

Mussolini Is Mum, and His Silence Has the European Nations Buzzing

Premier Mussolini, foreground, leaves a church in Rome after requiem high mass for late Pope Pius XI. Count Ciano, foreign minister, says goodbye to the priest in doorway.

By MILTON BRONNER

NEA Service Staff Correspondent.
ROME, March 17.—Andre Maurois, French Academician, once wrote a book which made a hit with the English—"The Silences of Colonel Bramble." But right now it is the strange silences of Duce Benito Mussolini which are intriguing the people of Europe.
It was announced that, at the conclusion of a meeting of the Fascist Grand Council in Rome, the Duce would make an important speech. His silence was 24 carat gold.
Later, at two or three other functions, the report was widespread that the Duce would deliver a speech which would make Europe sit up and take notice. Nothing happened.

BRITISH PRESS HOPES.

THIS oratorical self-denial, this swallowing of words unuttered, has given rise to a lot of wishful thinking in a certain part of the weekly London press. They write as if the Duce and Hitler were almost on the outs. They talk about the Duce being in a fury.

The hint is that Hitler is not keen about Mussolini's demands upon France for Djibouti, the seaport of French Somaliland in East Africa, and for the French protectorate of Tunis in North Africa.
One very immediate cause for Mussolini's unwillingness to disrobe the world in the last days of February and first days of March has been the death of Pope Pius XI, necessitating the election of a new head of the Roman Catholic church. The Duce is a keen barometer when it comes to the feelings of the Italian people. He knows the overwhelming majority are loyal and faithful to the church. So he also knew, with the church in mourning, that it would be a very bad time to start upsetting Europe with the fear of a possible war.

Whatever joint pressure Mussolini and Hitler may have concerted to bring upon France and Britain, there is pretty apt to be a respite until the end of March.
By that time Pope Pius XII will have taken full hold of his great office and will probably have presided at some great religious ceremonies. A British mission to discuss ways and means of avoiding a clash for markets between Germany and Britain will also have about completed its visit to Germany.

However, March 26, which marks the 20th anniversary of Fascism, will give Duce another opportunity to break his silence.

U. S. PROVIDES AN OBSTACLE.

WITHIN the past few weeks a new element has also entered to disturb the calculations of the dictators—Roosevelt and Congress.
The proposed sale of large numbers of airplanes to France and England, the huge defense bill already passed by an overwhelming majority by the House of Representatives, the growing press criticism of the belligerent attitude of the totalitarian states—all these things have been weighed in Berlin and Rome.

The developments in America may not finally stop the plans of the dictators. But they have already slowed up the time-table.

New Panama Canal Locks Are Proposed

Safety Measure Is Urged by Woodring
In Note to Solons

WASHINGTON, March 17. (AP)—Secretary Woodring recommended Thursday that Congress safeguard the Panama Canal against aerial attack and sabotage by adopting immediately a proposal to spend $277,000,000 for an additional set of locks near the canal.

He sent to the Senate, with an urgent request for prompt action, a report by Brigadier General Clarence S. Ridley, governor of the canal, upon the feasibility of constructing additional facilities for the passage of shipping between the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans. The report had been requested by Congress.

Ridley recommended that an additional set of locks, designed especially to resist air raids and sabotage, be built a quarter to a half mile away from the present sets. They would be large enough to raise and lower the largest ships now envisioned from one to the other of the canal's water levels.

In his letter transmitting the report to the Senate, the secretary of war declared:

"I concur in the conclusions of the governor, and, in the interests of defense and of the future needs of interoceanic shipping, I recommend the immediate adoption of the project substantially as proposed in the report of the governor."

This recommendation went to a Congress already hurrying along a multi-million dollar national defense program submitted by the President.

When Mr. Roosevelt would recommend that the legislators appropriate money at this session to begin the canal project was not disclosed immediately.

A possibility of Secretary Woodring's recommendation being prompt action requested arose when it was announced the House Merchant Marine Committee would consider the canal proposals at a meeting today.

Ben Dansby Wildcat in Northern Pecos Is Showing Gas From Yates

By FRANK GARDNER.

Interest today was turned to a wildcat in northern Pecos, Ben Dansby, Jr., of Midland, et al No. 1 L. C. Lessenich, as it was reported to have encountered gas in the Yates sand horizon. Volume of the gas was said to be slight, but it was sufficient to burn at the casing-head.

The Dansby well last night was drilling ahead at 1,340 feet in anhydrite. It went out of the Yates zone at 1,215. Yates sand had been topped at 1,104, and first frosted quartz grains were found in samples from 1,118-28. The test is in section 45, block 9, H. and G. N. survey, about a mile and a half south of the Pecos River.

George T. Abell et al No. 1 O. W. Williams, three-quarters of a mile northeast of Imperial in northern Pecos, has been abandoned at 2,449 feet in time. It failed to log showing of oil or gas and encountered sulphur water from 2,445-49 which rose 800 feet in eight hours.

Anderson-Prichard Oil Corporation and Monte Warner No. 1 M. I. Masterson is standing after cementing 15 1/2-inch surface casing at 2,440 feet in red beds. It will test the Ordovician in the Masterson area of Pecos.

Humble Oil & Refining Company No. 1 Ozona-Barnhart trap Company, an Ordovician test south of Ozona in Crockett county, is drilling 5,532 feet.

Bennett Outpost Drilling.

New semi-wildcat extension test south of the Bennett pool in southeastern Yoakum was seen with the report that J. E. Mabey Company is drilling with big spudder, probably to set surface pipe, in the northwest quarter of section 759, block D. J. H. Gibson survey. Mabey recently obtained the tract from Conline Oil Company for one-sixth override. Exact location of the well, which is on N. W. Willard fee, has not been announced, but it is probably 440 feet from the north and west lines of section. If on that location, the test is a mile and a half due south of the Bennett pool proper, three-quarters of a mile southeast of production in the southwest extension area, and a mile and a quarter southwest of Shell No. 1 J. M. Ruyts, outpost pumper.

Shell No. 1 Waples-Platter Company, interesting wildcat two miles northeast of the Bennett pool, is rigging up cable tools at 5,000 feet in time.

Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Company No. 1 A. M. Brownfield, extending production on the east side of the Denver pool in Yoakum a mile and a half northward, was found to have 15 to 20 feet of cavings on bottom when blank shell was run preliminary to shooting. Yesterday was spent in cleaning out from bottom at 5,151, and the 600-quart shot is being run today. Top of line section to be shot is at 4,995 feet.

On natural production gauge, the well swabbed and flowed 127 barrels of oil through tubing in 24 hours, with oil level remaining constant at 1,500 feet from top.

In the Slaughter pool of southwestern Hockley, Texas Company No. 1-C Mallett Land & Cattle Company, west outpost, is drilling at 1,268 feet in red rock Texas No. 5 Bob Slaughter block, northwest edge test, is drilling anhydrite at 3,085, while Standalone No. 1-B Alex A. Slaughter estate is rigging up standard bottom at 5,151, and the 600-quart George Drilling Company and A. S. Everest No. 1 Dr. E. H. Jones, new wildcat in northwestern Gaines, is drilling below 1,300 feet in red beds.

In the Seminole pool of Gaines, Shell No. 1 Mann is drilling at 5,068 feet in time, having made eight feet of new hole. M. E. K. No. 3 Wasson, in the Wasson pool of northwestern Gaines, flowed 35 barrels of oil hourly on natural test from pay between 4,900-88, total depth, and is washing hole with 350 gallons of oil.

Lea Test Sets Pipe.

It was reported today that Fred Turner, Jr., of Midland, No. 1 Lea County State Bank, wildcat 14 miles northeast of Lovington, N. M., is standing, bottomed at 340 feet in shale and sand, after cementing 15 1/2-inch surface pipe with 100 sacks.

In the Lundy pool of Lea, Standalone No. 2 State is drilling at 4,593 feet in soft dolomite, while Repollo No. 2-A State, Lease No. 182, is rigging up rotary.

Shell No. 1 Harwood permit, southern Roosevelt deep test, is drilling at 7,080 feet in shale and anhydrite.

Waddell Southeast Extension.

Magnolia Petroleum Company No. 12 W. P. Edwards, adding three-quarters of a mile of territory to the southeast portion of the Waddell pool in northern Crane, swabbed 85 barrels of oil through 2-inch tubing in 13 hours and is still swabbing. Total depth is 3,529 in time, where it has been treated with 5,000 gallons in one stage.

In western Crane, Gulf No. 10 Waddell, farthest advanced of three Ordovician tests in the area, is drilling below 5,368 in time; Gulf No. 16 Tubbs is past 4,976, also in time; and Sinclair-Prairie et al No. 3 Tubbs Community is drilling time at 3,810. Gulf No. 5 McKnight, several miles to the northeast, is drilling at 2,680 in time.

North of the farthest east well in Ector's Foster pool, M. B. K. No. 1-B John M. Gist is drilling at 1,160 feet in red beds.

Proving three-quarters of a mile west extension to the North Cowden pool in northern Ector, Sinclair-Prairie No. 1 Fay Holt is drilling at 4,302 feet in time, still heading about 600 barrels of oil daily.

Atlantic and Standard No. 1-B W. F. Cowden estate, two miles south of the Emma pool in southern Andrews, had reported no gauges as it cleaned out to 4,165 feet after shot with 140 quarts from 4,140-80, plugged-back total depth. Sinclair-Prairie No. 5 Mrs. Emma Cowden, pool well, is drilling at 2,870 feet in salt and anhydrite.

Pari-Mutuel Bets On Local Option Declared Illegal

AUSTIN, Mar. 17 (AP)—Attorney General Mann held today the house bill proposing legalization of pari-mutuel wagering on horse races under local option was unconstitutional.

The opinion was sought by several members of the house in a resolution adopted several days ago. The house agreed to postpone debate on the measure until the attorney general made his ruling.

The house last week voted in favor of local option pari-mutuel wagering, but reconsidered after a bill was entered by Senator Bradbury, long-time foe of legalized wagering, and agreed to ask Mann's opinion on constitutionality of the bill.

Just what action by persons favoring legalized wagering will be taken next remains problematical.

Michigan Governor Dies After Only 2 Months in Office

GRAND LEDGE, Mich., March 17 (AP)—Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald, who defeated Frank Murphy, now United States attorney general, for re-election last November, died from a heart attack at his residence here last night. The Republican governor had been suffering from influenza. Gov. Fitzgerald was 34 years old. He began his second two-year term as governor of Michigan last Jan. 1.

Fitzgerald first was governor in 1934-35 but Murphy captured the office from him at the end of his first term. Two years later Fitzgerald turned the tables on the Democrat, who was appointed to President Roosevelt's cabinet at the expiration of his term.

The governor was ordered to bed Monday by his physician, Dr. E. M. McCoy, who said the influenza was aggravated by a lung and circulatory condition left by pneumonia five years ago.

Fitzgerald was the first Michigan governor to die in office. He will be succeeded by Lieut. Gov. Luren Dickinson, who will be 80 years old next month. Dickinson is serving his seventh term as lieutenant governor but has not been in office continuously.

Dickinson himself is confined to his home at Charlotte with influenza.

Natural Resources Of State Publicized

AUSTIN. — To publicize Texas' vast store of natural resources, officers of the University of Texas branch of the American Chemical Society today planned to send their entire 118-man chapter to the society's national convention in Baltimore, April 2-9.

Boasting "the society's largest chapter of regular members in the nation," its officers believed that appearance of the entire chapter at the convention would do much to convince American industrialists that Texas presents a fertile field for expansion.

Chapter officials indicated today they would ask legislative permission to use university cars for the mass transportation. Falling in this, they would "turn to Texas business men—who would profit by industrial expansion in the State."

Ten members will present papers stressing the "wasting of the State's natural resources." Resources discussed will include natural gas, petroleum by-products, ceramic soils and pottery manufacture and dehydrated Texas lignite, suitable for fuel.

Full Territorial Status Is Demanded by Alaska Residents

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, March 17 (AP)—The Alaska Home Rule Association, a pioneer group, Thursday issued a "declaration of necessity" demanding "full territorial status" now and eventual statehood for Alaska.

The declaration sharply assailed "taxation without representation." It asserted the "despots," the "Lord Norths" and "torches in our own country" were retarding development of a territory "which should now be supporting a population of millions."

The references to taxation, "Lord Norths" and "torches" referred to American revolutionary times. Lord North was the member of the British government who sponsored the stamp tax which led to the historic Boston tea party and spurred the independence movement.

Since Alaska already has territorial status, technically at least, the demand for "full" privileges of that nature was interpreted as a contention of the pioneers that some of the federal departments and bureaus in Washington should relinquish their Alaska activities to territorial agencies.

The association's program:

1. Unite Alaskans as one people.
2. Free Alaska from Federal bureaucracy.
3. Speed establishment of full territorial government and future statehood.
4. Lay solid economic and political foundations for development of resources and future statehood.

Sherran A. Noyes, Fairbanks attorney who helped organize the association, said one of the major impending evils was "the recent proposal by a federal resources committee to set aside a portion of Alaska, north of the Yukon River and larger than the State of Texas, exclusively as a reindeer pasture."

Disapproval of Nazi Methods Is

LONDON, Mar. 17 (AP)—Britain today instructed her ambassador to Germany, Neville Henderson, to return to London and report on the reich's absorption of Bohemia-Moravia and arbitrary force "in occupying Czechoslovakia."

Persons close to the government described the recall as a gesture of disapproval of the methods of Adolf Hitler's government in its eastward advance through central Europe.

They compared it to President Roosevelt's action last November in summoning Ambassador Hugh Wilson to Washington to report on the German drive against Jews.

Prime Minister Chamberlain recalled the ambassador to Nazi Germany after the government had received fresh criticism because of his policy toward Central Europe and "I do not think any useful purpose would be served by intervention on the part of his majesty's government," he replied in the house of commons when asked what he proposed to do about Carpatho-Ukraine, annexed by Hungary.

Disclosure that Ambassador Henderson would be called home was made by Chamberlain in response to a laborite request that Britain withdraw her diplomatic representative from Berlin.

FACULTY COLUMN.

School-Community Cooperation
By A. L. Gilbreth.

Many of our communities are making splendid progress in the field of school-community cooperation. The major portion of our citizens are assuming the Englishman's compromising attitude toward controversial issues. This makes a very pleasant environment for the teaching personnel and it can give more attention to the task at hand.

There are certain duties which school systems owe to the public. The primary duty, of course, is to help furnish a part of the child's education. This education is varied and accounts for the great variety of subjects in our curriculum. The field of possibilities is limited only by the community's ability to pay the bill. There are secondary duties of the school to supplement the primary and these are to make the community life a little better by furnishing educational, recreational and social activities to the adults as well as to the youths. The school cooperates with the community by holding an open house for the community at all times and remaining above suspicion. The public schools are willing to receive suggestions and constructive criticism from its patrons. It cannot change basic plans and activities to satisfy a small minority if that change will destroy something the majority feels should be maintained.

The public is doing its share in modern education to promote school-community cooperation. It pays the bill. It is very tolerant toward the school's experimental projects. It recognizes the fact that the schools are in the hands of administrators and teachers who have been especially trained for that work.

These teachers and administrators may be as expert as the doctor or the lawyer is in his profession. The public does not attempt to determine school policy except through its legally elected representatives. These representatives, the boards of education, work with the administrators to improve public education at the least possible cost. The public is kind to the teacher in that he or she is judged by the general good that is done rather than by one or two mistakes which may be made and this is as it should be. The teaching profession and the public realize that the homes, the schools, and the churches are our basic institutions, and that the strength of all of them depends upon cooperation of the various members.

There are several scores of agencies of cooperation between the school and the community. These may all be classified under the following major headings: organizations, personal visitations, exhibits, displays, pageants-parades, publications, reports and records, social functions, school building functions for the public, parent education, health service, and guidance. We are making progress in this field of human relationships.

WEEKLY ARGUMENT.

Too Much Athletics in School
Yes.

By Preston Dickson.

In my opinion there is entirely too much athletics in the present day schools. There are many students who are excellent scholars until they reach the grade where they are allowed to join the football team. Then their interest diverts from their studies and they eat, sleep, and talk football. They forget that there are such things as reading, writing and arithmetic. They forget that to obtain a real education and prepare themselves to earn their own living, these are the necessary things to learn. May I ask how being able to kick a football, hit a baseball, throw a basket ball, or high jump will earn you a living late in life?

Many of our pupils purposely fail in their courses in order that they may stay in school another year and be an athlete. Were it not for athletics these students would continue to study, and in all probability would be honor students in their graduating classes.

Every year we read where some student has been fatally injured while playing football. If he doesn't die from his injury, often times he is injured for life. If there were not athletics in the schools, these young fellows would be able-bodied men today and able to accomplish things that would make this a bigger and better world. They would devote their time to studying their lessons, instead of spending every afternoon practicing football or jumping over poles.

Another thing, when a pupil fails in his studies, it casts a reflection upon the teacher's ability to teach, and might leave the impression that she is not a capable teacher, when it really is no fault of hers if she cannot get the pupil interested in his studies.

No.

By Buddy Davidson.

Do we have too much sports in our country as a whole? My opinion is No. We have all heard these wild stories about high school athletes getting passed when they failed because they excelled in some type of game. The majority of these yards are untrue.

There have been many cases of weak, flat-chested, skinny boys who after four years of high school, and four years of college athletics, become big, broad-chested, strong, robust men.

Even if a boy does not make a star in some game, he still learns to cooperate. And if he is really a good athlete, just look what he can do. If a firm has a job to give some one man and a man who has graduated from some college and made All American football team asked for it, don't you think he would be given the job in preference to someone who had just been to college?

Then there are some men such as Glenn Cunningham, the world's greatest mile racer, who have made athletics their career. Could such a career as he be called in vain? Recently Davis O'Brien was offered a small fortune to play professional football. Although he didn't accept, he could have in a few years made a fortune. What if, instead of trying to model themselves after some famous athlete, boys might take up the example set by some gangster or public enemy?

Our national game, baseball, has made fortune and fame for many men, and put many others to work in carrying for the great parks where they play.

Also, do we not realize that in the period just before our P. E. class in school most of us look forward to this activity. So in my opinion if all athletics were suddenly cut out, this world would be a pretty dull place in which to live.

ESSAY COLUMN.

Governor O'Daniel's Radio Hour.
By James Hill.

Another unusual thing about W. Lee O'Daniel as a governor is his Sunday morning radio talks. He speaks each Sunday morning from 8:30 to 9:00 o'clock.

At the beginning of the program of course, the "Doughboys" play a selection or two to give the program the real O'Daniel coloring. But the main purpose is to talk to the people of Texas about the way things are going on and the things he plans to do.

In this way the general public is in close communication with him and his plans. It makes the people feel that he is sincere and above board, and to tell them in his own words of his proposals has a much greater weight with the people.

Too, Governor O'Daniel has the opportunity to correct any false reports which may and do arise from public gossip. We are aware that the newspapers do not always give both sides of all questions in unbiased views.

Sometime ago for example when the governor stayed the execution of a condemned negro, some newspapers gave his statement absolutely opposite to what he had said and meant.

I think his talks are a grand thing. Many people who do not read the papers will listen to his talks. He will win their confidence, admiration and cooperation—all to the ends of a better chance to succeed as a governor in spite of a few "sour-grape" politicians.

OPINIONS.

By Mary Frances Carter.

Three wise little monkeys sitting on a blotting pad use their hands to express, "Se no evil, speak no evil, and hear no evil." Wouldn't this be a grand old world to live in if we could all follow their advice? We can't help but decide what we think or a person, place, or thing, and we call this our opinion. But we don't have to blurt out these opinions about everything that comes up. An old, wise man would say, "If you can't say something good about a person, keep quiet." There could be no better piece of advice. We do more harm sometimes in five minutes by speaking our opinions than we can correct in five years. And nine times out of ten one wants to hear our ideas, anyway.

There's something queer about opinions too. They change pretty often. One day we might be of the opinion that Tom is the smartest boy in the room because he can build the nicest airplane. Martha is called the dumbest because she can't build anything. Said opinion might change the next day if Martha makes some delicious fudge, and Tom's effort at the same thing is a pure flop.

There was once an old lady in Chicago who kissed her cow each night. An interested neighbor saw her and asked her why she kissed the cow when there were so many nice people in the world.

"Ump," said the old lady, "every one to his own opinion." And she kissed the cow again.

This is a free country, to be sure, and everybody does have a right to his own opinions. But if we would only be a little slower in forming them and express them only when they would help, the world would be a lot happier. Let's don't be monkeys, but let's do try to see no evil, speak no evil, and hear no evil for one day. Just see if we don't have better opinions of ourselves.

The Law West of the Pecos.
By Bobby Stevens.

For years we have heard the famous western phrase "The Law West of the Pecos." To some it is just another legend. But it is really true. For a long time there was a lawless strip of land between the El Rio Pecos and the Rio Grande Rivers. Badmen from every state collected there. The only law was Judge Colt upon whom everyone depended.

One day there was news received that the Transcontinental Railroad would be brought through this Rio Grande-Pecos region. This event acted like a magnet, at least it brought on a gun-slinging, whiskey-runner named Roy Bean, a short man about sixty years old who measured more in power than his stature signified.

Beans were springing up everywhere along this proposed railroad line, and this peculiar, little old man was whistled man settled in one of them. He built a saloon called it the Vinerygarron, which also became the name of the town.

This little old man had a plan to be judge as he got a law-book and appointed himself judge. Thus began the "Law West of the Pecos." The greatest wrong was that the new Judge Bean was not such a good example of an honest character and ran the court the way he pleased.

The railroad changed and ran about ten miles north of Vinerygarron, so the village disappeared overnight, just as it had come. This meant the downfall of Bean, so he played a trick on his enemies and planted himself in the path of the railroad, and through another man's name got a block or two in the new village, soon to become the boss.

Mr. Bean ran the court to his own profit. In every case he would make the prisoner work for him or put the fine into his own pocket. The only jail they had was a knotty little mesquite tree to which the prisoners were chained. If anyone asked about his punishment, he would explain that sunshine was good for them.

In spite of his overbearing nature this apparent badman always helped the underdog, and always ruled his court to help the poor, especially the Mexicans. He married people for five dollars and divorced them for ten. When a lawyer from San Antonio told him he could not do this, he said, "Anything I do, I can undo. And see here young Squire, I run this court by common sense. That's my ruling."

One day this colorful old man died between sunset and dark—with his boots on. At last the rangers chased the outlaws to other states. News came that a dam was going to be built on the Pecos. "The Law West of the Pecos" became just another legend in the annals of history.

ART APPRECIATION.

"Appeal to the Great Spirit"
By Dorothy Otho.

Cyrus Dallin, the great American sculptor, has given us a series of five statues. From an early childhood Mr. Dallin has been fascinated by the Indians. The gay dresses, their customs, and other things interested him. It was impossible for him to live so near Indian life without giving expression to his feelings toward it in some manner.

"The Appeal to the Great Spirit" was the fourth piece of sculpturing which Dallin did. The statue stands before the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. It was purchased by a group of citizens of Boston for $12,000. Dallin completed this work of art in 1907, and after he exhibited it in Baltimore, it was sent to Paris where it was cast in bronze.

The sculptor makes us feel that this is the last of the vanishing race. The brave Indian is making his last appeal to the Great Spirit. The chieftain knows their needs. The downcast look and drooping ears of the steed give evidence of the bond of sympathy between the man and his horse. Although the attitude of the Indian toward his deity is childlike, and his faith simple and sincere, one cannot but respect his reverence toward the Great Spirit.

This chieftain has spent many days brooding over the tragedy that is befalling his people. They are being pushed from place to place. He knows their needs, their virtues, their endurance, and their intelligence. Will not the Great Spirit help him? There appears to be a ray of hope expressed in the upturned face and the palms of the outstretched hands.

He has made his contribution to this nation in his belief that virtue is essential to the making of physical excellence. His deeds are carved upon the rocks of mountains.

WHO'S WHO COLUMN.

J. W. (Uncle Jule) Driver.
By Martha Jane Preston.
J. W. Driver, better known as "Uncle Jule" was born January 20, 1857. He recently celebrated his eighty-second birthday. Mr. Driver was born in Teague, Limestone county, having had a twin sister who lived to be only sixteen years of age. His father, who fought for the Confederacy in the Civil War, was a slave owner. "Uncle Jule's" mother was never well after the war, and died in 1867 when he was only ten years old. One year later he lost his father. Since that time he has made his own way.

"Uncle Jule" left Teague and went to Roundrock when he was eighteen years old. He owned six yokes of oxen, and was hauling lumber from Waco to Roundrock when Sam Bass, a notorious robber and killer was slain. He saw the body of Sam Bass the day after he was shot.

From Roundrock he went to Brownwood where he had a job hauling lumber for the T. & P. railroad between Fort Worth and Dallas. It was in this venture that he made his first big money.

Mr. Driver and Eliza McCormick were married on Dec. 19, 1878. Ten years later they and some of their children started for California. But when only a little distance west of Midland, their son, Ira, took typhoid fever. This caused them to settle in Midland county. Later they came to Midland where Mr. Driver was in the livery stable business. But when cars came into use, he sold his livery stable to Ed Crowley and bought a home where the gin is now standing. He lived on a ranch south of Midland for thirty-five years before he moved back to town.

Mrs. Driver died September 19, 1930. Before she passed away, they had celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1928. "Uncle Jule" is in good health, but is confined to his home because of an injury received many years ago. He is the grandfather of J. V. Stokes III of 7A.

Kenneth Taylor.

By John Perkins.

Kenneth has been living in Midland for four years. Ever since the first day he arrived, everyone has liked him. He is one of the favorites of 7B, for he always has a happy expression on his face. Kenneth is a good all-around fellow; he is in practically everything that is representative of the school. He is a member of the Safety Patrol and is considered one of the best patrolmen. He also went out for football last season and was in quite a few games.

In doing all these various activities one might expect him to be a deadhead in the school-room. But you would be entirely wrong, for there is no one in the school who reads that he is not on it. And when it comes to spelling and arithmetic he is tops. So as you may well see he certainly belongs in the Who's Who.

LETTERS BACK HOME.

Pisa, Italy

Dear Miss Latham,

Well I got here. How? By air, by rail, and by water. Feels good to touch old "Mother Earth" again. I'm sure you don't want to hear about my experiences in the various methods of travel, so let's go for a minutes under the Leaning Tower of Pisa.

This celebrated marble bell tower, in the Italian city of Pisa, is really worthy of rank among the seven wonders of the modern world. It was begun in 1174, and completed in 1350. The structure commenced to dip after the first three galleries had been constructed. The slant of the tower, which is about fourteen feet from the perpendicular, increased an additional foot in the last century.

The Italian government has begun plans to give the tower a broader substantial footing, although it is not to be straightened. For centuries the "falling tower" as engineers have called it, has been slowly sinking vertically into the soft river valley sediment on which it rests. To try to keep it from sinking, they plan to inject cement in liquid form through pipes under the tower. The tower is built entirely of white marble, rising to a height of 137 feet, having the bells in the eighth story. The walls are thirteen feet thick at the base, and between six and seven feet at the top. A staircase of nearly 300 steps leads to the top from which I got a fine view of the picturesque city of Pisa.

You probably know that this tower was intended for the bell tower of the beautiful old cathedral of equal fame near by. And by the way, not only does the Leaning Tower of Pisa stand as a creation of architectural beauty, but Galileo, the famous scientist, used it in his experiments to determine the velocity of falling bodies.

I'm just bulging with knowledge. Best wishes, Janice.

Governors were the topic of conversation last week after we had one in our midst. Of course Governor Neff is the best one we ever knew because he had by his personal charm, won us all over. When he asked Miss Latham if she didn't think he was swell to, she of course agreed with us. But when she had to tell us the following experience (See SCHOOL NEWS, page 4)

We, The Women

By RUTH MILLETT

The woman who is trying to make a place for herself among a new group of people can't afford to forget that:
It is all very well to be a nice agreeable person, but she can't slide through on that alone.
If she can't be amusing, she had better be well-informed.
Good manners—that is, thinking first of the other person's feelings—are the most effective first aid in social emergencies.
If she is really interested in anything—gardening, music or Chinese checkers—she will be able to fit in with at least one group of people.

She must make her own judgments of people and not accept hand-me-down opinions, even from good friends.
It's a mistake to tell all about herself in three installments, or less.
If she has any accomplishment, anything that makes her stand out from the crowd, she should use it for all it's worth.
It's better for her to appear to be self-reliant than dependent on others' approval. (She would be smarter not to copy any of her acquaintances, either, in the way she dresses, her hair or arrangements the furniture in her living room).

She can't get by on past history, and will only make a bore of herself if she insists on telling people just how important she was in her previous job or in her home town.
Fitting into a new group isn't very easy, because all the effort falls to the newcomer. The old-timers just sit in judgment.

which made her feel as if stormy Jim Ferguson is the one she would always remember best. Here's her story, believe it or not.

When Miss Latham was a school girl, she went to Austin on some kind of school excursion. Of course, the first place that the teacher took them was the capitol where the group was cordially received. Even the Governor's office!

As you would know, so she says, she was the "nosiest" one of the class and got into a conversation with Governor Ferguson. He asked her if she wouldn't like to be governor for a while, and allowed her to sit in his high-backed chair and to write her name with his pen on a piece of paper.

Then he took them into the State Treasury room where there were bags and bags of money. Governor Jim told her she could have all she could carry. But she couldn't lift one of them!

"Well," he asked, "Young lady, how much did you ever have in your hand at one time?"

"About a dime," she answered.
Then he gave her three government bonds, each worth a million dollars and let her hold them for a second.

"Now," he continued, "you can tell your children and grandchildren that you once held three million dollars in the palm of your hand."

BITS OF PHILOSOPHY.

Wallace Covington, Jr.

I have found a most interesting hobby in collecting quotations of wisdom. Some of my most interesting material has come from the book "Selected Stories, Quotations and Aphorisms" by Dr. Jno. B. Thomas, M. D., F. A. C. S.
"It is the province of knowledge to speak, and it is the privilege of wisdom to listen."
—Oliver W. Holmes.

"We think our fathers fools, so wise we grow. Our wiser sons no doubt will think us so."
—A. Pope.

"The roots of education are bitter, but its fruit is sweet."
—Aristotle.

"Wealth may seek us, but wisdom must be sought."
—Dr. E. Young.

LOCAL COLOR IN OUR TOWN.

By Colleen Oates.

The most colorful sight on the streets of Midland is our hot-tamale man, Bill Busby. Bill has his little home-made wooden cart with bicycle wheels on it. He seems very friendly with those people who find time to talk to him. Business must always be good as he never seems discouraged. Bill just pushes his cart along and sings his song in any weather, rain or shine. In the afternoon about five o'clock you hear his song, "Hot tamales, they're good all the time." It seems that no town is complete without some picturesque character, and ours is just about the best "what am."

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS IN ASSEMBLY.

Emma Harwell.

Mr. Gilbreth called us back to assembly Tuesday morning to hear the talented artists, Rose Paldar and Mr. Gallagher. The assembly sang two songs and gave two readings for their guests who then entertained us. Miss Paldar sang two songs, a Czech song and an English song, "One Day When We Were Young." Mr. Gallagher played two selections on the piano, the "Spinning Song" and another piece which was a harp imitation.

Really it was about the most enjoyable assembly we've had in a long time.

JUNIOR HIGH REARS GOVERNOR NEFF.

Margie Nell Currie.

The sixth and seventh grades of Junior High School were very pleased when Mr. Lackey phoned Mr. Gilbreth and invited the students over to hear ex-governor Pat M. Neff speak at High School Monday morning. Everyone was quite excited. We went over in a body, thrilled to hear our governor speak and to see such a very distinguished man.

Governor Neff expressed a very sympathetic and tolerant attitude toward the youth of today. He compared his school days with ours, and told many humorous jokes. He is one of the best speakers we have heard in a long time. All of us hope we can hear him again some time.

Later on in the morning Governor Neff came over to Junior High. Think we don't have celebrities visit us!

SPORTS COLUMN.

LaGrant Daugherty.

The most disappointing thing happened this week end. The basketball game was called off, and we did not get a chance to beat the high school. Mr. Freels and Mr. Kimbriel were out of town Saturday.

Track in P. E. is over, and we have our Junior team ready. Everything went along smoothly, and everybody is happy.

High jumping is very interesting as this is the first time we tried it. Most everybody got the three foot cleared, but one little fifth grader, Fritzle Schottlander. Fritzle is fast even if he can't jump.

We surely would be glad to get sweaters if we make the team and win the county meet. We have good hopes, and they're built around Bobby and Robby Smith, and H. G. Bedford. There are a few others. I'll let you know about them next week.

The team starts practice Tuesday, and by the time this is printed, they will have been out for four days.

That's all. See you in the funny paper.
P. S. I hope none of the boys who have flu take a relapse running.

POETS' CORNER.

Charles Reader.

Bringing in The Cows.
When the sun sinks low in the West
And it's almost time to rest,
Of the daily tasks I've had my fill
So I start for the cows over the hill.

Co Boss, Co Boss, I call
But they come not at all.
There she is in the waving corn,
I see the top of an angled horn.

I get a stick to make them hustle
They shy around, and are off in a bustle.
Now along the trail they brouse and graze
"Hie along," I call, "to your corn and maize."

Slowly they plod toward the corral gate,
So I tap them along as it's getting late.
The gate's ajar when we get there.
Old Boss eases through with the greatest care.

They sniff the odor of new mown hay,
And kick their heels like calves at play.
At the click of the latch, one and all
Saunters in to her private stall.

Arithmetic.
By Tommy Carter.

Arithmetic is my favorite subject,
It should be yours too,
I like arithmetic better,
Than eating Irish stew.

English is okay,
And geography is all right too,
But they aren't either one as good
As eating Irish stew.

Now, history isn't so bad,
Neither is spelling,
But I think in both of them
You have to do too much telling.

But I'll stick,
To that Irish stew
And of course arithmetic,
'Cause with all the other ones
I have just too much to do.

PERSONALS.
By Frances Palmer and Belva Jo Knight.

R. L. McDonald and Jack Bryan really gave some of our modern crooners some heavy competition when they sang "The Funny Old Hills" in chapel the other morning.

Some Junior High students had to have the verification of their teachers as to Ex-Governor Neff's identity. They couldn't recognize his picture in their history books due to the fact that some undiscovered Gainsborough had him bedaubed with sideburns and chin whiskers.

We would take up too much space to enumerate all the castor olers this week. But the flu has a lot of our students in his clutches.

Mr. Cheatam of the Stanton schools visited our English and spelling classes last Monday.

Mr. Freels hied himself to Denison this past week end to visit his family. On his way back he stopped in Greenville for a brief visit with our former principal, Mr. R. C. Fagg.

Matilda Abbot has been absent for the last two weeks with an eye ailment. But she is back now in good condition.

Betty Shockley was absent from school, visiting her grandmother in Oklahoma.

Imogene Smith has been absent because her mother had to have an operation on her eyes.

Joyce Lee of 5B has moved to Lorraine, Texas.

Our new song books "America Sings" have arrived. We want to thank Miss Price and those who donated them.

Miss Latham had an occasion to practice what she preaches the other day. Regardless of the consequences, tell the unadulterated truth. Mr. Gilbreth found that the scales were broken. She had to confess that she had just weighed.

Unique Car Conditioning System at Chevrolet Plant

One of the major accomplishments of the motor industry has been the placing of hundreds of thousands of automobiles in owners' hands the world over in absolutely uniform condition. Chevrolet does this in a unique manner. In a building entirely separate from the production lines, a Car Conditioning department takes the units after final assembly and inspection. Here they are not only inspected but actually conditioned for delivery. Details such as tire pressure, radiator anti-freeze, transmission and rear axle grease, motor oil, and ignition timing are thoroughly checked and adjusted for the locality to which the car is consigned. The photo shows the Car Conditioning department at the Flint plant, where a staff of 70 trained mechanics turns out about 50 cars an hour.

STAMP NEWS

NEXT stamp to be issued on the 1939 U. S. program is the modernistic 3-cent New York World's Fair commemorative, the design of which is shown above. It will be placed on first-day sale at New York, April 1. Color and size will be announced soon.

The Leatherstocking Stamp Club of Cooperstown, N. Y., will issue the official cachets June 12 commemorating 100 years of baseball. Undoubtedly, the U. S. commemorative to be released that day will be sold exclusively at Cooperstown first since the great American game was started there by Abner Doubleday in 1839. Returns from the cachets, which will show the national baseball emblem, will be devoted to Double-day Field in Cooperstown.

At least 10 foreign governments are expected to issue commemoratives in connection with the New York World's Fair. These include Brazil, France, Iceland, Ecuador, Turkey, Rumania, Russia, Dominican Republic and French colonies. In addition, several other countries are considering the idea.

Interesting new issues: British Solomon Islands—series portraying island scenes and King George VI; Monaco—18 values showing scenes in the tiny principality; Finland—four regular values; Turkey—eight values in memory of the late Atatürk. (Copyright, 1939, NEA Service, Inc.)

Police Car Kills Deer, Crash Damage Is $300

BENNINGTON, Vt. (U.P.)—A police "prowl" car his only weapon. Patrolman R. Theodore Cook brought down a 12-point buck deer. But the shotless slaying cost the department $300 for repairs to the automobile.

The deer crashed into the car, smashing the windshield, left running board and two left doors. The accident also left the police force without a car.

Co-eds Co-ops Are Urged

BERKLEY, Cal. (U.P.)—The California Honor Students' Association has asked students and administration officials to consider co-operative co-educational dormitories before taking steps to establish a university dormitory system. The association estimates that 5,000 undergraduates are "socially lost" through lack of social facilities which the co-educational dormitories would overcome.

LAMESA, PAMPA ENTER WTNM; FIRST PLAYERS DUE HERE SOON

Jodie Tate Is Named Head of Dawson Entry

DALLAS, March 17. (AP). — The West Texas-New Mexico Baseball League will operate with eight clubs this year, President Milton E. Price said today.

Pampa and Lamesa were the latest to apply for membership. The season of 140 games will open April 25 with Amarillo at Pampa, Clovis at Lubbock, Abilene at Lamesa and Midland at Big Spring. It will close Sept. 1.

Price, who has offices here, also is secretary of the Texas League.

"We're all ready to get to work now on the schedule," said Price. "All entries appear to be sound now and, with much more population from which to draw, I believe we'll have a big year."

"We have adopted sensible eligibility rules. Each club is limited to fourteen men, six of whom must be beginners without previous professional experience. No club may carry more than three class men, players who have had more than three years in pro baseball. Our player and salary limits are within reason and we have much more population than is required for D classification. Operating on an economical basis, we should make the grade without difficulty."

Prospective manager are: Amarillo, Neal Rabe; Pampa, Grover Seitz; Clovis, Dick Ratliff; Lubbock, Hack Miller; Lamesa, Joe Tate; Midland, Jimmy Kerr; Big Spring, Tony Rego, and Abilene, Fincher Withers.

Persecutions Should Be Added Incentive to Christian Living

Editor's Note: The following discussion of this week's Sunday school lesson is printed here through courtesy of J. Fred Cooke, teacher of the Business Men's class of the Methodist church.

Those of the right way will be blessed, will love life and see good days; their suffering by God; what these endure, God will take notice of; and no permanent harm will come to those of this way, because the accompaniment of the way is Christ, and the end of the way is God.

1. Those of the good way are blessed, not necessarily with riches, but with the favor of God. For, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold." Those of this good way have those things which money can not buy; for they, "the meek, shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace." Then, if they are persecuted, even unto death, as were some at that time, they will have peace, as the trials rage around upon them. And when the time of departure arrives, there will be an exit, not ajar, but wide open from the trials to the perpetual home. But often, their persecutions are less, and their social standing is better than if they had never professed. Those in Mexico, who took upon themselves belief in Christianity, were considered of low standing socially. But they were soon recognized as the leaders in their several communities. Those of India have their four social castes. These are the high and low, middle and out-casts. Christianity appealed only to the out-cast. But when these embraced the Christian religion, they were soon recognized as the leading people of that country. Like a graduating class of Princeton University. Men like Woodrow Wilson and Cyrus McCormick were in the class. Yet they chose, as their hero, for president, Woodruff Halsey. He was no student like some of their number. He was not rich; for he was working his way through school. He made no display of brilliancy. But Dr. Robert E. Spear said, that "time after time he had seen him pierce his way right through to the central moral issue of confused problems. There was a light within him, and that light was Christ." And that light enabled him to have a social standing, that was second to none in Princeton University.

2. If one loves life and sees good days, he must have a song in his heart which is not engendered of this world. The man of this sort is enriched with a melody from the other side. He has his conversation with men of earth, but his heart is in heaven. He dwells not long under the deep shadows. He forgets the trials and persecutions because of the joy which is set before him. He may think of the cross which he bears as being heavy; but it never outweighs God's grace. And it keeps him singing all the time. He has no continuing city, but he seeks one to come. The mountain of difficulty has been made low; and instead, the incline plain is before him, and with a Divine urge he pushes from the terrestrial toward the celestial. Before he touches the banks of that heavenly shore he is dwelling in Beulah Land. He is like Paul when he said: "I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content." He thinks much of this life because it is the vestibule of a life which he will enter into if he fixes up the scars in life's character here. He is careful of the thoughts which enter his mind here, because he does not want them to mar his thoughts of God. He wants to see good days, like the man who said, "I don't want to go to war because my mind may be enamored with those revengeful designs and purposes of the battlefield." Then he might die and bury all his hopes for doing good. The writer heard a young man say: "That he didn't want to lose his life in France and stop his hope to enter the ministry when the war was over." Robert E. Spear said in sense, that a man has no right to hammer his energy and his life away, when he could use it to bless the world, in obeying the call to the ministry. Nor has he the right to give his energies to the practice of law, when he has felt the Divine urge to go to the ministerial path of duty with his logic, oratory, and personality. Like the congressman, congratulated on his distinguished career. The law maker statesman replied: "Oh! there is not much to it in comparison with preaching the gospel."

3. In his depressing moments—the Christian does not think of God's sees and understands his good endeavors. But he sees the motive back of all our deeds. Like Bryan Untidit when more than twenty school children were caught in a blizzard. This boy, only fourteen, was busy all night trying to comfort the other boys and girls on the bus. He sacrificed, along with other things, even his own coat for their care. It never entered the youth's mind, that, even the president, would do him honor for the noble deed, by inviting him to partake of the hospitality of the White House. Such unselfish daring went to the heart of the president. So will every good thing you do wing its way to the heart of God. There is nothing hid which shall not be revealed, nor secret which shall not be known. "For the eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous and his ears are open upon their cry." For even the hairs of your head are numbered. And the Heavenly Father notes the sparrow's fall. But said Jesus, "How much better are you than many sparrows?"

4. The Christian suffers by devices of the wicked. This should be an incentive for the Christian to continue his work and suffering. All good people are in favor with the principles of Christianity. That should be enough to keep us unwavering in the faith of our profession. Most thoughtful people are with the Christians; even if they do not agree with them upon all points. Godliness in those of the way is an appeal to the thinking folk. The infidel was not in accord with the argument of the minister. But when a vulgar young man said to an old lady to "get out of my way," and with a push enforced his words, and, when she said "young man, I'm praying for you," it caused the infidel to say, "Surely there is something in Christianity." For he appreciated interest and forgiveness in the race of enmity; which is Godliness. A sentry came in from duty on the Island of Malta. Although worn out by the watch, he knelt at the side of his cot to pray, in spite of the ribald jokes, at his expense, hurled at him from every side. A big soldier in the next cot hit him in the head with a muddy boot and then again with a second boot. The man prayed on. The next morning at the side of his cot the big bully found the boots nicely cleaned and polished. When he learned that it had been done by the man that he had been insulted, it was too much for him. Said he; "I broke my wicked heart, and I was saved the next day." Then,

Hagen Regains Mastery of Touch, to Try Comeback

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

MIAMI, Fla.—After Horton Smith and Henry Picard sink 15 and 12-foot putts for birdie 3's, Walter Hagen said he hadn't knocked in a putt like those since 1914, yet The Haig with no preparation was the star of the first round of the International Four-Ball matches at the Miami Biltmore Country Club.

It was not the immortal Hagen's fault that he and Gene Sarazen were eliminated. Sarazen was of little help.

Hagen had a 68 in the morning and needed a four for 69 in the afternoon. The way he hit his shots amazed Sarazen and the day's biggest gallery. And so pleased the 47-year-old Hagen that he has announced his return to competition.

Hagen ankled into the true test of golf in typical Hagen fashion after a shave and a few practice swings.

He had played only a half dozen rounds since taking part in the $12,500 Westchester Open last September.

It was only a few months ago, while on a world tour with Joe Kirkwood, that he was delirious from malaria in India.

LONG VICTORY STRING GOES BACK TO 1914

Hagen has won 55 major tournaments . . . dating back to his first United States Open at Chicago's Midlothian in 1914 . . . and perhaps carelessly tossed away nearly as many more.

Richard Arlen, the movie actor, tells of Hagen needing a three or a short hole to tie the young Harold McSpaden in the Sacramento Open of 1934. Jug McSpaden, just married, was seeking his first important tournament victory.

"See that trap out there," remarked The Haig, as his tee shot found it. "This will be a fine wedding gift for that kid."

Hagen made his last great stand in a United States Open over treacherous Oakmont in 1935, when he was forced to play his entire last round in a storm and finished three strokes back of Sam Parks.

HAGEN PUTS SELF ON BUSY LIST

Anyway, it is pleasing to know that the great Hagen will appear in the North and South Open at Pinehurst, March 21-23; the Greensboro Open, March 24-26; the Masters' Tournament at Augusta March 30, 31-April 1, 2; P. G. A. and United States Open.

Golf has suffered for lack of color since The Haig and Robert Tyre Jones let down.

William Lawson Little, Jr., insists that he'd do it all over were he again a celebrated amateur turn professional. He calls the money players as fine a group as he ever met and the only real simon-pures.

Little asserts that in the spring of 1936, after he had become the first player in history to bag both the British and American amateurs in successive years, he was offered $6000 a year and all expenses by a concern handling two entirely different kinds of products and shown a way in which he could remain an amateur.

"I was to play with certain of this firm's products and sell others," explains the young man who accomplished the unprecedented feat of winning 39 consecutive matches in major competition.

PROS SAY LITTLE WILL HIT TOP

But Little didn't like masquerading, decided to go all the way, and signed for the tour he made with Horton Smith and Jimmy Thomson. They were later joined by Harry Cooper.

Walter Hagen

The professionals like Little and his power game . . . believe he'll be in the select circle in another year.

Other shotmakers making rapid progress are Ben Hogan, a 134-pound Texan who swats the ball from course to course, and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock and Chandler Harper of Norfolk, who, as Henry Picard will tell you, certainly can massage a putt.

But all have a long way to go when you realize that Ralph Guldahl and Samuel Jackson Sneed established a new tournament record in using exactly 28 strokes, seven under par, for their best-ball in smothering Horton Smith and Paul Runyan on the outgoing nine of the afternoon round of the final International Four-Ball match at the Miami Biltmore Country Club.

These fellows today make true championship tests look like miniature golf courses.

Kerr, Rookies Are Due Here Wednesday

Directors of the Midland Baseball club today announced Manager Jimmy Kerr and the first contingent of players would arrive here next Wednesday.

Kerr has signed several youngsters out of the White Sox baseball school that is now going on in Longview and asked permission to bring the boys out here prior to the scheduled date to start spring training.

April 3, Kerr declared most of the boys he had signed come from northern and eastern states and that it would be more economical to pay expenses of the boys from now until the end of the month than to have to pay traveling expenses of them from their homes. Also, it will be possible for Kerr to see that the boys remain in physical condition.

Although Kerr did not give the names of the players or state their positions, he declared in a telephone conversation with club president Bill Collins that he had some very likely prospects under contract. He is expected to bring about 10 or 12 boys along.

Meanwhile, work is being pushed on the playing field in order to have it ready by the time of arrival of the players. Dirt is being hauled and placed on the diamond and it will be watered and rolled today and tomorrow.

Officials have announced a business manager of the club would be named early next week and that he would start work immediately. Selling advertising on the park fences and looking an exhibition will be the first duties. Expenses of keeping the players here until the season opens April 25 will have to be borne by the club and several exhibitions with semi-pro and other clubs of this area will be played in order to help pay expenses.

Uniforms for the players were ordered today by club officials. The uniforms will be the usual cream color, with Navy blue button strip on the shirt trimmed with Cardinal military braid, Navy blue tunnel belt loops, Navy pocket flaps, Cardinal braid on belt loops and down the sides of the pants. Double digit numerals with the lettering "Midland" in fancy style; caps of Navy blue with red buttons.

A "cast" coin is made by pouring molten metal between two molds; a "struck" coin is stamped out of a blank of gold, silver, nickel or copper bronze.

Analyzing Stories of Hitler's Doubles

By NEA Service.

IS Adolf Hitler dead? Are the mistachened individuals you see in the pictures, speaking from platforms, patting little Bavarian girls on the head, and opening movie shows, just a couple of other fellows?

Rumors of Hitler's "death" have been circulated in the United States for months, and even reached print as long ago as last December. Thus far, no real evidence has been produced to prove it.

Now a sensational new book, "The Strange Death of Adolf Hitler," which purports to be written by Hitler's chief "double," maintains that the Fuehrer died on the eve of Munich, and that thereafter he, one Maximilian Bauer, impersonated Hitler on every public occasion, including the negotiations with Chamberlain at Munich.

FAR FROM PROVED.

INDINANT denials have come from German sources, and no one could regard the case as stated in the book to be proved.

The manuscript is said to have been brought to America by a German ship's officer, to whom it was surreptitiously handed at Nice by a French friend who had received it in the mail from Germany. The manuscript, purporting to be written by Hitler's double, stated that he wished his true name to appear on his tomb and that therefore he was taking this means to "tell all," disgusted at last with a regime with which he originally sympathized.

The English translation, is filled with sentences in characteristic German word order, which could result only from either carelessly literal translation or a conscious effort to emphasize the Germanic character of the manuscript.

It tells the lurid story of Bauer, arrested in 1933 in Berlin when mistaken for Hitler, saved from death by Hitler's sudden seizure of power, and then catapulted into a position as "double" for Hitler on public occasions, including speeches. Since Hitler's "death," Bauer has been Hitler, he maintains, the "front" for a ruling clique which refuses to admit the death of its Fuehrer.

So much for the book, which, though it is creating a sensation in literary circles, has practically no direct evidence of authenticity.

HOW HITLER DOUBLE WAS ASSASSINATED.

THE only instance in which a Hitler "double" was connected with a news event in which the Fuehrer himself figured, came in the summer of 1938 when Julius Schreck, a storm trooper brigade leader, was shot by an assassin.

Hitler, with a party of Nazi officials, was motoring from Berlin to Bernau. Hitler was driving the car. Schreck, who resembled Hitler, particularly in the cut of his mustache, was riding in the back seat. An assassin, hiding at the side of the road, apparently thinking that the Fuehrer would never drive his own car, fired a single shot into the body of Schreck. Hitler had lost a double, but his own life had been saved.

For a long time, pictures of Hitler "doubles" have cropped up often enough to lend credence to rumors that the German "Fuehrer" seen in public is not the man himself, but a "double." Top left is a man photographed at a Vienna zoo. At right, another who appeared in Nice, France, both causing sensations, though unidentified. Below is Julius Schreck, Hitler's personal chauffeur, killed by a bullet meant for the Fuehrer, and whose resemblance is believed to have cost him his life.

"doubles" of Hitler made in Europe and in fact in other parts of the world, have been frequently published.

Two such pictures are printed with this story. The one in the striped suit is that of a "mystery man" who appeared at Nice in 1935 with two bodyguards and created a commotion by strolling through that resort. The other "double" was photographed at the zoo in Vienna in 1936. The name of neither man was ever discovered.

WOMAN INTEREST.

MUCH has been made of recent interest by Hitler in several American dancers and in light opera as scarcely in key with his known character as one who was notoriously indifferent to the charms of women, and a lover of the heaviest Wagnerian music.

Explanation is offered that the "double" who has taken Hitler's place, despite his physical resemblance, is quite different in temperament, and fond of women and light music. A far simpler explanation would be that it has been decided to "humanize" Hitler a little, and that his sudden liking for American girls has elements of what is known in the fight game as "the old build-up."
