Cheese Plant Meeting Friday Night

Plans to have Mr. Sullivan of the Baker Ice Machine Co. here to speak to a general meeting of the citizenship of this area Friday night of this week materialized the latter part of last week when Mr. Sullivan accepted the invitation. Mr. Sullivan has had more than twenty years experience with cooperatives and will be able to explain their workings in detail as well as to give needed information on the cost of cheese plants, lockers etc.

Farmers all over this area are being invited to attend the meeting Friday night at the high school auditorium at 7:30. Directors of the organization are hopeful that a large crowd will be present, and that interest will be such that they will be able to go ahead with plans to establish the factory.

At a recent meeting of the directors a sufficient number of farmers had not paid their payment on stock to justify them going ahead with the organization at that time. Quite a number have paid since that meeting and many others have said they will be able to pay at the meeting Friday night.

Mrs. J. F. Hiser celebrated her 82nd birthday Sunday with a dinner at her home north of town. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hiser of Colorado, and Mrs. J. R. Coon and two daughters, Fern and Ruth, were guests.

Hooten has a dynamic personality, he is one fully consecrated to the cause of Christ and is one of our most useful men. He was here in a mid-week service just before Christmas. Those who were out will remember his fine Christmas message. The pastor, Bro. Shewbert, urges every one who can to be out for the services Sunday night. Special music is being planned and following the message the second quarterly conference will be held. Services will begin at 7:30 P. M. You are cordially invited to come out.

Roscoe Man Badly Burned Thursday

Jay Mooring of Roscoe was badly burned at the Allen Beaty place last Thursday when a bucket of gasoline caught fire. Mooring was hauling bundle feed and his truck did not start easily so he took some gasoline in a bucket and primed the fuel pump. The truck backfired and the gasoline caught fire. He threw the gasoline out and the wind blew it back onto him catching his clothing afire. His left leg below the knee was badly burned, both thighs, his right arm and forehead were also burned.

He was brought to the Johnson Hospital where he has remained under treatment.

PRIMARY GROUP IS ENTERTAINED

Eighteen beginners, primary and junior children of the evening group, under the leadership of Mrs. John Marshall and Mrs. Emma Land, enjoyed a Valentine social Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Martin.

Visitors were Rev. and Mrs. Shewbert and Mrs. W. S. Thomas. Red lemonade, cookies and mints were served as refreshments.

District Court To Convene Monday

Mitchell County District Court will convene in Colorado next Monday morning for the spring term. The lightest docket in several years is to be heard, according to J. H. Ballard, district clerk. Only 34 cases are slated for trial, including five divorce cases set for hearing.

Ten criminal cases were carried over from last term of court. Among other cases to be tried is the case of the State of Texas Vs. Lee Brandon, charged with driving while intoxicated. Two charges of forgery have been filed, one against Lonnie Sisson and one against Rufus Thompson. Tuesday, February 21, is appearance day, at which time the civil docket will be set.

Sixteen men have been summoned for service on the grand jury.

The Methodist Youth Crusade

The Methodist Youth Crusade was launched by the Bishops and the General Conference at their meeting at Birmingham, Alabama, last April. It is not a campaign but a movement of Christian Youth, largely directed by the youth and is for the youth of our nation and world. The Crusade is not something "tacked on" to the regular youth program of the church. It is the youth program and covers the next four years. It includes six great goals: 1. A vital Christian experience on the part of our youth. 2. The enlistment of youth as followers of Jesus. 3. Making the life and teachings of Jesus vitally effective in personal and social living today. 4. The discovery of the nature and the purpose of the Christian Church. 5. Specific preparation for the enlarging tasks of the church. 6. Participation in the world mission of the Christian religion.

A series of Youth Crusade Rallies will be held throughout Texas this month and next. The Rally for the Sweetwater District will be held February 23 at Big Spring Methodist Church at 7:30 P. M. The Methodist young people, which includes those between 12 and 24 years of age, will meet at the church on the above date at 5:30 P. M. and leave for the meeting. Rev. Shewbert states he expects 50 from Loraine to attend this Youth Rally. A splendid program has been arranged for the occasion, but we are sorry to leave it out because of lack of space.

S. W. Altman of Cisco visited Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Bennett and C. M. Thompson Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Barney Haney of Roscoe visited Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Edwards Sunday afternoon.

It Otter Be—

Emil Liers of Homer, Minn., thinks his otter ought to make a good retriever. Liers will arrive in New York Friday for the National Sportsmen's Show February 18 to 23, exhibiting the only pack of otters ever bred, raised and trained in captivity. Above photograph shows one of his pets sitting up as prettily as a prize dachshund as Liers offers it a tempting frog.

Dr. Johnson Has New Equipment

Dr. Bruce Johnson, who has always tried to keep up with the latest developments in science and medicine, has recently installed a high frequency S. K. Gap machine in his hospital. The machine is used to treat various diseases and has proved very successful. One of the uses is taking out of tonsils. The machine is also recommended for treatment of hay fever, skin cancer and other diseases.

GLEANNERS S. S. CLASS

The Gleaners S. S. class met Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. S. E. Meadows.

After the class song we were led in prayer by Mrs. Annie Price.

Following a short business session Mrs. J. G. Bruce and Mrs. Ed Williams presented a very interesting discussion of the first five chapters of Judges.

The class regrets very much to lose Mrs. Arlie Martin, who is moving to Colorado. She was presented a mirror as a token of our love for her.

Mrs. John Mahon was elected treasurer to succeed Mrs. Martin.

The hostess served chicken salad, wafers, cookies and cocoa to sixteen members.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Smith of Lubbock spent the week end here visiting relatives.

Produce Shipments Are Large Here

The produce business in Loraine amounts to quite an item each week. In fact the produce business just about keeps the wheels of industry oiled and moving here. Nearly $650 worth of eggs and cream was shipped from Loraine by local buyers last week, according to T. J. Green. This amount did not include the cream shipped by individuals or the eggs taken to the hatchery.

During last week about 150 cases of eggs was shipped which brought farmers $468.00 at 13c per dozen. 30 cans of cream was shipped which netted approximately 650 pounds of butterfat at 23 cents per pound, a total of $149.50.

100 ATTEND BANQUET HERE THURSDAY NIGHT

About 100 Loraine and Colorado business men mingled together at a get-together banquet in the band room in the high school last Thursday evening. The Loraine men were guests of the Colorado men at the banquet which was a round of fun from beginning to end. Ladies of the Methodist Church served the banquet.

Harold Bennett of Colorado, a former Loraine boy, served as toastmaster and kept the banqueters in an uproar of laughter most of the time with questions which he asked various ones. When the correct answer could not be given to the question a ten-cent fine was collected by tail twisters appointed for the occasion.

Musical entertainment was furnished by Dr. Logsdon and his Cowhands from Colorado and a sextet of girls from Loraine High School. Kirk Taylor sang a solo rather than pay $1.00 fine assessed against him if he did not sing.

Everyone in attendance thoroughly enjoyed himself if expressions heard on the street the following day is any indication. No business of any kind was discussed. In fact, anyone caught talking business at the banquet was fined a dime.

Such occasions as these cause us to know our neighbors better and have a better understanding toward each other. We should have more of them.

Bridge Across Atlantic

There is a bridge across the Atlantic. This sounds like an untrue statement, but it is perfectly true, and the bridge is the only one that spans the Atlantic ocean. It is the Clachan bridge near Oban, which joins Seil island to the mainland of Scotland. The strip of water between them is narrow, but it is part of the Atlantic. So the bridge spans the Atlantic.

Feeling of Unrest in Europe
Reaches Our Side of Atlantic

Permeates Administration and, to Some Extent, Congress; Result Is Great and Increasing Mystery; President's Secrecy Approved; Facts About Plane Sales.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—The feeling that has obsessed Europeans for weeks—that they are approaching toward some international crisis—seems to have spread to our side of the Atlantic. Right out of the air, so to speak, we are made to feel that great questions are about to take shape and that we, in this country, must be ready to decide them. The germ, or whatever it is, has taken up its domicile within our administration and, to some extent, in congress, and the result is great and increasing mystery.

Most sources in Washington did not believe that the so-called settlement of the European crisis at Munich last September was, in fact, more than a stop-gap, as I reported to you at that time. The Munich failure has become more and more evident and the very atmosphere is charged again with exactly the same type of bated expectancy.

In a general way, of course, we all know that the worldwide difference between the democratic forms of government and the dictatorships is at the bottom of the whole thing. We know, as well, that Hitler and Mussolini have challenged the European democracies by the boldness of their dictatorship actions in taking practically what they want in the way of additions to their empires. We know, further, that the end decidedly is not yet insofar as the Hitler and Mussolini ambitions are to be considered. And wrapped up in all of this is the genuine friendship that the United States has for France and England.

Beneath the surface, things have been going on in our own government. The President, the department of state and the military and naval services know what is taking place in Europe and they are advised as to what may be expected. Plans were being formed and developed so that steps could be taken here at the proper time. All of this was done in more or less secrecy, as it always has to be done since public discussion of such delicate matters could tilt us very easily from the frying pan into the fire.

Genuine Danger of War, But Not Immediately

Because of the necessity for avoiding wrong impressions which is a vital thing in international relations, President Roosevelt told the military affairs committee of the senate confidentially something of the inside story. I believe he did right in shielding those facts from general knowledge for no one knows how they could, or would, be distorted in German or Italian newspapers.

But this air of mystery has backfired in a curious way. It has aroused certain portions of the country into a veritable frenzy—particularly, some members of congress—and they have seized upon a relatively unimportant thing as their weapon in striking at Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy. They have jumped all over the President's neck about the sale of airplanes to France, airplanes that were manufactured and are being manufactured by private plane builders and which are being sold for cash to the French government.

It is made to appear that this is a terrible thing. The howlers are saying that Mr. Roosevelt has violated the spirit of the neutrality act and that he should never have given permission for the sale of the planes. There are other charges flying about, also, but they are unimportant here.

I have dug into the situation as far as is possible, I believe, and I fail to get very much excited about the whole thing. There is, of course, the genuine danger of war, although I am not convinced that Europe is going to break out tomorrow. Sometime, probably, but not immediately. Such a clash of hopes and convictions and traditions and faith as obviously occurs between the philosophies of dictatorships and democracies is bound to lead to use of force but I think there is the probability that it is further away than this jittery feeling of the world now indicates.

France's Purchase of American-Made Airplanes

To get back to this airplane thing, I should like to set out some of the facts. France is buying American-made airplanes—several hundred of them. She is doing this because her own airplane production has stalled and France has sufficient gold to buy them elsewhere. The French military service must have them in case there is that outbreak of force that seems so imminent on the surface for the reason that Germany and Italy are superior to France in the air.

The contracts were let in this country after Mr. Roosevelt had talked over the whole question with his cabinet and with the war and navy departments and certain leaders of the airplane industry. They were authorized after Ambassador Bullitt, in his reports from Paris, had laid bare the whole situation.

I am told that Mr. Bullitt advised Mr. Roosevelt to treat the matter as a routine; that to talk much about it would excite people, unduly. Well, the Bullitt idea was working until the unfortunate accident out near Los Angeles when a big bombing plane fell, injuring a member of the French mission that is in this country buying the planes. Then, out popped the secret and out came the critics of the Roosevelt foreign policy.

It is not within my power to say whether Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy is right or wrong. I do not believe anyone can tell yet. Any foreign policy is something of a gamble. If it works, the author is a hero; if it fails, the author of the policy promptly is termed a sap.

But of this phase, I can write: why should the howlers now arise and denounce the President's foreign policy on the basis of sales of planes to France, when more than a year ago the British government began buying planes from our manufacturers? Why is it wrong to let the French buy and right to let the British buy? Or, to state the matter affirmatively, it seems to me that we cannot well differentiate between two nations with whom we have friendly relations.

Foreign Policy Opposition Making Itself Look Foolish

I do not regularly burn incense at the Roosevelt dais, but when I believe his opposition is making itself look foolish, I believe they ought to be called what they are. If they can show where the present foreign policies are ridiculous, now is their opportunity.

If this criticism of Mr. Roosevelt were directed at his actions with respect to Spain or Japan, perhaps there would be something worth considering. It will be recalled that the President persuaded plane manufacturers and many others as well to discontinue sales to the Japanese for use against China. It will be recalled also that indirect assistance was given the so-called loyalists in Spain, aid that surely must be looked upon—if done honestly—as help to the military forces although disguised as provisions for those who suffered back of the lines. All of this was done while we have a neutrality act through which congress believed it was taking away certain powers from the Chief Executive.

So, I repeat that there is cause, it appears, for criticism of some of the President's foreign policies, but it does not seem that critics have joined issue with the Chief Executive on any sound basis.

I always have felt that there is too much secrecy in general governmental administration. Unimportant squirts, holding unimportant jobs, are forever and ever taking themselves seriously to the point where they would not admit it were pouring down rain if it were raining cats and dogs. From that level of officialdom on up and down the line, one finds that sort of thing in our government. I saw a congressional committee chairman refuse, just the other day, to let newspaper men see a statement that he was inserting in the committee record, a record that is as public as the light of day. It was silly, but it was typical.

President Has Authority To Shape Foreign Policy

When it comes to foreign relations, however, the situation is entirely different. The constitution, wisely enough, provides that such matters must be dealt with by the President. It allows him the power of negotiation but it curbs that power by requiring him to ask congress for a declaration of war. In other words, the President is provided with authority to shape and conduct the foreign policy, the dealings with foreign nations, but he must have the approval of congress, which represents the people, when the concluding phases of those negotiations are reached and the nation is about to be bound.

That condition was arranged at the outset of our nation's history. It has worked well. The rights of the people are amply protected. Think for a moment what the situation would be if our foreign policies were in the hands of adulated demagogues in the house or the senate! I hazard a guess that some of them would talk as long as Hitler did the other day and create just as much grief.

So, I firmly believe there should be some secrecy about our foreign policy and that the President should have some liberties in working out arrangements with other governments. After all, any program that he has must eventually be published and debated by congress.

C. Houston Goudiss Gives Some Timely Hints on How to Keep Up Fuel Value of Winter Diet;
Discusses New Methods for Quick Baking

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

MIDWINTER weather calls for energizing breakfasts to get the day off to a good start . . . energizing midday meals to help keep children and adults functioning efficiently . . . energizing, but easily digested, evening meals to satisfy bodily requirements without over-taxing the digestive system.

In addition to the need for supplying meals that are adequate as to energy values and other nutritional requirements, the homemaker has two other important factors to consider; she must satisfy the appetites of various members of her family . . . and she must keep within her food budget.

Breadstuffs—The Staff of Life

One of her greatest aids is bread in various forms. Breadstuffs, or other foods made from grain, are undoubtedly the largest single item in the dietary of people throughout the world. They appear in some form at almost every meal. And they are also highly satisfactory as a between-meal lunch for rapidly growing school children.

Breadstuffs are notable for their energy values and for their ease of digestion. They contain some protein and minerals, and under some circumstances, they may also carry other significant food values.

Bread and rolls combine well with milk, cheese, butter and meat. They make good eating and give a comfortable feeling of satisfaction afterwards. Such simple combinations as bread and cheese, or rolls and milk, are highly effective in satisfying hunger. And they go a long way toward meeting nutritional requirements.

A Notable Food Team

Nutritionists have a high regard for the combination of bread and milk. Breadstuffs are generally regarded as a most economical source of energy and protein in the diet. Milk is our most nearly perfect food. And the proteins of milk supplement those found in the grains of which bread and rolls are made.

Children especially should consume some form of bread, toast, or well-baked rolls at every meal. These easily digested foods supply the fuel values that most active youngsters require in abundance. Rolls and bread with a well-baked crust have the additional advantage of encouraging thorough mastication.

During adolescence, the energy requirements are especially high. Boys sometimes eat more than their fathers, and it is desirable that the extra calories be provided in the form of such easily digested and wholesome foods as breadstuffs. This is also an advantage to the homemaker, from the point of view of economy, as breadstuffs rank as one of our most reasonably priced foods. Adolescent girls, on the other hand, frequently develop finicky appetites and strange food habits. They may wish to go to school without breakfast—a practice which must be discouraged as it may lead to undernutrition from which "nerves" may develop.

Adolescents Like Variety

One way to help growing girls to be energetic is to encourage them to eat some form of bread at every meal. This will help to keep up the fuel value of the diet at very little expense.

Mothers must, however, guard against loss of interest in breadstuffs by various members of their families, as a result of monotony. Luckily, there is no reason why this should occur in any home. For it is possible to provide breadstuffs in such a variety that the same kind need not be served twice in succession within the space of one or two weeks.

You can add variety to the diet by preparing bread from graham, whole wheat or rye flour. Rolls can be made from plain or sweet dough. Some of the more popular are Parker House rolls, sandwich rolls, finger rolls, cinnamon buns, butterscotch rolls and pecan rolls.

A New Leavening Agent

Some homemakers may feel that it is too costly to purchase such fancy breads outside the home. And they may feel that they cannot spare the time required for home baking. Such arguments might have been valid in the past. But not any more! Recently a new kind of yeast has been developed which makes it possible to prepare a variety of hot breads at home—more quickly than ever before. Thus, home baking follows the trend of the times and becomes quick-baking.

One reason why modern homemakers have been reluctant to make bread and rolls at home, I believe, has been the difficulty of obtaining a leavening agent that was both quick-acting and possessed good keeping qualities.

Yeast is the most satisfactory leavening agent for bread and rolls. Heretofore, only two types had been available. Fresh, or compressed yeast, and dried yeast. Both of these products are composed of yeast plants combined with cereal.

Fresh yeast has a higher moisture content, however, and because of this, spoils rapidly. Hence, it must be purchased fresh, kept well refrigerated, and used within a few days. Dried yeast keeps several weeks at room temperature and has, therefore, been regarded as more practical. Its great disadvantage has been that it acts less quickly, owing to the fact that some of the yeast plants are destroyed during the drying.

Keeps and Is Quick-Acting

But nowadays homemakers can buy a new kind of yeast. A new, fast, pure yeast that combines the keeping qualities of dry yeast with speedy action.

This product is a dry yeast that comes in the form of small granules. It softens promptly in water, and is then ready for use. Moreover, it keeps its strength and activity for several weeks, so that it can be kept on hand at all times.

Homemakers can bake whenever it is convenient. And what delicious bread and rolls they can make. Such wholesome combinations as prune bread, combining both white and whole wheat flour with seeded, uncooked prunes . . . refrigerator rolls, coffee cakes, raisin bread, wholesome raised doughnuts, waffles and buckwheat cakes.

It cannot be denied that bread is one of the oldest foods known to man. But just to prove that even our most basic foods may be improved—along comes this revolutionary yeast to provide a leavening that is more satisfactory than ever before, perhaps, to homemakers all over the country.

SENSELESS BILL

Senator Gordon Burns of Huntsville has introduced in the Legislature a bill described as the most severe ever placed before that body to regulate the practice of a profession.

This bill would restrict the advertising of optometrists to such an extent that they would be unable to use the columns of newspapers, the radio, printed handbills, billboards, display signs, lighted signs or any other device means or method to tell of their services.

The optometrist, under this bill could be fined $500 and put in jail for six months for advertising his business address or office location in type larger than his name, and each day would be a separate offense. It would allow cancellation of licenses of optometrists for 13 practices and make 15 practices unlawful and punishable by jail sentences and fines.

If Dr. Joe Doakes purchased the most modern and expensive equipment obtainable for use in his practice, he would be prohibited by law from telling any of his friends and patients about it in any form of advertising.

This bill, in short, would put a senseless restraint upon optometrists. It would make it virtually impossible for department stores
and other merchants to lease space to optometrists as a convenience to their patrons, for the important reason that they would be unable to state in their advertising that first-class service was obtainable in their establishments.

Advertising is a legitimate means of telling of one's goods or services. The optometrist
should have the same opportunity to tell of his services as the merchant, the manufacturer, or whatnot.

The avowed purpose of the bill is to stamp out "unethical advertising." But going about it by stamping out ALL advertising is like throwing away a whole barrel of apples to get rid of one rotten one.

The Burns bill has no place on the Texas statute books. It should be defeated.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

BY JULIAN CAPERS JR.

Austin—With the cart before the horse, as is too often the method of the Legislature, the House committees on constitutional amendments and revenue and taxation, began work this week, opening with joint consideration of Gov. O'Daniel's Townsend-inspired transaction tax,
and its accompanying constitutional amendment.

So far, nobody has suggested in the Legislature how much revenue, if any, needs to be raised. There is a deficit in the general fund, and certain phases of the social security program are as yet unfunded. But the Senate's economy committee recommended savings in governmental cost that would probably cover
these costs, and there is evident

Water Rises No Higher Than Its Source

By T. C. Richardson, Secretary

Texas Breeder-Feeder Association

"You can't make a silk purse
out of a sow's ear" and "a crop is no better than its seed" are equally true sayings. It is one of the most expensive "economies"
(1) on the farm to plant poor seed and spend a whole season's work making a poor crop. It costs only a few cents an acre
more to get the best seed available for crops like corn, sorghum, melons, tomatoes and a great many others. The difference may run into dollars on cotton, clover, alfalfa, and the small grains, but the best pays off at harvest time
far beyond the extra cost.

But what is "good seed"?
First, it is clean seed, unmixed
with weeds or other crop seed.
Second, it is pure seed; that is it is bred to produce true to its name and character. Third, it is a variety adapted to the soil and climate where it is to be grown.
Fourth, it is high in germinating
power.

But how are we to know all this? Most of the guesswork is eliminated by purchasing only seed which is bagged and properly labeled. Every state has seed labeling laws, and the tag tells
(1) percentage of foreign seed present, (2) name of the variety, and (4) percentage of germination. As to (3) its adaption to his locality, the buyer must know by experience or look up the records from the nearest agricultural experiment station.

On the question of purity there is a further safeguard in buying seed officially "certified" or "registered" in the name of its breeder or grower. This information is on another tag, usually a strong determination on the part of many legislators to put all or most of the recommendations in effect. To save $5,000,000 a year, would of course, be better legislation than to load $5-000,000 of new taxes onto the backs of the taxpayers.

Nobody knows, or has guessed,
how much, if any, new pension money is required, because the legislature has not even discussed yet what the future pension policy will be. The governor himself has abandoned his original promise of $30 a month for everybody over 65. His substitute plan of "$30 total income" apparently pleases neither the old folks nor the Legislature. The two committees are to hear proposals for submitting a sales tax to the voters after the testimony on the transaction tax is in, and the consideration of natural resource taxation bills will follow in order. Out of these hearings probably will come bills upon which the real taxation fight of the session is to be predicated.

Folks Write Solons

An unprecedented interest in public affairs is reflected in the flood of mail which members of both houses are receiving. This probably is partly inspired by Gov. O'Daniel's radio pleas to the folks to write in support of his transaction tax, and by the vicious opposition to the transaction tax and the sales tax proposals which has developed. O'Daniel claims most of those writing him favor the transaction tax, while legislators report their mail records an opposite view. The battle over raising the truck load limit also has brought thousands of letters and cards, obviously inspired by the railroads, and mostly favoring their view that the limit should not be raised.

The truck bill, authored by Sen. Rogers Kelley, got off to a start with 2,000 persons favoring it attending a hearing and cheering loudly as farmers, fruit growers, produce men, cattlemen
and various other groups urged raising the load limit. Railroad opposition will be heard this week.

Editors Join Bond Fight

Diversion of part of the gasoline tax money to pay off the
"dead horse" bonds of counties, issued to build lateral roads with which the State has no concern,
was vigorously opposed this week-end when the Texas Press Association adopted resolutions condemning the plan of some County Judges to shift millions of dollars of county debts onto the state. Lowry Martin, Corsicana publisher, and ex-president

colored to indicate the different grades. The highest grade is that which came last from the breeding block, the second grade is usually a year farther removed.
The reputation of the breeder is back of this tag, and it also carries the assurance of the certificating authority that the seed has been grown under its rules and inspection.

It is a risky practice to buy bulk seed either from someone traveling through the country or from a local seed store. If it turns out to be good the buyer is lucky;
if not he has only himself to blame. The seed peddler may be honest and the local merchant who has to face his customer afterwards surely wouldn't knowingly misrepresent his goods.
But the source of the seed is unknown, its purity is a matter of faith, and there is no germination test. Reliable local merchants would prefer to handle only properly tested and labeled seed, but for the "bargain hunters" who save a dime and lose a dollar
by insisting on cheap (?) seed.

It is too late to buy seed when planting time is at hand. Buying ahead insures getting the best you are willing to pay for, while last-minute buying sometimes means taking Hobson's choice.
Read the tags, buy the best seed available, have it ready—and then don't treat it like a step-child. Good seed is worthy of a good seed-bed; a good stand depends on good germination and a good seed-bed; and a full crop is impossible without a good stand.

of the Press Association, as well
as President of the Texas Good Roads association, explained the judges' plan to unload two hundred millions of local debts onto the State, and the association declared the plan "detrimental to the best interests of the State, its counties and the users of the highways." One of the hardest hurdles the diversion bill will have to hurdle is the unequal distribution of the county bonded debt, as more than half the debt is owned by a small group of 28 counties, and legislators from the other 226 counties are beginning to register opposition to having the State act as Santa Claus to this favored group of counties.

Senate Rejects Smith

The Senate proved it has no grudge against the governor, by confirming his nominee for Labor commissioner, Joe Kunschik, of Austin; member of an independent union, in spite of bitter opo-sition from both AFofL and CIO union leaders. Then, to demonstrate its independence, it rejected Truett B. Smith, of Taho-ka, as Life Insurance Commissioner. Smith was rejected, not because of any personal objection to him, but because he was sponsored in the Senate by Sen.
G. H. Nelson, his former law partner. Nelson inflicted bitter wounds in numerous Senatorial bids when he ran last year for Lieutenant Governor on a unicameral legislature issue, and criticized the upper house unmercifully. His opponent was Coke Stevenson, but Stevenson alone didn't block Smith's confirmation. He had plenty of help from Senators who resented Nelson's injudicious criticism of the upper house.

Who Pays for Pensions?

In view of the pension discussion, it is interesting to see who is now paying $20,500,000 a year
for old age pensions in Texas.
Half the money is furnished by the federal government. Examination of the financial statements of the Pension Bureau for 1938 discloses that of each dollar paid out by the State, liquor and beer taxes paid 48.8 cents; cigaret taxes paid 48.3 cents; vending machine taxes paid 2 cents.
The balance, a fraction of a cent,
came from interest on daily balances, and from late collections
from the now defunct race gambling tax. Not a dime is shown by the records to come from the great natural resource corporations which are annually taking millions of dollars of irreplaceable gas, oil and sulphur from Texas soil, and now seek to nail
the pension burden to the backs

of the farmer, the small wage earner and the consumer, with a sales or transaction tax, and freeze the tax into the Constitution, where it couldn't be taken out for years.

Austin Notes

Abolition of the death penalty,
recommended as emergency legislation by Gov. O'Daniel, will not come for many years in Texas,
if expressions of the legislators are any indication. Lawyers oppose it about 10 to 1, and most of the solons are lawyers. . . .
Both houses quickly passed emergency legislation to borrow $900,000 at 1.6 percent interest to prevent reduction in current payments, averaging $13.80 each,
until the legislature works out
the troublesome pensions-taxation program. . . . Recurrent criticism of the handling of State School lands by Ex-Land Commissioner Bill McDonald caused both houses to enact with record speed a bill recommended by Bascom Giles and Gov. O'Daniel, withholding leases on school land
until 90 days after the Legislature adjourns. Meanwhile, a bill setting up a school land leasing board to handle sale and leasing
of school lands is in the hopper.
The CIO boys at Nouston who want to "recall" Gov. O'Daniel are barking up a blind alley.
There is no provision in Texas
law for "recalling" any state official, and impeachment is only possible for "high crimes and misdemeanors". . . . "I have stepped on so many political toes that I probably couldn't be elected dog-catcher again in Texas," Gov.
O'Daniel remarked in addressing the Press Association. He urged somebody to volunteer to "explain" the transaction tax. Sen.

Manly Head of Stephenville volunteered to "explain" it on the Senate floor if it ever gets that far.

PROCLAMATION

living present, and unmatched
in the marvelous opportunities it has in store for its citizens ever in the future; and

Liberty and the beginning of the Republic of Texas, and its

Hall, Mayor of the City of Lorraine, in accordance with Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 8 of the Forty Second Legislature, proclaim TEXAS WEEK and invite our citizens to observe TEX-AS WEEK, not as a season of holidays cut as a week of better
work and better living;

FIRST, I urge every home, office, place of business and industry, every public and private school to fly a Texas Flag each day during TEXAS WEEK and;

SECOND, I urge all schools
and colleges to observe TEXAS

WEEK with appropriate assem-

WEEK education week and book week; hang Texas pictures in home, school, and office; plant trees and flowers and dedicate
them; and make patriotic pilgrimages to places of historical significance and;

the marts and industries, professional pursuits, clubs, conventions, churches, lodges, and other consider more plans for the further industrial development of our state. By putting to use our as may soon be a leader in industry as well as in agriculture;

and

FIFTH, We Texans should cooperate in the growing movement for the preservation of scenic beauty and wild life in our state. Texas is an exquisitely beautiful state and only by the support of every loyal Texan can
the beauty be made to endure;
and

SIXTH, Let us all, for the brief space of TEXAS WEEK, extol the cultural and spiritual values of the romantic traditions of our history and dedicate our-

Assembly Program

Last Tuesday Mrs. Baker presented a group of her singers in a program consisting of several hymns, followed by a talk by Mr. Thomas Riden, President of the School Board. Following Mr. Riden's talk, we were honored by an address from Rev. L. L. Trott of Rotan. Bro. Trott took as his theme the word "Area" and from an important word beginning with each of the four letters of this word he pointed out to us the four essentials of a good and successful life. Bro. Trott used the words "Ability," "Reliability," "Energy," and "Action" to illustrate how essential these four qualities are to a person who is to cover much profitable area during his life in this world.

Are Men Superior to Women?

If you don't know the answer to this question, then ask any member of the Senior class and you will receive first hand information on the subject. The Seniors received their information last Friday when a debate was held within the class to determine the solution to this vital problem. Roy G. Edwards and J. W. King, Jr. upheld the men's side of the question, while Blossom Lee Green and Helen Comp-ton defended the women's side. Much valuable and interesting information was brought out by both sides in this debate, but Mrs. Soules came to the conclusion that it was really an undebatable question, since the solution depended upon the definition of the word "superior." Therefore, no decision was offered as to the winner of the debate, so the question still remains somewhat unsettled.

Jokes

The doctor met Mrs. Soules on the street. "How is your husband now?" he asked. "Did you give him the sleeping potion?"

Junior News

Heigh-Ho Folks! The Juniors are now on the air for their first rate broadcast. First number on program, coming up. . . Betty Johnson came to school Friday with her hair done "up" on top of her head. Rather cute Betty. I must say! . . . Friday night seemed to be a lucky one for several Junior girls. Those seen were Frances Riden, Ruby Jo Marshall, Betty Johnson, Loeita Martin, Wennola Martin and some others "not seen." . . . P. S. Three Colorado cuties (boys) were in our fair city Saturday night prospecting for -- guess what? Ahem, and from the looks of things they found what they were looking for. . . Our English class enjoyed a senior debate Friday, even though Marvin Hall did have a time trying to keep the baby (doll) quiet! Better luck next time Lefty! No further remarks along that line.

While driving the car one day, Jane Meadows was stopped by a traffic cop exclaiming, "Lady, lady, don't you know anything about driving a car? Use your noodle, use your noodle!" Jane calmly replied, "Yessir, but where is the noodle? I've pushed and pulled everything in here, and haven't found it yet!"

Introducing The Seniors

Boom! Boom! here comes the drummer. R. L. Mahoney was born January 2, 1921. He is 5ft. 2 in. tall, weighs 100 pounds, has light hair, blue eyes and a light complexion. R. L. is probably better known as "Nubbin".

Nubbin is a member of the Loraine Band and is one of the snare drummers. He is a member of the Latin Club. He is sports editor of the paper and treasurer of the Senior class.

If anyone sees a person who is behind a drug store fountain who is "very, very" loud, but "very very" small you will know that you have seen R. L. "Nubbin" Mahoney.

Home Ec. News

The Home Ec. Dept. wishes to announce a "Martha Washington Silver Tea" to be given Thursday, February 16, 1939 in the High School auditorium at the P. T. A. meeting.

A program honoring the month of February will be presented by the 4th and 5th grades.

We are giving this silver tea in order to put silver in the Home Ec. Dept. so we won't have to borrow silver to have banquets.

You are cordially invited to attend.

Band News

The band had a party Tuesday night. Everyone was allowed to invite someone and there was quite a group there. We hope everyone enjoyed the party and think they did. Table games were played. Refreshments were candy.

Mr. King was gone to a meeting last week in Houston. He heard some good bands and also heard some things to teach.

Debate

Two debates were held Friday. Resolved: That W. Lee O'Daniel is a Politician, was the question debated in Civics class. J. W. King, Jr. and Roy G. Edwards took the negative side while R. L. Mahoney and Doris Black had the affirmative. The Junior class acted as judges and the affirmative side won. Everyone seemed to enjoy the debates very much.

What Do You Look For?

What do you look for? Do you look for the best that is in your associates, or do you give them rope to hang themselves, if it is your goal that they do so. And, after they have hanged themselves, do you take delight with sinister glee and say, "I knew it would happen." How would you fare with your environment if all those with whom you are bound to have association, stubbornly look for all bad traits of character in you, not letting a small streak of light fall on the traits which are good to see, and hear about. If, however, you are found to be guilty of the latter mentioned theory, what else can you expect as you are to "Do unto others as you will have them do unto you."

There never has been any sane person who has not had only one, but more characteristics, which sometimes peep out, even though the personage doesn't will it thus, which makes his fellowman look up to, and have respect for this abstract characteristic. It must be stressed that most usually it is not the outside appearances of people which characterizes them, but the abstract traits, which reach into his soul.

We will all find it the best policy to follow, if we look for the good in people and let the bad recede into unnoticed corners. If we do this vigil of life, life will take on a new meaning for you and others involved. And students, school is a very good place to begin because almost every person has a different making. And experience makes perfection.

Please (for grade's sake!) we girls are making a plea with Mr. Edward F. Brown to have mercy when we become just a wee bit--well anyway not real bad. One thing though, I suppose to be thankful for is that he at least lets us walk out rather than, shall we say "take a twirl". We, the girls, think that he shows undoubtable favoritism with the superlative "men species." If you wonder at this remark, I mean that their punishment only lasts a few minutes--after the licks began. Anyhow, we are all quite sure (especially after experience) that both methods have proved to be a most effective method and too, is done quite methodically.

The English 2 class makes, and seconds, the motion that all the little (but significant) spelling books be done away with. They are pulling our grades down like a twenty-pound weight. It is quite interesting though, to see how good we can spell without knowing the words which we are attempting. I also think that it is good for us--not morally--but mentally.

Our Spanish class is, more or less, a "tongue twister" class. On some of those many lettered words we get all twisted up and we make the grade (mostly uphill) with perspiration dripping off our wrinkled brows. But to top it all we find out it is a three-lettered english word--well why? ah why? shouldn't we turn gray prematurely? Us, and our problems!

No one can say we shirked our duty this week, can they Sophs? Just look how much longer our news report is.

Senior News

What do I see? My goodness! were just a few of the exclamations that arose as the Senior girls came to school Friday. It seemed that the causes of the exclamations were that each Senior girl had a great big ribbon in her hair and was carrying a "doll". Throughout the day you could hear the cries of the dolls. If you have not seen a modern doll you could have seen one Friday. Ask members of the Senior class for information. Mr. Brown got rather aggravated at the crying and stated that his youngster had not cried that much in all her life. Anyway we enjoyed playing dolls once more.

METHODIST CHURCH

J. E. Shewbert, Pastor
 "Being a Christian in an Unchristian World" will be the subject of the pastor's message for next Sunday. Come out and hear this message. What do you think about the conditions Christians face today. After all, can we be Christians today under such circumstances? Don't miss this message.

Last Sunday was another good day with us with good crowds out for all services. The pastor spoke on "Christ's Power to Break Barriers" in the morning and "Should Christians Judge" for the night sermon.

We were happy to welcome Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Templeton who came to us from Westbrook. They are former residents of Loraine. We are glad they are back with our church.

Sunday night Bro. Hooten will be with us to preach and hold our second quarterly conference. Let every steward, trustee, S. S. teacher, and officer of our groups be present and ready to report. If at all possible we hope that Rev. and Mrs. Hooten will bring us one of their very fine messages in song. Both are splendid singers.

At this writing Bro. Wilson, who has been seriously ill, is doing nicely. Our church prays for his recovery. He has been one of the church leaders here in Loraine for a long time.

Our young people's work and children's work is improving and we appreciate those adults who are leading these groups. We are placing special emphasis on the Youth Crusade just now. We expect a large crowd to attend the Rally at Big Spring next week. The pastor is planning to make Sunday, February 26, "Young People's Day" in our church. He will bring a special young people's message on Sunday morning and then they will have charge that night with a special program.

We will look for all the adults young people and children out next Sunday. Don't forget the mission forum meeting at 6:15 next Sunday evening. A fine crowd continues to be with us. We will study the objectives in the cause of missions. Be on time at S. S. Sunday 9:45 A. M.

AND SHORT SUBJECT

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST SERVICE SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

Regular services will be held at the Primitive Baptist Church in East Colorado Saturday at 2:30 P. M. and Sunday at 11 A. M. The regular pastor will be in charge of the services.

HAPPENINGS AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH

We had a real good day last Sunday, two greatly appreciated new members, over the 200 mark in the Sunday School, fine attendance at preaching, and the offering was good.

The Governor has asked the Legislature to abolish the death penalty. No doubt a bill will be introduced to do this. It may come to a vote of the people. How would you vote? Don't you think we had better look into the matter a little before we say it shall or shall not be? Come out to the Baptist Church Sunday night at 7:30 and let's take our Bibles and see if this law is based on the Word of God. Let's just put a little sound reasoning to it and see which way to go.

At this time there is a great deal of sickness. Our church seems to be doing all it can to help in this matter. In fact, Loraine can boast of the very best in case of sickness. Loraine stands at the head of the list in many things. I only wish they could see their mistakes in some other things. I would be happy to see Loraine come together in a fine spirit and consider some things that are badly needed.

Weekly News Analysis Paris, London Woo Franco In Weak Bid to Oust Fascists

By Joseph W. La Bine

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst, and not necessarily of the newspaper.

Spain

Germany and Italy would not have aided Rebel Spain if they had no aspirations in the Iberian peninsula. Nor, presumably, would Rebel General Francisco Franco have accepted Fascist aid if he did not expect to repay that favor. These simple facts are being ignored by France and Britain, who now hope to woo the Rebels away from their Rome-Berlin connections to make a peace which would save the defeated Loyalist cause. It is hoped thereby to end the war immediately, giving General Franco a partial victory when he could achieve a complete victory through a few more weeks' fighting on the Madrid-Valencia front.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?
(Shoemaker, Chicago Daily News)

The likelihood of a complete Loyalist surrender is evidenced by an apparent breakdown in morale, coupled with internal squabbling. An army of 200,000 government troops allowed itself to be routed out of Catalonia. Next day Loyalist President Manuel Azana plumped for unconditional surrender while Premier Juan Negrin boasted he would continue fighting. Meanwhile, in southeastern Spain, Loyalist Gen. Jose Miaja was a virtual dictator in his own right, ignoring both Senors Azana and Negrin. Whether he wanted to surrender or continue fighting was anybody's guess.

Britain and France could hardly expect General Franco to jump at a peace offer from such badly-tattered opposition, but they did. It was reliably reported that Anglo-French interests were offering to supply funds for reconstructing Spain if Franco would oust German and Italian influence. So anxious were the British that they sent a cruiser to carry Rebel Spain's envoy to the Loyalist island of Minorca, where a surrender was asked and won.

In return for these gestures, General Franco offered little to the two great European democracies who refused him recognition until all Loyalist hope was gone. His promise: To remove foreign troops, which does not necessarily mean removal of foreign influence. Expected daily is recall of the old Bourbon dynasty to Spain's throne. Probable ruler will be big, sport-loving Prince Jaime, not a sufferer from haemophilia (bleeding) like so many Bourbons. Highly grateful to the man who restored his throne, Prince Jaime would be more than willing to let General Franco rule as premier, a la Mussolini.

Vatican

Within 18 days of a pope's death, the Sacred College of Cardinals must meet in Rome to elect his successor. Locked in secret conclave at the Vatican during late February and early March, these princes of the Roman Catholic church will name a successor to the late Pope Pius XI. Attesting to the futility of prediction was the last election, on February 6, 1922, when Pius—only nine months a cardinal—was elevated over the heads of many more favored candidates.

Favored candidate this time is Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, papal secretary of state who serves as temporary pope during the interim between Pius' death and the election of his successor. Though he confesses a longing to lead the contemplative life of a monk, Cardinal Pacelli has the excellent record of papal diplomat that qualifies him for the job of pope in a year like 1939.

Only stumbling block to Cardinal Pacelli's election is the growing belief that a non-Italian might make more headway in settling the current European turmoil. Though the position traditionally goes to an Italian, it is recalled that in 1922 the Spanish Cardinal Merry del Val led early balloting.

Great Britain

Last January 13 the British foreign office received a mysterious "ultimatum" demanding withdrawal of English troops from Ireland within four days. Three days later bombs began exploding throughout the British Isles and between subsequent explosions Scotland Yard was able to place responsibility with the illegal Irish Republican army. While first arrests were being made and special guards were assigned to the king and queen, Irish Prime Minister Eamon de Valera found occasion to regret the incident.

Far from a terrorist, Mr. de Valera has won amazing concessions for Ireland by using much gentler tactics than the extremist Republican army advocates. Today Ireland is known as Eire, having become an independent state associated with the British commonwealth only for certain minor purposes. British overlordship is gone except for far North Ulster, which is largely English Protestant as opposed to the Irish Catholicism of southern Ireland. Main purpose behind the Republican army is British withdrawal from Ulster. Mr. de Valera also wants this but he believes in saner tactics.

While soothing London's nerves by asking laws to crush the illegal army, Mr. de Valera probably found himself blushing with embarrassment when P. T. Kelly, an independent senator, arose to "regret that the ultimatum sent by the Republican army to the British foreign secretary had not been sent by the Irish government."

Relief

It is paradoxical that this year's anti-administration congress should be the first to admit that federal relief is a permanent fixture. But this does not mean that the White House and Capitol Hill are agreed on how relief should be handled. No sooner had the nation recovered from the shock of congress' independence in slashing $150,000,000 from the relief deficiency bill, than relief again popped into the headlines.

"Emergency." As President Roosevelt signed the reduced deficiency appropriation he begged congress to restore the $150,000,000. Reason: "In my opinion an emergency now exists." The President said WPA's alternatives are (1) to slash 1,000,000 relievers from the rolls by April 1 or (2) to oust from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 via week-by-week reductions from April 1 to July 1. Since each WPA client presumably has dependents, the President thought it was contrary to "human decency" to leave from 4,000,000 to 8,000,000 Americans stranded.

"URA." The house received a bill from Virginia's Clifton A. Woodrum which would completely upset the administration's relief apple cart, creating "URA" (unemployment relief administration). The bill's lightly-camouflaged purpose is to give congress complete voice over relief, hamstringing the White House. Stipulations: (1) halving the President's 1939-40 budgetary relief request of $2,266,165,000; (2) abolishing WPA and creating "URA" which would report monthly to congress; (3) providing for congressional allocation of relief funds to individual state agencies; (4) giving the President $120,000,000 a year to spend as he sees fit; (5) attempting to divorce politics from relief.

"Off Again, On Again." Created in 1933, PWA is soon to expire. But Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes has urged creation of a permanent PWA to prevent future de-pressions. Says he: "American growth has been an 'off again, on again, gone again' Finnigan." We owe it to our people to protect them from the strains and stresses of an economic system which... periodically has hurtled off the track. A program of 'timed' or 'balanced' public works... would act like a gyroscope." For proof Mr. Ickes pointed to PWA allotments last June, when the federal reserve index stood at 77. By October the index had risen to 97, and by November to 100.

SECRETARY ICKES

"Off again, on again, gone again..."

Miscellany

In Harrisburg, Pa., State Rep. John J. Baker proposed a $50 "baby bonus" for needy mothers, "not to increase the population but to make sure mothers can depend on proper medical attention."

● In Cleveland, Safety Director Eliot Ness claimed 80 per cent of serious traffic violations are committed by WPA workers.

Business

As counsel for a New York state legislative insurance committee, Charles Evans Hughes made a name for himself in 1906 uncovering what he thought to be irregularities. The chief Hughes fear: That insurance company resources were so large as to make conservative, responsible management increasingly difficult. The Hughes remedy: Federal supervision of insurance investments.

Since 1908 Mr. Hughes has risen to the U. S. Supreme court and may have changed his mind. At least nothing has been done about it and the vast insurance fund has quadrupled. Whereas Mr. Hughes suggested limiting new policies to $150,000,000 a year per company, some now write $2,000,000,000 a year. Today there are $110,000,000,000 worth of policies in effect and insurance investments cover a surprisingly wide field. Samples: Government securities, $4,500,000,000; railroads, $3,000,000,000; farm mortgages and corporation securities, $2,000,000,000; state, county and city bonds, $1,500,000,000.

If this business was worth investigating 23 years ago it is even more vulnerable today. Just started in Washington is a 12-month probe by the temporary national economic committee, headed by Wyoming's Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney and better known as the "monopoly investigating committee." Chiming in is William O. Douglas' Securities and Exchange commission. Pertinent question marks include (1) what influence insurance investments exert on U. S. money markets, banks, railroads, etc.; (2) how insurance executives are chosen; (3) possibility of interlocking directorates between insurance firms and utilities.

Though the monopoly committee has often reiterated that it is not hunting witches, and although Mr. Douglas maintains he only wants to bring the Hughes report up to date,

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES

The sins are now quadrupled.

there is a good chance of new legislation providing federal regulation over all interstate insurance business. This would supplement state supervision now in effect.

Adding to their discomfort is the demand by Montana's Sen. Burton K. Wheeler that insurance companies take a greater hand in helping reorganize U. S. railroads. The Wheeler charge: That present insurance company negotiations with carriers feature repeated concessions to investment bankers at the expense of bondholders. But if rail aid presents as many obstacles as insurance men claim, the probable solution of this problem will not be a federal whipping post for insurance companies but revision in the railroad reorganization statute.

Treasury

Statutory limit of the U. S. public debt is now $45,000,000,000, which will be reached when and if congress approves President Roosevelt's new budget. (Current debt: About $39,700,000,000). When congress convened last month it was rumored the administration would ask to raise the debt limit another $5,000,000,000. To congressional fiscal experts who questioned him about the U. S. financial outlook, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. explained that it might be a good idea to raise the debt limit. Said he: "I would not be worried to see it (the debt) go to another $4,000,000,000 or $5,000,000,000, which is the present budget, and we are going to have to ask congress, if you vote this money, to increase the treasury's borrowing power." Mulling over this advice, congressmen decided the official request, which will come from the White House, may precipitate another feud between spenders and conservatives.

"And I'm quite sure," continued Hale, "you were not asleep, Miss Hosanna, when you tried to pour some of this poison into Joan Kneeland's water bottle."

The color in her face changed to a bluish white. Her hot eyes, which had met the steady look of his up till now, turned aside.

"That's a terrible thing for you to say," she muttered.

"It is. It's a terrible thing for you to do. In fact, this is the most terrible hour of my life, Miss Hosanna. I can't imagine anything that could ever happen to me that I would feel more. Joan in such danger—and you! Lately I have begun to suspect almost everyone else in the house of trying to hurt Joan. Never for one second have I suspected you. I trusted you absolutely. I haven't realized it till now, but—well—the fact is, I was awfully fond of you. And all the time—"

"You don't understand."

Miss Hosanna stood up, but her body sagged and her voice had the flatness of utter exhaustion.

"No one has been poisoning Joan," she said. "You can't prove any of the wild things you're saying. But I'll talk to you about them in the morning. I can't talk any more tonight."

She half turned to leave, but Hale's imperative gesture stopped her.

"You can't go, Miss Hosanna," he said almost gently. "The door is locked and I have the key in my pocket. Sit down, please."

She did not obey. She stood looking at him in silence. He kept his seat and went on.

"I can prove what I'm saying. I took this bottle of poison from your hands. A minute before that I interrupted you by opening Miss Joan's door just when you were about to put some of its contents into her drinking water."

"You will have to explain to me, and to others, why you were opening Joan's door at one o'clock in the morning."

Miss Hosanna spoke as quietly as he had done. At his sudden change of expression she smiled. The smile was like the look in her eyes—something from which he turned away.

"That gives you something to think about, doesn't it?" she asked softly.

"Yes, it does. I'm thinking of how desperate you must be, Miss Hosanna, to say such a thing. But I can prove my charges all right, and without hurting Joan. This wasn't your first visit to her room at night. You have been there before. She recognized you and was horribly frightened by your looks and your actions. She told me about the visit the next day."

Miss Hosanna did not speak. Hale gave her time to get the full effect of his words and went on.

"Tonight, over the telephone, just before I came upstairs, I received a message from a leading New York analyst. He reported to me that the specimen of milk I had sent him for analysis contained a dose of the same poison you have in this bottle. I took that specimen from the milk in Joan's thermos bottle, which Rose had brought up to Joan's room by your order to Jane. I had confiscated that thermos bottle."

"You would confiscate it," Miss Hosanna said dully. "From the first you have interfered with everything and everybody here."

She dropped back into her chair, not as if she wanted to but as if she could stand no longer.

Hale nodded.

"I have interfered," he admitted. "I've interfered with sadists and extortionists and malpractitioners. Now I'm interfering with a would-be killer. Do you understand that, Miss Hosanna? I'm preventing a murder."

Suddenly, as she sat there before him in silence, his self-control gave way.

"Oh, for God's sake!" he broke out. "Why did you do it? How could you do it? The girl you were trying to murder was your own niece, your brother's child. What had you against her? What had she done to you? If you can explain it to me, in God's name. I'm going off my head under the shock of this. Anyone else I could handle. But you—you—" He ended with the despairing gulp of a small boy. "I tell you I was getting fond of you! I felt almost as if you were taking the place of my mother."

As if the words had been a sort of invocation, Miss Hosanna's manner changed again. She threw out both hands, palms upward, in a strange gesture of acceptance.

"Then I will explain," she said quietly. "I'll have to, later. I might as well do it now."

As if rallying her courage for the ordeal she raised her head in her familiar proud gesture.

"You ask me what my niece has ever done to me," she began. "My answer is that she has never done anything to me. She has never done anything for me, either, though she could have changed my whole life with a few strokes of her pen. At Christmas time and on my birthdays she gives me a new dress, or a wrist watch, or a pin, and I'm expected to be touchingly grateful. At Christmas time and on my birthdays my brother hands me a ten dollar bill or perhaps a twenty dollar bill, if he's feeling generous. These doles from him and from her are all I have in the world. They are all I've ever had, since my father and mother died and I was left dependent on my brother. Casper and Joan have about a million dollars each. I've worked and slaved for Casper since father and mother died. I could have got a situation then. I could have supported myself and lived a self-respecting life. But Casper's wife, Julia, never liked housekeeping. As soon as they came East they said they needed me to run their houses. So I have run their houses."

She stopped an instant, drew a deep breath, and went on.

"I endured their selfishness and indifference. I never knew what it was to have a penny of my own. Casper thinks he's a wonderful brother. Isn't he giving me a home, and three meals a day? Isn't he supporting me in comfort while others work out in the world? He thinks I'm quivering with gratitude, but I hate him. I've always hated him. He has made me a beggar in his home. While his wife was living I was worse than that. She needed me; but during the last years of her life she hated me, and she let me see it twenty-four hours a day. By that time it was too late for me to get an outside job. I was caught."

There was a short pause. Hale did not speak. Miss Hosanna glanced at him once, lowered her eyes, and went on.

"Still, if it hadn't been for Ruth I would have left Casper long ago. I would have taken a job in someone's kitchen, if I had to. But after Julia died Casper let me have Ruth here a good deal. Even that wasn't done for me. She amused him, at first. He doesn't like her now, and he lets her know it. In the beginning Ruth enjoyed being here. She likes comfort and luxury, and Casper will always loosen up on anything that makes a show, close as he is. Anything he gave to me didn't show, so why should he give me anything? That's the way he looked at it. The bitterness of the low voice was indescribable.

"But—why are you taking out your hatred on Joan?"

"Don't interrupt me, please," Miss Hosanna spoke with sudden dignity. "You wanted an explanation. You're getting it. Now keep quiet and try to take it in. I'm coming to Joan. When I heard she was to live with Casper—that was eight years ago—I was glad. I thought things would be different, especially as she grew older. I wanted to mother her. I even thought she might love me. I thought she would see my position and understand it. I was sure she would help me. I had dreams of a possible income, however small. She had so much! But—well, she never thought of such a thing as helping me. Perhaps it wasn't her fault. She simply stepped into the picture and things went on exactly as they had always gone. She is never unkind to me, of course. But she is as remote as the stars. She gives me an occasional present, as I've said. That's all. She hardly realizes that I'm on earth. When I'm desperate for a few dollars I am always good to Cass. He is surprised when I'm driven to it, and he shows it. He can't understand why I need money, when I have such a good home!" Her lips curled and the words ended almost in a snarl.

"I don't want to interrupt again, Miss Hosanna," Hale interjected. "But I still can't understand why you are taking out all your resentment on Joan."

"I'm telling you, if you will keep quiet," Miss Hosanna said wearily. She went on more slowly, as if now dragging forth her words by sheer will power.

"Three years ago I learned from Casper's pompous talk that he had made a new will."

"I thought perhaps he had left me something. That shows how hopeful I was, even then! If he had I wouldn't have much chance of getting it, of course. I'm only two years younger than he is. But—well, the knowledge that he had thought of me might have warmed my heart. It needed warming. By that time I was getting pretty hard. Not one of the family cared for me, or paid the slightest attention to me. They merely looked on me as a useful machine around the house, a sort of Robot. I love Ruth Spencer Forbes, but I know I'm only a habit with her. She likes me as much as she likes anyone, though, and she has lived long enough to appreciate unselfish devotion. That's all I ask. We get along. We've always got along. She has given me the only glimpse I've ever had of real friendship and affection."

She stopped definitely now, as if to give Hale another chance to interrupt. He did not take it, and she continued.

"I knew Casper's will was in his safe. I have the combination. Well, purely as a matter of curiosity, I opened the safe and read my brother's will. It ran true to Casper's form. He did not leave me a penny. Neither had my other brother, who had just as much money, left me anything. John ignored me entirely. I suppose he assumed that Casper was generous with me. Generous!" She laughed, and Hale shuddered.

"Well," she continued, "in his will Casper commended his dear sister to his son's care. He explained that he was sure that Herbert would always give me a good home. After all my work for him, he left me dependent for the rest of my life, in my old age and helplessness, on the charity and the caprices of the wife and children Bert will have some day."

"You've been abominably treated, Miss Hosanna," Rex muttered. "But I don't see yet where—"

"Where Joan comes in? You will. Joan had made a will at the same time Casper did. He advised it, and Mr. Phelps prepared both wills. I read her will without much interest, and with absolutely no hope of being remembered in it. But Joan had come up against the discovery that she had a small family and a large fortune. Her few relatives, except myself, didn't need any extra money. She left the bulk of her fortune to Bert. Because she didn't know what to do with the rest of it, she left a hundred thousand dollars to me! I think Mr. Phelps had suggested it."

She stopped and looked at Hale. He stared back at her.

"And because she did that," he brought out slowly, "you tried to kill her!"

"I did." She made the confession with perfect calmness.

"There wasn't a chance in a million that I'd ever get the money in a natural way. She's a young girl. I'm a middle-aged woman. Besides, as soon as she marries her will must be changed and all her money will go to her husband and children. She would never leave me a hundred thousand, with them in the offing. I knew that."

"Just the same," she went on quickly, as Hale tried to speak, "I didn't do anything about it till last summer. Then Ruth told me that Mrs. Stuyvesant had tentatively asked her to come and live with her as companion and secretary. The situation was a sinecure. Ruth's no good as an aid to anyone, and no one knows it better than Mrs. Stuyvesant. But she's a lonely woman and she's really devoted to Ruth. So there was a little income attached to the offer."

Hale's lips parted, but Miss Hosanna's expression checked his words.

"You've been talking pretty steadily ever since you came to Halcyon Camp," she told him grimly. "Can't you listen for half an hour?"

Hale flushed and nodded.

"Then I'll soon finish."

She went on in the same flat voice, from which all vitality seemed to have fled.

"The matter was not settled. Mrs. Stuyvesant confessed that the only reason she hesitated to urge the suggestion was that Ruth occasionally took heroin. She wanted Ruth to promise she would give that up. That made Ruth furious. She's fond of Mrs. Stuyvesant, but she won't be dictated to. The flare-up between them gave me my chance. I—well, I rather encouraged Ruth to take the heroin. I was driven frantic by the fear of losing her. I would have lost her completely if she had gone with the Stuyvesants. I'd have seen her at first, but the friendship would have tapered off."

"Ruth finally admitted that she wasn't keen on going to Mrs. Stuyvesant," she continued after another pause. "She said she would rather live with me. She said she would feel more independent. She even said she would ask nothing better for the rest of her life. But she added that Casper was getting pretty brusque and she didn't know how long she could stand his bad manners and the suspicious way he had of looking at her. I had hardly thought of Joan's legacy for two years. After that I—I remembered it."

"My God," Hale groaned. The interview was a growing nightmare. He could no longer convince himself that it was taking place. "So last summer you began to—to—"

"No," Miss Hosanna evidently shared his dislike of putting the matter into words. "I began very early this last spring. I gave Joan a few doses, as—well, an experiment. I didn't do any more about it until we came here. I thought it was safer here. I was so ignorant about such things that I didn't know how to proceed. I got books and read about the effects of different kinds of poisons, in small doses, over a long period. One book described the effects of bichloride of mercury, but it said they varied in different persons. Some persons were quickly affected by little doses. With others it took a lot. I got the stuff from Jim Haines. I told him I wanted it for household use and I think he believed me. Then I experimented, very cautiously."

"Experimented? How?"

Hale asked the question under his breath.

"On Joan, of course, with very little doses, several days or more apart. On animals, too," Miss Hosanna said simply.

"On the two cats? And on Joan's Pekinese?" Rex jerked out the question after a moment of stupefaction.

"Yes. But the doses were too large, and the effect too sudden. I learned to be more careful. You see, I had to get the effect the book described—a very gradual breaking down of health—a natural-looking effect."

Rex got up and moved around the room. He felt that if he sat still any longer and listened to that flat voice going on and on and on with its horrible tale he would do something desperate. He turned back at last, plunged his hands in his pockets, and faced Miss Hosanna. For a long moment they looked at each other in silence. Then, as she began to speak again, Rex raised a shaking hand.

"Don't tell me any more about it," he said. "I think I've got it all."

"Yes," she agreed. "I think you have. You see," she added, "I didn't kill her."

"No, you didn't kill her." (TO BE CONTINUED)

Old Indian Mission in Michigan Built From Timber Dragged to Site by Oxen

Greensky Hill Indian mission, one of northern Michigan's most important historic spots, will be preserved as a perpetual exhibit if plans by the Charlevoix board of commerce and the county board of supervisors are successful, states a correspondent in the Detroit Free Press.

Originally, Greensky hill was a council place of the Indians, who planted a council ring of trees to mark the site of their powwows. To prevent the trees from being cut for timber by the encroaching white men, the Indians bent them to the ground and tied them with basswood thongs, rendering them unfit for lumber. The symbolic purpose of the planting of the trees was to demonstrate the pledge that, as long as the trees grew and bore leaves, the tribes would remain at peace with one another.

In 1839, in response to a request by Indians who had embraced Christianity, Peter Greensky was sent there by the Methodist church. The first church building was a "waggon-ant" constructed of saplings, and covered with elm bark, with only a dirt floor. In 1861 this became too small for the increasing congregation, and a log church was built.

The Indians felled the trees and squared the logs. The huge timbers were dragged into place by Peter Greensky's oxen. The only pieces used in construction which were brought from another place were the windows, doors, and trim, which were brought from Traverse city by dugout canoes, and transported up the steep hills on the backs of the Indians. No bell was available, so a huge conch shell was blown to call the Indians to worship.

Between the church and Susan lake is an old Indian burying ground, where the graves face the east, as has always been the custom.

Perfumed Rainbows

An idea which exists in some country districts is that there is an odor attached to a rainbow. The belief is really very ancient and is mentioned by Pliny and Aristotle. Of course there is no smell about a rainbow, and the origin of the belief is probably to be explained in the following way: Everyone is familiar with the increase of scent given off by plants, shrubs, and trees on a warm day after the rain has been newly washed by heavy rain. This state of affairs would often naturally coincide with the appearance of the rainbow. Hence people jumped to the conclusion that the odor which they noted must be caused by the rainbow, when, as a matter of fact, says the Montreal Herald, it had nothing to do with the wonderful arch in the sky.

BEVERAGE ALCOHOL AND ITS SOCIAL PERILS

LESSON TEXT—Amos 6:1-6; I Peter 2:11, 12, 4:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT—It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth.—Romans 14:21.

"Hazards in the use of alcohol in a machine age"—this is the topic assigned for our lesson today. It is a good one and worthy of the careful thought of every intelligent citizen. With automobiles alone killing over a hundred persons a day, and the obvious connection between alcohol and death on the highway, we might say much about the folly of trying to cut down traffic accidents while we are licensing more and more "taverns" along the road to fill the drivers with the destructive stuff.

There is much that might be said about the social havoc that is being wrought by alcohol. It is bad enough that a man pays 25 cents for a drink, but even worse, that he gives 25 minutes of his life for each indulgence. But the liquor industry covers that up under a mask of festivity, making booze look like a desirable adjunct to congenial and successful living. It does not picture the bleary eye and the babbling tongue of the drinker, nor does it present the broken-hearted mother, the devastated home, the ragged children, and the empty cupboard. Liquor is one of America's major problems. Let us face it.

The Scripture portions assigned for our lesson rightly emphasize fundamentals, the first being a call to awake from a false sense of security, the second emphasizing that this is a spiritual battle, and the third pointing the way of victory as being in holy living.

I. Foolish Security When Surrounded by Danger (Amos 6:1-6).

Surprise attack is always effective. Satan would lull us all to sleep in the assurance that "God's in his heaven—all's well with the world." God is in heaven and it is certain that ultimately He will reign over all, but just now the world is in the hands of the Wicked One (I. John 5:19).

The people of Amos' day, to whom the message was addressed, had come to the point where prosperity had made them at ease when they should have been active, foolishly secure when they should have been sacrificially serving their fellow men who were in need. The picture is astonishingly up-to-date. Today in our own land the Gold Coast and the slums rub elbows, but few of those who have plenty are concerned about those who have not. In the eyes of most people the purpose of gaining possessions is to relieve one from the necessity of work and to enable one to evade life's responsibilities.

America needs to awaken to its dangers, and we repeat that not the least of these is the liquor question. We must either win a victory over it, or it will destroy our people.

II. Spiritual Warfare—While at Peace with God (I. Pet. 2:11, 12).

"Fleshly lusts, which war against the soul" (v. 11) are the object of serious concern on the part of every sincere Christian. There is a battle on, and the enemy of our soul knows how to make the abuse of the normal impulses and appetites of man his strong ally. The rush of modern life, the increasing use of stimulants, both natural and artificial, the very luxury in which many live, these things tend to give the flesh and its desires undue prominence, and not infrequently cause even God's children to fall into sin.

We are called to a holy warfare, but that does not mean that we live in a constant turmoil. We are, after all, pilgrims and strangers in this world. Our citizenship is in heaven (Phil. 3:20) though we live on earth. In the heart we have peace, and that enables us to fight a good fight against the world, the flesh, and the devil.

III. Doing the Will of God in a Self-willed World (I. Pet. 4:1-5).

Essentially there are two opposing principles operative in the lives of men—we either are controlled by God's will, or by self-will. The flesh is really man's personality controlled by his own self-will. It results in the kind of life described in verses 2 and 3. When a man becomes a Christian he should move over into the will of God.

Such a man may be regarded as strange, but as a matter of fact, men will recognize his godliness (see I. Pet. 2:12). Dr. Will H. Houghton tells of "a soldier who ultimately was made a Christian believer through seeing his companions make fun of another soldier, who was a believer in Christ. The thing that impressed him was the fact that though they made fun of this man, they left their money in his possession for safekeeping!" Do we have that kind of a testimony?

When He Doesn't Worry
His Satanic majesty never worries about the man who has come to the conclusion that there is no devil.

TIPS to Gardeners

DON'T put an added burden on your flowers by asking them to grow in conditions to which they are not suited. Flowers are like races of humans. Some thrive in warm, moist climates. Others, through the centuries, have become accustomed to intensive cold.

Certain flowers, for instance, may be grown successfully in comparatively cool, semi-shaded locations. If you have such spots in your yard, don't plant your zinnias or petunias there.

Any of the following will prove more satisfactory, according to Harry A. Joy, flower expert: Annuals—balsam, clarkia, coleus, nasturtium, pansy, calandula and vinca; perennials—English daisy, campanula, columbine, myosotis, sweet William and viola.

If you live in drouthy sections or if your flower beds are on well-drained soil in full sun, try the following: Annuals—abronia, ageratum, alyssum procumbens, arctotis, calliopsis, candytuft, cosmos, ffour o'clock, lupin texensis, petunia, portulaca, sunflower, verbena, and zinnia; perennials—coreopsis and hollyhock.

Can't Eat, Can't Sleep, Awful Gas

PRESSES HEART

"Gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. It even pressed on my heart. A friend suggested Adlerka. The first dose brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine, and never feel better."—Mrs. Jas. Miller. Adlerka acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels. Adlerka gives your intestinal system a real cleaning, bringing out waste matter that may have caused GAS, BLOATING, sour stomach, headache, nervousness, and sleepless nights for months. You will be amazed at this efficient intestinal cleanser. Just one spoonful usually relieves GAS and constipation. Adlerka does not gripe, is not habit forming. Recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. Sold at all drug stores.

At Peace

Where there are laws, he who has not broken them need not tremble.—Alfieri.

WHY let all your activities today be ruined by a feeling of congestion in your head due to a cold? You can relieve this discomfort by inserting a little Mentholum in your nostrils. It will soon break up the congestion of mucus there. Mentholum will also send soothing medicinal vapors up through the breathing passages. Then your head will feel clearer, your breathing easier. Using Mentholum as needed, you'll be able to carry on through the rest of the day in comfort.
