Tornado kills 37 in Saragosa...

Thunderstorms drench Snyder area

From local and wire reports

Snyder and the surrounding area received significant moisture in the early hours of Saturday morning, accompanied by thunder and lightning. Heavy rain continued to fall during the day.

No local damage was reported during the early morning storm, but Saragosa, a small town in far West Texas, did not fare so well. A tornado struck the community Friday night causing considerable loss of life and property damage.

The Snyder filter plant officially recorded 1.43 inches at 7 a.m. with rains still falling. Unofficial reports just before noon Saturday put the day's total well over two inches. Snyder's official total for 1987 is 7.44 inches. A Roby Highway resident reported 1.30 inches.

Ira received two inches and Fluvanna reported 2.5 inches of rain. Dermott reported 3.2 inches.

Other rain totals include Hermleigh, 1.30 inches and Dunn, 1.40 inches.

Deep Creek peaked just below the flood gauge shortly after 3 a.m., but the creek continued to run Saturday morning.

Snyder firemen made two runs during the thunderstorm which was accompanied by heavy lightning. The first was at 1:30 a.m. when a power line was down at 200 31st. At 2:09 a.m., firemen were called to Furr's on College Ave. where an auxiliary generator had apparently been hit by lightning.

Most cotton crops in the county are planted and the rains are expected to be a boost to the crops. There was, however, concern over washed out crops and terraces. May 18 was the uniform planting date in Scurry County.

Rescuers in mining helmets picked through rubble Saturday for victims of a tornado that flattened Saragosa and killed as many as 37 people, many of them children at a pre-school graduation, authorities said.

More than 110 people were injured Friday night, said state Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox in Austin.

"They're still bringing people out of the building, live and dead. They're using dogs," Reeves County jailer Janie Rodriguez said early today in Pecos, about 35 miles northeast of here. "The town is completely gone."

Moments before the twister struck this West Texas farm town around 8 p.m., parents frantically pulled their children from the stage of the community hall where the graduation was taking place and shoved them under tables and benches, a witness said.

Pecos Police Chief Ed Krevit said one of his officers at the scene reported 37 dead, many trapped inside the hall.

Other officials here said the count was actually 29 dead, but that it was likely to rise to 37.

DPS spokesman David Wells said there could be more dead in the fields but that rescuers were hampered by bad weather and darkness. Saragosa was without power and the roads were impassable, Cox said. A school bus was converted into a morgue.

Houses, which appeared to be mostly frame on cinder-block foundations, were flattened throughout the community, leaving nothing behind to indicate how the town once looked.

"There is no structure left in town," said Wells. "The stone building was filled with 5-year-olds and their parents attending the ceremony."

Reeves County Sheriff Raul Florez said there had been some reports of severe weather in the Special session looms in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — State legislators have little more than a week to go in their 140-day regular session, but they will be summoned back for a summer special session if they fail to act on several issues.

Calling lawmakers into a 30-day overtime period is a power that rests with the governor, who also can limit the agenda to whatever subjects he pleases.

Gov. Bill Clements has a list of items he considers important enough to bring lawmakers back after the June 1 adjournment.

Heading the list is the tax-and-spending dilemma that has kept the House, Senate and governor tangled in knots for months.

Clements says flatly that he will veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion. Both the House and Senate have passed budgets that would require at least $2 billion more new money than the governor's limit.

Quoting actor Clint Eastwood and President Reagan, Clements encouraged lawmakers to "make my day" if they don't believe his veto threat. Since state government's fiscal year ends Aug. 31, action would have to be taken this summer to keep the doors open.

The governor says he is determined to get legislative action on several other matters as well, even if it means overtime.

One is tort reform, the complicated question of revising the state's civil justice system for personal injury and liability lawsuits.

Clements recently said he believes the problems of obtaining liability insurance are so severe that they affect consumers, public services, tax rates and even job growth.

"There is no question that state government can be part of the solution of stabilizing the liability insurance market through reforms that restore the predictability of the civil justice system," he said.

The House and Senate have passed different tort reform bills and the matter is before a conference committee. If that fails, lawmakers will be back, Clements says.

"I have made it clear that should these efforts fail in this regular legislative session, I will submit the issue to special session. It is that vital," he said.

A second vital issue, Clements says, is an odd-sounding item called "budget execution authority."

Such authority would allow a governor to shift funds from one state agency to another in times of fiscal crisis if the Legislature isn't in session.

Voters approved a constitutional amendment two years ago that allows the Legislature to grant such power to the governor. But lawmakers, who traditionally guard their power over state spending, have been reluctant to part with any.

Various proposals have been floated to give the new clout to the governor and a panel of other officials. Clements says some plan must pass, although the Senate early this year voted against even bringing the question up for debate.

"The people of Texas, who voted for the constitutional amendment, are just being ignored by certain people in the House and Senate," Clements said.

According to Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary, two other unresolved issues also may be subjects raised in a special session, although Bashur said he doesn't know if either by itself would force the additional 30 days.

Memorial Day observances

Two veteran organizations in Scurry County will have joint Memorial Day activities Monday. Sponsors are Post 8231 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Post 181 of the American Legion.

Activities will begin with a flag raising ceremony at the VFW Post on Ave. T, followed by flag raising at the American Legion Post on Ave. R.

Next, flags will be raised at the Snyder Cemetery and Hillside Memorial Gardens. Morning activities will conclude at 10 a.m. with a Memorial Service at the Veterans Monument located on the north side of the courthouse.

The day's activities will conclude with a dinner served at the VFW Post from 6 to 7:30 p.m. All VFW, American Legion, Disabled Veterans, Vietnam Veterans, active duty personnel, National Guard, and reserve duty personnel and their families are invited to the dinner.

City, county, state and federal government offices will be closed Monday for the Memorial Day. However local elementary and high schools — including Snyder, Hermleigh and Ira — will be in session.

The Scurry County Museum and the Diamond M Museum of Fine Art will also be closed. The county museum will observe its regular Sunday hours from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. and will close Monday only. The Diamond M Museum will be closed Saturday through Monday.

In addition to Monday's closing, the Scurry County Library will be closed Saturday.

Snyder's financial institutions — to include American State Bank, Snyder National Bank, West Texas State Bank, City Savings, Olney Savings Association and Snyder Savings and Loan Association — will also be closed Monday.

There will be no home delivery of mail Monday, but mail will be put in post office boxes.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A good sermon helps everyone. Some gather new strength and others wake up from it refreshed."

There is good news for students and teachers. There is only one more Monday left in this school year. The bad news is for parents, and every day will be Monday with a house full of kids all summer.

Graduation is Friday night, but it's still difficult for some graduates to think seriously about their future. A father of one senior lamented his son's apparent lack of concern and ambition.

"For him, getting out of bed is a career move."

We noticed that this spring's college grads are finding the job market tight, and that those who are able to find jobs are finding starting salaries lower than expected.

If we could make career choices again, law would be near the top of the list. After watching some of the congressional hearings, we've concluded that about every other person in the room is a lawyer.

It seems that few people do anything or make any decisions without first consulting an attorney. This reminds us of the story about the plaintiff who was unaccustomed to court proceedings. He was disturbed to see that the defendant had two lawyers at their table.

During a recess, the plaintiff asked if he needed a second lawyer. The lawyer told his client that the case was going smoothly. "In fact, I don't see how we can lose."

"Perhaps so," said the plaintiff, "but the company has two lawyers. When one of them is up speaking, the other is sitting and thinking. When you're up speaking for our side, nobody's thinking."

Women to form group

A new organization for women will have its first general meeting on June 2 at The Shack restaurant. Working with the Chamber of Commerce and other civic groups, the members of the new organization will assist at community activities.

The purposes of the organization are twofold — first, to support city and county events with a corps of civic-minded women; and second, to help newcomers develop a stronger attachment to the county and its people.

Although the group intends to work closely with the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, it will function as a separate entity with its own officers and bylaws. Membership in the chamber and membership in the women's group are not related.

Members will decide particular interests at their meetings. Those interests would include such endeavors as city beautification, hostessing conventions in Snyder, working at cultural events and helping at public gatherings in ways which enhance the image of Snyder as a friendly city.

The June 2 meeting will begin at noon and conclude at 1 p.m. Lunch service will be available at the salad bar.

Interested persons may call Betty at 573-0654 or Linda at 573-8611 for more information.

Q. — Is the open container bill in Texas in effect yet?

A. — No. It goes into effect Aug. 31. The new law will make it illegal for the driver of a motor vehicle to be in possession of an "opened" alcoholic beverage. A passenger may still have a drink in their hand, however.

Navy probes Stark incident

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A U.S. Navy team investigated the USS Stark disaster Friday but released no report on its initial findings, and an Iranian gunboat attacked a Qatari freighter in the Persian Gulf sea war.

U.S. officials in Washington said air power might be used to prevent further assaults on American warships.

Another American team was expected to visit Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, soon for a joint probe with Iraq of the raid on the Stark, in which 37 sailors were killed and 21 wounded Sunday night by missiles launched from Iraqi aircraft.

A Navy team went to the crippled Stark, anchored 3 miles off Bahrain, on Friday to continue their investigation. They arrived on Wednesday.

Although no official details were given, a source close to the investigation, speaking with the condition he not be identified, gave this account of how two French-made Exocet missiles struck the frigate:

The first missile hit on the Stark's left side at a slight downward angle near the ceiling of one of the decks, ripped a tunnel through the vessel and punched a small hole in the right side, but did not explode and remained inside the ship.

Although the exact entry area of the second missile has not been determined, it roared through the left side and into a small, confined area where it exploded, causing tremendous damage because the space was limited.

It exploded "upwards and outwards" right next to some of the crew's quarters, and a fierce blaze was made worse by the presence of chemical-filled piping.

The source in Bahrain said he had just visited the crippled warship.

Church held liable for affair

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — A jury has ordered Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord to pay $50,000 to the family of a teen-age girl with whom the church's former youth minister had sex with in 1984.

In an affidavit, former youth minister Brad Calley admitted engaging in sex with the girl four times in July and August 1984. He resigned two weeks after the incidents.

The girl was 15 at the time of the incidents and now is 18.

A civil court jury unanimously concluded Thursday — after three days of trial — that the church was responsible for Calley's actions and returned a $50,000 verdict against it.

However, the church's attorneys indicated Friday they would appeal the case unless the family accepts a reduced settlement of $30,000. The family's attorney, Michael McLeaish of Odessa, said the family rejected the offer.

"They've got their verdict. The only argument now is if they can keep the $50,000," McLeaish said.

Presiding District Judge Joe Connally said Thursday he will review the evidence to determine whether the amount of the award will stand.

The Rev. James R. Otterness, who was pastor of the church in 1984, would not comment Friday. He referred all questions to the church's attorneys. Otterness has been pastor of Our Savior's Lutheran Church in Midland since October 1985.

In final arguments Thursday, lawyer Stacy Trotter, representing the church, argued that Calley "was not employed by the church to perform sexual acts with a 15-year-old girl. ... The Lutheran Church of the Risen Lord had nothing to do with these acts."

McLeaish argued that just as a company may be responsible for auto accidents its employees have, so is the church responsible for its employees.

"Was it Brad Calley's job to seduce a 15-year-old child? No. ... But for Brad Calley being hired a minister with this church, he would never have been given the opportunity to ... rape this 15-year-old girl," McLeaish said during final arguments.

War on drugs pledged

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements promised Friday to marshal state and federal funds to combat drugs in the classroom, workplace and along the Texas-Mexico border.

"We're talking about marshaling all our resources — a full commitment from your governor's office and the related state agencies and doing something about the drug problem in the state of Texas. You have my full commitment," Clements told a gathering of Texas Lions Club governors.

Clements accused his predecessor, former Democratic Gov. Mark White, of letting the war against drugs languish during the past four years.

Clements won national attention for his anti-drug abuse campaign when he was governor before White's term that ended in January. He said he organized the latest effort, "Texans' War on Drugs, Phase Two," to destroy "this cancer that's on our society."

Efforts will range from educating young children through college students about the dangers of drugs; combating the import of illicit drugs along the border with Mexico; and drafting employment policies that would require a worker caught abusing drugs to be treated or fired, Clements said.

Educators who don't cooperate should be replaced, Clements said.

"We want no foot-dragging in this program," he said.

State told to revise school financing; given time to do it

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge Friday ordered the state to revise its system of financing public schools to give all students a better chance at a quality education.

However, the injunction ordered by state District Judge Harley Clark won't become effective until the 1989 Legislature has a chance to remedy the current system, which Clark says is unconstitutional.

"The court would be satisfied if the 1989 Legislature does what it should do," Clark said at a Friday hearing.

"I am not happy with ordering the Legislature to do anything, but if by Sept. 1, 1990, there has been no change in the financing system, I will order the Texas Education Agency, the treasurer, the comptroller or anybody else necessary to not spend a penny more under the present system."

On April 29, after a 2½-month non-jury trial, Clark held that the present school financing system was unconstitutional, because it discriminated against students in property-poor school districts.

"It's going to be very difficult to do what Judge Clark wants to happen," Speaker Gib Lewis said after Clark's ruling Friday.

Bell planning local programs

Texas' economy in the next two decades will be significantly influenced by the revolution in the telecommunications technology as it was by highways in years gone by," according to Bill Haehnel, Southwestern Bell Telephone science demonstrator.

Haehnel's program, titled "Gateway to the Information Age--Part II," will be presented to the Snyder Lions Club on Tuesday and to the Snyder Rotary Club on Thursday.

He noted Southwestern Bell is at the center of the high-tech explosion in Texas, and improvements in the Texas network will have major impact on productivity in the state in years ahead.

"Lightwave systems, digital switching, and other advanced technologies will be required to meet customers' demands, Haehnel said.

A 44-year-veteran of the communications business, Haehnel will examine technological changes affecting the whole spectrum of human endeavor, both in business and personal lives of Texans.

Scurry County residents urged to make 'memorial gifts'

As part of the Memorial Day observance, Scurry County residents are urged to make a "memorial gift" to the American Cancer Society in memory of a loved one lost to cancer.

"A gift today may spare others tomorrow," said Jan Johnson, public information chairman. "The American Cancer Society fights cancer through research, education and service, thus seeking to fulfill one of mankind's greatest hopes--the ultimate triumph over cancer."

According to the ACS, two out of every three families will be affected in some manner by cancer during a lifetime. Each memorial contribution helps bring the moment of final victory over the disease a bit closer.

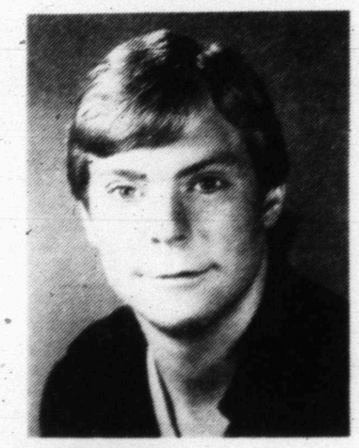

Every memorial gift is acknowledged with an appropriate card naming the person in whose memory the gift is made. This card is sent to the person who made the gift. In turn, the donor receives an official receipt of the contribution.

Johnson said that the process of making a memorial gift is simple. The only information needed is the name of the person honored and the name and address of the person to whom acknowledgement should be sent. Special envelopes are available from the American Cancer Society office at 301 N. Willis, Abilene, Tex. 79602, 915-673-4295, or at the West Texas State Bank.

"Help us wipe out cancer in your lifetime, by remembering a very special person during this special time of the year," said Johnson.

Memorial Day events slated

By Richard Herzfelder
Associated Press Writer

Celebrations for the 200-year-old piece of parchment that became the U.S. Constitution highlight a Memorial Day weekend that will also be marked by the snarl of racing engines, the sweet sound of jazz and the rustle of millions of beach blankets on sand.

Good weather and spring fever brought outdoor activities to the fore, with everything from inner-tube river races to kite-flying on the programs. Beaches and national parks were bracing for millions of visitors.

Veterans groups across the nation were planning Memorial Day observances shadowed by the deaths of 37 Navy sailors in the Persian Gulf on Sunday. President Reagan attended a service Friday at Mayport Naval Station, Fla., for the men who died when an Iraqi plane attacked the USS Stark.

Whether by land, sea or air, it was a sure bet travelers would not be lonely. Washington state officials warned of clogged ferries and overflowing airport parking lots and said aircraft would target speeders for a beefed-up squad of state troopers.

"In some cases, the travel increases by as much as 50 percent, with people visiting families, relatives, or going home from school over the weekend," said Howard Graff of the New Mexico Traffic Safety Bureau. The peaks, he said, will probably be late Friday and late Sunday.

The Memorial Day weekend was the first holiday test of the new 65 mph speed limit, and Utah police worried motorists would not notice the limit is still 55 mph in urban areas. For safety's sake, many states were sponsoring The Great American Buckle-Up.

The Spoleto Festival U.S.A. opened with a bright banner and brass fanfare Friday at Charleston, S.C., City Hall, where a bust of festival founder and artistic director Gian Carlo Menotti was unveiled.

Richard Strauss' "Salome" was bowing Friday night. B.B. King's blues and a performance by 19th-century marionettes were other highlights among more than 100 performances scheduled from now to June 7.

The Constitutional Convention opened 200 years ago Monday.

Polygraph said inconclusive

DALLAS (AP) — A police spokesman Friday disputed an attorney's description of a polygraph test taken by the Rev. Walker Railey and said the test indicated some of the minister's story about a near-fatal attack on his wife is not true.

A privately administered test showed Railey was truthful when he answered "no' to questions about possible involvement in the choking of his wife, Margaret, attorney Doug Mulder said Friday.

Mulder also said results of a second polygraph test administered by police were inconclusive.

But Mulder's characterization of the police test was "somewhat less than completely accurate," police Capt. John Holt said.

Some of the police test results were inconclusive, but other parts indicate that Railey "was untruthful" about his whereabouts on the night of the attack on his wife, Holt said Friday.

"We have serious concerns that there are serious conflicts in his account to us and what the investigation has revealed to be indisputable evidence," Holt said.

Meanwhile, the investigation into the near-fatal attack on Mrs. Railey is stalled because Mulder and police investigators can't agree on who should administer a third polygraph test.

Mulder said the case isn't likely to move forward unless he and police can agree on the operator for another police polygraph test.

But Holt said Railey's refusal to talk with detectives, on the advice of his lawyer, is "a serious impediment to the investigation."

Mulder said he arranged the tests to clear up questions about whether Railey was involved in his wife's attack.

"I think it's important that he clear his name for the congregation in particular and the public in general. We're attempting to do all we can to do that," he said.

Police have never said Railey was a suspect in the April attack that left Mrs. Railey in a coma. Holt said Friday that investigators' efforts to question the minister should not be seen as implicating Railey in the crime.

Ten days after the attack on Mrs. Railey, her husband took an overdose of drugs in an apparent suicide attempt the night before police planned to question him a third time. They wanted to ask about inconsistencies involving his whereabouts the night his wife was hurt.

PTL management accounts for $80 million

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL put on the auction block today a vintage car, a grand piano and other luxuries from the empire built by Jim and Tammy Bakker, as their daughter charged they had been tricked into giving up the TV ministry.

The PTL officials who took over after Bakker stepped down in a sex scandal March 19 also asked him and other departed officials to return more than $1 million in bonuses they allegedly paid themselves this year.

Up for auction today were a baby grand piano from a hotel suite the Bakkers used, a 7-foot brass and copper giraffe, a 1927 Franklin car, a Lincoln Continental, collectors' comic books, silver coins, Italian desks, a wide-screen television, jewelry, oil paintings and a stereo.

PTL hopes to raise $500,000 from the sale of the items, which were bought by PTL or donated over the years, chief operating officer Harry Hargrave said Friday.

The auction coordinator, PTL singer Bob Johnson, denied an allegation made by Bakker's teen-age daughter, Tammy Sue, that some of the items were the personal property of Bakker or his family.

PTL executives, meanwhile, said auditors looking over the books have accounted for $80 million of the $92 million that had been reported missing after Bakker left.

They also announced PTL raised $3.5 million in donations in the past week in a "May Emergency" drive with a $10 million goal.

Tammy Sue Bakker on Friday lashed out at the Rev. Jerry Falwell, to whom her father turned over the ministry after admitting to a 1980 sexual liaison with a church secretary.

She said Falwell lied to Bakker by "telling him you can come back anytime you want and you can have the ministry back."

"Then what does he do on TV? Tells Dad right on TV, 'You cannot ever come back to Heritage USA,'" she said, referring to PTL's theme park here. "Now if that's not a lie, I don't know what is."

Falwell, reached by telephone Friday night at his Lynchburg, Va., home, said he sympathizes with the Bakker children and added, "It is very understandable that the daughter would feel quite strongly regarding this matter."

While leaving the TV ministry $66.7 million in debt, Bakker and other former PTL executives had paid themselves huge bonuses, charged Jerry Nims, PTL's chief executive officer.

"The people who took the bonuses should seriously consider giving them back," he said.

"Usually you get bonuses for success, but at the time they took the bonuses, this ministry was going down $1 million to $4 million per month. Those bonuses, when you add them up, are in seven figures."

Nims said he was more optimistic about the ministry's future: "The plane that was in a dive, we've pulled up and gotten it stabilized."

Of the newly accounted-for $80 million, $30 million was spent on salaries, labor and related costs; $20 million went for television time; $20 million was used for payroll taxes, travel and interest; $5 million was spent on publications, printing and postage, and $5 million went for Bibles and books, Nims said.

In 1889, North Dakota and South Dakota became the 39th and 40th states admitted to the Union.

area but no tornado warnings. "It was a surprise to these people here."

Rescue workers, their way lit only by mining helmets, worked in the dark early today, picking through the rubble of homes for victims.

Townspeople huddled near rescue trucks, awaiting word on the fate of relatives and friends in this town of about 180 people. Cars lay crumpled along the buckled guardrails of Texas 17.

"You could just see gray and then you could hear just kind of like a whistle sound ... like a vacuum" cleaner, said Salvador Carrera, 22. Then there were sounds like explosions "and roofs were coming down."

About 100 people were inside the hall when the tornado leveled the building, according to Jose Rodriguez, who said he was attending the ceremony for pre-kindergarten youngsters in a government Head Start program.

"A parent yelled a tornado was coming, and parents started grabbing their kids from the stage," said Elodia Garcia, 26.

"They told us to take cover, then the windows started shattering, the walls started coming down. It fell on us, but the Lord was with us," Ms. Garcia said.

Ms. Garcia and her 6-year-old daughter, mother and father sustained only minor injuries. She said they were pulled from the rubble by volunteers.

Hospitals in Pecos, Fort Stockton, Monahans and Odessa said 108 injured people arrived for treatment.

"The hospital at Pecos ... is all beyond capacity," said Russ Kyler, assistant administrator at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa about 70 miles from here. "The helicopters are trying to get in here, but the weather is so bad that they can't come in."

Authorities put out a call for cots, water, blankets and other outside aid, said Ector County Red Cross spokeswoman Katherine Stockton.

The tornado came from one of a series of intense thunderstorms that drenched the western portion of the south Plains, the National Weather Service said.

Johnny Morgan, 43, of Midland said he and his family saw the tornado from their car.

"We ... watched it grow. I got to the edge of Saragosa and came right by the thing, and it turned around the other way," he said in a telephone interview from Reeves County Hospital, where he was aiding rescue efforts.

"Buildings were flattened. Cars were strewn about. Power lines were down," said Morgan. "As we watched it, the stem became wider and wider and darker. As we got to the edge of Saragosa, I really became frightened by it."

The worst single tornado in Texas history hit Wichita Falls on April 10, 1979, killing 42, injuring 1,740 and destroying mroe than 3,000 homes. Damage was put at $400 million, and an estimated 20,000 were left homeless.

The worst tornado disaster on record since 1925 was the Great Tri-State Outbreak on March 18 of that year in Missouri, Indiana and Illinois, where a system of seven twisters killed 689 people and injured 1,980.

DWI guilty plea nets probation

A 24-year-old Midland man was placed on felony probation for two years after entering a guilty plea in the 132nd District Court this week.

Wesley David Balkum was arrested for driving while intoxicated in Scurry County on March 16 and pleaded guilty to that charge in exchange for the two-year probated term.

Five-year term given probationer

Jerry DeLao Torres, 23, of 2508 Ave. C was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections after having a previously granted probationary prison term revoked in the 132nd District Court this week.

Torres was originally given a five-year probated term in March 1983 after pleading guilty to a charge of burglary with intent to commit theft.

Local probation officers sought revocation of that term in light of Torres' arrest on suspicion of driving while intoxicated on May 10.

Misdemeanor assault filed against husband

Foyt serious for 'spectacle'

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Through the eyes of A.J. Foyt, the "Greatest Spectacle in Racing" is no spectacle. It is, as it always has been, a race.

As Foyt put it: "I'm a vanilla kind of a guy. I like to keep things clean and simple."

So burst all the helium balloons, fold the carnival tents and souvenir stands, wrap the sun-worshipers in shirts, put the beer back in the ice bucket. A.J. comes to Indy to work.

"I try to stay low-key and stick with the racing, stick with the basics," Foyt said. "That's how I make my living."

The work began May 2 and it will continue through Sunday afternoon, until the 71st Indianapolis 500, the 30th in a row with A.J. in the field, is over.

Over those three weeks and two days, Foyt will have had his hand in every phase of the preparation. He spent a good deal of time Friday, for instance, chastising a fellow who didn't paint Foyt's car trailer correctly.

"A lot of people think we have a month, but we don't," Foyt said. "And it's been hot all month, and that's led to a lot of the crashes because the track is so slick."

One of the crashes involved Foyt. His Lola went into the wall during Thursday's "Carburetion Day" practice session, scrunching up the left side and setting his crew to the nerve-wracking task of rebuilding the car as the last 48 hours ticked away.

Today, chief steward Tom Binford planned to call the drivers together for the annual public counseling session on safety.

Foyt is no daredevil. Far from it.

"Scared? All the time," he says. "I'm not one of these guys who's a hero race driver. The guy who tells you that is fooling himself. There's not a man alive who wants to go out and break his arms or legs or back, and I've had all that happen to me."

At age 52 and after starting every Indy race since 1958, Foyt still has trouble overcoming the special emotions of this race.

"I have to talk myself down every year. I think I've got myself talked down pretty good this year, because I don't know what the car's going to do. It's all new. We did do a lot of tests the week after we qualified so we have a pretty good idea how to put it back together. And I think we'll have a car that's very capable of winning the race."

Foyt will start his rebuilt car from the fourth position in the 33-car field. He started from the same spot when he won in 1967 and it was from No. 4 that he won his record fourth 500 in 1977.

Knocks Oklahoma from tourney...

UT avenges loss to Sooners

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Oklahoma pitching ace Jack Armstrong had handcuffed the University of Texas 13-4 earlier in the season, and word was out that the 6-foot-5 righthander wanted badly to pitch against the Longhorns in the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament.

Vengence belonged to the Longhorns on Friday, however. Texas, the nation's No. 1-ranked college baseball team, drubbed the Sooners' all-America candidate in a 10-5 victory before 5,800 fans on Friday, knocking him out in the sixth..

After beating Oklahoma, the Horns, 56-9 on the year after their sixth straight win and 23rd in their last 25 games, needed only two more wins to advance to the College World Series for the 25th time.

The loss knocked the Sooners out of the tournament, since they already had one loss in the double-elimination tournament. Oklahoma, 42-20, has now lost four straight times in a Central Regional here and seven of its last nine regional games here.

Texas was paired at noon Saturday against Houston, also unbeaten in the tournament after an 8-4 victory Friday over Sam Houston State. At stake for the winner was a spot in Sunday's 1:30 p.m. finals. In other action Friday, Indiana State drubbed Lamar 10-5 to make the Cardinals the first team eliminated.

Sam Houston, 43-17-1, was matched against Indiana State, 45-17-1, at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, with the loser falling out of the tournament.

Texas rapped Armstrong and two relievers Friday for 13 hits - including a three-run homer by Brian Johnson and six doubles. Brian Cisarik drove in three runs with a pair of doubles.

Elanis Westbrooks, Coby Kerlin, Mike Patrick, Rusty Crockett and Johnson had two hits each for Texas.

UT's John Morton preserved the win for Mark Petkovsek (13-2) by inducing two double plays in the last two innings after OU rallied for five in the seventh.

The Houston-Sam Houston game was in the fourth inning before either side got a hit. Sam Houston's Andy Deen broke the seal in the bottom of the fourth with a single to drive in Terry Pirtle who had been hit by a pitch.

Kansas City wins, 8-1...

Royals slam Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Danny Tartabull hit a pair of two-run homers, Bo Jackson also homered and Charlie Leibrandt pitched a four-hitter as the Kansas City Royals beat the Texas Rangers 8-1 Friday night.

Leibrandt, 6-2, walked one and struck out five in pitching his third consecutive complete game. Loser Mike Loynd, 1-1, went five innings, giving up six runs and six hits.

Tartabull started the scoring in the first inning with his fifth home run of the season two outs after a leadoff walk to Willie Wilson. He also accounted for Kansas City's final two runs with a ninth-inning homer off Greg Harris as the Royals won for the 14th time in 18 games.

Jackson's homer leading off the sixth, a 440-foot shot to straightaway center, was his seventh of the season.

The victory extended Leibrandt's career record against Texas to 5-1 but was his first at Arlington Stadium since Aug. 16, 1984.

Hereford blanks AHS; Pecos suffers loss, too

LUBBOCK -- It took Hereford just over an hour and a half to dispose of District 2-4A representative Andrews in the first game of a best-of-three bi-district playoff series here Friday, 10-0.

2-4A's other representative, Pecos, also fell to a team from 1-4A. Canyon silenced the Eagles 7-1.

Hereford and Andrews were to meet again at 1 p.m. Saturday at Chaparral Stadium for Game 2 of the series. A third game, if necessary, was to follow.

Pecos and Canyon also met at 1 p.m. Saturday, at O'Banion Field here. That series was also to wrap up with a Game 3, if necessary.

Hereford took a slim, 1-0, lead in the first inning Friday, then exploded for five second-inning runs. The Whitefaces scored four fifth-inning runs - after two outs had been recorded - to win the game via the 10-run rule.

Hereford, 21-4, got top pitching from Keith Anderson, who walked none and hurled a one-hitter while improving to 11-1. Munday Hernandez, 7-4, was the loser for the Mustangs, who are now 16-10.

King Hodson pitched five-hit ball as Canyon clubbed Pecos in their ballgame. Hodson was the winner while Lupe Gabaldon took the loss. Both are 10-2 on the season.

Canyon, the 1-4A runnerup this season, improved to 21-6 overall and Pecos fell to 16-9.

The winners scored four runs in the first inning, led by Jason Roach's two-run single. Canyon picked up three runs in th sixth. Walt Garrison hit a two-run single to pace the effort.

WTC's Milner signs with Lady Toppers

Wendy Milner, who had at first decided to discontinue her basketball career, has signed with Western Kentucky University.

The standout wing player for Western Texas College, averaged 11.9 points and 5.8 rebounds while helping Coach Kelly Chadwick's Dusters to conference and regional championships, and a fourth place finish in the NJCAA National Tournament.

"Wendy gives us that big two-guard with great athletic ability," commented Western Kentucky Lady Topper Coach Paul Sanderford. "Plus the fact that she played for Kelly Chadwick, one of the top junior college coaches in the country, is a big extra for our program. Wendy should have no problem making the adjustment from junior college ball to the Division I level."

"Wendy is a great athlete who can certainly shoot the ball," Chadwick said. "She knows when to shoot, too. And, she's an unselfish team player. I had five of my players from this year's team sign with Division I programs, including an All-American, and I feel Wendy has as much potential to do well in Division I as any of them."

Western Texas sent Lisa Thompson to Texas Christian University, and All-American Brenda Welch, GiGi Robinson and Dee Ann Marr to Sam Houston State University.

An excellent student, Milner posted a 3.0 grade point average at WTC and plans to study math education at Western Kentucky. She is a native of Columbus, Ohio.

Milner joins two other spring signees at Western Kentucky, 5-9 all-state guard Kelly Smith of Laurel County High, and USA Today's National Player-of-the-Year, 6-2 All-American Terri Mann.

The Topper coaching staff signed four other Kentucky prep stars during the past November signing period, including 6-1 forward Mary Taylor, Kentucky's "Miss Basketball".

Ex-official does not testify

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Israeli official David Kimche, following strenuous protests by Israel's leaders, was excused Friday from testifying before a special grand jury investigating the Iran-Contra affair.

Kimche indicated he would leave soon for Israel.

An attorney who represented Israel at a federal court hearing on the matter said no guarantees had been made that Kimche would return if the court eventually upholds the validity of Independent Counsel Lawrence E. Walsh's subpoena for him to testify.

However, a source speaking on condition of anonymity said the Israelis did give U.S. District Judge Aubrey Robinson Jr. assurances that Kimche would come back if ordered to do so.

Walsh is investigating the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of some profits to the Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government. By all accounts, Israel was involved in the early stages of the Iran initiative.

Meanwhile, the congressional Iran-Contra hearings were in recess. However, investigators at the Capitol were interviewing next Wednesday's scheduled witness, Albert Hakim, the Iranian-American business partner of retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord.

The pre-hearing questioning was expected to continue into the weekend for Hakim, who controlled Swiss bank accounts apparently used for channeling money used in the arms sales and later diversion of profits.

In Israel on Friday, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir had called the efforts to compel Kimche's grand jury testimony "illegal ... a clear violation" of agreements between Israel and the United States. He declared the former official "would not be permitted to be interrogated by such a body."

After appearing with Israeli Ambassador Meir Rosenne at a closed court hearing to oppose the subpoena obtained by Walsh, Kimche said, "As you can see I am leaving."

Computer course for children slated at college

Britt Canada, assistant professor of computer science, will be instructor for the course.

To enroll students in the course, parents are to call the Continuing Education office at 573-8511, ext. 240.

FIRST RUNNER-UP--Krysta Danielle Atwood, the five-month-old daughter of Gary and K'Ana Atwood, won first runner-up honors in the Kids of America Most Beautiful Baby Contest. She is the granddaughter of Don and Zelda Atwood of Snyder and the great-granddaughter of Mrs. J. E. Atwood of Graham and Clyde and Dean Brown of Ira. (Family Photo)

Disabled man raises millions

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — When Rick Hansen left a Vancouver shopping plaza 26 months ago vowing to circle the globe in a wheelchair, some thought he would be lucky to reach Seattle.

But 34 countries and 25,000 miles later, the handicapped Canadian has become an international hero and generated millions of dollars in donations.

As he traveled the final 25 miles Friday, 20,000 people awaited his arrival at Oakridge shopping center in Vancouver where his journey began.

'It's an incredible feeling to travel this far for so long and to finish off on a positive note," he said as his "Man in Motion" tour resumed Friday. The 29-year-old wheelchair athlete, whose spinal cord was severed in a pickup truck accident when he was 15, propelled himself across the Swiss Alps, met Pope John Paul II and ascended the Great Wall of China on a journey to raise awareness about handicapped people and raise money for research.

His convoy-like entourage, including a motor home, became a familiar sight on Canadian highways as he zigzagged across the country.

His total mileage exceeded the earth's circumference.

Hansen lost track of how many gloves he wore out rolling his extended-frame wheelchair. And he dismissed the setbacks, such as the theft of customized clothing in New Zealand and a motor home crash in Florida.

In Shanghai, half the wheelchair athletes who joined Hansen on the road folded up their wheelchairs and walked away after he left.

ORAL REPORTS--Fifth graders in Mrs. Betty Courtney's and Mrs. Becky Cottrell's classes at East Elementary gave oral reports recently, each telling about one of the 50 states. The project was assigned in February. Students made poster boards, showed maps, and brought items having to do with the state, and they turned in a complete notebook of all the information they had found. A special luncheon treat Thursday was a pot luck dinner. Each student brought food having to do with the products of their state. RUUD® IS PROUD OF THESE NUMBERS

They represent the range of the Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratios of Ruud's central air conditioning units. The higher the S.E.E.R. number, the greater the energy efficiency, and the higher the efficiency, the lower monthly cooling costs will be.

If your present air conditioning unit was made more than 10 years ago, it's probably less efficient than any unit Ruud® now makes.

For example, even Ruud's budget model has a S.E.E.R. range of 8 or above, while Ruud's most efficient, the ADVANTAGE,™ offers S.E.E.R. numbers above 12, more than twice the efficiency of many older units.

Call today. Take Advantage and get Ruud's energy efficiency and save on cooling costs.

Scurry Co. small business concerns may be eligible for disaster loans

LUBBOCK--The U. S. Small Business Administration (SBA) has announced that small business concerns in Andrews and Scurry Counties may now be eligible for financial assistance under the agency's Economic Injury Disaster Loan (EIDL) program.

Damages and losses to crops due to adverse weather conditions occurring January 1 through November 30, 1986 prompted the disaster designation, according to Walter Fronstin, district director for the Lubbock SBA office.

SBA is authorized to accept and process applications for EIDL loans from small business concerns without credit available elsewhere and from agricultural cooperatives without credit from other sources. In addition to the credit elsewhere factors, Fronstin stressed that the program is available only to small bsuinesses which meet SBA's size standards. "Agricultural enterprises are not eligible for the EIDL loans," Fronstin aid.

The interest rates for loans processed under this designation are four percent for small business concerns without credit available elsewhere and 9.5 percent for small agricultural cooperatives without credit available from other sources.

"The deadline for filing applications under this EIDL declaration is Dec. 30, 1987, subject to requirement changes of the Federal budget," Fronstin said.

The EIDL program is intended to assist agriculture-related businesses such as fertilizer and seed dealers or implement dealers, who suffer a decrease in sales or other forms of economic injury directly attributable to the crop losses incurred by farmers to whom the dealer usually sells, or to the inability of farmers affected by the disaster to purchase goods and services at their normal levels.

Small business owners seeking more information or requesting loan application forms should contact SBA's Area 3 Disaster Office, 2306 Oak Lane, Suite 110, Grand Prairie, Tex. 75051, or call toll free (800) 442-7206.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

"To me history is alive and I'm trying to make it seem that way to my students," Dr. Franklin Pruitt, history professor at Western Texas College, explained when quizzed about his sometimes unorthodox teaching methods.

If the number of individuals who flock to his classes yearly are any indication, he at least has captured students' attention.

Born in Waco and raised near Tyler in East Texas, Pruitt began his teaching career at Snyder High School in 1952. "I was going to stay a couple of years. I stayed a few but met and married a local girl and have been here since," he laughed.

He came to Snyder almost "accidentally" after graduating from Baylor University with a history major and journalism minor in 1952. "Dr. Yarbrough was the superintendent then. He just hired me, not for any particular thing. He just said, 'We'll find a spot for you.'"

Later, Pruitt was offered a choice between health and science or arts and crafts at the high school level. "I wasn't really prepared to teach either. But since I didn't know anything at all about arts and crafts, I told him I would teach health and science."

But four weeks before he was due to begin, Dr. Yarbrough offered him a sixth grade spot at East Elementary. His arrival in Snyder produced another surprise — he had been moved back to the high school.

"The principal (at East) said later he already had my name on the door. But the day I came here, I found out that I would be teaching English and journalism at the high school."

Six years later he switched to history and remained with the school district an additional 16 years. In 1974, he was offered his current position as professor of history and government at the college.

"I think there are different types of teachers. Different approaches work for different teachers," Pruitt responded when questioned about his approach.

His students will find him ready to use acting when a point can be made more effectively. One antic even attracted a Lubbock television station.

"When I talk about James Bonham, the man who escaped from the Alamo and later returned, I use a stick horse and black hat," he explained. He gallops around the room, shouting and whooping, and speeds off to seek help.

Mimicking Bonham's efforts to identify himself on his return, Pruitt ties a white handkerchief around the hat. Holding up a worn, wooden yardstick, he laughed, "I did graduate from using this to the stick horse."

A Lubbock television station's first attempt to film Pruitt in action a few years ago failed when just days before the interview, he fell and cracked two ribs. "They returned the next year and got me on the horse," he said.

Another popular illustration with students includes the opportunity to wield kingly power. "During the age of aristocracy, the kings had the power to do whatever they wished to do. I set up a throne on a desk and enlisted several students ahead of time to help. The king and his court 'executed' a few students and 'imprisoned' a few," he explained.

"I don't really think of myself as a clown. Sometimes I do things to get across a point. And normally I don't use costumes, except these," he said, pointing to the hat and stick horse. "But I'm not saying that I wouldn't dress like a Roman if it would make a difference to the class."

Pruitt attributes his desire to teach to the influence of his brother. "I guess I always wanted to be a teacher. When I was in the fifth and sixth grades, my older brother was teaching fifth and sixth grade. He would come home and tell me about the kids in his class. I guess that's one reason I wanted to teach."

He believes his penchant for acting in the classroom began during World War II. "When the war was declared, I was a young boy. I ran around telling everyone. I sort of became the towncrier for war news," he explained.

When the U.S entered the war, Pruitt wanted to join. During the summers after his sophomore and junior years in high school, he hitchhiked into Tyler to attend summer sessions not offered at Lindale High School where he normally studied. "I wanted to graduate mid-term so I could join the service. Mother wouldn't sign (for him to join) if I didn't graduate."

He entered with the U.S. Coast Guard just before the end of the conflict. "Most people aren't aware of it, but we were getting together a huge fleet to invade Japan just before peace was signed," he explained.

At WTC, Pruitt teaches U.S. history (two semesters are required for all students), Western Civilization and, every other year, Texas history — a course that will be offered by extension in Haskell this summer. In addition, he has taught government and plans to offer History of England to 1763 as a new class on the main campus this summer.

His reputation generally produces a "good turnout" for elective classes. "When I offer Texas history, it usually makes. I guess I've been here a long time. When you get along with people, I guess word gets around. I have taught dozens of second generation kids — kids whose parents I taught either in high school or here. People tend to encourage kids to take your classes if they got along well with you," he noted.

Married to the former Elois McDow, he has four children and five grandchildren. An elder of the 37th Street Church of Christ, he is a member of the Texas Junior College Teachers Association, the Texas State Historical Association, the West Texas Historical Association, the

FLORENTINE BEEF ROULADES

1 beef flank steak, about 1 pound (see note)
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
¼ cup diced onion
3 large cloves garlic, crushed
1 10-ounce package frozen leaf spinach, thawed and drained
½ cup coarsely grated Mozzarella cheese
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
2 28-ounce cans whole tomatoes, drained and chopped
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley
Steamed broccoli florets and baby carrots

Divide flank steak into 4 equal pieces, cutting in half lengthwise then crosswise. Cut each piece in half horizontally to make 2 thin slices, resulting in 8 thin slices altogether. Place each slice between two sheets of plastic wrap. Using meat pounder or rolling pin, pound so each measures 5 x 3 inches. Set aside.

In 10-inch skillet over medium heat, heat 1 tablespoon oil. Add onion and 2 cloves garlic. Cook about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally until tender. Remove onion mixture to medium-size bowl. Add spinach, Mozzarella cheese, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper and mix well. Spread equal portions of spinach mixture over beef slices, leaving narrow border uncovered on all sides. Roll each slice jelly-roll fashion, starting with one 3-inch side. Secure roll at each end with string.

In 10-inch skillet over medium-high heat, heat remaining 2 tablespoons oil. Add beef rolls. Cook about 5 minutes, turning frequently until brown on all sides. Using slotted spoon, remove rolls to plate. To drippings remaining in skillet, add tomatoes, parsley, remaining 1 clove garlic, ½ teaspoon salt, and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Bring to boil over high heat, stirring to loosen brown bits from bottom of skillet. Return beef rolls to skillet. Reduce heat to low. Simmer, covered, about 5 minutes, turning rolls occasionally until tender when pierced with sharp knife.

Remove strings from beef rolls and arrange rolls on platter. Spoon some of tomato sauce over rolls. Arrange steamed broccoli and carrots next to beef. Garnish with fresh basil, if desired. Serve remaining tomato sauce separately.

Note: One pound beef eye round steak may be substituted for flank steak. Carefully cut round steak into 8 slices; pound each piece to about 4 x 4 inches.

Preparation time: approximately 45 minutes. Serves 4.

When asked about retirement, Pruitt laughed, "Right now I'm planning to stay two more years. But, I've been saying that for the past four years. I still enjoy it and as long as I enjoy it, I'll probably continue."

Colorful world

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are increasingly looking at the world through rose-colored glasses.

Newspapers are now multicolored. More than 90 percent of the nation's television sets and about 80 percent of camera snapshots are in color.

Now, office photo copiers are going the color route. Nearly 90 million color copies were made in 1986 and the figure is projected to reach more than 2.5 billion by 1990, according to Steven L. Silver, vice president of KIS Color Systems.

Deaf Jews have own congregation

By PHYLLIS MENSING
Associated Press Writer

SKOKIE, Ill. — Behind a plain-looking storefront in this Chicago suburb is a tiny but dynamic community where the hearing and the deaf have become partners.

The Congregation Bene Shalom, the country's only full-time congregation for deaf Jews, began in 1972 with 11 families. Rejected by traditional synagogues, they were determined to form a congregation of their own.

The group asked a young rabbinical student, Douglas Goldhamer, to lead them, and he accepted in a minute. The move changed his life, and theirs.

"I just felt it was God speaking," explained Goldhamer, 41, a soft-spoken, intense man, in his study before a recent Sunday breakfast with the congregation.

Today, the Congregation Bene Shalom is a busy, friendly place where spoken words and sign language mix well. It is governed by a board of deaf members, although one-fifth of its membership, now about 145 families, can hear.

During Friday evening services, the rabbi delivers his sermons in English and in sign language. A cantor sings traditional Jewish prayers and a choir signs them.

On Sundays, the members come for Sunday School, sign language classes, and breakfast with the rabbi, where they discuss everything from spiritual concerns to world issues like the United States' dealings with Iran.

"They find ways of getting along, just like a family," said Lauren Troy of suburban Highland Park, a hearing member who teaches a Sunday School class of five, including two deaf children.

It wasn't always so pleasant. For years, Goldhamer said, rabbis have interpreted the Talmud, the book of Jewish law, as banning the deaf from worship. And deaf people did not have the money to start their own congregations.

"You can't just put an interpreter for the deaf in a traditional service," Goldhamer said. "The deaf feel very uncomfortable. They feel they're dressed poorly, and they feel people will judge them by their dress and their lack of voice.

"To have a rabbi is expensive, to have a building is even more expensive. And to establish a community, you have to be vocal. The loss of voice has made it hard for the deaf to do that."

But the Hebrew Association of the Deaf, formed in Chicago in the 1960s, persisted. Its members asked the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati to send a rabbinical student. The third student who came was Goldhamer, in 1969, first on a part-time basis and then to stay — even though he wasn't sure he'd get paid.

"In the beginning, I couldn't understand my parishioners," he said. "I stayed at different people's homes, but I couldn't just say, 'Can I have a glass of milk?' or something like that. Yet, wherever I was, they loved teaching me the language. Their encouragement spurred me on."

The Congregation Bene Shalom began as an orphan, borrowing basements and warehouses for worship. But the rabbi helped create a group of business leaders and others, called Friends of the Congregation Bene Shalom, to help provide support. Today that group numbers around 300, Goldhamer said, and covers a little less than half the congregation's budget.

"The hearing contingency has grown," Goldhamer said. "People have come to services and like them. There was a fear, as we were growing, that the hearing people would take over. But that fear just fizzled away."

Apple pie with cheese is a classic pairing, but one of our readers reversed those standard ingredients and came up with this meatless main dish. Prebaking the crumb crust gives it a toasted flavor and keeps it from becoming soggy when the cheese mixture is added.

APPLE-CHEDDAR QUICHE

1 tablespoon chopped onion
⅓ cup margarine or butter
1¼ cups crushed stone-ground whole wheat crackers
¼ cup finely chopped walnuts
2 large tart apples, peeled, cored and sliced (2 cups)
3 eggs
1 cup cream-style cottage cheese
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
¼ cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
Ground nutmeg

Cook onion in margarine until tender. Stir in crushed crackers and nuts. Press mixture onto bottom and sides of a 9-inch pie plate, forming a crust. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 8 to 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, simmer apples in a small amount of water for 3 to 5 minutes or until tender. Drain; arrange apples in crust. In blender container or food processor bowl blend eggs, cheeses, milk, salt and pepper until smooth. Pour into crust. Sprinkle nutmeg on top. Bake in a 325-degree oven about 45 minutes or until a knife inserted off center comes out clean. Let stand 10 minutes. Makes 5 servings.

A highly informative bid

By James Jacoby

The unusual two no-trump jump overcall showing the two lower unbid suits is a fine bid. It crowds the opponents' bidding, allows the side using the method to quickly reach their top limit in the auction, and can really be an effective irritant to the opposition. But it can also backfire by helping declarer play the hand.

South overbid a trifle when he finally went on to five diamonds. After the king of hearts lead, West switched to his singleton spade. (Yes, it would have been better to continue with a low heart.) Declarer won with dummy's queen and took a successful diamond finesse. He then played two more diamonds, ending in his hand, and played a low club to dummy's queen. West would have made life easy for declarer by taking the king at that time. Declarer then took his A-K of spades, throwing a heart from dummy, and played his last spade. At this point West was reduced to the K-10-9 of clubs and the A-9 of hearts. If he threw a club, declarer would simply give up a club and make the contract, so he let go the ace of hearts and declarer ruffed the spade in dummy. Declarer, who knew the defenders' bidding methods, simply ruffed a heart back and got off lead with a low club. West had to win and lead into the A-J of clubs, giving South his five-diamond contract.

I'm not criticizing the two no-trump jump, but does anyone think South would have made five diamonds if West's first bid had been a simple one-heart overcall?

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

Couple united in Austin ceremony

AUSTIN — Joanna Kay Pitner of Austin and David Conrad Snyder of San Antonio were united in marriage May 23 at 2 p.m. in the Tarrytown United Methodist Church. Rev. John Flowers of Oak Hill United Methodist Church officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are the late Robert B. Pitner of Snyder and Dr. and Mrs. Hector Ruiz of Austin. The groom's parents are Col. and Mrs. Phillip Snyder of Austin. The bride is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. O. Pitner of Snyder.

The altar was flanked by seven-branch candelabra decorated with ivy and pixie carnations. Pews were marked with white bows, greenery and baby's breath. A white isle runner lined the bride's pathway.

Soloist Claudia Sobeck and organist Lissa Alspach provided music for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her stepfather, the bride chose a gown of white satin trimmed with silk Venise lace and pearls. The fitted bodice was heavily appliqued with the lace and embroidered in pearls, ending in a scalloped bateau neckline. Bell sleeves were appliqued with medallions of the lace and joined the bodice with soft draped bows of satin.

A full gathered skirt ended in a cathedral-length train and was embellished with cameo appliques of the Venise lace. The illusion veil was attached to a white satin circle wreath covered with satin roses with pearl stamens. The roses were surrounded by pearls, small silk flowers, Alencon lace and sequins.

The bride carried a bouquet of miniature roses, gardenias and baby's breath.

Beverley Peggs of Glasgow, Scotland served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Carmen Currie of College Station and Renee Daulong of Austin. Each attendant was attired in a silk tea-length gown in cantalope. Gathers in the bodice ended at the waist in a soft bow. Full, short puff sleeves and a full gathered skirt completed the design.

Best man was Paul Snyder of Austin, brother of the groom. Groomsmen were Ralph Browne of Austin and Tony Arnold of Phoenix, Ariz.

Ushers were Chad Walcott of Waco, Roland Walcott of San Marcos and Jeff Willis of Austin.

Special guests included Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Peggs, Beverley Peggs and Andrew Downie all of Glasgow, Scotland.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Austin Hotel. The bride's table was covered in white linen. The sides were draped in greenery and baby's breath. A three-tiered traditional cake was decorated with icing roses in cantalope and white. An icing nosegay topped the cake.

The groom's table was also covered in white linen and held a rectangular chocolate cake decorated with the Texas A&M crest.

After a honeymoon trip to Cancun, Mexico, the couple is making their home in Houston.

The bride was graduated magna cum laude from Texas A&M University in 1987. She is a gas purchase analyst with Tennessee Gas Transmission in Houston.

The groom was graduated from Texas A&M University in 1983 and is a manager with Altra Car Rental in Houston.

CHARGEBACK RULE PROTECTS CONSUMERS

A little-known safeguard built into the federal Fair Credit Billing Act can protect consumers from losing money on credit card purchases.

A consumer can eliminate a disputed payment from a credit card bill by requesting a chargeback. A chargeback simply means the disputed payment has been charged against the merchant or creditor rather than the consumer.

If your problem is a billing error, such as being overcharged, you must notify the card issuer of the problem within 60 days of the date of the last statement.

Withhold payment or ask for a credit when you notify the company. The card issuer must answer within two billing cycles or 90 days, whichever comes first.

When the problem involves defective or shoddy goods, poor service, no refund or exchange, first approach the merchant with your problem. If you're still not satisfied call or write the card issuer, just as you would if it's a billing problem.

Chargeback feature lets you withhold payment on that portion of the account that is in dispute while the problem is being resolved.

Whenever you have a problem with a bill, don't send your letter to the same address as your credit card payment. Send the letter to the address for inquiries or complaints that's listed separately on your bill.

The letter should include your name, address, credit card number, the facts of the dispute, an indication that you have talked with the merchant if the dispute is over the merchandise, the amount of payment you are withholding and your signature.

Any letter should also state explicitly that you are requesting a chargeback under the special rules of the Fair Credit Billing Act.

LOW-IMPACT AEROBICS

Low-impact aerobics could be the answer to the "I don't want to be seen in my swimming suit" blues.

Aerobic activity is the most efficient way to burn calories. It's vital for any weight control or conditioning program.

Low-impact aerobics provides a good workout with minimum stress to the joints, especially ankles and knees. Low-impact workouts may include such things as brisk walking, vigorous arm movements, and exaggerated marching.

Low-impact aerobics applies the same conditioning principles as other types of aerobics. These exercises help you reach and maintain your exercise heart rate, increase cardiovascular fitness, and can help tone muscles.

Low-impact aerobics also reduce the number of injuries by excluding running, bouncing and other high impact movement. The exercises are geared toward keeping one foot on the ground at all times. This removes most of the stress on impact, and reduces injury.

Low-impact aerobics should not be used to attempt spot reduction.

You can't burn energy from one particular area of the body. Targeted exercise will build or tone the muscle group being worked.

Low-impact aerobics have become quite popular within the last few years. The success is due to their wide range appeal. Not only are they an alternative for the injured; low-impact aerobics are great for people just beginning a fitness program, those who feel threatened by other types of aerobics, and those who want something with less stress to their body.

It is a story that makes us firsthand witnesses to historic private meetings with Trotsky, Kenin, FDR, JFK, Reagan, Prince Charles and Deng Xiaoping and to a life charged with adventure. Editorials-Columns-Cartoons-Kid Stuff-Look Back-Letters

The press as a body prides itself on its "objectivity"--meanwhile, we're stalled in the blocks trying to figure out if such a thing exists.

They tell you in journalism school that objectivity means you're supposed to report both sides of the issue. In the real world of work, it often means you try to reach both sides on the telephone to offer them a chance to "squeak up."

So, you read that qualifying remark in AP stories, "repeated calls to the senator's office and home remained unanswered."

We've always felt this gets the reporter off the hook, but makes his subject sound like he's purposely ducking the phone while he 1.) hides under the bed, ashamed to show his face to decent people; or 2.) is out in the back yard burying his latest round of victims.

The mere fact of allowing both sides to speak is obviously a good start, but still a long way from complete objectivity.

The selection of facts is what slants a story, and even a simple news item contains a bag load of these. The ones you choose to pull out and glorify have a lot to do with the message you send to the reader.

But, journalists try. They can be tripped up by their own inexperience or ignorance and the occasional mean-spirited rewrite man, but they try.

Often, they're even forced to stick so-called objectivity into a story when they don't want to.

Sometimes a story gets personal. This occurs when the reporter is convinced one side has a mandate direct from the Almighty himself, and the other is so far off-base they couldn't find the right track with a metal detector.

What we have here is a direct conflict with the credo that's supposed to be stenciled on your undershorts since J-school-- "Thou Shalt Be Objective."

This leads the frazzled reporter to mentally put away any preconceived notions regarding which side is the good guys and which side the bad.

And it doesn't hurt to remember that, right or wrong, both sides have a right to their opinion--as screwy and harebrained as they may or may not be.

Then, you write your story.

Admittedly, this little mental exercise succeeds in varying degrees for the poor old bumfuzzled journalist. But, a funny thing has been known to happen. If he keeps his eyes open, he might realize that, by gosh, those other guys do have some points.

It's weird to feel your attitude change in the middle of a story, but it happens.

To be totally objective is probably the journalist's Holy Grail. You can look for it all your life, but don't bet the ranch you're ever going to achieve it.

But, we suggest all campers keep looking. It doesn't make you fat; it doesn't pollute; and it doesn't violate your neighbor's space. It can't hurt.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

The other morning I shuffled over to the computer, grouching and whimpering the way I usually do in the mornings, turned the page on my desk calendar, and received a mind-numbing shock: the page was empty. I stared at it, trying to make sure my eyes were focused. Sure enough, it was blank.

There were no appointments, speeches to make, or board meetings to preside over. There were no business calls to make or letters to write. No errands to run. The assignment for "Parents Magazine" had already been completed on deadline and needed only to be mailed. I'd turned in "Country Life" 10 days early. The kids were at school, husband gone. Even the Noah Project Germanfest fund-raiser was over and done with.

Of course, there was a stack of "friendly" letters to answer, and I've always got several on-going projects going on. But dazzling weather beckoned, and I realized, It's time I took a day off. It was going to be an Absolutely Perfect Day.

Working at home can be troublesome because you can never get away from it. Writing, even more so, because you can work almost constantly in your head while you do other things that don't require much thought. You have to be a self-starter and you have to keep yourself going; there's no boss looking over your shoulder, so, if you want to succeed, you tend to push yourself even harder than a "real" boss would. Throw in the demands of a growing family, community commitments, and, in my case, a bothersome muscular problem, and you've got the makings of exhaustion on a grand scale.

The first thing to do, naturally, was curl up in my big, warm waterbed with a library book I'd been unable to finish in the four weeks I'd had it out. I almost never get to read for pleasure any more. If I read suspense, I have to "study" it to see what makes it work — or flop. Otherwise I read for research or professional trade publications. This was sheer pleasure; a novel by Elisabeth Ogilvie, a writer who picks you up and drops you in the middle of an island off the coast of Maine, fishing with lobstermen. I enjoyed the trip enormously, and indulged myself with chocolates during the journey.

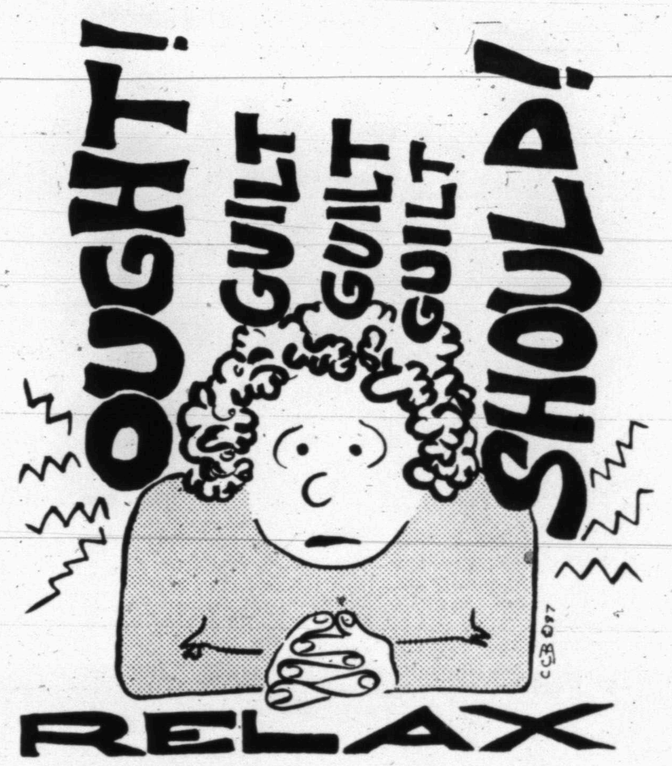

Afterwards, I plugged in a movie I'd rented to watch later with my husband, "Sweet Liberty," written and directed by Alan Alda. It's the story about a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian, Alda, whose book, "Sweet Liberty," is picked up by Hollywood and made into a bawdy comedy, "starring" the irascible Michael Caine, with an unforgettable performance by Lillian Gish. It was warm and hilarious — what a delicious feeling, wallowing in the middle of the living room floor all by myself, glomming down all the popcorn (with lots of fattening butter), and guzzling my favorite beverage — the kind that comes in cold brown bottles with droplets of moisture on the outside — I.B.C. Rootbeer.

Oh, it was definitely shaping up to be an Absolutely Perfect Day.

When the movie ended, I pulled on my boots, slung my camera over my shoulder, and took off with the dogs and my sheep across pastures laden with wildflowers. I got drunk on their fragrance and languished in the Chinaberry Grove, until I got driven out by the snap-butt contests. (The dog snaps at the sheep, she butts at him. With me in the middle. Nuisance.)

When I got back, I had a half-hour to go before time to drive to the bus stop. Music, that was the ticket. I couldn't decide between Mozart and Beethoven, and opted for Handel instead. (Ha! Fooled you, didn't-I? You thought I'd pick the Beatles.) I dragged out dusty, never-used headphones and practically levitated over the Mormon Tabernacle Choir's "Hallelujah Chorus."

What an ending for an Absolutely Perfect Day. On the way to the busstop, the mailbox yielded a book manuscript I'd foolishly offered to critique for someone in my "spare time." At the bus stop, I could hear the kids quarreling before they even reached the car. By the time we got home, it was almost 5 p.m., and I hadn't even bothered with the breakfast dishes.

I headed for my desk and began filling in the next day's date on the calendar with Things To Do. In the back of my mind, I could still hear the "Hallelujah Chorus," and penciled in one more reminder:

Be sure to schedule in a few more Absolutely Perfect Days.

County Clerk Beverly Ainsworth informed county commissioners Monday she would be resigning her position effective immediately for health-related reasons.

Ainsworth, who won a new four-year term unopposed last November, said Monday afternoon, "I can't feel good about taking the salary if I can't give (the job) what it needs."

Three county businessmen and a representative of the local fire department met informally with the Scurry County commissioners court Monday seeking support to revive the effort to build a western truck route around the city by extending FM 1611.

Court officials indicated they felt 1611 was a "dead issue" regarding the court, however, and by meeting's end the group indicated they would spearhead a petition drive aimed at putting the proposed extension on an Aug. 4 ballot as a non-binding referendum item.

The search for the body of a drowned Lamesa teenager officially ended at 7:44 p.m. Tuesday at Lake J.B. Thomas.

Local authorities had been searching for Richard Garcia--who now officially becomes the lake's 27th drowning victim--since 4 a.m. last Friday.

Resignations of 11 school staffers--to include longtime Assistant Superintendent Jack Gorman--were accepted by Snyder school board members Tuesday.

In addition Tuesday, trustees approved changing 22 staffer contracts to non-probationary status and 13 first-year staffers were also employed for the second year of this probation period.

Chamber of commerce directors discussed Tuesday ways to make the upcoming July 4th celebration at Towle Park a "break even" project.

Each year, the chamber normally loses money on the annual celebration, it was noted. Two of the big money items are the fireworks display and the insurance for the event.

WEDNESDAY
May 20

A man found guilty of aggravated sexual assault Tuesday was given a 99-year prison term Wednesday by an 132nd District Court jury.

The verdict--which legally constitutes the same penalty as a life term--was the stiffest sentence available to the local jury and qualifies as among the harshest prison terms ever handed down in Scurry County.

Sentenced for the rape of a 22-year-old Snyder housewife and mother was Jaime Ortegon, 30.

FRIDAY
May 22

A second "outside endorsement" of local efforts to secure a state prison facility in Scurry County has been received, it was reported Friday.

The Region 3 members of the Texas Municipal League has adopted a resolution supporting the plan to locate a state detention facility here.

The document reads, "The TML Region 3 would now encourage the state...to seriously consider an opportunity to serve this area of the state by locations of a state detention center in...Scurry County."

Dear Abby

Is a Baby Sitter Supposed To Do Any More Than 'Sit'?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1987 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last night, my husband and I went out and left our two children with a baby sitter who arrived as I was dishing up dinner. We returned to find leftover food still on the stove and dirty dishes on the table. I didn't say anything because the girl did perform the job she was paid to do — baby-sit the children.

We've had some sitters who take advantage of the quiet hours after the children are in bed to do the dishes, or at least clear the table and tidy up the toy room. I always thank them and pay them a little extra.

It seems to me that these jobs are an opportunity to develop the good work habits that will carry throughout a career. Rather than just fulfilling the minimum requirements, some young people really make an extra effort.

Am I wrong to expect more from sitters? I feel it's not my place to suggest that they do more than just sit, but it would be great if their parents would! Your comments, please.

SUE

DEAR SUE: A sitter should not be expected to do anything more than just "sit." Further, the sitter who cleans up the kitchen, folds the laundry or does anything besides "sit" should be paid accordingly.

When a sitter is engaged, the ground rules should be established. Some guidelines: What precisely are the sitter's responsibilities? Feed the children? Bathe them, put them to bed? Is the sitter allowed to have company? If so, how many friends? Is the sitter allowed to eat and drink whatever she finds in the fridge, or do you set out the "snack"? May the sitter pass the time talking on the telephone after the children are asleep? If so, how much time? Do you leave a number where you can be reached in case of an emergency? (And does the sitter have the name of your physician or someone to call in case you can't be reached in an emergency?) Also, do you tell the sitter what time you will be home? And are you as good as your word?

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have never smoked, and I am very sensitive to cigarette smoke. Many of my friends are smokers, but I don't allow anyone to smoke in my car or house.

I'm planning a party in my home for about 20 people. It will be wintertime, and I do not have a separate room that could be set aside for smoking. Abby, I cannot bear the thought of my house, draperies, rugs and furniture smelling of smoke for days afterward!

Some of my friends have indicated that they would not attend my party if they weren't permitted to smoke.

Is it unreasonable of me to maintain my long-standing no-smoking rule?

RED-EYED IN INDIANA

DEAR RED-EYED: No, it's unreasonable of them to refuse to attend unless they are permitted to smoke. Your objections are valid. Accept their regrets and tell them you'll miss them.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago my husband had an affair with a young co-worker I'll call Debbie. Debbie was married and had a small child.

When I learned of this affair, I was ready to throw my husband out. Well, since then, my husband has done a complete turnabout and has never been so attentive and loving in all the 27 years of our marriage.

Debbie was "let go" from her job, her husband has divorced her — keeping the child, the house, etc. Debbie has recently married a man about five years her junior. He is the son of a very good friend of mine. She's a kind, gentle and a highly principled woman.

My question: Should I tell my friend what kind of no-good tramp her son married? My blood boils when I recall how that little slut came into my home, pretending to be my friend when all the while she was playing house with my husband.

CAN'T FORGET

DEAR CAN'T: Now, why on earth would you want to hurt your good friend by telling her that her son had married a "no-good tramp"? She'd be devastated to hear such shocking news about her new daughter-in-law. Let go of your anger, and don't try to punish Debbie further. She's already paid dearly for the affair.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I'm a single guy in a small town who has trouble with women in general. I just can't seem to find one who wants to go out with me. The women outnumber the guys here, and when I approach one politely and try to make conversation with her, she tells me to get lost.

It's left me with a bad attitude toward women in general. I get frustrated and upset, so I stay at home and watch TV. When I do go out (most of the time by myself) I go to a bar, hoping to find a good-looking lady, and when I try to talk to her, she says, "Get lost."

I hear it every time I try to meet a lady. It never fails — in bars, stores, the laundromat, and even at baseball and football games. I wear fairly new clothes, bathe regularly, use cologne, and I'm not ugly. I've tried everything. What should I do?

LONESOME

DEAR LONESOME: A "lady" who takes one look at a man who has approached her politely, then tells him to get lost, is no lady. Perhaps your batting average would be better if you didn't bat your eyes at only the good-looking ones. (Some gems come in a plain wrapper.) You may even find the answer to your prayers in a church. Hallelujah!

* * *

DEAR ABBY: As a single mother who has just recently begun to date again, I am wondering if it is appropriate to assume that the gentleman who has asked me out will pay for my baby sitter.

As my finances are very limited, not knowing could be the deciding factor as to why I may have to turn down the date. Do I dare to just ask him?

LOW ON FUNDS

DEAR LOW: Don't assume anything. And don't ask a gentleman if he plans on paying for your baby sitter. A sensitive man should offer to pay the baby sitter if he suspects that it will be a financial hardship on the lady to do so, and if he can better afford it. After a few dates, both parties should be able to talk candidly about such matters.

LIFE STYLE

When Australian aborigines migrated to the city, they adopted Western life-styles (eating cheap fatty meats, carbonated drinks and alochol). They promptly developed adulf-diabetes, overweight, and high blood pressure. When two middle-aged diabetics returned to their previous hunter-gatherer lifestyle in the wild, within two months they had major improvements in diabetes, they lost excess weight steadily on their low-fat, wild meat and fish diet and increased physical exercise. Head for the wilds!

House members...

Financial figures disclosed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Illinois congressman's mystery rugs and a Louisiana lawmaker's mastery of the poker chips put spice into the House of Representative's annual show-and-tell of personal finances.

The financial disclosures of all but about two dozen of the 438 House members and non-voting delegates revealed Thursday the broad contours of their outside income and holdings, but some turned up interesting details as well.

The mystery rugs belong to Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., a member of the House committee investigating the Iran-Contra scandal. He secured permission to keep secret which foreign government gave the rugs to him, saying disclosure might adversely affect relations between the United States and that country. The rugs are displayed in Hyde's office.

If the constituents of Rep. Buddy Roemer, D-La., had any doubts about his favorite pastime, they know now. Roemer grossed more than $15,000 at what he listed as his "hobby — poker playing."

But after losses, Roemer's net winnings reportedly came to around $8,700. He is running for governor of Louisiana this year against the Cajun State's best known gambler, Gov. Edwin Edwards.

The reports demonstrated once again just how lucrative a sidelight speech-making can be for lawmakers.

The undisputed king of the lectern is House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who commanded $177,500 in honoraria. Rep. William Gray III, D-Pa., the Budget Committee chairman, pulled in $111,950 for 75 speeches.

Both men, like the rest of their colleagues, had to give everything over $22,530 to charity.

If talk wasn't cheap, the written word generally was.

Several lawmakers reported being paid $100, $150 or $250 for op-ed pieces in leading newspapers. Rep. David Bonior, D-Minn., didn't fare much better in the book business. He earned $235 in royalties for a book on the plight of Vietnam veterans.

When the Senate disclosed its finances Tuesday, about one in every four senators appeared to belong to the millionaire class. The House's batting average of wealth was not so high, but it also has its share of politicians who don't have to live from paycheck to paycheck.

Freshman Rep. Joseph Kennedy, D-Mass., earned more than a quarter-million dollars last year, much of it flowing from his partnership in Chicago's huge Merchandise Mart, the cornerstone of the Kennedy family fortune. He reported assets of more than $2.5 million.

Rep. Bill Green, R-N.Y., is worth anywhere from $6 million to $12 million or more.

Congressmen call for policy changes

DALLAS (AP) — They say Monday's death of an elderly black man at the hands of police didn't prompt their request, but two Dallas congressmen are calling for changes in police deadly force policies and the hiring of more minority officers.

U.S. Reps. Martin Frost and John Bryant, who instigated a congressional hearing on police deadly force use two weeks ago, wrote Mayor Annette Strauss with suggestions. Their letter was sent Wednesday, two days after an 81-year-old crime watch volunteer was shot and killed by police.

Their suggestions include changing the deadly force policy to emphasize alternatives to violence, restoring pay lost in a 1 percent cut for Dallas police officers and hiring more minorities.

The two Democrats also urged the city to recognize and offer incentives to officers who show resourcefulness in resolving violent situations without firing their guns.

"Some officers take great risks to avoid hurting someone and they should be recognized for that," Bryant said.

Frost said the letter wasn't prompted by Monday's fatal police shooting, but he said he hoped that incident would speed action by the City Council.

Police have asked the district attorney's office to investigate the death of David Horton.

Police reports said Horton was shot after he refused to drop a rifle and fired at an officer. But witness accounts conflict with police reports.

Deputy Police Chief M.R. Price said two bullets embedded in a house across the street from the scene of the shooting have been recovered. He said it is not known if the bullets were fired from the rifle of the dead man. Price said ballistics tests are being performed on the bullets.

Of the two bullet holes, one is 43 inches from the slightly elevated porch floor and the other is 52 inches away, indicating that whoever fired the shots was not shooting in the air or overhead as a warning, officials said.

Dallas deadly force policy was discussed May 8 at a hearing by the House Subcommittee on Criminal Justice.

Minority leaders had called for the hearings, complaining that the number of minorities who died in police shootings was disproportionately high.

Mrs. Strauss said the city manager's staff and police are analyzing all recommendations made during the hearing and should present a report to the council early next month.

The congressmen also recommend giving full authority for police shooting investigations to the Dallas County medical examiners.

Assistant Dallas Police Chief Lou Caudell said he wasn't aware of the letter, but several of those recommendations already are being evaluated.

Genital warts can be treated

DEAR DR. GOTT — What can be done about genital warts? I am male, 24, and single, and have refrained from sex to hide my problem. Should I see a general practitioner or a specialist? What procedure should I expect?

DEAR READER — Genital warts are skin eruptions caused by a type of virus that multiplies within the outer skin layer and is spread by sexual contact.

Genital warts can be surgically removed, frozen or burned off. There are several compounds, including salicylic acid, that can be applied to warts to cause them to disappear or drop off. In my opinion, genital warts should be removed by urologists, gynecologists, dermatologists or surgeons, depending on the sex of the patient and the number (and location) of the warts.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Every time I get a cold, it ends up as a sinus infection. I'm afraid to go out in public and breathe the air, since I fear I'll catch another cold or flu. Could something else be causing this?

DEAR READER — The sinuses are a series of paired chambers that communicate with the area behind the nose by means of small channels in the moist skin (mucous membranes) of the upper airway. Sinusitis (sinus infection) results when one or more of these channels becomes blocked and the sinus cavities are unable to drain properly.

The blockage is usually caused by a condition called turgidity: a swelling of the mucous membranes that obstructs the flow of mucus from the sinuses. This is why colds and allergies, which cause turgidity, make people more susceptible to sinusitis.

In addition, all of us have nasal septums: skin-covered cartilage that separates our nostrils from each other inside the nose. Many people have deviated septums, in which the tissue is pushed to one side or the other, rather than being in the middle. Under these circumstances, swelling of the septal covering also can block a sinus opening.

If you have repeated sinus infections, you should be examined by an ear, nose and throat specialist to determine if there is some anatomical reason for these infections, such as a deviated septum. Surgery may be necessary to repair the septum so that it no longer slants to one side. The specialist also will be able to tell whether the covering of your sinus opening is unusually turgid; in that case, the use of decongestants would help to prevent sinus infections.

Finally, the ENT doctor may discover that you are sensitive to something in your environment — such as dust, pollen or tobacco smoke. He or she might then refer you to an allergist for specific treatment of the allergy.

Why doctors churn patients

Stock churning is one of the tricks used by brokers to generate commissions. Last January, "60 Minutes" reported on an elderly widow who had been churned out of a quarter of a million dollars. Her broker, who had been found by arbitration to have acted unethically, stated on-camera that brokers don't make a dime unless they buy or sell stock for clients — so in the world of options, indexes, bears and bulls, it's consumer beware.

A broker's primary allegiance is to the brokerage house. He is expected to make money for the company and, in turn, he is paid a percentage of the profits. However, stockbrokers also have a responsibility to their clients; the experts are supposed to advise them about purchases and sales. This is where the ethical waters become a bit murky.

If a broker has control over many accounts and has relatively great power over his customers' stock dealings, he may be tempted to engage in stock churning to increase his prestige and his income. This process is often at the expense of the client, who must pay a commission on every transaction, whether or not the stock price rises or falls.

In many respects, stock churning is similar to medical practice.

You don't feel well or you notice a lump. You go to a doctor, who tells you that you need an operation. You accept his or her opinion and undergo surgery. Whether the operation is a stunning success or a dismal failure, you are expected to pay. Therefore, the more operations performed, the more treatments given or the more office-call checkups completed, the more money the doctor makes and the more successful he or she becomes. For some practitioners, this arrangement becomes an addiction.

Young stockbrokers would never openly admit to manipulating their accounts for the sole purpose of making money. These inexperienced people would probably insist that their customers' happiness and success are paramount. However, as they become more enmeshed in the realities of the financial world, I'll bet that their priorities change.

Doctors may be affected by an identical alteration. After being in practice awhile, the average doctor learns that financial and professional success comes with a head count. A lucrative practice is not necessarily the most challenging one, in which the patient's best interests are primary. The lucrative practice is one in which patients pretty well give their physicians carte blanche — sort of like selling and buying stocks on commission.

Doctors tend to defend other doctors who are charged with performing unnecessary surgery or giving superfluous treatment. This is the way the system has always worked. I mean, we're all in this together, right? Sure, there are abuses — but only by a small minority.

Perhaps this was true once upon a time. But I believe that today, most health-care professionals, including hospital administrators, go in for this larceny to one degree or another. The doctor, like the stockbroker, only makes money when he is dealing and doing. In the 1987 climate of intense competition among health-care providers, the medical equivalent of stock churning is a very real malignancy. Practitioners and hospitals are turning over patients as fast as they can because that's what generates income.

Before you sit down to write me an indignant letter, Doctor, look into your soul and pledge that you have never requested that an infirm elderly patient return for a follow-up because the Medicare reimbursement is inadequate for one visit — but for two, it's OK.

I'm sorry for the tribulations suffered by the widow portrayed on "60 Minutes." The brokerage houses don't seem inclined to improve the system and protect the customers' assets. Here is where stockbrokers and doctors part company. Medical patients have at least some checks and balances, in the form of second opinions. In my view, second (and third) opinions are the mechanism that saves patients from being churned up in the health-care system.

Therefore, if your doctor recommends surgery (and you don't like the idea) or if he or she is not performing up to your expectations, seek a second opinion. If your doctor is a patient advocate for you, trust him. On the other hand, if he is devoted to fast-food medicine and his bank deposit slips, fire him and hire a healer who is more objective.

After all, patients are not stock-market clients and should not be treated as such.

State employee pay hike proposed

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he would like to give state employees a 2 percent salary increase, but he's not sure how much money it would take to fund the proposal.

Responding to a call-in question, Clements said Thursday he believes state employees "do deserve consideration for a small increase."

"If an increase can be managed through these difficult times ... I would be inclined to give it to them," Clements said on "The Governor Reports," a locally televised question-and-answer show.

On the program, the governor responds to call-in questions and those from a panel of Capitol journalists.

Special session more likely

AUSTIN (AP) — With the budget stalemate continuing and time running out on the Legislature's regular session, Gov. Bill Clements says a summer special session may be inevitable.

"I don't think anything is going to happen in this session," Clements said Thursday.

The 140-day regular session ends June 1, and so far the House and Senate have failed to agree on either a 1988-89 spending plan or a tax increase to pay for it.

"I'm not resigned, I'm realistic. I certainly don't see any alternative at this point to a special session because I don't believe that we can do what we need to in the remaining days of this session," Clements said.

In some of his toughest talk yet, the Republican governor placed the blame for the impasse on Democratic Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate.

"I don't think the problem is in the House. The problem is in the Senate. And the problem is Mr. Hobby. He is immovable," Clements said.

Senators have approved a $40 billion state budget. The House has passed a $39.4 billion plan. Clements said his bottom line is $36.9 billion.

Asked if he had a reaction to Clements' comments, Hobby told reporters, "No. No, I don't. I'd like to think I'm moving right along, not always in the same direction."

The governor said the Senate-passed $40 billion budget actually totals $41 million, because Hobby didn't count some higher-education funds that traditionally are included in the budget total.

"He has expanded significantly several of the programs. This is not the time to do that. He is set in concrete, so to speak," Clements said.

Hobby said Clements needs to study the Senate budget more closely, adding that he believes the governor's own budget counted that money in the same fashion.

"More attention to detail might be in order," Hobby said.

Men likely to say 'I love you' first

HOUSTON (AP) — "I love you," the magical phrase that can make or break a relationship, is usually uttered first by the man, a Texas A&M University professor says.

The first time those words are spoken marks a critical point in the relationship, according to William Foster Owen, an assistant professor of speech communication who did a study on the sensitive subject.

And it's the males, he said, who tend to be the ones to say it.

"It is somewhat surprising for some people since we often think in society it's females who are emotional," he said Thursday in a telephone interview from College Station. "But it's males, like it or not — and this may sound sexist — who are saddled with leading the way."

Owen's survey included nine men and nine women, all unmarried and ranging in age from 18 to 25. He acknowledges the survey is not statistically significant.

"But I have a hunch this is more common than the limited sample would indicate," he said. "I found it repeatedly in the diaries and taped conversations of other studies."

Owen noted that when he mentions his findings to his students, most of them nod their heads in agreement.

"This falls under interpersonal communication," he said. "Relationships are constructed two ways — slowly over time and sometimes suddenly and impulsively, what we call a critical communications event. And one important event is that phrase.

"Basically I studied the interpretation people give prior to, during and after that important utterance."

In the study, only one of the nine women involved was the first to tell her partner "I love you," Owen said.

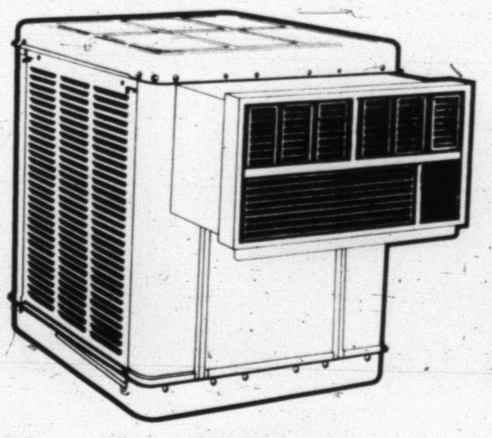

"Males first utter it in society because they're expected to lead the way and females are expected to react," he said. "Sometimes males sense the female is slipping away."

Uttering "that magical phrase" may be a way to keep the relationship going, he said. Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your best possibilities for gains today are likely to come from a situation initiated by someone else, instead of your own spadework.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your ambitions will be tuned to a higher pitch today, but mask your methods with charm. Consideration and thanks spell success.

Sunday, May 24, 1987

You will make several constructive changes in the year ahead that will prove to benefit you materially. They won't be easy to swing, but you'll be prepared to diligently work them through.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you use your talents properly today, the results should be profitable. Be imaginative, enterprising and resourceful; you have what it takes. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll be happiest today if you associate with companions who are both physically and mentally active. Slow movers or dullards may bore you to tears.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) An objective of importance can be achieved today, provided you have the tenacity to go after it. Set your sights upon your goals and proceed fearlessly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your methods of expression today will capture the imagination of your listeners, especially if you talk about your newest interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You won't be deterred from your course today once you set your mind on a particular goal. But be sure the target you're aiming for is worthwhile.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A substantial portion of your efforts today may be devoted to helping others sort out their problems. You won't find it too trying, however.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions in general look harmonious for you today. Should something disturbing occur, you'll be able to cope without breaking your stride.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Try to spend time today on your pet project, or puttering around doing something you enjoy. You'll find it both relaxing and gratifying.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your energies are apt to be directed today toward social events instead of industrious things. It's a good choice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is a good day to finalize an arrangement where you can get back something of value that is owed to you. Give it a go.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't hesitate to push your plans forward if you truly believe them to be better than those of your associates. Chances are you're right.

This message is from all of the Furr's employees at 2912 College Ave. to our friends and neighbors in this area.

Don't sacrifice quality, Just spend Less money!

Hi, again! We're the employees of your new Furr's and we're back this week to talk about how you can feed your family for less money. You don't have to give up quality. You don't have to give up variety. You don't even have to give up freshness. All you have to ''give up'' to save on your grocery bill each week is high supermarket prices. At Furr's we offer you the lowest prices possible. And that's the best way we know to be a good neighbor!

Low prices every day!

Here at Furr's we have what we call our ''Everyday Low Prices.'' Thousands of items throughout the store are marked with low prices - every day. That means you can rely on us to have low, low prices every day of the year. And that's important when you're trying to feed a family on a budget. Instead of running from store to store trying to get their specials and trying to save money, you can trust us to have low prices every day. And even if another store has one of our items at a special sale price, your total grocery bill will still be lower at Furr's because of our everyday low prices throughout the store!

We're all working together!

We think it's important to work together to make things better for the neighborhood. And we're doing just that. We live here, we work here and we send our kids to school here. We want to be good neighbors and good friends. We know how hard it is to feed a growing family on a shrinking paycheck and that's why we're doing everything we can to keep our prices down. We buy groceries for our families too, and we're proud to buy them at Furr's!

Tell us what you think!

We're the new kid on the block and we want you to tell us what kinds of products you'd like for us to carry. If you're having trouble finding your favorite brand, tell us about it! We want to be YOUR grocery store, and that means' stocking YOUR favorite products. So, please, take a few minutes and fill out our little survey. We're waiting to hear from you!
