Building Collapses

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP)-A frozen food market collapsed this morning, and at least one man was killed and several other persons were injured, state police said.

A state police spokesman said the building was being renovated by construction workers when it collapsed about 11:10 a.m., EST. A fire broke out afterwards, the spokesman said.

The building is located on Indiana 32 at the eastern edge of the city.

2 Mayors Ousted

By The Associated Press

Two big city mayors will be looking for new jobs soon, one the victim of a maverick female Democrat who knew how to topple Chicago's powerful party machine, the other a poor fourth-place finisher in a six-way race.

Political outsider Jane Byrne scored an upset victory over Mayor Michael Bilandic Tuesday as Kansas City Mayor Charles Wheeler was losing his bid for an unprecedented third term.

In other election results, Cleveland took its first tentative steps toward financial recovery as voters agreed to increase the city's payroll tax by 50 percent. But they refused to sell the city's electric utility to help pay for some of the city's mounting debts.

Amin In Trouble

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)-Ugandan President Idi Amin said Tuesday that forces loyal to him have recaptured the key southern town of Masaka from "invading Tanzanian aggressors," but fierce fighting was still going on.

Meanwhile, The Los Angeles Times reported Tuesday in a dispatch from Nairobi, Kenya, that Western diplomatic sources said Amin had evacuated his family to Libya, foreigners were fleeing from Kampala and the Ugandan army was in rebellion.

Tractorcade March Ends; Long Trip Home Begins

WASHINGTON (AP)-The three-week-old tractorcade march on Washington by protesting farmers began breaking up today.

Under an agreement reached this morning with police and city and federal officials, the farmers began evacuating their tractor encampment on the Mall, the grassy promenade between the Capitol and the Washington Monument. All but about 50 tractors are to leave the city by Sunday.

Meanwhile, the farmers demonstrating for higher federal price supports for their crops were allowed a final, 15-tractor demonstration through city streets during the non-rush hour Thursday.

Gary Hankin, a spokesman for the District of Columbia police, said farmers began complying this morning with orders to remove their 500 remaining tractors from the Mall and park them on adjacent streets.

Other farmers, he said, were loading their tractors on trucks and starting to return home.

Earlier, local police had given the farmers a deadline of midnight today to clear the Mall. Under the new agreement, they will have until Sunday to evacuate.

The meeting followed President Carter's remarks at a news conference Tuesday that some of the farmers' tactics, such as stalling commuter traffic with their tractors, were "counterproductive." Carter saw "no possibility" the farmers would achieve their goal of higher federal price supports for their crops.

Today's meeting was attended by a dozen members of the American Agriculture Movement, organizeers of the Washington demonstration that began Feb. 6, District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry, chiefs of the D.C., U.S. Park and Capitol police, and an Interior Department official.

Under the agreement, said mayoral spokesman Kwame Holman, the farmers will be allowed a final demonstration of 150 tractors during the non-rush hour period Thursday, probably to the Federal Reserve Board on Constitution Avenue near the Lincoln Memorial.

As agreed earlier, the farmers will be allowed to keep about 50 tractors on side streets near the Mall, and to leave two tractors parked at the nearby Agriculture Department in a symbolic gesture. All the rest will have to leave the city by Sunday.

The SDN Column

Sometime ago we read that federal regulations add at least $600 directly to the price of every new automobile, and how much it adds indirectly is anyone's guess.

But government regulations are getting more attention now than ever before. This could result from the simple fact that there are so many more of them, but apparently people are beginning to question some of the measures the federal government takes to "protect" them.

However, regulations generally have the same effect as subsidies. There are periodic outcries against subsidies, but when you get down to specifics, you learn that a complaint is opposed only to those subsidies in which he doesn't share.

Consequently, you can find some of the most liberal politicians who speak against regulations and subsidies, but they are not talking about subsidies and regulations per se, but only certain types that do not affect their own constituents.

A well-known U.S. Senator is credited with this statement: "There is a government mentality that sees regulations as the natural order of the universe, that equates the Federal Register with the Holy Writ and that believes anything the market-place can do, the government can do better."

If you are fed up with regulations, you can't help but agree with that statement. But, do you know who made it? Surprise! It came from the lips of Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, acknowledged to be one of the most liberal of the liberals and who has promoted and continues to promote his share of regulations.

The director of the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability figures that the cost of complying with federal regulations already costs at least 10 percent of the inflation rate, and the bill is still going up. And the big trouble with most regulations is that they wind up doing not only what is necessary to correct abuses, but a lot more that isn't necessary. The public is beginning to raise its voice and some of the politicians are joining in the chorus, but so far, nobody seems to be doing much about it.

Ask Us

Q--Why can't the tractor pull be held somewhere else? We went last year and when our kids needed to use the bathroom, we had to go home because the restrooms there were a disgrace.

A--We assume you refer to the July 4th tractor pull, and so far as we know, there isn't a better place for the event than the rodeo grounds, where it was held last year. In fact, those in charge were so well pleased with the response after they moved it out of Towle Park, we doubt that they are looking for another site. But, in view of your experience, perhaps some effort will be made to improve sanitary facilities. We understand WTC plans to hold a rodeo there this spring.

Motions Are Filed In Williams Case

Seven pre-trial motions were filed yesterday afternoon in the capital murder case of Larry B. Williams, the man who allegedly shot and killed Gibson's store manager John Garcia during an armed robbery Jan. 12.

The motions filed yesterday request names of witnesses, witnesses' statements, inspection of grand jury minutes, and one is a motion to discover the possible criminal records of witnesses.

Another motion is one for discovery of physical evidence, police and laboratory reports in the case. Two other motions ask for limine and exculpatory evidence.

The motions were filed by Williams' attorneys, Tom Chorn of Snyder and Travis Shelton of Lubbock. They will likely be dealt with March 16 at a pre-trial hearing. Williams' trial is slated to start April 30.

Allegedly acting with Williams in the murder-robbery was David Dell Rivera, also known as Dale Rocha Rivera. Investigators claim he is the one who demanded a sum of money from a store cashier. He is charged with capital murder-robbery.

Rivera's trial is slated for March 19. No motions have been filed in his case.

Armies Regroup...

Decisive Battle Seen In Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—Vietnam reported today that it put a Chinese regiment and two battalions out of action in the northeast province of Lang Son, where analysts believe the armies are regrouping for a decisive battle in the border war.

Meanwhile, Peking said that small Vietnamese units had penetrated six to 10 miles into China at three points but that all incursions were repulsed.

The Voice of Vietnam reported today that more than 1,600 Chinese troops were killed in the Lang Son area Tuesday, but did not give the exact location of the fighting.

Reliable analysts said the provincial capital, also called Lang Son, had not fallen to the Chinese but that Vietnamese civilians had been evacuated. The city of Lang Son is located 80 miles northeast of Hanoi and 11 miles south of the Chinese border.

The analysts said some main line Vietnamese units were being brought up closer to the Lang Son front and they expected a major battle in the area in the next few days. To date, regional and militia forces are believed to have carried the weight of most of the fighting.

The battle has been predicted since last week, and much fighting has been reported in the hills around Dong Dang, seven miles northwest of Lang Son at the entrance to the Munan Pass.

The Vietnamese broadcast also reported battles in the seacoast province of Quang Ninh, where its troops put 400 Chinese "out of action," at sites located three and six miles inside the border. A third battle zone north of Hanoi, in Cao Bang, was reported where the broadcast claimed 36 Chinese casualties.

China's Hsinhua news agency said the Vietnamese shelled a commune northeast of Lang Son and 10 miles inside China on Friday.

Jury Picked For C-City Murder Trial

COLORADO CITY — A seven-man, five-woman jury was chosen late this morning for the murder trial of Aubrey Gene Williams, charged with the murder of his ex-wife, Girlie Dee.

The 12 jurors were chosen from a 300-member panel summoned in the case, said Bill Erwin, district clerk for Mitchell County. Jury selection began Monday morning.

The defendant is represented by Travis Shelton of Lubbock, Gene Dulaney of Snyder, and T.L. Rees of Colorado City. Hearing the case is 32nd District Court Judge Weldon Kirk of Sweetwater.

The murder is alleged to have occurred last July. Williams' first trial ended in a mistrial in December.

Shelton is also one of two lawyers representing Larry B. Williams of Snyder who is charged with the capital murder last month of John Garcia, the store manager for Gibson's Discount Center.

AAM Meeting Set Thursday

An organizational meeting of local supporters of the American Agriculture Movement will be held Thursday at 8 p.m. at the former location of the Athletic Center on College Ave.

The purpose of the meeting, said a spokesman for the group, "is to bring everyone up to date, to remount and reload."

The meeting is open to the public.

Energy Controls May Be Needed

WASHINGTON (AP)-Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger said today it is possible that current oil shortages in the United States may force weekend closings of gasoline stations and mandatory controls on thermostats in public buildings before summer.

Testifying before the Senate Energy Committee, Schlesinger said it is almost certain that a standby gasoline rationing plan now before Congress would not be invoked because of the current situation.

The energy secretary was called to defend standby mandatory conservation measures that must be approved or disapproved by Congress over the next 60 days.

He said the most likely initial step in reaction to shortages caused by political upheaval in Iran would be shifts of natural gas from producing states to areas of industrial shortage.

But beyond that, Schlesinger said if Congress approves the standby conservation measures, "it is possible that at some time we may have to invoke temperature controls or weekend closings before summer."

"There is no immediate need to do so," Schlesinger said.

Under the plan, industrial plants and most other non-residential buildings would be required to maintain thermostat settings of no higher than 65 degrees fahrenheit for heating and no lower than 80 degrees for cooling.

Hot water for personal hygiene or cleaning could go no higher than 105 degrees.

Schlesinger would also have authority to close gas stations for all or part of the weekend.

As for gasoline rationing, he said it "represents a last resort" that could not be put into effect for five or six months anyway.

The Carter administration has been considering proposals for the decontrol of gasoline prices, but Schlesinger indicated today those would be held back during the current shortage.

"It is unlikely the administration would send up decontrol legislation while there is a generalized shortage," he said. "We will not end up with rationing and decontrol."

Schlesinger said the United States over-reacted to the 1973-74 oil embargo by stockpiling too much oil.

RAY MASON AND WIFE, BRENDA

Mason Hired As C-City Manager

COLORADO CITY-Ending an often frustrating three-month-long search, the city council, in a called meeting last night, hired Ray Mason of Tahoka as city manager. He will assume his duties April 1.

Mason, 33, has been city administrator for the city of Tahoka for the past two years. Prior to that he coached and taught school five years in Tahoka. The Denver City native is a graduate of McMurry College, married and the father of two sons. His salary will be $20,500 per year plus a $1500 car allowance.

The city manager's job came open on Nov. 1 when James Campbell, city manager since 1975, resigned to take a similar position for the city of Corsicana.

City secretary and tax assessor-collector, Brenda Tarter has served as manager during the search.

The council also passed an ordinance last night which retains a one percent sales tax on the sale of gas and electricity to local residents. Mrs. Tarter said that without the ordinance the tax would have been removed from utility bills in the near future.

how to balance budget

"Don't look back," baseball immortal Satchel Paige used to say. "Something may be gaining on you."

These days members of Congress and the political establishment in Washington are looking back, very nervously. And something is gaining on them.

That something is a powerful grass-roots drive to curb the growth of U.S. government and of the tax burden by amending the Constitution to mandate a balanced federal budget.

Twenty-five of the required 34 state legislatures have petitioned Congress to call a constitutional convention to consider the amendment. If nine more states act, which is considered likely, Congress will have two unhappy choices.

It could head off a convention by itself proposing a budget-balancing amendment to the states. Or it could convene the convention, the first one since the Constitution was written in 1787, and accept grave risks.

There are fears the convention couldn't be limited to budget matters.

It might take up such controversial issues as abortion, gun control, school prayers and equal rights for women, or produce a drastically rejiggered Constitution.

Even if the convention only wrote an amendment to balance the budget considerable harm could result. Such an inflexible order could lead to widespread budget trickery on the part of Washington to evade balance. Or, if blindly adhered to, it could turn a mild business slowdown into a full-blown recession.

Recently the threat of putting the government in fiscal handcuffs has stimulated the political thought process, and better alternatives are coming into view.

One, worked out by Nobel Prize-winning economist Milton Friedman, has won broad Republican support. It would shift the emphasis from budget balancing to constitutionally limiting government spending.

Friedman proposes holding the growth of federal spending in any year to the percentage that the economy grew the year before. Thus the government would not grow faster than the gross national product, and the specter of a runaway government expanding uncontrollably and crowing the people's freedoms would fade.

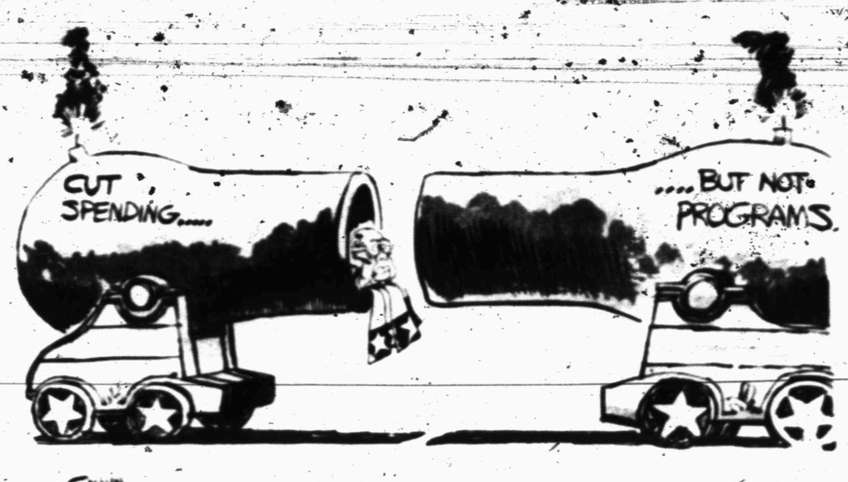

The proposal contains needed flexibility.

In times of rapid inflation, an exception would be made and spending would grow less than the GNP. During an emergency or recession the spending limit would be raised. Thus Washington could use its weight against inflation or stimulate the economy as required.

But in general the federal governmnent could not demand an ever-growing share of the nation's resources. It would keep about the same relative size to the economy that it now has.

Certainly it seems wiser than rigid budget-balancing. But amending the Constitution ought not to be done lightly, and the proposal should be the subject of congressional hearings, expert scrutiny and a national debate.

Who knows, it just could be the answer to a federal spending machine and bureaucracy that is beginning to alarm even thoughtful liberals.

The Greatest Show on Earth

at wits end

If I ever stage a telethon, it will be for one of the most underrated diseases of the 20th century — Cabin Fever.

Cabin Fever has been with us for as long as there have been children, but during snowstorms the disease reaches epidemic proportions.

A minister in Iowa recently noted that the city's Dial-a-Prayer number increased 125 calls a day due to the malady. "There's no doubt about it," he said. "Cabin Fever is a reality and people are depressed when they're shut in and unable to get around."

Back in Ohio when the kids were little, I used to crawl out of bed every morning during the winter, fall to my knees and pray. "Please God, let there be school." For my intentions, I would offer up 18 shirts to be ironed by the end of the day, 30 pounds of hand washables to be dunked, and a promise to return the bank's call.

Everything gets through to you when you have Cabin Fever. It's as if you have no control over your own actions. You find yourself sitting there watching a child force a button up his nostril and saying nothing. You see them coloring your marriage license and you mumble, "Stay in the lines." You observe the chandelier over the dining room shaking as they jump up and down on their beds above and you are numb.

You go to the window and for the life of you can't remember what color the lawn used to be...or what the downtown area looked like. To keep in touch with reality, you count by sevens backwards, recite the Greek alphabet...or name the presidents in order.

Your mind drifts back to your youth when the most traumatic moment in your week was when you had used up all your no-shower days after phys. ed.

Bitterly, you envy nuns, their social life and make plans for all the things you're going to do when the weather clears. These include: training for the Boston Marathon, finishing college, and dedicating your life to Population 0.

Cabin Fever is nothing to kid about. I've seen women who retreat into the house just after the New Year's Eve party as vivacious, spirited women only to emerge in April pale, heavily sedated, and nearly catatonic.

Help stamp out Cabin Fever by taking a mother to lunch or offering to carry her coloring book. We're making progress. Due to last year's sparse donations, we have research going on. To date, one rat has responded to a cure for Cabin Fever.

Now, all we have to do is cure him of his acute alcoholism.

casual violence

Can it be that TV violence isn't violent enough?

In a study done for the U.S. Conference of Mayors, two researchers say much of the violence we see on TV is "bloodless" and therefore gives the impression that it's harmless.

As reported in Human Behavior magazine, Patricia Beaulieu Higgins and Marla Wilson Ray watched 73 hours of prime time TV programs and recorded the appearance of weapons on an average of nine times per hour.

But 84 percent of the shots fired from handguns missed - and when they did hit someone, they didn't seem to hurt much.

With weapons being used so frequently and so casually - and yet hurting so few people - the researchers believe we may actually see a greater acceptance of real-life violence.

Well, maybe they have a point.

Are you a doodler? Look by your telephone or on a desk where time is spent concentrating or problem solving and find the scribbling you did unconciously.

Webster tells us doodling is an aimless scribble. I suspect at one time or another, we're all guilty of it.

Do you draw arrows through various shapes? The appearance of an arrow or arrows generally indicates a calculating, perhaps cruel, temperament.

The drawing of squares suggests a tendency toward the practical. A series of geometrically linked squares is evidence of concrete practical skills.

Tightly drawn circles within circles signals tension and anxiety.

Three demensional forms are symptomatic of a probing intellect. This sort of person must get to the bottom of things.

Sharp jagged up and down connecting lines often spell out a mood of resentment, even hostility. This doodle is often done during business of family arguments.

The triangle, shape is an especially meaningful design. In adults, it's a sign of a strong, well directed mind. In children, under six, it's an almost certain sign of exceptional intelligence.

Flowing, curved figures indicate an easy-going, good natured disposition.

The circle doodle hints at a "a closing up," a warding off of the outside world.

Steps and ladder designs take many forms in doodling. In most cases, they are shorthand for a desire to "climb up" in the world.

The spider web design is the trademark of a person essentially pre-occupied with himself, constantly seeking to widen his horizons.

Random, helter-skelter markings like short lines without a clear-cut pattern are often evidence of a confused personality.

Check marks are a reliable sign of a person who concentrates on business at hand.

These are not my findings but those of a Dr. Klara G. Roman, psychologist and handwriting expert at New York City's New School for Social Research.

Since doodling is a common habit of many, including myself, I found it interesting to see what they meant. Like color preferences, doodles are supposed to tell a great deal about the kind of people we are, according to psychologist and handwriting experts.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The growing debate over the need to revive the military draft appears to be stirring new interest in the concept of universal national service, but the two do not necessarily go together.

Pressure for renewal of the draft is almost entirely pragmatic in origin, stemming from concern in military circles and on Capital Hill about the quantity and quality of recruits available to the all-volunteer armed forces.

Proposals for creating a national youth service, on the other hand, are inspired by a more abstract desire to harness the idealism of youth for the benefit of society as a whole and a moral conviction that citizenship entails responsibilities as well as privileges.

It is possible that return to the draft might hasten the establishment of a civilian national service program, but it is by no means guaranteed. The military has a multitude of friends on Capitol Hill, idealists have realtively few, especially on this cost-conscious era.

Costs — the dollar kind, not the human variety — are contributing to the criticism now directed at the all-volunteer force. It is unquestionably cheaper to finance a conscript army than to provide the levels of pay and benefits needed to attract and maintain an adequate force of volunteers.

Precious few 18-year-olds, however, consider the forced disruption of their own lives a fair exchange for the relatively modest budget savings that could be gained through a return to the draft. And the politicians know it.

That is why arguments for a revival of the draft or at least the compulsory registration of all 18-year-olds have focused increasingly on the preparedness needs of the military, rather than the cost issue.

None of the armed services met their recruiting goals during the final quarter of 1978, the first time this has happened since the draft was abolished in 1973. Reserve force levels are deteriorating fast, and Pentagon planners say there is no way they could mobilize a sufficient number of troops fast enough to meet manpower needs if a major war should break out.

The manpower squeeze is likely to get worse in the years ahead as the "baby boom" generation gives way to the children of the "baby bust," and fewer 18-year-olds become available for possible service.

One way out of the dilemma is to require all young Americans, women as well as men, to put in at least one year of service to the nation, either in the military or in civilian roles aimed at filling unmet needs, such as caring for the elderly, working in schools, hospitals, day care centers, or sprucing up national parks.

By offering educational or training benefits as a reward for military service, but no similar incentives for civilian duty, such a plan could presumably lure enough young people into uniform to meet military needs while still preserving an element of choice.

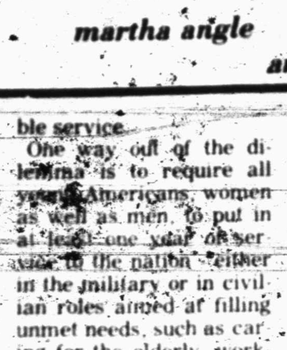

A sophisticated version of such a plan was introduced in Congress last week by Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr., R-Calif., and 10 of his colleagues from both political parties. It will be the subject of hearings on Capitol Hill early this spring.

The catch, however, is the cost factor. No matter how it is organized, any civilian national service program is going to cost money — quite a lot of money — and require extensive new administrative machinery.

Congress just isn't in the mood to undertake any new expenditures that can be avoided. A universal national service program might be good for the country and good for the young, but a return to the draft would be cheaper. It's all a matter of how Congress assesses the political price of the alternatives before it.

Miss Eicke Directs Club In "Spring Sing"

Rita Eicke, a 1978 graduate of Snyder High School, recently participated in "Spring Sing" at Oklahoma Christian College in Oklahoma City. "Spring Sing" is a popular campus wide show which is produced each year entirely by students.

Each social club on campus prepared a seven-minute show, then they were combined to make a 2½ hour musical. Miss Eicke was chosen by her club, Gamma Rho, to be its director.

Working since mid-December, Miss Eicke arranged the music, taught the music to club members, and coached them as they set their music to choreography.

With the theme "Row Your Boat Through History," Gamma Rho took the audience on a historical journey starting on the Nile River in Egypt. The 'journey' went through England, Germany, Russia, South America, the Old West, the 50s, and right up to modern U.S.A., using the basic folk song "Row, Row, Row Your Boat" with many variations.

Dressed as the captain of a ship, Miss Eicke led her sailor-like club members in a show that drew capacity crowds each night (Feb. 15-17).

Miss Eicke is the first, first-year student, to direct a club in "Spring Sing" at OCC. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seabourn Eicke of Snyder.

Pure Water Doesn't Conduct Electricity

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP)-Water is popularly known as a good conductor of electricity - but pure water doesn't conduct electricity, according to the Water Quality Association.

"The technology exists to make water so pure it is an electrical insulator," a spokesman said. "It's called 18 megohm water, and industry is producing it by the millions of gallons a day."

Such water is used for rinsing semiconductors and microcircuits, where the slightest impurity could spell trouble, he explained.

"A person could stand in a pool of this ultra-pure water, with a live wire touching it, and not be harmed," he added.

This hand was bid and played aggressively by Renee Molson, one of Canada's best women players, at the 1978 Can Am Regional at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal. Renee's jump to five hearts indicated that was the suit she wanted to play the hand in and asked North to bid a slam if he had first- or second-round control in West's spade suit.

A key move occurred at trick one. Declarer ruffed the king of diamonds to delay taking a discard on the ace of diamonds until later. Trumps were drawn in two rounds and the top clubs were cashed. First, dummy's king, then her ace. If clubs had divided 2-2, declarer would have had seven heart tricks, one diamond and five club tricks.

Clubs did not divide, but fortunately for Renee the hand with the singleton club (West) also had both the spade ace and queen. Declarer wisely led a spade to dummy and West was in trouble. If he played low, declarer would win with the king in dummy and discard the remaining spade on the ace of diamonds. She would then concede a club trick and claim the contract.

West won the ace of spades to avoid just such an eventuality, but to no avail. He returned a diamond which declarer ruffed in her hand and it was a simple matter to lead a spade to dummy's king-jack and finesse for West's queen.

Declarer would up losing one spade trick, but both club losers were thrown away, one on the diamond ace and the other on the spade king. Everything was made possible by the far-sighted ruff at trick one.

Declarer had to keep both spades in her hand at trick one to allow her to make the contract when the club suit did not break. She could not have taken the make-or-break jack of spades finesse with only one spade in her hand.

Preference Of Home Styles Vary

NEW YORK (AP)—American home buyers have much in common but style preferences vary widely in different sections of the country, says Housing magazine.

A survey of six major metropolitan areas showed that tudors are "in" in San Diego and San Francisco, while colonials are most popular in Washington, D.C.

Tudors and contemporary homes run neck and neck in Miami, and the ranch house is preferred in the Chicago area, the survey indicated.

Home buyers believe insulation is important, it added, but less than half are ready to reduce window space to cut energy costs.

And, the magazine added, nearly all shoppers want fireplaces - with Californians desiring two.

In 1692, a charter was granted for founding the first American postal system.

Dear Abby

She Drove Them Out of Her Mind

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: There are two sides to the lament voiced by DON'T DRIVE IN OMAHA.

I am a "Do Drive" living in a retirment community in Arizona, surrounded by "Don't Drives." When I moved here I invited some "Don't Drives" to ride with me to shopping centers and various civic affairs. No doubt this was a welcome gesture to them, but it later became such a headache that I quit offering.

There is the "Don't Drive" who, when invited to go to a shopping center, asks to be driven all over the city on her little errands.

There is the "Don't Drive" who shows up with two or three of her friends, unknown to me, whom SHE has invited to go along—each with their own little errands that will take "only a minute."

There are the invitations extended to me solely because I drive and can provide transportation for five or six of my hostesses' "Don't Drives."

But most of all, I resent the "Don't Drives" who have never driven because they're "too nervous," but are the world's most unnerving backseat drivers!

DO DRIVE IN ARIZONA

DEAR DO DRIVE: You must be living in the wrong retirement community. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I live in an area with a large population of senior citizens, many of whom do not drive. (My eyes are poor, so I can't drive.)

However, I've never wanted for transportation anywhere. Two or three neighbors call me daily, offering to drive me wherever I want to go.

Perhaps it's because I keep a record of all the rides I get. I mark down the approximate amount I would have paid had I hired a taxi. Then, periodically, I give each person who has driven me a box of groceries whose cash value equals the cab fare I saved.

DON'T DRIVE, DO PAY

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of relatives you never hear from unless they're drunk?

SHIRLEY

DEAR SHIRLEY: It could be worse. You could have relatives you never hear from unless they're BROKE.

DEAR ABBY: I am still laughing about something that happened this morning. The character who gave me that laugh sounds like someone who'd write to you.

I am a switchboard operator for the telephone company. When I answered a call this morning there was no response on the other end of the line. After I had said, "Good morning, this is the Pacific Telephone Company" for the third time, I heard a somewhat embarrassed little female voice say, "Is this REALLY the telephone company?"

I assured her it was, and asked her to whom she wanted to speak.

She replied, "Nobody, I guess. I found this telephone number in my husband's coat pocket and my curiosity was killing me."

Connally Calls Trip Sensational

LUCKY NUMBER WINNER-Vee Ann Hoyle of 2505 31st won $10 last week when she matched the Lucky Number hidden in the SDN. Pick-up a Lucky Number Sheet at one of the participating merchants and win cash and prizes. (SDN Photo)

By MICHAEL O'CONNOR
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — John Connally's initial excursion into the Republican political stratosphere is over, and the presidential candidate says the trip was "nothing short of sensational."

The 62-year-old Houston attorney wrapped up a weeklong campaign swing through 22 communities with a birthday reception in his home city Tuesday that included about 3,700 friends who paid $25 apiece to attend.

Campaign officials said their candidate spoke to about 27,000 people in his 3,000-mile odyssey around the state.

"There is no question in my mind that we can carry Texas on any basis," Connally said.

A mostly white, middle-class crowd downed free cocktails in an attempt to get its money's worth and discussed politics while waiting for the festivities to begin.

The party-goers cheered when Connally blew out the candles on a detailed cake replica of the White House, but continued chattering while others on the program spoke. They hushed, however, when Connally strode to center stage.

In the forceful, colorful "Big John Connally" style that won him three terms as Democratic governor of Texas before he switched parties, Connally engaged the people, telling them what they wanted to hear and asking for their support.

"We went off the high board on Jan. 24, and we're hoping you'll man the fire hoses and fill the pool before we land," he said. "It'll be a crash landing for us if you don't."

To intermittent cheers, he launched into a litany of problems facing the country and criticism of the Carter Administration for failing to deal with them.

"The government doesn't have anything to give you other than what it's taken away from you," said the obviously tired, but bouyant candidate.

He said inflation, foreign affairs and the energy crisis were the three main issues worrying the American voter.

In a news conference earlier, Connally told reporters gasoline shortages will trigger double-digit inflation, and predicted gasoline rationing and huge price increase this year.

He said the shortages were "nothing short of tragic and so unnecessary," and he attacked President Carter's handling of the situation.

Rather than follow policies encouraging expanded oil exploration and development, nuclear power and coal development, Connally said, Carter has asked the American people to "share the shortages."

"What kind of policy is that?" he asked. "The strength of the United States is an ever-expanding economy, not a sharing of shortages."

Asked if it is necessary for a President to lie to the American people, Connally said, "No, but it is necessary to the President not to tell all he knows all the time."

The candidate also said he doesn't blame the Carter administration for the "Iran debacle."

"But I deplore the fact that they didn't know what was going on, or if they did, they didn't do something about it two years ago," he said. "We should have tried to encourage the shah to broaden the base of government and defuse the opposition."

Salt in the diet

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I know common salt can be dangerous and I have been reducing my use of it in cooking and on the table. However, what about sea salt? Is it dangerous, or would it be all right to use it?

DEAR READER — Salt isn't necessarily dangerous. It depends upon whether or not you need it. If a person suffers from salt depletion, as a heavy laborer might with excessive sweating, then it might be useful to replace the body's normal salt content. We all have salt in our blood and tissues and it is essential to our health. Without an adequate amount of it, we would go into chemical imbalance and die.

Most people do use too much salt or certainly more than they need. There are a variety of medical problems, such as heart failure, that are associated with retention of fluid and are adversely affected by salt.

Common salt, as we use it on the table, is sodium chloride. In that pure state, it has nothing else added. When pure salt is obtained from an area without anything else, trace amounts of iodine are added so people will not have iodine deficiencies. Impure salt may contain a variety of other elements besides iodine. That's true of sea salt.

It is still sodium chloride, and if you had a medical condition that meant you should restrict salt intake, you certainly should not use it. If you're a normal, healthy person and want to use sea salt in reasonable amounts, then it should not harm you any more than the ordinary salt you buy at the grocery store. Don't expect any miracles from it because there are no real beneficial effects from sea salt that you should not be able to get from ordinary salt.

To give you more information about problems with salt, I am sending you The Health Letter number 10-12, Salt: Your Vital Sodium and Potassium Balance. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 29-year-old male. After undergoing two recent exploratory operations, I was informed that I could never have children. It seems that although my testicles do produce a normal amount of sperm, the passage that carries the sperm from the testicles to the penis (vas deferens) is not there. I would like to know if my chances for reproduction are completely hopeless at this time. If so, is there any hope in the near future?

DEAR READER — The answer to your question depends a lot on what was really found during the exploratory surgery. Men who have had their vas deferens surgically severed can sometimes have the sterilization operation reversed. Of course, the less damage done to the vas deferens, the easier it is to accomplish this.

The vas deferens is just a tube. A vasectomy literally cuts and blocks the tube to dam up the sperm cells.

I would think your best bet for reconstruction to provide a tube or passageway might be with one of the new microsurgical techniques. It's worth a consultation with such a urological surgeon. Since you've already had exploratory operations, I presume that there ought to be quite a bit of information that he could use to determine whether there is anything that could be done now.

Even if the answer you receive at this time is no, I would think there might be some possibilities in the future because of the rapid advances in reconstructive surgery and the use of microsurgical techniques.

For Politicians...

Balanced Budget, New Cause

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP)— For a while there, every politician wanted to be a tax cutter. Now there are new buzzwords: balance the budget.

There is little disagreement on the desirability of that goal. There is little but disagreement on the way to achieve it.

The count of budget balancing bills and resolutions introduced in Congress is pushing 80. In 28 states, legislatures have adopted resolution calling for a constitutional amendment to require balancing federal budgets. They want a constitutional convention to make the change if Congress won't act.

President Carter opposes an amendment, but says he wants a balanced budget. The administration guardedly projects that federal spending will break into the black in 1981, but says that depends on economic conditions and on the need for new programs or tax reductions.

An AP-NBC News poll showed 68 percent of the people favor a balanced budget even if it requires cuts in federal programs they like. That survey of 1,600 adult Americans, conducted Feb. 5-6, showed that 70 percent favor a constitutional amendment that would require balanced federal budgets.

But the same number say they don't think the politicians who are publicly committed to balancing the budget will actually work to do it. And by 49 percent to 45 percent, people say they don't think it is going to be possible to balance federal spending and income in the next few years anyhow.

There's a political issue there, but nobody seems quite sure how to handle it. California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. advocates a constitutional amendment, by convention if Congress doesn't approve one and submit it to the states. He lost in his own legislature, where the Ways and Means Committee would not approve asking for a convention. Instead, it urged Congress to balance the budget.

William Brodie, a respected Edinburgh businessman by day and the leader of a gang of thieves at night, was the inspiration for the book "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

In Gas Rationing Plan...

Unused Coupons Could Be Bought By Others

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)— The standby gasoline rationing powers President Carter says he needs just in case the nation's oil supplies sharply dip would go easiest on motorists with at least two gas-saving cars.

But the president's plan would allow people who ran short of gas to buy unused coupons from other drivers.

The plan, which would require a new bureaucracy to handle the paperwork and cost an estimated $1.66 billion a year, will be submitted to Congress Thursday.

In either case, Energy Department officials say oil shortages anticipated this summer by the upheaval in Iran would not be severe enough to trigger the plan.

The president plans to send proposals dealing with the Iranian curtailment to Capitol Hill early next month.

Because of the mechanics involved, the standby rationing program could not begin before next winter. And then it would be activated only by a "Severe Energy Supply Interruption," which officials say is unlikely to occur.

A severe interruption is roughly defined as a 20 percent shortage of the 7.5 million barrels of oil consumed daily in the United States. Iran has supplied 5 percent of the daily U.S. consumption, although imports from other nations have cut the net effect of the Iranian curtailment to 2.5 percent.

The Carter plan, required under a 1975 law directing the president to devise such a program, would ration gasoline not by calculated "needs" or to individual drivers, but to each registered motor vehicle.

The federal government, using state records, would set up a nationwide file of current vehicle registrations.

It would determine how much gasoline is available, usually for a three-month period, and then start setting aside various reserves.

Then, making allowances for top-priority public service needs such as agriculture, it would figure out how much gas could be parcelled out to the general public.

Feud In Italy Claims Victim Number 29

CITTANOVA, Italy (AP) —A family feud that has bloodied this southern Italian town for years claimed its 29th victim Monday when Vincenzo Minasi, 47, was ambushed and shot to death near here, police reported.

Minasi's body was found by his 14-year-old son, who might now become another avenger in the feud that has long split The Facchinieri and Raso-Albanese families, authorities said. Miniasi was a relative of the Facchinieris.

Family feuds in this region in the toe of Italy are usually triggered by grudges leading to a first murder. Vendetta killings then follow, sometimes for generations.

Dusters Set For Regional; Try Weatherford Thursday

ABILENE—The Region V NJCAA basketball tournament is no stranger to the Western Texas College Dusters, and neither is Thursday's 1 p.m. opponent Weatherford College.

This year's entry into the three day meet marks the Duster's fifth in a row, and tomorrow's meeting with Weatherford will be WTC's fourth this season.

While the Snyder-based club tangles in the tourney opener, six other teams line up to make bids towards a regional championship, and with it, a berth to the National Tournament.

Amarillo College and Ranger Junior College will vie in the day's second first-round contest at 3 p.m. - all games will be held at Moody Coliseum on the ACU campus - followed by Clarendon College versus McLennan Community College (Waco) at 6 and Odessa College versus Howard County College (Big Spring) at 8.

A tournament ticket sells for $10 (seven games), session tickets (two games Thursday and Friday, one on Saturday) go for $2 each, and game tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students. Tickets may be purchased at the coliseum box office.

The Dusters lost to Weatherford, 64-63, in WTC's second game of the season. It was a rough start for the Joe Cushing coached team which went 0-3 before finding a 66-59 victory over New Mexico State on Nov. 11.

But the road continued rocky, until, at 8-8 on the season, the Dusters edged highly-touted Amarillo College 64-63 in Snyder on Jan. 15 to begin a string of wins that has left them 23-10 going into tomorrow's tournament.

With that 15-2 streak came wins of 88-44 and 65-46 over Weatherford, and a lot of experience.

"I believe these girls can do just about anything they want to do," commented Cushing, who led the team to a co-championship this year in his first season as a junior college coach.

Win or lose Thursday, the Dusters have done a lot already this season. They've snapped five team and individual records, and are in position to set some more this week.

Among the records tied or broken are: most team victories in a single season, tied (23 set in the 1975-76 season); most points in a season, 2,119 breaks old record of 1,933 in 1975-76 season; most individual points in a single season, Nodia Vaughn's 482 breaks record of 476 set in 1978 by Cindy Luttrull; most individual rebounds, Joyce Plagens' 274 breaks 234 set by Marilyn Payton in 1976; and most free throws in a single game, Vaughn's 12 ties Teresa Beal's record in 1976, both set against Wayland.

The 23 season victories record would fall with a win over Weatherford tomorrow, and Cushing is keeping several record breaking possibilities under his hat for now.

The winner of the contest will face either McLennan Community College or Clarendon College at 6 p.m. Friday. The championship game will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Slaton Sails Past Merkel

Slaton girls dumped Merkel, 56-34, in Class AA bi-district basketball play-off action here last night.

The Tigers, of District 5-AA, will vie against a Crane-Fabens team in their next step up the playoff ladder.

Slaton jumped out to a 22-7 lead and let up only in the third period when the desperate Badgers outscored the Tigers 14-4. But an already bulging halftime lead of 39-17, coupled with a 13-3 disasterous fourth quarter for Merkel, easily gave Slaton the victory.

Cynthia Robinson led the Tigers through their paces, striking the net for 17 points, while teammate Esquleta Whaley hit 12. Cindy Boone guided the Badgers with 16 points.

Merkel, 29-2, was unable to handle Slaton's full-court press and turned the ball over 26 times in the first half alone.

That third quarter was Badger basketball at its best, but it was not enough, and it didn't last.

Cats Open Season Against Monterey

The baseball season gets underway for Snyder's Tigers on Thursday as they play host to Monterey at 4 p.m.

The Tigers, defending District 3-3A champions, have scrimmaged twice this season, coming up with a 1-1 preseason record.

Leading off for Snyder Thursday will be left fielder Bryan Vincent, followed by second baseman Sid Everton (.366 last year), center fielder Bobby Degrate, right fielder-pitcher Mitch Mackey (.376 last season), first baseman Scott Crenwelge (.289), short stop David Lee (.274), designated hitter Sam Willis, pitcher Tony Degrate, and catcher Mark Davis.

Snyder will start Tony Degrate (6-3) on the mound for several innings, to be followed by Mackey (11-2), according to Coach Albert Lewis.

Willis will be hitting for third baseman Richard Crayton (.354).

Others planning to see action for the Tigers include Ricky Gambol, Walter Banks and Toby Neves.

The game will be held at Moffett Field.

Angels Consider Legal Action

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)-Team owner Gene Autry said the California Angels are considering legal action against baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn over Kuhn's disciplining the club for alleged tampering with former Southern Cal pitcher Bill Bordley.

"I will be meeting with Buzzie Bavasi (Angels executive vice president) and our attorney to debate what action we should take," Autry said Tuesday.

Kuhn last week announced the Angels would be fined at least one draft choice and an unspecified amount of cash - which has turned out two draft choices and $15,000.

"The commissioner is being totally unfair," Autry said. "The evidence is strictly circumstantial. I am certain that neither Buzzie nor anyone connected with the club is guilty."

Kuhn claimed the Angels had offered "assurance" to Bordley prior to January's amateur draft. The Cincinnati Reds, picking ahead of the Angels, chose Bordley. He has since signed with the San Francisco Giants.

"There were no papers signed, no deal made," said Autry. "The boy and his father came to us to tell us that because of illness in the family he did not want to play in the East and would be receptive to a draft by the Angels. If that makes us guilty, then whatever happened to free speech?"

Tennis Star Harold Solomon is only 5-6 and weighs 130 pounds.

Ira 'Dogs Erased By Tough Sands

BIG SPRING--Ira should have been forwarned. At least some might look at it that way.

Like the sands that fiercely blew across Highway 350 enroute here last night, Sands High School took advantage of the situation and swept up a 60-33 Class B girls bi-district basketball victory at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

But unlike the sands that besieged the area - limiting visibility to 100 feet in some places - it wasn't too hard to see what was wrong with the Ira Bulldogs. They were tight. Extremely tight.

"I think you could say that and be very safe," commented Ira Coach Mickey Rundell. "We did not do what we had to do to win," he added. "We did not stop (Jill) Floyd and we didn't take care of the ball, that's obvious with 30 turnovers."

Led by the ever-moving Floyd, Sands jumped out to an 11-5 first-quarter lead, kept in during the second quarter, and took a 42-26 advantage by the beginning of the final period.

Floyd, who hit 10 of 12 shots from the charity stripe, basketed the first two buckets of the fourth quarter to all but seal the victory.

Ira, meanwhile, could never find the momenteum it needed to fight back against the Mustangs. The Bulldogs hit 13 percent from the field in the first half, and managed only 10 floor shots for the game. Sands failed to shoot well in the first 16 minutes either, but took advantage of Floyd's rebounding to get second tries, and came back in the second half hitting 58 percent.

Linda Cooley led the 'Dogs with 10 points - six points from the free throw line - while Donna Layne scored 8 and Brenda Cooley added 5. Layne also pumped in a half-dozen charity shots.

Floyd scored half of Sands' points. Penny Grantham was the only other Mustang in double figures, coming off the bench to pitch in 11.

The loss ends Ira's season at 23-10. Sands, 32-5, will begin regional competition in Levelland at 2:30 p.m. Friday.

Davis Mansion Impresses Judge

FORT WORTH (AP)—The judge in the divorce trial of Cullen and Priscilla Davis says he has been in some very expensive homes in different parts of the United States.

But never, he said after taking a tour of the $6 million Davis mansion Tuesday, has he seen "anything to compare to this."

He was particularly impressed with a $95,000 chess set with its board of black-and-white jade and its pieces of white and yellow gold.

Judge John Barron of Bryan proposed the tour Tuesday, recessing court at noon to "break the damn monotony" of the often-dry testimony about Davis' financial affairs.

He called the mansion a "great showplace."

"It's very beautiful and most elegantly furnished," he said after an hour-long tour of the 19,000-square-foot, 20-room home.

The mansion is the primary physical property at stake in the divorce proceeding in which property division is the sole issue.

Barron toured the mansion to see how it has been maintained and to view items appraised for property division in the divorce trial.

Journalism Scholarships Available

SAN ANGELO (AP)—Students interested in majoring in journalism at Angelo State University to prepare for professional newspaper careers may begin applying for the $300 Millard Cope Memorial Scholarship, according to Dr. Harrison Youngren, head of the ASU journalism department.

The scholarship is awarded each year to a freshman journalism student entering Angelo State University. A student who receives an award as a freshman is eligible to apply for renewal each year providing the student maintains good academic standing and makes significant contributions to the ASU journalism program.

Students who are selected for the scholarships must enroll in ASU on a full-time basis as journalism majors. Priority will be given to students who indicate a desire and intent to work as a staff member on one of the two campus student publications.

Approximately seven Millard Cope Scholarship awards are made each year by the selection committee. Last spring, two scholarships were awarded to entering freshmen and five scholarships were awarded to sophomore, junior and senior students who were renewing their awards.

In addition to the Millard Cope awards, the university may provide other ASU journalism scholarships to outstanding entering freshmen who are not selected for Millard Cope awards.

Seminar Offers Tips On Determining Roots

Unless you are a king or president or other notable, finding your ancestors and drawing up a family tree may be up to you.

Thousands of Americans every year are doing just that.

Enthusiasts say it is the third largest hobby in the United States, behind collectors of stamps and coins, and that it is growing rapidly, suggesting a growing passion for social history.

The increasing trend toward genealogy research started four or five years ago, picked up stimulation in the Bicentennial year and was spurred again by Alex Haley's "Roots" and the tremendously successful ABC television series based on his book.

That series, the most watched ever on television, led thousands of blacks and whites alike to search for their own roots. The National Archives reported that its mail requests quadrupled in the week after the series.

Most people starting out don't know how to begin.

To assist beginning genealogists and others, The Western Texas Genealogical Association is sponsoring a seminar Thursday evening, beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Conference Room of The Agricultural Service Center, 3423 Avenue T (Snyder Shopping Center).

Guest speaker will be Richard Shepherd of Salt Lake City, Utah. Shepherd has been interested in the fascinating endeavor of genealogy for over 30 years. He has attended Humbolt College and the University of Utah and has spent five years as a microfilmer for the Genealogical Society in Salt Lake City.

Shepherd has visited most of the major genealogical centers in every state and Washington, D.C. Each year he conducts over 200 public seminars. He is presently one of the most popular and sought after genealogical speakers in the country, having lectured to most of the various genealogical societies in the nation.

The French novelist Victor Hugo was readily defeated when he ran for president in 1848.

Carter's Gas Rationing Plan Called Deplorable

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has told the National Governor's Association that President Carter's emergency gas rationing plan is "deplorable" and that Texas has a much better solution.

Carter released his proposal of a standby gasoline rationing plan to be used only in an emergency on Tuesday, and Clements said the President fails to realize an emergency already exists.

"We are in an energy crisis. It can be described in no other way," said Clements, re-emphasizing his criticism of Carter's energy policies.

But, the Texas governor took issue that gas rationing is the answer.

"There must be no energy rationing in the United States without an all-out production effort," Clements said.

The first Republican Texas governor in 104 years said Carter's gas rationing proposal "is a clear indictment of the administration and the administration's energy policies. It's deplorable."

Clements told the governors a "non-partisan coalition" of the mostly-Democrat Texas delegation has endorsed his 13-step plan.

Basically, the governor called for the "unfettering of the oil, gas and coal industries to "allow it to do what it is capable of doing — produce energy," removal of barriers to nuclear power plant development, opening federal lands for energy development, seek oil and gas from Mexico, "moderate environmental restrictions," completion of a West Coast pipeline to Texas refineries and promotion of "a sensible conservation program that provides information and incentives at a local level."

Windfall profits in the energy industry should be used only for development of energy, added Clements.

"If a drop in production in Iran — a country from which we import only five percent of our petroleum supplies — brings us to the point of gasoline rationing in peacetime, we are in serious trouble in regards to energy," said Clements.

"Obviously, our problem becomes worse if a similar interruption occurs in other countries.

"The fact of the matter, reduced to its most basic terms, is this: We in the United States are overly dependent on imported oil from some of the most politically unstable and unpredictable parts of the world," continued Clements.

"The last major oil crisis in the United States was five years ago and the nation still has not developed a rational energy policy that addresses the problem of an over-dependence on imported oil.

Highlights Of Carter Speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are some highlights of a nationally broadcast news conference Tuesday in which President Carter:

US-MIDEAST

Called conclusion of an Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty "an urgent necessity" and announced that Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin will arrive in Washington Thursday "for a frank discussion" at the White House of the issues involved in the talks.

INFLATION

Declined to say whether the unpredictable oil supply situation is prompting the administration to revise its estimate that the 1979 inflation rate will be 7.4 percent.

FOREIGN POLICY

Said the administration is "exercising prudence" in foreign affairs, specifically in effort to contain regional disputes, but insisted that "we're a strong nation" and "I'm committed to preserving that strength."

US-CHINA

Said he has informed the Chinese his "firm disapproval" of their invasion of Vietnam, but added that it would be counterproductive for the United States to terminate its new bilateral relations with Peking and added that Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal's trip to China is proper.

BROTHER BILLY

Reiterated that he has no control over the public remarks of his brother, Billy Carter, concerning Jews or anyone else and added: "I know for a fact that he is not anti-semitic."

GAS RATIONING

Said he has no plans to implement gasoline rationing or any of the other standby fuel conservation measures made public by the Energy Department Tuesday.

BALANCED BUDGET

Reaffirmed that he believes convening a constitutional convention to draft an amendment to require a balanced federal budget "would be very ill advised, contrary to the best interest of our country."

JERRY BROWN

Said if he was looking for a political adversary, California Gov. Edmund G. "Jerry" Brown, and many others" would be worthy.

US-IRAN

Declined to speculate over which U.S. administration might be responsible for the turmoil in Iran that resulted in the overthrow of the shah's monarchy.

ISRAEL-OIL

Said the United States will honor its commitment to help Israel meet its fuel needs, although Israeli leaders so far have been able to make up for the loss of Iranian oil on their own.

FARMERS

Said he believes protesting farmers have a legitimate right to demonstrate their views "as long as they do it within the bounds of the law" but noted that some of the protesters have caused hardships and have interfered "with the right of people to go to their homes" in the nation's capital.
