'FERGUSONISM FAKE,' MOODY DECLARES

General English Strike On

GOVERNMENT FAILS TO END MINE WALKOUT

"War Has Been Declared" Labor Leader Asserts After Parley

PRINTERS QUIT WORK

'Evening Mail' Edition Fails To Come Out Because Of Stand

LONDON, May 3.—(AP)—Any hope of averting a general strike that hung upon Sunday's negotiations between the government and the trades union congress vanished at one o'clock this morning when it was officially announced that the negotiations had broken down.

The government immediately issued a statement refusing to resume them unless the congress withdrew the general strike order and repudiated other overt acts which the government describes as challenging the constitutional rights and freedom of the nation.

The overt acts specified include interference with the freedom of the press, an obvious allusion to the strike of the printers and other operatives of the Daily Mail, because they objected to an editorial sent to them to set up.

In view of the attitude taken by the trades union congress and the miners up to the present there does not seem the least probability that they will adopt the course the government has demanded from them, and the general strike consequently will go into effect at midnight tonight.

"War has been declared," J. H. Thomas, secretary of the national union of railway men said to the newspaper men when leaving Downing street.

"It is a very sad state of affairs."

EVENING MAIL FAILS TO APPEAR

LONDON, May 3.—(AP)—One of the first effects of the strike is the non-appearance of the Daily Mail this (Monday) morning, owing to a strike of printers, who took exception to the Mail's proposed editorial on the strike situation under the caption "for king and country."

The editorial declared that "a general strike cannot be tolerated by any civilized government."

The Daily Mail informed the Associated Press that the printers took exception to the editorial and demanded that alterations be made by the editor who refused to comply.

The printers supported by the machine managers, stereotypers and packers, although not by the compositors, process workers and telegraph operators, ceased work. Consequently the paper was unable to appear.

Congress To Take Up Dry Question Again This Week

WASHINGTON, May 2—(AP)—Farm relief and public buildings legislation will occupy the attention of congress this week to the exclusion of most other subjects.

The house on Tuesday will take up the widely divergent measures for agricultural aid and will debate them for four days and then get down to voting on various amendments which will be offered.

Prohibition will have another day as the senate judiciary sub-committee meets Wednesday to consider the sixteen bills proposing modification and tightening up of the Volstead Act.

Apparently none of the wet bills has a chance and there is some doubt that any of the administration measures can be put through at this session.

Pair Are Charged With Drug Robbery

FORT WORTH, May 2.—(AP)—Collier Langford, 23, of Los Angeles, and Eugene Anderson, 21, of Anson, Texas, are charged in justice court here with the robbery of J. B. Prewitt, clerk in a drug store robbed here eight days ago. The men denied the charge.

Prewitt was held up by two dapper young unmasked men who drove away in a coupe. One covered Prewitt with a pistol while the other took $50 from the cash register. Two [illegible] south side drug stores were [illegible] within 15 minutes of the time of this holdup. No charges have been filed in connection with the other two robberies.

"Wet" Nation Is Disputed By Dry Advocate

Wayne B. Wheeler Denies Babes Cry for Moonshine

WASHINGTON, May 2—(AP)—Further echoes of the recent wet and dry eruption before a senate committee came today in a statement by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, declaring "the wets" picture of a drunken nation, whose babies cry for moonshine" was a slander on a whole people that aroused "general anger."

"If this nation was one-tenth as wet as the modificationists claimed at these hearings," the statement said, "the foes of prohibition would not be forced to make grand stand plays but would enter the primaries and elect congressmen and legislatures who would re-amend the constitution.

Because they are only a small minority, they have lost more of their number at each successive national election. At the primaries this year they will probably prove again that wet action causes a dry reaction."

TEXAS GAINS IN EXPORT TRADE

State Second to New York In Amount Handled Through Ports

DALLAS, May 2.—(AP)—Texas increased her export business by $21,500,000 in 1925 but lost her leadership among the states to New York, which trailed the Lone Star state in 1924, the United States department of commerce announced today.

To beat Texas, New York was compelled to extend herself by increasing her export business $79,000,000 and then the great Atlantic seaport ran second in two quarters of the year. Texas led in the first and last quarter, giving way to New York in the second and third quarters, and this state was gaining so rapidly on New York as the year closed that she was ahead of the Empire State in the last quarter by $61,000,000. The department reported that the competition between the two states was keen throughout the year.

Texas exports for 1925 totald $758,665,052 as compared with $737,218,927 for the previous year. New York's total shipments abroad for the same year were $810,416,054 as against $731,593,502 for 1924. Pennsylvania, runner-up for Texas, has exports valued at $302,869,783.

King Cotton dominated the Texas export business, representing $600,704,353 of the business. Refined petroleum products came second with total of $67,253,703; wheat and grain and flour represented $17,780,536; cottonseed cake and meal $10,372,751; wood and paper $8,646,986; machinery and vehicles $8,058,205; sulphur and brimstone $6,047,884; animal oils and fats $2,460,391; and eggs $1,534,164.

Total exports from the United States in 1925 were $4,819,041,495 as compared with $4,498,151,936 the previous year, an increase of more than $320,000,000.

RODEO CLOSES WITH A RECORD CROWD ON HAND

Nearly 6,000 Out For The Final Events Here Sunday

NOBODY INJURED

Officials Are Well Pleased With Success of The Year's Venture

The weather gods looked down kindly Sunday afternoon on the final day of the Tom L. Burnett Production company's annual rodeo and as a result the last performance drew a record crowd of around 6,000 persons. The grand stand at the fair grounds, while not packed to capacity, was pretty comfortably filled and with those on the sidelines swelled the throng to what is believed to be a roedo record.

For entertainment of the throng, the cowboys and cowgirls gave the most spirited exhibition of the three in which they have appeared. No records or near-records were set, but better time was made in the calf-roping and steer bulldogging than in either of the previous two days' work. The cowboys, too, seemed to have profited by Friday's and Saturday's training in the saddle, and as a result the broncs, as wild as ever, were unable to discommode their riders quite as frequently as they did the first two days.

No One Hurt.

No one was hurt Sunday for a change. Friday afternoon, the opening day, Mike Ryan took a beautiful tumble and suffered a dislocated shoulder when Bovolopus lifted him gracefully over his horns. Saturday afternoon Red Sublett got too close to the business end of Spark Plug's heels and his paunchy mule let loose with a volley of hoofs that knocked the famous clown out for a time.

As the novelty feature of Sunday's program, Mayor R. E. Shepherd entertained the big crowd with some tenor solos for which the accompaniments were played by the Simmons College Cowboy band here to supply music for the rodeo.

Officials of the rodeo expressed themselves last night as well pleased with the results of this year's venture. Attendance was better than previously, they said, and the class of attractions was as high if not higher.

A large crowd was out Sunday night for the cowboy dance held on the grounds.

Romance of '80 Reechoes Again On Court Stage

Daughter of Slackwire Artist Awarded Property of Mother

FORT WORTH, May 2.—(AP)—The romance of an acrobat and a slack wire dancer back in the '80's, a "divorce of convenience" and a contested adoption were among the stage properties of the drama in which the second court of civil appeals rung down the curtain here yesterday by awarding May (De Beque) Hiller the entire $100,000 estate of her foster mother, Maggie De Beque.

Frank De Beque contested on the ground that he was the common law husband of Maggie De Beque after their divorce in 1905. He further charged that the adoption of May Hiller was invalid.

Judgment was rendered for the adopted child on the jury findings that the adoption was valid. The judgment was affirmed yesterday.

The pleadings recited that the estate was built up from profits of the old Standard theatre which flourished years ago in the neighborhood of the Union depot. Franfi De Beque, whose real name is Frank Riggins, married Maggie Mawhorn in 1883, the opinion recites. She was a slack wire dancer and club swinger and he an aerial acrobat. Jointly they operated the Standard. The name "De Beque" because it had been the couple's stage name.

JUDGE NABERS DIES IN VERNON

Prominent Jurist and Engineer Succumbs To Illness

VERNON, May 2.—J. A. Nabers, aged 70, veteran Wilbarger county jurist and attorney, died here Sunday following a brief illness.

Judge Nabers came to Wilbarger county in 1885 and has lived here since, becoming one of the best known of Vernon's engineers and attorneys. He served the county first in the capacity of county surveyor, relinquishing this post 26 years ago to become county judge. He was county judge for 12 years, and then became judge of the district court of this county, which post he held until 1925, another 12 years.

He is survived by his wife, two sons and two daughters, Ida and Mabelle, both of whom live in Vernon, and John B. Nabers, present Wilbarger county engineer, and Robert Nabers.

Funeral arrangements will be announced Monday, members of the family stated Sunday night.

The Crowd That Elects Them Will Decide What Officers Are Like--Kay

The kind of a crowd that elects them will determine the kind of policemen and mayor and sheriff and judge a community has, Judge John C. Kay declared Sunday morning in his address to his men's Bible class at the Strand. It was a talk in which he stressed for the main part the infinite beauty and unspeakable marvels of God designed and plan for the universe.

His address in full was as follows:

For a little topical thought this morning before we come to the lesson, if we ever come to it, you know sometimes I just mention it and then go on, I want to tell you something about government. I mean a city government, a county government, state government or any kind. Any sort of government that you have is just simply a reflection and index to the kind of people you have got. It is like a poor cow. You say you see a poor cow once in a while, now you didn't see the cow, you just saw the hide on the outside of it and you see a people by seeing its system of government. There wasn't so much the matter with the cow's hide, all the poverty and bones and bardships was inside the hide. And so it is with a government when it looks like a poor cow, it's the folks inside that are weak and undernourished and doing badly so let's don't mistake hereafter the cow's hide for the poverty of the cow inside.

What I mean by this is that you folks can't have just any kind of officials. It looks to me like in the right kind of a world that you could put the finest men in the land in office, but you can't. You are going to have the same kind of policemen and mayor and justice of the peace and sheriff and judge and government, the same kind that your crowd is. Now somebody is going to get insulted at that and say I have got that too strong here in Texas. (From the audience. "Pour it on.") You are going to say, we mustn't be judged by that old mangy cowhide, but you can and you must be.

Now coming to this lesson this morning, the lesson is about the flood. You know a lot of educated and enlightened people don't believe the story about the flood, they didn't in Noah's time either. I think Noah was the poorest missionary, the poorest preacher, the poorest advocate in the world. He is the man that lectured and talked and preached for 120 years and couldn't get anybody but his own family to go into the ark when it started raining and he probably ran them in with a stick. So whatever Noah was he wasn't much of an advocate.

Of all the stories in the Bible, I find less difficulty in believing in the flood than any other. I saw some little fossils, some little fossil animals that came up from a well down here in Young County 4,880 feet deep. Now that used to be on top of the ground. The geologists tell us that the sedimentary formations, a geologist says argalaceous, but that means mud to ordinary people, that these sedimentary formations in Texas are probably thirty thousand feet deep and it was all washed there and churned up and laid down by water. Now there is no use talking about any little shower before breakfast doing that. No wonder that noted geologist from Yale who came down here says "Gentlemen, where did it come from?" Some of these men who don't believe in the flood, couldn't move one cubic yard of dirt without being laid up from it. Yet here is a territory from here to Mobile, Alabama and I don't know how far out into the Gulf of Mexico and running back pretty near to the foot of the plains, all washed in there by water, four and five miles deep and here and there that is true all over the world.

A Plan In Everything.

You know some people refuse to see a plan in anything. I am one of those kind that find design in anything I see. I like to do that. When I was a boy I went swimming in a little pond, there was something in there that I did not know about. There were leaches, a lit-

30 GOVERNMENT BUREAUS READY TO MAKE PROBE

That Many Agencies In Washington Able To Start an Inquiry

EVERY BUSINESS HIT

Any Successful One May Be Subject to Quick Investigation

By WILLIAM P. HELM, JR.

Federal investigations have multiplied to such an extent since the war that any firm doing a fair volume of business is subject to investigation or inquiry at all times by from two to reparate branches of the government. In some special lines the number of investigating agencies affecting a single business firm is even greater. These firms, for self protection, must preserve their books and records for several years in most instances.

Every business firm in the country, for instance, is subject to investigation by the bureau of internal revenue, the tax collecting branch of the government. Some of the bureau's investigations go back three to five years. The bureau has a considerable number of investigators and any one of them at any time has the right to enter an office and demand access to the books. If such access is denied the procedure that has been followed in past instances is to make an additional tax assessment, where it is thought warranted, and leave it to the firm to make out its own case.

No Fraud Intended

In such cases it has been found the better policy to place the books at the investigator's disposal. The overwhelming majority of these investigators are reasonable men and have no desire to be unjust in their reports.

Likewise every firm in many large lines is required by law to furnish detailed information to the federal census bureau. The firm has no choice but to comply. Most of this sort of investigation is done by correspondence and the information thus obtained is kept confidential by the census bureau and worked into general statistical tables whose totals are made public.

The bureau of labor statistics makes extensive investigations much after the manner of the census bureau. The women's bureau and the children's bureau of the labor department also conduct general investigations of unemployment conditions affecting women and children. With these two bureaus the trend is to investigate conditions by entire industries, rather than by individual firms.

In the cases of labor dispute, the federal board of conciliation and mediation is usually ready to offer its services but such an offer need not be accepted. If accepted the board conducts its investigation with a view to remedying the trouble.

Employment Service

Another labor department bureau which is in constant touch with employers is the employment service. This bureau maintains a staff of field workers and is closely allied with state employment services. Its function is to find jobs for idle workers and men

Ward T. Van Orman Wins Big Bag Race

LITTLE ROCK, May 2.—(AP)—Arrival at Langley Field of Lieutenant A. W. Gray, pilot of the United States army balloon S-20 and his aide, Lieutenant Roland Kieburtz, tonight had definitely accounted for all of the balloons that started from this city Thursday evening in the Lichfield trophy and national elimination race.

Ward T. Van Orman, veteran balloonist for the third time in succession out distanced all competitors and won the right to try again for the Gordon Bennett cup which last year was retained by Belgium after Mr. Van Orman had landed at sea on the deck of a German steamer. He had covered a distance close to 800 miles when he landed yesterday on the bank of the James river, southeast of Petersburg, Va., to avoid being carried out to sea.

The Akron N. A. A. piloted by John A. Boettner was in second place according to unofficial calculations with the army balloon piloted by Captain Gray, in third place.

DIVE FOR CAR.

JOPLIN, Mo., May 2.—(AP)—A deep-sea diving suit was used today to explore a huge water-filled cave at Webb City in an effort to locate a motor car which it was reported had been pushed into the cave by bandits in making a get-away after a robbery in Berryville, Ark.

More than 2,000 persons were attracted to the scene as a result of reports that the motor car, if found, might contain the body of a woman who disappeared from Berryville about the time of the robbery.

DAN ASSAILS JIM'S CLAIMS OF EFFICIENCY

Candidate Disputes Allegation Of State's Indebtedness

POLITICAL QUACKERY

The Fiery Attorney General Rips Into Governor's Husband

AUSTIN, May 2.—(AP)—Fergusonism as a synonym of efficiency and economy in government is a sham, Attorney General Dan Moody, candidate for governor, charged here today in a lengthy attack on the Ferguson administration.

Moody charged that the deficiency of the state Jan. 1, 1926, "under the much boasted business acumen of Mr. Ferguson," was increased nearly a million dollars over that which existed at the beginning of the previous year.

No Smoke Screen

"No smoke screen can obscure the real battle line upon which this campaign must be fought. I accept the issue stated last Sunday as 'Fergusonism.' I charge now and I expect to prove that Fergusonism as a synonym of efficiency and economy in government is a sham and a fraud.

"In his last statement Mr. Ferguson uses the following language: 'On April 1, 1925, seventy days after I came into office there was to the credit of the general fund $670,371.38, while on April 1, 1926, there was to the credit of the general fund, after paying March expenses, approximately $5,000,000, or a gain of four and a quarter million dollars.' In this statement he is in error to the sum of $1,000,000. The treasurer's books show that on April 1, 1925, there was to the credit of the general revenue fund $1,664,372.05.

Urge Early Payments

"The present comptroller and state treasurer had been active in urging the county tax collectors in the various large counties of the state to remit state taxes prior to April 1, and as a result of their activities in this matter there was collected and credited to the general revenue fund during March, 1926, the sum of $12,354,005.81, as against $9,457,929.49 in March, 1925. The present balance to the credit of the general revenue fund is, therefore, to be accounted for by the fact that during the month of March, 1926, there was $3,886,076.32 more paid in taxes than was paid in during the month of March, 1925.

"The difference between the balance to the credit of the general revenue fund on April 1, 1926, and the balance to the credit of that fund on April 1, 1925, is $3,421,394.31, whereas, there was $3,886,076.32 more collected in March, 1926, than was collected in March, 1925, for the credit of the general revenue fund, which would indicate that the state was $464,000 worse off on April 1, 1926, than it was on April 1, 1925. This year a large part of the revenue has been collected but a corresponding large amount is not in the treasury.

"The boast is made that the deficiency inherited by the present administration has been paid off. This statement will not stand analysis. The books of the treasurer's office show that on December 29, 1924; the deficiency amounted to $2,252,302.74. The same books show that on Jan. 1, 1926, there were outstanding warrants with no money to pay them in the amount of $3,226,064.00, or in other words, the outstanding warrants of date Jan. 1, 1926, exceeded the deficiency of December 29, 1924, by approximately $975,000.

Deficiency Increases

"It is true that these warrants were cashed at face value, but that was made possible by reason of the fact that the state treasurer prevailed upon the state depository banks to take up these warrants and hold them until there should be sufficient revenue paid into the treasury in this year's taxes with which to meet their payment. The fact, however, remains, that on Jan. 1, 1926, the deficiency of the state in the general revenue fund was $97,000 more than it was on December 29, 1924, and no figures are available for January 1, 1925.

"It, therefore, follows that the deficiency of the state, on Jan. 1, 1926, under the much boasted business acumen of Mr. Ferguson, was increased nearly a million dollars over that which existed at the beginning of the previous year.

"On Saturday, May 8, I am going to Taylor, where my mother and father lived and died, and where I was born and raised, and where the people ought to know something of the equipment which I can bring to the governor's office, and there I shall dicuss fully the political principles I hold."

RAIN STORM IN WICHITA FALLS

City Is Drenched Thoroughly Following Sultry Day

A storm that had been threatening to break for several hours, descended on Wichita Falls at 10 o'clock Sunday night, drenching the city with a thoroughness that has not been equalled in some time. The rain, general throughout northwest Texas, approximated a quarter of an inch in the city between 10 o'clock and midnight.

The rain clouds came in from the northeast after a day in which sultry heat and ominous black clouds hovered around the out-skirts for hours. A heavy electrical display accompanied the rain which peppered down with great severity and caught a large number of pedestrains down town on the streets.

No damage was done by the storm, so far as could be learned last night, this being attributed mainly to the absence of a high wind. Weather bureau predictions indicated that Monday would probably be generally fair and that the Sunday night storm was to be of short duration.

What is declared by some to be the most violent hailstorm experienced in years at Archer City occurred in that district between six and six-thirty, stones in some instances larger than pigeon eggs falling there for a half hour or more. So far as is known there was no damage done. Telephone operators all over this section of the state reported considerable trouble in establishing long distance connections due to the electricity in the air.

San Antonio School Teachers Elected

SAN ANTONIO, May 2.—(AP)—Applicants for positions in the San Antonio public school system have about one chance in 2,000 to get such employment for the 1926-27 term, according to estimates made in the superintendent's office today.

Practically every position in the system will be filled by re-elections, with teachers who return from leaves of absence and promotions of subs, Marshall Johnson, superintendent said.

Ambulance And Car Near Crash

A Hines ambulance answering a call at Dad's Corner, south of Holliday in Archer county shortly after noon Sunday averted a near serious accident on the outgoing trip at the corner of Ninth and Filmore streets when it swerved just in time to prevent crashing into a small car which had been temporarily halted due to a jam in front of a trolley car. One of the small car's fenders was clipped off and the ambulance scratched up. No one was injured, however. The ambulance was driven by Curley Skeen of the Hines com[illegible]

"HER MAN"

--By Beatrice Burton--

READ THIS FIRST:

SYLVIA STARR has been engaged to RANDALL PHELPS for a year when he asks her to free him because he's in love with her chum, FAY SHIRLEY.

Heartbroken, Sylvia gives him up, to the great satisfaction of AUNT AGONY, the shrewd spinster who reared her. Aunt Agony says that Ranny will never be true to any woman for very long. Her opinion of him seems to be correct, too, for suddenly Ranny drops Fay and marries Sylvia after all.

Their married life is not happy, even to start with. For Ranny hates to be "tied down" and gradually he returns to his bachelor habits—having love affair after love affair, and spending so much of his money on gambling and drinking that Sylvia has to give music lessons to help make both ends meet in the little flat.

When the baby is born, Sylvia has to turn the tiny breakfast room into a bedroom for it. The room has one window, opening on an air shaft, and after the baby dies Sylvia feels sure that it would have lived if it could have had more light and sunshine in the house that Ranny refuses to buy, because he doesn't want the bother of one. But when Sylvia leaves him after the baby's death and goes home to Aunt Agony and has a nervous breakdown, he comes to his senses.

He tells Sylvia that, after all he loves her and only her, and takes her with him to his parents' house while they furnish a little house of their own. When they are in it, Sylvia is sure her troubles are over. For Ranny settles down and takes an interest in his work with his father's real estate firm. And when the second baby is born, a little girl, Sylvia thinks that her cup of happiness is full.

Then one morning when the baby is six weeks old, she is waiting on the front porch for LOLLY BOYLE, Ranny's married sister, to take her to market. The postman arrives while she is waiting and brings her a letter from BABS DELANO, an old friend, who is coming to Sylvia's town to become head of a branch library there.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLIX.

Sylvia was still holding Babs Delano's letter in her hand, as she went slowly down the steps of the Little White House that morning, and stood waiting for Lolly.

"Hello, Beautiful. How wonderfully well you're looking today," Lolly greeted her, when she came gliding up in her new car and opened the door of it. "How's the blessed baby? How's Ranny? Has he left for the office or would he like us to drop him on our way downtown?"

While she answered Lolly's rapid fire questions, Sylvia's eyes were busy with her own reflection in the little tilted mirror on the windshield.

Yes, Lolly was right. She was looking unusually well. Her cheeks were faintly tinted with sofe rose color once more, and the old flirtatious sparkle had come back into the blue eyes.

"But then, why wouldn't I look well?" she asked herself. She had been unbelievably, gloriously happy for a whole year. And happiness is the most clever beauty doctor in the world, as every woman knows.

Happiness can lift a sagging cheek-muscle as no surgery can, and it can put sparkles into the dullest eyes. It can make the homeliest scarecrow of a woman glow and shine with something very close to beauty.

And when it enhances such beauty as Sylvia had even in her worst moments, it makes her as lovely as a rose. She glowed like a rose, now, as she opened Bab's letter on her knee.

"Do you remember my mentioning Babs Delano—a girl I used to know at library school?" she asked Lolly, as they turned into the parking space behind the market.

Lolly shook her head in its bright red turban, and hunted for her grocery list in a handbag loaded with three different kinds of rouge, two lipsticks, and an eyebrow pencil, besides a key, a purse and a handkerchief.

"No—never heard of her," she answered absently. "Why? What's she done for herself?"

Sylvia laughed a little, as she followed her sister-in-law into the market. "Nothing in particular," she said "Only she's coming here from Portland to take charge of the new library over on the west side. I just had a letter from her this morning."

Lolly put her frivolous head to one side, and made Ben Turpin eyes: "Hmm! A librarian," she remarked, "I hope if she's highbrow you won't make me see much of her. I have no soul above dancing, bridge playing, keeping house, and buying groceries—How much is lettuce a head, this morning?"

Her last sentence was addressed to the Italian before whose vegetable stall she and Sylvia were standing. And while she wrangled with him about the high cost of living, Sylvia re-read Babs' letter.

Yes, she supposed that Babs was what Lolly would call a "highbrow." She read dull books, wore thick glasses and no make-up, and her clothes were terrible. At least, they had been terrible the last time Sylvia had seen her, four years before.

"At any rate, she's not the kind of girl that Ranny would look at twice," Sylvia thought, and was comforted by the thought. "No man would look at her twice—and not many of them even once."

And anyway, she went on thinking, Ranny wouldn't look at a Follies beauty these days, except as he might look at a beautiful picture or a statue. He seemed at last to have settled down for good. Why, he was getting to be a regular Family Man, like the kind in the funny papers. He rushed home at five every afternoon, he kept the yard clean, and last Saturday he had even white washed the basement. He didn't play poker any more, either.

Sylvia tucked Babs' note into the pocket of her coat, and turned to the serious business of collecting meat and vegetables for dinner.

It wasn't until after that dinner was eaten, and she and Ranny were settled before the living room fire that Sylvia even thought of Babs again.

She ran upstairs then, and took her letter out of her coat pocket.

"I suppose I'll have to ask her to stay here for a day or two until she finds a place to live," she said, when she had read it to Ranny.

He scowled. "I suppose you will," he admitted grudgingly. "But I hate the thought of having a strange female hanging around the house. I'll bet she smokes cigarets, too, and talks about a lot of things she doesn't understand. If there's anything I can't stand it's an old maid. Where are you going to put her to sleep?"

That was a problem. Sylvia didn't know just where she could put Babs and her bags, when she did come. There was no extra bedroom now that Sylvia the Second had arrived. Even the little housemaid, Liza, had to go home at night.

"I suppose you could sleep on the davenport for a night or two," Sylvia said finally, "and Babs could have your bed,"

But Ranny interrupted her. "Nix on the comedy," he said, shaking his head and looking as cross as a bear, "I'd get a fine lot of sleep on that thing, wouldn't I?—No. I'll go over to mother's while your old maid friend's here. Maybe she'll take the hint and beat it after the first night."

And so it was settled.

But Sylvia wasn't happy about it.

It wasn't that she didn't want Babs to come there. She did want her, and she was hospitably inclined, anyway.

"My Dear, I've Never Seen Anything So Good Looking As Your Husband."

But she hated the thought of Ranny leaving her, even for a few nights. She hated anyone to spoil their evenings here together, in the white panelled room with its grate fire, its books, and its softly shaded lamps.

The Little White House was an earthly heaven for her, these days.

She loved every bit of it, from the attic where Ranny had put his old billiard table and his wall exerciser, to the basement that he had whitewashed. She loved it as a woman loves the place where she finds happiness and contentment and peace. And Sylvia had found all three of them here, in this cheerful little place.

On Sunday morning, a few days later, Babs' telegram came.

"You open it and read it," Sylvia called to Ranny when he brought it upstairs. She was bathing the baby herself, at the time, and didn't dare to leave her for even a half minute.

For Sylvia the Second was no frail baby, such as little junior had been. She was fat and sturdy, and she rolled herself around on the bath table in a reckless way that filled Sylvia with fear that some day she would roll right off and onto the floor.

"It's from your friend, Babs Delano," Ranny called through the closed door of the bathroom, "She says she'll be here at five tonight and wants you to meet her at the station."

Sylvia groaned inwardly. Sunday was Liza's day off, and there wasn't anything in the house to eat but some canned things. For on Sundays mother Phelps always gathered her flock around her at the big house, and fed them on the fat of the land.

"I must say that your old pal has nerve," Ranny added, after a pause, "Why does she have to be met at the station as if she were the Dowager Empress of Patagonia, I'd like to know? Why can't she jump in a cab and come out here, by herself, huh? I suppose this means I've got to go and get her doesn't it?"

Sylvia slipped the baby's flannel kimono over her cute little curly head, wrapped her in a pink blanket and went out into the hall.

"Come on downstairs, and we'll talk it over in peace and comfort," she said, and carried Sylvia the Second down to the living room. "Of course, you'll have to meet her, but how will you know her? You've never seen her and I can't go with you, because it's the baby's bedtime."

Then a sudden thought struck her, and she laid Sylvia the Second in Ranny's arms, and ran upstairs to the attic. There, in her old steamer-trunk, she found the thing she was looking for. A photograph of Babs Delano.

Ranny groaned when he saw it. "Whew, she certainly is some flaming mamma," he exclaimed, half shutting his eyes as if the sight of Babs' pictured face hurt them.

Sylvia couldn't help laughing at him. "She isn't half as homely as this picture," she said. "She really would be good looking if she fixed herself up a little. She has nice features, and you'll like her. She's just as smart as a whip."

Ranny grinned. "She'd have to be as smart as mustard to get away with a face like that," he answered.

But at five o'clock he left the house on his way to meet Babs Delano. He had her picture in his pocket.

"Although I don't really need it," he had said to Sylvia, when he kissed her goodby, "I'll just look around for the homeliest woman in sight—and that will be Babs, I know."

At six o'clock, when the baby was in bed, and a cold supper was laid on the tea table in front of the living room fire, his car swung into the driveway.

Through the gathering darkness, Sylvia could see that there was no one but himself in it. But a second later a taxicab stopped in front of the house.

From the door way, Sylvia saw Babs get out of it. Then Ranny jumped out of his own car, and hurried across the lawn toward her. He paid the driver who had brought her, and gathered up her three handbags.

Sylvia heard him explaining to Babs how he had waited for her at the station and missed her, somehow. They were both laughing as they came up the walk and into the glare of the porch light.

"No wonder he didn't recognize her," was Sylvia's first thought when her eyes fell on Babs. For Babs had changed miraculously in the last four years. She was almost handsome.

Her hair, that had been oily and dark as an Indian squaw's locks, had been bobbed and permanently waved.

She had always had good features although her complexion had been bad. But someone had shown her how to color her lips and cheeks, and to shadow her eyes with brown powder, so that they looked large and soft.

Her clothes were no longer as "terrible" as Sylvia had described them to Lolly. They were simple and clinging, and delicately fragrant with some kind of spicy perfume. In short, Babs had transformed herself from an Ugly Duckling into a Swan, to say the least.

She gave Ranny a radiant smile from under her darkened lashes when she shook hands with him. And her eyes followed his tall figure as he started up the stairs of the Little White House with her bags.

"My dear," she said excitedly to Sylvia, when he was out of hearing, "My dear, I've never seen anything in my life half so good looking as your husband."

For the life of her, Sylvia couldn't have told you why her heart sank at the words. But it did.

It was like lead in her breast, as she led Babs Delano into her living room.

GOVERNMENT

for unfilled jobs. Its investigations, however, are usually superficial and confined strictly to its work.

In the commerce department there are three investigation bureaus in addition to the census bureau. The steamboat inspection service conducts rigid investigations of American-owned steamships. Under the law, the service must be furnished, for instance, with blueprints of certain parts of all vessels. The work of this agency is done with an eye to the safety and comfort of passengers and crews.

The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce has a force of hundreds of investigators at home and abroad, their efforts being devoted to extending American trade. Through 16 commodity divisions and through other branches it keeps in close touch at all times with conditions in each of the major industries of the United States. Most of the investigating work which enables it to do so is done by correspondence and questionnaires.

The bureau of mines conducts minor investigations in the mineral industries and, by means of a questionnaire publishes a monthly review of gasoline stocks, production and related information. The geological survey of the department of the interior follows much the same methods of investigating the weekly production of coal and the monthly state of the petroleum industry. At irregular intervals, the survey also estimates stocks of hard and soft coal on hand—a work involving the liberal use of the questionnaire.

In the department of agriculture there are several bureaus which have been endowed with investigative powers by congress. One of these is the bureau of chemistry which enforces the food and drug act. It has wide powers of inquiry and action. Another is the packers and stockyards administration which supervises all the packing houses and stockyards of the country. A third is the grain futures administration which has broad powers over the grain exchanges of the United States and may conduct sweeping investigations.

If the business man happens to be a banker, his bank (assuming it to be a national bank) is subject to investigation by two federal agencies, the controller of the currency and the federal reserve board.

So far as the railroads, the telephone and telegraph companies, the costal steamship lines and the pipelines are concerned, their big federal boss is the Interstate Commerce Commission. These industries are subject at all times to minute federal investigation by the commission and are regulated in great detail by the same agency. This, of course, does not preclude their investigation by other governmental agencies such as the internal revenue bureau, the census bureau, the bureau of chemistry, and so on.

Drinking Water

One minor phase of railroad operation, for instance, subject to investigation by the public health service is their drinking water supply for passengers. Not many years ago the public health service banished the common drinking cup from passenger trains. Today it makes frequent tests of the drinking water furnished and in addition investigates the manner in which the containers are filled and cleaned.

Another first-rate investigator is the tariff commission, whose activities will be described in more detail later. Still another active agency of investigation is the customs service which levies and collects the duties on importation. The federal trade commission, also, is extremely active in inquire into the business practices of any firm or individual in business in the country.

Above all these is the congressional committee to which usually is given power to compel attendance and production of papers. Indeed, in some cases a committee's investigators have simply moved into a large office and taken complete charge of the documents. Every firm and individual in the country is subject to such a committee's questioning.

As if this were not enough, congress creates or the administration appoints, from time to time, special commissions such as the coal commission which not long ago investigated the coal industry (at a cost of $600,000) the oil conservative board which kept the entire industry busy for months answering questionnaires, and the federal power commission, whose investigations are restricted to a narrowed particular line.

And in All, government is in business up to its hilt—in business with a question on its lips every moment of the day.

JUDGE KAY

tle short, dark-brown worm, if he is a worm. I don't know how he is classified and he sucks the blood out of you. Now he hasn't any warmth in his body, he is a cold-blooded animal. Doctors used to use him to bleed people. When that blood is coming out it does not clot, it does not coagulate, it keeps running for him but it stops and clots and coagulates for other animals or insects that can bite you. They found out about that lately, that leech has got a little gland in his mouth that makes some kind of a substance that keeps the blood from clotting. If it wasn't for that he wouldn't live and he is the only animal that has got that. That strikes me as a very curious thing and a very great proof of design and plan. It may not to you, the scientist who was telling me about it in his book, it no doubt never occurred to him there was anything unusual about it, but it was to me and I think it is to you a great proof of design and plan.

Now this rainbow that came after the flood. Did you ever get some red and green and purple and other colors and make you a rainbow. You can put those colors in any kind of arrangement that you like and see if it is not a miserable failure and an impossible rainbow, unless you arrange the colors like they are in the sky, they won't go together any other way. Now tell me that just happened! Those colors were put together by the matchless mind of God and they were put together right and the only way they can be put together.

The Scale Stops.

When I was a little boy I used to think that the organ and piano might have been longer and the scale might have been longer, but you can't have any more musical notes than are on the piano, you can't run the scale up to nine or ten, because the everlasting law of nature is that it stops when the scale runs out and that scale is the same scale as the colors of the rainbow. I was talking with a man who makes it his business to build boats, trying to buy a boat in fact, and he was talking about a boat being seaworthy and one that would ride the waves. Now he said you cannot build a boat nineteen feet long, it wouldn't ride them, he says you have got to build it in the musical scale either eighteen feet or twenty-one feet and so on up to the great liner or it would be awkward and would not be seaworthy. They found that out by experience and by trial. It is a wonderful thing, that through all nature the everlasting beauty and rythm of plan and design and organization is evident.

When the golfer goes out here to hit a golf ball, he calls it timing, but if he doesn't hit that ball with the same scale that is in the rainbow, if he doesn't hit it with the matchless music of John Milton, it isn't going. It has got to come down just like the eternal music of God for it to go. Has all of this a meaning There was an old Russian named Mendelithe, one of those stars of the first magnitude that flash out once of twice during a century and he got to working with chemistry and he discovered that all the elements that are in the world are vastly similar to the musical scale, so they if you know how much iron was in the world or how much copper, or how much nickel or what not, you could take that one element and put it in the scale and determine how much gold there was or what not. In other words he just had the elements standing up singing songs to him telling him how God made everything and how he put them together. It is no wonder that Job sang, "Where wast thou man when the morning stars band together?"

Now this rainbow was put in the sky as a covenant to man. Now I don't know all that is meant by all that. Did you ever see a rainbow in the desert or in the mountains up there in New Mexico There it is much more glorious, it is right at you. This story tells us this is a promise to man. Now the question I want to put up to you is can a man live his life with the colors in the rainbow, with the musical scale, with the boat that rides the waves, with the chemical compounds, with the crystals, can he do that? In other words, can a man so live that he will be in touch and in harmony in unison with the great music of nature and of nature's God? Such a man is the man who gets the most out of life, as I think you can see from my illustration.

A Word For Sin.

Now the oldest word for sin in the world came way back yonder before our ancestors climbed the slopes of the White Mountains in Asia coming this way. They had a word for sin more expressive than ours, I think. It meant then with the people getting out of step, out of harmony, out of tune, so a man who goes out here and crushes his soul and his body with sin has disarranged the colors in the rainbow of his life, he has fixed his chemicals into an incompatible compound and has destroyed the design his Maker gave him by which he is intended to live. There is much about this thing that we do not know, there is much that we cannot know and I am glad that is true, because I can go down here and watch the tints of the leaves of the trees—one great man found over six hundred different shades of green on the elm trees. You go down to the creek next week and you will find they are all a little different tint to each other. But people those colors are for what purpose? And the flowers, as we go out here on the prairie without understanding, without knowledge, without strength and watch the unfolding beauties of the springtime in Texas and say that I can see it, but it is all the work of the Master. It is the beautiful design of one infinitely greater than you and I and but a glimpse and a proof and a hint of his glory, which somewhere, somehow is to be unfolded before us and somehow, somehow, we can understand better than we do here.

Jimmie Parker, Texhoma ace, stopped the Panhandle Longhorns' winning streak dead Sunday afternoon when he held them to five bingles, two runs and emerged the victor by and 8 to 2 margin.

Parker fanned an even 10 of the Panhandle men and to the list he included two pinch hitters in the ninth inning.

Hargrave, Panhandle third baseman, led the attack with a home run and a single in four times at bat. None of the other men on either team could get more than one hit.

Allen, flashing Texhoma second sacker, turned in the feature play of the game when he speared Kerr's line drive over second with a leaping one-handed catch and turned it into an easy double play.

Near Battle In Eighth

The game almost ended in the eighth inning in a free for all fight. Third Baseman Hargrave and Right Fielder Gerard Boone came to blows at third base and this adverted into another scrap between Bill Hoehn and Hoop Cannon. It took four men to pull Hoop from the melee and the game was then continued without further trouble.

Texhoma batted out from behind a two-run lead piled up by the Longhorns in the first three innings. In the second, Hargrave hit a long drive to center field for a home run. This was their first tally, and in the third they added another.

Hicks Singles

Hicks led off in the third with a single to center. Randolph was reported sick and Cannon, batting for him, walked. Hinds hit to Hale who forced Cannon at second, Hicks pulling up at third. On a nicely worked double steal Hicks stole home and Hinds went to second.

After this Jimmie Parker settled down and shut them out for the remaining six innings.

Texhoma shoved over their first tally in the fourth inning. Hale walked and later was safe at second when Davis hit to Cannon and Hinds dropped the throw to second. Allen hit down the third base line and beat the ball out while Hargrave waited for it to roll foul. The bases were filled. Hoop Cannon popped to Faichney. Gerard Boone bunted and squeezed Hale over the plate.

Tied in Sixth

Texhoma tied the count in the sixth inning. Kellogg opened the sixth with a double over Faichney's head. Allen and Cannon fanned and the chances seemed to grow deeper, but Boone hit to Hinds who heaved high to first base and Kelogg scored.

In the eighth inning runs were piled up by the Texhoma club and the game was iced away. Both Cannon and Hatton were sent from the hill and McDuffy called on to retire them.

Cannon walked Hale and Kellogg and was taken from the hill and replaced Hatton. Allen fanned. Hale and Kellogg pulled a double steal. Cannon dropped a little fly in right field for a safe hit when Graves failed to make a shoestring catch. Hale scored on the hit. Boone again attempted a squeeze play and beat out the bunt to first base, Kellogg and Cannon scoring. Parker drove a hot single past Hoehn and Boone went to third. It was at this point that Boone and Hargrave exchanged their blows. Hargrave had the base blocked and when the Texhoma midget bumped into him they went together. Parker took second on the throw in. Gordon bunted in front of the plate on another squeeze play and Hargrave fumbled the bunt and all hands safe, Boone scoring. Taylor lined a single to left scoring Parker and Gordon. McDuffy was then sent into the game. Davis rolled out Parker to Kellogg. Hale walked and Kellogg rolled out McDuffy to Kellogg for the final out.

Parker had no trouble in blanking the Longhorns in the ninth.

Cubs Win Out In 9th, 6 to 5, With Aid of an Error

Bottomley's Miscue on Easy Bunt By Alexander Proves Fatal

CHICAGO, May 2.—(AP)—For the fourth successive game of their series with the Cardinals, Chicago came from behind to win from St. Louis 6 to 5. Alexander had a good day at the plate and it was Bottomley's error on the veteran's bunt in the 9th that gave the Cubs the game. Score:

Bayou City Baseballers Take Bargain Matinee From Shippers

BEAUMONT, May 2.—(AP)—Houston took the first double bill of the season today 10 to 9 and 2 to 1, before a big Sunday crowd. Dell was driven from the mound in the second inning of the first game and Eberhard pitched brilliant baseball thereafter but the lead was too big. A ninth inning rally after two were out got two runs and left the tieing marker on second. Reagan, Deviveros and Vigara fielded well. The second was a mound duel with Mahady and Caldera vieing for honors as generous hurlers, 15 bases on balls being accredited the hitters. Caldera walked three in the first inning, which with an infield hit and sacrifice scored two for Houston, the first run being forced home by a walk. Mahady went wild in the fourth and forced a Beaumont run in with three passes and an infield error. Reagan, Deviveros and Ormand contributed fine fielding for the Cuban southpaw who started as an Exporter for the first time in three years. Dunning and Demaggio were the leading hitters of the afternoon. Score:

De Paolo Retains His Lead for 1926 Auto Race Honors

NEW YORK, May 2.—(AP)—Peter De Paolo, champion American auto racing driver of 1925, retains his lead in the battle for 1926 honors in spite of the fact that his good luck token, a pair of baby shoes tied to his machine failed to bring him victory yesterday in the 300 mile international race opening the new speedway near Hammonton, N. J., midway between Atlantic City and Philadelphia.

De Paolo finished second to Harry Hartz of California, in a speed battle that saw six world's records smashed at distances ranging from 75 to 300 miles. The 320 points awarded to the runner-up, however, were sufficient to keep De Paolo in front in the championship standing with a total of 1,180. Hartz, gaining 600 points by his victory, jumped to second place with 1,060 points for his 1926 total, displacing Bennett Hill, who failed yesterday to add to his score of 552. Bob McDonough landing third money and 170 points is fourth with a total of 340.

Pompey Looms As Big Derby Threat, Say Turf Prophets

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May. 2.—(AP)—Three colts loomed large in the calculations of turf prophets here tonight as possible winners of the Kentucky derby, to be run at Churchill Downs on May 15.

Pompey's easy gallop to victory in the Wood stakes yesterday and Canter's smashing second to Rockman in the Cheseapeake stakes Thursday served to fortify the two eastern thoroughbreds in the posts of mild favoritism accorded them on their records as two-year-olds.

With the big race less than two weeks away however, it seemed certain that horses running in the colors of E. R. Bradley, Lexington, turfman, would attract a tremendous volume of play from Kentuckians.

Events at the Lexington meeting during the past week showed the strong hand of Bradley, whose horses race as representatives of the Idle Hour stables. When Bubbling Over ran a mile in 1:38 4-5, to win Hard Held at the Lexington track Monday his stable mate, Boot to Boot was closest to him at the finish. On Thursday another Idle Hour racer, Bagen Baggage won easily from a field of three-year-olds at a mile and 70 yards, with his stable mate, Barcola, in second place.

Gulfers Portside Eagles to Death

The Burkburnett Gulf Production company southpawed the American Refinery Eagles to death Sunday afternoon and won the long end of a 6 to 5 score on the Burkburnett diamond. Lefties Snow and Coop worked for the Burkburnett nine.

Snipe Connally was pounded from the box in the second inning and Ronie Glidewell, the American ace, then finished the game and hurled good ball.

Curley Christian led the hitting at tack. He also played a great game at third base. Coyal Francis was used at short in place of Raymond Windham, who split a finger in the infield practice before the game.

DODGERS, SOX SURPRISES OF MAJOR RACES

Collins Men Out-Hit Yanks, Brooklyn Pitchers Are Effective

NEW YORK, May 2.—(AP)—Another week in major league baseball has brought to notice an exceptional defense in Chicago and redoubtable pitching in Brooklyn.

Slugging, with hits bunched has given the New York Yankees eight straight conquests, two over the Boston Red Sox and three over the Philadelphia Athletics and the champion Senators and behind this attack has been strong mound work and an excellent performance on the field. The American league is in the hands of the New Yorkers where last season they were no better than sixth.

Has Real Fielders.

But the Chicago White Sox, led by the veteran Second Baseman Eddie Colling and bolstered by Everett Scott who short stopped in the American league for a record number of consecutive games, have gained six contests in the past week and lost only one. In their magnificent rush a single fielding misplay was recorded, that by Catcher Crouz on Saturday.

Collins' men actually outhit and out-scored the Yankees in the seven days and a worthwhile forecast on the result of the 1926 race must await the first visit of the western teams to the east this week.

Petty Shows Way.

Brooklyn's effort, a victorious streak broken by Philadelphia Saturday when Fred Leach and Cy Williams found Dazzy Vance for home runs, is perhaps, the most amazing development of the season. The Dodgers, with an infield shattered, have been pulled together by the sensational play of the little veteran, Rabbit Maranville, and now lead the National league.

Jess Petty, a big left hander, native of Los Angeles, has won four of the Dodger victories, permitting only 17 hits in 38 innings while Vance, the ace of 1925, has lost his only two starts. Johnny Butler, the 30-year-old infielder from the American association has been installed at second base after a brief illness and should be a fixture, although to date he has failed to meet expectations in the hitting department.

Robins Run Wild

BROOKLYN, May 2.—(AP)—Consistent hitting behind the great pitching of Jess Barnes gave Brooklyn the first game of the series with Boston today 9 to 1. The Robins knocked Ryan out of the box in the third inning and treated Benton, Graham and Hearn almost as harshly. Gue Felix led the assault on the Braves with a triple and a double accounting for four runs. Score:

Martin's Curves Driven Out With Gusto In Dallas

Wichita Falls Hits Hard But Airtight Fielding Keeps Them Away From Plate

DALLAS, May 2.—Conley's Steers slammed Paddy Martin at a terrific clip, taking the second straight from Wichita Falls this afternoon, 14 to 4. The Spudders got to Victor and Darrough for 11 hits, but airtight fielding held the score down. Dallas pounded out an even dozen safe blows. Errors afield and bases on balls abetted the local team in running up such a large score.

The Spudders started like sure winners, hitting Victor lustily. They knocked Victor from the box in the sixth inning.

All but two of the Dallas runs came late in the game.

Wichita Falls scored two runs in the first inning. Distel flied out to center field. Metzler walked. Brainard doubled to center, scoring Metzler. He took third after the catch on fly hit to center by Washburn. Fitzgerald followed with a single through second base, scoring Brainard.

Spuds Good At Start

Martin looked good in the first and the Steers failed to threaten. Neither club scored in the second inning. Sharp fielding by the Wichita Falls infield kept Dallas from crossing the plate. Riley, first up, drew a walk. He was forced at second by O'Brien on hard roller to short. Morse hit into a double play, Turgeon to Distel to Washburn.

Dallas scored four runs in the third inning. After there was one out,

Suds Sutherland will pitch for the Spudders in the series final this afternoon at Dallas, Manager Brainard announced last night.

Nervous Wichita Falls fans who upon learning Ping Bodie was not in the lineup yesterday, feared the redoubtable Italian outer gardner was sick or injured, need worry none. The lineup was shifted, said Brainard, to see if the Spudders couldn't break the jinx that has been trailing them.

Brainard declared the entire club is in good spirits and that each Spudder feels the team will get going soon and be non-stopable.

The Skipper wired the Record News sports editor last night in answer to earlier telegraphic query: "Tell the fans we're not discouraged yet! We'll get going soon!"

Victor singled to center. Martin filled the bases by walking Bauman and Gross. Williams followed with a double to right field, scoring Victor and Bauman and sending Gross to third. A single by Riley sent Gross and Williams over the plate. Riley was thrown out stealing.

Fast fielding held Dallas from the plate in the fourth. O'Brien led off with a double to center. Morse grounded out to Turgeon with O'Brien advancing to third. Billings flied out to left and Lamb nailed O'Brien at the plate on bullet throw to Lapan.

Spud Greed Hurts 'Em

Brainard singled in the Spudder half of the third inning but was thrown out at second trying to stretch the blow to a double. Washburn combed a double to center off Victor but was called out when the ball was thrown to first, the umpire ruling the Spudder had failed to touch the bag in his flight for second.

Turgeon led off the fourth with a single to left and was thrown out at second trying to make a two-bagger out of his hit.

But with one out in the fifth Wichita Falls batters doubled and got away with it. Neither omitted to tag first en route to the keystone. Neither arrived at second too late. Distel doubled to left center. Metzler followed with a two-bagger to right center, sending Distel home. Brainard flied out to left and Washburn hoisted to first base, retiring the visitors with no further scoring.

Victor Out in Sixth

For a few moments the score was tied up in the sixth inning. Turgeon conected for a home run into the left field bleachers with the bases empty. He touched all the bases. Lamb followed with a single to left and Victor was relieved by Darrough who got by without no further trouble.

Miller opened the Dallas half of the sixth inning with a double to right field. He went to third on a sacrifice bunt by Riley. Martin hit O'Brien with pitched ball, sending him to first. Morse walked, filling the bases. Billings singled to center, scoring Miller and O'Brien. Darrough struck out and Bauman forced Morse at third. The score was 6 to 4, Dallas.

Conley's men scored three more runs in the seventh after Metzler had led off for Wichita Falls with a single but died on the paths while the next three batters proved easy victims. The bases were filled when Riley doubled again, scoring two runners. O'Brien hoisted a sacrifice fly to center, scoring another runner from third.

Call Out Bat Boy

Dallas score five runs in the eighth. Wild throws to first by Distel and Brainard put two runners on. Then Gross beat out a bunt down the third base line to load the sacks with none out. A double by Williams sent two runners over. Infield outs coupled with walks and another safe crack scored three runs.

The same teams are to play here tomorrow. Neither club manager was sure what pitchers would be called out as starters. Fred Brainard, Wichita manager, said he wouldn't know until game time because practically his entire staff is afflicted with a sore-arm epidemic.

Said Brainard: "I hated to use Martin this afternoon. His arm has been bothering him. After I sent him out there I hated to leave him in, but I didn't have anybody to relieve him with. At the rate we're going right now I may have to use the bat boy tomorrow. His arm isn't botheirng him, but I don't know whether or not he can throw as far as home plate."

Waco Wins Another

SAN ANTONIO, May 2.—(AP)—Earl Wolgamot's well seasoned bat drove in all of Waco's runs, including two in the 11th inning to give the visitors today's game 4 to 3. Although the Bears tapped Southpaw Jimmie Priesmuth for ten hits he was at his best in the tenth inning when with the bases loaded, one down and a run needed for a Bear victory he fanned Walter Golvin on three swings.

Mike Collins lasted two innings for the Bears, walking four batters. When he walked the fifth in the third he was taken out and Babe Owens sent to the hill. Wolgamot was the only one who hit Owens with effect and each of his three drives was productive.

ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

April 3, 1925

Charles A. Allingham, pioneer rancher and banker of this section, dies in Vernon home.

TWO GREAT MEN

THOMAS JEFFERSON, the founder of the democratic party, advocated a constitutional amendment permitting the federal government to co-operate with the states in such matters as vocational training and agricultural work. Thomas B. Love made the discovery. Thomas Jefferson is dead. Thomas B. isnt. He is a candidate for senator from Dallas county. He is for public highways for the reason he knows where to find his hat. In other words, he knows what the majority of the people want.

He is not "agin" the 50-50 plan. He says that the farmers will not continue to follow their vocation willingly unless they are lifted out of the mud. He has made the discovery that of 1,800 miles of road in Dallas county, only 700 miles are paved, leaving 800 miles of black waxy mud to bog and maroon the bulk of the farmers after rain. Dallas is a road-building county. Dallas City pays most of the mony to build most of the highways.

Thomas B., who is in the land of the living, warns the democrats of his county who are opposed to federal highway aid, that the federal road act was passed during the administration of Woodrow Wilson and since its passage $35,000,000 has been spent by the United States government for Texas' roads, this being the largest sum spent in any state.

Thomas B. claims to be a prophet. The balder he grows the more seer like he becomes. Now he is of the opinion that if federal aid is stopped as the result of the Archer county bond case, road building in Texas will be set back five years. Senator John Davis is seeking renomination. He is opposed to federal aid or rather to the principle of federal aid.

Thomas B. is seeking the scalp of Big John and the senatorial prize. Now it is up to Big John to read the messages and the state papers of Thomas Jefferson in order to supply himself with material to make it interesting in the campaign for the bald headed Missourian who led the force of William Gibbs McAdoo to defeat in two very exciting campaigns.

Big John is a native Texan. He was born in San Jacinto county. They did not have paved roads in San Jacinto when Big John was a boy. Now they are building them and are ready to accept federal aid.

Big John was born a pro and an equal suffragist. Thomas B. wasn't. He was converted to the twin proposals by William Jennings Bryan. Big John sat as a delegate in the Madison Square Garden convention. He was one of the first to declare for the nomination of John W. Davis when the flag of McAdoo fell from the tired hand of Thomas B.

Now Thomas B. says Big John isn't a democrat, and when the campaign opens in earnest, Big John will be in telling the voters the proper classification to be made, politically, of one of the leaders of three forlorn hopes and two lost causes.

Some smug faces are certain to break into the picture of the fortieth legislature.

THIS TAKES MENTALITY, TOO

MASCULINE vanity will doubtless be considerably flattered by the admission by a lady politician that women are not the intellectual equals of men. But this is about as far as it will go. The men themselves might be divided into halves—say, according to age or girth measurement—and one-half proved intellectually superior to the other. The women constitute half of the franchise system in the United States. To say that this half is mentally inferior—even though it could be proved—does not mean anything. They are there, and that is all there is to it. As for the flattering of masculine vanity which this 'admission" constitutes—well, in that respect, at least, the superiority of women must be unanimously conceded. To complete the circle, as all we have to say is that it takes a certain degree of mentality to flatter successfully.

IMPENDING PERIL

France seems to be on the brink of compulsory service in the cabinet.

COMPETITION

It is said that during the eruption of Mauna Loa one could barely hear the sound of the ukeleles on the beach at Waikiki.

AN ADVANCE

High schools used to discipline girls for chewing gum. Now they enforce penalties for carrying pocket flasks.

GROWING

We are becoming less and less dependent on Europe. Practically all our golf professionals are now home grown.

A MAGIC VALLEY EPIC

THIS is a Magic Valley epic. George H. Pletcher of Hidalgo county, is strong for Irish potatoes. Old timers told him that the Irish potato could not be grown in the valley. On January 20, 1926, Pletcher planted 90 bushels of Irish potatoes, red Triumph variety, on less than five acres of ground. He started digging his potatoes on April 2 and finished April 14, digging 730 bushels which netted him $2,347.60.

These potatoes were entirely free from scab or other defects. In 1925 Pletcher planted this same five acres in potatoes. He harvested a hundred bushels to the acre without fertilizer, 90 days after planting. This was followed by cowpeas, which were disliked under, then a crop of beans was harvested in November of that year.

This land lay idle from November 1925 to January 20, 1926, when the potato crop harvested in April was planted by Pletcher, planted in a five-acre citrus orchard between young trees. This story should be sent to the publicity agents of the Florida land boomers.

He tells of the fertility of Texas soil, the climatic conditions of Texas, the dividends that may be harvested by a diversifier of crops in a section where the modern Luther Burbanks are confident that a new crop can be produced every month of the year.

California has climate for sale; Florida has its gulf breezes and Texas has sunshine, gulf breezes, soil as rich as the valley of the Nile and a climate where crops may be produced and harvested 365 days in the year.

Californians sold California to the people of 48 states and British North America. Florida is attempting to do the same thing. Why not Texas? It appears the first thing to do is to sell Texas to Texans and then let the wide world know it.

ROCKEFELLER'S GIFT

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR., withdrawing his offer of $10,000,000 to Egypt for a museum and school of archeology, is moved by the fact that the Egyptians wanted the controlling voice in the management immediately instead of gradually. Mr. Rockefeller was willing to relinquish the entire direction of its foundation to King Fuad's government as soon as there was native-born scholars capable of first-rate archeological research. But home-bred archeologists able to hold their own with Schliemann or Doerpfeld, Peterie or Maspero or Carter, have not yet been raised up in Fuad's country, and it would seem a breach of trust to commit the treasures housed in a great museum to incompetent directors and curators. It has proved galling to the armour prepre of certain Egptian chauvinists to be reminded that foreigners are better qualified than those of their own number to decipher and display the records of the immemorial past.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM THERE?

ABOUT 200,000,000 persons nominally speak the English language. But admittedly and even proudly, Americans have gone somewhat astray from the purer springs. So have Canada, South Africa and Australia. St. John Ervine asserts that most Englishmen have also got off the track. By this process of elimination, the minority has become rather limited. But why stop here? By the same process, differences might be discovered that would reduce the number of chosen purists to a mere handful—even down to one. It would be curious if that one should turn out to be Sir John Ervine himself, for even he has one glaring and unescapable peculiarity of pronunciation. He calls his doublet first name something like "Sin-Jin." If that is pure English for St. John—where do we go from there?

THE LATEST MARVEL

SEEING by radio is the latest marvel. To a world fairly surfeited with the wonders of mechanical invention the highly sensitized revolving lenses, making television possible by receiving transmitted motion pictures, represent merely a further step in the development of accepted appliances and principles which no longer produce a thrill. But when simultaneously seeing-in and listening-in become a domestic commonplace and walls have eyes as ears, we can see and hear each other, the world around, as though distance no longer existed, and nostalgia may have to be classed among the obsolete maladies.

Dad's Pardonable Error

DOROTHY DIX

Questions From the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

Most husbands Would Prefer the Wife Who Counted the Effort of Her Words Rather Than Her Calories; Whose Spirits Were Lifted Instead of Her Face; Whose Wrinkles Were Ironed Out of Her Disposition; Whose Morale Never Sagged.

It is a natural desire that all women have to make themselves as attractive as possible. To this end they not only spend vast sums of money in the beauty shops, but they heroically submit themselves to the tortures of the inquisition.

Many a martyr at the stake has suffered less than the women do who are parboiled and skinned alive in the attempt to acquire a schoolgirl complexion; who undergo all the agony of slow starvation trying to attain a boyish figure, and who grow old before their time toiling at the never-ending labor of trying to keep young.

And the pitiful part of it all is that it is love's labor lost. These frightful sacrifices are made in vain, for in spite of all effort no one can cheat time. The years put their brand upon us, and no matter how artfully we dye our locks or how skillfully we hand-paint our complexions or how near we understudy a living skeleton, we cannot really camouflage our age.

After 40, every inch we ake off our waistlines we put in the lines of our faces. Our hairdresser can give us young-looking hair, but he cannot give us the fresh, young faces to go below it. We can buy ourselves flapper clothes but no earthly power can make us look like a flapper in them.

So, inasmuch as we cannot be young and beautiful at middle age, no matter how hard we strive to do so, it often occurs to me that we might far better spend our thoughts and energies developing spiritual attractions instead of physical ones.

For, after all, a woman's looks are a very sall part of her. They are merely her shop window where she hangs out a few charms to catch the eye, but if she holds out interest and our affection and admiration she has to carry a bigger stock than that. She has to have qualities of brain and heart that are all wool and a yard wide, and that are warranted to wear well and not shrink in the wash.

Suppose then that instead of doing her daily dozen to keep her body supple a woman did her daily dozen to keep her mind and her sympathies supple. Don't you think she would really get better results? Don't you think it would do more to keep her really young?

For age is not so much of the hardening of the arteries as it is the hardening of perception. You are never old as long as you can change your opinions and shift your point of view and alter your way of living. The sign of age is becoming set in your ways; having to do the things you have always done and eat the things you have always eaten.

It is a lot worse to get muscle bound in mind than it is in body, and to have your sympathies creak than it is to have your knees. And women will get better results from bending her own views a dozen times a day to meet those of her husband and children and friends than she will from bending over and touching the floor with the palms of her hands.

If women would do their spiritual dozen as religiously as they do their daily physical dozen; if they would constantly exercise their minds and their hearts and keep from getting rigid and stiff in their opinions; if they would keep themselves standing on tiptoes with new ideas and interests and enthusiasms, they would keep permanently young. Or if they didn't nobody would know it or care, because they would have the charm that makes them ageless.

The think that takes the joy out of life nowadays for women is counting their calories, because somehow they are always about twice as much as they should be, no matter how little you seem to have eaten or how often you have denied yourself dishes for which your mouth watered.

The Whip Discovers Art

BY MEIGS O. FROST

It was a fine place to hole up, the Chicago Whip decided. Last place in the world the New Orleans harness bulls and dicks would look for a guy. And if they did—

He nodded approvingly as he considered the outlook from his attic quarters, front and aft. Four flights of stairs to climb before anybody reached the hall door. Those funny, fancy iron balconies in front, running along building after building, with their open-work for a toe-hold clear down to the side-walk, were smooth stuff for a get-away. And the wooden balconies in the back were almost as good. Court-yards led out to a side street, too. Quiet streets. And the roof!

"Looks jake," he affirmed.

He turned his attention to the contents of his kit-bag. There was a full flask in it, and some sandwiches. The food disappeared. The flask stayed corked as he drank from the washstand pitcher. No use jarring your bean when you might have to use it quick and hard, he told himself.

Nothing to do now but sit pretty until the Big Feller passed the word the next liquor-boat was ready to slip out for Nassau.

He wondered what Nassau was like and wished it was honest-toGod country, though. Like that Illinois farm section he had come through, headed south. Crops and fat cows standing around, and comfortable farm-houses and trees here and there. Like many city-bred folk, the Whip cherished a sentimental love for the country. A love all the stronger in that the joys of country life were known to him only through certain scenes in the movies. The Whip's reading was negligible.

To the events that had placed him in temporary hiding, Nassau-bound, the Whip gave little thought. That was all in the day's business. Kinda hard luck, but all in the day's business.

How in the name of Mike could anybody have expected hi mto know that the two guys with shotguns who had held up the liquor-loaded truck headed up the Lower Coast road to New Orleans—the truck it was his paid duty to guard—were deupty sheriffs instead of the hi-jackers he took them to be? They hadn't flashed any badges or worn any uniform or anything. Just cracked down on him, as he explained an hour later to the Big Feller, and dam' near spattered his head out from under his cap, at that. So the Whip had done his stuff.

It was effective stuff. The same stuff the Whip had been paid to deliver in Chicago, and had delivered. That was why he had been sent on, temporarily, to New Orleans, with an unaddressed, ambiguously-worded letter to the Big Feller—the letter that was his passport and assured him further employment at his specialty.

That specialty was removing such human obstacles as happened to block the path of his employer. The Whip was a competent specialist—an artist, even. His professional instruments were heavy and blue-black and flat and automatic and forty-five calibre. They never jammed. He used either, or both, with assured indifference.

When the ever-accursed nosey reporters had learned that the two dead men on the Pointe-a-la-Hache road were newly appointed deputy sheriffs, and the headlines began to flare, edition after edition, the Whip took his orders. Quietly he checked out of the quet hotel where he had been a guest. He went to the address, in the old French quarter, that the Big Feller had given him. The ancient building at that address, kept by a half-blind old concierge, had been used by the Big Feller for emergencies, before. It held studios for hard-working artists, largely, but it held, too, a few rooms for tourist-lodgers who liked to live and wander in the rabbit-warren of olden buildings that cluster about the Old St. Louis Cathedral, fronting narrow, deserted, Old World streets.

In one of these rooms the Whip was now established. All he awaited was word from the Big Feller telling of the arrival of a certain sea-going gasoline cruiser that would slip empty out of Lake Pontchartrain and the Rigolets as swiftly and as silently as she had slipped in, laden.

Little of this, however ,the Whip revolved in his mind, as, drawing on a cigarette, elbows on window-sill, he alternated his casual gape at the street far below by looking over the roofs nearby.

Everything looked jaded, didn't it? It was the Whip's practice to let the other guys do the worrying. The only thing really on his mind was a vague sort of loneliness—a foggy kind of discontent that he couldn't take this enforced vacation on a nice little farm, such as he had seen frequently depicted in the movies.

Some day, if he found the right sort of a jane, he was going to buy a little farm and settle down. In the rubber-lined belt that rested against his skin about the lithe waist, was a little matter of eight thousand dollars, the net profits of his past two years as a specialist. A guy ought to be able to buy some kind of a farm out west or down south, somewhere, for eight grand or thereabouts, he figured. Raise all sorts of things on it.

What was that?

The tensed and turned, an automatic flashing magically into his hand. To his straining ears came a faint sound as of something dragging on the floor just outside.

"Steve Brodie took a chance," he meditated.

Cat-footed, he tiptoed to the doorway. As he leaned forward, hand nearing the knob, he heard the faint and dragging sound again.

Carefully he moved to the wall, reached out, and turned the key. He was flattened against that wall, gun in hand, as the door swung inward to his gentle pull. Still nothing happened.

Cautiously he peered around the corner.

There on the hall floor, in front of his door, clear in the reflected sunset glow through the skylight, he saw the huddled form of an old, old man. Faded blue eyes shone with the glint of a desperate determination, as the old figure sought to haul itself nearer the door. While the Whip looked on, puzzled, the crawling limbs lapsed limply to the floor again. The white and shaggy head sank low.

One sweeping glance showed the Whip that save for this pitiful figure, the hall was untenanted. His pistol vanished as magically as it had appeared. He stepped forward and stooped.

"What's the matter, granddad?" he asked, solicitously. "Too much hooch?"

"Take—me—back—there—"

The old man essayed feebly to indicate the door across the hall—a door swinging partly open. His effort failed in mid-gesture, but the Whip understood.

Strong hands scooped up under the prostrate figure. The old man was carried acros sthe hall, through the door, and into such an apartment as the Whip had never seen before—though he recognized it, instantly. Same stuff he had seen pictured in the "Pitfalls of An Artiste' Model"—five reels. Not near as classy, though.

Then the old man's eyes opened.

"Sorry—" he began, his voice quavering with distress and weakness.

"Sall right, Old-timer," said the Whip. "Spill the dope. Get it off your chest. Bad hooch sure is hell."

Misty puzzlement lurked in the faded blue eyes.

"I must ask that you get a doctor," he said weakly. "There is one three

PERIODICAL CICADAS

We sometimes read in the paper that a plague of seventeen year locusts is predicted for the following season, and we wonder how it is that anybody can know when and where these insects, which are not really locusts at all but cicadas, will appear. The early settlers in New England noticed the strange habits of these cicadas, and from that time to this they have been studied until it is now known just in what parts of each state a crop of the destructive cicadas will appear. Even the approximate date is known, and whether there will be a light or heavy infestation. All this has been figured out on the basis of long observation, and the different "broods" that have hatched in different years have been mapped out and their dates for reappearances, in fourteen or seventeen year periods, have been figured out for long in advance. But nobody knows why the cicadas choose to remain buried under the ground for seventeen years at a time, nor by what instinctive clock work they are able to get the date right.

Now what do you know about that?

Answers to Saturday's questions.

1. The European cuckoo lays its eggs in other birds' nests; the American cowbird also does this.
2. Gulls live on dead fish.
3. Kingfishers, dive for fresh-water fish.
4. The passenger pigeon is probably now found nowhere, being extinct; in 1897 the last wild specimen was seen.
5. Falcons are trained by men to hunt other birds.
6. Black swans are found in Australia.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

BY MARY BLAKE

TAURUS

Today's planetary aspects are quite favorable until noon. They then become adverse and unpropitious. All your energetic efforts should be made in the morning, as the signs denote ultimate success for anything worthwhile attempted during this period, although commitments of a financial character do not promise a very satisfactory outcome. During the rest of the day, the indications point to temperamental disturbances, that will tend to unbalance judgment and nullify good intentions. A quiescent attitude should be established, especially in the family circle, where there will be experienced a disposition to become testy, nervous and fidgety.

Children born today will, while not inherently endowed with any exceptional degree of physical strength, show signs of "wiriness" and resistence that will stand them in good stead, when attacked by any of those many ailments to which most children seem heir. They promise to attain a normal maturity, provided they are given that care to which their condition entitles them. In disposition, they will be very ambitious but most of them will expect their dreams to come true, without making any serious or lasting effort to convert into actualities. Procrastination will be their besetting weakness. At all times, though, they will be loyal, frank, and affectionate.

If today is your birthday, you possess an inflexible will and a dominating character. Whether these traits are assets or liabilities, will depend entirely on your mental processes. You will be just as persistent in pursuing a wrong course as in following a correct one. You are very charitable in your thoughts and are tolerant of those who do not agree with you, and unforgiving of those who, you think, stand in your way of achieving a given aim.

You, undoubtedly inspire respect and a certain degree of fear. You do not, however, attract by ties of affection and love. This does not mean that you are incapable of true love but your disposition will be to cleave to one who is, possibly unworthy of you. The more he or she may prove to be, the greater the love on your part.

Successful people born this date are:

Lot M. Morrill, ex-Governor of Maine.

William Proctor, Pharmacist and educator.

William L. Wilson, statesman and educator.

Wilbur O. Atwater, chemist.

Jacob A. Riis, reformer.

Julia Arthur, actress.

A MAY SONG.
By George S. Chappell.

At last the Merry Month of May,
With blossoms 'round her head,
The winds of March are stowed away,
The April showers have fled.

The birds are mating in the boughs,
The sun is in the sky,
And on the green the kids carouse
About the May-pole high.

So put your overcoat away,
And park your rubbers, too,
We'll picnic in the fields today!
It's quite the thing to do.

We'll munch and crunch a tasty lunch,
Of sandwiches untold,
And while we're at it, I've a hunch
We'll catch an awful cold!

This Is Sox Stuff.

Earl had developed the habit of asking for cookies at every home in the neighborhood, much to his mother's embarrassment. Finally his mother told him that if he asked for cookies again he would be severely punished.

The next day Earl called at one of our neighbors, who just happened to be baking cookies. He sat down in a chair, sniffed knowingly, and remarked: "I smell cookies, but what's that to me?"

A NEW START.
By Fannie F. Berger.

Two fine old Southern families, the Buells and the Lees, had been carrying on a feud for generations. The trouble had begun years ago, when a Buell had lost his life in a duel with a Lee. Since then, the male members of both families had amused themselves by taking pot-shots at each other. Sometimes even the women would do their bit toward making things unpleasant for the enemy clan.

This went on until only one of each family remained—Young Jack Buell, and pretty Little Betty Lee. Bets were placed throughout the countryside. Some thought that Betty would have no chance against the remaining Buell, others claimed that she was the best pistol shot of the two, and granted odds in his favor. When they met, the entire country seemed to hold its breath.

But the ways of cupid are strange. They fell in love, of course, just as they do in the movies. Betty cuddled her head against Jack's shoulder.

"The feud is over forever, dear," she whispered. "We'll get married—"

"Honey," said Buell, "you may know a lot about feuds, but you know nothing a'tall—nothin' a'tall about marriage. We'll get married and let the feud continue!"

More Truth Than Poetry

THE ARDVARK

The ardvark is a type of bear
Which makes of ants his bill of fare,
The large ones he employs as meats,
The very little ones for sweets.
He pulls them upward, through his nose
As we pump water hrough a hose.

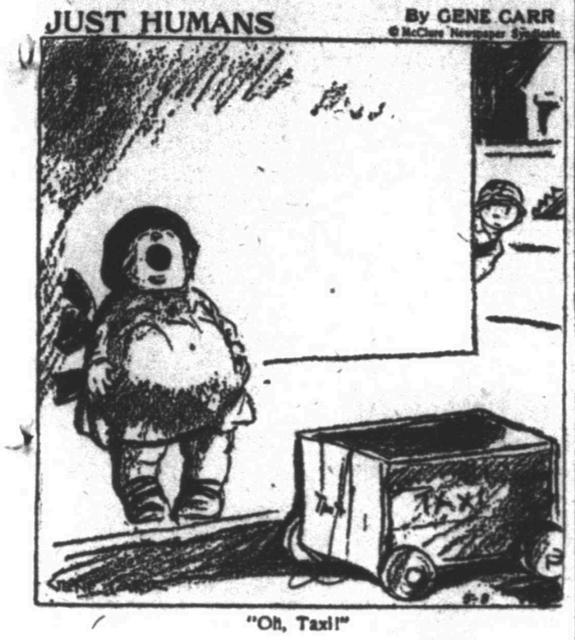

He has rare gastronomic thrills
When he observes the high heaped hills
Where many million ants invite
His always eager appetite.
The same thrill comes to you and me—
When pie or chocolate cake we see.

The simple ardvark feels no shame
Because he has an ugly name,
Nor does he deem it a disgrace
To own an unattractive face.
On both of these he takes his chance
If he can find abundant ants.

We don't eat ants, and that is why
He never lacks for his supply.
He would not bite us if he could
Because his heart is kind and good.
For our part, we let him alone
Although his ways are not our own.

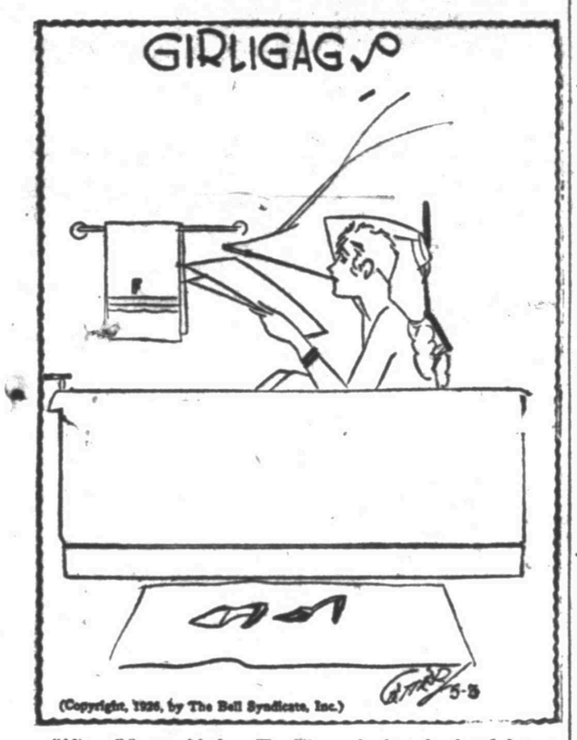

For only can the world advance
By gentle, mutual tolerance.

A SUGGESTED PROCLAMATION

It has been brought to my attention by the Girl Reserve department of the Young Women's Christian association that one week of the year is observed annually as Mother and Daughter week. The first week of May has been chosen for this week, and I am happy to encourage the proper observance of such an event.

E. Shepherd, mayor of Wichita Falls, do hereby proclaim the first week in May as Mother and Daughter week and earnestly request that it be observed by our mothers and daughters to their mutual uplift and happiness.

Rainstorm Hits New Orleans Crowd

NEW ORLEANS, May 2.—(AP)—Thousands of pleasure seekers were driven to shelter and heavy property damage caused by a downpour of rain here this afternoon. During the three hours that the storm was at its height, precipitation totalled 3.67 inches. Several hundreds automobiles and street cars strandad in all parts of New Orleans.

Lightning caused an unestimated damage to several residences. Telephone and electric power services were hampered. Anxiety was expressed for occupants of several yachts known to be cruising on Lake Pontchartran.

Dirigible Norse Puts Off Sailing

LENINGRAD, Russia, May 2.—(AP)—The start of the dirigible Norge, of the Amundsen-Ellsworth polar expedition, for Spitzbergen which had been set for this afternoon had to be postponed owing to the strong wind.

The arrival at Spitzbergen of Commander Byrd on the steamer Chantier, as well as the unfavorable weather forecast for North Russia in the next few days make it expedient for the Norge to hasten her departure.

A flight to Vadsoe, the northermost point of Norway is planned for tomorrow morning.
