Chemical Blast

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)-Explosion and fire struck a chemical company on Jacksonville's west side today, sending up a cloud of thick, black smoke that police said may contain lethal insecticide.

There were no immediate reports of injures.

Up to 15 fire units moved in to battle a three-alarm blaze and a large area was ordered evacuated.

Letter Investigated

SAN ANTONIO (AP)-FBI officials say they are investigating a letter mailed to District Attorney Bill White that threatened White and two federal prosecutors and took credit for the assassination last week of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

The letter was received in the mail by White's office on Tuesday. White turned it over to the FBI.

Miracle Proclaimed

SAN ANTONIO (AP)-Critically ill Steve Little got his miracle Wednesday when doctors successfully transplanted a kidney into him from his mentally retarded sister in an operation allowed by a landmark Texas legal decision.

"We got our miracle," said Margaret Little, mother of the children said after the five-hour operation. Both 15-year-old Anne Little and Steve, 14, were in stable condition Wednesday night at the Bexar County Medical Center.

Visits Birthplace

KRAKOW, Poland (AP)-Pope John Paul II visits his birthplace in southern Poland today and prays at the Auschwitz and Birkenau death camps after a jubilant welcome for the former archbishop of Krakow.

Following morning prayers at Kalwaria Zebrzydowska Monastery outside Krakow, the pontiff was to drive to his birthplace at the little town of Wadowice for a speech in front of the local church.

Then a helicopter was to take him to Auschwitz, 18 miles away, where he was to visit death cells and the death wall at Block 11. At nearby Birkenau he was to attend a Mass celebrated by priests who were prisoners at the twin camps in which the Nazis exterminated an estimated 4 million people.

Sharp Drop In Beef Credited ...

May Prices Rise Modest .4%

WASHINGTON (AP)—Wholesale prices rose a modest 0.4 percent in May—the smallest increase in nine months—with a sharp drop in beef prices getting much of the credit, the government said today.

The May increase was a marked turnaround from the 0.9 percent wholesale price rise in April, together with increases of 1 percent or more in the first three months of the year.

The Labor Department report offered further proof that the nation's economy has begun to slow, which might help ease the high rate of inflation so far this year.

Wholesale food prices fell 1.3 percent in May, the largest drop since February 1976. Beef prices at wholesale fell nearly 7 percent, the first decline after five consecutive months of large increases.

"It's bound to have some effect at the retail level," said John Early, chief of the Labor Department's division of industrial prices. "Most food changes pass through very rapidly."

At the same time, however, the wholesale prices of consumer goods other than food rose 1 percent in May.

Early blamed the continuing increase on rapidly rising gasoline and fuel oil prices. Gasoline prices went up 5.2 percent in May, for an increase of nearly 12 percent in the past three months. Fuel oil was up 5.4 percent, or more than 18 percent since February.

Government economists had been predicting the slowdown in food prices. The rising petroleum prices are blamed on a worldwide shortage and rapidly escalating charges for crude oil from producing nations.

Wholesale price changes are included in the Producer Price Index, which reports prices at three levels: the wholesale or finished goods level, when goods are ready for sale to the final user; the intermediate level, where they have received some processing, and the crude level, where goods have not yet received any processing.

The Producer Price Index stood at 212.4 in May, meaning that goods costing $100 at the wholesale level in the 1967 base period cost $212.40 last month.

The index last month was 10 percent ahead of a year ago, the Labor Department said.

They are participating in workshop-type sessions studying the organization and operation of state and local government. They were chosen from among 900 local high school students. The sessions began today and end June 12. Two outstanding youths from Boys State will advance to Boys Nation to be held in July in Washington D.C. First Eastridge Permits Issued

Permits have been issued for construction of three dwellings in the Eastridge Addition, a new residential development in the southeast part of town.

The permits were picked up Wednesday afternoon by Randy Culver, representing Colony Homes of Fort Worth, the development firm, and construction work is due to begin soon.

The three new dwellings, to cost an estimated $105,000, quickly ran the June building permit totals here beyond the entire total for the month of May.

The Fort Worth firm, also the developer of the Kingswood Estates Apartment complex on 37th St., has had site preparation work underway for the Eastridge Addition for several months. Streets have been constructed and utilities have been installed in the new addition.

The three units for which permits were issued Wednesday will include three separate floor plans and are expected to serve as model homes for display purposes. They will be located on Eastridge drive, just east of the Brick Plant Road.

Colony Homes also has an application in for funds to develop additional apartment units at Kingswood Estates.

Trying To Trade Farm Goods For Oil

WASHINGTON (AP)-An American farm leader is trying to work out an apparently unprecedented deal to buy oil from the militant Arab state of Libya in return for wheat, corn and farm machinery.

Allan Grant, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, is conducting quiet negotiations with Libyan officials in an effort to ease the farmers' shortage of diesel fuel. More than 3 million American farmers are members of the federation.

If the talks succeed, farm cooperatives will import the high quality, expensive Libyan crude and sell their agricultural products to the oil-rich nation.

"What we would like to do is to develop a contract for continuing supplies," Grant said.

State Department officials said they did not think there would be any objections to the arrangement Grant is trying to work out.

Ticket Sale For July 4th Is Underway

Tickets for the annual July 4th celebration are now being sold at the chamber of commerce office and by members of several local clubs and organizations.

The tickets may be used for admission to the July 4th tractor pull event, which will be held on the night of July 3 and the afternoon of July 4 at the rodeo grounds. They also are issued as tokens for contributions to the chamber's July 4th fund, with proceeds going to help pay for the big fireworks display and other expenses.

At the same time, people may register for prizes which will be given away in Towle Memorial Park on the evening of July 4 prior to the fireworks display. There is no charge for registration for the prizes.

Spring Rains Soak Texas' Dry Image

COLLEGE STATION (AP)-Texas' dry-as-a-bone image had already taken a bath in higher than usual rainfall amounts before the heavy deluges of May and early June left their soggy mark.

A large number of big, slow moving upper level disturbances combined with moisture from the Gulf of Mexico to drench almost every section of Texas with spring rainfall amounts 20 percent to 50 percent higher than usual, said Kenneth Brundidge, head of meteorology at Texas A&M.

"This produces the instability that triggers the rain. We don't know why there are more of these slow-moving upper level disturbances, but they're the cause of the precipitation," said Brundidge.

Before the May rains, which pelted some areas with as much as 10 inches of rain, only two of the 15 weather reporting regions showed less than normal rainfall for February through April. And the state climatologist's office said most stations reported readings at least 20 percent higher.

The SDN Column

After reading the document of office staff practices from an earlier day in this column last week, Dorothy Cox was reminded of a book she read in which church manners were discussed.

Published in 1880, the book was titled "Home and Health and Home Economics." It had this advice concerning church manners.

Be on time. No one has a right needlessly to disturb a congregation or a preacher by being tardy.

Never look around to see who is coming in when the door is opened.

Never talk or whisper in church, especially after the exercises are opened.

Never pull out your watch to see what time it is. Better to feed on a sermon than to time it.

Never manifest your disapprobation of what is being said by unpleasant sounds, or signs, or by hastily leaving.

Do not fidget as though the service were a weariness.

Be quiet and decorous to the very end.

No gentleman ever defiles a place of worship with tobacco.

Never be one of a staring crowd about the door or in the vestibule before or after service.

Do nothing out of keeping with the time, place and purpose of a religious assembly.

Let your politeness be positive. Invite the near stranger to a seat, offer him a hymn book, or share with him your own. Be cordial to all.

Do not be offended if you are not specially noticed.

Do not put on your overcoat or adjust your wrappings till the Doxology has been sung.

Angry About Rising Fuel Costs...

Independent Truckers Stepping Up Protests

By The Associated Press

A mile-long section of the Indiana Toll Road was blocked by 300 trucks four abreast for several hours early today, and independent truckers in several states stepped up protests against rising fuel costs.

Elsewhere, truckers took complaints to the source, using their big rigs to block pumps at truck stops, mainly in the West and Midwest.

At least one truck stop was blockaded on Interstate 70 in Denver as the 210-member Colorado Association of Independent Truckers joined in a call for a nationwide shutdown.

It was causing concern among shippers such as Joe Oran, president of Scott Truck Line in Commerce City, Colo., who said he couldn't find drivers for 10 truckloads of beef sitting in refrigerated trailers in his lot. He said each trailer contains $50,000 to $100,000 worth of meat.

Indiana State Trooper Dan Hexenbaugh said trucks began lining up shortly after midnight at the Burns Harbor exit near Indiana's deep-water port on Lake Michigan and a Bethlehem Steel Corp. complex. Four hours later they were jammed four abreast a half mile in either direction from the exit, he said.

The truckers started pulling away before the morning rush hour of mill workers and employees.

Industry Officials Plan Visit Here

Officials of an industrial firm considering a site near Snyder are scheduled to make a personal visit here before the end of the month, Bill Warner, chamber of commerce manager, has announced.

Local agencies were advised several months ago that a major industry seeking a new plant site in the Southwest had narrowed its potential list to three, one of which was Snyder.

Since then, the chamber, the Board of County Development and Scurry County Industrial Foundation have kept in contact with officials of the firm.

When the original announcement was made it was noted that the firm was considering a plant that could eventually employ up to 1,500 persons.

Meanwhile, the chamber and other agencies have provided information and invited the officials of the industry to make a personal visit here. A site here was among those that got a high recommendation from a consulting

DC-10s Remain Grounded Until Problem Resolved

WASHINGTON (AP)-The nation's fleet of DC-10s is grounded for at least a week, creating continued turmoil at airline terminals, as engineers seek to correct what may be a design defect in the big jet's engine mounting system.

The plans of many travelers coming to the United States also are being disrupted because of a Federal Aviation Administration decision to bar foreign-operated DC-10s from U.S. airspace until the problem is resolved.

"It's going to be some time," FAA chief Langhorne M. Bond said Wednesday when asked how long the DC-10s will be out of service. "The grounding will remain in effect until the problem is found, analyzed and cured."

He said the planes won't be airborne again until McDonnell Douglas Corp., the plane's manufacturer, proves the aircraft is safe. He said that would take at least a week--longer if a major design change is required.

Bond said the FFA will work closely with the plane's builder to pinpoint the problem and fix it.

"We're going to outline our main design and maintenance procedures first and work from there," he said.

The FAA suspended the design certificate of the troubled DC-10 Wednesday after fresh hairline cracks were found in the engine mounts of two jets that had been checked and cleared during other inspections conducted just a week ago. The order affecting foreign-operated DC-10s was issued later in the day.

In Long Beach, Calif., McDonnell Douglas released a statement calling the FAA action "extreme and unwarranted" and said it is considering going into court to try to overturn it.

It was the fourth time in a week that all or some of the 138 U.S.-registered jets had been grounded in the aftermath of the May 25 crash of a DC-10 in Chicago. The American Airlines plane that crashed and burned after an engine fell off during takeoff, killing 275 persons in the worst U.S. aviation disaster.

Bond said FAA investigators had discovered a possible design problem in the left rear bulkhead of the DC-10 engine mounting, which is one of the points where the engine attaches to the wing. A 10-inch crack that existed before the accident was found in this section in the engine that fell off the DC-10 in Chicago.

reaction to crisis

Motorists, (not here, thus far), queue up for hours to fill their fuel tanks. Tempers shorten, obscenities fill the air; in some cases, fists fly, rumors ripple through offices that the "shortages" exist no where else but in California. Governor Brown, celebrated as a premier gasbug himself, holds a press conference to advise that he is considering imposing a form of rationing.

The government blames the oil companies. The oil companies blames the government. Local gas dealers blame them both. Motorists blame all three. Editorialists - cum-philosophers, as easily as the Rolling Stones accepting guilt for the JFK assassination ("...after all, it was you and me"), wax oracular about collective guilt.

What gives? Some of the gas stations are closing early and it is sometimes an exasperating exercise to find enough fuel for daily driving. Out of the sense of emergency, people prevail on the politicians to do something. Mandate permanent rationing. Nationalize oil companies. Do something fast!

Nothing could give the politicians, who got us into this mess, more pleasure. They convet the power they perceive the oil companies having. Once they have it, rest assured, they would make a botch of it greater than the miserably regulated oil companies have ever accomplished. If you want permanent shortages, nationalize.

What makes it infuriating is precisely the past success of the capitalist system, of which the oil companies are a contemporary component, in keeping this country awash in oil.

When accumulated obstructions to the free market finally manfifest themselves at the gas pump, modern Americans - because they have become habituated to consumer confidence - give reign to their emotions. Irrationally, desperately, some of them call for the very control which will shove us back into the category of the inconvenienced nations.

What is all the more infuriating, especially to those who have learned to accept the beneficence of the capitalist system, is the accusation that enough fuel does exist, that it is being withheld by people more sinsister than they. We hear stories of 80-90 m.p.g. engines and wonder why Detroit has been so paralyzed about marketing them.

Our fuel tank "crisis" is nothing sinister. It is cause and effect. A tangle of political regulations has impeded domestic oil production and severely cramped and interfered with the oil companies' capital allocation. If the oil companies are deliberately withholding fuel and the local dealers are deliberately withholding fuel, both of which we doubt, it is because they have devised a desperate strategy of bluffing the government.

But, if true, it is surely desperate strategy. And it may not work: rather than rallying public opinion on their behalf it could just as easily prompt a public demand for more government action.

presidential preakness

Do you know how many candidates are officially announced and running for President?

You've heard "seven." There are 67!

Let's get acquainted with some of them.

When an unemployed governor--Jimmy Who?--became President of the United States, it rekindled the great American presumption that any boy can grow up to be President.

So now, out in Denver, Mr. K. Core Seaman says, "Why not me?"

Why not you?

All you have to do these days is fill out and submit two forms to the Federal Election Commission.

If you want to qualify for "government money" to help with your campaign, you first must raise $5,000 in each of 20 different states. The $5,000 must come in donations of $250 or less.

Or you can reject "government money" and run on your own. Lord Robert Benedict of Newark, N.J.--an announced candidate for President--has informed the FEC that he wants no "government money."

"To insure my name and to prevent any distortion of my honesty, integrity and loyalty to America, no contributions are acceptable, desired or required."

Those announced candidates with whom you are best acquainted would have to be considered the front-runners: Robert Dole, John Connally, George Bush, Phil Crane.

Harold Stassen is back in the race for the umpteenth time if only to defend his reputation as the runningest candidate in U.S. history.

Another unknown from Georgia is trying to make himself known--a Decatur, Ga., TV repairman named Carl Freeman whose campaign slogan is: "Put folks back on the farm."

A Denver osteopath named Ernest Carlson is promising, if elected, to abolish federal taxes.

There are candidates of the World Citizens Party and the God and Country Party.

There is a Fritz for President committee in Honolulu. "Fritz" is John Paul Fritz.

Rather than accept "government money," candidate John Kelso of Austin, collected $700 at two concerts in the local Soap Creek Saloon.

Dr. James Jeffers of St. James, Mo., collected $453.93 selling peaches and melons. But he dropped out of the race when his Pyramid Freedom Party dissolved.

Another candidate has a specific plan to do something about the high cost of food. Democrat James Andrew Johnson of Mount Vernon, Ill., favors "fasting."

The Wall Street Journal, scanning this growing field of presidential hopefuls, found some veterans.

Mrs. Nell Fiona of Burnsville, Tex., tried and failed in 1976 to take the nomination away from Gerry Ford, and now she is back for more.

If you did not hear John Gordon's announcement that he is a candidate for President it may be because he made the announcement as early as December of 1975 from a jail cell in New Hampshire.

Just how big is that bureaucracy in Washington, D.C.?

The current issue of U.S. News and World Report addresses itself to that question, and its facts and figures are startling.

In the 12 months ending last Sept. 30, the magazine reported, the General Services Administration, the Government Printing Office, and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing bought 330,752 tons of paper for use by federal agencies.

The 330,752 tons of paper, according to the magazine, translate in to 66 billion sheets of 8½-by-11-inch paper. That, in turn, would pave a strip 2,882 feet wide from New York City to Los Angeles; make 48 trips to the moon; circle the equator 461 times; or cover Washington, DC., with a blanket 25 sheets thick.

The first three sound a bit far-fetched to me. That last one, however, has its practical applications. If a person were to stack 25 sheets of paper on every square foot of ground in the capital city, then set fire to the whole mess, I think it would drive the bureaucrats out of every nook, cranny, and niche there is in Washington.

That, now, is an idea. People have been wondering for years how best to dismantle the bureaucracy. The best way I have been able to figure out is to let the people up there stew in their own juices.

Although not a member of the world-traveled jet set, I have been to Washington, D.C. All in all, I enjoyed my trip, but there was one thing that disillusioned me: I saw only one nut.

I toured the White House and the capitol, and saw only one person carrying a picket sign. That was at the Capitol. The man I saw was carrying a picket sign that read, in part, "Repent and Be Saved." His message was classic, I think.

Then one day, while off the beaten tourist paths, I saw perhaps six people in front of an office of the World Bank. They were protesting President Carter's aid to Somoza. But, like I pointed out, they were off the beaten path in Washington.

Around the White House-Capitol area, I found only one nut, and it wasn't Carter.

Baby's Finger Valued High

AUSTIN (AP) A state district court court has decided the left index finger of an infant is worth $94,110.

District Judge Harley Clark will say Thursday if he agrees with the jury.

The verdict was given two weeks ago after a two-day trial in which the legal guardians of Julie Castillo sued the city of Austin for the loss of the tiny finger.

If Clark signs the order Thursday, as is scheduled, Julie will receive the money in 1996, when she is 18.

Evidence at the trial, which was not contested by the city, showed a nurse in city-owned Brackenridge Hospital placed a gauze mitten over each of the little girl's hands in early May 1978 to keep her from pulling out the intraveneous tubes feeding the baby.

Instead of using tape to fasten the gloves, the nurse used rubber bands. Witnesses said the rubber band cut off circulation of blood to Julie's finger and gangrene developed. Two-thirds of the finger had to be amputated.

congressional comment

by charles stenholm, mc

WASHINGTON, D.C.— Every political movement since the beginning of time has had the seeds of its own destruction located within--often from the onset. During the sixties and early seventies we became acquainted with such movements as the New Frontier, Great Society, and the social-welfare state. In this period our Country seemed to have unlimited resources. We could conduct a war on poverty at home and a fighting war in Vietnam half way around the world. The government began a policy of intense regulation of the economy and spent billions trying to cure such problems as structural unemployment and poverty. The phenomenon of government expansion was world wide as we began to see the nationalization of many important industries in Western Europe and around the globe.

The idealism of the sixties finally collapsed when it was discovered that government programs did not cure poverty or promote efficiency in the marketplace. Massive amounts of foreign aid did very little to enhance the world prosperity and military intervention overseas often did not stabilize pro-Western regimes or make friends for the United States.

Now we are in the process of examining our past errors. The issues people seem most concerned about are too much government spending and regulation, inflation, and our eroding national defense. These concerns are not confined to America but are worldwide. A Conservative government recently won in Great Britain with a pledge to reduce inflation and government spending but at the same time to maintain a strong national defense. A similar situation happened in Canada with the election of the Progressive-Conservative party. The Prime Minister-elect, Joe Clark, ran on a platform of reducing inflation from 9.8 percent to 5 percent, using incentives to increase the economic growth rate, and to use financial incentives, not government regulations, to encourage production and conservation of energy. Certainly these are policies I support in this Country. In 1976 a Socialist government was defeated in Sweden after 44 years in power. Even in communist Yugoslavia they are experimenting with a decentralized economy based upon competition between separate business entities. A common denominator around the globe appears to be the desire for internal and international stability and an end to much of the social experimentation undertaken during the 1960's.

Certainly I am pleased that the world is beginning to move ever so slowly toward a more laissez-faire economic system based upon limited government intervention. There are many problems that the government cannot solve and must be lived with. Hopefully we are finally entering a time of reevaluating our own limitations and a realization that most problems are the responsibility of each individual to solve and not for a paternalistic bureaucracy located in a national capital.

WASHINGTON (NEA) Republicans seeking Jimmy Carter's job, while normally quick to second-guess his every move, are remaining remarkably quiet about the president's efforts to deal with the current energy crisis.

Not a single GOP presidential candidate has stepped forward to attack Carter's energy program or to offer his own proposals for coping with the soaring prices and shrinking supplies of everything from crude oil to gasoline.

George Bush and Robert Dole have suggested that Carter convene some type of national energy council or conference to serve as an authoritative source of information about the causes and scope of the country's energy problem.

John Connally, a vehement defender of the oil industry, has abruptly muted his praise in the face of public fury at Big Oil, and is scrambling to come up with a new and more saleable position.

Ronald Reagan plans to address the energy issue only after he becomes an official candidate--which is to say, not before fall.

And Howard Baker, GOP leader of the Senate, will go along with any proposals drawn up by his colleagues there but isn't drafting his own as of now.

There are several reasons for the unusual reticence of the GOP presidential contenders, not the least of which is the fact that all of them have previously advocated precisely the move undertaken by Carter--decontrol of oil prices to stimulate production and curb consumption.

Yet now that prices are soaring and consumers are screaming, decontrol has lost its political appeal. So the Republicans, grateful that the onus is on Carter, are hunkering down and hoping that nobody asks what they would do if they were in the president's shoes right now.

As "draft Kennedy" movements continue to spring up around the countryside, White House political operatives are working hard to nail down support for Carter among key Democratic constituencies--including, most notably, organized labor.

Although AFL-CIO President George Meany has frequently excoriated Carter's economic policies, the White House remains confident that most unions will recognize and reward administration efforts on behalf of programs dear to the hearts of labor.

While Congress has rejected many of his initiatives, the president has fought for a long series of legislative proposals cherished by the unions--minimum-wage boosts, common site picketing, cargo preference, labor law reform--and has promised to veto others, such as modifications of the Davis-Bacon law, which are anathema to labor.

Vice-President Mondale and White House aide Landon Butler recently met with key leaders from the building trades unions to remind them of past administration help and to seek their loyalty in return. Heads of other major unions are being systematically wooed as well.

So far, only the chiefs of the Machinists Union and the Retail Clerks have openly jumped to Kennedy. The big question mark remains the intentions of Doug Fraser head of the huge United Auto Workers and a longtime Kennedy ally on national health insurance whose defection from the Carter ranks could be devastating. So far, Fraser has remained mum and is likely to stay that way until he finishes the big auto industry contract negotiations this fall.

In confident bursts of letters said quickly or in desperate, dragged-out guesses, they spelled them right.

But "freshet," "chicanery," "commissure," "soporific" and "masochist" were troublesome. They knocked contestants out of the running.

By the time Wednesday's spelling ended, the 109 original competitors - 63 girls and 46 boys from 39 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, had been whittled down to 32 - 18 girls and 14 boys to compete today until a champion emerges, winning the $1,000 prize.

While the children, age 10 to 14, spelled before two microphones, parents tiptoed to the front of the hotel ballroom to photograph their offspring in the act of high concentration.

The judges sat before the spellers, a fat dictionary at their side, ready to ring a bell for every misspelling.

Bridge teacher Sumner Cotzin of Worcester, Mass., has a monthly publication called "Communication." Each month's issue includes a problem.

Here is one of his problems that is well worth studying.

West opens the five of clubs. East takes his ace and shifts to the jack of spades.

West overtakes, with the queen after you (South) duck. West continues with the ace and a third spade which you ruff with dummy's queen.

Sumner asks how you should proceed.

You start some detective work by cashing dummy's queen of diamonds. Then you come to your hand with the queen of clubs. You aren't worried about a ruff. If West's club lead had been a singleton, he would have let East hold the first spade trick.

Now you lead out your two high diamonds. You aren't worried about West ruffing because dummy can overruff and you know that East won't be able to ruff. West follows to all three diamonds and you know he started with 7-1-2-3 distribution. Now you have solved all heart-suit problems.

You lead to dummy's ace and finesse against West's jack on the way back.

One final point. You must not chuck your queen of clubs on the first club lead.

Big Increase In Syphilis Cases Noted

ATLANTA (AP)-The number of reported cases of syphilis rose 19.2 percent in the first quarter of 1979, and officials of the national Center for Disease Control say the increase may reflect emphasis on the prevention of gonorrhea at the expense of efforts to stop syphilis.

Dr. Peter Perine of the CDC said Saturday that there has been a realization "that the consequences of gonorrhea, particularly in women, are more serious than the consequences of infectious syphilis for the vast majority of people." In its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, the CDC said there were 5,952 reported cases of syphilis from January to March in 1979, compared with 4,995 in the same period last year.

What's in a BUN test?

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My father has been treated for a kidney disorder. He was given a BUN test. After these tests were taken he was placed on a low-protein diet. Could you give me any information on kidney troubles and also on a low-protein diet? Some of the symptoms I know of were that he was bleeding from his kidneys and had a tired feeling and he had some hurting in his back and legs. He is 68.

DEAR READER — BUN stands for blood urea nitrogen. It's a test to determine how much urea is in the blood. Proteins are composed of amino acids. The protein is broken down into amino acids in the intestine. The amino acids enter the bloodstream.

Since many people eat a lot more protein than their body needs, these amino acids are chemically broken down. The part of the amino acid that contains nitrogen is stripped off. Two of these units are joined together to form urea. This excess nitrogen in the form of urea is then eliminated through the kidneys. That's why you can measure the urea eliminated in the urine and have a good idea about how much excess protein a person is consuming.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 12-12, Your Kidneys And How They Work, to give you some basic information about how the kidney filters the blood and eliminates such substances as excess urea as well as excess water, excess glucose and retains substances that you need. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

When a person's kidneys are not functioning adequately, they can't filter out the "excess" urea left over from excess ingestion of protein. The BUN level builds up. If this situation, it's common to limit the amount of protein in the diet.

DEAR DR. LAMB — About 15 years ago a urologist diagnosed a growth on one of my testicles as a spermatocele and said not to worry about it unless it became much larger. Several years later, after it had enlarged, I consulted another doctor who aspirated fluid from it and said it was non-cancerous but advised surgery if it continued to grow.

Recently I developed a small growth on another testicle and a third urologist advised it might never get any larger because of my age. I'm 58. He said it was immaterial if I had surgery.

I'd like to know whether or not I am risking my health by not having elective surgery. What causes such a growth like this anyway?

DEAR READER — Having the unanimous agreement of three urology specialists about your condition ought to be very comforting. In medicine we don't always get such a unanimity of opinion. Often there is some difficulty in deciding what something is that you can't look at under a microscope.

I'm certain that with the agreement of all three specialists that the diagnosis is correct. These are really little cysts that develop in the tubes that carry the sperm cells away from the testicles. These little cysts are not really important as long as they're not large enough to create mechanical difficulties. They do not become cancer.

Sappy Drama Mars 'Last Giraffe'

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Last Giraffe," tonight on CBS, sounds like it can't miss—two young people fall in love, get married and save some endangered giraffes. I mean, how can you mess up a story like that.

Tune in, and see.

The story itself is fine—dramatic and touching, in the general style of "Born Free." But the production is so superficial and the acting so inane you get the feeling you're watching "Love Boat Sails to Africa."

Susan Anspach plays Betty Bruce, a divorcee who gets a camera and goes to Kenya "to work." She keeps saying this, that she's there "to work," but you never quite know what she's supposed to be doing. Just taking pictures of all the pretty animals, I guess.

She goes on a tour of a game reserve, where she witnesses the killing of a giraffe by a poacher. She is outraged, and takes a special interest in the endangered Rothschild giraffe species.

Fortunately, she snapped a picture of the poacher in the act of the killing, making possible a prosecution. Unfortunately, she was duped into handing her film over to the poacher's boss, villainous Ian Fielding.

Miss Anspach isn't given the brightest lines ever written, but she might have helped by not bringing her Susanne Sommers imitation to Africa. It's impossible to take her character seriously when every line is delivered in a sing-song, little girlsy-wirlsy manner.

Anyway, she meets local tour guide Jock Leslie Melville Wimon Ward, and they fall in love. This gives her the opportunity to remind us "I'm too happy. . . I didn't come to Africa to have fun, I came here to work."

After a day in the jungle, he proposes marriage. Finally she tells us "I came here to do photos, do a book, do something important with my life."

In the meantime, though, she'll accept his proposal.

Here's where the movie gets good, because here's where the giraffes get the screen. Betty talks Jock into letting her care for the young offspring of the giraffe she saw killed. He agrees, and the newly-weds take the lovely creature home with them.

Giraffes aren't cute and cuddly like Benji the dog, but they are elegant creatures, a wonder to look at. And there's plenty of opportunity to do so as the Leslie-Melvilles have fun with Daisy, nursing her, petting her and such.

The giraffes and the countryside are great, but the drama is sappy.

If you don't mind the humans, you might enjoy this. Or, you could go to the zoo.

Four Mishaps Reported Here

Four minor traffic accidents were reported to city police officers Wednesday.

The first occurred shortly before 9 a.m. in the 1300 block of College Ave. A 1979 Pontiac driven by Jerry King and a 1975 Ford driven by Lisa Harper collided.

The next accident was in the 3000 block of College Ave. at 12:40 p.m. There, a 1970 Ford owned by Rosa Villa was in collision with a parked 1976 Pontiac owned by Mary Blackman. Reports indicate one vehicle slipped into gear and struck the other.

The third collision was recorded in the 3100 block of Ave. I and involved a 1963 International truck driven by C.C. Vicars and a parked 1968 Pontiac owned by Annie Chaney. That wreck was reported at 1:20 p.m.

The final mishap Wednesday was reported at 5:45 p.m. in the 1700 block of College Ave. Involved in it were a 1978 Dodge driven by John Sanchez Velasquez and a parked 1977 Chevrolet owned by Quientien Chambers of Longview.

The greatest population growth in the United States came between 1880 and 1920. More than 21 million Europeans entered the country during that time.

Federal Authorities Report...

Airman Who Vanished in 1977 Emerges In Southeast Texas

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP)-Air Force Staff Sgt. Wilmer W. Higgs Jr. mysteriously disappeared New Year's Eve 1977 from the all-night gas station where he moonlighted. About $120 was missing from the cash register; blood stains were on the floor.

They found his car a few days later, partially submerged in the San Antonio River south of downtown. The keys were in the ignition and police said it appeared to have been driven or pushed into the water. There were signs of a struggle.

It looked for all the world like a robbery-homicide. A statewide search was mounted, dozens of Higgs' fellow servicemen searched for his body in the brush near the river and Exxon offered a $1,000 reward.

No trace was ever found. The Air Force declared the Lackland Air Force Base marksmanship instructor "officially deceased" Jan. 20, 1978. A memorial service was held for him four months later in Vidor. Air Force death benefits and insurance money were paid.

That is not, however, the end of the story.

Local and federal authorities said Wednesday they have located the 33-year old Higgs living in the Galveston area. The FBI says Higgs has lived and worked in Southeast Texas for the past 18 months, posing in at least two jobs as "Johnny Newman."

If the Air Force sergeant is indeed alive, he faces possible theft charges in the station robbery and will be classified as a deserter, San Antonio police and Lackland officials said Wednesday.

Military authorities must also determine if fraud was involved in connection with the undetermined amount of death benefits and insurance money his wife, Carolyn, later received.

"There is no question at all in my mind, from what we have determined, that Higgs is alive. I'm convinced of it," said the FBI agent who began the investigation in Southeast Texas about two months ago. The agent asked to remain anonymous.

"Since his disappearance, both the robbery and homicide divisions have been investigating what the hell happened to him," said Police Lt. Virgil Roberson, who believes Higgs orchestrated his own disappearance.

"I have information that he is alive. The next step is to file theft charges against him for the money missing from the gas station," said Roberson. The station owner must decide, Roberson said, whether to press those charges.

The agent said the U.S. Attorney's office in San Antonio initially ruled that there was no federal violation falling under its jurisdiction and turned the case over to the Department of Defense and the San Antonio police. Roberson said local police know the man is near Galveston, where he is reportedly working as a carpenter, and plan to apprehend him if charges are filed.

Military authorities are also looking into the case and will apprehend him if he is declared a deserter.

"If he's found alive, he would be classified as a deserter," said Lackland spokesman Joe McAnally.

Higgs' wife and the couple's two daughters lived in the Vidor-Beaumont area during the time the FBI report said Higgs was working in the vicinity, apartment managers said. Higgs' father, W.W. Higgs Sr., who also lives in Vidor, confirmed that.

Mrs. Higgs, who an apartment manager said moved to Hawaii last Aug. 31, said Wednesday when contacted by phone about the reports, "I found out this morning, but I am just too upset right now to talk about it. I have no comment to make."

She refused further comment to other questions and then hung up.

In Vidor, Higgs' father, W.W. Higgs Sr., said, "I'm extremely happy. Frankly, I never felt he was dead. I never had given up on him. If the law has found him, I would certainly like to know where he is."

Higgs was asked three times if he had seen his son since the disappearance. He answered each time, "No sir." He was asked if his daughter-in-law had any contact with his son during that time and replied, "If she has, I'm not aware of it."

He said his daughter-in-law received death benefits and insurance from the Air Force, but did not know how much. Higgs, who had been in the Air Force since 1965, made about $750 per month, officials estimated.

Air Force officials said the benefits, which usually are about $3,000, were paid, but added that they were unable immediately to determine the total.

Vidor police records show that a man named Wilmer W. Higgs Jr., matching the description of the missing sergeant "right down the line," was issued a traffic ticket there June 4, 1978, said Vidor Police Lt. Sam Kittrell. The FBI contacted Vidor police three weeks ago about the ticket, said Kittrell.

Roberson said FBI reports showed Higgs worked for Brown & Root Construction Co. at the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City for several months after his disappearance, apparently using the alias "Johnny Newman." Brown & Root confirmed that a man by that name worked for them there until last Aug. 11.

Roberson, quoting an FBI report, said Higgs left that job and worked at another Exxon station before moving to the Galveston area. Jack Greer, owner of the station, said a "Johnny Newman" matching Higgs description - except for a beard - worked for him as a mechanic until about five weeks ago. "He was a very mysterious person," said Greer.

Paralegal Certificate Is Awarded

SAN MARCOS – Cecil Gutierrez of Snyder is one of 23 students who received certificates during graduation ceremonies of Southwest Texas State University's Paralegal Program.

The paralegal program, founded in the spring of 1976, is designed to train paralegal assistants to handle responsibilities as an integral member of a staff working under a lawyer.

By handling time consuming administrative duties and freeing the lawyer to devote his attention to legal work, the paralegal helps save time for the lawyer and at the same time helps keep costs down for clients. The graduate level program includes an intensive semester of academic work as well as internships to provide practical training.

MUSEUM EXHIBIT--Paula Lunsford and Sherry Smith are shown with four of the quilts included in the second annual quilt show at the Scurry County Museum. The show is to open on Sunday and will remain in place through July 29.

Quilt Exhibit Set At Scurry Museum

More than 50 quilts will be featured in the Scurry County Museum's second annual quilt show scheduled to open on Sunday afternoon.

A reception marking the opening of the exhibit is planned from 1-5 p.m., and the public is invited to attend. The show will remain in the museum through July 29.

Mrs. Janelda Davis, Mrs. Leona Benitez and Mrs. Frances Daniel are chairmen of this year's show, titled "Warm Memories." They have expressed their appreciation for the cooperation given them in preparing the exhibit.

A number of quilt patterns will be available in the museum for persons who would like to be able to make their own quilts, and several of the patterns have been used to make sample blocks which can be studied to see how the patterns are put together.

Some of the quilts in the museum exhibit are collector's items, while others are the product of new sewing techniques. Quilting originated in Egypt more than 5,000 years ago, and became a distinctive folk art in this country in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Patchwork quilting began to taper off in the late eighteen hundreds with the advent of the sewing machine, but it did not become a lost art because of the number of women who made quilts as a hobby and considered them necessities in homemaking.

All Swiss men must serve in the military service. When they complete their training they keep their guns and equipment at home, ready for immediate call to duty. Switzerland can mobilize an army of 600,000 within 48 hours.

Wilson College: School That Would Not Go Away

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (AP)-"Silver and blue, we love you," Josephine Benincaso sang after a judge reversed a trustees' decision to close Wilson College, a 110-year-old liberal arts school for women.

And two days later the 22-year-old woman accepted her diploma without tears, happy her class wouldn't be Wilson's last after all.

"Women's colleges right now are on the upswing," said the Italian-born New Yorker who will return to Italy for medical school. "We survived when others failed, and we aren't going to fail now."

It is a hope shared by Dr. Donald Bletz, a part-time political science professor who became Wilson's acting president after Franklin County Judge John W. Keller ordered Wilson to stay open last month.

"Our goal is to rebuild," Bletz said, in the office vacated by Dr. Margaret Waggoner, the president for four years who quit after the court's ruling. "The college has been around 110 years and there's no reason we can't be around for another 110 years. We don't think the situation is hopeless."

Bletz said the faculty - those who didn't get new jobs after Wilson announced in February that it would close - is supportive, reorganizing, and considering curriculum changes.

"We are a liberal arts college, but we find little incompatibility with a certain amount of career orientation," Bletz said. "We do not intend to become a trade school, or a vocational school. We are planning to remain a women's college."

The unexpected decisions to shutter Wilson and turn its assets into a scholarship foundation for college-bound women was fought by alumnae, students, and faculty who sought an injunction to block the closing.

"They didn't believe anyone would protest," said Gretchen Van Ness, a 20-year-old Rochester, N.Y., woman who is president of the student government association. "I think they were shocked that students and alumnae fought so hard to keep it open."

Dr. Harry Buck, professor of religion studies since 1959, blamed the move to close on an administration that forgot it was the 1970s and ran the school like it was still the 1950s. The school had been criticized earlier for not offering career-oriented courses.

And said Dr. R.G. Townsend, an economics professor: "We could have adjusted to the times ... but we didn't."

Dr. Waggoner, silent now, told a reporter a day before the court ruling "the college was in very serious trouble when I came here, and most people thought it was an impossible job."

Asked what would happen if Wilson was ordered to stay open, she said: "I don't know where they are going to get students or money. I think it is unrealistic in the face of the facts. Closing a school is very emotional. I wanted to save it. I tried to save it."

Joan Edwards, an alumna and a leader of the Save Wilson Committee which already has more than $1.5 million in cash and pledges, blamed poor management by Dr. Waggoner and the 25-member board of trustees, headed by attorney Martha Walker until she also quit after the judge granted the injunction halting the planned closure.

DC-10 Groundings...

Airlines Losing Millions, Customers Patience

By DON HARRISON
Associated Press Writer

Travelers — about 65,000 a day — are losing time and patience, and airlines are losing money — millions a day — with the grounding of the nation's DC-10 fleet.

Tempers have flared as airline clerks stew over alternate flights for the nation's DC-10 passengers, but on the whole people seem resigned to the order to park the controversial jets.

More than 80 flights were canceled Wednesday in Chicago alone. Jack Hanley, of Drexel Hill, Pa., was among those affected at O'Hare International Airport.

"I'm glad that they're grounding the DC-10s and that there is someone concerned about the problem," he said. "I don't feel my inconvenience is as important as making sure those planes are safe."

The domestic DC-10 fleet, built by McDonnell Douglas Corp., was grounded early Wednesday by the Federal Aviation Administration, pending inspection of engine-wing assemblies.

Foreign air carriers were not legally bound by the order, but were later told they could not carry passengers or cargo in U.S. air space. Many, including Britain's Laker Airlines, parked their planes.

Sir Freddie Laker, who had rolled up his sleeves to help mechanics conduct earlier inspections, grumped that the FAA had gone too far.

"I believe that this grounding is totally unnecessary," he said in London.

Laker's budget Skytrain of six DC-10s was shutdown, stranding many trans-Atlantic travelers, and Sir Freddie complained that the grounding was costing him $728,000 daily.

Two hundred Laker passengers camped outside Gatwick Airport near London Wednesday night, hoping for seats on alternate flights. Hundreds of others were booked into hotels or returned home.

Securities analyst Michael Derchin, vice president of Oppenheimer & Co. of New York, estimated the daily costs to U.S. carriers with DC-10s would range from $390,000 for Western Airlines to $1.4 million for American. He estimated the daily loss overall in the United States would be $5.3 million.

Among the domestic airlines with DC-10s:

—United Airlines, with 30 DC-10s in its fleet. It was able to replace only 13 of the 125 flights affected Wednesday.

—Western Airlines, with one of the jets. Clerks were warning persons holding reservations for today that they might not be accomodated. In Los Angeles, spokesman Dave Jimenez warned today "will roughly be a carbon copy" of Wednesday.

China Doing Good Job In Feeding Itself

WASHINGTON (AP)- China is doing an excellent job of feeding its one billion citizens, according to an Agriculture Department official.

"By U.S. standards, Chinese agriculture is inefficient. Perhaps more than three-fourths of all Chinese are involved in agriculture, compared with 4 percent of all Americans," James C. Webster, head of the department's office of governmental and public affairs, said Wednesday.

"But measured on standards of energy efficiency or productivity per unit of land, China probably leads the world," Webster wrote in the June issue of the department's publication, "Foreign Agriculture."

"The notion that China is backward, especially in agriculture, vanishes before the realization that it provides a decent diet for most of its billion people on around half the arable land area the United States has," he said.

Texas To Keep Natural Gas, Says Poerner

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP)- Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Joe Poerner says Texas intends to keep its natural gas and not have it siphoned by other states, particularly California.

"As Texans, it's ours. We paid to develop it," Poerner told the Texas Gas Association. "Our needs come before those of other states, particularly California, a state that has repeatedly thwarted the efforts of industry to link our resources from coast to coast.

"As far as I'm concerned, Californians may breathe the pollution of their own political bad judgment," the chairman of Texas oil and gas regulatory agency said.

He said he believed California's own stringent clean air standards "appeared to be the major causes of their desire to switch from other fuel sources to our gas."

Poerner said there should be optimism "rather than rampant cynicism sweeping our nation" about the natural gas industry.

"Despite obstacles which were encountered early in the 1970s, in the form of frequent gas shortages, now the industry is in a good position to improve the quality of service to the consumer."

Ami's Troops Emptied Preserve Of Wildlife

PAKUBA, Uganda (AP)- Once one of Africa's great wild-life preserves, Kabalega Falls National Park in northwest Uganda, seems virtually empty of animals, its herds of elephants, buffalo and hippopotamus destroyed by Idi Amin's troops.

In a three-day trek across the rolling plains of the former Murchison Falls National Park, a reporter saw one giraffe, one buffalo and several clusters of gazelles.

Less than a decade ago, zoologists estimated that the 1,500-square-mile park contained 30,000 buffalo, 14,000 elephants, 13,000 hippopotamuses, 600 crocodiles and at least a dozen rare white rhinoceroses transported into the area to save them from poachers.

The park includes a spectacular waterfall where the Victoria Nile thunders through a rocky gap 20 feet wide and plunges 127 feet into a pool. Both the falls and the park were named after Sir Roderick Murchison, president of Britain's Royal Geographic Society in 1864 when a European explorer discovered the falls.

Amin changed the names after his coup in 1971. As his turbulent, murderous rule unfolded, the number of foreign visitors to Uganda dropped from 80,000 a year to nearly none and the $17.5-million-a-year tourist industry collapsed.

Villagers living in the park said Amin's soldiers began invading Kabalega, the country's best wildlife preserve, to kill elephants and sell the ivory tucks across the border in Zaire.

After Amin lost Kampala, the capital, to an invasion force of Tanzanians and Ugandan exiles on April 11, thousands of his troops fled through the park.

"They came in convoys of big trucks," said Pastor Lolili, a 25-year-old school teacher.

"They shot the animals with machine guns, loaded the trucks with the carcasses and drove to the West Nile."

Lolili and other villagers said the soldiers wanted the meat to feed themselves and their families in West Nile, where food is chronically scarce.

The troops also sacked the two tourist lodges in the park, at Pakuba and Paraa. An official in the nearby town of Pakwach said a convoy of 20 trucks went to the lodges at the end of April and took away every movable item of value.

The furniture is gone. Floors are covered with broken glass. Doors have been splintered and the electrical wiring ripped from walls.

The shooting could have driven some of the animals into hiding, and they should emerge later. But it will probably be many years before the park is again a place where visitors can observe African wildlife at close quarters.

One resident commented:

"The lodges can be fixed up in a matter of weeks, and it will take a few years to restore the economy of Uganda. But it will be decades before the animals are back as they once were.

"This empty park may prove to be among the longest lasting legacies of Idi Amin."

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Sharp words will result today with someone you know socially, unless you're able to ignore this person's rude behavior. Keep your cool.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Bullying tactics are used only by those who can't control themselves and so try to control others. Don't stoop to this method should opposition arise.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) What you say today will make a stronger impression than you may intend. Weigh your words carefully before sounding off.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Foolishness could cause you to jump into something way over your head financially. Beware of anyone dangling carrots in front of your nose.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't pull the rug out from under someone you are closely associated with today without first thinking about the consequences. Chances are, later you'll wish you hadn't.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Erratic behavior on your part will call attention to you for sure, and it won't be the good kind. Protect your image and reputation.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Upon occasion you have a tendency to overact to something someone has said. Be smart. If this happens today, conceal your irritation.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're much too reckless moneywise today and could make a costly mistake. Take time to study financial projects carefully.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's not your nature to try to outmanuever a competitor. Give him enough rope and he'll hang himself.

Can't Fault Him In Fault-Finding

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I've stolen all my life. I started taking small things from my friends. I've stolen money from my mother's purse and also my father's pocket. I've even shoplifted just to get away with something. I've never been caught. I guess I've been lucky, or maybe I'm just good at it.

I'm also a terrible liar. I make up things just to get people to listen to me. I don't have any friends, and I'd like at least one. I work hard to impress people but always end up making a fool of myself.

I'd like to be a good person but I don't have the will power to do what's right. Dishonesty seems to come more natural to me. I need help before I end up in jail. So, Dear Abby, what can you do for a 15 year old failure? I can't talk to my parents.

A NO GOOD GUY

DEAR GUY: A guy who knows his faults as well as you know yours is no "failure" in my book.

You are fair enough to blame only yourself for your weakness, smart enough to know that you lie to attract attention, and sufficiently honest to admit you want friends and a clear conscience.

If you have a school counselor, make tracks for that office. If not, tell your parents you have some personal problems you would like to talk over with someone at the mental health clinic. Once you get the help you need, I'll bet on you.

DEAR ABBY: You wrote, "Under certain circumstances, a child CAN be darker than its darkest parent."

Abby, since there are only two parents involved, you should have used "darker" instead of "darkest." Just thought you should know.

ENGLISH BUFF

DEAR BUFF: I knew. But "darkest" somehow sounds better to my ear. Just as "put your best foot forward" should be "put your better foot forward" if one wants to be absolutely correct. However, I'll opt for putting one's best foot forward — whether I'm referring to a person or a centipede.

DEAR ABBY: I called a young lady I know and invited her to attend a sailing regatta with me on the 4th of July. It's one of the nicest affairs of the season and entails the races in the afternoon, followed by dinner and dancing at the yacht club.

Instead of saying yes or no, she asked me to call her around the 25th of June and she'd tell me then.

Abby, if she turns me down, I'll have to ask somebody else, and by then all the best girls will have been asked. Why do you think she's waiting, and what should I do?

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: She could be waiting to see if she gets a better offer. Call her and tell her if she can't give you a definite "yes" now, you'd like to call somebody else. (That should take the wind out of her sails.)

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular, You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Milwaukee Outlasts Ranger Rally

MILWAUKEE (AP)-With Milwaukee Brewer pitcher Lary Sorensen generously supplying the Texas Rangers with long drives, it was fortunate for him that outfielder Jim Wohlford has a long reach.

Pat Putnam, already responsible for one of the two home runs which Texas had hit at Sorensen's expense Wednesday, whacked another long drive to center field with a runner on base in the ninth inning, threatening to drive in a score-tying run.

But Wohlford made a running, over-the-shoulder, one-handed catch to end the game with the Brewers in front 4-3.

"Jimmy made a sensational catch," manager George Bamberger said, weighing the close shave. "If that ball gets by, the game is tied and there is a runner on second or third."

Gorman Thomas hit his 13th homer of the season in the second inning, scoring two runs that allowed Milwaukee to tie the game after John Grubb, following Bump Wills' single, slammed a two-run homer in the Texas first.

Putnam's fifth-inning homer made it 3-2. Then Sorensen (8-5) settled down while the Brewers went ahead for keeps in the fifth on Paul Molitor's walk off Ranger starter Steve Comer (5-5), Cecil Cooper's RBI double and Sixto Lezcano's RBI single.

Bamberger insisted he wasn't troubled by the home runs yielded by Sorensen.

"Homers don't bother me one bit," the former Baltimore pitching coach said. "Any time you're throwing the ball over the plate, you are going to get home runs."

"Bases on balls - they lead to more runs than anything else," he continued. "As long as the guy throws the ball over the plate, he is doing all right."

Grubb, having now hit safely in 19 consecutive games, credited Sorensen with a 'good lively arm," saying he connected on his ninth home run of the season when Sorensen apparently "got it farther in than he wanted."

Sorensen said his home run pitch to Putnam was "up a little higher than I wanted it to be."

After that, he said, "I just maybe bore down a little more and put the ball in better spots. They are a good ball club. It feels good to beat them."

Grubb singled in the sixth to no avail, Texas tried to tie it in the eighth with pinch hitter John Ellis' lead-off single and a sacrifice bunt that moved pinch runner Larvell Blanks to second.

But Grubb flied to center and Al Oliver grounded to second.

Astros Zip Past Phillies In Seventh

HOUSTON AP—Philadelphia catcher Bob Boone, who hit a homerun that gave the Phillies a two-run edge over Houston, blames himself for the hit that spelled another defeat for his slumping team.

Boone said he asked reliever Ron Reed for an inside slider to pinch-hitter Denny Walling in the seventh inning, and that's exactly what he got.

But Walling lifted it over the rightfield fence for a three-run homer; his first of the season. Houston scored one more time in the eighth to beat Philadelphia 4-3 Wednesday night.

"I wish I could take the pitch over," Boone said with a chagrined shrug. "I should have gone with Ron's number one pitch, the fastball.

"It just wasn't a very good call on my part," he continued. "I was trying to outguess the batter, and I guess I tried to figure too much."

Walling said he was playing the same guessing game, and he figured on a fastball.

"I try to gear myself to the fastball because that's probably the pitch I'll have to hit," he said. "They know I've been on the bench seven or eight innings and probably won't be very loose."

Although both sides lost the guessing game, Walling delivered the home run, scoring Jose Cruz and Art Howe who led off the inning with back-to-back singles.

In the eighth, the Astros continued where they had left off. Cesar Cedeno singled, stole second and went to third on a single by Enos Cabell.

Garry Humpston stroked a two-run, tie-breaking double down the left field line in the eighth inning to lift Pepperdine past Texas. Humpston, who was 1-for-9 in the series when he stepped to the plate, connnected off reliever Keith Walker and made a loser of Texas ace Jerry Don Gleaton, who suffered his first setback in 14 decisions.

Arkansas Stumbles; Texas Knocked Out

OMAHA, Neb. AP—Is a free-swinging slugfest tough on a baseball coach?

"That was a 12 Rolaid game," Garrido said after his team outlasted Arkansas 13-10 Wednesday night in the College World Series.

The 27 hit game, highlighted by five home runs, was a pitchers' nightmare. Arkansas took a 2-0 lead. Fullerton went on top 8-2. Arkansas made it 8-6. Fullerton pulled out to an 11-6 advantage and the Razorbacks cut to 11-10 before the Titans finally put it away.

The offensive fireworks followed a well played game in which Pepperdine eliminated top-rated Texas 6-4. That set up a showdown tonight between conference rivals Fullerton (58-14) and Pepperdine (53-17), with the winner to meet Arkansas (48-14) for the national title Friday night.

Texas, a 9-4 loser to Arkansas Tuesday night, finishes the year 55-8.

Dan Hanggie and Mike Garcia swung the big bats for Fullerton. Hanggie belted a grand slam in the Titans' seven-run second inning and Garcia tagged a three-run shot in the seventh.

Hanggie, who is Fullerton's No. 2 RBI man on the year with 67, has been a key player in the series because the Titan's top slugger, Tim Wallach, is batting only .235. Hanggie is hitting .375 and has driven in six runs.

Arkansas, which tied a series record by hitting three home runs, was hurt by two plays on the basepaths. Kevin McReynolds was thrown out at home in the fourth inning when he tried to score from first on Mike Martin's double and Jeff Ash was nailed in the sixth when he tried to go from first to third on a single to left.

"We were hoping to stay close and do some things in the late innings," Arkansas Coach Norm DeBriyn said. "I thought the key to the game was Ash being thrown out at third when we were behind only 8-6.

"I'll take the blame for that. I thought he could make it."

McReynolds, Johnny Ray and John Hennell homered for Arkansas. McReynolds, a freshman, also slapped two singles, raising his series average to .714.

Malone Leads NBA All League Stars

NEW YORK (AP)-No members of the NBA champion Seattle SuperSonics made the league's 1978-79 all-league teams, and some familiar names like Julius Erving and David Thompson also were missing. But the 10 players named as all-stars Wednesday aren't a bad lot to have on your side.

The first team is paced by National Basketball Association Most Valuable Player Moses Malone of the Houston Rockets. Joining Malone on the squad are guard George Gervin, San Antonio's point machine; guard Paul Westphal of Phoenix, and forwards Marques Johnson of Milwaukee and Elvin Hayes of Washington.

The 6-foot-11 Malone, basketball's best rebounder at 17.6 per game and the No. 5 scorer in the league with 24.8 points a game, collected the most points in the voting of 66 media members from the 22 NBA cities. Malone had 120 points, followed by Gervin with 114, Johnson with 99, Hayes with 98 and Westphal with 90.

Gervin poured in 29.8 points a contest to lead the NBA in scoring for the second consecutive year. He combines with Westphal, a 24 point per game scorer, to form the all-league backcourt for the second straight season.

Johnson was third in league scoring with a 25.6 average while Hayes averaged 21.8 points and was sixth in the league in rebounding and blocked shots.

Named to the second team were forwards Bobby Dandridge of Washington and Walter Davis of Phoenix, center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles and guards Lloyd Free of San Diego and Phil Ford of Kansas City.

Grimsley's Sports

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

If you're a betting man and have any of those little green George Washington portraits left after the Belmont Stakes Saturday, here's a tip offered free and without obligation:

Billy Martin not only will be back as manager of the New York Yankees, he could be calling the shots by the July All-Star break or shortly afterward.

Who says so?

Not Owner George Steinbrenner. "We are continuing our talks - nothing definite yet," the big boss says.

Not Billy, who still insists, "I'll be back in 1980 with a two year contract."

How come a change in mid-season? Easy. Steinbrenner watchers know he is a man who lives by his instincts. He dislikes drift. He demands movement. It's a throwback to his days as a college coach and assistant athletic director. Never lose the old college try.

So far his instincts have been generally good. He hired the controversial, thrice-fired Martin originally because the team needed an injection of Martin's kind of fireworks. Billy can sting tender nerves but he can also manage a ball club and ignite emotions.

George took the rubber bands off the free agent market by signing Catfish Hunter for $3.5 million and then courting Reggie Jackson to change residences for $2.9 million. From then on, as the Yankees moved to three league championships and two World Series titles, George played his big chess game with million dollar chips, filling holes with super stars as the situation dictated.

When Yankee squabbling dropped the champions 14½ games out of the lead last July, Steinbrenner began getting impatient. The team was loaded with stars. The least thing it needed was conflict. Exit: the feisty, volatile Martin. Enter: Placid, low-key Bob Lemon. It worked like a charm.

Through no fault of Lemon's but largely because of injuries, the Yankees so far this year have shown little get-up-and-go. There are signs of complacency and over-confidence. The champs look as if they could use a swift kick in the pants. That's Martin's forte.

Steinbrenner is not the kind of man to let a dormant situation exist for long. He is too much a perfectionist, too proud, too impatient and too impetuous.

The bottom line is this: Good ol' Bob Lemon can't wait to shuck his uniform and trade it for mufti. Scrappy. Bill Martin can't wait to get back in the trenches. If it means juicing up the Yankees, Steinbrenner would quick to oblige.

Synthetic Fuel Prospects Bright, Says Wright

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON AP—A guaranteed price for synthetic fuels will prompt the private sector to start production, says House Majority Leader Jim Wright.

The Democrat from Fort Worth said Wednesday that "synfuel" production incentives are a likely centerpiece for an intensifying congressional drive toward energy solutions.

"There is a growing consensus on the need for dramatic action to increase our domestic energy supplies," he said after congressional leaders met with President Carter at a White House session.

"I am less discouraged right now than I have been in two years," Wright said.

He said the program shaping up in Congress includes proposals to guarantee a government market for up to 500,000 barrels a day of synthetic fuels, expedite a pipeline to move Alaskan oil from California to Gulf Coast refineries and authorize the president to "fast track," or grant priority status to certain energy projects.

A bill that has the approval of the House Banking Committee but has not reached the floor would allow the government to contract for up to 500,000 barrels a day at a fixed price.

"We are going to create a synthetic fuel industry," Wright said, adding that increasing the ceiling to 2 million barrels a day has been discussed.

Any synthetic fuel - biomass, from coal or shale - would qualify for the price guarantees under the bill sponsored by Rep. William Moorhead, D-Pa.

Wright said the time between the decision to start a plant and the first production might be about five years.

"I think it's time to make a commitment," he said. "We need the sense that Franklin Roosevelt had in 1941 when the Japanese cut off our rubber supplies."

Ed Rothschild of the Energy Action Educational Fund, a consumer group, said any proposal to give government support for a synthetic fuel in industry should include partial government ownership.

"There is no way the government should be subsidizing this kind of technology at all unless the government runs and owns it," he said. "I think they should stand on their own two feet."

Earl Ross of the American Petroleum Institute, a producers' group, said the organization had not taken a position on the Moorhead bill.

"Our basic position is that we're in favor of all synthetics," he said.

Wright said he favored government action to insure construction of the troubled Long Beach, Calif., to Midland, Texas, pipeline. He said the government should operate the finished pipeline if a purchaser from the private sector could not be found for it.

The third proposal in "the package I see shaping up" would allow the president to declare that an energy project had top priority and could not be subject to delay for any reason, Wright said.

"My interest right now is not putting a Band-aid on the wound," he said. "My interest is curing the cancer."

Clements Resurrects Primary Issue

AUSTIN (AP)—Gov. Bill Clements has resurrected the presidential primary issue by saying he might include it in a special legislative session if other states join Texas in a regional primary.

"If things start bearing fruit, it's possible that I will consider it sufficiently important that we might call a special session to accomplish this," the governor told a weekly news conference Thursday.

Clements said a regional primary would give Southwestern states greater influence in national politics.

"It would realign the focus and perspective of what's happening in a state like New Hampshire," he said of the state with the earliest primary. "That thing is blown up out of all proportion to its importance."

Diplomat Says England Needs National Goal

LONDON (AP)—In a controversial assessment of Britain's standing in the world, the man who becomes his country's ambassador to Washington next month says his once-mighty land needs a new "sense of national purpose" to arrest its slide toward becoming a "poor and unpround nation."

"Today we are not only no longer a world power, but we are not even in the first rank as a European one," Sir Nicholas Henderson is quoted as saying in The Economist, a British news weekly.

The diplomat's blistering attack on Britain's national malaise apparently was leaked to the journal by British Foreign Office workers. He had provided the grim assessment last March in a letter to then-Foreign Secretary David Owen.

Romance Disclosed In Dry Financial Reports

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON AP—It isn't every day you encounter romance in the mostly dry-as-dust financial disclosure reports high-paid federal officials must file under a new ethics law.

But romance seems an apt term to apply to the reports filed by Margaret McKenna, President Carter's personnel office.

Ms. McKenn's filing reports that during 1978 she received from Miller "Christmas, birthday gifts of clothing and accessories, $250."

So, it would seem, Miller places a higher value on the gifts he gave than did Ms. McKenna on the gifts received. But Miller did insert a question mark after his valuation.

Miller's filing also included another item under "Food and entertainment" for which Ms McKenna made no comparable entry.

According to Miller, Ms McKenna was guest of honor at what he listed as "Birthday party, $400."

Needless to add, the two Carter aides are good friends.

The White House came close to being the scene of an inter-national incident Monday when French Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet came calling.

Among other things, Francois-Poncet wanted to complain about a controversial administration subsidy aimed and insuring adequate home heating oil for New England next winter.

The French and some other Europeans claim the subsidy has boosted their own costs for such oil. Carter has a different view.

Alerted by the French Embassy, a sizable press contingent assembled to hear a promised Francois-Poncet statement following his meeting with Carter.

But associate White House press secretary Dale Leibach approached an embassy official and announced it would be a breach of protocol for the foreign minister to sound off on White House property. Leibach suggested as alternative sites the State Deparment or the French Embassy.

Meanwhile, the embassy supplied reporters with copies of a statement Francois-Poncet planned to make.

As French officials objected to Leibach's attempt to keep Francois-Poncet away from the reporters, who often question prime ministers, ambassadors and other foreign officials at the White House without dealing a death blow to protocol, the argument was moved indoors.

In the end, the foreign minister made a delayed appearance in the driveway and got his beef on the public record.

Mrs. Justice Says ERA Not Needed

The Equal Rights Amendment was the main subject of a talk given by Wanda Justice, president elect of the Snyder chapter of the Eagle Forum, to the First Church of God in Big Spring Wednesday night.

She asserted that the ERA is unnecessary because there is already adequate legislation assuring women of equal rights. She referred to the Equal Employment Opportunity Act, the Equal Credit Act, and the Equal Education amendment.

"If women aren't enjoying these benefits it's due to lack of enforcement not laws," she stated.

Mrs. Justice also said that authorities agree that passage of the ERA would make women subject to the draft. She pointed out that a bill has already been introduced in Congress which calls for reinstatement of the draft and that Harold Brown, Secretary of Defense, has recommended that women be included.

"Not only would women, including mothers, be subject to the draft, but the military would be compelled to place them in combat units alongside men," she said.

She told the group of a feminist publication entitled "The Document: A Declaration of Feminism." The following is an excerpt from that pamphlet: "The end of the institution of marriage is a necessary condition for the liberation of women. Therefore it is important for us to encourage women to leave their husbands and not to live individually with men."

Mrs. Justice dissented by saying, "God created us and gave us a beautiful and exalted place to fill. No women in history have every enjoyed such privileges, luxuries and freedoms as American women. Yet a tiny minority of dissatisfied, highly vocal, militant women, are determined to liberate you."

Mrs. Justice has been invited back to Big Spring to help organize an Eagle Forum chapter there.

firm that assembled information on possible locations for a new plant.

Warner said the local agencies are preparing to welcome the industry officials and take them on tours of Snyder and the area, including a potential plant site that is under consideration.

The first Christmas Seals, designed by Emily P. Bissel of Wilmington, Del., were placed on sale in the Wilmington post office on Dec. 9, 1907. The proceeds were devoted to the campain against tuberculosis.

Food Industry Unions Complete Merger

WASHINGTON (AP)- Two of the nation's most powerful food industry unions formally completed a merger today to form a 1,250,000-member giant that becomes the AFL-CIO's largest union.

The 735,000-member Retail Clerks International, one of the nation's fastest growing unions, voted at a convention here to complete the labor movement's biggest merger since the AFL and CIO wed a quarter a century ago.

With only one vote in opposition, 600 delegates voted to dissolve the Retail Clerks so the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union could be created.
