Allies plan invasion

■ In a punishing prelude to ground war, commanders throw hundreds of warplanes against new Iraqi front-line targets.

N.Y. Times News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — As warplanes intensified their punishment of dug-in Iraqi troops, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney met with allied commander H. Norman Schwarzkopf on Friday to plan when the "K-Day" invasion of Kuwait will begin.

With the timing of a ground offensive the over-arching question of the day, military spokesmen said the air war has destroyed about 600 Iraqi tanks and 400 artillery pieces.

Another 13 Iraqi aircraft made it safely out of Iraq to Iran, the spokesman said, bringing to 147 the number that had escaped since the start of the war. That figure includes 121 jet fighters.

The ground invasion "could start today, it could start in a month," said Prince Khalid bin Sultan of Saudi Arabia, the operation's chief Arab commander. However, officers at the Pentagon and in Saudi Arabia contended the desert war was unlikely to begin until after Iraqi forces have been bombed for two more weeks or so.

Pentagon officials said they want to use air power to further reduce the fighting capability of Iraqi forces before the ground offensive begins. The delay would also allow late-arriving U.S. units

Bush seeks expanded oil production

■ Administration's draft of national energy policy backs deregulation, ignores energy efficiency.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The White House has drafted a national energy policy that would encourage the growth of the domestic oil industry and remove obstacles to the construction of new nuclear power plants. But the plan calls for only a modest effort to encourage energy efficiency.

The plan, which is taking final form as U.S. troops are engaged in a war in the Persian Gulf, is intended to make the nation less dependent on foreign sources.

Through deregulation and tax breaks, it would encourage the oil, gas and coal industries to begin aggressive programs for increasing the domestic output of fossil fuels in the United States.

The Office of Management and Budget circulated a draft of the legislation embodying the policy to federal departments and agencies this week.

The proposals include few programs aimed at substantially reducing the con-

'Great old bird' stops off in Midland

The powerful warbird, the old B-29 Superfortress, is well into its peacetime mission over the United States.

It's heading home to Seattle, where the heavy bomber was built in 1945.

"It's pretty much basically the way it was 45 years ago," said Tom Cloyd, chief pilot of the Confederate Air Force-owned airplane.

This weekend, the rare warplane is making a 12-hour, 2,400-mile flight from Harlingen to Seattle for its overhaul by Boeing Co. workers and volunteers, including retired Boeing people who worked on the aircraft during World War II.

The airplane landed at Midland International Airport on Friday for refueling and, following layovers, is scheduled to arrive at Boeing Field in Seattle by noon Monday.

"The B-29 was the beginning of Boeing as far as being known as the maker of big airplanes," said Cloyd, an El Paso-based pilot who, in his free time, has been flying the B-

Drug dealer pays $350,000 county fine

By David Morris

A man police describe as a drug "kingpin" paid what prosecutors said was the largest fine in Midland County history Friday.

Judge John H. Hyde sentenced Denny Earl Durbin, 36, of Phoenix, Ariz., to 10 years in state prison and ordered him to pay a $350,000 fine.

Investigators said Durbin, who pleaded guilty Friday in 238th District Court to illegally investing in about 600 pounds of marijuana, was part of a nationwide drug-distribution network.

Durbin consented to his sentence and fine as part of a plea agreement between his lawyers and the Midland County District Attorney's Office.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said the fine, which was turned over to Midland County officials Friday in the form of a check, will be deposited in the county's general fund.

Painter said Midland undercover officers learned in September 1990 that Durbin was in town seeking to make a large marijuana purchase. They contacted him and set up a buy, Painter said.

"He got it all set up, but he wasn't

Hazardous waste moves draw warning

HOUSTON (AP) — Supporters of Texas' sudden moratorium on hazardous waste facilities say industry officials are just crying wolf when they complain that the action will have dire environmental consequences.

In response to a call by Texas Gov. Ann Richards, state agencies have halted work on permits for new and expanded commercial sites for disposal and handling of hazardous waste.

"This could result in far more environmental harm than she's seeking to avoid," Jon Fisher, senior vice president of the Texas Chemical Council told the Houston Chronicle.

The move could prompt continued use

Winter storm besieges England; Brits carry on

LONDON (NYT) — For two days now, this city has been surrendered to winter, besieged by the kind of cold, snowy weather more common to Chicago than England.

Judges have closed their courts, soccer teams have abandoned their pitches and police officers patrolling snow-covered highways have resorted to the most British of emergency measures, carrying hot urns of tea to sustain stranded motorists.

In fact, some eight inches of snow have fallen since Thursday in Central London, and nearly a foot in outlying areas. As the city seldom sees more than a dusting during a typical winter, the current stretch of bad weather, which is expected to continue into the weekend, has been more than enough to paralyze wide areas, shutting down air, rail and motor traffic.

Weather officials say it is the worst stretch of winter

PIC pledges job-search aid to HSA employees

Ward Whitfield plans to go back to school this summer.

The 30-year-old credit manager at HSA Mortgage Co. soon will be laid off, and he figures he'll use his newfound free time to finish his bachelor's degree in finance.

He hopes a government job-training program will be able to help.

"I had an informal discussion with the JTPA (Job Training Partnership Act) and they did tell me that there were opportunities for funding for school," said Whitfield, a 10-year HSA veteran.

At a news conference at HSA offices Friday, the Permian Basin Private Industry Council (PIC) announced plans to use JTPA funds to help former HSA employees retrain and find

WASHINGTON — The nation's mayors Friday denounced President Bush's proposal to give states control over $15 billion worth of federal programs, saying it would permit governors to skim money that now flows directly from Washington to hundreds of cities around the country. Speaking officially through the bipartisan U.S. Conference of Mayors, the mayors also contended that Bush's proposal would add a new layer of bureaucracy, at the state level, to many health, education, welfare, housing and law-enforcement programs.

Secession at issue

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. — Lithuanians are expected to vote overwhelmingly for independence today in the first balloting anywhere in the Soviet Union on the secession of a republic. But many Lithuanians foresee little more than a moral victory over the Kremlin. Pro-independence leaders scheduled the non-binding vote after last month's military crackdown in the three secessionist Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, in which 21 people were killed. On Friday, Lithuanians made final preparations for the poll.

Sunny skies continue

Staff Report

Today's forecast is for continued sunny skies, a high in the upper 60s and southwest winds 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be clear with a low in the lower 30s.

Sunday is predicted to be clear with a high in the mid-60s, NWS said.

After an overnight low of 27, Friday's high was 66, compared to the record high for the date of 80, set in 1963. The record low for today's date is 12, set in 1936.

STATE

A high pressure system provided clear skies and warm temperatures across Texas Friday, and more of the same was expected through the weekend.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from 58 at Dalhart to 72 at McAllen. Highs were in the 60s across most of the state.

Northerly winds swept North Texas, while West Texas had southerly breezes at 10-15 mph.

Skies were clear except for some patchy clouds in western portions of the state.

The National Weather service predicted a springlike weekend with sunny skies and afternoon highs mostly in the 60s and evening lows in the 30s and 40s.

NATION

The weeklong warm spell continued Friday across the northern tier of states with record highs from the Dakotas to Maine.

More than 170 high temperature records were broken or tied during the first week of February, the National Weather Service said.

Friday's record highs included 49 degrees at Marquette, Mich., which posted six records in seven days.

Airlines fined $2,500 each

Staff Report

The four airlines that operated at Midland International Airport in 1988 were each fined $2,500 this week for security violations.

American, Continental, America West and Southwest airlines were ordered to pay the fines by U.S. District Judge H.F. Garcia of San Antonio.

Federal Aviation Administration officials had previously reported the security breach they detected in April 1988.

An FAA agent posing as a passenger was able to pass a briefcase containing a simulated dynamite bomb through the X-ray security point at the airport.

Airlines operating at the airport are responsible for providing security at the concourse entrance, airport officials have explained.

Stanley Smith Security Inc. of Midland was under contract with the airlines to staff the checkpoint at the time of the violation. That company's contract expired more than a year ago, officials said.

Globe Security Inc. is the current contractor, according to airport spokesman Marcy Blauvelt.

The airport and the city are responsible for security throughout the remainder of the terminal. Since the beginning of the Persian Gulf War, heightened security measures have been in effect.

STORM: Snow halts trains

(From 1A)

since 1987, when blizzards isolated some small towns in England. Many office workers here took the day off today, saying they could not get into the city.

Even secretaries on duty at Scotland Yard, the London police headquarters, had to beg off inquiries from reporters, because, they said, their supervisors were stranded at home.

And if other local police patrols found themselves working overtime, there was some solace that the weather is making it equally difficult for criminals.

In Nottingham, a team of four burglars were captured on Thursday night after detectives tracked their footprints in the snow. "It took no Sherlock Holmes to catch this lot," a police spokesman said.

Derek Hardy, a spokesman for the Meteorological Center, said people in England don't know what to do when they see this much snow and cold.

"There is that John Bull spirit, you know, that you carry on, regardless," Hardy said. "And then people will venture out on the highway and find themselves stranded in a snowdrift. And then someone has to go carry them out, regardless."

The cold snap, part of a weather system blowing out of central Russia that also brought snow to the French Riviera on Thursday, has even worked its way into national politics.

As nighttime temperatures in much of the nation have dropped below 20 degrees, well under the average February low of 34, some opposition members of Parliament compiained that the government of Prime Minister John Major was not doing enough to protect the poor and elderly from the cold.

Other government officials said additional beds would be available in shelters for some of the city's estimated 3,000 homeless people.

INVASION: 3rd Armored Division not ready yet

to become battle-ready.

The 3rd Armored Division, just in from Germany, is still without all its tanks and helicopters. "We're the last division to come into the country so we just aren't ready yet," said division commander Maj. Gen. Paul Funk, but he added that he's "prepared to go to war with what I've got."

In Riyadh, Cheney and Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, were met at the airport by Gen. Schwarzkopf. They began two days of meetings to assess the progress of Operation Desert Storm. Cheney and Powell will return to Washington on Sunday and meet Monday with President Bush to decide when to begin an allied ground assault to liberate Kuwait.

Meanwhile, Iraq again promised a bloody battle keep to its captured territory.

"Iraq and its leader will not make peace with infidels," said Radio Baghdad, speaking for President Saddam Hussein.

The Iraqi station said President Bush and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia would be held accountable for Iraqi deaths caused the allied bombing. "The curse will haunt them and their families until doomsday," it promised.

However, a contrasting portrait of enemy resolve has been painted by defecting Iraqi soldiers and prisoners of war, said Gen. Khalid. They told of "execution battalions" stationed behind the front-line troops to kill deserters and of informers whose duty is to report on likely defectors, said the Saudi commander.

In London, Defense Secretary Tom King predicted mass surrenders as the bombers intensify their attack on Iraqi positions along the Kuwaiti-Saudi border.

"As it starts to roll, it will have a significant impact on the ground," said King.

The air war is now aimed at destroying entrenched forces in the Kuwait theater of operation, known as the KTO. "The stepped-up campaign is much more focused on the KTO," said Marine Maj. Gen. Robert Johnston, the Desert Storm chief of staff.

The KTO was hit with 600 aerial missions on Friday, including 150 against the elite Republican Guard in norther Kuwait and southern Iraq, said Johnston.

Military officers estimated that the air war has knocked out at least 10 percent of the Iraqi tanks and artillery pieces and reduced the flow of enemy supplies to front-line troops by 90 percent.

Military analysts believe Iraq started the war with about 5,500 tanks and about 4,000 artillery pieces, some of which are capable of tossing shells more than 20 miles.

Some allied military commanders say a ground war will not start until at least 50 percent of Iraq's military assets are destroyed, but Johnston would not commit to that figure.

"We have assigned no particular percentage that will drive us to a decision" to start a ground war, said Johnston.

The 90 percent cutoff of supply lines should have a significant effect on the fighting ability of Iraqi troops in Kuwait and southern Iraq when the ground war starts, according to a senior military source.

"He can't just sit in the desert for four or five months and not have some maintenance problems," said the source.

Indeed, the visiting dignitaries seemed pleased with the aerial progress of Operation Desert Storm.

"You are the heart and soul of the most enormously successful air campaign in the history of the world," Cheney told members of the 48th Tactical Bomber Wing.

However, the defense secretary discouraged speculation that the ground attack would come sooner rather than later.

DRAFT: Oil industry executives applaud plan

(From 1A)

sumption of energy. For instance, there are no proposals that would encourage motorists to reduce their use of gasoline, the largest single use for oil in the United States.

Copies of the draft were made available to several news organizations Friday. White House officials said the draft was receiving a last review from the Energy Department and other agencies and that when those had been incorporated it would be given to President Bush for his signature.

Energy Secretary James D. Watkins is scheduled to testify before the Senate Energy Committee and Natural Resources Committee on Feb. 19, and Sen. Timothy Wirth, D-Colo., said Watkins would present the plan then.

The draft of a letter accompanying the plan, from Watkins to Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., the speaker of the House, described the policy's purpose.

"To secure future energy supplies, we must consider fossil fuels, nuclear power, renewable energy, fusion energy and enhanced R&D," the letter said.

"As events in the Persian Gulf have demonstrated so aptly, we must reduce our dependence on imported oil from unstable regions. This will require both reducing our overall dependence on oil, particularly in the transportation sector, and increasing domestic production in an environmentally sound manner."

Oil industry executives, who were made aware of its details Friday, applauded the administration's aggressive plan to take some restraints off the domestic oil industry.

"If this is as described, it certainly sounds very positive, not only for the industry, but for the consumer," said Douglas G. Elmets, a spokesman for ARCO in Los Angeles. "It certainly makes us less reliant on insecure sources of oil."

But environmental leaders who read the draft Friday said it was one-sided and would fail to solve the nation's dependence on foreign oil, which supplies more than half the American consumption.

Among the measures in the 142-page draft is a proposal to open 1.5 million acres of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska for oil exploration.

The administration wants to put 300,000 acres of the 19-million acre refuge up for bid to oil companies in the first round of oil lease sales; every two years after that, 300,000 more acres would be open for leasing to oil companies.

TRAINING: PIC, broadcast stations to split cost work.

HSA will shut down by March, according to officials — eliminating some 140 jobs.

PIC will concentrate its efforts on finding immediate employment for the 50 to 60 HSA workers — such as those with families to support — who cannot afford to go long without jobs, PIC Chairman Wayne Scott said.

"There is going to be a massive effort throughout the community," Scott said. That effort will include an advertising campaign aimed at letting area employers know that qualified HSA workers are available.

PIC and local broadcast stations are splitting the cost of the $50,000 campaign, Scott said. AmWest Savings & Loan, which owns HSA, is contributing an undisclosed amount to the campaign, HSA President Barry Marks said.

The campaign is scheduled to begin next week and should last about a month.

Scott said PIC, operated under the auspices of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, also plans to provide vocational training for those HSA employees who desire it. The two-year programs will feature paid on-the-job training at local firms, financed by JTPA through PIC.

Scott said he did not know how much PIC money is available for the HSA effort, but said there is "enough."

He said the effort, which he characterized as unique in PIC's history, will not affect those people already in JTPA programs.

Scott said about 30 HSA employees already have found new jobs, some of them with AmWest. Marks did not know how many HSA employees AmWest will be able to absorb, however.

HSA employs about 40 loan collectors, 60 clerical and secretarial workers, 15 accounting and loan service specialists, 10 supervisors and 15 "managers and business professionals," Marks said.

All employees have been given the opportunity for employment counseling from PIC representatives, Scott said.

The counseling includes seminars on resume writing, career opportunities, stress management and college tuition assistance.

Whitfield said he has appreciated PIC's efforts and added that most HSA employees have found the counseling reassuring.

"Contact with the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission has been a real asset," he said. "They've come to the office, for one, rather than our people having to take off the time to do that (counseling)."

Earlier this week, HSA and AmWest officials said it was likely they would close the business because it was losing money. Those plans were confirmed at Friday's news conference.

Employers interested in hiring former HSA workers are urged to call PIC at 563-1061.

FINE: Amount assessed is largest ever in county

(From 1A)

involved in the actual transfer of marijuana or money," Painter said.

The actual undercover drug sale occurred Oct. 5, 1990, in Nolan County. An associate of Durbin was arrested in connection with the sale and police seized $350,000 in cash.

About a week later, warrants were issued for Durbin's arrest and he turned himself in to Midland County authorities, sheriff's office officials said.

Durbin has been free on $50,000 bond since his arrest. His plea agreement allows him to voluntarily surrender to the Texas Department of Corrections on Feb. 26.

Painter said the marijuana that Durbin and his associate tried to buy was intended for distribution in Indiana. After the Nolan County bust and Durbin's arrest, local authorities contacted law enforcement officers in Indiana and informed them of the drug network in which Durbin was involved.

With help from Midland investigators, Indiana authorities conducted several "reverse sting" drug sales that resulted in several arrests and asset seizures, Painter said. About $167,000 was seized in the operation, Painter reported.

Information from the Texas and Indiana arrests led to additional investigations and arrests in Arizona, he said. The investigation, assisted by the U.S. Attorney's Office and the Drug Enforcement Administration, eventually reached into Canada, sheriff's office Lt. Tim Rodgers said.

"The general consensus around here is that we should not go beyond our jurisdictional limits in investigating a case," he said. "But if we had done that in this case we'd have only gotten the tip of the iceberg."

Assistant District Attorney Wayne Frost, who prosecuted Durbin, said the fine assessed Friday should cripple any future attempts to resurrect Durbin's drug network.

The bottom line of Durbin's plea agreement was "he was going to have to go to prison and we were going to break him financially," Frost said.

He said the Durbin's fine was the largest ever imposed in Midland County.

The maximum fine for illegal investment is $1 million. The offense carries a penalty of 10 to 99 years or life in prison.

B-29: Plane heads home to Seattle for repairs

(From 1A)

29 on national tours since 1983.

The B-29s, which were built for long-range, high-altitude missions over the Pacific Ocean and into Japan, often flew out of Guam, Tinian and Saipan for 3,500-mile round-trip bombing raids.

"The round-trip was like 15 hours of flying time," Cloyd said. "It was 14 hours and 35 minutes of boredom to try to get up there and back and about 25 minutes of sheer terror when they got over the targets."

Boeing, which before the war had designed and built the P-26 Peashooter pursuit monoplane and the famed B-17 Flying Fortress, has been a leader in heavy military and civilian aircraft, such as the B-52 jet bomber and the Boeing series of airliners, including the 707, 727, 737, and 747.

The B-29, the biggest airplane to emerge from World War II, has a 141-foot wingspan and is powered by four Wright R-3350 Cyclone radial engines. Each of the 18-cylinder engines develops 2,200 horsepower.

The B-29, which will be in the shop at Boeing for about five months, will then be based at Midland International Airport — the new home of the CAF.

Retired Boeing design engineer Bob Nichols, 67, of Seattle is flying with Cloyd and his five-man B-29 crew.

"Structurally, it's excellent," Nichols said of the airplane, which is the world's only flying B-29.

All told, 3,970 Superfortresses were built from 1942 through 1945. Most not destroyed in the war have been scrapped — chopped up, melted and turned into peacetime pots and pans. The most famous B-29, the Enola Gay which dropped the atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, on Aug. 6, 1945, is being restored by the Smithsonian Institution's Air & Space Museum.

In Seattle, "the guys who worked on the B-29 during the war, particularly the retirees, are eager" help restore the Superfortress, Nichols said.

"We'll get lots of volunteer labor."

Jerry Walton, a former U.S. Navy aviator, admired the "great old bird" and its radial engines.

"They are just a real fascination that they can operate and function," Walton said of the round engines. "They are so horribly complicated — but reliable and generate a lot of power. It's a fascination to most aviators."

WARNING: Critics dismiss complaints

(From 1A)

of "less desirable" disposal technologies, risks from increased storage and transport of waste, and "improper storage in a lot of places," Fisher said.

But environmentalists reject such statements as a tired replay of industry's earlier predictions — which did not come true — that anti-pollution regulations would be burdensome or harmful.

"It sounds a little like hysteria to me," said Ken Kramer, director of the state Sierra Club.

Texas now has existing facilities that offer "enormous capacity" for disposal of hazardous waste, he said.

"Every time a strengthening of hazardous waste regulations is proposed, we hear the cry of 'midnight dumping' and that's simply not the case," Kramer said.

"I've heard industry cry wolf on this exact theme every time some regulation is proposed," said Brigid Shea, Texas program director of Clean Water Action. "I want to hear some American ingenuity" to reduce hazardous waste production.

The dispute now moves to the Legislature, where Richards will seek a law imposing a two-year moratorium on new waste facilities.

It would let lawmakers consider waste-reduction mandates, "which could substantially reduce the need for new disposal facilities," Richards wrote.

Richards said in her letter the state was "moving too quickly to grant permits to facilities that may jeopardize public health and sensitive environments."

During the 1990 campaign, Richards pledged support to opponents of American Envirotech's proposed incinerator near Channelview homes and Hunter Industrial Facilities' proposed waste cavern.

Promotion turns grim; pickup hits boy

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Festivities at a Midland service station offering cheap gasoline turned grim Friday evening when a pickup hit an 10-year-old boy, sending him to the hospital.

The accident occurred at about 6:05 p.m. as several children darted between vehicles in line for the gasoline at L&L Inc. at the corner of Big Spring Street and Florida Avenue.

According to witness Gina Vines of Midland, who was headed east on Florida Avenue at the time of the accident, at least two children ran in front of her car from a 7-Eleven store, attempting to cross the street to the service station.

"They ran across the street and forced me and two or three other cars to brake," Ms. Vines said. "The pickup just didn't see them. It's a wonder the other kid didn't get hit."

Michael Jesse, 52, of Groveton, hit the boy with his 1990 Dodge pickup as he traveled westbound on Florida Avenue.

"I didn't see him," Jesse told bystanders who clustered around the fallen child, covering him with coats and blankets.

Police officer Bruce Williams said the boy, Gilbert Yorkman, did not seem to be badly hurt. An emergency medical technician said he appeared to have a knot on the back of his head where it hit the pavement.

The youngster was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released, a hospital spokesman said.

Williams said the accident report would indicate the boy was running in between intersections and was at fault.

But he added that the accident might not have occurred if the service station's 95-cent gas hadn't caused heavy traffic on Florida Avenue.

The low-cost fuel had attracted 654 vehicles by the time of the accident.

L&L Inc. owner Chuck McDonald said he was offering the cheap gas Friday because his station had just reopened after being closed 10 days while gas lines were replaced.

McDonald had been directing traffic on Florida Avenue as hordes of people, hearing that gas was at least 30 cents cheaper at the station, jammed its four islands and congested the Big Spring intersection.

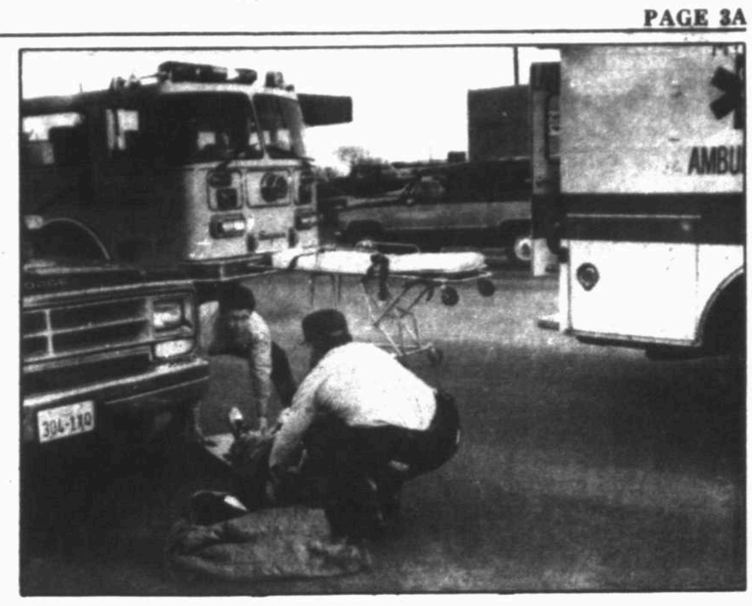

He said he saw several neighborhood children playing in the alleys and darting across the street as he stood in the middle of the street.

"I tried to holler at him, but I was down there directing traffic and he got hit further up," McDonald said.

Before the accident, McDonald said the response to his cheap gas had been encouraging.

"This is one of those days I'm going to remember for the rest of my life," he had said.

As the ambulance left the scene, a subdued McDonald said, "well, this had been fun."

Bush cautions Jordan on tilt toward Iraq

WASHINGTON — With the administration concerned that any change in Jordan's neutral status in inter-Arab politics would have a profound effect on the entire Middle East, President Bush stepped up pressure on King Hussein Friday not to join forces with President Saddam Hussein of Iraq.

"I have some concern now about what appears to be a shift in the Jordanian position," Bush said at a picture-taking session during a meeting in the Oval Office with the Argentine foreign minister, Guido Di Tella. The American people, he added, "don't understand some of the rhetoric coming out of there."

"We've always had a historically good relationship with Jordan," Bush said, "but this complicates things. He seems to have moved over, way over, into Saddam Hussein's camp."

The president's remarks followed the announcement on Thursday that the Bush administration was reviewing its $55 million in 1991 foreign aid to Jordan in response to a speech this week by King Hussein, in which the Jordanian leader assailed the United States and backed Iraq.

Marlin Fitzwater, the White House spokesman, said that Friday's harder line toward Jordan grew out of a closer review by the president of the king's speech.

Fitzwater said the address on Wednesday made it clear "that Jordan has declared his allegiance to Iraq."

"The statements by King Hussein were very precise in terms of his attack on the United States," Fitzwater added.

Administration officials say they understand what the king seems to be doing, which is positioning himself for the postwar Middle East.

They believe he has concluded, wrongly, that when the gulf war is over Arab radicals will take revenge against all of the Arab leaders who joined with the United States in destroying Iraq.

Therefore, through his tilt toward Baghdad and denunciations of the United States, the king is trying to buy himself some life insurance for the postwar era, these officials say.

Given the king's life history, this is not altogether irrational. As a 15-year-old prince, Hussein was at the side of his grandfather, King Abdullah, in 1951 when Abdullah was shot to death by a Palestinian who accused him of selling out the Palestinian cause after the 1948 Middle East war.

After the 1967 Middle East war, King Hussein's own throne was challenged by Palestinian radicals, who wanted to sweep him and other Arab leaders aside for their failure to defeat Israel in that war.

But while administration officials say they are ready to accept a certain amount of posturing by the king, who has provided some useful intelligence on Iraq, and tacit military cooperation, since the gulf war began, they felt that his speech of this week crossed a line and that unless they yanked him back he might be lost indefinitely from the pro-American Arab camp.

Iraqi missile hits Israel, 15 injured

JERUSALEM (AP) — The first Scud missile fired from Iraq in nearly a week struck buildings in central Israel early Saturday, and at least 15 people were slightly wounded, the army said.

Residents of Tel Aviv reported hearing at least three explosions, but it wasn't known if they were from the missile or from the firing of Patriot anti-missile batteries. It wasn't clear whether the missiles struck the incoming Scud.

Reporters who reached a stricken neighborhood saw broken glass and shutters torn off porch windows. The area was in darkness because power lines were damaged.

Rescue workers, some in anti-chemical suits, walked through the neighborhood with flashlights. Ambulances rolled up and down the streets.

The missile carried a conventional warhead, said Brig. Gen. Nachman Shai, the army spokesman. Air raid sirens sounded throughout the country at 2:40 a.m. and an all-clear was announced about half an hour later.

The army stressed is would not reveal the location of the impact. Censors prohibit publication of such facts, saying they may help Iraq target future attacks.

Boleslav Goldman, deputy director of the Tel Hashomer Hospital in the Tel Aviv area, said his hospital received five injured people. One suffered a slight head wound and the rest were suffering anxiety attacks, Goldman said.

Kids who write to soldiers suddenly face death in war

By Chris Carola
Associated Press writer

ALBANY, N.Y. — When school started in September, a class of fifth-graders in Rochester, like children all around the country, became pen pals with a serviceman who was part of Operation Desert Shield.

But Desert Shield became Desert Storm, and suddenly some of the pen pals were dying.

American casualties in the Persian Gulf War have been relatively few, but death already has touched scores of children who got to know the men through letters and photographs.

Like Marine Lance Cpt. Dion Stephenson, who corresponded with fifth-graders at Gates-Chili School District in suburban Rochester. Stephenson, of Bountiful, Utah, was one of the first Americans killed in action.

Teachers trained in crisis counseling spoke with the children, who later put up a bulletin board to honor their pen pal. A picture Stephenson sent to the class was used in the display.

A month after Iraq invaded Kuwait, at the start of the school year, grade-school teachers encouraged their students to write to U.S. troops. It seemed a good way to tie the crisis to lessons on current events, geography and history.

"To some degree we've put our students at risk. We've gone from a general knowledge of a person to a more personal level," said Jacob Romo, executive director of the Sullivan County, N.Y., department of community services.

The opportunity to memorialize a fallen pen pal will be important to children, said J. William Worden, director of an ongoing Harvard University study on child grief and bereavement.

Ramadan now affects the timing of land war

Ramadan, the Islamic holy month of daylight fasting, has become a factor along with the weather in the timing of an allied ground offensive against Iraq.

It may or may not affect how troops on both sides fight. But experts warn that the image of Muslim battling Muslim during this period set aside for spiritual introspection might further inflame anti-Western passions in the Middle East.

"Muslims in the Arab world ... would look at the conflict as a further example of disregard for Islamic religious beliefs," predicted M. Cherif Bassiouni, 53, an Egyptian-born authority on Islam and international law at DePaul University in Chicago.

"My fear," said Manochehr Dorraj, 38, an Iranian-born political scientist at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, "is that if it drags on into a bloody ground campaign with hand-to-hand combat we would definitely see the sort of backlash we're already seeing in Morocco, Libya, Tunisia, Jordan, Lebanon, Syria and Egypt."

Ramadan, the ninth month on the Muslim lunar calendar, starts with the sighting of the first sliver of the moon in mid-March. This year, it is expected to begin around March 18.

Fasting for the 30 days of Ramadan is one of the five pillars of Islam, along with reciting the profession of faith, praying five times daily, paying a charitable tax and making a pilgrimage to Mecca, Saudia Arabia, if one can afford the trip.

The month commemorates the revealing of the Koran, Islam's holy book, to the Prophet Muhammad while he meditated in a cave outside Mecca, said Imtiyaz S. Yusuf, a Tanzanian-born professor of Islamic studies at TCU.

Yusuf was the only specialist on Islam contacted who said that Muslim troops on both sides of the conflict have no exemption from the dawn-to-dusk fasting.

"Soldiers have to fast," Yusuf asserted. "It's compulsory. That's why I think it (the war) will be over by then.

"There's no food, no sexual activities, no drinking — not even water or juice" until nightfall each day during Ramadan, he said. "It's a period of introspection. All adults must compulsorily fast except the sick, children, women who are menstruating or who are pregnant, and travelers."

But Ahmad Zaki Hammad, 46, president of the Chicago-based Islamic Society of North America, said that soldiers fall under the same Ramadan exemption as travelers and the sick.

"The philosophy is that hardship is an acknowledged justification in Islam for breaking the fast," said Hammad, editor of the "Koran Project." "And being on active duty definitely is a hardship."

Combat continued during the fasting month in the eight-year Iran-Iraq war, although it reportedly dropped off during Ramadan in the 1970s conflict between what was then North Yemen and South Yemen.

Bassiouni said Muslim soldiers traditionally have been permitted to postpone the fast during battle. He predicted that the Saudi monarchy is likely to ask local religious leaders to issue a Ramadan exemption for troops.

"I think the religious establishment in Saudi Arabia works very closely with the royal family and would no doubt accept the position of the king (Fahd) that dispensation for Ramadan be given and the clerics would give such dispensation," he said.

Tank drivers dream of desert warfare

By Charles J. Lewis
Hearst News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Listen to a professional tank driver describe with relish what he believes the land war against Iraq will be like: "You are going to see entire tank corps maneuvering across the battlefield," said Col. Leroy R. Goff, a brigade commander in the 3rd Armored Division. "We haven't seen elements of that size maneuvering since the North African campaign in World War II."

A corps consists of more than one division, each with about 400 tanks.

Goff and other commanders in the 3rd division are designing an attack to minimize the killing power of the two most lethal assets left in Iraq's inventory: minefields and artillery.

Tank drivers dream of desert warfare. The wide open spaces were made for the tracked behmoths (or was it the other way around?) and the annals of modern warfare reserve some of their rarest superlatives for descriptions of tank battles.

The 3rd Armored Division served as the vanguard during World War II for Gen. George Patton's attacking forces. John Fialka, the respected military writer for the Wall Street Journal, says the division covered as many as 101 miles in a single day, which he believes is the distance record for modern armor.

Until November, the division made its home in Germany and its mission was to defend against a feared Soviet blitzkrieg through the Fulda Gap.

Gulf notebook

But the Soviets are now on the U.S. side in the Persian Gulf crisis and the division's tank crews and mechanics are trading in their woodland green camouflage uniforms for desert tan.

More fundamentally, the division is shifting its focus from defense to offense. Its main weapon during the initial phase of the attack will be speed and shock.

"We have to keep going forward. Don't get bogged down. Don't stop," said Lt. Col. Dana Robertson, head of the engineering battalion.

Getting though or around an Iraqi minefield will be the first goal of the U.S. and British armored divisions. B-52 bombing and artillery attacks are designed to clear a path through the field, where thousands of anti-tank mines have been planted.

Robertson's men have a variety of devices to clean up the rest, including plows and rakes.

If the minefield isn't breached quickly, the attackers would feel the brunt of Iraq's other heavy punch — thousands of peices of artillery.

Col. John F. Michitsch, commander of the division's artillery, says the weakness of Iraqi artillery is that the guns are not self propelled and are deeply dug into fixed positions.

That means, he says, that if U.S. tanks can penetrate at unexpected places and can keep moving, Iraqi gunners will have to take considerable time to re-aim their guns.

The division is the last major unit to arrive in Saudi Arabia.

Scholars fret as bombs hit ancient sites

N.Y. Times News Service

The allied bombing of Iraq, widely regarded as the richest country in archeological remains, has caused anguish and division among specialists in Middle Eastern culture, many of whom have devoted their professional lives to studying the cradle of civilization.

Some scholars are demanding that the U.S. government stop the war, some have urged the government to try to protect the museums and archeological monuments of Iraq, and some argue that it is callous to protest physical destruction when human lives hang in the balance.

Since 1925, when the eminent prehistorian and archeologist Gordon Childe first published "The Dawn of European Civilization," scholars have regarded Mesopotamia, the land between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers, which is much of modern Iraq, as the place where man first took the step from village culture to high civilization in about 4000 B.C.

"Almost all of Iraq is an archeological mound," said Selma al-Radi, a New York City consultant in archeology with wide experience in the Middle East. "There are half a million archeological sites from all periods. About 40,000 or 50,000 of them are considered quite important. Between 100 and 200 of them were ancient capital cities."

Notable sites include Erbil in the north, where traces of a town dating to 7000 B.C. have been found; the ancient Assyrian capital, Nineveh, which is believed to contain the tomb of Jonah; the 100-foot-high Arch of Ctesiphon, the ancient world's largest arch, which dates to the second century B.C.; the ancient city of Ur, where a third millennium B.C. royal cemetery was excavated in the 1920s, and Baghdad itself, where the Iraq Museum houses what is recognized as one of the world's finest collections of ancient and Islamic art.

"The difficulty is that the archeological remains are in the urban fabric," Ms. Radi said. "When they bombed the Ministry of Defense the other day, did they know that the Abbasid Palace, which dates to the 10th century, is less than 100 yards away?"

Little is known outside of Iraq about what damage may have been done to cultural monuments. On Jan. 28, the U.N. secretary general, Javier Perez de Cuellar, received a letter from Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz of Iraq charging that during the first five days of bombing the Iraq Museum in Baghdad had sustained large-scale damage.

In addition, Aziz declared, on Jan. 19 bombs damaged the country's oldest Christian shrine, the fourth-century Church of St. Thomas in the northern city of Mosul, and on Jan. 21 the eighth-century Al Abbasi mosque in the Dur district north of Baghdad was damaged.

Blind employees make straps for soldiers' helmet

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — For Celia Torres, who has been blind since birth, helping manufacture chin straps used on the helmets of U.S. soldiers is a special way to contribute to the war in the Persian Gulf.

Ms. Torres packages hundreds of the straps, which are being made by workers at the San Antonio Association for the Blind.

Her son, Michael Spears, has been stationed in the Persian Gulf with the U.S. Army since last August and Ms. Torres says it's possible she packaged the chin strap he uses on his helmet.

"He told us not to worry, that he's doing all right, just doing his duty and serving the country," said Ms. Torres, who has another son stationed in Kentucky.

"I worry about him, but I'm proud he chose to serve his country," she said.

The employees are completing one order for 170,000 chin straps, while anticipating a second $520,000 contract for an additional 210,000 straps.

Another worker has a nephew who is a U.S. Marine participating in Operation Desert Storm.

Workers can turn out more than 35,000 chin straps per month, said Raymond Siess, the association's vice president of operations.

The chin straps are used with the Kevlar helmet, which replaced the old-style helmet used since World War II. The straps are made of durable nylon material and feature a quick disconnect snap, which allows for quick removal.

Seiss said about 150 blind or visually impaired employees work at the association's Lighthouse for the Blind rehabilitation center.

"We have to meet very stringent quality standards because most of the items we build are made to specification," he said. "Our complete emphasis, on anything we do, is quality."

Texas rates 2nd in number of uninsured

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas, New Mexico and Louisiana have the highest rates of people without health insurance, according to a General Accounting Office study that finds Texas also has the second-greatest number of uninsured.

The GAO said 26 percent of the population in Texas and New Mexico is uninsured, with 25 percent of Louisiana's population having no health insurance coverage.

California had the greatest number of uninsured — 4.9 million, with the uninsured representing 20 percent of the state's population. Texas ranked second, with 3.9 million people without health insurance. New Mexico had 351,000 uninsured people, while Louisiana had 963,000 uninsured.

The information is based on 1988 census figures.

GAO, the investigative branch of Congress, said that for most of the 1980s, more than 30 million Americans were not covered by medical insurance, one of the most important channels of access to the health care system.

Although employer-provided plans are the primary source of health insurance, most of the uninsured are employed, GAO said.

The likelihood of being uninsured, the report said, is greater among young adults, minorities, unmarried people, and those with less than a high school education.

The percentages of uninsured workers in the service sector of the economy and other industries such as agriculture, mining, construction, public utilities and transportation, continued to be higher than for those in the manufacturing sector, GAO said.

Minorities make up a disproportionate share of the uninsured, the study said. In 1988, 33 percent of Hispanics and 21 percent of blacks were uninsured compared to 12 percent of whites. In Texas, 47 percent of Hispanics under 65 were uninsured, compared with 27 percent of blacks and 16 percent of whites, GAO said.

And while Hispanics account for 27 percent of the Texas population, they represent 49 percent of the state's uninsured population, the study said. Whites account for 59 percent of the population, but only 37 percent of the uninsured, while blacks account for both 13 percent of the population and for 13 percent of the uninsured population.

"The cliche is that we have the best health care in the world — for those who can afford it," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said recently.

"Unfortunately, that cliche is approaching reality, and that reality is not good enough for America."

Richards heartened by finance plans

■ Governor encouraged that both House and Senate have filed similar school finance bills.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards said Friday it is heartening that similar plans have been filed in the House and Senate to overhaul the $14 billion-a-year school finance system.

Richards

"It's very encouraging at this point that we have both the House and Senate discussion on the same track," Richards said.

Richards said the bills contain "at least two common components" necessary in any measure answering the Texas Supreme Court's order for equitable funding for poor school districts.

"One of them is going to be a consolidation of taxing entities into some number, and the other is going to be a recapture from some of the wealthier districts," she said. "I understand that both of these bills do that."

The proposals, sponsored by the heads of the House and Senate education committees, would require all school districts to impose local property taxes at a minimum rate.

Revenue over a certain amount would be taken from wealthier school districts and distributed to poor ones.

Twenty tax regions for school districts are included in the bills by Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, and Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

Parker's package also includes an option to bypass the taxing districts and redistribute property tax revenue statewide. That would require a constitutional amendment.

A constitutional amendment requires approval by two-thirds of the Legislature and by voters.

Parker said he hasn't given up on his previous idea of creating a statewide property tax, which would replace local property levies for schools.

But he said he has not yet been able to muster enough legislative support for a proposed constitutional amendment creating the tax.

Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, initially said the statewide property tax was a top option for reform. But the idea met with resistance from groups, including the Texas Association of School Boards, and the leaders said they are looking at other alternatives.

"The simplest system is to do a statewide property tax. But there's a lot of emotional objection to that, and I recognize and understand that," Richards said.

Both the House and Senate bills would increase state aid to school districts, and both provide for financing buildings and enriching programs.

The state is facing an April 1 Supreme Court deadline for school funding reform. The system declared unconstitutional by the court relies on local property taxes, state aid and some federal money.

Differences in property wealth among school districts result in funding disparities that the court found unacceptable.

'The simplest system is to do a statewide property tax.'

— Gov. Ann Richards

STATE IN BRIEF

Suspect shoots officer in face

DALLAS (AP) — A police officer was in fair condition Friday after a shotgun blast hit him in the face, neck and chest, doctors said.

Robert Quirk, 27, was taken to Methodist Medical Center after the attack early Friday. He had responded to a report that shots had been fired at a street in the Oak Cliff section of South Dallas.

Two police cars were dispatched to the address, with Quirk's the first to arrive shortly after midnight. He radioed police headquarters that he had been shot.

Quirk said he emerged from his car when he saw a suspect attempting to hide a shotgun.. The man then ran behind a large tree and fired at the officer from 15 to 30 feet away.

The officer, who was wearing a bulletproof vest, was struck by shotgun pellets, one of which lodged near his carotid artery.

Tax rebates set record

AUSTIN (AP) — This month's $177.4 million in sales tax rebates to cities and counties are the highest in Texas history, State Comptroller John Sharp said.

The comptroller's office Friday mailed the checks to cities and counties across the state that collect the local sales tax. The reports filed by monthly taxpayers reflect sales made in December.

Sharp said February's total rebates always are large because they include sales taxes collected by annual, quarterly and monthly taxpayers. This month's rebates broke the previous record set in February 1989 by $19.5 million, or 12.4 percent.

Cup theft reported

MENARD (AP) — A woman who was given a coffee cup at a sheriff's office was then accused in its theft, but the item was later returned.

A complaint against Kimberly Light Davis, 27, was dismissed Thursday, said Peace Justice Sheila Gonzales.

Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Buck Miller had filed the complaint accusing Ms. Davis of knowingly and willfully taking his cup from a Menard County sheriff's office.

Ms. Gonzales said the woman was arrested Jan. 19. Ms. Davis said she had returned the cup to the sheriff's office just before sheriff's deputy Ruben Flores arrested her.

The woman had asked for a cup of water when she was questioned after a traffic stop Jan. 16. A dispatcher then gave her Miller's cup, which she carried from the office.

Miller confronted her about the cup the next day.

"Buck asked us if someone had carried out a coffee cup the night before," said Ms. Davis. "I told him 'Yes sir, I did ... I'll bring it back.' "

Drug prosecution grows

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Pregnant women who abuse drugs will be investigated by a Nueces County grand jury, the district attorney said.

"They are very interested, extremely interested," District Attorney Grant Jones said of the grand jury after it agreed Thursday to pursue the investigation.

Jones has said he believes prosecution is a way to combat the increasing number of babies born with drug-related problems, and may deter women from abusing drugs while pregnant.

Health care officials in Corpus Christi and nationwide have opposed prosecution of drug-abusing mothers. They say such actions single out the women and discourage them from seeking prenatal care.

Train hits pedestrian

UNIVERSAL CITY (AP) — A freight train's approach may not have been evident to a man who was wearing headphones as he walked on a railroad track.

Arturo Lopez, 23, of Cibolo was struck and killed Thursday while walking on the Southern Pacific tracks in this San Antonio suburb.

Authorities said the man, who was listening to music on the headphones, may not have heard the train's whistle. A train employee said he blew the train whistle several times and applied brakes, but could not stop in time.

Jeff Francis, an investigator with the Bexar County Medical Examiner's Office, said witnesses said a portable cassette player was found in a bag Lopez was carrying.

The ice life ain't the good life, but it's my life

By Paige St. John

HOUGHTON LAKE, Mich. (AP) — It is the time of year when any northerner can walk on water, drive on water, even erect cities of shanties on water. Some people fall in. A few die. But the ice escapades continue.

Mackinac Island residents stake their Christmas trees in the Lake Huron ice to mark safe snowmobile passage to the mainland. Folks on the Stonington Peninsula cut the long trip to town by driving their cars across Lake Michigan instead of around it. In the Les Cheneaux islands, they attach airplane engines and propellers to home-built sleds and blow their way across.

And when the ice starts to melt, Drummond Island kids tether their snowmobiles to shore and make a contest out of who can drive farthest onto Lake Huron before getting dunked.

But the most fanatic and faithful are the ice fishermen, who drag little shacks onto frozen lakes and sit inside for hours, sipping peppermint schnapps and angling for slow-feeding perch or pike.

There are enough ice-fishing aficionados to build a business on, like Best Tackle Co. in Northport. The fishing tackle company thrives despite a bad economy.

"When times get tough, people go fishing," said Best Vice President George Young. And ice fishing, which requires only a hole in the ice and a stubby foot-long pole with a spool of line, is about the cheapest way to go.

Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and New York are Best's bread-and-butter states. But ice fishing is spreading south and west, Young said, citing orders from Colorado, Washington, Illinois, Indiana and Missouri.

When it comes to shanties, nobody runs an ice show like Minnesota.

"I'll tell you something about Minnesota," Young said. "They lay out their fishing shanties just like towns on their lakes, with streets and electricity so the guys have TV. I have even seen some that had carpet on the floor."

Shanty cities are as popular in Michigan, and some towns run festivals around the fishing villages. Beulah explodes fireworks over its ice town. Tawas City cuts a hole for "polar bear" swimming. Houghton Lake hosts Tip-Up Town, USA, named for the fishing rig that springs a flag when a fish strikes.

About 40,000 people attended Houghton Lake's back-to-back weekend carnivals in January, a crowd so large that the ice sagged under its weight. The main events are staged over shoals, however, so anyone who falls through is left standing in a mere foot of water.

Even so, carnival chairman Dick Fuller said, there are the foolhardy few who drive their trucks and vans over the lake's pressure ridges. Some go in. "We put out warnings, but it doesn't make any difference," he said.

Two snowmobilers already have died on Houghton Lake this winter: One rammed his machine into a pier and the other broke through thin ice and drowned. A week later, fishermen undaunted by the tragedies were zipping across the foot-thick icecap not only in snowmobiles but in pickup trucks, vans and station wagons.

'Dogs clinch berth

■ Midland High clinches its second bi-district boys basketball playoff berth in three years with an 84-52 pummeling of Odessa Permian.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

ODESSA — It may not have been a work of high art, but the effect was just the same.

After an emotional win at San Angelo four days ago, the Midland High boys overcame a slow start and an early Odessa Permian lead to defeat the Panthers handily, 84-52, and clinch a bi-district basketball playoff berth Friday at the Permian Fieldhouse.

Even though the Bulldogs earned the right to represent District 4-5A in postseason action, their second playoff appearance in the past three years, MHS still does not know if it will be as the No. 1 or No. 2 seed.

The 'Dogs are 18-10 for the season and 9-2 in district play, but still trail San Angelo by ½-game in the standings. The Bobcats downed Abilene Cooper 75-58 Friday to go to 26-5 overall, 9-1 in district and also clinch the playoffs.

Friday's win gave MHS a season sweep over the Panthers (10-18, 4-6) after a 69-60 victory at the Chaparral Center in the first half of district play.

The Bulldogs had trouble finding the basket in the early going, as they shot less than 35 percent from the field in the first quarter, but finished the game at a respectable 50 percent total (35-of-70).

Also, MHS head coach Jack Stephenson was able to use every player on his 13-man roster, and they all scored at least two points.

That depth seemed to spell the death of the Panthers, according to Permian head coach Willie Spears, who suited up 10 players against the 'Dogs.

"It hurt us to a point," Spears said. "It's got to be a plus to you to have that many players. I know he must have played nearly three different teams (sets of five)."

"Our depth makes a big difference," Stephenson said. "We have so many people who can go in — that's why we try to run. It wears on people."

As in the 90-78 win over San Angelo Tuesday, the Bulldogs got even scoring from its starting five, plus efficient point production from the bench.

Post Antwan Goodley, a 6-4 sophomore, was MHS' top scorer with 16 points. Skeet Bowers and Earl McDonald followed with 11 each, while Brian

MHS girls look ahead

Staff Writer

Midland High girls basketball coach Jim Raughton got a peek at his prospects for next season and liked what he saw.

But hope for the future didn't do Raughton nor his Lady Bulldogs any good on Friday night at the MHS gym. The Lady 'Dogs ended their season by getting a 64-44 pasting at the hands of the Odessa Permian Lady Panthers.

Permian, 23-6 overall and 11-1 in district play, clinched a share of the District 4-5A championship with Friday's win. The Lady Panthers will face Abilene High at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Snyder to determine playoff seedings.

The Permian-AHS winner will face District 3-5A runnerup Amarillo Tascosa, while the loser will battle 3-5A champ Plainview.

MHS at full strength for soccer tilt

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Center forward Steve Canon and center halfback Joe Dominguez showed just how valuable they are to the Midland High soccer team during Tuesday's District 3 battle with Odessa High.

They didn't play.

Consequently, the Bulldogs tied the winless Bronchos 0-0 despite outshooting their hosts 21-2.

Canon, the team's leading scorer with four goals, has been playing on the MHS basketball team and as such, has been unavailable for most Tuesday contests.

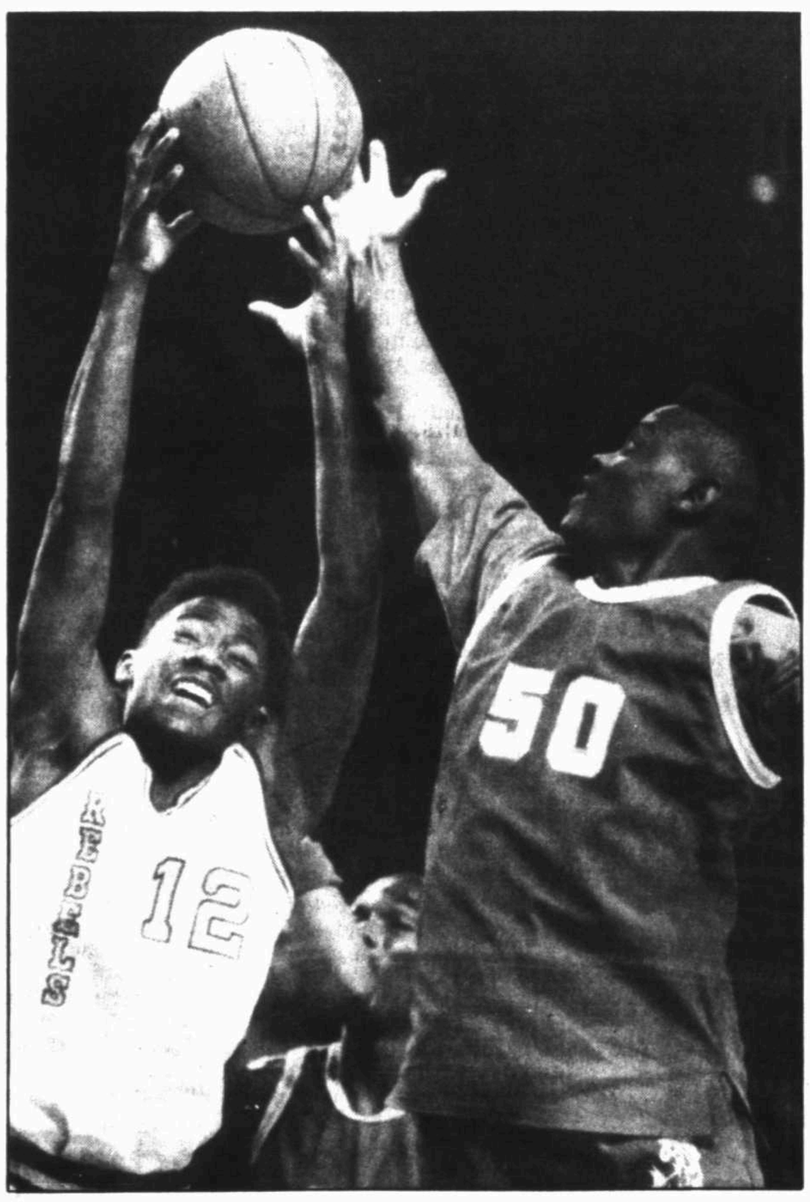

Dominguez, who is tied for second in team scoring with three goals, sat out Tuesday's match after picking up his third yellow card of the season in last Saturday's match with Abilene High.

But both players will play today — and their return comes not a moment too soon. The Bulldogs, 0-1-2 in district play, will try to pick up their first district win against loop-leading San Angelo in a 2 p.m. start at the MHS field on the corner of A and Tennessee Streets.

Elsewhere in the district today, Odessa High travels to Abilene Cooper and Abilene High visits Odessa Permian.

Midland Lee has the day off. The Rebels enjoy their open date in a solid second place just percentage points behind undefeated San Angelo. Only a tie with Midland High blemishes Lee's 2-0-1 district mark. Midland High is in fifth place.

Lattibeaudiere hits late game winner

■ Sophomore Martin Lattibeaudiere lifts Midland Lee out of the District 4-5A basketball basement with a three-second game winner.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee sophomore Martin Lattibeaudiere, with the maturity of a skilled senior, hit a jump shot from the top of the circle with three seconds left Friday night at Chaparral Center to hand his Rebels an 85-83 District 4-5A basketball victory over Odessa High.

It was one of those wins that should have been in the bag much earlier, but it took cold blood and no fear from Lattibeaudiere to find the path to victory.

"I was just thinking I had to make it," said Lattibeaudiere, who ended the game with 24 points. "The game had gotten too close and we never should have been in that situation in the first place. I just had to make that shot."

Lee had 10 seconds left on its last possession of the game. Keenan Henry tried to penetrate and looked as if he were going to take the last shot, but dished off to Lattibeaudiere in mid-air when he found Odessa High's Ira Young in his face.

"I was planning on taking the shot, but I saw Martin open and I figured I had time to dish off. Ten seconds is a lot of time and I had three seconds to spare," said Henry.

Lee led by as many as 15 points, 43-28 in the second period, but OHS chipped away at that lead all night until they forced Lee into a tie game twice and held the lead twice in the fourth period before the sophomore pulled the whole thing out of the fire.

"That's a perfect example of snatching victory out of the jaws of defeat," said Lee coach Jon House. "We tried every way in the world to lose it. But on the positive side, we also found a way to win it."

Clemens becomes richest yet

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Roger Clemens became the best-paid player in baseball on Friday with a $21.5 million, four-year contract extension that overshadowed the first arbitration decisions of the year.

The two-time Cy Young Award winner will get an average of $5,380,250 a season, shattering the previous record of $4.7 million, set by Oakland outfielder Jose Canseco last June.

Clemens, a 28-year-old right-hander, is to make $2.5 million in 1991 in the final season of a three-year, $7.5 million contract.

He will get $4.4 million in 1992, $4.5 million in 1993, $5 million in 1994 and $5.5 million in 1995. The Red Sox have an option for 1996 at $5.5 million with a $1.5 million buyout. Clemens also gets a $621,000 bonus for agreeing to the extension.

"We believe that Roger Clemens is the best player in baseball and deserves to be paid the highest salary in baseball," said Randy Hendricks, one of his agents. "That is now the case.

"He has commenced a distinguished career in Boston, and this contract is calculated to keep him in Boston for the duration of his career, although we hope we can do one or two more contracts at the end of this one."

Simpson, O'Meara on record-breaking pace

Associated Press

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. — Mark O'Meara hit one out of bounds.

Tim Simpson said he was playing at "only about 80 percent" effeciency.

Despite those problems, the two remained in a tie — and on a record-breaking pace — through three rounds of the five-day, 90-hole Bob Hope Classic.

"I definitely left four or five shots out there," Simpson said Friday after a 6-under-par 66 at Indian Wells, the shortest and easiest of the four desert courses used for the first four rounds of the tournament.

Despite a penalty shot on the par-5 13th at La Quinta, O'Meara also recorded a 66 and was tied with Simpson at 197, 17 strokes under par.

With two rounds to go, some record numbers are a distinct possibility, Simpson said.

"It wouldn't surprise me to see somebody shoot 30 under (par for 90 holes)," Simpson said.

The PGA Tour record for that distance is 27 under, shared by Lanny Wadkins and Craig Stadler in this tournament in 1985.

The weather has been ideal, with little wind and temperatures in the 80s. The forecast is for more of the same.

And the courses, Simpson said, are in magnificent condition.

"In my career, I don't think I've ever seen courses in such immaculate condition, he said."I definitely think 60 can be broken this week."

That's been accomplished only once in tour history, by Al Geiberger at Memphis in 1977.

Blaine McCallister made the best run at it this day — a 63 at La Quinta that left him two shots off the pace at 199.

"Hey, I'm shooting 63 and I'm 17 under par for three days I'm in third place and I'm wondering what's going on," McCallister said.

LEE: Williams scores 24 for Bronchos

(From 1B)

Junior Wayne Wilson had 20 points, despite being shutout in the third period when OHS made a serious run at Lee. Brian Massey had 10 points, but was saddled with foul trouble early.

Chap Center continues to be a nightmare for OHS. The Bronchos lost in double overtime to Midland High last week, and now this. And this one could hurt for the longest since this may have been the game to decide last place in the league race.

Both Lee and OHS entered the game with 2-7 league records, so the Rebels climbed out of the basement and sets its sights on Abilene Cooper for fifth with games left against Abilene High and San Angelo.

"We could have been in last place, but we're not now," Lattibeaudiere said.

Lee was deadly in the first half, hitting 17 of 30 shots from the field for a salty 57 percent. However, Lee connected on only five of 18 shots (28 percent) in the third period to lose control of the game.

Meanwhile, OHS climbed into the thick of the battle, hitting 19 of 25 free throws in the second half.

Jarvis Williams scored 24 points for the Bronchos, hitting 10 of 11 shots from the charity stripe. Guard Fred Givens had 23 points after a slow start of only two points in the first quarter. Young had 18 points with eight coming in the third period.

Lee travels to Abilene High Tuesday and ends its season Friday with a home game against league leading San Angelo.

In the junior varsity game, OHS took a 46-43 win over Lee without any players hitting in double figures. Lee got 11 points from David Wilson and 10 from Mike Gunn.

'DOGS: Plainview leads District 3-5A

(From 1C)

Rounding and Scott Allen tossed in eight apiece. John King and Mark Farias came off the bench for six points each.

The 'Dogs fell behind 6-3 at the outset, but then cut the margin to 10-7 about four minutes into the game. Then MHS went on a 13-3 binge to end the quarter, as McDonald put the the Bulldogs up for good with 2:49 to play in the first quarter.

From there, it was all downhill for Mojo. The Panthers, who posted a 28.6 field goal percentage (22-of-77), did make a run at MHS in the second quarter after trailing 20-10 at the end of the first. Three straight Mojo buckets cut the lead to 22-16 at the 5:56 mark, but the 'Dogs quickly stymied that effort and led 40-23 at half time.

The second half saw more of the same, with Permian coming out ahead in only one key statistical category. The Panthers turned the ball over two fewer times than the Bulldogs, and still ended the game with 21 miscues.

In junior varsity play, MHS claimed a 76-66 win with Mike Melzer and Phillip Koss scoring 20 points each. Rob Foster added 10. In the sophomore game, the 'Dogs won 74-49 with Andre Gill scoring 17, Marcus Anderson 13 and Billy Merit 10.

NOTES: Koss played in both varsity and JV games Friday. Koss, who suited up with the varsity but did not play Tuesday, scored 10 straight points to open the third quarter as MHS turned a 33-30 lead into a comfortable cushion. ... In District 3-5A, where the 4-5A playoff representatives will find their bi-district opponents, Plainview is atop the standings with an 8-2 league record and two games remaining. Lubbock Monterey is 8-3 with one game left, and Amarillo Tascosa is 7-3 with two games to go.

GIRLS: Lady Dawgs dominate in spots

(From 1B)

Midland High, 15-14 and 5-7, finished in sole possession of fifth place on the heels of back-to-back last place finishes in the final two years of former coach Jane Young's long tenure.

Permian needed only three seconds to establish superiority in Friday's game. That's how long it took for Mojo to win the tip, make four passes and set Anita Wright up for a layup.

While the Lady Dawgs held Wright to six points, the Mojo front line of Kaelie Butler, LaShon Powell and Charletta Washington combined for 42 points on 17-for-26 field goal accuracy.

Washington and Butler combined for 11 of Permian's 17 first quarter points, Powell got Mojo moving again with seven third quarter points — and the 6-3 Butler helped turn the game into a rout with 12 points in the fourth quarter.

After going zero-for-five from the floor and spotting Permian a 17-5 lead in the first quarter, MHS caught fire after Permian coach Terri King made a five-for-five switch to open the second quarter.

The Lady Dawgs outscored the visitors 17-9 in the second eight minutes, and even had the chance to take the lead a couple of times late in the period. But that's not what struck Raughton, who also substituted freely.

"We outplayed their juniors in the second quarter," Raughton said. "She's going to have to play them next year."

Leading scorers Sally Gibson, Ashley Chase and Donna Eaden return next season for Midland High, though Eaden and fellow starter Stephanie Spencer sat out Friday's game after opting to begin track workouts in midweek. Spencer is also a junior. And, either Jennifer Pirkle or Charlotte Scharbauer appear poised to replace lone senior Angie Johnson in next year's backcourt.

Chase and Gibson took charge in Friday's second quarter, scoring seven and five points, respectively.

Only the post play of junior L'Tanya Williams kept Permian from falling behind. Williams scored eight of the Panthers' nine points.

A swarming MHS defense forced Permian into six second-quarter turnovers and the Lady Dawgs were consequently able to put together a 10-0 spurt to pull within two at 18-16 with 4:15 left in the half.

With 3:43 left, Williams broke the spell with a short jumper despite being fouled by MHS' Jackie Perez. But she missed the resulting free throw.

With 1:24 left, Chase made both ends of a one-and-one opportunity to put the Lady Dawgs within one at 22-21. After another Permian turnover, MHS had a chance to pull ahead, but Chase missed a front end with 1:16 left.

MHS got yet another turnover off their half-court defense, but Johnson missed a breakaway layup with about a minute left, and Williams made two baskets in the last 45 seconds of the half to put Mojo up by five.

The Lady Dawgs stayed close for the first few minutes of the third quarter, even with Permian's starters back in the game. But Powell and guard Brandi Craig led an 11-3 Mojo spurt in the last 4½ minutes of the period to give the visitors some breathing room.

Still, Raughton was pleased with how his girls hung tough.

"I'm not disappointed in our effort," Raughton said. "I'm disappointed that we got beat, but Permian has a great team."

King didn't think her team was too great on Friday.

"I did not like this game," she said. "We lacked intensity, and because of that we fouled too much.

"I bet Sally Gibson outrebounded our entire team."

King admits that the Lady Panthers will have to bring it up a notch against Abilene High.

SOCCER: Bobcats picked as the preseason favorites

(From 1B)

San Angelo was the consensus pre-season favorite to win the district title, but Coach Pete King's Bobcats have shown vulnerability against district foes. Midland High played the 'Cats to within one goal, and MHS coach Tom Esikhati said woe will be upon the Bobcat who takes today's match lightly after Tuesday's debacle in Odessa.

"We have a little surprise for them if they think they can beat us easily," Esikhati said.

The MHS mentor said the main problam against OHS was poor shooting.

"We should have won, but our shooting was not accurate," Esikhati said. "We outshot them in regulation, but if we don't score, it doesn't mean anything."

Longhorns rally to down Miami

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Miami substitute rightfielder Greg Coleman misplayed Dean Haskins' short fly into a two-run triple in the eighth inning Friday, and eighth-ranked Texas rallied for a 6-2 victory over the No. 3 Hurricanes.

Chris Cox (1-0) was the winner in two innings of relief for starter Rodney Pedraza as the Longhorns improved to 5-0 in front of 6,243 fans at Disch-Falk Field. Miami fell to 3-1.

The Longhorns broke a 2-2 tie in the eighth when Haskins hit a short fly to right following a walk to Brooks Kieschnick and a single by Clay King. Coleman, an infielder pressed into outfield duty by injuries and academic casualties, never saw the ball and Haskins ended up on third with two RBIs.

Roger Luce then hit his first homer to make it 6-2.

Miami went up 1-0 in the second when Coleman singled and later scored on a wild pitch. Charles Johnson's RBI double in the fifth made it 2-0.

Texas tied the game on a wild pitch and sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Suger Ray sees Norris as a gauge

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Most boxing fans think Terry Norris will play the victim's role against Sugar Ray Leonard tonight at Madison Square Garden.

The 23-year-old Norris likes the stage. It's the script he plans to change.

Norris was at home in Campo, Calif., when he got a call from manager Joe Sayatovich, who told him he might have a chance of fighting Leonard.

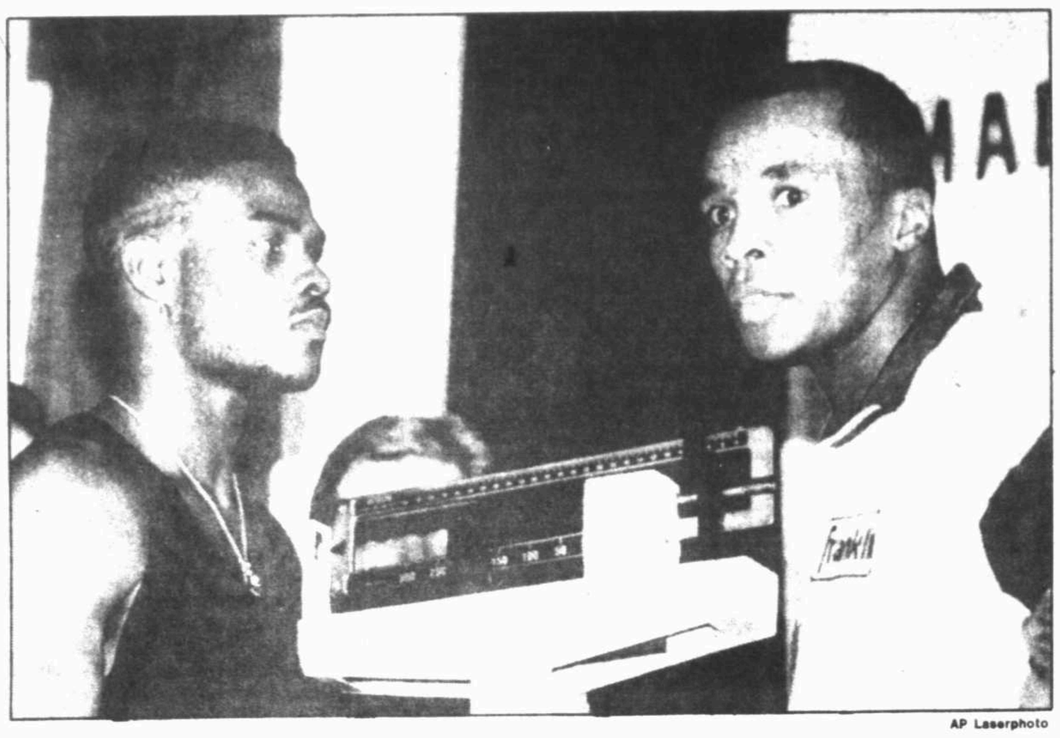

"I thought it wouldn't happen," said Norris, who will be defending the World Boxing Council super welterweight title in the scheduled 12-round match. "I'm surprised Leonard is taking me — the best super welterweight out there.

"He needed someone who was going to help him prove himself. Beating me would prove he's not losing anything. It's a test. He just took the wrong test."

Leonard, who will be 35 on May 17, sees Norris as a measuring stick to gauge where he is as a fighter at this stage of his career. The man who won world titles in five weight classes has looked sharp and relaxed in training.

His sparring sessions over the past two weeks would seem to indicate that Leonard is going to try to get Norris early.

"I don't expect it to last too long if Ray stands in there," Norris said. With my power, I'll knock him out. Mugabi found out."

"When people say, 'Who the hell is Terry Norris,' I say that he beat John 'The Beast' Mugabi," said Leonard, who was made a 12-5 favorite by Las Vegas bookies.

Norris won a share of the 154-pound championship by knocking out Mugabi in the first round last March 31 at Tampa, Fla. He had made one defense, scoring a 12-round decision over Rene Jacquot July 13 in France.

Norris has a 26-3-0 record, with 15 knockouts. Leonard's mark is 36-1-1, with 25 knockouts.

Norris tried to win the World Boxing Association 154-pound title July 30, 1989, at Atlantic City, N.J., but was knocked out in the second round by Julian Jackson, who is considered to be one of the hardest punchers from 140 to 160 pounds in the world.

"I got a little too cocky," Norris said. "He caught me with a good shot. It was a lesson. I rebounded and I'm a champion."

Norris had battered Jackson in the first round.

"He was doing well in the second round," Sayatovich said. "Then he went to the ropes, put his hands down, made some fancy moves and got nailed. He got hit with a right hand and three more shots."

Norris got up at the count of five, but Sayatovich stopped the fight.

Leonard weighed 154 pounds at Friday's weigh-in, while Norris tipped the scales at 152½.

A victory would make Leonard a world 154-pound champion for the second time. He stopped Ayub Kalule in the ninth round for the WBA title June 25, 1981.

step in the vast escalation of salaries over the past 16 months. Minnesota outfielder Kirby Puckett became the first $3 million-a-year player on Nov. 22, 1989, and Clemens became the 34th to reach that level.

Nolan Ryan got the first $1 million-a-year contract in November 1979 and George Foster became the first $2 million player in February 1982.

Meanwhile, Toronto second baseman Roberto Alomar and Montreal outfielder Mike Aldrete were salary arbitration winners Friday, but San Diego catcher Benito Santiago failed his in attempt to set the record.

Santiago, a two-time National League All-Star, was given San Diego's offer of $1.65 million by arbitrator Rols Valtin rather than his request for $2.5 million.

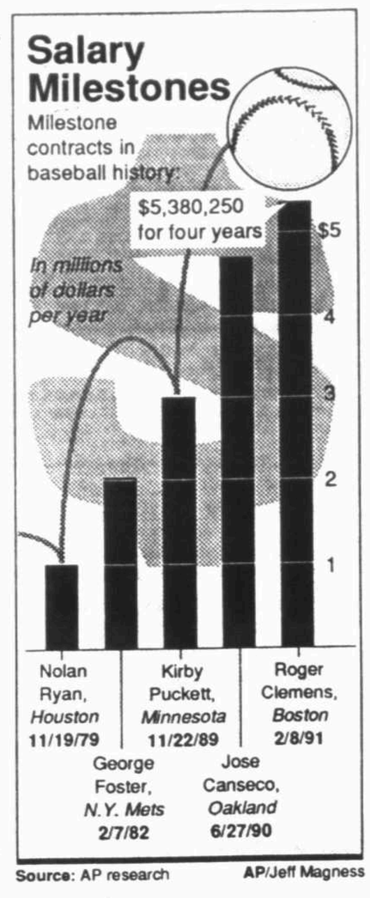

Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees got the top arbitration salary ever, $1,975,000 in 1987.

Alomar, traded by San Diego to Toronto in the Fred McGriff-Joe Carter deal, was awarded $1.25 million by arbitrator William Rentfro rather than the Blue Jays' offer of $825,000.

Aldrete was awarded $510,000 by arbitrator John Caraway instead of Montreal's offer of $350,000.

Four players in arbitration settled, reducing the remaining number to 52.

Right-hander Jeff Parrett and Atlanta agreed to $855,000, a $180,000 raise, and left-hander Tom Glavine and the Braves agreed to $697,500, a $385,000 raise.

PGA: scores plummet on immaculate courses

"I'll tell you, with this weather, with these courses, you better shoot the lights out or you're gonna get run over," he said.

Corey Pavin, second last week in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, and Fred Couples were another stroke back at 200, 16 under par. Pavin shot 66 at Bermuda Dunes and Couples had a 64 at the Arnold Palmer course at PGA West.

It was another two strokes back to rookie Jim McGovern and Davis Love III at 202. McGovern shot 69 at La Quinta and Love had a 67 at Indian Wells.

They will complete a rotation over all four courses today before the field is cut for the final round Sunday at Indian Wells.

Simpson and Love will play their fourth rounds at the Palmer course, O'Meara, McCallister and McGovern at Bermuda Dunes, Pavin at Indian Wells and Couples at LaQuinta.

Spurs' Robinson focused once again

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Nearly four weeks into the Persian Gulf War, U.S. Naval Academy graduate David Robinson is back in the business of being an NBA All-Star.

"At first, I was like most people — I would just sit, wait and watch," said Robinson, the starting center for the Western Conference in Sunday's All-Star game. "I was out of rhythm for three or four games, but now I'm focused on basketball again."

Robinson is on the Navy's "selective reserve" list, which means he is subject to callup to active duty, but only if an officer with his skills is needed.

As a 7-foot-1 civil engineer, Robinson's chances of having to leave the San Antonio Spurs are slim, although he still will have reserve duty in the offseason.

"When the war started, I was deeply affected," he said Friday. "Everything else seemed so insignificant.

"Now that the news is coming at a slower pace than before, I've gotten focused again on my career. I've got to keep a professional attitude."

Robinson has been the best center in the NBA this season.

Six Orangemen suspended, reinstated within hours

Associated Press

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Syracuse basketball star Billy Owens and six teammates who were suspended by the school on Friday were reinstated a few hours later by the NCAA in a matter that was more procedural than punitive.

The school suspended the players based upon findings made during a university investigation into possible NCAA rules violations within the basketball program. The possible violations weren't spelled out by Syracuse spokesman Robert Hill, who announced the suspensions and, later Friday, the reinstatements.

NCAA spokesman Jim Marchiony said that such eligibility matters are routine, and that the Syracuse case was unique only because it became public so soon.

Marchiony said that Syracuse followed NCAA rules in making the suspensions and then appealing to the NCAA's eligibility staff for reinstatement, and "that action warranted immediate restoration of the players' eligibility."

The eligibility staff is separate from the infractions committee, a five-member group that hears evidence on possible violations and renders decisions on sanctions.

Declared ineligible in addition to Owens were senior center LeRon Ellis, junior forward Dave Johnson, sophomore guards Michael Edwards and Mike Hopkins, sophomore forward Dave Siock and senior walk-on Chandu Carey.

Owens, Johnson, Ellis and Edwards are starters. Owens is averaging 23 points and 11 rebounds a game, Johnson 20 points a game and Ellis 11 points and 7.7 rebounds.

The suspended players were left behind when the Syracuse team left Friday for South Bend, Ind., and a Saturday game against Notre Dame. Upon their reinstatement, they boarded a plane to rejoin the team.

"It was a very troublesome situation, a very nervous situation for all of us," Hill said. "We're glad this part of it is over and that the team is able to go. We expect them to play with vigor."

Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim was not immediately available for comment. Only three scholarship players made the trip to South Bend with Boeheim. They were freshman guards Adrian Autry, the lone starter, and Scott McCorkle, and sophomore center Conrad McRae. Also along were walk-ons Brad Small, Vinnie Cohen and Todd Barlok, who have a combined 30 minutes and 14 points.

The school began its probe after the Syracuse Post-Standard published a series of articles in December, alleging that Syracuse might have broken several NCAA rules, such as allowing players to receive merchandise, cut-rate use of cars and even cash gifts from boosters.

Hill said the investigation turned up some things in the past week, but he said only that "the infractions vary from player to player."

The Syracuse newspaper had reported that a network of booster families supported basketball players in Syracuse.

On Wednesday, Hill said that the university's investigation would include a look into allegations that Johnson and Hopkins lived at the home of basketball booster Joseph Giannuzzi.

"The issue of the possibility of NCAA violations concerning those basketball players and that family is under investigation," Hill said. "We need to know more about that."

Johnson had told the newspaper in December that he was friends with the Giannuzzis but never lived in their house.

Berthe falls in second round

Staff Report

MINNEAPOLIS — Midland College women's tennis player Myriam Berthe lost Friday in second round action at the Rolex ITCA Collegiate Indoor Championships.

Berthe lost in three sets to the tournament's No. 3 seed, Shannan McCarthy, of the University of Georgia. Berthe won the first set in a tie-breaker, 7-6, and lost the last two sets 2-6, 1-6.

"I just lost my concentration and didn't play as well after the first set," Berthe said.

Currently ranked No. 1 among junior college women, Berthe on Thursday became the first junior college player to win a match in this tournament over a Division I opponent. The tournament featured 31 Division I players.

Berthe won the Rolex Junior College and Small College Indoor titles last fall to earn her way to the Indoor Champsionships.

Berthe is listed as the top-seeded player in women's singles competition for the ITCA National Junior College Indoor tournament, which begins Thursday, Feb. 14, at The Midlander.

The four-day event, co-sponsored by Midland College, includes 32-player draws in men's and women's singles and 16-team draws in men's and women's doubles.

Daniel bursts into lead at LPGA Phar-Mor Classic

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Beth Daniel who earlier said she'd be shocked to be in contention this week, fired a 5-under-par 67 Friday for the first-round lead in the $500,000 LPGA Phar-Mor Classic.

Daniel, the 1990 Player of the Year, led by one stroke after carding bridies on three of her first four holes in her first tor start this season.

Tied for second at 68 on the 6,286-yard East course at Inverrary Country Club are Colleen Walker and Japan's Hiromi Kobayashi, the 1990 Rookie of the Year on the American tour.

Three players were at 69 and five more, including former U.S. Women's Open champion Sandra Palmer, were at 70.

The 34-year-old Daniel set an LPGA earnings record last season, her 12th on tour, with $863,578. She also claimed the Vare Trophy for the low scoring average of 70.54, and won seven tournaments.

'I'm very, very pleased, and a little surprised with the way I hit the ball (Friday)," Daniel said. 'I thought I would be rusty, and you're usually a little nervous in your first tournament."

Her only bogey was at the par-5 eighth when she blocked her 3-wood second shot behind a tree, pitched back into the fairway and subsequently two-putted from 20 feet.

She made three more birdies on the back nine.

Three share Suncoast Classic lead

Senior Golf

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Bob Charles, Frank Beard and Bob Brue each shot 4-under-par 68s on Friday to share the first-round lead in the $450,000 Suncoast Classic senior golf tournament.

Orville Moody, Bobby Nichols and Walt Zembriski shot 69s on the 6,631-yard Tampa Palms Golf and Country Club course, and nine others were in at 70.

Most of the low scores were posted in the morning, before afternoon winds of 15-20 mph sent scores soaring. Charles, who won the tournament in 1989, was an exception, playing late in the day but managing four birdies without a bogey.

"I made some bad swings late in the day when the winds came up, but for the most part I got away with them," Charles said. "It was a good putting round."

Beard, who had five birdies and one bogey, said that "conditions were difficult late in the round. When the wind came up, it was a definite factor. But I did what I had to do — drive entirely with my 3-wood and keep the ball on the golf course."

Brue posted his score early in the day, with five birdies against a lone bogey. He opened the round with consecutive birdies, sinking a 12-foot putt on No. 1 and a 15-footer on No. 2.

He holed a bunker shot for birdie at 14 and closed his round with a 15-foot birdie putt at 18.

"The course is in great condition, especially the greens, and it makes that kind of putting round possible," Brue said.

Two strokes off the lead at 70 are defending champion Mike Hill, 1988 winner Dale Douglass, Charlie Owens, Don January, Lloyd Moody, Simon Hobday, George Lanning, Terry Dill and Lee Trevino.

Don January, 61, one of the oldest players in the field of 78, led for most of the afternoon, standing at 5-under through 16 holes.

Razorbacks unveil 94-foot gameplan

Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Coach Nolan Richardson says his Arkansas Razorbacks can't afford to get into a half-court game with the Runnin' Rebels of UNLV.

No. 1 UNLV (19-0) will be at Barnhill Arena on Sunday to take on No. 2 Arkansas (23-1) in a national TV game (CBS).

"They are one of the finest basketball teams I've seen in a long time," Richardson said Friday. "They have no weaknesses in their five spots. It will be very difficult for us to try and play a half-court basketball game with them. They are just too strong inside and outside.

"That doesn't, however, change the way we think about our basketball team and what we'll do. We will play a 94-foot game and do the best job that we can defensively," Richardson said.

Stopping the second and third shots will be a major factor for the Razorbacks, Richardson said.

"The key as always is to play hard," Richardson said. "Our kids have that trademark. We can't afford to let them have any second shots.

"Another key, of course, is to keep Oliver (Miller) out of foul trouble. It's easy to see from the (Houston) game that when Miller's not in the game our rebounding and defense suffer."

The Razorbacks beat Houston 81-74 Thursday night, ending the Cougars' 18-game home winning streak.

"He allows us to gamble," Richardson said of Miller. "He doesn't just block shots, he gives us a chance to score off of his blocked shots."

Richardson said Todd Day, who scored 30 points against Houston, needs to play well.

"He usually plays at the same level the crowd is at," Richardson said. "Lee (Mayberry) has got to take more shots. We are going to shoot some threes. If we hit the threes, it will open up the inside.

"Vegas is tough inside defensively. They put pressure on every shooter. We have to do a good job of attacking and getting in the position to where they don't control us with their defense."

Taking care of the ball will be a priority, he said, and Arkansas will have an advantage with two point guards — Mayberry and Arlyn Bowers.

"We've got two point guards on the floor now. We might be the only team in the country with two point guards.

"We've got to take care of the ball. If we don't we'll get blown away by Vegas. I don't want to try and match up with them. That's a chess match. I don't want a chess match. I want a street fight."

Bears chairman hospitalized for tests

CHICAGO (AP) — Edward McCaskey, chairman of the Chicago Bears, says he will be back at work Monday after being hospitalized for tests.

McCaskey has a history of heart problems and doctors originally feared he had suffered a heart attack. But McCaskey said doctors had told him he was bleeding from the small intestine.

Schoolboy's death linked to an irregular heartbeat

DALLAS (AP) — A schoolboy basketball player who collapsed during a game died after his heartbeat became irregular, according to pathologists.

The death ruling came Thursday from the Dallas County Medical Examiner's Office. A spokesman said Quincy also had an abnormally enlarged heart.

Nathaniel Quincy, a Red Oak senior forward, died Jan. 11 during a game at Cedar Hill, a South Dallas suburb.

Quincy, who had missed a free throw midway through the game's second quarter, grabbed his head and collapsed in front of the Cedar Hill bench after running downcourt to play defense.

Doctors said Quincy's condition was similar to that of Hank Gathers, a Loyola Marymount star who collapsed while playing basketball and died in March 1990.

Injury fails to keep NFL hopeful from combine

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Joel Dickson's route to the NFL may be easier than his route to the NFL scouting combine.

First, the California defensive tackle sat in a plane at Oakland for four hours while the airport was socked in by fog. When he finally arrived in Dallas, his connecting flight was long gone. So next he was rerouted to Atlanta.

Of course when he got to Indianapolis, his ride to the hotel was gone, too.

"I guess I was moving so slow on crutches that they just forgot about me," he said.

Dickson is on crutches because he partially tore his right Achilles tendon when an opposing player fell on the back of his leg in the Hula Bowl.

"It's kind of frustrating, but football is a game where these things happen," he said. "I looked at the clock and saw there were 42 seconds left and I thought, 'I just can't be hurt now.'

"I simply can't put pressure on the foot. Right now, I should be fine in early April, but if I pushed myself here and aggravated my injury it could be a year or 18 months before I was ready to play football again."

The injury has been the big question in talks with scouts.

"The important thing for me now is to convince the scouts that I'll be ready to play next season," Dickson said. "I came here prepared for the questions. Basically, I'm here letting my mouth perform so that I can get a later chance for my body to perform.

"I was looking forward to competing against the best in the nation here, going one-on-one and to be judged by what I can do. Now, I just have to wait."

The 6-foot, 3-inch, 265-pounder from Vallejo, Calif., has impressive quickness and strength. He bench presses nearly 400 pounds when he's healthy and squats 600.

But he had a college career slowed by injuries. The 1988 season was cut short by a random shooting outside a dance hall and complications from the ensuing surgery. In 1989, injured an ankle on the season's second play from scrimmage and was redshirted.

Dickson was healthy in 1990 as California went 7-4-1, including a 17-15 victory over Wyoming in the Copper Bowl. He had 10 tackles behind the line of scrimmage, along with two fumble recoveries, three pass deflections and his first collegiate pass interception. He also had 22 unassisted tackles despite facing offenses that consistently ran away from him.

Top 4A girls cage team reprimanded

AUSTIN (AP) — Calallen, ranked No. 1 in Class 4A girls' basketball, was placed on probation for one year for allegedly violating rules on how much a team is allowed to practice during a school day.

The high school also was publicly reprimanded by the University Interscholastic League. Coach Leta Andrews was placed on probation for a year and publicly reprimanded, but said she was relieved that the penalty was not greater.

"It could have been so much worse. I can handle a public reprimand, because I can live with that," she said.

Calallen, 32-0 and the defending 4A champion, faced possible disqualification from the playoffs.

The UIL State Executive Committee rulings will allow Calallen to advance past district. Its next game is Monday in bi-district against Carrizo Springs.

Calallen players used a morning tutorial session, primarily designed for study, to practice shooting free throws, according to testimony presented to the UIL staff. The staff reported to the executive committee.

The report, however, quoted five varsity players as saying Mrs. Andrews did not attend the sessions, require practice, or prescribe basketball activities during the period. The girls wore their regular school clothes.

Under state guidelines, only one 60-minute period is allowed for athletics during the school day. Calallen usually holds its one-hour athletic period in the afternoon and regular practice sessions begin after school.

The accusations against Calallen were brought to the UIL's attention in an anonymous letter signed, "An honest citizen," according to the UIL staff.

School officials, including Mrs. Andrews, said no UIL rule had been knowingly or intentionally violated, but they added that the questioned practice had been stopped.

"I'm glad we don't have to go back and tell those girls they can't defend their state championship," said Superintendent Fred Zachery.

He said school officials were so happy that "we can fly home now without a plane."

The Calallen girl's team has not lost a district game in 10 years, and has made 13 appearances at the state tournament, including five in a row.

With this in mind, Mrs. Andrews said, "See you in three weeks."

In other action, the executive committee denied an appeal by Gustine, whose girls' basketball team was disqualified for district honors by the District 32-A committee after hearing allegations that Coach Linda Buffe had been assisted in coaching by her husband, Leonard Buffe.

UIL basketball tourney sold out

AUSTIN (AP) — Ticket sales to the Texas high school basketball tournament reflect how popular the sport has become in what for decades has been known as a football state.

For this year's tournament, held March 7-9 in Austin, the public must wait until tournament teams return unsold tickets to get a chance at purchasing tickets.

No tournament tickets for all nine sessions remain, the University Interscholastic League said, and only single session tickets not purchased by the participating schools will be sold, beginning March 7.

"We have said for several years now that this event was fast becoming a sellout, and for all practical purposes it has," said UIL director Bailey Marshall. "It is a problem because we wish everyone who wanted to come to Austin could get a ticket, but that is no longer possible.

"It is a headache, but a nice one."

Confessions: Fri. 5-5:45 p.m., Sat. 3:30 to 5 p.m. & 6:30 p.m. 'til finished

The date was Good Friday, April 14, 1865. A hush fell over the audience as the curtain rose upon "Our American Cousin" at the Ford Theater in Washington D.C.

From his balcony box, President Abraham Lincoln was viewing the play when suddenly the unmistakable "crack" of a pistol pierced the atmosphere! Lincoln slumped into unconsciousness, felled by the bullet of John Wilkes Booth, a southern sympathizer in the Civil War.

Abraham Lincoln was tall and thin in stature, with sharp features in contrast to his gentle heart and an honest nature . . ."with malice toward none, with charity for all."

Having struggled from his humble birth in a log cabin to become a self-educated lawyer, and ultimately the sixteenth President of the United States, Lincoln believed in "government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

The rising sun, on the morning of April 15, 1865, found Lincoln stilled forever, claimed in the darkness by death. Yet, his impact upon our nation would not be destroyed. Though the life of Abraham Lincoln had ended, a new era of freedom had begun.

Food was sent immediately and for six weeks volunteers distributed 900 tons to the poorest families in Managua, the capitol city, feeding about 220,0000 people.

ADRA is now concentrating on the medical phase of the project and has trained 150 community health workers who are providing primary health care in the provinces of Somoto, Ocotal and Esteli, hard-to-reach mountain provinces near the Honduran border where some of the worst fighting occurred.

ADRA is underwritten in part by Midland's Adventist Church. Those interested in knowing more about this organization may call the Midland church.

Minister receives reward

Staff Report

Daniel Brewer received the Perkins Distinguished Alumnus Award during a special awards presentation earlier this month at Southern Methodist University, Dallas.

Brewer, the president of the United Methodist-related Gbarnga School of Theology in Liberia, narrowly escaped his war-torn homeland and was reunited, along with his two daughters who had remained with him, in late December with wife and son in Texas, ending a nine-month ordeal as a refugee in his own country. His family was helped in this country by several United Methodist congregations including St. Luke's United Methodist Church in Midland.

"St. Luke's became a family to my family: a support group, undergirding me, helping me grow and develop, strengthening me in my ministry, and I've always been grateful," Brewer said.

"But during this time of real distress and turmoil, when my wife was experiencing such grief, and the family was separated without the certainly of meeting together, St. Luke's rallied around her and gave her the support and prayer, counseling, words or encouragement and comfort.

"The church provided even financial support, especially with our hosuing, provided a home away from home.

"Now, with us being displaced, away from home, we're so overwhelmed with joy and gratitude, we want the whole world to know how grateful we are to St. Luke's.

"We recal the words of Jesus: 'Insofar as you've done it to the least of these — your brothers and sisters — you've done it to me...'

"We pray that God will bless the members of St. Luke's, who are actually living out the demands of the gospel."

Elder James E. Faust, a member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, presided over the semi-annual conference of the Odessa Texas Stake held in Midland and Odessa this past weekend.

Faust

Faust came on assignment from Salt Lake City to call a new presidency for the stqake consisting of 2,500 members. He was joined in this endeavor by Rulon G. Craben of Utah, a member of the Second Quorum of Seventy, and Wilford Cardon, regional representative, who lives in Mesa, Ariz.

"As a special witness, Elder Faust bore his testimony that Christ is the Son of the Living God and that Joseph Smith and Brigham Young were true prophets of God and the the Book of Mormon, another testament of Jesus Christ, is true," said a release from the church.

Prior to his calling as a general Authority of the church in 1972, Faust practiced law in Salt Lake, was a member of the Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights and Racial Unrest, served in the Utah Legislature and was in the U.S. Air Force during World War II. He is married with five children.

In other news from the church, the western region of the Fort Worth Mission of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints has started airing 30-minute radio programs Sundays at 8:30 a.m. on KFYO 790 A.M. The programs will cover a variety of topics explaining the beliefs of Latter-Day Saints. The first broadcast is "Together Forever."

The public is invited to both services.

First Presbyterian plans choir workshop

Staff Report

A Youth/Adult Choir Workshop is slated for 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. today at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave. The event concludes with a Festival Concert at 3 p.m.

The event is sponsored by the Midland Association of Churches and the West Texas/Permian Basin Chapter of Chorister's Guild. The youth portion will be directed by John Yarrington, director of music and arts at Pulaswki Heights United Methodist Church, Little rock, Ark.

"Dr. Yarrington is a sought after clinician throughout the entire country and has been in the Permian Basin on many occasions working with local church adult and youth choirs," said a release from the local Choristers Guild.

He has served on the board of directors for Choristers Guild International and is the past president of the Fellowship of United Methodist Musicians and Others Related to the Arts. Yarrington recently has written and published the book, "Building the Youth Choir."

Debby Vester, music assistant at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, will serve as the accompanist for the choir.

The adult day of rehearsing and performing will be directed by several local directors of music including Jane Debenport, Trinity Presbyterian; Kathleen Attebury, First United Methodist Church, Odessa; Ty Morris, Crestview Baptist; Brad Kisner, First UMC; Lester Ackerman, First Presbyterian; Bert W. Bostic, St. Luke's UMC; and Gil Oxidine, First UMC, Big Spring. Accompanists for the choir will include Darryl Knapp, Steve Spain, Debby Vester, Carol Hall, Van Hayes and Michael Mitchell.

The Festival Program, which is open to the public, will include the music of Franz Joseph Haydn, Mozart, Jane Marshall, Melody Green, Tom Fettke, John Rutter, Carig Courtney, David Stanley York, Loonis McGlohen, Tom Mitchell, Laura Manzo, Karen Lafferty, Joyce Eilers and Allen Pote.

Publisher offers new books for Baptists

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — A new publishing house will begin offering alternative reading materials for moderate Baptists, partly because a book written by a Texas professor was shredded.

Smyth & Helwys Publishing Inc., is named in honor of two early Baptist leaders, John Smyth and Thomas Helwys, advocates of religious liberty.

The company will offer supplemental and alternative materials for Baptists concerned about the direction of the Baptist's conservative publisher, Convention Press and Broadman.

The Rev. Ronald D. Jackson, pastor of Tabernacle Baptist Church in Vidalia, Ga., and managing editor of the new publishing house, said plans have been in the talking stages for several years.

He said the firing of the editors of the Baptist Press, the Southern Baptist denominational news service, prompted the business to begin offering alternative materials.

Jackson said a secondary reason was the shredding in Fort Worth of a book about the board that trustees felt did not treat conservatives' political activities fairly, according to the Associated Baptist Press.

The first offering by Smith & Helwys will be "Studies in Acts" by T.C. Smith, professor at Furman. The book will be part of a series on Kerygma and the Church.

Jackson said a second volume is planned for the spring of 1991, "Interpreting Isaiah for Preaching and Teaching."

"To us there is a strong need for publishing for Baptists who appreciate scholarship and who appreciate approaching the Scriptures with integrity," Jackson said.

The first reading has been ordered and Jackson said the company is waiting for it to arrive anytime.

Women of Muslim family confined to their homes

By Kathy Gannon

HALA, Pakistan (AP) — The untended graves of 70 women who were shrouded in life and are hidden in death lie behind a weather-beaten gate that is locked and bolted.

They belong to the Makhdooms, a religious Muslim family whose authority is unchallenged in this dusty town of southern Sind province, where feudal landlords reign supreme.

Makhdoom men are revered, believed to be descendents of the prophet Mohammed. The women are confined to their homes, built of dried mud and brick and enclosed by walls that are 20 feet high and topped with jagged glass.

Most feudal families in Pakistan place restrictions on their women, but the most stringent are imposed by those with religious standing, like the Makhdooms.

Down the generations, little has changed for Makhdoom women.

They lead a cloistered existence from birth and will see no male except their father and brothers. The women of the current generation cannot expect to marry because there are no male first cousins, nor will they leave their homes except at death.

Even for burial, they are wrapped in voluminous shawls and carried to their graves after midnight so no prying eyes will see.

Many Pakistani marriages are between cousins. For the Makhdooms, a marriage must be between first cousins.

Tradition and religion often are cited as reasons for the unyielding treatment of women in Pakistan's powerful feudal families. Land is another.

"It's just the land," a follower of the Makhdooms said, on condition of anonymity. "They don't want to have to give away any land when they marry off a sister."

Makhdoom Rafique uz-Zamman, 37, said his five sisters — and perhaps his eldest brother's three daughters — would be the last women in the family to live cloistered lives.

"It's oppressive," he said. "As far as I'm concerned, I'm going to marry my daughters."

Time has passed the sisters by, he said, and "it's their bad luck."

The youngest sister is in her early 30s, the eldest in her late 40s. Women friends say the Makhdoom women are strikingly beautiful, with shimmering, waist-long hair.

A friend who gave her name only as Aysha said conversations with the sisters are monitored and such thought-provoking topics as politics are forbidden for fear they will be incited to demand freedom.

"We are not allowed to talk about anything stimulating and we are only allowed two hours at the most with them," said Aysha, a medical student whose father frequently rebukes her for being outspoken.

Except for freedom, the Makhdoom brothers say their sisters have nearly everything a woman could want.

"They have ... television, video casette recorders, radio; they can even cook," said another brother, Khaleeq uz-Zaman.

There are said to be at least 2,000 women in Sind whose lives are seriously restricted by feudal rules.

Some may eventually marry, but even then will leave their homes only rarely, covered from head to toe by billowing, tent-like veils.

"This is the most difficult tradition to change," said Sayed Nasir Shah, an 80-year-old religious leader also believed to be a direct descendant of the prophet. "The world is going so fast. We are still so backward."

"My two younger brothers argue with me," he said. "They have girls that are still unmarried and not allowed out of the house. When the airplanes would fly overhead, the women would run inside so the passengers couldn't see them." Five years ago, Shah broke with tradition and took his children and grandchildren to Karachi, a bustling port 150 miles to the south.

"Now everyone wants some freedom and we're giving them some, slowly, slowly," he said.

Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi a former prime minister who owns about 25,000 acres in Sind, has educated his daughters and they have married outside the family, but within their social class.

Jatoi's associates consider such liberalism a political liability.

"Don't say Jatoi educates his daughters," a spokesman said, on condition his name not be used. "He'll lose votes."

Teachers cannot wear religious garb

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Principals of the city's public schools have been told they can fire teachers who come to work wearing Christian crosses, Muslim head scarves, Jewish yarmulkes or other religious garb.

A federal appeals court last year upheld the Philadelphia School District's decision to prohibit a Muslim teacher from wearing a head scarf to school.

The district said its aim was to preserve "an atmosphere of religious neutrality," and last month sent a memo telling principals they could take action against teachers who wear religious garb.

This was defined as "any garment, headwear or accessory which is identifiable as religious in nature."

Some teachers were angered by the policy, which they say violates their First Amendment rights.

Virginia Stewart, a sixth-grade teacher at Strawberry Mansion Elementary who wears a cross, said she does not promote her religion or try to persuade students to become Christians.

"Religions are part of our culture, and I can't believe there's anything wrong with children knowing that religious people exist and that a few of them might even be teachers," she said.

Deputy Superintendent Albert Glassman said principals were told to warn a teacher before taking disciplinary act n. Under the law, teachers could be suspended without pay for up to one year after one violation and fired after a second violation.

Principals are handling the district's memo in various ways. Some are ignoring it and others are enforcing it to the letter.

Mayors assail takeover plan

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The nation's mayors Friday denounced President Bush's proposal to give states control over $15 billion worth of federal programs, saying it would permit governors to skim money that now flows directly from Washington to hundreds of cities around the country.

Speaking officially through the bipartisan U.S. Conference of Mayors, the mayors also contended that Bush's proposal would add a new layer of bureaucracy, at the state level, to many health, education, welfare, housing and law-enforcement programs.

"We the mayors of America, Republicans and Democrats, are united that this simply won't work and isn't a good idea," said Mayor William J. Althaus of York, Pa., a Republican, who asserted that Bush's proposal was "entirely wrong."

Mayor Raymond L. Flynn of Boston, vice president of the mayors' conference, said, "This isn't federalism, this is fraud." At a news conference here, the Boston Democrat vowed that mayors would "go to the wall" fighting Bush's proposal to transfer selected programs to the states with a lump sum of federal money.

The mayors estimate that cities now receive more than $12 billion a year under the federal programs Bush wants to turn over to the states.

> 'This isn't federalism, this is fraud.'
> — Raymond L. Flynn, mayor of Boston

The programs include Community Development Block Grants, which disburse more than $2 billion a year directly to cities and urban counties.

The remaining $10 billion comes from health, education, welfare and housing programs under which states are required to share federal money with units of local government.

If the mayors lobby as aggressively as Flynn indicated, they could substantially reduce the chances for congressional approval of Bush's proposal.

Many governors have cautiously welcomed the block grant proposal and plan to negotiate details with the administration.

In the budget submitted to Congress on Monday, Bush suggested that states might receive "a single consolidated grant" in place of the many they now receive to help pay for social services, elementary and secondary schools, public libraries, heating the homes of low-income families and administering welfare, food stamps and Medicaid.

John H. Sununu, the White House chief of staff, said on Thursday that the proposal was an important item on Bush's domestic policy agenda because it would give states more flexibility and discretion in using federal money.

"All the states want it — governors, state legislatures — and people around the country understand its significance and value," Sununu said of the proposal. But he added, "We're not sure Congress will pass it."

It is not clear whether the administration will make a serious effort to persuade Congress to approve the president's proposal.

Debra R. Anderson, the White House official responsible for dealing with governors and mayors, was not immediately available to respond to the criticism from the mayors' conference.

Elisa Lund, an assistant to Ms. Anderson, said she was tied up with other business.

The mayors said the federal government should preserve programs, like the Community Development Block Grant, that disburse money directly to cities.

Referring to the social and economic difficulties of the nation's cities, Flynn said:

"This isn't a city problem. This isn't a poor people's problem or a minority problem. This is an American problem."

Leaders of the mayors' conference plan to meet next week with Richard G. Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, to argue against the president's proposal.

Flynn complained that "the federal government has been walking away from America's cities" at a time when they must find homes for babies born to mothers addicted to crack, care for people with AIDS, shelter the homeless and cope with extraordinarily high rates of poverty, infant mortality and murder.

Flynn said there were political reasons for what he called the nation's neglect of its cities.

Political power has shifted, he said, and cities can no longer deliver votes or campaign contributions to candidates as they once did.

As a result, he said, "cities have no influence whatsoever in Congress."

Study links electric appliances, leukemia

By Jane Kay
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Preliminary results of a University of Southern California study show an apparent relationship between the risk of childhood leukemia and such appliances as black-and-white television sets, hair dryers and electric blankets.

The study of 232 leukemia cases in children in Los Angeles County examined exposure from electric and magnetic fields emanating from wiring inside and outside their houses.

Overhead power lines, house wiring, appliances and other possible harmful exposure to children under age 10 were examined between 1980 and 1987.

The study confirms earlier results that make suspect magnetic fields, which are caused by current or the movement of the charge, and rules out dangers of electric fields, which are caused by voltage or the strength of the charge.

The fear is the fields can alter human cells and promote cancer.

The study, financed by a utilities' research group, found:

- "Considerable support" for a link between leukemia and the use of electric appliances.
- "Some support" for a link between leukemia and the way wiring is hung. Larger wires carry more current, which means they emit a stronger magnetic field, and two wires farther apart from one another emit a stronger magnetic field.
- "Little support" for a link between leukemia risk and magnetic fields.
- "No support" for a link between leukemia and electric fields.
- An apparent higher risk from household pesticides and parents' occupational exposure to spray paint.

These findings, released by the Electric Power Research Institute (EPRI) at a meeting of nationwide experts Thursday, haven't yet been reviewed by other scientists.

USC spokesman Doug Stokke said the university opposed the release and called it "inappropriate and misleading to comment until it's passed through peer review."

At this point, scientists are singling out children's exposure to electric appliances because even low-voltage appliances can have high magnetic fields.

Electric dial clocks, electric blankets, computers, electric razors, rheostats and black-and-white TV sets produce the fields. Experts say color TV sets have greater controls on magnetic fields. For all appliances, exposure drops off sharply at three to four feet.

Much of the information on using appliances was done by questionnaires, which raises questions of accuracy.

The study appears to confirm the associations of two earlier studies in Denver and Los Angeles County that linked electromagnetic fields to childhood leukemia.

In the mid-1970s, Boulder, Colo., epidemiologist Nancy Wertheimer was the first to find a correlation between the disease and overhead high-current power lines. Her group noticed transformers in back yards of leukemia victims. Wires next to the transformers carry the most current.

If the findings are borne out, it may mean restringing power lines so the incoming and outgoing currents cancel each other, rewiring houses or changing the ways in which appliances are used.

S&L regulator denies Neil Bush's hearing request

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top savings and loan regulator on Friday denied Neil Bush's request for a second public hearing on the government's conflict-of-interest case against him.

Bush

The president's son had asked Timothy Ryan, director of the Office of Thrift Supervision, for a chance to argue his case before Ryan in person.

Ryan is due to decide soon whether restrictions should be imposed on Bush's business activities if he takes another position with a savings institution.

The office charged Bush in January 1990 with conflict of interest in his role as a director of the failed Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association of Denver. Silverado's collapse in December 1988 is expected to cost taxpayers $1 billion.

Bush, a 36-year-old oil and gas developer, had the right under administrative law to ask for a hearing.

But Ryan, who was not obligated to grant the request, said in a brief statement that Bush "failed to demonstrate good cause." Staff attorneys had recommended to Ryan that he refuse Bush's request.

The regulators have accused Bush of failing to adequately inform fellow Silverado directors of his business ties with developers Kenneth Good and Bill Walters, who invested in Bush's oil company. Good and Walters eventually defaulted on more than $132 million in loans from Silverado.

Bush has insisted that he committed no wrongdoing in voting as a director to approve loans to Good and Walters.

NATION IN BRIEF

Rep. Conte dies after surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Silvio Conte, popular Republican congressman from Massachusetts and dean of the state's delegation, died Friday night, his office announced.

Conte, 69, had been hospitalized for a blood clot on the brain.

The 17-term congressman underwent emergency surgery on Feb. 1 for removal of the clot, and his office said then he was expected to recover fully.

But he underwent a second operation to remove blood accumulating in the brain on Wednesday at the National Institutes of Health in suburban Bethesda, Md., near his home, and was listed in critical condition.

His wife drove him to the hospital on Feb. 1 after he complained of flu-like symptoms and loss of feeling in his left hand.

Conte, a gregarious, cigar-chomping deal-maker, brought home the bacon for his western Massachusetts district for more than three decades and angered GOP conservatives with his liberal votes. He was the only Republican in a 11-member House delegation that, when Conte was elected, was split between the parties.

His district became largely Democratic during his tenure.

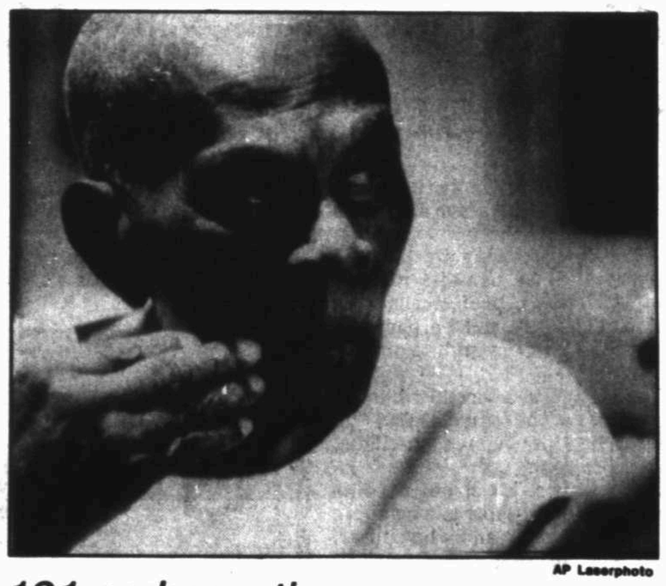

Federal judge indicted

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — U.S. District Judge Robert F. Collins, one of the first black federal judges in the Deep South in modern times, was indicted Friday for taking an alleged bribe from a defendant.

Collins, 60, maintained his innocence in a statement read by his lawyers, who accused the government of targeting black officials nationwide in an effort to discredit them.

Collins, appointed to the federal bench in 1978 by President Jimmy Carter, was charged in the federal indictment with bribery, obstruction of justice and conspiracy.

The Justice Department said more than $16,500 in bribe money was found in the judge's chambers and his wallet.

Rural America's REA, utility co-ops under seige

By Ellen Miller

■ Rural electric cooperatives are going bankrupt, and administration strategists are attacking billions of dollars in federal subsidies channeled to co-ops to help cut the budget deficit.

MONTROSE, Colo. (AP) — Like many rural Americans, Kathy Hall still remembers the day when the lights went on for the first time.

She was already in high school when power lines finally reached her family's ranch school on the windswept plains east of Casper, Wyoming.

"It was incredible," she said. "We had a refrigerator and a freezer and bright lights. We had pumps for the water instead of relying on the wind. We even had lights in the barn to milk by, and that was in the '60s, for crying out loud."

And she remembers just as clearly who gave them that power: the federal Rural Electrification Administration.

"The REA was a magic word," said Ms. Hall, now 46 and an aide to Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo., in Grand Junction.

Still an object of near-religious allegiance in rural America, the REA today is under siege. Bush administration strategists searching for ways to cut the federal budget deficit have attacked the billions of dollars in federal subsidies channeled by the REA to rural electric cooperatives nationwide.

In recent years, three of the nation's 1,000 electric co-ops have been forced into bankruptcy court and an REA team is working with another five troubled co-ops to head off new insolvencies.

One of the three co-ops in bankruptcy reorganization is Colorado-Ute Electric Association Inc. of Montrose, which owes the REA $415 million and private creditors another $700 million. The company generates and supplies power to smaller electric co-ops covering more than half of Colorado and in many ways, its history parallels the growth of such cooperatives nationwide.

Lights on loan

The REA was able to bring light to America's most remote corners through low-interest loans and loan guarantees, subsidized by taxpayers. Using those loans, rural Americans formed their own nonprofit, cooperatives distribution systems, elected their neighbors to the co-op's boards and packed the annual meetings.

By the early 1940s, the co-ops got the idea of joining together to form their own generating and transmission companies. That way, they could build their own power plants and no longer have to buy electricity from privately owned power companies.

'We still haven't given up on the idea of cooperative power.'

— Dave Potter, general manager
La Plata Electric Association

Somewhere along the line, things began to go wrong at Colorado-Ute.

Its former management and board of directors have been called incompetent by the state Public Utilities Commission, and last August a federal bankruptcy judge ordered the appointment of an outside trustee to take over running the company.

The trustee, Victor Palmieri of New York City, promptly dismissed two top officers and told the board its services were no longer needed.

Palmieri, who also was the trustee for the Penn Central reorganization, is reviewing several proposed plans for Colorado-Ute — ranging from a merger with another generating co-op in eastern Colorado to outright liquidation. He said he hopes to present a plan to the court by the end of the month.

Colorado-Ute likely will lose $38 million in 1990, Palmieri said, despite a rate increase of 8 percent in 1989 and another 12 percent hike in December.

How did Colorado-Ute, which started out with such high hopes, go so terribly awry?

Colorado-Ute was incorporated in 1941 by its member co-ops as a generating and transmission company. It was formed with a grand total of $75 in capital, $5 from each co-op, according to Fred Kroeger, a former director of one of the co-ops, La Plata Electric Association of Durango, Colo.

The rest of the money came from the federal government.

Colorado-Ute produced its first power in 1959 at the old Nucla Station, growing to a system with numerous plants serving more than 600,000 people in all or parts of 49 of Colorado's 63 counties.

Come back, shale

The low-interest federal loans flowed. The utility grew and grew, building coal-fired power plants, investing in some hydroelectric projects and making grand plans for the oil shale boom that was supposed to have transformed western Colorado. But in 1982, the boom busted, plunging the Western Slope into an economic depression from which some areas still have not recovered.

In 1986, Colorado-Ute decided to lower its rates, as management persuaded the board that sales of power could be increased if the price were lower. The huge glut of electric power available in the western United States apparently wasn't considered an important factor.

The utility began what economists call a "death spiral." The costs of producing electricity rose as revenues fell, leading to heavier borrowing, higher costs and weaker revenues.

According to an audit by the Public Utilities Commission, the REA told Colorado-Ute's president and chairman that it opposed the rate cut, but that objection was not passed on to the board or other managers. Nor did the REA follow up when the co-op lowered its rates.

Board members didn't get — and didn't ask for — monthly financial statements until after Colorado-Ute defaulted on its loans in March 1989. Then after the default, directors spent 40 percent more on themselves in directors' fees and travel allowances than they had the year before. They also doled out generous merit pay raises for top management.

Finally last year, the REA, the utility's single largest creditor, ordered a rate hike of 24 percent. The move has been contested in federal court by the state Public Utilities Commission, which claims the authority to set electric rates in Colorado.

Despite all of Colorado-Ute's troubles, support for locally run cooperatives runs deep here, almost as deep as the mistrust of private power companies that might replace them.

"That's why this is such a tragedy because it's done so much good for so many people," Ms. Hall said of the REA.

Dave Potter, general manager of the La Plata Electric Association, said "We still haven't given up on the idea of cooperative power."

Sage's papers opened after 35-year ban

BALTIMORE (AP) — Thirty-five years after his death, the last unpublished papers of H.L. Mencken were uncrated recently in what was described as "the greatest posthumous self-promotion in the history of American letters."

The seven wooden crates, sealed with metal bands and nailed shut, contained three volumes of Mencken's "Thirty-Five Years of Newspaper Work" and four volumes of "My Life as Author and Editor."

"Mencken was a great hoaxer," said Carl Bode, author of a biography on the writer. "He could have eliminated an occasion like this, but I think he enjoyed it. It has served to a degree to make Mencken alive."

The staff of the Enoch Pratt Free Library struggled to pry open the boxes with a crowbar and wire cutters. Champagne flowed when the first crate was opened to reveal the manuscripts, swathed in brown paper and tissue.

Michael Kelly, a trustee of the library, offered a toast to the writer, known as the Sage of Baltimore.

"Whatever Mencken's vices or virtues, he was the greatest posthumous self-promoter in the history of American letters," Kelly said.

Mencken wrote for 40 years at The (Baltimore) Evening Sun, edited the Smart Set and the American magazines and wrote dozens of books.

Mencken was the voice of an old-fashioned conservative but rebellious minority, Bode said.

"What you do get in Mencken is a view of American letters presented by a man who pulls no punches," he said.

Before Mencken died Jan. 28, 1956, he sent copies of the seven volumes in sealed crates to the Pratt Library, the library at Dartmouth College and the New York Public Library. He stipulated that the crates were to remain sealed until the 35th anniversary of his death.

The crates at Dartmouth were also opened Tuesday. The crates in New York won't be opened until later in the year.

"H.L. Mencken is looking down on us today. I hope he still is experiencing that 'subtle rapture of a postponed power,'" said Dartmouth President James Freedman, quoting Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

In paging through one of the volumes, Freedman found a biting reference to author Sinclair Lewis.

"All the while I knew Sinclair Lewis," Mencken wrote, "he was either a drunkard or a teetotaler, so my relations with him never became what could be called intimate, for I am ill at ease with any man who is either."

Mencken's reputation as a brilliant social and political critic was tarnished in 1989, when his diary was published. It contained what many considered to be anti-Semitic, racist and pro-Nazi references.

The manuscripts will not cause the furor that the diary did, said Charles A. Fecher of Baltimore, who edited Mencken's diary.

Mencken mentioned the manuscripts in his diary in 1945.

Politics and Hollywood merge over issues ranging from energy to abortion

EDITOR'S NOTE — Some Hollywood stars have become almost as well-known for the causes they support as for the parts they play. Jane Fonda, Charlton Heston and Edward Asner come immediately to mind. While those three may represent an older generation, show business today is not without its activists concerned about such issues as the environment, energy, abortion and the homeless.

By John Horn
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Academy Awards night typically finds Hollywood in a self-indulgent mood, the stars lavishing themselves with fine clothes, finer praise and the finest food.

Some, but not all.

As the guests preened for last year's Oscar presentations, actors Ron Silver, Susan Sarandon, Alec Baldwin, Christopher Reeve and Jennifer Beales had more serious business at hand.

They are members of an advocacy group called The Creative Coalition and spent all day with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and state legislators, pushing environmental legislation and sounding the alarm of global warming.

In addition to The Creative Coalition, a growing group of entertainment figures are cashiering their fame for good works, performing at benefits and actually embracing causes as if their careers — and sometimes their lives — depended on it.

While the stereotype of the ineffectual celebrity do-gooder persists, these performers, writers, directors and executives endeavor to be both dedicated and knowledgeable.

"This is five days a week of two people working regular hours," says Robert Foxworth, the former "Falcon Crest" star who along with assistant Bobbi Murray produces a weekly issue-oriented radio show with his own money.

ED BEGLEY JR. ("St. Elsewhere") is one of Hollywood's most dedicated activists, frequently sacrificing his time (and creature comforts) for energy conservation.

Living in a home illuminated by low-energy, 15-watt light bulbs and commuting to work by bus, bicycle or electric car, Begley's lifestyle strives to be as environmentally conscientious as possible.

In November, Begley was named chairman of an advisory committee to the Southern California Rapid Transit District, which runs the city's bus system and is building a massive subway network.

"Mr. Begley's commitment to public transit, as well as his involvement in environmental issues, will provide strong leadership," says RTD board President Nick Patsaouras.

Actor Robert Foxworth, former "Falcon Crest" star, sits in a recording studio built over his garage in Los Angeles. He produces a weekly issues-oriented radio show, "American Dialogues," supported entirely by his "Falcon Crest" savings.

Most actors and actresses say when it comes to choosing between their careers and their causes, employment comes first. Without work, these activists have neither a platform nor money to pledge.

What separates real activists from fair-weather warriors is the level of sacrifice.

Foxworth's "American Dialogues" program, for example, is supported entirely by Foxworth's earnings and "Falcon Crest" savings.

The 5-year-old show, heard in 75 cities, has Foxworth interviewing experts in a spectrum of social issues, from the war on drugs to campaign finances to Central American politics.

"It's always been a frustration to some extent that the work in film, television and theater hasn't been able to be more focused on issues," says Foxworth, sitting in a recording studio built over his garage. "We have our podium, our pedestal is to some extent our career. It provides some access to people."

Silver, who was one of the founders of the non-partisan Creative Coalition, says entertainers have a duty to charity.

"I think there's almost an obligation," says Silver, the co-star of the film "Reversal of Fortune." "Many of us are very well compensated for work which a lot of people would love to do. And we also have a lot of leisure time in between jobs.

"The more visible members of our group use their access and utilize their attention-getting abilities to bring a lot of issues to the public's attention," Silver says.

THE 250 SHOW business professionals in the New York-based group lobby local and national politicians about issues such as the environment, freedom of expression, abortion rights and the homeless.

"They say that Hollywood is sex without substance, and Washington politics is substance without sex, so maybe the marriage of the two is mutually intriguing," Silver says.

There are more than a few celebrities who have become almost as well-known for the causes they support as for the parts they play.

Jane Fonda's acting career has been tinged by her activism during the Vietnam War when she appeared on Radio Hanoi and begged American soldiers to stop bombing. To some she is as much "Hanoi Jane" as she is the star of 1981's "On Golden Pond" or 1989's "Stanley and Iris."

During filming of the latter in 1988, a Waterbury, Conn., veterans helped circulate bumper stickers that read, "I'm Not Fond'a Hanoi Jane."

"I'm a good scapegoat," Miss Fonda said in an interview not long ago. "I can be painted into an image which causes a lot of hostility. I may not be that person but that's irrelevant."

Charlton Heston ("Ben Hur") donates time to the National Rifle Association and lobbies against government funding for explicit art. Mike Farrell ("M-A-S-H") is recognized as one of the nation's strongest voices for civil rights. Singer Jackson Browne, whose concerts are loaded with plugs for causes, said that some fans have taken to yelling, "Just sing!"

ED ASNER is so strongly associated with left-of-center issues that he believes his politics contributed to the 1982 cancellation of his "Lou Grant" series on CBS.

Mary Tyler Moore, herself a diabetic, is the international spokesperson for the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation. In the non-paying position, Miss Moore makes speeches, appears in public service announcements and travels to support the foundation.

Candice Bergen has adopted several causes. An animal-rights activist, she does not wear furs. And she dedicates her time to the Starlight Foundation, which grants wishes to children dying from cancer. She and her husband, director Louis Malle, hosted a benefit screening of Malle's film "Au Revoir Les Enfants" for the Starlight Foundation.

Liza Minnelli is on the board of the Institute for the Achievement of Human Potential, an organization that works with mentally handicapped children and their families. Miss Minnelli performs regularly at benefit concerts for the institute.

Some labor for causes linked to their on-screen characters. Richard Dysart, who stars as senior partner Leland McKenzie on "L.A. Law," has made two public service announcements advocating equal protection.

'They say that Hollywood is sex without substance, and Washington politics is substance without sex, so maybe the marriage of the two is mutually intriguing.'

— Actor Ron Silver, member Creative Coalition

Roy Scheider ("Jaws"), who appeared in Home Box Office's death-row drama "Somebody Has to Shoot the Picture," hosted an anti-death penalty screening of the film. "It's a barbaric custom and it doesn't work," Scheider says.

THE COMPACT DISC for rock star Phil Collins' new album "Serious Hits...Live" is packaged in recycled cardboard. It bears the message, "Car pool when possible. Tune up your car regularly and keep your tires inflated to the recommended pressure. These steps will conserve energy and reduce air pollution."

Not bad. But musicians Peter Gabriel and Raffi are insisting that their CDs be issued in no cardboard packaging at all, saving even more trees.

Rock star Chrissie Hynde of the Pretenders is an activist for People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals. She spent one recent morning disrupting hunters as they stalked game in a Maryland corn field. The animal-rights group, whose other celebrity members include k.d. Lang, River Phoenix and Jane Wiedlin, opposes hunting, the fur industry and using animals for laboratory testing.

Even sincere Hollywood activists dance in dangerous territory. The preposterous TV advertising line, "I'm not a doctor, but I play one on television," still points up the basic ambiguity of celebrity endorsements: Just because somebody's on camera, why should we think they know anything?

When Miss Sarandon ("White Palace") made a campaign appearance for New Jersey Gov. James Florio, a heckler shouted, "Go back to Hollywood!"

In one recent debacle, Angela Lansbury of CBS' "Murder, She Wrote" was induced to appear in commercials opposing a pair of California initiatives that would limit elective office terms.

MISS LANSBURY'S commercials, which failed a state requirement to identify their sponsors, were later proved inaccurate. The actress' son (and agent) conceded that his mother was misinformed. "She doesn't really read newspapers," said son David Shaw.

Foxworth, on the other hand, reads — newspapers included. Despite the heckling of Miss Sarandon, Silver says his coalition tries to protect its members from ridicule.

When the celebrities don't answer, don't hang up

NEW YORK (AP) — There's a message in pithy answering machine greetings, says Spy magazine, which crank-called dozens of celebrity machines to find out what the rich and famous have to say.

The magazine says it started with 200 celebrities' home phone numbers. Mostly, the magazine says in its March issue, it ended up talking to maids or hanging up on answering services.

There were, however, some gems.

Peter Fonda tells easy riders: (Crash sound effect) "Jeez, you hit the ranch. We can't find the phone right now; we'll try to get back to you. Wait for the beep."

Actress Lauren Bacall says: "It's ridiculous, but I'm not here, so if you leave your name, number and the hour of your call, I will get back to you when I am here, if I am here. Isn't that an amazing ... situation?"

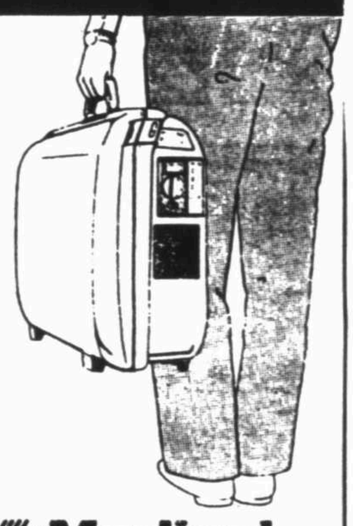

Anchorwoman and man Connie Chung and Maury Povich: "We're not here, so just leave your message." (Long pause. Povich's voice:) "Boy, we're not even in sync." (Chung's voice:) "I think that was OK!"

Spy magazine says all the messages were authentic.

"Oh yeah, it's true," said the magazine's Patty Nasey. "We didn't want to get sued."

NPR asks affiliates to help pay for gulf war coverage

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Public Radio, strapped for cash because of its around-the-clock coverage of the Persian Gulf War, is asking affiliate stations to help foot the bill.

The network needs $1.4 million by March 1 to continue its current level of coverage, NPR officials said Friday.

"If every one (of the affiliates) contributes just a little we'll make it," said Bill Buzenberg, NPR's vice president for news and information.

On Tuesday, NPR Chairman Dale Ouzts sent letters to the network's 411 affiliates asking them to contribute anywhere from $1,000 to $26,000, depending on their size.

But many of the stations are "very, very small and will not be able to help" because of their tight budgets, Buzenberg said.

However, he added, "we have had a very gratifying response so far." Ten to 12 stations had promised a total of $92,000 and a California affiliate had pledged $100,000 as of Friday.

Since U.S. and allied forces began their repeated bombardments of Iraqi positions, NPR has increased its five-minute hourly newscasts from 18 to 24 a day, added an afternoon call-in show, and dispatched eight correspondents to the gulf region.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man pleaded guilty to charging more than $5,000 in champagne, elegant dinners and limousine rides to filmmaker Steven Spielberg.

Spielberg

David Bojorquez pleaded guilty Thursday to four counts of grand theft as part of a plea bargain, prosecutors said.

Under the agreement, prosecutors will recommend that Bojorquez be sentenced to three years in prison and four other grand theft counts will be dismissed, said Deputy District Attorney Sharon V. Garabedian.

Bojorquez, 29, will be sentenced Feb. 26. Without the plea bargain, he had faced up to six years in prison.

Last month, Bojorquez spent several nights on the town, dining with friends at expensive restaurants and riding in limousines, Ms. Garabedian said.

"He really lived it up," she said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gay activists said Friday a kiss between two women lawyers on this week's episode of "L.A. Law" may have been the first lesbian kiss broadcast on commercial network television.

The Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation hailed NBC, saying the "historic smooch makes attorney C.J. Lamb ... the only recurring gay or bisexual female character currently on television."

ABC's "thirtysomething" has two gay male characters who appear infrequently. CBS' "Doctor, Doctor" comedy series, now on hiatus, had an openly gay male supporting character.

Some advertisers boycott "thirtysomething" each time the gay characters appear. "Doctor, Doctor" never experienced advertising boycotts.

NBC spokeswoman Sue Binford said the network didn't know if the Thursday night show's lesbian kiss was a first. Some advertisers yanked their commercials, she said, but audience response was "really mild."

Of about 85 viewer calls to NBC, slightly more than half were negative, Binford said. The advertisers who withdrew their spots were immediately replaced and the network didn't lose any money, Binford said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Oliver Stone says his new movie about rock legend Jim Morrison tells of a young man who "pushed the barriers of human existence" and embodied the spirit of the late 1960s.

Stone

In the March issue of Details magazine, the Academy Award-winning filmmaker recalls listening to Morrison, the lead singer of The Doors, while "stoned on marijuana" in Vietnam. The forthcoming movie is also titled "The Doors."

"You have to remember we were on the edge of life and death in Vietnam, and Jim spoke to us very directly about the earth, life, death, fear," Stone said.

"'The Doors' is the story of a young man who wants to break all the limits of life and reaches a point where he's done it," Stone said. "And what does he do next for an encore? He does not know."

Morrison died in Paris in 1971 at age 27.

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — The wife of baseball star Jose Canseco has counterfiled for divorce in California to seek an equal share of their belongings, her lawyer said.

Canseco, 26, filed for divorce in Miami on Jan. 16, saying his marriage to former Miss Miami Esther Haddad was "irrevocably broken."

The couple own two homes in Contra Costa County, and still live together in Coral Gables, Fla., where they were married on Oct. 25, 1988, said her lawyer, Frank Quintero.

"It's a strange situation, believe me," Quintero said. "There is no physical or verbal contact except for pleasantries."

Mrs. Canseco filed her petition on Wednesday.

Mandela to West: Repealing sanctions will be disasterous

N.Y. Times News Service

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Nelson Mandela, the African National Congress leader, warned Friday turmoil would break out in South Africa if the West repealed sanctions in disregard of the ANC's insistence that they remain.

Mandela, speaking at a news conference marking the end of his first year of freedom, said he was not making a threat. But he added the ANC had "certain trump cards" to play to stop countries from lifting sanctions and he acknowledged the usefulness of its strategy of coordinated marches, boycotts, strikes and other protests enforced in black townships by congress supporters.

Since it suspended its guerrilla option last August, the ANC has adopted "mass action," as it calls the strategy, to maintain pressure on the government before negotiations on the nation's future.

"Once our people discover they have no friends in the international community, it is going to be difficult to control them," Mandela said. "They will be so angry."

He implied protests would be mounted to discourage a return of foreign investment if sanctions were ended without ANC permission. If sanctions end, he said, "mass action will be the order of the day."

"The situation in the country is going to be so unstable that no wise businessman is going to want to invest in South Africa," he said.

Despite the militant tone of Mandela's warning, which asserted ANC supporters would take to the streets to protest the lifting of sanctions, it was unclear how much voluntary support such a strategy would get in the townships where unemployment is rampant.

Many black South Africans are desperate for work and economic prosperity and have wearied of strikes that cost jobholders a day's wages or more, especially now that the white minority government has promised negotiations that would extend political rights to blacks.

Demonstrations called by the ANC and its allies to demonstrate against Parliament when it opened on Feb. 1 drew significantly smaller turnouts than the crowds that turned up a year ago to celebrate the legalization of the congress and the release of Mandela.

Lithuanians go to polls today

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Lithuanians are expected to vote overwhelmingly for independence on Saturday in the first balloting anywhere in the Soviet Union on the secession of a republic.

But many Lithuanians foresee little more than a moral victory over the Kremlin.

"This will show (Soviet President Mikhail S.) Gorbachev that everybody supports independence," said Vitas Tomkus, editor of the pro-independence newspaper Respublika. "But Gorbachev will not accept it. He has said that all along."

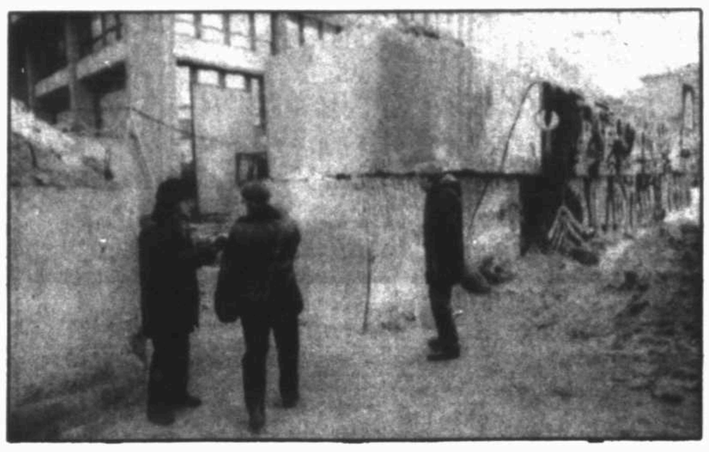

Pro-independence leaders scheduled the non-binding vote after last month's military crackdown in the three secessionist Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, in which 21 people were killed.

They hope to demonstrate the depth of their popular support to the Kremlin and the world, although Gorbachev has already declared the poll "legally invalid."

On Friday, Lithuanians made final preparations for the poll. Nearly 80 election monitors were expected from eight foreign countries and five Soviet republics, and representatives have already arrived from the United States, Canada and Australia. There were no reports of violence.

Leaflets against secession, signed by the pro-Kremlin Lithuanian Citizens' Committee, were distributed Thursday in the republic's second largest city, Kaunas. Some of the leaflets reportedly were dropped by a military helicopter.

Polling stations open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. on Saturday, with unofficial results expected by midnight. About 2.7 million people are eligible to vote in the republic of 3.7 million people, roughly 17 percent of whom are ethnic Russians or Poles.

A volunteer guard checks identification papers at the barricades outside the Lithuanian Parliament Friday on the eve of a historic vote to reaffirm the republic's intention to secede from the Soviet Union.

Kremlin loyalists in Lithuania have urged a boycott of the poll, and promise to try to carry out a Moscow-directed referendum on March 17. Gorbachev has ordered all 15 Soviet republics to vote on that date whether they wish to preserve their union.

Several republics have picked other dates and questions for their referendums, but Lithuanians will be the first to cast their ballots.

Saturday's plebiscite will ask: "Do you support the idea that Lithuania must be an independent democratic republic?"

The national referendum is to ask: "Do you think it is necessary to preserve the Soviet Union as a renewed federation of equal, sovereign republics in which the rights and freedoms of people of all ethnic groups will be fully guaranteed?"

Polling experts have criticized the questions, saying they are written to elicit "yes" responses. And each side has accused the other of using the ballots to affirm the course they already have set.

Juozas Jermalavicius, chief ideologist of the anti-independence Lithuanian Communist Party, said Friday pro-Moscow forces "understand that we're not going to achieve great results" in the March 17 balloting in Lithuania.

"But we are going to show that there are people in Lithuania who support the unity of the Soviet Union," he said.

Jermalavicius, speaking to reporters in his spartan office under an etching of Lenin, accused Lithuanian leaders of "deceiving the Lithuanian people."

"This game of antagonism and anti-Soviet policy is anti-ethnic and against the people," he said.

Lithuanian officials said they are wary of any pretext for another crackdown. They have not yet decided whether to try to block the March 17 referendum, "but we probably will let anybody vote because we don't want any provocations," said Leginas Vasiliauskas, an aide to Lithuania's envoy in Moscow.

But, he added: "Nobody will honor this vote."

Saturday's poll comes four weeks after the storming of Lithuania's television and radio facilities by Soviet troops, in which 14 people died. The Jan. 13 attack, called "Bloody Sunday" by many Lithuanians, was the culmination of weeks of tension over the deployment of Soviet paratroopers to track down draft dodgers and army deserters.

Soviet troops remain in control of several buildings in the republic.

Several Lithuanians said that before the crackdown they had started to doubt whether the Lithuanian parliament's unilateral declaration of independence last year would ever lead to secession.

Tomkus, the newspaper editor, was certain Saturday's vote would show vast support for independence, "especially after Bloody Sunday."

"People were tired before that tragic event. But now, they want very much to say they're independent," he said.

Aristide bans former president from leaving Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Newly installed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide on Friday barred former interim President Ertha Pascal-Trouillot and more than 150 other prominent Haitians from leaving the country.

Moving quickly to take advantage of his wild popularity, the fiery priest also disclosed in an interview that he had chosen Rene Preval, a close friend and bakery owner with no government experience, as his prime minister.

A communique from Aristide's office said he consulted on his choice with the presidents of the two chambers of the National Assembly on Thursday. The prime minister, who runs the government, serves with the approval of parliament.

The communique did not say whether the parliamentarians accepted Preval. Although both chambers of the assembly are led by Aristide's National Front for Change and Democracy, his appointment is likely to be controversial.

The travel ban was issued by government prosecutor Bayard Vincent to comply with a judicial commission investigating corruption and repression by the Duvalier family dictatorship and successor regimes, the government said.

Among more than 150 individuals named in the order were retired Maj. Gen. Williams Regala and Claude Raymond, both former ministers of interior and defense under dictator Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier," who was ousted in 1986.

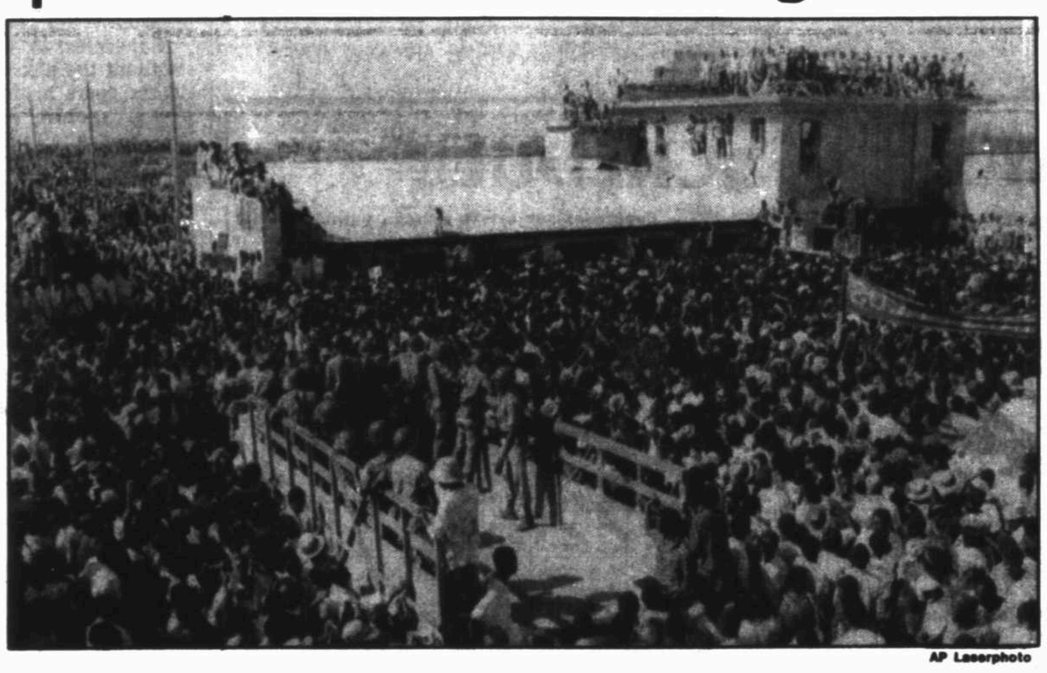

Regala is widely regarded as the mastermind of the 1987 election massacre in which 34 people were killed by thugs in collusion with the army. Raymond also is accused of participating in the massacre.

According to the U.S. Embassy, however, both men have left the country and their whereabouts were unknown.

Aristide was inaugurated Thursday, prompting widespread street celebrations. But some fear that Duvalierists are waiting for the proper moment to begin a campaign of violence and return the country to dictatorial rule.

Also covered by the ban are Mrs. Pascal-Trouillot, a Supreme Court judge who led an 11-month interim civilian government until Aristide took over, and those who served in her Cabinet at any time.

Sources said her administration may be under investigation for failing to arrest Roger Lafontant, former head of the outlawed Tonton Macoute militia, when he returned to Haiti last summer from exile.

AP Laserphoto

Hundreds of Haitians turn out to observe the changing of Fort Dimanche from a torture chamber to a museum Friday. The change comes one day after the inauguration of Jean-Bertrand Aristide as president.

Lafontant, a bitter enemy of Aristide, led an attempted coup on Jan. 7 and held Mrs. Pascal-Trouillot hostage for several hours. The coup was put down by loyalist soldiers after mass protests.

Announcement of the travel ban came on independent Radio Haiti Inter.

Peace talks end without accord

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Peace talks between Angola's leftist government and U.S.-backed rebels ended in failure Friday as the two sides could not agree on a plan to halt the country's 16-year civil war.

The ceremonial signing of the peace plan was postponed because the government suggested changes the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola would not agree to, a joint Portuguese, U.S., Soviet mediation team said in a statement.

Diplomats said the government delegation proposed setting a firm cease-fire date and concrete steps towards changing Angola's political structure that went beyond the scope of an earlier agreed-upon plan.

The statement said mediators will meet in Lisbon on March 4.

Government softens policy amid offensive

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Fearing more rebel attacks in the capital, the government Friday softened its anti-insurgency policy to allow active guerrillas a chance to help redraft the nation's 104-year-old constitution.

But Government Minister Humberto de la Calle said the rebels must declare a cease-fire before they can take part in a national assembly rewriting the constitution.

"Immediately after a cease-fire is declared, we can authorize a representation for the guerrillas in the constitutional assembly," De la Calle said Friday.

Previously, the government insisted rebel groups must surrender before joining the assembly, which was inaugurated Tuesday.

Some guerrilla groups have put down their weapons, but the two remaining rebel organizations recently launched their biggest offensive in 30 years.
