Hepburn dies

UNITED NATIONS — Audrey Hepburn, the Oscar-winning actress known for her charm, high-fashion elegance and aristocratic bearing in films such as "Roman Holiday," has died, the U.N. Children's Fund announced Wednesday. She was 63. Hepburn, who had undergone colon cancer surgery last year, had been a longtime goodwill ambassador for the U.N. agency./7A

Faxes to God

JERUSALEM — People who want to plant notes to God in the Wailing Wall can now do it by fax. Every day hundreds of notes seeking divine intervention are stuffed into cracks in Jerusalem's Wailing Wall, Judaism's holiest shrine. Faxes sent to a number the national telephone company has set up will be brought to the wall by an employee, company spokesman Zecharia Mizrotzky said Wednesday. The fax number is 011-972-2-612222. It is not toll-free.

Marine casualty

MOGADISHU, Somalia — As hundreds more U.S. combat troops flew home Wednesday, the Marines reported their fourth casualty in Somalia, a reminder that this lawless land remains dangerous. Despite the departure of the troops, about 25,000 American soldiers remain in Somalia. The U.S. military command announced that 3,000 Army engineers would spend the next six weeks building and repairing 1,200 miles of roads and bridges in this war-ravaged land./8A

Iraqi sneer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq gave George Bush one last sneer Wednesday, promising to rebuild a factory blasted by U.S. missiles and appearing to abide by a cease-fire offered to President Clinton. U.S. planes were reported in the skies over Iraq, but military officials in Washington said there was no fire or provocations directed at American craft./8A

Man held in Midland for Florida murder

Lawmen arrest suspect in Fort Stockton

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

A Florida man, wanted for the videotaped fatal shooting of his former wife, remained in custody in Midland County Central Detention Facility Wednesday after being apprehended in Fort Stockton earlier in the day.

Emilio Jesus Nunez, 34, of Delray Beach, Fla., appeared before U.S. Magistrate Louis Guirola Jr. late Wednesday afternoon on a charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. Nunez, who remains jailed without bond, will be back in court for a detention hearing scheduled for 9 a.m. Monday.

Nunez was filmed firing a weapon at his former wife 12 times from point-blank range in a Broward County cemetery at the grave of their daughter.

The accused man was apprehended by Midland FBI agents, Pecos County Sheriff's deputies and the U.S. Border Patrol in Fort Stockton at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, after getting off a Greyhound bus headed for Los Angeles, said Tom Kirspel, supervisor of the Midland branch of the FBI.

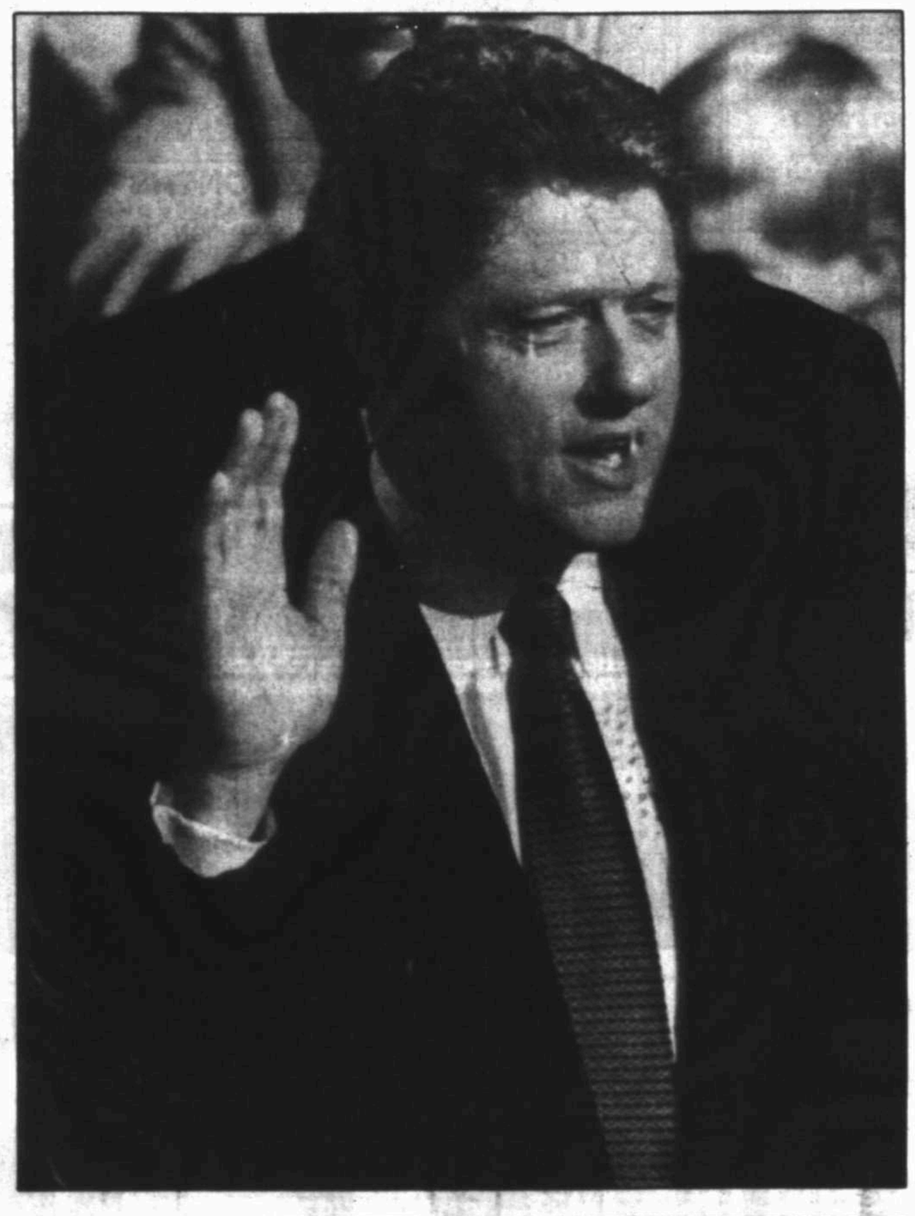

Acting on a Dade County Crime Stoppers tip, officials stopped and disarmed Nunez, who attempted to pull a 9 mm stainless steel semi-automatic weapon, and then transported him to Midland for an initial appearance on the federal charge for fleeing the first-degree murder charge lodged against him in Fort Lauderdale.

Clinton's 'tomorrow' here at last

■ New president pledges to 'face hard truths and take strong steps.'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Jefferson Clinton was inaugurated the 42nd president of the United States on Wednesday before a cheering crowd of a quarter-million, bringing a new generation to power and pledging "to face hard truths and take strong steps."

Inheriting a weak economy, a $4 trillion federal debt and a galaxy of foreign-policy problems, Clinton called for national renewal but acknowledged, "It will not be easy; it will require sacrifice." He specified none in his inaugural address, leaving that for later.

Clinton used the word "change" 11 times, and promised his Democratic administration would end the "deadlock and drift" of government.

"There is nothing wrong with America that cannot be cured by what is right with America," Clinton said at a Capitol ceremony bathed in sunlight on a chill winter day.

Cheers, whistles and applause swelled from the huge crowd. Around the world, countless millions paused to watch the ceremony on television.

It was a day of emotional celebration and colorful pageantry. Pennsylvania Avenue was packed with an estimated 800,000 well-wishers as the new president and his wife, Hillary, walked several blocks of the parade route to their new home at the White House. Hand in hand, they walked inside after staying past dark to watch marching units from every state.

Later, they headed out for a late night of partying, beginning with a dinner honoring Medal of Honor winners. "As you might imagine, this has been a long, wonderful, unique day in the lives of Bill and Hillary Clinton," the president told military dignitaries. "We wanted to begin here because of your commitment to our nation." Next came 11 inaugural balls.

Festivities 'bigger' than football game

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Against the backdrop of the gleaming U.S. Capitol, a mink-coated woman from Nashville, Ark., gasped in wonderment as she surveyed the enthusiastic crowd of 250,000 people cheering the inauguration of Bill Clinton.

"My," she breathed, "this is bigger than an Arkansas football game."

It WAS bigger than a football game, though football may provide the best metaphor for the national homecoming celebration that is every presidential inaugural.

The sudden flight of birds from the Capitol building right after Clinton took his oath appeared to be just another theatrical touch to inaugural festivities that all week have carried the Hollywood imprint. In reality, the birds took flight when a nearby howitzer battery fired off a 21-gun salute.

It was a day for hats, with Hillary Clinton and Tipper Gore modeling colorful headgear, and Chief Justice William Rehnquist again sporting a black silk cap that gave him the appearance of a high priest from another millennium. When he wore it four years ago for George Bush's inauguration, Rehnquist explained that it was an ancient British tradition.

Four years ago, Marilyn Quayle stole the fashion show on the inaugural platform with her commanding hat. This year, both she and Barbara Bush were hatless.

Midland, Odessa combine to form metropolitan area

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Midland has recently became part of a metropolis with a population greater than 225,500.

The sudden growth stems from the federal government's classification of Odessa-Midland as a joint metropolitan statistical area.

As a result, Odessa-Midland now ranks as Texas' 12th largest metropolitan area with a population of 225,545.

"One of the good things about the union . . . is that we will look at what is good for the region rather than two individual cities," said U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock. "It will benefit them both than them suffering individually," he added.

Combest said the major benefit would be in terms of economic development.

Local officials agreed that the classification will boost the potential for economic prosperity for the two cities.

"I think it's a different threshold we are now placed in in terms of consideration" by companies to locate, Mayor J.D. Faircloth said.

"It reflects a larger population and work force which is important for businesses considering relocation," he said.

Cities with populations under 100,000 may not be as attractive to companies and neither Midland nor Odessa surpassed that number in the 1990 census, Faircloth said.

"Once you exceed a 100,000 things happen," he said. And 225,000 plus puts the cities in even a greater light, he added.

Janna King, president and CEO of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said the joint metropolitan

MURDER: Florida man accused of killing ex-wife

(From 1A)

Federal officials in Midland are awaiting extradition papers for Nunez's return to Florida.

"It was a border patrol simulation, a routine alien check. Everyone exited from the bus, a struggle ensued. He went for his weapon that was in his pouch, and he was restrained," Lt. Lou Cavallo of the North Lauderdale Police Department said at a news conference late Wednesday.

Cavallo said investigators believe it was the same gun Nunez used to kill his former wife, Moritza Martin Munoz, 33, at the grave of their teen-age daughter at Our Lady Queen of Heaven Cemetery in North Lauderdale on Monday.

The shooting was captured on video by a Florida television crew who were interviewing Nunez about his daughter's suicide.

On the videotape, before the shooting, Nunez told reporter Ingrid Cruz that his 15-year-old daughter Yoandra Nunez shot herself on Thanksgiving Day after her mother slapped her when Miss Nunez revealed that she was pregnant. He also alleged that Ms. Munoz abused the girl.

While the film rolled and Nunez was placing flowers on the grave, Ms. Munoz showed up in her car and got out. Ms. Cruz and her cameraman, Jorge Delgado, approached Ms. Munoz to interview her. As Ms. Munoz started to walk into the cemetery, Nunez began shooting her.

He fired a shot to the back of her head. As she fell to the ground, the film shows Nunez continuing to fire. In all, Nunez fired 12 shots at the body of Ms. Munoz.

"I should have done it a long time ago!" he said afterward in Spanish.

Cruz said despite the violence, she was ready to interview Nunez again. Cruz was working on the suicide story for the Spanish-language program "Occurrio Asi," or "It Happened Like This," a show similar to "A Current Affair" and "Hard Copy."

"I want to find out why he killed her," she told The Associated Press. "I want to go to Texas to interview him again. I'm making arrangements."

Nunez had fled immediately after the shooting, leaving his red Jeep Cherokee in Hialeah, a northwest Miami suburb. The weapon was not found inside.

North Lauderdale Det. Robert Edgerton said Nunez was travelling with a male companion. The man, who police would not identify, was not an active participant in Nunez's interstate flight and was not detained, Edgerton said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Town celebrates as Gore takes oath

CARTHAGE, Tenn. (AP) — For 16 years, the hand-painted black letters on the white wooden sign at the edge of town read: "Welcome to Carthage, Home of Senator Al Gore."

Tacked across the word "Senator" on Wednesday morning was a red-white-and-blue sign: "Vice President-Elect." By noon, somebody had clipped away "-Elect."

In such small ways the town of 2,600 in central Tennessee's rolling hills celebrated this moment of history.

The 750 students at Smith County High watched the inaugural on classroom televisions, eyes glued to the sets as Gore was sworn in by Supreme Court Justice Byron White.

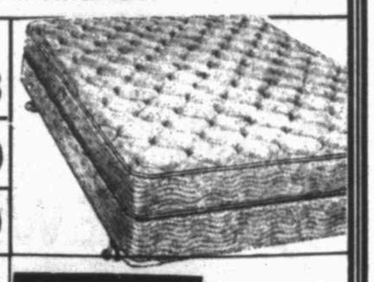

When the hometown hero was finished taking the vice president's oath of office, boys in Debbie Fulton's sophomore English class exchanged high-fives.

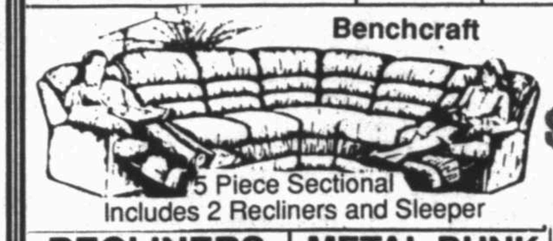

The 78-member high school band raised $30,000 to make the trip to Washington and march in the Inaugural Parade. Students watched for their friends.

"It makes you proud," Upchurch said. "Al will do a good job."

AREA: Union should boost cities' economic futures

(From 1A)

statistical area paints a more realistic picture of the sister cities.

"It more truly communicates the size of your labor force . . . and the size of the consumer market," Ms. King said.

As a result, "you have more discretion and more authority to set your priorities at a local level," she added.

From the west side of the joint metropolitan statistical area, officials also welcome the move.

"We're the 12th largest city in the state and that means something. Being 25th or down the ladder doesn't mean that much," said Frank Deaderick, president of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce.

"Together we're pretty strong," he said.

Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman expressed similar sentiment, adding that the increased strength comes from a change in outsiders' perception.

"Nothing has changed but statistically it will appear the size of the community has doubled," she said.

"It will have a huge impact economically and how we are perceived around the country," Ms. Perryman said.

Companies will see more consumers, work force and population, she said.

The larger statistical area should bring in more advertising dollars from state and national sources as well, she said.

The only possible disadvantage due to the change would be certain government regulations that an area over a certain population may have to adhere to, Ms. Perryman said.

"That's the only possibility of a negative that I know of and the positive outweighs that," she added.

Area officials have sought the classification since 1985, Combest said.

Ms. Perryman said seeking the joint statistical area status was reportedly stalled due to a low traffic count between Midland and Odessa, one of the criteria considered by the Office of Management and Budget in Washington, D.C.

"After this census (1990) was done our traffic count had gone up enough," she said.

Toddler has historic name

NOBE, W.Va. (AP) — The mother of 13-month-old Clinton Bush said she had no idea his name would become part of history.

Johnetta Bush said the name never even struck her as odd until three months after the child was born.

"I went into the drugstore one time and the pharmacist asked me who I was for, Clinton or Bush," Mrs. Bush said. "That's when it hit me and I laughed. I said, 'Either way, he's a winner.'"

Mrs. Bush said she and her husband, Richard, did not choose the name until the day after the child's birth. They never thought of Bill Clinton, then governor of Arkansas and a presidential candidate.

She said they went through books of names looking for something different and settled on Clinton because her husband liked it and no one else in the family had the name.

WEATHER SUMMARY

High to be in mid-60s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies, with a high between 60-65 and northwest winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low in the lower 30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be sunny with a high near 70.

After an overnight low of 33, Wednesday's high reached 62, compared to the record high for that date of 76 set in 1986. The record low was five set in 1966.

STATE

Much of the rain that plagued the state earlier this week drifted away Wednesday, but the clear skies left behind may lower temperatures entering the weekend.

Louisiana got to deal with the rains that had hit Southeast Texas as several showers and thunderstorms moved east out of the region.

A few showers remained in the far eastern stretches, but they were expected to be gone before Thursday.

Further carryover effects of the two to three inches of rain that fell earlier this week was expected to produce minor lowland flooding along portions of the Sabine and Trinity rivers.

Skies cleared up by mid-Wednesday, with the only lingering clouds in the far east and far south. Afternoon temperatures had reached the mid 70s.

The moon and stars were finally expected to be visible Wednesday night, and the temperature was to drop rapidly.

Overnight lows are expected from near 30 in the Hill Country to the upper 50s along the lower Gulf Coast. Today's forecast calls for fog over some areas in the morning but generally sunny and pleasant weather by noon with temperatures mainly in the 70s.

West Texas had some low clouds and fog in the late morning and sunny skies lit up the rest of the region. Afternoon temperatures peaked in the 30s and 40s and a few 50s in the Edwards Plateau.

Clouds over the Panhandle were to decrease Wednesday night with clear skies continuing over other sections through Thursday.

Today's lows were to be in the 20s and 30s with highs mainly in the 50s and 60s.

The improvement was felt in North Texas, where rain ceased in the western and central sections. A flash flood watch for the southeastern sections was cancelled as the systems left the state.

The far eastern portion of the area could still face a threat of rain, but the cloudiness will keep decreasing in the central and west parts. Lows will be near 30 in the west and in the upper 30s in the east.

Today should be clear, with temperatures ranging from the 30s to near 60.

NATION

A new Pacific storm hit the Northwest on Wednesday with wind up to 100 mph and heavy snow and rain.

Up to 10 inches of rain fell in Louisiana, and snow and ice glazed highways on the Plains and upper Midwest.

High wind hammered the Pacific Northwest, with gusts to 100 mph along the Oregon coast and 80 mph in western Washington.

Utilities reported nearly 200,000 customers without power, and downed trees and mudslides blocked roads.

By midafternoon, rain was falling along the northern and central Pacific Coast, with snow reported over parts of Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Idaho and Montana, the National Weather Service said.

Up to 10 inches of snow fell overnight at higher elevations of the northern Sierra Nevada along the California-Nevada line.

A low pressure system over the lower Mississippi Valley produced snow and ice over much of the central part of the nation.

Freezing rain fell during the afternoon across much of Iowa, northern Missouri, eastern South Dakota, southern Minnesota, southern Wisconsin and northwestern Illinois. Light rain and drizzle fell over parts of Missouri, Illinois and western Kentucky.

Heavy rain fell across parts of southern Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

THE CLINTON PRESIDENCY: DAY ONE

Bushes look forward to 'new life'

By Harry F. Rosenthal
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — George and Barbara Bush, now just Mr. and Mrs. Citizen, took a final aerial tour of this capital where they had spent nearly three decades, then flew home to Houston "looking forward to a new life."

As the capital welcomed Bill Clinton and his new administration with a joyous parade, hundreds of people who worked for Bush in the White House and other executive offices, gathered at Andrews Air Force Base in the Maryland suburbs to bid him farewell.

His last act before the Air Force jet rolled down the tarmac was to pose for a picture with members of the Air Force maintenance crews who kept his planes flying. About three hours later, they arrived at Ellington Air Force Base in Houston.

"Now it's back to the real world for the Bushes, privileged to have served and to have had this wonderful opportunity to be in the White House. . . . All I can say is it's been one hell of a ride," Bush told a small crowd that greeted him.

And offering a glimpse of his plans, Bush said "we're going to try to do something helpful" for Houston, the city where a rented hotel suite supported his hometown claim.

Only an hour before, Bush had watched stoically as Clinton took the oath that made him the 42nd president of the United States. The new chief executive lauded Bush "for his half century of service to America," then turned and saluted his predecessor.

There was a smile on Bush's face as the two men faced one another — symbols of their generations. Bush, 68, a World War II hero; Clinton 46, a Vietnam war resister.

But in contrast to the animated expression on Clinton's face throughout the celebration of the peaceful passage of power, Bush was solemn for the most part.

A helicopter was waiting on the Capitol grounds. President and Mrs. Clinton escorted Bush and Mrs. Bush to it. Bush turned and gave a double thumbs up before he got on board. Dan Quayle, the vice president who left office with Bush, and his wife, Marilyn, also went aboard.

The chopper lifted, circled the Capitol and then the White House before bringing the Bushes to the air base.

About 2,000 people awaited them there, cheering lustily as they alighted. A Navy band played marches. The brilliant sun glinted off the plane that Bush rode so often as Air Force One.

The 747 on which he flew Wednesday did not carry that designation because that name is given only to the plane carrying the president. Instead, for this flight, it was SAM 28000. SAM stands for special air mission.

The big blue and white jumbo jet was familiar to Bush. In his 1,462 days as president, he traveled 612,394 miles to all 50 states and 35 foreign countries, most of them aboard the 747.

Bush's longtime spokesman Marlin Fitzwater also held one last press briefing. A brief one. Asked how Bush felt, he said, "He's fine, looking forward to a new life."

Fitzwater, who was wearing a cowboy hat, almost shouted the sentence in glee.

Something else was different. The Navy band, on the tarmac to play for Bush's departure, no longer sounded the familiar "Hail to the Chief," which honors the incumbent president.

With the inauguration ceremony at the Capitol, Bush became one of five former presidents still living, a record equaled on inauguration day only when Abraham Lincoln was sworn in for the first time.

"History will record George Bush's presidency as having been well done," said Bob Simon, who was a White House speech writer for Bush. He said he bore no ill will toward the Clinton administration.

"It's their turn. Let them have it. We'll be back in four years."

On the flight home, the Bushes took along a number of friends, including a bunch of former officeholders: his Chief of Staff Jim Baker, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Jack Kemp, White House counsel C. Boyden Gray, and political director Ron Kaufman.

The crowd of people carried signs. One said, "Mr. Bush, may I have a hug?" Its bearer didn't get it.

Bush's final hours in the White House were filled with poignant moments marking the end of a tenure he had fought hard to extend for another four years.

He took a solitary last walk around the White House grounds with his dog, Ranger, shook hands with people waiting along a fence, left a note in the Oval Office for his successor and said his final goodbyes to the staff.

After the jumbo jet lifted off, reporters shouted to Quayle, "How about a few words?"

Quayle got a mischievous grin on his face and said, "Goodbye."

BIGGER: Arkansans proud as 'peacocks'

(From 1A)

as South African leader Nelson Mandela, Jesse Jackson, entertainers Michael Bolton and Kenny G., politicians such as Texas Gov. Ann Richards and former Mass. Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Just beneath the podium on the West Front of the Capitol sat the 50 "faces of hope" guests, the just-like-you-and-me Americans who had lunch with Clinton Monday. Each guest had met either Clinton or Gore during their election campaign and had made a special impression on the candidates.

One of those faces belonged to 10-year-old Sarah Weber of Cleveland, who's confined to a wheelchair by an illness that has drained her family's savings.

"We're here because of health care issues," said Sarah's mother, Marie Kostos-Weber, referring to a topic that Clinton mentioned in his 14-minute inaugural address.

But for the thousands of Arkansans who journeyed here to honor a native son, it was a day of pride and triumph.

"We're just as proud as peacocks," said Marie Box of Fayetteville, who watched the swearing-in with her husband, Lloyd. "We just can hardly believe he's actually president, somebody from our ittybitty state."

Neal Privett, a Little Rock resident, said he's a Republican, but he believes Clinton "can restore confidence to the nation anyway."

"He had the ability to make us believe in ourselves even when the rest of the country was looking down its nose at Arkansas," Privett said. "It's hard to describe what we're feeling like today."

Vicki McGraw, a spokeswoman for the National Park Service, said the inaugural crowd was larger than any in recent memory.

"This was the first time I remember people standing along the National Mall, quite a distance from the podium," she said, describing the crowd as "very orderly."

The crowd estimate rose to some 500,000 onlookers when the inaugural parade started from the Capitol, went down Pennsylvania Avenue and past the White House.

This was the first time the White House has changed political parties in 12 years — the novelty seemed to contribute to the sense of excitement. Collectors bought up political souvenirs — hats, T-shirts, buttons and framed pictures, while families gobbled up hot dogs and popcorn and had their photos taken along with life-sized cutouts of the new president and Mrs. Clinton.

Even the dour Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine seemed seized by the atmosphere. He smiled frequently from his seat immediately to the left of the podium, perhaps fantasizing about all the legislation he could help engineer now that Democrats control both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, sat right behind the Supreme Court justices on the podium, wearing a cowboy hat and smoking his customary cigar.

For Bush, it was a wistful, poignant moment — a juncture that he must have been dreading. Bush, who is now the fifth living former president, seemed to be working extra hard to maintain his composure and legendary courtliness during the ceremony. The man who clearly loved being president appeared sad, strained and teary at times as he contemplated the inaugural ceremony that provided a dramatic punctuation point to his presidency and the end of his career.

When the ceremony was over, Bush was whisked off in a Marine helicopter in the first leg of his journey home to Houston, Texas.

As the helicopter carrying Bush circled low over the Capitol, onlookers walking away from the ceremony turned to stop, some waving and blowing kisses. Vicky McVicker of nearby Bethesda, Md., said she'd voted for Clinton. But watching Bush "made me sad anyway," she said.

PLEDGES: U.S. cheers new leader

(From 1A)

the crowd by playing along as Ben E. King sang, "Your Momma Don't Dance and Your Daddy Don't Rock 'n' Roll."

Outgoing President Bush, denied a second term by a restive electorate demanding change, watched stoically at the Capitol as Clinton was sworn in by Chief Justice William Rehnquist. Suddenly an ex-president, Bush stepped forward to shake his successor's hand.

Afterward, Bush flew home to Houston, ending a quarter-century of public service and 12 years of Republican rule in the White House. Bush left behind a note for Clinton in the Oval Office; its contents weren't disclosed.

At 46, Clinton is the nation's third-youngest president and the first of the postwar baby boom generation to sit in the White House.

Bush, perhaps the last president of the World War II generation, was the fourth-oldest chief executive when he was sworn in at 64.

In his speech, remarkable for its brevity at 14 minutes, Clinton saluted Bush but lamented the state of the nation.

"Raised in unrivaled prosperity, we inherit an economy still the world's strongest but weakened by business failures, stagnant wages, increasing inequality and deep divisions among our people," Clinton said. He decried the high costs of health care, the scourge of crime and the hardships suffered by millions of poor children.

The day was draped in expectations that Clinton would move quickly with an economic program — and more slowly perhaps to recast U.S. policies involving international crises in Somalia and Iraq, Haiti and Bosnia.

Untested in foreign affairs, Clinton was forceful in expressing his resolve.

"When our vital interests are challenged, or the will and conscience of the international community defied, we will act — with peaceful diplomacy when possible, with force when necessary. The brave Americans serving our nation in the Persian Gulf, in Somalia, and wherever else they stand are testament to our resolve."

With U.S. warplanes flying over Iraq, Clinton was the first president since Richard Nixon to take office with American troops on combat duty. Iraq appeared to be abiding by the cease-fire it offered Clinton but there was a fresh challenge, as Baghdad promised to rebuild a factory devastated by a U.S. cruise missile attack.

The inaugural parade was still under way as the Senate confirmed the nominations of key members of Clinton's Cabinet: Warren Christopher, secretary of state; Les Aspin at Defense, and Lloyd Bentsen at Treasury. Clinton may hold his first Cabinet meeting today. He also plans to personally greet White House visitors at an open house and, aides said, would issue executive orders on unspecified subjects.

A moving van with Arkansas tags — presumably carrying his household goods — arrived at the White House at the same time as Clinton. "Y'all made it, huh?" Clinton said.

In his last hours as a private citizen, Clinton stayed up until the early hours of Wednesday talking with Vice President-to-be Al Gore about the days ahead. "I didn't get much sleep," Clinton told lawmakers at a Capitol luncheon. He raised his glass to toast "a new partnership in America's government."

House Speaker Thomas Foley pledged cooperation from congressional Democrats. "We will match your proposals with our strong effort to move the country toward fundamental change."

At 11:58 a.m., two minutes ahead of schedule, Clinton raised his right hand and recited the simple 35-word oath used by George Washington and every American president thereafter. With his left hand on a King James Bible given by his grandmother, he pledged "to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution."

The president took his oath as William Jefferson Clinton, eschewing for the moment his trademark "Bill."

Clinton grabbed Gore in a bear hug after Gore recited the vice presidential oath. After his own swearing in, Clinton kissed his wife and his 12-year-old daughter, Chelsea, and scooped them up in a family hug. "I love you," he whispered.

Clinton, in a dark suit, was no fashion match for Mrs. Clinton — wearing a cadet blue, wool coat and matching hat. As they strolled part of the crowded parade route, the Clintons walked without coats — but Mrs. Clinton kept on her striking hat.

For more than three hours, the marching units — including six bands from Clinton's Arkansas — paraded noisily up Pennsylvania Avenue from the Capitol to the White House. The day's finale: 11 inaugural balls spread around the city in museums, hotels and arenas.

Clinton's inauguration marked a dramatic change in the nation's political compass. Clinton promised to put government to work to solve America's problems. Bush, and Ronald Reagan before him, tried to restrict government's hand.

"We know we have to face hard truths and take strong steps," Clinton said. "But we have not done so. Instead, we have drifted, and that drifting has eroded our resources, fractured our economy and shaken our confidence. Though our challenges are fearsome, so are strengths."

"To renew America," he said, "we must be bold."

"We must do what America does best: Offer opportunity to all and demand responsibility for all," Clinton said. "It is time to break the bad habit of expecting something for nothing, from our government or from each other."

Clinton's first official act was to sign an executive order imposing strict ethical standards on senior officials in his government, and another order proclaiming Friday as a "national day of fellowship and hope." He also signed nominating papers for his Cabinet appointees.

"Let us resolve to reform our politics so that power and privilege no longer shout down the voice of the people," Clinton said. "Let us put aside personal advantage so that we can feel the pain and see the promise of America."

His inauguration crowned a long journey from an Arkansas hamlet called Hope to the most powerful job in the world. Along the way, he was elected the youngest sitting governor at age 32 and left that office as the nation's longest-serving governor.

Maya Angelou, the first poet to read at an inauguration in 32 years, hailed Clinton's arrival as the dawn of an era of unity where "each new hour holds new chances."

Clinton began the day at a prayer service. A tear rolled down his cheek as he sat in a front-row pew and listened to a soulful rendition of "Holy Ground." Later, Clinton and Gore and members of their families went to the White House for coffee with Bush and his wife, Barbara.

"Good luck to you," the outgoing president said. They rode to the Capitol together in an armored limousine adorned with the presidential seal.

Governor recommends release for woman convicted of murder

■ More national news/5b

BOSTON (AP) — Eugenia Moore has served nearly seven years of a life prison term after being convicted of killing her former boyfriend, whom she said had repeatedly threatened her. On Wednesday, she got the governor on her side in her bid for freedom.

Moore, one of eight women convicted in Massachusetts of killing mates they say battered and threatened them, now is only one step away from having her sentence for second-degree murder commuted.

The former bus driver was imprisoned in February 1986 for the death of her ex-boyfriend, Alfred Phillips.

Gov. William Weld urged the Governor's Council to free Moore, saying, "She had been stalked and harassed and threatened for some period of time, and there was ample support for that in the record."

"In her case no testimony was admitted about the battered-women's syndrome," he said. "I think if it went to trial today you might very well have testimony admitted about that defense."

Massachusetts passed an anti-stalking bill last year.

An advisory board of pardons unanimously recommended to Weld earlier this month that Moore's sentence be commuted.

The Governor's Council — a board elected to ratify some gubernatorial appointees and approve pardons, among other things — plans to discuss the case next week.

"We're hopeful, very hopeful, and we're grateful to the governor and to the parole board," said Moore's attorney, Susan Howards.

Sheila Hubbard, Weld's appointee as head of the pardons board, said that if Moore's commutation is approved it apparently would be the first time in state history that such a request was granted.

The killing that landed Moore in prison happened on June 5, 1985.

Phillips had been harassing her for days, she said. On the day he died Phillips accosted Moore while she was driving her bus, she said, but Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority police dismissed it as "only a domestic dispute."

Working smoke alarms save lives

A housefire in Midland on Monday that killed two young boys, ages 2 and 3, was a tragic occurrence, solemnly boosting the death count in housefires across the nation this winter.

Housefires nearly always bring tragedy — in the form of loss of property and lives, and even when major losses don't occur, in the disruption of lives. Winter is the season for housefires and across the nation, those fires annually kill thousands of people. Most fires occur at this time of the year, fire officials say, because people are indoors and are using heaters of some type to warm their homes.

Of course, fires can start from heaters but also can begin due to faulty wiring or other reasons. And the tragic results are often written in statistics on deaths caused by fires.

Fire officials encourage use of home smoke alarms. The inexpensive devices help alert a home's occupants to a fire by sounding an alarm, thus giving them time to evacuate the home safely. The officials note that they do not know whether a smoke alarm was present in the Midland home that burned earlier this week. They add that the home was burned so badly that they could not determine whether a smoke alarm was present. They quickly add, however, that an alarm would have helped.

Smoke alarms already have helped save millions of dollars in property loss and thousands of lives since their use became more common a few years ago. Midland Fire Marshall Jerry Petree noted that nationwide there were only 4,500 deaths in housefires compared to more than 12,000 a decade ago, and he attributed the decline in fire deaths to use of smoke alarms. Yet even with the decline, 4,500 people died in fires and reducing that statistic should be the concern of each of us.

Smoke alarms are inexpensive insurance against the tragedy that housefires can bring. We encourage all Midland residents to install alarms in their homes and to check to ensure that their alarms are in good working order.

Clinton can't rekindle political glamor

WASHINGTON — Democrats have had their routs and revels, Republicans have had their ration of gall and wormwood, and now Democrats confront the problem of Republican impotence. It is said that opponents are useful because they allow us to believe that if they were absent we would be able to realize our ideals. Congressional Republicans are too few to foil President Clinton's plans, so he needs excuses for the country's coming disappointments, and his.

Will

Actually, the country is more immunized against disappointments than he is. He is of the generation that got permanently sun-struck by staring into the glare of the Kennedy glamour, or what then seemed glamorous. He hopes he can rekindle the splendor, such as it was. He won't, not primarily because of any defect on his part, but because of the maturation of Americans.

The most important political fact of the 32 years since Kennedy came to the presidency is the collapse of the prestige of government. That prestige peaked around 1965, when a "great" society — merely "good" would not suffice — was going to be legislated. Nowadays government looks to most Americans like an overbearing and overreaching underachiever that is suspect regarding both its competence and motives.

The vocational interests of politicians, and the emotional needs of the media (which feel important in proportion to the importance of what they are covering), explain a thought that recurs every four years. The thought is that the most recent presidential election was especially momentous. But the 1992 election was not, for three reasons.

First, the nation is more secure from foreign threats than it has been in 216 years. Second, because of the deficit, and the electorate's taxaphobia (related to the government's diminished prestige), and the power of interest groups over career politicians, the federal government has little latitude for action.

Third, the problems most troubling to most Americans seem largely immune to government. For example, the inadequacy of education in grades K-12, and the urban regression in the midst of societal prosperity, are problems of cultural values, character, behavior and family breakdown.

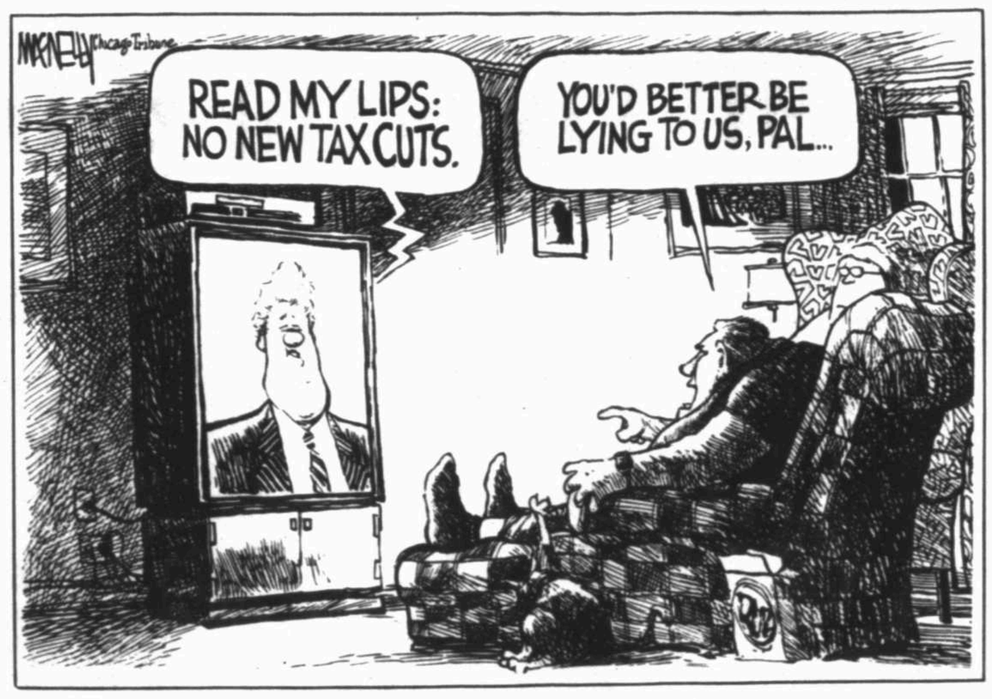

Clinton is the highest ranking of 18 million civilian employees of government, which employs more people than all U.S. manufacturers combined. He is landlord of the federal government's 440,000 buildings, and custodian of the approximately one-third of the nation's land that the federal government owns.

Clinton was elected promising "change." But he was elected only because voters decided that his party has changed in a direction that makes it less ambitious about using government as an instrument of change.

An Inauguration is an occasion for Americans to bask in the warmth of sentiments put into words by Stephen Vincent Benet:

We made this thing, this dream
This land unsatisfied by little ways

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Emotional states reflect in cosmetic ads

Romance with Commitment. That's what today's woman wants."

Those were the words of Calvin Klein, introducing a floral-scented fragrance named Eternity five years ago.

Safire

That's when commitment was in, a word that has gone from connoting entrance into a mental institution to its modern meaning of "permanent relationship" or perhaps a mutual understanding to date steadily at least through New Year's Eve. If you want a word to stand for a long-range commitment, eternity cannot be topped. (Forever must have been considered, but the diamond people have a lock on that word; forever is expensive.)

Klein's commitment to commitment followed his mid-80's passion for Obsession, which he defined poetically at the time as "passion beyond reason." Times and public moods change, and people in the cosmetics, fragrance and fashion industry like to be right out there on the cusp with the words that reverberate with customers.

In billboard and magazine advertising for his current line of underwear, Calvin Klein is using as his male model a rapper named Marky Mark, who wears a distressed expression that seems to reflect his difficulty in adjusting the zipper on his pants, but the theme of much of the cosmetics and fragrance advertising is behind the product line of Escape; it speaks of having "time to be alone" and being "free." Thus, we have come from the uninhibited passion of Obsession ("Grab her!") to the commitment of Eternity ("Hold her") to the freedom of Escape ("Let her go, and lemme outta here"). Chanel, on the contrary, has delivered a consistent underlying message: the realization of elegant dreams. The advertising slogans play with rhymes ("Every Woman Alive Wants Chanel No. 5"), and the dream-come-true theme is updated. "As the man appeared with the spritzing of No. 5 in the air," I am informed by a Chanel copywriter, Sheila White, "that was a mere statement of wish-fulfillment. In the new campaign, 'Share the Fantasy' invites participation in the dream."

Now to the lingo of skin care, a phrase that seems to have replaced makeup, suggesting a trend away from painting the face toward preserving it.

"As women have become more demanding of performance from their treatment products," Ms. White says, "Chanel has become more explicit in the language of its claims. The old way: 'The Clockstopper' was the headline for an 'anti-aging' product. The new way: 'Up to 45 Percent Reduction in the Appearance of Wrinkles,' but lightened by the fillip 'We don't say it's a miracle. You may think otherwise.' " (That is an example of the rhetorical technique called aporia, in which you feign doubt about where to begin, or make a statement by saying you will not be able to make that statement.)

Skin care copy is pulsating proof that we are in the Anti-Age Age. "Gray hair lies," charges Miss Clairol, with the adjuration to "keep it healthy-looking, young and vibrant." In the old days, Clairol stressed naturalness, asking, "Does she . . . or doesn't she?" with its double-entendre, and asserting that "only her hairdresser knows for sure."

This classic ad was replaced by a forerunner of the escapist school, "If I've only one life . . . let me live it as a blonde!" That formulation would not be used today; blonde is a color, not a person, and feminists believe — with good reason — that the use of the adjective as a noun demeans the person. "She is blonde" is O.K., though "her hair is blonde" is better; "she is a blonde" is out, though she is perfectly free to live her life like one.

Do the words of advertising copy really sell these products? You bet they do; that's why they are so carefully attuned to the shifting public moods. What comes after Escape? Try La Safire's Recapture, or wait for my unforgettable (Revlon's favorite adjective) Commitment. (I see the unisex Commitment in a square bottle, with a tiny golden ball and chain around its neck.)

Perot ready to march long way for fairness

President and Mrs. Clinton were walking down Pennsylvania Avenue after the swearing-in ceremony when a man jumped out from the crowd. The Secret Service tried to stop him but the man yelled, "It's all right. I'm Ross Perot and I have to talk to the President so that we can give this country back to the people."

Buchwald

President Clinton said, "Ross, can't it wait until I get to the White House?"

"It will only take a minute. I want to give you my new 800 number and tell you that I've formed a new organization called 'United We Stand,' which will produce a government for the people — not one that only caters to the insiders and big shots in this town."

"That's nice, Ross, but what does all this have to do with me?" President Clinton asked.

"You could resign. I'm going on the 'Amy Fisher Show' Sunday evening and if you watch you'll see what a mess you've made of this country."

Hillary said, "Make him go away."

"You thought you had seen the last of me when the election was over, but it's only the beginning. Larry King wants me to go on his show every week. Barbara Walters thinks I'm wonderful and I'm doing a walk-on for 'Cheers.' The American people have a right to know the truth about the mess in Washington."

The President said, "If I give you $15 and join your organization, will you go away?"

"Well, it's better than nothing, particularly since I stopped using my own money to save the country. Don't walk so fast. It's hard to keep up with you."

"Ross, the people are waving at me, not at you," the President told him.

"I got 19 percent of the vote. That's almost enough to impeach you."

"Ross, would you like to be our ambassador to Mozambique?" the President asked.

"You can't buy me off with a lush ambassadorship. Your administration is no different than George Bush's."

Perot took a stack of papers out of his back pocket. "Can we go over the budget deficit now?"

"Not now. The people are having a good time."

"They won't be after I go on the 'Today Show.' Mr. President, you better get off the stick, or we're going to have a revolution on our hands. All we're asking for is a fair shake and an honest pizza."

Chelsea said, "Mr. Perot, I can't see a thing because of your big ears. Why don't you go sit over there with the nice people."

By now Perot was burning. "I should be leading this parade. If I hadn't bugged out last summer because Bush was going to wreck my daughter's wedding, I would have been sworn in today."

"Hey, Ross," the President whispered, "there are some press people over there you haven't talked to yet."

"I'm not interested in being in the limelight. All I want to do is see that each citizen gets what's coming to him. That's what America is all about."

President Clinton said, "Why don't you drop by the house some day with the missus, and we can talk about what's bugging you."

"I'd like that. Trying to stay in step with you with your long legs on Inauguration Day cramps my style."

Reader seeks 'PK' patients

Where are you? Persons with Parkinson Disease, wherever you are, please consider this challenge: "I can . . . live each day living with the disease, or I can . . . live each day dying with this disease. I have chosen to live . . ."

I make this plea to you through the Permian Basin Chapter of the American Parkinson Disease Association whose slogan is "To Ease The Burden To Find The Cure." We have tremendous resources available, pharmaceutical and medical, professional speakers and therapists, and a nationwide network of the latest research update. Possibly the most important reward, however, is the sense of joy and calmness that comes from patients sharing with one another.

Abilene has over 50 people in their chapter. We are hoping to equal that, but first we must know WHO you are and WHERE you are. We feel an impassioned mission to tell you of conferences we have attended recently and the difference they have made in our lives. Even though I am not a "PK" patient, my dear husband is, and I have seen the upbeat change in his quality of life, as well as in mine.

To join our circle of Parkinson friends and their families who have "Chosen to live a better life" call me at 687-4516 (AM) or at 684-4619 (PM).

Vests give 'slight edge'

In response to the letter by Shannon Day (Letters, Jan. 3), she compared Midland Cheer Fund donations to police vest donations. Both are important causes, but I see no parallel.

As the mother of a son who works as a police firearms trainer for a New Mexico city (Farmington), I'm thankful that city of approximately 40,000 believes vests are a crucial part of their 100 officers' gear. Vests are not optional and must be worn by any of their officers who are on duty. The council budgets for this expense and, according to information passed on to their officers, vests are cheaper than costs incurred in replacing a disabled or dead officer.

In Midland, if only one officer's life is saved while answering high-risk calls on our behalf, such as robberies, domestic quarrels, or drug apprehensions, the vests are worth every penny! How would Shannon Day, if he were an officer, like to go on one of these calls without a piece of equipment that could save his life?

A police officer's salary is not, and never could be, due compensation for the risks that sometimes must be taken. We should be ashamed of even asking our city's police officers to protect us and our property unless we can at least give them a slight edge over criminals.

Mayor makes new offer

I am so pleased that we voters in Midland may get the opportunity to reconsider our overwhelming defeat last year of a proposed ¼-cent "economic development" sales tax.

Mayor J.D. Faircloth is quoted in the Jan. 5th edition of the Midland Reporter-Telegram as saying, "I think the citizens are fed up with taxes, they made that clear last year. We can't go back to the voters with the same plan, if we go back at all."

True to his word, the mayor is now proposing a different plan — a ½-cent tax. Yeah, that's much more palatable mayor. Please give us a chance to reconsider.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Audrey Hepburn dies at 63

TOLOCHENAZ, Switzerland (AP) — Audrey Hepburn, the Oscar-winning actress beloved for her charm, elegance and aristocratic bearing in films such as "Roman Holiday" and "My Fair Lady," died Wednesday. She was 63.

Hepburn, who had undergone colon cancer surgery last year, died at her home in this small village on the shores of Lake Geneva, according to a relative who answered the door at the residence. She spoke on condition of anonymity.

Hepburn epitomized high-fashion elegance and inspired many designers with her beauty, but spent her last years traveling the globe in jeans and T-shirts working for needy children as a goodwill U.N. ambassador.

As a child, she had herself received help from the agency after surviving the last winter of World War II in Holland on a diet of mostly turnips.

"God has a most beautiful new angel," said actress Elizabeth Taylor in a statement.

Her death "is a painful and irreplaceable loss for her family, friends, for children everywhere and UNICEF," said UNICEF director James Grant. "The children of the world have lost a true friend, and an important and eloquent advocate."

Actor George Peppard, her costar in the 1961 film "Breakfast At Tiffany's" said in a statement from Los Angeles: "It's very sad. A silver bell has been silenced."

Hepburn, who was born in Belgium and was a British citizen, was catapulted to stardom after playing a princess who goes out incognito in Rome and falls in love with a journalist in the 1953 film "Roman Holiday."

She won an Academy Award for best actress for the role. Time magazine said she was "exquisitely blending queenly dignity and bubbling mischief."

Along with "Breakfast At Tiffany's," she was nominated for an Oscar for "Sabrina" (1954); "The Nun's Story" (1959), and "Wait until Dark" (1967).

Her other films include: "Charade" (1963); "Paris When It Sizzles" (1964); "My Fair Lady" (1964); "Always" (1989).

"I never had this huge talent or a great technique," she once said of her acting ability. "But somehow I have had something that contributed."

She was born Audrey Hepburn-Ruston on May 4, 1929, near Brussels, Belgium. Her father, J.A. Hepburn-Ruston, was a banker of English-Irish ancestry, and her mother, Ella van Meemstra, a Dutch baroness.

After her parents divorced, she was sent to a girls' school near London, but then spent the war in Holland.

After returning to London on a ballet scholarship, she was discovered as a model by fashion photographers in London and began studying acting.

After jobs in the chorus and minor roles in British movies, the French author Colette met her and insisted she play the part of Gigi when her novel of that name was adapted to the stage.

The role took Hepburn to Broadway in 1951.

In January, she was too ill to travel to Los Angeles to accept a Screen Actors Guild honor, but sent a message thanking all her directors and co-stars.

"It is they," she said, "who helped and honed, triggered and taught, pushed and pulled, dressed and photographed, and with endless patience, and kindness ... guided and nurtured a totally unknown, insecure, inexperienced, skinny broad into a marketable commodity."

Hepburn stopped making movies regularly in the late 1960s, but returned for several roles, including Marian with Sean Connery's Robin Hood in "Robin and Marian" in 1976. Her last film role was in Steven Spielberg's "Always" in 1989.

Iraq hails Bush's exit , holds to cease-fire

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq gave George Bush one last sneer Wednesday, promising to rebuild a factory blasted by U.S. missiles and appearing to abide by a cease-fire offered to President Clinton.

U.S. planes were reported in the skies over Iraq, but military officials in Washington said there was no fire or provocations directed at American craft.

Saddam Hussein promised Tuesday to stop shooting at allied planes as "a gesture of good will" toward Clinton, who took office Wednesday.

"The cursed criminal George Bush ended his ominous term today and departed for history's trash heap with his hands stained with the blood of people aspiring to freedom," the official Iraqi News Agency commented.

Baghdad also said it would allow U.N. weapons inspection flights to resume without the conditions Iraq imposed earlier.

The 70-member U.N. inspection team — that has been waiting in Bahrain for more than two weeks — will leave for Iraq on Thursday, U.N. regional chief Doug Englund said in Manama. The group includes the 25-member chemical weapons destruction team led by American Paul Brough.

Still, Saddam showed Wednesday he would remain an irritant to Clinton. He ordered the reconstruction of the factory that was seriously damaged in an attack Sunday by U.S. Tomahawk cruise missiles, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

The Pentagon said the factory at Zaafaraniyeh, just south of Baghdad, was an important part of Iraq's nuclear program. Iraq insisted it made moldings and machine tools for private industry.

France, a key member of the U.S.-led coalition that fought the Persian Gulf War and drove Iraq from Kuwait, on Wednesday criticized the cruise missile attack, saying it overstepped the U.N. mandate.

The U.N. Legal Department backed the French in a ruling Wednesday. It said the resolution the allies used to justify declaring "no-fly" zones in southern and northern Iraq makes no reference to the use of military force.

French planes have flown escort for U.S. and British craft during the military strikes against Iraq that began Jan. 13, but Sunday's attack was carried out only by missiles fired from U.S. ships.

Iraq also announced that on Thursday it will reopen a baby formula factory destroyed by allied bombs during the 1991 Gulf War. The United States insisted at the time the facility was a cover for the manufacturer of bacteriological weapons.

More troops fly home; Marines report casualty

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — As hundreds more U.S. combat troops flew home Wednesday, the Marines reported their third casualty in Somalia, a reminder that this lawless land remains dangerous.

Despite the departure of the troops, about 25,000 American soldiers remain in Somalia. The U.S. military command announced that 3,000 Army engineers would spend the next six weeks building and repairing 1,200 miles of roads and bridges in this war-ravaged land.

The departing soldiers, members of a Marine battalion who left for Camp Pendleton, Calif., will probably be the last major unit to go until U.N. peacekeepers take over security in the country, said Marine Col. Fred Peck. More than 1,100 Marines have left for home in the past two days.

Despite generally improved security, Chief Warrant Officer Gus Axelson of Las Cruces, N.M., was wounded in the right shoulder Tuesday night as the convoy he was with headed back to Marine headquarters at the former U.S. Embassy.

Area animals' stock rises

■ Martin County livestock draws praise from the state's major stock shows.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

STANTON — Livestock raised in Martin County "do well in major shows across the state," Greg Jones said Wednesday in wake of the recent Martin County Livestock.

Many FFA agricultural science students and 4-H Club boys and girls whose calves, lambs and hogs fared well in the Stanton show will be taking their livestock projects to major stock shows in Houston, Fort Worth, San Antonio, El Paso and San Angelo, Jones said.

"We've had several breed champions, high-placing animals," in previous major shows, Jones said. "The quality is super good this year."

The Martin County Livestock Show's grand champion steer, a 1,305-pound Maine Anjou-Chianina cross, will be competing in the El Paso Livestock Show, Jones said. Exhibitor of the calf, tabbed Tracer, is Katie Joe Yates, 12, of Tarzan.

Her sister, 9-year-old Samantha Yates, showed the 1,310-pound reserve grand champion, a Hereford calf named Uno, which was bred by Martin County rancher George W. "Tee" Knox of Tarzan.

"We'll be taking him on to Fort Worth (to the Southwestern Exposition and Livestock Show) and see how he does there," Jones said of the big calf. Uno came in third place in the heavy-weight class in the recent Sand Hills Hereford & Quarter Horse Show in Odessa.

"That's pretty good," Jones said.

Hereford cattle are "real hardy and good mothers," Jones said. "It's a good breed of cattle" and among the first English-bred cattle to graze the Texas plains.

In the Stanton show's steer class competition, Samantha Yates showed the champion British breed, and Rawley Mims of Lenorah exhibited the reserve champion.

Rawley Mims also showed the champion American cross-bred steer.

Katie Jo Yates showed the champion European breed, and Kenny Stewart of Stanton showed the reserve champion.

Jeremy Smith of Stanton won the steer show's junior showmanship award, and Kenny Stewart of Stanton won the senior showmanship award.

Steer judge was Sweetwater cattle breeder Wendel Kent.

In the lamb competition, Angela Tubb of Lenorah exhibited the grand champion lamb, a Suffolk, and her brother, Brian Tubb, showed the reserve grand champion lamb.

"They're tough," Jones said of the Tubb lambs.

Jaybo Webb of Stanton showed the champion and reserve champion finewool Rambouillet lambs. Cindy Wells of Lenorah exhibited the champion finewool cross-bred lamb, and Cory Harbison of Stanton showed the reserve champion of that breed.

Angela Tubb exhibited the champion medium-wool lamb, and Brian Tubb showed the reserve champion of that breed.

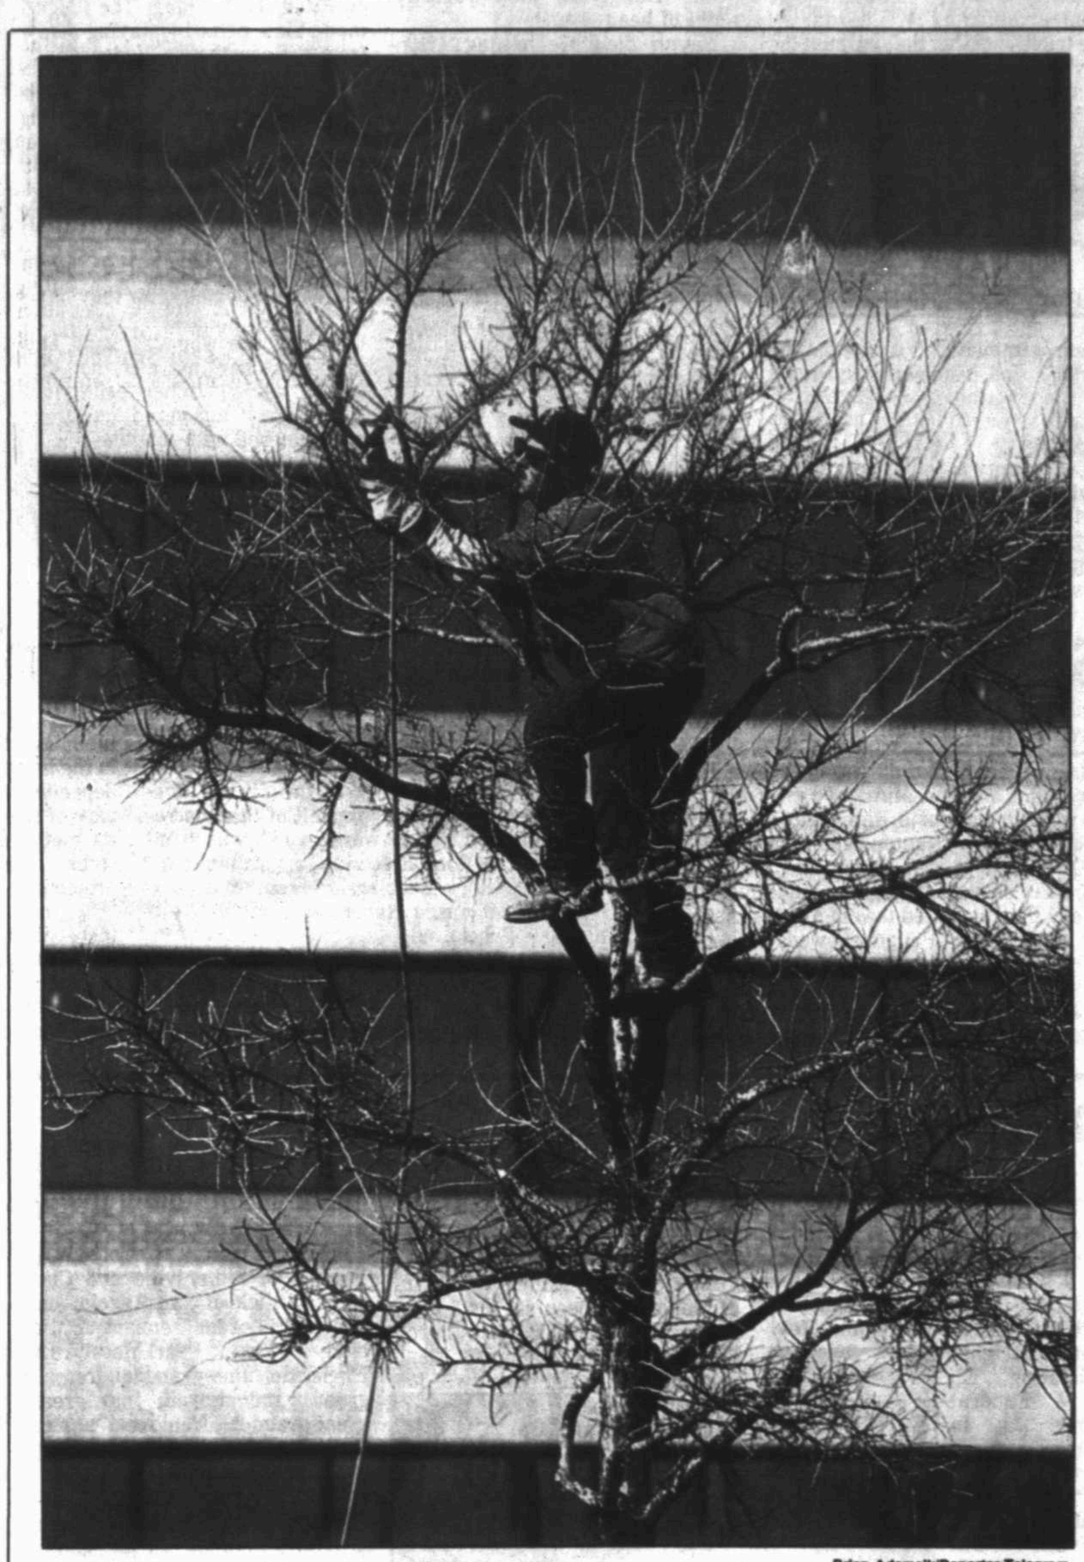

Winning the lamb show's junior showmanship award was Hali Tubb. Angela Tubb won the senior showmanship honors.

Lamb judge was Ricky Spencer, Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) agent in Midland.

In the swine competition, Brady Peugh of Lenorah exhibited the grand champion hog, a Hampshire, and his brother, Cody Peugh, showed the reserve grand champion hog, a crossbred pig.

Stephanie Jones of Stanton showed the champion Duroc, and Cory Harbison of Stanton showed the reserve champion Duroc.

MC hosts free trade symposium

Staff report

A symposium on how the North American Free Trade Agreement can be used to the advantage of Permian Basin businesses is scheduled on Friday at Midland College.

Co-sponsored by Midland College, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the symposium takes place at the college's Chaparral Hall, located in the Student Center. Registration starts at 11:30 a.m., the luncheon and program begin at noon and will continue until 3:15 p.m. Cost is $12.50, including lunch. Chamber of Commerce members will pay $10.

Registration should be made at the college's South Facility, 201 West Florida. For registration forms or more information, call the college's Business and Economic Development Center (BEDC) at 684-4100, the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, 682-2960, or the Midland Chamber of Commerce, 683-3381.

"This symposium provides a special opportunity for business owners and entrepreneurs to learn of trade opportunities and to develop an in-depth understanding of border economics in the 1990's," said Jim Flores, director of Midland College's BEDC.

Opening the seminar are Flores, Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth, and Midland College President David E. Daniel.

Keynote speaker will be Don Nibbe, editor/publisher of the Twin Plant News magazine in El Paso. Nibbe is a leading expert on the twin-plant industry and trade with Mexico.

Luis de la Calle, from Mexico's Office for Free Trade Agreement Negotiations, served as an advisor during the long NAFTA talks which recently concluded with adoption of the agreement. He will speak on the provisions of the Free Trade Agreement.

Also speaking will be Carlos Lara, director of the Hispanic Business Affairs Office from the Mexican Investment Board. His topic centers around the opportunities in Mexico available through NAFTA.

City health department begins wellness series

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Diabetes, when undetected, can be a killer, according to Ellen Godfrey, R.N., with the Midland City County Health Department.

But the disease can be controlled. "And there is no reason you can't all be comfortable and happy," Godfrey told dozens of senior citizens Wednesday.

Following a lunch at Southeast Senior Center, diners stayed to watch a video on detecting diabetes and the proper care to control it.

"About 11 million Americans suffer from diabetes and many of them don't even know they have it. Sometimes there are no obvious symptoms," Ms. Godfrey said, encouraging seniors to have their blood sugar-level checked.

She said about 400,000 Texans have been diagnosed with diabetes, and another 400,000 people are living in the state are unaware they have it. "About 2,000 Texans will die this year from impairment or with blindness because of diabetes," she said.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Midland City County Health Department Nurse Ellen Godfrey, left, answers a question from seminar attendee Allee Shaw, who is not diabetic, about the symptoms of diabetes.

Ms. Godrey presented the first health department program — in a series of educational programs planned — this year.

Health department administrator Monette Burke said the a survey was taken to see which programs the seniors at the center wanted presented.

"Last year, we did programs on colds and flu, and respiratory problems," Ms. Burke said. Due to survey responses, the health department plans to present talks on hypertension, sickle cell anemia, and how to read pharmaceutical labels."

"I really appreciate these programs. I attend them all," said Jimmie Rolison. "I attend school — Midland College sends teachers here to teach classes. I sing in the choir, exercise, eat good meals and do everything right here on this site."

Charity Lawrence said she was a newcomer to the center. "This is only my third time coming here," she said. "But since I am a nurses' aide I take care of a lot of these people so I know a lot of people here. The food is delicious and I really enjoy the people and socializing."

Court backs sexual harassment ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has upheld a ruling protecting the privacy of people claiming sexual harassment against a former Odessa police officer.

Without comment, the Supreme Court on Wednesday upheld an 8th Court of Appeals' ruling that only parts of a 1989 investigation into sexual harassment claims against former Odessa police Lt. John Ellen be released under the Texas Open Records Act.

Jack McNamara, publisher of The Nimby News in Alpine, made an open records request to the City of Odessa in August 1991, seeking access to files of the city's investigation of Ellen, who later became police chief in Alpine.

The Texas Attorney General determined the files should be released.

But attorneys for Ellen disputed the attorney general's opinion, claiming invasion of privacy. The case went to state district court.

Both the trial court and the 8th Court of Appeals determined that a 12-page affidavit from Ellen concerning the sexual harassment allegations and a three-page board of inquiry report be released with the names of witnesses who testified against Ellen deleted.

The attorney general appealed the decision, demanding full disclosure.

" 'Because the information involves a prominent former public employee and allegations of sexual harassment in a public workplace . . .' (it) must be disclosed," the attorney general argued.

But the appeals court and Supreme Court disagreed, saying the privacy of the claimants must be protected.

An ode to the rancher, the plains' tireless resource

STANTON — Weathered and weary. That's the way a lot of ranchers and cowboys and farmers and their hands wind up after a season of hard work on the plains.

Todd

That's the way of life when you're working the land, working with the land, and asking the Good Lord for rain, preferably at the "right" tines.

It's a good life.

Cowboy or plowman, they may be weathered and weary, 'til rest is done, but happy and pleased with their roles in life. Maybe they're most broke from sale to sale, harvest to harvest, loan to loan. Maybe they'll hit pay dirt once in a while if the market suits their fancy and their goods.

Sam Houston looks the part of the ol' rancher who is still fighting the elements, wet and dry weather, cold and icy, hot and droughty.

Drinking drug-store coffee following an icy-cold day on the ranch, Houston looks the role of the leathery and kind cowboy who's far more content in his work than he will ever admit.

"Don't get married to a herd of cattle," lamented Houston, whose forefathers starting ranching here well over a hundred years ago.

It's a consuming venture.

"Yes, sir," Houston said, "if you do it right."

And that's what folks, dedicated to their life's work, do: Toil, toil, toil.

If you are raising livestock or rearing children and doing it right, your soul is committed.

You do what it takes.

Ranchers break the ice to free water for their livestock in the dead of winter.

Parents do the same to help free the spirit and mind of their children.

Out on the plains, the rancher and his hands allow the cattle to graze heartily but, if they are good caretakers, not enough on one pasture to ruin the land. If the grassland is lean, they bring in supplemental feed.

Farmers who are good caretakers of the land ensure that the land's fertility is rich. They return to the land that which is the land's. It is their sustenance and their paycheck.

Loving parents, too, share their experience, strength and hope with their children. They educate them in the ways they know to be true. And many fathers and mothers call on teachers from the outside to counsel their children.

And, similar to man's ideal custom of resting on the Sabbath to restore a body and mind grown weary from a week's work, farmers who practice good stewardship ever so often let the land go fallow.

Do not all living things work — toil and grow — and then rest to muster the energy to carry out their purposes?

There is always something to mend. Things are always breaking on the farm, at the ranch, around the house.

The windmill breaks down. The bank's interest rates go up. The barbed-wire fence starts falling down. The cultivator breaks. The clutch goes out. The coyotes prowl for tender meals. There's a misunderstanding at home or school. The baby falls ill. The teen-ager gets a broken heart. The roof leaks.

There are places to go and things to do.

There are fences to mend.

There's money to be made and spent and socked away.

There are kind words, sometimes firm, to be said.

There are hugs and caresses to impart.

Those folks who are the genuine article on the ranch, on the farm, at the house, at the workplace any place, and at places of learning, reading, writing, doing, inventing, making, composing, selling, buying, studying, repairing, mending, healing and building all, in the ideal world, wish to do their best and somehow to work and play at full throttle.

And when it is time to rest, they rest well.

It is all right, must be so, Sam Houston, to be weathered and well worn like fine machinery tuned to the task, and made to work as perfect as any thing on Earth can be.

Security measures vary in state courtrooms

By Suzanne Miller
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — The locked courtrooms and barren hallways were ironic reminders Wednesday of the triple shooting that erupted the day before at the George Allen Courthouse.

Hai Van Huynh opened fire in the hallway outside the 304th State District Court Tuesday, shooting his wife, Ly Dang, and a teen-age bystander before turning the gun on himself.

Ms. Dang, 26, died Tuesday night of head wounds.

Huynh died Wednesday afternoon at Parkland Memorial Hospital. Rogerio Gutierrez, 16, also at Parkland, was listed in good condition with a gunshot wound to the leg.

The shooting angered many judges who have been pleading with county officials to tighten security at the building. The judges made their point by staying away from the courthouse Wednesday.

Jurors also were told they wouldn't be needed until further notice.

Otherwise, business continued as usual in the building where marriage licenses, child support papers and other documents are processed.

In an emergency meeting late Tuesday, Dallas County commissioners approved $200,000 for detectors and other security measures.

twice a month. "We have daily lunches and exercise daily," she said, noting that an average of 70-80 diners eat lunch at the center each day.

Community & Senior Services of Midland Inc. manages the center and prepares the meals, and the YMCA provides a trained professional to conduct the exercise classes.

"Having nutritious meals, daily exercise — and especially the socializing — really improves the quality of life (for the seniors)," Ms. Smith said.

Participants viewed a video on living active lives with diabetes, narrated by Wilford Brimley of television's "Our House." Brimley was diagnosed with Type II diabetes several years ago.

Nurse Godfrey said, "A lot of people are walking around with diabetes that do not know they have it."

Patting one woman's hand and reassuring her that diet, not just insulin, could help her feel better, Ms. Godrey answered questions and bantered with attendees.

"Having diabetes may cause you to crave sweets. You'll think, if I don't get that chocolate I will go out of my mind," the nurse said, to laughter and heads nodding in recognition.

Ms. Burke said the department planned to offer lectures the third Wednesday of each month for the next six months.

"We are starting with the seniors, but we would like to have family health clinics at this center, immunize kids, and gear it for the whole community," she said. "We have visiting nurses come out and give blood pressure checks, but the big part of public health is immunization."

STOCK: Area livestock scores strong in shows

(From 1B)

Josh Carson of Stanton exhibited the champion OPB (other pure breeds), and Jody Brooks of Lomax showed the reserve champion OPB.

Cody Peugh showed the champion cross-bred hog, and Tandi Peugh showed the reserve champion cross.

Clint Schwelke of Lenorah won the swine show's junior showmanship award, and Tandi Peugh earned the senior showmanship honors.

Hog judge was Gary Patterson, TAEX agent at Farwell.

For his volunteer work in the overall livestock show, Larry McCampbell of Stanton received the Top Hand Award, which was sponsored by Cap Rock Electric Cooperative.

The Cap Rock Scholarship went to Kenny Stewart, and Casey Robertson won the Newman-Sale Scholarship.

All told, 65 Martin County youths exhibited 168 steers, hogs and lambs in the 1993 livestock show, Jones said.

"They develop responsibility, and that is the main, key thing," Jones said of boys and girls in the livestock program. "You've got animals depending upon that youth for feed, taking care of them, just like a baby depending upon its mother. Then, they learn about the livestock industry" through their livestock projects.

"It may not be exactly like things are out there (in the marketplace), but it's pretty close," Jones said of the 4-H Club and FFA livestock programs. "It teaches them how to get along with other people, how to win, how to lose. That's very important."

Jury convicts trio in civil rights deaths

HOUSTON (AP) — Three members of a radical polygamist group were convicted Wednesday of civil rights violations and other federal charges in the 1988 slayings of three former sect members and a young girl.

The defendants each were convicted on nine counts and acquitted on one weapons charge in the killings, which prosecutors claimed were carried out to bring on the "kingdom of God."

However, the jury said it had not yet reached a decision on four charges alleging conspiracy and murder-for-hire. U.S. District Judge Simeon Lake urged the jurors to go back and try to reach a verdict on the remaining charges.

Jurors deliberated for about an more before telling the judge they wanted to review some testimony. The judge let them go home for the day, telling them to return Thursday morning when the requested evidence would be available.

William Heber LeBaron, 28, Patricia LeBaron, 27, and Douglas Lee Barlow, 31, were convicted of charges stemming from the July 27, 1988, fatal shootings, which occurred almost simultaneously in three locations.

The three were found guilty of several charges, including tampering with a witness, conspiracy, a weapon's violation and interfering with a person's religious beliefs. They also were convicted of the Racketeering Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act.

Prosecutor Mike Shelby said it was the first time in the nation the obstruction charge has been used since enacted June 24, 1988 — just three days before the murders. The law, part of the hate crimes legislation, makes it illegal to obstruct a person's right to practice their religion.

So far, each defendant faces up to life in prison without parole, plus 25 years, when sentenced by the judge.

Jennifer Chynoweth, 8, her father, Duane Chynoweth, 31, his brother, Mark Chynoweth, 36, and Ed Marston, 32, were gunned down at three sites in Houston and suburban Dallas.

The three men had been targeted for death because they left the Church of the First Born of the Lamb of God, founded by the late polygamous leader Ervil LeBaron, prosecutors said. The girl was killed because she was a witness to her father's death, they said.

"I'm in shock. I'm happy for what they got. I'm relieved," said a smiling Laura Chynoweth, whose husband and daughter were killed. She said the case was especially painful since she had known the defendants for years, and once considered them part of her family.

"I feel a lot for them (the defendants). I still have good memories from the past," she said. "But I know that they killed."

The defendants showed little emotion when the partial verdict was read.

"We have prepared them for a verdict like this," said defense attorney Tom Berg, who represents William Heber LeBaron. Berg and the other two defense attorney said they planned to appeal.

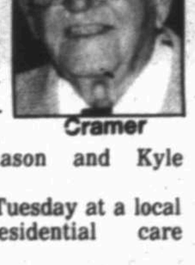

Patricia and William are the natural children of Ervil LeBaron, and Barlow is his stepson. In all, LeBaron had 54 children by 13 wives.

The jury spent about eight hours deliberating on Tuesday and Wednesday before delivering the partial verdict.

DEATHS

A.B. Cramer

Services for A.B. (Burrel) Cramer of Stanton have been set for 2 p.m. today at First United Methodist Church in Coahoma with Dr. Jarrell Sharp and Rev. Cletus Beights officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Cramer

Pallbearers will Wendel Shive, Bill Bates, Buddy Anderson, Lonnie Anderson, Cramer Thomason and Kyle Wheeler.

Cramer died Tuesday at a local retirement residential care facility.

He was born Nov. 28, 1904, in Copperas Cove and moved to Howard County at the age of nine with his parents, who were early pioneers of Coahoma. He married Ruby Lea Drake on July 26, 1924, in Big Spring.

In 1924, Cramer farmed north of Big Spring on the Guitar Ranch and later worked for a pipeline company in Ponca City, Okla. He joined Mobile Oil Co. in 1928, retiring in 1960. He then worked as a park ranger at Big Spring State Park, retiring after eight years of service. He moved to Midland in 1975.

Cramer was an amateur archeologist and a member of the Gem and Mineral Society. He was a charter member of the Historical Society of Big Spring, a charter member of the Coahoma Lions' Club, a Scoutmaster in Coahoma and also had managed the American Legion ballclub in Coahoma. He was active with the advisory council at Hillcrest Manor, and was a member of St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

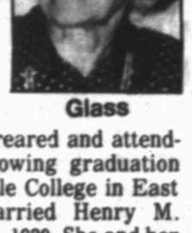

He was preceded in death by one daughter, Joan Cramer.

Survivors include his wife; two daughters, Berylene House of Midland and Donna Roberts of Edmond, Okla.; one brother, Putman Cramer of Houston; six grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to St. Luke's United Methodist Church in Midland.

Mrs. Rhyne died Tuesday at a local hospital.

Officials seek robbery tip

ODESSA — Odessa Crime Stoppers is seeking information which could help solve an aggravated robbery that occurred at the La Bodega Restaurant on East Seventh Street on Jan. 9 at 8:45 a.m.

The manager had opened up to allow her employees in to start the morning clean up prior to opening up for business. The manager then went to her upstairs office to do the morning reports.

She heard someone coming up the stairs and was confronted by a Hispanic male, who told her to "give me your lana," Spanish slang for money. The suspect then pointed a small black handgun at the manager and told her to put the money into a tan plastic bag he handed her. The suspect then forced her to open the upstairs door for him to leave.

The suspect left with more than $5,000. He is described as 5 feet, 7 inches tall, 110 pounds with a small build, wearing a dark ski mask, faded jeans, dark colored shirt, gloves and tennis shoes.

The first caller with information that leads to the arrest and indictment of person or persons involved in this crime could collect up to $1,000 cash reward this week by calling Odessa Crime Stoppers at 333-TIPS or Midland Crime Stopper at 694-TIPS.

One dead, two injured in shooting

DALLAS (AP) — A 26-year-old woman died late Tuesday from gunshot wounds she received from her estranged husband while trying to seek court refuge earlier in the day, officials said.

Ly Dang, died at about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday, said Liz Winter, Parkland Memorial Hospital's on-call spokeswoman.

Dang and a teen-age bystander were shot in a sixth-floor corridor of the George Allen Sr. Courts Building at about 9:30 a.m. Dang was waiting with her husband Hai Van Huynh, 30, outside a courtroom when witnesses said the man pulled a .38-caliber revolver from his coat, put it to his wife's head and shot her several times.

The couple had a hearing scheduled Tuesday concerning a restraining order Dang had placed on Huynh.

Parkland Memorial Hospital mistakenly reported earlier that Huynh died. But Ms. Winter said that Huynh, remained in critical condition Tuesday night and it was his wife who was dead.

The shooting was the second in six months in a Metroplex courthouse, renewing concerns over security measures in public buildings.

Rogelio Gutierrez, 16, was upgraded to good condition late Tuesday with a gunshot wound to the left leg.

Officials and witnesses said Huynh approached Ms. Dang in the hallway outside the 304th state District Court about 9:30 a.m.

"I was sitting outside the courtroom at the juvenile court," said Robin Presley. "I heard a shot and I looked to my right. I heard another one so I didn't know whether this person was shooting at someone or if he was just running through shooting."

Added Ms. Presley's husband, Don, "He just came out of nowhere. There were attorneys sitting around talking with people about their cases.

"All the sudden you just heard a gunshot. I kind of turned and looked to see what it was. Then you heard two more gunshots, and everybody was running," he said.

Sheriff's Lt. Larry Forsyth said the couple were on Tuesday's docket for a custody hearing when the shooting broke out. Li Dang's family members say that she had been seeking protection and that Huynh had a history of violence.

Lawmakers question prep funding plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Senate Education Committee members questioned Wednesday whether their chairman's school funding proposal would pass muster with other lawmakers and a Texas Supreme Court that's demanded reform.

Sen. Bill Ratliff, who last week took over as Education head, said such questions are natural since the Supreme Court has three times thrown out school funding laws.

"All we can do is take our best shot," Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, said. "If they don't like this one, I'd like to see what they have to offer."

Ratliff said the committee may vote Friday.

Questions at a Wednesday hearing included whether the plan would allow unconstitutional funding disparities among school districts, and if the elimination of some special funding allotments would doom the measure in the House.

Ratliff's measure would continue the current "Robin Hood" system of school funding, in which some local school property tax money is redistributed within single or multi-county education districts, or CEDs.

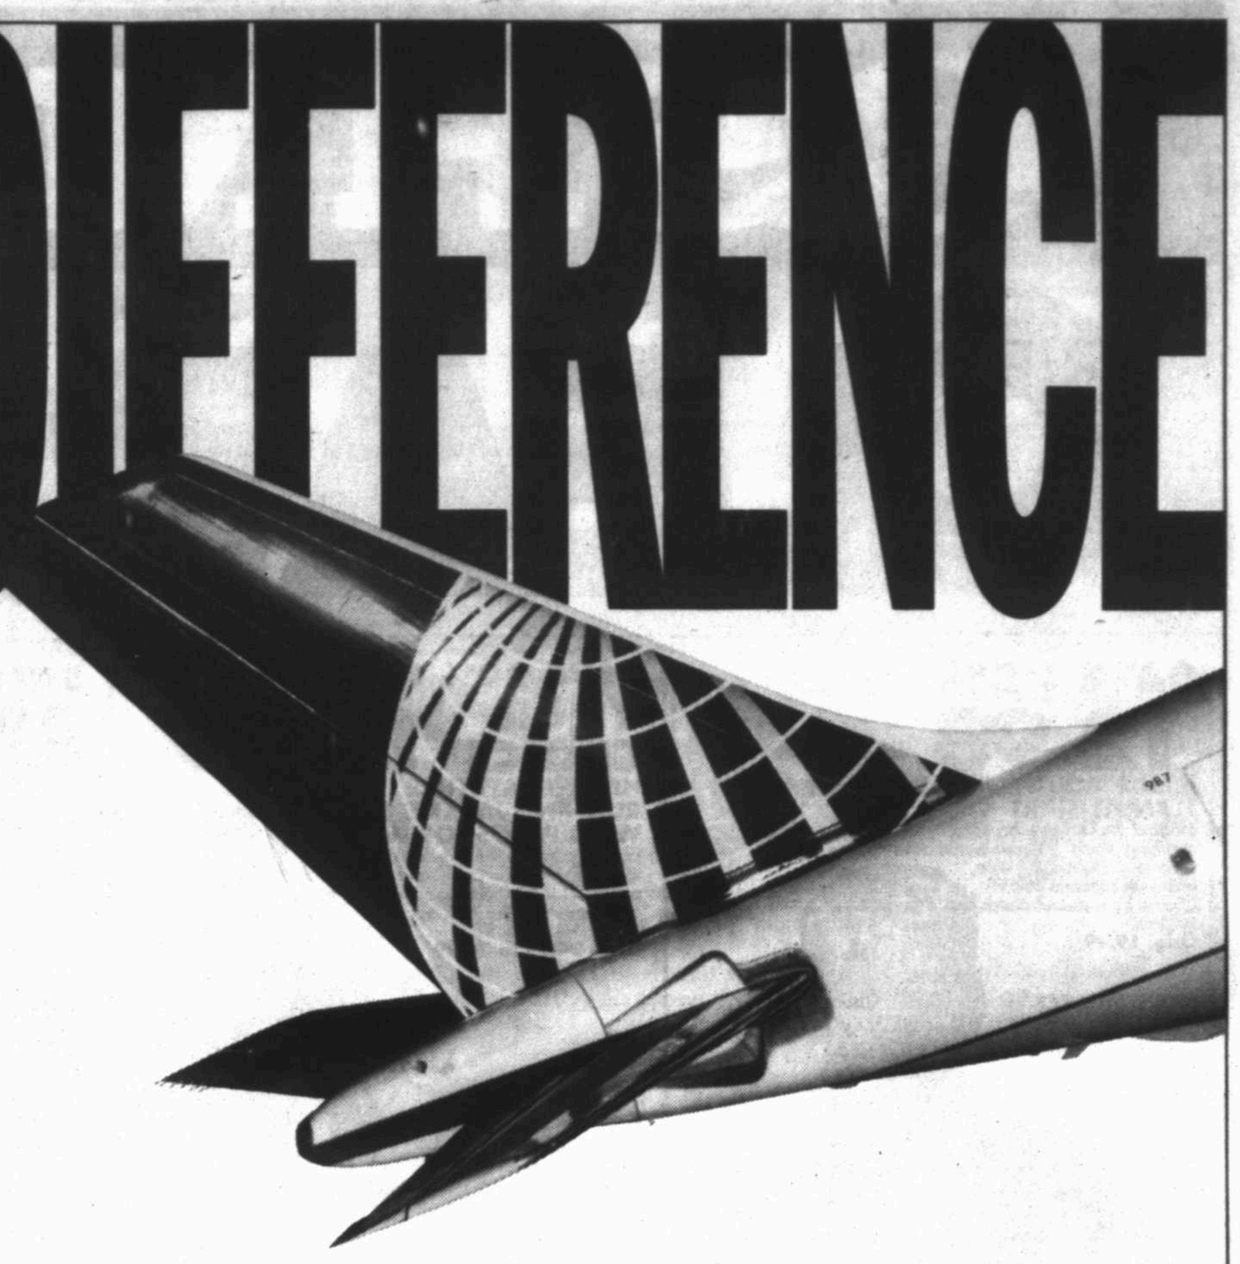

The system, passed by lawmakers in 1991, was meant to meet a Supreme Court order to equalize funding among property-rich and poor school districts. Schools are funded mainly through local taxes and state aid.

But the Supreme Court said the current plan violates the state constitution by imposing a statewide property tax, and by levying a property tax without voter approval. It has ordered lawmakers to come up with a constitutional measure by June 1.

Ratliff has proposed a constitutional amendment to keep the CED system. That would require two-thirds support of the Legislature and voter approval on a statewide ballot.

If the constitutional amendment failed, a backup provision would allow voters in education districts to decide on authorizing the CED tax.

Government closes due to power failure

Associated Press

A new storm blew into the Pacific Northwest on Wednesday with wind to 100 mph and heavy snow or rain, closing highways, idling ferry boats and knocking out power to more than 600,000 customers, including Washington's statehouse. At least two deaths were blamed on the storm.

"Trees and lines are down all over the place," said Sue Veseth, spokeswoman for Tacoma City Light in Washington.

Freezing rain and snow on parts of the Plains made travel hazardous and closed dozens of schools, and up to 10 inches of rain caused scattered flooding in Louisiana.

The National Weather Service reported wind gusts along coastal Oregon to more than 100 mph, up to 70 mph in the northeastern mountains and more than 60 mph in the Willamette Valley. Gusts to 80 mph hit western Washington.

The worst power outages were in Washington. The state Capitol building in Olympia lost power at midmorning, plunging the House into darkness just after lawmakers had convened.

Thousands of state employees were sent home after officials were told power wouldn't be restored before 6 p.m., Senate Secretary Marty Brown said. He said it was believed to be the first time state government had shut down because of a power failure.

Puget Sound Power & Light Co. reported about 400,000 customers without power; Seattle City Light reported 92,000; and the Snohomish County Public Utility District reported 150,000. Other utilites also reported thousands of customers without power.

Two men were killed by falling trees, according to the King County medical examiner's office in Seattle. One of the accidents was on Highway 18 near Maple Valley, the other in the Kirkland-Redmond area. No other details were immediately available.

"I've never seen so many trees blown down in my life," said Bruce Holland, a commercial fisherman in Cathlamet, along the Columbia River in southwest Washington.

High wind forced cancellation of some Puget Sound ferry runs, Washington State Ferries spokeswoman Susan Harris said.

Interstate 5 was temporarily closed during the morning south of Toledo, Wash., when power lines fell across all four lanes.

Floating bridges across Seattle's Lake Washington also were closed, including Interstate 90. A floatplane flipped over on the lake, but the several people on board were reported safe.

To the south, rain or snow spread over all of Northern California, north of a line from San Jose to Merced to Yosemite National Park. Honeydew got 7.60 inches of rain in the 24 hours up to 4 a.m. Up to 10 inches of snow was reported in the northern Sierra Nevada. Snow also was reported over parts of Nevada, Idaho and Montana.

Freezing rain fell during the afternoon in parts of Iowa, Missouri, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois.

Kevorkian assists No. 9

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — Dr. Jack Kevorkian was present at his ninth assisted suicide Wednesday, and his attorney said more would come before a temporary state law banning the practice takes effect.

Jack Elmer Miller, 53, was the first man to die with help from Kevorkian, who has helped eight women die since 1990.

Miller inhaled carbon monoxide through a mask at 9:10 a.m. at his home in Wayne County's Huron Township, lawyer Geoffrey Fieger said. Miller suffered from bone cancer that had left him in excruciating pain, Fieger said.

"There will be more deaths," Fieger said. "There is a feeling of desperation among many people out there that time is running out."

Effective March 30, a state law will make assisted suicide a felony for 15 months while the issue is studied. Violators face up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

Miller was diagnosed with cancer in June 1992, Fieger said. A few weeks ago his doctors told him he had only days to live, Fieger said, but he continued to live in terrible pain.

Miller, a tree trimmer, had five children, Fieger said. His fiancee, Cynthia Lee Coffey, was present at his suicide, the lawyer said.

Coffey wrote to Kevorkian about two months ago about Miller's desire to kill himself, Fieger said. Miller had four siblings who were aware of his plans to die but did not want to be present, Fieger said.

Miller's death will be investigated as a homicide, said Township Police Chief James Caygill. The results of the investigation will be turned over to the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office.

Miller's death was the first involving Kevorkian outside suburban Detroit's Oakland County.

Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair would not comment on whether Kevorkian would be charged with a crime.

"If you have a direct, intense action that causes the death, then that's a homicide," O'Hair said. "If you don't have direct involvement, then that's what's being referred to as assisted suicide. That's a grey, murky area right now."

Miller released the flow of deadly gas by removing a clip that pinched closed a tube running between the gas canister and a face mask, Fieger said.

Fieger said Kevorkian met several times with Miller and his fiancee and had urged Miller to go on with his life. But when doctors were unable to ease Miller's pain, Fieger said, the man insisted he wanted to die.

Kevorkian, a retired Royal Oak pathologist, has been crusading for the rights of terminally or chronically ill people to commit suicide with a doctor's help.

But hours after Kevorkian helped two women end their lives using carbon monoxide in December, Gov. John Engler signed the bill that will outlaw the practice. Kevorkian has said he intended to ignore the law because he considers it immoral.

Governor pleads innocent to inauguration fund theft

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. Guy Hunt pleaded innocent Wednesday to 13 felony charges in an alleged $200,000 inauguration fund swindle.

"I'm not guilty, your honor," Hunt told Circuit Judge William Gordon.

Hunt then walked out of the courtroom with his wife, Helen. He was surrounded by aides and lawyers and did not answer reporters' questions.

Hunt's lawyers also filed papers asking a judge to dismiss the charges.

The governor and three associates were indicted Dec. 28 on charges of conspiring to move $200,000 from a tax-exempt 1987 inauguration fund to Hunt's campaign fund, then to convert it to Hunt's personal use.

Hunt, Alabama's only Republican governor this century, has described the indictment as a political attack directed by Democratic state Attorney General Jimmy Evans.

He has said he did nothing illegal, but admitted that some mistakes may have been made by those overseeing the funds. Hunt's attorney, George Beck, said Tuesday that Hunt used money from his campaign fund, but it was all legal.

As Hunt appeared in court for the brief arraignment, about 400 people rallied at the Capitol in support of the governor.

Senate confirms Bentsen for Treasury post

By Ron Hutcheson
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Senate confirmed Lloyd Bentsen of Texas as Treasury secretary on Wednesday, clearing the way for Bob Krueger to become the state's newest U.S. senator.

Krueger, who was selected by Gov. Ann Richards to replace Bentsen, is expected to take the oath of office on Thursday. The New Braunfels Democrat is giving up a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission to come to Washington.

Senators approved Bentsen's nomination to the Cabinet post by voice vote in a bipartisan display of support that included glowing tributes from his colleagues. The Senate also confirmed Rep. Les Aspin of Wisconsin as defense secretary and Warren Christopher, a former official in the Jimmy Carter administration, as secretary of state.

Several other Cabinet appointments are scheduled for confirmation votes Thursday.

Bentsen's departure from the Senate triggered a free-for-all among politicians hoping to replace him. Krueger, a former House member with a reputation as a political moderate, hopes to retain the job in a May 1 special election that already has drawn several challengers.

Authorities arrest airman for shooting

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — An airman accused of fatally shooting his wife at a South Carolina Air Force base said Wednesday he committed the crime and would have escaped if authorities had not gotten lucky.

Jeromy Willis, who was arraigned on a murder charge Wednesday morning in Brownsville, told television stations KGBT and KRGV he shot his wife. An extradition hearing will not be necessary because the crime falls under federal jurisdiction since it occurred on the base, according to the District Attorney's office.

Willis, who fled after the Jan. 4 shooting at Myrtle Beach Air Force Base, was arrested Tuesday night at a Brownsville motel by the FBI, Texas Rangers and police, said Joe Hanley, an FBI spokesman in San Antonio.

Tuesday morning, authorities found a car leased by Willis near the international bridge leading into Matamoros, Mexico.

Australia tough on netters

■ No. 6 Michael Chang and No. 9 Richard Krajicek fall as the brutal Australian Open begins to take its toll.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — Flies the size of hummingbirds, birds as loud as cats in heat, heat as brutal as a sauna. Tough place to play tennis, the Australian Open.

And the wind, the dry, swirling wind out of nowhere, breaking the stadium silence with a clattery tumult of cups and plates, plastic forks and knives.

Players are screaming, fans are fainting, ballboys are woozy.

No wonder upsets and fines are rising with the mercury — 129 degrees Wednesday, Jim Courier slapped $1,000 for a "visible obscenity," Michael Stich $500 for an audible one. Three days and nearly $6,000 in fines overall.

At least Courier and Stich are still here. Four other men's seeds are gone, and the second round isn't even over. No. 6 Michael Chang and No. 9 Richard Krajicek followed the path of no resistance taken by No. 4 Boris Becker and No. 8 Ivan Lendl in the first round.

Injuries and illness are taking their tolls, too. Anders Jarryd, Becker's conqueror, quit in mid-match against Todd Woodbridge because of a strained calf. Jennifer Capriati, fighting a fever and upset stomach, pulled out of her doubles match with partner Steffi Graf.

Capriati will have to make a quick recovery to get past the second round Thursday night, despite facing a relatively easy opponent, Florencia Labat of Argentina.

Nobody gets a free pass here, except those buzzing, pesty, monster flies and chattering ravens. Just ask David Wheaton, who had to overcome more than Chang.

"It was weird," Wheaton said of the chaotic third set in his 6-4, 6-3, 1-6, 6-3 victory. "There was the wind coming up, stuff blowing all over the place. The flies were sticking to me like glue. And then the shadow was moving across the court, so I'd serve and I didn't know what side of the shadow to run in on. The volley was starting from the shadow and going into the light."

Pity the players, but save some for the innocent bystanders. Six fans fainted, five ballboys suffered heat exhaustion and about 25 others were treated for heat-induced nausea and headaches.

Super fan to player

■ Emmitt Smith has been to the Super Bowl, but never as a player.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Emmitt Smith has been to a Super Bowl in Pasadena but the last time he was just a spectator.

Smith will be there again on Jan. 31 as a member of the Dallas Cowboys, who will take the Rose Bowl field against the Buffalo Bills in Super Bowl XXVII.

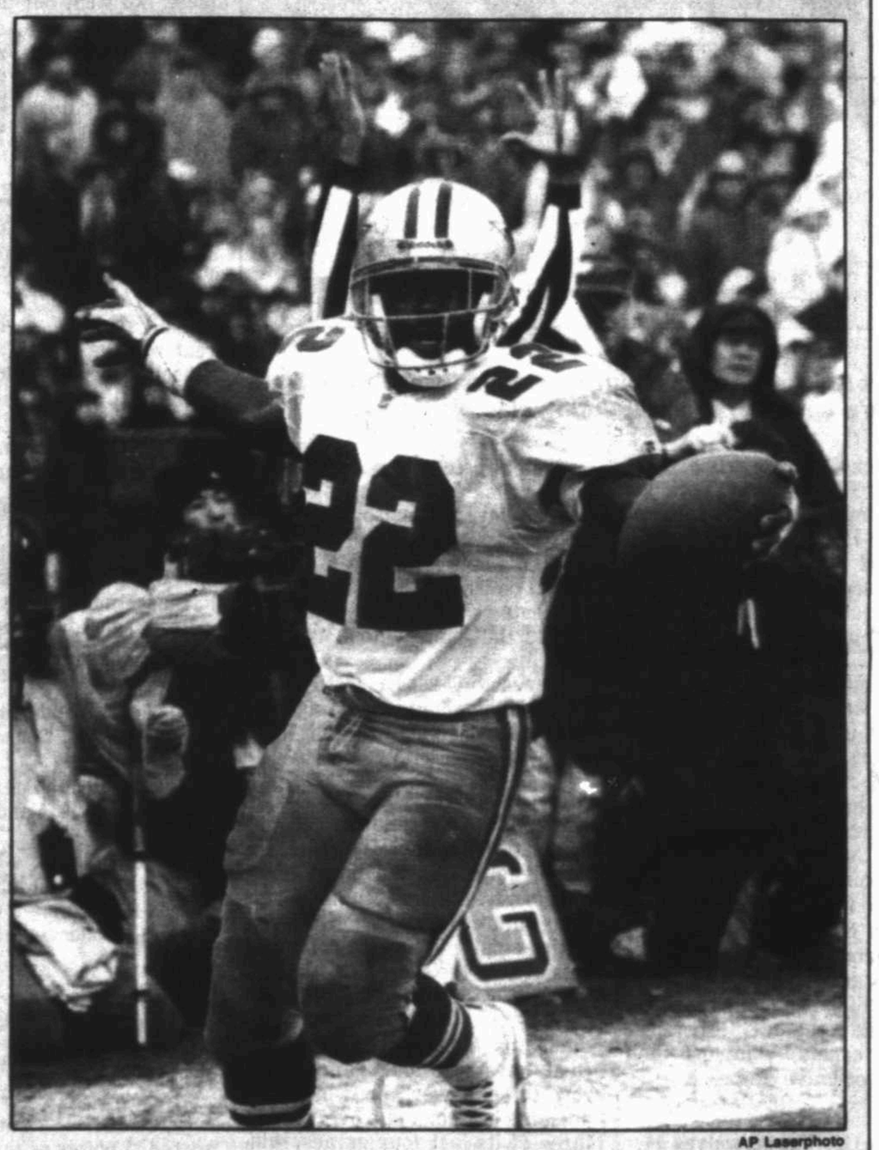

Smith, the NFL's leading rusher, was unstoppable as a running back for Escambia, Fl., High School. He posted the third highest career rushing and scoring totals in national high school history with 8,804 yards and 106 touchdowns.

Smith was named Player of the Year by Parade Magazine and USA Today. He also won the Gatorade Player of the Year which got him a ticket to Super Bowl XXI between the New York Giants and Denver Broncos in Pasadena.

"I was kind of going for the Giants in that game," he said. "I was sitting there wondering if I'd ever play in a Super Bowl. I think it's ironic that the first one I get to play in is in Pasadena where I was doing my dreaming that day back in 1987. Believe me, this is a thrilling situation."

Smith, who has rushed for over 100 yards in each of the Cowboys playoff victories over Philadelphia and San Francisco, set himself a goal that day six years ago in California.

Chaps face key game with NMJC

■ Midland College hopes to shake a three-game conference losing streak, but this is a road game.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

HOBBS, N.M. — The Midland College Chaparrals hope to shake a three-game Western Junior College Athletic Conference losing streak when they travel to New Mexico Junior College today. Tip-off is set for 8:30 p.m. Midland time, 7:30 p.m. in Hobbs, N.M.

The Chaps, fresh off a well-played, but stunning 64-61 loss to South Plains last Saturday, are expected to see the return of Shawn Morris and Kelon Haynie, a pair of sophomores who served a one-game suspension for unspecified reasons during the South Plains game.

In a development just as stunning as MC's loss to South Plains was the Texans' loss to Frank Phillips Monday night, 110-108 in overtime. The Texans were 15-5 overall and tied for second in the conference with a 3-1 record going into the game at Borger. FPC was 1-14, 0-4 before the win.

Midland, 14-5 overall and 1-3 in conference, is now in fifth place, one-half game ahead of New Mexico Military, which lost 94-64 to Howard Monday night. In Monday's other game, Odessa downed Clarendon, 123-86.

Elsewhere around the conference tonight, Howard visits South Plains, and Clarendon hosts FPC. OC and NMMI are idle.

The Chaps return home next Monday against NMMI. Tip-off is set for 7:30 p.m.

Tonight's game from Hobbs can be heard on KCRS (550 AM).

Rangers' woes may be cured by veteran additions

By Bill Price
Staff writer

When the Texas Rangers scored more runs than any other team in major league baseball in the 1991 season, they finished in third place, just eight games over .500 with an 85-77 record.

What had been the most glaring problem for the Rangers in recent years was magnified. Texas needed pitching.

And while the Rangers may not have gone out and signed any Doug Drabeks or Jack Morrises this offseason, they did come away with four additions to the staff that can only help.

Hailed Toronto closer Tom Henke, starter Charlie Leibrandt from Atlanta, Craig Lefferts, a starter/reliever from Baltimore and middle reliever Bob Patterson from Pittsburgh are all new Rangers.

And according to Patterson, who was in Midland Wednesday with the Rangers' Winter Caravan Tour, the only thing the Rangers lack now is confidence.

"You must know that when you go out on the field you're supposed to win. You're not just supposed to play a game and get beat, you're not supposed to just be there in uniform. You're supposed to win the game," said Patterson, a member of the Pirate teams that won three consecutive National League East titles.

"The offense is there, and the pitching and defense are coming right

Weather good, bad news for locals

Bad weather has thrown a major kink in the District 4-5A basketball race, leaving loop squads having to play on back-to-back nights, starting today.

Williamson

Tuesday's scheduled games went East with the recent foul weather, forcing the change in schedule. The games could have been played Tuesday because Mr. Winter wasn't nearly as nasty as it could have been. Still, it was probably a good decision not to put kids on the road during those conditions.

However, any change in schedule does throw a burden on the district teams involved. It could end up having a major impact on playoff berths while playing when tired and road weary.

With that ultimate goal (making the playoffs) in mind, we see the forced two-day run as potentially having good and bad results for the Midland squads.

In fact, it looks good for three of the four local teams and that's about all you can ask for in this dire situation.

The local weather loser is the Midland High girls, but with a two-game lead over the field, we still feel like this stretch won't make much difference. The MHS girls may be good enough this year to overcome a cold slap in the face.

The MHS girls must hit the road twice, playing San Angelo tonight and at Abilene High Friday. Those may be MHS' two strongest opponents in the league. Even if MHS should lose both games, the Lady Bulldogs would still have a share of first place. The problem is that Midland Lee is next on the agenda Tuesday and you never want to enter the cross town rivalry needing a win when you don't have to.

But it is different for the other three locals. Lee's district leading boys, for instance, happen to draw the open date tonight before meeting pre-season favorite Abilene Cooper on the road in one of the league's blockbuster games of the year. Cooper, on the other hand, must travel to dangerous Odessa Permian tonight before getting back home at 2 a.m. on the way to meeting Lee. Lee can't ask for a better time to play its toughest road game of the year.

The MHS boys do have to play on back-to-back nights, but both are at home, against San Angelo tonight and Abilene High Friday. MHS should beat the 0-4 Bobcats tonight with relative ease, but Abilene High is in the playoff race with MHS. Abilene High will be at home tonight against Odessa High and then will have to make a long road trip. This could turn out to be the key game of the year for the Bulldogs, who would have a leg up on the playoff race with AHS with a victory. A home loss would make the Bulldogs' final half run, one that features cruel road games to Abilene twice and San Angelo, a never-slip affair. MHS must take advantage of this weather-created advantage.

The Lee girls, losing leading scorer and rebounder Tekeira Strambler to a leg injury and already needing to make up a game on either Abilene High or San Angelo for a playoff berth, have the open date tonight before hosting Cooper Friday, a team the Lady Rebels lost to in the first half. Lee must win this second half opener to maintain playoff hopes and will be fresh against a weary Cooper team Friday.

About the only thing left is to convince MHS girls coach Jim Raughton that this set of events isn't all that bad. Maybe we could get him a pillow for the bus rides the next two days. All we're asking for is two measly road wins.

MHS honors football, cross-country teams

By Bill Price
Staff writer

More than once Wednesday night at the Midland High Fall Sports Banquet, the Dallas Cowboys' phoenix-like rise from the ashes of a 1-15 season three years ago was mentioned.

Hoping the analogy to the Bulldog football team's 1-9 record in 1992 was ample proof that, indeed, turnarounds can come quickly, the likes of guest speaker Pat Sullivan offered the Super Bowl-bound Cowboys as an example. And if Wednesday's mood at the banquet, conducted at the Holiday Inn Convention Center, was any indicator, a turnaround may be on the way for MHS.

The MHS football and cross country teams were recognized for their efforts (the volleyball team will be recognized at the Spring Sports Banquet) in 1992, as Sullivan offered insights from his playing and coaching background.

Sullivan, the 1971 Heisman Trophy winner as Auburn's quarterback, conveyed his thoughts on turning a program around, something he is trying to do now as head football coach at Texas Christian. His narrative came at the start of the banquet so he could hit the recruiting road.

Then Ronnie Reeger, the MHS head football coach who saw the Bulldogs' end an 18-game losing streak in their season finale of his first year, and cross country coach Monty Stumbaugh paid tribute to their athletes.

The night's top award winner was senior Philip Warlick, who played center and linebacker on the football team. He first earned the Theresa Kapproth Award, named for a former MHS math teacher and given to the football player with the highest grade-point average.

Warlick, a three-year academic and football letterman and a two-year letterman in basketball, owns a 5.51 GPA and has already received an appointment to the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. He was also named Outstanding Offensive Lineman and Outstanding Linebacker.

Other football awards went to junior Michael Gilbert as Outstanding Offensive Back after he rushed for more than 140 yards in each of MHS' last two games, Greg O'Neal as Outstanding Receiver, Justin Duffield as Outstanding Defensive Lineman and Luis Bernal as Outstanding Defensive Back. The Special Teams Award went to placekicker/punter Jeremy Hernandez, a three-year starter for the Bulldogs. The Fighting Bulldog Award was presented to co-recipients Jason Lewis and Bernal.

In cross country, Jerry Robinson, who recently moved to Knox City, was named Most Valuable Runner, while Jason Hensley received the Most Improved Award.

Suns lose, Barkley sits it out

Associated Press

NBA

RICHFIELD, Ohio — The Phoenix Suns, playing without suspended Charles Barkley, overcame all of an early 15-point deficit before succumbing to the Cleveland Cavaliers 123-119 Wednesday night.

Mark Price scored 12 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter for Cleveland, which won its third straight and its 15th in the last 19 games. The Suns fell to 4-4 in January, following a 14-0 record in December.

Price put the Cavs ahead for good 100-98 with a runner in the lane with 8 minutes left.

Barkley, the Suns' leading scorer and rebounder, learned earlier in the day that he had been suspended for one game and fined $10,000 for chasing after the officials following a Phoenix loss in New York on Monday.

Cedric Ceballos replaced him in the starting lineup and got off to a quick start, scoring 10 points in the first quarter. But the Cavaliers limited him to four points the rest of the way.

Celtics 121, Hawks 106

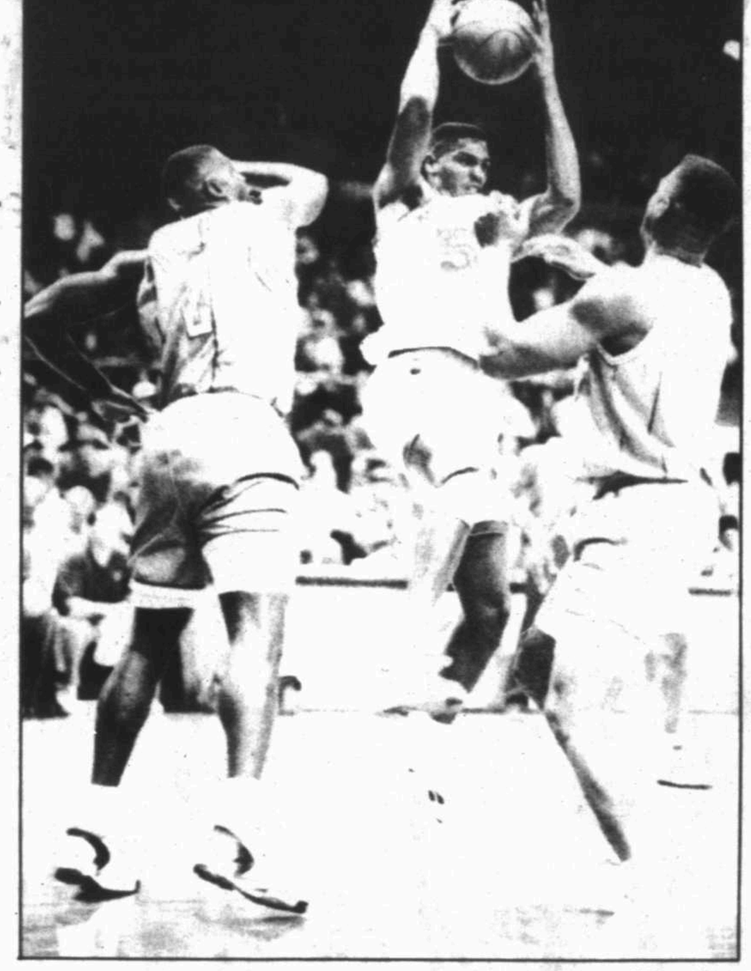

BOSTON — Boston capitalized on an injury to Kevin Willis as Robert Parish grabbed 15 rebounds in a lopsided third quarter that carried the Celtics to a rout of Atlanta.

With Xavier McDaniel getting 11 of his season-high 27 points, the Celtics outscored Atlanta 31-15 in the period to take a 93-78 lead. The lead ranged from 11 to 20 points the rest of the way.

Willis, third in the NBA with 13 rebounds per game, was sidelined for the first time this season, suffering from a sore back. The Celtics grabbed a season-high 62 rebounds, 17 more than the Hawks, and had a season-high 13 blocks.

Boston, 9-2 in its last 11 games, got 21 points from Reggie Lewis and 14 from Rick Fox.

Atlanta had won five of its previous six games overall and eight of its last nine against Boston. It was led by Dominique Wilkins with 35 points and Duane Ferrell, starting for Willis, with 17 points but just one rebound. The Hawks made only 36 percent of their shots.

Knicks 114, Hornets 91

NEW YORK — New York got even for one of their three home losses as Patrick Ewing had 30 points and 13 rebounds in three quarters of a rout over Charlotte.

The Knicks, with their biggest offensive output of the season, opened leads of 22 points in the first half and 28 in the second and led by at least 11 in the final three periods in improving their record at Madison Square Garden to 16-3. The first of those three defeats came in overtime against the Hornets on Dec. 10.

Larry Johnson led Charlotte with 19 points, but he had no rebounds in the first half and finished with just four. He is averaging 10.4 rebounds a game.

John Starks finished with 24 points on 9-for-14 shooting for New York, while Kendall Gill scored 18 for the Hornets, who lost their fourth consecutive game.

Blazers 110, Timberwolves 94

MINNEAPOLIS — Cliff Robinson had 22 points, 14 rebounds and a career-high eight assists to lead Portland over Minnesota.

Robinson, who also had four blocked shots and three steals, helped cover the absence of starting center Kevin Duckworth, who missed the game with a respiratory illness.

Minnesota (7-26) has lost 10 of its last 12 at home and is 0-11 against Pacific Division teams. Doug West led the Wolves with 20 points.

76ers 115, Heat 112

MIAMI — Overtime has become horror time for the Miami Heat.

Philadelphia is the latest team to take advantage of Miami's overtime failures, with Jeff Hornacek hitting a pair of crucial 3-point baskets to help the 76ers to a victory.

The 76ers outlasted Miami in triple overtime in November when the teams last met. The frustrated Heat have lost four games in a row, three in overtime, while Philadelphia has gone into overtime in three of its last four games, winning two of them.

RANGERS: Texas picks 'winners'

along."

Ahh, defense. A particular sore spot with the Rangers in 1992, the club has acquired shortstop Manuel Lee from Toronto, outfielder Doug Dascenzo from the Chicago Cubs and outfielder/first baseman Gary Redus from the Pirates. And though batting average is not necessarily a strong suit for these guys, offense has not really been a concern of the Rangers lately.

Left fielder Juan Gonzalez led the majors last year with 43 home runs. A healthy Jose Canseco in right, Dean Palmer at third and a rejuvenated Rafael Palmeiro at first will bring plenty of punch to the lineup. If 1991 batting champ Julio Franco returns to form after a knee injury that cost him most of last season, runs will be scored.

Now, Patterson said, it's up to him and the rest of the Texas veterans to provide leadership.

"That's part of my resume. I'm sure that's part of it (why Texas acquired him)," said Patterson, whose career record is 25-21 with a 4.22 ERA.

"They have gone out and purposely picked winners — Gary Redus, Henke, Manny Lee. Hopefully that will carry over. In Pittsburgh, when we went out there, we went out there to win."

"I know we're capable of hitting home runs, and that's a great situation to be in. After talking to Kevin (new manager Kevin Kennedy), he's going to put the club in motion," said dugout coach Jackie Moore. "He'll have the guys running more, there will be more stolen bases involved and some hit-and-runs. I know Kevin wants to establish manufacturing a few runs, then all of a sudden getting the three-run homer.

"We think we have this ability. There's nothing we're asking the club to do that we can't expect from it."

Still the biggest change Rangers fans can expect in 1993 will be on the pitching and defensive fronts, Moore said.

"All at once we end up with Henke from the world champions, and now we have an established closer. Leibrandt from Atlanta is a proven winner, he's won 30 ball games the last couple of years. We have Lefferts from Baltimore. Starting in San Diego last year, he won 15 ball games, and Patterson from Pittsburgh.

"The key to all this is that they're all winners. I think also it's going to create a winning attitude on the ball club. Manny Lee is an outstanding shortstop, and he'll make the pitching staff better."

Ranger fans hope so, anyway.

Virginia streak ends

Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Seventh-ranked Virginia's 16-game winning streak came to an abrupt halt Wednesday night as No. 3 North Carolina pounded out an 80-58 victory.

The Cavaliers — who had the nation's longest current winning streak as well as the third longest in school history — couldn't overcome North Carolina's occasional dry spells in the first half.

In the second half, the Tar Heels pounded the ball inside to their big men and widened a seven-point halftime lead to as much as 29 points.

No. 5 Michigan 80, Minnesota 73

MINNEAPOLIS — Chris Webber, wearing a face mask to protect a broken nose, and Jalen Rose sparked a 21-12 second-half run as No. 5 Michigan handed Minnesota its first home loss of the season.

Rose scored 23 points and Webber had seven blocked shots as Michigan (14-2, 3-1) avenged last season's Big Ten loss at Minnesota.

No. 19 Vanderbilt 102, No. 8 Arkansas 89

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Billy McCaffrey scored 28 points, including four straight on technical fouls following the ejection of Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson, as No. 19 Vanderbilt beat the eighth-ranked Razorbacks.

Vanderbilt (14-3, 4-1 Southeastern Conference) led 57-54 with 15:50 left in the game when Richardson was ejected for arguing a non-call on an apparent charge and a 3-second violation called against his team.

Top 25 Cage Roundup

No. 11 Arizona 91, Arizona St. 87

TEMPE, Ariz. — No. 11 Arizona took a page from Arizona State's playbook, coming from 13 points down in the second half to defeat the Sun Devils.

The Wildcats (10-2), who trailed 41-34 at halftime, stayed unbeaten in the Pac-10 Conference at 5-0 and won their eighth straight overall.

No. 20 Pittsburgh 81, Boston College 70

BOSTON — Jerry McCullough scored 22 points and Pittsburgh held Boston College to 40 percent shooting.

Malcolm Huckaby had 19 of his 24 points in the second half to rally Boston College, but the Eagles twice missed the front end of 1-and-1 free throw opportunities after pulling within 58-56 midway through the second half.

Wisconsin 76, No. 24 Ohio St. 67

MADISON, Wis. — Sophomore forward Michael Finley scored a career-high 34 points to lead Wisconsin over 24th-ranked Ohio State.

It was the second straight victory over a ranked team for the Badgers, who knocked off then-No. 19 Minnesota on Saturday. Wisconsin (9-4 overall, 2-2 in the Big Ten) is off to its best conference start since 1987.

Ohio State (9-3, 2-2) lost its second consecutive game.

Rice overcomes fouls, beat Raiders

SWC Roundup

HOUSTON — Marvin Moore scored 21 points as foul and injury-plagued Rice ended the game with only two starters on the court but held on for a 67-59 Southwest Conference victory over Texas Tech Wednesday night.

Rice (9-4, 4-0 in SWC games), extended its winning streak to seven games and handed the Red Raiders (8-5, 0-2) their third straight loss.

Rice starters Brent Scott and Scott Tynes each fouled out in the final 1:30 and Adam Peakes suffered a knee injury in the first four minutes of the game and did not return.

Texas Tech, troubled by free throw shooting this season, missed eight second half free throws.

Will Flemons led the Red Raiders with 24 points.

Rice built a 44-38 with 14:13 left in the second half on Moore's basket but the Red Raiders refused to fold. They battled back and took three more leads, the last at 58-57 with 4:59 to play.

But after a free throw by Lance Hughes with 2:24 left, Tech did not score again.

Rice took a 32-27 halftime lead despite playing most of the first period without starters Scott, who drew two fouls in the first two minutes, and Peakes, who suffered a knee injury with 16:11 to go.

Flemons' basket with 6:06 to go gave Tech its final tie of the first half. Marvin Moore's basket with 5:48 to go put the Owls ahead to stay.

SMU 79, TCU 65

FORT WORTH — Mike Wilson scored 22 points to keep Southern Methodist undefeated in the Southwest Conference by beating Texas Christian 79-65 Wednesday night.

The Mustangs, who have switched to an up-tempo offense this season, won their fifth straight to improve to 10-4 overall and 3-0 in SWC play. Rice is 4-0 and Houston is 3-0 in league play.

TCU coach Moe Iba returned to the bench after missing two games following the death of his father, coaching great Hank Iba, but saw his team fall to 3-10, 0-3. The Horned Frogs were 1-1 in his absence.

Baseball looks hard at overhaul

NEW YORK (AP) — Eight teams in three rounds of playoffs. Six divisions and wild cards teams. Interleague play. A designated hitter in every game.

These are some of the changes major league baseball is considering, according to a survey sent to about 10,000 fans.

"We're looking at all out options," said Philadelphia Phillies president Bill Giles, a member of the committee studying format changes. "We're meeting, talking, strategizing. It will be a while before we know the direction we can go. The great majority (of fans) want a change of some kind. The question is how best to make the change."

The eight-page questionnaire, sent to about 2,000 people randomly and then to about 8,000 season-ticket holders, was developed by Audits & Surveys. It states: "Major league baseball is looking at ways to make late season games more meaningful for the fans and to create more exciting postseason play." It then asks if fans would like:

— two teams from each division making the playoffs.

— three divisions in each league with the division winners and a wild-card team in each league's playoffs.

— realigning teams within each league.

— shifting teams from one league to the other.

— interleague play involving 10-28 games each season.

— eliminating the designated hitter, expanding it to the National League or allowing its use during interleague games in AL ballparks.

— more day games or night games on both weekends and weekdays.

"We want to make the product as good as it can be," said Atlanta Braves president Stan Kasten, another committee member. "We always have to be looking at that. It would be important even if we were in a boom time, and clearly we're not in a boom time."

According to owners, data collected from the first batch of surveys shows younger fans are in favor of change while more avid fans are against it. The committee, chaired by Boston Red Sox president John Harrington, hasn't received results from questionaires sent to season-ticket holders.

"I would hope that at these upcoming meetings, either in February or March, that they'll have very strong recommendations to make," said Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig, chairman of the ruling executive council.

Any changes would need the agreement of the Major League Baseball Players Association.

Oklahoma St. hires Browning

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Appalachian State offensive line coach David Browning, a former line coach at Midland Lee, was named Wednesday to a similar position at Oklahoma State.

The appointment must be approved by Oklahoma State's governing board.

"His combination of background and experience brings a lot to the table," Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones said in announcing the appointment.

Browning has been in the coaching ranks for 21 years, the past four years at Appalachian State. Before that, he was offensive line coach and recruiting coordinator at Texas A&I.

Prior to Texas A&I, Browning was offensive line coach at Midland Lee under Spike Dykes from 1978 to 1983. He is a 1972 graduate of Texas Tech.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JANUARY 21, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You have an excellent chance of catching the brass ring that will carry you to fame and fortune. Others are now willing to use their influence on your behalf. Show your appreciation by not letting them down! Although acquiring great wealth is not your main goal, you would be wise to have a regular savings program. Romance could lead to new domestic arrangements by the fall. Let a loved one's attitude be a source of inspiration for you next December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actresses Geena Davis and Jill Eikenberry, singer Placio Domingo, basketball player Akeem Olajuwon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You could receive a message from someone who loves and misses you. Keep in closer touch with those at a distance. Confusion may arise over how to proceed at work. Ask for clarification.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Personal affairs may reach a climax today. Trust your intuition. Tend to routine duties before beginning new projects. A certain amount of aggressiveness pays off.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Improved rapport with a member of the opposite sex will make things go much better. Check telephone messages to prevent confusion. Visualizing yourself as a savvy entrepreneur will boost business.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): This is no time to be moping around. Get a handle on the atmosphere at work. Greater understanding and patience will help you land more business deals. New romantic possibilities come into view.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A successful relationship means a lot to you. Member of opposite sex will influence some of your career choices. Keep your guard up. Someone may try to pull the wool over your eyes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Buckle down to the task at hand. Greater input at work will be rewarded. When dealing with youngsters, set a good example instead of just extracting a promise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Forge ahead with a pet project; obstacles seem to melt away. Distant affairs have a direct impact on your financial status. Touch base with loved ones early this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Look at your assets to see if they could serve you better. Refuse to accept a temporary defeat as a final decision. Turn over a new leaf in a romantic relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone's kindness will be a source of inspiration to you. A romantic encounter could be both fascinating and somewhat disturbing. Know the difference between shadow and substance.

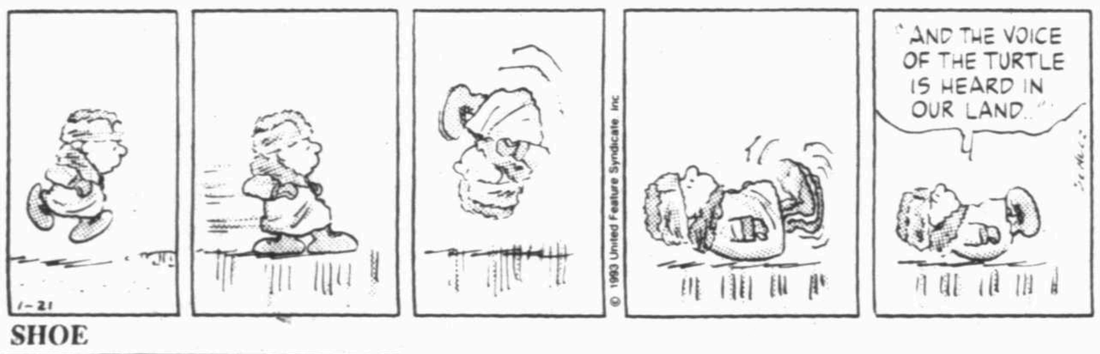

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A business partnership is more rewarding than in the past. Revise a budget and get better organized at home. Pursue romance, but be selective. Choose a partner who shares your goals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Although your responsibilities seem overwhelming at times, you will do what needs to be done. Be willing to accept a helping hand. Make sure to pay bills promptly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep a close eye on financial transactions. Check and recheck the figures before signing a contract. Influential people may be in a difficult mood today. Avoid asking for special favors.

Ely Culbertson used to tell the story about a visit to a card factory in the Soviet Union. The product was of atrocious quality. The manager explained that card-playing was considered a bourgeois pastime and manufacturing cards that did not last was an attempt to eradicate the habit! Judging by the number of people playing bridge these days in the former Soviet republics, the Communists did not succeed. Here's an excellent defense from the Estonian Trials to select a team for the 1993 European Championships.

We have little quarrel about the auction. Had North's king been in any suit except spades though, we would have jumped to four hearts.

The queen of spades was universally selected for the opening lead and the defenders quickly raked in their book, West discarding a club. Most Easts shifted to the king of clubs. Declarer won in dummy, ruffed a club, cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. When the king of hearts appeared on a trump lead, declarer won and continued the crossruff and emerged with eight trump tricks and the minor-suit aces.

At one table the contract was defeated and there was nothing declarer could do about it. Disregarding the maxim about not giving a ruff-sluff, East continued with a fourth spade at trick four. Declarer ruffed and West dumped his remaining club. South could still score eight trump tricks and the ace of diamonds, but any attempt to collect the ace of clubs would allow West to ruff for the setting trick—down one.

'Mr. Television' celebrates 80th year in show business

LOS ANGELES — "Mr. Television," comedian Milton Berle, has celebrated his 80th year in show business with a Hollywood Press Club gala.

Berle, who will turn 85 this year, looked back Tuesday night on a career that has seen success in vaudeville, nightclubs, Broadway, radio, feature films and television.

Berle began his career as the Buster Brown kid in advertising and appeared in many silent films as a child actor including "Birth of a Nation" and "The Perils of Pauline."

He did several radio shows in the 1940s, then landed a guest spot as host of the first "The Texaco Star Theater" in 1948.

Berle was an overnight sensation and eventually became the regular host. In 1954 the series became "The Milton Berle Show." He later he was a frequent guest star on shows such as "The Love Boat," "F Troop" and "The Defenders."

MUNCIE, Ind. — The daughter of Malcolm X says there may never be an official holiday honoring her father, but people of all ethnic backgrounds can keep his memory alive.

"We don't need legislation to light a candle of celebration," said Atallah Shabazz. She spoke Tuesday at Ball State University, one day after the national holiday commemorating another slain civil rights leader, Martin Luther King Jr.

Malcolm X was assassinated in New York City on Feb. 21, 1965.

She said that while Spike Lee's movie "Malcolm X" has renewed interest in the Black Muslim leader, people should also read Malcolm X's autobiography and other material written about him.

"History is not new. The struggle is not new. You're just being awakened to it," said Shabazz, eldest of six daughters born to Malcolm X and his wife, Betty Shabazz.

DENVER — Arthur Ashe, the former U.S. Open and Wimbledon tennis champion who has AIDS, will attend an AIDS fundraising and education event April 13, organizers say.

Ashe will attend a tennis tournament, an educational community fair and a black-tie dinner, sponsors said Tuesday.

The events will raise money for the Colorado AIDS Project and Black AIDS Project at LargeCARE, which works with the black community in support of AIDS education and support groups.

Ashe

The event, called "Athletes Against AIDS — a Day of Love," also will feature a few other celebrities and local children, said Rosemary Hanratty, spokeswoman for the fund-raiser.

LONDON — A press watchdog agency is asking Prince Charles and old flame Camilla Parker Bowles if they feel their privacy was invaded by publication of the transcript of an intimate telephone conversation.

Press Complaints Commission director Mark Bolland said the voluntary agency had written to the 44-year-old prince and Mrs. Parker Bowles, 45, to see if they would cooperate in an inquiry.

"In cases involving personal matters, people have a right to silence if they do not want the matters investigated," Bolland said.

Buckingham Palace said it would consider the Press Complaints Commission's letter when it arrived.

A transcript of six minutes of a 1989 telephone conversation, allegedly between the two, first appeared in an Australian magazine earlier this month and has since appeared in newspapers that circulate in Britain.

Bolland said neither the prince nor Mrs. Parker Bowles had protested officially to the commission.

LOS ANGELES — The author of a how-to drawing book wants a little recognition from opera star Luciano Pavarotti, who she charges copied three of her illustrations for his paintings.

Pavarotti's works "Venezia," "Casa Florita" and "Parigi," which have received critical praise at exhibitions, appear to be unacknowledged copies of illustrations from Mary E. Hicks' 1972 book, "My Adventures in Europe," the Los Angeles Times reported Wednesday.

"The books were made to be copied, but I resent it when he says that these are his original paintings. I resent that he is making money from them, too," said Mrs. Hicks, an 87-year-old widow.

Prints of Pavarotti's works have sold for up to $2,500 each.

Mrs. Hicks, who lives on Social Security in La Veta, Colo., holds copyrights to her paintings, but not to the book.

"I wouldn't even want an apology," Mrs. Hicks said. "I would just like recognition that his originals are my originals."

Pavarotti's spokesman, Elliot Hoffman of New York, told the newspaper: "I'm a very busy guy. This is a non-story."

Prices slump

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell for the third straight day Wednesday as brokers reacted to weekly industry supply figures and also tried to figure out how calm the Middle East situation would remain.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in February closed down 25 cents a barrel at $18.33 on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian and Navajo Refining lowered their posted price 25 cents to $17.

After the market closed Tuesday, the American Petroleum Institute released weekly supply statistics that traders said Wednesday put further pressure on crude and gasoline prices.

The trade group said domestic crude oil supplies jumped to 328.1 million barrels from 320.3 million the week before, and stockpiles of domestic gasoline rose to 226.53 million barrels from 220.57 million the week before.

Meanwhile, Iraq appeared to abide by a cease-fire offered to President Clinton.

Traders have been wary about the Iraqi moves, worrying wether fighting would halt oil exporting in the Middle East.

Natural gas prices were the only petroleum products to rise, with contracts for delivery in February settling at $1.631 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 0.80 cent.

LTV revamps

NEW YORK (AP) — LTV Corp. filed a bankruptcy reorganization plan Tuesday under which the steelmaker will repay $850 million to its pension funds and reimburse creditors with cash and stock.

The plan also calls for Sumitomo Metal Industries Ltd. to invest $200 million by purchasing stock and notes in LTV.

LTV, which has been in bankruptcy court for nearly six years, said it could emerge from Chapter 11 protection in the spring if the plan is approved by a federal judge and creditors. A hearing on the proposal is scheduled for Feb. 17, and a creditor vote is tentatively set for March.

Dollar drops

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mostly lower in moderate trading on world currency markets Wednesday.

In New York it cost $1.5440 to buy one pound, less expensive than Tuesday's $1.5465.

Stocks retreat

NEW YORK — Stock prices pulled back Wednesday, still caught in their early-1993 stalemate as Wall Street watched the change of administrations in Washington.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 14.04 points to 3,241.95 on top of Tuesday's 18.92-point loss.

Bush orders steel protection

■ Trade commission has until Feb. 25 to decide if it will impose duties of 26 percent to 148 percent on imported steel.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration in its waning hours moved to protect the U.S. steel industry from low-cost imports, a senior Commerce Department official confirmed Wednesday.

The order said duties of 26 percent to 148 percent would be needed to offset the artificially low prices of Brazilian, French, German and British steel, the official confirmed, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The U.S. International Trade Commission now has until Feb. 25 to make a final decision on whether to impose the duties. Until then, the Customs Service will require a bond or cash deposit on products covered by the order.

The Commerce Department action was not announced immediately. First word came in a statement issued by Inland Steel Industries Inc.

"The department's findings confirm what Inland has known for years — that many sellers of imported steel are dependant on unfair trading practices for sales in the U.S. market," the statement said.

Inland said it was pleased by the "substantial" amount of duties that would be needed to counteract the "dumping" of foreign steel in the U.S. market — selling it here at prices below those in home markets.

The margins found by the Commerce Department were Britain, 25.82 percent; France, 64.55 percent; Germany, 85.05 percent, and Brazil, 148.12 percent.

The department also said countervailing duties of 23 percent — duties imposed to make up for foreign government subsidies — would be justified.

The order covered hot-rolled leaded or bismuth carbon steel bar and rod products.

The International Trade Commission ruled in May that there was evidence that imports were hurting the U.S. steel industry. The complaint was filed by Inland and Bethlehem Steel Corp.

The U.S. Customs Service will require a cash deposit or bond on imported products covered by Tuesday's order. If duties will become final if the ITC makes a definite determination the imports have hurt U.S. manufacturers.

The ITC has until Feb. 25 to make a final decision.

AMR reports 1992 losses of $935 million

DALLAS (AP) — AMR Corp., parent of American Airlines, on Wednesday reported a record $935 million loss for 1992 largely due to special charges and new accounting standards.

But even without those tolls, AMR would have posted a record deficit as fare discounting, recession and higher costs socked the company and the rest of the airline industry.

"We simply cannot have another year like 1992," chairman Robert Crandall said.

AMR lost $200 million in the fourth quarter, nearly matching in three months the full-year record loss of $240 million set in 1991.

The results for AMR and American, the nation's largest airline, signal further trouble for an industry gripped by losses since the Persian Gulf crisis began in 1990.

"If American is having problems, usually everybody else is," said John Pincavage, a partner in Transportation Group Ltd., a New York investment bank specializing in airline securities.

American's passenger and freight volumes rose. But the amount a passenger pays to fly one mile, a widely-watched indicator called yield, fell.

Part of the problem came last April when American unveiled a four-tier fare structure that executives believed would bring greater revenue to the airline and simplify travel for passengers.

But competitors refused to go along with the plan, which American called "Value Pricing." Steep fare wars followed, including a half-off sale for summer, usually the airlines' most lucrative period.

Michael Durham, AMR's chief financial officer, called the fare fiasco a significant component of the losses.

The company in late November cut about 600 management jobs in the first step of a plan to save $300 million in costs this year. Most of the cuts came in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, American's home base.

AMR is traditionally the first airline operator to report its financial performance but not the only one coping with losses.

United Airlines said earlier this month it would trim 2,800 jobs from all levels of the company as it aimed to save $400 million.

Northwest Airlines said last month it would lay off about 1,000 workers, and Alaska Airlines shelved plans for a $45 million maintenance facility and cut 64 jobs.

Delta Air Lines last month decided to cut its quarterly dividend from 30 cents per share to a nickel, trim non-union pay 5 percent and delay aircraft purchases through 1995.

Group forms independent chamber

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of small business owners who say they have been neglected by the Greater Austin Chamber of Commerce and differed with it over an environmental protection initiative are forming their own group.

The Independent Chamber of Commerce will use the motto, "What's good for Austin is good for business."

It counts about 100 members, drawn mainly from small shopkeepers, restaurants, lawyers and the music industry, organizers say.

The independent chamber is seeking a charter for a community credit union and hopes eventually to publish a director of "like-minded" businesses and to help members arrange low-cost group health insurance.

"The Independent Chamber of Commerce exists to provide services to small businesses and to promote the growth of small businesses," said Bruce Neslaw, publisher of the Austin Comic News, a humor newspaper.

The group was born in the wake of last year's fight over the Save Our Springs ordinance. The Greater Austin Chamber opposed that law, which placed strict limits on development in the Barton Creek watershed.

FTC OKs Lockheed, GD deal

FORT WORTH (NYT) — The Federal Trade Commission has informed Lockheed Corp. that it will not block its $1.5 billion purchase of General Dynamics' Fort Worth Division, company officials said Wednesday.

The Calabasas, Calif.-based defense giant announced Dec. 9 that it would buy the 20,000-employee Fort Worth operation where GD produces the F-16 fighter plane.

"They have told Lockheed that they will not object to the acquisition of GD-Fort Worth," said Keith Mordoff, a Lockheed spokesman.

"We're still on schedule to complete the acquisition on schedule sometime in the first quarter."

The two companies are now expected to move ahead with an internal plan to merge the facility into Lockheed's Aeronautical Systems Co., which employs 11,000 in Marietta, Ga.

The two companies have each formed committees that have been analyzing each other's technical and manufacturing expertise before making any decision on consolidations or organizational changes.

Jack Modzelewski, an analyst with PaineWebber in New York, said both firms did not expect FTC approval to come so quickly.

"Both companies were looking for second requests and there just wasn't any," Modzelewski said.

"They could close the deal in February now. They could have done a January deal had they known this was coming.

"It's difficult to imagine anything taking place now that could slow this down."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Brokers have various ways to hold stocks

By Bill Doyle

Q: My 85-year-old sister always kept her stock certificate in her house. Sometimes, she could not find it. So her broker said he would keep it for her at no cost.

Doyle

The broker told her to sign her name on the certificate before giving it to him. I told her she should not do that, but he said she had to. Is that true?

A: Not necessarily. There are different ways a brokerage firm can hold a customer's stocks.

Typically, the securities held by a brokerage are in a "street name" account, meaning the brokerage is the registered owner and acts as the customer's "nominee." The customer is the "beneficial owner" — the real owner — and receives statements from the brokerage showing what is in the account.

Another way is in a "safekeeping" account. Using that method, the stocks can be kept registered in the customer's name and needn't be put into street name. The broker tucks the certificates away in his firm's vault to keep them safe.

By signing the assignment form on the back of the certificate, your sister made her stock negotiable, meaning the shares can be put into street name or sold.

Q: When stock is left with a broker in street name, how does the investor who owns that stock get her dividends?

A: Because the brokerage is the registered owner of street-name stock, the dividends go first to the brokerage. The brokerage then credits the dividends to the customer's account.

If the customer wants to receive those dividends as soon as possible, she should instruct her broker to have checks mailed to her. The hang-up — and a continuing source of mail to this corner — is that many brokerages are painfully slow when parting with customers' money.

Q: After three losing years, I decided to close my individual retirement account at a large brokerage firm and roll the money over to a mutual fund IRA.

When I received my closing statement, copy enclosed, I was shocked to see the brokerage had charged me a $73 termination fee. Is that legitimate? Who determines the fee?

If brokerage fees are not regulated by any agency, why can't brokerages charge what ever they want — and milk the investing public big time.

A: That fee was not conceived on the other side of the blanket, i.e., illegitimate, for one simple reason. There is no rule preventing it. Brokerage firms are free to charge any fees they choose. That has been the story since May 1, 1975, when fixed commission rates were abolished by Securities and Exchange Commission fiat.

Since then, brokerage charges have been determined mainly by competition. Brokerages levying high fees tend to lose business to other firms.

If you had read the agreement you signed when you opened the IRA, you shouldn't have been shocked by that termination fee. IRA sponsors and custodians can't lay on any fees not mentioned in the agreement.

Q: Is a bank allowed to charge a $10 annual trustee fee on an IRA certificate of deposit when that fee was not part of the original disclosure statement? It seems to me that fee should be charged only after the CD's maturity date, when a new CD is put in the account and when the IRA participant signs a new disclosure statement agreeing to the charge.

A: You're quite right about banks and other IRA sponsors not being allowed to spring surprise fees, about which there was absolutely no mention in the agreement you signed.

But are you sure there was no such mention? I'd lay long odds that, by studying your original disclosure statement, you will find some fine print permitting the bank to institute charges down the line.

First, second ladies elected fashion leaders

AP Laserphoto

By Anne-Marie Schiro
N.Y. Times News Service

Whether she likes the idea or not, Hillary Clinton is the country's latest fashion icon. She is neither dowdy nor clothes-crazy. Like thousands of successful working women, she wears tailored sportswear that sees her through eventful days. She keeps up with fashion without latching onto the extreme designs of fashion leaders. So she is not very likely to be seen in a Calvin Klein see-through georgette, but is highly likely to be seen in a Donna Karan long black skirt.

Ms. Karan is one of the designers whose clothes Mrs. Clinton has been buying at Barbara Jean Ltd., the boutique in Little Rock, Ark., where she has shopped for 12 years. Others are Randy Kemper, who made the red blazer and black skirt she wore as Inauguration Week started on Sunday; St. John Knits, which made the brown knit dress she wore Monday, and Sarah Phillips, who designed her dress for the inaugural ball.

The outfit Mrs. Clinton wore on Wednesday for her husband's swearing-in is by Connie Fails, a Little Rock designer, who also made the black cashmere coat and long printed scarf to match the lining that Mrs. Clinton wore on Sunday, and the green moire coat with a fake fur collar she bought to wear at a gala Monday night. The green coat went over a black wool crepe suit with black sequins and gold lace by another Arkansas designer, Helen Benton.

WHEN MRS. CLINTON stood by her husband as he took the oath of office, she wore a princess-shaped coat in a color described as cadet blue over a fuchsia dress. Two weeks ago, she ordered a blue velour hat with a big, off-the-face brim by Darcy Creech, a millinery designer from Southport, Conn.

Judith Leiber, who makes handbags in the four-figure price range, said Monday that by request, she had sent Mrs. Clinton two alligator bags to choose from. Mrs. Leiber made the royal blue silk bag to go with Barbara Bush's inaugural gown.

"I don't know what they mean by cadet blue," Mrs. Leiber said, "so I sent a royal blue bag and a navy blue bag." She also sent a small green leather bag with a chain handle for the Clintons' daughter, Chelsea, to wear with her forest green coat.

Mrs. Leiber also made an oval-shaped metal clutch covered with amethyst and lavender rhinestones to go with Mrs. Clinton's inaugural ball gown. The bag's wisteria pattern is suggested by the design on the chiffon overskirt of the violet lace dress, which was designed by Sarah Phillips and executed in the workrooms of Barbara Matera, a theatrical costumer. A purple velvet coat, also by Ms. Phillips, goes over the dress.

AS EVERYONE surely knows by now, purple is one of Mrs. Clinton's favorite colors. "She loves color, especially jewel tones," said Michelle Revere, the buyer for Barbara Jean. "She likes red, royal and purple. She likes interchangeable things that travel well and wear well. She would never call before coming in to shop. She'd just come in the store and the first person to see her would say, 'Hillary's here' and we'd get her a coffee or a Coke, and she'd just walk the room and pick out what she liked."

"She always asks my input," Ms. Revere added, "and I tell her what the extreme is and what's really going to be worn."

The fashion spotlight is of course on Mrs. Clinton, but Tipper Gore does share it. And the wife of the vice president also has role-model potential.

Mrs. Gore's style, running to simple cuts and pretty colors, is not that different from Mrs. Clinton's. She has long worn clothes by Albert Nipon, whose new designer, Steven Stolman, showed his spring collection to Mrs. Gore two weeks ago. She picked out several outfits, including a pink sweater and black skirt for an interview last week on "Today," the red suit she wore on Sunday and the black lace and satin organza ball gown she wore Tuesday night to a gala at the Capital Center.

ANOTHER OF Mrs. Gore's favored designers is Pat Kerr of Memphis, who is known for romantic evening and wedding dresses combining antique lace and ribbon-edged tulle. Ms. Kerr made inaugural ball outfits for Mrs. Gore and her three daughters. Mrs. Gore's dress was utterly simple, with a slim silhouette, but the cape she wore to make her entrance in had enough sparkles to be noticed by the television cameras.

Easy-care hair style 'big'

By Shari Spires
N.Y. Times News Service

"Hillary Clinton is not a woman who is crazy about her hair," says Robin Weir, the Washington, D.C., hairstylist known for doing Nancy Reagan's hair.

Mrs. Clinton's shoulder-length bob is a drastic departure from the big-headed Republican helmets of the past 12 years.

"It's a career look," says Weir, "Not an I-spend-a-lot-of-time-taking-care-of-my-hair look. In fact, I know Hillary is not going to want any media attention to either her hair or her clothes. She is going to be getting down to business and focusing on her husband's administration."

Weir (a Republican) knows this because he did hair at the Democratic National Convention and visited briefly in Little Rock for a meeting with Hillary's stylist and Bill's longtime barber.

Even before the election, women were asking Weir for a cut like Hillary's.

"That kind of thing happened a lot in the 1980s with people wanting to look like Mrs. Reagan, but in the last four years, no one ever said, 'Make me look like Barbara Bush,'" Weir said.

Mrs. Clinton's hairstyle was created by Christophe in Beverly Hills, where she was referred by television producer Linda Bloodworth-Thomason about a month before the convention.

"The cut is all-important," Weir said. "It's not all one length, but is feathered around the face. Her hair is definitely highlighted and the color adds a lot of body."

Clothes widen generation gap

By Erma Bombeck

I could always tell the day my kids were having their school pictures taken. The night before they would pull out a tooth or get hit in the eye by a fly ball. They would be overdue for haircuts, oversleep that morning, dress from the dirty clothes hamper and look like poster children for neglect.

Bombeck

Kids don't bring to picture-taking the same vanity adults bring to it. A grandmother from Sun City, Ariz., wrote that she always wanted a nice family portrait of her son's "beloved family." It was a time when grandsons would be going to school, and she wanted to see the family framed together and displayed on a table in her living room for everyone to see. She even sent money to help pay for the sitting.

She received the picture recently and lamented, "Erma, I'm at a loss to know how to handle this. I just received an 8x10 glossy print of my son and his family in casual attire taken in their beautiful garden with the 15-year-old grandson on the ground right in front, wearing shorts and a long-sleeved shirt and tie. Why would he wear shorts in a formal picture?"

You're asking me? I had a kid who went to his grandmother's funeral in Florida. As the services started, I glanced at him and discovered he was wearing high-top gym shoes with stars on them. He was 12 at the time.

There was a time when I had some control over their dress code. I could say, "This car doesn't move until you go back into the house and get into something you don't have to wear under a coat!" That phase lasted about six years.

Our photo albums tell it all. Hair combed by a hurricane, jeans with the knees out, unstructured jackets from wrinkle city. Before Andre Agassi, there were my sons who didn't wear spandex under their tennis shorts. They had underwear hanging out halfway down to their knees. Before Madonna, there was our daughter going out for an evening wearing bib overalls as if she were going to a Caterpillar tractor opening.

I think most kids go out of their way to put some distance between their parents and the way they dress, think and act. Some do it to be noticed. You have to admit, Grandmother, your grandson got your attention.

I don't know if this will depress you or make you feel better, but last Thanksgiving one of my grown sons appeared at his grandma's table in sweats (with the sweat still in them and a red bandanna around his head). "I'd have dressed," he said, "but I didn't have a clean T-shirt."

DEAR ABBY

Poem helps heal the hurt of losing beloved old pet

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This letter is for "David in Scottsdale" who lost his pet parakeet and suffered such a tremendous loss. His letter touched my heart and brought back memories of my beloved poodle, which I lost several years ago. I had Tink for 17 years, and to this day the tears come when I remember this dear little loved one. Only those who have loved and lost a pet can realize the terrific loss and the hurt that stays.

Van Buren

Shortly after losing Tink, this poem was printed in the paper, and it has meant the world to me. Perhaps it will help to soften the hurt for David.

Oh, shame on the mothers of mortals,
Who did not stop to teach
The sorrow that lies in dear, dumb eyes,
The sorrow that has no speech.
For the same force formed the camel
That fashioned man and king,
And the God of the whole
Gave a spark of soul
To each furred and feathered thing.

Thanks for letting me share this, Abby. — ROBERTA M. TEW, BRADENTON, FLA.

DEAR ROBERTA: Thank you. That lovely poem appeared in my column in 1984. The author is unknown.

DEAR ABBY: I am a large woman, 5 foot 11 and weigh 152 pounds. I am well-proportioned. My problem is that a lot of people have mistaken me for a man.

I was in the ladies' room a few weeks ago, and a woman got angry with me and asked me why I didn't use the men's room!

My problem is not just with women; men also mistake me for a man. I am sick of it. I have tried wearing feminine-looking clothes, but I look ridiculous. I have always worn tailored clothes, and I am more comfortable in a pantsuit than in a dress. I was never one for long, fluffy hairdos, but I don't have a mannish haircut either.

Please don't tell me to wear a dress; I feel very uncomfortable in dresses. I am at the end of my rope. Next time a salesperson asks, "May I help you, sir?" — I am going to punch him out! — BIG PROBLEM, VANCOUVER, B.C.

DEAR BIG: From your own description of yourself — your size and the mannish clothes you prefer — you should not blame anyone for mistaking you for a man. Short of singing, "I Am Woman," looking and dressing as you do, there is not much that can be done about the problem — unless you are willing to consider seriously an image overhaul.

A professional makeup artist can teach you how to artfully apply makeup that will make your appearance less masculine. You can "soften" your style of dress by learning to accessorize with silk scarves and/or colorful printed blouses under those tailored suits. Large-scale pieces of costume jewelry (earrings, brooches and bracelets) can also make your appearance more feminine without being "fussy." Think about it, and candidly discuss the investment with a fashion coordinator at one of the larger department stores.

WORTH QUOTING: "The process of empowerment cannot be simplistically defined in accordance with our own particular class interests. We must learn to lift as we climb." — ANGELA DAVIS

For an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person, order "How to be Popular." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Local models featured at international convention

Jeffreys

Lara

Olguin

Three students of P.S. Images Modeling & Talent Center of Midland were featured at the International Modeling & Talent Association convention Jan. 4-10 at the Bonaventure Hotel in Hollywood. The three P.S. Images students — Mandy Jeffreys, Chris Lara and Barbara Olguin — brought home 12 awards from the convention, which featured models and talent from the United States, Canada, Mexico, Australia and Ireland.

The three students were seen by top modeling agents, talent scouts and casting directors. In addition to the awards, the students had numerous call backs and interviews with national and international agents from New York City, Los Angeles, Chicago, Dallas, Paris, Milan, Tokyo and London.
