined to intelligence operations because it was "good news" that classified information was recovered and "didn't reflect a broader administration view" on press freedoms.

The Guardian's hard drives were destroyed the day after Ledgett's email. Top editor Alan Rusbridger made the decision after a week of increasingly blunt threats from British officials. A senior aide to British Prime Minister David Cameron even warned that Rusbridger's nearly 200-year-old newspaper faced closure unless the documents were destroyed.

In a statement to the AP, the Guardian said it was disappointed to learn that "cross-Atlantic conversations were taking place at the very highest levels of government ahead of the bizarre destruction of journalistic material that took place in the Guardian's basement last July."

"What's perhaps most concerning is that the disclosure of these emails appears to contradict the White House's comments about these events last year, when they questioned the appropriateness of the U.K. government's intervention," the newspaper said.

Lawmakers seek lower price for vets care

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Stung by sticker shock, members of Congress are scrambling to lower the cost of a bill to fix veterans' health care amid a growing uproar over long waits for appointments and falsification of records to cover up the delays at Veterans Affairs hospitals.

At the same time, deficit hawks fear that letting veterans turn more to providers outside the VA for health care could cost far more if Congress, under pressure from powerful veterans groups, decides to renew that program rather than let it expire in two years.

Lawmakers in both parties agree on the need to reform the Veterans Affairs Department's health care network — the largest in the country — following reports of veterans dying while awaiting appointments at VA hospitals or clinics. The resulting election-year firestorm forced VA Secretary Eric Shinseki to resign in May. A half-dozen other VA officials have resigned or retired since then.

The VA's inspector general has confirmed that at least 35 veterans died while awaiting appointments at the agency's Phoenix medical center alone, but he has yet to report on the results of investigations into whether delays in treatment were responsible for any of the deaths.

The latest analysis by the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office estimates a Senate-passed bill would cost $35 billion through 2016 to build new clinics, hire doctors and make it easier for veterans who can't get prompt appointments with VA doctors to get outside care. The CBO put the price tag of a similar measure passed by the House at $44 billion.

Obama advocacy arm sees fundraising dip

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Giving to President Barack Obama's advocacy arm took a dip in the last three months, according to a fundraising summary Organizing for Action released Friday.

The nonprofit group formed from the remnants of the president's re-election bid collected almost $3.9 million in April, May and June, down from almost $5.9 million it raised in the first three months of this year. The drop in fundraising comes as the group scaled back its courtship of high-dollar donors and dismissed roughly half of its staff.

Former Obama campaign officials founded OFA early in Obama's second term, seeking to transform his powerful political organization into a grassroots group that could advance his agenda. The group has held thousands of events on issues like gun control and same-sex marriage, and has aired TV ads backing Obama on health care and the economy.

OFA raised more than $30 million in the 15 months after Obama's re-election success but struggled to build support for Obama priorities. Earlier this year cut its paid staff in half and shifted its focus. It now focuses on training young activists.

"Thanks to the work of our volunteers and supporters, OFA is training the next generation of progressive organizers and amplifying the voices of Americans across the country who want to see action taken in Washington to make progress on the issues they care about," OFA spokesman Ben Finkenbinder said.

A Palestinian firefighter hoses a boat hit in a missile strike at the port in Gaza City on Friday. Israel launched the Gaza offensive to stop incessant rocket fire that erupted after three Israeli teenagers were kidnapped and killed in the West Bank and a Palestinian teenager was abducted and burned to death in an apparent reprisal attack. The military says it has hit more than 1,100 targets already, mostly what it identified as rocket-launching sites, bombarding the territory on average every five minutes.

Israel leader: World pressure won't stop Gaza offensive

Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel's prime minister vowed Friday to press forward with a broad military offensive in the Gaza Strip, insisting international pressure will not halt what he said was a determined effort to halt rocket fire by Palestinian militants as the death toll from the 4-day-old conflict rose above 100.

Addressing a news conference, Benjamin Netanyahu brushed off a question about possible cease-fire efforts, signaling there was no end in sight to the operation.

"I will end it when our goals are realized. And the overriding goal is to restore the peace and quiet," Netanyahu said.

Israel says it launched the offensive on Tuesday in response to weeks of heavy rocket fire out of Gaza. The Israeli military says it has hit more than 1,100 targets, mostly what it identified as rocket-launching sites, bombarding the territory on average every five minutes.

At least 21 Palestinians were killed Friday, pushing the overall death toll to 106, including dozens of civilians, according to the Health Ministry in Gaza.

Palestinian militants have fired more than 600 rockets at Israel, including one that struck a gas station and set it ablaze earlier Friday in the southern city of Ashdod. Israeli health officials said the blast wounded three people, including one in serious condition.

The army also said the condition of a soldier wounded by rocket shrapnel on Thursday had worsened. But there have been no deaths on the Israeli side, in large part because of a new rocket-defense system that has intercepted at least 128 incoming projectiles.

Netanyahu said he has been in touch with numerous world leaders, including President Barack Obama and the leaders of Britain, France, Germany and Canada.

He said he had "good discussions" with his counterparts, telling them that no other country would tolerate repeated fire on its citizens.

"No international pressure will prevent us from acting with all power," he said.

Israel's allies have backed the country's right to self-defense, but they have called for restraint. U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon has expressed concern about the heavy civilian casualties in Gaza, and on Friday, the U.N.'s top human rights official said the air campaign may violate international laws prohibiting the targeting of civilians.

"We have received deeply disturbing reports that many of the civilian casualties, including of children, occurred as a result of strikes on homes," said Navi Pillay, the U.N. high commissioner for human rights.

"Such reports raise serious doubt about whether the Israeli strikes have been in accordance with international humanitarian law and international human rights law," she said.

Marte hits game-winning single for 'Hounds

By Oscar LeRoy

RockHounds	3
Missions	2 (10)

Even Billy Burns can't help but admire what Jefry Marte is doing at the plate these last few games for his Midland RockHounds.

Burns, known for his speed on the base paths, trotted home with the winning run after Marte smocked a single to left-center field with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning. The game-winner lifted the RockHounds to a 3-2, come-from-behind victory over the San Antonio Missions at Security Bank Ballpark on Friday night.

It was the second straight night that Marte had a flare for the dramatics as his solo home run with two outs in the ninth inning of Thursday night's game gave the RockHounds a 7-6 victory.

"He just seems like Mr. Clutch right now," Burns said. "He's been tearing it up at the plate, and having him in the middle of the lineup has been beneficial where we've been winning."

That stretch has the RockHounds (13-7 in second half) on an eight-game winning streak and in first place in the Texas League South Division standings by 1.5 games over Corpus Christi — a 12-4 winner over Frisco on Friday — and now 2.5 games ahead of the Missions, who dropped their fourth straight and third in a row against the red-hot RockHounds.

Marte, who went 2-for-5 on Friday night, is the team's hottest hitter. He is 10 for his last 15 at the plate.

"It's his time," said Midland manager Aaron Nieckula of his 23-year-old third baseman from the Dominican Republic. "He's figuring some things out. For the most part, he's been working his tail off the entire season. Maybe we're starting to see the fruits of his labor come to the surface. He's playing some good baseball right now offensively and defensively."

While Marte's bat stole the show at the end of the game, this contest was a pitching duel between Midland's Nate Long and San Antonio's Bryce Morrow, as both put in quality outings for their respective teams.

Long went 6 1/3 innings, gave up one run with eight hits, three walks and four strikeouts in a no decision.

Also getting a no decision was Morrow, who went seven innings and gave up one run on four hits with two walks and two strikeouts.

The only runs each starting pitcher allowed were in the first inning. The game stayed tied at one until the ninth inning when Brian Bixler reached on a fielding error by second baseman Conner Crumbliss and later scored on a single to center by Casey McElroy, who drove in both runs for the Missions.

However, Crumbliss made up for his error in the bottom of the ninth as his grounder was miss-played by second baseman Cory Spangenberg, allowing Mac Muncy to score from third to tie the game up at 2.

"He put the ball in play with two strikes," said Nieckula of Crumbliss' grounder. "Anything can happen when you put the ball in play, so you've got to give Crumbliss a lot of credit."

After Jose Flores (1-1) allowed only a walk in relief in a scoreless top of the 10th to get the game tied, Burns led off the bottom of the 10th with a walk.

Using his speed, Burns then stole second base to get into scoring position.

Knowing full well Burns' speed, Missions reliever Luis De La Cruz tried to pick off Burns at second but the throw

Jamboree field dotted with former Chaps

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

Brady Shivers easily admits that had it not been for his chance to play at Midland College, the Seminole native might not have been able to play college golf at all.

A four-sport letterman at Seminole, Shivers had a choice to make his senior year, and he picked golf. Shivers' high school coach made a call to longtime Midland College coach Delnor Poss, and over the next two years Shivers was part of a program that won a national championship. Shiver later went on to play at the University Houston.

"It was awesome," Shivers said before his round Friday at the Jamboree at Green Tree Country Club. "I think we had 16 guys on our team, and I think we had four from America. It was different, but it was fun. I still stay in touch with a bunch of those guys. I probably had more fun here because our team was so close and we just did everything together."

Shivers, who played at Midland College from 2005-07, is not the only golfer this weekend whose career included Midland College. Of the 28 players in this year's Championship Flight field in the Jamboree, eight are former Chaparrals.

The Jamboree field is typically dotted with former professionals and college players, but it's easy to see the influence the Midland College golf program has had on the players who played there and this tournament as well.

Green Tree's head professional, Brian McKinley, is a former Midland College player himself. For those who played there, the experience helped shaped their golf careers in one way or another. But for all them, it was what they learned from Poss that helped shape them.

"If you look back at all the young men's lives that he's been a part of, and it's amazing, and a lot of those people have gone on to be successful people," said Shawn Savage, a former Jamboree champ who played at Midland College in the early 1990s. "While you are going through it, it's tough. But you look back on it, you are like, 'Wow.' That guy's not only touched my life, but all the other people's lives he did touch."

James out to prove you can go home again

This isn't Brett Favre or Joe Montana, or any other over-the-hill star — insert your own favorite here — shopping teams and/or rosters in search of one last hurrah.

In the NBA, one supremely talented individual can make a world of difference. LeBron James proved as much by carrying his team into five of the last seven NBA Finals. What's going to make this quest for a championship in Cleveland the best sports story out there for some time is that he's committed to try and tip the balance of power by himself, if need be, to pay back all those folks who nurtured him from the start.

"My goal is still to win as many titles as possible, no question. But what's most important for me is bringing one trophy back to Northeast Ohio," James said in a Sports Illustrated first-person story published Friday announcing his decision to return to the Cavaliers.

"I always believed that I'd return to Cleveland and finish my career there. I just didn't know when," he said.

Had James delayed the announcement much longer, the army of in-studio analysts and on-scene reporters deployed by every media outlet on the planet would need catheters to stay on the job. If nothing else, that part of our long national nightmare is over. So what's worth saying after everything that's already been said?

Just that the next chapter in James' story will turn out to be worth every penny — if not quite every word — that's been lavished on him.

ARLINGTON — Garrett Richards allowed five hits over seven innings to extend his personal winning streak to seven decisions as the Los Angeles Angels handed the Texas Rangers their sixth consecutive loss, 3-0 on Friday night.

Mike Trout provided Richards all the run support he needed with a solo home run in the fourth inning, his 22nd of the season.

Richards (11-2) is unbeaten in his last eight starts and the right-hander has an ERA of 1.27 during that span. His last loss was May 30, at Oakland.

Albert Pujols and Erick Aybar had two hits each for Los Angeles, and Alex Rios had two for Texas.

Texas right-hander Nick Tepesch (3-5) retired the first 10 batters he faced before Trout sent a 1-0 sinker 418 feet to center field for the game's first run. Tepesch allowed two runs in the seventh.

The Rangers left eight men on base, including runners in scoring position in six innings.

JAMES

neighbors put him through takes real guts. It's what plenty of us wanted James to do the first time around: Behave like a real king: Dig in his heels and redouble his effort to patch the cracks in the foundation of a Cavaliers franchise that spent more than seven seasons and hundreds of millions trying to build him a throne.

That's the way Michael Jordan, Larry Bird, Magic Johnson and Kobe Bryant got their championship rings. We even held out hope at the time that James might give the Cavs a hometown discount, taking less money than he was worth to free up cap space down the road, the way Tim Duncan has done more than once.

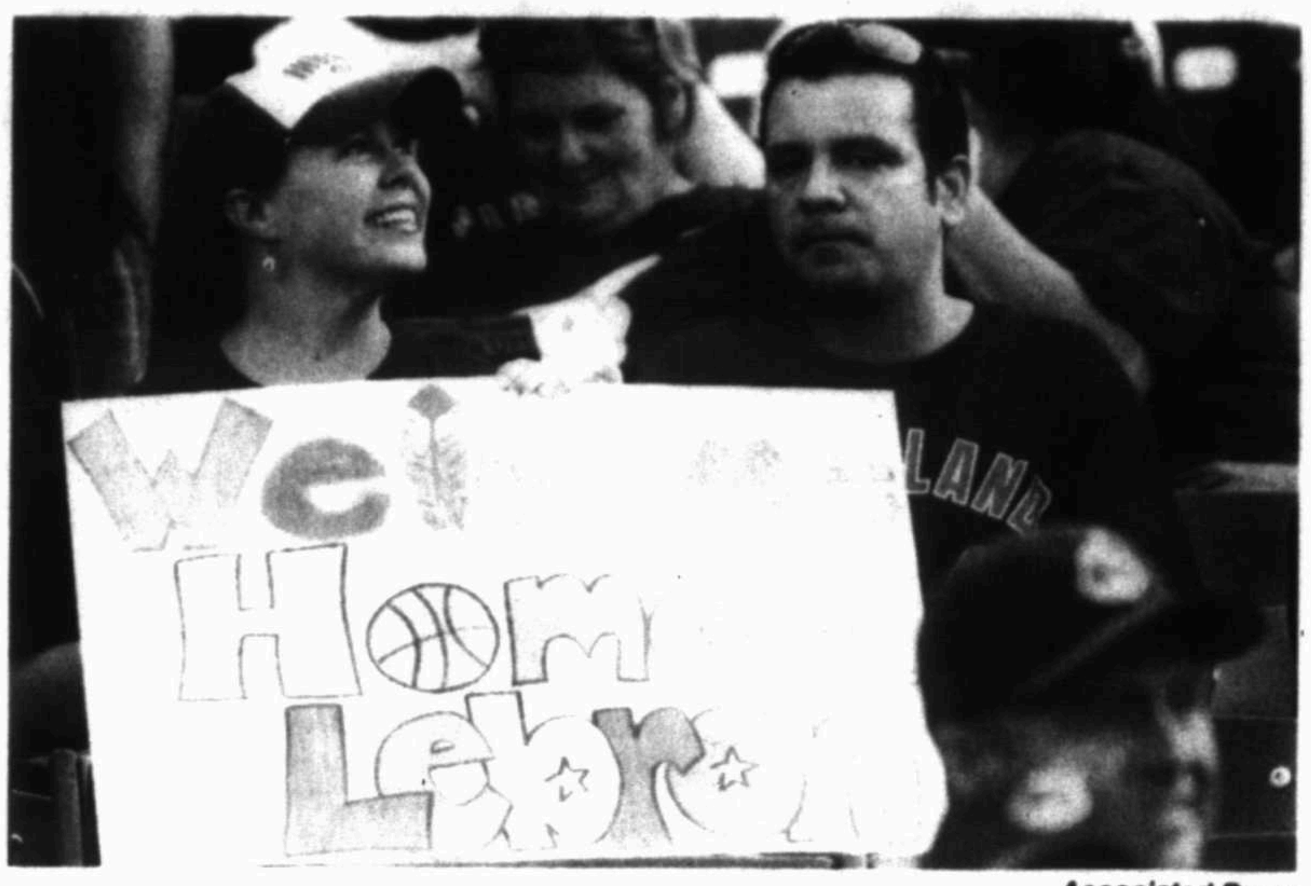
No disrespect to what James accomplished in Miami: two NBA titles, two Finals MVPs and two more regular-season MVPs, among others. But it will be even better when he wins another one this way.

"It will be a long process, much longer than it was in 2010," he wrote in SI. "My patience will get tested. I know that. I'm going into a situation with a young team and a new coach. I will be the old head. But I get a thrill out of bringing a group together and helping them reach a place they didn't know they could go."

Parse the entire statement if you want. But everything you need to know is in those last two sentences.

When James announced the original decision in 2010, no athlete in history ever held so much sway over his sport without winning a title first. The only thing he could rightly claim to be the king of was hype, hypocrisy and stacking the deck by lighting out for South Beach to join superfriends Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh. A few of his tattoos — "Loyalty" and "330" (the Akron, Ohio, area code) — made a mockery of his words even as they spilled out of his mouth.

He'd been trying so hard to please the various constituencies he'd acquired since coming into the league that you wondered whether James even knew what he really wanted.



Associated Press

A fan holds a sign welcoming LeBron James back to Cleveland, before a baseball game between the Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians on Friday in Cleveland. James announced earlier in the day he will return to play for the Cleveland Cavaliers.

MARTE

went into the outfield to send Burns to third base.

"I just knew if I got on, I was going to try to take a bag there, and then they gave me a little bit of help there getting to third, so it worked out," Burns said.

After Max Muncy was intentionally walked with one out, Marte delivered the game-winner.

"It's huge, especially against San Antonio," said Burns of the second-straight win in the last at-bat. "They're a great team and we're battling against them for a playoff run."

'HOUND BITES: Rock-Hounds RF Jeremy Barfield made a nice return to the field as he made a diving catch in the top of ninth to rob Hunter Renfroe of an RBI hit. …Midland manager Aaron Nieckula said his team is playing with some confidence, and that comes from winning eight straight. "The pitfall is where you get overconfident and think you're going to win no matter what," he said. "We still have to go out and play the game, we've got to execute the fundamentals, we've got to get good pitching and we've got to be solid defensively, and get some timely hitting." …The RockHounds are now 15-8 against the Missions this season.

TODAY'S PROBABLES: The RockHounds host the Missions at 7 p.m. today. Midland is scheduled to start RHP Drew Granier (4-4, 3.31 ERA), while San Antonio's probable starter is RHP Justin Hancock (1-1, 3.71).

Sockers, Austin end in draw

From staff reports

Sockers FC drew points against the Austin Aztex for the first time in 2014, but the result won't be remembered fondly.

The 2-2 tie in Austin leaves the Sockers (6-4-3) three points ahead of the Laredo Heat for the Mid-South Division's final playoff spot, a small cushion with only one game remaining for the Sockers and two for the Heat.

The game will be viewed as yet another collapse for the Sockers against Austin. Down 2-0 with less than 15 minutes to play, the Aztex cut the lead to 2-1 in the 79th minute. Then, in waning moments of stoppage time, Austin struck again to even the score at 2-2. This is the third straight game in which Austin netted a last-minute goal to either defeat or draw Sockers FC.

The Sockers scored early in the 28th minute thanks to Rory Knibbs, his team leading sixth goal of the season. They netted the second tally shortly after halftime when former Aztex Tucker Hume scored.

Sockers FC will play its season finale Sunday against Houston at HDL FC Soccer Complex in Houston. The game will kickoff at 6 p.m. and is a virtual must win for the Sockers in order to make the playoffs.

4 suspended for rigging results

Associated Press

LJUBLJANA, Slovenia — Four Slovenian ski officials were suspended Friday for allegedly rigging the results of pop violinist Vanessa-Mae to help her qualify for the Winter Olympics in Sochi.

Competing in Sochi for Thailand as Vanessa Vanakorn, using the surname of her Thai father, she finished a distant last among the 67 racers who completed the two runs in the Olympic giant slalom.

To earn enough points to be eligible for the games in February, she had to compete in official races in Sweden, Norway, Slovenia and Switzerland.

The Slovenian Ski Association said Friday it found evidence indicating that the races it hosted in January were "fixed at the behest of Thai ski officials to meet her qualifying criteria for Sochi."

The Houston Astros' Jose Altuve tosses his bat after striking out against the Boston Red Sox in the seventh inning Friday in Houston

MLB ROUNDUP

FROM WIRE REPORTS

American League

RED SOX 8
ASTROS 3

HOUSTON — Rookie Christian Vasquez got his first three major league hits and drove in three runs, while David Ortiz had three RBIs to break open the game in the sixth inning and lead the Boston Red Sox to an 8-3 victory over the Houston Astros on Friday night.

Vasquez, who was playing in his second major league game, singled in the third inning, had an RBI double in the fourth and drove home two more with a double in Boston's five-run sixth.

Ortiz drove in three runs with a double in the sixth to make it 8-1.

John Lackey (10-6) rebounded from a tough stretch to allow four hits and two runs with a season-high five walks in six innings. He had allowed five or more runs in each of his previous three starts.

Scott Feldman (4-6) allowed seven runs and tied a season-high with 11 hits in 5 1-3 innings.

INDIANS 7
WHITE SOX 4

CLEVELAND — Corey Kluber allowed four runs in six innings, and Nick Swisher hit a two-run homer in the fifth, leading the Cleveland Indians to a 7-4 win over the Chicago White Sox on Friday night.

Kluber (9-6), left off the AL All-Star team despite a strong first half, wasn't his usual dominant self but pitched well enough to win. The right-hander has won three of his last four decisions. Cody Allen struck out the side in the ninth for his 11th save.

Swisher's homer off Hector Noesi (3-7) to center field broke a 4-4 tie.

Before Swisher's home run, the biggest cheer from the crowd of 24,652 came when the Indians put a message on the scoreboard welcoming home NBA superstar LeBron James, who announced he was returning to the Cleveland Cavaliers. Chants of "LBJ" were heard later in the game.

ORIOLES 3
YANKEES 2, 10 INNINGS

BALTIMORE — Manny Machado led off the 10th inning with a double and scored on a one-out single by Nick Hundley, giving the surging Baltimore Orioles a 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees on Friday night.

It was the ninth win in 11 games for the AL East-leading Orioles, who extended their margin over third-place New York to five games. Baltimore has gone to extra innings in three of its last five games and won in the 10th, 11th and 12th innings.

Machado began the game-winning uprising with a liner into the right-field corner off Adam Warren (1-5). After Ryan Flaherty struck out, Hundley hit a liner into left-center that enabled Machado to score easily.

T.J. McFarland (3-2) worked a perfect ninth to earn the victory for the Orioles, who are 9-3 in extra innings.

BLUE JAYS 8
RAYS 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Steve Tolleson's two-run single snapped a ninth-inning tie and helped the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Tampa Bay Rays 8-5 on Friday night.

Jose Reyes and Jose Bautista also drove in two runs apiece for the Blue Jays, who blew a four-run lead before using a walk and Reyes' one-out double to set up the go-ahead hit off Grant Balfour (0-3).

Aaron Loup (3-2) pitched 1 1/3 scoreless innings to get the win. Casey Janssen worked a perfect ninth for his 14th save.

Toronto's Mark Buehrle labored five innings in pursuit of his elusive 11th victory, departing with a 5-2 lead that the Blue Jays bullpen couldn't hold. He is 0-5 over seven starts since last winning on June 1.

ROYALS 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Anibal Sanchez tossed seven stingy innings, Ian Kinsler and Miguel Cabrera drove in runs and the Detroit Tigers squeaked out a 2-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals on Friday night.

Sanchez (6-3) scattered eight hits without a walk to help the AL Central-leading Tigers take their second straight from Kansas City. The second-place Royals dropped 6 1-2 games back in the division with two games left before the All-Star break.

Salvador Perez drove in the only run for the Royals, who squandered a solid start by Danny Duffy (5-9). He gave up both runs, only one earned, while losing for the fourth time in five starts.

Joe Nathan worked around a single and a walk in the ninth inning to earn his 19th save, and gave Detroit its fifth straight win over the Royals at Kauffman Stadium this season.

Nathan got Nori Aoki to ground out on a full-count pitch to end the game.

National League

REDS 6
PIRATES 5

CINCINNATI — Brayan Pena's pinch-hit single in the eighth inning completed another late rally by the Reds, who overcame more injuries on Friday and beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-5 to keep their momentum going toward the All-Star break.

Down 5-1 after six innings, the Reds scored twice with the help of third baseman Pedro Alvarez's throwing error in the seventh and added three more in the eighth.

Devin Mesoraco homered with two outs off left-hander Tony Watson (5-1) in the eighth, and the Reds put together four more singles, with RBI hits by Ramon Santiago and Pena completing Cincinnati's second big comeback of the week.

Curtis Partch (1-0), called up earlier in the day, escaped a bases-loaded threat in the eighth.

CUBS 5
BRAVES 4

CHICAGO — Justin Ruggiano hit an RBI single with two outs in the ninth inning Friday that sent the Chicago Cubs over the Atlanta Braves 5-4.

Arismendy Alcantara singled with two outs off Jordan Walden (0-1) and stole second. Ruggiano then got a hit that slipped past shortstop Andrelton Simmons to win it.

The Braves, who scored the tying run in the top of the ninth on Christian Bethancourt's two-out single, have lost five of six following a nine-game winning streak.

Jordan Schafer stole three bases for Atlanta and was caught stealing once.

Cubs starter Jake Arrieta gave up three runs and four hits in 7 2-3 innings. He struck out six and walked three.

METS 7
MARLINS 1

NEW YORK — David Wright went 4 for 4 with a mammoth homer, Lucas Duda also hit a long two-run shot and the New York Mets rocked recent nemesis Henderson Alvarez in a 7-1 victory over the Miami Marlins on Friday night.

Zack Wheeler shut down Miami again and Juan Lagares had three hits as the Mets improved to 6-2 on a 10-game homestand that takes them into the All-Star break.

Wheeler (5-8) pitched 6 2-3 strong innings and helped himself with an RBI double. He moved to 2-0 with a 1.05 ERA in five career starts against the Marlins.

Alvarez (6-4) had been on quite a roll, allowing two runs or fewer in each of his last nine games. He was 4-0 with a 1.04 ERA during that stretch, and the Marlins had won his last 10 outings — a club record for one of their pitchers.

PHILLIES 6
NATIONALS 2

PHILADELPHIA — Jimmy Rollins homered twice and A.J. Burnett pitched 7 2-3 strong innings to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to their fifth straight victory, 6-2 over the Washington Nationals on Friday night.

Domonic Brown doubled and drove in two runs for Philadelphia, which matched its longest winning streak of the season. It has been a surprising run for the Phillies who had lost 13 of 16 before a four-game sweep of the NL Central-leading Brewers in Milwaukee.

Interleague

ROCKIES 6
TWINS 2

DENVER — Jorge De La Rosa pitched six strong innings, Troy Tulowitzki and Drew Stubbs each hit two-run homers, and the Colorado Rockies beat the Minnesota Twins 6-2 on Friday night in the teams' first interleague meeting at Coors Field in six years.

De La Rosa (10-6) allowed one run and six hits in winning his fourth straight and reaching double-digit wins in a season for the fourth time in his career. He benefited from a power surge that has seen Tulowitzki hit three homers and Stubbs two in their last two games.

The Rockies also benefited from the return of star outfielder Carlos Gonzalez, who missed the previous 35 games because of a benign tumor on his left index finger that had to be excised surgically.

RANGERS

record of 24-9 since June 6 is the best in the majors during that span.

The Rangers (38-55) have lost 12 of their last 13 games and 20 of their last 23, saddling them with the worst record in the major leagues.

Trout has driven in 45 runs in his last 51 games. He entered Friday's game second in the American League in slugging percentage and on-base percentage.

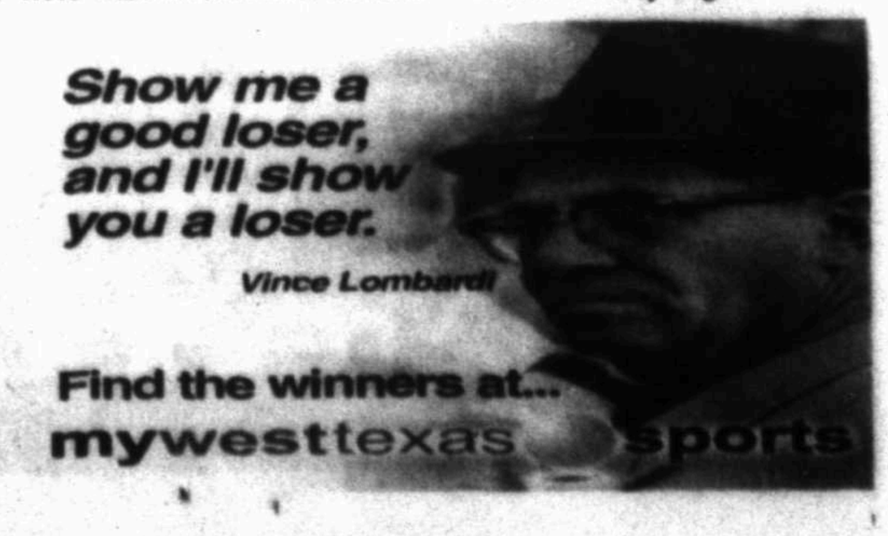
Pujols opened the Angels' sixth with a shot that went under the glove of shortstop Elvis Andrus and was ruled a single. Josh Hamilton pulled a liner to the right side that skimmed off the glove of second baseman Rougned Odor, sending Pujols to third.

Aybar hit an opposite-field flare to left that scored Pujols and ended Tepesch's night. David Freese greeted reliever Neftali Feliz with a single up the middle to score Hamilton.

In Game 6 the 2011 World Series, Freese's two-run hit to deep right field off Feliz over the glove of Nelson Cruz prevented the Rangers from clinching the franchise's first Series title, and the Cardinals won Game 7.

Rangers third baseman Adrian Beltre, one of the club's two All-Stars, extended his hitting streak to 15 games with a third-inning single.

Rangers left fielder Jake Smolinski, who made his major league debut Monday, left the game following the second inning after being hit in the left elbow by a pitch by Richards. Smolinski had multi-hit games in his three starts before Friday night.



Martin takes 3-shot lead in Women's British Open

Associated Press

SOUTHPORT, England — Mo Martin had a plan for Royal Birkdale, and it's working better than she imagined at the Ricoh Women's British Open.

Martin took two putts from short of the green on the par-5 18th hole Friday for her 10th birdie in two rounds, and her second straight 3-under 69. That gave the American a three-shot lead over Beatriz Recari of Spain and former U.S. Women's Open champion So Yeon Ryu going into the weekend.

"It's always nice when your plan pans out," Martin said. "So it's fun to be here."

For Michelle Wie, it was fun while it lasted.

Coming off her first major in the U.S. Women's Open at Pinehurst No. 2, Wie kept putting herself in tough spots and couldn't convert enough pars. She followed her highest score of the year (75) with one that was even worse, a 78 to miss the cut by three shots.

Wie was among the favorites. It was easy to overlook the 31-year-old Martin, who has never won an LPGA Tour event and is playing links golf for only the third time.

She is 5-foot-2 and among the shortest hitters in women's golf. That figured into her strategy at Royal Birkdale, which is littered with pot bunkers and is framed by dunes covered in thick grass.

"Every hole you have something to think about. Every single shot you have something to think about," Martin said. "But there's fairway there, and there's green there, and that's what I'm focusing on."

in Lubbock and played at MC in the mid-1990s, said it offered him the chance to play with top-flight players. He said he recieved a wake-up call when he played with current Midland Country Club professional Stevie Young, who also roomed with him.

"He was unbelievable as far as golf was concerned, and at the time he was on Europe's Walker Cup team and flying back and forth to Spain," said Reeves, who went on to play for Texas A&M-Commerce and also played professionally. "It was a pretty big wake-up call. When you are living with a guy that's one of the top four best players in the country, you get a good idea."

Savage, who was a second team NJCAA All-American in 1993, played with current PGA Tour professional Chad Campbell and McKinley, who is a native Scotland. Savage said one of the best parts was playing with players from places such as Scotland, England, South Africa and Australia. But he said Poss did a good job of mixing some Texans into the group who contributed to the success.

Now, the program has become so well known that it's almost a network that helps continue to feed it and continue its success.

"(Poss) has been doing it for a long time, and word of mouth travels pretty quick whenever you have a guy here in the late 80s that comes and plays golf for (Poss), and he did them right, and they become better players," said Scott Rundell, a native of Clovis, New Mexico, who now lives in Midland and played at MC in 1996 and 1997. "They go back from wherever they came from and spread the word."

The word is certainly out, and for those who once wore Midland College colors, they know that no matter where they might have ended up in golf, their experience playing for the Chaparrals and Poss certainly changed their lives.

"I wish it would've been four years instead of two," Rundell said. "It was a blast."

Jamboree notes

LIVINGSTON-WHITESIDE JUMP INTO LEAD

K.T. Livingston and Bobby Whiteside, who combined to win the 2012 Jamboree with a record-setting score, shot an 11-under 61 on Friday during the first round of the Jamboree at Green Tree Country Club.

Livingston said that he had six birdies and an eagle during Friday's round and Whiteside had five birdies.

Brady Shivers and Will Christensen combined to shoot a 62 and are one stroke behind in second heading into today's second round.

Shivers and Christensen are three strokes ahead of four different teams tied for the third spot as Mark Terry-Beau Davis, Kelly Grunewald-Kevin Boscamp, Michael Pruitt-Zach Atkinson and the team of Bobby Gee-Shawn Savage all shot seven-under 65.

Netherlands players practice during a training session Friday at the Estadio Nacional in Brasilia, Brazil. The Netherlands will face Brazil in the World Cup third-place match today.

Dutch look to finish unbeaten

Associated Press

BRASILIA, Brazil — Dutch coach Louis Van Gaal is trying to motivate his players for the third-place match against Brazil by giving them the mission of becoming the only Dutch squad to finish a World Cup unbeaten in regular play.

Brazil coach Luiz Felipe Scolari is just hoping Brazil can finish on a high note in front of the home fans following the devastating 7-1 loss to Germany.

After being eliminated by Argentina on penalties, the Netherlands has the chance of ending the tournament without a loss in seven matches. The Dutch won their first four games, then drew Costa Rica 0-0 in the quarters and Argentina 0-0 in the semis.

Van Gaal had been saying the third-place game was pointless and that he would rather not play it, but on Friday he changed the tone a bit, saying that going out without a loss would be a good reason to stay motivated.

"We are realizing that there is something else we need to defend and we have to go for it," Van Gaal said through a translator. "Never a Dutch team returned home unbeaten, and that has to be the next target."

Scolari said the third-place match will be important to give Brazilian fans some reason to celebrate in the team's final World Cup appearance at home.

"We already know that we can't reach our main goal anymore," the coach said. "But we still have the third-place game, and we want to win so we can give at least some happiness to the Brazilian people."

Scolari said he is expecting to make two or three changes to the lineup that played against Germany, but didn't give any hints. In a training session earlier Friday, he used a lineup without striker Fred, who has struggled throughout the World Cup.

Brazil captain Thiago Silva, who didn't play against Germany because of a yellow card suspension, was in the team that lost to the Netherlands in the quarterfinals of the 2010 World Cup in South Africa.

"I couldn't be more motivated," Silva said. "It's a different objective, but we will be playing for our honor and our dignity. When you wear the Brazilian jersey you have to respect it and you always have to play motivated. We have to move on."

NASCAR president Helton: No animosity toward RTA

Associated Press

LOUDON, N.H. — NASCAR President Mike Helton said Friday there is no animosity from the governing body toward the recently formed, nine-team Race Team Alliance that will collaborate on initiatives and issues facing auto racing.

The goals of the RTA include lowering costs for NASCAR teams and creating one voice on issues facing the teams.

Helton downplayed the immediate significance of the new faction, saying NASCAR will "continue to do business the way we've done business."

"They've made clear their intentions are to grow the sport and make the sport stronger through their ownerships, and we have respect for what they do in their business models," Helton said at New Hampshire Motorspeedway, "but the other thing is, the way we do our form of motorsports has worked. We continue to add assets and values to create and grow the sport. We'll continue to do that and also continue to do that with the input of as many people as we can do individually."

Helton said he did have notice from the RTA that it was forming.

The RTA currently includes Chip Ganassi Racing with Felix Sabates, Hendrick Motorsports, Joe Gibbs Racing, Michael Waltrip Racing, Richard Childress Racing, Richard Petty Motor Sports, Roush Fenway Racing, Stewart-Haas Racing and Team Penske. Michael Waltrip Racing co-owner Rob Kauffman was elected chairman of the RTA, which was formally announced Monday.

Italy's Trentin wins 7th Tour de France leg in photo finish

Associated Press

NANCY, France — Matteo Trentin of Italy won Friday's seventh stage of the Tour de France in a photo finish, after two top American hopefuls went down in the latest spills of a crash-marred edition this year.

Fellow Italian Vincenzo Nibali retained the overall leader's yellow jersey. U.S. rider Tejay van Garderen, a solid all-around rider with an outside shot at the title, crashed late in the stage and lost more than a minute in the title chase.

The sun finally broke through clouds that had dumped rain over riders in recent days for the 146 mile ride from Epernay, the capital of Champagne country, to the eastern city of Nancy. It was the second-longest stage of the three-week race this year.

Trentin, a cheery 24-year-old who won a stage in the Tour of Switzerland earlier this year, beat Slovakia's Peter Sagan by what looked like no more than a centimeter or two on the finish-line photo of the final sprint. The finish was so close that the Tour's website initially declared Sagan the winner.

Trentin patted Sagan on the back after crossing the line. The Cannondale star, who took home the green jersey given to the Tour's best overall sprinter for the last two years, has finished in the top-5 of every stage this year — and second three times — but has yet to win. France's Tony Gallopin was third.

"Honestly I didn't know that I won. I told Peter that he had beaten me on the line. Cycling is nice because anything can happen," said Trentin, who won a stage in Lyon in his first Tour last year. "It's a good thing that I won two times."

Trentin dedicated the victory to his Omega Pharma Quick Step team and its star sprinter Mark Cavendish, who crashed out in Stage 1.

Two Midland teams to compete in state, regional tournaments

A pair of Tall City Little League teams will be playing in state and regional tournaments over the next two weeks.

The Midland Mid City Intermediate (12-13 year old) All-Stars won the Texas West State Tournament last week at McAllister Park in San Antonio. The Intermediate squad defeated Fort Worth Westside 12-9 in the championship game.

The squad will compete in the Southwest Regional tournament, beginning Friday in Grand Junction, Colo.

The Northern Major (11-12 year old) All-Stars won the Texas West Section 3 Tournament in Lubbock this past week. The Northern squad defeated Pecos 13-1 in the final to clinch a berth in the Texas West State Tournament.

Northern will take on an undetermined opponent at 6 p.m. Thursday at McAllister Park in San Antonio.

Young teen mocked for not wanting to date

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl in middle school. I have never seriously dated anyone, and the one time I did I felt trapped. My friends think it's weird that I have never dated a guy and they call me a lesbian. I just want to finish my schoolwork and wait until high school to start dating. I don't want to feel weighed down by anyone. Is there something wrong with me? — CONFUSED IN S. CAROLINA

DEAR CONFUSED: Something wrong with you? Good grief, no! In fact, I would go so far as to say there is something RIGHT with you. Not every teen — and that goes for boys, too — feels ready to date at 14.

It makes me angry that your "friends" would call you something you're not just because you're not doing what they're doing. If it persists, your parents should talk to the school about it. Preferring to concentrate on your studies and waiting until high school to date is nothing to be ashamed of — it's something to be proud of.

DEAR ABBY: I attended a friend's birthday celebration a few weeks ago at a chic restaurant. After our entrees were ordered and the appetizers served, the restaurant's fire alarm sounded and the dining room was evacuated. For 20 minutes all of the patrons waited patiently outside while the fire department was summoned. We learned from another guest that there had been a small fire in the kitchen.

When we returned to the dining room, a heated debate ensued among the guests. One person said that because the fire alarm had interrupted our meal, the lunch should be complimentary. Others insisted the restaurant owed us nothing beyond an apology. We paid our bill, but the question remains: Should the management have shown some consideration for the inconvenience we experienced? — FOUR-ALARM FRAZZLED

DEAR FRAZZLED: I took your question to Craig Susser, owner of the successful Craig's restaurant in West Hollywood, California. He agreed with me that the restaurant owner should have shown appreciation for the patience that was exhibited by the patrons.

While Craig said he wouldn't have paid for the entire meal for everyone who was dining there that day, he certainly would have made some adjustment to the bill to compensate them for their inconvenience. "After all, we're in it together," he added. And that gracious attitude is why he has one of the most popular dining establishments in L.A.

DEAR ABBY: What are your thoughts on marriage? Is it an antiquated practice? I don't know if I really want it, or just because society and social media deem it important. — CINDY VIA TWITTER

DEAR CINDY: I don't consider marriage to be an antiquated practice at all. In a sense, marriage is a team sport. It won't succeed unless the team members are dedicated to a common goal and are willing to sacrifice selfish needs to achieve it.

In my opinion, the reason so many marriages fail is that individuals go into it for the wrong reasons. No one should marry because society and social media deem it important. When you meet the right person, you won't be ambivalent about spending your life and creating a family with that individual.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, July 12, 2014:

This year you often wonder whether to be vulnerable or like a turtle, protected by your shell. You might experiment as to which way is best for you. You often want to be logical but are highly emotional, and vice versa. If you are single, potential sweeties find you enticing and magnetic. You might have difficulty deciding who, when and what. CAPRICORN has the same concerns as you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ An authority figure in your life, perhaps an older relative, could present you with an opportunity, but you might not be able to say "yes" because of other commitments. Anger could erupt. Proceed with care if you don't want to get into a fight. Tonight: A force, wherever you are.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You could be taken aback by a situation that forces you to break past your normal boundaries. Once you walk in another person's shoes, empathy evolves and takes any disagreement away. Good news heads your way. Accept a fun invitation. Tonight: Try a different type of cuisine.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Relax and then deal with someone directly. Speak your mind in a manner in which others can receive your message. Make quality time for a loved one you really care about. If it is your sweetie, try to re-create an old-fashioned date. Tonight: Adding more heat to the moment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Others could be far more in touch with their feelings than you realize. A loved one has been changing in front of your very eyes. You could be delighted by what comes up in a discussion. Tonight: The only answer to an offer is "yes."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ You might have focus and direction today, whereas others do not. They are playful and spontaneous. Make it clear what you want to do. Indicate when you will be available. Tonight: Enjoy a spontaneous happening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Today's Full Moon brings into light your friendships, loved ones and possibly your relationship with a child. You could be juggling more than you can handle at the present moment. Someone close makes a request that you would like to fulfill. Make a major effort. Tonight: Whatever you do, do it 100 percent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ You might feel pressured. The question might be how to proceed. Some of you might try to juggle different concerns, whereas others make a choice. You could become unusually frustrated and angry with demands or requests. Let others know your feelings, in any case. Tonight: Find a friend who knows how to make you smile and detach.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Take a day trip, as you are very tired of the same old routine. If you can get away longer, all the better. You could be amazed at the results of even a day trip. You'll gain a new perspective and relax at the same time. You just might opt for doing these escapes more frequently. Tonight: Return calls only if you want.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You could see a situation differently than a partner does. You might have a conflict about funds. If you can hold back on this expenditure, you will see new information come forward. Someone close to you lets you know how much you are cared about. Relax. Tonight: Make it dinner for two.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You will want to assume control, while others seem scattered. A partner or loved one might be in such a good mood that his or her efficiency seems to dwindle and he or she doesn't care! This person is loving the moment. If you can, join in. Otherwise, be efficient if you would like. Tonight: Your popularity pushes to the forefront.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ You could be stunned by what you are seeing; nevertheless, you will opt to withdraw. You can decide whether to create a sanctuary-type mood alone or with another person. You crave quieter, more centered interactions. Tonight: Listen to what is being said without interjecting thoughts in your mind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ Your friends cannot seem to be without you. They call you, invite you to their parties and ask for your company in general. A child or loved one also needs your attention. You have the ability to juggle various concerns. Remember what is most important in your life and act accordingly. Tonight: Where you want to be.

ALPHA CRUDE CONNECTOR, LLC ANNOUNCES SUCCESSFUL OPEN SEASON, PROJECT APPROVAL TO PROCEED WITH THE ALPHA PIPELINE PROJECT AND INITIATION OF A SECOND OPEN SEASON

Tulsa, Okla.-(BUSINESS WIRE)-Alpha Crude Connector, LLC ("Alpha") today announced a successful open season for the Alpha Crude Connector Pipeline (the "Pipeline" or the "System"), a new FERC regulated, crude oil transportation pipeline to be located in Lea and Eddy Counties New Mexico and Culberson, Loving, Reeves and Winkler Counties, Texas. Having received sufficient binding commitments, Alpha's owners have determined to proceed with the Pipeline.

The Pipeline will have the capacity to accept over 100,000 barrels per day of crude oil from numerous lease tank batteries and other field receipt points and a truck terminal in the northern Delaware Basin. Shippers will have the ability to deliver crude through the System to multiple downstream pipelines and a rail terminal, providing access to local refineries, Cushing and the US Gulf Coast. The Pipeline is projected to be in service in the second half of 2015.

Second Open Season

Alpha intends to conduct a Second Open Season to explore obtaining additional binding long-term acreage or long-term volume commitments for this new crude oil transportation System. The Second Open Season will provide an additional opportunity for interested shippers to secure long term transportation commitments for certain capacity rights at competitive rates. "We are pleased to launch a Second Open Season for the Alpha Crude Connector Pipeline", said Dave Presley, President and Chief Executive Officer of Frontier Energy Partners, LLC. All interested parties who signed a Confidentiality Agreement for the First Open Season are automatically entitled to receive information relative to the Second Open Season.

Second Open Season Process

The Second Open Season is scheduled to begin on July 2, 2014 and end on November 4, 2014. All bids must be submitted to Alpha by 5:00 pm, Central Standard Time, on or before November 4, 2014. Certain additional information regarding the Pipeline and the Open Season can be found at www.frontierenergyllc.com. All requests for Open Season documents, presentation of bids, and other correspondence should be directed to:

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
I tend to lose everything. I lose my sunglasses at least once a month. I lost my wallet not long ago and left my purse at the hairdressers just last week. Fortunately, I've learned to live with my bad habit of misplacing things. When I bought my last car (using the classifieds of course), I was smart enough to have a spare key made at a local hardware store and put it away in a safe place. Sure enough, I lost my car keys last week. "Not to worry," I thought. I took out my trusty spare, opened the door and put the key in the ignition. It fit, but it wouldn't start the car! I called around and learned that the key has to be a special kind that has some sort of chip in it. Apparently the store that made the key had no idea, just like me. How was I supposed to know this key was special? Is this some sort of new technology on all car keys?

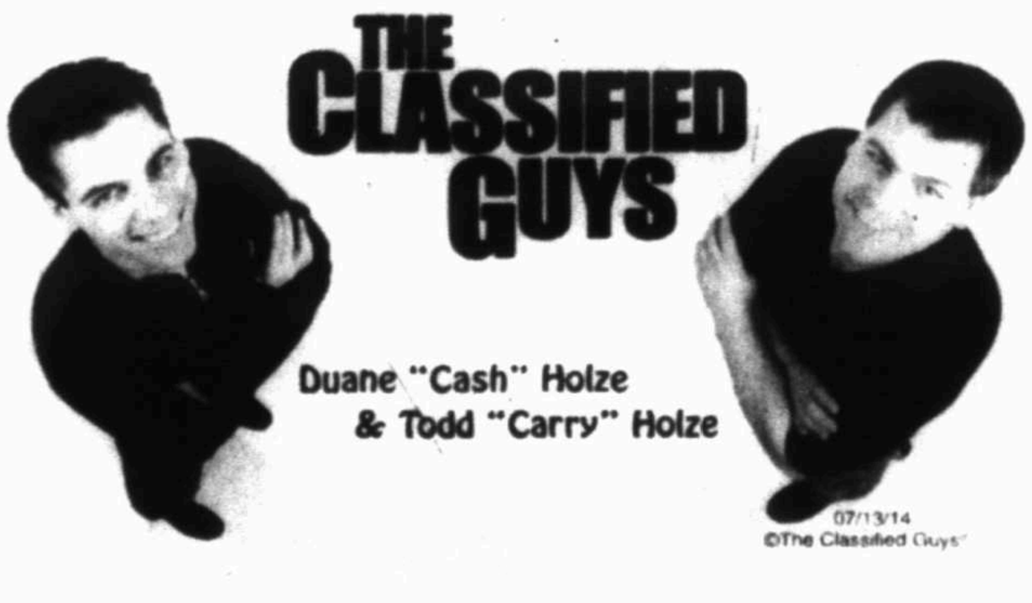
Carry: That's quite a list of things to lose all the time. Hopefully you won't misplace the newspaper before reading this column!



Cash: As with many things on newer cars, even simple items like keys have become more complex. Older model cars that use a metal key in the ignition were the easiest for thieves to steal. Many of those locks could be picked or even started with a screwdriver and a lot of force.

Carry: As added protection for the consumer, manufacturers began adding security devices to the keys to make it more difficult to steal. The newer style keys look different since they have a large black plastic top or built in remote to store the electronics.

Cash: General Motors was one of the first to implement the idea by adding resistors to their keys. When you placed the key in the ignition it completed a simple circuit and allowed you to start the car.

Carry: Since then, most manufactures have added a variation of the security device. Some high-end models even have keys that, when put in the ignition, reset your seat or steering column position and your mirror adjustments. That can be helpful if people keep borrowing your car.

Cash: To resolve your current problem, take your spare metal key to your dealer or qualified locksmith and have them make a replacement on the correct blank with the security chip. And considering your history with keys, it might pay to make a few extra copies!

Fast Facts

Fill Up and Go

Electronic security devices can be found in everything from credit cards to cars. Yet despite the new technology, some can question whether it's a move forward. Computer scientists from The Johns Hopkins University and RSA Laboratories found a way to acquire information from a car key tag or credit card payment tag (like Speedpass) using a wireless electronic device. This means that criminals armed with the device could not only steal your car, but also fill it up with gas on your credit card!

Getting Old

Those of us who drive older cars tend not to worry about theft as much as new car owners. However according to information from the National Insurance Crime Bureau, the most stolen cars are the 1995 Honda Civic and 1994 Honda Accord. Surprisingly, 9 out of the top 10 automobile models stolen each year are at least 10 years old. That's sad news for owners of older model vehicles since over 1 million cars are stolen each year.

Forget Me Not

Since it was raining last Saturday, my girlfriend called me up and invited me out for a day of shopping at the mall. She and her husband recently bought a new car, so she offered to drive.

After we made the rounds through the mall and stopped for lunch, we headed to the parking lot. My friend pulled out her keys and told me that her car had one of those new keys that remembers all your settings when you put it in the ignition. "I love it," she said. "I put it in and it remembers to adjust my seat position and side mirrors."

"However," she frowned looking out over the sea of cars in the parking lot, "it would be much more helpful if it could remember where I parked!"
