Borden cancer benefit

GAIL — Cancer has a way of inspiring fundraisers, and next month will be no exception.

LUDECKE

Melissa Ludecke, president of the Borden County chapter of the American Cancer Society, Ludecke is also Borden County treasurer.

Proceeds from the dance will go toward the American Cancer Society, she said. Some of the money will go toward the county chapter's sponsorship of a Breastmobile that gives breast exams for cancer twice a year in front of the Borden County Courthouse, she said.

Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys will perform country-western music at the dance, Ludecke said.

"It's a time for people to have a nice evening of enjoyment for a very good cause," she said.

The fund-raising goal for this year's dance is $6,000, Ludecke said.

About 500 people attended last year's dance, which raised $5,936, she said. That amount represented $7.51 for every person in the county, Ludecke said, making Borden County one of the state's top counties per capita on behalf of the American Cancer Society.

Lister jailed

BIG SPRING — The man accused of kidnapping his estranged wife from a Big Spring church was handed over to Big Spring Police Thursday afternoon.

According to a department news release, James Henry Lister, 33, Morgan Way, Midland, is in custody in the city jail after being transferred from an Amarillo jail. Justice of the Peace China Long has ordered him held without bond on a charge of aggravated kidnapping.

Lister is accused of abducting his wife, Lanette Lister, at gunpoint on Sunday night and fleeing with her to Amarillo.

LULAC conference

MIDLAND — The national LULAC president and state LULAC leaders will gather here for a three day conference beginning Friday that will focus on educational issues facing Hispanics.

The League of Latin American Citizens District V will host the Texas State Board quarterly meeting at the Ramada Inn of Midland, according to a LULAC press release.

A welcome reception is scheduled for 7 p.m. Friday, with business meetings and a press conference scheduled for Saturday morning and a noon luncheon featuring LULAC president Jose Garcia De Lara.

New bill gets tough with drug dealers

By BRADLEY WORRELL
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — A new state drug bill that would call for mandatory prison sentences for dealers who sell drugs near schools was introduced today by State Rep. Troy Fraser, R-Big Spring.

Fraser, flanked by a group of educators, local law enforcement officers and leaders of the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, announced at Big Spring High School new legislation he said will create a "drug free zone" near public schools and playgrounds.

"If they're going to deal drugs around school, they're going to go to jail," Fraser said. Fraser's bill, House Bill 94, requires a minimum five year prison sentence with no chance of probation or good time for those found guilty of selling drugs within 1,000 feet of a school or within 300 feet of a playground. The bill also applies to within 300 feet of a public or private youth center, public swimming pool or video arcade facility.

Fraser said the idea to "make drug dealers think twice before dealing near public schools" came after discussions with Big Spring Police Chief Joe Cook about what could be done to stiffen penalties against such offenders. The state bill would parallel existing federal law, the state representative said.

Under current state law, drug dealers can receive reduced sentences or probation through plea bargained agreements with a district attorney's office, Fraser said. The new law would prohibit marijuana or any amount of cocaine or heroine, Cook said.

Fraser predicted the bill will pass the Texas legislature easily, saying lawmakers want to do more to crack down on drug dealing near schools. "I think they will sign it, it's a good law," he said.

The one stumbling block has been an absence of space to house drug offenders, but that should change now with the addition of new state prisons, Fraser said.

"We're going to have a place to put these people," Fraser said. "It's time to get tough on drug dealers."

Fraser cited part of his interest in wanting stiffer penalties for drug dealers who peddle drugs near schools after learning a Cuban national had reportedly set up a heroin lab across the street from the high school after arriving in town. The suspect was arrested by local authorities on drug charges Oct. 24.

Fraser said he believes the case is still pending with the district at-

Texas crime drops

AUSTIN (AP) — The head of the Department of Public Safety says the latest crime figures for Texas are encouraging: The crime rate dropped slightly, although the number of major crimes is slightly up.

DPS said Thursday the crime rate dropped 1.2 percent in 1989 when compared with 1988.

"Considering some of the past increases in crime Texas has experienced, we are very pleased to see the crime rate has actually dropped and the number of crimes reported has grown only slightly," Col. Joe Milner said Thursday.

The 1989 crime rate, which is measured as the number of major crimes reported per 100,000 people, dropped from 8,019.6 in 1988 to 7,926.8 in 1989, according to DPS crime statistics.

BSISD trustee honored after resigning position

By ERIN BLAIR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Independent School District Board of Trustees bid a fond farewell to Dwayne Fraser, a member of the board since 1981, at their meeting last night.

Fraser's resignation is effective immediately, leaving the seven-member board a person short until after the May 5 elections. He represented District 3 for nine years, witnessing a changeover in administration and serving as vice-president of the board in 1983-84 and president in 1984-85.

"The changes I have seen in my tenure on the board have been many and varied and I believe they have improved education in Big Spring," Fraser said. He thanked the administration, staff, students and community for the good working relationship he shared with them.

The board passed a resolution thanking Fraser for his service. "Your footprints are evident in every wholesome walk of life in Big Spring and the surrounding area," the resolution, read by Board President Dan Wise, said in part.

Fraser and his wife Kay have moved to Stephenville, where he has purchased an insurance agency.

Gene Piercefield and John Arrick have filed as candidates for the District 3 position. The filing deadline is March 21.

In other business, the board:

● Approved a bid of $69,610 by World Class Industries of Round Rock to resurface the track at Big Spring High School.

The company will install the new track and chute extensions in June. Leveling the area and preparing the asphalt will take two weeks and resurfacing the track with black matte polyurethane and an overlay will take a week, said Ron Logback, the district's assistant business manager.

"Our track has deteriorated and we felt that if we didn't address the problem now we would pay even more later," said Superintendent Bill McQueary.

McQueary said the district decided to go ahead with the new track despite a budget pinch because its depository, the First National Bank of Big Spring, agreed to an extended pay out time of three to five years. "This won't impact our budget like $69,000 would," McQueary said.

He added that an increase in the district's average daily attendance, which the state uses to calculate its school funding, will amount to $35,000 more from the state than the district's budget had reflected. Settlements of some bankruptcy claims have also released some of the budget pressure, McQueary said, allowing the track restoration to get underway.

● Approved the 63 textbooks recommended by first through twelfth grade teachers in subject areas including language, health, math, home economics and history. The books were recommended by the state textbook committee and will be used for the next

Absentee voting increases

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

CROSSROADS — A 1988 state law allowing any registered voter to vote absentee appears to have increased participation in a few of the region's primaries.

The deadline for absentee voting is 5 p.m. today. Primary elections will be held March 13.

Donna Wright, chief deputy county clerk for Howard County, said 713 Democrats and 367 Republicans voted through Thursday in the county's primary elections. The numbers compared with total absentee turnout in the 1988 primary of 547 Democrats and 267 Republicans, she said.

Before the change in state law, registered voters in Texas had to offer an allowable reason — such as sickness, or expecting to be outside the county on election day — in order to vote absentee.

Joan Beach, county clerk for Mitchell County, also said the new state law contributed to higher than usual absentee voting in her county this year.

Four hundred and fifty-five Democrats and 16 Republicans in Mitchell County voted absentee in the primary elections by the end of Thursday, Beach said.

The number of absentee voters in Mitchell County compared with 144 total absentee votes in the 1988 primary, she said.

There are 5,235 registered voters in Mitchell County.

Beach said the large number of contested races in Mitchell County

Money speaks

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Remember the Alamo? The city officials developing a new stadium here could just as soon forget it — at least its name — if the money's right.

The city team overseeing the new domed stadium, informally dubbed the Alamo Dome, is considering selling the name of the building for a cool $5 million to $10 million.

The person or company putting up that kind of money would have the honor of having the Alamo Dome named, instead, after him, her or it.

The concept isn't new: The Carrier Dome at Syracuse University in New York was named after the air conditioning company that donated $2.8 million for its construction.

Atlanta's Richfield Co. paid an undisclosed amount to have its name on ARCO Arena, a private sports center in Sacramento, Calif., that is home to the Sacramento Kings pro basketball team.

The name isn't the only thing for sale: the dome team already has placed price tags on such things as private suites, preferred seats and advertising space in an attempt to raise money.

Suites would cost $50,000 each; prime club seats would be $2,500 apiece; and club seats would sell for $1,000 each. All would offer restricted access to special restaurants and other stadium facilities.

Richards focus of Democratic debate

DALLAS (AP) — The final Democratic gubernatorial debate before the March 13 primary was not the blood bath many political observers had predicted it would be.

But once again, the dominant theme for Thursday's debate was the fact that the front runner, Ann Richards, still refuses to answer "yes or no" to the question of whether she's ever used illegal drugs.

One of her chief opponents, Attorney General Jim Mattox, says Ms. Richards has already taken herself out of the race by failing to answer the question.

"I think Miss Richards has disqualified herself from consideration as the Democratic nominee," Mattox said after Thursday's debate. "Not because of what she has or has not done but because of her lack of candor on the issue."

"You see I think the Republicans will exploit her and the Democratic Party if she were to be the Democratic nominee. But I don't think she'll be the nominee so I don't think we'll any to worry about it."

Ms. Richards, a recovering alcoholic, said Mattox and former governor Mark White have to attack her character because they can't criticize the work she's done as State Treasurer.

"I think that these guys are really stretching and reaching because they cannot fault my performance," Ms. Richards said.

"In this particular dialogue for the gubernatorial race, the question has come up about exactly what I did and when I did it and my response has been that my message to the people out there, that I want you to get help and you can put your past behind you," she said.

But Ms. Richards has not stood by idly. She recently launched a more aggressive television campaign directed at White and Mattox.

White and Mattox said they don't like the ads, which question the integrity of both politicians.

In one ad, White is accused of helping his Houston law firm make money through his political connections while he was still in the governor's mansion.

"I was sickened this week by a couple of slurs that were made," White said. "But I feel we've answered them fully."

The drug issue took another turn Thursday, when all but one of the seven candidates said they would submit to a drug test before the Tuesday primary if asked.

Ms. Richards also said she would be happy to take a drug test before the primary but maintained that she is the only Democrat capable of defeating Republican front runner Clayton Williams.

"I think the important thing is the polls have consistently shown that I'm the only candidate in this primary who can defeat any of the Republicans that are running," Ms. Richards said.

But Mattox said he, too, can beat Williams. In fact, Mattox felt confident enough after the debate to borrow a line from one of Williams' television ads.

"I think I can beat Clayton Williams," Mattox said. "I'll stand toe to toe with him. And I'll tell you this if anybody tells you that there's going to be a Republican in the next governor's position you tell them they don't know Jim Mattox."

Although the three top Democratic candidates fired several verbal shots at each other Thursday, all agreed after the debate to support the winner of primary.

"I think the Democrats are going to be unified in November," Ms. Richards said. "I don't think there's any question about that. We've all made a commitment and we've all signed a pledge that we will support the victor out of this primary."

The debate, sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Texas and KDFW-TV, was the first to include so-called minor candidates.

Flood evacuees

TEXARKANA — Bowie County Civil Defense Rescue workers evacuate Patrice and Dale Smith Jr. after heavy rains caused the Carver Terrace neighborhood of Texarkana to flood Thursday, leaving the streets under three to four feet of water in some areas. Carver Terrace, built on a former wood preserving site, was declared a Superfund site in 1983. Residents requested evacuation by boat to avoid direct contact with creosote, a wood preserving chemical, which seeps from the ground during floods and is carried throughout the neighborhood.

Death ruled homicide

AUSTIN (AP) — A 77-year-old woman whose emaciated body was found in her home died of a respiratory ailment brought on by weeks of starvation and neglect, according to the Travis County medical examiner.

Dr. Robert Bayardo ruled the death of Violet Maxwell a homicide, and police and prosecutors said Friday they were preparing charges against her son, Gary Merle Scanlan, 47.

Police alleged that Scanlan starved his mother to death and injected her with heroin while stealing money from her bank account to support his $1,000 a day heroin habit.

Numerous needle marks were found in Mrs. Maxwell's thighs. Her son's girlfriend told investigators that the woman had been given heroin injections by her son for about six months, police said.

Scanlan, who lived with his mother, was arrested Wednesday on drug charges.

Mrs. Maxwell was 5-foot-9 and weighed about 58 pounds when she died, police said.

Although Mrs. Maxwell died of pneumonia, that condition was only evident for about three days, Bayardo said. "The starvation was going on for a month, maybe longer," he said.

Nintendo championship games open

DALLAS (AP) — It was an evening of heartbreak and victory for hundreds of competitors who took their first job at video glory at the opening night of the Nintendo World Championships.

More than 40,000 people are expected at the Dallas exhibition hall at Fair Park as the four-day Nintendo World Championships continues through Sunday, looking for Mario and Luigi's best assistant, the "rarest" racer and the most "Tetrisized" of 'em all.

On Thursday, it looked as though 11-year-old John Mulhausen was a cinch to win his age bracket. As others struggled to score 150,000, John breezed through the quarter-finals with scores of 410,000 and 443,700. The Game Master announced to the crowd that John was visiting from outer space.

For young John, winning is simply a matter of concentration. "The thing is," he said, "to keep your mind clear and alert and try to go for it."

In the same hall where Ramses held sway last year, promoters have set up a "power walk" where folks can play Nintendo video games on about 250 hand-held and full-size terminals until they can't take it anymore.

The admission price — $12.50 for adults and $9.50 for 17-and-under, gets you unlimited playing time on the games, most of which aren't yet available commercially, promoters said.

Forbes makes gift from grave

NEW YORK (AP) — The late Malcolm Forbes left orders to give all Forbes Inc. employees an extra week's pay, a break on personal loans and some free advice on what to do with the money: "enjoy it!"

Steve Forbes, Forbes' son and successor as editor in chief of Forbes magazine and chief executive officer of the corporation, told staffers Thursday that "in accordance with my father's wishes" the company was giving each of them an extra week's pay and forgiving all debts up to $10,000.

"As Pop put it, 'Like a lottery, it's pure chance as to who benefits,'" his son wrote in a letter to employees, referring to the loan amnesty.

"As for the extra pay," Forbes added, "his advice should be no surprise: enjoy it!"

Burned boy has 50 percent chance

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Reagan was one of more than 100 callers offering birthday wishes to a critically injured boy who was beaten, bound and set aflame after refusing a neighborhood bully's order to smoke crack.

David Aupont spent his 12th birthday Thursday fighting for his life, with doctors giving him a 50-50 chance of survival following the vicious attack in an abandoned building.

The 13-year-old charged with Wednesday's attack was described as a foster child with learning disabilities who dropped out of the sixth grade, and whose vicious behavior grew out of his own torment at the hands of older children.

The youth, who suffered burns over 55 percent of his body, was under heavy sedation in critical but stable condition, said Dr. Cleon Goodwin, head of the hospital burn unit. He should be hospitalized for up to four months and undergo skin grafts to repair the second-degree burns over much of his body.

Settlement reached in Prego case

NEW YORK (AP) — A doctor settled a lawsuit that claimed she contracted AIDS through the negligence of another doctor, for she doubted that she would live long enough to see through a promised appeal.

Dr. Veronica Prego, who claimed she contracted the deadly disease in 1983 after she accidentally pricked her finger on a needle that had been used to draw blood from an AIDS patient, said she was relieved the case against the city was settled.

Under the agreement reached in Brooklyn state Supreme Court, none of the parties named in Prego's lawsuit acknowledged guilt. The settlement, the amount of which was not disclosed, was reached as attorneys prepared trial summations.

Prego's lawyer, Diane Wilner, said the settlement was reluctantly accepted because the defense said it would appeal any jury victory by Prego.

Laying down arms

SANTO DOMINGO, Colombia — Leftist guerrillas from the April 19 Movement turn in their weapons in Santo Domingo, Colombia, Wednesday. The group laid down their arms after a 16-year battle with the government and pledged to fight for peace as a political party.

Senators to push U.S. aid for family planning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of U.S. support for a United Nations family-planning agency are seeking to reverse President Bush's decision to exclude the organization from this year's foreign aid bill.

Four senators — two Democrats and two Republicans — told Bush in a letter Thursday that they hope for a compromise. Failing that, they said they plan to force the issue, which led to a veto of last year's foreign aid bill.

Both the House and Senate voted last year to give $15 million to the United Nations Population Fund, known as UNFPA, to help carry out its family planning activities in more than 140 countries around the world.

But the provision ultimately was dropped from the foreign aid bill after Bush vetoed the measure. The White House had come under heavy pressure from anti-abortion forces who complained that the agency operates programs in China, which uses forced abortions and sterilizations to carry out its one-child-per-family policy.

In their letter, Sens. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt.; Barbara Mikulski, D-Md.; Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan.; and Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.,

argued that Third World population growth poses "a grave threat to our own future security" because of the increasing pressures it places on the environment and on the political stability of poor countries.

Supporters of aid to UNFPA are optimistic they can prevail this time around, in part because the population agency is willing to provide extraordinary safeguards to make sure the money is not used in China and in part because of growing GOP fear of highlighting the abortion issue.

The senators told Bush that UNFPA has agreed to permit the United States to earmark its population aid for specific countries whose family planning practices are in line with U.S. values, and will allow audits to make sure the money isn't freeing other funds for use in China.

"With the population of the developing countries projected to grow by over 900 million during the 1990s... we cannot afford to remain outside the UNFPA," the senators wrote.

Bush's veto last year "sent the wrong signal to the American public and the international community."

Quayle begins South American trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle is off for a tour of South America, saying he wants to listen rather than lecture about how the United States can help its hemispheric neighbors with economic development.

The vice president's trip revolves around two inaugurations — Sunday in Chile and March 15 in Brazil. But he also will stop in Venezuela, Barbados, Argentina and Paraguay for talks on Latin debt and trade problems and on President Bush's push to win acceptance for Panama's U.S.-installed government.

In briefing foreign reporters on the eve of today's departure for Caracas, Quayle offered no specifics on what the United States can do to help the Latin countries with their massive debt and inflation problems.

He said he wanted to hear ideas on trade and economic development from those countries' heads of state.

Lithuanians drop secession vote

MOSCOW (AP) — Averting a showdown with Moscow, Lithuanian nationalists have dropped immediate plans for the republic's parliament to declare independence from the Soviet Union, a Lithuanian journalist said today.

Moscow has said the Baltic republic would owe it billions of dollars in compensation if it voted for independence.

A secession vote was on the original agenda for the parliament when it meets Saturday.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev had warned Monday that Lithuania would owe the central government $34 billion in convertible currency for investments made since the Kremlin absorbed the once independent state in 1940, Lithuania's official Vilnius Radio reported.

Tass quoted Lithuania's president, Algirdas Brazauskas, as saying such a payment "would be an extremely difficult task."

Tax protesters attack police

LONDON (AP) — Crowds angered by a new tax battled police, looted stores, paraded effigies of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and hurled bottles and eggs in protests across Britain. Dozens of people were injured or arrested.

There have been four straight nights of violence against the new "community charge," which replaces the system of taxing homeowners to pay for government services. Instead, municipal councils now divide the costs of services equally among all adults in their district.

Charges can vary widely, depending on the level of services provided by a district. And since each adult is taxed, it means two people living in a two-room apartment would pay twice as much as one person living next door in an eight-room house.

Anger over the system has sent the Conservatives' popularity plunging to its lowest level in its decade of rule.

Peace Corps can be a smart move

The Peace Corps wants to show the true face of the United States to the developing world — by recruiting as volunteers more Americans of African, Hispanic and Asian descent. That laudable goal promises to enhance U.S. relations on a multicultural globe, and it amounts to an offer that members of the targeted minority groups ought to seriously consider.

Right now minorities make up 7 percent of Peace Corps volunteers — far less than their share of the U.S. population. The agency wants minorities to make up 10 percent of volunteers next year. Since the agency operates mostly in Latin America, Africa and Asia, the increase in Americans whose ancestors hail from those regions can only help.

A legacy of President John Kennedy, the Peace Corps reflects the noblest of Yankee instincts, the willingness to give a hand to the less fortunate. Volunteers work directly with the people of the host nation, helping them to meet basic needs for health care, food, shelter and education — thereby promoting international peace and friendship.

The agency suspects that minority college graduates may shun the Peace Corps because they feel more pressure than whites to begin their careers and thereby to start earning money. However, the corps may be an excellent career move, providing experiences that increase the job marketability of those who serve.

True, volunteers don't make much money, but neither do they need all that much. The cost of living is typically so low in their assigned countries that many manage to save a good deal of their monthly expense allowance. In addition, upon completion of their tour of duty, typically two years, volunteers get $200 for each month in service.

The volunteers need not be young college graduates, so long as they have useful skills. In fact, many are over 50. All in all, an increase in minority volunteers at the Peace Corps promises to be mutually beneficial.

United Way helping people

To the editor:
As new residents and officers to the great community of Big Spring, it is indeed with great appreciation that we say thank you to everyone who made the United Way Campaign such a success this year. There are so many Big Spring residents and homeless that come to us for assistance each day, and with the campaign being such a success it means we will be able to help them according to their various needs.

When you deal with people who are hurting because they are homeless and hungry, it makes it much easier to know that there are those in the community who know and understand what it takes to help. We are glad to be a member of the United Way of Big Spring and Howard County. We hope that those who see the need of this great community will continue to support those who are meeting the need with their continued financial support.

Insurance is too expensive

To the editor:
Has anyone looked at the cost of health insurance lately? If you are not on a company group plan, the cost is monstrous and rising steadily. Insurance is not an essential evil. Without it one cannot enter a hospital unless a large sum of money is paid up front, which most people do not have. Hospital and doctor charges are out of sight.

Most working people do not qualify for government aid, so when a company does not have a group plan many are without insurance because of the high cost. They can't afford insurance but certainly can't afford not to have it either. The people who do not want to work can get Medicaid. Medical services are also provided for the criminals of this country. They have it better than those out there trying. We, the taxpayers, pay for all of this. Our elderly are also left holding the bag. We set up monuments to criminals and let our elderly suffer and die. Doesn't this seem out of balance?

Seems like if one tries they either get nothing or pay double. Where is the justice? What is the solution? Is it coming to socialized medicine? At least everyone would have access to medical attention. There has to be an answer somewhere. Maybe we should all write to our congressman and senator. At least do something!

Mayor obstinate about his chili

To the editor:
Maxwell D. Green is an unyielding, unyielding obstacle of resistance that defies explanation. He is an edifice of steel and concrete that would make the Berlin Wall look like a mud fence.

You see, for the past year and a half I have been trying to convince the man that I can cook a better pot of chili than he can. It is my belief that a book-keeper type CPA cannot know the first thing about cooking chili. Their heads are full of decimal points, numerals and ledger sheets.

I have argued, I have wheedled, I have cajoled, all to no avail. I have offered this rock-hard individual my help and expertise in order to improve the mess that he cooks and mistakenly refers to as chili.

You see, Max Green has this disarming twinkle in his eye and a chili-eatin' grin on his pudgy face and any discussion with the man turns into a no-win situation.

Well, I give up. I quit. Is there anyone out there who is willing to discuss with me my chili cooking genius on a one-to-one basis? Perhaps District Attorney Rick Hamby or Judge Gwen Fair, or heck... even Cotton Mize.

What every young girl should no

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

The other day, one of those morning television talk shows featured a lady from the National Chastity Association.

Yes, the National Chastity Association. It was formed in Illinois, and members are against sort of fooling around out of wedlock, including no holding hands, no hugging, no kissing, no playing footsie under the table, as well as no going all the way.

And, even if you indulged in all that before, you can join the NCA and wipe your slate clean.

There was a National Chastity Association when I was growing up.

It didn't have that name, but it certainly existed and it was run by individuals whose dedication to chastity was legend.

The difference was, it wasn't their purity they were concerned with, it was the purity of their daughters.

Yes, we are talking mothers with daughters. More precisely, mothers with daughters I dated.

This was the time of Mother's Ten Points to Remember while you're on a date, which all mothers wrote out on a sheet of paper and stuffed in their daughter's bras before what's-his-name with that look in his eye came by to pick up Precious.

The idea was before anything got out of hand, daughters could consult their lists to make certain their chastity remained intact.

It took some doing, but I managed to contact an old classmate, Wilamena "Deep Freeze" Lacewell, whose idea of heavy petting was when she scratched her cat.

Boys were afraid to get near her. You could catch cold in temperatures like that.

Wilamena, who never married, is currently a veterinarian in Blue Nose, Nebraska. She said she still had her mother's Ten Points and consults it to this day whenever, as she puts it, confronted by "a wild-eyed rascal" at the Blue Nose Bowl-a-rama.

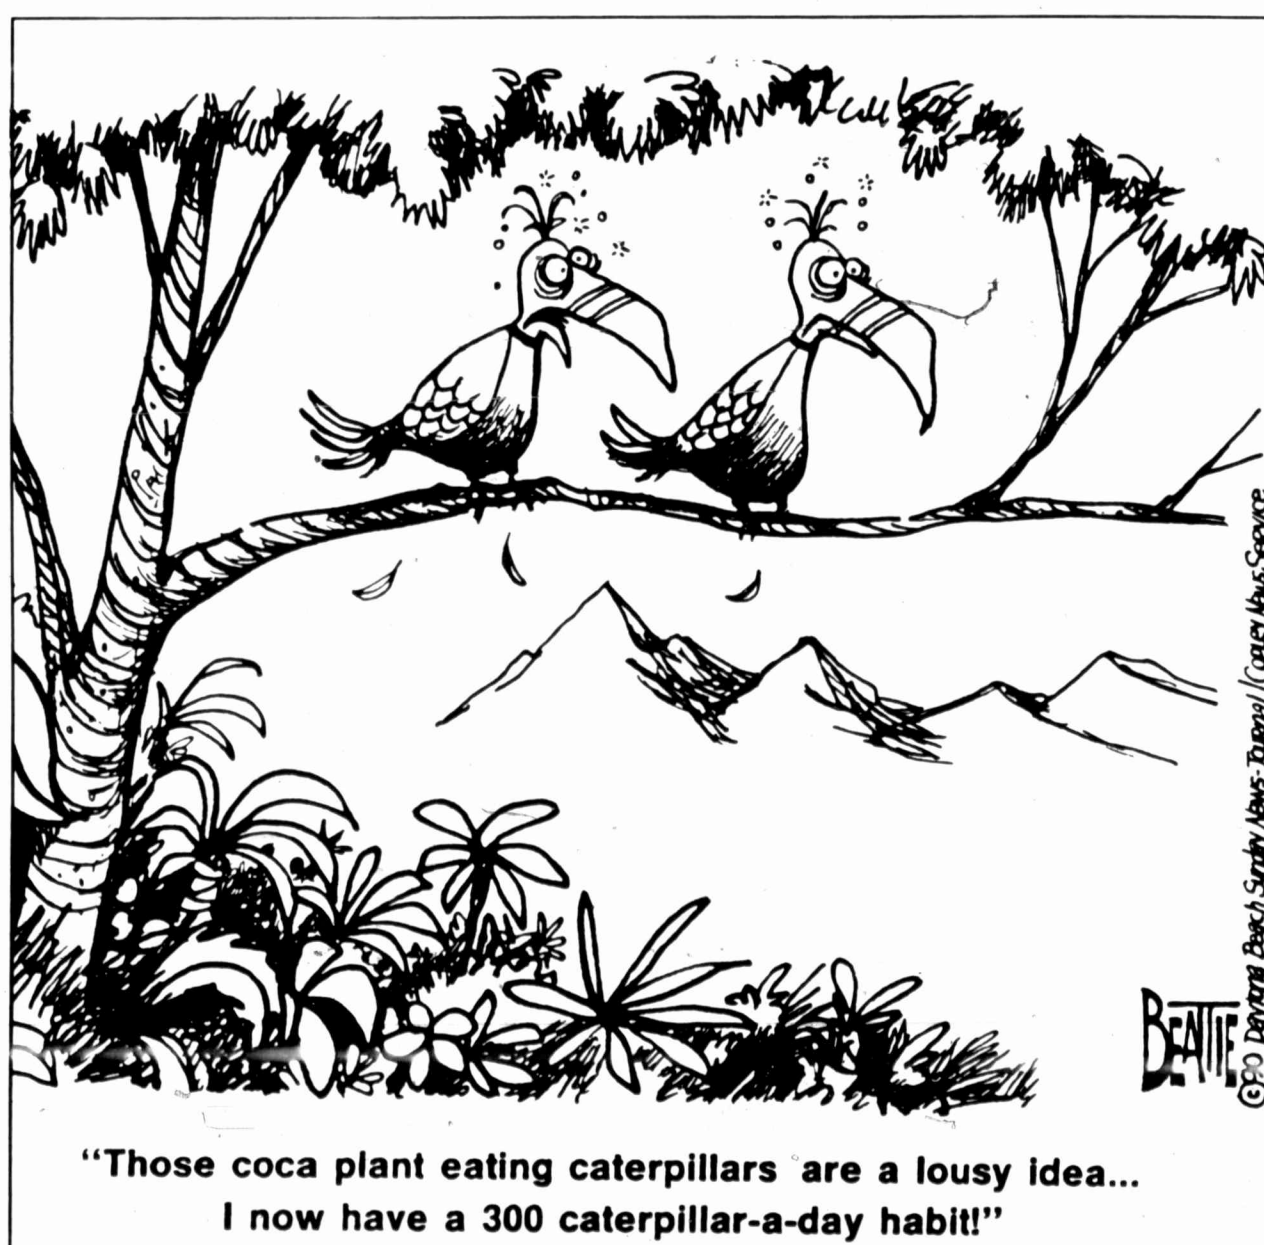

She was kind enough to read The List:

1. Boys have only one thing on their minds when they take you on

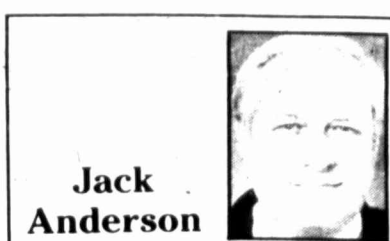

2. And it's not discussing Thursday's algebra pop quiz, the rotten little slimebag.
3. I don't care what they taught you in biology class, you can get pregnant by slow dancing.
4. Back seats are for sluts.
5. Sluts do not get into good sororities and wind up marrying shoe salesmen.
6. If you allow a boy certain liberties, he will no longer respect you and I will kick his butt all over town.
7. If you have any questions as to how to act on a date, pretend I am there looking over your shoulder.
8. That's not a bad idea. What time is Pickle-face picking us up?
9. If a boy tries to touch you where he shouldn't, grab your file and go for the eyes.
10. Save yourself for your husband, as I did for your father, who at least still has one good eye.

It might be a good idea for mothers in the '90s to acquaint their daughters with The List. And if it's late to save their purity they can always join the National Chastity Association and, poof, born-again virginity.

JTPA fraught with fraud

By JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — Ask Dan Quayle what he is most proud of from his years in the Senate, and he will say the Job Training Partnership Act. It was a good idea — federally subsidized job training for the poor to save money down the road on welfare. But what the bureaucracy has done with that $3 billion a year program is nothing to be proud of. The participants would have been better off if Quayle had simply handed them the cash.

The program hasn't put a dent in the welfare rates for poor and uneducated workers. Half of the people trained by private companies using taxpayers' money were never hired permanently by those companies when the subsidy ran out. And 60 percent of them already had high school diplomas when they took advantage of this program for the "uneducated."

The problem, according to our sources at the Labor Department, is accountability. The JTPA doesn't have any.

Each state that gets JTPA money makes its own rules, and in many cases the states can't even tell the federal government where the money went. When federal auditors have found fraud, they have also found contracts so loosely written that there is no wasted money.

The JTPA was formed in 1982. Since 1985, auditors from the Inspector General's Office of the Labor Department have been sounding the alarm, but the department simply discounts their reports.

Our associate Tim Warner has seen those internal investigations that the department chooses to gloss over. The auditors have found widespread fraud, abuse and misuse of JTPA funding.

Overall, according to the inspector general's staff, the JTPA has only slightly reduced the number of trainees dependent on welfare. The states and private businesses using JTPA grants are hiring trainees who are not qualified as disadvantaged or uneducated, leaving the truly needy still in the welfare lines.

In Scott County, Ky., the auditors found that the state used $2.58 million in taxpayers' money to train 545 auto workers who did not qualify as needy.

In Houston, $41 million was spent over two years and less than a third of the money went into training programs. The rest was spent on administration.

Another inspector general audit looked at 263 JTPA contracts and found that 83 percent of them — $189 million worth — had no provision in the contracts to protect against fraud and no way for the government to get the money back if it was being misused. More than half of the contracts didn't even give the federal government the right to audit the state agencies assigned to distribute the money.

In Houston, one agency under contract to the JTPA spent $104,085 in one year traveling to conventions and paying dues to a professional organization.

In Mississippi, $1.2 million was spent on a youth job training program and much of the money was spent on computers after the program was over. In that program, only 56 percent of the trainees met the goal of upgrading their reading and math skills.

Labor Department officials and congressional staffers recently drafted some proposals to increase accountability in the JTPA. But some of our sources in the department say the proposals don't go far enough and the JTPA is still a wide open invitation to abuse.

SHORT-TERM GREED — Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady wants to steer the stock market away from dependence on quarterly profit statements. Companies want to impress their stockholders with those profits and are driven to make short-term decisions. Some analysts blame one of the biggest market players, pension plans, for the short-term thinking that leads to a volatile market. Brady questions whether pension plans have enough incentive to invest large amounts of money for long periods of time.

Happy hunting

SHELLDRAKE, Mich. (AP) — Two dogs who went chasing after a rabbit got stranded on an ice floe for three days and crossed the border into Canada.

Leo Cherette said his 8-year-old beagle Scooter, who sped off Feb. 20 with a neighbor's black mongrel, Bear, seemed none the wiser for his adventure. Ontario officials handed back the dogs on the Canadian side of the International Bridge in Sault Ste. Marie.

"I don't think he's learned his lesson yet," Cherette said Friday. "He's smart enough to understand but he pretends he's not."

Locals saw the dogs pursuing a rabbit near the Lake Superior shore about three miles north of the town of Paradise. They apparently ran onto the ice-choked Whitefish Bay, then drifted on an ice floe to Batchawana Bay 20 miles across the lake in Ontario. The fate of the rabbit was unknown.

A skier staying in Batchawana found Scooter, and turned him over to the Ontario police, who also picked up Bear, a larger dog belonging to Cherette's neighbor, Jay Alton.

Out of control

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A pair of pet pigs found themselves in the pokeny for promenading down a street and stopping the traffic.

Police took four hours to round up the pigs, and a goat that joined them, and took them to the pound Monday after officials at Homestead Elementary School complained they were blocking traffic.

Officer Terry Simpson said he decided to rein in the trio because owner Marge Lampert had been ticketed a dozen times for failing to control her animals, and allegedly had not paid up.

Lampert, an equipment operator at Elmendorf Air Force Base, said she bought the pigs at a state fair last year and her children named the cute and cuddly things Joseph and Miss Piggy. Now that they're grown, they've become too hard to hold, she said.

"I had hoped to confine them well and let the kids in the neighborhood experience farm animals without offending anyone," she said. "I seem to have offended everyone."

"I'm not a real organized person, so sometimes I get more than I can handle," she said.

She also owns four dogs, a cat and 15 tropical birds.

Trendy pets

DENVER (AP) — A pet shop owner who wants to promote pricey pigs is squealing about a Denver zoning law banning ownership of the animals.

Jon Cochran, owner of Pet City, says he gets four or five calls a month from people asking how they can get miniature pigs — also called Vietnamese potbellied pigs.

"People are finally coming to the realization that there are things out there other than dogs, cats and hamsters," he says.

Cochran raised the issue recently at a meeting of the city council's zoning committee. He was told to draft a formal proposal for changing the law banning pigs and present it March 21.

"Some of the council members thought it was ridiculous that we were even discussing this," said senior city planner Merlin Logan.

The potbellied pig, which sells for up to $6,000, is popular among those looking for a trendy pet.

"They're better than dogs," said Carolyn Sharp, who breeds miniature pigs in Fort Collins. "They're not stinky. They don't have fleas. They don't bark, and they don't run around in packs annoying people."

Sisters sue to recover gravestone

FORT WORTH (AP) — When three daughters of an elderly woman made their mother's burial arrangements, they did not want her gravestone covered over as well.

But that's what the three Nocona sisters contend has happened at Laurel Land Memorial Park. They filed suit against the Fort Worth funeral home, claiming the facility "covered up" the headstone above their mother's casket after they failed to pay all of her funeral expenses.

Six months after Artie Victoria Vickers' death, her gravestone disappeared, according to Fay Steele and her two sisters, who had hired Laurel Land to bury their mother.

When $2,787 of the funeral bill was unpaid, part of the grave was uncovered, the headstone placed on top of her casket and then covered with dirt, according to the lawsuit in a Tarrant County district court.

The women claim in their suit that funeral director Leon Provence told Ms. Steele that burying gravestones of people whose funeral expenses had not been fully paid was "quite common with us" to ensure the money would be forthcoming.

Papers filed in the suit last week claim that Mrs. Vickers' headstone was still missing, her grave was marred by recent digging and the sisters were unsure whether her remains were still buried at the site.

Ironically, the elderly woman had life insurance policies when she died on June 7, 1989. One policy paid $1,000 to Laurel Land for the funeral, while two other policies paid another $200 to the funeral home, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Thursday.

Ms. Steele said she told the funeral home that because of "violent circumstances" surrounding her 81-year-old mother's death and a ransacking of her home, they were unable to find some remaining insurance policies.

The newspaper said that neither Jim Garrison, the funeral home's vice president and general manager, nor Larry Tenroy, general manager of Laurel Land Memorial Park, would comment on the suit.

A Wichita Falls attorney who represents the sisters would not discuss the lawsuit and advised his clients not to talk with reporters.

A spokesman for the Tarrant County medical examiner's office said Mrs. Vickers, with a history of heart problems, died in Harris Methodist Hospital of natural causes.

"Our investigator couldn't ascertain signs of trauma or foul play," the spokesman, Bill Fabian, said. Fort Worth police said there was no record of a burglary at the Vickers home.

Papers filed in the suit alleged that the funeral home became unhappy when a collection agency was unable to collect the remainder of the bill from Mrs. Vickers' relatives and the funeral home "launched their own disgraceful method of debt collection."

Study finds abortion pill effective

BOSTON (AP) — A study today demonstrating the effectiveness of the new French abortion pill may help spur acceptance of the treatment in other countries, a doctor says.

The study in the New England Journal of Medicine concludes the medicine is 96 percent effective in terminating early pregnancies. The pill, RU 486 or mifepristone, is sold only in France, where it has been available since 1988.

The study's results, which duplicate earlier findings, show that the pill works as well as vacuum aspiration, the most common form of abortion, when taken by women up to three weeks after they miss their menstrual period.

The study of 2,115 women was conducted by Dr. Louise Silvestre and others from Roussel-Uclaf, the French company that makes the abortion pill.

In France, the pill is now used for about one-quarter of the 120,000 abortions performed yearly but is not available for home use. Women must take the medicine at a clinic or hospital and return two days later for an injection of a synthetic form of the hormone prostaglandin.

Dr. Sheldon J. Segal of the Rockefeller Foundation in New York noted in an accompanying editorial that Roussel-Uclaf had withheld distribution of the drug in other countries until its effectiveness and safety were reviewed in larger studies.

"The new findings reported in this issue of the journal provide reassurance on these issues and could presage the availability of the method in countries where comparable conditions of authorized clinical use prevail," he wrote.

No company has proposed selling the drug in the United States, Segal said, and obtaining federal approval can take several years once someone applies.

Members of the National Right-to-Life Committee disagreed with findings that the pill was safe. Richard Glasow, education director of the group, contended the study "collected nothing to calm concerns about the possibility of long-term adverse side effects."

Drained cat

SCARBOROUGH, Maine (AP) — Tootsie the cat is back in her nice, warm home after spending five weeks in a snow-covered storm drain.

"The poor, little thing looked awful when we got her out. She was just skin and bones," said Nicole Lonsdale, who helped find the cat for her neighbors, Peter and Teri Tyson.

Tootsie disappeared Jan. 26, apparently entering an open storm drain which was sealed off by a snow plow clearing the road in this southern Maine city, the Tysons said.

The Tysons and neighbors searched the area, but gave up hope of finding the 6-year-old cat until late last week.

Tyson was chatting with Lonsdale in her driveway Saturday when he heard a faint meow from the nearby drain. He prided the lid off the drain with a crowbar, then got a ladder and climbed into the drain, calling Tootsie's name.

The cat poked her head out of a pipe and scampered for Tyson, who wrapped her in a pillowcase.

"She wants to be around us all the time now," Mrs. Tyson said.

Timber sales decline in U.S. forests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of timber harvested from national forests fell about 5 percent to 11.9 billion board feet last year, but total revenue was up slightly to $1.5 billion, the U.S. Forest Service announced today.

The timber sale program generated an estimated 132,371 jobs and $4.4 billion in personal income in fiscal 1989, the agency said in a report.

Net increases in timber sales were reported for half of the Forest Service's 10 regions — Northern, Rocky Mountain, Inter-Mountain, Eastern and Alaska.

The Forest Service said 56 of the 122 national forests with commercial timber sale programs returned more money than they spent last year.

Kids want parents to move next door

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 72 and I am 71. We have yearly checkups and are both in very good health. We live comfortably in our own home, with no mortgage and no debts. Our neighbors are very friendly, and we also have relatives living in this city, where we have lived happily for more than 50 years.

Dear Abby

Our daughter and her husband, who are both physicians, live in Oregon. They are worried about our advancing age and want us near them. They say the little house next to them is now for sale and they want to buy it for us, in case at some point we have an emergency and need their help.

We are very appreciative of their kindness and have told them time and again that we are happy here, but they insist that we would be better off living next door to them.

We want our daughter and her husband to fulfill their lives as we did and quit worrying about our future. It would be difficult for us to move at our ages, but they are very insistent! We respect your opinion, Abby. What should I do? — HAPPY IN FRESNO

DEAR HAPPY: Your children's concern for your welfare is admirable, but I think you'd be making a big mistake to give up your home and relocate because "at some point" you may need their help.

Older people fare best in familiar surroundings. So assure your children that you appreciate their generosity and caring, but you prefer to stay in Fresno, where you are happily and securely rooted.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I travel in a van with our two standard poodles. In mild weather they can stay in the van overnight, but when it's very hot or very cold, we cannot leave them in a closed-up van, so we put them in a kennel. This is quite expensive, and not satisfactory when we take long trips.

Can you tell us where to find a directory of overnight accommodations that allow dogs to stay in the rooms with their owners? We realize there are probably not many, because dogs can be destructive, dirty or noisy. Our vet knows of no such directory.

Thank you for any help you can give us. — WOODBURY, CONN.

DEAR WOODBURY: The American Automobile Association (AAA) has a list of hotels and motels that allow pets. Contact your local office for more information.

I am reminded of this charming message one reader saw framed and hanging near the registration desk in a small hotel:

"Dogs are welcome in this hotel. We never had a dog that smoked in bed and set fire to the blankets. We never had a dog who stole our towels, played the TV too loud or had a noisy fight with his traveling companion. We never had a dog that got drunk and broke up the furniture. So if your dog can vouch for you, you're welcome, too."

DEAR ABBY: Is it too late to add my 2 cents' worth about the controversy over lowering grades as punishment? I hope not, because I would like to air my feelings as many other readers have.

When I was an eighth-grader, my brother was a senior at the then-largest high school in Indianapolis. School was not easy for him, and his grades were not the best. However, in electrical shop he was tops. Before Honors Day, he received notification to appear on stage for an award. But as seniors often do, he and several friends skipped a day of class near the end of the school term and went swimming at a nearby lake. My brother was suspended from school — not because he played hooky, but because he would not name the others with him for the officials. (The others were not suspended because they "cooperated.")

As a result of his suspension, my brother was no longer eligible for the Shop Award, and it was given to another student. He had earned the award and he deserved it, but as part of his punishment, he did not receive it.

As an eighth-grader, I thought it was grossly unfair, and to this day I think the punishment was far greater than the "crime" called for.

Interestingly enough, my brother continued in electrical work, and today he is a well-respected, much-sought-after licensed electrician for an electric company in Indianapolis.

There's more: On the other side of the coin, in my junior year, I was ill two different times during the first semester, causing me to miss two weeks of school on each occasion. Because of these absences, I was unable to complete the required number of garments in my sewing class. School policy called for a grade of F. My teacher, however, knowing that the quality of my sewing was A, allowed me to stay after school one afternoon to complete my last garment so that I would not fail.

Well, I received the Home Economics Award! It was special to me because I had determined four years earlier that if my brother couldn't have the Shop Award, then I would have the Home Economics Award. Had my teacher not had a sense of fairness that went beyond the written rules, it would not have been possible. I will never forget her. — ELEMENTARY TEACHER, NEWBURGH, IND.

Tumbleweed enthusiasts enjoy festival

One long, boring day, Billy Joe Wood had a thought "We need something to do, but what, oh what." We'll have a party, that's what this town needs and we'll call it the Festival of Tumbleweeds.

Visitors and townfolk came by the score bringing 150 tumbleweeds to enter in the contest or more.

The weeds made the fort look like a ghost town, except for the events going on all around.

The cowboys held gunfights like in the western years as the children close by stood holding their ears.

The cowchips and horseshoes were sailing through the air. It was such a sight, you'd just had to have been there.

The political candidates threw eggs instead of mud. No one got mad, everyone had fun.

The fat man was found when at Ft. Wood he did weigh, then he went off to Mac Michaels to eat sirloin all day.

Tumbleweed Smith judged the tumbleweeds both big and small. Then stayed around afterwards to be greeted by all.

A video was made of parades long ago that showed Tumbleweed Queens and others we know.

The band in the pavillion played country sounds. While several couples danced around.

The parade of the "Uglys" drug their tumbleweeds by the root. The winner won a pair of roper boots.

Soon the day was over, you could see the setting sun. Not one person had come that didn't have fun.

As the people were leaving, the crowd how they cheered "Good job Billy Joe, let's do it again next year."

The winners of the events held at the Tumbleweed Festival at Fort Wood Saturday are as follows:

World's Biggest Tumbleweed — 36 ft. 6 inches, $200 to Jason Hartley, Snyder. Jason and his father found this tumbleweed in an Ira cemetery. They were only able to get half of it. It took a car hauler and 300 ft. of boat rope to get it to Ft. Wood.

2nd Largest — 35 ft., Manuel Gonzalez. He found his tumbleweed on the Moore Farm, northwest of town.

3rd Largest — 34 ft. 9 inches, Nick Lopez. This one was found in Westbrook.

Ugliest Award — Leonard Moore of Westbrook won this title winning a new pair of boots.

Fattest Award — Ray Davis won this, weighing in at 350 lbs. His prize was an all-u-can-eat sirloin dinner at Mac Michaels Restaurant.

With CHS' The National Honor Society at Colorado High School has started a clean-up campaign. They hope not only to involve students but our community as well. The groups' campaign slogan is "Lend A Hand, Clean Up The Land." This past week was Clean-Up CHS Week. The students took to the streets as everyone helped beautify Lone Wolf Boulevard that runs in front of the school. Next week will kick off "Lend A Hand, Clean Up The Land" Week during which they would like to encourage everyone to clean up their own yards. The young people plan to wash the windows of the downtown businesses. I hope everyone will get involved.

voting or just wanting to eat out, the Wallace Center is holding an "Election Night" Spaghetti Supper. This event is sponsored by the Senior Citizens. Anyone can eat from 5 to 7 p.m. at the dining room of Wallace. The menu includes chicken spaghetti, salad, hot bread, dessert and your choice of tea or coffee. Adults can get a plate for $4 and children under 10 years for $2.50. Tickets are available at the City National Bank, Free's, Wallace Center and they also can be purchased from any senior citizen member. To make the evening even more interesting, door prizes will be given away every 30 minutes. All profits from this event will go to support the nutrition program.

Program to pay food cost

Child care providers who care for children in their own homes may receive payments for food costs through a program offered by Children's Enterprises, Inc. Payments will be made for each meal and snack served when basic nutrition guidelines are met. Located in Lubbock, Children's Enterprises is a not-for-profit organization which promotes quality care for children. The Child Care Nutrition Program offered by Children's Enterprises is funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Day Home providers may not discriminate against children because of race, sex, color, national origin, age or handicap.

Children's Enterprises' staff are available to assist with menu planning for child care providers. If desired, providers may have menus custom-planned for their home. There is no charge for the Child Care Nutrition Program services. Child care providers may participate in the program regardless of their family's income and there is no minimum number of children required to participate.

Ruth Ellen Riley, Midland, serves as the Area Representative for the Child Care Nutrition Program throughout the surrounding area. Ms. Riley is available to visit with child care providers concerning the nutrition program and other programs offered by Children's Enterprises. Those interested in becoming family day care providers may also receive assistance in becoming registered or licensed.

Children's Enterprises offers additional programs to promote quality care for children.

For the record

In a Thursday story on District Clerk Glenda Brasel and her bid for re-election, part of her statement regarding her duties was accidentally omitted.

"Also, I plan to begin microfilming District Court record in order to better manage and preserve them. I just plan to continue the same courteous, efficient service that the public has received in the past," Brasel should have said in the article.

In the election coverage on Commissioner, precinct 4 an opening paragraph should have read: Incumbent David Barr will face off against two Democratic challengers in the March primary before the winner of that primary faces Republican Robert Crenshaw in the November elections.

No lie: Honesty campaign didn't make everyone honest

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A 14-month campaign to make honesty a city policy ends today, and its leader and police say they cannot tell a lie. It hasn't rid the city of liars, cheats or scoundrels.

"We haven't wiped out crime or made everybody honest, but we have made people think about it. That's what we intended to do," said Jeb Stuart Magruder, the former Watergate conspirator who led the "Take an Honest Look" campaign.

The privately financed $35,000 campaign in this Midwestern city of 566,000 closes today with a speech by Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young and an awards ceremony honoring those whose honesty was exemplary.

The guest list excludes those responsible for an increase in crime in Columbus last year. Homicides rose by 29 percent from 1988, car thefts by 22 percent and aggravated assaults by 5 percent. Bank robberies dropped 50 percent last year, but already this year robbers have held up 33 banks, compared with 54 all of last year.

Deputy Chief Robert Kern said neither he nor the street patrol officers he oversees have noticed an outbreak of honesty.

"Crime is up, that's for sure," he said. "But I haven't noticed any more people than normal being honest. A lot of people call us with information or turn people in, but they've always done that."

The idea for the campaign surfaced when the honesty — or lack of it — of Columbus residents was questioned in 1988 after the rear doors of an armored car flew open, spewing bags of cash on an interstate. Many motorists who stopped to scoop up the flying cash never returned it, although one man who returned $57,000 became a local celebrity.

The all-volunteer campaign initiated by the Columbus Commission on Ethics and Values targeted city schools, churches, government and city groups. Its chief weapon against dishonesty was public service announcements.

The television and radio spots, for example, showed a driver who backs into an unoccupied vehicle in a parking lot. He, of course, leaves a note explaining what happened. Another person gets too much change from a store clerk and gives it back. But Magruder, a Presbyterian minister, said the campaign's biggest success was an honesty curriculum in area school districts. It spread sincerity to 90,000 Columbus school students through workshops, essay contests and other programs.

"I think it had an effect," said Howard Merriman, Columbus schools assistant superintendent. "It heightened the awareness of teachers and administrators that it's important to talk about honesty. It also helped the students."

Other events included a symposium for corporate leaders and "Honesty Sunday" at churches. Andrew Altman, a philosophy professor at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., who specializes in law and morality, said it will take more than a campaign to persuade people that honesty is the best policy.

"Most people are honest most of the time," he said in a telephone interview. "Restoring ethics and honesty will take a general cultural transformation about what we think is important in life... a return to a life of simple virtues."

Magruder, who spent seven months in prison after he admitted destroying records and committing perjury in the Watergate scandal, said he saw the campaign as making a small inroad into the problem.

"I have learned that change can occur in little increments. And change for the better is something worth doing," he said.

Magruder said the commission is so satisfied with the effort that it plans to target another topic come fall — prejudice.

The light side

CHESHIRE, Conn. (AP) — The investigation into the theft of a coat and hat was only a day old when the prime suspect, wearing his booty, waltzed into police headquarters and the arms of the law.

Randolph Ferland, 53, stopped Wednesday at the police station in this west-central Connecticut town to use the bathroom, but was arrested after an alert police captain realized Ferland and his outfit matched witnesses' descriptions.

The crime drama began Tuesday night when someone sneaked into the Lutheran Church of Cheshire, and stole a winter coat and knit hat from a closet. A few church members got a glimpse of the man, and described him to police.

Police Capt. Gary Walberg said he was reading a report on the theft Wednesday when he happened to peer out of his office and saw the man described in the report — jacket, hat and all.

"He matched the description to a T," Walberg said.

The only thing missing was the victim to identify the coat Ferland was wearing as the one that had been taken.

Bill

torney's office. The case was part of the reason local police wanted the bill, Cook said. "The bust last year had something to do with it," he said, although it was not the only reason.

The bill drew a favorable response with the group of local and area authorities who gathered for the announcement.

"Sure, you bet, it's going to be good all over the state," Midland County Sheriff Dan Painter said of the legislation. The bill will benefit law enforcement agencies and the public across the state, he said.

Painter said he is appalled by current statistics that indicate prison inmates only serve 22 days of each year for which they are sentenced. The shorter sentences are a result of days off and good time. Mandatory sentences would help correct that, he said.

"It's about time somebody looked at our kids and said, 'hey, we need to do something' about drug dealing near schools, Painter said. "This (bill) will give law enforcement a chance to protect citizens."

Cook said the bill should make drug dealers wary of selling controlled substances near schools.

"Why deal around a bunch of kids and get busted and not be able to do anything about it," he said, noting the absence of any possibility of probation.

Rick Hamby, 118th district attorney, who was not at the meeting, said he has not read the bill but said he believes he would support it.

"We wouldn't have any problem with that," Hamby said of the proposed legislation. Special attention needs to be devoted to keeping schools drug free, he said.

The bill would not create a significant new case load for the district attorney's office if passed, Hamby said.

"I don't see it as a problem at all... We would support it. I applaud it," he said, "I applaud Mr. Fraser for his efforts in that area."

But Hamby said there may be problems with prison space to hold the inmates.

"We don't have a place to put them," the district attorney said. For the bill to be effective the state board of pardons and paroles is going to have to stop giving early prison releases to offenders, he said.

Fraser said the bill could be brought before the legislature after lawmakers have resolved the school finance dilemma.

Workers give Highway 80 facelift

HERALD STAFF REPORT

STANTON — State Highway 80 will have lanes blocked off in Stanton for the next 2-3 weeks as workers seal cracks in the four-lane road in preparation for repaving which is scheduled for sometime this summer.

Cones are set up right now in the westbound lane of the highway in the downtown area to keep motorists off the sticky emulsion which is used to seal the cracks, said Johnny Brooks, the assistant maintenance foreman with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

In prior weeks workers

"We're sealing those cracks now by hand so it'll last longer." — Johnny Brooks, assistant foreman were working east and west of Stanton on the five-mile stretch of highway between the interchanges of Interstate Highway 20 which will be paved, he said.

"Now I've got them working in town for probably several weeks," he said. "There's a lot of cracks out there."

He estimated that it will take about three days to finish sealing the lane in Stanton that they are working on now. Five men are working on it and are using about 500 gallons a day of emulsion, which is used in asphalt, he said. Sand is poured over the emulsion to help keep it in place.

"We're sealing those cracks now by hand so it'll last longer," Brooks said of the repaving which will be done this summer.

He said the last time it was paved was in the 1970s. "It's been at least 12-14 years since we last put the sealcoat (asphalt) on it," he said.

BIG SPRING — A benefit basketball game between the Big Spring coaches and some ex-Steer players will be March 29 at 7:30 p.m. in Steer Gym.

The Coaches All-Stars-Brown machine matchup will benefit the Mexican American Senior Class.

Rodeo team in action

ODESSA — The Howard College rodeo team starts the spring rodeo circuit this weekend by competing in the Odessa College Rodeo.

Howard heads into the spring season with the HC cowgirls in third place and the HC pokes in fifth place.

HC rodeo coach Bobby Scott says his teams have a strong chance of qualifying for the College National Finals Rodeo in June in Bozeman, Mont. "I'm expecting great things from the women's team, they are coming together as a unit," said Scott. "The men's team needs to come on strong in the final six rodeos and I think they will because they are improving daily."

The men's team for the Odessa Rodeo will consist of Randall Thornton, Kaid New, Kevin Reed, Billy Mac Callahan, Corey Ross and Jim Bob Mayes.

Competing for the women's team will be Jody Heath, Jana Pierce and Robin Wardlaw.

Waters all-tourney

SNYDER — Howard College Lady Hawks sophomore forward Linda Waters was named to the Region V All-Tournament team. The 5-foot-10 Portland, Ore. native scored 37 points and got seven eight rebounds in two tournament games.

South Plains, which beat Odessa 58-57 for the Region V title, had Sheryl Swoopes named as MVP.

The rest of the team included: Amy Hyde; Hill; Tabitha Truesdale; McLennan; Nicole Davenport; Cisco; Monica Norman; Grayson; Pat McDonald; Frank Phillips; Cynthia Hernandez; Odessa; Patricia Rivers; Odessa; Carol Bailey, South Plains.

Hawks soar in region opener

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

SNYDER — Howard College ended Waco TSTI's season — and basketball program — with a 115-86 win in the first round of the Region V tournament.

Thursday afternoon's win improved Howard to 29-3 on the year and sent them into the second round of the tournament. The Hawks will play the north's number-one seed, McLennan College, at 9 p.m. today. McLennan advanced to the second round by beating the West's number-four seed, New Mexico Junior College, 95-87.

In other games, the Western Junior College Athletic Conference's first and third seeds advanced after comfortable wins over Northern Junior College Athletic Conference teams. South Plains beat Grayson College, 76-65, and third-seeded Odessa whipped Hill Junior College, 81-62. South Plains and OC will play at 7 p.m. today.

HC coach Steve Green said his team will have its hands full with McLennan. The Waco team looked good against New Mexico Junior College, he said.

"Before I knew much about McLennan I was kind of surprised," they beat New Mexico, Green said. "But after watching, I wasn't. McLennan is good."

"They're a good team — strong and shoot the ball inside well."

McLennan probably won't try to run with the Hawks, as they're more of a half-court team, he said, so the Hawks will try to force the tempo.

If HC gets past McLennan, the Hawks will make it an all-WJCAC final, as either Odessa or South Plains will advance. Green said he would rather face South Plains for the regional championship and a shot at the national tournament.

With Thursday's lopsided win, the Hawks snuffed out any hope TSTI had of extending its canceled basketball program for one more game. The Waco school announced in January that it would no longer fund a team, preferring to channel the money to other areas.

Most of excitement in the game centered around figuring out who was who, as the Hawks swapped around several jerseys. Johnny McDowell was forced to wear Natan Vieira's number 24 jersey, as his own number 32 came up missing.

Frank Henderson usually wears number 40, but Cleveland Melvin wore his jersey. Vieira ended up with a number 21 shirt, and Henderson was wearing number 5.

Green said the Tornados tried to pick the Hawks apart, but his team wouldn't let them.

"We came out and got after them," Green said, "and forced them to make some questionable passes."

The Hawks leaped to a 9-0 lead at the start of the game then at various times extended that to 14-3, 21-5 and 33-11. The Tornados' point guard, Cedric Carson, caught fire midway through the period and scored 17 of TSTI's 40 first-half points.

However, the Hawks were busy scoring 53 points, with 15 of those coming from Terrence Lewis. HC went on in the second half to play most of its bench and outscore TSTI, 62-46.

Lewis has found his range again after a — for him anyway — late-season slump. The sophomore led the team with 27 points, including two three-point goals. McDowell scored 20, Carlos Thunn had 14, Greg Jeffery 13 and Cecil Pittman 12.

Green said he didn't have any problem keeping his team from overlooking TSTI and thinking about a game with New Mexico and McLennan.

"There is no next game if you don't play today," Green said. "I told them every year one team gets upset in the first round, and after Odessa won the first game I said one down, three to go."

HC bats come alive

By STEVE REAGAN

BIG SPRING — Tom Leahy and the Howard College Hawks played with fire for most of Thursday afternoon — but it was Ranger Junior College that ended up burned.

Leahy overcame some early inning shakiness and the HC hitters awoke from a week-long slump with a vengeance as the Hawks battered Ranger, 11-4, in Region V baseball action at Jack Barber Field Thursday.

Leahy, a freshman from Boulder, Colo., struggled for five innings before finally settling down for his fifth victory against no losses. He surrendered four runs on seven hits, and struck out six and walked three in going the distance.

The Howard batters, meanwhile, roughed up three Ranger pitchers for 12 hits. Leading the way was first baseman Franklyn Johnson, whose second-inning homer got the HC attack going, and shortstop Jeff Schulz, who went three-for-four with two RBIs.

Howard is now 2-2 in Region V play with the win, while Ranger falls to 2-2 with the loss.

"This helped our confidence," HC assistant coach Frank Anderson said. "It was good to go out there and get one... Franklyn's home run helped us. Our confidence was off last week, but his homer got us going."

Johnson's pyrotechnics started the scoring in the second inning. After right fielder Todd Kolbicka led off the inning with a single, Johnson stepped to the plate and greeted pitcher LeeRay Quintanilla with a monster shot that cleared the left field fence on the rise.

Quintanilla, however, limited the damage to those two runs, and his teammates got them back the following inning. With one out and the bases loaded, Norberto Erazo rapped a sharp single to left field that scored two runs.

Leahy got out the jam, however, by striking out Hector Rivera and forcing Reed Cullum to ground out to first.

The Hawks wasted little time in regaining the lead, striking for three runs in the third. Schulz delivered the big blow of the inning, a two-out double to right that scored David Perez and Johnson. Schulz then came home on Sean Teague's single to left field.

Howard made the lead stand up for the rest of the game, although Leahy did have his shaky moments. Ranger struck for single runs in the fourth and fifth innings, shrinking the Hawks' lead to 5-4.

The game turned in Howard's favor, however, in the sixth. Leahy settled down to get his first one-two-three inning in Ranger's half, then the Hawks chased starter Quintanilla with three runs in the bottom half of the inning.

Schulz led off with a single to right and went to second when Teague walked. Ranger third baseman Tony Matta left the bag uncovered, allowing Schulz to steal third and, when designated runner Michael Hughes stole second and Tim Demerson walked, the Hawks had the bases loaded with none out.

Quintanilla then walked second baseman Steve Ramos, forcing in Schulz. John Acker came in to relieve Quintanilla, but he was greeted by Lee Demarais' towering fly ball to center that scored Hughes. An ensuing throwing error by Ranger second baseman Kirk Black allowed Demerson to score the third run of the inning.

Howard added three insurance runs in the eighth. Ramos reached base on an error by the right fielder, moved to second on Demarais' single, then scored on a

Lamesa sets record in romp over Gonzales

AUSTIN (AP) — Lamesa destroyed Gonzales 100-69, while 34-0 Navasota downed Gainesville 54-35 in a battle of tourney newcomers in the other 3A semifinal.

Using cat-like quickness and a smothering full-court trap, Lamesa, 30-6, established a new Class 3A tournament scoring record by hitting the century mark.

The Golden Tornados shattered the previous mark set by Phillips in 1956. The two teams also combined to break the aggregate high score game of 165 set by the same Phillips team against Webster (84-81).

It was the first time a team has scored 100 points in a state tournament game since Conroe defeated Corpus Christi King 107-76 in a semifinal game in 1985.

Senior Dwight Mason connected on 15-of-25 shots and had 34 points for Lamesa. Kirk Mathis paced Gonzales, 32-6, with 22.

Bad blood brewing on Davis Cup team

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Andre Agassi, upset with remarks made by Tom Gorman, lashed out at the U.S. Davis Cup captain Thursday, saying it would be difficult for him to play on the American team as long as Gorman is the captain.

"If he doesn't drastically change the way he runs things, I think it would only be harmful to keep him in this position," said Agassi, who the previous day had announced he would decline to play for the United States against Czechoslovakia later this month.

Gorman wanted Agassi to join Brad Gilbert as the American singles players in Prague in the second-round matches beginning March 30.

"I am terribly disappointed that Andre has chosen not to play," Gorman had said Wednesday. "I'm not happy with the situation at all. It's a nationalistic thing."

"What he said to me before and what he said to you all was different," Agassi told reporters Thursday. "Now I have no interest in going. As long as he's captain, it will be difficult. He's a chameleon."

"I'm not going to say I'm not going to play as long as he's captain. I'll just say it would be difficult. I don't want the country to suffer."

Agassi obviously doesn't like Gorman's approach to Davis Cup competition, saying Gorman wanted the players to spend most of their time together during the week before the tournament.

"He doesn't want my friend or Nick (his coach, Nick Bolletieri) to show up (in Prague) before Thursday," Agassi said. "I disagree on being a robot for a week. If I want to go to a movie with a friend, what difference does it make?"

Gorman later responded by saying, "We have to develop a connection between players. We have to develop team communication so if a player gets down, we can help him get back on track."

Gorman added that he wanted to speak privately with Agassi, saying, "If there are differences, and there apparently are, I think it can be worked out."

Aaron Krickstein, who is ranked No. 6 internationally, will replace Agassi, who is ranked eighth.

"At the end of the Scottsdale tournament, I said I'd play, then Krickstein wins Scottsdale,"

 The unheralded Boerne Greyhounds pulled off a major upset Thursday night by defeating Lincoln 59-55 in overtime in front of 10,677 screaming fans.
 When David Shivers hit a jumper in the lane with 14 seconds remaining the Bumblebees suffered their first ever loss in a state tournament game.
 Boerne, 28-7, will now face Dallas Lincoln in the 4A finals Saturday. Dallas Lincoln defeated Fort Worth Boswell 79-67 in the other semifinal game.
 No. 1 ranked Port Arthur Lincoln, 29-6, came into the game with a perfect 10-0 record at the state tournament with five state titles in the 80's before the Boerne upset.
 Boerne led from early in the first quarter until Terry Miller drilled a three-pointer to give Lincoln the lead 41-39 with 1:13 left in the third quarter.
 However Chad Chase made both ends of a one-and-one to tie the game at 41-41 after three quarters.
 Boerne grabbed a 50-48 lead in the final period, but Ronald Campbell made four straight charity shots sandwiched around a Chivers layup to make it 52-52 and send the game into overtime.

 Robbie Shivers started off the extra period with a three-pointer for a 55-52 advantage, but Kelvin McKeyer hit a free throw, followed by two from Vincent Shelvin to tie the game again 55-55 before Shivers' short shot.
 Shivers, who came in with a 30 point average, finished the contest with 16 points after sitting out most of the game in foul trouble.
 The 6-6 Campbell finished with 18 points and 15 rebounds to lead Lincoln.
 Dallas Lincoln outscored Fort Worth Boswell 14-2 in the final 4:57 to break open a tight game and slide past the Pioneers in the first 4A semifinal.
 In a tug-of-war struggle that turned into a scoring battle between Lincoln guard Willie Black and Boswell postman Tom Etchison, neither team held more than a six-point advantage until Lincoln made its run late in the contest. The game was tied 11 times and was 40-40 at halftime and 56-56 after three periods.

Fowler gets SFA job

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — Ned Fowler says it was just a matter of time.
 Fowler had found it hard to get another head coaching job since resigning as Tulane basketball coach amid a devastating point-shaving scandal in 1985.
 On Thursday, Fowler was chosen to rebuild the program at Stephen F. Austin, which is coming off a 2-25 record, its worst ever.
 Fowler replaces Mike Martin, who was fired with three games left in the season. Martin had a 12-40 record.
 "There was no doubt in my mind that I would get another Division I head coaching job," Fowler said after being introduced by university president William R. Johnson. "What has surprised me is that it's taken this long."
 Fowler was an assistant to Sonny Smith at Auburn from 1987 to 1989 before Smith left for Virginia Commonwealth.

Fowler was passed over for head coaching jobs repeatedly and had been teaching physical education in Tyler, Texas, and working for a scouting service.
 Fowler said his return was delayed because he had sought head coaching positions with such Division I programs as New Orleans and Auburn.
 "I think the majority of people around the country realize that I really had no involvement with the situation that happened there," he said. "It just so happened that I was the coach."
 Fowler resigned at Tulane after admitting that he had given players money out of his own pocket for humanitarian reasons, never as payment for playing.
 Basketball was abolished after the 1985 season amid the point-shaving scandal and allegations that star center John Williams received $10,000 to sign with the school and later got cash from coaches to tie him over some emergencies.

 David Wallace then brought both Demarais and Ackley home on a double to right field.
 After the game, Anderson said the win, coming in the manner it did, might prove to be a confidence builder for the Hawks.

"It may be a good sign," Anderson said. "Tom didn't have his good stuff, but he still fought through it, which was good to see."
 Leahy, blaming his performance on an inadequate warm-up, agreed with his coach.
 "This is definitely a confidence-builder — to go out there and have a game like this and still win."

New pastor

The Rev. Syl Moore was called as pastor of Baptist Temple Church, 400 11th Place, in November, according to a news release.

He was born Aug. 7, 1935 in Anderson County.

Moore and his wife Wilma live at 2905 Goliad, SYL MOORE. He spent 21 years in the military, during which time he pastored for three years a Foreign Mission Church in Tokyo, Japan.

After retiring from the Air Force in 1975, Moore pastored Southern Baptist churches in Levelland, Anton, Aspermot and Lamesa before accepting the local pastorate. He attended Elkhart High School, Elkhart, and attended North Texas State University, Denton.

Moore was licensed to the ministry in 1965 and was ordained in 1974, the release stated.

Women study poverty

Women of the First Church of God met recently for a monthly meeting. Betty Reagan, Missions Resource coordinator, directed the study titled "Poverty in America - The Rural Picture," which was compiled from Mennonite Central Committee Report, and from interviews with Church of God spokespersons.

The objectives were to view United States poverty from a rural perspective, and to consider biblical reference to the poor.

Members recognized signs of poverty in their own church and community instead of projecting them as "elsewhere."

Linda Lindell, Spiritual Life coordinator, closed the meeting by reading Deuteronomy 8:11-17, and with prayer.

The next meeting will be a salad supper and guest night April 2.

Recital

Van Hayes will present a recital of organ music March 18 at 3 p.m. at First United Methodist Church.

The program includes pieces by J.S. Bach, Bish, Daquin, Elgar, Fletcher, Franck, Frescobaldi, Mueller, Shack and Stantly.

Three of the compositions illustrate the various sounds of the organ; and others arrangements of well-known tunes.

Hayes received a bachelor's of music degree in church music from McMurray College, and has served as director at First United Methodist Church, Brownfield, and at El Buen Pastor United Methodist Church, Wichita Falls.

Hayes, a student of M. Keith Ross, serves as organist and music assistant at First United Methodist Church, Big Spring.

College Park news

Members of College Park Church of God youth group will compete at the "Regional Teen Talent" competition Saturday in music, Bible, art, creative writing and more.

Competition will be at Quaker Avenue Church of God, Lubbock. Regional winners will advance to state April 28 in Weatherford.

The youth ministries sponsored its youth revival at the end of February. Jeff Anderson was the evangelist.

The Sunday School Department will sponsor "Family Day" and "Girl Scout Day" Sunday at 10:30 a.m. Sunday School begins at 9:30 a.m.

Choir practice and prayer meeting will be Monday at 7 p.m. at the Worship Center.

The ladies ministries will have a prayer meeting and Bible study Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the Worship Center.

Heavenly commercial

'Jesus' appears on TV to boost attendance

By KRISTI UMBREIT
Associated Press Writer

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — An actor portrays Jesus in an unusual paid television commercial here seeking to boost attendance at an inner-city United Methodist church.

The pastor, the Rev. Craig A. Hunter, decided something more was needed than the typical "come visit us" appeals used by churches in such efforts.

With the help of a local advertising firm, he put together two 30-second spots using an actor portraying Jesus Christ.

In one spot, "Jesus" is sitting silently and alone in a pew. In the other, he is being led through a church door by a young girl.

"To our knowledge, this is the first church in the nation that has ever used an actor to portray Jesus in a television commercial," said Hunter, senior pastor of Richard Brown Memorial United Methodist Church.

The commercials, which state, "There's a very special spirit in this church," and that it has "a few seats left, and one of them is for you," began airing in mid-February on TV stations in this city of about 110,000 people.

Hunter said it's too soon to gauge the sentiments of the public and other churches. But he's braced for criticism.

Armed with a $6,000 grant from the East Ohio Conference of the United Methodist Church, Hunter visited local market and media specialist Vic Rubenstein, who offered his services for free and persuaded an area production crew and Ohio actor John Galgosi to make the commercial at cost.

One Sunday last month Hunter cut short the church service, and crews wheeled in a fog machine, lights, movie camera and other equipment. They filmed two commercials in about four hours.

One begins with the sound of a heartbeat and features a young man nodding off in a pew. He is the only person in the church, which appears misty.

As the camera closes in on the man, a voice-over says, "Some churches are kind of empty. Others are kind of staid. Others are very sleepy."

He awakes and his image fades, then becomes the likeness of Jesus, with a small halo around his head. The camera pulls back and he is surrounded by congregation members.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — The Rev. Craig A. Hunter of Richard Brown Memorial United Methodist Church, and Vic Rubenstein, a local market and media specialist, pose with a television playing a commercial for the church in which an actor portrays Jesus.

In the other commercial, a narrator portrays a visitor, speaking to his wife as he walks around inside the church.

"This is some special church, Martha," the man says as the camera scans people in classes and other activities. The man notes the different races and backgrounds of members and says, "There is something special going here."

Just then, a little girl walks through the door holding the hand of Jesus, who scans the activities and smiles slightly and approvingly.

The character of Jesus, played by Galgosi, 37, does not speak in either commercial. Galgosi, a dark-complexioned Caucasian with brown eyes and long, brown curly hair, wears a robe in the spots.

The church bought some of the local commercial time; other spots are given free by stations as public service announcements, Rubenstein said. The church qualifies because it is non-profit, he said.

"The first rule of marketing is one of positioning, of separating your product and your service from the rest," said Rubenstein, who attends a synagogue across the street from Hunter's church.

Rubenstein said the Richard Brown church seemed special to him because of its mix of people. "You see the blacks and the whites, the wealthy, the poor, the very secure, intellectual, university group, the handicapped. Who else but a spirit could bring these kinds of people together?"

The church's stone structure, built in 1915, is near the Youngstown State University campus. Hunter said membership reached about 500 in the 1950s, but residents' migration to the suburbs has cut the congregation to about 200.

Hunter and Rubenstein said most of the calls they have received since the ads ran have been positive.

"I warned Craig, I said, believe me, be prepared for the flak," Rubenstein said. "I don't think we've really experienced that backlash yet."

Richard L. Rustad, pastor of Boardman United Methodist Church, one of the city's larger Methodist churches, said he saw no problems with the commercials.

"We believe, speaking as a person in a mainline church, not only in historical Jesus but in the present Christ, and it seems like they're trying to indicate that the person and presence of Christ can be found within that congregation," Rustad said. "In fact it's creative. It's good."

"It's a very interesting church over there because it's very heterogeneous," he said of the Richard Brown congregation.

Ministry in music

The public is invited to hear and to participate with Don Hal Haney in a special time of ministry in music Sunday at 10:30 a.m. at First Church of the Nazarene.

Haney, a pianist, organist and vocal soloist, shares God's message through the medium of music. Though entertaining, Haney's goal is to encourage audience participation in worship and praise.

According to David Wilkerson, author of "The Cross and the Switchblade," Haney is "an excellent musical artist and a man of God."

Beginning at an early age, Haney has sung his way into the hearts of many people. He was featured soloist with the World Action Singers of Oral Roberts University of a tour of Europe and in Estonia, U.S.S.R.

At home with symphonies, school groups, or before large or small audiences, Haney's commitment to his faith in God is evident.

After working as a crusade associate with David Wilkerson for two years, Haney established his own ministry in 1975.

He has witnessed to audiences of all sizes in an international ministry. Haney ministers in more than 150 concerts per year, traveling from his home base in Dallas.

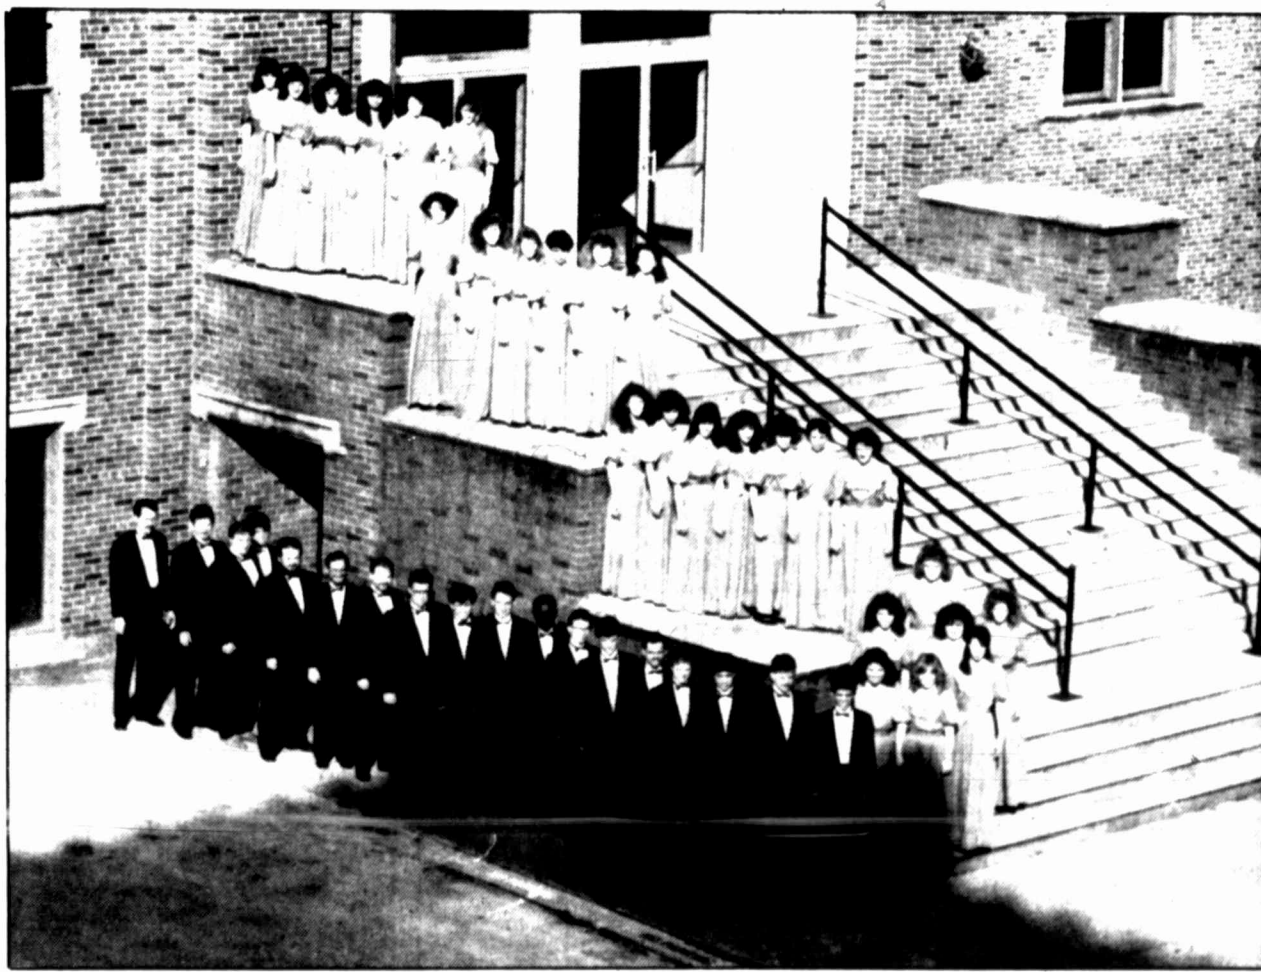

Pastor installation

The Rev. Robert Slaton will be in service Sunday at First Assembly of God for an official pastor installation service for the Rev. Stephen Grace.

Slaton is superintendent of the West Texas District of the Assemblies of God—West Texas is one of 57 districts of the Assemblies of God with its main office located in Springfield, Mo., according to a news release.

G. Raymond Carlson is the general superintendent.

In 1989 the movement celebrated its 75th anniversary with its historic gathering that began in Hot Springs, Ark. in 1914.

The Concert Choir from East Texas Baptist University will be in concert Sunday during the morning worship service at First Baptist Church, Big Spring.

Concert Choir to perform

The Concert Choir from East Texas Baptist University will be in concert Sunday at First Baptist Church, Big Spring.

Their music is representative of the wide range of musical styles present in churches today. Included in their concerts are contemporary sacred songs as well as the masterworks of choral literature.

The represent ETBU in a full schedule of performances on campus in addition to their travels throughout Texas and the nation.

The choirs are under the direction of Charles Fuller, assistant professor of music and director of choral activities. Fuller, a native of North Little Rock, Ark., holds a doctor or musical arts degree in choral music from Arizona State University, and has completed degree work at West Texas State University and Baylor University.

He was selected as one of the Outstanding Young Men of America in 1986, and is an active member of the American Choral Directors Association, Texas Choral Directors Association, Music Educators National Conference, Texas Music Educators Association, Southern Baptist Church Music Conference, and Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Professional Music Fraternity.

Maintain dignity in yourself and your friends

By BOB FARRELL
Special to the Herald

As a child, growing up, one of the things boys bragged about in our school was getting "a whipping from Chandler." Chandler was the P.E. teacher and had the respect and admiration of all the students.

Looking back, I can make observations now that were not possible for me then. What made it special to get "a whipping from Chandler?" I think it must have been the realization that the one everybody admired now knew me. Recognition from one so significant, whether it be his praise or his whipping, was important.

But there was something else Chandler did when around the students; he would squeeze the back of your neck, twist your ear, pop a frog on your arm, etc. What was being conveyed was that the one all admired and held in high esteem had noticed I was alive. I can observe now that those respected by youth help to

Pastor's corner
BOB FARRELL

Human life is measured in terms of statistics and we are spoken of as "75%" or "83% of those questioned say..." We are seen as only one among thousands. How do we regain the dignity of human life?

In spite of what some may say, the Bible is still relevant. Though its message was recorded centuries ago, truth remains truth.

I am a creature of dignity because I was created intentionally in the image of God with mind, will and emotion. I, as a part of the human race, was made responsible and partial architect of the shaping of my world and God has made us our brother's keeper whether we want to be or not. A fundamental responsibility is the recognition of the dignity of human life.

But the highest elevation of human dignity was granted when God became man and dealt among us in the person of Jesus Christ. When he walked this earth he never met an unimportant person. Everybody was special to Jesus, whether a leper or a prostitute, or an obedient servant. Jesus regarded them all as individuals with dignity. He always had time to respond to the blind, like Bartimeus, and for the little children.

If we ever expect to recapture national dignity it will be through the recovery of personal dignity. The Lord Jesus gave man his greatest evaluation of the dignity of all mankind by his death for us on the cross.

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." John 15:13.

I am grateful for all the "Chandlers" who helped me understand that I am a creature of worth, but most of all for Jesus who settled the matter more than 1,900 years ago.

The Rev. Bob Farrell is pastor of East Fourth Street Baptist Church.

'Christ the Redeemer'

RIO de JANEIRO — Rio's famed Christ the Redeemer statue, which overlooks this beautiful city from atop Corcovado mountain, is getting a $2 million facelift. Years of wind, rain and temperature change have caused serious damage to the statue, with some chunks of its soapstone facade already having fallen off.

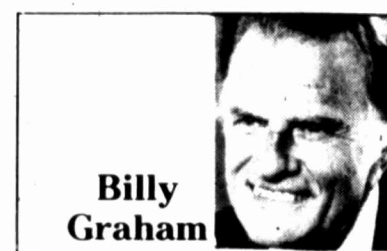

'God does forgive our sins'

By BILLY GRAHAM

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: If we commit a sin after we have become Christians does that mean God gets angry with us and we will lose our salvation if we forget to confess the sin? — Mrs. B.D.

DEAR MRS. B.D.: No, it doesn't. If this were true the only person who could be saved would be someone who is perfect — and no one is perfect. Salvation, instead, is a free gift God will never take from us — a gift that has already been purchased by Jesus Christ through his death on the cross for us. The Bible says that "the blood of Jesus, his Son, purifies us from all sin" (1 John 1:7).

Does this mean sin is unimportant, or that we don't need to confess our sins when we commit them? Not at all. Think what happens in a family when a child disobeys his or her parents. When that child does something wrong, fellowship is broken in the family — that is, there is no longer the warmth and oneness between the child and his parents that there once was. There may be embarrassment and shame, and the child may even go out of the way to avoid the parents. Fellowship — the closeness of the family — is broken.

But notice something very important: Although fellowship has been broken, the relationship is still the same. The child is still part of the family — and nothing can change that! The child is still a son or daughter, in spite of what he or she has done. And when that child is able to admit the wrongdoing and ask forgiveness, the closeness is restored.

When we sin, our fellowship with God is damaged; we are no longer as close to him as we should be. But we are still his children, if we have truly committed our lives to Jesus Christ.

Names in the news

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Isaac Stern said playing the violin is not a job but a way of life. "It's a way of speaking, a way of expressing something," Stern told reporters before a sold-out concert appearance Wednesday night. "Music is a whole world out there. I'm very sorry for those who cannot get this ecstatic moment when you are at one with the phenomena of man's creativity, and you're able to express it, and enjoy it and be moved by it and move others by it. That's very special. That's what is meant by being a musician."

The violinist said he loved working with young people. "I will be 70 this year and I've been playing concerts since I was 15. The world has been very nice to me, and I've taken a lot spokesman said Thursday. Kalila Dinkins Hoggard was born Wednesday at Middlesex Memorial Hospital in Middletown, Conn., said mayoral spokesman Tom Kelly. "Mother, daughter and grandparents are all doing fine," Kelly said. Kalila's parents, Donna Dinkins Hoggard and her husband, Jay, also have a son, Jamal, 3. "Kalila" is Arabic for beloved, the mayor's office said. Her grandfather's first name means "beloved" in Hebrew.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor David Dinkins' circle of supporters grew by at least one when he became a grandfather for the second time, a TOKYO (AP) — Paul McCartney, arrested and expelled from Japan 10 years ago for marijuana possession, said Thursday that people should stay away from drugs, alcohol and cigarettes.

Jeanne Dixon's Horoscope

SATURDAY, MARCH 10, 1990

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Britain's Prince Edward, playwright David Rabe, actress Pamela Mason, golfer Sandra Palmer.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Greater self-discipline is needed if your work is piling up. Be flexible if someone insists you change your plans. Effort spent on your appearance begins to pay off. Socialize tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Those in the arts want to make changes in their work environment. Be certain to obtain a higher-up's approval before starting a major project. Wear something a bit daring to a social event!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Something wonderful happens today. A new plan is perfect for you. Be sure you make the right choice after consulting experts. You and a long-lost romantic partner recapture the original magic.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Forget any fears you have about increasing your workload; you can handle it. A raise or promotion is in the works. A move to another city is possible. Consult mate before making a final decision.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel in pursuit of an educational or legal goal is favored. A parent-child conflict can be ironed out if you will go more than halfway. A surprise gift leaves you guessing!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can turn a power move into a victory if you play your cards right. Who you know counts big with influential people. A missing document surfaces in a strange place. Nurture romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Opinionated remarks could have unfortunate repercussions. Stay on your toes; be diplomatic if asked your preferences. Gemini will help you move mountains. Romance looks golden.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A new image will lift your spirits. Comparison shop when looking for new clothes. Bargains abound! Enroll in an exercise program or buy a workout video to follow at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish projects today. Secret deals could backfire. Focus on polishing your writing skills. Involvement in a community or charity project will bring satisfaction. Romance has its ups and downs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Create a more productive work climate by getting better organized. Do not expect all your plans to go like clockwork. The written word will be more persuasive than a verbal exchange.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A proposed financial transaction may lack a solid foundation. Take steps to protect your investment. Study other people's body language to discover what they are really thinking. Guard important papers.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get rid of the dead wood in your life and you will be much more productive. Your charisma and enthusiasm help you get a difficult project off the ground. Mate may be testing you.

Absentee voting light

STANTON — A 1988 state law allowing any registered voter to vote absentee appears to have little effect on the participation in the region's primaries. Before the change in state law, registered voters in Texas had to offer an allowable reason such as sickness, or expecting to be outside the county on election day in order to vote absentee.

Two counties, Martin and Glasscock, reported below normal absentee voting for this year's primary elections.

Unless they pile in today, some seems to be a little below normal. Betty Pate, county clerk for Glasscock County, said she has not yet counted the absentee votes. There are about 680 registered voters in Glasscock County, she said.

In Martin County, county clerk Virginia James said absentee voting was "light" for primary elections.

Only residents voted in the Republican primary, and 34 voted in the Democratic primary, as of 9:15 a.m. today, she said.

There are 2,677 registered voters in Martin County.

The light side

CHESHIRE, Conn. (AP) — The investigation into the theft of a coat and hat was only a day old when the prime suspect, wearing his boots, waltzed into police headquarters and the arms of the law.

Randolph Ferland, 53, stopped Wednesday at the police station in this west-central Connecticut town to use the bathroom, but was arrested after an alert police captain realized Ferland and his outfit matched witnesses' descriptions.

The crime drama began Tuesday night when someone sneaked into the Lutheran Church of the hire and stole a winter coat and knit hat from a closet. A few church members got a glimpse of the man, and described him to police.

Police Capt. Gary Walberg said he was reading a report on the theft Wednesday when he happened to peep out of his door and saw the man described in the report — pocket hat and all.

He matched the description of the man, Walberg said.

The only thing missing was the victim to identify the coat. Ferland was wearing as the one that had been taken.

As that thought crossed Walberg's mind, the victim walked into the police station to see if the coat had been found. It had.

After spending most of the day in jail, Ferland pleaded guilty. Meriden superior court judge degree Ferland by possession. A judge released him for time already served.

SVFD fights grass fire

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — Seven county firefighters spent 3½ hours Thursday afternoon snuffing out a grass fire which gobbled up about 200 acres of grass about 12 miles northeast of here.

Nobody was injured and the only damage was to a fence, said Stanton Volunteer Fire Department Chief Lonnie Long.

"Someone was burning weeds along the fence rows. It got away from them," he said. Estimating how much fence was burned, he said, "I'm going to say a quarter of a mile of fence post."

He said the only problem encountered was not having enough water on hand to dump on the blaze.

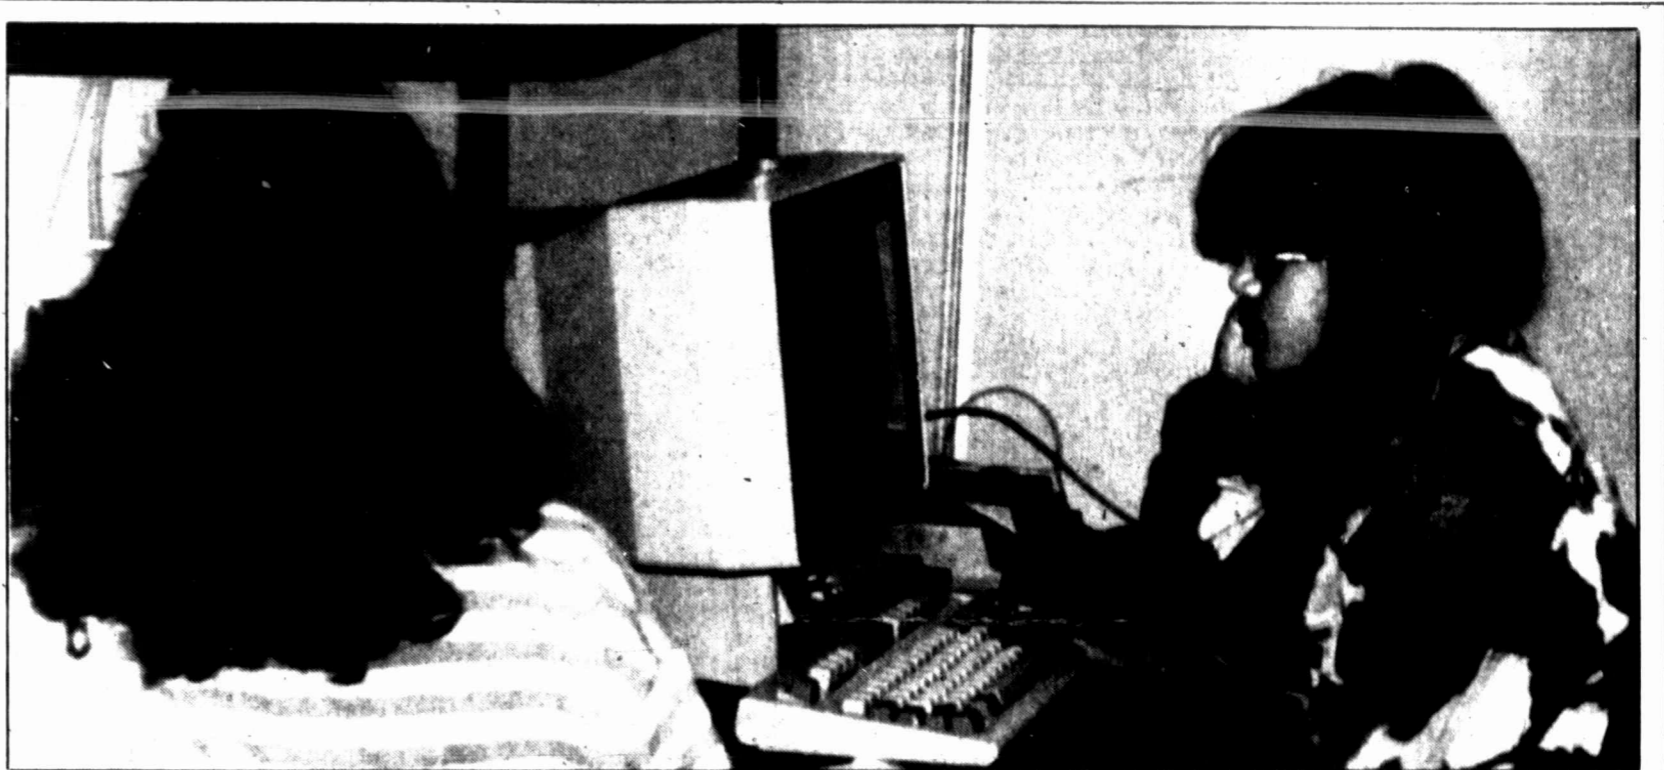

"IST Petroleum had to haul us out two tankers of water," he said. "I imagine we put about 8,000 gallons of water on it."

The thickness of the grass made it tough to extinguish the fire, but otherwise there were no other major problems, Long said.

"There were gusts of wind at times but nothing uncontrollable," he said. "It was just plenty hot, a lot of smoke."

"The grass was thick. It was hard to put out," he said.

Stanton fireman Corky Blocker said, "It was harder to fight than • FIRE page 3A

Honesty campaign didn't make everyone honest

By BETH CRACE
Associated Press Writer

COLLEGE STATION — A 14-month campaign to make honesty a city policy ended today, and its leader and police say they cannot tell a lie. It hasn't rid the city of liars, cheats or crooks.

"We haven't wiped out crime or made everybody honest, but we have made people think about it. That's what we intended to do," said Jeb Stuart Magruder, the former Watergate conspirator who led the "Take an Honest Look" campaign.

The privately financed $35,000 campaign in this Midwestern city of 566,000 closes today with a speech by Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young and an awards ceremony honoring those whose honesty was exemplary.

The guest list excludes those responsible for an increase in crime in Columbus last year. Homicides rose by 29 percent from 1988, car thefts by 22 percent and aggravated assaults by 5 percent.

Bank robberies dropped 50 percent last year, but already this year robbers have held up 33 banks, compared with 54 all of last year.

Deputy Chief Robert Kern said neither he nor the street patrol of ficers he oversees have noticed an outbreak of honesty.

"Crime is up, that's for sure," he said. "But I haven't noticed any more people than normal being honest. A lot of people call us with information or turn people in, but they've always done that."

The idea for the campaign surfaced when the honesty — or lack of it — of Columbus residents was questioned in 1988 after the rear doors of an armored car flew open, spewing bags of cash on an interstate.

Many motorists who stopped to scoop up the flying cash never returned it, although one man who returned $57,000 became a local celebrity.

The all-volunteer campaign initiated by the Columbus Commission on Ethics and Values targeted

DPS: State crime rate dropped slightly in '89

AUSTIN (AP) — The head of the Department of Public Safety says the latest crime figures for Texas are encouraging: The crime rate dropped slightly, although the number of major crimes is slightly up.

DPS said Thursday the crime rate dropped 1.2 percent in 1989 when compared with 1988.

"Considering some of the past increases in crime Texas has experienced, we are very pleased to see the crime rate has actually dropped and the number of crimes reported has grown only slightly," Col. Joe Milner said Thursday.

The 1989 crime rate, which is measured as the number of major crimes reported per 100,000 people, dropped from 8,019.6 in 1988 to 7,926.8 in 1989, according to DPS crime statistics.

The total number of major crimes reported in Texas — including murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, theft and motor vehicle theft — edged up from 1,345,688 to 1,346,846. That is an increase of 1,158 offenses, or 0.1 percent.

There were increases reported in murder, aggravated assault, theft and motor vehicle theft in 1989, compared to the previous year.

The number of reported murders was up 0.4 percent, to 2,029 cases; aggravated assault, by 6.5 percent, to 63,978; theft, by 0.3 percent, to 741,642; and motor vehicle theft, 12.4 percent, to 150,974 cases.

In contrast, decreases were reported in burglary, down by 5.5 percent to 342,360 cases; robbery, by 3.6 percent, to 37,910; and rape, by 2.1 percent, to 7,953.

The 1989 crime rate, which is measured as the number of major crimes reported per 100,000 people, dropped from 8,019.6 in 1988 to 7,926.8 in 1989, according to DPS crime statistics.

Texas peace officers cleared 20 percent of the major crimes they investigated, the same clearance rate reported in 1988.

The total number of arrests in the state increased by 5.8 percent, to 905,166, in 1989. Arrests for drug-related offenses grew 13.2 percent, to 71,800.

Arrests for drunkenness increased by 4 percent, to 165,495 in 1989, while arrests for driving while intoxicated decreased 0.5 percent to 103,008.

The number of peace officers assaulted in Texas increased by 8 percent, to 4,580 cases, in 1989.

"Law enforcement in Texas has had a price," Milner said. "In 1989, 17 law enforcement officers died in the line of duty — eight officers in criminal actions and nine in duty-related accidents."

STANTON — A section of U.S. Highway 80 that runs through Stanton will be closed for the next few weeks as workers seal cracks in the road. Officials say it's been at least 10 years since the last paving work was done on the highway.

Workers give Highway 80 facelift

HERALD STAFF REPORT

STANTON — State Highway 80 will have lanes closed out in Stanton for the next few weeks as workers seal cracks in the four-lane road in preparation for repaving, which is scheduled for sometime this summer.

Cones are set up right now in the westbound lane of the highway in the downtown area to keep motorists off the sticky emulsion which is used to seal the cracks, said

Herb Brooks, assistant maintenance manager with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

In prior weeks workers were working east and west of Stanton on the five-mile stretch of highway between the interchanges of Interstate Highway 20 which will be paved, he said.

"Now I've got them working in town for probably several weeks," he said. "There's a lot of cracks out there."

He estimated that it will take about three days to finish sealing the lane in Stanton that they are working on now.

Five men are working on it and are using about 500 gallons a day of emulsion, which is used in asphalt, he said. Sand is poured over the emulsion to help keep it in place.

"We're sealing those cracks now by hand so it'll last longer," Brooks said of the repaving which will be done this summer.

He said the last time it was paved was in the 1970s. "It's been at least 12-14 years since we last put the sealcoat (asphalt) on it," he said.

Officials conducting flood study

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

STANTON — An engineer from an Austin firm was in the area Thursday to gather data for a flood control study which should be completed by August.

The study is part of a $100,000 state matching grant to help alleviate flooding which caused more than $4 million in crop and road damages in the Knott, Sulphur Springs and Three Leagues areas in 1986 and 1987. Commissioners may hear the first report on the study at a March 26 meeting.

Jerome Zovne, a project manager with HDR Engineering Inc., met Thursday in Big Spring with Colorado River Municipal Water District Manager O.H. Ivie to get information on area precipitation, the water flow in Sulphur Springs Draw and Natural Dam structure.

"We're in the process of preparing models that we're going to be using to determine our alternatives," Zovne said. The models will include information on the history of rainfall and flooding in the area.

"We won't be able to have any results until we complete that process," he said. "We have lots of ideas at this time but nothing formal to put into a plan."

He said he will give a preliminary verbal report to Martin County commissioners at the end of this month. A draft final report should be completed in June and then submitted to commissioners and the Texas Water Development Board, the agency which awarded the grant, he said.

"We intend to submit a final report by Aug. 31," he said. "This is anticipated to be a 60-90 day process. Unless there is a delay."

Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport said that commissioners may meet on March 26 to hear the first report. Deavenport, along with Precinct 4 Commissioner E.D. Holcombe, attended the meeting with Ivie.

While in Martin County to give the first report, Zovne said he will also do some more work on the study. "We'll also be spending some time that week doing some field verification of the models," he said.

He said he may not have to interview county residents while visiting sites as previously planned. "I'm finding that the commissioners, particularly Mr. Holcombe, are knowledgeable about the flooding conditions," he said.

Commenting on the effect of recent rains, he said, "Apparently they haven't had any flooding from it but they wish they had some more."

So far it has rained five times this year for a total of 1.35 inches, said Grover Springer of Lenorah, who measures rainfall for the National Weather Service in Lubbock.

"That's not near enough rain," he said. At around this time last year, which is considered a drought year, it rained 1.59 inches, he said.

The average annual rainfall in the county is 18-20 inches, he said. It rained 8.11 inches in 1989; 20.76 inches in 1988; 15.01 inches in 1987; and 41.41 inches in 1986, he reported.

city schools, churches, government and city groups. Its chief weapon against dishonesty was public service announcements.

The television and radio spots, for example, showed a driver who backs into an unoccupied vehicle in a parking lot. He, of course, leaves a note explaining what happened. Another person gets too much change from a store clerk and gives it back.

But Magruder, a Presbyterian minister, said the campaign's biggest success was an honesty curriculum in area school districts. It spread sincerity to 90,000 Columbus school students through workshops, essay contests and other programs.

any fire we had. You'd wet it down and it would just smolder back up again." He added, "Our wind changed on us three different directions."

At the scene were five firefighters from the Stanton fire department and two from the Lenorah Volunteer Fire Department. Long said. Two tanker trucks and a mini-pumper were used to put the fire out.

"The alarm went off probably about 1:15 (p.m.). We were back in town about 5:30," Long said. "It was 3 1/2 hours that we were out there."

ASCS news

A small quail sure can produce man size excitement. A flushed covey can bring more excitement than one person can handle at one time.

How do I increase quail on my place? This question is most asked by landowners who really enjoy that man size excitement. Now is a good time of year to make plans to increase quail numbers for the next year. If 20 to 30 percent of last year's quail make it through the winter we are well on our way to a quail crop for the coming year. This carry over will provide the needed breeding stock for the next quail crop.

Ensuring a year around supply of food is one of the first considerations. If mother nature does not cooperate with moisture at the right time we may not be able to do much to increase food supplies. But if she does cooperate there are several things a landowner can do to increase year around supply of food.

One of the simplest and cheapest methods to increase food production is soil disturbance. This can be done by disking. This disking should be done in strips. These strips should be close to good cover. The disking should be growth of many native food plants. Some of the most important are ragweed, sunflower and doveweed.

Another method used to increase food production is food plots. These can be planted using annuals, perennials or a combination of both. These should also be placed close to good cover. These plantings must be treated like a crop. A good clean firm seedbed is a must. These plantings should be done timely, using proper seeding rates, and if needed fertilizer and weed control. Some of the best plants to use are sorghum, millet, sunflower, partridge pea, blue bundleflower, yellow clover, switchgrass, kleingrass, and bristlegass.

Planting woody species can still fill a dual role. They provide food but also can provide good overhead cover. This type cover is used by quail for escaping predators and also as loafing areas. Some of the better woody species are native plum, skunkbush sumac, Rhus, olive, sandcherry, hick, and honeysuckle. These can be planted in motts or multiple row plantings. Much care is needed to ensure success when it comes to woody species planting. They must be planted properly, watered properly, and have good weed control. Also protection from livestock and rodent damage is a must.

Increasing quail numbers can be a big challenge for landowners. It cannot be done overnight but with proper planning and carrying out that plan it can bring excellent rewards.

The local soil conservation service office in Stanton will assist through the mustang soil and water conservation district. A plan can be developed for managing and habitat. Please call 915-756-4444 or come by the office located at 109 E. Broadway for assistance.
