Iraq on Wednesday promised to free 120 hostages, including a few Americans, but U.S. officials blasted Saddam Hussein for his "cynical" use of the captives and the foreign envoys who have been seeking to free them.

At the United Nations, diplomats said the United States is sounding out member countries on a Security Council resolution that would authorize the use of U.N. military force against Iraq. If such a measure is adopted, it would be an unprecedented step in the history of the United Nations.

But the text of the resolution has not yet been circulated to other Security Council members because Secretary of State James A. Baker III is overseas trying to line up support for it, said the diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"We know they've got it on paper, but it would be absurd for them to pass it (the text) around until they've got all the crucial support lined up," said one official.

Baker, off on a weeklong tour that has already taken him to the Mideast, is now in Moscow.

In some of her strongest remarks of the 3-month-old Persian Gulf standoff, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher warned Saddam that "time is running out" for a peaceful solution.

Mrs. Thatcher told British lawmakers they must send the Iraqi president the messsage that "either he gets out of Kuwait soon or we and our allies will re-

Trains collide

CORONA, Calif. (AP) — Two freight trains collided Wednesday, killing four crew members and injuring two others, officials said.

The Santa Fe Railway trains crashed about 4:10 a.m. A westbound train left a siding too early and smashed into a passing eastbound train, said Santa Fe spokesman Mike Martin.

Four locomotives and at least six freight cars derailed. Diesel fuel from a locomotive ignited but firefighters prevented the blaze from spreading.

Another summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush probably will meet with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Paris this month, the White House said Wednesday.

The meeting would come during a five-nation trip, which would include a stop in Prague, the first visit to Czechoslovakia by an American president.

No date has been set for a meeting with Gorbachev, but Bush will be in Paris from Nov. 18 until Nov. 21 for the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Alleged bomber

WASHINGTON (AP) — A reclusive Georgia businessman with a history of criminal charges was charged Wednesday with mailing package bombs that killed a federal judge and a civil rights lawyer.

Moody

Walter L. Moody Jr., 56, long the prime suspect in the case, was accused of mailing bombs last December that exploded when they were opened by their recipients, Circuit Judge Robert S. Vance and Robert E. Robinson, a Savannah alderman and civil rights lawyer.

Bennett to resign

WASHINGTON (AP) — William J. Bennett is resigning as the first director of the Office of National Drug Control Strategy after leading what the White House called "a turnaround" in the battle against the drug scourge.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said President Bush will formally accept Bennett's resignation in a ceremony at the White House on Thursday.

Bennett

Fitzwater denied that the resignation was prompted by threats, saying that Bennett "has lived with threats of a kind ever since day one of the job."

A successor for the job has not been named, the spokesman said.

Bennett leaves office only two weeks after another senior administration official, Secretary of Labor Elizabeth Dole, became the first member of Bush's cabinet to resign.

Bennett, a former secretary of education, became director the nation's anti-drug efforts at the beginning of the Bush administration. He helped to coordinate some 27 departments and agencies involved in the drug war.

"The president feels that Bill Bennett has provided extraordinary leadership and service to the country during his tenure as drug czar," said Fitzwater.

"Two years ago this country viewed this problem as impossible to deal with and with no end in sight," the spokesman said. "Today there has been a turnaround. There is strong bipartisan support in the Congress for drug programs and there is growing evidence that society is beginning to turn away from the drug scourge."

Cooler temperatures atypical, NWS says

By Michael Kashgarian

Staff Writer

Wednesday's chilly temperatures were atypical for this time of year but the outlook points to warmer and dryer days by the end of the week, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

With a daytime high of 35 and a low of 34, Wednesday's temperatures strayed somewhat from the average November high of 66 and low of 39.

"That shows this is a fairly strong cold front for this time of year but not record breaking," a NWS spokesman said.

The rain and drizzle, possibly mixed with snow, are expected to continue today with temperatures in the mid-40s after the forecasted drop below freezing Wednesday evening and this morning.

Richards to organize education summit

By James Cullen

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Hoarse but happy governor-elect Ann Richards Wednesday said she planned to relax a few days in South Texas before organizing an education summit and preparing to march up Congress Avenue to be sworn in Jan. 1.

"I can't tell you how happy I am to be here today," the Democratic state treasurer told cheering supporters in the Senate Chamber, a day after 50 percent of the state's voters elected her governor.

Republican Gov. Bill Clements also congratulated Richards for her victory over Clayton Williams, who got 47 percent of the vote in the largest gubernatorial turnout in 20 years.

"The people of Texas have spoken and certainly I am abiding by their wishes," Clements said in ordering his staff's full cooperation with the Richards team for a smooth transition.

Clements declined to conduct a post-mortem of the campaign, in which Republican Clayton Williams of Midland lost a double-digit lead in the polls during the last month with a series of gaffes.

She also said the pressure her campaign put on Williams and his own inexperience caused him to make the errors that undermined his campaign.

Richards thanked Williams for his gracious concession Tuesday night and his offer to help after a "good, tough, hard-fought campaign." She said she would try to put aside partisan differences as governor.

Lewis wants budget estimate to reflect shortfall

By Rick Brown

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The tilt in the political playing field brought on by Tuesday's election didn't keep House and Senate leaders from revealing cracks of disagreement on the state budget Wednesday.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said he wants initial budget estimates to reflect the $3 billion shortfall that House lawmakers have been predicting for months.

But Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby wants the preliminary figures drawn to maintain the current level of state services, which would carry a higher overall price tag.

Lewis and the lame duck Hobby discussed their positions but reached only a stalemate during a meeting of the Legislative Budget Board (LBB) Wednesday.

The current state comptroller, Bob Bullock, will replace Hobby when lawmakers gather again in January, at which time Lewis is expected to win a record fifth term as speaker.

Prior to January, the panel of lawmakers who make up the LBB must direct legislative staff members to draw a sample budget as a starting point for discussion on the biennial appropriations bill.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and an LBB member, said

WEATHER SUMMARY

COLD: Snow possible

By Sunday, Midlanders should be enjoying a warming trend with highs near 70.

But precautions were being taken against the hazards of rain mixed with freezing temperatures Wednesday evening.

At Midland International Airport, preparations were being taken in the event of ice forming on runways.

"All snow equipment and personnel are on standby," said Ken Day, assistant director of airports/operations.

The weather scan system at the airport was predicting freezing rain between 9 p.m. and 6 a.m.

But freezing rain or air temperatures don't necessarily translate into icy runways.

"Surface temperature is what is important," Day said.

If surface temperatures are predicted to drop low enough to facilitate freezing, preventive steps will be taken.

"We will activate maintenance to do an anti-icing control — spread a chemical on the runway to keep pavement temperatures above freezing," Day said.

Because of warm ground temperatures, NWS also did not anticipate any accumulation if it snows.

"The worst part would be the bridges and overpasses because they cool quicker and ice may accumulate," a NWS spokesman said.

Ray Navarro, assistant street superintendent for the city of Midland, said the street department is prepared in case of icy roads this morning.

"We are about 80-90 percent ready in mobilizing equipment," Navarro said.

"We are ready year-round or as we come into a time of year that warrants it," Navarro added.

Routine preparation consists of having personnel on call, and access to brine water, sand and gravel, barricades and emergency equipment, Navarro said.

The street department determines whether or not to take safety measures for slippery roads if notified by the police, fire department officials, or a concerned citizens.

In the county, some precautions are taken at busy intersections during inclement weather, but because of the extensive road network the effort is limited, said Albert Stewart, superintendent for the Road and Bridge Department in Midland County.

When conditions for freezing roadways first appear, drivers should take note immediately, advises the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS).

"When a storm first comes, that's when most of the accidents occur. During the initial impact people just don't slow down, people think they can handle their car in any situation," said Captain Coy Clanton, with DPS.

"Eighty percent (of icy-road related accidents) could probably be prevented if people just slowed down," Clanton said.

Unfortunately, most people don't reduce their driving speed until they are involved in an accident or drive past one, Clanton added.

Firefighters responded to a blaze about 1:30 p.m. Wednesday caused by fire in a washtub — apparently started to keep people warm — spreading to a nearby building.

The accidental fire caused moderate damage to a vacant, dilapidated building at 400 N. Lamesa Road, fire officials said.

At the same time, other Midlanders were concerned about keeping warm Wednesday.

Major Milton Wood, commanding officer for the Salvation Army in Midland, said he had seven requests for heaters Wednesday. In addition, the United Way sponsored agency anticipated increased requests for blankets and a place to stay.

"We are going to be full in our sleeping arrangements," Wood said Wednesday.

The Salvation Army will accept all donations of working electric heaters, Wood said.

But according to NWS forecasters, the recent cold front may be a premature indicator of the winter to come.

"It doesn't mean it will be an abnormally cold in a month or two," a spokesman said.

Today's forecast calls for an 80 percent chance of precipitation with a high in the upper 30s and 10 to 15 mph southwest winds, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

NWS forecasted freezing rain and snow for the morning hours and then turning to rain or sleet by the afternoon.

Tonight is expected to be decreasing cloudiness with a low near 30, NWS said. Friday's forecast calls for sunny and warmer with a high near 60, NWS said.

The record high for Wednesday's date was 88 set in 1963. The record low of 27 for today's date was set in 1948. Wednesday's high was 44, with the low being 34.

STATE

Freezing rain, sleet and thunderstorms were reported throughout Texas as cold accompanied by a storm system slid into the state Wednesday.

In West Texas, sleet and snow were reported in the South Plains and the Panhandle as the system moved out of the Rockies and headed for the area.

Wednesday temperatures ranged from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 30s in southern regions of West Texas. Rainfall there ranged from a mere trace to one tenth of an inch.

By Wednesday afternoon a cold front passed through south central Texas, bringing rain showers and thunderstorms over a large part of that section.

But the expected cooler temperatures didn't reach the area by late Wednesday afternoon. Temperatures varied from the upper 40s in parts of the Hill Country to the low 60s in south central sections and the 70s in the rest of South Texas.

Temperatures were in the 30s in Abilene while the western part of the Red River Valley had readings in the 40s. Afternoon temperatures ranged from 37 degrees at Abilene to 69 at Tyler.

West Texas skies are expected to clear Thursday in some sections.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

move him by force and he will go down to defeat with all the consequences."

"He has been warned," she added.

The Iraqi information minister denounced Mrs. Thatcher, saying she was mentally unbalanced and possessed by the devil.

In a statement carried by the official Iraqi News Agency, Minister Latif Jassim said Mrs. Thatcher's statements were "filled with rancor and hatred toward the Iraqi people" and did not befit the office of prime minister.

He said "her continued calls for beating the drums of war unequivocally show beyond a shadow of a doubt that this woman ... has lost her mental balance. ... The devil has found a comfortable dwelling within her mind and conscience."

Her saber-rattling sent oil prices surging upward. At the New York Mercantile Exchange, a key market, contracts for December delivery of light sweet crude oil were up $2.68 at $35.31 per barrel at the close of the session on Wednesday.

In Iraq's latest round of hostage-freeing, 74 Japanese nationals left Baghdad on Wednesday, and the official Iraqi News Agency said 100 Germans and 20 other foreigners, including an unspecified number of Americans, Britons and Italians, would be released.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said U.S. officials had not yet been notified about plans to free any Americans. He denounced Iraq's "cynical bartering" of captive foreigners, who were trapped by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Iraq did not say when the 120 would be freed, but suggested it would be soon. The announcement marked the second time in two days Baghdad agreed to release a large group of captives in response to an appeal by a former foreign leader.

The White House on Wednesday took aim at such missions, saying the foreign envoys were being manipulated by Saddam.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater singled out former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, who interceded on behalf of the Germans, and former Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, who won the Japanese hostages' freedom.

"Clearly, these people are being used. And we want to point that out in the strongest terms," Fitzwater said. He accused Saddam of "cynical attempts at propagandizing this situation" in a bid to "build legitimacy for his government."

Iraq still holds hundreds of Japanese and German hostages, along with other "guests" from other countries.

Japan denied having changed its gulf stance to win its citizens' freedom, but word that the Japanese hostages would be freed came Tuesday, just came as Tokyo said it was abandoning its proposal to send Japanese troops to the gulf region.

The Iraqi news agency said the German hostages would be freed to reflect "appreciation for the German policy, which does not support trends toward war."

BENNETT: Drug czar resigning

(From 1A)

However, leading House Democrat John Conyers, Jr. of Michigan said Bennett "was the personification of a drug strategy of the last 10 years that failed."

An administration official who asked not to be identified said that Bennett feels he "has done all that he told the president he would get done. He feels he's done what he came to do in the job and it was time to get on with his life."

Lee I. Dogoloff, executive director of the non-governmental American Council for Drug Education, said that Bennett's plans to leave "have been rumored for some time" among groups in America's war on drugs.

"It's not surprising," said Dogoloff. "I talked to him several months ago and he said then that he had not taken a lifetime assignment."

GOP: Candidates make strong showing

lieutenant governor hopeful Rob Mosbacher stung, Ms. Rhea said Republicans made a strong showing overall in the election.

"There'll be another political race down the road," said Ms. Rhea, who had worked alongside other Republican supporters at the Victory 90 headquarters since early July.

At the nearby Williams headquarters, Charles Harris, Glasscock County Republican party chairman, said the campaign was well worth the effort.

"I think we should be awful proud of the man," Harris said. "I guess the state's not ready for a man who's honest and tells it like it is.

"He's taken the loss to heart and we have too."

A campaign spokeswoman in Austin said Williams was expected to return to Midland possibly as early as Wednesday afternoon, depending on the weather.

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas said he was stunned over the defeat of Williams, whom he formally endorsed.

"I'm personally very disappointed and I think a lot of Midlanders are," Thomas said. "Claytie represented a lot of the beliefs the community has. Those beliefs were rejected by the majority of voters in the state."

Thomas said that although Republicans failed to capture the Texas governor's seat, he was not discouraged by the party's showing.

"We've had economic and political disappointments before," he said. "We'll bounce back from this like anything else.

"We've still got a president who's a former Midland resident."

Rick Davis, Midland County Republican Party chairman, said he was pleased with his party's performance statewide.

"As Republicans, we're very excited about how we did in the other races," Davis said. He pointed to victories by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, state treasurer candidate Kay Bailey Hutchison and agriculture commissioner candidate Rick Perry among others.

"We were excited to elect Republicans down the ballot," he said. "We've had difficulty getting the traditional Democratic voters to elect down-ballot candidates."

Davis did not attribute losses by Williams and other Republicans to dissatisfaction with President Bush's administration and recent controversy over the federal budget.

Kelley Smoot, co-chairwoman of the local Ann Richards campaign, countered that the Williams campaign was not completely unscathed by federal-level happenings.

"I wouldn't lay it totally on the feet of George Bush, but I think it helped defeat Clayton," Ms. Smoot said. "I think Clayton did himself in with his continuous comments that offended people."

Although Republicans managed to capture a handful of races statewide, Ms. Smoot said Democrats still strongly flexed their political muscles.

"It certainly looked like a clean sweep to me," she said. "They'll have a few in there, but they were elected in tight races. I think the Democrats came out really good."

"I think we're part of the new beginning for the Democratic Party in Midland, Texas," McCormack said. "It's a good feeling to know we can get our message across and our voices heard.

"I think it's an uplifting experience for all the Democrats in Midland County who have worked for so long without regulation."

BUDGET: Lewis, Hobby at stalemate

(From 1A)

Parker said the ultimate approach is important since it determines the way state agencies will have to compete for dollars.

With Lewis' way, "Those that could roll enough logs and generate enough power could have their goodies added to the bill," said the senator.

But the speaker said his approach guarantees lawmakers will start talks with a no-growth budget that will not "build false hope" among state agencies.

Rep. Ric Williamson, D-Weatherford, sounded a note of agreement, saying, "I'm getting a little tired of being accused of not knowing the fiscal constraints by the people we represent."

But Parker said lawmakers who advocate cuts should be forced to provide specifics publicly. "Nobody ever gives a list," he said.

Lewis said legislative staffers would recommend the $3 billion in cuts and give LBB members a chance to approve them, under his approach.

Meanwhile, Gov.-elect Ann Richards told supporters she is sticking to a campaign estimate that state coffers will be $3 billion fatter next year because of economic growth.

The state could garner an additional $2 billion by closing loopholes in the franchise tax and instituting a lottery, she said.

intend to do that," she said.

"We've always said that in Texas politics is a contact sport. It is not for the weak nor the lily-livered. You have to be able to fight for what you believe ... and we did that," she said.

Her campaign was successful in raising money, securing her Democratic voter base, telling Williams' story, telling her own story and building a grassroots organization, she said.

"The last task was to galvanize the women of Texas to understand that this was a crucial election," she said, and she noted that exit polls showed 60 percent of women voted for her. "The nice thing about it is we did well among men as well," she said.

"This election was not about me. This election was about moving Texas forward to be a major competitor," she said, adding that improving the state's education system remained her top priority, but she insisted she could do it without raising taxes.

She confessed that she was not confident going into election day.

"I thought we were going to win the race but I was never really confident," she said. "I felt great (Tuesday) morning because it was such a beautiful day and the weather was not going to keep people from the polls."

The recovering alcoholic added, "Whatever serenity I'm able to maintain has a lot to do with the program I practice. I have very strong feelings about how you lead your life. You always look ahead. You don't look back."

Richards said she does not expect any problems dealing with Republican President Bush, who made three trips to Texas to campaign for Williams.

"People of good will who care about their state are going to work well together, and I believe that George Bush cares about Texas. ... We will work together very well for the future of Texas," she said.

The election of a woman governor, a Hispanic attorney general and a black judge on the Court of Criminal Appeals was especially significant, she said.

"It means that the doors are open to everyone and they're not going to be closed again," she said.

She also said her appointments to regulatory and policymaking boards and commissions will reflect the ethnic and gender populations of the state.

Confederate soldiers' descendants fight their own civil war

By Matthew Mosk
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — A new Civil War is underway between factions of descendants of Confederate soldiers who are battling for control of Confederate Memorial Hall.

Just eight blocks from the White House, the red brick structure they call the "Confederate Embassy" stands as a memorial to Southern warriors. But former allies who lovingly restored and preserved it are pitted against one another in a legal battle that has now lasted longer than the Civil War it memorializes.

At issue is control of the committee that administers the hall and sets policy for its use.

One side is led by John Edward Hurley, the great-grandson of a Confederate cavalryman and the president of the Confederate Memorial Association for 10 years. He complains that he is the victim of a "legal lynching."

On the other side are members of three Washington area groups: The Jefferson Davis Camp No. 305 of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, the Robert E. Lee Chapter No. 644 of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Southern Relief Society of the District of Columbia.

In May, 1987, Hines and his allies attempted to throw Hurley and Mrs. John Tilden Rogers of Burke, Va., off the CMA.

The two sued Hines and six others in the Circuit Court of Alexandria, Va.

In turn, the defendants filed a $250,000 suit against Hurley and Rogers.

From those seeds a ticket of five claims and counterclaims has sprouted in state and federal courts in Washington and Virginia.

Hurley filed the latest suit in August in the United States District Court in Washington under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, or RICO, asking $5 million from the three groups and 15 of their members.

The defendants in that suit deny all of the charges against them. On Oct. 10, they asked the court to dismiss the RICO case.

And, while Hurley still runs the hall, the legal scale has tipped in Hines' favor. The most recent decision, in a Virginia case, says that because Hines' faction represents a majority, it can exercise control ever the Confederate Memorial Committee.

In an interview last week, Hurley said that his foes, whom he describes as "outsiders" — some with a penchant for bigotry and racism — have to use the hall, created as a museum and showplace of Southern culture, for political purposes.

Between 1986 and 1990, he said, select members of the Confederate Memorial Association, which has a total membership of 1,500, tried to hold events at the hall, including a "freedom fighter night" and a "night with Oliver North," Hurley said.

Hurley further claims that Hines misused funds of the CMA and tried to "bring an element of white supremacy" into the association.

Hines failed to return repeated telephone requests for an interview. But Hines, a former South Carolina legislator and campaigner for the Rev. Pat Robertson's presidential bid, told the New York Times earlier this month: "This ain't a Southern thing; it's a kook thing."

"There is no substance to anything that Hurley says," said attorney Thomas L. O'Neill of Arlington, Va., who represents Hines and several others.

As for using the hall for political purposes, Hurley's opponents say that he rented a meeting room to followers of political extremist Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr. and to a gay group. Hurley has denied those allegations.

ELECTION '90: THE AFTERMATH

Democrats reclaim Sun Belt

■ Republican analysts counter that the GOP fared better than usual in the mid-term election.

By David Espo
Associated Press Writer

Democrats boasted Wednesday of a Sun Belt election breakthrough that could buoy their presidential prospects in 1992. Republicans gained two late upsets to go with a win in California and claimed, "we didn't do too bad" despite mid-term setbacks.

Still, a Democratic celebration was in full swing.

"George Bush is in a slide. There's absolutely no question about it," said Ron Brown, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

The White House saw it differently, as a midterm election with something for everyone, and said it could not be interpreted as a referendum on Bush's popularity anyway.

For winners everywhere, the day after brought exultation. "An overpowering moment," said John Engler, elected governor of Michigan in a long, late count over Democratic incumbent James Blanchard.

From the disappointed, there were generally gracious comments. Said Democratic Rep. Jim Bates, trailing narrowly in California, "If the voters decide to make a change, that's what democracy is all about."

After weeks of talk that voters were angry about Congress' performance and ready to make changes, about 96 percent of incumbents won re-election.

Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell and House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, their majorities strengthened in the 102nd Congress, went to work on an agenda for the next two years.

Foley said it would include "tax fairness," as well as legislative initiatives for health care and education.

"The debate over the budget was the best thing that happened," said Brown of the October political free-for-all in which Bush abandoned his no-new-taxes campaign pledge.

In the ensuing scramble, Democrats jumped on a theme of tax fairness, depicting themselves as defenders of the middle class and Republicans as protectors of the rich.

A day after the polls closed, there were three races unsettled.

Arizona's gubernatorial contest appeared headed for a runoff after neither Democrat Terry Goddard nor Republican Fife Symington amassed 50 percent of the vote in a three-way race.

Two California House races were too close to call, both involving Democratic incumbents. In a third race that was decided during the day, Republicans held onto a GOP seat.

In all, Democrats emerged from the elections with a 56-44 majority in the Senate, a gain of one seat. They were adding nine seats to their House majority for a likely edge of 268-167. Their major congressional disappointment: GOP Sen. Jesse Helms' bigger-than-expected re-election in North Carolina.

Democrats took seven governorships away from Republicans, including Bush's home state of Texas, where Ann Richards vanquished Clayton Williams, and Florida, where Lawton Chiles ousted Gov. Bob Martinez.

Pete Wilson defeated Dianne Feinstein to keep California in Republican hands. And the GOP took away five statehouses from the Democrats, including Ohio and Michael Dukakis' Massachusetts. Engler's win was an upset, and Arne Carlson won Minnesota in a race so close it wasn't called until well after dawn.

With independents Lowell Weicker and Wally Hickel winning in Connecticut and Alaska, Democrats held 28 governorships for sure and the Republicans 19. If the GOP wins Arizona, where its candidate was leading narrowly but heading for the runoff, that would mean a loss of one for each party.

Both sides claimed gains in the race to control the redistricting of House seats before 1992. Democrats emerged with complete control over reapportionment in Texas and Florida, which together will gain seven seats, and in 15 other states. Republicans have outright control in three states, and Wilson's victory gave then a share of the power with the Democratic legislature in California, which gains seven seats.

Rep. Beryl Anthony noted House Democratic gains of two seats in the South and declared an end to the gradual move toward the GOP there. "Realignment is dead," he said. "The Republicans will have to find a new slogan."

"You win some and you lose some," shrugged Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, and he and party spokesman Charles Black said Republicans beat the historical averages for midterm losses by the party in the White House.

Bush "campaigned hard in Texas and lost, campaigned hard in California and won," Fitzwater added, speaking of two key gubernatorial races.

But Brown chortled that Bush "campaigned heavily for 18 candidates and 14 of them lost." Asked why the Democrats lost California, he replied, "George Bush didn't stay long enough."

Outgoing Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste tried to blame Democratic gubernatorial losses in New England and the industrial Midwest on Republican economic policies. "Democrats may be paying a price for the weakening of the national economy," he said. "It would be ironic if those Democrats who have been carrying the burden of Republican parties for the last decade" would pay the price for a recession.

Fitzwater said Bush was looking forward to working with the new, Democratic majorities in Congress, but also predicted the election results would not affect the president's ability to sustain any vetoes.

"It means the veto will continue to be a legislative strategy tool. The president's been very successful in that regard, upholding some 16 vetoes in his first two years," he said.

Voter surveys said economic concerns were evident. Republican governors Mike Hayden of Kansas, Kay Orr of Nebraska and Martinez all raised taxes, and all were swept out. New Jersey Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley's close call seemed to reflect anger with a tax increase engineered by Democratic Gov. Jim Florio.

There will be four new faces in the new Senate. The list includes Republican Reps. Bob Smith of New Hampshire, Hank Brown of Colorado and Larry Craig of Idaho, all of whom succeeded retiring GOP lawmakers. The fourth is Paul Wellstone, a liberal who defeated Rudy Boschwitz in Minnesota.

New Democrats include: Chiles, Richards, Zell Miller in Georgia, Joan Finney in Kansas, Ben Nelson in Nebraska, Bruce King in New Mexico, David Walters in Oklahoma, Bruce Sundlun in Rhode Island and Richards in Texas.

The number of women in the House shrank by one to 28, in part because several veteran Republicans chose to run for the Senate instead. They all lost.

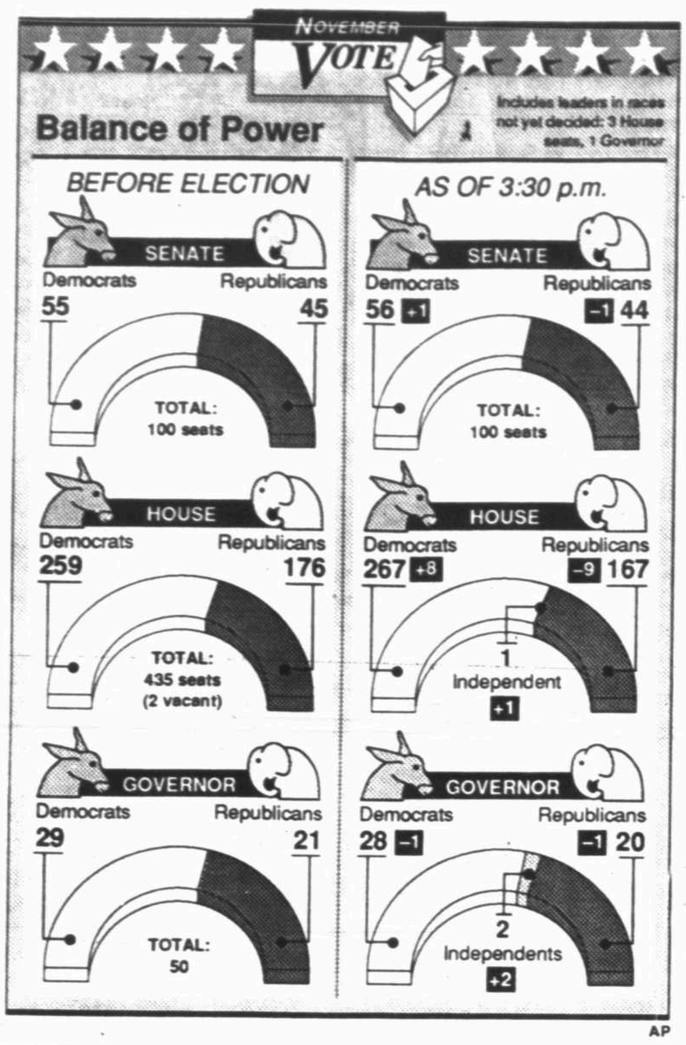

The number of black members of the House rose by one to 25, including Gary Franks of Connecticut, the first GOP black elected to the House since 1935.

The overall re-election rate for House members hovered at 96 percent.

Not counting the California races that were undecided, the incumbent House losers totaled 13, four Democrats and nine Republicans.

Some were tinged by controversy, including Democratic Rep. Roy Dyson of Maryland, a hawk on military matters who disclosed he was a conscientious objector to the Vietnam War, and Arlan Stangeland of Minnesota, who made sveral hundred long distance telephone calls to a female lobbyist on his government credit card.

Republicans won a signal victory in Massachusetts, where they increased their minority strength in the state senate from nine to 16. That's enough to force a roll call on any vote, if not to sway the outcome.

Texas voter turnout biggest in gubernatorial election since 1970

DALLAS (AP) — A little over half of Texas' 7.7 million registered voters exercised their right to vote, for the best turnout in a gubernatorial election since 1970.

With all but six of the state's 7,030 precincts reporting, 3,857,634 of the state's 7,701,499 registered voters went to the polls, the secretary of state's office said today.

That translates to a statewide voter turnout of 50.09 percent, said secretary of state's office spokesman Mark Toohey.

"We had estimated 50 percent, so we by a little bit exceeded what we had estimated," Toohey said.

Tuesday's vote marks the first time since the 1970 gubernatorial election that voter turnout has exceeded 50 percent, Toohey said. The gubernatorial vote usually hovers around 45 percent, he said.

Toohey said several factors contributed to the higher turnout.

"I think the interest generated by the candidates (and) the extended absentee voting period has a lot to do with it," he said. He also credited the work of county election officials during registration drives.

State election marks career turning points

By Kaye Northcott
New York Times News Service

FORT WORTH — What a difference a day makes. The electoral victories Tuesday created new political stars and ended the careers of other ambitious Texas politicians.

With Democrats Ann Richards occupying the governor's mansion and Bob Bullock heading the Senate as lieutenant governor, these top state offices could be sewed up for the next eight years or even longer. Nonetheless, Democrats and Republicans alike are assessing their next moves.

One savory plum is Lloyd Bentsen's U.S. Senate seat if he doesn't run for re-election in 1994 or if he runs for and is elected president in 1992. And there will be new congressional seats up for grabs in 1992.

So who's hot and who's not after the election? These are some of the names being mentioned.

Former San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, who decided not to run for governor this year, showed he still has charisma when he stumped for Richards. He would be on most Democratic lists of potential successors to Bentsen. But people question how long he can remain on the shelf without going stale.

Treasurer-elect Kay Bailey Hutchison and agriculture commissioner-elect Rick Perry are new GOP stars who will want at least to consider running against Richards in 1994 or farther down the line.

Hutchison has now risen higher than any female GOP elected official in Texas and she may aspire to do what Richards did — use the treasurer's job as a launching pad for a gubernatorial race.

Perry has the reputation as a giant-killer after bringing down incumbent Democrat Jim Hightower. Decked out in his cowboy gear for TV commercials and campaign posters, Perry became a Republican heartthrob.

Hightower could hardly be called a hot property at this point. Nor could Fort Worth Sen. Hugh Parmer, who lost his bid to replace Texas' Republican U.S. senator, Phil Gramm. But there was speculation Wednesday that Richards will consider both men to fill the Railroad Commission seat to be vacated by Democrat John Sharp.

In his election as comptroller, Sharp was the state's top vote-getter Tuesday. The Democrat won 62.9 percent of the vote in a lopsided contest with Republican Warren G. Harding Jr. He garnered 12,000 more votes than Gramm, who was the top Republican vote-getter by capturing 60.1 percent of the votes in his victory over Parmer.

Sharp was the state's top vote-getter Tuesday. The Democrat won 62.9 percent of the vote in a lopsided contest with Republican Warren G. Harding Jr. He garnered 12,000 more votes than Gramm, who was the top Republican vote-getter by capturing 60.1 percent of the votes in his victory over Parmer.

Richards said Wednesday that she has made no decisions on appointments. One of the posts most coveted by politicians is secretary of state. It has been used as a step to higher office by Bullock and former Gov. Mark White, among others.

Republican George Bayoud has gotten good marks for his term as secretary of state, and has expressed interest in making a political run.

Rep. Lena Guerrero of Austin, former Railroad Commission candidate Clint Hackney, Lubbock Sen. John Montford and Harrison County Democratic Chairman Max Sandlin all are being mentioned as possible Democratic successors to Sharp.

On the Republican side, there is another oil millionaire who may take up where Clayton Williams left off. T. Boone Pickens said Tuesday night at Williams' headquarters that he wants to run for statewide office.

Houston oilman Rob Mosbacher, who lost to Bullock in his second statewide race, may try again.

Dallas attorney Tom Luce, one of the Republican candidates who lost in the primary to Williams, has given clear signals that he wants to remain involved.

George W. Bush, who decided not to run for governor this year, would be a major contender if he decided to run in the future, said Republican consultant Karl Rove. But one skeptic pointed out that the president's popularity would influence his son's chances and not necessarily to the good.

Not hot but impossible to ignore because of their persistence are gubernatorial losers Attorney General Jim Mattox and Republican Kent Hance. The consensus is that Clayton Williams and Mark White are not likely to try comebacks.

Political dirt thoroughly muddied gubernatorial waters

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Mercifully, it's over.

If Hollywood's big cigars had gotten hold of this mess, they'd have called it "Mud and Money."

It was a Texas political campaign like no other. It drew national attention like flies to fertilizer, and for much the same reason.

When the mud, blood and tears subsided Tuesday night, Democrat Ann Richards had won the most expensive and probably the nastiest governor's race in Texas history.

And you can say farewell also to Warren G. Harding, Gene Kelly and Bart Simpson. All lost, despite name recognition.

If you can believe the polls, Williams squandered a $20 million campaign, a double-digit lead, the influence of President Bush and the support of U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm.

"Only Clayton Williams could have beaten Clayton Williams," a disgruntled, unidentified GOP supporter told reporters before leaving a victory party that wasn't.

It was an unusual election.

While Democrats were clearly the big winners, it was Republican Rick Perry, a Haskell farmer and rancher, who pulled off a major surprise in the Texas agriculture commissioner's race by beating incumbent Jim Hightower.

"I would call it probably the biggest upset in the last 10 years of Texas politics," gushed Perry.

■ An Analysis

The populist, wisecracking Hightower will be remembered always for his comment when told that his longtime adversary, GOP Gov. Bill Clements, was studying Spanish.

Democrat Bob Bullock won the lieutenant governor's race after a hard-hitting, big bucks campaign against Republican rival Rob Mosbacher, son and namesake of the U.S. Commerce Secretary.

Bullock may have turned that political asset into a liability, referring to Mosbacher derisively as "Junior" throughout the campaign.

It was not a good year for familiar names. Democrat John Sharp was elected Texas comptroller over Republican Warren G. Harding, who is not related to the former U.S. president. And Democrat Gene Kelly, who is unrelated to the dancer, was defeated in his bid for a Texas supreme court seat.

Even Bart Simpson lost.

But this Bart Simpson was a 24-year-old Republican state legislative candidate from Bexar County and not the bratty, underachieving star of the hit TV show.

He lost to Democrat Leticia Van de Putte, a pharmacist and mother of six.

But nothing, of course, rivaled the governor's race, where Richards, the state treasurer and a recovered alcoholic, faced the feisty Williams, who she accused of attempting to buy the governor's mansion.

But it was his mouth, not his money, that became the decisive issue.

The Midland millionaire rancher-oilman misspoke himself mightily when he jokingly compared rape to lousy weather. If inevitable, he chuckled, best we "relax and enjoy it."

No one laughed, although some Democrats surely snickered a bit.

Likewise, not everyone was amused by Claytie's disclosure that he frolicked with Mexican prostitutes as a youngster, a rite of passage, he explained, into West Texas manhood.

If possible, he made even more serious gaffes in the closing days of the campaign, permitting Richards to overcome a deficit of 12 percentage points in the opinion polls.

In an orchestrated snub, Williams refused to shake hands with Richards when the two crossed paths in Dallas. He then dismissed her as a "liar."

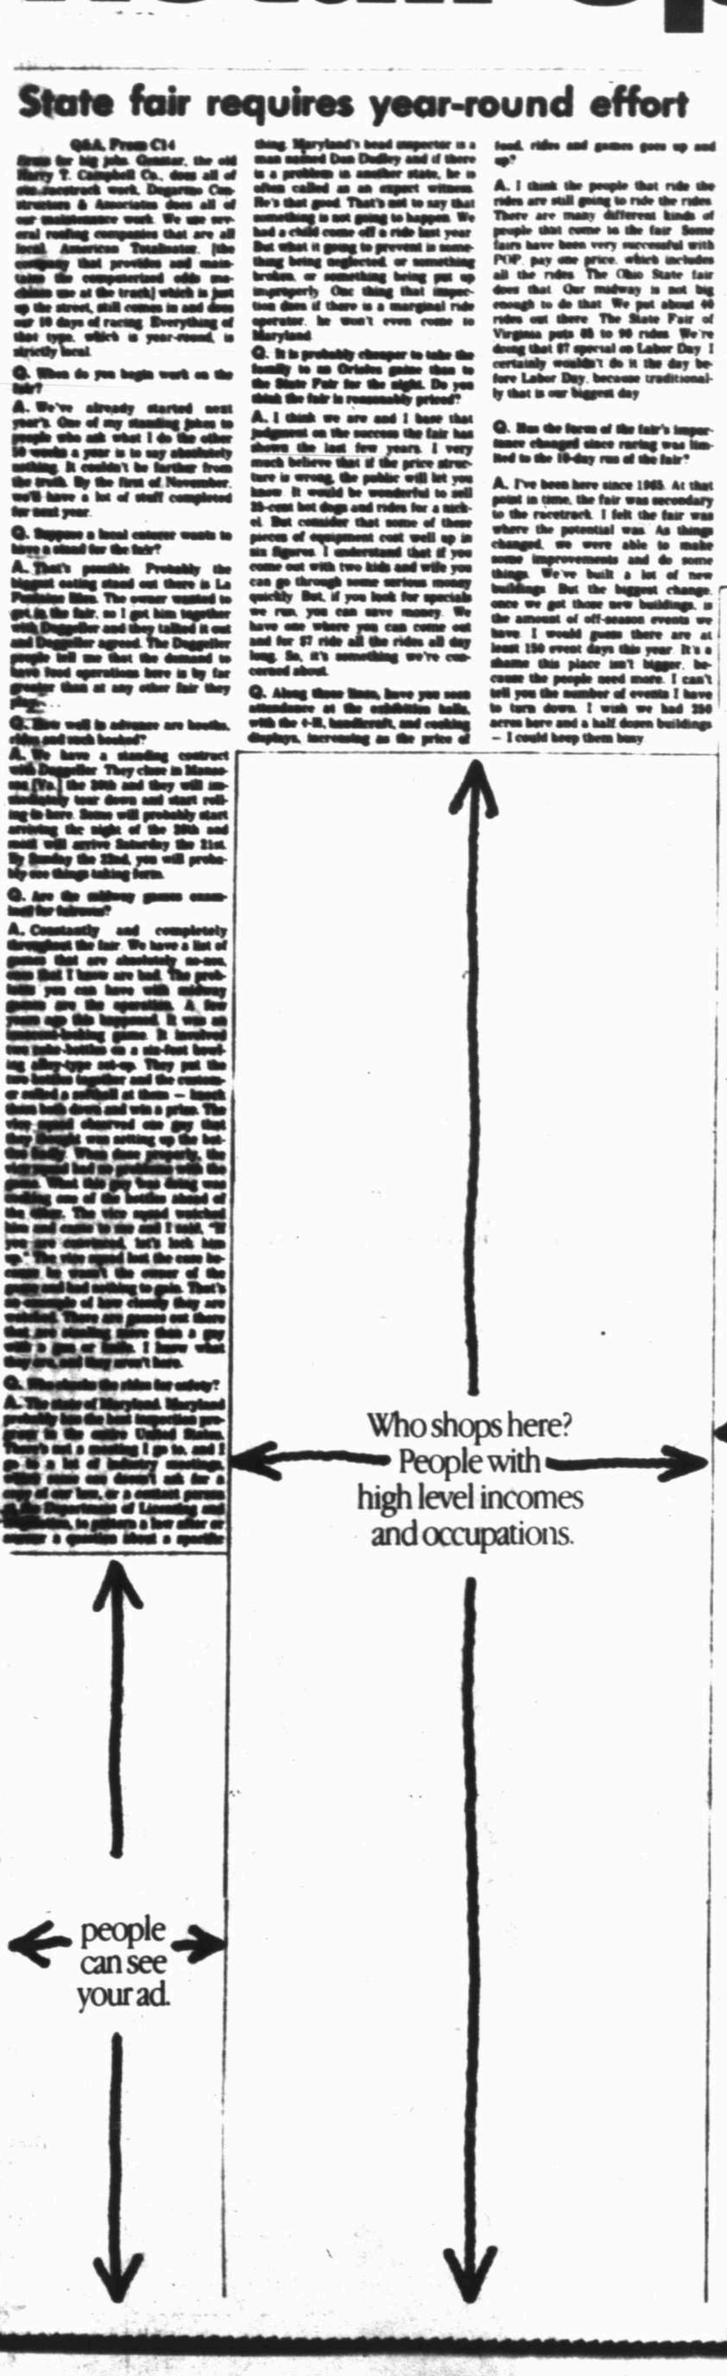

Later, off guard but on TV, he admitted he didn't understand the only proposed constitutional amendment on the ballot. And he said he paid no income taxes in 1986 because of the slumping oil economy.

If in fact George Bush was born with a silver foot in his mouth, as Richards once suggested, then poor Claytie was born with silver boots, a silver saddle and maybe a silver steer stuck in there somewhere.

He didn't need money. He needed a muzzle.

Dollar firm in early European trading

LONDON — The dollar firmed and the West German mark was especially weak in early European trading today, suggesting that central banks may again feel they have to intervene to try to stabilize exchange rates this week.

The dollar rose to 1.9130 marks at the opening in Frankfurt from 1.8915 at the London close on Friday. It was trading around 134 yen, only a little up against Japan's currency. The mark slipped sharply against the yen and other currencies.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 133.88 yen and 1.9133 West German marks.

Dealers saw a risk of dollar sales by the West German Bundesbank, perhaps aided by other central banks, to defend the mark, and there was speculation of further increases in Bundesbank interest rates to attract funds back into marks.

"The main focus is still on the dollar," said Ekkhart Hager, currency analyst at Chase Bank AG in Frankfurt, who believes the dollar could rise as high as 1.95 marks.

London stocks were mostly easier in this early trading today. Nervousness over the possibility of higher world and British interest rates continued to weigh on the market.

Tokyo stock prices opened the week lower in quiet trading, with most traders seemingly taking a summer siesta, brokers said.

Rebel ingenuity fills gaps in technology

By Douglas Grant Mine

GUAZAPA MOUNTAIN, El Salvador (AP) — Lalo, a bomb maker with one arm, pressed a whittled, foil-sheathed plug through a tube wired to a flashlight battery and tiny bulb. The bulb went on.

"Boom," Lalo said softly. "There goes your foot."

The switch is designed to be buried and activated by a soldier's footstep. It is one of dozens of devices leftist rebels have improvised to make up for a shortage of commercial weaponry.

Lalo, whose left arm was blown off by a mine, makes explosives from various mixtures of nitrogen-rich fertilizer, ground charcoal from the guarumo tree, powdered aluminum, ammonia, sulfur and sawdust. For shrapnel, Lalo uses nails, glass, even stones.

He and his assistant, Jorge, fashion their mines and mortar shells on this extinct volcano 15 miles north of San Salvador with the rudimentary tools of a traveling tinker.

"Everything we make is a copy of industrially manufactured weapons," Lalo said.

Five years ago, he lost his arm to the explosion of a homemade mine he was digging up for relocation.

"Every amorer makes two mistakes," he told an interviewer, stripping wire with his teeth: "The first, when he gets into this line of work; the second, when he gets creamed."

Details of government casualties are classified, but foreign military attaches say homemade mines wounded more soldiers than rifle fire in the 1980s.

The most common guerrilla mine is the "quita-pie," literally "foot-taker." It is designed to maim rather than kill, and its components cost about $2.

Congress voted in October to halve U.S. military aid to El Salvador, originally set at $85 million for the year.

While Defense Minister Rene Emilo Ponce lamented the effect on logistics and operations, Lalo and his colleagues were making bombs of what seemed little more than chewing gum, baling wire, sticks and spit.

More than $1 billion in U.S. military aid in the 1980s swelled the armed forces from 12,000 to 56,000 men and gave them sophisticated weapons, including jet fighter-bombers, helicopters and artillery.

Rebel ranks are believed to have about 7,000 full-time combatants and roughly the same number of militia fighters.

They have received some arms, mainly assault rifles and ammunition, from Cuba and Nicaragua since the civil war began in late 1979, but generally rely on the black market and their own ingenuity.

Included in the arsenal are 35-pound bombs made from refillable tanks of the propane gas Salvadoran workers use as cooking fuel. A dozen such bombs, launched like mortar rounds from barrel-sized pipes, were among projectiles that rained on the main air force base in an attack Oct. 17.

Guerrilla arms makers are scavengers who utilize what the enemy throws away or inadvertently bestows.

Bomb casings are made from ration cans discarded by army patrols. Lalo has extracted as much as 200 pounds of Tritonal high explosive from U.S.-supplied 500 lb. bombs that did not explode when dropped on the slopes of Guazapa.

In 1982-83, the rebels on Guazapa were decimated by a malaria epidemic. Pharmaceutical quinine was almost impossible to obtain because of government offensives.

The doctors extracted the alkaloid from the bark of the cinchona tree, mixed it with cornmeal and sugar and pressed it into pills. By early 1984, the disease was under control.

Agusto, one of the doctors, recalled operating with a razor blade and tweezers for lack of surgical implements. He learned to modify a disposable syringe for tracheotomies and used the severed fingers of rubber gloves to drain wounds of pus and blood.

Classes focus on everyday life

By Sarah S. Hays

TYLER (AP) — It may as well be called Lessons in Life 101.

Home economics education in today's public school has come a long way since the 1940s when girls were supposed to learn to be good housewives.

And, they say, it's the "best kept secret" in education.

Home economics, which concentrates on what the teachers call "life skills," reflects trends of modern living. In addition to cooking and sewing, home economics students now learn everything from how to balance a checkbook and apply for credit to the facts about genetics.

"When we first started, it was 'stitch and stir,' " Mrs. Boyd said. 'Home economics education prepared students to stay at home and be housewives. The homemaking teachers even went to students' homes to help them with their canning."

In a standard home economics curriculum, like Lee's, a student can choose from comprehensive home economics; individual and family life; parenting and child development; food science and nutrition; housing, design and furnishings; interior design; apparel; textiles and apparel design; and food production, management and services.

Under that same home economics umbrella falls Home Economics Cooperative Education, which give students the opportunity to actually work in the following fields: apparel and textiles production; child care and guidance; fashion design; food production, management and services; hospitality services; housing, home furnishings and equipment management, production and services; and institutional maintenance.

There also are vocational home economics-related programs for students who are mildly handicapped.

Today's home economics education is geared more toward successful balancing of home and career. There's no shame in using convenience foods and Singer sewing machines in a current home economics curriculum.

"Home economics now prepares students for the dual role of homemaker and wage-earner," Mrs. Boyd said. "Otherwise, we could still do everything from scratch."

"I don't know that many people who are just homemakers," Mrs. Larison added. "I would say 75 to 90 percent of women work now, at least part time."

"Everyone is going to be a homemaker," Mrs. Boyd said. "Everyone is going to have a home."

The need to teach concepts for healthy and responsible living — to which other segments of the community have just now awakened — was recognized long ago by home economics teachers.

Indictment names prime suspect in fatal mail-bombings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A reclusive Georgia businessman with a history of criminal charges was accused Thursday of mailing package bombs that killed a federal appellate judge and a Savannah civil rights leader.

Walter L. Moody Jr., 56, was accused of mailing bombs last December that exploded when they were opened by their recipients, Circuit Judge Robert S. Vance and Robert E. Robinson, a Savannah alderman and civil rights lawyer.

The bombs bore marked similarities to one that Moody was convicted of possessing in 1972, according to federal authorities.

The indictment, announced here by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh and FBI Director William Sessions, also accused Moody of mailing similar bombs to the Atlanta court where Vance sat and the Jacksonville, Fla., office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Those bombs were defused without causing any injuries.

The 70-count indictment returned by a federal grand jury in Atlanta also accused Moody of sending assassination threats to Vance and his colleagues on the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals and mailing a tear-gas bomb to the NAACP regional office in Atlanta.

Six of the charges, including murder of a federal judge, carry sentences of up to life imprisonment. He also was accused of transporting explosive material with the intent to kill and mailing the bombs with the intention to kill.

Thornburgh called the bombings acts that "strike at the heart of our American concept of the rule of law."

"Those who would seek to attack the integrity and sanctity of our legal system through violent behavior would undermine the very foundations of our democracy," the attorney general said.

The indictment capped a massive investigation conducted by the FBI, postal inspectors and other federal law enforcement agencies that involved a meticulous examination of millions of court documents, bomb fragments and other physical evidence.

Moody has been known to be a prime suspect in the case since February when FBI agents searched his home in Rex, Ga.

The FBI also searched the home and business of Robert Wayne O'Ferrell, an Enterprise, Ala., junk dealer who had written numerous letters to the 11th Circuit.

Thornburgh refused to comment when asked if the indictment meant that O'Ferrell had been cleared as a suspect. But the attorney general noted that the indictment charges that Moody acted alone.

Asked if he expected any more charges, Thornburgh said: "Not soon."

Defense attorney Bruce Harvey said he planned for Moody to plead innocent to the charges, "There's absolutely no question about that."

Vance died Dec. 16, 1989 after opening the parcel at his home in Mountainbrook, Ala. Two days later Robinson, an NAACP leader, was mortally wounded when he opened a package that had been sent to his law offices, the same day a bomb was found at the 11th Circuit courthouse in Atlanta.

The pipe bombs contained the same brand of powder and had improvised detonators made with the barrels of ball-point pens, according to the indictment.

Moody was also charged with sending a Dec. 21, 1989 letter to an Atlanta television anchorwoman threatening to kill more NAACP leaders.

The indictment also accused Moody of sending letters in August 1989 to the 11th Circuit and 14 television stations around the country threatening poisonous gas attacks on large population centers.

Neither Thornburgh nor Sessions would say whether the killings were racially motivated, although the FBI director had indicted earlier that race was a possible factor in the case.

Moody has been in federal custody since July when he and his wife, Susan, were indicted on charges of trying to suborn perjury and tamper with witnesses to induce a federal court to vacate his 1972 conviction.

Moody and his wife, who has petitioned for divorce, are scheduled to be tried Nov. 27.

Friends have described Moody as a loner. A psychiatric evaluation ordered since his indictment last summer concluded that between 1967 and 1988, "there may be reasonable cause to believe" he suffered from mental illness.

The 1972 conviction arose from charges that Moody made the bomb with the intention of sending it with an extortion note to an automobile dealer who had repossessed his car.

Moody was acquitted of manufacturing the bomb but found guilty of possessing the device, which exploded and seriously injured his first wife.

Pons ducks reporters at fusion review

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The University of Utah scientist who claimed to discover a cold fusion energy process made his first appearance in Utah in weeks Wednesday at the opening of a review his work by independent researchers.

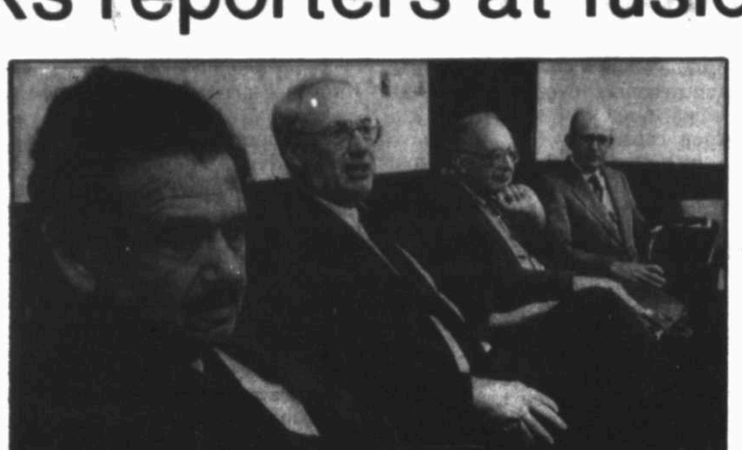

Electrochemist B. Stanley Pons ducked away from cameras while listening to the four-member review team's vows to conduct an unbiased review and keep open minds about his controversial experiments.

Pons left Utah several weeks ago, putting his Salt Lake City home up for sale and pulling his 7-year-old son out of school. Later reports placed him in France.

Pons dodged reporters Wednesday, and Fritz Will, director of the university's National Cold Fusion Institute, rebuffed reporters' questions about the scientist. Will would only say Pons was attending the meetings — which were closed to the public — and was expected to appear before the state Fusion Energy Advisory Council on Thursday.

The state council oversees spending for fusion research and was responsible for dispersing $5 million last year to start the fusion institute.

Pons and colleague Martin Fleischmann created a furor last month when they left Utah, apparently without making their destinations known to officials of the institute and the university. Fleischmann returned to his home in Tisbury, England, for medical treatment, and did not return for the review, Will said.

The episode cast yet another shadow over the research that was unveiled on March 23, 1989, when the two announced at a news conference they had achieved a sustained nuclear fusion reaction in a simple tabletop experiment that produced more energy in the form of heat that was used to run it.

Fusion long has been sought as a potential source of cheap and virtually inexhaustible energy.

But few scientists have been able to duplicate their work and many remain skeptical.

Researchers around the world have spent billions of dollars trying to reach that same energy surplus from hot fusion, the process that powers the sun and stars by combining, or fusing, two hydrogen atoms into a heavier helium atom.

Participants in Wednesday's closed-door session were required to sign a confidentiality agreement, officials said.

Dale F. Stein, a metallurgist and president of Michigan Technological University, promised a fair review of the work going on at the institute — even though he was a member of a national panel that recommended against providing federal funds for fusion research early on.

"I think that (Department of Energy) panel said there was reason to continue research" even though it did not approve funding the University of Utah's fusion research, he said. "I was very open and objective as a member of that panel."

Stein and the others said the results of the review will not be available until mid-December.

The other panel members are Stanley Bruckenstein, a professor of chemistry at State University of New York at Buffalo; Loren G. Helper, a chemist from Alberta, Canada; and Robert Adair, a professor of Physics at Yale University.

Will told the council last month that dozens of researchers in the United States, Japan, India and elsewhere not only had produced excess heat, but evidence of such nuclear fusion indicators as tritium, an isotope of hydrogen, and neutrons, uncharged particles.

Recently researchers from two laboratories — the Colorado School of Mines and the University of Hawaii — reported detecting positively charged atomic particles they said might be products of cold fusion reactions, according to Wednesday's Wall Street.

A palladium rod used in the Hawaii experiment that produced unexpected heat showed helium atoms that might have been produced in a fusion reaction.

Guard charged in studio blaze

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — A guard was arrested Wednesday for allegedly torching the historic Universal Studios backlot, gutting sets used for "Dick Tracy," "Back to the Future" and an unfinished Sylvester Stallone movie.

Michael J. Huston, 40, of Tujunga was booked for investigation of arson and held in lieu of $1 million bail, said sheriff's Deputy Rich Erickson.

"He was on duty when the fire started and after questioning he was arrested early today at the studio," Erickson said. Authorities refused to disclose a possible motive.

Huston is an employee of Burns International Security Services, a New Jersey firm contracted by Universal. He had been on the job one month, said Dan Slusser, general manager of Universal City Studios.

"We are all saddened as a result of this fire and arrest of one of our security officers," said Burns' Western States president, William Ewing.

Damage to the studio, visited by 5.1 million tourists a year, was expected to be in the millions of dollars, but Slusser said it would take days to make an assessment.

MCA Inc., Universal's parent company, said it believes the loss is fully covered by insurance.

Although rubble continued to smolder, the studio's popular tram tour went ahead as scheduled Wednesday morning, a day after the wind-driven fire.

Leaving promptly at 9:30 a.m., trams full of visitors toured the charred remains of the sets from such classic films as "The Sting," "To Kill a Mockingbird" and the "Back to the Future" series.

"The show must go on. The show will go on," said one tour driver.

NATION IN BRIEF

FBI arrests sect member

MIAMI (AP) — The powerful leader of a black sect was arrested Wednesday and charged with directing the slayings of 14 people, including "white devils" who were slain in initiation rites and whose ears were cut off.

A federal grand jury here indicted Yahweh ben Yahweh — "God, son of God" in Hebrew — and 16 followers of his secretive Miami-based Yahweh cult for allegedly using murder, fire bombings and extortion to build a business empire and keep followers in line.

"Any dissenter was subject to extreme violence, including murder, to maintain control of the organization," said U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen.

Yahweh, who claims to be the son of God, was arrested by heavily armed FBI agents early Wednesday in a New Orleans hotel. Three other sect members were arrested in Lafayette, La.

Seven Yahweh members were arrested in a pre-dawn raid by FBI and local law enforcement agents on the sect's "Temple of Love" in Miami's mostly black Liberty City section.

The Yahweh's attorney, Ellis Rubin, who has accused authorities of persecuting the group, said he was stunned by the raids because he had already indicated the Yahwehs would surrender after the long-expected indictment was handed up.

Jets to be withdrawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — All U.S. jet fighters based in the Philippines will be withdrawn by next September, the Pentagon announced Wednesday on the eve of a new round of negotiations on the future of American bases there.

The 48 aircraft will be removed from Clark Air Base along with more than 1,800 Air Force personnel, leaving a U.S. military airlift command unit, training units and special operations forces at Clark, the Pentagon said. Between 7,500 and 8,000 U.S. Air Force personnel currently are based at Clark.

The decision was conveyed to Philippine Foreign Secretary Raul S. Manglapus by Richard L. Armitage, the presidential special negotiator on U.S. basing arrangements in the Philippines, according to a statement issued by the Pentagon.

In Manila, Manglapus described the planned pullout as a "partial victory."

"It's their privilege to withdraw," Manglapus said. "It's certainly a step forward." He did not elaborate.

NASA sets launch date

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After months of delays, NASA will try to launch Atlantis next Thursday with a Pentagon spy satellite that reportedly will gather intelligence information in the Persian Gulf.

NASA, meanwhile, also reported Wednesday that a special investigative team found no pattern in a series of accidents involving shuttle equipment.

Atlantis was supposed to blast off in July with the spy satellite, but the shuttle was grounded by hydrogen leaks. During the grounding, the spacecraft reportedly was modified to spy on Iraqi forces.

Pictures analyzed

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Magellan spacecraft's pictures of Venus suggest immense volcanic eruptions once spewed gargantuan floods of lava that may have deluged more than half the planet, a NASA scientist said Wednesday.

"It seems to have happened all at once in the past, maybe 400 million years ago" as molten rock erupted from numerous cracks called vents on the Venusian surface, said geologist Steve Saunders, Magellan's chief scientist at Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Magellan uses radar to make pictures of cloud-covered Venus. The spacecraft was launched from space shuttle Atlantis in May 1989, went into orbit around Venus on Aug. 10 and formally started making maps and pictures of the planet on Sept. 15.

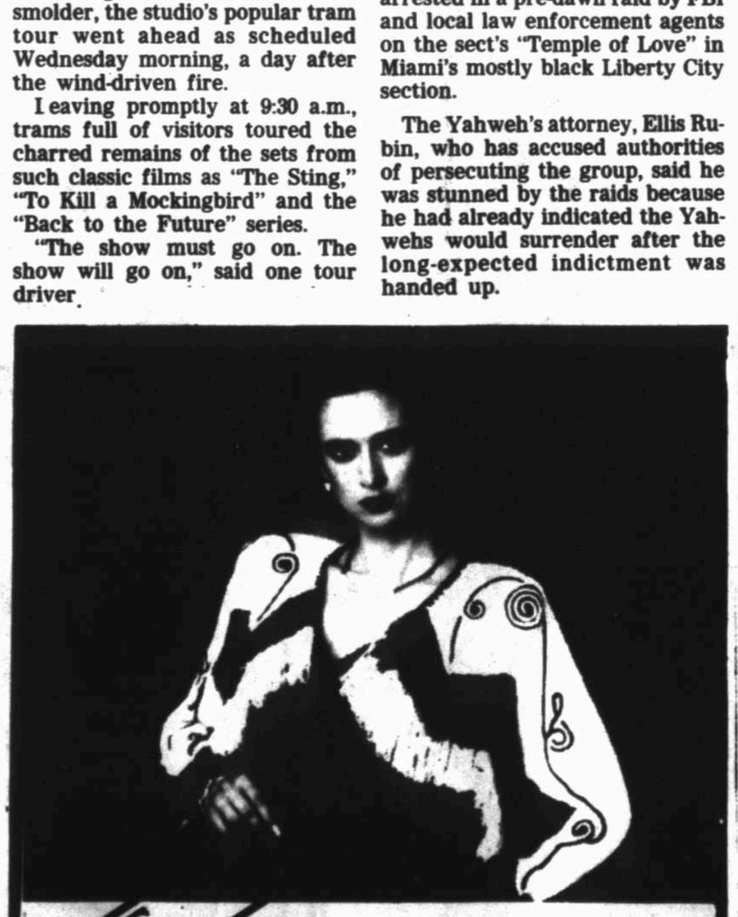

Mayor has heart attack

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Joe Smitherman, the seven-term mayor of Selma, underwent successful treatment Wednesday for a blocked coronary artery after suffering a heart attack, hospital officials said.

Smitherman was mayor during the 1965 civil rights marches and again had to deal with months of racial protests earlier this year over the firing of the city's first black school superintendent. He was admitted to University Hospital on Tuesday afternoon complaining of chest pains.

Marion Cunningham brings Fannie Farmer into the '90s

By Mary MacVean

NEW YORK (AP) — Turn to page 225 of the 13th edition of "The Fannie Farmer Cookbook" to learn how to truss a chicken, page 628 to bake a batch of brownies. Or just soak in the spirit of the book, which is only partly about food.

It also is about "an act of giving and receiving, because the experience at table is a communal sharing; talk begins to flow, feelings are expressed, and a sense of well-being takes over," Marion Cunningham writes in the 13th edition of Fannie Merritt Farmer's guide to the American kitchen.

A valuable cookbook also reflects its time, and the previous edition — Cunningham's first, published 11 years ago — already was losing its relevancy when she set out three years ago on the new edition.

"I tell you, things are different, really different. It was only looking recipe by recipe that I could see how dramatic our changes have been," she said in an interview in New York.

Testing every recipe in the 12th edition, Cunningham dropped 200 and added 325, for an appropriate total of 1,990. Fat was reduced when it worked, and recipes sometimes dropped when it didn't. There's no kippered herring in cream or crabmeat terrapin, for example.

There are new chapters on microwave cooking (which surely won't prompt any manufacturers to ask her to be a spokeswoman), outdoor cooking and vegetarian foods, such as zucchini pancakes and a winter vegetable cobbler that "will win any contest."

All sorts of ethnic ingredients are used. Raw fish is out, as is steak tartare. Salt generally is left up to the cook. And there are warnings about raw eggs and fish and other safety problems.

"Those were the issues that were very hard to reconcile," Cunningham said. "To act responsibly and not destroy the feeling that cooking and eating are ... well, certainly one of the better human endeavors."

While Farmer aimed "The Boston Cooking-School Cook Book," published in 1896, at families who had help in the kitchen, the newest edition of "The Fannie Farmer Cookbook" (Alfred A. Knopf, $24.95) is intended to capture the way ordinary people actually eat.

So along with the instructions for making pasta from scratch are recipes for a ham and cheese sandwich, for making popcorn, hotdogs and macaroni and cheese. Cunningham tells how to improve the flavor of canned broths, and offers suggestions for leftovers. "Everyone clamors" for the simple cheese spread in the appetizer chapter, she writes.

There is plenty of practical advice, too. Of olive oils, for example, she says, "Money does not always buy the best, and I have found the terms 'virgin' and 'extra virgin' not very meaningful."

Both inside covers have all sorts of nifty facts — things you've been told dozens of times but can't seem to keep straight, such as how to tell if an egg is stale and whether cream whips better cold or at room temperature.

Farmer would, Cunningham concluded, wholeheartedly embrace today's health movement. Cunningham, too, thinks we ought to know what we eat.

"But in concentrating so much on the negative aspects of eating, we are making ourselves overly fearful and we are missing the pleasure that a good meal provides," she writes. "Instead of stringent diets, eliminating almost all fats, all salt, all sugar from our diets, and bloating ourselves with high-fiber products, I believe that the best possible approach for the average person is to eat a wide variety of foods and to eat sensibly, in moderation."

While there is plenty of low-fat food, this is no diet book.

Along with the turkey patties and vegetable soups and green salads, there is a "carpetbag steak," a beef and oyster dish from the "improvident days" of the 19th century, and chicken fried steak served with milk gravy.

Cunningham delivers a storehouse of basic information — and a pep talk. Come on, now, just get up and go in the kitchen. Taste the food, experiment. It's fun, it's homey and it tastes good. Don't let your failures stop you.

"Cooking is a dandy way to solve a lot of problems," said Cunningham. Besides, she said, "It's harder to learn to drive a car."

Cunningham, 68, began the 12th edition of Fannie Farmer in 1974, with no writing experience and no famous name. She had been a full-time homemaker, and two years earlier had met the late American cooking icon James Beard.

"Jim Beard recommended me. I didn't think I had any qualifications," said Cunningham, sitting on a hotel bed with her legs drawn up under her, gray hair pulled straight back into a short, neat ponytail.

The choice made sense to Judith Jones, Cunningham's editor at Knopf.

"For one thing, she had worked with Beard and his classes on the West Coast. He thought she really typified the good home cook in America and had natural good taste, and that's just what Fannie Farmer needed," Jones said.

"It made me so happy to have something to focus on. I've really loved it," she said. "I loved it from the beginning."

Her pale blue eyes still express a little awe at her success more than a decade later, during which she also has written "The Fannie Farmer Baking Book" and "The Breakfast Book" and worked as a restaurant consultant.

Her husband, a man she'd known since kindergarten and who she says gave her the support and encouragement to become a professional, died three years ago. Their son and daughter are grown. So except for a yellow labrador named Rover and a cat, she lives alone and cooks for herself in Walnut Creek, Calif.

Besides Beard, she uses "Joy of Cooking" and the early American cookbooks she collects: "I turn to a lot of them, wonderful recipes, simple to make."

Like three-quarters of American families, she has a microwave. The "speedy, clean and silent" oven did not fare well under Cunningham's scrutiny, although she includes more than 50 recipes specifically for it.

"The microwave has promised a lot more than it can deliver," she said.

It was, she wrote, no faster than the stove for many of the vegetables she tested. Meat becomes "pallid and the texture is not appealing."

Lobster thermidor and newburg, for example, did not work with milk instead of cream, and with cream they stayed.

"People can read about them if they don't want to make them," she said.

FDA throws out 223 OTC drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration banned 223 ingredients in over-the-counter drugs Wednesday, saying manufacturers had offered no proof they were effective for problems they were supposed to treat.

The ingredients ranged from pine tar in dandruff fighters through dehydrated garlic in digestive aids to aspirin in medications for external use.

The FDA did not ban the ingredients entirely, just in certain uses. For example, aspirin may still be used in products for pain relief taken internally, because it has been shown to be effective pain reliever.

The over-the-counter drug industry said most of the ingredients already had been withdrawn, but some familiar drugstore and supermarket products still will be affected, the agency said.

The ban becomes effective in six months. The agency said none of the ingredients posed a safety problem in any of the banned uses.

Election results call for changes

The gubernatorial election in Texas is over — thank goodness! — and Ann Richards will be sworn in as governor. It was a hard-fought contest that was reported around the world as a prime example of dirty politics. Now it truly is time to put partisan politics behind and to get on with the task at hand.

Midland oilman and entrepreuner Clayton Williams spent more than $20 million attempting to win the governor's office, a quest that was derailed by his tendency to say the wrong thing — frequently.

Those political blunders hurt the Williams' campaign and confirmed one of the plain-spoken candidate's attractions: the fact that he wasn't viewed as one of the "insiders."

Following his defeat, Williams remarked, "Maybe I'm a little too open, maybe straightforward. If there's anything that we've proven, it's that I'm not a politician."

True enough, but the political system will suffer if one of the casualties of the 1990 governor's race is movement away from honesty and openness by candidates — even if it does cost them some support. Honesty in government is sorely needed.

Although Richards won the race, she cannot construe her margin of victory as a mandate for what she advocated during her campaign. In fact, she now must proceed with utmost care considering the fact that one out of two people who voted in the election cast their ballot for Williams or another gubernatorial candidate. She won the race, but the margin of victory was close.

To an extent, some votes cast for Richards and other democratic candidates were actually intended as opposition to the actions of President George Bush, a Republican, many political observers believe. Voting against the party in power in Washington, D.C., carried out at the state level has been a pattern political analysts have noted for years. This year it was particularly likely because of Bush's flip-flopping concerning taxation and the federal deficit, and other domestic issues.

State officials and voters in particular must be particularly concerned about the dissatisfaction evidenced by voters who didn't like either of the major party candidates or the overall direction of state or national government. The voter turnout for the Tuesday election nationwide was compared to that of the 1986 election and said to be the lowest turnout in 50 years. Obviously something must be done to bring the American voter back to the polls.

Judging from the Texas election, voters are concerned that too much money is being spent on political campaigns. Together, Williams and Richards spent $32 million running for governor. That is an obscene amount and the system must be changed to make elections more fair and less costly.

The campaign "season" is too long and legislators should take steps to move the primary much closer to the general election. That in itself will cut down the length of time candidates have to spend money and make them concentrate more on addressing the vital issues.

It's also obvious that the state electorate is evenly divided over whether government can resolve its problems or whether the private sector has the answers to our problems.

It will be a challenging term for Richards and the Texas Legislature, but the answers must be found and changes implemented to bring about greater participation by the electorate.

The way to start is to heal wounds created by this dirty governor's race. Williams pointed the way when, in speaking to his supporters on election night after results indicated he had lost, he noted Richards had won and congratulated her. His supporters booed, but he stopped them by telling them, "No, now that's not right."

Then he called on them to join Richards in working for a better Texas. That was a great gesture and exactly the step that is needed now to ease hard feelings.

LETTERS

Separate but Equal brings court date

The facts are simple, J.E. Barton (Letters, Oct. 29th). The Midland Independent School District operates under a consent decree which has its roots in the historic Brown vs. The Board of Education decision of 1954. This landmark decision basically states that the concept of "Separate but Equal" school facilities is unconstitutional. Further, by order of the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas, Midland-Odessa Division, Aug. 12, 1976, the court instructed the Midland Independent School District to "desegregate its elementary facilities."

The problems that were inherent in finding a way to desegregate schools in Midland still exist today. Very simply, you have through segregation laws established a "Black and Hispanic" community in east Midland, while those same laws established a "White" community in west Midland. The problem was and is how do you bring about integration without transporting children? Fourteen years have passed and patterns are basically the same. The causes for this are many, but it suffices to say that a community does not overcome 200 years of segregation in 14 years.

Most of the busing that you see in Midland has nothing to do with integration; those buses run because Texas provides transportation for students who live over two miles from their school. Riding the bus is not mandatory, you may transport you child if you choose.

If you know of a way that this community can provide an equal and quality education to the minority community of Midland without placing an undue burden on either one community or the other, let's hear it. However, if you are trying to return our children to segregated "Separate but Equal" facilities, we will see you in court.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

Thirty years ago, on Nov. 8, 1960, Massachusetts Senator John F. Kennedy defeated Vice President Richard M. Nixon in their quest for the White House.

On this date:

In 1793, the world-famous Louvre Museum in Paris opened its doors to the public for the first time.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

'Better dead than read as a noun'

Judge Crater Found, Vegged Out

'You ask about Marlin," George Bush wrote, kidding around earlier this year about his press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater. "He is a serious contender for the coveted Scowcroft Award. ... He needs to improve his record on sleeping in important meetings. The Scowcroft Award gives extra points for he/she who totally craters, eyes tightly closed, in the midst of meetings."

Safire

This citation from The New York Times was sent in by Elizabeth N. Tate of New Haven with a shocked paraphrase of Little Red Riding Hood: "Grammar, what big teeth you got!" It was tucked in a file labeled "virgule" for its replacement of one with he/she. The president's jocular note was cross-filed under "slobject," my code word for "sloppy use of object," because the president should have used him/her; in the phrase "for him/her who totally craters," the slashed pronoun is the object of the preposition "for," which requires a him or her, and is not the subject of the clause "who totally craters," which would lead the misuser into he or she. But my filing system flopped because I was looking for the presidential use of crater as a verb. Took hours to find, a loss of time I am amortizing with this paragraph on virgules and slobjects.

The crater hunt was inspired by this sentence in Clifford Irving's new novel, "Trial": "I've known enough liars so that one more won't crater me." (I would say this thriller makes a good read but recoil from that locution because every review now includes "a good read," "a terrific read" or "spiritually edifying but not much of a read." Here's a slogan to help you avoid reviewerese: "Better dead than read as a noun." I don't know if Irving's book makes any sort of read at all, but it's a far more satisfying courtroom drama than Scott Turow's second squeezing, and it includes slang verbs like crater.)

Our search begins in ancient Greece, where kerannynai meant "to mix"; from that root came crater, a mixing bowl in which wine and water were mixed by Greek partygoers who wanted wine on the rocks but didn't know how to freeze water. The bowl's shape interested speakers of English, who began using it in the early 17th century to describe the bowl-shaped depression at the top of a volcano, and about a century ago to describe the holes caused by meteorites crashing into other heavenly bodies.

That gives us the noun crater, which was verbified by scientists studying candlepower in 1884, the verb meaning "to form a crater or hollow," in "This arrangement is found to have given a better light than the solid rod, which is apt to 'crater' or become hollow in its burning end." But whence the slang verb to crater, now freely used by presidents and novelists?

My speculation is that to crater is an extension of the slang verb to crash, one sense of which is "to fall sound asleep." In his Dictionary of American Slang, Stuart Berg Flexner cited a 1973 usage from Family Circle magazine — "I heard about this place and hoped maybe I could crash here for a day or two" — and defined this intransitive crash as "to sleep or reside at a place, typically for a single night or just a few days without an invitation." Another sense was added by college students: "to pass out drunk," a synonym for zonk out, cork off, get lost on the sauce.

Thus, our search for Judge Crater (an obscure allusion to a New York jurist named Joseph Force Crater, whose disappearance in 1930 caused great media interest but remains unexplained) leads to this sense of the intransitive slang verb to crater: "to fall sound asleep," resulting in the presidential granting of the Scowcroft Award, a prize apparently drawn from a crisis-management occasion in which Brent Scowcroft, the national security adviser, did not impress his boss with a state of appropriate alertness.

In its transitive state (taking an object), as in Clifford Irving's "won't crater me," the verb can mean "destroy, devastate" or "cause to veg out."

GEORGE WILL

What next now that the line's been drawn?

WASHINGTON — When the Secretary of State stood in the Saudi Arabian sand and told American soldiers they were really at home because "Americans are at home wherever our principles are," an unenthralled soldier responded, "Let's do something or go."

Will

It will not suffice to say to the soldier that, like an ICBM in Wyoming or a battalion in Germany, the Desert Shield deployment is doing something — deterrence, containment. The Bush administration is risking an indispensable military asset, public opinion, because it says the goal in the Gulf is not just deterrence and containment — but then gives a garbled message about what the goal is.

Baker told the soldiers we must not make the sort of mistakes made "in the 1930s," but many of the soldiers hearing him do not remember Elvis, much less Mussolini.

Bush says, "I'm not trying to sound the tocsin of war" but "I've had it" with Saddam, who is more brutal than Hitler. Bush says, "We're prepared to give the sanctions time to work," but "sand is running through the glass. I don't think the status quo can go on forever." There is much room between three months and forever, and surely Bush must wait much longer.

When the embargo was imposed, the question was: Why will this embargo succeed when so many have failed? There are reasons for optimism. Iraq is dependent on a single export; Iraq's military machine depends on spare parts. But if the necessarily protracted process of economic attrition is really a strategy against Saddam rather than a stratagem to lull Americans while a war-fighting capability is assembled, then the embargo must be given much more time. Otherwise, an outbreak of war will be accompanied by a presidency-breaking outburst of cynicism.

Bush says that Iraq's aggression will be reversed, but that the Desert Shield deployment is "wholly defensive." But it cannot be that, if it is to be credible as an alternative to the embargo as a means of establishing the status quo ante (ante Aug. 2).

That reiterated goal precludes declaring every day a victory of containment and bringing some of Desert Shield home. To do so would involve defining victory merely as deterrence.

But Baker almost makes that our goal when he suggests U.S. participation in permanent "regional security structures," presumably to contain Saddam, as U.S. forces in NATO and Korea have been deterring aggression for decades.

The Vice President, saying he is repeating something Baker believes, says that even if Iraq withdraws unconditionally from Kuwait, "we would have to go beyond that" because Saddam cannot be allowed to keep the weapons he has (chemical and biological) or acquire those he desires (nuclear). Saddam, says Dan Quayle, is a murderer and a terrorist who is destroying a nation "and that cannot be tolerated."

Now, never mind that our new-found friend, Syria's Assad, is a mass murderer and a certified (by the U.S. government) terrorist who is devouring Lebanon. Quayle's principle makes the embargo and Desert Shield (punitive deterrence) merely the thin end of a large wedge — a global U.S. duty to punish aggression and impose certain kinds of arms control. If so, American military personnel are going to see much of the world.

And they should bring along the judiciary. Bush says he is not preparing the nation for war. But he is warning Saddam about war-crimes trials.

A "top official" tells the New York Times, "It's the budget mess all over again —flip-flops, a message out of control and nobody in charge." Another official says, "We seem to be zig-zagging because sometimes it's less a matter of a game plan and more a matter of the President's moods."

ART BUCHWALD

Power is scrambled eggs, blue flimsies

You hear a great deal about "power breakfasts," but most people don't know exactly what they are. The power breakfast is the essential meal now consumed by the business community. Without the wheeling and dealing that takes place over orange juice and scrambled eggs, all commerce in this nation would grind to a halt.

Buchwald

One of the most powerful places to hold such a breakfast, is the Regency Hotel on Park Avenue in New York City. You must have at least $30 million in your personal banking account before they will pour you a cup of coffee. Not long ago, I was sitting at a table and had an opportunity to observe a power breakfast in play.

Four men at the next table were all buttering their toast at the same time.

One man said to the others, "I will offer three slips of pink paper in exchange for two sheets of yellow paper."

"Are you crazy, Pete?" one of the other men shouted. "This deal is worth six slips of pink paper, and four blue flimsies."

Pete replied, "It might have been worth that a month ago, but the price of pink paper has gone up, and the price of yellow paper has hit a new low. But since the deal is so important to me, I will throw in a dozen pads of chartreuse unlined paper."

Another man joined in the conversation, "I can't accept that without talking to my lawyer." He stood up, walked over to the next table and spoke to a man writing figures on a legal pad. The man returned to his table and announced, "We don't want any chartreuse unlined paper. We got stuck with a bunch on our last transaction with Drexel Burnham, and we still haven't been able to offload it. We would really like a straightforward deal — purple memo-sized order blanks with pale green delivery receipts."

Everyone took a break while the waiter refilled the coffee cups. Then Pete said, "Gentlemen, I thought that when we met this morning, we had all come intending to negotiate in good faith. It's obvious that you are using this breakfast to gain the upper hand. I can go to any hotel dining room in New York and people will offer me twice as much yellow paper as I can get here. But I chose instead to hold the negotiations at the Regency because I prefer their croissants. At the same time, I am not going to compromise my principles, even if I have to pay for the breakfast."

The man who had consulted with his lawyer intervened, "Don't get all upset. We have to take care of our own interests at power breakfasts. Colored paper isn't what it used to be. Look at Donald Trump's paper; look at Mike Milken's paper; look at HUD's paper. The reason that you are stuck with pink paper is because nobody is crazy enough to give you yellow paper for it."

Pete said, "Would you be surprised if I told you that I am withdrawing my offer? I wouldn't give you any pink paper if you got down on your hands and knees and begged me."

"Nothing would surprise me," one of the men said.

"Every time you try to exchange some colored paper, you back out at the last minute when nobody will pay your price. If you don't trade us your pink paper, you are not going to have any yellow to pay off your notes to Chase. We're your last hope."

Pete answered, "OK, you've got me in a box. I'll give six pink sheets of paper for five yellow and that's my final offer."

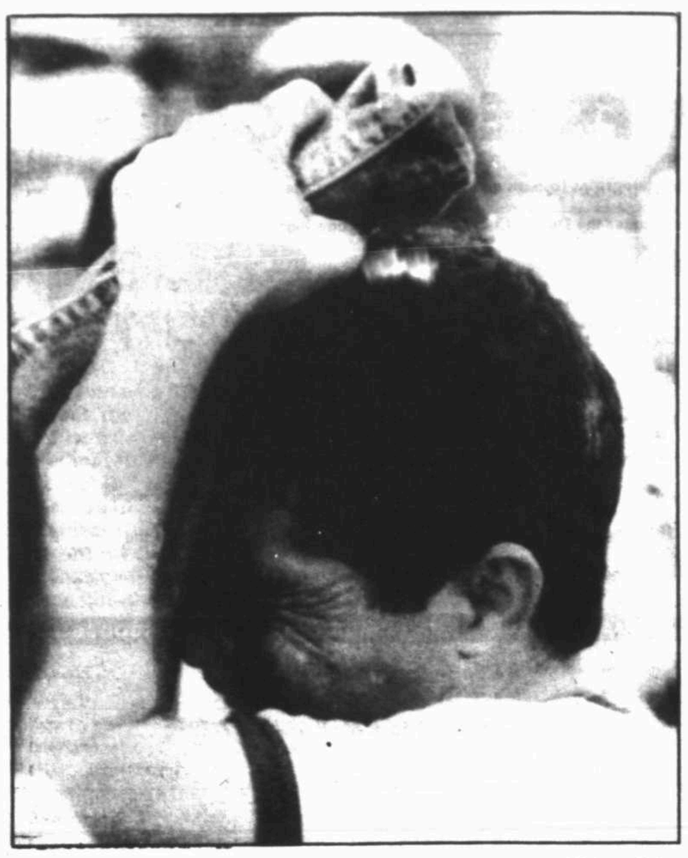

"How do we know that the paper is any good?" one of the other men inquired.

"Ask the waiter," Pete told him.

"Is his paper any good?" the man asked.

"It's OK," the waiter replied, "but the oatmeal is better."

A follower of militant Rabbi Meir Kahane shows emotion during Kahane's funeral procession through Jerusalem on Wednesday. Kahane, founder of the Jewish Defense League, was assassinated Monday in New York City.

Arabs attacked by followers of Rabbi Kahane

JERUSALEM (AP) — Hundreds of supporters of slain Rabbi Meir Kahane rampaged through Jerusalem on Wednesday, shouting "Death to Arabs!" as the anti-Arab crusader was buried.

The rioters attacked Arabs, smashed shop windows and clashed with police after breaking away from a funeral procession of thousands of Israelis, some of whom toted assault guns.

Police reported four Palestinians and two policemen were injured, and hospital officials said two of the Arab victims were stabbed. Israel radio said many more Arabs were injured in beatings. Jerusalem police said they arrested 13 rioters.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir appealed for restraint, saying in a statement on Israel radio that "those harming security and public order first of all harm Israel and assist our enemies."

Near the Givat Shaul cemetery where Kahane was buried, a civilian and two soldiers tried to help an Arab who lay unconscious. A crowd of Kahane supporters shouted: "He's dead, he's dead, the dirty Arab is dead!"

As the stricken man showed signs of life, the crowd tried to hold back an ambulance. Police forced them back.

While Israeli politicians of every stripe condemned Kahane's murder, a debate in Parliament still brought out mixed emotions over the Brooklyn-born rabbi who espoused violence and the mass expulsion of Arabs from territories ruled by Israel.

The establishment shunned him for his extreme anti-Arab views, but a chief rabbi and two Cabinet ministers came to the funeral. The Parliament that had outlawed him as a racist stood in silence for him on Tuesday.

Both officials and newspaper editorials warned Kahane's murder could worsen violence between Jews and Arabs.

"This is the danger engulfing us now — that Kahane's murder will spark a dizzying cycle of further murders," the daily Yedioth Ahronoth wrote.

"The fear is that this act of murder will intensify the racist tendencies of our two people," Police Minister Roni Milo said.

But he added a warning: "The state of Israel, as a democratic state, will defend its citizens and will cut off the hand of those who wish them ill."

Police brought in hundreds of reinforcements to prevent violence, but supporters of Kahane's anti-Arab Kach faction ran though the streets attacking Palestinian passers-by and shops employing Arab workers.

The angry Kach followers also stoned an Israeli television crew, beat the reporter with the crew, and tried to invade Israel TV headquarters. Hadassah Hospital spokeswoman Ruth Mekel said one policeman was hit on the head with a stone and the other was knocked off his horse.

One Arab ran through a shopping mall chased by several Kach loyalists who shouted "Death to terrorists!" A shopkeeper gave him refuge and police rescued him.

Kahane, who led the militant Jewish Defense League in New York, immigrated to Israel in 1971 and later founded Kach to spread his call for expelling all 2.5 million Palestinians from Israel and the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

He openly encouraged his supporters to retaliate for attacks on Jews by assaulting Arabs at random.

Police said more than 15,000 Israelis took part in the procession or the funeral at a yeshiva, or Jewish seminary, run by the Kach faction. Men in the black hats of Orthodox Jews mixed with Kach men wearing the movement's yellow T-shirt.

At the Jerusalem funeral, Kach activist Yekutiel Ben-Yaakov echoed the vow of revenge voiced by Kahane's supporters since his death.

"We will let our friend the submachine gun talk for us. We will let our friend the knife talk for us," Ben-Yaakov told the thousands jammed in the streets around the yeshiva.

The procession took three hours to wind along a major boulevard to the municipal cemetery.

Marchers carried blue-and-white Israeli flags and yellow banners emblazoned with the Kach symbol of a clenched fist set in the Jewish Star of David. Some supporters waved signs saying "Transfer," a euphemism for Kahane's call to expel the Palestinians.

Science Minister Yuval Neeman and Absorption Minister Rabbi Yitzhak Peretz came to the funeral, along with Israel's chief Sephardic rabbi, Mordechai Eliahu.

In his eulogy, Eliahu appealed to the mourners to leave vengeance to God.

Neeman, an ultra-rightist, was turned away amid shouts of "leftist, leftist!" He told Israel's army radio he had come to represent Shamir's government.

"I meant to eulogize Rabbi Meir Kahane, may God avenge his blood," Neeman said, using a traditional Jewish phrase in cases of violent death.

In Parliament, conservative lawmaker Hanan Porat of the National Religious Party recalled that it was traditional to refer to the dead as holy.

"All the same," he added, "I confess that it is not easy for me to talk about Rabbi Meir Kahane, of blessed memory, as holy. That's not easy for me."

WORLD

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Search teams and relief aid were dispatched to remote sections of southern Iran on Wednesday following a powerful earthquake that killed at least 22 villagers and left more than 12,000 homeless, Tehran radio reported.

The report, monitored in Nicosia, said most of the victims were children less than 12 years old who were sleeping when the quake struck Tuesday evening. The radio said 100 people were seriously injured.

The crisis further strains Iran's relief agencies, still reeling from a major quake in northern Iran in June which killed an estimated 50,000 people.

The temblor shook 18 villages around the city of Darab, about 600 miles southeast of Tehran, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said.

The U.S. Geological Survey said initial readings put the magnitude of the quake at 7.0 on the Richter scale. Iran's Geophysics Center of Tehran University said it measured 6.6.

The news agency's casualty toll was slightly lower than the radio report, suggesting the count was ongoing.

It said two of the villages, Qareh-No and Do-Borj-E Fourk, were razed. They had a combined population of more than 6,300 people.

Tehran television said the other villages sustained 60 percent to 90 percent damage, and that seven villages were without potable water.

The radio reported that schools, communication centers and police offices were flattened. Roads to the villages were blocked.

Rescuers worked round-the-clock searching for survivors, while helicopters flew in blankets and tents and carried those injured to hospitals, IRNA said.

A quake measuring 7.7 on the Richter scale struck northern Iran on June 21, killing an estimated 50,000 people and leaving 500,000 homeless.

President Hashemi Rafsanjani sent Vice President Hamid Mirzadeh to the region after allocating $13 million for disaster relief.

Rafsanjani, who visited the northern Gilan and Zanjan provinces, said only half of the homeless from the June quake have found permanent shelter. He urged officials to speed up reconstruction before temperatures plung below freezing.

No survivors found in crash of U.S. copter

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A U.S. Army transport helicopter carrying three crewmen crashed Wednesday night in the sea between Corinth and Athens, officials said. No survivors were found.

A spokesman for the Athens Region Control Center that monitors Greek air traffic said the UH-1 Huey helicopter vanished from radar screens at 6:20 p.m. in the Saronic Gulf near Corinth, about 47 miles west of Athens.

An officer of the Isthmia port police said rescue vessels found wreckage near the islet of Evreos in the Saronic Gulf.

"They found fragments, but there are no signs of survivors," he said by telephone, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The helicopter was based at Hellenikon U.S. Air Force base near Athens, the traffic control spokesman said, also speaking on condition of anonymity.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Mandela says West's reaction in Middle East 'hypocritical'

PARIS (AP) — Black nationalist Nelson Mandela on Wednesday accused the West of hypocrisy and prejudice in responding to Kuwait's occupation, saying Iraq is being singled out because its people are "brown-skinned."

Mandela, deputy president of the African National Congress, said Western governments had made no objections when U.S. forces invaded Grenada or Panama and had tolerated the Israeli occupation of Arab territory.

"But now, the whole of the West is screaming and sending armies" because of Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, Mandela said.

He emphasized that he did not condone Iraq's actions and expressed hope the confrontation could be solved peacefully.

Mandela, however, suggested that Iraq was being treated differently because its people were "brown-skinned."

During his international tours to raise support for his organization, Mandela has generally avoided comments apt to stir controversy on matters unrelated to his anti-apartheid struggle.

However, while in the United States earlier this year, he praised Cuban leader Fidel Castro for his support and expressed approval for Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The comments upset many Americans.

In Paris on Wednesday, Mandela also said he had received a positive response from President Francois Mitterrand to his request that France help finance housing, jobs and education for ANC members and their families as they resume their lives in South Africa after exile or imprisonment. The ANC is the leading South African group opposing the white-led government of that country.

Speaking to reporters after the talks, he declined to single out France for criticism in regard to the Persian Gulf crisis. But he said: "We reject the hypocrisy of the West."

France has deployed 13,000 soldiers in the Persian Gulf region as part of the multinational force. More than 25 countries, including the United States, have sent troops there to counter Iraq.

Mandela said he is not worried that South Africa might be pushed out of the world spotlight because of the crisis and the gradual dismantling of apartheid, South African's system of racial separation.

He said the leaders he met during his trip responded positively to his appeal for aid, although he declined to give details.

Baker to seek Soviets' support for use of force

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III turned to the Soviet Union on Wednesday to support sterner measures against Iraq as the Bush administration acknowledged a worldwide economic boycott was inadequate to force Saddam Hussein's invaders out of Kuwait.

At the top of Baker's agenda is determining if President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who has strongly urged that a diplomatic solution to the crisis be sought, would support a U.N. resolution authorizing the use of force.

Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen told Baker on Tuesday in Cairo that Beijing would not block such a resolution. However, the Chinese minister stressed his government's preference for a political settlement.

Baker needs at least as much from Gorbachev, whom he sees at the Kremlin on Thursday, before the United States makes its move in the Security Council for a resolution authorizing force and another demanding Iraq permit the resupply of the beleaguered U.S. and British embassies in Kuwait, the only two still defying Iraq's order to shut down.

After more than three months of a trade cutoff and other sanctions, the Iraqi president has not budged in his determination to hold on to Kuwait as an annexed province.

President Bush and Baker had expressed confidence that once the sanctions bit, the Iraqi leader would have to reassess.

But a senior U.S. official who flew here with Baker from Turkey acknowledged that, despite a battery of 10 Council resolutions, that point had not yet been reached. Among them is a demand Saddam release his grip on Kuwait, an oil-rich emirate at the northern tip of the Persian Gulf.

"The sanctions are having an effect," he said. "We've never disputed that. I think the question is are the sanctions yet having an effect that would alter Saddam's political calculus, and lead him to withdraw peacefully and otherwise fully implement the resolutions. We're obviously not yet to that point."

As he left Ankara, Baker said, "We would all like to see a peaceful, diplomatic, political solution to this problem. At the same time, it is the view of our president and the United States that we cannot rule out the use of force."

One step Baker took in Cairo was to assure Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak of U.S. logistical support to help get the 14,000 Egyptian troops in Saudi Arabia into combat if there was a war.

Library seeks donations for expansion

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

That's what friends are for.

The Friends of the Library are busy pounding the pavement this month in search of donations for the library addition.

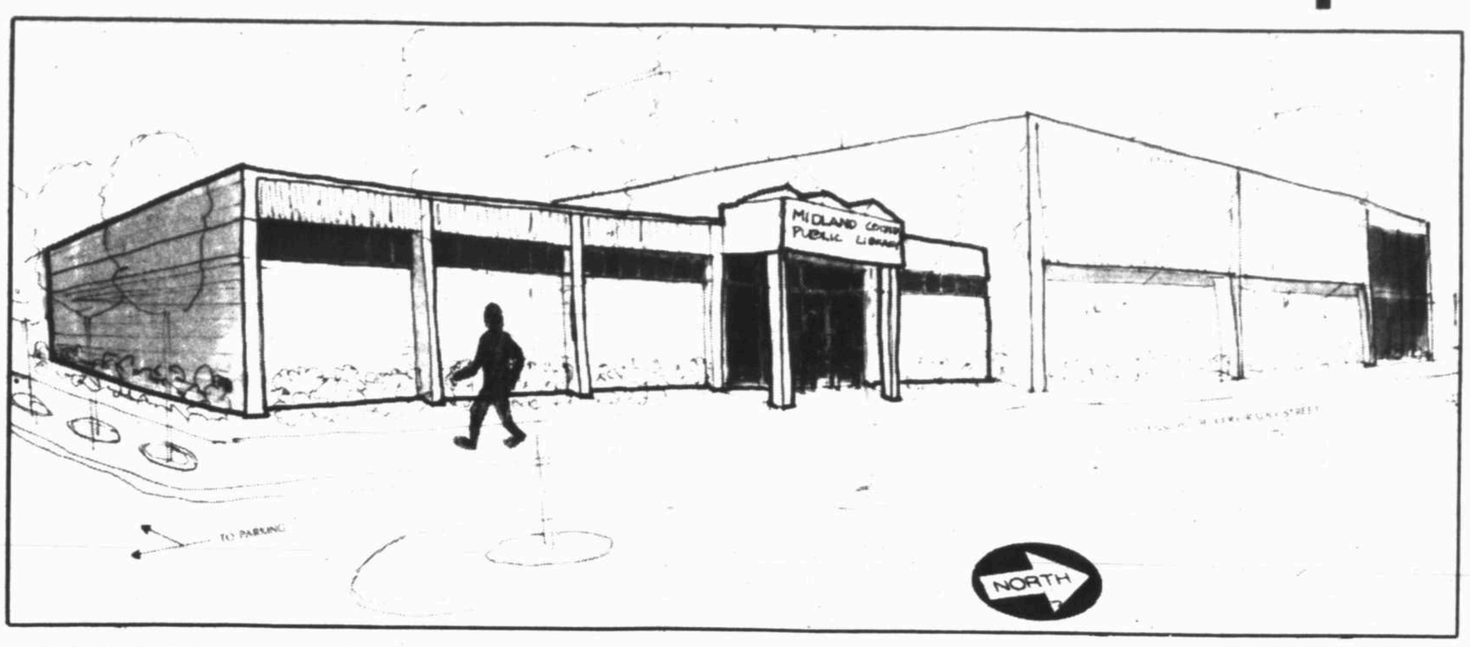

While certificates of obligation will pay for the majority of the $1.75 million cost of the 20,000 square-foot addition, the Friends and the Library Advisory Board must come up with $300,000 in gifts to capture an Abell-Hanger Foundation matching grant for the project.

"We started this week and we'd like everyone to participate," said Max Perry, chairman of the Friends' fund-raising committee. "We'll take everything from larger gifts to any amount someone can give.

"Regardless of the size of the gift, we'll put the donor's name in a bound book to be kept in the library."

If anyone wants to donate $300,000, Perry said the Friends would consider naming the addition after the individual.

The campaign has already netted about $18,000, including a $10,000 check from an anonymous donor, he said.

A $1.25 million county library addition and renovation project, rendered above, should be nearing completion in Sept. 1992. The Abell-Hanger Foundation has proposed a $300,000 matching grant to help pay for the upgrade.

"We'd like to have the money part done by the first of the year," Perry said. "We'd like to go ahead so we can start the building."

Perry said the project is three months ahead of schedule because no bond election was necessary to raise the bulk of the capital.

It has $1.15 million in the bank from the county's August sale of certificates of obligation, debt instruments similar to bonds that do not require an election.

When the commissioners approved the expansion, Precinct 2 Commissioner Guy McCrary said the certificates would not cause an increased tax burden because they would replace a debt for jail renovations that was retired.

At the July 23 commissioners' meeting, Abell-Hanger Foundation Executive Director David Smith proposed a $300,000 matching fund drive: if the community could raise $300,000 for the library addition by June 30, 1991, the foundation would match it.

"This is an opportunity to bring the best of the public and private sector together," Smith said. "Our intention with this challenge grant is to hopefully stimulate others to donate and take the burden off the taxpayers."

Perry said subcommittees of the fund-raising committee are targeting specific groups, including corporations, foundations, businesses and social organizations for gifts.

"We're doing this on a person-to-person basis," Perry said. "We feel like we can get the gifts without a paid fund-raiser or mail-outs.

"I think it will be successful."

The Friends and the advisory board have formed a construction committee that is not yet active, pending the completion of fund raising. Capital must be in hand before the additional land required can be purchased and an architect and contractor hired, Perry said.

The plan calls for a single-story addition to the south of the library, where the current parking lot is. The main entrance will face

Lawyers' project renders a service

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Attorneys, often denigrated as greedy and mercenary, will be the source this month of a monetary windfall for some of Midland's hunger relief agencies.

Russell Malm, chairman of the Midland County Young Lawyers Association's hunger relief project, said his organization will distribute about $3,000 to local charities next week.

The association solicited donations from members of the Midland County Bar Association in October, Malm said, and the results so far have been better than expected.

"So many of the people we were requesting money from were already making contributions to the United Way," Malm said. "That makes the amount of money we got quite impressive, I think."

The $3,000 is more than double the $1,400 raised locally two years ago, the last time the Midland Young Lawyers Association took part in the project.

"Our intent is to keep this as an ongoing project of the association," Malm said.

The project involved sending request letters to local lawyers, who were asked to donate the value of an hour of their time to the relief agencies of their choice.

"We don't want to try to say that any one organization is better or more worthy than any of the others," Malm said.

Agencies receiving project money include the Salvation Army, the Area Methodist Outreach Service, the St. Vincent De Paul Society, Community & Senior Services of Midland Inc., the Baptist Crisis Center, Casa De Amigos Community Center, and the Permian Basin Food Bank.

Dolly Neff, Permian Basin Food Bank executive director, said monetary donations from groups such as the Young Lawyers Association are vital to the her agency's operation.

"To put it simply, it costs me 22 cents a pound to issue food," she said. "Agencies (served by the food bank) help me with 12 cents a pound. I have to make the other 10 cents a pound in begging and from local foundations."

Flood victims in need of aid

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

When Alex Urbina took three tons of food, blankets and medical supplies to Chihuahua City, Mexico, last week, he was unprepared for the suffering he found there.

More than a month after a flood ravaged Northern Chihuahua, the stench of death still lingers in the hardest hit areas, Urbina said.

At least 50 people drowned and more than 200 are missing, presumed dead, in the disaster that made 1,500 families homeless.

"The people who were hurt by the flood were poor to begin with," he said. "They had cardboard houses, now they don't even have that. They're even poorer."

Urbina, a Midland Memorial Hospital instruments technician, collected a good assortment of emergency supplies from friends, hospital staffers and social service agencies in Midland.

He and two volunteers, Rick Cauble and Charles Smith, drove the cargo to Chihuahua on Oct. 26.

No relief for Mojo

■ Permian's head coach schedules press conference today.

AUSTIN (AP) — In a decision that came as no surprise, the 3rd Court of Appeals Wednesday officially rejected a plea by the Odessa Permian football coaching staff for relief from a judge's ruling that barred the defending Class 5A champions from this year's playoffs.

Jerry Treece, who represents 12 Permian coaches in their suit against the University Interscholastic League, told the Reporter-Telegram Monday that the appeals court had declined to rehear his motion for a temporary injunction that would have permitted Permian to play.

The head football coach of Permian High School, Tam Hollingshead, has scheduled a press conference for 11:00 a.m. today at the high school in Odessa.

"The court basically told us to go back and try our lawsuit in regular due course. That means there won't be any further attempt to get an injunction. What we will do is sue the UIL for damages," Treece said.

Couple feel pull of West Texas — across the Atlantic

RANKIN — The "country girl" and her dandy man took an autumn trip to a far-away land, enjoyed the sights, the mountains, the castles, the greenery, the sky, the hills and dales, the rivers and lochs, and, especially, the people — a friendly sort, those Scots.

Todd

"It's gorgeous down in the country," said the gal, Peggy Sue Garner.

Unlike her beau-like husband, Jack Garner, she favored the Scotsmen in their tartan kilts: strolling, blowing their bagpipes, beating their drums, and playing "Amazing Grace."

"I liked the men in their kilts," smiled the judge. "I'm just teasing. But they wear them a lot. They wear them to church. And I can attest to one thing: They do wear something under their kilts."

Her man, that guy named Jack, took in those scenes and sights, too. But mostly, he liked the sheep, particularly the mountain critters.

"He fell in love with it (Scotland) because of the sheep — different breeds of sheep," said Mrs. Garner, the "country girl" who is the Upton County judge with an old-fashioned Texas drawl. It's a mix of East and West — Texas-style.

"My dad (H.H. Dossey) tried to farm in East Texas," she recalled, "but never could make it go, so he came to the oil fields of West Texas" in 1937.

Jack and Peggy Sue had been to the British Isles and across the Channel into Europe before their 1990 trip.

But this one was special. And it wasn't so much because of their seeing the queen, the queen mother and Prince Charles in Rolls-Royce motorcars up in Scotland or because of their sailing the Loch Ness in search of the legendary monster.

But they went back because of the sheep.

"His dad (John Willis Garner) was a pioneer rancher who helped organize Upton County" back in 1910, served as sheriff and county commissioner, operated a big horse ranch but never claimed any kinship to another Texan, John Nance "Cactus Jack" Garner, who served as United States vice president under President Franklin Delano Roosevelt before Harry S. Truman came along.

"If John Nance Garner ever made president, he would claim kin to him," Mrs. Garner said of her father-in-law. "But as long as he was vice president, he wouldn't go to the trouble."

Jack Garner, who has put in 43 years with Peggy Sue and with Gulf Oil Co. and Chevron and who most recently toiled as gang pusher in the McElroy Oil Field, is getting his retirement career lined up even more with West Texas sheep and with his penchant for Scottish sheep.

In their travels up and down the British Isles, the Garner couple were most impressed with the neighborliness of the folks.

"They were friendly, great people — the Scots," said the judge.

"Jack and I never did find any unfriendly people," she said. "Of course, we'd go in smiling."

After their recent sojourn abroad, Jack and Peggy Sue were ready to return to the States.

"We had a great time, but we were chomping at the bit to get back home," Mrs. Garner said.

"Here we were amid the beautiful mountains, the lochs — the lakes — and the rivers," she reflected, "and we looked forward to going back to the mesas, the cactus, and the rattlesnakes of Upton County."

And it all seemed to make sense.

PROJECT: Lawyers' group distributes $3,000 next week

(From 1B)

She said the Young Lawyers Association also has been involved in the food bank's Hunters for Hunger project, in which hunters donate game for distribution to hunger relief agencies.

Malm said his organization's interest in hunger relief stems from the efforts of two Austin attorneys who started a prototype hunger relief fund-raising project in 1985.

"They really saw that there are so many people out there going hungry and that something needed to be done about it," Malm said.

Texas Young Lawyers Association officials learned of the Austin attorneys' efforts and decided to implement a similar project among association members about four years ago, Malm said.

Lubbock attorney Jim Hund, chairman of the statewide Young Lawyers Association Hunger Relief Committee, said he did not yet know how much money the project had raised this year. However, he said about $108,000 was collected in last year's fund drive.

'To put it simply, it costs me 22 cents a pound to issue food. Agencies help me with 12 cents a pound. I have to make the other 10 cents a pound in begging and from local foundations.'

— Dolly Neff, executive director, Permian Basin Food Bank

He said most of the state's Young Lawyers Association chapters — which have about 20,000 members — are taking part in the project. Abilene and Amarillo are not participating, he said.

The state association pays for all mailing and photocopying fees for local letter-writing campaigns, Hund said, so 100 percent of locally raised money goes to the organizations for which it is designated.

MC's spring registration next week

Staff Report

The early registration period lasts slightly less than three weeks, closing on Friday, Nov. 30.

"This registration period is mainly for those who are currently enrolled at Midland College, plus transferring students and those who are exempt from TASP," said C.C. Dakil, dean of students.

Registration, for the first time, will be handled in the new Student Services area which is located in the northwest portion of the Student Center. All Student Services were moved to this area recently.

Students now enrolled have received information about enrolling by telephone, along with a special number to call for this service. Those registering by telephone must pay their tuition and fees within five working days or they will be deleted from course rolls.

Those receiving financial aid, scholarships, or transfer students with transcripts must report in person to the Student Services area.

First time students who have taken TASP or Pre-Tasp exams also must report in person.

"This early registration allows students to complete all their entrance or re-registration paperwork, select classes with meeting times, and pay for fees at this time. No other action is required," Dakil explained.

Registration hours are 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday for the entire period. The college will not register during the Thanksgiving holidays.

An alphabetical system for early registration is being used.

Students or prospective students should report for registration in this order: last names beginning with F through L on Monday, Nov. 12; A-E on Tuesday, Nov. 13; S-Z on Wednesday, Nov. 14; M-R on Thursday, Nov. 15; and F-L on Friday, Nov. 16.

For the remainder of the registration period, the order will be: A-E on Nov. 19, S-Z on Nov. 20, M-R on Nov. 26, F-L on Nov. 27, A-E on Nov. 28, S-Z on Nov. 29, and M-R on Nov. 30.

Regular registration will be held only on Wednesday, Jan. 9. Spring semester classes begin on Monday, Jan. 14.

Persons who are not TASP-exempt must register in person. Bulletins listing registration procedures as well as classes are available in the Student Services area and at banks in Midland.

Information regarding spring registraion may be obtained by calling 685-4501. It also is outlined on Midland College's Cityline information service 24 hours per day by calling 560-2400, extension 1835.

APPEAL: Coach to talk to press today

(From 1B)

"We've got to get a case that defines the role of the UIL and what they can do to public school employees. Since every other case has been a bang-bang deal, nobody has had a chance to determine this," the Houston lawyer said.

But the Permian coach said all legal avenues have been explored.

"We've exhausted all our legal avenues. We're going to go on with the healing process," Hollingshead said.

The Panthers were declared ineligible by the UIL, which said the school violated its rules by holding practice before Aug. 20.

Permian coaches filed a lawsuit Sept. 28 in an effort to restore the school's eligibility this season and also to lift penalties imposed by the UIL against the head coach and three assistants.

State District Judge Peter Lowry of Austin upheld the UIL decision, ruling that Permian was ineligible.

AID: 1 trip not enough

(From 1B)

"We went to the hardest hit areas, the situation is terrible," Urbina said. "The smell of decomposing bodies under the mud is everywhere.

"Our supplies were not enough, the people are in great need."

He said the Mexican government and social service agencies are doing what they can to help, but have limited resources.

Ecce Iei Mendoza, the Midland consul of Mexico, said the floods were caused by a tornado and torrential rains, which threatened to burst dams in Chihuahua City. A decision to let water out of the dams aggravated the flooding, he said.

"Hundreds of families were left without houses and possessions," Mendoza said. "The federal and state government has been working hard to help."

He said many local Mexican nationals and Mexican-Americans had contributed to relief agencies for the flood victims because Chihuahua is their home state.

Urbina originally came from Chihuahua City and his brother is still there, so the disaster is personal to him.

Because physicians, pharmacists and individuals are still donating supplies, Urbina is continuing to collect them and hopes to take another load to Mexico soon.

This time, however, he wants to work with an established organization, perhaps the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce or a social agency.

"The biggest problem I had in taking the supplies was that I was a private citizen," he said, adding that he was delayed at the border while officials checked his papers.

The main library will be renovated after the addition is finished and more parking also will be added. The addition and renovation construction will cost $1.25 million. Land acquisition will run about $300,000 and architectural consulting and contingency fees will cost $100,000 each.

Perry said the library hoped to complete the project by September 1992.

He said anyone who visits the library knows how crowded it is and how much it needs the new space.

"There's no space for a reading room on the first floor," he said. "The librarians have to pull a book from the shelves every time they add a new one."

They're going once, twice, gone at Decatur market

By Melody Ryall

DECATUR (AP) — The wheels of trailers upset dust as they roll. Gates open and bang closed as men unload cattle, and potential buyers wind through the day's crowd to take seats in the arena.

"To see if you can get them (the cattle) in and out, get all they're worth, and make both sides happy ... it's a challenge," said Wayne May, owner of the Decatur Livestock Market.

May and his wife, Betty Lou, opened the market, located on Farm Road 51 North, in August.

He says he has been asked why he opened his business in Decatur when another auction is less than 30 miles away in Bridgeport.

A survey of Wise, Tarrant, Jack, Parker and Denton counties showed that farms and ranches in the Wise County area have a 95 percent calving rate, May said. "Eighty percent of our cattle come from Wise County."

And Decatur is easily accessible to people from Denton, Tarrant and Jack counties, he said.

'Every little town has a Dairy Queen. We thought every town ought to have an auction.'

— Wayne May, owner, Decatur Livestock Market

Besides, "every little town has a Dairy Queen. We thought every town ought to have an auction," May said.

Response to his new market has been favorable, May said.

May got his start in the livestock trade in 1955 when he was 14. "I worked in the back and brought up (unloaded) cattle."

He said he listened to auctioneers as he worked, and eventually progressed to auctioneering through a series of mishaps.

"One (auctioneer) got a bug in this throat one day and couldn't talk ... and he got me up and whispered 'Get up here and do it,' " May said, and he filled in until the owner found someone else.

Then on a day when he was covered with mud, sweat and general grime from unloading cattle, the owner again asked him to fill in for an auctioneer. May said the auctioneer showed up drunk and passed out and no one could revive him or find a replacement.

"I sold for about six or seven hours until I finished the sale," May recalled.

Later the owner approached him about doing it full-time. "You're not very good, but you're not old enough to have very many bad habits," May said the man told him.

By age 18 he was doing auctions six days a week, and continued at that pace for eight years.

May later became owner of a livestock market in Llano. He owned five livestock markets over the years, but the Decatur market is the first he has built.

The Decatur market has a feature May says is unique to Texas sales — electronic scales that weigh an animal when it steps into the ring.

The weigh master pushes a button that weighs an animal 15 to 16 times in rapid succession and an average weight is displayed on a television monitor above the ring, he said.

The electronic scales are designed to be tamper proof, he said.

The market also has a double unloading area that people seem to like, May said.

May said workers are building pens to accommodate the average size herd brought in. "Most of the people here have from 10 to 50 head," he said.

The key to managing a livestock market is knowing the buyers, he said.

"You need to know the buyers from every area. We try to call everyone of them the night before the sale and give them a rundown of what we have."

He said the livestock business is hard work, but rewarding.

"The auction business kind of gets in your blood."

INDICT: Petty to prosecute

(From 1B)

Rhonda Barnett, who is no longer employed by the district attorney's office, is accused of misapplying money that she was holding in trust for a child.

On June 5, 1989, according to the indictment, Ms. Barnett intentionally misapplied approximately $20,000 "in a manner which involved considerable risk" of loss.

Ralph Petty, a Midland County assistant district attorney assigned as a special prosecutor in the case, said Ms. Barnett was working for the Ector County District Attorney's Office when the alleged offense occurred.

Petty would not disclose details of the case, which he said has been investigated by himself, the grand jury, and the Texas Rangers.

Petty said a warrant has been issued for Ms. Barnett's arrest and added that her bond has been set at $5,000.

"I expect that she will...turn herself in to the sheriff of Ector County," Petty said.

If convicted, Ms. Barnett faces from two to 10 years in prison and a maximum fine of $10,000.

Man jailed for illegal possession of gun

A Midland man was arrested Tuesday and charged with possession of a prohibited weapon after police found a sawed-off shotgun in the man's pickup, police said.

Micheal Lee Goodale, 18, was jailed and bond set at $2,500 by Justice of the Peace R.H. Pine.

Goodale was arrested in the 2200 block of Tarleton Street when a school security guard contacted police on another complaint and was advised that something was hidden under the seat of Goodale's truck seat.

A 12 gauge shotgun with a short barrel and cut-off stock was recovered.

Midland club hosts Cajun zydeco band

The group played the New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival 1990, the Festival International de Louisiane 1990, the SXSW Music Conference 1989 and 1990 in Austin and Aqua Fest in Austin in 1989.

Production doubles

About 7 billion plastic soda bottles were produced in 1989, double the amount of 1980.

OPTIMIST YOUTH APPRECIATION

OPTIMIST YOUTH APPRECIATION WEEK.

WE SALUTE THE YOUTH OF OUR COMMUNITY

Optimist Clubs of Midland have joined together to honor our young citizens for their outstanding service to the community. The Youth Appreciation Week is for the recognition of those 95% of our young people who are following the "juvenile decency" road to adulthood.

For the past Thirty-six years, Optimist clubs nationwide have set aside the second week of November to pay tribute to the vast majority of youth often overlooked and unrecognized.

On November 8, 1990, at 7:00 p.m., in the Midland Community Center, the Optimist Clubs of Midland will sponsor a banquet to honor young people who will represent schools and organizations which provide learning experiences of good citizenship for our youth. Parents and friends are invited to attend the banquet along with the leaders of our community to honor these young people.

- Midland Optimist - Jackie Swanner
- West Side Optimist - Richard Sexton

Ex-priest posts bail

HOUSTON (AP) — A former priest released on $50,000 bond returned here to await trial in Grimes County on sexual assault charges that were filed in connection with testimony he gave during a trial involving the Catholic Church.

Fernando Noe Guzman, 39, posted bond and was released from jail Tuesday. He had surrendered to authorities in Navasota on Monday, the day a four-count indictment against him was unsealed.

The former priest was the focus of a recent Houston trial concerning a $7 million lawsuit a former church secretary filed against the Galveston-Houston Catholic Diocese.

Debbie McCorvey, who once worked at the Galena Park Church where Guzman had been assigned, claimed Guzman forced her into a lengthy sexual relationship three years ago.

She sued the church, claiming it knew about Guzman's sexual history and should have intervened. Last Friday, a jury ruled in favor of the diocese.

During the trial, Guzman admitted he had engaged in sex twice with a 14-year-old girl and said a social worker had caught and stopped them another time in 1984.

Grimes County District Attorney David Barron has said he began investigating the case after he read newspaper accounts about Guzman's testimony.

"It was covered up by the church," Barron said. "He was transferred and the church never told anyone about it."

Guzman's attorney, Candelario Elizondo, contends there may be a problem with the statue of limitations in the case. The statute of limitations on sexual assault of a child was extended in 1987 from five years to 10, and under the old law Guzman's case would not now be prosecutable.

But Barron said he believes the new law is retroactive.

Supreme Court turns back Lone Star appeal

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Supreme Court turned back a move by Lone Star Greyhound Park to continue its court fight following the Texas Racing Commission's decision to reopen the application process for a Galveston County dog racing track.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday denied Lone Star's appeal of a decision by the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin. The decision refused Lone Star's bid for more time to file an appeal of a state district court ruling last April.

The four losing applicants filed a lawsuit to block Lone Star. State District Judge Pete Lowry of Austin ruled he could not decide the matter because the Racing Commission hadn't given Lone Star final approval.

Lawyers for Lone Star had 30 days to appeal Lowry's decision but didn't because of a miscommunication, according to an affidavit by several Lone Star officials.

But the 3rd Court said Lone Star deliberately waited beyond the 30-day period. The court noted that Lone Star didn't file its request for an extension of time until after the Racing Commission ruled against the group.

Gas.
It's A Natural For Reliability.

America's reserves of natural gas are vast. Unlike oil, which increasingly comes from foreign sources, virtually all of our natural gas is produced right here in North America.

From an environmental standpoint, gas is the cleanest burning of all fossil fuels. Increased use of gas can help reduce atmospheric pollution such as acid rain. So, gas can be relied upon to help clean up the environment.

What's more, gas is a reliable way to save money on heating your home and providing other forms of household energy. For example, over five years a gas water heater saves on average, hundreds of dollars in energy costs. In addition, natural gas heats water faster than electricity.

Finally, gas is always readily available. Think about it. When is the last time your natural gas went off?

Gas. For cleanliness and cost-efficiency, it's a natural for reliability.

Dallas-Oak Cliff split runs deep

By Jay Jorden

DALLAS (AP) — It could be a tale of two cities.

One, Dallas, is the eighth largest in the country.

The other would absorb about half Dallas' land and almost one-third of its population into a new city called Oak Cliff on the city's south side.

Like twin Swords of Damocles, threats to de-annex Oak Cliff come from a proposal in the Texas Legislature to allow a secession vote and from a move to change Dallas' city charter.

"Oak Cliff will no longer tolerate the perception of second-class citizens," said Bob McElearney, president of the south Dallas community's Chamber of Commerce.

"If Dallas doesn't change its way of doing business, it will lose Oak Cliff," he said.

The secession movement's organizers said a vote may be taken as early as 1992, and the new city could be in operation by 1993. It would be Texas' seventh largest, with a population of about 310,000.

Dallas City Council member Dr. Charles Tandy points to uncompleted parks, unrepaired roads and the lack of improvements as some factors in Oak Cliff residents' dissatisfaction with Dallas officials.

"We don't want to de-annex; we want to improve the quality of life in the southern half of Dallas," said Tandy, an anesthesiologist. "That includes direct city services like trash pickup, code enforcement, street repairs, things like that.

"We have libraries that were promised eight to 10 years ago that were never built and parks that were initially approved 15 years ago that were never completed."

Tandy and McElearney both say the de-annexation move started in earnest this year after Dallas City Council approved changing its makeup into 12 single-member districts and a mayor elected citywide.

Oak Cliff leaders claimed that the reapportionment would split their neighborhood. Although council members later withdrew the proposal in favor of a Dec. 8 referendum calling for a 14-1 plan, the de-annexation move has continued.

"That vote won't affect things one lick," said Bob Stimson, an accountant who chairs the de-annexation effort's finance and budget committee.

Three accountants are working full-time to analyze the panel's projections on revenues and expenses, and representatives of that committee and 18 others from Oak Cliff were invited to meet with Dallas staff members this week on other findings.

"If Dallas doesn't change its way of doing business, it will lose Oak Cliff.'

— Bob McElearney, president of the south Dallas community's Chamber of Commerce.

"Everybody's keeping their doors open because we have all expressed the desire to work together," said Stimson, who accompanied Tandy and McElearney to an earlier meeting with Dallas officials, including City Manager Jan Hart.

Marsha Owes in the city manager's office said staff members were still analyzing the Oak Cliff committee reports, which were shared with council members, and results could be available in several weeks.

"The main goal of the de-annexation study is to create a better quality of life, with de-annexation one way to do that," said Stimson.

Roots of the Dallas-Oak Cliff split are deep. The former city of Oak Cliff joined Dallas in 1903 by an 18-vote margin and the two were still operating separate governments a year later until legislative and court action settled differences.

McElearney even has a 1911 letter sent to the father of a 96-year-old lifelong relative of Oak Cliff that said, "Please come to a meeting to discuss separating from Dallas."

At a meeting last month where Oak Cliff residents voted overwhelmingly to proceed with a de-annexation referendum, Dallas Mayor Annette Strauss was shouted down when she tried to derail the effort.

"We are one family," the mayor pleaded as the crowd of almost 2,000 yelled at her. "That's the way it's been, and that's the way it's got to continue to be."

A disturbing fact these days is that Dallas city contracts for goods and services have traditionally gone to businesses on the prosperous north side, said Louis Salcedo, a civil engineer and Oak Cliff resident.

"It is easy to drive around Oak Cliff and see areas that have been neglected. It is something that people here see all the time," he said.

Busy West Jefferson Boulevard harkens to the days when it was the former city's downtown section. But some of the businesses closed their doors in the last decade.

"I want whatever is best for the community," said Theresa Floyd, who runs The Clothing Place there. "I grew up in Oak Cliff and I have seen its condition grow worse for many years now.

"It used to be pretty nice, but now it's going straight downhill."

New rule allows lower AT&T rates

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission announced it took action to allow AT&T Communications of the Southwest to reduce rates for basic long-distance telephone service.

AT&T also will receive additional flexibility to change rates for other competitive services, such as 1-800 numbers and operator services. Long distance rates only can decrease as a result of Wednesday's action, the commission said.

NEW YORK (AP) — ESPN will begin its Sunday night coverage of the 1991 major league season on April 14 with the Seattle Mariners at the American League champion Oakland Athletics.

ESPN, in its second season of baseball broadcasts, will televise games on 25 consecutive Sunday nights beginning with the Mariners-A's and ending on Sept. 29 with the San Francisco Giants at the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The cable network's regular-season schedule begins Monday, April 8 with an opening day doubleheader — Houston at Cincinnati and Milwaukee at Texas. Other games will be chosen on a weekly basis.

NEW YORK (AP) — In response to the defeat of a proposal to make Martin Luther King's birthday a holiday in Arizona, NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue summarily pulled the 1993 Super Bowl out of Phoenix Wednesday.

"I do not believe that playing Super Bowl XXVII in Arizona is in the best interests of the National Football League," Tagliabue said after the Arizona electorate rejected by 15,000 votes of nearly 1 million cast a proposal to make a holiday of the slain civil rights leader's birthday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cleveland Indians catcher Sandy Alomar Jr. fullfilled pre-season expectations Wednesday when he became only the third unanimous choice as rookie of the year, winning the American League award.

The catcher joined Mark McGwire (1987) and Carlton Fisk (1972) as the only major leaguers to sweep the honor since it was first presented in 1947. Alomar, 24, hit .290 with nine homers and 66 RBIs and was the first rookie catcher ever to start an All-Star game.

Mustangs, Steers roam Andrews

■ Andrews and Big Spring meet in a District 3-4A gridiron battle with playoff implications Friday.

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

ANDREWS — While the West Texas landscape will be strewn with meaningless football games on Friday, District 3-4A's showdown between Andrews and Big Spring will be anything but.

Coach W.T. Stapler's Andrews Mustangs made this week's game mean something by knocking off Monahans 34-26 last week in what amounted to an elimination game. Andrews, 5-3 overall and 3-1 in 3-4A play, can pull into a tie for second with an upset win over Coach David Thompson's Steers, 6-1-1 and 4-0.

Two things are certain. Andrews needs a win to stay in the hunt for a playoff berth, while Big Spring must win one of their last two to clinch a tie for first.

Area Football

Many potential scenarios are based on the assumption that Sweetwater — the other third of 3-4A's three-headed monster — will defeat lowly Fort Stockton in their season finale Friday. A Sweetwater win Friday would assure the S-Mustangs, 7-2 and 5-1, of no worse than a tie for the championship.

In other area action Friday, Rankin will try to nail down their third straight District 8-A title with a win at home against Fort Davis; Iraan hosts similarly undefeated Wall in a battle to determine the District 6-2A champion; and Lamesa hosts Snyder with an opportunity to make things interesting in the District 2-4A race.

Lamesa is out of the playoff race, but a Tor win would knock Snyder out of a first-place tie — and out of the playoffs, if both Levelland and Lubbock Estacado win Friday.

Elsewhere in the area Friday, Greenwood plays out the string at Colorado City after a tough loss against Sonora that knocked the Rangers out of playoff consideration. Also, Stanton hosts Eldorado, McCamey hosts Forsan and Garden City visits Roby.

Saturday, Midland Christian visits Carlsbad (N.M.) Bethel Christian in the consolation game of the New-Tex Christian Football Conference playoffs. MCS will not know until Sunday whether the Mustangs have qualified for the Texas Association of Private and Parochial School playoffs.

IN ANDREWS, the always-pessimistic Stapler said the Mustangs are going to have be atop their game to even have a chance against the seventh-ranked Steers.

"We will have to play better than we've ever played," Stapler said. "We will have to have every break under the sun."

On paper, Stapler would appear to have a point. The

■ With an uptempo attack, the Howard College Hawks invade Midland for today's opening game of the Chaparral Classic.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — They haven't exactly changed their name to Loyola-Big Spring yet, but the word out of Howard College is the 1990-91 Hawks are a runnin' bunch.

Area junior college basketball fans will get a chance to see for themselves if West Texas' own Tasmanian Devils are as fast as preseason talkers claim when the Hawks tear into Midland for the 13th annual Chaparral Classic today.

Howard head coach Steve Green suffered some key losses off last season's conference co-champions. The addition of some speedy freshmen, though, has apparently made up for the outside shooting ability of Terrence Lewis, who now resides at Washington State.

Speed is not the only improvement, though, according to Green.

"We're better defensively," Green said. "Much better than last year. And we're more inside oriented than last year."

In addition, Howard also signed Richie Campbell, a Buffalo, N.Y. prep star; Ted Berry, from Richmond, Va., and Connors State (Okla.) transfer Eddie Sheppard.

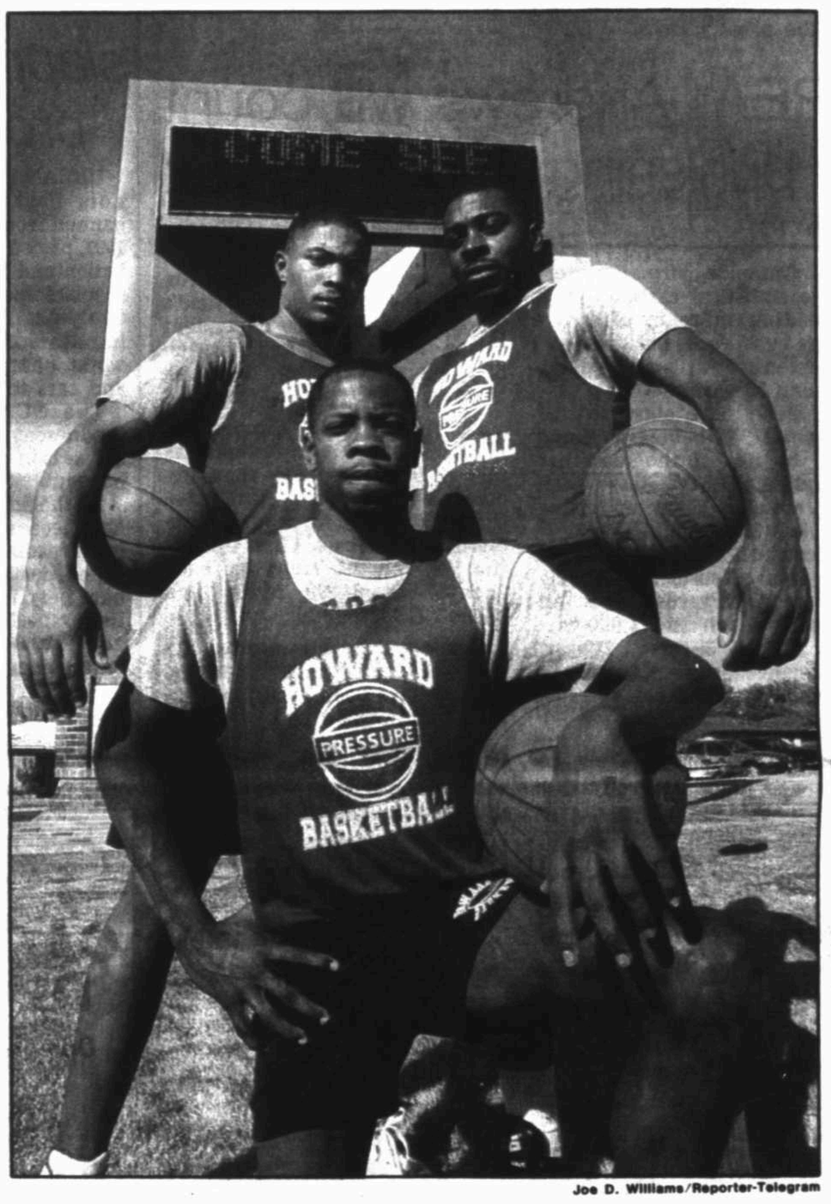

Green says his newcomers fit his style of basketball like a glove.

"I like pressure, both offensively and defensively," Green said. "The aggressive teams will win 80- to 90-percent of the time. I want premier athletes. Guys who can run and jump, but more than anything guys who just play hard.

"I tell my players two things are very important: You've got to have great attitudes and you've got to educate the players to know they can shift to another gear higher than they've ever had. The game of basketball is really very simple: Play as hard as you can for as long as you can."

Howard College did just that last year. Ranked at or near the top of the national Junior College basketball rankings for most of the 1989-90 season, the Hawks finished the season with a 28-4 mark, tied with South Plains for the conference championship. Both South Plains and How-

UIL orders Carter to forfeit tainted wins, 5A title

AUSTIN (AP) — The University Interscholastic League said Wednesday it has no option, following a court ruling, but to order Dallas Carter to forfeit four victories that led to the school's 1988 Class 5A football championship.

The 3rd Court of Appeals on Wednesday denied a motion by the Dallas Independent School District to clarify or modify its Oct. 3 ruling, in which both sides claimed victory, or to be granted a rehearing.

UIL Director Bailey Marshall said the league's State Executive Committee would proceed as if it had won the case, pending possible appeal to the Texas Supreme Court.

No one was immediately available for comment from the Dallas ISD when contacted by The Associated Press.

Prep Football

The Carter case is a dramatic example of what the UIL and Texas Education Agency perceive as a problem that has gotten worse since the Legislature enacted the no-pass, no-play law.

Under that law, a student must pass all classes to be eligible for extracurricular activities, such as sports. It is considered a key element of educational reform in Texas' public schools.

In the Carter case, the school was temporarily forced out of the 1988 football playoffs by a ruling from state Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby that Carter had violated the no-pass, no-play law by changing an algebra grade for backfield star Gary Edwards from failing to passing.

But hours later, on Nov. 18, 1988, state District Judge Paul Davis of Austin issued a temporary restraining order that enabled Carter to continue in the playoffs.

The UIL appealed to stay Davis' temporary injunction, which was denied by the 3rd Court on Dec. 9, 1988.

In July 1989, Davis again ruled in favor of Carter and filed a permanent injunction against the TEA and UIL, which was appealed.

Dykes coping with hard-luck season

A loss to rival Texas and a 2-7 record would have started the Lubbock clan grumbling in any other year. But not 1990. Spike Dykes' popularity and personality has earned him the deserved honor of being the Teflon coach.

Patterson

Dykes and his Texas Tech Red Raiders are struggling through a tough season in which the team has lost to all five of its Top 25 opponents.

Texas Tech Sports Information Director Joe Hornaday says the people in Lubbock are so fond of Dykes that they aren't likely to raise a stink about the team's losing record.

Dykes shrugged off suggestions that his popularity is keeping the complaints from the faithful to an inaudible roar.

"I don't know about that," he said. "We've got great fans and they're not fair weather fans.

"Losing is hard on my wife, and it's hard on me, and the players, and it's hard on the guy that works down at the post office who cares. But you don't just go vapor-lock and jump out the window first chance you get. Life's full of peaks and valleys and you've got to fight your way through it."

Play five teams in the Top 25, Dykes said, and it has an impact on your record. And the fans understand that, Dykes feels.

The Raiders have been outscored 181-101 in their five losses to Top 25 teams (Ohio State, Houston, Texas A&M, Miami, Fl., and UT.) Another loss came against Rice, so if Raider fans were fickle, they could've found sufficient reason to groan. But again, the man in Lubbock running the club has endeared himself to so many that it's easy for the fans to forgive and forget.

If five ranked teams weren't enough, Tech has to roll into Fort Worth Saturday and meet previously-ranked Texas Christian. The Horned Frogs just so happen to possess Matt Vogler, a quarterback who quite likely would qualify as best backup anywhere.

After TCU starting quarterback Leon Clay went down two weeks ago with a season-ending injury, Vogler, a transfer from Auburn, jumped off the bench and passed for an NCAA-record 690 yards last week in a 56-35 loss to Houston. Not exactly what the Tech doctor would've ordered.

"I felt sorry for (TCU head coach) Jim (Wacker) and he's a good friend of mine," Dykes said. "Leon went down and I said to myself what a shame. Little did I know.

"They've got it turned around. You know your program's in place when you replace good players with good players."

If things don't work out to the Raiders' advantage this weekend in Fort Worth, Dykes can always take solace in the fact that the Raiders should end the season on an up note — at home against Southern Methodist. And that ought to keep the fans happy 'til next year.

HOWARD: Hawks attract avid basketball following

(From 1C)

Some JUCO observers felt Howard peaked too soon, and fell apart when the going got tough.

Green vehemently disagrees, saying it was a slack defense and a lack of free throws in the late stages that led to the Hawks' demise (Howard made just four of 16 free throws in the loss to McLennan).

"I think our defense began to weaken as the season went along," Green said. "We scored enough points to win every night out. Free throw shooting also hurt us a lot. We lost at Odessa and were 15-of-34 at the free throw line."

Green disputes the "peaked too soon" theory saying, "The games at the end of the season are a heckuva lot more competitive."

As for his uptempo philosophy, Green says his association with the slower style of play led him to grow fonder of the pressure game.

"(Half-court) is not as entertaining," Green said. "It's like soccer. If you understand soccer, it's not that bad to watch. I went to a soccer match, and I told the people I was with, 'Wake me when they start the penalty kicks.'

"And I don't think the players enjoy playing that way. They're pressured into making the perfect play every time down the court. (Slower play) cuts the number of possessions down in each game and places more emphasis on each trip down the court."

Howard followers also approve of the faster style the team has adopted. The Hawks have one of the most faithful followings in the conference, bringing the biggest crowds of any school to last year's regional tournament.

"Last year when we came to Midland, if our people didn't come, there wouldn't have been anybody there," Green noted.

The upswing that Howard College has recorded in attendance should continue this season as the Hawks are again favored to finish in the upper echelons of the WJCAC and appear to again be bound for the Region V tournament. Whether or not those fans will travel all the way to Waco in the same numbers as they drove to Snyder is doubtful, but they'll almost certainly be in the stands for the Chap Classic.

AREA: Andrews will count on punishing rushing attack

(From 1C)

Steers dominate virtually every positive statistical category in 3-4A, leading in team offensive yardage by 25 yards per game and team defensive yards allowed by a whopping 79 yards.

The Steers have outscored district foes 113-28 behind a Wing-T fueled by two of the most heralded athletes in the state — tailback Jermaine Miller and wingback Neal Mayfield.

Miller and Mayfield are one-two in tandem offense, respectively. Miller needs 65 yards against Andrews to reach the 1,000-yard mark after a 39-carry, 212-yard performance last week against Pecos, while Mayfield has averaged 34.1 yards on 15 catches.

Both have missed time, Miller on a one-game suspension three weeks ago, and Mayfield on a sprained ankle during non-district play. But Miller, especially, are back in form, Thompson said.

"Miller is running well, and he'll get the ball on bunch (against Andrews)," the coach said. Mayfield's success may be more dependent on the success of up-and-down junior quarterback Gerald Cobos, however.

The Mustangs don't throw much — quarterback Kevin Nichols has thrown for fewer yards than any other 3-4A starter — but have three of the district's top 15 rushers in left halfback Chris Garrett (102-594, fourth), right halfback Zach Miller (84-399, ninth), and Nichols (72-321, 13th).

Garrett averages almost six yards a carry, while Miller and Nichols have been good for more than four yards a pop.

While tight end-tackle Mike Garza anchors the interior line, split end Oscar Bueno is Nichols' main target with six catches for 177 yards and one touchdown.

Alomar wins AL rookie honors

Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Even before Sandy Alomar Jr. was a starter in the major leagues, everyone expected him to be a star. It turned out everyone was right.

Alomar, a prospect who turned promise into productivity, became only the third unanimous choice as rookie of the year, winning the American League award Wednesday.

The Cleveland catcher joined Mark McGwire (1987) and Carlton Fisk (1972) as the only major leaguers to sweep the honor since it was first presented in 1947. Alomar, 24, hit .290 with nine homers and 66 RBIs and was the first rookie catcher ever to start an All-Star game.

"You only get one chance to get this. To get it unanimously is much better," Alomar said from Japan, where a team of major league all-stars is touring.

Before opening day, many thought it would be a banner season for rookie catchers — particularly Alomar, a two-time minor league player of the year, and Todd Zeile. Alomar was successful but Zeile was not, batting only .244 for St. Louis and eventually being shifted to third base.

"Everybody had their eye on me," Alomar said. "I was traded for Joe Carter, so everything was going to be a bit harder."

Despite all of Alomar's accomplishments in the minors, he could not win a job in the majors because San Diego already had All-Star catcher Benito Santiago. So last December, the Padres, who have Alomar's father Sandy Sr. as a coach and brother Roberto as a second baseman, traded him and two other players for Carter, the Indians' best player.

"I felt more prepared this year," he said. "I didn't want to go back. I wanted to go forward."

Alomar joined Fisk and Thurman Munson as the lone catchers to win the AL rookie award and became the fourth Indian to receive the honor, along with Herb Score, Chris Chambliss and Joe Charboneau.

Alomar received all 28 first-place votes for a total of 140 points. Two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in each AL city voted.

Kevin Maas, who hit 21 home runs for the New York Yankees, got 14 second-place votes and had 47 points and Kansas City pitcher Kevin Appier was third with 31 points.

Tagliabue yanks Super Bowl from Phoenix

Pro Football

NEW YORK (AP) — NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue summarily pulled the 1993 Super Bowl out of Phoenix on Wednesday after Arizona voters rejected a proposal to make a holiday of Martin Luther King's birthday.

"I do not believe that playing Super Bowl XXVII in Arizona is in the best interests of the National Football League," Tagliabue said after the Arizona electorate rejected by 15,000 votes of nearly 1 million cast a proposal to make a holiday of the slain civil rights leader's birthday.

While Tagliabue's statement doesn't make the move official, it's expected that most if not all of the 28 NFL teams will go along with his recommendation. A total of 21 votes are necessary to move the game, which will probably go to San Diego, Los Angeles or San Francisco, the other cities that bid for it.

"I can't imagine that people won't go along with the commissioner," said Norman Braman, owner of the Philadelphia Eagles and chairman of the Super Bowl site selection committee. "I think it's tragic for the people who worked so hard to get the game there. But I think it would be an affront to our public and our players if the game is played in Phoenix."

Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill said the proposal to make King's birthday a holiday was "the right thing to do" and that he was disappointed both at the voters' decision and Tagliabue's action.

Illini cagers slapped with probation

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois basketball team was banned from postseason play in 1991, placed on three years' probation and limited to two new scholarships each of the next two years. And that's after being cleared by the NCAA of the worst charges: offering cash and cars to top recruits.

The NCAA stopped short Wednesday of wiping out Illinois' season altogether, but left no doubt it could have.

"If the most serious violations had been found then I think from reading the report the so-called death penalty ... would have been imposed," said David Berst, the NCAA's assistant executive director for enforcement.

Such a penalty can be imposed after a school is sanctioned twice within a five-year period for major NCAA infractions.

Illinois

WHAT THE NCAA FOUND
— Improper recruiting contacts.
— Improper use of complimentary game tickets by players.
— Helping high school coaches buy NCAA tournament tickets.

WHAT THE NCAA DIDN'T FIND
The NCAA said there was insufficient evidence of these other major allegations:
— That prep star Deon Thomas was offered $80,000 and a Chevrolet Blazer during recruitment in 1989.
— That recruit LaPhonso Ellis was offered $5,000 to sign and $5,000 a year and a car to play.

PENALTIES
— Three years' probation.
— No postseason tournaments this season.
— No off-campus recruiting in 1991.
— Only two new scholarships each year in 1991 and 1992.

COMMENTS
Illinois Chancellor Morton Weir: "After a long and thorough investigation, the Committee on Infractions has concurred with our judgment that the evidence doesn't support the main allegations. We disagree with several of the committee's findings, and some of the sanctions are harsher than we expected."
NCAA assistant executive director for enforcement David Berst: "If the most serious violations had been found then I think from reading the report the so-called death penalty ... would have been imposed."

1967 — Slush Fund
A slush fund of about $21,000 was used to pay athletes over a four-year period.
Three coaches, including football coach Pete Elliott and basketball coach Harry Combes, were fired. Three basketball players were declared permanently ineligible and four football players lost some or all eligibility.
The NCAA placed Illinois on probation until March 6, 1969, and banned the football team from television appearances through the 1969 season.

1974 — Basketball Recruiting
A pattern of basketball recruiting violations was established. The NCAA placed the basketball program on probation for two years. A basketball support group — the Playmakers — was dissolved and key members were barred from associating with the program.

1981 — Dave Wilson
An eligibility dispute arose between quarterback Dave Wilson and the Big Ten Conference. The Big Ten banned the football team from bowl games for one year and withheld about $500,000 in league revenue from the university's athletic program.

1984 — Football Recruiting
The NCAA found 73 recruiting violations in coach White's program. Sanctions included probation and a ban on live TV and bowl appearances for one year.

1988 — Football Recruiting
The NCAA found additional football recruiting violations. White resigned and the NCAA placed Illinois on probation for one year, but no major sanctions were imposed. John Mackovic became football coach.

Coaches like Hogs

SWC

DALLAS (AP) — The Arkansas Razorbacks are looking for a Southwest Conference basketball championship "three-peat" before they say adios for the arenas of the Southeastern Conference.

And coach Nolan Richardson said the Hogs are even greedier than that. They want the national title.

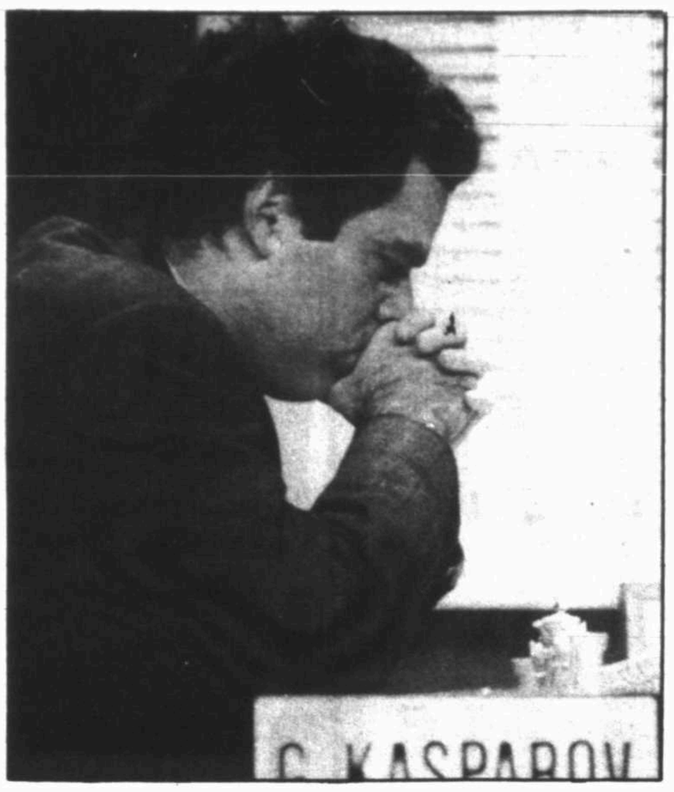

"We'll all be disappointed if we don't go to the Final Four and win it," Richardson said Wednesday during SWC media day.

Arkansas lost to Duke in the NCAA semifinals last year and returns the mainstays of a team which should help Razorback fans forget their miserable football season.

But the basketball team is expecting the same kind of welcome the football team got.

"It could be real tough," said Arkansas guard Todd Day. "The fans are really going to be against us and teams will be taking their best shot at us because it's the last year. This won't be a cakewalk."

Richardson said everybody was shooting for Arkansas last year and things could be double-tough in 1990-91. Baylor and Texas Christian pulled off upsets of the Hogs.

Spurs win shootout

Associated Press

David Robinson scored a career-high 43 points and Terry Cummings added 31 as the hot-shooting San Antonio Spurs beat the defenseless Denver Nuggets 161-153 Wednesday night.

Sean Elliott also had a career-best 29 points and Reggie Williams 22 for the Spurs (2-0), who shot 63 percent from the field. Denver shot 57 percent.

Winless Denver (0-4), which set an NBA record with 90 first-half points, was led by Orlando Woolridge with 37 points. Walter Davis added 32 points and Todd Lichti 29.

The teams combined for 173 points, the most ever in the first half of an NBA game, eclipsing by three the number scored by Golden State and Denver on Nov. 2. The final total of 314 points was the fifth highest in league history.

Trailing 90-83 at the half, the Spurs took control with a 12-0 run early in the third quarter. Cummings had six points during the rally.

Denver crept back within 117-114 with 2:08 to go in the third period. But San Antonio scored 12 of the next 14 points, Cummings again accounting for half of them, to go up 129-116.

Suns 126, Warriors 119

Eddie Johnson scored 17 of his 35 points in the fourth quarter as the Phoenix Suns rallied to beat Golden State, handing the Warriors' their 10th consecutive loss here since 1987.

Pistons 110, Clippers 83

Joe Dumars scored 25 points to lead six Pistons in double figures.

Benoit Benjamin, who missed the first three games of the season with a separated shoulder, returned to center and led Los Angeles with 18 points. James Edwards and Vinnie Johnson supported Dumars with 14 points apiece.

NBA Roundup

Mavericks 104, 76ers 101

Roy Tarpley scored 26 points and reserve forwards Herb Williams and Alex English combined for 18 in the fourth period for Dallas.

Two free throws by Derek Harper gave Dallas a 104-99 lead with 12 seconds left, but Johnny Dawkins made a layup with three seconds remaining. Charles Barkley intercepted the inbounds pass deep in the corner, but his 3-point shot at the buzzer bounced off the rim as the 76ers lost for the first time in three games this season.

Bulls 96, Timberwolves 91

Chicago averted its first 0-4 start in 23 years as B.J. Armstrong came off the bench to score 10 of his 14 points during a decisive 18-8 second-half spurt.

The Bulls won despite an off-night by Michael Jordan, who scored just 17 points after averaging 31.7 in Chicago's first three games. Jordan, who has won four straight NBA scoring titles, took only 14 shots.

Cavaliers 100, Hornets 89

The Hornets shot 71 percent from the floor in the first quarter and led by as many as 12 points early in the second before missing 13 straight shots, letting Cleveland back in it. The Cavaliers ran off 15 consecutive points, capped by Craig Ehlo's 3-pointer, for a 42-39 advantage, and they led 46-45 at the half.

Cleveland took control with a 10-point run in the third period, including four each from Brad Daugherty and Gerald Paddio, and eventually expanded the lead to 82-62 on Daugherty's layup early in the fourth.

Non-winner takes lead

Golf

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — David Peoples, a nonwinner on the PGA tour despite nine years of trying, shot an 8-under par 63 Wednesday for the first-round lead in the Kapalua International on the island of Maui.

Peoples is one shot in front of Ben Crenshaw in the chase for the $150,000 first prize at the Kapalua Resort's Bay Course.

Peoples, whose best finish as a professional is as tie for third, moved past Crenshaw with an eagle putt of 25 feet on the 18th hole. He shot a 7-under 29 over the final nine holes.

Crenshaw rolled in seven birdie putts, missed a hole-in-one by a foot too much and an eagle by a foot too little en route to his 64.

Crenshaw flirted with an even lower score when he hit his drive at the par 3 12th hole just a foot past the pin, and then left a chip shot for an eagle at the par 5 18th a foot short.

He knocked in birdie putts of seven, nine, two, 18 and 15 feet before closing with the 25 footer for eagle at 18.

Peoples is coming off his best year ever on the tour with four top 10 finishes and $259,367 in earnings, 57th on the money list.

"These kind of rounds just happen," he said. "You can't plan on going out and shoot a 63. If you do, you start to press."

HEALTH

By Jane E. Brody
N.Y. Times News Service

In my eighth month of pregnancy in 1969, my obstetrician ordered an abdominal X-ray to confirm his suspicion that I was having twins.

Although I feared possible fetal harm from the radiation, I knew the information the X-ray would reveal could be very important to the way the rest of my pregnancy was managed to assure my babies' well-being.

No such risk need be taken now, and women do not have to wait until late in pregnancy, or until delivery, to find out they are having more than one baby.

Today, ultrasound imaging, a diagnostic technique that uses high-energy sound waves, produces a very detailed view inside the womb without exposing woman or fetus to the risks of radiation.

Ultrasonography, a crude experimental technique when my sons were born, is now a widely available, highly developed technology that can reveal information vital to the management of a pregnancy.

In a study published last summer in The Lancet, a British medical journal, physicians from Helsinki, Finland, described results from a study of 9,300 pregnant women, half of whom underwent routine sonography from the 16th to the 20th weeks of gestation.

Although many of the women in the control group also had sonograms at various stages of pregnancy, in the group that was systematically screened only half as many babies died near the time of birth.

The researchers said the routine examination helped to prevent premature deliveries, hemorrhaging from a misplaced placenta and the birth of severely malformed infants, since many women found to be carrying deformed fetuses chose to have an abortion. Moreover, women who had screening sonography made fewer prenatal visits, presumably because they had fewer complications.

Use of sonography in pregnancy without a good medical reason is still frowned upon by most experts in this country.

Nonetheless, well over half of pregnant women now undergo one or more ultrasound examinations, usually to answer questions that can affect the course of obstetrical care.

In addition to counting the number of fetuses early in pregnany, physicians can use ultrasound to determine a woman's due date, check for fetal anomalies, monitor fetal growth, assess the health of the tissues that support the pregnancy and sometimes determine the cause of complications — all without a single incision or insertion of an instrument.

My sister-in-law was a recent beneficiary of this remarkable tool. Near the end of her sixth month of pregnancy she began to bleed and had contractions.

A sonogram revealed that the placenta had partly torn from its moorings and was in the wrong place; complete bed rest was prescribed.

After another sonogram eight weeks later, she was assured that the fetus was developing normally.

There was no reason to deliver the baby early, her doctor said. Two weeks before her due date she went into labor spontaneously and gave birth to a healthy boy.

The different ways in which various tissues reflect these sound waves is picked up by the instrument and converted into a picture of the fetus, placenta and amniotic fluid, showing details as tiny as a fetal eye.

In the most recent innovation, a transducer is inserted through the vagina to scan the uterus directly, enabling physicians to see details as small as one or two millimeters.

This permits them to diagnosis pregnancy or complications within a day or two of a missed menstrual period.

Ultrasound can be used to estimate the age of the fetus when the woman is uncertain about when she conceived, when the size of the uterus does not match the presumed stage of gestation or when a woman is to undergo a scheduled Caesarean delivery or induction of labor. Such dating decreases the risk of an inadvertent premature delivery.

Sometimes when a prenatal blood test suggests a problem of fetal development, ultrasound is used to be sure the woman is correct about the stage of pregnancy, which influences the test results.

Ultrasound allows physicians to make frequent checks on fetal growth and development when, for example, the woman has kidney disease, diabetes or severe hypertension, which can result in insufficient nourishment for the fetus.

Toward the end of pregnancy, sonography can detect intrauterine growth retardation, fetal movements, fetal breathing and heart rate patterns, helping the physician decide whether to deliver the baby early or treat it in the womb.

When a fetal abnormality is detected and the decision is made to continue the pregnancy, ultrasound can be used to monitor fetal development and serve as a guide to prenatal and postnatal treatment.

When parents have months to prepare mentally and physically for a problem at birth, they are better able to make rational decisions about treatment.

As far as can be scientifically established, nothing untoward has happened to any child as a result of undergoing one or more ultrasound exams while in the womb.

Nonetheless, the 14-member panel agreed that routine ultrasonography is not now recommended. The panel especially frowned upon frivolous use of the technique, for example, to satisfy parental curiosity about the baby's sex.

One of the most comprehensive assessments of the short-term and long-term effects of prenatal sonography involved nearly 20,000 pregnancies among women in Canada.

The children born to these women have so far been followed for up to 15 years and no untoward effects have been detected. In fact, to date there have been far fewer childhood cancers than expected among those who were examined by ultrasound as fetuses, a finding the Canadian researchers find "very reassuring."

When children who had been exposed to ultrasound before birth were compared with those who had no such exposure, no differences could be found in their rate of growth or development.

Traditional, witch doctors sometimes agree on cures

By Laney Salisbury

Western-trained doctors said the 36-year-old office clerk had cirrhosis of the liver and his bloated belly was a symptom.

Evil spirits casting spells was the more believable diagnosis to Musara, the product of a culture steeped in superstition, but both healers prescribed similar treatment: tablets and herbs rich in vitamin B, and lay off those nine bottles of beer a day.

"It doesn't really matter what the diagnosis is, just as long as the treatment is right," said Dr. Chris McCormick, who treated Musara. "You should never disbelieve the power of traditional African medicine."

About four-fifths of the 9.5 million people in this southern African nation prefer the mystical rituals and elixirs to Western medicine, according to a study by the University of Zimbabwe.

"It's unfortunate so much has been lost," said Gordon Chavunduka, head of the healers association and a university professor of sociology.

"There was once a time, when people had a pain they just walked into the bush and picked the plant. The whole country is our source for medicine and many of us don't realize that.'

— Gordon Chavunduka, head of the Zimbabwe National Traditional Healers Association

"There was once a time, when people had a pain they just walked into the bush and picked the plant. The whole country is our source for medicine and many of us don't realize that."

A bottle of 30 vitamin C tablets costs the equivalent of $3.25, nearly a day's pay for the average worker. Visiting a Western-trained doctor costs up to $10 just for the consultation.

Going to a n'anga, on the other hand, costs $2.50 to $5, depending on the illness and form of treatment.

Joseph Harrison, a 49-year-old n'anga, says many of his remedies were passed down through generations of his family and new ones come from his dreams.

Two of Harrison's remedies are "hloni," an animal quill that, when pressed to a patient's forehead, discourages enemies from seeking revenge, and a yellow powder he describes as "the best aphrodisiac in southern Africa."

Witch doctors in central Africa suture wounds with the snapping jaws of live soldier ants. In Tanzania and Uganda, traditional healers treat epilepsy and blindness with herbs.

Zimbabwean n'angas in feather headdresses claim they can heal ailments ranging from sprains to cancer and mental disorders by throwing bones, chanting incantations and stirring mixtures of herbs and animal parts.

In the reception room of a township clinic a few miles southwest of Harare, 6-year-old Regis Nyamba lay on a bench, his head swollen to four times normal size by encephalitis that had made him permanently retarded.

"Regis could be a healthy boy today if he came to my clinic first," said a physician treating hin, who asked not to be identified. "Healers will have a bash at something and if it doesn't work, they send the patient to me. By then it is often too late."

"Some Western doctors don't understand that part of the success behind traditional medicine is the interplay of the spiritual and physical worlds," said Chavunduka, head of the healers association.

Disease linked to personality changes

NEW YORK (AP) — A blood vessel disease in the brain that attacks mental abilities also frequently alters personality, a study suggests.

The personality changes appear not to be due simply to intellectual deterioration, researchers said.

The study focused on multi-infarct dementia, which may cause about 20 percent of cases of progressive loss in mental faculties among the elderly. It results from obstructions in blood flow to parts of the brain.

Associated Press

Improvements in the Pap test are making this potentially life-saving screening test more accurate and are providing more information.

"A simpler classification system, better sampling techniques, and a focus on viral infections associated with cancer promise to make the Pap smear even more valuable in protecting women's health," says Dr. Leza Gallo, a pathologist at New York University Medical Center.

The new classification system, developed at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., is gaining widespread acceptance. It standardizes the way results are reported, thus removing an element of guesswork for some physicians and laboratories.

Since the Pap test was introduced in 1943, deaths from cervical and uterine cancer declined by 70 percent, to under 10,000 a year.

The test involves scraping cells from the cervix, the lower end of the uterus, and having them analyzed. The scraping procedure is painless and takes seconds.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Important career changes lie just ahead. The next six weeks are crucial. The New Year will begin on an upbeat note when a longtime relationship is rejuvenated. Show more initiative at work this winter. Wise investments will pay off handsomely next May. Your self-reliance is a big plus in sticky situations. Replace any self-destructive habits with health-oriented new routines. Summer 1991 will be an especially favorable time for big business deals.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Bonnie Raitt, newscaster Morley Safer, actress Katharine Hepburn, actor Alain Delon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Play it safe in all relationships and undertakings today. Someone you like may try to mislead you. Keep your guard up and protect yourself. Share secrets only with loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Leave all thoughts of romance for tomorrow and spend today taking care of routine matters. A telephone call will bring welcome news. Remain calm if a neighbor tries to play hard ball.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Greater tact and patience will help you avoid domestic confrontations. At work, stick to solo projects. You will enjoy being in the spotlight at a community or church event.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be on the lookout for unusual opportunities to advance your career. Some funds you expect to receive may be delayed. Be careful about getting involved in a friend's business.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The emphasis now is on fulfilling your obligations. Communication will improve by the day's end. Following a hunch will lead you in the right direction. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Uncertainty could hamper your productivity today. Schedule a conference with the appropriate person if you have questions about your future. Romance will be uppermost in your thoughts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An influential person will be easier to approach today. Just be certain you have done your homework before presenting a proposal. A problem with a younger person will be resolved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A lucky day for those who work behind the scenes! Prominent people will be more helpful than in the recent past. You may find yourself counting the hours until a romantic rendezvous.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It is easy to make stupid errors when you are in a hurry. Take your time. Rely on your own judgment where financial matters are concerned. Social affairs may become rather expensive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make better use of your creative or artistic talents. Postpone signing an agreement until more information is available. Extra funds should be put into savings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Speak up when you have a good idea. Greater input will increase your chances for a promotion. You may need time alone tonight to think things through. Your mate or partner will understand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): No important decisions should be required today. Lend an attentive ear to mate's wishes and woes. Romance is everywhere. You may want to go out tonight. Be sure you can afford it.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are generous, spiritual and attracted to the mysterious. As youngsters, they will love exciting stories about dragons and goblins. Fantastic writers and artists, these Scorpios probably will be happiest working for themselves. A second career is possible when they reach their early 30s, perhaps in the ministry. Highly dependable, they are experts at keeping secrets. Employers and clients can trust their discretion.

By taking the first two places in the Women's Pairs, winning the Mixed Pairs and finishing second in the Open Teams, the United States again dominated the World Bridge Olympiad, played in Geneva, Switzerland, thereby retaining the Charles Solomon Trophy awarded to the country that does best overall. Since it was first presented in 1968, no other country has won this prestigious cup.

This deal is from the team event and features brilliant defensive play by one of the top American pairs, David Berkowitz of Old Tappan, N.J., who sat East, and Bart Bramley, of Chicago. East's weak jump overcall prevented North-South from finding their four-heart spot. That contract would have made easily, possibly with an overtrick. However, three no trump was a perfectly reasonable game and would have coasted home against most defenders.

Suppose East were to play the jack of diamonds on the first trick. Declarer holds up on the first diamond, but wins the continuation and attacks hearts. If West goes up with the king, the assault on declarer's second diamond stopper cannot be continued. If West follows low and East wins, there is no longer an entry to the diamonds.

Berkowitz realized that partner probably had a doubleton diamond and, therefore, inserted the nine from the East hand. That prevented a holdup play—declarer was forced to win with the ten or lose one stopper. When declarer now led a heart, West grabbed the king and reverted to a diamond, and East's suit was set up with the ace of hearts as an entry.

DA said he never doubted Kennedy would pass exam

John F. Kennedy Jr. told his bosses in the district attorney's office Wednesday he passed the state bar exam on the third try.

Kennedy

"I am pleased by this news," said District Attorney Robert Morgenthau. "We never doubted that he would pass."

Kennedy's passing grade on the July exam means he gets to keep his job as an assistant district attorney, and that he will get a $3,000 raise to $33,000 a year.

When he is formally sworn in as a member of the New York bar, he will get an additional $1,000. The raises are standard at Kennedy's level, said office spokesman Gerald McKelvey.

It was announced Friday that Kennedy had passed the Connecticut bar exam, but that would not have saved his job, which carries a proviso of three strikes and you're out.

Kennedy, son of the slain president, has been listed as "one of the 50 most beautiful people in the world" by People magazine and one of the sexiest men by US magazine.

Schwarzenegger

He rounded up 50 tons of weightlifting equipment for the U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia.

"After learning that soldiers were using makeshift weights to keep fit, he spearheaded a campaign to secure donations from companies who manufacture aerobic and weightlifting equipment," publicist Charlotte Parker said Wednesday.

More than 100,000 pounds of dumbbells, bench boards, leg presses, leg extensions, power squat racks, cycle machines and tread mills have been donated, Schwarzenegger's publicist said.

The exercise equipment will be shipped in time for Thanksgiving. The actor is chairman of President Bush's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

BROKEN HILL, Australia (AP) — Sarah Ferguson, the Duchess of York, told inquisitive school children Wednesday she has to mind her royal manners because the media dogs her footsteps.

Duchess of York

Broadcasting to 180 students over a radio network spanning thousands of miles of outback, the duchess was quizzed by seven pupils on the talkback system called School of the Air.

A group of students also came to the school studio especially for the one-day royal visit to this small mining center of Broken Hill.

"You always have to remember that they're there watching," she responded when asked what she thought of the media attention she attracts. "If you trip up down the steps, they'll criticize you for tripping down the steps, so you have to be careful."

The duchess, the wife of Britain's Prince Andrew, sidestepped other questions, including how much money she has and which horse she backed in the Melbourne Cup, Australia's premier racing event that she attended the day before.

PARIS (AP) — Prince Karim Aga Khan, the Ismaili Moslem spiritual leader and one of the world's richest men, was given France's highest civilian honor Wednesday for his philanthropic works.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal was given an honorary doctorate Wednesday by Vienna University.

Wiesenthal said his 4½ years in a Nazi concentration camp made him realize that "survival is a privilege."

He vowed to continue to work for justice and freedom and to remain "a voice of all those people whose mouths were closed forever" in Nazi death camps.

No buyout

BOSTON (AP) — General Cinema Corp., which has a majority share in Neiman Marcus Group, called off a deal Monday to buy remaining stock in the specialty retailer less than a week after the offer was announced.

General Cinema said it took the action because a special committee of the Neiman Marcus board of directors had decided to withdraw its recommendation supporting the $14.40 a share tender offer.

Stocks plunge

The Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 44.31 to 2,440.84 as declining issues outdistanced advances by more than 5 to 2 on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Dollar eases

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar ended moderately lower against most currencies in volatile trading Wednesday, bouncing off early-day lows with a buying spurt prompted by Middle East saber-rattling.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with Tuesday's late rates, included: 1.4874 German marks, down from 1.4927; 1.2485 Swiss francs, down from 1.2545; 4.9870 French francs, down from 5.0055; 1,116.0 Italian lire, down from 1,121.0; and 1.1671 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1630.

Gold moved erratically in domestic trading. It fell 30 cents a troy ounce to $386.30 on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

Mary Kay sues

DALLAS (AP) — Mary Kay Cosmetics Inc. has filed a federal antitrust lawsuit against Beauti-Control Cosmetics Inc. alleging that it conspired with cosmetics giant Clairol Inc. to monopolize the skin care market.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court in Dallas Monday, seeks relief under federal and Texas antitrust laws for unspecified damages.

War rhetoric sends oil price soaring

■ After ignoring talk from and about the Persian Gulf earlier this week, oil traders sent oil prices soaring past $35 on war rhetoric that seems to be real.

By Dirk Beveridge

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices shot up nearly $3 per barrel Wednesday after British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher warned that war could be near in the Persian Gulf.

The surge gained momentum when a confidante of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak said the countdown for confrontation had begun, resurrecting anxiety among oil traders that the flow of petroleum supplies would face disruptions.

Traders were also responding to reports that Secretary of State James A. Baker III had given Iraqi President Saddam Hussein an ultimatum for vacating Kuwait, though Baker denied the reports.

West Texas Intermediate-light crude closed $2.68 higher at $35.31 per barrel for December delivery contracts on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Oil had opened 28 cents lower at $32.35 a barrel, then moved ahead by more than $3 to the day's high of $35.45 before settling back.

Contracts for delivery in later months all moved higher, many by the daily limit imposed by the exchange of $1.50 a barrel.

Mrs. Thatcher's saber-rattling was directed at Saddam and came as a new session of the Parliament got under way.

"The implacable message of this House must be: either he gets out of Kuwait soon or we and our allies will remove him by force and he will go down to defeat with all the consequences," Mrs. Thatcher said. "He has been warned."

"The market's rallied on Thatcher's comments," said Thomas P. Blakeslee, an energy analyst with Pegasus Econometric Group Inc., in Hoboken, N.J.

The foreign reports on Baker also pushed up prices, as did the advance release of an editorial to be published Thursday by Makram Mohamed Ahmed, editor of the weekly al Mussawar magazine and a close associate of Mubarak.

"It seems like we are now entering the countdown for war which has become inevitable," Ahmed wrote. It was not immediately clear whether this was his personal interpretation of the crisis or the view of the Egyptian government.

Regardless, the escalating words of war on Wednesday injected new life into a crude market that had been sluggish for more than a week.

New United Heathrow bid eyed

■ United Airlines faces a stiff battle in its bid to fly into London's Heathrow after purchase of PanAm slot at the airport.

Associated Press

LONDON (AP) — Another Battle of Britain is raging but it's not about warplane dominance over the skies. This fight concerns jetliner space on the ground.

United Airlines' bid to fly into Heathrow, announced last month, is expected to intensify the struggle for landing spots at one of the world's busiest airports.

The competition over which airlines can fly to Heathrow is likely to be raised between the U.S. and British governments, which are currently reviewing their air services agreement, the British Department of Transport said.

When United announced Oct. 23 it had purchased most of Pan American World Airways' British air routes for $400 million, the buyer asserted Pan Am's slot at Heathrow was part of the deal.

But since 1977, the British government has barred any new airline from entering crowded Heathrow, and might force United to fly into Gatwick and other British airports.

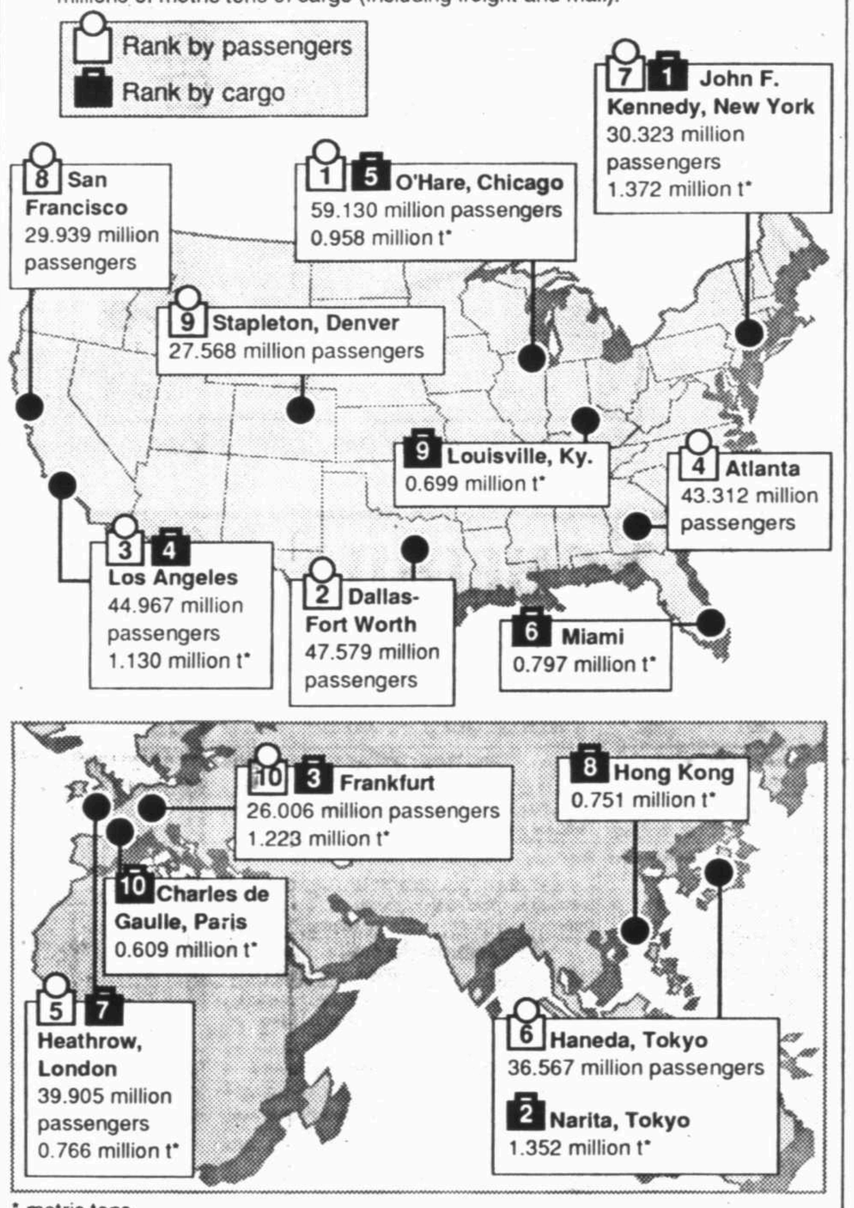

American Airlines was told to go to Gatwick when it bought Trans World Airlines' Chicago-Heathrow route in a $195 million deal last year.

"We certainly don't think they (United) have the right to operate out of Heathrow," said Lizann Peppard, an

Wal-Mart acquires new chain

■ The largest wholesale club will buy Wholesale Club Inc. for $178 million.

N.Y. Times News Service

Wal-Mart Stores, already the operater of the nation's largest chain of wholesale warehouse clubs, will acquire Wholesale Club Inc., which operates 27 membership clubs, for $21 a share, or a total of $178 million.

The $18 billion membership warehouse club industry sells discounted merchandise to businessmen and consumers who pay small membership fees.

Wal-Mart's 141 Sam's Wholesale Clubs have already surpassed the Price Club, the industry pioneer, in both number of stores and annual sales this year.

Jack Seibald, an analyst for Salomon Brothers Inc., said Sam's Wholesale Clubs should have sales of about $6.5 billion for 1990 even without the Wholesale Club. Price, which has 62 stores, is expected to have sales of $5.6 billion.

In a second transaction Tuesday involving wholesale clubs, Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., one of the largest supermarket chains, announced it was buying control of Warehouse Club Inc., a chain of 12 units.

A&P will acquire 7.3 million common shares of Warehouse Club for $1.50 each, or a total of about $11 million. The stake represents about 50.8 percent of the Chicago-based wholesale club.

A&P intends to continue operating the Warehouse Club stores "to learn more about that business and how far we should go with it," said Michael Rourke, an A&P vice president.

Wal-Mart and the Wholesale Club said Wholesale Club shareholders would have the option of receiving either Wal-Mart common stock or cash for their shares, subject to the limitation that only 20 percent of the total purchase price can be in cash.

Judge gives LTV four more months

DALLAS (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge has given LTV Corp. another 120 days to develop a reorganization plan, extending the filing period that was to have expired Tuesday.

Judge Burton Lifland, a bankruptcy judge in the Southern District of New York, granted the extension last Thursday.

The company has received numerous extensions since filing for Chapter 11 protection in July 1986. LTV now has until early February to present a reorganization plan.

Development of the plan was slowed when the Supreme Court in June affirmed a federal agency's decision that an LTV subsidiary is liable for $2.3 billion in underfunded pension plans, said company spokesman Charles Palmer.

U.S. District Judge Robert Sweet of Manhattan reserved judgement last month on whether LTV must reassume liability on the plans covering more than 60,000 employees and retirees. The company stopped funding the plans in 1987.

LTV attorney Lewis B. Kaden argued to Sweet that the high court had decided only legal issues and had not taken into account the company's current financial situation.

Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. general counsel Carol Connor Flowe said Sweet had to shift liability in light of the Supreme Court ruling.

In seeking an extension for the bankruptcy filing, LTV attorneys told Lifland the company needed more time to work out an arrangement with the federal agency.

SCOTT BURNS

How to cope with expensive rent house

By Scott Burns

Burns

Q. My problem is owning a rent house which I'm stuck with and which is bleeding me. I don't have discretionary funds to save and would like to know some options on this house problem so I can get on with life and rebuild my finances. The house is in an extremely depressed area and sits in among blocks of houses with "HUD/FBI/Government" signs in the windows.

I'm 39, single, and earn $32,000 a year. Last year I had a loss of about $5,000 on my Rent House From Hell. The rental income was $2,700 and expenses were about three times that. The house is seldom rented more than half of the year. The balance due on the 13.5 percent mortgage is $31,107 but the tax assessed value is $22,845 and that's probably the market value. The loan has 23 years to go.

The bank won't take a deed in lieu of foreclosure and it is impossible to refinance. So I am being drained and it looks like it will go on forever.

I own the home I live in, worth about $50,000 with a $25,000 mortgage balance. I also have student loan payments of $212 a month with six years to pay. On the positive side, I have $7,000 in an IRA account; am vested with a former employer and will have a $968 a month pension at age 55; and also have $26,685 in another employer retirement account.

I just don't know what to do: refinance the loan; let the bank foreclose and then deal with a deficiency judgment; declare bankruptcy and hope all retirement money is exempt; try to figure out a way to pay off the mortgage earlier; try to sell the house and take the loss. I know lots of people are in similar situations. Please help!

A. Let's look at the house first. From what you write, the rent can't cover operating expenses, let alone the mortgage. Even with a year round tenant it would net only about $100 a month after operating expenses. That won't cover your mortgage, even if you could refinance it. In sum, this house is a very deep hole.

Now let's look at it another way. You are now losing $5,000 a year. To earn that amount at 8 percent, you would need $62,500 in investments. If you sell the house and have to come up with $10,000 to $15,000 in cash at the closing, it is no more than three years of current losses. If you purchased the house for more than its current mortgage balance, your tax loss will be an income tax deduction (at $3,000 a year) that will reduce the impact.

Conclusion: sell the house. Try to get the bank to share in the loss. Offer the contents of your IRA account as your contribution to fill the cash deficiency from the sale. In some circumstances, such deals have been made. In others, the banks are inflexible and appear to be working very hard to maximize losses for all concerned parties, including taxpayers. Either way, you CAN afford the loss and your life will be much improved without the Rent House From Hell.

Q. I recently received a "distribution notice" from one of my mutual funds, along with a pamphlet of questions and answers. It said that distributions, whether received or reinvested, are taxable. Another question was "Do distributions of common stock funds increase the value of my account?" The answer was "no." I'm not sure that I understand this.

I have several questions:

If I have no gain on a distribution, why am I taxed on it?

Where does the money go if I don't receive it?

If common stocks and mutual funds are treated the same — and I suspect that they are — why are so many people interested in dividend paying stocks?

Peace Corps takes new tack

ATLANTA — The world is indeed changing when a Soviet president receives the Nobel Peace Prize and Peace Corps ads show volunteers teaching English in Poland instead of agriculture in Ethiopia.

That's the thrust of the Corps' latest recruitment ad (created by volunteer agency Backer Spielvogel Bates Inc. in New York), which opens with news footage of the Berlin Wall crumbling, then cuts to scenes of a Peace Corps volunteer teaching English to school teachers in Poland.

Backer has handled the Peace Corps account for two decades, and coined its long-running theme, "The Toughest Job You'll Ever Love." But this is the first Corps ad set in Eastern Europe or, for that matter, in a developed country. Last year's campaign featured Peace Corps volunteers teaching English and architecture in Belize.

"The world is becoming more urban, and in some respects, the Peace Corps is moving with it," says Renee Summer, a senior vice president with the agency.

Charged with nostalgia

In an effort to draw a parallel between Christmas 100 years ago and Christmas today, MasterCard has gone to considerable lengths.

Three new commercials, which begin airing next week, show a family gazing into a shop window and interacting with carved animated figures in the window in a Victorian-era setting. The characters are seen in story-book Christmas settings — caroling outdoors and listening to Grandpa reading stories.

"We wanted to bridge the gap between the 1890s and the 1990s family to communicate that, even across a span of 100 years, family traditions and values have, in essence, remained the same," says Keith Kendrick, MasterCard senior vice president of marketing.

The ads support the MasterValue retail promotion, in which shoppers receive discounts when using MasterCard at B. Dalton Booksellers, Casual Corner, Montgomery Ward, Musicland/Sam Goody, K mart and Toys "R" Us.

Quickly . . .

The holidays have become the season for offbeat liquor ads in magazines. Last year, Grand Mariner, ran a battery-powered ad that featured a swinging cardboard bottle of the pricey liqueur, and Absolut vodka's battery powered wonder-ad sang. This year, a new ad for Crown Royal invites you to throw it away. "This Christmas, send it airmail," says the headline. The ad contains instructions on how to fold it into a paper plane . . . Well, if David Robinson can't "Kick some butt," he can tickle some ivories. The National Basketball Association's Rookie of the Year, whose Nike spot was pulled from prime time after consumers complained that his remark was offensive, is appearing in a new Nike ad playing the piano with a 78-year-old concert pianist . . . Perrier may encounter more image problems after the Nov. 16 broadcast of ABC's "20/20" program. The focus will be on the claims bottled-water makers make in their ads, and whether they're true.

Pepsi to 'Cool' it again this winter

Christmas came early for Pepsi-Cola Co. this year, so now the company is hoping for a repeat performance.

BURNS: Fund distribution often confuses investors

(From 8C)

What is the best way for an ordinary investor like myself to handle this situation?

A. You aren't the first person to be vexed about mutual fund distributions. The problem in understanding has to do with "taxable events" — a mutual fund distribution is designed to recognize, for tax purposes, events that have already occurred. That's why a distribution, in itself, does not increase the value of your account.

You can understand this best by imagining that you have $4,560 as an initial investment in a short term bond fund that earns 8 percent. This means the fund earns $1 a day in interest. After you have owned the fund a year it will be worth about $4,927 before any distributions (I am not taking into account compounding). Your investment is now composed of two parts, your original $4,560 plus $365 in interest.

You can receive that distribution in cash so that you have your original shares and $365 in cash.

Or you can receive it in new shares so that you have $4,927 in shares.

The total value is the same in either case. So is the taxable income, $365. If you let the new shares accumulate, they will compound to a larger sum.

BID: United bid opposed at Heathrow

(From 8C)

American Airlines spokeswoman in London.

American has indicated an interest in buying the Pan Am routes at a higher price than United is paying, but Pan Am and United say their deal is sealed.

Many international and domestic airlines want slots at Heathrow, which is 20 miles west of London and served by the London subway system. Gatwick, 27 miles south of London, links up with the British Rail train network.

Heathrow has more shops, restaurants and other amenities, and offers far more connecting flights than Gatwick, primarily a center for charter flights.

British Midland Airways, Britain's second largest airline after British Airways, wants more Heathrow slots and is lobbying for a Heathrow expansion. Virgin Atlantic Airways, which operates out of Gatwick, also wants to get into Heathrow.

"We certainly have ambitions ourselves to get into Heathrow and it would obviously be unacceptable for U.S. carrier flying into Heathrow and ourselves not," said Ed Hullah, Virgin's director for commercial operations.

But Lawrence Nagin, senior vice president for United Airlines, said U.S.-British air services agreement allows successors to the two specified American carriers operating out of Heathrow — Pan Am and TWA — to assume their rights.

United has filed with the U.S. Department of Transportation asking for approval of transfer of rights. It has asked for an expedited review, and a decision by Dec. 31.

"We're optimistic that the United States government will be successful to get the U.K. government to approve United Airlines' operations in Heathrow," Nagin said in a telephone interview from Chicago.

United wants to start operating the Pan Am routes in the spring. They are from New York, Washington, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Seattle.

ANALYSIS

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 17.08 points on Tuesday, dropped 28.96 to 2,456.19 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 442 up, 1,017 down and 461 unchanged.

Analysts said the market appeared to be on hold awaiting the results of a quarterly offering of bonds and notes by the Treasury, which began on Tuesday and continues through Thursday.

Investor demand for that enormous supply apparently has been bolstered by expectations of new moves soon by the Federal Reserve toward a relaxation of its monetary policy.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numberical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key(*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key(*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Annuities mean quick profits for banks

By Bill Doyle

Q. My two sisters, my brother and I are very upset. Our widowed mother went to her bank to roll over a matured $50,000 certificate of deposit. Instead of a new CD, she was sold a deferred annuity — an absolutely wrong thing for her. Although Mom is not hurting for money, she is far from rich. My siblings and I feel very strongly her money should be invested to provide current income, such as interest from CDs, not in an annuity — where both income and taxes are put off until a future time.

Doyle

The four of us phoned and visited the bank in attempts to get the annuity cancelled. We were stonewalled. As a result, we have closed all accounts we had at that bank.

The annuity is written by an insurance company, which now has our mother's money. We do not understand why the bank would give away business to the insurance company. What is the explanation for that?

A. For a quick profit. Geoff Bobroff, senior vice president of Lipper Analytical Services, who keeps tabs on annuities for his firm's annuity performance reports, notes that insurance companies pay bank and savings and loan associations commissions of up to 8 percent on annuity sales. On a $50,000 annuity, that could be as much as $4,000. After paying the salesperson and meeting its other expenses, the bank might have a net profit of $1,500 to $2,000 on the deal.

That's a better immediate bottom line result than the bank could generate on a $50,000 CD. A bank pays interest at one rate on the money it takes in from the sale of CDs and attempts to put that money to work in loans and such, at a higher interest rate. The difference between the two rates is the bank's "spread," from which it hopes to turn a profit.

There's no way a bank can invest $50,000 from a CD at a rate high enough to pay salaries and other overhead and still show a fast $1,500 to $2,000 net profit.

Sure, by keeping the money "in house" in a long-term CD, the bank should net more than that over the life of the CD. But that profit would dribble in — not arrive in one shot.

Bobroff calls bank annuity sales "short-sighted" because they "cannibalize a bank's assets." They do, however, bring about an immediate improvement in the bank's earnings statement.

Q. The young man who sold me an annuity says every insurance company must have a "legal reserve," which provides protection equal to that of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. on bank deposits. Is that true or false?

A. The first part is true; the second is false.

Insurance companies are required, by laws of the states in which they operate, to set aside money to protect against their insolvency. That money is called a "reserve."

Life insurance companies must maintain policy reserves large enough to pay anticipated future claims. The amount of each company's policy reserve is based on formulas taking into account mortality tables, forecasts of corporate earnings and other items.

But that is not equal to FDIC coverage of bank deposits, which is backed by the full faith and credit of our federal government.

Q. Do insurance companies ever go broke? If so, what happens?

A. In 1989, 44 insurance companies in the United States became insolvent. That was a record number and up from 31 the previous year.

In that unhappy event, the failed outfit often is merged into a larger and financially healthy insurance company. When that doesn't happen, guarantee funds come into play in most states.

Those funds raise money to pay off policies of busted insurers by assessing solvent insurance companies. In many cases, things work out well for policyholders and annuitants.

However, some of the funds pay only residents of the state in which the failed insurance company was headquartered — not all states in which its policies were sold.

Questar, Santa Fe join to explore Powder River

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Questar Corp. and Santa Fe Energy Resources report that two of their affiliates have agreed to jointly drill a series of exploratory wells in Wyoming's Powder River Basin.

The oil and gas exploration agreement is between Celsius Energy Corp., an affiliate of Salt Lake City-based Questar, and Santa Fe Energy Partners, L.P., of Houston, Texas.

The agreement became effective Aug. 1. It involves leases on approximately 37,600 acres held by the two companies in Campbell, Crook and Weston counties in Wyoming.

Signed for an initial term ending Dec. 31, 1992, the agreement can be extended from year to year thereafter. Santa Fe is the designated operator of the joint venture during the initial term.

The two companies anticipate drilling six exploratory wells in 1990 and 10 wells a year after that.

Enron Corp. plans trust to trade gas contracts

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – Enron Corp., banking that natural gas prices are poised for a rebound, plans to launch a publicly traded trust company to buy and sell long-term gas contracts.

The venture, registered last Friday with federal securities regulators, would mark the first public trust company in which investors' payback will depend entirely on the market price of natural gas.

Analysts said the new company, to be called Enron Gas Trust, is evidence of both a shift toward longer-term gas purchase deals and of a growing sentiment that prices have hit bottom.

"This is a path breaker," said Bill Johnson, a gas specialist at Jofree Corp., a Houston-based energy consulting firm. "What you're seeing happen is a general expectation that gas prices will begin to firm. And with a tightening market, long-term contract sales make a lot of sense."

Enron officials said they plan to begin marketing the trust to investors after the Thanksgiving holiday. American Stock Exchange trading in the new company is to begin under the symbol EGU before the end of the year.

According to a prospectus filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, Enron will offer 10 million units of the trust at $5.35 per unit, or share.

Enron will use the proceeds from the offering to secure long-term natural gas contracts. The deal is premised on the notion that the company can lock in cheap natural gas in the short-term and sell it for much more in future years, when prices are expected to rise.

"We're advancing cash and in return we're getting gas production," said Jeff Skilling, chairman and chief executive officer of Enron Finance Corp.

Supermodel plays Guess-ing game on tour

By Nancy Miller Lewis
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — So was it a rock tour, or was it Memorex?

Well, actually, it was neither. But if a Guess fragrance promotion featuring model Claudia Schiffer hadn't taken place at a department store, you'd have sworn the whole thing was only rock 'n' roll.

"Come on, will you? We're going to be la-a-ate," dramatically moaned a 16-ish blonde emerging from the driver's seat of her car. From the passenger side, her look-alike friend scurried to catch up in an equally dramatic fashion — all the while wearing clogs.

THE SCENARIO was repeated throughout the parking area like a photocopier gone berserk — with little kids, beach guys, women in their 30s, middle-aged men and hip grandmothers all hurrying to get in line to meet the Guess girl.

Inside the store, there were black-and-red Schiffer posters and gift bags everywhere; the speakers blared with music recognizable only to those with hips slim enough to fit into a pair of Guess jeans.

"What's all that noise?" asked a saleswoman who heard the cacophony all the way over in the silver department.

Then, down the escalator they came: Dozens of models in Schiffer T-shirts and Guess satinesque baseball "tour" jackets. The fans of all ages, already in line in the cosmetics department, let out the ohhs and ahhs.

UPSTAIRS, IN THE executive offices, the press and the public relations people hung out, waiting for the 20-year-old dubbed "the most beautiful girl in the world" by GQ magazine.

The hint that things were ready to get under way came when the troupe of bodyguards, muscles bulging under their wash-and-wear gray suits, entered the offices. Next came a handful of well-dressed women surrounding the 6-foot-1¼-inch Schiffer. The angelic face and hair to die for this day topped off a white linen double-breasted pants suit and a pair of taffy-pink suede cowboy boots.

PICKING UP THE rear of this entourage were the promotion men with their ponytails, Italian eyewear, full-cut European suits and huge Louis Vuitton briefcases.

"Guess is a lifestyle," mused Peter Zegras, president of Revlon's fashion and designer fragrance group, which produces the Guess fragrance. Zegras stood next to a wall and took it all in again — just the way he did the day before, when Schiffer pulled 3,000 fans in San Francisco. She drew that same number with her three stops in Southern California, which included this one at Robinson's.

"It's a perception. Claudia's fans aspire to be like her and look like her. She does look like the bigger version of Brigitte Bardot," he added.

The last remark is indeed true. But Schiffer is not only a taller Bardot, she's also the softer, more-angelic '90s version of a sex symbol.

Bardot made her mark — on movies, gossip columns and fashion — during the mid-'50s and early '60s. That Schiffer, who just turned 20 and is the oldest of four children, wasn't even born during the star's heyday makes no difference to her.

"In Europe, everybody knows (Bardot). She changed a whole generation. I think it's a great comparison — people are always being compared," Schiffer said with a laugh. She has had nine years of English classes and speaks the language with agility.

"Now I even miss my home — even though I hated it when I was there," she said and laughed again.

No, it's no more Rhineland for Schiffer. Now it's international magazines, the runways of Paris and appearances on "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous," "Entertainment Tonight," "Into the Night Starring Rick Dees" and "Hard Copy."

Schiffer moved into an apartment in New York three weeks ago. Now she shuttles into Paris for Chanel fittings for Karl Lagerfeld and swings like a pendulum between New York and Los Angeles, all in the name of Guess and its many products. The Guess fragrance "tour," which started in New York, takes in 11 cities and was headed for Chicago, Atlanta and Miami after stopping in LA.

"In Germany, they don't have big models. (The top models) go out of the country. Nobody's interested," Schiffer, who had intended to be a lawyer like her father, shrugged matter-of-factly. She added that she's now attracted to the idea of entering an American university where she could focus on languages, art and history.

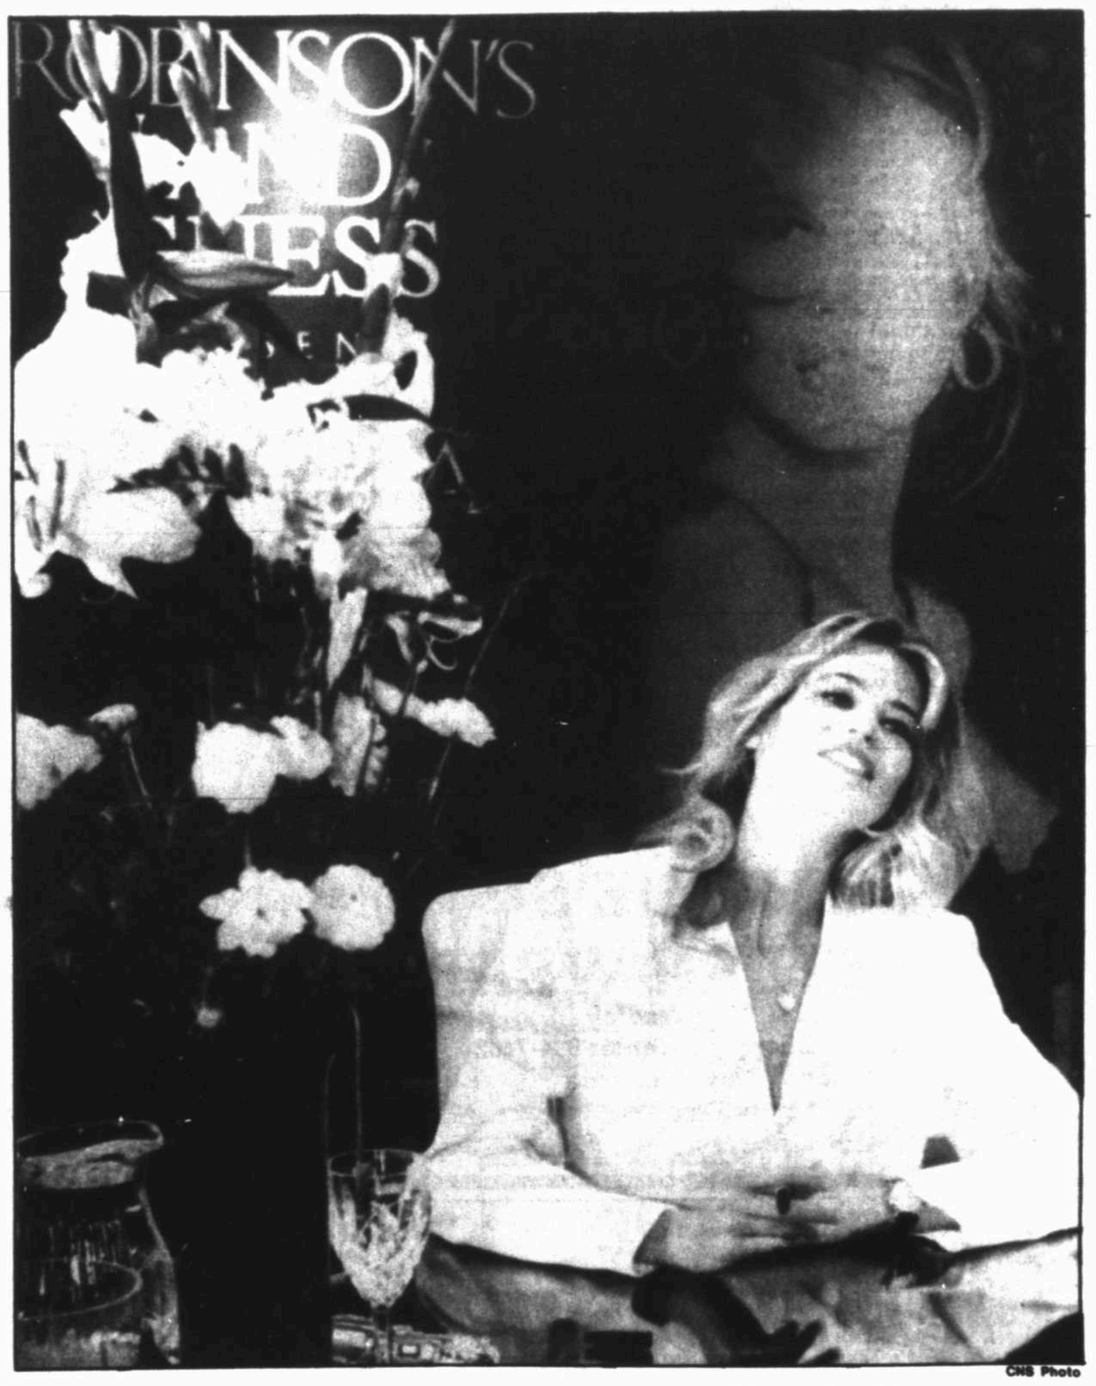

BACK OUTSIDE THE interview area, Leah Levy, Guess associate director of public relations, confirmed that Schiffer is, indeed, the whole package — beauty, brains, warmth.

"No one ever writes about how nice she is. She's so sophisticated, intelligent and fun. And, you know, she'd got to have her Guess clothes specially made," Levy said.

Hot water baths leave dry skin even drier

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Keep out of hot water if you have dry skin. "The temperature of the water correlates to the drying-out effect," says Dr. Dennis Weigand. "I repeatedly tell people who have dry skin to cool their bath water down if it's more than lukewarm."

Weigand, vice chairman of the dermatology department at the University of Oklahoma's College of Medicine, suggests soaking in tepid water and then using an ointment to keep the water from evaporating. He says lotions containing urea or lactic acid are good to help retain the moisture.

DEAR ABBY

Widower seeks way to handle wife's property

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife died last year, leaving some very nice jewelry and good clothing — including two fur coats. My three daughters-in-law are all too small to use the clothing except for purses and maybe some coats. I am going to get married again, and my new wife could use it all. She comes from a very poor background and has never had anything nice. Would it be in bad taste to offer these things to her (after marriage)? What would my daughters-in-law think?

Van Buren

I cannot afford to buy such nice things for my new wife right now. I am told there's a very high-class resale store that buys and sells "good-as-new" clothing. — PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: It would be very generous of you to offer a few items of jewelry that belonged to your late wife to your daughters-in-law.

As for your bride-to-be, the choice should be hers. Perhaps she would enjoy your wife's things — but on the chance that she might feel uncomfortable trying to literally fill her shoes (etc.), sell them and use the proceeds to buy her some lovely new things of her own.

DEAR ABBY: My very dear friend and I are both in our 60s. We have been seeing each other socially for eight years, with no plans to marry.

He drinks beer constantly, usually starting at noon. He doesn't "chug-a-lug" it, but nurses it along. However, when he gets up to throw the empty can in the recycler, he immediately goes to the refrigerator for another beer, and the process continues until bedtime.

In one day, he can easily consume a dozen beers! I have talked to him as gently as possible about this, but he just laughs and says he can handle it — he's been doing it for years.

I have driven him home many times. Abby, this is getting to me. I'm beginning not to want to be around him anymore. Between the beer drinking and the cigar smoke, frankly, he stinks!

We do not live together, so I could ease out of the relationship, but I hate to end a longtime friendship. He insists that he's a beer drinker, not an alcoholic. What are the facts? — PATIENCE STRAINED

DEAR STRAINED: There is as much alcohol in a can of beer as there is in a shot of whiskey served in a bar (1½ ounces). So, if your friend drinks one beer after another every day from noon until bedtime, regardless of what he calls himself he drinks like an alcoholic.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Airlift may resupply embassy

By Andrew J. Glass
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The U.S. embassy in Kuwait — besieged for months by Iraqi soldiers and running low on food and fuel — may be resupplied from the air in a way that limits the risk to human life, it was learned Wednesday.

At the nub of the projected relief operation is a system used by U.S. Special Operations Forces that allows three-ton payloads to descend from planes cruising at 35,000 feet. At the time, they would be flying over Persian Gulf waters, some 30 miles east of the beleaguered five-acre embassy enclave.

The system relies on a $25,000 steerable parachute, called Para-Point. It uses a coded radio homing signal to guide the load to a soft landing within 300 feet of the intended target site.

"Without getting into classified matters, I can assure you that this is now being looked at as a very serious option," said Herman A. Weber, director of military operations for Para-Flite Inc., the New Jersey company which makes the system for the U.S. Special Operations Forces.

Asked to comment, Pete Williams, chief Pentagon spokesman, said: "As a rule, we never discuss future military operations and, particularly, any special operations."

WITHIN THE last week, President Bush repeatedly assailed Iraqi President Saddam Hussein for "starving out" the surrounded U.S. diplomats. Bush has vowed that the Kuwaiti embassy must stay open.

On Oct. 31, Bush told reporters "we're looking at every possibility" for the means to resupply the embassy. He added that "it would not be good for me to signal what I might or might not do."

Asked specifically whether a resupply attempt would be made, the president responded: "I'm not sure about that, but I think the loudest signal on that was the action taken at the United Nations (approving a resupply effort). And that gets through to Saddam Hussein."

During his recent visit to the Gulf region, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said the United States hoped the U.N. would be able to arrange to resupply of the surrounded embassy. But he added that Washington would consider taking unilateral action if it was needed to get the job done.

In the aftermath of the Aug. 2 assault, Iraqi forces have cut off both power and water from the embassy. Ten diplomats, led by U.S. Ambassador W. Nathaniel Howell III, as well as an undisclosed number of private U.S. citizens, have been holed up in the surrounded compound, surviving mainly on dwindling stocks of canned tuna. A generator-powered radio enables the embassy to send and receive coded messages.

Iraq has offered the diplomats — and a separate remaining two-person British contingent in Kuwait City — safe passage. But Washington insists that some 600 other Americans still trapped in Kuwait also must be allowed to depart freely.

THE RESUPPLY mission would lack an element of strategic surprise. Since it has been specifically sanctioned by a U.N. Security Council resolution, Baghdad Radio has carried a report quoting Saddam as warning that such a "provocation" was in the works.

Bush, however, still retains the tactical option of making it clear to Baghdad that the U.S. mission bears Iraq no hostile intent. Such a signal may serve to keep Iraqi forces from firing on the canisters, which would glide down onto the embassy grounds at about 30 miles an hour.

Taking off from a nearby Saudi Arabian base, the mission would be mounted by a flight of specially equipped aircraft, known as MC-130H Combat Talon II. These planes have been recently modernized with computerized electronic gear that, among other sophisticated tasks, could be used to confuse an enemy.

Para-Flite's Herman Weber said there are three ways of guiding the payloads down to the embassy enclave.

The first is to steer the "smart" parachutes from the MC-130H airborne mother ships. While that is the safest way, it is also the least accurate one and would probably have to be discarded in such an operation.

THE SECOND is to use a ground transmitter. Such a unit weighs only four pounds. But a means would have to be found to get the device through the ring of Iraqi troops.

The third method is to employ an elite team of Special Forces Rangers, normally based at Fort Bragg, N.C. The Rangers would jump from the MC-130H and escort the payload toward the embassy site, using their own steerable chutes and hand-held transmitters.

Weber said that was clearly the most reliable option, from the standpoint of getting the job done. "These guys are trained to land on a rooftop in the dead of night," he said.

But that scenario also carries its own set of political risks, which Bush and his advisers must also weigh carefully.

At best, the Rangers would have to join the U.S. contingent on the ground for an indefinite stay. At worst, they could become Iraqi targets.

The Iraqis have heavily fortified the seaside area near the compound in anticipation of an attack. At least in one instance, involving the French, they have burst into an embassy, technically intruding onto foreign soil.

Navy hospital ship may be best trauma facility

By Michael Gormley
Hearst News Service

ABOARD THE USNS COMFORT, — The Navy petty officer struggled to fight off the sedatives to speak for a few moments during his third day in intensive care. The oxygen mask muffled his labored words, his weak breath barely clouding the transparent plastic.

Bandages covered his left shoulder and half his chest. On Oct. 30, he was accidently shot at close range by a Marine sentry. At least one .50-caliber bullet tore through the front of his shoulder, shattered his collar bone, ricocheted off his shoulder blade and then went out through his upper left arm.

His surgeons said that an inch either way and the petty officer would be dead. He's still not out of the woods, but the prognosis is good, due in large part to the sophisticated medical services on this hospital ship.

The Comfort is one of the American military's two hospital ships in the region. The other is the USNS Mercy. Each ship has 1,000 beds, making them the largest pieces of the medical preparedness picture here. In fact, if the Comfort were a land facility, it would be the ninth largest hospital in the United States.

THE COMFORT is three football fields long, 10 stories high, weighs 70,000 tons and travels at a top cruising speed of 17 knots. It has a crew of 1,162 and is capable of providing every medical procedure except open-heart surgery.

"Our readiness right now is excellent," said Capt. David A. Snyder, director of surgery on the Comfort and at Bethesda Naval Hospital in Maryland. "This may be the best trauma facility in the world. Nothing is like it except the Mercy. It's a great asset."

"I told the crew they were doing a fantastic job," said Adm. Robert Sutton, commander of naval logistics and support for Operation Desert Shield, following crew efforts to save the 10 sailors burned in a boiler room accident on the USNS Ivo Jima last week. "The way they treated those casualties here was superb. The crew gave them the best possible care."

All 10 victims later died.

That accident brought to nearly 40 the number of servicemen killed so far during this operation. Sutton said the fatalities had been running just about as projected for a force this size in this area.

The Comfort and the Mercy are crucial to the care of wounded soldiers and sailors should war break out. Even the Seventh Fleet Hospital, on shore, will send some of its most complicated cases to the Comfort's surgery teams.

The ship, a converted oil tanker once named Rose City, has 12 operating rooms and additional areas for minor surgery, 80 intensive care beds, 4,500 units of blood — 3,000 of which are in special freezers that can extend their shelf life to 10 years — and one of the only two CAT scanners on ships in the world (the other is on the Mercy). Its own power plant supplies the ship with oxygen. Distilling plants turn 150,000 gallons of sea water a day into fresh water.

MILITARY MEDICAL planners said all this means that soldiers and sailors in need of medical care have the best hospital around; the closet rivals are in Germany and Japan. Helicopters can ferry wounded from anywhere in the theater of operations to the landing pads on the deck of the ship.

Hospital corpsman Stephen Rathbun knows that the team effort must extend beyond the technical; it must also be used to tend the emotional needs of the patients.

For example, one of the tips was to keep several paper clips taped to the walls of triage work stations. The clips are taped to the body to mark the locations of entry and exit wound on X-rays. That trick was picked up from city hospitals, not military units.

Many other lessons were learned in Vietnam. For instance, blood in hospitals usually is kept in a laboratory, a floor or two above the operating rooms. On the Comfort, blood is stored next to the operating rooms because experience in Vietnam showed that time lost in the trip to the lab could be critical.

THAT WAR also showed that each patient needs an average six units of blood, resulting in the massive blood storage facility on the Comfort, which has a CAT scanner on board to diagnose head injuries.

Capt. Amoret O'Rourke, the head of the operating rooms on board and at the Bethesda Naval Hospital, said improvements made for the Comfort give it some advantages even over the Bethesda facility, where top brass and presidents are treated.
