Completion Of Tolk Unit One Year Away

- Boiler Test In August -

Completion of the first unit of the Southwestern Public Service Company Tolk Station 10 miles east of Muleshoe is nearly one year away from operation according to Ben Green, plant manager.

"We will hit a milestone soon when we make a hydrostatic test of the boiler," said Green adding "we will fill the boiler which will be brought to a pressure of one and one half times the normal working of the boiler."

This test predicted for August, will prove the structural integrity of the boiler. The parts and pieces of the boiler which transcends 239 feet are presently in the welding stage.

Green explains the boiler's function in simple terms: "It evaporates water into steam like a tea kettle," he said. This high pressure is created by the burning of coal fuel to heat the water.

"The steam from the boiler is piped into a steam turbine which works similar to a windmill," explains Green. At the speed the main steam travels through the pipes, it could finish the Boston Marathon (26 miles) in about 12 minutes. "This turbine produces the power to run the generator which produces the electrical power energy we are after."

Each part of the plant must be completed before the test is done. Construction is continuing on the auxiliary buildings which help support the system. These include the cooling tower and the baghouse.

In the cooling tower, impure water, running through tubes, cools the steam from the boiler and condenses the steam back into purified water. This steam is piped back into the boiler and used again. The baghouse (fabric filter) filters out matter in the gases coming from the plant, and collects dust so there is no ash in the atmosphere.

Plant operation may sound simple when compared to a tea kettle and windmill but a behind-the-scenes look is overwhelming.

The tour begins in the office building which is now complete. Located on the second floor of this building is the control room which will eventually service both Unit 1 and Unit 2. Unit 2 has a projected completion date of June 1985. In this large control room "operation of the plant will be monitored 24 hours a day, every day of the year," according to Green.

Two rooms on each side of the control room will house the computers which will control and monitor temperatures, mechanisms safety and many other operations which must be precise.

Locked Door Smashed By Handcuffed Prisoner

Friday night, officers arrested one male for public intoxication. In the course of arrest, the prisoner attempted to get away from the officers, and, when presented with opposition, kicked in the glass door of the Law Enforcement Center. Officer Julian Dominguez suffered some cracked ribs in the ensuing melee. The prisoner, originally arrested for public intoxication, now faces a charge of aggravated assault.

Also, arrested in the same incident was a female. She has been charged with resisting arrest. Another male in the incident was charged with DWI. These have made bond.

Late Saturday night, a possible kidnapping was reported in southern Bailey County. Upon investigation officers discovered that the report was a misunderstanding in a domestic quarrel. In other activities, a radiator was reported stolen on north Highway 214 and at Progress, a reported theft involved the loss of a CB radio, antenna and tools from a combine.

The Sheriff's office has been successful in positive identification of the two males arrested last week in connection with the car theft and burglary. Both suspects remain in custody at this time.

Muleshoe Police Department has several incidents under investigation at this time: the theft of a bicycle from the City Swimming Pool, the theft of batteries from a location within the city and a report of criminal mischief resulting in broken windows at Thornton Chevrolet on June 15.

Two were arrested for public intoxication June 14. One has made bond and the other was turned over to the Border Patrol.

Gasohol Tax Bill May Be Included In July Session

The gasohol tax exemption bill may still have a chance to receive action in the July 15 legislative special session.

Gov. Bill Clements called for the 30 day special session last week and announced the session will include: the repeal of the state property tax, creation of a Texas water trust fund, congressional redistricting, revisions of the state property tax code adopted two years ago, and renewal of the medical practices act.

Although Clements announced in his statement that the session would be limited to these five, the gasohol bill may still be included, according to Guy Austin, chairman of the High Plains Grains Products Cooperative of Muleshoe.

Austin spoke with the governor's office last week and the governor indicated that the five announced bills would be considered first, but he still had hope the gasohol bill would be included.

"I spoke with Rep. Bill Clayton who urged us to continue writing letters and let them know we are still here....and gasohol is vital to this area," said Austin.

The Muleshoe cooperative launched a letter campaign recently to get the bill into the special session. Letters urging the inclusion of this bill should be addressed to Jim Kaster c/o Governor's Office, State Capital, Austin, Tex. Cont. Page 6, Col. 1

Muleshoe Ex-Students Planning Gala Reunion

The Muleshoe High Ex-Student Association is planning a gala reunion for ALL ex-students of Muleshoe High School. The classes of 1940 through 1949 will be honored, according to James Glaze, chairman of the Ex-student Association.

The day will be kicked off with a dutch treat buffet breakfast at 10 a.m. at the Corral Restaurant. Registration, business meeting, and a mixer will begin at 7 p.m. at the Bailey County Civic Center on the night of the Fourth.

From 8:30 until 11:30 p.m. a dance will be held for all ex-students. The reunion committee stresses the invitation is for all ex-students, whether or not they graduated from Muleshoe or regardless of the year.

In an effort to reach those that contact has not yet been made with, the committee asks that anyone knowing the whereabouts or having an address for any ex-student contact James Glaze or Billie Bavless.

During the "Mixer" hour, each individual class of the 40's will have a separate space allotted for class meetings. Former class officers and other individuals will man these booths.

In order to keep things going, each ex-student will be asked to check in with their respective class.

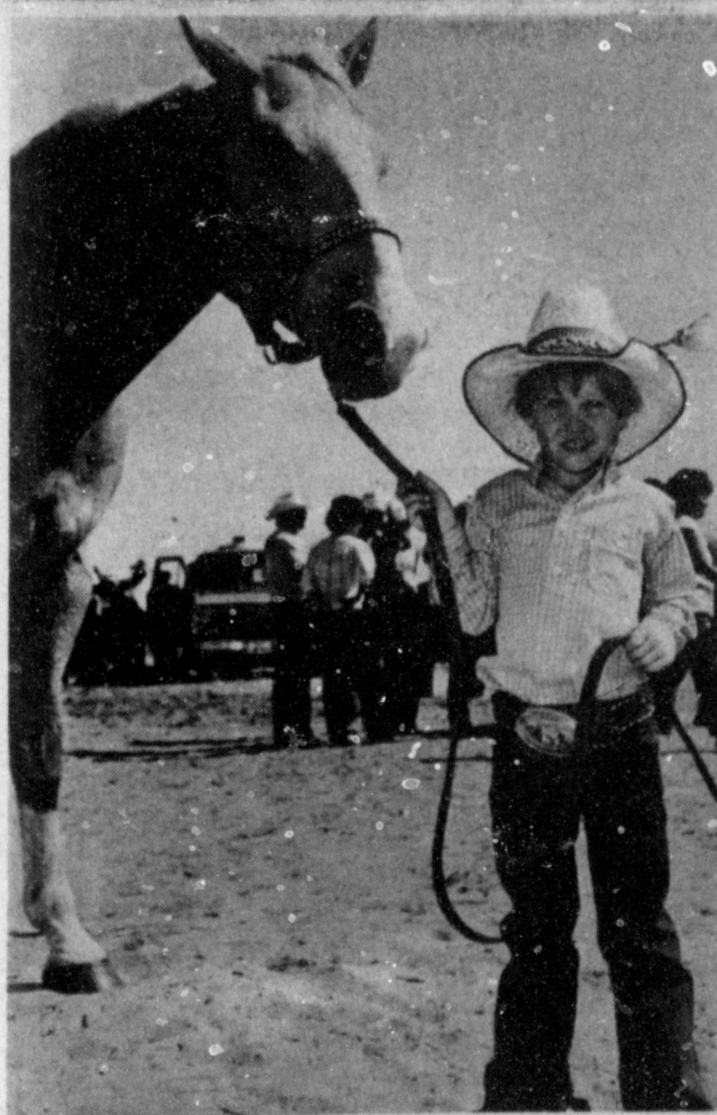

Those class members working on this reunion are Mattie Hicks, Billie Joan Smith, Mary Moore, Betty Cowan, Maureen Hooten, Laura Seales, Irvin St. Clair, Barbara Blackman, Jack Young, Analita Haley and Fern Warren, Billie Bayless and James Glaze.

LITTLE BOY-BIG HORSE.....This young Lamb County contestant was one of many 4-H'ers who flocked to Muleshoe for the Progress 4-H Horse Show last Saturday.

Chamber Urges July 4 Participation

The annual July Fourth Celebration is rapidly drawing near, and clubs and organizations are encouraged to be making their plans to participate in this year's events.

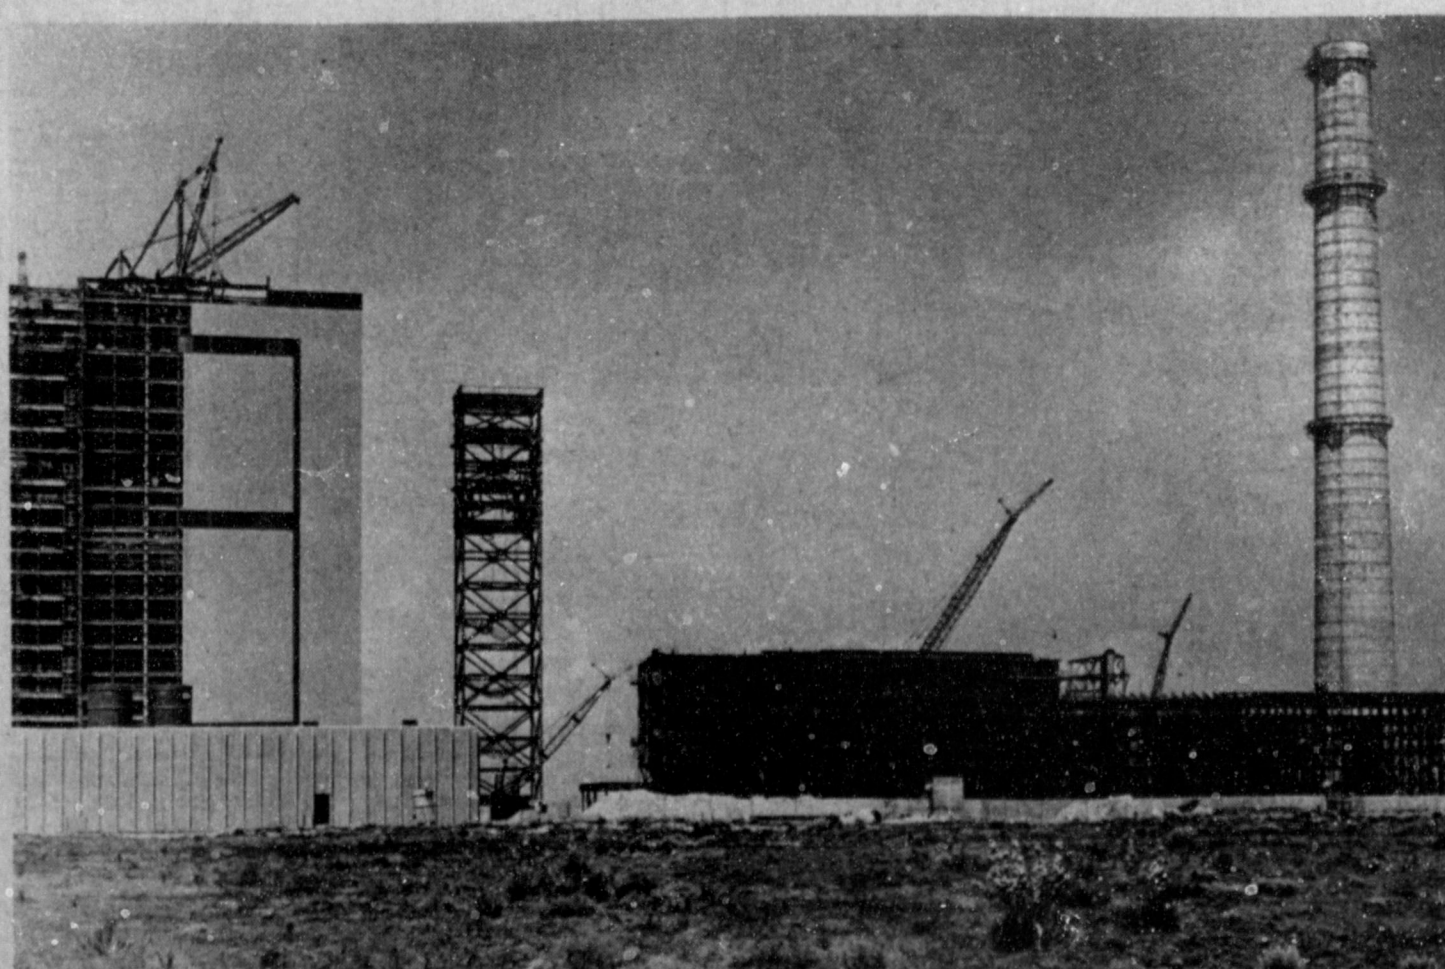

The Freedom Parade through downtown Muleshoe at this point only has two entries. While deadline for entry is not until June 26, organizations are being asked to turn in their entry forms as soon as possible, so that the parade order can be finalized as soon as possible.

At this point, there are also only two groups which have signed up for booths at the Civic Center.

According to Chamber Manager John Gulley, "These are two money making activities which clubs are invited to participate in. The first place float in the parade will be awarded a $100 cash prize, and the second place float a $50 prize. Of course, there is also the opportunity for clubs to make money from the Civic Center booths."

Any group interested in either activity should contact the Chamber at 272-4248, or come by the office in City Hall at 215 South First.

MIRAGE IN THE LONE PRAIRIE?.....No, this is not a mirage on the southside of the Earth Highway, it is the Southwestern Public Service Company's Tolk Station Unit #1 which is nearly one year away from completion.

Leukemia Under Control

A type of blood cancer, occurring in older persons - chronic lymphatic leukemia - now is under long term control with POACH, a combination drug treatment being given at the MD Anderson University of Texas Cancer Center.

Dr. Samuel G. Murphy, Associate Professor of Medicine, and his colleagues are developing new approaches to treatment that have more than doubled the life expectancy of patients with chronic lymphatic leukemia. His research is supported by an American Cancer Society grant.

This leukemia, striking at older person, is a milder version of the acute lymphatic disease which, until recently, was uniformly fatal in children.

Median survival time for adults with the chronic type of leukemia has been increased from 19 months to about four years. Some patients, however, have been free of symptoms as long as eight years.

The treatment is a combination of five drugs, including hormones, antibiotics and cell poisons which, by themselves, are effective against some other forms of cancer.

The researchers have also developed a laboratory test that shows that certain blood cells are different in the leukemia patients and, perhaps, in their close relatives.

The test, autologous mixed lymphocyte reaction (AMLR), creates a different response in leukemia patients compared with other persons without the disease. The difference was found, despite treatment, and was noted prior, during and after drug treatment was given and remission occurred.

Now families of patients are being tested, especially some families who have more than one member with leukemia. It will be several months before significant results can be analyzed.

New clues have been found as to how this type of leukemia may occur. A series of stages comprises the development of the lymphocyte cell. At one of these stages, like a broken link, a change occurs creating a defect. At this point the cell becomes leukemic.

Pinpointing these events could produce new targets for attacking the disease with specific chemicals to halt its progress and provide a new way of controlling this kind of blood cancer.

The nation's industries raised output in April.

Plan Now For Quail Habitat Improvement

Landowners interested in seeing more bobwhite quail on their property can take steps now to improve quail habitat.

Carl Frentress, a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologist from Athens said many techniques for habitat improvement are relatively easy and inexpensive.

"Quail prefer areas where at least part of the acreage experiences soil disturbance each year," Frentress said. "This is one reason quail often do well in cropland areas. Unfortunately, much of the farmland in East Texas and elsewhere is being converted to pastures which don't support quail as well."

"But even where livestock grazing is the primary land use, there are many improvements which can be done in the spring and summer to help sustain quail populations the year around," Frentress continued.

"Keeping fertilizer away from fence rows, thickets, brushpiles and the edges of the woods will reduce competition with quail food plants such as goatweed, partridge pea, vetch and the like," he said. "Discing strips around the edges of fields or open woods will encourage such plants to grow. Patches of moderately dense bunchgrasses at least one-tenth acre in size should be retained for nesting cover, he added."

"Quail also require escape cover in the form of woody vegetation. Woody plants such as wild plum can be dug from one location and transplanted, as can low-growing grapevines, rattan or blackberry," said Frentress. He said this is done best during the winter when the plants are dormant.

"For maximum utilization of food plots there should be woody cover within 100 yards," he said.

Frentress said more intensive quail management can be accomplished by using domesticated varieties of seed-producing plants. These include OK game bird pea, wild game feed milo, Japanese millet, browntop millet, sesbania, kobe lespedeza and bahia grass. Discing of the seedbed is recommended for all these.

Green forage plants also are important for quail and other wildlife species as well, Frentress continued. "While quail utilize many native winter greens, this type of forage can be supplemented with plots of Yuchi arrowleaf clover. This plant is a valuable addition to spring pastures and is an excellent soil builder."

Landowners should consult local agricultural specialists for details prior to planting. Local Parks and Wildlife Department biologists can assist by assessing the habitat and recommending procedures for improvement.

Hance Promotes Anti-Busing Bill

US Representative Kent Hance said the House approval of an anti-busing amendment "is a step in the right direction, but stronger action is needed still."

The House approved anti-busing language on the Justice Department authorization bill that forbids the department from bringing "any sort of action to require directly or indirectly" the busing of students to any school but the one closest to their home, except when special education is needed. This would virtually take the government out of desegregation business, since Congress has already stopped the Justice Department practice of cutting off federal funds to schools in order to force them to implement busing.

"The effect of the language we approved would be to prevent the Justice Department from filing or intervening in court suits which seek to desegregate school systems by busing students beyond the neighborhood school," said Hance. "School districts presently under court order will not immediately change, but the Justice Department cannot now reinstitute most of those same suits which have a time expiration date. We should begin to see relief over the next two to three years at most of the affected school districts."

Although the Justice Department could not intervene in legal battles, the bill would not prevent federal court from ruling on busing suits brought by individuals.

"The House and Senate

Poultry Good Food Buy

US consumers often complain about rising inflation and high food prices but poultry prices are lower than those in most countries.

"Even with grocery prices soaring, food takes a smaller bite out of pocket-books in the US than any other country," emphasizes Dr. Dave Mellor, poultry marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Mellor says that the US Department of Agriculture regularly reports prices of selected foods from 17 world capitals.

USDA also reports the working time of the average production worker needed to earn each of these products in various countries.

"For example, broilers were $1.74 per kilo (about 2.2 pounds) in Washington, D.C. at the time of the last survey," Mellor notes. "This compares to only $1.44 per kilo in Madrid. But it took only 13 minutes to work to earn a kilo of broilers in Washington compared to 35 minutes in Madrid."

At the time of survey, eggs were $1 a dozen in Washington, D.C., $1.36 in Buenos Aires.

"It took eight minutes to earn enough money for a dozen eggs in Washington but 46 minutes in Buenos Aires," Mellor states.

Unless salaries keep up with the current round of price increases, Mellor says food will cost even more.

"American consumers are expected to face at least 10 percent higher food bills this year because of drought-damaged harvests last year and increasing export demands," points out the specialist.

In early 1980, poultry prices were low because of large supplies. These low prices combined with mid-summer signs of rising feed costs led poultry producers to begin cutting back on their flocks. These cuts now mean higher poultry prices, but not as high as they are in other countries, Mellor explains.

The specialist reports that recent figures from the United Nations indicate that US residents use 13.6 percent of their personal spending money on food.

This compares with 34 percent in the Soviet Union and 59.3 percent in India.

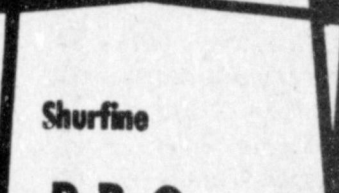

Fire ants' march continues westward

Already the insects, which produce a violent sting and attack in massive numbers when disturbed, have pushed as far west as Corpus Christi, San Antonio and Dallas, Texas, leaving behind thousands of new colonies.

Color Your Wardrobe

Color your wardrobe "you" by knowing the special meanings of colors, says Ann Vanderpoorten, a clothing specialist.

Ms. Vanderpoorten is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Color is important in fashion -- and in other aspects of life, she says.

"Colors cause physical and psychological reactions in people. In fact, clothing colors send emotional 'messages' about the wearer," the specialist says.

Light colors are generally seen as more cheerful, active and feminine than dark colors.

Dark colors, on the other hand, are viewed as sophisticated, reserved and "business-like."

True colors are more exciting and cheerful than subdued or grayed colors. Warm colors, such as red, orange and yellow, are lively.

Cool colors -- such as blues and greens, and neutral colors are restful and soothing. Cool colors have a receding effect, while neutrals may appear reserved of aloof.

Colors also affect apparent size and shape -- dark colors are slimming, while light or bright colors make the figure appear larger, Ms. Vanderpoorten

Addressing the fiscal implications of failure of passage of the bill, Tommy Harbert, chairman of North West Texas Grain Products Cooperative of Dumas, said "The state has been denied a new industry which would have been launched with more than $200 million worth of construction this calendar year and which could be expected to produce three-quarters of a billion dollars of new tax base in the next three years."

Harbert also attacked the $160 million fiscal note attached to the bill, saying that, while the state might have uncollected revenues as a result of a partial tax exemption for gasohol, "the tax gain to Texas over the ten-year life of the bill resulting from property and sales taxes would far offset any losses in revenue, and would continue for many years."

"In addition, a viable gasohol industry in Texas would create from 1000 to 3000 new jobs," he said.

Guy Austin, chairman of High Plains Grain Products Cooperative of Muleshoe, bemoaned failure of passage of the bill. "I can't believe this happened in Texas, of all places," he said. "Right here, the energy leader of America, a leader in production of agricultural products with a large motor fuel market is ideally suited for a gasohol industry. Not to have passed this bill is unthinkable."

"For these men, for reasons best known to themselves, to have killed the bill -- after overwhelming approval by committee after committee, by the House and tentatively approved by the Senate -- is totally unfair and unjust," Austin said. "They should have to explain their reasons to every consumer every time someone fills up a tank of gasoline."

"We fought -- and won -- every battle, but lost the war due to parliamentary trickery," Austin said.

Johnson said the groups supporting gasohol in Texas have not given up hope for passage of the gasohol exemption legislation. Without such an exemption Johnson said, there is not sufficient economic incentive to permit building expensive alcohol distillation plants in Texas.

Johnson also pointed out that 29 other states have already passed legislation permitting such exemptions and warned that gasohol supporters in Texas are already exploring building such plants in neighboring states where exemptions for the fuel already exist.

Alcohol and rats

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — Using rats in studies of alcoholism can be vexing: most animals dislike the taste of alcohol.

But, researchers in The University of Texas College of Pharmacy have devised a simple way of overcoming that problem. The method involves surgically implanting a tube under the skin of an animal for up to 30 days and refilling the tube daily. Amounts of alcohol released can be controlled by the size of the tube.

Because the method allows blood alcohol levels to be sustained over a period of days, scientists are better able to study the mechanisms that lead to physical dependence on alcohol.

"This will be one of the nicest plants around," said Green. Excluding the nuclear plants, Green places this plant in the forefront of any plant using fossil fuels.

While walking through the mechanical operations of the plant, Green explains that parts for the plant come from across the country and across the ocean: "The turbine came from Philadelphia, Penn.... the generator from Pittsburgh.... the boiler from Connecticut.... fabrication from Tennessee.... and parts of the condenser are German made."

Green explains that the plant strives to be self-sufficient providing all of its own maintenance.

The plant currently provides jobs for over 750 including skilled professionals. Green has selected approximately 40 of a total of 105 employees to operate the plant upon completion. "We have selected virtually all of the plant supervisory staff," he added.

According to an information sheet provided by SPS at average power output, both units combined burn approximately 10,600 tons of coal a day. This fuel is primarily Western coal from Wyoming. Each unit will use approximately 315 tons of coal an hour.

Each unit can produce enough electric power to supply a city of 225,000 people. Delivery of 1000 kilowatt hours of electrical energy (about one month's use for many homes) to a customer, requires burning 1365 pounds of coal at Tolk Station.

It takes a wise man to be satisfied with what he deserves.

TABS Results Indicate High Competency Level

New TABS scores released by the Muleshoe ISD indicated more than 50 percent of all third graders had mastered 17 of 23 skills in math, reading, and writing, and 70 percent showed competency in at least 13 of the tested skills.

At the 5th grade level half of all students mastered 26 of 29 academic skills and 70 percent were competent in 16 of the areas measured by the test.

At the 9th grade level 50 percent mastered 26 of 28 skills and 70 percent were competent in 14 of the areas tested.

The TABS test, a minimum competency test was given to about 750,000 Texas public school students in February. Administered to 3rd, 5th and 9th graders TABS measures a student's competency in basic skill areas in math, reading and writing.

Third grade math results showed 5 percent demonstrated mastery in 8 of the 10 skills; 70 percent mastered 4 of the 10 skills, and 80 percent could read and write whole numbers. On the reading section, 80 percent mastered 4 of the 8 skills, and 90 percent mastered following written directions and recognizing words through phonic analysis. In the writing section 80 percent mastered 3 of the 5 skills tested.

In the fifth grade math 50 percent mastered 9 of the twelve objectives, 70 percent mastered 7 of the objectives, and 80 percent mastered 5 of the skills. In the reading section 60 percent mastered 8 of the 11 skills and in the writing section 60 percent mastered 5 of the 6 skills tested.

In the 9th grade 72 percent mastered the total math skills; 61 percent showed mastery in reading and 70 percent mastered 4 of the 6 writing skills.

Superintendent Harold Horne concluded that the TABS results show the areas for concentration of basic instruction during the 1981-82 school year and will be one of the priorities for the Muleshoe Independent School District.

World's largest telescope planned

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — The University of Texas hopes to build the world's largest ground-based, single-mirror telescope.

UT will seek outside funding for the $45-million project, which calls for a 300-inch telescope to be located atop Mount Fowles in the Davis Mountains, near UT's existing McDonald Observatory on Mount Locke.

The proposed 300-inch primary mirror will embody a revolutionary design, resulting in a thickness of only four or five inches compared with a thickness of four or five feet if designed according to "classical" telescope methods.

The Tax Cut

There's growing sentiment in Congress in favor of a cut in the tax on capital gains. Among many who oppose President Reagan's three-year ten percent income tax cut, and some who favor it, the potential business stimulus of a capital gains tax cut is widely appreciated.

One comparative study which has commanded attention is that by Data Resources, Inc., commissioned by the Securities Industry Association. This study shows the Reagan tax cut program would increase the Gross National Product 65 cents for every dollar lost to the Treasury in taxes in 1982.

But a capital gains tax exclusion increase from 50 to 75 percent would increase the GNP in 1982 $14.13 for each tax dollar lost—or about twenty times the increase stemming from a tax cut.

Another proposal getting attention is that to reduce the maximum tax on investment income from 70 to 50 percent. This would reportedly yield a $4.51 GNP increase for each tax dollar lost in 1982.

Thus it may be that the tax bill which finally passes Congress will include tax relief designed to stimulate business to a greater degree—through one of these or similar approaches. And the biggest, quickest stimulus potential lies in a reduction of capital gains taxes.

What makes alternative proposals, which could be supplemental reductions combined with slightly lesser income tax reductions, attractive is that they wouldn't be inflationary; some experts feel that the estimated $42.7 billion which a ten percent tax cut would place quickly in the hands of consumers would add to today's inflationary problem.

Fighting Crime

Congressman Charles Bennett (D-Fla.), Congressman Skip Bafalis (R-Fla.) and other legislators have introduced a bill in the House called the Organized Crime Act of 1981. It's designed to apply all resources of the federal government to the war on organized crime and violence.

The new law would allow the federal government jurisdiction in "murder for hire" cases involving killings, though to a limited degree. It would provide for better protection of government personnel involved in investigations, etc.

It would make it a federal crime to threaten or harm the families of federal law enforcement officials and provide better protection for witnesses and informants, plus those under subpoena to testify.

The proposed law would provide better protection of the identity of informants. It would enable the federal government to apply to the courts for reduced sentences, in return for helpful information and cooperation from a defendant.

It would allow federal judges to increase the penalty imposed when a federal crime is committed through the use of violence. It would allow judges to seal portions of wiretap evidence, which reveal ongoing criminal investigations.

It would allow federal judges more discretion in setting bail, so the danger to society, upon release of the accused, is taken into full consideration. And it would allow for closer cooperation with state and local law enforcement officials collaborating in investigations of a federal offense.

The Speaker Reports

by Bill Clayton

AUSTIN—There were many important pieces of legislation that were passed during the 67th Legislature's just-completed session that will have a profound effect on the people of Texas, and they never received more than a mention in the media.

On the other hand, there were several bills, some having great impact and others touching only specific groups, which received headline position in the media.

Almost every Texan got at least a partial education concerning the redistricting process we go through every ten years. This session, House and Senate bills were passed which redistricted our 14.2 million citizens. We also passed a $26.5 billion appropriations bill that divides up the state's treasury for the next two years to our schools, more than 200 service agencies, and for the maintenance and preservation of our state government.

We passed legislation that will let a Leon County farmer have clear title to his farm, which was faulty because of paperwork 50 years ago.

Pharmacists will now be able to substitute generic drugs for brand name drugs to save consumers money. We determined a way to regulate nuclear waste handling, storage, and disposal in the state and created a Texas nuclear waste authority.

Texans who have not reached the age of 19 will no longer be able to purchase alcoholic beverages because of legislation which changed the age from 18.

A package of drug bills, termed the Texans' War on Drugs program, was passed. They include a ban on the sale and possession of drug paraphernalia and an increase in the penalties for drug trafficking and sale of narcotics to minors.

Voters will have the opportunity to approve in 1982 a plan to tie the state's welfare ceiling to a figure equal to one percent of the state budget.

Interest rates on consumer loans were raised to a maximum ceiling of 24 percent and 28 percent on large commercial loans.

For the first time in Texas history electronics eavesdropping has been approved. The controlled wiretapping legislation is aimed at nabbing suspected drug traffickers.

The legislature also approved a two-year ban on commercial harvesting of redfish and speckled sea trout.

All of these bills were approved, and, as far as media coverage were concerned, were the most talked about bills of the session.

(Over the next several weeks Speaker Clayton will concentrate on legislation that was considered in the 67th regular session.)

'AGENT ORANGE' & VETS

The House unanimously passed a bill recently directing the Veterans Administration to provide hospital care and medical attention to Vietnam veterans whose health problems may be due to the herbicide Agent Orange.

CAPITOL UPDATE

John Tower
U.S. SENATOR for TEXAS
142 RUSSELL OFFICE BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

On June 15, 1961, I took the oath of office for the United States Senate for the first time.

It was truly an awesome moment for a 35-year-old political science professor from Wichita Falls. It also was a dream come true, because I had had a lifelong interest in politics and public service. Then, as now, I could think of no greater privilege than representing the citizens of the greatest state in the nation in the Senate.

This twentieth anniversary of that occasion is a time to reflect on these exciting years, and to thank you for allowing me to serve you.

These years have been momentous ones for our country. We have achieved many things, and suffered from many problems. We put a man on the moon, but allowed our national defense posture to deteriorate. We made great strides in bringing equal opportunity for all Americans closer to reality, but allowed government to intrude unnecessarily in the lives of individuals and business.

We have endured war, assassinations, riots and natural disasters.

Yet as I look at our nation today, I see the American spirit as undaunted as ever. Patriotism has surged in the past year, even as pressures on freedom in the world have increased. In the face of the problems facing our economy, I sense a determination to pull together to endure short-term sacrifice while working for real long-term solutions which will leave us in better shape than ever.

Looking at the Senate as a body, I also sense a new mood there among my colleagues. Senators seem less sure now than they did 15 years ago that government intervention is the way to solve problems. In this Congress, there is more emphasis on the essential responsibilities of government—defense among the foremost—and less on finding new things with which to concern itself.

In fact, there is a growing realization that government has gone too far in injecting itself in the lives of its people. And there is a real possibility of giving back some of the control that has been assumed in recent years.

Over the past 20 years, my own responsibilities have grown, particularly during this Congress as I have taken on the chairmanship of the Senate Armed Services Committee. The responsibility which goes with that job is one I take seriously, for I truly believe the future of our way of life depends on maintaining a strong U.S. defense capability. But my primary purpose for being in Washington is still to represent you, the citizens of Texas.

The past 20 years have been exciting and challenging. But never have I felt greater opportunity, greater responsibility or greater optimism than at this juncture of history.

Together -- we who serve you and you who keep us in touch with your needs -- can seize the moment and go beyond our current problems to a better future.

Life would be much simpler if we didn't try to make people think we're what we're not.

Time is not so scarce. What is rare is the proper and intelligent use of time.

Screwworm Cases Under Close Observation

Two screwworm cases were confirmed in sheep in the Marfa area recently, Dr. John Holcombe, executive director, Texas Animal Health Commission, reports.

"We don't want to be alarmists, but this is a situation that will be to be watched closely, Dr. Holcombe said. The two cases were found in lambs on a ranch between Shafter and Marfa in Presidio County. This makes four confirmed screwworm cases for Texas this year.

"All livestock producers throughout the state need to be mindful that we could have problems again with screwworms. We all need to redouble our efforts to be on the watch for suspected screwworm cases. Producers need to submit suspected samples to the fly lab at Mission," Dr. Holcombe said.

A variety of measures are being taken in the Marfa area to contain any further outbreaks. Sterile screwworm flies from Mexico will be air-dropped in a 25 to 40 mile square area and SWASS pellets will also be dispersed. SWASS pellets contain a specific attractant and insecticide.

No Dear, It's Called Deers

DEERS is not a new word meaning more than one deer. It is a new acronym that has entered the military language. DEERS (the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System) is a computerized system which will check the eligibility of persons seeking health care from all military medical facilities and reimbursement from CHAMPUS (Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services).

Beginning June 17, an intensive three month enrollment period will start at Reese Air Force Base for the South Plains area. Active duty military personnel and retirees entitled to retirement pay are automatically enrolled. However, it is their responsibility to enroll their dependents. Retirees and known survivors of deceased military personnel will receive letters from the Department of Defense explaining how to enroll.

At this time of enrollment, proof of relationship to the sponsor will be required. This includes legal documents such as marriage licenses, birth certificates, adoption papers, etc.

In the early stages of DEERS, no one will be refused health care as a result of their eligibility not being confirmed by DEERS. However, if a person later proves to be ineligible for military health care, administrative and/or legal action may be taken to require payment for medical services rendered.

Once enrolled on the computer data base, checking eligibility will normally take no more time than that required for credit card checks.

DEERS first went into operations in southeastern Virginia and northeastern North Carolina early in 1980. In time, the system will be expanded worldwide and will provide eligibility confirmation for nine to twelve million people.

Under DEERS, eligibility checks for military health care will make it less likely for ineligible people to receive these benefits. As a result, DEERS will help eliminate fraud, save tax dollars and improve the health care system through better management.

Ra ch-to-ranch contacts in the area are also being made by personnel of the Texas Animal Health Commission.

An increase in suspected screwworm samples to the fly lab at Mission has occurred in recent weeks as a result of the two previous cases reported this year. "We are happy to see that we do have an increase in sample submission, but new more than ever this needs to be intensified, especially in the Marfa area, but also over the state as well," Dr. Holcombe said.

This is the normal time for screwworms to make their northward migration, and recent rains and warm, humid weather provide an impetus for screwworm infestations, he explained.

Collins Bill Binds IRS To Tax Advice

Should the IRS be made to stand by the advice it gives to taxpayers? Texas Congressman Jim Collins thinks it should and has introduced legislation which would make the IRS "stand by its word."

"The IRS receives millions of phone calls every year asking for advice but what good is all that advice if a taxpayer cannot count on it? I would rather have one right answer than ten wrong answers," Collins said.

The provision to bind the IRS to the advice it gives taxpayers is included in the Collins Taxpayers Bill of Rights-H.R. 2389. This bill now has 59 cosponsors and is pending in the Ways and Means Committee of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Collins cited examples of inconsistent IRS advice in a report by the Citizen's Choice National Committee on Taxes and the IRS. The 26-member commission held hearings across the country and found the most frequent single complaint was "the difficulty of getting from the IRS a single, authoritative answer to a question about the tax laws."

According to the report, a witness in Seattle called the same IRS office three times on the same day, talked to three different people, asked the same question and got three different answers.

Another taxpayer, the report noted, asked whether he could set up an Individual Retirement Account for himself if he was also a participant in an employer-sponsored plan. Once he was told yes; once he was told no.

"When taxpayers call the IRS assistance office for advice they should be able to count on that advice as accurate and not be penalized if the advice they received was incorrect,"

Mailing kits for submitting suspected samples are available free from Texas Animal Health Commission offices, county agent's offices, and other outlets. The mailing kits can be mailed postage-free.

Student controls

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — Enrollment controls have been clamped on the number of undergraduate students in The University of Texas College of Business Administration, which has more than 25 per cent of UT's enrollment.

The plan gives preference in class scheduling to graduating seniors; accepts qualified freshmen as pre-business students but makes their admission as business majors to the upper division of the college dependent on their academic record and available space; limits the number of students who can transfer into the college from other Texas colleges, and denies admission to foreign and out-of-state residents who wish to transfer into the college.

COTTON TALKS

FROM PLAINS COTTON GROWERS, INC.

High Plains cotton producers in 1980 spent about $25 million on efforts to control bollworms and beet armyworms and still saw themselves robbed of some 200,000 or more bales of production, says Dr. James Leser, Area Extension Entomologist at the Lubbock Research and Extension Center, "and I'm convinced that one-third of the control cost and at least half the production loss could have been avoided."

The key to maximum worm control at minimum cost, Leser says, begins with producers being constantly aware of egg lays, predictions of egg lays and other conditions that may lead to worm infestations.

"This allows the farmer to plan ahead and be ready, if necessary, to apply the right control measures at the right rates at the right time," Leser continues.

Dr. Leser is currently holding meetings in many locations over the High Plains to better acquaint farmers with fundamentals of a systematic approach to avoiding bollworm and beet armyworm losses. Times and places for the meetings will generally be available from area news media and are always known to county extension agents.

Points for discussion at these meetings include past identification, scouting procedures, the decision-making process once it appears infestations may require action, the selection of proper control "tools," and timing and rates of application, all aimed at maximum worm control along with minimum destruction of beneficial insects and spiders.

Also, beginning June 12, Leser began publishing a weekly insect newsletter which will include egg lay predictions based on computer analyses of worm moth trap catches, "moon phases," temperature records and the stage of crop development. These will be mailed to county agents, ginners, aerial applicators and all farmers who request them.

"A minimal number of individual farmers are now on our mailing list for this information," Leser says, "but we now have the facilities to print and mail to every farmer who will make use of them."

Entomologists on the Plains are currently working at a disadvantage because of the relative absence of historical data with which to compare current phenomena, Leser admits.

"But that doesn't mean we can't help many farmers do a better job on bollworms and beet armyworms than they did last year," he says, "and with the farmer's cooperation we hope to do just that."

When is the best time to go fishing?

This question has been asked by anglers ever since Dame Juliana Berners authored the first book on angling in 1496. And, because fish are more fickle than golf balls, wives with headaches, or even faro dealers, this is a matter to be taken seriously.

I know a feller who insists that the best time to go fishing is when the leaves on a willow tree are the size of a squirrel's ears. This theory, although perhaps valid, is difficult to prove. Squirrels are frisky at that time of the year, and capturing one to examine its ears can pose a problem.

Other people claim that the fishing is always better on an incoming tide, but when you consider the tidal tables for states like Kansas and Illinois they aren't much help.

When a hound dog wakes up and starts scratching is a good sign, but you gotta own a hound to put this program into effect. A poodle won't do, and neither will one of the German breeds.

Moon phases work for some folks, and so does finding a horseshoe or a four leaf clover. My Braniff pilot friend insists that a sky filled with jet trails is a good omen. Another buddy of mine goes fishing when his golf game is off. Some say the fish bite best when the wind is from the west. Craypie fishing is usually good when the dogwood is in bloom. They cry of a rain crow is always a good sign. My neighbor has a kid who figures the best time to go fishing is when the grass needs to be mowed. A cousin of mine goes when his wife lets him.

So there you have it. If you put things in the proper perspective, almost anytime is a good time to go fishing.

"Joey" is a common backstage name for a circus clown, chosen in honor of the first great modern clown, Joseph Grimaldi.

We hear that the less one knows, the easier one forms an opinion.

Older women

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — Because so many older women outlive men, the problem of their aloneness and loneliness is one of the saddest in society, says an official of The University of Texas Hogg Foundation for Mental Health.

"There are nine bridegrooms for every bride over the age of 65," says Bert Kruger Smith. While older men who are widowed often reach back 30 years and find younger brides, "most women do not have this kind of option," she says.

She predicts elderly women will learn to overcome their aloneness by finding more meaningful lives through new cooperative living, planning and social arrangements.

Cooling Help Offered To Low Income Homes

Low income families containing members age 65 or older may receive needed assistance in July to help in cooling their homes. Under the cooling phase of the federally-funded Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP), the Texas Department of Human Resources (TDHR) proposes to make a one-time-only payment to qualifying Supplemental Security Income, food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children households.

The program established by Congress in 1980 provided assistance this past winter to approximately 475,000 needy families by distributing $25 million in benefits. Because of the harsh effect of Texas summer heat on elderly persons, participation will be limited to low income households containing elderly persons.

Under TDHR's plan, those households with elderly persons not receiving an automatic payment, may apply between August 3 and August 31, 1981. Each county in Texas will have a designated location where members of such households can apply.

A household's resources cannot exceed $1800 for one person or $3000 for more than one person. The value of a homestead, cars, personal and household belongings will not be considered as resources. All household income must be verified and gross monthly income cannot exceed the following limits: for 1 person the income limit is $296; for 2, $446; for 3, $613; for 4, $756; for 5, $893; and for 6, $1044.

Those individuals or groups wishing to comment on this proposed plan should do so by June 9, 1981. Comments should be addressed to Ms. Susan Johnson, Handbook and Procedures Division 444-B, Texas Department of Human Resources, P.O. Box 2960, Austin, Texas 78769.
